COMPLETIONS ADD 4256 BARRELS TO DAILY POTENTIAL

Nine Locations Add
To Activity of Busy Week

BY PAUL OSBORNE
Four new field completions added a total of 4,256 barrels potential daily to West Texas production during the past week, with one test abandoned as dry, while nine new locations were announced and three old wells prepared to deepen.

Of the Basin's widest operations, none established conclusive information as to their value, but tests for completion one way or the other were under way.

One of the locations just officially announced has been heard of locally, and is to be known as the York and Harper and Harry Adams Corporation No. 1 Hereford Stock Farms, Inc., 3,500 varas (8,333 feet) from the west line and 2,500 varas (5,556 feet) from the south line of League 315, Parmer county school land, extreme north-central Andrews county. Location will be five miles north and three miles east of the Means area, and will test a theory that the central platform east edge producing zone extends from the Means area in this north-east direction.

Three in Ector
Three announced Ector county locations will be development wells in the North Cowden field, one in the north part and the others to the south. Amerada Petroleum Corporation will offset to the east the Continental No. 2 Holt produce, with its No. 1 Holt, 1,980 feet from the south and east lines of section 20, block 4, public school land.

Stanford Oil and Gas company Nos. 13 and 14 J. M. Cowden will be drilled in section 27, block 43, township 1 north, T. & P. Railway survey, the former 1,980 feet from the south and east lines of the section and the latter 660 feet from the north and east lines. No. 14 will be the northernmost of the 23 wells in the southern part of the field and will leave an area of only a mile and a half north-south extent between the two areas.

Ward county received one new field location in the Sid Richardson No. 11-B Johnson, which will be 2,310 feet from the southeast line and 990 feet from the northeast line of section 22, block 34, H. & T. C. survey, southern part of the county. Gulf Production company No. 16 Hutchins in northern Ward, 135 rings up to deepen from a previous total depth of 2,754 feet.

Two more wells are announced for the Tippetts area of eastern Pecos county, where shallow production is the goal. They are the Stanolind Oil and Gas company No. 9-B Tippetts, 3,188 feet from the east line and 950 feet from the south line of section 61, block 194, C. & S. P. Railway survey; and the same company and Continental Oil company No. 4-C Tippetts, 330 feet north and 600 feet west of the southeast corner of the lease in section 40, same block.

Gulf to Shoot
In Crane county, Gulf Production is moving in a series of tests to deepen and shoot its No. 4-C Crier-McElroy, located in the center of the northwest corner of the northwest quarter of section 18, block F. C. S. D. & R. C. N. G. Railway survey, which was formerly bottomed at 2,845 feet. The same company is digging cellar for a new location, to be known as its No. 1 W. N. Wagner, at the corner of the northwest quarter of section 4, block B-27, public school land, which will be a wildcat test in the central-west part of the county, some 15 miles east of a slightly north of southern Ward county production.

Upton county will add another dangle operation with the start of Stanolind Oil and Gas company No. 35 Burleson, 2,970 feet from the north and east lines of section 2 of the J. Nidever survey.

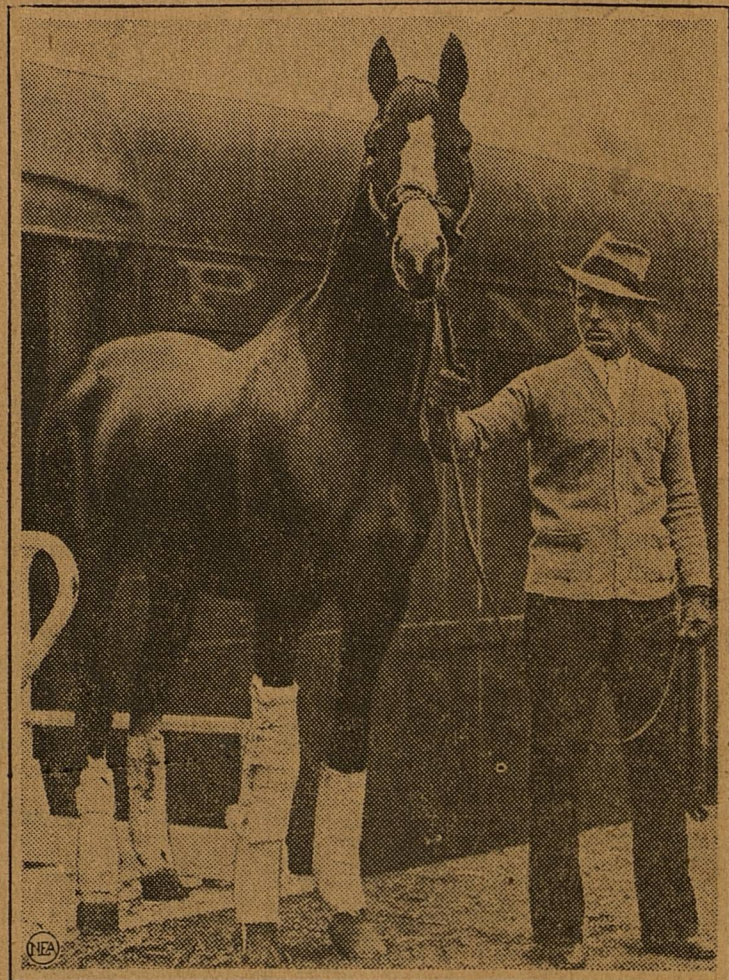

The other new drilling deeper is the Humble Oil and Refining company No. 1 R. M. Means, discovery well of the northern Andrews county area, which will be cleaned out and drilled deeper after rotary equipment is installed, the equipment being moved over from the same company's No. 1 J. S. Means location.

Completions favor Ward county, where the California company No. 15 Durgin registered initial production of 2,950 barrels per day through casing on perforation gauge from total depth of 2,559 feet; the same company's No. 14-A York made 140 barrels per day flowing on perforation gauge through inch and a quarter tubing from total depth of 2,525 feet; and Sid Richardson No. 9-B Johnson gained 1,068 barrels per day on perforation test, flowing through tubing from total depth of 2,580 feet. All three producers are in block 34, H. & T. C. Railway survey, the Durgin being 990 feet from the northwest line and 2,310 feet from the southeast line of section 15; the York, 1,550 feet from the southwest line and 990 feet from the southeast line of section 18; and the Sid Richardson well 990 feet from the northeast line and 1,550 feet from the southeast line of section 22.

The fourth producer completed during the week was in Upton county, the Gulf Production company No. 11 Crier-McElroy, 1,320 feet from the south and west lines of section 18, block F. C. S. D. & R. C. N. G. Railway survey, which established a potential of 98 barrels per day through tapered tubing from 2,893 feet.

'California Here I Am'

Major league racing has returned to California after an absence of many years. Ten other thoroughbreds were in a shipment from Lexington, Ky., but all attention was focused on Ladysman, shown above with W. Phillips, and Osceola, aces of the W. R. Coe string, upon their arrival at the new Santa Anita Park track, hard by Los Angeles. Both are scheduled to be nominated for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap to be run Feb. 13.

Mexico's Young President

Mexico's new president, inaugurated Friday, is only 33 years old. The former General Lazaro Cardenas has had long military service and has performed much public work in his native state, Michoacan, Cardenas. He headed the national revolutionary party ticket and was elected to succeed Abelardo Rodriguez. In assuming the presidency he began a six year program of reconstruction. A crowd of 70,000 witnessed the inauguration.

"Baby Face" Funeral Like Those of Gang War Rage

CHICAGO, Dec. 1. (UP)—Funeral services reminiscent of the days when gang warfare raged in Chicago were held today over the body of George "Baby Face" Nelson.

Hundreds of curious onlookers lined the streets where the late public enemy No. 1 was laid out in a glistening silver-like casket, and a high with yellow chrysanthemums and red rose buds. The streets outside were jammed.

The services lasted for only a few minutes. Burial was at St. Joseph's cemetery in the suburbs. Federal agents were at the funeral, looking for Nelson's wife if she should appear.

Govt. Cattle Bring More Than $150,000

Midland county's share of Uncle Sam's cattle purchase money will pass the $150,000 mark when all checks are in, a resume by the county agricultural agent's office Saturday showed.

Indications were that the purchasing had been completed here, as all of the last orders had been filled and the cattle shipped.

A federal agent of the federal reserve system into a virtual "central bank" through concentration of its powers in federal government was reported to be under consideration today.

"Evergreen" Was Bedford's Name, Centre '91 Squad

E. G. Bedford, Midland oil man, attended a reunion of his old Centre college football team October 10 at Danville, Ky.

It was remarkable that all members of the team of 1891, on which he played, were present at the reunion, as were the coach and the referee of that year.

The get-together was on the occasion of the "Praying Colonels" game with Morehead college, the Centre team beating the rivals 47 to 0. A round of dinners, public meetings and appearances for photographs on the football field, between halves of the game, occurred.

A football used by the '91 squad was presented to Bedford who brought it home with him after it had been exhibited at Dallas by Prof. J. Elmer Turner of Dallas, a team mate.

Mrs. Bedford accompanied her husband on the Kentucky trip and they revisited a number of interesting spots before returning south. Speaking of E. G. "Evergreen" Bedford, member of the famous 1891 squad, the Kentucky Advocate, attention was called to the fact that Bedford didn't use to fill that position of Center Rush a la Kubale style? He was a terror in his day and he smashed the opposition like it was a house of paper cards.

Bill Potter Has Red Bluff Store

Bill Potter and wife visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Potter, during the Thanksgiving holidays. He is putting in a general store at the new town of Red Bluff, near the site of the Red Bluff dam. His building has been completed and the stock will be installed immediately. Potter formerly was associated with dry goods firms here but later was connected with a Carlisle, N. M., hotel.

Relief Program May Cost Seven Billion

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1. (UP)—The federal government's program of relief was taking shape today. It was indicated it may cost at the most $7,000,000,000 next year.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the conditions is serious yet, with 10,500,000 persons out of work.

PLAN TO PRESERVE SURPLUS CITRUS CROP

AUSTIN, Dec. 1. (UP)—Relief plants to can surplus grapefruit and oranges from Rio Grande valley products were proposed by the Texas Relief commission, cooperating with the federal surplus corporation today. Cans of peanut butter may be made in beef canneries which were scheduled to close down in two weeks.

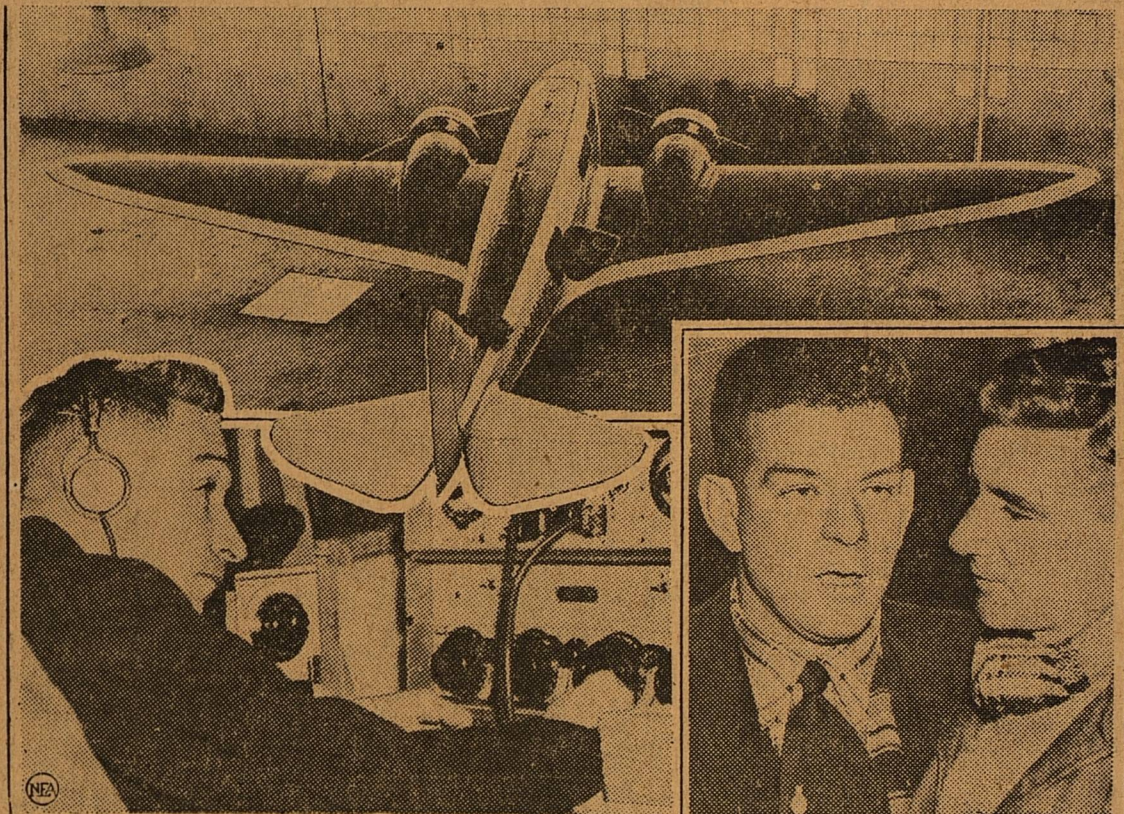

Blizzard Sinks Ship; One Dead

MUSKEGON, Mich., Dec. 1. (UP)—A blizzard raging over twelve midwestern states sank the 2,000-ton steamer Henry Cort in Muskegon harbor early today.

At least one life was lost and traffic and communications were disrupted by the sixty mile an hour storm. John Dipert, of Frankfort, Mich., was drowned.

THE FORECAST WEST TEXAS, Sunday partly cloudy, somewhat unsettled, colder in north portion.

Ulm and Party Ready for Ocean Hop

Weather conditions permitting, Capt. Charles Ulm and his two Australian companions, who were grounded here Tuesday, were poised for a takeoff Saturday afternoon or today on a transatlantic flight to their homeland from Oakland, Calif. This point having been selected Friday by the leader in preference to Vancouver, B. C. Leaving about three o'clock this afternoon, they hope to reach Hawaii sometime Monday afternoon, and will be met some 100 miles off the coast of the island by an escort of army planes, notified by radio of their approach. Above is shown the Stella Australis, their specially built English Air Speed Envoy ship, and the three instructors. J. Leon Skilling, radio operator and navigator is shown lower left seated before his $15,000 radio equipment which is placed in a small compartment of the ship where the open door is shown; and lower right shows Capt. Ulm, former partner of Kingsford-Smith, left, and George McC. Littlejohn, copilot of the flight.

"Babes in the Woods" Are Buried Near Death Scene

MARTIN LOCATION NEAR MIDLAND IS TO SPUD DEC. 15

Reports here Saturday indicated that materials are being moved to a wildcat oil location in Martin county, three miles northeast of Germania and a mile north of the highway.

Wright and Scott of Wichita Falls were said to have made the location on a 12,000 acre block the well to be on the land of F. W. Flanagan, in the northeast corner of section 22, block 37, township 1-south, T. & P. Railway company survey.

NANCES RETURN

Tom Nance and wife returned Saturday from Lexington, Ky., where they have spent the past month. Nance sold several loads of yearlings and calves and bought a car load of thoroughbred mares and fillies while there.

HOLDERS RETURN

Allen Holder and wife have returned to Midland after attending a series of summer and fall rodeos in practically all sections of the United States. The last in which Holder, outstanding calf roper, competed were at Madison Square Garden, New York, Boston and other eastern cities.

Beavers Gathered His Wood

SHENANDOAH, Pa. (UP)—Beavers are grateful for favors, according to Jack Stucker, of Danville, near here. Stucker said he strengthened a beaver dam which had become weak. Several days later, the beavers dragged enough wood beside the dam to last Stucker all winter.

Looks Forward to Local Pastorate

By REV. E. B. CHANCELLOR
The Rev. J. E. Pickering of Fort Worth, who will become pastor of the First Christian church here January 1, sends word that he is looking forward to a happy and helpful ministry in Midland.

Mr. Pickering has been serving as pastor of the Riverside church of Ft. Worth for five years, during which time he has made a most commendable record. He comes to Midland highly recommended by his church officials and also by the state secretary of Christian Churches, who also lives in Fort Worth.

Rev. Pickering is 33 years of age; a graduate of the University of Mississippi, being also a native of that state; has a wife and four children, ages 12 to 6. After completing his university course he served two years as missionary for southern Louisiana, under auspices of the United Christian Missionary society.

He was pastor of the First Christian church of Logansport, Ind., for four years, resigning that post five years ago to accept call to the field at Fort Worth.

Rev. Pickering has a spirit to cooperate in every good work. At present he is president of the ministerial association of Christian churches in Fort Worth, and last year served as president of the district convention in the missionary work of the state. He has been active in the civic life of the city as well as in the religious work.

BROADWAY SHOWS, TOO LATE, THAT IT HAS A HEART

One of the least lovely traits we possess is our fondness for making a sentimental fuss over the coffins of people who never got a decent break from us while they were alive.

That peculiar community symbolized by the word "Broadway" went in for a regular orgy of that sort of thing the other day when an old woman known as "Apple Annie" was laid to rest.

Apple Annie was a poor old woman who for years supported herself by peddling apples and chewing gum on Times Square. It wasn't such a hot way of making a living, as you can imagine; the thought of a woman of 70 keeping on the pavement in all kinds of weather to make a few dimes for her support isn't a pleasant one.

But Apple Annie stuck to it, and she enjoyed a moment of fame, a year ago. Someone wrote a story about her, the story was transformed into a movie—and a press agent came along and used Apple Annie to ballyhoo the picture.

She was turned into a lady for a day; they put her up at a fine hotel, trotted her around Broadway in a big car, dressed her up in fine clothing, gave her a swell meal—and then, after it was all over, let her go back to the apple-peddling game.

As a matter of fact, people completely forgot about her. Like other businesses, the selling of apples suffered a diminishing profit margin. Besides, Apple Annie was pretty well on in years. Presently she vanished, and nobody knew what had happened.

Then, a few days ago, Apple Annie turned up—in the city morgue. She had died during the night, she and the enfeebled old husband whom her earnings as a peddler had helped keep alive. She lay in the morgue a week before anyone recognized her.

But once she was identified, Broadway turned out to give her a fine funeral. Stars from the stage and the night clubs gathered by her coffin. Expensive bouquets and wreaths were sent. Broadway, as they say, showed that it "had a heart."

So Apple Annie had two big days; one when a press agent used her to ballyhoo a movie, and one when she was buried.

If we had a decent amount of genuine human sympathy, wouldn't we have spread all that fuss out a little bit more, so that the poor old lady could have got a little good out of it?

The drouth has caused Emporia, Kan., to restrict its residents to only four inches of water in their bath tubs, but the city as yet has made no ruling against singing in the bath.

THE GREATEST GIFT

The Merry Widow
Adapted by GERTRUDE GELBIN
From the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Ernst Lubitsch Production
Starring MAURICE CHEVALIER and JEANETTE MACDONALD and What Has Happened Before
After Danilo's first surprise at discovering that Sonia is his wife, he was told that she was his wife. Then she discovers he has been commissioned by the King to marry her so that her wealth will remain in Marshovia. Her heart is broken. She believed he loved her, as she does him. He does—but nothing he can say or do now, can convince her. Once again she is forced to spurn this man who has won her heart completely.

CHAPTER X
On Trial for Love
Danilo left Sonia in despair and made for the dancing salon. Guests rushed to him from all sides, congratulating him, shaking his hand, uttering praises for the lady of his choice and high good wishes for himself. He stood there in glory, silence, too deeply hurt to answer or correct them.
Sonia watched it all from a corner of the room. The tears coursed down her cheeks as her own name or Danilo's reached her above the babble of voices. Then she heard Danilo clearly.
"Ladies and gentlemen," he was saying, "I wish to correct a misunderstanding. The announcement of Madame's engagement has been made without Madame's knowledge or consent. I am speaking for Madame Sonia when I say that Madame has never entertained the slightest thought of such an engagement."
A murmur of surprise greeted his announcement. Sonia closed her eyes and held her hand to her heart. This, then, was the final break between them. Danilo came to her side. His manner held the quiver of despair, his voice was toneless with sorrow.
"Madame," he said, "I know it's all over. There is nothing left to be said. I shall make no attempt to explain. There's only one thing I want to say before I go—'I love you, Fili.'" Sonia's eyes blazed with all the hostility of a deeply hurt woman. "Now what do you expect me to do?" she asked. "Fall into your arms? Oh, Marshovia selected the right man. You are brilliant, Captain, too brilliant."
Forcing herself to smile, she accosted a group of men standing politely at attention. "Shall we dance gentlemen?" she asked with assumed gaiety.
The door opened and two Marshovian officers entered the room. Sonia, her head thrown back, her eyes bright with tears, her mouth set in a smile, saw them approach Danilo. She danced away with her partner before she heard what they said to him.
"Sorry, Captain. In the name of His Majesty, you are under arrest."
Danilo saluted. He turned over his sword and insignia. With bowed head he marched out of the Embassy. Under escort, he rode to the station to entrain back to Marshovia.
"Extra! Extra!" The streets of Marshovia were filled with the cry. An old woman hawked the latest news.
"Trial opens today. Captain Danilo on trial! Widow withdrawn! money from country. Extra! Extra!"
Shepherds, peasants, cowherds, soldiers, babies and musicians thronged the streets to hear the recent editions, to read the latest news off the press.
In the royal Palace, King Achmed and Queen Dolores scanned the papers.
"It's terrible," the king said angrily. "This is the worst press we've ever had." He lunged down his paper in disgust as he called down the corridor:
"Gabrilowitch! More clippings, please."
"What are we going to do?" he continued to Dolores. "If the widow doesn't change her mind, we can close up the kingdom."
"Darling," asked the Queen, "does our insurance against loss cover the throne, too?"
He answered, "His fine show of bravery left him. He bowed his head in his hands. 'Oh, Dolores, Dolores.'" Looks like exile to me," she observed sadly.
"What are we going to do?" he cried again. "Go on the vaudeville stage and sing?"
Three heavy cannon shots boomed through the Palace windows.
The King seized the Queen in fright.
"Gabrilowitch!" he bawled. "What is it? Revolution?"
Gabrilowitch bounded into the room. "No, Your Majesty. The guns just announced the opening of the trial."
The King and Queen almost swooned with relief.
"Go to the courtroom, Gabrilowitch," ordered His Majesty. "Follow every detail. Report everything to me, at once."
Gabrilowitch took to his heels.
A court attendant opened the door as the file of witnesses paraded in. Secretary Zlapoff, Ambassador Popoff, the Turk and the Three Chinese from Maxim's; Mishka, Danilo's orderly; a court attendant carrying a stepladder; a second leading in Sonia's dog; a third carrying a large salami on a tray.
The judge raised his hand for the trial to begin as a soldier rolled a drum.
The prosecutor arose. "In the name of the State," he proclaimed, "I accuse Captain Danilo of high treason, failing in duty, disorderly conduct, incompetence, deliberately conspiring against the interests of his country and pawing his medals."

A long drawn sigh swept the room. The prosecutor continued sternly.
"Be not deceived by his demureness—by his charm." He pointed to Danilo. "Look at that innocent face. Believe me, behind that child-like expression is the black soul of a monster in human form. The State is going to prove that this man not only is—but always was—a menace to Marshovia."
He walked to the jury box and looked at the men assembled there as he raised his voice—"And with NO RESPECT for the sanctity of the home!"
He called his first witness, Sonia's dog.
"Moreover, Gentlemen," he continued, "I shall prove that this monster undermined the morals of man's best friend! And with what?"
He paused to point to his first exhibit—the tray of salami. His mouth buttoned in anger. There was no salami to be seen. The dog looked up at him contentedly, licking his chops and yawning. The prosecutor looked helplessly at the jury—at the judge at the prisoner. He felt his case was collapsing.
There was commotion in court. Someone was trying to push through the crowds. The spectators rose in excitement. Danilo half stood in the prisoner's box. The prosecutor smiled broadly in welcome. The defense attorney mopped his brow. As the judge turned to bellow "Order!" his eyes fell upon the newcomer, standing uncertainly in the aisle.
It was Sonia.
She hurried to the Judge's desk. "Your honor," she said, "when I read the charges against Count Danilo, I realized that this case concerned me."
Danilo raised a hand in protest. Then he looked nervously at the floor.
"And so I came here from Paris. May I be allowed to testify?"
The judge bowed. "The court appreciates your patriotism, Madame, and thanks you." He gestured to the prosecutor to take Sonia to the witness stand.
Sonia's voice trembled as she began. "As I understand it," she said, "you are charging the defendant with neglecting his duty and being a traitor to his country. Your honor, you are accusing an innocent man."
A loud murmur rose in the courtroom. Danilo stared at Sonia. The murmur rose to a babble as the judge banged his gavel for silence. Sonia sighed. "He did everything in his power to be true to Marshovia and to betray me." She knew she was losing control of her voice and she struggled to be calm. "But it was too much for her. 'Don't put him in jail,' she cried, 'give him a medal. A monument! Set him up as an example—a Marshovian Patriot who stopped—nothing.'"
She put her hands to her face. "He did his duty," she sobbed. "He used every stratagem. Every trick. He lied. He deceived us. He played with emotion, with medals."

We're not bragging, but next week's paper is going to be a lulu. The fact that it is to be such a hot number is not our fault, and we haven't anything to brag about ourselves, but a lot of our friends in high places have been kind enough to help us out on this one, and the result is an editor's dream come true. We are really proud of the edition we have to offer you next time, and hope that all of Odessa will be proud of it. After all, it is not so much our edition any-how—it belongs to Odessa. Yeah, we've been printing on that paper for two or three weeks ourselves... and it's really a lulu.

Home Economics Students Study Color for Red Head

This is the third of a series of articles by Clothing II students on choice of colors for clothing.

COLORS FOR THE RED HEAD

The girl with red hair is more limited in her choice of colors than other types but she may be content in knowing that no other type is quite so colorful or quite so striking in becoming colors as she. There are two general types under this class. The girl who has red hair with a blonde skin coloring and blue eyes and the girl with red hair, brunette skin coloring and brown eyes. In either case the first thing to be decided is whether the red-orange of the hair should be forced or subdued. If the color of the hair is to be suppressed, then the dull, dark browns will be better. If it is desired to emphasize the coloring of the hair, choose a soft green, blue-green or brownish green.

For the blue-eyed type, blue and green are, of course, the best colors. Blue-purple is very good because it emphasizes the hair. Pale yellow-orange is good, especially under artificial light. Brown is becoming except the dull, light tones as tan. She should always choose the soft, subdued colors rather than strong colors. Red and pink must be avoided because they clash with the red-orange of the hair and put too much color into an already florid face. Black and white are equally good.

If the eyes are brown and the skin brunette, deep cream tones will blend much better with her coloring than white. Brown-greys are good but blue-greys should be avoided. Brown is becoming in all tones while black is not so good. Warm, orange-browns may be worn that are not becoming to any other type of coloring. All tones of yellow are good for her, especially orange-yellow. Orange-reds, as henna, are often good if not too bright. All greens are becoming but only green-blues are good. Pure purple should be avoided as should also pure red and pink. As a general rule the darker colors are more flattering than the light tones.

It is well for us to remember that if the value is dark enough and the chroma is dull enough, a color is not conspicuously unbecoming to anyone. For instance, navy blue and auburn brown are worn by all types alike.

CLOTHING STUDENTS SAVE MONEY ON DRESSES

Approximately eighteen girls who are taking Clothing II will have new dresses for the Thanksgiving holidays. The dresses were planned and made as a class project and we shall take a great deal of pride in wearing them. They are dark tailored garments made of silk or wool or of a combination of silk and wool. Some of the more ambitious students made swag suits which are lined and lined and tailored in every detail. The dresses range in price from $3.15 to $7.25. If these had been bought ready made, they would have cost from $5 to $20, a saving of from $2 to $12.75 for each girl. The garments were on exhibit in Addison Wadley's store window last Tuesday and Wednesday.

FOODS II CLASS SERVE ECONOMY MEAL

The second year Foods class is studying the preparation and serving of dinners. The class has been divided into three groups, and each has been given a problem on planning, preparing and serving a dinner.

The first problem was to plan a dinner menu for a family of four. The father is a carpenter, the mother works in a store, the daughter, 12, is an invalid and the son, 14, is a football player. Their income is $12.00 a year, making $7.50 a day for food. The following menu was served:

Stuffed Flank Steak
Cabbage Carrot Salad
Rolls
Apple Pie
Hot Chocolate

This was served Tuesday, November 27, to Annadine Evans, hostess, Edythe Behols, host, Jane Holloway, daughter, Marguerite Wood, son, Kathryn Beauchamp, guest, Florine Hamlin, guest, Miss Vada Crawley, the instructor.

A color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the birthday cake and appointments. Favors were little airplanes made of chewing gum, candy, and mints. Present were Betty Lou Bobb, Elizabeth Ann Cowden, Eugene Heff, Dianne Debnam, Jean Conner,

Miss Scotti Shirey And Mr. J. D. Hicks Married Nov. 17

Miss Scotti Shirey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Shirey of Midland, and Mr. J. D. Hicks of San Angelo were married November 17, at the home of the Rev. Willis J. Ray in Big Spring.

The bride, who has lived in Midland for several years, is a graduate of Mincola high school. Until recently she was employed as clerk in the Hotel Scharbauer.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Hicks of San Angelo, is a graduate of San Angelo high school and an ex-student of Howard Payne college at Brownwood, where he was a football star.

He was formerly assistant manager of the Hotel Scharbauer here and is now employed as day clerk of the Naylor hotel in San Angelo where the couple will live.

Mr. and Mrs. Hicks will leave for their home today.

Old China, Glass In Library Display

A display of old china, glass, and bronze is now on exhibit in the children's room of the county library.

Dresden, Cloisonne, old and modern Delft, Wedgwood, Crown Derby, and other well-known chinas are included in the collection, which contains both amusing and decorative pieces.

Of particular interest are the Roman lamps, miniature in size, but authentic. The old-fashioned mustache cup draws a smile from the casual observer. An array of vases merits admiring comments. But what catches the eye is the collection of smelling salts bottles so beloved of fiction writers and of high-born young ladies when swooning was in fashion. These range from clear cut glass to painted china or porcelain.

Unusual in the collection are the pieces of pate-sur-pate with their decorative figures of paste applied on a dark background.

The exhibit will probably continue for some time and the public is invited to view it when the children's library is open in the afternoons.

World's Oldest Music Organization Sings at B'Spring

BIG SPRING.—The Vienna Choir Boys, world's oldest musical organization, are coming to Big Spring for a concert Friday night, December 14th.

Final arrangements for the concert were made this week when the San Angelo date of the group was cancelled and transferred to Big Spring.

The choir boys, featured attraction on the Hardin-Simmons University Artists' Course, are booked into El Paso on December 15th. It was discovered by the National Broadcasting Company Artists' Service, booking representatives, that it would be impossible to jump from San Angelo to El Paso, where a guarantee of $1,000 awaits, they and to make the jump more certain Big Spring was substituted.

The Vienna Choir Boys is the world's oldest and one of its best known musical organizations. It was founded in 1498 by imperial decree of Emperor Maximilian I and has continued without interruption since that time.

It has been instrumental in developing many of the world's immortal figures in music. Mozart, Haydn, Schubert and a host of others received their early musical training in the Vienna Boys' Choir and were world-famous in their early twenties.

The choir boys are making their third consecutive annual two-months' tour of America. Landing in New York City Saturday November 17, they opened the tour that night with a concert in Town Hall. The next night, Sunday, they were world-famous in their early twenties.

Seven dates will be filled in Texas—Houston, San Antonio, Harlingen, Fort Worth, Abilene, El Paso and Big Spring. The choir filled four engagements in Texas last year—Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth—and in repeating this year in all except Dallas where a conflict in dates made a re-booking impossible.

Baptist Women To Hold All-Day Meet Thursday

TWO TEXANS ON ASSOCIATED PRESS ALL-AMERICAN ELEVEN

DARRELL LESTER, TCU; AND BILL WALLACE, RICE, ON MYTHICAL 11; SOUTH PLACES FIVE ON FIRST TEAM

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Staff Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 1. (AP)—The University of Minnesota's all-conquering football forces have a copper-riveted claim to the mythical national college championship of 1934, but not even this super-army of gridiron talent proved equal to the job of trying to keep this year's gridiron heroes of the far-flung Southern battlefront from displacing the Midwest as the leading producer of all-America stars.

For the first time since Walter Camp popularized the annual all-star argument, way back in the "elephant" era, the South leads all other main sections of the country in placing its favorites on the all-America team.

The territory stretching from the Carolinas to the wide open ranges of Texas contributes five of the 11 stalwarts named today for college football's highest award in the eighth annual Associated Press consensus selections.

The South's most formidable gridiron machine, Alabama, shares the first team honors with Minnesota and Stanford, each placing two men, while Texas Christian, Rice Institute and North Carolina contribute the remaining three representatives of Dixie's galant gridiron forces.

Rest Evenly Divided

This compares with two places on the first team each for the East, Middle West and Far West. It is a sharp contrast with the all-America situation of the last four years, in each of which the Midwest has been the dominating contributor of all-star talent.

The easily apparent explanation is that while Minnesota has produced one of the great players of modern times, with Ohio State another potent factor, the rest of the Middle West, "Old Guard" has fallen off considerably. Michigan, Nebraska, Northwestern and Notre Dame, which among them have turned out at least a score of all-America stars in the past 10 years, all have had subnormal seasons, speaking comparatively. In the case of the Wolverines, who have rarely missed a year with at least one representative in the all-American parade, they have just finished the most disastrous campaign in the history of football at Ann Arbor. Under the circumstances, Minnesota's display of power and ability has been all the more conspicuous. It is no surprise to find the experts giving something like unanimous all-America ratings to Captain Francis (Fug) Lund, backfield ace and sparkplug of the team, as well as to Frank (Butch) Larson, brilliant left end. Both overcame the handicap of injuries to close out remarkable careers. To their teammates, Bill Egan, a spectacular guard, and Stan Koska, battering-ram fullback, go the honor of places on the second or alternate all-star array but the names of these four by no means complete the roll of outstanding talent on the Gopher team.

It is one of the main regrets of a remarkable college gridiron season that this super-aggregation from the adopted land of the Vikings could not try conclusions with either Alabama or Stanford, the two other principal undefeated teams in major league competition and prospective opponents in the forthcoming Rose Bowl classic, New Year's Day. Pittsburgh, although beaten by Minnesota's last-period rally in the adopted game, was in contrast with the Gophers, completes a national "Big Four" for the 1934 season and it is natural enough to find the Panthers also contributing three men to the combined all-star lineups.

Tackles, Centers Scarce

In a football season marked by amazing developments in the passing game, forward and backward, and an extraordinary number of beautifully-coached, high-powered teams in every major section of competition, the experts found the task of all-America picking unusually difficult. A dearth of really outstanding tackles, centers and quarterbacks was in contrast with a wealth of talent contending for recognition as all-star ends, guards, halfbacks and fullbacks.

Such teams as Minnesota, Ohio State, Pittsburgh, Colgate, Alabama, Columbia, Princeton, Rice and Louisiana State, while all endowed with some extraordinary individual talent, owed most of their success to the happy combination of well-knit team play and a wealth of reserves. Pitt, for example, demonstrated it could not at least teams on the field with little to be chosen between them, at least offensively. The Panthers had three sets of backs and did not let on. Colgate and Columbia were less fortunate in the matter of substitutes but each of these splendidly coached teams came back after early season setbacks to the West Coast.

The same thing was true of Ohio State. With this background in mind, it remains to point out the details of the all-America picture, necessarily with some misgivings and considerable room left for argument. With an all-star backfield consisting of Bobby Grayson of Stanford, Fred (Buz) Borries of the Navy, Bill Wallace of Rice and Pug Lund of Minnesota, there would seem nothing to worry about, especially if as the mythical combination discloses—they are fortified with a 200-pound line of six-footers, but it is impossible to give them much margin over a considerable number of other outstanding performers.

Grayson, in his second year considered one of the greatest all-around backs the west coast has produced, was hurt and forced to yield the individual honors of the game to California's Arleigh Williams a week ago. Borries, the finest passing and running back the Navy has had in 10 years, was not stopped by any opposition, including Columbia, Notre Dame and Pittsburgh. Nevertheless it is difficult to rank the Navy ace very far above Army's famous Jack Buckler or prove to the satisfaction of the all-America committee that he is entitled to higher, if as high individual rating as Shepherd of Western Maryland, Leemans of George Washington or Buckler of Temple, a trio of smashing eastern ball carriers who lack only the advantage of the major league spotlight to get wider recognition.

Lund is rated the best back in the Big Ten, taking the season as a whole into consideration. But Minnesota captain gets much of his support because Chicago's Jay Berwanger had the misfortune to be severely handicapped by injuries in the last few big games. Berwanger,

In Andrews county, it was reported that Bond et al. No. 1 McCarty was preparing to plug at total depth of 5,001 feet, where the formation was lime although salt stringers persisted nearly to the bottom hole. Location is some thirteen miles south and slightly east of the Means area.

Honolulu-Liano No. 1 Parker, wildcat in central Andrews county, plugged back Wednesday with lead wool to 4,758 feet and on a 24-hour test over Thanksgiving showed about 70 barrels of oil and three of water. It is planned to further plug back to 4,750 feet before shooting. LATEST "CHAN" FILM PACKED WITH THRILLS

Judged by preview audiences on the coast as by far the most entertaining of the entire series of "Chan" thrillers, "Charlie Chan in London" will make its appearance on the screen of the Ritz theatre today for three days. Warner Oland, whose name has become synonymous with the character of Charlie throughout the series, again portrays the role of the bland Chinese detective. Advance reports indicate that Oland's portrayal in this film is his most notable to date.

In his latest adventure, "Charlie Chan Investigates," again, Oland, who has become synonymous with the character of Charlie throughout the series, again portrays the role of the bland Chinese detective. Advance reports indicate that Oland's portrayal in this film is his most notable to date.

A man is doomed to hang for murder. His sister believes him innocent. She pleads with Chan to take the case and try to find the real murderer and exonerate her brother. With only sixty five hours remaining before the innocent man must meet his death, Chan gets to work. He finds he is working against time and a murderer who has the cunning of a fox. With only eight hours remaining in which to solve the mystery, Chan lays a clever trap and snares his human fox without the aid of hounds or horse.

Drue Leyton, who will be recalled as the feminine lead in "Charlie Chan's Courage," again portrays the role of the romantic lead opposite Ray Milland. Others in the cast assembled for this production are Mona Battle, Alan Mowbray, Murray Kinell, Douglas Walton, Walter Johnson, E. E. Clive, George Barraud, Madge Bellamy, David Torrence, John Rogers, Paul England, Elsa Buchanan and Pury Tully.

Simplicity Keynote Of Table Setting, Authority Says

Fashions come and go in the realm of food and its service just as in other realms, though perhaps a little more slowly. Mary Margaret McBride of the NEA staff, writing from New York, interviews an authority on such matters and reports:

The up-to-the-minute table setter puts on less and less in the way of non-essentials and gadgets, declares Helen Dryden, artist, and well-known authority on the table arrangements.

"It's so easy to do too much," Miss Dryden warns, "whether you are working on a picture, a story or a table. Simplicity is the keynote of the mode today. Only what is necessary should be used. Sweep away all the ash trays, fruit dishes and other gaudiness that simply clutter up. If you want place cards, use small plain paste boards with the name—written without flourishes, not those awful things adorned with cupid's bows, flowers and Easter rabbits.

"In table setting, as in all other fields of decoration, we are coming to depend for our effects upon material, color and line. If these are right, then we need no added trimming."

"The thing to remember is choosing table decorations or in planning a table set-up," she points out, "is fitness. Certain things are all right for large magnificent houses that would look ridiculous in small, simple ones. Lace cloths, for instance, go with pretentious places. In the real country, checked gingham and plaid Basque materials make the most appropriate cloths or doilies. There is no unbreakable rule about always using a cloth at dinner. Nice doilies are quite all right at a small table. And they go especially well on a refectory table."

As decorations for a big table, you might have a big candelabra for the center of the table and perhaps two bowls of flowers, besides. It is also appropriate at this season to have both flowers and fruit on the same big table. Another nice arrangement is four or five small low bowls, placed down the table, each fitted with different flowers."

Never use high flowers or other tall table decorations on a table at which as few as eight persons are seated. It hinders conversation. Never use candles in daytime and do not put them on the table unlighted, warns this oracle.

A Good Bargain for Grocer Jones!

SOME of the 15 out-of-town checks deposited by Grocer Jones yesterday, will travel a week before the money they represent will be back in our hands. These 15 checks may in that time entail a total of 180 clerical operations, with stationery, postage, etc., costing this and other banks 60 cents or more, handling expense alone.

Grocer Jones appreciates this fact, and he, therefore, maintains a balance in his account large enough to reimburse the bank for the cost of this service. It is a "good bargain" for Mr. Jones and for the bank—neither has lost, while both have gained through worthwhile banking service.

Kerchoo! Be Careful Or You'll Take Cold! Precaution Advised

BY DR. MORRIS FISHEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Look out for a cold at this time of year, especially if you are easily susceptible to one.

For this is the season when colds begin. Boys and girls return to school. People who have lived a great deal outdoors during the summer, move indoors. And many of us will sit for hours exposed to the elements, at football games.

It is such sudden changes in temperatures, and other conditions, that may lower vitality and give way to cold, although the exact cause of the common cold is not yet known. Colds also are passed from one person to another by coughing and sneezing.

Furthermore, a diet that contains insufficient vitamins and mineral salts may lower vitality and leave you susceptible to a cold. Chronic infections in nose and throat and in the ears, may do so. And so may interference with breathing through improper construction of the nose.

If you catch colds easily, you should undergo an examination as to the special conditions existing in your system which might be related to the manner in which you catch cold.

Through the experience of many years, techniques have been worked out for taking care of the ordinary cold, although it is not certain that any of these techniques will actually stop a cold or cure it. The summary of the best advice includes a few simple procedures.

The first place it seems to be generally believed that alkalization of the body is desirable. This may be accomplished by taking alkaline drinks, such as orange juice and lemon juice in the form of orangeade and lemonade, which at the same time supplies plenty of water to the body.

The taking of plenty of water is known to be useful, not only for flushing the intestines and the kidneys, but also for protecting the body against fever. The alkaline solution may also be taken in the form of small doses of the citrates or bicarbonates, but it is best not to undertake that type of treatment without medical advice.

It is usually considered desirable to have the intestinal tract clean. This does not mean that strong cathartics should be taken, but any of the usual mild measures may be tried.

It is best to go to bed and to stay there until the cold disappears. While in bed you should keep warm, but not hot. The danger in overheating the body is the possibility of chilling, with the onset of another cold.

Because the lips and the nose may be irritated, lubrication in the form of simple ointments may be applied. Sometimes stimulation of the circulation of the blood is attempted by placing the feet in hot mustard baths, and by rubbing irritants on the skin.

The value of these measures is questionable, but they seem to do little, if any harm. There is no good evidence to establish the use of nose and throat antiseptics.

Once established, the cold runs a mild course in most cases. Too much spraying of the nose may drive the infection into the ears. The same result may follow too vigorous blowing of the nose.

Babies cannot blow their noses ordinarily, so that it is usually helpful to drip suitably medicated oils in the nose with a dropper. This helps to relieve the child of the mucus.

Use of the term "coddling" a cold indicates that there are two methods of treatment—one highly protective and the other completely disregarding. It is not well to disregard the condition completely, because such disregard may result in development of a much worse condition.

Reasonable coddling of any illness is the part of those who are wise.

RURAL SCHOOLS

The following Thanksgiving program was given by pupils of the Warfield school Wednesday morning:

Three songs—The Turkey Gobbler, Glad Thanksgiving Day, Over the River and Through the Woods—The school.

A Thanksgiving Story—Pearl Wilson.

Reading—A Boy's Thanksgiving—Mack Powers.

Thanksgiving Exercise—Twelve small children.

Short talks on "What I am Thankful For" by each pupil and the teacher.

Trustees bought a new two-burner oil stove and cooking utensils for the school last week. With this and the new kitchen table which Mr. D. D. Wilson built, Warfield has a modern kitchenette of which pupils and teacher are proud.

Through this column, we wish to express our thanks to the trustees and Judge Barron for their cooperation in making it possible for us to have the new kitchen equipment," Mrs. Ruby Jamison, teacher.

Billy Baker was absent from school Friday on account of illness. Several children have had to miss school this week in order to help finish the cotton-picking and other crop work.

Mrs. W. G. Chaney was a visitor to the school last Friday. Little Miss Billie McKandless visited school last Wednesday.

A program given by the school children in the morning, a basket lunch at noon, and lectures which a ball game in the afternoon, marked the observance of Thanksgiving at Stokes school. Friday was a holiday.

The program included: Song: "America," The school and visitors, led by Imogene Hale. Welcome: Prim. M. W. Alcorn. Dialogue: Six boys.

Reading: Johnnie May and Ivy Grace Collier.

A Prayer: Six primary pupils. Reading: Imogene Hale. Song: Primary pupils.

Reading: Carter Flowers. Reading: Willis Lewis.

A basket lunch was served at noon. Among the visitors present were the Rev. Jim Sharp, pastor of the Methodist church at Stanton, and his family and the Rev. Butterfield.

Later, a basket ball game between outsiders and school boys was played, the school winning by a score of 22 to 23.

Through donations of patrons, a waterless cooker has been purchased for preparing the school lunches.

The invitation to "Thanksgiving at Martin county in which the Stokes Indians are asked to compete was "lots of fun" to those attending, it was reported. Stokes played two games, winning from Courtney by a score of 22 to 11 but losing to Pleasant Valley, 13 to 16.

Senior students at Stokes are starting work on a school play "The Four Married Men" to be staged just before Christmas.

At The Library

The following new books have been placed on the shelves of the county library:

"A Plantation Christmas", by Julia Peterkin: "I hear that in many places something has happened to Christmas; that it is changing from a time of merriment and gaiety to a holiday filled with tedium." That this is not true of the great plantations of the South is borne out by Mrs. Peterkin's charming essay on the customs and rituals that the Southerners zealously preserve. Young and old, black and white, all join in the festivities. Rooms are hung with greens and berries, fires burn brightly, tables are heaped high, banjos are strummed, laughter helps to relieve the child of the mucus.

Use of the term "coddling" a cold indicates that there are two methods of treatment—one highly protective and the other completely disregarding. It is not well to disregard the condition completely, because such disregard may result in development of a much worse condition.

Reasonable coddling of any illness is the part of those who are wise.

echoes, and the churches resound with song and prayer. To read "A Plantation Christmas" is to regain in essence the timeless Christmas spirit.

"The Second House From the Corner" by Max Miller (author of "I Cover the Waterfront" etc., etc.) In this book Max Miller builds the second house from the corner, and becomes a householder and a married man. He tells of this new phase of his existence in the same way that he has told of other phases, with a new style and flavor unique in American literature today.

"Arctic Trader" by Philip H. Godsell is the account of twenty years with the Hudson's Bay Company. Simply and effectively written, "Arctic Trader" will interest every one who responds to the lure of the North.

"So Red the Rose" by Stark Young: An American historical novel. Accurately, vividly, and without sectional bitterness, the story presents the life of the family of a wealthy Mississippi planter during the Civil War period.

"Maximilian and Charlotte of Mexico" by Egon Caesar Courti translated from the German by Catherine Alison Phillips. This is the full story of the most romantic adventures of modern times, the attempt of an Austrian archduke to carve an empire out of the New World.

When in the spring of 1864 Maximilian and Charlotte sailed for Mexico the curtain went up on one of history's greatest dramas; but already ambition and avarice had intrigued to set the scene. The two tragic figures who appeared upon the stage were puppets in the hands of adventures, diplomats, and politicians. And when Maximilian and Charlotte madly, the parts played by the monarchies of Europe so reeked with treachery and selfish interest that not till recent years have the documents which throw light on the affair been given to the world.

"Arctic Village" by Robert Marshall, translated from his first visit to a remote Alaskan town by the frontier conditions, as well as the contentment evinced by the people, the author returned to spend a year north of the Arctic circle. He took copious notes on everything—climate, occupations, domestic economy, recreations, and conversation of the white and Eskimo residents, and his book, informally conversational in style, is a Middletown of the Far North. Excellent photographic illustrations.

Juvenile books: "Monkey-do" by Margaret Evans Price. This gay book tells of the adventures of a little American monkey captured in his native forest by an American boy.

Monogrammed Handkerchiefs

for his XMAS

One of the nicest items for a man's Christmas is a beautiful quality linen handkerchief with his Monogram, initials or even his full name in his own signature copied in either white or colors.

The cost is very little and the work is done by Marshall Field & Company at Chicago and is very beautiful.

Half a dozen regular 25¢ quality handkerchiefs would cost you $2.25 with his name, monogram or signature or the whole dozen would be $4.00.

The regular 50¢ quality would cost you $3.75 for the half dozen or $7.00 for the whole dozen, in other words any handkerchief you select is monogrammed for $1.00 the dozen or 75¢ for the half dozen.

These orders must go within the next few days, however, as it takes about two weeks to get these back.

Will be glad to have you see the beautiful quality linen handkerchiefs and the designs for this work.

Let's get this order off right away, to be sure that this gets back in ample time.
