KLEBERG PLEDGES HELP TO GET MORE BOATS

Piloting

There is a great need for more housing facilities for visitors to Rockport—and this need is due to grow with the end of the war. It has been necessary for court operators to turn people away every day because of no vacancies. Of course, there are many permanents occupying tourist courts because of lack of accommodations elsewhere, but requests for reservations here are out number the facilities occupied by permanents.

That Rockport will continue to be a popular vacation place during the winter seems fairly well assured, because of the fact that people working in war industries are not all taking leaves during the summer. The government is recommending that those working under pressure take short leaves to keep themselves in trim for their work. Rockport can expect a heavy demand for occomodations by visitors all the year round.

Those coming here in the winter will discover what a delightful place Rockport is to spend a winter vacation and will no doubt want to come back here during the winter regularly.

In addition to the need for more courts, there is a definite need for a large, modern Hotel in Rockport. A two hundred room hotel here, under proper management, would be a paying proposition for all concerned. Not only would a hotel provide a special type of accommodations that is desired by many, but it would also help the tourist court business. With a good hotel Rockport in normal times could be a convention center, and there would always be many who would prefer courts to the hotel.

Speaking of taking vacations, R. R. Roberts of Fulton, could think of no place he had rather spend a vacation than along Aransas Bay—evey though he lives on the bay at Fulton. Roberts last week rented a cottage at Lamar, only a few miles from home, and took himself a most enjoyable vacation at Wells Court and Mills Wharf.

Mills Wharf has another oddity on display among the many curios of the place. The latest additions to the collection is a jar full of little rattlesnakes. The jar holds 29 little rattlers, all of them removed from a mother snake by a Mexican on the St. Charles ranch.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Casterline received the following interesting letter from their son Cpl. L. E. Casterline, who is in North Africa:

"At last we can reveal where we have been and what we have done since we landed here. We landed at Oran on January 16th and went to work hauling gravel and fill for hospitals and some supply dumps. We worked at Oran for about three weeks then we were ordered to move to Tebessa, where we arrived around the 24th of February to find the Germans had control of an airport only thirty-five miles away and the front lines were somewhere between us and the airfield. We started hauling supplies that were endangered by capture. This lasted for about a week and they starting pushing the Germans back. After they started back, we hauled gravel to repaid the roads around Tebessa. We have filled the bad holes to Koisoran and Sousse. We moved from Sousse to Tebarka and on to Mateur. We are now trying to clean up some of the wreckage caused by our bombs. I am now somewhere in Bizerte hoping to come home soon. It has been sixteen months today since I landed overseas."

"Was glad to hear you had recieved the Mother's Day Greeting."

"Things are quiet around here now. I hope they will start the final push soon for I am ready to come home to you all."

Congressman Praises Men For Good Work

Big Crowd Greets Kleberg On Visit Here Monday

Congressman Richard M. Kleberg told workmen of the Rice Bros. and Company Shipyard here Monday that he would give assistance toward securing more boats for them to build. He made his pledge to assist in getting new boat contracts ,after praising the men for their enviable record in building and sending to sea nearly a score of fighting ships in less than two years.

The congressman came here from Aransas Pass Monday afternoon and addressed the workmen of the shipyard and a large number of people from over Aransas Coputy at the mill in the shipyard. He was accompanied here by his secretary William P. Elliott. From Rockport the congressman and his secretary continued a tour of the counties in this congressional district.

Kleberg was introduced by R. R. Rice and was greeted with loud applause and cheers. He then briefly reviewed the record of the yard in building submarine chasers and laid stress on the fact that there have been no strikes or serious labor disorders. He then said that he would do his best toward getting more boats for the yard.

Before coming to Rockport Congressman Kleberg was honored with a barbecue dinner at the Lloyd Richardson home in Aransas Pass, at which R. R. Rice was master-of-ceremonies. Who's News This Week

By Delos Wheeler Lovelace

Consolidated Features.—WNU Release.

NEW YORK. — Vice-Adm. Frederick Joseph Horne takes a good look ahead through his binoculars and reports that the end of the war is not on the horizon. It may run until 1949 in the Pacific, he says, and he knows plenty about the Far East, and Tokyo in particular. He was in Japan all the time the United States was in the last war. He went out there as naval attache to the American embassy in January, 1915, and stayed four years. His government handed him the Navy Cross for what he accomplished, and Japan, being one of the Allies in those days, passed him a decoration, too, the Third Order of the Sacred Treasure.

Adm. Horne Sights No Early Peace on Pacific's Horizon

This is the third war in which this native New Yorker, now 63, has had a hand. He had entered the Naval academy in 1895 at the ripe young age of 15, and while still a middie he served in the North Atlantic aboard the USS Texas in the scrap with Spain. When the war was over, he went back to Annapolis, graduating in 1899. Since returning from Tokyo, he attended the Naval War college. What's more he went to the Army War college, too.

Back in the mid-Twenties some of his flying officers got his sea dog dander up when they tried to tell him that the orders he gave couldn't be carried out. He promptly had himself assigned for training with the air arm at Pensacola, and in 1926 he was qualified as a naval aviation observer. Later he commanded the aircraft carrier Saratoga. Since March, 1942, he has been one of Admiral King's right bowers in planning sea operations. Planes are his specialty.

IF Katharine F. Lenroot were settling upon a prayer for children, and who would be more likely to pray for them, she might easily cull from the atharva - veda, those loosely phrased hymns from India's old, old scripture:

Statistics Are Her Grenades in Battle For Child Welfare

"Old Age! This child shall grow to meet thee only;
None of the hundred other deaths shall harm him."

Children have been Miss Lenroot's concern for 30 years and on, and though progress must seem slow she probably would agree that in her time some of those hundred other deaths have been scotched.

Just back from South America she notes that there also at least a few have been; under-privileged children receive low-priced, even free food; medical care spreads. It is 13 years since she was last in South America and she found a change so great "I could hardly believe my eyes."

Ever since she went into the children's bureau of the department of labor, Miss Lenroot has had a strong interest in South America. She is well known there, and speaks Spanish fluently enough to make an easy way from the plateau cities of New Granada to low-lying and windy Punta Arenas, though she might be more comfortable if she stopped at Buenos Aires.

Children everywhere have been Miss Lenroot's strongest interest ever since she came out of the University of Wisconsin. Even earlier she was badgering that state's legislature in their behalf.

After graduation, a novice lawyer, she hired out as a deputy industrial commissioner, but after a couple of years found her life work with the federal bureau at Washington. She has been its chief for ten years, and is an authority on its multitude of problems.

She is a systematic chief and calm, but if the objective is big enough she can make a final drive as headlong as this fellow Patton, now all over Sicily. Statistics once led her to declare in distress that mothers were this country's cheapest commodity, so many of them die in childbirth. If she were saying that now she might put it ironically that they are as expendable as P-T boat crews at Corregidor. Her arsenal of facts and figures is inexhaustible. It would stretch from here to there and back again.

She Exposed the Expendability of Nation's Mothers

This is not to say that she is dull. Her sense of humor is keen and catholic and her public utterances can amuse as well as devastate, and her voice can charm. She comes from northern Wisconsin where those cold winds off bleak Lake Superior, or something, all too often put an edge on native voices, but hers is low and agreeable.

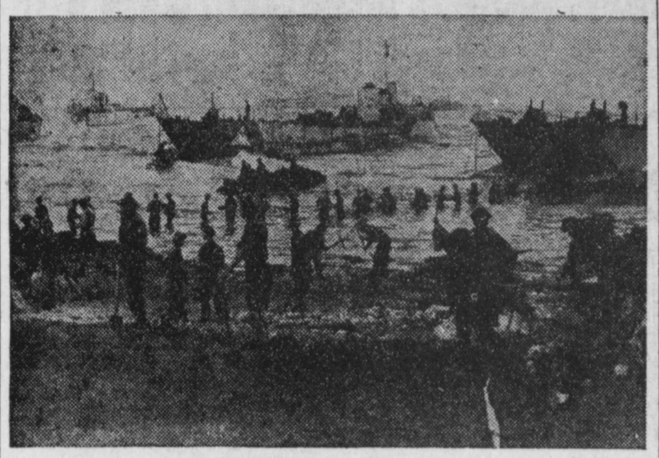

The figure that encloses the voice is on the stocky side, topped by loosely dressed hair that used to be blonde, about half way between a Harlow platinum and Bette Davis' middling locks.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Allied Forces Meet Bitter Resistance In Final Phase of Battle for Sicily; Japanese Employ New Naval Strategy To Supply South Pacific Strongholds

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Here's the way the Allies work in setting up a base after landing on hostile shore. As the first Allied wave struck Sicily, men waist deep in water pass supplies ashore from a lighter, while men in foreground prepare roads for tanks and other vehicles.

SICILY:
Yanks' Test

More than three divisions of Adolf Hitler's crack German troops took up positions around San Stefano in northern Sicily to await the assault of Gen. George S. Patton's charging American Seventh army.

The San Stefano region loomed as the Axis' northern anchor for their shrunken lines in the mountainous corner of the island where they found themselves pocketed. Much like the Tunisian terrain, great difficulties confronted Patton's Yankees, who were faced with a tedious crawl up rocky slopes in the face of stiff machine gun and mortar fire.

To the west of the Axis defenses, stood the Canadians, encountering the same obstacles as the Americans. To the south, Gen. Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth army poised for action against strong German forces, which had held them up in the plains after a slashing tank attack.

Thus the final phase of the battle of Sicily opened.

Five Points for Italy

Successful as a diplomat once before when he pulled Adm. Jean Darlan's French North Africa over to the Allied cause, Gen. Dwight "Ike" Eisenhower addressed himself to another soldier, this time Italian Premier Pietro Badoglio, in a bid for Italy's withdrawal from the war.

Commending the Italian people and Italy's royal house for removing Mussolini, General Eisenhower stressed five points in his address to the newly constituted government.

Said General Eisenhower: 1. Only the Germans in Italy are blocking peace; 2. Cessation of hostilities is possible immediately under honorable terms; 3. Discontinuance of assistance by the Italians to German armed forces is a prerequisite of peace; 4. A pledge that Italian war prisoners will be returned if Allied prisoners in Italian hands also are returned; 5. If hostilities cease, the liberties and traditions of Italy will be restored.

PACIFIC:
Rip Jap Barges

Although Japan's merchant marine ranked No. 3 among the world's fleets before Pearl Harbor, her maritime position has since slipped in view of her losses and limited shipbuilding facilities.

As a consequence, the wily Nips have devised a new system for supplying their embattled South Pacific island forces: strongholds are now being supplied through small, swift coastal barges, in which the enemy sail at night, and in which they hide by day in the many coves along the shores lines.

Well aware of the Japanese system, American airmen have concentrated much of their bombing against these craft. Barges attempting to stock enemy troops at beleaguered Munda on New Georgia island have had rough going at the hands of U. S. aviators, and a concentration of the craft at Rein Bay, New Britain, was the target for a heavy Allied assault.

With the Allies threatening their sea-borne supplies and bombarding them from the sky with deadly torpedo and dive bombers, Jap troops, true to their tradition of fighting to the death, clung desperately to the last perimeter of their defenses at Munda.

SHIPS:
1,496 Delivered

In the first six months of 1943, Pacific coast shipyards turned out 393 vessels of approximately 4,200,000 tons; Atlantic coast shipyards completed 259 of over 3,000,000 tons, and gulf coast yards produced 108 of 1,150,000 tons. Grand total: 760 ships of 8,350,000 tons!

Since Pearl Harbor, American shipyards have turned out 1,496 vessels, more than existed in the entire U. S. merchant marine before the war. This production has given the country a greater commercial fleet than Britain, and a larger one than Japan, Germany and Italy combined.

Once looming as the great bottleneck in Allied war plans, America's industrialists overcame the shipping hurdle with a mass production technique which also has given the U. S. supremacy in aircraft construction. Not only have war materials been flowing overseas in great numbers, but the improved situation has increased use of shipping for civilian supply.

GAS:
Sees More for East

Completion of the "big inch" pipeline to the East which will supplement the railroads' transport of oil to that section of the country, will result in a reduction of the "A" and possibly the "B" and "C" gas ration cards in the central states, Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes indicated.

At present, "A" card holders in the East only receive 1½ gallons per coupon, while the same coupon draws 4 gallons in the central states. Ickes indicated that central states' allotments may be cut down as much as two gallons.

Gas rationing in the central states has been primarily enforced for the preservation of rubber, Ickes said. Because oil was relatively plentiful in these states as a result of insufficient transportation facilities to haul it to the East, rations were more liberal. Now that facilities are available for increasing the haul, however, Ickes felt that the supply should be "equalized" as much as possible throughout the country.

RUSSIA:
Peak Offensive

Peak of summer fighting in Russia centered around Orel. Here, the Reds exerted the greatest pressure against stubborn German forces ringed from the north, south and east, with their principal railway supply line running westward to Bryansk seriously threatened.

According to Russian accounts, the Germans used large forces of reserves to counterattack advancing Red units from the south and east. Admitting they were outnumbered, the Germans were said to have fallen back slowly under the trip-hammer blows of Russian armored columns.

The Germans told another story. They said their attack at Belgorod in the first stage of the summer fighting broke up Red concentrations at the southern end of the 160-mile front and compelled the Russians to concentrate on Orel. Here, the Nazis said, they were pursuing a policy of defensive fighting to exhaust the Reds' strength.

Heavy fighting was reported south of Leningrad by both sides.

FDR:
Help to Servicemen

Declaring that America's servicemen and women must not be demobilized into an environment of inflation and unemployment, to a place on a bread line or selling apples, President Roosevelt outlined a six-point program for post-war recovery.

The program was the highlight of a speech in which the President declared Mussolini's ouster was the first crack in the Axis, and the initial step in Italy's democratic reconstitution.

The President's six-point program for demobilization includes: 1. Mustering out pay large enough to cover the period before employment is obtained; 2. Unemployment insurance; 3. Opportunity for education or trade training at U. S. expense; 4. Credit for unemployment compensation, old age pensions and survivors insurance for the period they were in service; 5. Adequate hospitalization, medical care and rehabilitation of disabled servicemen; 6. Sufficient pensions for disabled in armed forces.

DOCTORS:
Face Draft

Out of the nation's 170,000 doctors 47,000 already are in uniform, and out of the 70,000 dentists, 17,000 are in the services.

However, the army has requested a substantial addition to these numbers, and to meet the need, the War Manpower commission has planned to draft doctors and dentists between 38 and 45 years of age.

Under the WMC's plan, the army would waive its prohibition against the drafting of doctors and dentists over 37. Faced with induction as privates, the men will rather seek commissions which their professions ordinarily are granted when entering the service.

Heretofore, local and state committees have recommended induction of doctors and dentists.

MIDWEST:
Looking for Trouble

August 16, farmers, small manufacturers and merchants from five midwestern states will meet with 25 senators and congressmen in the Radisson hotel at Minneapolis, Minn., to present the problems besetting them in a wartime America.

Robert La Follette

In calling the conference, Representative August Andresen of Minnesota declared: "One of the primary purposes of the congressional recess was to permit members to secure first-hand information from their constituents on the prosecution of the war and the effect of the present federal policies upon business and agricultural economy of our country."

Regional in character, the conference will not be confined to a single district, but will give the legislators an idea of the situation confronting a variety of interests. Senators Robert La Follette from Wisconsin and Guy M. Gillette from Iowa have endorsed the parley, which besides being open to their states also will take in Minnesota and North and South Dakota.

MEAT:
More for Civilians

Action by the War Food administration assured civilians of increased meat supplies.

Whereas packers formerly were required to set aside 45 per cent of production for the government, WFA cut the figure 5 per cent. Moreover, a temporary slash was made in the government's purchase of pork products.

The action in beef was attributed to the heavy run of grass fed cattle expected from the southwestern and western ranges, while the cut in pork purchases was made at a time when hog marketing declines.

HENRY FORD:
'Would Have to Run'

"If I felt any better, I'd have to run." With those words, sprightly patriarchic Henry Ford recently celebrated his 80th birthday.

Once again in active command of the great Ford works for the first time in a quarter century as a result of the death of his son Edsel, the elder Henry has supervision over his plants' production of motor equipment and bombers for the army.

Declaring that the general welfare of the community should be the guiding moral principle, Ford said that business and industry must build the physical basis of the good society.

"There must be more and more industry," Ford asserted. "It is essential to political and economic freedom."

WHEAT:
For Feed

In an effort to bolster the nation's dwindling feed supply, the Commodity Credit corporation went into the grain markets. The CCC started the ball rolling by bidding for one million bushels in Chicago and revealing it planned to buy all wheat available at Minneapolis at the loan rate. The agency hoped to secure 100 million bushels from Canada.

If necessary, the CCC divulged, effort also might be made to import wheat from Australia.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Afternoon Tea

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

The spirit of your home is what you make it, war or no war. It is for you to give courage to your own people, and take courage from them.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

DON'T overlook the civilized old custom of afternoon tea, while you are trying to adapt yourself to the needs of this new wartime, busier world. Tea in the late afternoon is a tried and true soother of human nerves; for long generations it has served its purpose in the homes of gentle peoples. In fact, I once heard a scientist say that we were the only nation in the world that served only three meals in the twenty-four hours, and that we were none the better for the difference.

The spirit of your home is what you make it, war or no war. It is for you to give courage to your own people, and take courage from them. The crisis of a war CAN be a means of disuniting and disorganizing a family, or it can increase interest and affection in the home circle and bring its members closer together.

Nowadays Mother, Dad, sons and daughters are keeping odd hours, busy with tiring pursuits. Nowadays shopping is a nuisance, tiring and discouraging, and planning meals is too much for any one person to handle. Unless everyone understands the changed conditions, and will cooperate, there is household chaos. No meat in the markets, no maid in the kitchen, nobody's business to answer the telephone and put away the laundry—life has grown just a little too difficult and everyone is cross.

Afternoon Tea Solves Problem.

"I helped solve this problem with afternoon tea," writes Erna White of St. Louis.

"My family," her letter goes on, "consists of six members, all of different ages and occupations. My daughter Jean, 27, works in a munitions plant from midnight to eight. Her daughter Sonia, six, goes to school. Doretta, my son's young wife, is with us, expecting a baby. Both son and son-in-law get home occasionally from their respective services for leave. Also there is my younger son, 15, in high school, my husband and myself. My husband works from nine to five in a department store; little Frank, who is six feet two, has a magazine route, and takes main charge of one of the finest little victory gardens you ever saw.

"Some months ago I realized that we were gradually growing uncomfortable at home, and I sat down and faced the situation squarely. The trouble was that we weren't ORGANIZED.

"Well, I began with Jean, who gets home oily, tired, hungry, just as we others are sitting down to breakfast. I persuaded her, instead of dropping wearily into a chair and hurrying her meal, to go upstairs, take a hot bath, get into nightgown and wrapper and come down again. Her room was always ready and darkened, with the bed turned down, and she slept, after breakfast, until one or two o'clock.

Busy Day in White Home.

"Young Frank is instructed to air his room and hang up his things; Doretta, my son's wife, and I get Sonia and Frank off to school with their lunches, and put the bedrooms into perfect order. Then we descend to the kitchen and dining room and start on breakfast dishes and meal planning. We find that to have the upstairs rooms in order is more restful than leaving them until the kitchen work is done. Often I can lie flat for an hour before going to the hospital at 12. I get home at six; as do both Franks; Sonia and the girls have set the table nicely and perhaps started supper. But we have tea first and dine at eight.

ORGANIZATION ON THE HOME FRONT

Conflicting hours which bring members of the family home at different times, housekeeping tasks not finished because mother is at war work, and the general restlessness caused by a war—these and other factors can easily cause discord within a family unless they are overcome by intelligent organization. The unity of all family members in an effort to keep up morale is necessary in these days. This week a mother relates how she got her family running smoothly despite wartime problems and how afternoon tea has played a big part in her planning.

"Tea in this case doesn't always mean real tea; it means 'light refreshment.' Orange or tomato juice, fruit, a cup of jellied or hot soup according to the season, a plate of sandwiches or cookies with milk, crackers and cocoa on a bitter cold afternoon—these are set out on the sitting room table, and we all sit down and rest for half an hour, nibbling, drinking and chatting. Then everyone scatters to freshen up, and an hour later we all dine together.

"Other rules are the placing of things for the cleaner on the hall table on a certain morning, or else they simply don't go. Nobody has to hunt up Doretta's sweater or Frank's white trousers. Young Frank must do his homework between seven and eight, little Sonia sweeps the steps and sidewalks every morning of her life. And every night, at ten, we listen to radio or recorded music, and catch up on mending. This last was hard to establish. Everyone was sleepy, stupid, lazily busy with books or card games. But I insisted, and now everyone looks forward to this peaceful closing hour, when buttons and tapes are replaced, rips in sheets and hanging hems are put in order, and the precious stockings are darned. There is something domestic and reassuring about women sewing and talking together under the evening lamps, and the men like it as much as we do. The kitchen is quiet and dark, the dining table set for breakfast, the fresh vegetables stored in a cool laundry tub, letters from the absent sons are cheerful, and the approaching arrival of a new little member of the family keeps our thoughts on the happier future.

Confusion Under Earlier Plans.

"A year ago nerves were beginning to crack. Housework was everyone's job and nobody's job. Dust and dishes were everywhere; clean clothes weren't put away; dirty clothes didn't get to the laundry. Doretta and Jean and I floundered helplessly in the accumulating disorder.

"Sonia loitered about 'to see Mummy' until she was late for school, and big Frank and I came home so tired and ravenous that dinner made us feel wakeful and uncomfortable half the night. Our afternoon tea solves this problem. It is a break between the weariness of the day and the dinner and evening hours, and we consider it a great innovation. Anyway," the letter concludes, "things are running very smoothly in our house now, and as I consulted you a year ago about my troubles it seems only fair to let you know that they have disappeared."

THEY WERE EXPENDABLE

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. After taking General MacArthur and his party safely to Cebu, in the southern islands, Squadron 3 prepared to participate in a "great offensive" planned against the Japs. But our planes and ships that were supposed to come didn't appear, and Lieut. Kelly's boat and the one Lieut. Bulkeley was riding in were forced into hiding.

CHAPTER XIII

"They didn't get us then," said Kelly. "At midnight our escape began. The destroyer lost me with its light temporarily, so I did a ninety-degree turn so as to pass astern of her and lose her. I continued on that course five minutes, heading directly away from her, then to the left in another ninety-degree turn, and I started looking around the ship.

"I found Reynolds, my port gunner (he was also cook), had been shot through the throat and shoulder. I got him down below and had the chief torpedoman and the radioman give him first aid.

"I found our mast had been shot off a foot over my head, so we couldn't use our radio for sending. The port turret had been hit and its guns were out of action.

"Our objective now was to get Reynolds to a doctor. We were going like a bat out of hell. I couldn't see the 41 boat—it was so dark I couldn't even see the shore. I just had to look at the compass and make mental estimates as to how far we had gone in various directions since I last had seen land I recognized, and then guess where we now were. I thought we were near the narrow channel between the islands; would another Jap destroyer be laying for me there?

"Suddenly, directly ahead, a searchlight came on, less than a mile away—a Jap steaming full speed at me. I barely had time to give a hard left and a hard right and we went scooting past each other at a relative speed of sixty knots before he had a chance to fire a shot. He turned, holding me down with his light like a bug under a pin, and started chasing, blazing away with big guns—two splashes four hundred feet away, two more fifty feet away. I started zigging to squirm out of that light—wouldn't let my gunners fire a shot; it would help him keep our position. I was getting away, all right, but he kept firing for ten minutes, although his accuracy was going to hell. By 1:30 I could barely see his light, which was waving around, searching the water back of us.

"I kept on, wide-open, wondering how we'd ever get in, since we had no charts, it was black as pitch, and I knew coral reefs must be all around us. At four o'clock I slowed down and headed into where I hoped the beach was, taking soundings. The water suddenly shoaled off and bump! we were aground—a pinnacle of coral under her belly. Looking down with flashlights we could see the water was twenty feet deep with coral pinnacles all around us about every twenty feet, like a petrified forest, rising to within five feet of the surface.

"Studying the shore line, I realized we were about ten miles too far up the coast. I sent Ensign Richardson ashore in a rowboat to send an army doctor and ambulance out from Cebu for Reynolds, and also a tug for us.

"For the next hour we sallied ship-rocking it, trying to jiggle it off the pinnacle, backing with the engines—and finally managed to roll it off.

"Reynolds was feeling fine now. I'd suddenly remembered a little present Peggy had given me on the Rock, went down to my locker and brought it up for him—a couple of codein tablets and a sedative pill. Now he was sitting topside smoking, although he couldn't drink because the water would leak out the hole in his throat. They'd been short of drugs on the Rock, but she sneaked these out for me just in case I got wounded out on patrol. A hell of a thoughtful present, and much more valuable and useful than a gold cigarette case.

"Dawn came with a low fog which shut out the coastal contours, and because of all the coral we had to stand well off the coast. The sun was well up but that didn't worry me; with air superiority we didn't need to stalk in the dark any more. By 7:30 the sun had burned the fog away and we started out on two engines—one screw had banged up on the coral but that didn't matter—we were crippled now, but 'Dad' Cleland would quickly fix us. At eight o'clock we spotted the entrance to the long channel and turned in.

"So there we were, fat, dumb, and happy, heading up the narrow channel at fifteen knots, when all of a sudden—Wham! It was a hundred-pound bomb which landed about ten feet off our bow.

"Then I looked up, and here a second plane was peeling off, coming out of a cloud. But instead of the big white stars of the American air corps on her wings, there were the flaming suns of Japan!

"I didn't have time even to wonder what in hell had become of our big American offensive and the air umbrella, because I had to throttle back, stopping the boat momentarily so that the next bomb would land twenty-five feet in front instead of squarely on us. Then I gave her the gun and started trying to zigzag in that narrow four-hundred-foot-wide channel, meanwhile giving word to our machine guns to start firing.

"They bombed us for thirty minutes, and the farthest bomb was thirty feet away. We would wait for the bomb release, see it start falling, then I'd give hard rudder and it would miss by a few feet. All the while we had to keep in this narrow channel so we couldn't be beached helplessly on a coral reef, and work our way down it toward port, where presently some of the newly arrived American planes would see what was going on and come to help. We didn't doubt, of course, that they'd arrived. Four Jap seaplanes were after us, working in rotation—undoubtedly those from the second cruiser the army had reported as being around.

"When their bombs were exhausted they began diving down just over our mast stub to strafe us. With their first salvo they killed Harris. He was my torpedoman and also manning the starboard 50-caliber machine guns—a fine kid he was—he slumped down from his guns and rolled on the deck when a bullet ripped into his throat. So I put in

"But meanwhile Ross had shot down one of the four planes."

Martino, or started to, but found they had also hit the gun and put it out of action.

"But meanwhile Ross, with the starboard 30-caliber machine guns, had shot down one of the four planes. The next plane got Ross in the leg, and also put out his gun. So we now had no guns, only two engines and a boat full of holes with three planes diving down to less than one hundred feet, raking us with fire which we couldn't return—only try to dodge.

"The engineer now reported the engine room was full of water and the boat was sinking, so there was nothing to do but beach her, if we were to save the wounded men. I headed her over towards nearby Kawit Island, and there she beached hard and fast. There were about twelve hundred yards of shallow surf, four feet of water over an uneven bottom of coral and sand, and then the palms. The planes kept up their strafing as we lay there, but there was nothing to do now but dodge while we got the wounded ashore.

"I went down into the engine room and there was Hunter, my chief machinist's mate, with his arm practically blown off—a bullet had entered his elbow and gone out a three inch hole in his forearm, but he was still manning the engines. I gave the order to abandon ship. It turned out that there were only three of us unhit, so it was a job getting the wounded out while the Japanese dived to rake us. We made the mistake of taking off our shoes, and the coral cut our feet to ribbons as we staggered carrying the men.

"I found Reynolds, who had been wounded in the throat during the night, now lying with his hand over his belly.

"'Mr. Kelly,' he said, 'leave me here.'

"'What happened?' I asked.

"'When the planes attacked,' he said, 'there didn't seem to be anything for me to do, so I went below and lay down on Mr. Brantingham's bunk. They hit me in the belly while I was lying there. I'm done for, sir. I'll be all right here. You get out the others.'

"Well, the hell with that. So in spite of his protests, Martino and I carried him ashore. Then we went back for a last trip. Only Harris was left, lying where he had tumbled into the tank compartment. But the radioman and I carried his body ashore, because we hoped to give him a decent bural.

"I rounded up some native soldiers, who got stretchers, and in these we carried the wounded to the other side of the island where they could be loaded into a launch, putting them in charge of Sheppard, a first-class machinist's mate, to get them to the hospital.

"At this point a banca showed up, and it was a native doctor, the one we had sent Ensign Richardson ashore for, before dawn, for Reynolds, who by now was en route to the hospital. So I loaded the ship's papers, binoculars, and stuff into this banca, and with them I shoved off for Cebu.

"Halfway over the three planes came back and we tried to hide behind a fish trap—a net with bamboo poles sticking up out of the water. But they weren't strafing now. They were looking for the fourth plane we'd shot down. They scoured the area for twenty minutes. After they left we went on in, and of course I went straight to army headquarters, and met the colonel in charge—the No. 2 officer of the island. No, he hadn't heard from Bulkeley, but he'd send out a radio message to hunt for him if he was still alive. And maybe I'd better give my report direct to the general. I wanted to, and also I wanted to find out what had happened to our big American Offensive we had been asked to be part of, and that air umbrella which should have protected us this morning.

"The general had been having a conference at the bar of the American Club, sitting with some other officers and some civilians who were now all having a drink. Now a general is pretty important, and you don't just go barging into his conferences—not if you're a mere naval lieutenant in command of a little seventy-foot boat. So, following the lead of this conducting colonel, we stood off a bit and waited until the general gave us the signal to come on in and tie up at his table. He saw us all right, but he didn't give us the signal—just went on talking to the other officers and civilians.

"Now, thinking back, I realize it was a most important conference. But at the time I was excited, because I had just come from my boat in which I'd fought all through the war and with which we'd just helped to sink a Jap cruiser—my boat which was now lying beached across the bay, with one man dead, another dying, and all the rest but three wounded. I suppose I was unstrung. I wanted to have him make my report by radio about the cruiser. And then, although maybe it wasn't my business, I'd have liked to find out about that American offensive he'd invited us to join the night before.

"We kept standing there, the two of us, while I got madder and madder. I see now it was unreasonable, but I couldn't help it then. Finally it embarrassed even the colonel and he invited me to step over by the bar and have a drink with him. I said no, thanks, I had work to do, but I'd have a Coca Cola. I stuck around ten more minutes drinking it and then, since the general gave us no signal, I shoved off.

"I arranged to have the boat guarded. Because I wouldn't yet admit that maybe both it and we were expended now. High tide was at four o'clock. Couldn't we maybe patch her up, float her over to 'Dad' Cleland's, get torpedoes and a crew from somewhere, and maybe fight her just once again?

"I went over there to where Brantingham and the 35 boat were, taking the stuff I'd salvaged from the boat, and they gave me some lunch as I talked about the fight and what had happened to us, and during it Ensign Richardson telephoned. He said Reynolds had died, and they were burying him and Harris in the American cemetery with a military escort and a priest, at four o'clock. I said of course I would go, and would meet Richardson at the bar of the American Club, from which we'd go over together.

"I got there but Richardson didn't show up. I stood around. I was tired and mad and lonesome as hell. Finally a civilian came up—and I got to talking to him. He was a very nice guy—vice president of the club. I told him our story and he said how sorry he was, and asked if he might go to the funeral. He was the first sympathetic person I'd met.

"Presently a truck arrived, driven by a Filipino soldier with a message for me that the funeral had been postponed until ten o'clock tomorrow. This American found out I knew nobody in Cebu, hadn't slept, and had no place to go, so he invited me out to his house for dinner and the night. Before I went, I located our three men who were unwounded. I gave them fifty pesos and told them to go ashore and get drunk and forget the whole mess—if they could.

GOD PROVIDES FOR HIS PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 16:11-18; 17: 3-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matthew 6:11.

Only God can provide the necessities of life. Rationing has taught us that lesson anew if we have been at all thoughtful about it. The plan is one of sharing. Sharing what? The food and other provisions which come to us from God's hand. Unless our crops are good there will be less to share. Only God can help us.

This was the lesson Israel learned in the wilderness. To reach the goal to which God was leading them they must pass through the wilderness. Not only were there many weary miles to travel, but there were privations to be borne. Life is like that.

Now they cried for food. Note how elemental are man's needs in the final analysis—bread and water. The very things we take almost for granted as we concern ourselves with life's weighty interests and profound problems become, if lacking, the only things that have any real meaning. And who is it that can provide them? No one but God Himself.

I. Bread from Heaven (Exod. 16: 11-18).

Israel's longing for meat was met by the miraculous coming of quantities of quail (v. 13). But that was not the food to sustain them day after day. For this they needed bread, and it came from heaven, every day until they entered the promised land (Josh. 5:12).

Observe four things about the manna.

First, it was a divine provision. There are responsibilities in life which we may bear—and must bear—but in the ultimate meeting of our real needs we must look to God.

Secondly, it was a daily provision. What forehanded folk many of us are, and no doubt rightly so, for God puts no premium on improvidence. But once again we must recognize, as did Israel in receiving the daily manna in the wilderness, that ours is indeed a moment by moment existence.

We plan bravely for the next decade or the next generation, but as a matter of fact it can only come to pass "if the Lord will" (read James 5:13-17).

Next, it was a limited provision—enough for the day and no more, except for a double portion on the sixth day, and none at all on the Sabbath. These provisions were made clear to Israel, and yet there were those who attempted to lay up for the morrow, and some even went out to seek manna on the Sabbath day.

We marvel at their stubborn obtuseness, but are we not often just like them. Some there are who are always expecting that the laws of both God and man should be set aside for them, but they come to grief.

Finally, it called for diligence and action on their part. They had to be out early each day (except the Sabbath) to gather it. God's mercies are for those who are willing to obey Him. He gives to those who receive by active faith.

II. Water from the Rock (Exod. 17:3-6).

"And the people thirsted"—for the daily manna was not enough, they must have water. Needy, yes, constantly needy are God's children.

"Every life knows the bite of necessity . . . every soul cries out in pain because there is wanting some completing favor, some culminating and all-contenting benediction. Here it is bread; there it is water; but everywhere a famine . . . in many a case a famine of soul, a spiritual destitution, a consciousness of a void which time cannot satisfy or space content."

God always provides. There is a rock in the wilderness. But what pleasure does a murmuring people find in a rock when they famish for water? It is God's delightful custom to meet our needs in unexpected ways and by means which we do not understand. Even our physical necessities come from unthought of sources.

III. Christ, the Bread and Water of Life.

Our lesson does not give the New Testament application of Israel's experiences, but let us not miss that blessed spiritual truth.

In John 6:31-33, Christ is declared to be the true bread from heaven, of which the manna was but a type.

Paul speaks in I Corinthians 10: 1-4 of this incident in the history of Israel, saying that they "did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (see also John 4:14).

Hungry and thirsty soul, you who are still unsatisfied after tasting all that life apart from Christ has to offer, will you not, just now, take Him?

Ripe Cherries Make Sweet Jams
(See Recipe Below)

Jelly Season's Here!

Think of the good cheer in a sparkling, quivery dish of jelly to go with your golden brown biscuits or rolls in the cold of winter. Do you need more than that to start you on a spree of jelly-making? My guess is no.

There's a great interest in jelly-making in spite of sugar rationing, for many is the smart homemaker who realizes what a spark and zest those little bits of bright-colored jelly can lend to wartime meals. So, go out into the berry patch, and let's get started on a batch of jelly.

Cherries, plums and blackberries are coming into season and make splendid jellies. They're all easy to handle and make nice, rich, luscious jellies:

Ripe Sweet Cherry Jam.
(Makes 7 6-ounce glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, pit about 2½ pounds fully ripe cherries. Crush thoroughly or grind. If a stronger cherry flavor is desired, add a few crushed cherry pits to fruit during cooking.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure fruit into a 5- or 6-quart kettle, filling up last cup with water if necessary.

Place over a hot test fire. Add powdered fruit pectin. Mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bringing to a full, rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire. Skim. Pour at once into sterilized jelly glasses and paraffin at once.

Ripe Plum Jelly.
(Makes 7 medium glasses)
3 cups juice
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush about 3 pounds fully ripe plums. Do not peel or pit them. Add ¾ cup water, bring to a boil and simmer 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly bag or cloth, and squeeze out juice. Add small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again, if there is a slight shortage of juice.

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside. Measure juice into saucepan. Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour in sugar at once, stirring constantly.

Continue stirring, bring to a full, rolling boil, and boil hard ½ minute.

Remove from fire, skim, and pour into glasses quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

Blackberry and Sour Cherry Jam.
(Makes 8 medium glasses)
3½ cups prepared fruit
4½ cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly about 1 quart fully ripe blackberries. Pit 1 pound fully ripe cherries. Crush thoroughly or grind. Combine fruits. Measure fruit into a kettle, filling last fraction of cup with water if necessary.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Pour sugar in at once, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil, and boil hard 1 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once.

You'll enjoy pickles, too, for your winter menu pickups. I've found some perfectly delightful recipes for you which will not take too much sugar — just in case you want to use most of the sugar on jams and jellies. Remember that you must use a pure apple cider vinegar and good, firm, fresh cucumbers to get nice, crisp pickles:

Cucumber-Raisin Pickles.
4 cups sliced cucumbers
1 cup salt
1 cup white vinegar
1 cup sugar
6 tablespoons raisins
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 tablespoon mustard seed

Soak cucumbers overnight in salt solution made of 1 cup salt to 1 gallon water. Drain. Combine remaining ingredients and heat to boiling. Add cucumbers. Boil 10 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars and seal at once.

Ripe Cucumber Sweet Pickles.
8 large ripe cucumbers
½ pound stick cinnamon or oil of cinnamon
1 ounce cloves (or oil of cloves)
1½ pints vinegar
3 pounds sugar

Pare the cucumbers, quarter. Take out seeds and cut quarters into medium-sized pieces. Scald in salted water (2 tablespoons salt to 1 quart water). Drain and simmer in clear water until they are tender but firm. Drain well. Tie the spices in a bag and boil them with vinegar and sugar for 5 minutes. Pour this mixture over cucumbers, cover jar and set away. Next day pour off syrup and boil for 10 minutes, then pour over cucumbers again. Flavor is improved by repeating the process several times. With last heating, place pickles in clean, sterilized jars, cover with hot solution and seal at once.

Like fruit drinks for winter? You can make delicious nectars out of fruits easily and use them when fresh fruit juices are no longer available:

Peach Nectar.

Select sound, ripe fruit. Peel and crush. Combine 4 cups fruit with 3 cups water and heat slowly to simmering. Press through colander, then through fine sieve. To each pound of fruit pulp and juice, add ¾ pound of sugar. Bring to simmering temperature. Stir until sugar is well dissolved. Pour into clean, sterile jars. Put on cap. Process 30 minutes in a water bath at simmering temperature (180 degrees F).

Lynn Says:

Jelly Forum: Pectin is the magic ingredient that makes jam "jam" and jelly "jell." There must be a just right amount of it. Pectin is a natural jellying substance found in fruits and berries, but when the fruit or berry is shy on it, a liquid or powdered form of pectin may be added.

Jams and jellies may be kept for various lengths of time, but for best practical purposes it is best not to try to keep them for over a year.

Melt paraffin for jelly in a small pot over boiling water. Paraffin should not be smoking hot because it might lend a disagreeable odor to the jelly or jam.

It's possible to put up fruit juice to be made into jelly later if you do not have enough sugar to do it during the summer. Prepare fruit according to directions given in the jelly recipes but do not add water to the recipe. Squeeze the juice in a jelly bag if it is for jelly. Fill hot sterile jars with juice and process in a boiling water bath for 20 minutes.

HOW NOT TO CATCH A FLY

The CEILING KICK METHOD is by far the most ambitious effort required for killing a fly. In lieu of necessary implements at hand and in final exasperation, you boldly resort to kick the fly on the ceiling. Chief danger: plaster dust in the eyes, strained ligaments and your landlord orders your exit. An easier way is to

THE Great Lakes and the Norfolk service ball teams have been picking up most of the publicity as the two outstanding combinations along the war front.

Tom Hughes

A new challenger has now entered the field with a blast of bugles and a roll of drums.

This challenger thinks it has been overlooked. We refer to the New Cumberland team that meets the star-littered Norfolk bunch in Norfolk over this week-end.

I can break the news to both Norfolk and Great Lakes that New Cumberland's team is no soft touch.

It had won 22 straight games until Washington's Senators beat them 2 to 1 a few days ago on Vernon's homer in the eighth. Still 22 out of 23 isn't too moth-eaten. Over 4,000 tackled a rain to see this game at Harrisburg's Island Park.

New Cumberland's crack pitcher is Tom Hughes of the Phillies. Lynn Myers from the Cardinals and Pat Mullen from the Tigers lead the attack.

These three are not the only high-class players on the team's roster—a team that expects to take Norfolk in tow by Sunday afternoon.

Perhaps it won't, as Norfolk with Rizzuto and many other stars, is on a par with any big league squad.

Great Lakes will also have something to say in a loud voice about any service title.

Navy and Sport

Our navy believes with a big part of our army that sport, handled in the proper way, is something more than slightly important.

It is now well understood that those colleges, for example, who have navy recruits can carry out at least some sort of a football program.

Those colleges taken over by the army, so far as football is concerned, will return to the deep-tangled wildwood, where the whang doodle mourneth.

I have contacted athletic directors at many of these army campus grounds and they all tell me their case is hopeless unless army changes its plan.

"Here's the way it works out at Alabama," a former Rose Bowl star said.

"We have now about 2,500 students enrolled at the university. But they are all, or practically all, in the army. They are under army control, army training, and no longer belong to the university. Many of these want to play football. They believe they can keep up with their work and still find some spare time for a few games with near-by rivals such as Georgia and Georgia Tech. If Alabama was under navy control it would have a pretty fair team with Frank Thomas on hand.

"But under army control, unless army gives its permission for football to go on, there will be no Alabama team this fall. Most of the army men I have talked to—I'd say over 95 per cent—want competitive football to go along as it has at West Point and Annapolis—where they also work 16 hours a day—harder than any army recruits will work at any college.

"I happen to know how keenly the cadets and midshipmen from the Hudson and the Severn want football.

"I'm not speaking for morale on the so-called home front. I'm speaking for those in active service—and those headed in that same direction."

'Ride 'Em Out' Atkinson

One of baseball's most important slogans has always been "run 'em out."

Teddy Atkinson's racing slogan is "ride 'em out." Atkinson is one of the best jockeys riding around New York and the best hustler on the track today.

Too many jockeys stop riding when they see first-place beyond their reach. They overlook the fact that many large chunks of cold and hot cash are sent along for second and third spots.

Atkinson keeps on riding. If he can't make it in front he goes after second money. If he can't get that he keeps shooting for the show.

This, naturally, is the way it should be. It is tough enough to beat 11 or 12 per cent—in fact it's impossible—without having this hostile margin increased several points by riders who ease up or pull up when they see they can't get there in front.

Hagen Wanted to Win

During Walter Hagen's long prime as a winning golfer, the able pro would tell you he had no interest in second or third place—even in a U. S. or British Open.

"Who remembers who finished second or third?" he used to say.

This meant that Hagen would take any kind of gamble to win or lead where others would take no such risk. Hagen often knew that if any of his gambles failed, he would drop from second to fourth or fifth in the money. Perhaps lower.

BASEBALL A LA WAR COMMUNIQUE

NEW YORK.—It was admitted here today that a battle between the New York Giants and the Chicago Cubs is on. Official comment was limited, however, to a brief statement by the Giants that the fight is progressing favorably. Reports from Stockholm say that the Cubs have the upper hand. From Swiss sources comes a bulletin that the Giants scored heavily in the opening moments of the encounter.

By Reuters: The Giants claim an initial success. "We struck out two men in the first inning, and possibly three," said the statement.

The above was supplemented by the following bulletin from Giant headquarters in the third inning:

"Our side scored heavily in the second inning. It is believed we tallied five runs. Three runners were seen to cross the plate. One other runner was proceeding toward the plate when last reported. A fifth man was observed rounding third."

Later.—The Chicago Cubs deny a debacle. "At the moment of this bulletin," says an announcement from Cub headquarters, "one of our men has connected for two bases and probably three. He hit the second ball pitched, if not the first."

BERNE, SWITZERLAND. — The New York Giants, according to information here, had no pitchers knocked out of the box, as claimed by the Cubs. "All our twirlers carried out their objectives and returned safely," said a statement intercepted here.

NEW YORK. — No official announcement is available from either side, but on the basis of such information as can be pieced together the following summary is believed to be fairly accurate:

Giants: Six runs known to have been tallied; three runs probably tallied; four runs possibly tallied.

Cubs: Five runs known to have been tallied; five runs probably tallied; two runs thought to have been tallied.

Strikeouts: By Giants, eight positive, four probable. Cubs, four positive, eight probable.

VACATION DISCUSSION—1943

"Well, let's decide on our vacation, Wingate!"

"Let's! There's an outside chance something might come of it, Jennie, my dear."

"When shall we take our month's outing this year?"

"Our what?"

"Our three weeks."

"Are you crazy?"

"Oh, well, make it two weeks, then!"

"That's more like it. Let's take them in November."

"Where can we go in July or August for that matter!"

"You make it so involved, Wingate. Don't you want a vacation?"

"Certainly. But every time I begin planning one I imagine Eastman is watching me."

"Mr. Eastman says the government wants people to take vacations."

"Yeah. All he asks is that they don't use autos, buses or Pullman cars, that they don't travel very far and that they avoid starting off or returning on week-ends. You get a nervous collapse just trying to figure out how to do it."

"Our grandfathers and grandmothers took vacations without automobiles."

"Not in the places where we've been used to taking ours, dear."

"Traveling by railroad coach isn't a hardship, is it?"

"Not if you don't bruise easily."

"Lots of people travel that way when they need to go away for a rest."

"That's what makes them need to go away for the rest."

"You're just getting soft, Wingate. You need toughening up."

"A vacation this year is just the trick to do it. But assume we get some place. What do we use for transportation after we get there? You hate mules and I understand they don't keep camels."

"We can stay put after we arrive at the hotel."

"We never have."

"But this is different. A perfectly quiet vacation would do me good."

"It would be awful for me. I'd have to listen to all your squawks."

War Goods, From Brushes to Bombs, Are Stored In Huge Warehouses of Utah Ordnance Depot

Munitions Are Made In Nearby Factory At Salt Lake City

By John Elbridge Jones
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

The military axiom that "an army travels on its belly" is true, but a modern army needs many other necessary supplies—shoes, for instance, and trucks, and tanks, tractors, munitions and guns.

To furnish these supplies when and where needed and in the proper amount, the U. S. army has built up separate organizations within the army, headed by Lieut. General Brehon B. Somervell, called "Service Commands." There is a "Service Command" for each military area not only within the U. S. but wherever the army goes.

For the first 12 months or more of this war all information regarding army operation and placement was a military secret; now—in driving for final victory—the army wants you to know how it operates; how it takes care of your son or your husband—what it feeds him, how it clothes him—what it gives him to fight with and how it cares for him when sick or wounded.

With that in mind Maj. Gen. Kenyon A. Joyce, commanding general of the Ninth service command, with headquarters in Salt Lake City, Utah, recently invited a group of newspaper men to visit all of the army service forces. These newspaper men were shown everything and told everything, but they were restricted not to reveal military information helpful to the enemy.

Non-Combat Goods.

All of the thousands of articles called "non-combat equipment," meaning, in general, everything the army uses except actual weapons and fighting machines, are procured by purchase or are made to order. Canned vegetables, blankets, safety pins, uniforms of all sorts, road machinery, and stoves are samples of these things not used in actual fighting, but most necessary just the same.

The Ninth service command procures and stores this non-combat equipment in Utah Army Service Forces depot at Ogden, under the direct command of Brig. Gen. Ralph Talbot Jr. Here are tremendous warehouses and storage spaces—much of it in the open, with seemingly miles of rows of equipment such as trailers—trench diggers—harrows, carry-alls, scrapers, water tanks, plows, portable generators, barb wire and bridge building material.

The depot is roughly a mile wide by three miles long. There are 15 permanent type warehouses of concrete and steel and nine temporary warehouses of wooden construction. They house everything the army needs and uses outside of munitions and implements of war.

Several are used for food, others for clothing, kitchen equipment, for automobiles, for drainage tiles, for pipe, for everything.

On display were box lockers, 12 kinds of hats or caps, shirts and underwear, carrying bags, gloves, coats, mess kits, sleeping bags, uniforms for army and for WACs and for nurses, musical instruments, shoes, sox, tool sets, helmets, plastic

This young war worker, Miss Louise Anderson, is exhibiting belts of machine-gun cartridges for airplanes. She operates a machine that fills the belts, which are made of webbing.

Inspectors at the Tooele Ordnance depot examine a batch of empty cartridge cases, returned to be melted into brass scrap. They must see that no live ammunition has got mixed with the shells, since it would explode in the furnace and possibly cause an accident.

foot tubs, flags, tents, tent stoves, and mountain tents. Among thousands of other articles were pack kits, gasoline lanterns, emergency rations, G. I. thread and needles, compasses, pliers, sunburn cream, chap stick, towels, and rubber pants.

Unique here was the fact that a part of the guard for daylight service is made up of women: women trained to do guard duty—to carry a gun and use it. Police dogs aid the guards at night.

Making Cartridges

Guns, cartridges, bombs and similar munitions, as well as war machines like tanks and armored trucks, are made at the army's own ordnance factories, or by private manufacturers, under government contract. One of these latter is the Utah Ordnance plant in Salt Lake City.

The plant area is about 5,000 acres with more than 175 buildings—10 miles of heavy track railroad and 17 miles of surfaced road. Inner and outer fences extend a distance of about 21 miles, most of which is under 24 hour surveillance by auxiliary military guard under direction of the army.

This plant is the last word in a modern line production system for manufacturing small arms ammunition, such as 30 and 50 caliber armor-piercing, tracer, incendiary and ball shells. Here the principal operations are making the shell, the bullet, and the primer—bringing them all together, and then filling them with powder. The finished ammunition is put into belts—or clips and then packed in metal-lined cases for shipment.

Outstanding in the plant is the continuous rigid testing and checking—for on the efficient operation of these munitions may depend the life of your son or husband. Finally a certain percentage of each batch is sent to the ballistics department, where shells are actually fired in guns used by the army and are checked for accuracy, fire power and penetration.

Tooele Ordnance Depot.

During war the various ordnance manufacturing plants may ship direct to the field of action, but a large part of the material must of necessity be held in reserve in storage. For this purpose the government has built huge storage depots in strategic locations. These basic supply depots are removed from the seacoast for protection, yet so located that war goods may be transported swiftly by rail, highway or plane to the points of embarkation.

The army has built the Tooele Ordnance depot at Tooele, Utah, about 40 miles southwest of Salt Lake City. The depot, comprising an area of some 26,000 acres, is served by two transcontinental railroads, giving quick access to the Northwest, the San Francisco Bay area and the Southwest—all important ports for the Pacific theater of war. Within the depot are 150 miles of hard surfaced highway and 77 miles of railway track. Five Diesel switch engines handle freight cars.

The ordnance depot performs three main functions—first it is the reserve storage for all munitions—including rifle and machine gun ammunition, shells and bombs of all sizes and weight. It stores reserves of ordnance equipment such as pistols, rifles, machine guns, cannon, trench mortars, and mobile fighting equipment such as tanks, jeeps, trucks and tractors.

Repair and Salvage.

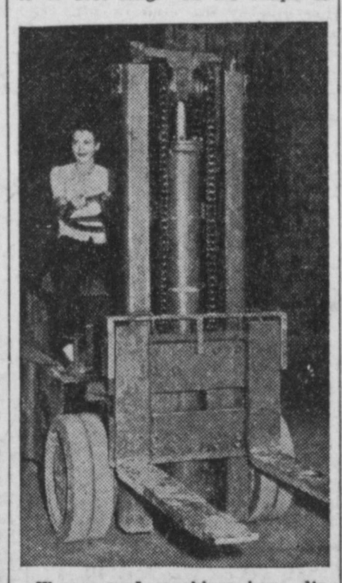

Second, the ordnance depot is a service organization. It puts equipment together, gets it ready for shipment and ships it. It takes care of the repair and rebuilding of damaged and badly worn equipment. In the depot area are huge buildings, one of them 525 feet wide by 540 feet long, used wholly for making repairs that cannot be taken care of at the front. Duplicate parts of all equipment are kept on hand—either for use in the depot or for shipment.

The third function of the Tooele Ordnance depot is one of salvage. Back to this depot are sent trainloads of used shells, large and small. The undamaged are shipped to the munitions factories for refilling, and the unusable are sent to the smelters. The army expects to get back approximately 90 per cent of the shells, packing cases, ammunition belts, clips, etc., issued.

Women by far outnumber the men in the warehouses. Girls trained for the job operate motor driven fork lift trucks—which pick up huge cases and stack them—8, 10 and 12 feet high. The depot is manned mostly by civilians.

Most interesting of all the features of the depot is the storage of the actual munitions. Small caliber ammunition is stored in above-the ground warehouses. Heavy ammunition and bombs are stored in "igloos."

There are about 1,000 of these igloos ranging in size from 40 feet to 80 feet long. In the shape of half of a barrel, the walls and ceiling are made of reinforced cement nine inches thick, covered with two to three feet of gravel and soil.

Women and machines have displaced husky men in the Tooele Ordnance depot warehouses. Miss Katherine Boswell runs a fork-lift shop truck, that can move and pile ten cases a trip. The work done by one truck would cost $40 an hour if done by hand.

One of the igloos visited was about half full, containing several hundred 1,000-pound semi-block buster bombs—all ready for shipment to Hirohito.

For protection the depot is watched over by a corps of auxiliary military guard under the direction of the army, who patrol in cars.

Not far distant from the Tooele Ordnance plant but entirely separate is another depot. Here the army stores and experiments with gas for the kind of warfare the United Nations hope to avoid. But, as proof of what President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill say about being ready for it, it is there. It may never be used—but it's there waiting and ready if needed.

BUSHNELL HOSPITAL for soldiers is another department of the Ninth service command. Construction of the huge institution was begun shortly after Pearl Harbor. It is located at Brigham City, 60 miles north of Salt Lake City. At present it has 2,000 beds.

Corp. John Kariger, 21, of Hershey, Neb., is one patient who probably owes his life to the new drug penicillin, administered at Bushnell. His thighbone was shattered by a Jap bullet, and infection developed.

W. L. White's "Queens Die Proudly" (Harcourt-Brace) contains this beautiful wordage: "And the plane—it isn't something that belongs to the Government with a number; it's Old 99, the beautiful NEW Flying Fortress that belongs to you. It's more than your home—it's, well, a kind of a sweetheart. All of you picked her up off the assembly line at the Boeing plant where she was born—a beautiful, smooth, shining, naked thing. Then all of you took her up over the clouds and wrapped that beautiful blue star-spangled gown of the skies around her, which is the way every Fortress ought to be dressed, because they're the Queens of the high skies."

H. Ullstein's "The Rise and Fall of the House of Ullstein" (Simon-Schuster) is a tragic story of the slow death of Germany's greatest publishers via the swastika poison . . . The history of its downfall has an uncanny way of paralleling some of the events already taking place here . . . The author reports that he told conservative German dailies to offer stiffer resistance to the rising tide of Naziism. But they, and even chiefs of his own paper, told him not to be so pessimistic about the danger within . . . They feared that such stories would lose subscribers—so they did nothing, and now they have nothing.

From "Exchange Ship," by Max Hill of the Associated Press (Farrar-Rinehart): "Clean people? The Japanese bath provides what probably is the dirtiest way of getting clean in the world. Scores of men, women and children bathe in the same water, which is hot but surely not enough to kill germs . . . Each wing (of my prison) had a row of five Japanese-type baths, one of them usually out of order. That meant the 180 prisoners had four tubs, and the water wasn't emptied until the last man passed through the line. The native prisoners were first—but there was only one place for the foreigners—last."

H. Allen Smith's book, "Life in a Putty Knife Factory," contains considerable amusement, including: "A man who becomes the writer of a column is much worse off. His brain achieves such a state that no respectable gumma would ever attach itself to it. He becomes a straightforward paranoiac. He suffers first from headache, tinnitus, palpitation, digestive disturbances, and incapacity for mental exertion. After that come intense egotism, selfishness, conceit, overbearing pride, violent temper, and moroseness. How do I know this? I was a columnist. My own favorite is W. W. Around newspaper offices, where it is fashionable to scoff, he gets very little outspoken applause. Your omniscient, swaggering newspaper man greets his name with a sneer. I never did. I wouldn't sneer even though it made me appear to be sharp as a tack."

"Time of Peace," an exciting tale by Ben Ames Williams (Houghton-Mifflin), contains this gem: "So now you've seen where your ancestors lived," Mark told his son as they came into familiar surroundings. "Don't ever forget that you're more than a New Englander. Out of your eight great-great-grandparents, two went from Massachusetts to Ohio, two went from Georgia to Mississippi, one lived in California, one in Oregon, one in Minnesota, and one—your mother's great-great-grandmother—came from Germany . . . Two of your great-grandparents came from Wales. Your grandparents came from Ohio, Michigan and Minnesota. You've got all the blood strains in you, Tony. You're not a Westerner, nor a Southerner. You're an American."

Secretary Harold Ickes' "The Autobiography of a Curmudgeon" (Reynal & Hitchcock) offers the following in the chapter called Blessed Event: "Mouth-to-ear rumors about a public man are almost without exception so fiercely barbed that most people would hesitate to repeat them out loud if they should be said of a private citizen. The private citizen has easy recourse to the courts—protection under the law. So, too, I grant you, in theory, has the public man, but the more public he is, the greater the probability that should he prove that he didn't actually commit the crime, the publicity that he would get would leave the world convinced that he was in the neighborhood when it occurred. In other words, the people can believe virtually anything concerning a man in public life provided that it is sufficiently unbelievable."

If you are still squawking about rationing, then read "Round Trip to Russia," by Walter Graebner (Lippincott is publisher) . . . Graebner's exciting book says that no civilian in Russia may travel by air or rail or own a car . . . Eggs, when you can get them, cost $3 each . . . Newspapers are used for rolling cigarettes and to put between blankets for more warmth . . . Ninety-five per cent of all food is rationed, and the annual civilian food consumption there is less than the annual civilian waste in the U. S.!

Geography Is Factor in Determining War's End

Road to Tokyo Both Long and Rough; Pacific Remains Studded With Well-Fortified Japanese Strongholds.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

No victory over Japan before 1949? When that sentiment was broadcast from Washington by Vice Admiral Horne under the aegis of Secretary Knox, a good many eyebrows were raised here in the capital. Of course, it is fully realized here that once the American people think the war is in the bag, they will be ready to resume the plowshare and the pen as simple citizens again, not as dollar-a-year men or munitions workers or victory gardeners or rationers or any of the other things we don't like. So Washington can't afford to be overoptimistic. But 1949 is a long, long way off.

When Admiral Halsey finally admitted that the capture of the important air base of Munda was "within reach," it looked like another easy victory scored and that Tokyo ought to tremble.

About Distances

But how much nearer are we to Tokyo? Get a map of Asia, including the Solomon Islands and if you can identify the little specks which are Guadalcanal where our main base lies, and Rabaul, our objective, note the distance between, and then see how much farther it is to Tokyo. It's as far as from New York to Casablanca.

And there is a lot of difference between the two roads. When we sent our troops over the Atlantic to Africa, it was pretty nearly our pond—there wasn't an Axis base en route. The Pacific is studded with Japanese bases.

There are two powerful Jap strongholds, much better protected than Munda right in the Solomon Islands, on Bougainville island and Rabaul, the hub of the Japs' empire in the Southwest. Beyond, over a long stretch of water, is the little island of Truk, said to be the main Jap naval base in the Pacific.

From New Britain, where Rabaul is located, it is 690 miles to Tokyo—further than from Tunisia to the northern tip of Norway.

In order to realize why we are still so far away from our objective in the Pacific war, we have to consider what it took to get as far as we have already gone. It took six months, some terribly gruelling fighting, and many lives, to capture the little island of Guadalcanal. It took another five months before the Allies were ready to start their second offensive movement with the final capture of Rabaul as the objective. Progress at this rate and with this type of island-to-island advance is taken for granted by those who put 1949 as the date when Japan will be vanquished.

Defensive Action

It took MacArthur approximately as long to turn back the Japs on New Guinea, fighting to reach Port Moresby, and to capture their key point of Buna, so they could move on Salamaua and Lae driving the enemy out foot by foot from these pretty much isolated points.

The fighting, up until the drive beginning with the capture of Rendova on June 30, has been nothing more than offensive-defensive. Before that the effort, and a successful one, was to keep the Japs from attacking Australia from Port Moresby, from seizing the Solomons and making the Australian east coast vulnerable and to save the life line of men and supplies moving from America to Australia.

Only now, summer 1943, are we really taking offensive action in the Southwest Pacific and, as I said, if you look at a map of Asia which shows all of the territory held by the Japanese, you will see that what we have won since our offensive really began is a very thin sliver, geographically speaking. In enemy effectives destroyed, it has been larger in proportion, but the navy men in Washington who talk about 1949 speak with a conservative geographical accent.

Diary of a Broadcaster

Isn't it awfully dull in Washington with congress gone home and everything closed up?

If you think so, you are dreaming a midsummer night's dream.

When I arise and start down toward Pennsylvania avenue, I note the little spring cat which has joined its maltese mother and its tiger (perhaps) father. Is it going limp with boredom? It is not. It prepares its toilet with the same tongue-wearying energy that it did when congress was in session.

That is just an example. The buses are just as crowded. Telephone numbers as hard to get. Laundry lingers as long among the launderers. Pants pant for pressing.

Recently I tried four leading hotels before I could reserve places for lunch. One of them was not air cooled. "I am ordinarily a two-suit guy," said a newspaper man to me the other day when Donald Nelson was complaining about the heavy buying of clothes, "but if I didn't have four suits now. I'd go to work unpressed and uncleaned or in a barrel."

'The Little Prince'

You recall I reviewed "The Little Prince" by Antoine de Saint-Exupery in this column some time ago. I have had many letters concerning the author whom I said was at the front.

Recently Leonard Lyons, New York columnist, reported that the aviator-author, who is back on the fighting line again although he is 43 years old, wrote to his American translator:

"After seeing the fighting men and the mighty armaments, I realize that I must come to Africa to appreciate America."

He was spared, after the fall of France, "to fight again."

Let us hope he will be spared, when she rises, to write again.

Food Program

It was a cooler and more peaceful day than many which had preceded it in Washington. The President was in a genial mood when he met the press and radio representatives.

The administration, he said, is working on a new food program.

A few days before, I talked with a member of the administration who said to me: "Frankly, if we have a food program, I can't find it." And he was very anxious to locate it because a lot of his friends had been asking . . .

The President, at the conference I referred to, explained that he'd be tickled to death if anyone would explain to him how he could reduce prices in accordance with the stabilization under the present limitations set by congress.

A little bit later, I heard it said flatly: "We've got to increase prices if we expect the farmers to raise enough food to meet the present goals."

Now, Howard Tolley, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, (whose business it is to figure out what is needed, not how we'll get it) says this:

Increased Consumption

"If the United States carries out its proposed international pledge to do all that is needed to provide better diets for its own people, the consumption of dairy products here would have to be increased 40 per cent."

That is just one product—representing, of course, milk, butter, cheese.

In order to bring the national diet up to the standard set, truck crops would also have to be increased about 80 per cent, eggs more than 20 per cent, fruit about 20 per cent. according to Mr. Tolley, and to raise crops for such a market would take about 40 million additional acres of cropland or about one-eighth more than is now cultivated.

With the present full employment, Tolley says that this extra output of the farmer's product could be absorbed. And this leaves out what would be sold abroad.

Right now, industry is working on plans to maintain this "full employment" by converting war plants to peace plants. Industry is trying to compete with the government in post-war planning in this field.

How many farmers are interested enough to get up and say "their say" in favor of a plan that will keep enough people at work so that they can buy this extra 40 million acres' worth of food they need to be healthy?

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The basis of modern rubber usage is vulcanization, a word that is derived from Vulcan, the Greek God of Fire.

The cryptostegia vine yields about 17 drops of rubber latex a day, a seven-year-old Hevea tree three to six pounds of rubber a year. Properly treated Hevea trees, when 10 years old, can give from 1000 to 1500 pounds of rubber per acre per year. About eleven pounds of rubber are used in making a small automobile tire.

Lay rubber articles flat when storing, allowing them to assume their natural position. Rubber loses its life when under a permanent strain.

Household Hints

For longer service wash cotton garments according to the instructions on the label.

* * *

To prevent figs, dates or raisins from clogging the food chopper add a few drops of lemon juice.

* * *

When washing cut glass or pressed glass articles, apply the sudsy water with a small hand brush. It gets the soapy water into the crevices and removes dust which dulls the brilliancy of the glass.

* * *

A little starch added to the water with which mirrors are washed will remove soil and give a polish to the glass.

* * *

Mending a small snag or rip before an article goes into the washing machine may save a larger patch later on.

* * *

Have you ever tried drying the dishes with twin dish towels? A fresh dry towel in each hand disposes of them in the proverbial twinkling of an eye.

If you buy wool material that isn't preshrunk, it's wise to steampress it to shrink it before cutting out a garment.

Remove fresh grease stains from wallpaper immediately by holding a clean white blotter over stain and applying a warm iron. Move the blotter as it takes up the grease and use a clean portion to prevent spreading the stain.

The gaily enameled unit insignia you see on a soldier's lapels and overseas cap are reproductions of his regimental shield displayed in the center of the eagle on his regimental flag. It's a part of U. S. Army tradition. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) It's a gift from the folks back home, that always rates cheers. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

ON THE HOME FRONT With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Odd pieces of lumber and plywood or even old packing boxes may be used to make simple chair frames and there are no priorities on cotton padding and sturdy cotton covering materials.

A simple frame for a chair of this type is shown here. It is padded with cotton batting basted to pieces of unbleached muslin cut to fit the back and well over the sides of the seat. A separate cushion filled with cotton, down or feathers is then made for the seat. Either plain or figured material with contrasting seam welting may be used for covering.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared detailed dimensions and directions for making this chair frame. Pattern also gives step-by-step directions for covering the frame after it has been padded. Ask for Pattern 250 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Judgment of Odors

That persons vary greatly in their judgment of odors is shown in a survey in which of 3,000 individuals tested for their reactions upon smelling freesias, 19 per cent said that this sweet-scented flower had no odor, 65 per cent said it had a weak or medium odor and 16 per cent said it had a very strong odor, reports Collier's. Of those persons who noticed the fragrance, 86 per cent found it pleasant and 14 per cent unpleasant.
