Says his life has been threatened

Holman seeks grand jury probe

By Ted Norman

In a press conference called late Sunday afternoon, Kirk Holman said he was going to the Aransas County Grand Jury with a request that the grand jury investigate the Aransas County Navigation District.

Holman, a member of the Aransas County Navigation District, said he is asking the Aransas County Grand Jury to investigate the navigation board for malfeasance, nonfeasance, possible conspiracy, possible misappropriation of funds and possible violation of the Texas Open Meetings Act.

During the interview Holman said he had assembled notes and copies of documents that he will take to the grand jury early Tuesday morning.

Holman also said he would ask the grand jury to investigate the possibility of the navigation district commissioners holding secret meetings and falsifying official records.

Holman says he objects to the conduct of the navigation district commissioners during the last 30 days and he says he doubts their value to the people.

During the interview he said the navigation district has handled its business so poorly that it doesn't have enough money to dredge or maintain Cove Harbor and he said, "We can't even go borrow the money to maintain the harbor, we can't dredge the harbor and I'm afraid our business is going to start moving south."

Holman claims the Aransas County Navigation District commissioners committed malfeasance when they voted not to lease boat slips to individuals who did not own boats.

Reading from a copy of documents of the navigation district minutes Holman said, "Commissioner Dominguez made a motion that slips could not be rented to an individual who has no boat, motion not to include fish houses. Okay, the three commissioners who voted on that committed malfeasance of office, because they're showing partiality to two fish houses."

Holman says the inequality is in the fact that, if a slip is vacated the next name on the list is not entitled to that slip, the fish house picks the next individual to go into that slip.

He says the fish house that controls the slip determines who gets the slip and that the navigation district has no control over it. Holman says, that is partiality.

According to Holman there is another problem with the Navigation District's subleasing policy. He says, "This is the most important thing in the issue. The district is not only competing with the fish houses for rental slips but it's also competing with each individual owner of

ACTA now preparing information package

By Becky Werhan

An informational handbook on the governmental boards within the county is now being compiled by the Aransas County Taxpayers Association. According to the ACTA chairman Mitch Ammons, the pamphlet is designed to "better educate the local voters."

Said Ammons, "We're trying to put together what the membership of each of the boards is, the terms of the individual offices, the method of re-election and all the dates involved. Also, we are including the overall purpose of each group."

The bodies discussed in the booklet will be the school board, commissioners court, the navigation district, the cities of Rockport and Fulton, the county tax appraisal district and the county water boards.

Working on the ad hoc committee preparing the packet are ACTA executive members and other ACTA general members. An important facet of the project is the input from the various board members and heads involved. "We envision," said Ammons, "the ACTA chairmen working on each group to be working in consortium with the heads of that particular group."

ACTA members are at the present time working at contacting the heads of the governmental bodies.

"It's going to be a thing that's not time-dated or targeted at individuals," said the group chairman. "It's a basic, very general guide to the various groups. It's aimed at getting the general voter more aware of the what, when, where and why."

Upon completion of the handbook, which Ammons hopes will occur in February, the packets will be mailed out to every registered voter in Aransas County.

ACTA has purchased the voter registration rolls from each precinct from the county. Voter rolls are made available by the county to groups and individuals wishing to use them for a non-profit educational use only, explained Ammons.

Ammons stressed that the information project is for the benefit of the county voters, saying, "We hope to show that ACTA is intending to be a continuing thing in this community, a positive thing."

He continued, "It's good to be able to go out and do something like this where you don't have an ax to grind."

The handbook will be mailed to an estimated 7,000 voters in the county. Said Ammons, "It's a pretty good undertaking."

Man dies of heart attack while fishing

Despite efforts by Aransas County's Emergency Medical Service (EMS), a 61-year-old Winter Texan died after suffering a heart attack while fishing in Little Bay Saturday afternoon.

Elmer Tipps of Oklahoma City was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. John Vaughn, a staff physician at Enterprise Medical Clinic, after EMS paramedics and volunteers worked for almost an hour to revive the man.

According to Paramedic Bobby Motes, Tipps was fishing from a private pier when he suffered a heart attack. Both units of the Aransas County EMS, three paramedics and five emergency medical technicians (EMTs) responded to the call which came about 2:44 p.m.

"We used all the equipment on the two vehicles and worked on him 50 minutes," until about 3:34 p.m., Motes said.

He added that Tipps "hadn't complained of pain or shortness of breath" or shown any other symptoms prior to the attack.

Tipps' body was shipped to Oklahoma City for funeral arrangements, according to a spokesman at Rockport's Marshall Funeral Home.

Meeting set on zoning ordinance amendments

Amendments that will affect motel construction, fences and acreage requirements for residential development in Rockport are scheduled for discussion in a meeting of the city's planning and zoning commission next Tuesday, Dec. 8.

The meeting, open to the public, will get under way at 7:30 p.m. in Rockport's City Hall.

Among items scheduled for discussion will be the density requirements for construction of motels, condominiums and similar units inside city limits.

At present, Rockport's zoning ordinance doesn't make provisions for these types of construction, says Delmar Hiller, chairman of the P&Z board. "The ordinance is not clear at all in its present form."

Also up for discussion are the fencing requirements in the current zoning ordinance. The ordinance presently prohibits fencing across the front yard of property and, says Assistant City Secretary Helen Braffett, "we keep getting calls from people wanting to fence their front yard."

The third item on Tuesday's agenda is the acreage requirements defining a "large-scale development."

The current criteria for a "large-scale development" — one that can be drawn up in a total site plan — is four acres, Hiller said. "The planning and zoning board wants to look at lowering the number of acres," he continued.

Taggart appointed to board

George Taggart III of Rockport has been named to represent Aransas County on the original board of directors of the Coastal Bend Community Foundation.

Taggart will serve a two-year term on the board whose 18 directors were appointed to staggered terms initially.

The Coastal Bend Community Foundation was established in December, 1980, by the Corpus Christi Chamber of Commerce to provide funds to help finance charitable, cultural, civic, health, literary or educational programs within a seven-county service area that includes Aransas.

The non-profit, charitable Foundation also will serve Nueces, San Patricio, Kleberg, Bee, Refugio and Jim Wells Counties.

Taggart is president of Aransas Gas Company in Rockport.

Also appointed to the board are Kyle Mansker of Bee County; Lucien Flournoy, Jim Wells County; Perry Finger, Kleberg; and Gorman Ritchie, San Patricio.

Twelve of the directors are from Nueces County, including Roberto Bosquez, M.D., Cecil E. Burney, Mrs. Pat

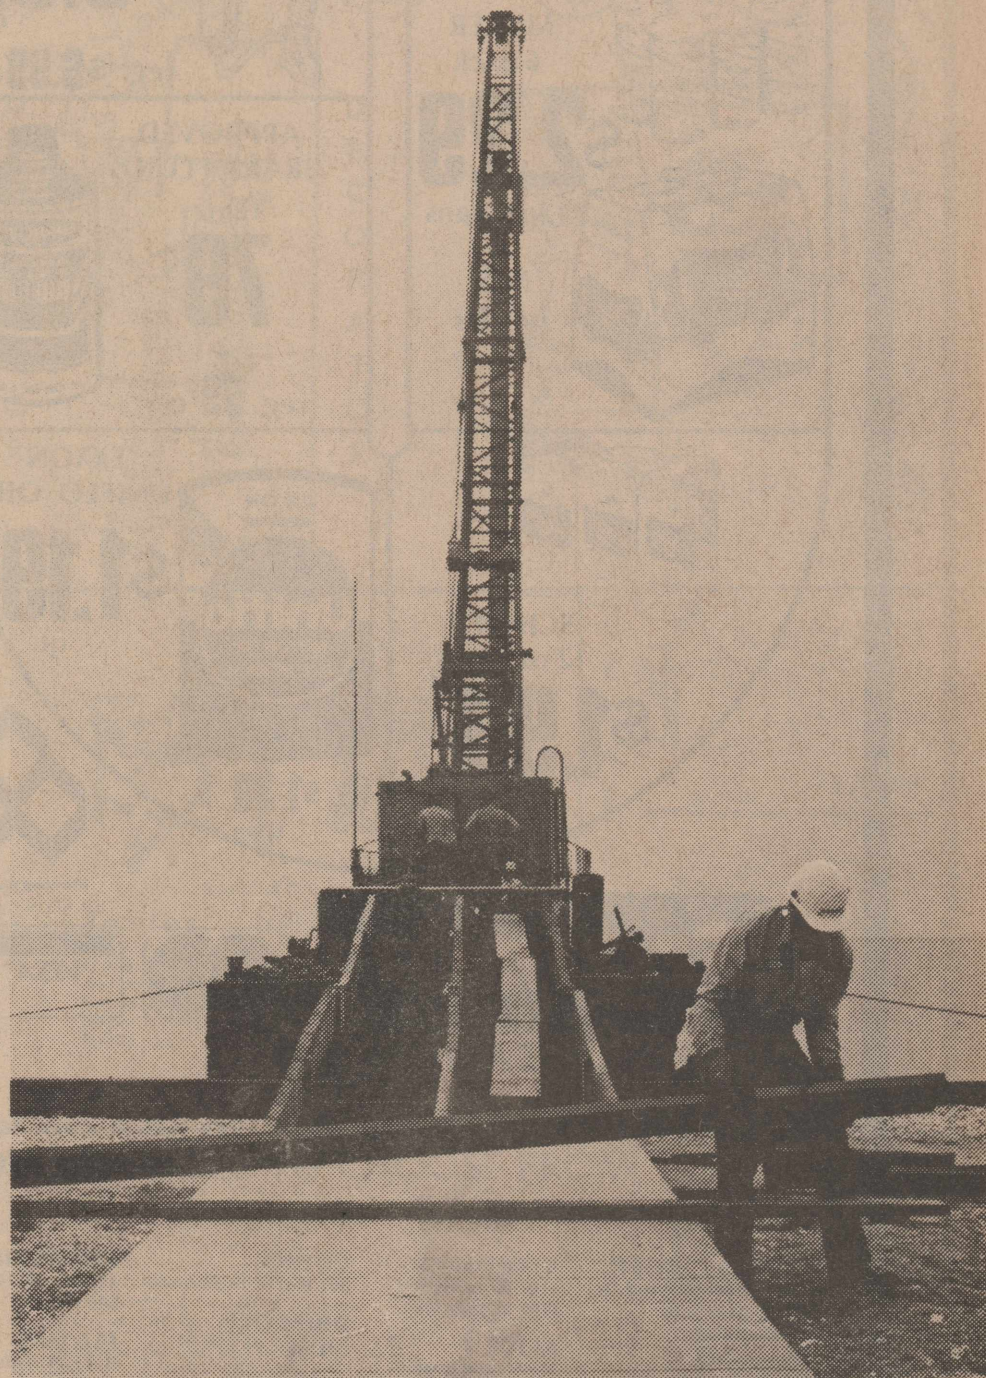

M. Eisenhauer, Dr. Humberto Garcia, John H. Garner, Paul R. Haas, Edward H. Harte, T.D. Sells Jr., James C. Storm, Mrs. Paul R. Turnbull, M. Harvey Weil and C. Ivan Wilson.

'No change' reported in Goodwin youth

Tony Goodwin, injured last week in an auto accident near Rockport, is "still critical but stable and still in a coma", according to officials at Memorial Medical Center in Corpus Christi.

The youth suffered head injuries Monday afternoon, Nov. 23, when the pickup truck he is believed to have been driving flipped over and rolled on Highway 35 north of Rockport.

Highway patrolman Jerry Richardson who investigated the accident said it occurred about 3:40 p.m. Two other youths in the small pickup with Goodwin were reported treated and released from Dr. Curtis Kovacs' clinic near the scene.

Fulton Pier — under construction

Workmen with Lloyd W. Richardson of Aransas Pass, contractor for the project, lay in the pilings for Fulton's new 1,000-foot-long public fishing pier just north of Fulton Harbor. Scheduled completion date for the facility is mid-January. The pier — to be lighted for night fishing and with 300-foot-long T-head and a ramp for access to wheelchairs — is being funded by a $217,000 grant through the Federal Coastal Energy Impact program. [Photo by Pat Blair]

You never get no back talk from a goat

Several weeks ago I wrote about Hartselle, Ala., and its goats. Hartselle, a city of 9,000 located in northwest Alabama, went out and bought itself some goats to work for the sanitation department.

The idea is that goats do a terrific job of keeping an area clean of garbage and growth because goats will eat anything, including tin cans, watermelon rinds and cigarette butts. Hartselle bought its goats in April and put them in a fenced, 30-acre tract which contains the city's sewage lagoon.

It was costing the taxpayers $1,500 a year in labor fees to keep the area maintained. Goats don't cost very much, so it was only a matter of time before the goats had paid for themselves.

"You never get no back talk from them, they never lay out of work, and they ain't asked for no raises yet," said a Hartselle city official.

I thought the goat idea was a great one and I suggested that other cities might want to try it.

Now I don't know. The word came from Hartselle the other day that somebody had shot the goats.

"I checked 'em on Thursday afternoon," said James Pirkle, head of the sanitation department. "When I went back Saturday, the one billy and eight of the nannies were dead."

"At first I thought maybe dogs had done it. But it wasn't dogs. They were shot with a rifle."

A 10th goat eventually died from its wounds. One goat survived the attack. Police are investigating. There are some leads, but no arrests had been made at this writing.

I've never known any goats personally, but they're cute little boogers. A guy called "the Goat Man" used to come through my hometown occasionally. He traveled all over the country with an old wagon pulled by goats. "Goats are a whole lot easier to get along with than most people I know," the Goat Man used to say.

Probably the only thing you could say against goats is that a lot of them together cause a rather foul smell. A couple of minutes around the Goat Man and his goats was enough to hold you for several months.

I talked to Mark Windle, Hartselle utilities department manager, about the goats.

"I guess it was just somebody mean as you-know-what who went out there and used our goats for target practice," Windle said.

The goats apparently were shot with a .22-caliber rifle. "We're all still pretty upset about it over here," Windle said. "The thing about goats is they're about the friendliest animals you can find. They're very trustful. I don't see how anybody could shoot such an animal down. They didn't mean any harm to anybody or anything."

The city held a memorial service for its goats. It might sound stupid to have a memorial service for a bunch of goats, but I had a dog once that got run over by a car and when we buried him up under the oak tree near my grandfather's onion patch, I had my cousin sing "The Old Rugged Cross" from a Cokesbury hymnal.

You can get yourself attached to animals — dogs, cats, horses, goats.

I asked if Hartselle would replace its slain goats.

"We won't decide until spring," said Windle. "All we can think about now is our chief mowing crew has been mowed down."

I was thinking about what I would do to punish a creep who had shot down 10 innocent goats if I were the judge and he were brought into my courtroom.

I've got a couple of ideas. Make him eat tin cans, watermelon rinds and cigarette butts until I tell him to quit is one idea.

Kick him in his you-know-what until he wishes he never heard the word "goat" is another.

Drinking is problem for 10 percent of adults

COLLEGE STATION — Alcoholism — a destructive form of stress control and a menace to the work industry.

An estimated 10 percent of adults in the United States have a drinking problem. 20 percent of all purchasers consume 80 percent of total alcohol sold, reports Dr. Mary Ann Shirer, a health education specialist.

Consequently, alcoholism costs the job industry approximately $40 billion annually, she points out.

High costs are the result of the impact alcoholics have on co-workers, in addition to increased absenteeism and losses in productivity, she notes.

One of every four families reports that drinking interferes with homelife as well as occupation. More cases are cited in high-income families than in low-income ones, the specialist reports.

Alcoholics drink to "tune out" self-doubt and ease challenging work pressures, which are both possible sources of stress, she explains.

In order to relieve these stress pressures, supervisors and co-workers should assume the responsibility of helping the alcoholic, the specialist urges.

Co-workers should not ignore the fact that the person has an alcohol problem or cover up for his behavior, she advises.

To prove to the individual he has a problem and needs assistance, Shirer recommends that supervisors record unacceptable habits, such as continuous absenteeism, long lunch hours and drinking on the job.

From this point, the "team approach" should be used to help terminate the problem, she urges. The team consists of supervisors, employee-assistance programs and community services.

You say Marauder, I say Molasses

By Becky Werhan
It has been written that the Karankawas, upon seeing the first Spanish conquistadores land upon this coast, fell to the ground beating their chests and wailing.

My reaction to seeing the tourist season's first Winnebagoes roll into town is somewhat similar.

We don't know exactly what the Indians' display meant. The spoken language of the Karankawas was at best, a series of grunts, so their wailing may have signaled sorrow, fear or, if some reports are to be believed, exultation at the prospect of a big meal.

While I am the product of, hopefully, a much more sophisticated culture, I'm still not sure exactly how to categorize what I feel about the arrival of the snowbirds.

On an aesthetic level, all those different colored license plates sure are pretty. I've always felt the black and white Texas plates lacked imagination and besides, we don't have one of those little mottos under the numbers.

But then, Texas is a pretty exciting state, with more other colorful and creative displays. Nebraska and Iowa, on the other hand, I'm not so sure of. For all I know, those colored license plates may represent the height of midwestern art.

The names of those big travel trailers are interesting, too, like "Winnebago," "Marauder," "Highwayman," "Wildcat," and "Invader." I'm not making that up, there really is a brand name "Invader."

Those are all such big, almost savage-sounding names. To my way of thinking, something as large as those vehicles and with a name like "Marauder" ought to move faster than

Portion vs. self-feeding

By Dr. Hap Lutz
Dr. Lutz is a former instructor of diseases of dogs and cats in the college of Veterinary Medicine at Texas A&M University.

Canine Nutrition

There is much confusion in the minds of dog owners as to the benefits of portion feeding in comparison with self-feeding for dogs.

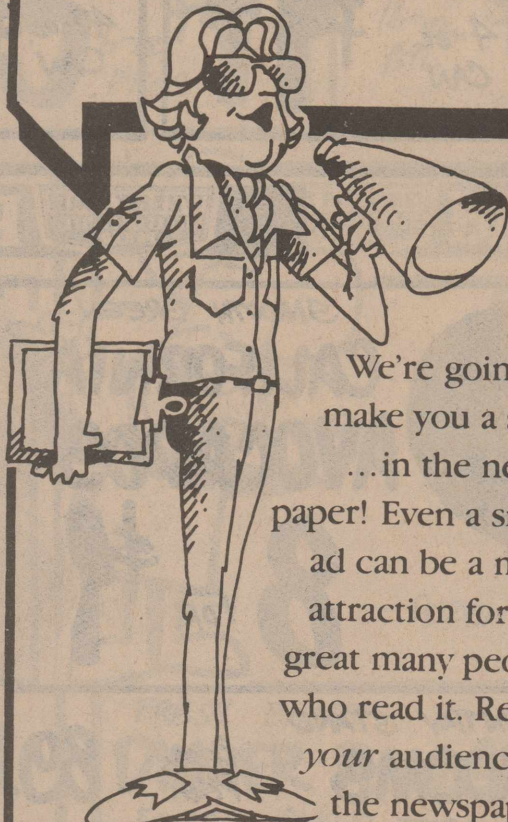

Portion feeding involves supplying the puppy or adult dog with a measured amount of food on a prescribed or regular schedule. For example, newly weaned puppies require four meals a day until three months of age. From three to five months of age, they require three meals a day, at five months, two feedings. Then at one year of age — one feeding a day.

With this method, the amounts fed can be adjusted to meet objectives for weight gain, stability or loss.

Self-feeding — a practice that has gained popularity especially among breeding kennels, veterinary clinics (and more and more with individual dog owners) — means that the puppy or adult dog eats from a container in which dry or soft moist food is always available. The animal can consume as much or as little as he desires whenever he wants.

With the self-feeding method, a puppy or adult dog will eat smaller amounts on a more frequent basis. For the dog's welfare, this is the better of the two methods because the level of nutrients in the dog's bloodstream remains more constant. In a kennel or clinic, it has a quieting effect since there is no pre-mealtime nervous excitement.

I've had hours to study them closely, crawling down Fulton Beach road at five miles per hour. I'm no speed demon and I appreciate the beauty of this area as much as anyone, but if I really wanted to move that

A battery and a purse were taken — but the purse was subsequently recovered — in separate car burglaries in Rockport this past weekend.

The purse, belonging to Jonie Gallant of #6 Sandra, Candlestick Park Subdivision, was taken Saturday between 7:15 and 7:25 p.m. while the car was parked at the Austin/Wharf intersection.

Police recovered the slow, I'd work for the post office.

But then, all those travel trailer owners buy a lot of our gas and eat at a lot of our restaurants and stay at a lot of our trailer parks and read a lot of our newspapers. I'm glad we have the economy we do and excepting the burly Canadian with the cigar I got caught behind at the grocery store the other day, I guess the purse and returned it to Gallant Sunday morning.

The battery was taken from a car belonging to Earline Ballou, 823 N. Wood between 1 and 5:10 p.m. Friday.

The vehicle was in a parking lot next to the Curiosity Shop at the time of the theft.

In another car burglary, a vehicle belonging to Emmett E. Bledsoe of Jackson, TN., was broken into while he was staying at a Rockport motel this past week.

A suitcase and two pillowcases — one of them containing some $10 in coins were taken. The suitcase and pillowcases were found in the pool at the motel.

The incident occurred between 11 p.m. last Wednesday, Nov. 25, and Thursday, Nov. 26.

Flag stolen

An unknown caller reported seeing someone take a VFW flag from its place in downtown Rockport Thursday.

The call was received in the police department about 11:55 a.m.

Criminal mischief

Yancy Duane Lamonte of 1131 Water St. told police his vehicle was removed from the parking lot of a Rockport motel sometime between 7 p.m. Friday and 2:15 p.m. Saturday.

The vehicle was found about 2:30 p.m. Saturday in a grassy field approximately 30 feet west of the 1100 block of South Live Oak.

Other calls

Police made two arrests on charges of public intoxication during the holiday weekend. Both persons were fined $56 on the charges. Police were also called to investigate a prowler report and made one arrest on a warrant issued by the county.

tourist industry doesn't pollute the air or anything like that.

Besides, paying four times more for tomatoes than people 40 miles inland have to almost makes me feel richer.

Another advantage not to be taken lightly is the opportunity we have for learning about people from other places. After such snappy conversational openers as "Excuse me, but that isn't a flamingo, it's a roseate spoonbill" or "No, that's not a pickle; it's called a jalapeno, would you like some water?", the coastal native has the opportunity to learn reams about our neighbors from the north and what they do when they're not down here looking at seagulls.

All in all, I guess the snowbirds are something we can live with, for six months out of the year. The only time I've really gotten angry with any of them was when I overheard a lady from Minnesota talking about how hot it was down here in October.

That's kind of like going shopping at Nieman's and complaining about the prices.

Texas A&I to offer scholarships

KINGSVILLE — A University Scholars Program, which will provide scholarships to students with outstanding academic backgrounds, has been announced at Texas A&I University by Dr. Bill Franklin, president.

The scholarships are another phase of Texas A&I's "Excellence in the '80s" program, which was initiated last year.

The new program will provide scholarships for two freshman students in each of the University's five undergraduate Colleges.

Ten new scholarships will be available annually. Each scholarship is for $4,000, payable at the rate of $500 each semester until graduation as long as a 3.0 grade point average (on a 4.0 scale) is maintained.

Applicants for the scholarships must have a minimum score of 25 on the ACT or 1100 on the SAT, must show promise of success in the major field as determined by tests and the selection committee, must have made a scholastic record that would justify consideration for a scholarship and must be in the upper quarter of his or her graduating class.

"We believe that the intellectual vitality of any university depends essentially on three things: the academic quality of the student, the quality of the faculty, and the resources that are available to support the teaching/learning process. This University Scholars Program is designed to attract some of the academically most capable students in the State to our University as a means of enhancing the quality of education we provide for all our students," stated Dr. Franklin.

Donations from six businesses, totalling $40,000, have allowed the University Scholars Program to be initiated. The businesses are the Kleberg First National Bank, Kleberg County Savings and Loan, Mesquite Oilfield Services, B.W. Curbow and Co., the Kingsville Publishing Company and Arthur Brothers.

Applications for the scholarships may be secured from high school principals or counselors, or by writing the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Campus Box 102, Texas A&I University, Kingsville, Texas 78363.

'Full house' attends Thanksgiving Service

It was a full house at Sacred Heart Catholic Church as the community of Rockport-Fulton met for worship in its annual Thanksgiving service last week.

The Rockport-Fulton High School Choir under the direction of Martha Luigi and Marianne Gould, organist, presented three selections of special music.

The service was led by area pastors Rev. Barrett Renfro, United Methodist; Rev. Gregory Deane, Catholic; Rev. Walter Clark, Episcopal; Rev. George Burlew, retired United Methodist minister; and Rev. Charles Fake and Rev. Jerry Pipes of Rockport Baptist Church.

Lay persons Cecilia Shannon, Episcopalian, and Jerre Ledbetter, Catholic, read the Scripture lessons. Mayor Walter Falk read a Thanksgiving Proclamation and Rev. Wayne Park, Peace Lutheran, delivered the sermon.

The offering was divided equally between the Rockport-Fulton High School Choir Fund for the Vienna Trip and the Aransas County Minister's Association. A check for $341.15 has been given to the choir.

Health

Texas Department of Health
Robert Bernstein, M.D., Commissioner

Don't have all your plans for this holiday season replaced with bad memories about food poisoning.

At the bottom of the pain and misery of what is commonly known as food poisoning is usually a bacterial infection called Salmonellosis. Infected animals and humans can be carriers and through their infected body discharges others may catch the disease.

Man may also be infected by eating improperly prepared or stored foods derived from animals suffering from Salmonellosis. The incubation period varies from a few hours to several days.

The most common symptoms are vomiting, diarrhea, stomach cramps, chill and fever.

Last year 1,724 cases of Salmonellosis were reported in Texas. There is no way of knowing how many cases went unreported by people who thought they had a 12-hour virus. Through the end of October 1981, 1,703 cases of Salmonellosis were reported.

"Since Salmonella germs are endemic in poultry and pork and to a lesser extent in beef, these products should be thoroughly cooked," said Lenwood L. Scholtz, with the Food and Drug Division of the Texas Department of Health. "The adequate cooking of food is one of the most practical methods of preventing Salmonellosis."

Temperature is also an important factor. Bacteria in food can really multiply quickly at temperatures ranging from 45 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit - from cool to warm. "We recommend that food be kept below 45 degrees or above 140 degrees," Scholtz said. "Keeping food just barely cool or warm doesn't help at all. Keep hot food hot and cold foods cold until they are served."

Scholtz warned about cross contamination. "Many cooks will slice up meat and vegetables on a cutting board with the same knife. Cooking the meat will destroy the bacteria, but it's possible the Salmonella germs will be transferred from both the knife and cutting board to the vegetables. Always wash a cutting board and knife with hot soapy water and rinse them well after cutting fresh meat," he said.

"Of course you should always wash your hands before preparing any food. But you also need to wash your hands after touching raw meat or poultry."

Salmonella germs aren't necessarily going to affect the smell or taste of food. You can't tell if meat is going to make you sick by just going by its taste and smell. If it does taste and smell a little funny, however, this usually does mean that the product has been held at a temperature good for the development of bacteria which could make you sick.

For more information, contact Lenwood P. Scholtz, Food and Drug Division, Texas Department of Health, 1100 West 49th Street, Austin, Texas 78756.

The Rockport-Fulton High School Choir Boosters are at the present time sponsoring a silent auction of brass tomb rubbings such as the two shown above. The rubbings were done at ancient tombs in England. These two are on display at First National Bank and others are on display at Live Oak State Bank. Here, Debra Kullman, a First National employee, makes her bid for the rubbings. Bids made and submitted at the bank are being collected by the choir boosters. [Most Often-Asked Questions On Nutrition]
By Jean Glowka

Q. A friend's little daughter has lupus erythematosus. What vitamins and/or foods would be good for this condition?

A. Lupus erythematosus is a skin disease which primarily affects the connective tissue and is characterized by anemia, stiffness of joints and numerous symptoms of adrenal exhaustion.

Research shows that patients receiving 1,000 to 2,000 units of vitamin E and 10,000 to 15,000 mgs. of pantothenic acid daily responded most favorably, even though many had suffered from the disease for 10 to 30 years.

It is felt that an even better approach would be to provide a diet rich in all nutrients, including an abundance of such foods as brewers' yeast liver, yogurt and wheat germ. Good results were obtained, in fact, when these foods were supplied and adequate vitamin-mineral supplements were given. Included in these supplements were 900 mgs. of pantothenic acid, 3,000 mgs. of vitamin C and 900 units of vitamin E daily.

Until next week, Folks, stay happy and healthy! It's a beautiful world!

Comments invited on nontoxic shot zone

AUSTIN — Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials have asked for comments from the public on a proposal to expand the state's nontoxic shot zone for waterfowl hunting for the 1982-83 hunting seasons.

The proposed zones for 1982-83 would include a portion of the mid-coast area for the first time in addition to an expansion of the nontoxic shot zone currently in effect in portions of a six-county Southeast Texas area.

Waterfowl hunters in the nontoxic shot zones are required to use nontoxic steel loads in their shotguns, rather than lead shot. Officials said studies have shown that waterfowl in heavily-hunted areas ingest spent lead shot, causing mortality.

The proposed new steel shot zone for the mid-coast area is bounded by the Matagorda Bay shoreline between Matagorda and Calhoun Counties, then north along the Matagorda-Calhoun County line to the junction with the Jackson County line, then west along that line to State Highway 35, then south along Highway 35 to the junction of U.S. Highway 77 in Refugio, then south along U.S. Highway 77 to the Nueces-Kleberg County line, then east along that line to the Laguna Madre Bay, then east and seaward to the three marine league limit, then northeast along the three marine league limit to the three marine league limit between Calhoun and Matagorda Counties, then north along the Calhoun-Matagorda County Bay shoreline.

The proposed Southeast Texas nontoxic shot zone would include the areas within the 1981-82 zone, plus additional areas brought in by moving the northern boundary of the zone to U.S. Highway 90 between Beaumont and Houston. The proposed boundaries would be the Louisiana state line, then west along Interstate Highway 10 and U.S. Highway 90A, and then along that highway to its junction with Interstate Highway 45 in Houston, then south along IH 45 to the junction with State Highway 35, then southeast along that highway to the junction with the Brazos River, then along the eastern shore of the Brazos to the shoreline of the Gulf of Mexico, then seaward to the three marine league limit, then northeast along the three marine league limit to the Louisiana state line.

Hog hunt applications available

AUSTIN — Applications are being accepted for hunting feral hogs on the Engeling Wildlife Management Area, 20 miles northwest of Palestine in Anderson County, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Four of the Friday-through-Sunday hunts, to be held in Feb. 1982, will be available to 260 hunters to be selected by drawing. Deadline for returning completed applications to the department is 5 p.m. Dec. 14. A public drawing will be held at 10 a.m. Dec. 17 at Austin headquarters.

Department wildlife biologists say the hogs are descendants of domestic hogs that were allowed to roam free. Foraging habits of these hogs often are damaging to wildlife habitat, requiring control of their populations.

Applications are available by writing to the department at 4200 Smith School Road, Austin 78744, or by calling the toll-free information line, 1-800-792-1119.

Pirates hold many memories of season

The 1981 season has come and gone for Rockport-Fulton football players, and yet, there are many memories for the players to hold on to. One thing that the Pirates of 1981 can hold on to is that they can within just two points of pulling off the biggest game of their careers when they lost to Beeville by a 16-14 score. Beeville, of course, went on to soundly defeat Gregory-Portland and Flour

Bluff to claim the District 15-4A title. Perhaps a first, the '81 Pirates, although 5-5, had two running backs with over 1,000 yards rushing in a single season. Michael Simmons, top ground gainer in the district, collected 1502 yards, including an incredible 362 yard performance in the season's final against West Oso. Running with Simmons was sophomore Dwayne Walls who gained nearly 1100 yards along the way. Both players were named to the All District Backfield by the Caller-Times, and may yet gain more honors when the Coaches' Choices are released following Beeville's winning or losing in the playoffs.

Although the defense had its problems, Eddie Naro captured the top mark on the tackle charts with 177 assists and individual efforts combined. Naro was ignored by the Caller-Times which chose linebackers from the top defensive clubs around, but everybody who saw Naro play knew he gave his all and then some on every play.

Big Michael Arthur, who anchored the left defensive end for the Pirates, drew the attention of the Caller writers at his position and was named to the defensive team on the All District selections. Arthur was runner-up to Naro in tackles, but led the team in fumble recoveries with four.

David Kelly, who will still in the process of learning his defensive position at the season's close, took honors as the top interceptor for the Pirates with four interceptions.

After setting a school record for receptions as a sophomore, Dennis Hull didn't have the ball thrown his way as much in his final two seasons, and the Pirate passing game was nearly nil. Hull was the leading receiver for the Pirates in number of catches with only seven.

There was quite a stir caused by the "gutsy" JV team from Rockport-Fulton as they compiled a record of 7-1 over the season, losing only to GP. In gaining the seven victories, the JV also had two running backs to go over the 1,000 yard mark for the season, but only in eight games because Aransas Pass couldn't field a team, and the game with Beeville was cancelled because of bad weather. Steve Arkell totalled 1007 yards, and on his heels just two yards behind was Mike Riddle.

Also making a little history was the duo of quarterback Bobby Dingenary to his favorite receiver Derek Conn. The duo connected twelve times, and six went for scores. Added to those catches were three which netted extra points.

For the defense, Kevin Billeiter was tops in tackles with 85 hits on defense. Billeiter and company teamed to shutout three of their eight opponents.

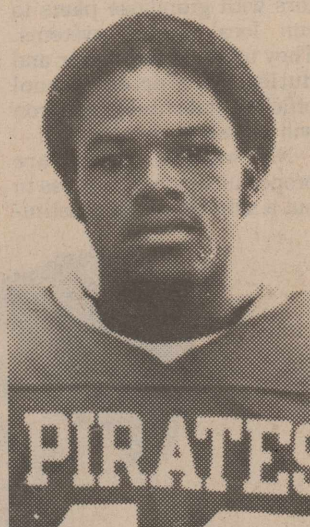

Joe Cantu, whose hard-hitting style caught everyone's eye, led the defense in interceptions with five. Darren Gurley and Philip Ochoa each had two fumble recoveries to lead in that department.

Although the Freshmen went winless, there was a few bright spots on the horizon. Bill Mott led the team in tackles with 106 strikes on defense, and then led the team in pass receptions with 18, while Ronnie Sifuentes gathered in nine throws.

Many times throwing under pressure, Louis Solis passed for 45 percent completions, and two of his completions went the distance. Trinelle Walls led the ground game with 469 yards gained and five TD's.

Rounding out the statistics, Toss Stubbs was the top fumble recovered with four. Four players on the defensive team had one interception each.

Pirates place three on coaches' 1st team

With Beeville's loss in the playoffs came the disclosure of the District 15-4A Coaches' Poll for All District. Coach Brian Connolly announced that three players from the 1981 Pirates of Rockport-Fulton made the First Team.

As most football fans guessed, Michael Simmons, the district leader in rushing with 1502 yards, was named to a backfield slot along with running mate Dwayne Walls. Simmons went one step further being named as Co-Player of the Year on offense along with J.J. Robinson of Beeville.

Also named to the first unit was Gene McElveen at guard, a frequent lead blocker on the Pirates' powerful sweep. At a Second Team tackle was Jon Shaw, who also found himself in front of the swift Simmons and Walls as a downfield blocker.

The Pirates had four offensive players who were listed as Honorable Mention for their accomplishments. Dennis Hull, Michael Henderson, Michael Arthur, and Charlie Ochoa all were picked in linemen positions, indicating the help they gave Simmons and Walls.

On defense, the Pirates did have two players to make Honorable Mention in Eddie Naro and Arthur.

The high number of players that the Pirates placed on the Teams and at Honorable Mention positions indicated the good caliber of players which took the field for Rockport-Fulton in 1981.

New superseed on the way

SAN ANTONIO — Some new varieties of improved onion seed are nearing the market due in part to a unique cooperative arrangement between selected growers and Texas A&M University.

R.A. "Bob" Peterson, Rio Grande City, president of the Texas Seed Improvement Assn., said more than $100,000 had been spent to date in the quest for purer seed and up to $250,000 additional would likely be added before the first seed become available to co-op members next fall.

The sale of seed allocations for $20 an acre when it becomes available, provided the front money enabling the project to get off the ground, Peterson told the Texas Vegetable Assn. annual meeting here recently.

David Brink, president of the American Bar Association, believes proposals in Congress to curb the power of federal courts pose serious constitutional questions.

The federal judiciary itself, especially during the past 20 years, has posed serious constitutional questions in wide-ranging rulings intruding into nearly every phase of American life.

Slowly but surely, the federal courts have encroached on individual freedom of choice, far exceeding their jurisdiction and in some cases giving the force of law to administrative rulings by government bureaucrats.

The federal judiciary has become deeply involved in making laws instead of interpreting them. The courts have usurped congressional prerogatives and violated the separation of powers provision of the Constitution.

Now with some 31 bills pending in Congress to strip federal courts of the power to rule on school busing, school prayer and abortion, strong opposition is beginning to surface and is being led by the American Bar Association.

Many of the cases decided by federal courts in the past two decades dealt with education. Some of the decisions cast federal judges in roles they were not qualified to play. Some of them tried to become educators with grandiose plans to run local school systems. They usurped the power and duties of elected school officials, substituting the iron will of the federal courts.

No wonder there are proposals before Congress to put a stop to this unconstitutional encroachment into local government. The Rockport Pilot hopes the best of these proposals will be enacted.

New Right strategists say they are determined to force broad changes in national policy by limiting the power of federal courts. This puts the New Right on a collision course with the liberal left.

"There is deep concern on the part of the average citizen about the power of the federal judiciary, because wherever you go in the country, it has intruded itself upon the local landscape," said New Right leader Paul Weyrich.

One of the main thrusts of the move against the federal courts is to persuade Congress to hand social issues over to state courts where they should be handled.

U.S. Attorney Gerald William French Smith agrees that congressional curbs are needed. He said "Federal courts have gone far beyond their abilities, and we believe the groundswell of conservatism evidenced by the 1980 election makes this an especially appropriate time to urge upon the courts more principled bases that would diminish judicial activism."

Mmm, mmm tamales...

Gayle Atchley and Nina Puster can't seem to wait for the upcoming tamale and bake sale sponsored by the Women of the Church of St. Peter's Episcopal. The sale will be Dec. 4, but tamales can be ordered now and picked up before that date, by calling 729-5687 or 729-2649. Baked goods, jellies and homemade Christmas decorations, such as the ones shown above, will be available for purchase at the sale, which will be held in the church parish hall.

The Real Estate Consumer

Corporations offer real estate jobs

If you are interested in a real estate career, here is an area you might explore.

Texas corporations own property worth billions of dollars. In the past, this real property was usually treated as a stepchild among the company's assets and was given no special attention. But with inflation and increasing real estate values, many companies are establishing special real estate staffs to acquire and manage real estate assets.

Some companies even find that expert management of such assets can create profits separate from those earned on the corporation's primary goods and services.

The Real Estate Consumer is provided as a public service by this newspaper and the Texas Real Estate Research Center. Address inquiries to the Texas Real Estate Research Center, Texas A&M University, College Station, Texas 77843.

Tickling the ivories

Backed up by Ranous Blankert on the saxophone, Mrs. Myrna Young, 83, entertains Winter Texans at last week's Potluck Supper at the Paws and Taws Building. Mrs. Young played a lot of "Golden Oldies" for some 50 to 60 winter residents of Aransas County. The Potluck Suppers on Wednesday nights and games nights on Mondays are sponsored by the Rockport-Fulton Tourist Association.

Hunters urged to wear eye protection

Hunters out to bag wild game need to be constantly aware that it only takes one botched shot to turn sport into tragedy. Harry Ploehn's story is proof says the Texas Society to Prevent Blindness.

Ploehn was on a Texas hunting trip, getting in some target practice when that one shot was fired. A 45-caliber lead bullet, it ricocheted off a tree and flew back toward him. But tragedy was averted when the bullet hit his safety glasses and was deflected to one side.

Ploehn suffered only facial lacerations, but had it not been for his safety glasses, he would have sustained major eye damage and joined the increasing number of hunters tragically hurt pursuing their favorite sport.

"The glasses that saved Ploehn's sight were industrial strength safety glasses," notes Jack B. O'Neill, Safety Chairman of Prevent Blindness. "Had they been ordinary streetwear, they surely would have cracked from the force of the bullet. They had side shields, too, which the Society also recommends. These afford extra protection from the tree and bush branches that so frequently scrape unprotected eyes as hunters push through thickets."

"For taking the precaution of wearing safety glasses, Ploehn has been awarded membership in the Prevent Blindness Wise Owl Club," O'Neill noted. "This national organization has more than 3,000 members in Texas alone, all of whom saved their own sight by having on eye protection at the time of a potentially blinding accident. TSPB also extends special congratulations to Ploehn for carrying the safety practiced at his work site, The Western Electric Company in Mesquite, into his off-the-job activities."

The Society recommends regular eye examinations for all hunters, O'Neill went on. According to the New York Department of Environmental Conservation one of the most frequent causes of hunting accidents last year was a hunter shot by a companion.

"Hunters shouldn't go out with defective guns or defective sight," said O'Neill. "And always take safety precautions; had Harry Ploehn not worn eye protection on that hunting trip, he might never have been able to go on another."

Those who wish information on other good "off-the-job" eye safety practices are encouraged to send a a slip," Holman says.

"The district owns the slips and it shouldn't have to compete with anybody," continued Holman.

Holman says the problem may have been solved with the creation of the new list for slips and he says, "That was my idea. I came up with that idea because I live in this harbor and I have to do business with these people."

"It's my feeling that slips that are leased to individuals, and the list should be posted in the navigation district's office so anyone can walk into the navigation district's office and look at those two lists..." said Holman.

Holman then brought up the matter of nonfeasance saying, "The attack on me personally is nonfeasance. The meetings since the Oct. meeting and public statements by two commissioners constitutes malfeasance of office, I think" Holman said.

"And what I'm going to ask the grand jury if that is in case so," continued Holman. "I'm not accusing anybody of anything, I'm just saying there's a question in my mind about it," Holman said.

Holman continued by saying the navigation district was not interested in proving anything, "They were just interested in embarrassing me and attacking me personally," he said.

Holman said, "The commissioners have made such a marvelous joke of this whole thing and such a mess out of it that it needs to be turned over to an investigative body and let them investigate this whole thing."

He then moved to the issue of falsification of official records saying, "That's all that needs to be said."

He said the navigation district has obviously misled a whole bunch of people in this county, both to their intent and their future actions.

Asked how the people have been misled, he said, "There are a whole bunch of people who expect me to give up my bait stand and resign, right? Well doesn't that constitute nonfeasance of office?"

Holman said that what has been done to the district as a whole is completely unjust, "I'm going to ask for an investigation of all leases," said Holman.

"People can criticize me and say that I'm doing something wrong, then they sit here and tell me the rest of the board members aren't doing anything wrong, but something's wrong somewhere and I've only been here two or three months and it's my feeling that I may not be all right but I think I've at least got enough common sense to know when there is something drastically wrong."

Holman said the district has been mismanaged so long that it is a tragedy. He said every small businessman in this county should be interested in what's going on at the district board meetings.

"It's my opinion that it's been mismanaged so badly for so long that it may not ever recover," Holman said.

Holman said that after the interview he was going to an undisclosed motel room and would be unavailable for comment until he could see the grand jury because a threat had been made against his life.

Game thief calls accelerating

AUSTIN — The opening of deer hunting season across the state this week brought a flurry of calls into the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's "Operation Game Thief" toll-free telephone line.

Operation Game Thief, which was authorized by the 67th Texas Legislature and financed by organizations and individuals, rewards persons who report information leading to arrests and convictions for violations of the state's hunting and fishing laws.

"During the first month of operation we received about 50 calls, some of which resulted in further investigations in the field," said Harold Oates, coordinator of the Austin operation. "The number of calls has increased noticeably since deer season opened in most counties Saturday (Nov. 14)."

The Operation Game Thief number is 1-800-729-GAME. It is operational on a 24-hour basis.

"Many of the callers provide good information, but some fail to provide enough information to obtain an arrest," said Oates. He said persons observing violations should pay attention to important details such as vehicle license numbers, accurate descriptions of persons or vehicles involved, exact time and location of the offense and direction of travel.

The six-member Operation Game Thief Committee will meet at Austin in April to review cases processed during the six months prior to the meeting, then disburse rewards ranging from $50 to $200.

"The program is off to a good start, and I believe it will continue to become an effective tool in combating the growing problem of poaching," Oats said.

Vitamin E proved effective in blindness prevention

HOUSTON — A research study of 150 premature infants at Texas Children's Hospital here shows conclusive evidence of the effectiveness of Vitamin E in preventing retrolental fibroplasia, a retinal disease of premature infants which causes total blindness or severe retinal damage in hundreds of babies every year.

Results of the study — described as a medical breakthrough — will be announced today (Dec. 3) in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Helen Hittner, M.D., Houston pediatric ophthalmologist, will give a paper on the research project at the Special Ross Laboratories Conference on Retinopathy of Prematurity, Dec. 4-6 in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Hittner led a team of specialists in the study which was supported by a grant from the Retina Research Foundation.

It is estimated that nearly 550 infants are totally blinded and 2,100 are affected to a lesser degree annually in the U.S. by retrolental fibroplasia. This disease of the retina occurs in premature infants who require oxygen for breathing problems during the newborn period.

Vitamin E is a natural anti-oxidant which can be given by mouth to prevent damage caused by oxygen in the preterm retina.

This study involved 150 infants, weighing three pounds and five ounces or less at birth, who required oxygen for breathing problems associated with their prematurity. Half of the infants were treated with oral Vitamin E and half were controls (double-blind randomized study). The study showed a marked reduction in the severity of retrolental fibroplasia in the group treated with Vitamin E.

Parents can help with writing

RESTON, VIRGINIA — For years educators have used instinct in teaching writing skills, but that's about to change, according to Allan A. Glatthorn, associate professor of education, University of Pennsylvania.

Glatthorn, in a National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP) monograph titled "Writing in the Schools: Improvement Through Effective Leadership," says there is a special role for parents to play as schools strengthen instruction in composition.

"Any new program will be more successful if it has the support and understanding of the parents," Glatthorn reported. The school and the home are partners in a very important enterprise, and parents can help their children improve writing skills.

He provides 10 recommendations on how parents can assist. 1) Encourage all members of the family to use writing as one way of keeping in touch: writing letters, memos, notes, and messages. 2) Develop family writing projects: keeping family diaries, writing in family journals, recording family narratives, writing family poems. 3) Read together as a family, encouraging family members to read, and building a family library. 4) Post writing of family members on a bulletin board in the home. 5) Edit children's writing when help is requested and encourage children to use a family dictionary to check spelling and capitalization. 6) Set up a "writing center" in the home where family members can write undisturbed: a quiet spot, with a good writing surface, a desk chair, and reference books. 7) Encourage children to take time to explore, plan, and revise when they write. 8) Encourage children to read to the family early drafts of their writing and help family members give each other constructive feedback. 9) Discuss books and writers, and emphasize the value of writing. 10) Keep in close touch with the school about children's progress in writing.

Glatthorn indicated that there is new research in the field of writing instruction, and that it will lead to improved composition skills.

He reported that the composing process is complex and involves five different stages: exploring, planning, drafting, revising and sharing.

"We now have a significant body of evidence which reveals that skilled and unskilled writers differ markedly in the way they compose," Glatthorn wrote. "The unskilled writer, unlike the skilled composer, makes only minimal use of plans and revises in a perfunctory manner."

Unskilled writers typically make no plans before they begin, write in a way that imitates speech, and view revision mainly as "error hunting", according to the author. Skilled writers spend more time in drafting; frequently stop to rescans, reread and reflect; are more concerned with content and reader appeal, and see revising as recursive and ongoing.

Oceans of Seafood

offers wide variety and freshness

When David Wells says that Oceans of Seafood carries "a complete line of seafood," he's not kidding. Oysters, lobster tails, crab, black tip shark, red snapper, tuna and other deep-water fish, as well as drum, flounder and other bay fare are all available. And of course, there's lots of shrimp.

Since opening in March, Oceans of Seafood, owned and operated by Wells and partner Harold Hubbell, has expanded facilities to include a huge walk-in freezer. The freezer allows Wells and Hubbell the opportunity to keep seafood as fresh as possible, even when out of season.

And the fish at this fish market is definitely fresh. Brought in regularly from Wells' and Hubbell's own boats, the seafood is guaranteed to be high quality.

Hubbell's wife Joanne is the store manager and according to her, "the quality of the fish and the freshness is getting better all the time."

Says Wells, "We're constantly expanding our line of seafood." Proof of that claim is illustrated by one of the Oceans of Seafood specialties — fresh Louisiana trout and redfish, brought in by trucks weekly.

Once the fish is purchased and the cook is ready to cook there's still plenty of items available at "Oceans" to make that seafood dinner the best. A complete line of Louisiana and Mississippi spices and mixes are offered at the fish market. That includes crab boil, file, fish dip, creole sauces, hush puppy mix, tarter sauce — "everything you need," says Joanne.

And if getting the fish home cold is a problem, don't worry. At Oceans of Seafood, the purchase can be quick-frozen, packed and prepared for travel. Also available are ice and ice chests.

The store is located on Highway 35, in Holiday Beach. Phone number of Oceans of Seafood is 729-6011. As Wells says, "If you don't know where you are, just look for all the bright orange signs!"

Enjoy your fireplace safely

Crisp fall nights and coming cold ones signal the return of fireplace season for homeowners fortunate enough to have them. Proper tools and procedures ensure a merrily blazing hearth and safe enjoyment of its pleasures, says Alfred Edge, President of Alfred Edge Realtors in Rockport, Texas. If your home lacks a fireplace, Edge says, manufactured metal ones are readily available and affordable — and they'll add to the resale value of your home. Before starting your first fire of the season, he counsels, always check to be sure no leaves or other obstructions are clogging your chimney. Otherwise, you'll have a roomful of smoke and risk setting an unwanted blaze — on your roof. You don't really need many tools, though many are available. A poker, a log-lifter, a small shovel for the ashes, a woodbox for indoor storage of logs, a firescreen to baffle sparks and perhaps a bellows will suffice. Some enterprising homeowners have found that an electric blow-dryer beats a bellows to supply a draft when starting fireplace blazes," Edge says. Building a fire shouldn't be a chore. Use dry hardwoods, plenty of kindling and crumpled newspapers between andirons or under the grate. Then put in one log at least an inch from the back wall of the fireplace and another in front, leaving just a little space between them for air flow. Later, when the fire is going well, top the two logs with a third. But don't stoke a match too soon, Edge warns. First be sure the damper is fully open. That's the movable metal plate or door between the hearth and chimney flue. "If it's even partly closed, smoke gets in your eyes," he says. "The damper should remain open as long as the fire burns. When things cool off, close it to prevent heat loss." When the logs are properly placed and you're sure the damper is fully open, roll up a piece of newspaper as a torch, ignite it and hold it above the logs for a few seconds to warm the air and produce a draft. Finally, enjoy!

is Totally Nice

Before You Buy Beef... Look for the Grade.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has many grades of beef. These are PRIME, CHOICE, GOOD, STANDARD and COMMERCIAL grades. All H.E.B. Steakhouse Beef cuts are U.S.D.A. CHOICE! To rate the choice grade, the beef cuts must be very tender, juicy and flavorful and must have good marbling (fat) to add to the flavor. Choice beef may be broiled, pan-broiled or fried and still maintain its choice qualities. At H.E.B. we're fussy about the beef we offer you. That's why we have our meat plant and why we offer you U.S.D.A. Choice Beef.

America is burying itself in a mountain of trash

America seems to be burying itself under mountains of trash — the discarded of an affluent, throw-away society. Each of us generates enormous refuse each year, from toothpaste containers to junked TV sets. With agricultural, mining and industrial wastes added, the total amounts to a staggering 4.5 billion tons each year. This is how the waste load breaks down:

- Agricultural activities generate most wastes, some 2.3 billion tons.
- Mining accounts for another 1.7 billion tons.

- Municipal solid waste amounts to approximately 150 million tons.
- Industries add another 347 million tons.
- Of this total waste load, 58 million tons — or one percent — are estimated to be hazardous if improperly managed.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has listed more than 300 substances as hazardous wastes. In addition, EPA has designated ignitable, corrosive, reactive or toxic wastes as hazardous if they meet certain criteria. They take many forms — solids, sludges, liquids and gases — and are produced by many sources scattered across the country. Without proper management, they could pose a threat to human health or the environment.

Because no industrial process is 100 percent efficient, some chemicals end up discarded as waste. Residues that can't be recycled must be stored, treated or disposed of as wastes to ensure that they do not harm the environment. There are many ways to accomplish this.

But first the nature of the waste must be considered — its physical and chemical characteristics, volume and the constituents that make it hazardous. Other important factors in selecting the best treatment include the degree of hazard anticipated, the degree of treatment needed, energy use and economic practicalities. Overriding all is the question of environmental impact: Will the final residues from waste management be safe for controlled release to air, water or land?

Physical, chemical and biological systems can render hazardous wastes less harmful, depending on the type, quantity and concentration of constituents. Most wastewater treatment systems in the industry rely on biological degradation, using bacteria to consume the waste and turn it into carbon dioxide and water. The dominant type of bacteria used depends on the waste. In some cases, it is the kind naturally associated with human sewage treatment. Wastes that are more difficult to treat sometimes yield to microbes specially acclimated to them. The treatment leaves behind a sludge. Some is recycled to keep the process going. The remainder is incinerated or put into a landfill.

Chemical treatment includes such processes as neutralization — a simple, economical practice often employed for hazardous waste streams that are too acidic or alkaline. Adding the right chemical can restore the proper balance. Lime, for example, neutral-izes acidic wastewater. Other chemical treatment may involve oxidation or reaction with water or other agents.

Incineration, landfills and deepwell injection also are used by the chemical industry to treat or dispose of hazardous wastes. Done properly, each one can be regarded as an ultimate method for getting rid of potential harmful by-products.

Incineration can be used for certain types of liquid and solid wastes, greatly reducing their volume. The process destroys harmful constituents, and the ash can be put into landfills.

Landfills that are properly destroyed, operated and monitored are one of the best ways to dispose of many industrial wastes. Secure chemical landfills are constructed with an impervious clay base or man-made liner to contain rainwater contaminated from contact with the wastes. This leachate may be recycled through the landfill or treated separately so that it can be safely discarded.

Accent On Health

You may see them throughout Texas — along highways, in parking lots or near shopping centers. They're oyster bootleggers from the back of a pickup truck or camper or directly from their boats on the coast.

The present economic crunch is providing support for illegal or "bootleg" shellfish activities in the state, reports the Shellfish Sanitation Control Division of the Texas Department of Health.

During the past few years, as oyster prices have soared, the bootleg operators have proliferated. A bootleg operation is one that is not under state inspection. The sanitary quality of the product could be highly questionable since such operations do not have the necessary facilities to process shellfish under conditions which will produce a safe product.

In addition, the shellfish may have been taken illegally from polluted shellfish growing areas and stored or handled under unsanitary conditions.

"Normally," said Richard E. Thompson, chief sanitarian in the Shellfish Sanitation Control Division, "such products are sold in glass 'mayonnaise type' jars with no seals, numbers or identification relative to who packed the oysters. These oysters are usually cheaper than the oysters processed by certified dealers. The certified dealers have an investment in buildings, equipment and containers to produce safe oysters."

Anyone who purchases oysters from unknown sources faces the prospect of becoming ill, said Thompson. "The Texas Department of Health makes every effort to properly classify growing waters, certify and inspect processors, and eliminate bootleg operations, but the consumer is the ultimate decision maker."

Various illnesses can be caused by eating oysters taken from polluted waters, including cholera, hepatitis, dysentery, typhoid and several types of gastroenteritis.

While cholera isn't identified too often, cases stemming from contaminated oysters were reported in Florida in the past two years, according to Neil B. Travis, Director of the Shellfish Sanitation Control Division. Cholera has been confirmed in Jefferson County in two persons this year and 12 workers on a drilling rig off the Texas-Louisiana Coast.

Hepatitis remains a serious threat in oysters taken from unapproved waters. In an outbreak in 1973 in Houston, a total of 268 cases were confirmed in one incident. Cause of the outbreak was traced to an out-of-state shipment of oysters, which were found to have been harvested illegally from polluted waters.

A number of prominent citizens and public officials in Wharton County became ill with nausea, fever and vomiting after eating oysters bought from a bootleg dealer last year.

"As long as some people continue to buy oysters from people driving around in a truck, or parked down the street or in a parking lot, without demanding a certified product, these operations will continue and people will continue to get sick," said Thompson.

Watch the oysters you buy

Crime takes toll in money and fear

One of the most pervasive problems facing American society today is crime. It takes an enormous toll on its victims, of course. But it affects all of us indirectly.

When you buy an item in the store, you pay more to make up for the cost of shoplifting and security. When you pay your taxes you pay for your city's best effort to prevent crime. Worse, you pay a price for crime in fear.

Crime has become an increasing problem. Statistics indicate that within any given 30-minute period, one person will be murdered, nine women will be raped, 67 will be robbed, 97 assaulted, and 389 families the victim of burglary.

But the American people have had enough. A recent poll showed almost half of the respondents named crime as the most important problem confronting their area. This was true both in a large eastern state and in a booming Sun Belt city. Even a relatively trouble-free college community found 55 percent of its voters declaring that establishing law and order was the single-most important issue facing their local government.

A bipartisan U.S. Attorney General's Task Force has made a number of recommendations to curb the rate of crime and to address some of the problems we have in prosecuting successfully those guilty of crime.

For instance, one recommendation would allow courts to deny bail to a defendant who, after careful safeguards to prevent abuse, had been determined to be dangerous or likely to jump even very high bail.

Another recommendation is for legislation to permit judges to order criminals to make financial restitution to their victims.

Together, the task force recommendations represent a comprehensive and thoughtful package which will be considered carefully in Congress. The American people are going to insist that their representatives take steps to make their cities, their streets, and their homes safe. Government — national, state and local — must have no responsibility more important than that.
