EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

Freedom produces order

"When freedom destroys order," Eric Hoffer wrote, "the yearning for order will destroy freedom."

Confusing freedom with license, the self-styled "water-front poet" would lead us to suppose that freedom is a war with order, that one prevails only at the expense of the other.

This statement of the relationship between two desired goals catches Americans in a dilemma. Many people are induced to think they must work out a compromise between antagonistic principles. So begins the battle of duffers, one group duffer have this while the other duffer have that. Neither is likely to see that has been tied into an intellectual tug-of-war in which neither can possibly win its true objective — a tolerable, harmonious, yet open social environment.

Moreover, Hoffer's depiction of freedom and order as opposites bent on destruction — at first blush — seems to be in accord with the observed evidence. For certainly, there is a conflict in the civil forum, in the academic halls, even in the streets. And the struggle is often between those who espouse liberty and others who proclaim as primary the necessity for order. The question arises not to the effect, but as to the cause.

Does the threat to a peaceful life originate from that very latitude for thought and action that makes life enjoyable?

Not according to what we believe. What we see is this:

The conflict in society begins when some men trespass upon the freedom of others. Occasionally the trespass is committed by criminals. More usually it is committed in the name of society itself.

For example, some men who wield governmental power declare that others shall not be able to artificial sweeteners such as cyclamates or saccharin. That is a transparent invasion of personal choice and not by masked men.

Even when President Carter was prattling about human rights in some far off land, his attorney general was lobbying Congress to permit the IRS to continue its police-state tactics against those in his own land with impunity. That's another example. The exhibits would fill a library.

Obviously disturbances also arise from man-made lawlessness as well as from man-made laws, though usually in smaller degree. In such a situation, the principle of freedom declares the misdeed.

R.C. Hoiles, late founder of Freedom Newspapers, often defined freedom as "100 per cent control of your own property and zero control over the property of others." He conceived that property included not merely material possessions, but an individual's body, time, ideas, skills and action.

Thus freedom is self-governing by definition. When one individual trespasses upon another at that moment he ceases to act under the authority of freedom and instead becomes an aggressor. Whether he intervenes by law or by gun is only a difference of means.

So it is not freedom that wars against order, it is license and coercion.

"Play ball!"

Will you become 'equally poor'?

By George Hagedorn
(Editor's note: Mr. Hagedorn is chief economist and vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.)

Public impressions as to the distribution of our national income among the poor, the rich, and the great middle majority seem to play a large part in the formulation of national policy. If the rich are believed to be getting an unduly large share, or if the poor are seen as losing ground relative to the more affluent, remedies are sought in tax legislation or in social welfare programs.

An interesting example of the way statistics may be used, or misused, in the debate on these issues is provided by a comparison of two recent statements: a press release by Rep. Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis.) which makes some dramatic comments on the Census Bureau's latest statistics on income distribution; and a study of the "Poverty Status of Families Under Alternative Definitions of Income" prepared by the Congressional Budget Office.

Rep. Reuss, interpreting the Census Bureau data, alleges that: "Quite literally, the rich get richer and the poor get poorer." He cites statistics to show that before tax cash income of those in the lowest 20 per cent of the income distribution increased less than the inflation rate in 1975, the latest year for which statistics are available. Furthermore, these figures indicate that Americans in the lower 40 per cent of the income distribution suffered a reduction in their share of the total of incomes from 18 per cent in 1968 to 17.2 per cent in 1975.

There are a lot of things wrong with the statistics cited by Rep. Reuss. They are based on income before tax and hence take no account of the equalizing effects of progressive taxation. Only cash income is included and no adjustment is made for non-cash assistance given to lower income people. Differences in average size of family between high and low income groups are not taken into account. All these limitations tend to exaggerate the degree of income inequality.

The Congressional Budget Office digs deeper and quite properly points out that statistics on before-tax cash income seriously misrepresent the real position of those in the lower income brackets. Cash income omits the large payments in-kind provided by government assistance programs — food stamps, housing assistance, medicare, Medicaid, etc. The CBO's results indicate that, whereas in terms of cash income 14.1 per cent of families were in poverty in fiscal 1976, when account is taken of taxes and income-in-kind provided by government the figure is only 6.9 per cent. By contrast with Rep. Reuss' strident protests, the CBO sees the status of low income families improving.

Apparently the motivation of the Congressional Budget Office study was a concern lest the record of distribution of cash income be interpreted as indicating that the vast expansion of government welfare-type expenditures during the past decade had been a failure in improving the lot of the poor. Such a conclusion would damage the case for continued expansion of welfare programs and the CBO study takes pains to refute it.

This leaves the observer in a curious logical position: If he agrees with Rep. Reuss' contention that the rich are getting richer and the poor poorer, he is encouraged to support further expansion of government income-equalizing programs — as necessary — to remedy that state of affairs. If he agrees with the CBO's contrary conclusion — namely, that substantial progress has been made in improving the relative position of the poor — he is encouraged to support further expansion of welfare programs on the ground that they have a proven track record for efficacy. It's like tossing a coin that is heads on both sides!

Nation's press

In simple terms

By PERRY PASCARELLA
Industry Week

It wasn't too complicated and it made sense. For many years, Canada exported surplus oil from its western provinces, imported oil for its eastern industrial-population centers, and saved the cost of transportation across the big country.

President Carter's bid to ship some of our Alaskan oil to Japan may have made similar sense. Transportation costs would be less to import Middle East oil from our eastern and Gulf Coast refineries than to haul Alaskan oil to them.

But Mr. Carter dropped his proposal. Whether it made economic sense didn't become an issue. It was unpopular politically.

In simple terms, Americans wouldn't want to import Middle East oil and give up their own. Congress wouldn't buy an energy policy if we were exporting American oil.

In simple terms, that, apparently, is how our representatives think we think. We can't grasp the facts. We can't follow a bit of reasoning. We can't rise above simple emotions.

We are living in an age of technology and international business. There is no better example than the Alaskan pipeline. Unfortunately, the oil it delivers is winding up in the political whirlpool where argue that Rep. Reuss' statistics on the deteriorating condition of the poor prove that social welfare measures don't work or, alternatively, that the CBO statistics on the improved condition of the poor prove that further welfare programs aren't needed.

The important point is that there is more to be gained for everyone — including the poor — by increasing the size of the national pie than by dividing it up so as to give the lower incomes a bigger share. Income equalization, carried far enough, might succeed in a peculiar way — by making us all equally poor!

technological progress and economic gain are pulled to the bottom and simplistic thinking swirls us lazily in circles which seemingly never end.

We are living in an age of complexity — an age that demands that important trade-offs be made in terms of costs and benefits. There is risk in everything we do. Sometimes it is ominously high.

Apparently, it is an age for which our elected officials think we are not ready. If we continue to let them make simplistic "political" decisions for us — if we let them seek quick solution — then, we are not ready.

And, in the meantime, we live under the greatest risk of all: over-simplification.

Michigan

What is now the state of Michigan was first visited by French fur traders and missionaries in 1616. A mission was established at Sault Ste. Marie in 1641 and a permanent settlement in 1668. The entire region was transferred to Britain in 1763, following the French and Indian War, and provided a base for attacks on American settlements during the Revolution. The United States acquired the territory in the peace settlement, although the British returned briefly during the War of 1812.

ASTRO-GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sept. 3, 1977

Don't become discouraged if your big plans encounter a few early snags this coming year. They'll survive sidetracking and come out fine in the long run.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
There's a possibility that you haven't learned the lesson you should have from a painful experience. Today you may repeat the same type of mistake.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's not a good day to seek favors or to borrow from a friend. If you do get what you want, chances are it'll have sticky strings attached to it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Share this evening with friends whose love and warmth you enjoy. The company of a good book is superior to associating with cold, unemotional companions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Duties left unattended will weigh heavily on you today. Do what you should do, even if it's not your first choice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
You're better off today passing up an affair where you'd have to cater to the boss's wife or clients you don't appreciate. No good will come of it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If entertaining at home today, don't put your guests in a position where they have to arbitrate a domestic issue. They may not take your side.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Normally you're extremely thoughtful in dealing with persons in all walks of life. Today, however, you may treat those under you demeaningly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Be careful today that someone doesn't try to use you to gain her own ends. Her methods are slick enough that you could be caught unaware.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
There's a possibility today of a family flare-up over an old problem. Your best bet is to bury it again quickly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Negative thinking could be your worst enemy today. You should be looking for sunshine and a silver lining.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
Unless you're very careful today the folly of a friend could cost you money. If you're operating in tandem, choose your companions wisely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Use only methods that you're proud of in going after what you want today. Back-street tactics won't help your cause or your image.

LEGAL PLUNDER

"But how is this legal plunder to be identified? Quite simply. See if the law takes from some persons what belongs to them, and gives it to other persons to whom it does not belong. See if the law benefits one citizen at the expense of another by doing what the citizen himself cannot do without committing a crime." — Frederic Bastiat, "The Law," 1850

When out of gas blues can get oily

By JIM FITZGERALD

When I saw the mammoth hole being dug in the Blue Cross-Blue Shield lawn, I figured the cost-containment problem had been solved.

But not at small expense. The Blues headquarters is surrounded by the lushest, best-kept lawn in downtown Detroit. Insurance covers the cost of laboring weeds. Automatic sprinklers are spaced like teeth in a comb. When the lawn is mowed, every severed blade of grass is individually bagged and immediately shipped out of sight.

I am a student of this splendid lawn because I walk by it twice every weekday. As a Blue Cross subscriber, my interest is as proprietary as it is aesthetic. When my premium was recently increased 44 percent, I began snarling at Blue Cross workers who walked on my lawn.

So, when I saw excavation in the Blues' west lawn, I was startled. But I wasn't angry, because I knew they wouldn't mess up that beautiful lawn except for good reason.

And I figured the good reason surely to build an underground container for costs.

You may recall it was last June when I first became concerned with the Blues' methods of containing costs. It was Charles Chomet who turned me on.

Chomet was then a member of the Blues' board. He was upset by a pay raise given to John McCabe, the Blues' president. Chomet said:

"In an era concerned with cost containment this is a bad precedent, a bad image. The record of Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield in cost containment has not been all that good, so I think there is a question whether the increase was warranted."

It occurred to me that the trouble might be in the container, so I visited the Blues' building to investigate. I discovered that many costs were contained on the top floor in a room with no ceiling. I also learned McCabe had the only key to that room, and he used it whenever he couldn't contain himself from asking for an increase in his $110,000 salary.

It was almost three months ago that I publicized these obvious flaws in the Blues' container. I was certain McCabe and his board would take steps to improve their policy of containment. But I was momentarily discouraged by what happened to Chomet.

AFTER GRIPPING about McCabe's pay raise, Chomet continued to complain to the press about other costs escaping from Blues' container. For example, he revealed that the Blues had made a $10 million overpayment to nursing homes, which certainly indicated that McCabe may have reached for a container in the dark and grabbed a sieve by mistake.

Chomet's fellow board members reacted to his complaints by voting him off the board. Their prevailing wisdom is that subscribers do not mind paying uncontained costs if they don't know it was ever possible to contain the costs in the first place.

"After a person has bought something for $10, he only gets angry if you tell him he could have bought it for $5 less around the corner. We don't want to make our subscribers angry," a board member explained to me.

This board member forbade me to publish his name. "McCabe doesn't allow us to talk to newspaper people," he said. "John gave me hell when he found out I answered the door Saturday when the Free Press carrier came to collect."

As I said, this anti-Chomet attitude was discouraging, and I was beginning to despair of the Blues ever doing anything to improve their cost container. But the other morning I saw that big hole in the ground, and my heart leaped.

What better way to contain costs than to bury them? Brilliant.

I phoned the Blues to confirm my elation. A man said a 30,000-gallon storage tank was being buried in the huge hole. For liquid costs? No, for oil.

The Blues' building is heated by gas, but an insurance company can't have too much insurance. Their burners can be converted to oil if the gas company ever quits subscribing to Blue Cross. The conversion would be awkward if the oil had to be carried into the building in gallon cans: So now there will always be a 30,000-gallon tank and connecting pipeline buried under the side lawn, just in case.

I couldn't find out how much it cost to ruin the lawn, buy the tank and fill it with oil. I was told that those costs were contained briefly on the top floor, but had disappeared before they could be totaled.

Jobless rate up in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's jobless rate rose from 6.9 per cent to 7.1 per cent in August as climbing unemployment among blacks matched a post-World War II high, the government reported today.

In August, the Labor Department said, "the over-the-month increase in unemployment was concentrated among black workers," whose jobless rate rose from 13.2 per cent to 14.5 per cent. The August level matched the post-war high for blacks recorded during the recession in September 1975.

Unemployment among blacks has been traditionally higher than for whites, whose jobless rate was unchanged last month at 6.1 per cent.

Overall joblessness has hovered at about 7 per cent of the work force since April, showing little month-to-month change after dropping steadily from its 1976 high of 8 per cent last November.

Economists say economic growth has slowed following a sharp expansion earlier in the year, and this means fewer jobs are being created to meet the needs of the growing labor force.

"The ratio of black-to-white jobless rates continued its recent updraft to the unusually high level of 2.4 to 1 in August," the Labor Department said.

The rise in black unemployment comes at a time that civil rights and labor leaders have been increasingly criticizing the Carter administration programs for easing unemployment. Earlier this week, the government released figures showing joblessness among black youth, age 16 to 21, reached the highest summer-time rate ever recorded — 34.8 per cent.

APL-CIO President George Meany said today in his annual Labor Day message that President Carter's job-creating programs were nothing more than "Band-aids" and that they would do little to solve the basic unemployment problem.

While the jobless rate rose in August, returning to its June level of 7.1 per cent, the Labor Department reported employment increased by 210,000 to a total of 90.8 million.

The civilian labor force rose by 300,000 in August to a total of 97.7 million, the department said. Both employment and unemployment increased because more people were looking for work than were able to find jobs.

The total number of unemployed was up by 180,000 in August to 6.9 million, with most of the increase occurring among persons who lost their jobs, the Labor Department said.

There is some margin of error as with any survey. But the government contends the relatively large size of the sample assures a high degree of accuracy.

Earlier this week, the department announced a resumption of "extended" jobless benefits for about 200,000 workers in 38 states who have exhausted their regular state benefits.

The decision was prompted by a slight increase in the insured unemployment rate, which tends to be lower than the overall national jobless rate because many workers in the general labor force aren't eligible for unemployment benefits.

The number of new claims for jobless benefits has been increasing in recent weeks.

Economists say the sharp expansion in the economy during the first half of the year is being followed by a slower rate of growth, and this means fewer jobs are being created to accommodate the increase in the labor force.

The Commerce Department estimates that the nation's economy grew at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent in the first three months of the year, then slowed to a rate of 6.1 per cent in the next three months. Officials are predicting an annual growth rate of about five per cent during the second half of the year.

From the consumers' point of view, the development has a favorable side since it has also resulted in an easing of the inflation rate, currently running between 6 and 7 per cent.

Wholesale prices, a precursor of prices consumers eventually pay, have fallen at a 2.6 per cent seasonally adjusted annual rate over the last three months.

Costa Rican girl to spend months in Pampa

Ana Losilla, 17, San Ramon, Costa Rica, in the southern part of Central America, arrived in the states just two weeks ago in the second of three waves of American Field Service (AFS) students coming to the U.S. this fall for an 11-month stay in the states.

The AFS student at Pampa High this year, Ana will be staying with her host family, the Wallace Birkes at 2356 Aspen. The Birkes plan to take Ana on some trips in Texas and New Mexico and to the west coast during the Christmas vacation. She will have a bus tour of the eastern coast after her stay in June.

Her brother was an AFS student last year, and he and another friend, who had toured Texas extensively, helped prepare her for her stay. She also corresponded with the Birkes before she left Costa Rica, and she surprised Birkes with a telegram on Father's Day!

Costa Rica, with a population of 2 million, is mountainous, ranging in an altitude from sea level to 13,000 feet.

Ana's home in San Ramon has a constant temperature the year around, fluctuating from 60 to 80 degrees. Ana has never seen snow, except on television. Costa Rica has 4 TV channels and an education channel. They carry many American programs.

City plans floating brothel

ROTTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — City officials are considering a plan to put Rotterdam's prostitutes aboard a floating brothel in an abandoned area of the local docks.

Mayor Andre van der Louw and three other members of the City Council are going to Denmark today to look over a 400-bed hotel ship that might be for sale.

A campaign to confine the city's estimated 700 prostitutes to a secluded part of the city started in 1974 when the two main red light districts began spreading into residential districts.

The ship plan will be presented to City Council on Oct. 13, and City Hall sources say approval is expected.

"The sooner it gets going the better," one streetwalker told a reporter who asked what the ladies of the evening think of the idea.

Rotterdam's brothel owners — not the city government — would buy the ship. Rechristened "Eros Center," it would be moored alongside the old port administration building and would have a restaurant and bar.

Officials said the government is prepared to sell the building to the brothel owners and will help them find a reasonably priced, second-hand ship.

"Of course, we would have nothing to do with the running of such a scheme once it is set up," said the spokeswoman for the city government. Toos de Jong.

Prostitution is illegal in Holland, but the authorities have tolerated it for many years. Prostitutes are rarely prosecuted. The city has more than 60 brothels, many of which advertise in the newspapers. Brothel owners usually are prosecuted only when they employ girls under the age of 18. The floating brothel is expected to accommodate many but not all of the prostitutes in Rotterdam, one of Europe's major ports. But authorities have said if the plan goes through, the police will crack down on prostitutes and brothels that don't cooperate.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Juvenile Court Judge Leodis Harris dispenses justice in a blue denim robe and with an astrological handbook to keep his young clients from coming back.

"Everything I do, even reading the zodiac signs, which is popular especially with young people these days, is an effort to relate and help them solve their problems," says Harris. His sentences include tours of jails, or spending days with doctors, disc jockeys and newspaper reporters.

O'Hair sues for slogan

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Three Texas atheists claim their constitutional rights are violated every time they handle money.

Madalyn Murray O'Hair and her two sons filed suit in federal court Thursday asking that the slogan "In God We Trust" be dropped from U.S. currency. The suit cited the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Murray v. Curlett that outlawed official prayers in schools. The Murray in that case was William Murray, Mrs. O'Hair's son.

The other son is Jon Murray. The suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here names Michael Blumenthal, secretary of the treasury, and James A. Conlon, director of engraving and printing, as defendants.

"Plaintiffs are forced to handle and display with regularity currency and coin which is imprinted by defendants with a religious motto, 'In God We Trust,' with which plaintiffs disagree," the petition states.

"This inscription on the currency and coin compels plaintiffs to subscribe to and affirm a belief which is antithetical to plaintiffs' most deeply held convictions and represents an abridgement of their rights under the free exercise clause and establishment clause of the First Amendment.

"Plaintiffs must pay their financial obligations on a daily basis with United States currency and coin.

"This compelled dissemination of religious symbolism by plaintiffs through their regular and unavoidable handling of currency and coin so imprinted deprives plaintiffs of their right to disaffirm the motto in contravention of the First Amendment right to free speech," the petition says.

Blast rocks Round Rock

ROUND ROCK, Tex. (AP) — A U.S. Army demolition crew worked late into the night Thursday to gather blasting caps that were strewn by a window-shattering dynamite explosion at a construction site near here.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said that no injuries were reported in the ground-shaking blast, which erupted Thursday afternoon when 15,000 pounds of dynamite was touched off by a grass fire.

Construction workers fled the area when they spotted flames licking the underside of an explosives storage building, according to state troopers at the scene.

Six or seven new homes in various stages of construction received moderate to severe damage, troopers estimated, and Round Rock authorities received complaints of broken china and glass for a mile around the subdivision.

The explosion knocked out several utilities in the area, but none were believed to be connected to occupied houses.

Ironically, the explosives were for use in utilities construction, the DPS spokesman said.

The cause of the fire was not immediately known.

White Deer man pleads

Alvin Richard Lisle, 30, of White Deer pleaded guilty to charges of driving while intoxicated this morning.

His pleas was accepted by Gray County Judge Don Hinton, who assessed the penalty at a $200 fine, 30 days in jail and six months probation.

David Martindale, County attorney, represented the state in the case.

Smith calls plan 'crazy'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith termed key provisions in the British-American peace plan for Rhodesia "crazy suggestions" today but did not reject the proposal yet.

"It seems to me that the plan is not only ill conceived, it is rushed," Smith told a news conference. He accused Britain of "seeking revenge" for his declaration of independence in 1965.

The 8,000-word blueprint for ending Rhodesia's five-year guerrilla war and transferring power to the black majority next year was presented to Smith Thursday by Ambassador Andrew Young and British Foreign Secretary David Owen. Owen, before he and Young flew to London Thursday night, told reporters he was "not full of optimism." But Young predicted "a gradual buildup of appreciation of what is good in the current situation."

"I believe when people are face to face with death they come to their senses," the chief American delegate to the United Nations added.

Smith told his news conference he was "no more optimistic" about a settlement emerging from the British-American plan. But he said he would make a thorough study of the document before reaching a final decision.

The provisions of the plan he termed "crazy suggestions" were those calling for a Briton to head an interim government during the transition to black rule and the formation of a new national army which he said would be based on the guerrillas of the Communist-backed Patriotic Front.

"I think it's a very cunning scheme to ensure that the Patriotic Front will be the next government of Rhodesia," he said.

Meanwhile, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, the leaders of the Patriotic Front, said the proposals "contain aspects which are unacceptable."

Smith made it plain to reporters that he would hold out for a settlement more favorable to the whites.

Strengthened by his landslide victory in a general election Wednesday, Smith said he would pursue his previous plan to negotiate a settlement of his own with black moderates "as a second string to the bow" — a wise precaution.

The British-American plan, made public on Thursday but leaked last week, calls for Smith's government to surrender power to an interim government headed by a British resident commissioner, a U.N. peacekeeping force to enforce a cease-fire in the war between the Rhodesian army and the black guerrillas of the Patriotic Front, "free and impartial elections on the basis of universal adult suffrage" and a new constitution "providing for a democratically elected government, the abolition of discrimination, the protection of individual human rights and the independence of the judiciary."

The British government nominated Field Marshal Lord Carver, 62-year-old former chief of the British General Staff, to be the resident commissioner.

British newspapers were not optimistic about the success of the plan. The London Daily Mirror said to ask Smith "to surrender on the very day he has just won all 50 white seats in the Rhodesian parliament is expressing a naive belief in the powers of Father Christmas." The Financial Times said the British-American plan lacked "a crucial ingredient — evidence of acceptability to any of the parties most directly concerned, both white and black."

Mrs. Whittenburg joins campaign

Spiraling utility bills have "finally affected operations of the Pampa Senior Citizens Center," Top O Texas Democratic Club president Tim Haigood announced Thursday night.

"The center has had some absorbent electricity bills lately so they have asked for us to pay an additional $5 per meeting," he added.

The club members unanimously approved the additional payment.

Speaker for the meeting was Mrs. Burk Whittenburg, whose husband is one of three Democrats contending for the seat vacated by Texas Senator Max Sherman, who resigned to accept presidency of West Texas State University.

Mrs. Whittenburg said her husband's main issues are energy, water, consumer protection and bureaucracy.

"Any system that allocates energy in such a manner that Texas gas leaves this state, while Texas farmers and consumers need gas is wrong," Mrs. Whittenburg quoted her husband. "Gas and oil produced in this state should not leave until our farmers and consumers have had the opportunity to pay, at the least the going rate. If court action is necessary to achieve this end, then our legislation must be prepared in such a way that will support court action."

As a solution to the problem Whittenburg calls for effective and knowledgeable leadership in Texas.

His wife added that her husband said without effective leadership that understands the water needs of both farm and metropolitan areas "we will simply drift from crisis to crisis without any well-planned water supply."

"An organized effort must be made to provide an adequate and dependable water supply for West Texas in order for us to face the future with confidence."

In regard to consumer protection, Mrs. Whittenburg said her husband believes simplified laws and procedures designed to allow consumers to shop around for goods and services in a meaningful way.

"The amount of tax money dedicated to bureaucratic activities must be continually reviewed to eliminate waste, implication and counter productive activities. Our elected officials should and must take full responsibility for the quality of government rather than simply to continue shifting power to unelected regulators," Mrs. Whittenburg said.

A forum featuring the three Democratic candidates is set for Oct. 3.

Mexico economy heals

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico has begun an economic recovery but must slow its population growth to pull out of the recession, President Jose Lopez Portillo told the nation in his first state of the union address.

Lopez Portillo, who took office Dec. 1, said he was encouraged by stability of the peso since its devaluation a year ago, cuts in Mexico's foreign debt and success of the government's anti-inflation drive including a voluntary 10 per cent ceiling on wage increases.

He said Mexico's worst problem was rapid population growth — 3.5 per cent a year — which requires the government to make huge investments to create jobs and maintain public services. An estimated 9 million Mexican workers out of a population of 64 million are unemployed.

"These are not times for heroics," the president told a nationwide radio and television audience in his three-hour speech Thursday. "But rather for persistent effort every day for many days, a time for work and effort."

Lopez Portillo is being urged by some in his administration to use Mexico's oil reserves — estimated at more than 60 billion barrels — to alleviate the economic crisis, but he rejected a quick "oil sell-off" because it would compromise future generations.

The president said he would continue policies of recent administrations that limited non-Mexican ownership in new ventures to a minority interest in most cases. Many countries, especially West Germany, had urged Mexico to modify foreign investment laws.

Lopez Portillo dedicated one paragraph of his address to the United States, saying good relations required "a single vision of commercial, financial, monetary and population problems, in their legal and illegal aspects."

Meany blasts labor plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Meany says the Carter administration is applying only "Band-Aids" to ease the country's unemployment problem.

In his annual Labor Day message, released today, the AFL-CIO president chided the administration for what he said is its failure to develop a comprehensive plan to put people to work in good jobs at decent wages.

"There are public service jobs, housing programs, mass transit programs, public works, school aid — but they are essentially Band-Aids for specific problems and just don't come to grips with the more general problem of mass unemployment," Meany said.

Meany, organized labor's chief spokesman, renewed his appeal for congressional enactment of the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act.

The measure, now in legislative limbo, would require the planning and coordination necessary for the government to reduce unemployment among adult job seekers to 3 per cent in four years and to keep it within that figure.

It is now about 6 per cent.

Cuba may let Americans leave

HAVANA (AP) — The chief U.S. diplomat in Cuba says he hopes several Americans can leave for the United States with their Cuban families "in a matter of days."

Other U.S. sources, however, say the families won't leave before late next week at the earliest.

The head of the new U.S. interest section here, veteran diplomat Lyle Lane, says his 10-member mission's first priority is helping Americans who want to return to the United States with their Cuban families plus a handful of other Americans in Cuban jails.

Responsibility for U.S. affairs in Cuba shifted from Swiss to American hands on Thursday with the formal opening of the U.S. interest section.

The ceremony marked an end to more than 16 years of official hostility between Havana and Washington. At a news conference afterward, Lane said, "It is clear that the Cuban government as well as our own look at this as a significant step."

Since President Fidel Castro agreed last month to let the Americans' families leave, Lane said, the Swiss have found only 22 families who wanted to go and 20 others who don't.

Forty-two families either haven't responded or haven't been located, he said.

But Lane conceded that the process of finding the families and seeing what they want to do is proving more difficult than anticipated.

He also said paperwork required to process those wishing to leave has proved a burden to Cuban officials.

The families include 120 persons with U.S. citizenship. They have always been free to leave Cuba themselves but elected to stay because their Cuban relatives could not go along.

Castro dropped this restriction following an appeal by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, during a visit here last month.

Meanwhile, in Boise, Idaho, Church said Cuban officials have told him the flights may begin next week, if details can be worked out.

The Cubans told him, he said Thursday, that those leaving the country will be allowed to take personal property with them, which Havana has not previously permitted.

There are seven Americans officially listed as being in Cuban prisons for espionage or other political crimes, but Castro has refused to release them or commute their sentences.

One prisoner, Rafael del Pino, was reported by a Miami newspaper to have committed suicide in his cell.

The Miami Herald said the information came from del Pino's relatives but there has

State representative to resign

State Representative Sarah Weddington (D-Austin) today announced that she is resigning her position as a member of the Texas House of Representatives immediately to become the General Counsel of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Ms. Weddington was nominated by President Carter for the USDA position and recently was unanimously confirmed by the Senate. She will be sworn in by USDA Secretary Bob Bergland in Washington, D.C. Monday.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Residents of South Texas began today to dig out from under their own hurricane preparations as Hurricane Anita moved onto the Northeast Mexico coast after threatening deep South Texas with her 155 m.p.h. winds.
Brownsville, once a target of the storm described by the National Hurricane Center as an "extremely dangerous" hurricane, got about 25 of an inch of rainfall and a wind gust of 46 m.p.h. But forecasters at Brownsville said radar indicated heavy rainfall in portions of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.
Hurricane Anita was expected to die out later today in the Sierra Madre Mountains of Northern Mexico. It made landfall about halfway between Brownsville and Tampico about 5 a.m. today.
Elsewhere in Texas, clear skies were the rule early today except for partly cloudy skies in the Panhandle and in deep South Texas and extreme Southwest Texas.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 60s in the Panhandle and extreme Southwest Texas to the upper 70s in East Texas and along the coast.
Some early morning readings included 70 at Amarillo, Wichita Falls and Texarkana, 77 at Waco, 73 at Lufkin, 74 at Houston, 80 at Corpus Christi, 78 at McAllen, 77 at Del Rio, 73 at San Angelo, 68 at El Paso, 69 at Lubbock and 67 at Dalhart.
Forecasts called for rain and scattered thunderstorms associated with Hurricane Anita in far South Texas and widely scattered thunderstorms in the Panhandle and Southwest Texas. The rest of the state expected sunny skies and warm temperatures. Highs this afternoon should be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Hurricane Anita, churning out winds of 155 miles per hour, hit land on the thinly populated coast of northeast Mexico today.
Torrential rains and vicious winds battered the Mexican coast after the season's first Atlantic hurricane turning away from the heavily populated resort areas of the Texas Gulf coast late Thursday.
Meanwhile, showers and thunderstorms along a stationary front dumped more than five inches of rain over portions of central Nebraska Thursday night and early today. Several tornadoes were sighted, and one touched down near Grand Island, Neb., late Thursday night. No injuries were reported.
Showers and thunderstorms also are reported over portions of central Iowa and southeast Minnesota from east central Illinois through southern Quebec. There also are showers and thunderstorms along the east coast from North Carolina to Florida.

More isolated shower and thunderstorm activity was in central and eastern New Mexico, southeastern Arizona and along the coast of Washington state.
Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions from around the nation:
Eastern U.S. — Atlanta, 69 clear, Boston 73 hazy, Chicago 69 foggy, Cincinnati 74 cloudy, Cleveland 73 thunderstorms, Detroit 72 hazy, Indianapolis 75 cloudy, Louisville 76 clear, Miami 78 rain, Nashville 74 clear, New Orleans 74 clear, New York 73 partly cloudy, Philadelphia 75 clear, Pittsburgh 71 clear, Washington 78 clear.
Western U.S. — Anchorage 51 clear, Denver 68 clear, Des Moines 75 thunderstorms, Fort Worth 74 clear, Kansas City 75 partly cloudy, Los Angeles 66 clear.

Names in the news

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Nature wasn't too cooperative when Gov. Hugh Carey and four of his 14 children arrived for a fast-paced tour of the New York State Fair.

After rain delayed the start of Carey's tour Thursday, the governor ran into more trouble when he tried to milk a cow.

The startled cow foiled Carey's first attempt by knocking him off his stool and further delayed the governor with an unexpected bowel movement.

But the Brooklyn-bred governor waited out the cow and managed to coax a few squirts of milk from her. He was awarded a blue ribbon for his efforts.

"It must be a Republican cow," the Democratic governor said.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Presidential confidant Charles Kirbo says the strains of the presidency are showing on fellow Georgian Jimmy Carter.

"He's changing in his appearance," Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer, told an economic club Thursday. "He's a little grayer. He's getting older a little fast. You may be able to see the gray on television."

"How would you like to get up every day and be faced with the Middle East, Africa, Korea, China, Greece, the Panama Canal, balancing the budget, energy, unemployment, illegal aliens and retirement programs?" Kirbo asked. "His big problem is trying to restore confidence in the government."

But, Kirbo added, Carter isn't complaining.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Atheist Madelyn Murray O'Hair, who was successful in a campaign to block prayer in public schools, now seeks to ban the motto "In God We Trust" from U.S. currency.

In a suit filed Thursday in federal court, Mrs. O'Hair and her two sons, Jon and William Murray, contend that use of the phrase is unconstitutional. The plaintiffs cited the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Murray versus Curlett that outlawed official prayers in schools as a violation of the separation of church and state. That suit was filed on behalf of Mrs. O'Hair's son, William.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Actor Dan Dailey is reported resting comfortably after undergoing surgery on the hip he broke last week during a dinner theater performance in Raleigh.

Doctors at North Carolina Memorial Hospital said Thursday that it was too early to say any more about Dailey's condition.

Dailey, 62, was engaged in an on-stage scuffle during a matinee performance of "The Odd Couple" when he tripped on a coffee table and fell, fracturing the ball in his right hip joint.

Pastor to Pampa

The Rev. Sam Brassfield and family, newly elected pastors of the First Assembly of God Church here in Pampa, would like to personally invite everyone in the greater Pampa area that does not have a church home to visit First Assembly this Sunday. Sunday school is at 9:45 a.m. and morning worship is at 11. The evening evangelistic service is at 6:30 p.m.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Ron is 21 and I am 19. We're newlyweds, and our problem is the TV in our bedroom. Ron likes to lie in bed and watch TV until midnight every night, and some nights he watches it until 1 a.m.

I want to turn off the TV at 11 p.m. because I have to get up at 7 a.m. for work, and if I don't get eight hours of sleep, I am very crabby the next morning. Ron gets up at 7 a.m., too, but he says he doesn't need as much sleep as I do. Anyway, I can't fall asleep while the TV is on, and Ron refuses to turn it off at 11.

How can this problem be solved? Don't suggest earplugs because I've tried them, and they bother my ears.

CRABBY

DEAR CRABBY: You have two choices. Separate rooms, or a 50-50 compromise. (Turn the TV off at 11 every OTHER night.) But remember, although a compromise makes a good umbrella, it's a poor roof.

DEAR ABBY: I work for a large corporation and for the last few weeks, my boss has been acting very secretive. I walked into his office yesterday, and he quickly slammed his desk drawer shut. Then I noticed smoke coming out of the drawer, but I didn't say anything.

He supposedly stopped smoking three months ago, but I know he's at it again because I've seen him in the hall with a cigarette in his hand. He tried to hide it, but I'm sure he knows that I saw him.

I'm afraid he might try to ditch another burning cigarette in his desk drawer, forget about it and burn up the building.

Don't you think he's acting very immature for a 55-year-old executive?

Should I write him an anonymous note and ask him who he thinks he's fooling?

ON TO HIM

DEAR ON: No. Anonymous notes are also immature. But to tell him that in the interest of safety for others, he should refrain from placing lighted cigarettes in the drawer.

DEAR ABBY: Is marriage contagious? It seems to be an epidemic around here. I'm 21, male and single, and one by one, all my friends are getting married.

My first love went away to college, and during the first quarter, she fell in love with a theology major, and they decided to get married. Now she's pregnant, and I don't know whether to cuss or pray.

Another old girlfriend is soon to marry the drummer of a rock group. Other good friends, male and female, are headed in that direction.

Why would anyone want to end the fun of being young and footloose by getting hitched so soon? All of them are under 21. Is marriage a contagious disease? I hope not.

SINGLE IN SEATTLE

DEAR SINGLE: Marriage in a sense is "contagious"—like divorce, shacking up, or growing a beard; some people get the courage to do it because their friends have made the move.

But you're safe. Anyone who suspects that marriage is a "disease" is probably immune.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I have a coated tongue and I have to rub it off every morning and night. I am now 55 years old. I have asked several doctors and nobody seems to know what it is, but one old doctor told me once that there is nothing that I can do about it. Something like that is hereditary and I believe it because my mother is the same way.

I am hoping you know what it is and have a remedy for it.

DEAR READER—The tongue is an indicator of many diseases and of general health. The evaluation of the tongue, sometimes called glossology, was once considered so important that some doctors thought various parts of the tongue represented different portions of the abdominal organs. Such an idea today would be ridiculous—as it should be. It smacks of current quack ideas of relating bumps on the head or area of the foot to various bodily ailments and personalities.

Nevertheless, the tongue may provide good evidence of a vitamin deficiency and its nature, various diseases, anemia and, of course, of related disorders in the mouth itself.

The coated tongue may be caused by many things. Often it is of little or no importance medically as your doctors apparently think in your case. Such simple things as sleeping with the mouth open can lead to furring or coating of the tongue. It is difficult to change this habit if you are a mouth breather.

Digestive disturbances often cause the tongue to be coated. One of these particularly common in middle-aged people is a hiatal hernia—a hernia of a small part of the stomach through the diaphragm. The tendency of acid digestive juices and par-

Consumers build furniture

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Soaring furniture costs are driving do-it-yourselfers to the work bench. But some interesting furniture can be made without a workshop.

Two books on the subject, Clement Meadmore's "How to Make Furniture Without Tools," and Mario Dal Fabbro's "How to Build Modern Furniture" can fill the needs of aspiring home furniture builders. The projects in Meadmore's book require no more than wood, white glue—new water-based glues makes it possible, he says—and the cutting set even an unskilled workman can build them.

For example, his low table can be converted to a bed with a 5-inch thick foam rubber mattress. The top measures 39 inches by 75 inches, the center brace, 12 inches from each end, is 8 and 7-8ths inches by 51 inches, and two leg panels measure 8 and 7-8ths inches by 39 inches.

Order forms supplied in the books are intended to be taken to lumber dealers where plywood is cut to the pattern. The lumber is cut into small pieces and you take home those parts, not the eight-foot piece of lumber that has always been a transportation problem for do-it-yourselfers. Most designs by Meadmore, a sculptor, are limited to rectangles for that reason.

Glue is put along the edges to be joined (it should spread to cover the entire edge when the parts are joined) and the pieces are held in place with masking tape, which should be stretched slightly when it is applied. Surplus glue is wiped off with a damp sponge. Glue sets overnight and the tape is removed so the piece can be sanded, finished and painted.

This book gives directions for pieces such as chairs, dining tables and record shelves. A high-back arm chair with slant back and slant seat is a design very much like the old-fashioned, comfortable, outdoor Adirondack chair that has more or less disappeared.

Dal Fabbro's excellent book, a new edition, should charm the proficient do-it-yourselfer. It has challenging illustrations that include the minute details of craftsmanship necessary for building 55 different pieces of furniture. It also shows how to join rails to legs, legs to upholstered furniture and so on.

There are directions for making and assembling cabinets, chairs, tables, upholstered seats, a five-drawer high chest, lounge chairs and even an upholstered sofa and service carts. Special features include detailed illustrations of seats—raffia, rush, cane—and how to upholster seats and chairs. Dal Fabbro, a long-time furniture designer for outstanding Italian and American manufacturers, has done many pieces that are recognizable as some of the best in good design. His styles range from timeless classic to up-to-the-minute modern.

In building your own furniture, it is essential to choose pieces that will fit into your present decorating scheme. A do-it-yourselfer may suddenly decide to build a piece that is a challenge and then be annoyed when his mate does not want to use it with certain other pieces of furniture.

Studying the furniture offerings is a necessary requirement in selection. Simple contemporary styles will go with many traditional styles, but some thought and discussion must go into the idea before execution of the piece. You may be saving money in building it yourself, but lumber is not inexpensive, and you might as well make something that will flatter your present home and please other members of the family.

("How to Make Furniture Without Tools" is published by Pantheon; "How to Build Modern Furniture" is published by McGraw-Hill.)

Fitting bust darts simplified

COLLEGE STATION—Bust darts often present fitting problems, but there is an easy way to alter a pattern for proper fit, says Margaret Ann Vanderpoorten, clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University.

In many cases, placement of darts in a bodice needs altering, even when the bodice length is correct. Darts should point toward the fullest part of the bust, not above it—that is a frequent problem for mature women, she adds.

To determine where darts point on a basic pattern, extend center lines of dart until they intersect (see figure 1). This is the bust point on the pattern.

To find the measurement to your body's bust point, measure from the top of the shoulder at the base of the neck to the tip of the bust. Next, measure the pattern from the shoulder seam line at the neck to the bust point.

Note the difference between your measurement and pattern measurement. The darts need to be lowered this distance.

To lower darts without changing bodice length, follow these steps:

Draw a line (Line B) across pattern below tips of the darts but above waistline, perpendicular to the lengthwise grainline or center front. Beneath Line B, measure down the amount needed for the alteration and draw a second line (Line C). Line C will be below Line B and parallel to it.

Cut pattern apart on Line A. Place tissue paper under pattern and spread pattern amount needed for alteration, keeping center front straight. Tape pattern to tissue paper to make alteration a permanent one for future use.

To maintain original length of bodice, lap pattern below dart tips by bringing Lines B and C together.

Altering a pattern in this way will cause small irregularities in the side seam stitching line and in the waistline dart stitching line.

To correct them, follow these steps (see figure 3):

To straighten the side seam stitching line, fold in underarm dart as if it were sewn and draw a straight line (Line D) from underarm to waistline—start it at intersection of the two seam lines under the arm (point E) and end it at the intersection of the two seam lines at the waist (point F). Then unfold the dart.

To correct waistline dart stitching lines, draw straight lines (Lines G) from dart tip to base of dart at waistline.

On the other hand, for other figure types, to raise darts, reverse process by lapping parallel lines drawn above darts—cutting and spreading the pattern apart at a line drawn below the dart tips. Continue all other steps as described above.

Tired of jogging, try skates

By BOB DVORCHAK

Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A roller skater who competes in races must battle obscurity, inconvenience and an image problem. But for Forrest Allmond, it's still fun.

"It's self satisfying, just like jogging," said the 28-year-old Allmond, who recently won his eighth straight Eastern regional Roller Skate Rink Operators Association championship.

"It's a very good exercise. I use it to keep in shape, so I won't get old and sluggish," he added. Not many people are even aware of the sport of speed roller skating exists. Most of the publicity in roller skating belongs to roller derby, and people often ask Allmond if he's a jammer or a blocker.

"When you tell people you roller skate, they think of roller derby. And they say, 'Well, I don't want my kid playing some kind of funny game in a roller rink,'" said Allmond, who has the nickname "Buggy."

"Rolling is a noncontact sport. In fact, there are strict penalties for charging or tripping," said the 5-foot-7, 140-pound Allmond.

Speed skating is similar to track. The sport has been popular in international circles for years, where competition is outdoors. When Allmond competed in Austria two years ago, the event was held on a 400-meter track used by ice skaters in the Olympics.

Like Olympic speed skaters, practice is a problem. The only Olympic-size outdoor ice skating rink is in West Allis, Wis. There is no outdoor roller rink.

"That's the inconvenience of it. I train where I can to suit my own schedule," said Allmond, a carrier for the U.S. Post Office here.

Allmond has been skating for 18 years. He works out about two hours a day, five days a week. Practice sessions usually come at midnight when patrons at area roller rinks have finished skating to the mellow waltzes played on an organ.

Sometimes, weather permitting, he skates outdoors on a circular road at Keystone Industrial Park in the northern suburbs. He also jogs and cycles to keep in shape.

Allmond competes in four events: 1,000, 1,500, 3,000 and 5,000 meters. His best time in the mile is 2 minutes, 56 seconds, considerably faster than a runner.

Another problem is cost. A good pair of racing skates costs about $100, and skaters must pay their own way to practice sessions and meets.

"We bear all the expenses, and it's tough at times," Allmond said.

"The biggest satisfaction is meeting people through skating. I've met people all over. And I'll always have friends there," he added.

"It is an amusement, but I'm more serious about it than that. I also dance skate. That's my enjoyment part," he said.

On Jan. 22, 1943, the temperature in Spearfish, S.D., rose 49 degrees in two minutes. At 7:30 a.m. that day it was four degrees below zero and at 7:32 it was 45 degrees above zero.

Missionary to speak

The Rev. David G. Snider, a newly appointed Assemblies of God missionary to French Polynesia, will be guest speaker 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 7 at the Bethel Assembly of God, the corner of Hamilton and Worrell Streets. Snider and his wife Doris will be involved in pioneer missions work during their first four-year term of missionary service in French Polynesia. This area is a new mission field for the Assemblies of God and the Sniders are the denomination's first missionaries to be assigned there. They will engage in evangelism, church planting, and starting an International Correspondence Institute outreach. Special music and a presentation about the revival in the South Pacific will highlight this missions service.

Subject to be control

The Rev. Lewis Koerselman Sr. returns to fill the pulpit at the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray St., speaking on texts from Genesis 19 and Luke 9. His sermon will be entitled "Controlling the Backward Look." Assisting in the pulpit will be Elder Joe Rogers.

The Chancel Choir, under the direction of Sally Green, will sing "God is so Good," taken from an old African melody. Doris Goad will be at the organ. Church school for all ages begins at 9:30 a.m. and morning worship follows at 10:45 a.m. Prayer group meets Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. in the West Room, and choir practice is held in the Sanctuary at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday evening.

Witnesses set big convention

Doug Cullins, presiding overseer of the Jehovah's Witnesses, has announced the completing of arrangements for the "Endure Through Close Association" Convention in the Amarillo Civic Center.

The Pampa congregation is looking forward to the principle discourse of the assembly entitled "Maintain Your Confidence Firm to the End." D. N. Bennett, special representative of the Watchtower Society, will deliver the lecture.

The public is invited to any part of the convention to be 2 p.m. Sunday. Seats are free.

Pentacostals set services

The United Pentecostal Church at 610 Naida St. will have weekly worship services Sunday school begins at 10 a.m.; evening prayer is at 6 p.m.; evening worship at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday night Bible study begins at 7:30 p.m.

If anyone is in need of transportation please call one of the following numbers: 665-4936, 669-2929 or 665-4129.

If you have children who would like to attend but you are unable, please contact our bus director at 665-4936.

Scouts honor Kevin Gantz

Kevin Gantz of Troop 404 received scouting's highest award at a Court of Honor Tuesday in the First Christian Church's Fellowship Hall.

Kevin, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Gantz, has been a scout since 1973. He has earned 24 merit badges, 7 skill awards and the Spanish translator stripe.

An investment in Your Future ...ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

What Does It Take To Build A Church?

Perhaps you glance at the church on the corner once in a while and wonder what it would be like to visit during a service. What is it that draws those people to that particular building every week? What built that church?

The only possible answer is — the love of God. Their love of God prompted them to sacrifice and give so that the sanctuary might be built. The love of God compels them to meet there with others who serve Him. Their love of God compels them to "go, and tell others".

We pray that you will be drawn to such a church this week and that you will align yourself with it. You can help build it into something even better.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

CDC traces cancer link

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Center for Disease Control now has a list of people exposed to one of the 588 nuclear tests conducted by the United States since 1945 to use in its efforts to find out if any have developed leukemia or cancer.

Since early spring, the CDC has tried to put together a list of observers at one particular nuclear test to give researchers a starting point.

Two veterans who witnessed a nuclear test with the code name "Smoky" on Aug. 31, 1967, at Yucca Flats, Nev., have filed claims against the government. Both have leukemia.

Paul R. Cooper, 43, of Emmett, Idaho, and Donald Coe, 44, of Tompkinsville, Ky., claim they were deliberately exposed to the nuclear test.

Dr. Glyn G. Caldwell, deputy chief of the CDC cancer branch, said the U.S. surgeon general's office has provided a list of 3,153 persons who could have witnessed the "Smoky" test.

Military operations reports show there were 2,235 persons who probably witnessed the "Smoky" test. However, the surgeon general's office said the operations reports do not list names, only groups or numbers of persons.

Maj. Alan Skerker of the Surgeon General's office in Washington said the list of 3,153 includes all persons who were issued film badges at the site the day of the "Smoky" test or the day after. The badges record the amount of radiation received by the wearer.

Caldwell said so far only Cooper and Coe are known to have been among those who observed the Aug. 31 test who later developed leukemia.

The CDC now is trying to locate all of the 3,153 people on the list, and interview them to try to find out how many actually were present at the "Smoky" test, and whether any of them since have developed leukemia or cancer.

U.S., Cuba near normalization

HAVANA (AP) — The United States and Cuba, separated by only 90 miles of water but 16 years of official hostility, are moving a step closer with the opening of interest sections in each other's capital.

Official ceremonies are planned here and in Washington today to mark the first posting of diplomats since relations were severed Jan. 3, 1961.

In the Cuban capital, Lyle Lane, a 51-year-old career diplomat, is occupying the U.S. ambassador's office. There were plans for a Swiss flag to be raised outside to signify that, at least officially, Switzerland still represents American interests in Fidel Castro's Cuba.

In Washington, the presence of Fernando Sanchez Parodi and other members of his mission was being marked with a diplomatic ceremony at the Czech ambassador's residence. Czechoslovakia officially represents Cuban interests in the United States.

Parodi and Philip C. Habib, U.S. undersecretary of state for political affairs, were scheduled to speak.

The Cubans will operate temporarily out of the Czech embassy, moving into their former embassy once repairs are completed.

Lane, formerly the No. 2 American diplomat in Peru, said Wednesday his middle-level rank as "counselor of mission" probably will not bring him into direct contact in the near future with Castro or other top Cubans.

He is supervising a staff of 10 Americans.

The exchange of diplomats is the most recent in a series of steps that President Carter and Castro hope will result in the eventual restoration of full diplomatic ties.

It follows a series of limited but important moves — a partial easing of the U.S. trade embargo, suspension of U.S. spy overflights, a new influx of American tourists into Cuba, a fishing agreement between the two countries and Castro's decision to let about 80 Americans take their Cuban relatives with them to the United States.

Only hours earlier, Cuban workmen were completing a hasty facelift of the 24-year-old embassy.

Facing the sea, the boxlike seven-story building has suffered from salt corrosion and general neglect. More than 300 Americans once worked there, but its only occupants in recent years have been the handful of Swiss diplomats who ran the one-room U.S. affairs office.

Endangered ducks protected

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission protested Wednesday the federal government's closing of a portion of the Trans-Pecos region to duck hunting to protect the endangered Mexican Duck.

There was disagreement over whether the duck was actually endangered, a spokesman said.

The department also set hunting seasons for duck and geese and maintained the bag limit for ducks at one to 10, based on a point system that enables hunters to shoot more of the more common ducks.

Duck season for the eastern portion of the state will be Nov. 5-27 and Dec. 22-Jan. 22.

Separate seasons were set for light and dark geese in the eastern section, with the season for light geese — which are more abundant — Nov. 5 - Jan. 22. The season for dark geese is Nov. 5 - Dec. 14 and Dec. 22 - Jan. 22.

West of U.S. 81, duck and goose season will be Nov. 1 - Jan. 22.

Couple teach hill lore

KELLEN HOLLOW, Ky. (AP) — Want to learn how to make a dried apple doll, play the harmonica, forecast the weather by crows, or how to cure snake bite with a home remedy?

Then head for the hills. The hills of northeastern Kentucky is where you'll find John and Mary Lozier practicing and teaching the arts of Appalachian life passed down to them from their parents and grandparents. The Loziers still live pretty much like their parents did before them on their 35-acre farm tucked away in the hills of Greenup County.

Each weekend, they play host and teachers to a group of Ohio State University students taking a course on Appalachian Folklore under the university's Creative Arts Program.

"They come down and we talk to them about the old arts and crafts," said Mrs. Lozier. "They stay two days and I do the cooking."

The students are treated to hearty hill dishes — fried dried apple pie, corn bread, biscuits, fried sausage and Mrs. Lozier's own canned vegetables and fruits.

The kitchen of the farmhouse, built before the turn of the century, has been modernized with an electric stove and running water but the cooking is still that of an earlier era.

Mrs. Lozier shows students how to prepare good food in addition to teaching them quilting, dollmaking, doctoring and whittling.

Her 68-year-old husband is the expert on farming the hard way with a small hand plow and a hoe. He's also the music expert, using his harmonica to play the rollicking tunes and ballads of an earlier time. Sometimes Mrs. Lozier, 63, sings along with the music. The two have performed on OSU's Columbus, Ohio, campus several times.

Neither of the Loziers made it to high school.

"I have an eighth grade formal education and my husband has about a fourth grade," said Mrs. Lozier. "I went to school in a one-room schoolhouse in Rock Creek that had eight grades," she added.

Despite the absence of formal education, the couple keep the college students spellbound with knowledge they've acquired.

"They seem very interested," said Mrs. Lozier, who has raised five sons of her own.

"We do a lot of the things we do because we do it the way our parents did it, but there's a scientific reason behind most of it," she said.

Big Bend rhino found

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Animals resembling rhinoceroses roamed the Texas Big Bend 40 million years ago, University of Texas scientists have learned from a fossil discovery uncovered by a New Mexico science teacher.

The remains of titanotheres found there are important because it gives the most complete picture of the animal's body structure and habits.

Titanotheres had short horns on either side of their snouts, the scientists say.

James Baldwin Jr. of Silver City, N.M., discovered the fossils on a visit to the Big Bend National Park in December. He reported the find to Dr. James Walleben of Sul Ross State University in Alpine, and Walleben contacted his former colleagues at UT-Austin, Dr. John Wilson and Dr. Wann Langston.

The UT scientists found skull parts and a shoulder blade in March. "We suspected the find was a single skeleton," says Langston, "but several weeks later I returned with one of our laboratory assistants and we discovered bones at the site were piled in like jackstraws."

Langston and Wilson later brought back 1,000 pounds of material, including three skulls, several lower jaws and complete limbs.

Langston said it was possible that the site was a catch basin in a gully, and animals which died on the surrounding plains could have been washed into the basin and covered by deposits of rock. Minerals in the sediment which covered the bones has become rock, and there are perfect, although, broken replicas of bones.

Griffins have worship

The First Free Will Baptist Church on 326 N. Rider Street will host Jack Griffin and family at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. The Griffins also will be in services Sunday morning for the regular worship services at 11 a.m. The Rev. L.C. Lynch said Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. The Griffins will also be at the Gray County singing at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Highland Baptist Church.

White nixes questions

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Secretary of State Mark White says he'll sic Atty. Gen. John Hill on Waller County officials if they continue requiring applicants for voter registration to fill out residency questionnaires.

White issued an emergency rule Thursday outlawing the questionnaires, which black leaders say have been used in Waller County to deter Prairie View A&M students from voting there.

White's rule applies statewide, but he said only Waller County uses the questionnaires. He said efforts to talk Waller County Tax Assessor-Collector LeRoy Symm out of using the questionnaire have failed.

If Symm doesn't comply, White said he would ask Atty. Gen. John Hill to file suit for an injunction forcing an end to the questionnaires. "Early indications are they are not going to change their procedure. . . . He (Symm) indicated he was going to talk to his lawyer," White said.

Registration forms prescribed by White's office are the only allowable means for getting information from applicants, he said.

"We are not here to say you don't have to be a resident in order to register to vote. . . . But the thrust of the election code is that officials have to do the work. The citizens don't have to do the work," White said.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description—when I became a wife, and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sicker.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little needles all over them, my head hurts real bad. I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and . . ."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to the office around 3:00?" he asks.

Every maternal hand on your neck stands up. "You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!" Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home. He enters the room of the Sicker.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, bring out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks tiredly. Then turning to the child he asks, "Is there a pain here?"

The child falls down giggling. "What about here?"

He shakes his head no until I think he will screw himself into the bed.

"A laxative should do it," says the doctor, closing the bag.

My husband is no better. After he relates all his symptoms to me, I relate them to the doctor and then report, "The doctor says he would like to meet you in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"That's ridiculous," he says. "I'm not in THAT much pain. What did you tell him?"

"I used your words. 'You're young. I want you to marry again.'"

"And for THAT he wanted me to come to the hospital?"

"I have been put in the middle so many times that I am sometimes reluctant to call the doctor. The last time my son complained of a knee injury I put it aside for a day or so. When we finally got to the doctor he said, 'Didn't the boy complain?'"

"Actually, he did," I said, "but I thought I could pull it off as the final billing date ends the 30th."

I have seen the look he gave me on only one other occasion. It was when Gen. Yoshijiro Umezaki tried to shake Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hand when Japan surrendered at the end of World War II.

Army may put women in war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army is conducting a major new study which could result in women serving under fire in a future war, officials say.

The study, the most detailed of its kind ever conducted by the Army, is aimed at establishing how women can fit best into the service structure and how many can be used effectively.

Army officials said Thursday there is no intention to change longstanding policy barring women from a direct combat role — as an infantry soldier, machine-gunner, or member of a tank crew. But they said they are looking at how women might serve in what they call a "combat environment."

As the officials explained the concept, women eventually might be assigned to signal, military police, transportation, maintenance or medical units with a role in the battle zones.

Traditionally, women soldiers have been kept far to the rear in higher headquarters or hospitals, although women nurses sometimes have been exposed to shellfire in past wars.

Meanwhile, leaders of women's organizations appealed to Congress on Thursday for more jobs for women in the armed forces.

Testifying before a Joint Economic Committee panel, they said expanding participation of women in the armed forces would result in greater military effectiveness.

One witness, retired Col. Mary A. Halarek, a former director of the Women's Army Corps, testified that WACs served in London during World War II bombing raids. "No one ever asked for a transfer to a safe billet," she said.

"There are women, as well as men, who crack under stress, who cannot take pressure, but working with men and women over the last 50 years, both in and out of the Army, has convinced me that it is the individual and not the gender that determines a person's strength under pressure," she said.

The Army study is being carried out in several sections, with most of the results due for consideration next spring by Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff.

One of the most important tests involves about 200 women who will go into the field with units in Western Europe this month. The purpose is to judge how women stand up under rough conditions of extended field duty.

Although women started serving with the Army in numbers during World War II, they were limited strictly until recent years to medical or clerical jobs. But 92 per cent of the skills in the Army now are open to women.

Born and raised in Westfield and Sioux City, Iowa, Thornton most recently was executive director of the Federal Advisory Committee on National Growth Policy Processes. For four years prior to that, he was a professional staff member of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Thornton's experience also includes five years in the 1960s as an assistant to then-Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union had almost 50 per cent of this year's grain harvest in by Aug. 15, according to the Agriculture Department. Officials say mid-month progress was ahead of the normal pace and that recent rains have helped improve prospects for planting fall crops in several major areas of the Soviet Union.

Russia is expected to harvest a near-record grain crop of 220 million metric tons this year. Its biggest harvest was last year, when 223.8 million tons were produced. The second largest was in 1973, when 222.5 million tons were turned out. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Robinson trial resumes

HOUSTON (AP) — Testimony was to resume today in the trial of a $7.6 million damage suit resulting from the 1972 death of a Houston plastic surgeon.

State District Court Judge Arthur C. Lesher gave jurors the day off for the second day in a row Thursday because of the uncertainties prompted by Hurricane Anita.

Lesher and attorneys spent the day in the judge's chambers reviewing depositions and anticipated motions.

The son, widow and mother of Dr. John Hill are suing millionaire oilman Ash Robinson, alleging Robinson arranged the shooting death of Hill in revenge for the death of Robinson's daughter.

When Hill was shot to death he was awaiting trial on charges he killed his first wife, Joan Robinson Hill, through medical neglect in 1969.

No criminal charges have been filed against Robinson, 79, and his attorneys have denied the allegations by Robert Hill, 17, Connie Hill, 37, and Myra Hill, 75.

Panhandle man predicts fight over cloudseeding

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A Panhandle man told the Water Resources Board at its first meeting today there will be violence over the issue of cloudseeding to suppress hail.

Earl Cosby of Tulsa, in Swisher County, said he served in the air corps in Europe in World War II and he knows the seeding is being done outside authorized limits.

"I'm telling you there's going to be violence over this by somebody," Cosby said, his voice shaking.

Cosby said he personally opposed violence. He pleaded with the board to take another look at the whole program.

In Swisher County, the vote in a recent election on the issue was 98.22 per cent against seeding, he said.

"Fellas, if that's not a clear-cut indication of what the public wants, I think you better go home and figure out what to do next," he said.

Board member George McCleskey of Lubbock said, "I think what this man has told us about violence is accurate."

Bruce Bigelow, acting board counsel, said he cannot yet certify election results in Panhandle counties because election officials failed to send him precinct maps so he could tell which ones are in the target or operational areas of two seeding permits.

Bigelow also told the board it had inherited the lawsuit filed against the old Water Quality Board regarding the Edwards Aquifer in South Texas.

An Austin district judge ruled against allowing Atty. Gen. John Hill to be a plaintiff in that suit, but San Antonio still is in it, Bigelow said.

The Water Quality Board wrote separate pollution standards for different counties over the aquifer, and Hill contended the standard had to be the same for all to be legal.

Except for natural attrition, the new board has a policy of retaining all employees of the Water Development Board, Water Quality Board and Water Rights Commission, which have been merged in the new board.

Bigelow said 30 employees in the old departments resigned or retired in August, saving a total of $400,000 a year in salaries.

The board adopted a budget of $19,178,504 for fiscal 1978, which began Thursday.

USDA tries to untangle red tape

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) Two federal agencies have come to an agreement on how to proceed with emergency loans to farmers stricken by droughts, hurricanes and other natural disasters in hopes of not getting tangled in each other's red tape.

A memorandum of understanding between the Farmers Home Administration and the Small Business Administration has been signed with that in mind, officials said Thursday.

The FHA is part of the Agriculture Department and the SBA is an independent agency. Both have been engaged in making emergency disaster loans to farmers. The agreement was signed by Gordon Cavanaugh, administrator of FHA, and Vernon Weaver, head of SBA. Officials said that the agreement pledged the two agencies "to cooperate in the use of their respective loan-making authorities to complement each other" and to improve and expand financial assistance to farmers "with the least possible degree of overlapping, confusing or duplicating activities."

A spokesman said that prospective borrowers from FHA will still have to show that they office levels where each is authorized to make farm disaster loans.

"A farmer may make initial inquiry about emergency financing to either agency but will be directed for filing of a formal application to the one where, it appears, the applicant can best be served," the announcement said.

Also, although a farmer will have an application pending only to one agency at a time, he will be able to apply to the second agency if denied a loan by the first.

"If during consideration by one agency, it develops that the application should apply to the other agency, financial and credit data already compiled by the first agency will not have to be recompiled." That is one way the two agencies hope to reduce paperwork and streamline their operations.

WASHINGTON (AP) — James E. Thornton, a native of Iowa, has been named associate administrator of the Farmers Home Administration, an agency of the Agriculture Department.

Thornton, 44, will share responsibility for FHA program that provide financing for rural development in four major areas: farmer programs, rural cannot get credit from regular commercial sources — a policy of many years — while those who get loans from SBA do not have to meet such a credit test.

For some time, the FHA offered emergency loans to qualified farmers at an annual interest rate of 5 per cent. Since authorized to make farm emergency loans in 1975, SBA has offered loans at 3 per cent.

But recent legislation which grew out of congressional oversight hearings on farm emergency credit now requires FHA to charge interest rates no higher than SBA for similar loans. Thus, the spokesman said, current FHA emergency loans are being made at the 3 per cent rate.

The memorandum signed by Cavanaugh and Weaver also provides for "prompt and continuous interchange of information between the two agencies at national, state and district

HAMMOCKS

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 10,000 hammocks will be sold in the United States in 1977, according to a National Geographic Society survey of the $5-million-a-year industry.

The society says Christopher Columbus and his men were the first Europeans to see a hammock, which was used by the Arawak Indians.

Christmas seal kickoff set in Panhandle

The first Laura B. Scott Christmas Seal kickoff dinner is set for Sept. 17 in Panhandle.

The announcement was made by Tom M. Seay, chairman of the American Lung Association of Texas, Top of Texas Area.

Each year the dinner hopes to honor a member of the Top of Texas Area Advisory Council who has been of special service to the association.

The 1977 honoree is Mrs. J.B. Howe of Panhandle, charter member of the Top of Texas Tuberculosis Association. Mrs. Howe will be recognized for the extensive time, effort and financial support to the organization.

Council members and friends of the association are invited to tour the Square House Museum in Panhandle, beginning at 3:30 p.m.

The council meeting will begin at 4:30 p.m. in Fellowship Hall of the Panhandle Christian Church. Following a brief session, a program on asthma will be presented.

The program will cover questions as to what asthma is, what is happening during an attack and what the lung association is doing to asthmatics in Texas.

Members of the Christian Church will cater the campaign dinner and will begin serving at 5:45. Tickets are $7.50 each.

Miss Vermell Meador, R.N., director of nursing service for Highland General Hospital and Bill Owens, a Highland General respiratory therapist, both of Pampa represent Gray County on the Advisory Council of the Top of Texas Area of the American Lung Association of Texas.
