Navy jets overshoot runway in El Paso

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Two Navy jets overshot a runway while trying to land in a freak snowstorm, with one clipping a car and exploding into "a million pieces" after its crew had safely bailed out, authorities said.

The second jet came to rest harmlessly in the mud and no one was seriously hurt in either of the two F-4 Phantom jets, flying in tandem Monday, said Pentagon spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Fred Leeder.

The first jet touched down on the runway at El Paso International Airport at about 7:25 p.m., tried to take off again, then slid across a four-lane highway, clipping a car with one wing and exploded after crashing on the grounds of nearby Fort Bliss, Leeder said.

The unidentified motorist was not injured, El Paso Police Officer Eddie Provencio said.

The jet broke into "a million pieces" after crashing, said Provencio, and two large pieces of the plane's fuselage lay about 1,000 feet from a row of middle-class homes in eastern El Paso.

The plane appeared to have "landed too late on the runway," said Richard Moya, an employee of Emery Worldwide air freight at the airport.

"You could hear him trying to stop," Moya said. "They put on their afterburner and tried to blast off and climb up a second time, but there wasn't enough time to do it and that's when they ejected," Moya said.

Larry Alderette was directing a play rehearsal at the La Casita Theater Workshop on Fort Bliss when he saw the lights of the jet hurtling towards the base.

"It was like a star heading toward you, like a falling star type of thing. It was coming right towards the building," Alderette said. "Someone cried, 'Oh my God,' after the explosion. Then there was silence...the plane hit the ground and exploded like a mushroom."

The two San Diego-based pilots, identified as Navy Lt. James Walsh, 28, and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Clifford Tinker, 35, were held overnight for observation at Beaumont Army Medical Center today, said Maurice Butler, a spokesman for Fort Bliss. Walsh had a bruised heel and Tinker was uninjured, said hospital spokesman Jim Bryant.

Bryant said Walsh and Tinker were en route with another fighter plane from Bermuda and were stopping to refuel in El Paso on their way to San Diego.

The two jets did not have weapons but were carrying classified electronic equipment, Butler said.

The second F-4 ran off the end of the airport runway just after the first jet crashed, said an airport tower supervisor who asked not to be identified. The plane was not damaged and the pilots did not eject, the supervisor said.

Butler said the two planes were flying 500 feet apart. He said the snow and sleet may have contributed to the accidents.

Engine 'crash lands,' but where's the plane?

DALLAS (AP) — Federal Aviation Administration authorities have the piece, but they haven't been able to solve the puzzle.

The mystery arose Monday afternoon when a Dallas resident found a smoldering chunk of an aircraft engine in his backyard.

But authorities can't find a plane missing a turbine, FAA officials said.

No injuries were reported from the falling debris, which measured about 1½ feet in diameter and landed about 75 feet from the home of David and Judith Wick in north Dallas, Dallas police officer Walter Clifton said.

"It landed between everything. It's amazing it didn't hit anything," said Wick, who returned home immediately after the mishap.

"It's not far from the swing set where the kids play. It's a good thing it was nap time," he said.

Two of the couple's children, 5-year-old Melanie and 4-year-old Andy, were asleep when the metal crashed into the back yard. Douglas, 9, was cleaning his room at the time.

Mrs. Wick said she was sitting in her kitchen "all of sudden I heard a loud noise."

"The house shook, and I heard a loud bang, and I looked outside and saw this white smoke," Mrs. Wick told The Dallas Morning News.

Officials had not determined today what aircraft the engine piece came from or if the plane arrived safely at its destination.

Political roadblock

Traffic on Lebanon's coastal highway, leading south from Khalde to Beirut, is backed up about three miles Tuesday behind an Israeli checkpoint. Lebanese Ambassador Antoine Fattal protested the logjam during U.S.-mediated talks in Khalde

PLO refusal stalls withdrawal pact

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Israel and Lebanon today were reported close to agreement on troop withdrawal, but President Reagan's overall Mideast peace plan was set back when PLO chief Yasser Arafat turned down the offer by King Hussein of Jordan to negotiate on the Palestinians' behalf.

In the Israeli-occupied southern Lebanese port of Sidon, a bomb went off in the main square but Israeli military sources said it caused no casualties. Israeli and Syrian forces were reported to have poured more tanks into eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

At the opening of the latest round of U.S.-mediated troop withdrawal talks in Khalde, Lebanese spokesman Daoud Sayegh quoted Israeli chief delegate David Kimche as saying "We want an early agreement with Lebanon and I think we are now close to it."

Kimche, director-general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry, did not elaborate, Sayegh told reporters.

He said the discussions focused on security arrangements designed to shield Israel against renewed Palestinian guerrilla attacks from southern lebanon. But he did not say whether any specific arrangements had been agreed upon.

Israeli invaded Lebanon June 6 to smash the Palestine Liberation Organization and forced thousands of guerrillas to evacuate west Beirut in August. But thousands more remain in northern and eastern Lebanon, sheltered by Syrian troops who have been in Lebanon since the end of the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war when they were sent to monitor the armistice.

In the Jordanian capital of Amman, PLO sources who requested anonymity said Arafat turned down Hussein's offer to negotiate on the guerrillas' behalf with Israel after meeting Monday with top aides serving on the 15-member PLO executive committee.

Arafat told reporters after arriving in Kuwait today that, "King Hussein and I are agreed on what is good for both sides," he said.

A main topic of the talks between Hussein and Arafat was the peace initiative presented by Reagan last September, according to sources close to the discussions. The plan calls for Palestinian self-government in the Israeli-occupied territories in confederation with Jordan.

American diplomats have said Hussein was willing to negotiate the plan with the Israelis — as hoped by the Reagan administration — if the PLO agreed.

But the PLO claims it is the sole representative of the 1.3 million Palestinians in the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip, and rejects Reagan's plan because it does not call for an independent Palestinian state and does not provide the PLO a role in peace talks.

The Palestine National Council, the PLO's parliament, favors a plan adopted last fall in Morocco.

Thailand continues assault on area held by Vietnam

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand today claimed Vietnamese troops were digging into positions inside its borders and followed up air strikes against the area with a barrage of artillery fire.

The Supreme Military Command said Vietnamese forces were holding territory just inside Thailand near the border town of Phnom Pan and the settlement of Phnom Chat that straddles the border with Cambodia.

In the first use of airpower during the six-day Vietnamese offensive, Thai air force jets Monday struck the area, about 25 miles north of Thailand's key border town of Aranyaprathet. Artillery was ordered today to zero in on Vietnamese positions, a military spokesman said.

According to reports from the field, Vietnamese cross-border artillery fire frequently has been intense in recent days, with the Thais sometimes returning fire.

The military spokesman said five Thai soldiers have been killed and 16 wounded during the fighting, while the bodies of six Vietnamese soldiers have been recovered over the past six days. Vietnamese weapons, ammunition and gas masks also have been captured, he said.

On Monday, Thailand sent a note to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar protesting what it claimed were Vietnamese intrusions into its territory and "inhumane genocidal crimes" against Cambodian civilians.

Last Thursday, Vietnamese forces launched their most intense drive to date in a four-year war against Cambodian guerrilla groups on the western edge of Cambodia.

In a series of swift attacks, Hanoi's troops, backed by artillery and tanks, knocked out the Communist Khmer Rouge stronghold of Phnom Chat as well as several Khmer Rouge-controlled villages. Then they overran the headquarters of guerrillas loyal to Prince Norodom Sihanouk, leader of a three-party resistance coalition that inclwdes factions loyal to the Khmer Rouge and to Son Sann, a non-Communist insurgent leader.

More than 43,000 Cambodian refugees have fled the fighting and been given temporary asylum in Thailand. Total casualties are still unknown since most of the fighting has taken place inside Cambodia, but one international relief agency official estimated that about 90 people have been killed and 300 to 400 wounded.

The Vietnamese border attacks have been condemned by the United States and some of Thailand's allies in southeast Asia.

MISD will fight possible ECISD annexation

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

If Ector County Independent School District trustees approve the annexation of about 2,000 acres of Midland County land tonight, Midland school board members plan to fight what could be an immediate loss of $17 million in appraised taxes.

About 67 percent of the registered voters in an area sitting on the boundary of Midland and Ector counties signed a petition seeking annexation into the Ector County Independent School District, which was presented to ECISD trustees Feb. 15.

About 76 students in that area attend schools in Odessa, according to Payton Cook, Midland Independent School District director of pupil services.

Although the 6.5 square-mile area, consisting of the Ridgewood Subdivision and Mision Country Club Estates, developed by HBF Corporation of Midland, is within Midland County and MISD boundaries, parts of Mision Estates were annexed into the Odessa City limits.

Mickey Jones, secretary of the ECISD Board, said he probably would abstain from the vote tonight due to a possible conflict of interest.

Jones is the attorney for a Hilton Hotel which HBF Corp. is constructing. "It's pretty questionable if it's really a conflict of interest," he said.

If approval is granted tonight, the petitioners are expected to present their case to Ector County Commissioners. Whether MISD trustees appeal to the commissioners or directly to the Texas Education Agency is undetermined at this point.

Under the Texas Education Code, areas meeting specific standards may be annexed into another district without approval by trustees of the school district from which the land was taken, according to Scott Sharp, attorney for HBF Corp.

Dr. Joseph Baressi, MISD superintendent, said ECISD boundaries are unique because they were set by the state Legislature in 1921 and cannot be changed by local jurisdiction. Any boundary change would have to be made by the State Legislature.

"None of these agencies (school board, county commissioners or the Texas Education Agency) has any legal jurisdiction in this matter because the boundaries were set by the Legislature," Baressi said.

In a letter dated Monday and expected to be read at tonight's meeting, Parker Humes, MISD board president, cited the specific clause.

Addressed to Shirley Huffaker, ECISD board president, Humes' letter reads: "We have reviewed the legislation which created the Ector County Independent School District. It appears to be clear that your district has no power to annex areas outside the Ector County boundaries."

According to the letter, House Bill 59, the 37th Legislature (1921) states the "boundaries of said district shall be and are hereby declared to be the same boundaries as those of Ector County and said district shall contain and be composed of identically the same territory as the county of Ector now contains."

Last spring, due to a potential growth of ECISD, trustees voted to charge a tuition of $1,260 per child for those transferring into the district. Mrs. Huffaker was quoted Monday as saying if the annexation is not approved tonight, a tuition exchange between the two districts may be a solution.

According to Dr. Baressi, it might be a possible solution — if there were ECISD students attending schools in Midland.

"We don't have any records of approved transfers (from ECISD)," he said of the current school year. Last year, about 10 students from Ector County transferred to Midland schools.

Midland policemen won't face federal prosecution

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The Justice Department will not prosecute five Midland police officers being sued by 18-year-old Walter Sowell, a former furniture store employee who claims his civil rights were violated following his arrest on disorderly conduct and public intoxication charges more than a year ago.

Officers named in the $1 million suit are Terry Garner, Vince Castillo, Ronald Keck, Ed Nicks and Victor Kuykendall. Also named is former officer Terry Lowe, the city of Midland and Chief of Police Wayne Gideon.

Garner received a one-day suspension in the case, and Lowe resigned from the force rather than accept a transfer from night patrol to duty at Midland Regional Airport after completing his 12-day suspension.

Sowell brought suit last October after a jury acquitted him of public intoxication and the city attorney's office declined to prosecute the disorderly conduct charge.

He alleges he was beaten at the booking desk and later as he was being taken to an upstairs cell at the jail. He was treated for head injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital the night of his arrest, which occurred Oct. 16, 1981.

Police maintain he injured himself when he struggled with them and hit his head against a door leading to the cell.

In addition to the suit, Sowell requested an FBI investigation of the case. In a letter released today by police, the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department said:

"After a careful review of (the FBI's investigative report), we concluded that this matter should be closed.

While police expressed satisfaction at the decision, Sowell's attorneys say it will not damage the lawsuit.

"It won't have any bearing whatsoever on the suit," said David Gilles of the Warren Burnett law firm in Odessa. He declined to elaborate.

It is not known when the case, filed Oct. 6 in U.S. District Court in Midland, will come to trial.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The Forecast For 7 a.m. EST Wednesday, April 6
● Low Temperatures

AP Laserphoto Map

Showers and snow dipping from the Southwest into the High Plains and northwest Texas, along with showers from the Gulf Coast to the Midwest, are forecast through Wednesday by the National Weather Service.

Snow, rain possible for area

The winter surge which began rolling into the Permian Basin Monday night is expected to dust the area with light snow or rain mixed with snow through Wednesday.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, blustery winds from the north are expected to bring winter-like temperatures and snow showers, causing advisory road conditions throughout the Panhandle tonight.

There's a 50 percent chance for snow sprinkles and rain tonight with the low nestling in the low 30s. Wednesday's high should clamber to near 50 with a 30 percent chance for light rain. Northerly winds are expected to blow through 15-20 mph.

A NWS spokesperson said there were special advisory road conditions called for the South Plains today, continuing in the Panhandle tonight.

Monday's high of 65 fell short of the record high of 93 set in 1939 while the overnight low of 35 was slightly warmer than the record low of 28 set in 1970.

Mission marred by satellite failure

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A $100 million communications satellite tumbled out of control today after release from the shuttle Challenger, marring an otherwise near-flawless mission by America's newest spaceship and placing in question the immediate future of the shuttle program.

Neither Challenger nor its four-man crew were affected by the failure that occurred after a rocket engine fired to try to arrest the 2½-ton payload in a stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the globe. At the time, the space travelers were in a lower orbit, more than 22,000 miles below, and were in a sleep period.

The Tracking and Data Relay Satellite, the world's largest and most complex communications satellite, was launched smoothly from the space shuttle Monday night, despite earlier problems with a gyroscope system.

An hour later, a small rocket engine made one of two firings to start the satellite toward a stationary orbit.

The second firing came at 5:45 a.m. and experts at Mission Control soon discovered the satellite was out of control.

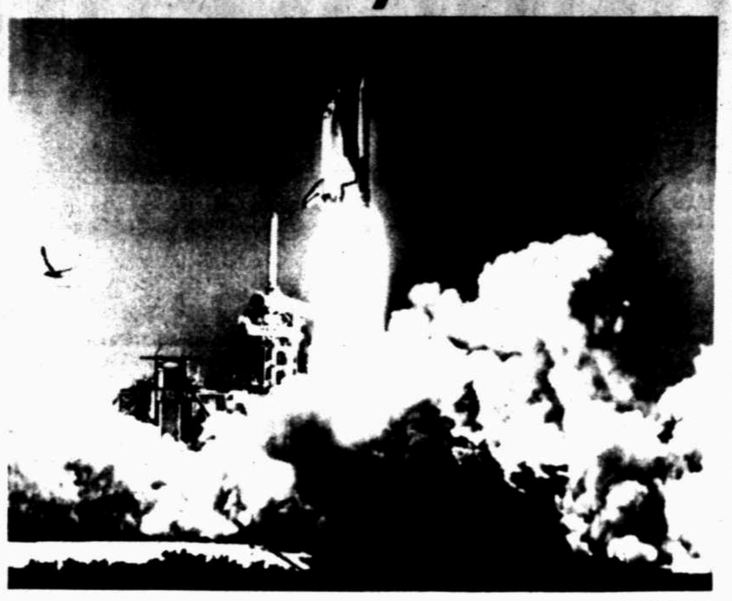

"They believe it is tumbling now," Bill Rice, of Boeing Aerospace, a major contractor building the satellite, said this morning. He said that radio communications with the craft were lost except for "bits and pieces of data."

The rocket package that was to control the satellite and place it into the high orbit lost battery power within two hours of the second rocket firing, Rice said.

This package contains five gyroscopes designed to hold the spacecraft stable during the rocket firing. Mission Control reported trouble with two of the gyroscopes even before the satellite was deployed. Later, however, Air Force officials said that they were confident that the mission was "within specifications" with only three of the gyros.

It was not known if the faulty gyros were responsible for the malfunction.

Officials said that experts were studying the problem and North American Defense Radar was attempting to determine the satellite's orbit.

Space shuttle Challenger heads skyward Monday from Kennedy Space Center, Fla.

The payload was designed to be a space switchboard between Earth and as many as 26 orbiting satellites.

The new shuttle's performance, meanwhile, was nearly perfect. It operated so well in the first hours of its inaugural flight that Commander Paul J. Weitz ended Day 1 with this simple summation: "It was a great day for the space program."

Mission Control in Houston agreed. "It's been a very clean ship," said Harold Draughon, the lead flight director.

Weitz and his crew members, pilot Karol J. Bobko and mission specialists Story Musgrave and Donald H. Peterson had completed their duties in deployment of the satellite and were in an eight-hour sleep period when the trouble began. Their schedule after wakeup was relatively light, devoted mainly to metals processing, scientific and medical experiments.

Also on tap were the first of four course-changing maneuvers planned over three days. These are intended to rendezvous Challenger with a phantom target in space in a rehearsal for later flights when astronauts will chase down satellites to service or repair them.

"It's a full, but not a frantic type of day," said Draughon. The space travelers deserve it.

From the 1:30 p.m. EST liftoff on Monday to the start of their sleep period early today, the four astronauts had put Challenger to the test, "checking and rechecking systems, firing the engines and, in a climax, deploying the 2½-ton satellite.

"We've got some spectacular views of it out the overhead window," Musgrave reported. "When it first came into the sunlight, it was tremendously bright — and then we got it against the Earth."

Deploying the satellite was the major goal of the mission, helping establish the U.S. shuttle fleet as a dependable carrier of military, scientific and commercial cargo. The first shuttle, Columbia, delivered two commerical communication payloads for paying customers on it fifth flight last November.

Challenger had a flawless sendoff on its maiden voyage Monday after being grounded on its launch pad for 2½ months by a series of cracks and fuel leaks that forced a minor redesign in its three main engines.

There was no trouble once the engines ignited. They pumped at full power for more than eight minutes as they propelled the $1.2 billion rocketplane into orbit 176 miles above the globe at 17,400 miles an hour.

"The new engines performed admirably," said Jay Greene, one of the flight directors.

"You and your crew are daring the future," President Reagan said in a congratulatory message sent to the crew soon after they entered orbit.

"We're proud to be here," Commander Weitz responded for the crew.

It was the sixth shuttle launch; the first for Challenger, lighter and more powerful than sister ship Columbia.

NASA officials had predicted there would be surprises on the first flight, and it wasn't long before some cropped up.

The edges of a nylon panel on the outside of the ship's right maneuvering engine apparently worked loose during liftoff. "It's somewhat tattered, but other than that it looks in good shape," Weitz reported.

Looking at it through one of Challenger's television cameras, the control center said there appeared to be nothing to worry about. Greene left open the possibility that Musgrave and Peterson might make a close inspection of the area when they take a double space walk on Thursday afternoon.

The two mission specialists will don bulky space suits for the 3½-hour excursion into the open cargo bay to test tools and techniques for retrieving and repairing satellites on future shuttle missions. They specifically will practice to repair a sun-study satellite — which has been ailing for more than three years — on the 13th shuttle flight next year.

After five days aloft, Challenger is to return to Earth Saturday.

Sistership Discovery being tested

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — As the space shuttle Challenger soars 175 miles overhead, a new sistership called Discovery is getting final touches and initial tests in a giant metal hangar on California's barren desert.

Technicians scramble over catwalks and scaffolds applying heat-shielding tiles and blankets to Discovery, stringing miles of electrical wiring and periodically switching on the power to newly installed systems, Robert Howard, spokesman for shuttle-builder Rockwell International, said Monday.

The ship already looks like a shuttle with its wings, tail and cargo bay doors installed and "they'll be painting the name and the American flag on it soon," Howard said.

Discovery is to come lumbering out of the hangar this September as Rockwell delivers it to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The birthplace of shuttles, called Building 294, is on the edge of the desert city of Palmdale, Calif., about 25 miles south of the Edwards AFB runway where Challenger is to land Saturday.

When Discovery ventures outside the hangar, it will be towed majestically through streets of Palmdale and adjacent Lancaster, then across the open desert to Edwards. It will be bolted to the back of a jumbo jet and flown to Kennedy Space Center, Fla., to be readied for its maiden voyage next spring.

The last of the planned spaceplanes, Atlantis, is mostly a collection of systems and parts still being built by subcontractors around the country. Delivery of the finished shuttle is scheduled for the winter of 1985.

The veteran of the fleet, Columbia, is taking a breather after five flights. The ship that took Americans back into space after a long absence is being modified at Kennedy Space Center to handle the Spacelab mission late this year.

And Enterprise, the prototype shuttle that was first off the assembly line but destined never to enter space, is still being used for tests and simulations and may advertise American technology in Europe.

Shuttle pilots get bad news: Houston loses championship

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — North Carolina State's victory over the Houston Cougars for the NCAA basketball championship Monday was bad news to the Houston fans traveling in outer space.

The four astronauts aboard the space shuttle Challenger, all residents of the Houston area, were told of the 54-52 score early today by Dave Covey of Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"Houston, say again who won," mission commander Paul Weitz said from orbit.

"North Carolina State," Covey replied.

"That's the only bad news we've had all day," responded the astronaut.

Winds, drifting snow hamper travel from Utah to Texas

By The Associated Press

Motorists caught off guard by a stalled April snowstorm packed New Mexico motels while Oklahoma officials complained about the spring that never came as winds and drifts made traveling treacherous today from Utah to Texas.

Winds measured in gusts up to 104 mph roared out of northern Utah's canyons, tearing roofs away, derailing a train, toppling high-tension transmission towers and cutting power to 44,000 homes.

Wind-flung snow piled waist-deep in New Mexico, where weather officials said polar air moving through the state had pulled temperatures down by 10 to 15 degrees below normal.

"Because of icy and slick conditions, all our motels are full," said Nancy Marquez, a dispatcher with the New Mexico state police in Tucumcari. "They are putting up people in the National Guard Armory."

The storm stranded many Easter weekend travelers trying to get home, she said.

"We don't have any spring out here, ever," said Oklahoma Highway Patrol dispatcher Sane Rieken, as eight inches of snow in the Oklahoma Panhandle shut down virtually all highways in the area.

"This is just a no-man's land, anyway — and we always catch the last of those snowstorms from the Rockies."

The storm that roared out of the mountains Monday whipped chest-deep snow with its fierce winds.

"Travel is best handled with a Sherman tank," said meterologist Rich Douglas in Salt Lake City.

The storm was gradually weakening today, with snow turning to rain as it spread eastward, said Hugh Crowther of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo. The hardest hit areas would be in New Mexico and western Texas, he said.

Five deaths have been blamed on the storm since it hit the West Coast on Sunday.

Authorities said "pretty bad" snow and sleet may have caused two Navy jets to run off a runway in El Paso, Texas. One F-4 broke up in a fiery crash, but its pilots ejected safely. The second aircraft came to a harmless stop in mud.

A Greyhound bus, at least 30 cars and 10 tractor-trailers were mired in 4-foot drifts for nearly six hours before being rescued on U.S. 83 in western Oklahoma, the state highway patrol said. Local farmers used plows to aid other stranded travelers, authorities said.

Snow fell across Colorado, with nearly 18 inches blanketing Fort Collins; 13 inches in west Boulder and 6 inches at Denver's Stapleton International Airport. The storm shut down two runways at the airport.

The slow-moving storm dropped up to 5 feet of snow in 36 hours at the Alta ski resort east of Salt Lake City and 2 feet at Crystal Reservoir west of Cheyenne, Wyo.

Winds clocked at 104 mph caused blizzard conditions closing Hill Air Force Base near Ogden to all but emergency personnel, idling 19,000 civilian and military personnel.

Gusts also were measured at 104 mph in East Layton and 101 mph in South Ogden, and the weather service continued a high-wind warning through noon today.

Rains raising property values

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some property values in the rugged hills and rolling valleys around the San Francisco Bay are falling as fast as the winter rains that triggered floods and mudslides.

Devastating weather during the past 15 months has damaged or destroyed hundreds of homes in the coastal counties of Marin, San Mateo and Santa Cruz, which have some of the nation's most expensive real estate. Tax assessors estimate private property losses at more than $100 million.

In most cases, assessors say the damage reports have been accompanied by reductions in appraised values. Actual market values have dropped, too.

"Some properties, depending on the type of damage incurred, have suffered a nontangible damage that will stay with the property for many years," said Larry Levy, a property appraiser for C. Warren Fox & Associates of Menlo Park, south of San Francisco.

That damage, in excess of actual physical losses, "can run from 5 percent to 75 percent of the value of the property in the 'before' condition," he said.

In scenic Portola Valley, for example, where the gently rolling hills of the San Francisco peninsula contain homes valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars, several acres of land are "slowly creeping down the mountainside in the form of a funnel right onto a house," said Levy. "I could see that it was going to take it out."

The home was worth about $250,000 before the slide, but its value has dropped by 75 percent, he said. While the house remains, a guest house has been crushed.

"I get a very strong feeling that some of the neighborhoods that have suffered the most damage are receiving poor response from the market," said Levy.

Store owner kills over Spam theft

HOUSTON (AP) — A convenience store owner won't be charged in the shooting death of a 23-year-old customer who allegedly fled without paying for a can of sardines and a can of Spam, authorities say.

Assistant District Attorney R.K. Hansen said state law authorizes the use the deadly force to prevent flight during a "theft at night."

Viet Xuam Nguyen, 35, told police he suspected Murley McKee of shoplifting the groceries worth $2.14 and detained him inside the store.

McKee broke Nguyen's grasp and ran out the door, police said. When McKee refused to stop, Nguyen pulled a 9mm automatic pistol hidden under the cash register and fired once, police said.

McKee was hit in the back of his head, investigators said.

Barefoot execution blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has formally blocked the execution of a Texas death row inmate who was saved from execution when the justices decided to use his case to establish procedures for death penalty appeals.

The court issued a one-sentence order Monday ordering the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals not to act in the case of Thomas Andy Barefoot.

The Supreme Court will hear Barefoot's case April 26.

Barefoot, sentenced to die for the shooting death of a Harker Heights police officer, was spared death by lethal injection Jan. 24, less than 12 hours before the scheduled execution.

Searchers find attorney's body

DALHART (AP) — The body of a 51-year-old Dalhart attorney was found near his twin-engine plane that crashed in high winds south of this Panhandle town, authorities said.

The victim, identified as John L. David, was recovered by an Amarillo search team Monday morning, said Dallam County Sheriff E.F. Byrd.

The Federal Aviation Administration, which blamed the crash on the weather, notified the Amarillo Civil Air Patrol early Monday morning that the plane had not arrived in Dalhart from College Station as scheduled Sunday night, said FAA spokesman Tom Graves.

Rescue efforts were hampered by snow that began Monday morning, Byrd said.

"It was terrible out there," said Peace Justice Yvonne Whiteaker, who pronounced the pilot dead at the scene. "One minute you could see the road just fine, the next minute you couldn't see anything."

Separated Siamese twins stable

EL PASO (AP) — Surgically separated Siamese twin girls were hospitalized in stable condition today, though one infant has remained on a respirator, hospital officials say.

Miriam Hernandez was strong enough to be taken off her respirator Monday, but her weaker sister Brenda remained connected to the machine, Providence Memorial Hospital officials said.

The girls, joined from brestbone to navel at birth March 20, were separated Thursday by a surgeons who finished the operation in 3 hours and 15 minutes, less than half the time they thought it would take.

The infants shared no vital organs and had two separate hearts — which greatly improved their chances for survival, doctors said.

The girls are the children of Raul and Marie Delores Hernandez of Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Former leaders: Economics, military should be equal

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Economic policies must be considered on an equal footing with military issues by Western nations attempting to maintain a balance of power with the Soviet Union, the former leaders of the United States and two of its closest allies say.

Former President Gerald Ford, former British Prime Minister Edward Heath, and former West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt also said Monday that the U.S. and the Soviets should initiate serious discussions aimed at reducing nuclear weapons in Europe and the Soviet Union.

Western nations need a "stable economic base to provide an adequate military defense," Ford said during a student-sponsored forum at Texas A&M University on the "Future of the Western Alliance."

"Although the alliance is not an economic entity, the facts of life dictate that the western industrial nations recognize the need to coordinate their economic policies," Ford said Monday night.

Ford also said continued deficits in the $200 billion range "would be disastrous for both us and our Western allies."

The former president called on Congress to approve budget cuts and tax increases in order to slash the red ink.

Heath said it is important to work with and keep the good will of developing Third World nations because they provide a large percentage of raw materials and supplies.

"We can no longer consider the political situation only in terms of the military," Heath said. "We must also consider economic and social relations."

Schmidt said he placed more emphasis on military issues because of West Germany's geographical proximity to the Soviet Union. The former chancellor, who lives in Hamburg, said it would take a Soviet bomber "just five minutes to arrive in the sky over my house.

"It's a different feeling to speak about the Soviets when living in that geopolitical position," he said.

Schmidt also warned that failure to come to grips with the economic crisis in the West could pose "a great danger of political destabilization."

During a news conference Monday afternoon, the three ex-leaders urged President Reagan and Soviet leader Yuri Andropov to talk about reducing nuclear weapons in Europe and the Soviet Union.

"There is time and it is essential that the Western nations get moving towards a summit meeting with the Russian leaders," Ford said. "And I'm not talking about an arms freeze, I'd like to see an arms reduction."

Schmidt expressed concern "with the enormous build-up of Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe" and said the balance of strategic weapons between the West and the Soviets should be restored.

The three men also said they were troubled by the increasingly hostile rhetoric from Washington and Moscow, saying it did nothing to further arms reduction efforts.

"I don't see the anti-nuclear movement in Western Europe as being a product of Russian propaganda," Heath said. "And I loathe the level of rhetoric that has developed over the arms race."

Ford, Heath and Schmidt also agreed that the new Soviet leadership under Andropov will not be significantly different in its attitudes from previous administrations.

Convicted drug traffickers send policemen to school

DALLAS (AP) — Some police officers are going back to school at the expense of convicted drug traffickers.

Money confiscated from dope pushers paid the tuition last week for two members of the police force in suburban Irving — Chief Benny Newman and Capt. Tracy Bush, director of the department's vice and narcotic division — when they attended an international crime seminar in Mexico.

"Let criminals pay for law enforcement," said McKinney Police Chief Ken Walker. "After all, they're doing it; why not let them pay for it?"

A 1979 state law allows local police to put money forfeited during narcotics cases in a special fund for use by that agency in criminal investigations.

Police forces in the Dallas suburbs of Irving, Mesquite, Plano, Garland and nearby Grand Prairie have set up the special funds.

"Let's say we make a drug raid and find $5,000 the drug dealer uses to make change," said Newman. "If the judge decides it is indeed drug-related, we get it back."

To deposit cash in the fund, police must file a forfeiture suit with the district attorney's office and a judge must rule the money was obtained through the sale, manufacture, distribution or delivery of narcotics.

"We've collected $54,000 since 1979, but less and less money is being put into the account because dealers are wising up and carrying less cash," said Newman.

"The fund allows us to give our people more training than the operating budget calls for," said Grand Prairie Police Chief David Kunkle.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, April 6, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This was the birthdate of famous radio newscaster Lowell Thomas, magician Harry Houdini, actor Walter Huston and Cincinnati Reds premier catcher Ernie Lombardi. Also sharing your birthday: country singer Merle Haggard, actor Billy Dee Williams ("The Empire Strikes Back"), conductor Andre Previn and jazz musician Gerry Mulligan. Money pressures ease in the months ahead and you end the year on a sounder financial footing. The economy favors your business interests. Do not let gossip complicate your personal life. A parent-child relationship improves. You bask in the warmth of a new family closeness. Be more discriminating when choosing romantic partners.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are on the brink of a big discovery. Postpone travel and delay signing legal papers. A tricky situation shifts in your favor. Romance becomes complicated when partner decides to play games.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep track of receipts and cut back on credit card purchases. Romance is terrific. A former employer desperately needs your services but is too proud to ask for them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Teachers, artists find that success comes easier now. Keep business and pleasure strictly separate. A romance with a co-worker could result in career trouble. Do loved one a favor this evening.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You have finally made it to the top of a hill. Congratulations! Delays work in your favor. Protect your valuables and property. New benefits accrue from your past efforts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Guard your reputation. Gossip could hurt your chances for a promotion or new job. Avoid all forms of gambling. Speculation can get you into trouble at both work and home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Continue to have faith in a loved one. You will not be sorry! Stand firm in labor or financial negotiations. Time is on your side. Romance is happier than in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Some outstanding luck will soon ease money worries, but in the meantime you must tighten your belt. It is important to catch up on a work backlog. Business travel produces big gains.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get some long overdue recognition. Accept it graciously. Although you prefer doing for others, now is the time to let others do for you. Include a lonely friend in celebration.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A casual encounter could lead to an idyllic romance. Those who try to undermine your position at work will bring about their own downfall. A business matter requires immediate attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A contract can be renegotiated on more favorable terms. The other party does not want you to be unhappy. You learn a valuable lesson from a romantic episode.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Form a better alliance before taking on a new challenge. A domestic problem needs to be resolved once and for all. Cut your ties with someone who continually upsets you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Business progress is slow but sure. You get a lucky personal break. A romance affects your thinking. Your search for a new place to live proves both interesting and successful.

Super agents return

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — There's a scene in tonight's CBS movie "Return of the Man From U.N.C.L.E.: The 15 Years Later Affair" when Napoleon Solo and Illya Kuryakin are walking virtually unnoticed past real people on a real Los Angeles street that's supposed to pass for New York City.

You'd think there'd be a turned head or a double-take or two for the suave, stylish Solo (Robert Vaughn) and the implacid, introverted Kuryakin (David McCallum). What's the matter with the folks in Los Angeles? Are they too trendy for nostalgia?

These guys were the super agents of the 1960s. And if it weren't for them and U.N.C.L.E., the United Network Command for Law and Enforcement, we'd all be saluting the THRUSH flag today.

Reunited 15 years after NBC canceled their four-season series, "The Man From U.N.C.L.E.," Solo and Kuryakin are as much fun as ever, providing light-hearted escapist entertainment. There's a twinkle in everything they do.

Or as Vaughn, rescued from his recent TV roles of villainy, said in an interview: "It's fun, games and terrorism."

The plot, such as it is, can be dispensed with quickly. Solo owns a computer company, but still prefers human companionship from femme fatales and poker players. Kuryakin is a thriving dress designer. They meet again during a restaurant brawl. After their fists separate right from wrong, Solo asks devilishly: "Gotta minute?"

This high-class Batman and Robin have been called back to the spy wars because their archenemy THRUSH, headed by Anthony Zerbe, has threatened to detonate a nuclear bomb if Solo doesn't personally deliver $350 million in ransom.

George Lazenby even makes an appearance as J.B., whose car, equipped with a missile-launcher, helps Solo out of a tight spot during a wild chase down the strip in Las Vegas.

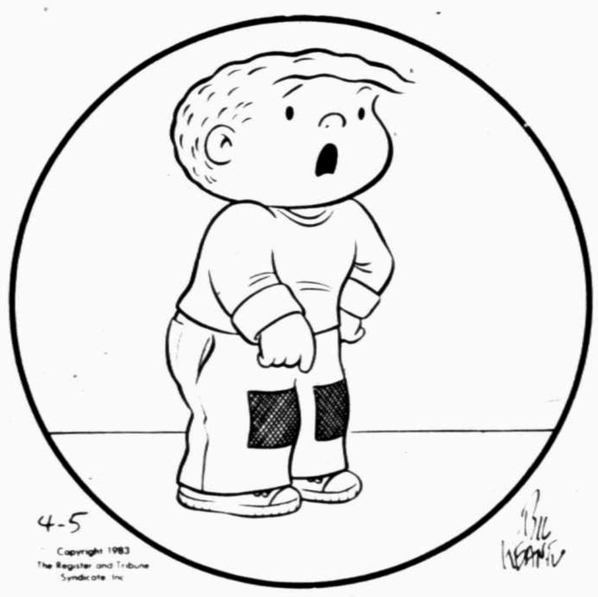

The script originally was written for a theatrical film budgeted at $5 million, according to Steve Mills, who heads CBS' TV movie department. In doing it for television, the cost was pared in half by removing some of the spectacular stunts.

But there's still plenty of energy and excitement for action-adventure lovers. There are several U.N.C.L.E.-THRUSH shoot-'em-ups reminiscent of "Star Wars," as only the nasties get hit, and oodles of fistfights and explosives.

The cards were not running well for Trump Coup Tommy. The hands had all been straightforward, and though he had gone down in only two game contracts that should have been made, he was already quite a bit out of pocket.

Things finally began to take a turn for the better when Tommy cut against The Stranger. He was a visitor from out of town who had ridiculed Tommy's bidding on a number of hands. Both sides were vulnerable when this hand came up. Tommy's final bid left something to be desired. Since his partner's heart response should have alerted him to the possibility that some of partner's values might be wasted, a pass would have been more prudent. Six diamonds, however, was an excellent contract. The Stranger's double proved that he was unaware of the transformation that came over Tommy when he was faced with a bad trump break.

With a smile, West led the king of hearts. When dummy came down, it was obvious that the double had to be based on trump length. Tommy was in his element. He won the ace of hearts and gave up all thought of leading trumps. Instead he came to hand with a heart ruff, cashed the ace-king of spades and ruffed another heart. The king-ace of clubs and a club ruff reduced The Stranger to nothing but five trumps.

Tommy ruffed a heart with the king of trumps as West underruffed helplessly. Declarer led his last club. If West ruffed low, dummy would overruff. Declarer would then ruff a heart with the ace of trumps and he would still have to score the jack of trumps en passant to make his slam. So West ruffed with the queen of trumps and returned a trump. But that was no better. Tommy won in hand with the ace and led a spade, and dummy had to score both the J-9 of trumps since they were poised over West's 10-8.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Naivete's end

When Javier Perez de Cuellar became secretary general of the United Nations a few months back, he made a hit by the straightforwardness of his talk. Unlike some of his predecessors, he wafted fresh breezes of candor and common sense into the international atmosphere, looking at the world body objectively, warts and all.

Since then he has been consistent in viewing the affairs of the world as he sees them, neither through rose-colored glasses nor clouded lenses. He is a man of hope but also a diplomat worth listening to when he talks about ticklish issues, such as the Soviet Union's brutal invasion of Afghanistan.

Perez de Cuellar journeyed to Moscow the other day to talk with Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov about that invasion. He wanted to find out what might be done by the United Nations to reduce or eliminate the ravages of that unprincipled war.

After two hours of discussion, the secretary general said he had received "renewed encouragement" about the possibilities of U.N. mediation efforts. He added a plea to be listened to further by saying, "Rely on me, I have reasons for hope."

If these words had come from someone else, they might suggest that a favorable answer had been found for the U.N. General Assembly's resolution asking Russians to stop murdering Afghans. Perez de Cuellar is not that simple-minded, or misleading. Asked at a press conference if he thought Andropov had any plans to pull his attackers off neighboring turf, the secretary general replied:

"One of the elements in the problem is the presence of Soviet troops in the area. But if you want me to tell you that Mr. Andropov will withdraw Soviet troops tomorrow, I think that you are not as naive as all that."

Perez de Cuellar is honest enough to admit encouragement, and hope, which always should spring eternal in men's souls. But he is honorable enough not to say he thinks an armistice will take place soon on the Afghan battlefronts. That is up to the honor of the Kremlin, where it has not been conspicuous in the past.

You're home, Hu Na

The U.S. government took an unconscionably long time deciding whether to grant political asylum to Hu Na, the young Chinese tennis player who defected in San Francisco last July. Her case had become a top-level diplomatic issue between Washington and Peking.

The U.S. Justice Department granted political asylum to Hu Na Monday. Albeit slow in coming, the decision was a wise one.

Premier Deng Xiaoping had been telling American officials that U.S.-Chinese relations would suffer if Hu was not sent home. That was a clue to how embarrassing her defection had become to the Chinese government, but it should have had nothing to do with whether Nu was granted asylum.

The tennis star, who is 19, claimed she had been caught up in rivalries between political factions in China. She feared for her future if sent back.

The fuss made over her defection in China suggested she would not have been safe if returned. The Chinese communists themselves made the best case for granting her petition for asylum.

Warnings from Peking about damage to U.S.-Chinese relations were not the issue. The safety of Hu Na was the issue.

Another View:

Clean air costs

The benefits of pollution control are very substantial, but it's worth keeping an eye on the costs as well. Among the defenders of the present environmental protection laws it is frequently regarded as irrelevant, not to say immoral, to add up the economic costs of a good cause. But the patterns that emerge provide a reliable guide to choices that have to be made. And the amounts at issue are not small. In 1981, the last year for which precise figures have been calculated, Americans spent $60 billion for pollution abatement and control.

The figures come from that undramatic but enormously valuable audit of the American economy, the Commerce Department's national income and product accounts. Two of the department's economists, Gary L. Rutledge and Susan Lease-Trevathan, have now published a survey of public and private antipollution expenditures for the past decade. The total outlay rose steadily to 1979, then began to decline slowly.

The chief reason for the decline has been the reduction in public spending on sewer systems. In broad terms, spending on water pollution has been falling while spending on air pollution has continued to rise. The largest rise recently has been in, specifically, the costs of reducing the air pollution generated by automobiles.

That sharpens a question already before the Environmental Protection Agency and Congress. The medical evidence accumulated over the past decade indicates that the three legally controlled pollutants from automobile tailpipes have only slight effects on people's health. Meanwhile, the same kinds of evidence point to much more important health effects from certain kinds of water pollution and, above all, from the air pollution generated by power plants. All attempts to rewrite the present legislation are deadlocked between the people who don't want to relax the automobile standards and those who don't want to tighten the industrial standards. The result is an increasing share of the spending on the least dangerous forms of pollution and a declining share on the most dangerous.

The total cost to business of pollution control and abatement, including capital cost as well as direct spending, was $54 billion in 1981. That figure can be viewed as a pollution tax. As such, it's a good deal larger than the total revenues from the corporate income tax. While the income tax is spread across all corporations that make profits, the pollution tax is concentrated on a few — notably the metals, chemicals and electric power industries. A tax on industrial pollution is fair and desirable. But the level is now high enough to affect profoundly the way the national economy works. A congressional review of basic environmental policy is badly overdue.

CHARLEY REESE

Logical way offered to reduce arms

Ban ICBMs, not nukes.

Those four words summarize the most intelligent proposal for sensible arms control that I have ever seen. People who are concerned about decreasing the probability of nuclear war should do everything in their power to propagate this concept.

Charley Reese

The concept is explained by its originator, Harry L. Reynolds, deputy associate director for Weapons Advanced Concepts at Los Alamos National Laboratory in the autumn issue of the Washington Quarterly.

What Reynolds has done is focus a first class mind on a problem which has been receiving too much attention from third rate minds. He brings into focus points which are so obvious they are frequently overlooked.

For example, suppose the United States and the Soviet Union achieved a mutual freeze. The probability of war and the damage such a war would cause would not have been reduced one iota. Levels of weapons are already sufficient. What would be frozen would be the present unstable balance of terror.

Okay, suppose both sides reduced their missile forces by half. Still, no real progress. Half of more than enough is still sufficient to obliterate both countries.

Reynolds argues that the rational goals of arms control talks should be to satisfy each nation's needs for national security (no agreement which fails to do this will ever be reached) and second to provide crisis stability.

What is de-stabilizing and increasing the probability of war is the intercontinental ballistic missile. Why? Because: (1) its 30-minute flight time makes a devastating surprise attack at least theoretically possible and this drives military planners on both sides nuts; (2) it gives neither side adequate time to plan a response; (3) once launched, it cannot be re-called; and (4) at the present, there is no adequate defense against it.

It is the fear of the first strike which is the key to nuclear war survival that makes the present so dangerous. The knowledge that nuclear devastation is only 30 minutes away by land-based missile or 10 minutes by sub-launched missile un-nerves everyone.

Suppose, however, the United States and the Soviet Union could negotiate the elimination of ICBMs and IRBMs and establish sub-free zones off each other's coasts. Both sides could retain their nuclear deterrent with aircraft, cruise missiles and short-range ballistic missiles.

But look at what both sides would gain. The chance of a devastating surprise attack would be virtually eliminated since it would be difficult to move large quantities of aircraft or even cruise missiles intercontinental distances before they were detected. Both sides would have re-call capability in a crisis. The danger of nuclear war by technical or personnel failure would be greatly reduced, if not eliminated. Neither side would be asking the other to endanger its national security. Both sides would have bought some time for a permanent resolution of their conflict.

Even banning ICBMs will not be easy and Reynolds goes into the difficulties involved. But at least his concept is achievable and it would significantly reduce the probability of nuclear war.

As I have said many times, nobody is going to eliminate nuclear weapons. They give the possessors too much power. To seek to ban nukes is like campaigning for the repeal of the law of gravity. It's futile.

But to ban delivery systems which destabilize the situation for both sides might well be an achievable goal, provided the public can force the governments on both sides to consider the proposition.

The nuclear genie cannot be stuffed back into the bottle and arms races do not cause wars. What does cause wars are aggressors with the capability or at least the perception that they have the capability to strike first and win. What causes wars is the nagging fear that if you don't hit first the other guy will.

Harry Reynolds' ideas are not the final answer, but they are a logical approach to arms control talks that might actually make the world a bit safer. These days, even a bit is better than what we have.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soviet weapon would tip balance

WASHINGTON — The Kremlin has been shrill in its denunciation of President Reagan's dream of a sci-fi umbrella to ward off Soviet missiles. But the most frightening military intelligence report I've seen in years warns that the Russians are beginning to produce a surface-to-air missile that might be able to shoot down some U.S. strategic missiles.

Jack Anderson

Ironically, this could put the Soviets in violation of the 1972 U.S.-Soviet treaty that the Kremlin claims Reagan's futuristic weapon would transgress.

The Soviet super-weapon is the SA-12. Tests monitored by the CIA showed that the SA-12 successfully shot down Soviet missiles roughly equivalent to U.S. Pershing 2 missiles, which have an 1,800-kilometer range.

That means the Pershing 2s — whose planned deployment in Western Europe has aroused such vociferous protest — may well be obsolete before they're put in place.

This would be scary enough. But what is truly hair-raising about the SA-12 is that it may be capable of knocking our Poseidon missiles out of the sky. The Poseidons are the submarine-based long-range missiles, the supposedly invulnerable leg of our nuclear weapons triad.

Yet this is precisely what the CIA suggests in its "special weapons intelligence review" — a just-completed report that is classified several levels above top secret. Though access to the report is restricted to a handful of high officials, details of its contents were given to my associate Dale Van Atta. He also saw a related State Department report on the subject so highly classified that even its code word is top secret.

The State Department experts suggest that the Russians developed the SA-12 as a weapon to use against tactical nuclear missiles, such as the Lance and the Pershing 1A. And because "the distinction between strategic and tactical ABM systems is not well defined" in the 1972 treaty, the SA-12's development wasn't necessarily a treaty violation.

But in addition to their obvious difference in range, tactical and strategic missiles differ in their speed. Generally speaking, the bigger the bang, the faster the flight. Thus a Pershing 1A travels its 1,800-kilometer distance at 8,000 fps (feet per second). The Pershing 2 is faster. The Poseidons have a speed of 19,000 fps, while the Minuteman III, our best land-based missile, has a speed of 24,000 fps.

But it makes no difference to an anti-missile missile how far the incoming target has been traveling, all that matters is its speed. And the CIA report suggests that the SA-12 is fast enough to intercept one of our 19,000 fps Poseidons.

This means that the SA-12, designed originally to ward off U.S. short-range tactical missiles, might be capable of defending the Soviets' land-based ICBMs against our sub-based long-range missiles.

If the SA-12 can in fact shoot down a Poseidon — or even if the Soviets only think it can — this would destroy the deterrent that many believe to be the only thing that keeps the Kremlin from nuclear aggression.

DRAWING A BLANK: Steven Bryen, a former Senate aide accused of passing classified information to Israel, is now a deputy assistant defense secretary — and the 600-page Justice Department file on his case has mysteriously disappeared.

In 1978, a lobbyist for the National Association of Arab Americans swore he overheard Bryen offer Israeli officials a document on Arab military bases during a meeting at Washington's Madison Hotel. When the NAAA filed a Freedom of Information Act request in 1980 for the file on the Bryen investigation, Justice said it had located a 600-page file and would process it in due course. But last December, the Justice Department told NAAA it had been unable to locate the file after an "exhaustive search."

In a truncated "working file" that was provided, a memo from a Justice Department official recommending grand jury action noted: "Some of the unresolved questions thus far, which suggest that Bryen is a) gathering classified information for the Israelis; b) acting as their unregistered agent, and c) lying about it, are as follows:" The next eight pages of the file were blanked out.

The Bryen investigation was quietly dropped. The NAAA plans to file a Freedom of Information suit this week to find out why.

BINGO: The Justice Department's proposed legislation to ban bingo games on Indian reservations has drawn heavy fire from the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Bingo has become big business on some reservations, which are generally exempt from state laws. The Justice Department proposes putting the bingo games under state control. In a memo to the Interior Department's legislative counsel, BIA officials said they "strongly oppose" such a move. The BIA argues that bingo revenues help tribal governments to become self-sufficient, as President Reagan wants.

SMUT GLUT: The overburdened Customs Service has already been put to work on two favorite Reagan administration projects — Operation Exodus, to cut the flow of high-technology exports, and Operation Greenback, to stop the laundering of ill-gotten money overseas. Next, I'm told, the customs agents will be ordered to crack down on imported pornography. No name yet for the proposed crackdown program. Operation Smut Glut, maybe?

INSIDE REPORT:

'Freeze' politics cuts both ways

WASHINGTON — The missing ingredient in the administration's plan to defeat the nuclear freeze resolution in Congress is the still-secret case against Soviet SALT violations, a case President Reagan is almost ready to take to the congressional jury.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Despite questioning by some White House aides, Reagan personally insisted on writing into his March 31 Los Angeles World Affairs Council speech a phrase in which he said "there have been increasingly serious grounds" for questioning compliance with existing treaties. He said he would "have more to say on this in the near future."

That opens the door for a presidential challenge of Soviet SALT compliance. Under White House guidance, an unpublicized study of alleged Soviet violations will soon be completed and handed to the president. It is expected to provide Reagan with an argument strong enough to cripple the freeze movement, and possibly defeat it in its first test in the House in mid-April.

The argument is this: Even if all other objections miraculously disappeared, it would be suicidal for the U.S. to submit to a nuclear arms "freeze" with knowledge the Soviets have been systematically cheating on existing nuclear arms treaties.

Reagan methodically ticked off his case of how "dangerous" the freeze is in his Los Angeles speech. Except for his teaser about having "more to say," he decided to ignore the cheating issue until he has studied details of the high-level probe of alleged violations, to be sent to the Oval Office within the next few days.

But Reagan has laid a groundwork on the cheating issue. In his March 29 interview with six White House reporters, he said he had "reason to believe that there have been numerous violations" by the Soviets of the treaty limiting underground nuclear tests. On Feb. 23, entertaining the Sperling breakfast group at the White House, Reagan described the Feb. 8 Soviet missile test as "the closest to indicating that it is a violation of SALT II." No president has ever been so frontal in suggesting Soviet treaty violations, although some have nursed similar suspicions.

Proponents of the "freeze," including liberal Democrats who glorify it as a passport for capturing the White House next year, have found the issue a bit more slippery than they bargained for even without a presidential onslaught against Soviet treaty violations. On March 16, House Democratic leaders decided to delay their planned passage of the "freeze" resolution after they barely managed to turn back an amendment (by six votes) that liberals felt vitiated the resolution.

The amendment would have watered down congressional restrictions on the president by allowing him to negotiate actual "reductions" in existing nuclear weapons, rather than tying him to an untimely weapons "freeze." The Soviets are rapidly modernizing all parts of their own force, but much of the U.S. force is senile. Without the defeated amendment, the resolution smacks of a unilateral restraint on the U.S.

The closeness of that vote surprised "freeze" backers whose passion for the anti-nuclear movement leaves no room for doubt about its efficacy. But less emotional Democrats who back it in principle have a growing worry about the politics of the "freeze" and how it may look next year in the heat of the election campaign. "Any whiff of unilateralism and we are in deep trouble," one member of the House Democratic leadership told us. As drafted, the "freeze" resolution does not satisfy him. It frightens him, because if enacted, the Soviets would refuse to negotiate lower levels of nuclear weapons on grounds that Congress had decreed a "freeze" at current levels, thus retaining their advantage of modernization.

By introducing the compliance issue on existing treaties as a factor in the congressional debate on the "freeze," Reagan sends a veiled warning to Capitol Hill that should convince proponents that the politics of the "freeze" cuts both ways.

Veterinarian reminisces about deadly horse virus

PIBER, Austria (AP) — At dawn's light, the night watchman found the foal stillborn and lying beside its mother, a brood mare of the majestic Lippizaners.

A herpes virus epidemic threatening the proud breed had claimed its first victim. But to veterinarians and farm hands, the death was then nothing more than evidence of nature's harsh hand.

"Deaths at births are not uncommon on a farm such as ours with more than 200 horses," said Dr. Othmar Schmehlik, resident veterinarian at the stud farm for the breed, whose stallions delight the world with their intricate, graceful dancing.

Schmehlik remembers the watchman's find on Feb. 9. On March 11, the first mature animal died. Two days later, the toll was 11 dead, including five miscarriages in one night. The doctors' days since then often have been sleepless as he labored to check the spread of the virus, which by last Tuesday had killed seven mares and 27 foals.

Schmehlik also has had to contend with charges that officials on the government-run farm tried to keep the epidemic secret. The Austrian public heard nothing of the tragedy of their beloved horses until an anonymous caller tipped a radio station, two weeks after the epidemic was manifest.

Shortly before he spoke with a reporter who visited the farm last week, workers carted away the carcasses of two stillborn foals. Schmehlik also was upset by the death during the night of the farm's oldest horse, a 26-year-old mare that became the latest casualty.

"Of course you develop a personal relationship to these animals," he said.

Asked if the doctors had conquered the horse epidemic, Schmehlik said Saturday, "I cannot say so. That's what we hope."

More optimistic, at least publicly, was the Agriculture Ministry, which runs the farm. "The worst is over," said a spokesman, Max Verworner, on Friday.

Still, signs on the stucco walls of the 19th-century stalls and barns warn visitors to stay away from the stud farm that provides a tourism living for most of the 558 residents of Piber, a hamlet in the rolling, wooded hills near the Yugoslav border.

The Agricultural Ministry also runs the Spanish Riding School in Vienna, where the stallions perform. But male horses apparently are immune to the virus' effects, including paralysis of the nervous system, and the performing horses are not threatened by the epidemic.

The virus killing the Lippizaners is caused by one of many herpes strains. In humans, different kinds of herpes cause chicken pox, cold sores and the genital blisters which have become a much publicized venereal plague in the United States.

In trying to explain the horses' deaths, Schmehlik and Heinrich Lehrner, the farm's director, sent tissue samples to Viennese laboratories. The virologists identified the disease as a particularly virulent form of herpes-induced equine rhino-pneumonitis, or ERP.

In its most benign form, ERP causes a runny nose, coughing and wheezing, and usually lasts several weeks.

But at Piber, foal after foal was aborted or died at birth or soon after delivery. The mares, most of them pregnant, also succumbed to nerve paralysis.

The epidemic shocked horse lovers everywhere.

Late last week, officials said breeding of the Lippizaners had been temporarily halted.

On Friday, three stricken pregnant mares got injections of variety of interferon, the experimental cancer drug. Donors who asked to be anonymous had the drug rushed to the stud farm.

But experts say there is no certain cure. They also say that the Lippizaners, of delicate constitution after 400 years of inbreeding, were poor risks for inoculation.

Lippizaners in Austria are all descendants of six 18th-century stallions whose origins go back to Iberia during the rule of Julius Caesar. A favorite of the Hapsburg royalty, their use was restricted to the Hapsburgs until after World War I and the collapse of Austria-Hungary.

Virus causes cancer

DURHAM, N.C. — Researchers at Duke University Medical Center have confirmed that a virus can cause a type of blood cancer in humans, scientists say.

The finding confirms the discovery of the virus by Dr. Robert C. Gallo at the National Cancer Institute in Washington, said Dr. Dani Bolognesi, deputy director of the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center.

The virus caused a form of leukemia. In the past, viruses have been linked to cancer in chickens, cows, cats, mice and other animals.

"In the scientific community, it takes independent confirmation of a discovery to validate it, and we are happy to confirm Dr. Gallo's discovery of a human cancer virus," Bolognesi said Sunday.

Dr. Barton Haynes, the immunologist who headed the Duke researchers, said the virus causes T-cell leukemia, a rare cancer found primarily in Japan. The disease is the most common blood cancer in Japan but is only the third or fourth most common form in the United States.

"Only 10 out of 100 cases of leukemia in the United States are of the T-cell type, and probably less than 1 percent are due to the virus," he said.

However, Haynes said the research could have far-reaching public health implications, especially for blood banks.

"The long-term implications are awesome," he said. "For years, people have been saying cancer is not contagious. But our work indicates that this is probably a transmissable agent. Blood is going to have to be screened."

No one knows how the virus is transmitted. However, its geographic distribution indicates it may be passed between individuals.

"We think it requires close contact over a long period of time with someone who's carrying the virus," Haynes said. "Research indicates it has an incubation period on the order of 20 years and that family members frequently have antibodies against the virus. So do people who live in areas where the virus is commonly found."

Haynes said susceptibility to the virus might be inherited to some degree.

Duke researchers are working with the virus to learn how it operates in the hope of developing a vaccine against it. They are taking extra precautions to make sure the scientists are not contaminated.

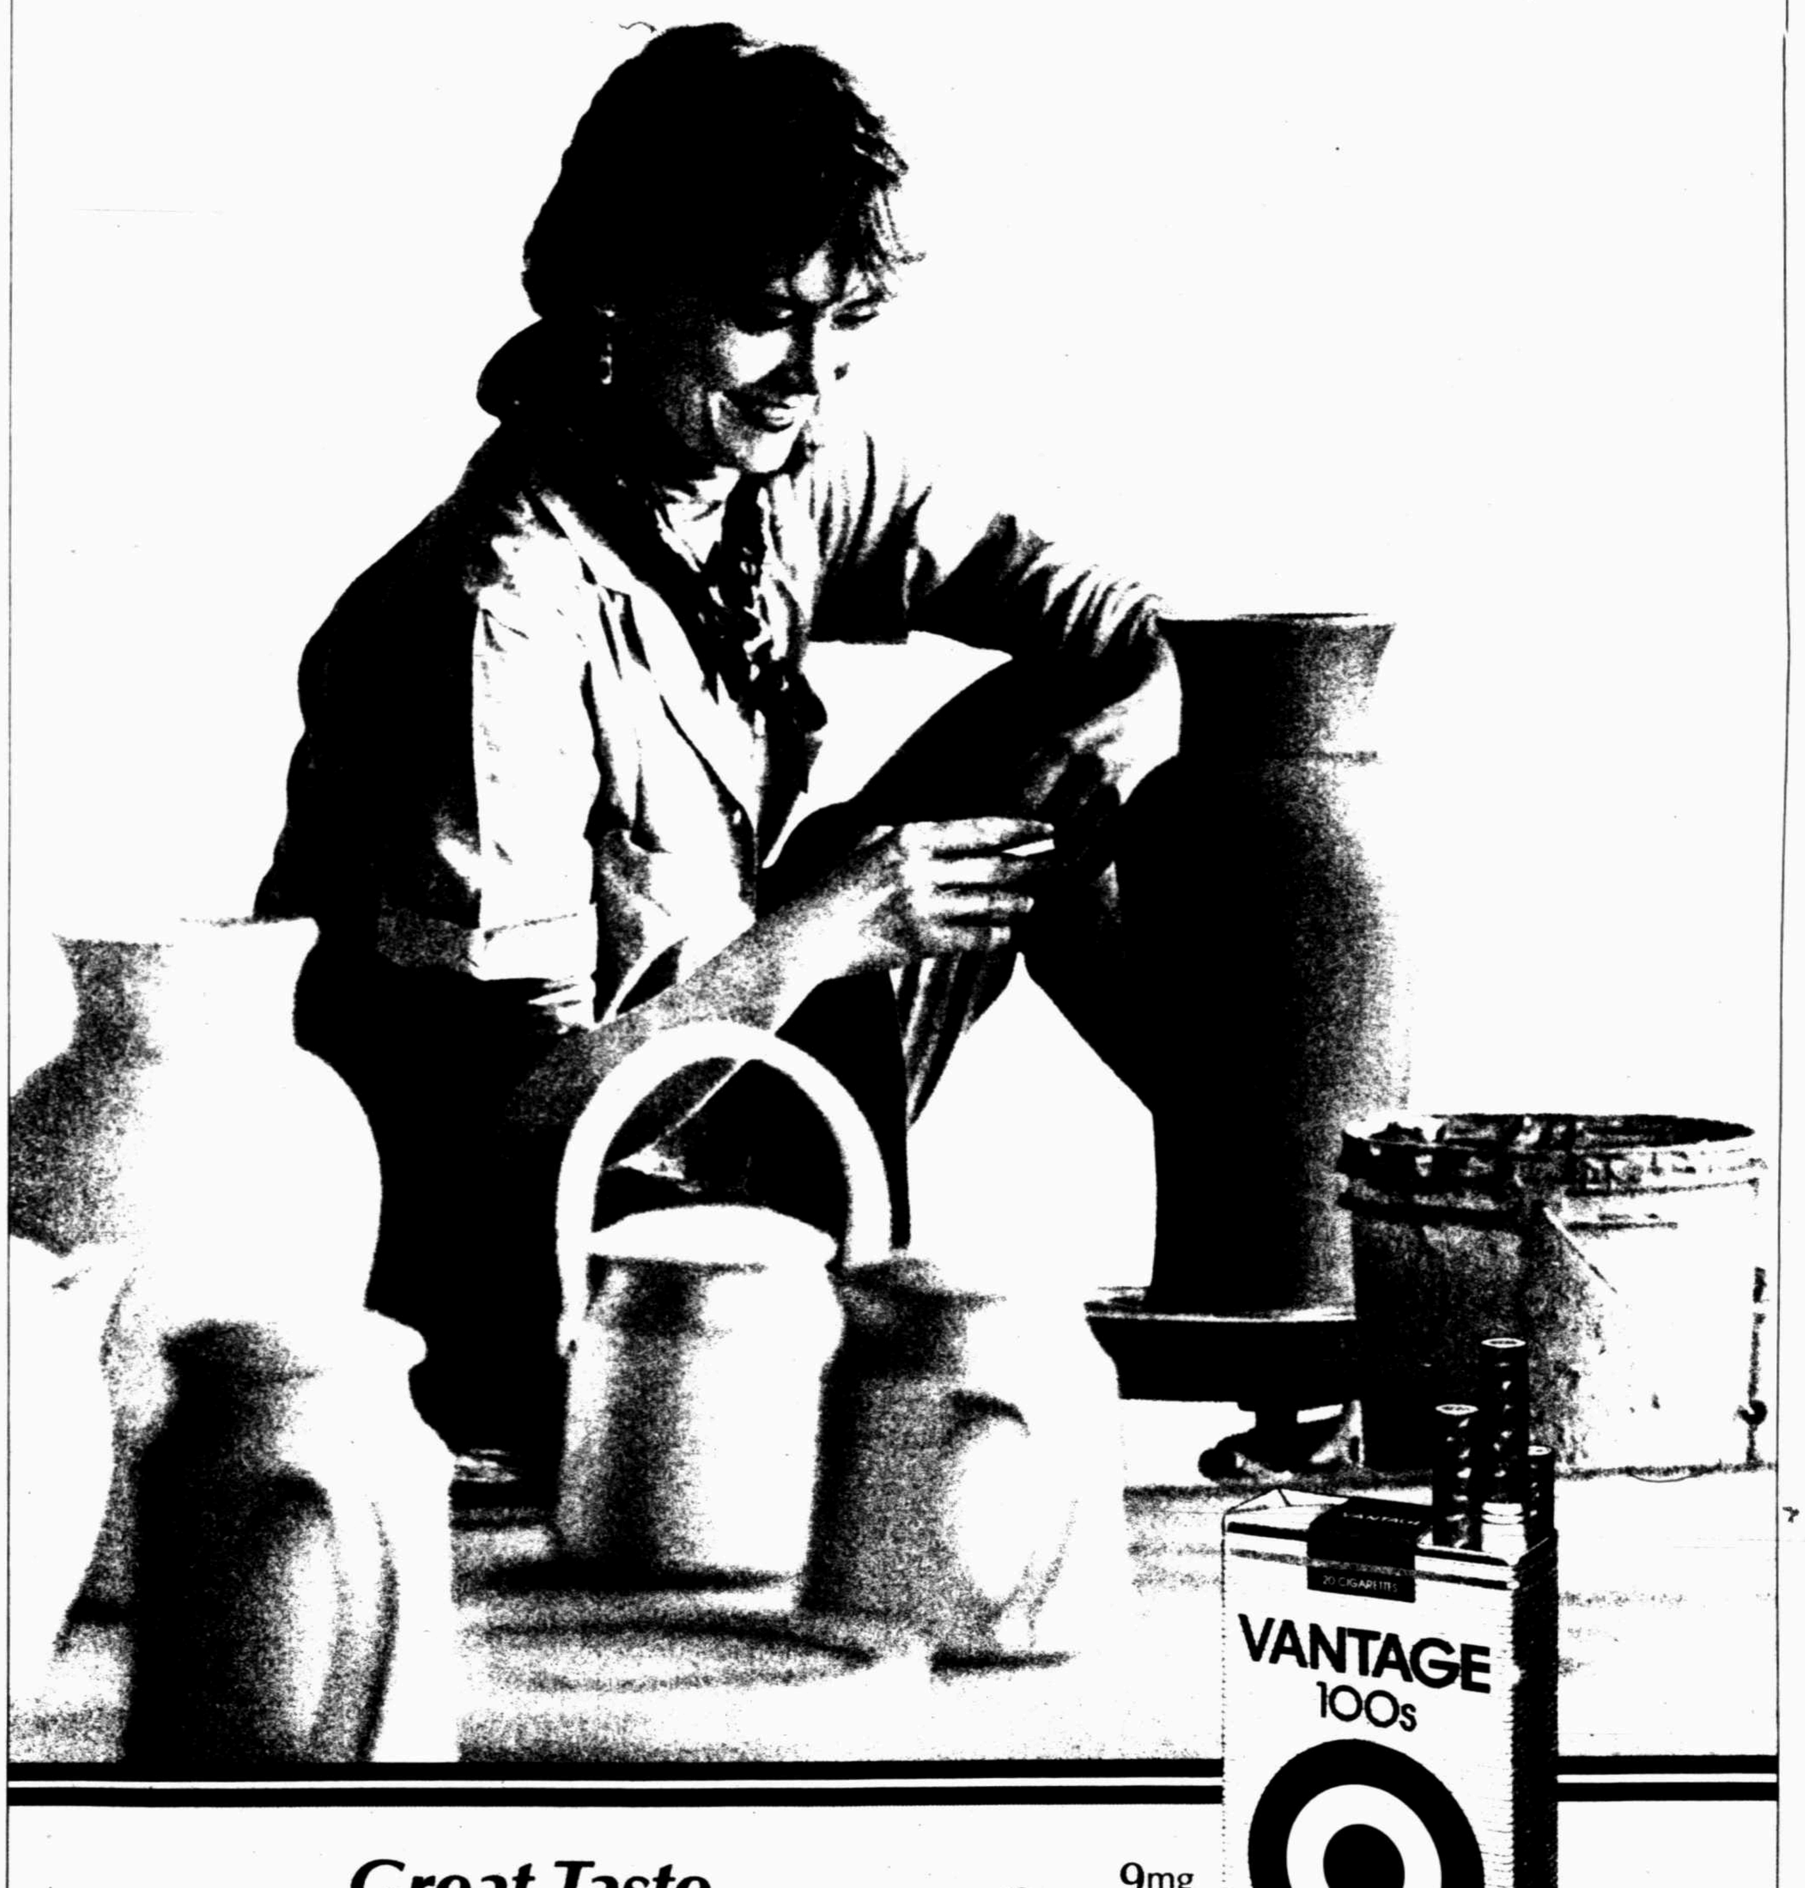

King Kong rises again

NEW YORK (AP) — When the original King Kong climbed the Empire State Building, it took minutes. When an inflatable version of the great ape did it, it took much of a day.

A 3,000-pound, 84-foot balloon Kong was hoisted to the Empire State Building's mooring mast on Monday as part of a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the film "King Kong."

The mast originally was designed as an anchor for lighter-than-air ships, but was never used for that.

Hospital starts organ donor hotline

PITTSBURGH (AP) — University of Pittsburgh officials say they began a national hotline for information about organ donations for transplants because many doctors and hospitals didn't know whom to call.

Starting today, the phone will be answered around the clock by specialists who know medical conditions that a volunteer donor must meet for successful transplants, said Donald Denny, director of organ procurement for the university's medical school. If a potential donor qualifies, the physician will be put in touch with the nearest of 110 organ procurement programs.

The toll-free telephone number, restricted to doctors and other medical professionals, is 800-24-DONOR.

TVA auctioning off equipment

SURGOINSVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — About $4.5 million was raised in the first day of an auction to sell $50 million worth of leftover construction equipment from a canceled nuclear power plant, officials say.

Approximately 1,000 contractors and wholesalers from 35 states and five foreign nations watched or took part in Monday's bidding. The auction is expected to continue all week to dispose of earth movers, cranes, dump trucks and other construction equipment.

The Tennessee Valley Authority spent about $1 billion on the twin-reactor Phipps Bend nuclear plant, but decided last year to scrap the facility because the agency had overestimated demand for electricity.

Human remains can't be identified

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Human flesh and bones found in the freezer of a man whose roommate disappeared are human but cannot be identified because there is no skull or fingers, a pathologist says.

Police went to the home of Lawrence John Crowley, 25, on March 24 after several neighbors told police they thought he might have eaten their dogs. Crowley has been booked for investigation of murder in the disappearance of his roommate, 40-year-old Earl Nolan.

Test results show the human remains are those of a man, age 35 to 40, who was stabbed near the rib cage. But a coroner's pathologist, Dr. Monroe Samuels, said Monday the remains were insufficient to identify the victim.

Man fatally shoots family, himself

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — A 46-year-old Pentagon employee who left a suicide note probably was responsible for fatally shooting his wife and three children before turning the gun on himself, police say.

The body of Leonard J. Fleeger, his 43-year-old wife, Mary Sue, their son Brian, 10, and their two daughters, Kimberly, 6, and Susan, 4, were found Monday in their lakefront home in this Washington, D.C., suburb.

"...It appears the father was responsible," said police spokesman Warren Carmichael, who declined to identify the contents of the suicide note. Neighbors described the family as friendly and active in the affluent neighborhood.

Judge sentences anti-war protester

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A judge said he had to "follow the law" in sentencing an anti-war protester to 30 days in prison for splashing blood on the Pentagon after she turned down the alternative of paying a $200 fine or donating blood.

"...I don't think I've ever had a more difficult decision," U.S. District Judge Martin Loughlin said Monday as he sentenced Francine Wall of Nashua. The case was transferred here at her request.

Students start day with moment of silence

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Third-grader Christie Jones says she likes starting her school day with one minute of silence because her class is normally so noisy.

But Kenny Lewis joined a number of students who in shook their heads "no" when asked if they favor the minute of silence mandated by the Tennessee General Assembly.

He said he doesn't like the practice because "everybody tells jokes to make everyone laugh."

Public school students in Nashville began following the new silent minute law on Monday, although some Tennessee school systems started the minute of silence in their classrooms late last month.

"We are now going to have a moment of silence — absolutely no talking," teacher Juanita Swett said as she turned off the classroom light at Warner Elementary School and followed the sweep hand of a big clock.

Attorneys for the American Civil Liberties Union say they want to keep organized prayer out of the state's schools.

Arkansas senator won't seek nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Dale Bumpers, who built a reputation winning hard races in Arkansas, has decided not to make a longshot bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984, sources say.

Dale Bumpers

After weeks of studying his chances against a half dozen better known Democrats, Bumpers, 57, concluded he was not willing to make the personal sacrifices needed to wage a year-long presidential campaign, said the political sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified.

"He would get up in the morning and look in the mirror and ask himself, 'Why am I doing this?'" one adviser said. "But during the day, people were telling him he could win and by nine at night his competitive instincts would be awakened and he would be gung ho again."

Bumpers was not available for comment and his press secretary, Tim Hackler, didn't return phone calls Monday. Bumpers was scheduled to give a news conference later today in Little Rock, Ark.

Bumpers' wife, Betty, said in Washington Monday night that she did not know what her husband had decided.

"I can tell you the honest to God truth. I don't know," she said. "He's been agonizing over this a long time."

In 1970, Bumpers startled Arkansas politicians by first defeating Democratic political power, Orval Faubus, in the state's gubernatorial primary. He later won the governor's race by ousting incumbent Republican Withrop Rockefeller.

And he won his Senate seat after beating incumbent Democratic Sen. J. William Fulbright, then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in the 1974 primary.

Bumpers began thinking seriously about running for president after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., announced late last year that he would not seek his party's nomination next year.

Bumpers began appearing at various Democratic "cattle shows," political events around the country where presidential candidates would speak briefly to impress potential delegates to the Democratic National Convention next summer.

By late March, Bumpers was laying the groundwork for fund-raising and establishing a campaign organization. He had gathered around him a group of political professionals and advisers, including David Doak, a political organizer credited with running successful gubernatorial campaigns for Charles Robb in Virginia and Mark White in Texas.

At that point, according to two advisers, Bumpers had definitely decided he had a solid chance of catching up with former Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Bumpers had told friends and advisers that he was in the race to stay.

But sometime in the last two weeks Bumpers decided he was not willing to sacrifice his personal life and eventually his seat in the Senate, said political sources.

Murderer's lawyers want conviction overturned

ATLANTA (AP) — Attorneys for Wayne B. Williams, found guilty of killing two young blacks during a series of slayings that shocked the nation, say pretrial publicity and dubious fiber evidence are among 33 reasons the conviction should be overturned.

Attorneys for the 24-year-old black man, now serving two consecutive life terms, filed a 255-page appeal brief Monday with the Georgia Supreme Court.

The state has 20 days to respond and the court then will schedule oral arguments.

Williams, a free-lance photographer and aspiring talent promoter, was convicted Feb. 27, 1982, of murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 29 young blacks whose slayings between June 1979 and May 1981 were investigated by a special police task force.

After the verdict, authorities announced they were closing their investigations into 22 of the other slayings because evidence in those cases was similar to that used to convict Williams of the Cater and Payne murders.

The investigations into the other five slayings, as well as one unsolved disappearance of a 10-year-old black boy, remain open.

Prosecution witnesses testified at the trial that textile fibers and hairs found on the bodies of Cater, Payne and 10 other victims were matched to carpets, bedspreads and other sources from Williams' home and cars.

Second condor egg beginning to hatch

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A second condor egg housed in an incubator at the San Diego Zoo has begun to hatch, and officials say the chick poked a fingertip-sized hole in its shell as it rocked back and forth to a tape of "mother vulture sounds."

Meanwhile, Sisquoc, the first of the rare birds hatched in captivity, was reported "eating like a little pig" Monday and steadily gaining strength and size at the San Diego Wild Animal Park.

The second chick began pecking through its light blue eggshell Monday, and the hatch was expected to be completed by later today or Wednesday, zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said.

"It (broke through) its shell earlier than anyone imagined," Jouett said. "You can see the beak poking now and then and the whole egg wiggles and rocks back and forth with the vulture tape."

Wolfpack slama jamas Cougars, 54-52

Lewis' coaching strategy criticized

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Just when Houston's Phi Slama Jama was ready to soar into orbit, it came crashing to earth.

After pounding Louisville with 13 dunks en route to a 94-81 victory in the NCAA semifinals, the Cougars' high-wire act snapped Monday night with only one dunk in a 54-52 last-second loss to North Carolina State in the title game.

And Houston Coach Guy Lewis, who had all but erased the stinging criticism that he could not win the big games, found himself once again haunted by coaching decisions that did not succeed in the title game. Four times now Lewis has been in the Final Four. Four times he has lost.

"It feels awful," Lewis said of the collapse. "I feel bad after every game we lose but this one, of course, has a special significance."

On behalf of the dunking fraternity, 6-foot-5 Benny Anders said he and his mates did their best.

"We were thinking dunk but we didn't dunk," he said. "I guess we were just trying to get the ball in the basket."

BUT THE ball went in the basket only 38 percent of the time from the field and poor foul shooting, the Achilles' heel the Cougars have had to run on all season, finally buckled. What had been called one of the best college teams of all time was left without a national title.

The crash was too great a disappointment for 7-foot center Akeem Olajuwon, who left the court abruptly, refusing to comment on his team's first loss in 27 games.

Olajuwon scored 20 points, had 18 rebounds and blocked seven shots to earn most valuable player honors. But he couldn't overcome Houston's 53 percent shooting percentage at the free throw line or the ineffectiveness of Phi Slama Jama.

Anders almost stole the ball from N.C. State guard Dereck Whittenburg in the final seconds in a desperate attempt to save the day for the Cougars.

Whittenburg managed to retreive the ball and put up a wide shot which forward Lorenzo Charles crashed home with a slam at the buzzer.

"I had told myself I would make him (Whittenburg) go to his left and as soon as he put it on the floor twice, I was going for it," Anders said. "I got a hand on the ball but he turned and put it up."

LEWIS HAS won 531 games in 27 seasons at Houston and was named last week as the Associated Press Coach of the Year.

Now, though, the old questions about Lewis' coaching decisions have surfaced again.

Why did he go to a passing game in the second half after Houston had staged a patented rally to take a 42-35 lead? The controlled tempo was supposed to be N.C. State's stategy but the Cougars took a page from the Wolfpack playbook.

"We went to that because I have a lot of confidence in that offense," Lewis said. "I felt we could pull it out and get some layups."

Lewis pointed to Houston's season-long weakness at the free throw line as the key to the loss. The Cougars hit only 61 percent from the line for the season.

"The whole thing came down to what has been said all year, that a couple of missed free throws would lose a game for us and that's what happened tonight," Lewis said. "If we had made some of those free throws, we would have won the game regardless of the passing game."

Lewis left forward Clyde Drexler in the game most of the first half, although Drexler drew his third foul with 12:21 to go in the half and picked up his fourth infraction with 2:47 to go.

Senior Larry Micheaux, a steadying force all season, watched his college career come to an end on the bench. He played only 18 minutes of the game and was replaced in the second half by seldom-used Bryan Williams.

"Larry wasn't playing very good," Lewis said.

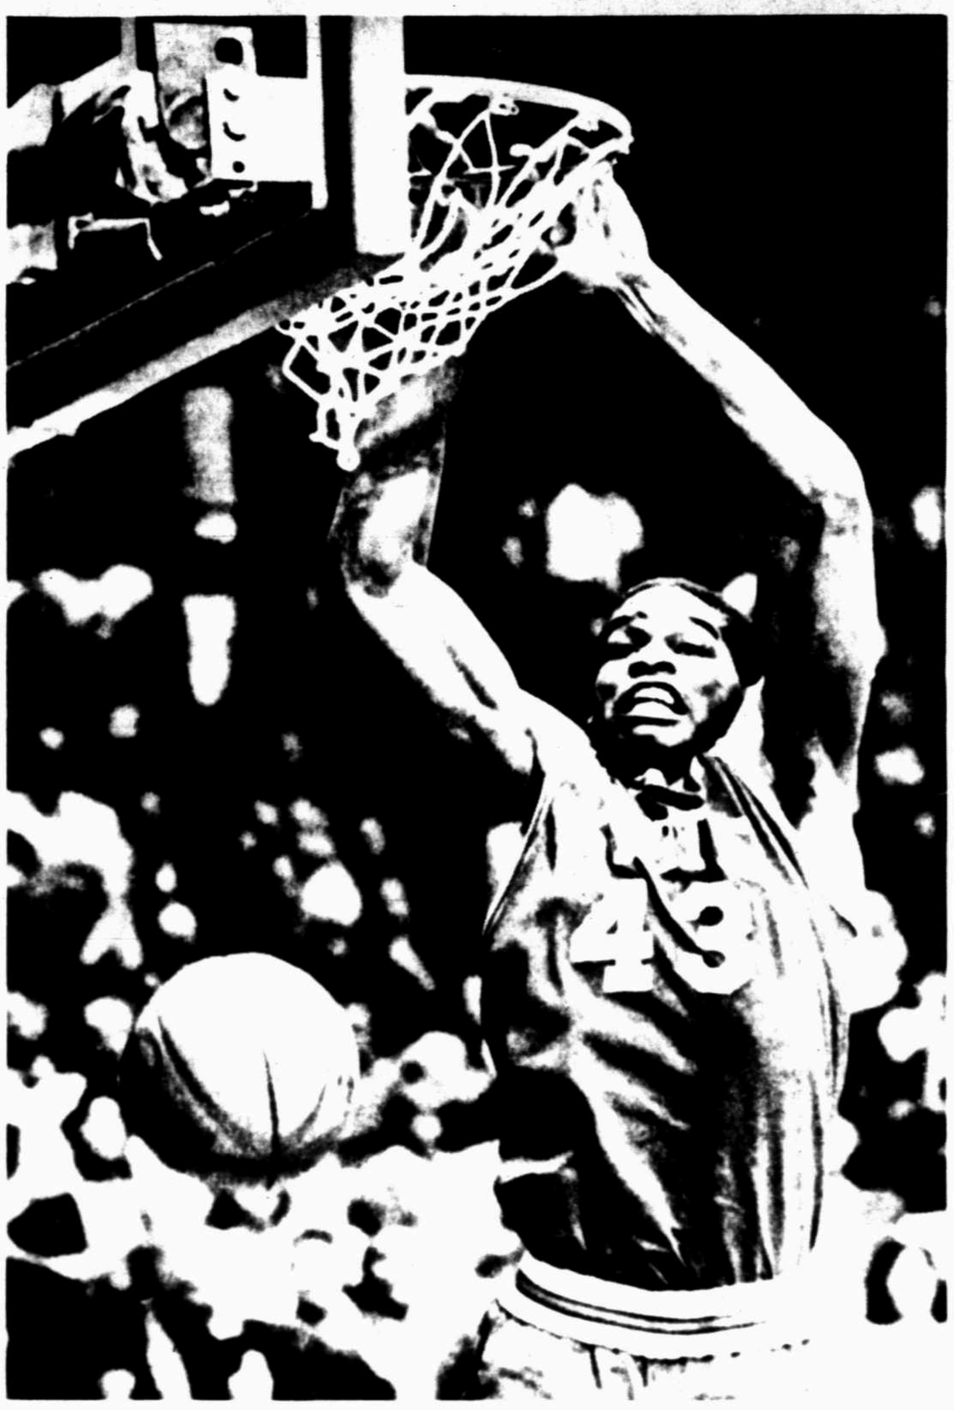

Micheaux questioned Lewis' decision to go to the passing game.

"I felt we should have kept playing the way we were," Micheaux said. "But there were a lot of things that cost us the game."

"It (passing game) surprised me," Anders said. "That's not our game."

Whittenburg also was scratching his head over the strategy.

"We were surprised when they went into their spread," Whittenburg said. "Olajuwon was on a roll. They were getting the ball inside to him and he was putting it in. When they went to the spread, we wanted to foul them and put pressure on them to make their foul shots."

North Carolina State's Lorenzon Charles stuffs through the decisive basket in the Wolfpack's upset victory over the Houston Courgars for the NCAA basketball title.

Foul shooting ends dream

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — North Carolina State's Heart Attack Wolfpack rule as college basketball's national champions today, unlikely winners of a crown that had been all but conceded to Houston's Phi Slama Jama skywalkers.

Beaten 54-52 in the NCAA finals Monday night, the men of the tallest fraternity in the land learned a couple of important facts of basketball life.

When you live by the dunk, sometimes you can die by the dunk, too. And you also can perish at the foul line, where soaring above the basket simply isn't allowed.

The irony of it all was that N.C. State did Houston in with a dunk by Lorenzo Chares at the final buzzer after Phi Slama Jama failed Elementary Basketball 101: Foul Shooting.

State was a longshot in this tournament after a mediocre 10-loss season. But Coach Jimmy Valvano, a street-smart New Yorker who took his wise-cracking act to tobacco country, sold his kids a dream and saw them deliver it against the top-ranked Cougars.

IT WAS not an easy victory, but little of what the Wolfpack did in the tournament was easy. Why should the title game have been any different?

So when Charles grabbed Dereck Whittenburg's last-gasp air-ball and stuffed it through the basket for State's winning points with one second remaining, it was almost routine for the Cardiac Pack.

"That's just the way it's designed on the blackboard," deadpanned Whittenburg, who in three years of playing under Valvano has learned to place his tongue in his cheek every bit as well as his coach.

"You think that's a freak play?" asked Valvano. "It's part of my Emergency Scoring Series, triple credenza play, unbalanced coach around left end."

It set off a wild celebration in the University of New Mexico's Pit, where State eliminated first Georgia and then Houston to capture the second NCAA title in the school's history.

It was a crown N.C. State almost didn't have a chance to win. They were the longest shots to win this tournament since 1966 when tiny Texas Western upset No. 1 Kentucky in the championship game.

THE WOLFPACK struggled through a mediocre season and was a so-so 17-10 going into the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. It was there that State beat North Carolina and Virginia on consecutive nights to win an automatic invitation to the NCAAs.

Then there were pulsating wins by two points in double overtime against Pepperdine, by one point over Nevada-Las Vegas and by two over Virginia again to reach the Final Four.

All the while, Valvano was selling a dream, telling his kids they were a team of destiny. And the Pack bought the idea.

"They get tired of me talking about dreaming," Valvano said. "But I've been dreaming about this for a long time, ever since I got into coaching."

All State had to do to make the dream come true was beat the No. 1 team in the country, a dunk-drunk squad riding the crest of 26 consecutive victories. Houston had put on a clinic destroying second-ranked Louisville in the semifinals and figured to destroy Valvano's dream.

But it didn't quite happen that way.

"OUR GOAL was not to give them a dunk, to make them beat us outside," Valvano said.

The Wolfpack scored the game's first three baskets and for the first 15 minutes, Phi Slama Jama did not manage a single stuff shot as State's dreamers charged into a lead on the fine inside work of 6-11 Thurl Bailey.

"We played great," said Valvano. "We were up 6-0 and it could have been 10-0."

Eventually, 7-foot Akeem Olajuwon soared over the rim for one of Phi Slama Jama's specialties with five minutes left in the half. It was to be the only dunk all night for the team that had stuffed 13 in the faces of Louisville's Cardinals just two days before. State's tenacious 2-3 zone defense controlled the area under the hoop.

At halftime, Bailey had 15 points, Houston's Clyde Drexler was tied to the bench with four personal fouls and the Wolfpack was sitting on a 33-25 lead, 20 minutes away from a national championship.

It turned out to be the longest 20 minutes of Valvano's life.

"I felt we were in a better position eight down to North Carolina State at the half than we were five down to Louisville at the half (in the semifinals)," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis. "I just had the feeling we hadn't played a lick. I felt if we go out and play at all, we win the game."

NORTH CAROLINA State came out ice cold in the second half and Houston went on a tear, outscoring the Wolfpack 17-2 over the first 9½ minutes. It was reminiscent of the 21-1 Cougar spurt that had buried Louisville on Saturday. The only difference was that Phi Slama Jama still wasn't stuffing. But the fraternity did have the lead, 42-35.

"We were stone cold," said Valvano.

It was beginning to look like the dream was over. Then, though, Houston helped revive it. The racehorse, run-and-gun Cougars, slowed to a walk. The slowdown that N.C. State was expected to play arrived from an unlikely source — Houston.

"We went to that because I have a lot of confidence in that offense," said Lewis. "I felt we could pull it out and get some layups."

Valvano admitted he was surprised to see it. Not sorry, you understand. Just surprised.

"They were on a roll and there was quite a bit of time left," he said. "It wasn't like there were four or five minutes. They hadn't exactly been lighting it up, either. Maybe they were trying to get us extended and further from the basket to get some layups."

THE PLOY did not work. Suddenly, State's perimeter game came to life. Whittenburg and Sidney Lowe, the backcourt partners who had played together for eight years through high school and college, began bombing from long range and hitting. They got help from Terry Gannon, another outside shooter, and slowly Houston's led melted away.

Olajuwon, the tournament's most valuable player and high scorer in the game with 20 points, tried to keep Houston in control but the Wolfpack kept coming. When the clock got inside five minutes, Valvano went to his last bit of strategy. He started sending Houston to the foul line.

They don't allow dunks from there and Houston has had problems with free throws all year, managing just 61 percent for the season. The shortcoming doomed the Cougars this time.

"We do not want someone else to decide the outcome of the game," explained Valvano. "We knew we had to get them to 1-and-1, so we had to foul. We don't care who we foul. If someone makes it, we don't foul him again. If we foul Drexler and he knocks in two, we don't foul Drexler again. If we foul (freshman Alvin) Franklin and he misses, we tackle him the next time."

DREXLER WAS the first candidate and he hit both of his free throws, extending Houston's lead to 52-46 with 3:19 to go. Valvano did not shop at his stand again, choosing instead to foul Michael Young, who had missed both of his free throws in the first half. Young obliged by missing again.

In the meantime, Whittenburg and Lowe were playing bombs away from the outside. First, Lowe hit a pair of 20-plus footers and then Whittenburg connected from the same territory. With 1:59 left, the Wolfpack had caught Houston, tying the score at 52.

Valvano's next customer at the foul line was Franklin, the freshman. When Whittenburg hacked him, he applauded himself, happy he had fouled the man he wanted to foul. Franklin missed his free throw and Cozell McQueen dragged down the rebound.

Now State could control its own destiny. The Pack called a timeout to plot the last shot.

"USUALLY IN that situation, we go with Dereck and Terry on each side and Sidney in the middle," said Valvano. "I tell him, 'Go to it. Nobody does it better.' But we got bent out of shape and didn't know how much time was left."

Drexler barely missed an interception but Whittenburg recovered the ball. With time running out, he launched a rainbow that never got near the basket. It didn't have to, though, because Charles was under the rim, waiting for it. And Olajuwon, who had 18 rebounds until then, was missing in action.

"He wasn't supposed to be that far from the basket," said Lewis.

Phi Slama Jama, indeed.

Rangers win opener

The Cincinnati Reds, the worst of the West in 1982, knocked off the Atlanta Braves, the division's best a year ago, 5-4 Monday in the National League's opener to the 1983 major league baseball season.

Eddie Milner's two-out single and stolen base and Dave Concepcion's single off reliever Steve Bedrosian broke a 4-4 tie in the bottom of the eighth inning. Winner Mario Soto allowed five hits and four runs — two earned — in eight innings. Tom Hume picked up the save.

The game in Cincinnati, the traditional opening-day site in the NL, drew 42,892 fans in superb baseball weather. It was the first time in 11 years at Riverfront Stadium that the Reds' opener has not been a sellout.

The Braves, who set a big-league record last year by winning their first 13 games, got a run in the first inning on Claudell Washington's sacrifice fly and two in the second on Chris Chambliss' homer.

The Reds got two back in the bottom of the second on Ron Oester's homer. Atlanta made it 4-2 in the sixth when Solo balked Glenn Hubbard home, and Cincinnati tied it in the bottom of the sixth on rookie Gary Redus' homer, Concepcion's walk and stolen base and Johnny Bench's single.

In Baltimore, Brett doubled and later scored in the first inning and homered in the third off Dennis Martinez. Aikens hit his homer in the sixth and Martin in the eighth. The Royals alsdo scored scored two unearned runs in the seventh following a two-out fielding error by shortstop Cal Ripken Jr.

Mike Richardt and Larry Parrish hit solo home runs to boost Texas to a 5-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox, a successful debut for Rangers Manager Doug Rader.

Richardt hit his homer off LaMarr Hoyt in the sixth inning and Parrish drilled a 400-foot shot into the center field stands in the seventh. John Butcher picked up the victory in relief of Texas starter Mike Smithson, who lasted six innings. The game attracted a paid crowd of only 13,140.

In Oakland, Andre Thornton hit a three-run homer on his first swing of the season and the Cleveland Indians gave their new manager, Mike Ferraro, an 8-5 victory, ruining Steve Boros' major-league managerial debut with the A's.

Wadkins captures Greensboro Open

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins, a five-shot winner in the Greensboro Open, turned his attention to Augusta, Ga. and the Masters.

"It would mean a lot to me to win there," he said Monday after he had compiled a 5-under-par 67 in the closing round and made the Greensboro title the 11th of his American PGA Tour career.

"It would mean a lot to my career to win at Augusta."

And, he suggested, that is not a completely far-fetched possibility.

"This was one of the finest putting days I've ever had," he said. "And, in the past, that has carried over for a couple of weeks.

"Mechanically, my swing is getting better. And, obviously, winning here and putting that well, the confidence factor is there."

Wadkins noted that he has not finished higher than seventh in the Masters, which begins Thursday on the Augusta National Golf Club course, but, he said, "looking at the course, it's one I think I should play well. I'm surprised I haven't played it better than I have.

"But the confidence is there now, and I'm playing better going in than I have in several years.

"I'd dearly love to win there. I'd like to win all the majors — the U.S. and British Opens, too — before I'm through. I'm not going to scare anybody's major-tournament total victories, but I'd like to win all the majors. And I think I can.

"You know, the money is fine and wonderful, but someday those trophies are going to be awful important to you, too."

Wadkins collected $72,000 from the total Greensboro purse of $400,000 and goes into the Masters as the No. 3 money-winner for the year with $136,773. He won this one, which was delayed a full day by rains that washed out Saturday's play, with a 275 total, 13 under par on the Forest Oaks Country Club course.

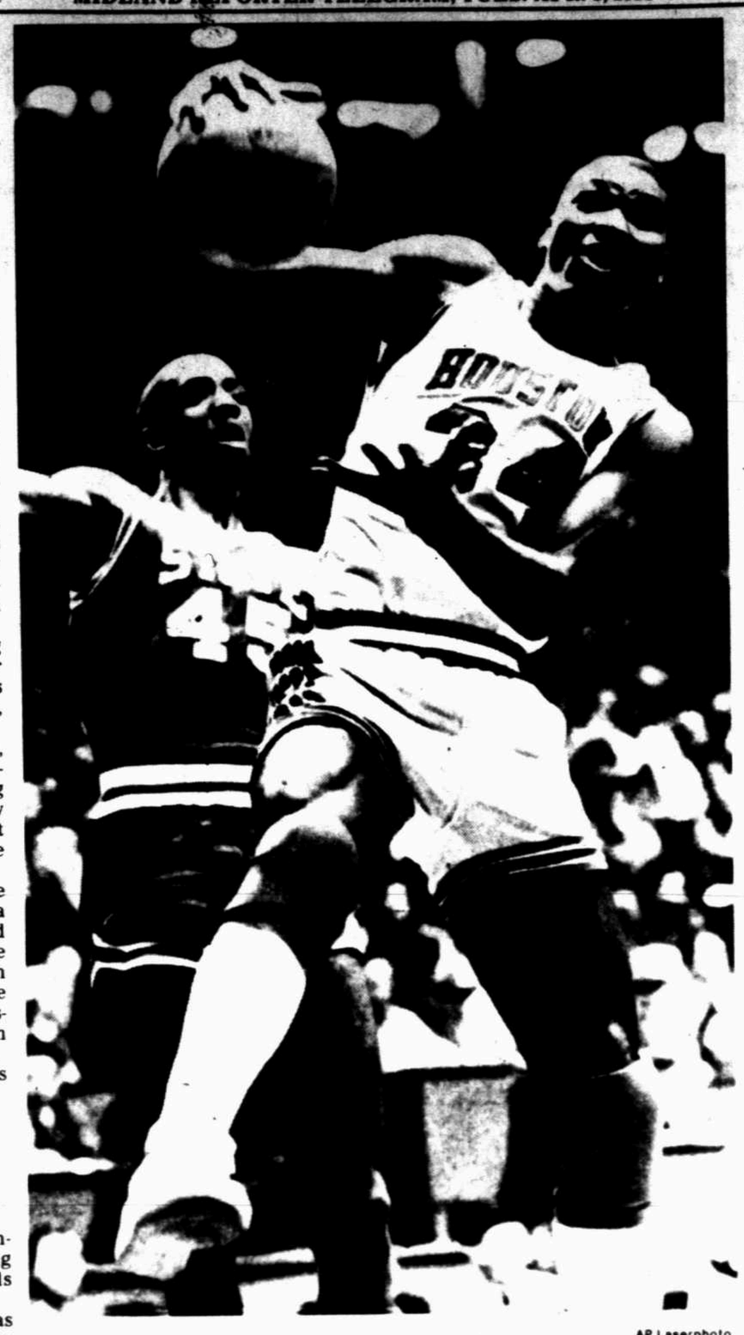

Craig Stadler, who will defend his Masters title in Augusta, and Denis Watson, a native of Rhodesia now living in South Africa, tied for second at 280. Each matched par 72 in the sunny-bathed last round.

Tommy Nakajima, the leading money-winner on the Japanese tour last year, was next at 71-281. He was followed by Bobby Clampett, 72-282, and Nick Faldo of England, 73-283.

Wadkins, who counts the PGA, World Series of Golf and Tournament Players Championship among his career triumphs, started the day in a tie with Stadler and Watson, but pulled ahead with a 12-foot birdie putt on the second hole.

He held the lead the rest of the way, went two shots in front with a 7-iron to four feet on the 10th and clinched it with a late burst of three consecutive birdies. He holed from the fringe, about 20-25 feet, on the 15th. He made it from the same distance on the next hole and then chipped in from 40 feet on the 17th.

"That's about as many long putts as I can remember holing," he said.

CBS best with Packer as coach

By The Associated Press

In its second year of televising the NCAA basketball tournament, CBS has learned that it can perform best by giving Billy Packer his head and let him coach the game for the fan at home.

He's often better than the coaches on the floor.

Packer was at his best Monday night in North Carolina State's last-second 54-52 championship game win over top-ranked Houston. He didn't just explain what happened after the fact, he anticipated — with an almost uncanny knack — the moves of Coaches Guy Lewis and Jim Valvano.

That was the highlight of an overall good job by CBS. Outshone by NBC during the regular college season, CBS improved dramatically in the tournament after a rather sluggish start characterized in the first week by a total inattention to what was going on elsewhere but in the particular game that was being televised.

Interestingly, the best may have come last, in the camera work that followed Lorenzo Charles' game-winning stuff. Seconds after the shot went through there was a shot of a Houston player, on his knees, crying and pounding the floor and producer Kevin O'Malley and his crew continued on, intercutting Cougar dejection into shots of Wolfpack celebration.

Still, Packer was the highlight Monday night. He understands that an analyst's job is to capture the ebb and flow of the game, putting individual moves and plays into the context of strategy yet to come.

For example, he noticed in the first five minutes Monday night how pervasively Houston's Alvin Franklin was sticking with Dereck Whittenburg, State's devastating outside shooter.

"They're going to have to set some picks for Whittenburg," Packer said. They rarely did and Whittenburg had a terrible shooting night until the end, when finally began to elude Franklin.

At the start of the second half, Packer suggested that the key would be momentum. And it was — the half was played in spurts. And in the final minute, Packer anticipated that the Wolfpack would foul Franklin, a freshman, who missed the foul shot that gave State the ball for its winning basket.

Packer's sidekick, Gary Bender, was improved over last year's amateurish and unprepared performance. He did his homework this year on teams and players and refrained from some of his sillier phraseology, like "young freshman."

The third member of the team, host Brent Musburger, was all too noticeable. As has been his tendency lately, he seems to think the more important an event, the higher the decibel count it merits. And he loves hackneyed phrases like "words do not describe the drama that has just unfolded."

But overall, if the coverage wasn't all it could be, it was capable, capped off by the fadeout to a musical montage of wonderful camera shots taken during the postseason tournament, starting with the earlier games and winding up with the extreme drama that ended it.

LCC's Velarde honored

LUBBOCK — Midland Lee graduate Randy Velarde was named Athlete of the Week in NAIA District 8 for his outstanding baseball performance while playing for Lubbock Christian College.

Velarde went 9-for-21 in games against Hardin Simmons and The University of Texas at El Paso including two doubles, four home runs and eight runs-batted-in. He is hitting .390 through 37 games this season.

Playing shortstop, Valarde handled 27 chances without committing an error to help the Chaparrals retain their No.2 national ranking.

As a senior at Lee, Velarde was District 4-5A's Most Valuable Player in 1981 and was named to the All-State squad.

As the leadoff hitter for LCC, Velarde has 10 homeruns, 40 RBI's and 55 basehits.

Bad news reaches shuttle crew

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — North Carolina State's victory over the Houston Cougars for the NCAA basketball championship was bad news to the Houston fans traveling in outer space.

The four astronauts aboard the space shuttle Challenger, all residents of the Houston area, were told of the 54-52 score early today by Dave Covey of Johnson Space Center in Houston.

"Houston, say again who won," mission commander Paul Weitz said from orbit.

"North Carolina State," Covey replied.

"That's the only bad news we've had all day," responded the astronaut.

Hu Na granted asylum

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chinese tennis player Hu Na says she is "happy and relieved" at finally winning asylum and starting a new life in the United States, but fearful for the safety of her parents in China.

The decision Monday to grant sanctuary to the 19-year-old defector after 8½ months of delay prompted an angry response from Chinese officials, who said the "grave incident" would harm political ties and sports and cultural exchanges with the United States.

Miss Hu, who learned from a telephone call Monday that she had been granted political asylum, "said she was very pleasantly surprised" according to her San Francisco lawyer, Edward C.Y. Lau.

"If my family in China can hear my words, I hope they know that I still love them and miss them dearly," said Miss Hu in a statement. "I hurt for my parents, brother, sister and grandfather, who have written to me.

Miss Hu is "gravely concerned about her family. She's quite surprised at the worldwide publicity she's gotten and she doesn't want to do anything more to aggravate the situation. She has real concerns that she doesn't want to discuss in public," said Lau.

Miss Hu has been staying with a private family. Her statement was released by Lau and her Washington lawyer, Terry Adamson.

"No one in China knew that I would take the action I felt I had to take last July, and I hope they can understand my personal agony in making such a choice to leave my homeland," she said.

She said she was "very happy and relieved" to learn of the U.S. decision and wanted "to thank the American people and the American government for letting me remain in this country."

Miss Hu has said she decided to defect after refusing to join the Communist Party and receiving a threatening letter from a high Chinese official.

In the statement Monday, she said she hoped her case would not hurt relations between the United States and China, and that "athletic ties between these two great nations can expand and lead to greater understanding and respect between our two peoples."

In Washington, the Chinese embassy said the U.S. decision was "a grave incident harming the relations between the two countries and will certainly affect bilateral exchanges ..."

"Hu Na is a tennis player who became such after years of education and loving care in China. She was sent abroad on many occasions for international matches and there simply does not exist any question of political persecution against her. The U.S. government has no grounds whatsoever to take this course of action."

Former wolf leads Seattle over Lakers

SEATTLE (AP) — Albuquerque, N.M., may be 1,200 miles from Seattle's Kingdome, but SuperSonic guard David Thompson made the round trip in mind if not in body.

North Carolina State's upset of Houston in the NCAA championship game "pumped me up a little bit," Thompson said after he went out and scored 31 points in Seattle's 121-111 NBA victory over the Los Angeles Lakers Monday night.

"I'm happy for them," Thompson said of the N.C. State players. "I know how they feel. They must be on cloud nine."

As a junior in 1974, Thompson led N.C. State past UCLA in double overtime and then beat Marquette to win the national title.

Thompson hit eight of nine shots in the first half Monday as the Sonics built a 20-point halftime lead. Los Angeles got no closer than eight in the second half.

It was the only NBA game of the night.

"I hadn't played well in any of the previous games against Los Angeles," said Thompson, who averaged just 10 points in four straight losses.

The Sonics had dropped seven straight to Los Angeles, including the past three in Seattle.

"We finally beat them," Thompson said. "When they made their run at us in the second half, we were able to execute."

Baseball begins in earnest tonight

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Tom Lasorda, who claims he "bleeds Dodger blue," did considerable bleeding in spring training with a Los Angeles team that finished six games under .500 and averaged almost two errors a game.

But Tom Lasorda is, well, Tom Lasorda; ever the optimist.

"Your exhibition record has no bearing whatsoever once the season starts," said Lasorda, who sent left-handed ace Fernando Valenzuela against the Houston Astros in a National League opener tonight. "Starting Tuesday, I don't think anyone will remember or care what we did (in the spring.)"

The contest is one of five National League openers, following the traditional game in Cincinnati Monday where the Reds beat the Atlanta Braves 5-4.

Along with Dodger-Astro game, Pittsburgh was at St. Louis, Philadelphia visited New York, Montreal was at Chicago and San Diego played at San Francisco.

After three American League games Monday, the rest of the teams got into action with Toronto at Boston, Detroit at Minnesota, Chicago at Texas, New York at Seattle and Milwaukee at California.

Lasorda expects a better performance from the Dodgers than their 11-17 record and butter-fingered defensive play this past spring. The team is making some adjustments after losing half their infield, first baseman Steve Garvey and third baseman Ron Cey.

Valenzuela, 19-12 last season, will oppose Houston's Joe Niekro, 17-12.

The Astros, meanwhile, seem to be hurting even more — literally. Along with pitching star Nolan Ryan, out with an inflamed prostate gland, the Astros have eight on players battling injuries.

AP Laserphoto

Tom Seaver test a pulled leg muscle by throwing some pitches.

Houston Manager Bob Lillis said he won't forget the just-concluded spring training that was troubled not only by injuries, but bad weather. The Astros wound up with one of their worst spring training records in history, 3-16.

"This experience is something on which all of us can build," Lillis said. "I realize it's been tough on our fans, but it's been tough on the players, too. And when we get off to a winning start, we can all look back on the spring and say, 'We waded through the misfortune. We proved we could handle adversity.' "

The Cardinals, defending world champions, have some injury problems, too, as they start the season. Centerfielder Willie McGee, the club's top rookie in 1982, and second baseman Tommy Herr both were out of the lineup with injuries.

The 24-year-old McGee, following an examination by team physician Dr. Stan London, was placed on the NL's 15-day disabled list. McGee, who hit .296 last season, suffered a slight shoulder separation during a squad game in Florida last week. Herr has undergone arthroscopic surgery on an injured left knee and the Cardinals are awaiting the results.

David Green will be McGee's replacement in center field and utility infielder Mike Ramsey will fill in for Herr at second.

By way of contrast with the condition of the St. Louis club, Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said the Pirates — with the exception of disabled right-hander Don Robinson — are healthier than at the start of 1982.

Left-hander John Candelaria, who a year ago recorded a 12-7 record while battling back from an arm injury the season before, will pitch for the Pirates. His opponent will be right-hander Bob Forsch, 15-9, the ace of the Cardinals' staff.

Pete Rose was scheduled to start in right field for the Phillies — the first time he's played the outfield since he was with Cincinnati in 1975. That development happened because of an injury to Von Hayes, whom the Phillies acquired from Cleveland in an off-season trade.

The Twins open their season with renewed confidence, following their best spring training in history, thanks to some fine performances by Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti.

This spring Ward tore up the Grapefruit League, batting .384 with 8 home runs, 33 hits and 31 RBI. The 33 hits is a Twins' record, surpassing the 1977 total of 31 set by Rod Carew.

Gaetti had 31 hits to go with his .378 average, a club record 10 spring training home runs and 25 RBI. Both Ward and Gaetti passed Harmon Killebrew's record of 21 RBI, while Gaetti suprassed his homer total of 9. Both also beat Killebrew's total base record of 52.

Cougar fans react to last-second loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Cougars fans will welcome home their fallen warriors this afternoon with a rally.

The forecast called for rain.

And rain would only be fitting for the non-celebration of the Cougars' 54-52 loss to North Carolina State in the NCAA's basketball championship.

Despite the loss, thousands who gathered around TV screens in bars and other public places Monday night and saw the Wolfpack hand Houston its first loss since Dec. 16 were not convinced State was a better team.

"It was just a fluke," said one student who did not identify himself. "The rest of the nation knows that Houston is still No. 1. It was just a strange circumstance that North Carolina (State) beat U. of H."

Lorenzo Charles picked off Dereck Whittenburg's air ball a foot short of the basket and slammed it through with two seconds left in the game.

"Of all the rebounds not to get," moaned Dennis Burt, a bartender watching the game at Grif's Shillelagh Inn. The muscular Cougars, 31-3 after the defeat, owned the boards against most of their opponents this season and outrebounded N.C. State 44-34.

At Grif's, which caters to sports fans, about 500 people huddled around four television sets.

"I really think the University of Houston has a better ball club than N.C. State," Burt said. "I'd like to play 'em 10 times and see what the result was."

Disappointment hung heavy after the game. On campus, outside a TV room where about 300 people gathered, the price of T-shirts that said "Cougars — National Champions" fell from $5 to $2 with Charles' shot.

The mood at Grif's dropped similarly.

"Everybody's down. It's like a morgue in here," said one patron, Doug Murray.

Burt acknowledged that N.C. State "played real well tonight, as much as I hate to admit it."

The Cougars, ranked best in the nation before the game, last lost to another Atlantic Coast Conference team, Virginia. N.C. State, ranked 16th before the game, ended the year 26-10.

The post-game analysis started immediately at Grif's, where Burt said he believed Houston erred with a surprise stall midway through the second half.

"I thought they shut it down too early," he said.

The run-and-gun Cougars went into their version of the four-corners offense after running off a 17-2 spurt against N.C. State to take a 42-35 lead.

But Murray said he thought "the key to the whole ballgame was (forward Clyde) Drexler being in foul trouble."

WASHINGTON — Former Arizona State University football Coach Frank Kush and two others must defend themselves against charges they violated the rights of a former player at the school, the Supreme Court ruled Monday. The court, in a 9-0 decision, cleared the way for a trial against Kush, now head coagh of the Baltimore Colts of the NFL, former athletic director Fred Miller and former assistant coach Gary Horton in a suit brought by Kevin Rutledge. The charges in the pending suit are that Kush and the others conspired to intimidate witnesses from testifying in Rutledge's behalf in the case...

NEW YORK — Chet Simmons, commissioner of the USFL , said he has told George Allen, president and coach of the Chicago Blitz, that he will be fined if he makes any more statements critical of USFL operations. On March 28, the day after Chicago drew only 10,936 fans for a 20-14 victory over Los Angeles, Allen said the USFL should not be considering expansion now. He also said that he felt there were franchises which didn't belong in the league and would fail...

Tennis

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — Carling Bassett, a 15-year-old Canadian, upended Rosalyn Fairbank, 6-4, 6-3, to highlight action in the first round of the $200,000 Family Circle Cup women's tennis tournament. Other winners included Zina Garrison, Bonnie Gadusek, Andrea Temesvari, Claudia Kohde, Evonne Goolagong, and Kerry Melville Reid.

HOUSTON — Australian Paul McNamee upset third-seeded Kevin Curren of South Africa 6-4, 6-2 at the WCT River Oaks International Tennis Tournament. Other opening-round winners included Americans Steve Denton and Tom Cain, Leo Palin of Finland, Ramesh Krishnan of India, and Peter Elter of West Germany.

Basketball

NEW YORK — Ralph Sampson, the 7-foot-4 center from Virginia, was a unanimous choice for the third year in a row to the All-America team selected by the NBA 23 coaches. The only other senior on the team, selected without regard to position, was forward Dale Ellis of Tennessee, who received 13 votes. Three sophomores completed the team: guard Michael Jordan of North Carolina, forward Keith Lee of Memphis State and center Patriek Ewing of Georgetown.

NEW YORK — Boston's Larry Bird, who set a team record for a regular season game by scoring 53 points in one game, has been named NBA Player of the Week. Bird averaged 31.3 points, 9.8 rebounds and 7.3 assists per game last week, shooting .641 from the field...

Hockey

MONTREAL — Center Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers scored three goals and added seven assists in the team's final three games of the 1982-83 season to edge goalie Murray Bannerman of the Chicago Black Hawks as NHL Player-of-the-Week for the period. In addition, Gretzky established an NHL record with 125 assists, breaking the record of 120 he set last season...

Knapple strikes Gold

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Denver's play of the week turned out to be the play of the game.

"Everything went right," reserve quarterback Jeff Knapple said after he scampered for two points on a fake kick conversion attempt to help the Denver Gold defeat the Michigan Panthers 29-21 in a USFL game Monday night.

Knapple's 7-yard jaunt up the middle with just 2:42 left in the game gave the Gold a 22-21 lead and deflated the Panthers, who had pulled ahead 21-14 on the strength of two 1-yard touchdown runs by quarterback Bobby Hebert and a 36-yard TD pass from Hebert to wide receiver Derek Holloway.

"It was THE play for this week," explained Gold Coach Red Miller. "It's a play we built on the way the defense lines up.

"It was a very heartbreaking game for me and I'm sure for the players," Michigan Coach Jim Stanley said. "We had our chances to win the game."

Regulate the telephone monopoly. And Let Freedom Ring.

Today many Texans have the freedom to choose between the existing telephone monopoly and dependable, less expensive long distance service.

But, today this freedom of choice is threatened.

In Texas the telephone monopoly controls over 95% of all long distance service. And they're not satisfied. If they have their way in the Texas Senate this week, the telephone monopoly will force the smaller companies out of business completely.

We must speak out now if we want to keep the telephone monopoly from once again being the only phone company in Texas. Real competition gives us the freedom to choose and the right to demand better service and lower rates.

Join Let Freedom Ring now. Send a message today that Texans deserve this freedom of choice.

Here's how you can help freedom ring:

1. Call your State Senator today. The Senate will vote on this critical issue on Wednesday, April 6. Let him know you support continued regulation of the telephone monopoly. If you cannot speak to him personally, please make sure the message is passed on to him.*

2. Sign and mail the endorsement below. We'll make sure it gets to your legislator as soon as possible.

Please act now. Your freedom of choice will be decided in the Texas Senate on Wednesday, April 6. Let Freedom Ring.

CPI could be flawed, investigators say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Price Index, the nation's key inflation measure, risks being flawed because the government does not have an adequate program to double-check the data, congressional investigators say.

"Because the CPI has such a far-reaching impact, accuracy of the data behind it is vital," the General Accounting Office said in a newly released report.

As a result, the report recommends that Congress provide the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which puts out the index, with enough money to set up an effective quality control program.

"Although (the General Accounting Office) found no evidence that the reliability of the national CPI has been compromised by 'bad' data, it did identify shortcomings in BLS' control mechanisms that could permit quality problems to go undetected or uncorrected," said the report.

The report said the government "knows its controls over CPI data quality are inadequate."

It noted that the Labor Department, of which the Bureau of Labor Statistics is a part, had been turned down last year in its request for money to design a quality control system.

But President Reagan, in his proposed budget for fiscal 1984, requested $200,000 for the system. Congress has not yet approved the budget.

"(The) GAO thinks the Congress should approve the BLS' request. Given the significant uses of the CPI, reasonable steps need to be taken to ensure its reliability. BLS' plan to design a quality control system is a reasonable first step," the report said.

It cautioned that neither the investigators nor the bureau know "what level of error it would take to cast a pall of unreliability on the national CPI figure."

The Labor Department, in responding to the report, emphasized that it maintains "multiple, built-in controls to ensure accuracy in compilation and publication" of the index.

"What is lacking is a formal quality control system that is both comprehensive and statistically based. ... The implication that no control system at all exists is clearly erroneous," it said.

The response also said the bureau has set up a task force to look at its quality controls.

The monthly Consumer Price Index is widely used in government to provide cost-of-living adjustments to recipients of aid programs, including Social Security and food stamps. Private industry uses it similarly for workers covered by collective bargaining agreements.

To underscore the impact the measure has on the federal budget, the GAO report said that in 1981 it was estimated a 1 percent increase in the index could boost annual outlays by about $2 billion in benefit programs that provide an inflation adjustment.

Until the statistical agency gets money for a formal control program, the report identified several ways in which it could bolster its quality checks.

For example, the report said supervisors don't always make surprise checks on data collectors to assess the price information they've compiled. Sometimes, the report said, the collectors know when they'll be watched.

In addition to the national price index, the government publishes price information for four regions and 28 cities. The report expressed concern that data at the local level had been hurt by inadequate quality controls.

The investigators looked at the way the price information is collected, how checks are made to determine the accuracy of the information, and the way the data is punched onto a computer tape.

They didn't check the way the bureau picks which goods and services are going to be priced for the index or the way it actually calculates the final measure.

The review was made at the bureau's headquarters in Washington and the Atlanta and Philadelphia regional offices.

There will be many cars to chose from

DETROIT (AP) — Once spring new-car introductions are over, major domestic automakers will have 296 models for customers in the 1983 model year, the third-largest model count in the past eight years, according to an industry journal.

Automotive News said Monday the 296 total follows 1975's 325-model offering and 1982's 307.

In a separate story, the periodical said $15,900 sticker prices have been set for the Bertone X 1-9 and the Pininfarina Spider 2000, which will be sold in the United States by International Automobile Importers Inc.

The cars had been sold by Fiat Motors of North America which priced them at $10,990 for the X 1-9 and $12,290 for the Spider 2000. Fiat announced in January it no longer would market the models in the United States.

Malcolm Bricklin, chairman of the new car importer company, told Automotive News the cars now will be "loaded" — with all-leather interiors, special wheels and paint. They will be 1984 models.

He said his company has been signing up distributors the past few months.

White, oilmen, legislators going behind closed doors

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White plans to meet tonight with legislative leaders and oil and gas industry spokesman over proposed oil and gas tax increases that would benefit some state colleges.

The closed door meetings had been set for Monday night but a spokesman for the governor said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was snowbound in Colorado while on an Easter holidays skiing trip.

White said last Friday he was "reviewing" his stand on new and increased taxes and would make a decision after the talks which involve a proposal by Hobby.

The legislative leaders invited to attend include Hobby, House Speaker Gib Lewis, Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin. Parker and Mrs. Delco have introduced measures for a special fund to finance college construction in state schools outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M University systems.

Oil and gas industry representatives invited to talk with the governor include spokesmen for the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, North Texas Oil and Gas Association, Panhandle Producers and Royalty Owners Association, and West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association.

Several representatives of major oil companies also were invited.

Hobby's plan, if approved by the Legislature and then voters, would increase the 4.6 percent oil production tax and the 7.5 percent natural gas tax by one percent each to set up the special fund.

Midland oilmen hit big in Arizona

BY LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

A Midland oilman may have tapped into the biggest oil play in Arizona which is not on Indian land.

Initial findings from the Dowling Petroleum State Number 1-A, 10 miles south of Yuma, are causing excitement at Dowling Petroleum. President Paul Dowling said a first look at the 5,000-foot well indicates hydrocarbon shows in a 1,600 foot interval, from 25 different Miocene and Pliocene sands.

Wells in the Permian Basin area of West Texas often produce from deeper geologic zones and from shallower intervals of around 50 feet.

If the find is as prolific as Dowling believes it to be, it would be the first commercial well in Arizona outside the Navajo Indian Reservation in the northeastern part of the state, said A.K. Doss, executive director of Arizona's Oil and Gas Conservation Commission.

"There could be millions of barrels of oil and trillions of cubic feet of gas," depending on tests results, Dowling said. "That would be classified as a major find."

The company has set 4 1/2 inch production casing and is presently evaluating logs and preparing to do production tests in the near future. It should be about two weeks before Dowling knows for sure what he has.

The well is in the Altar Basin in southwestern Arizona. The basin, which straddles the U.S.-Mexican border, has been compared by Arizona geological experts to the Los Angeles Basin in age and type of deposits.

The first discovery proving the basin commercially viable was made in 1981 by Pemex, the Mexican national oil company. That well, about 10 miles south of the Dowling well, potentialed at 6.5 million cubic feet of gas and condensate.

Joeseph Faull, the consulting geologist in Arizona who worked for the Pemex, also did the geology work for Dowling.

Dowling's 5,000-foot wildcat well was spudded March 7. A first test well begun in February was abandoned March 7 when the drill collars and bit became stuck in the hole. The rig was skidded over and the new hole started that same day.

"Geologic literature has postulated that the Los Angeles Basin and the Altar Basin were once together, and that the San Andreas Fault separated them," said Dowling's geologist Don Corrick Monday.

"We think it (the test well) has tremendous potential. The Los Angeles Basin has been tremendous and that's why we're so excited."

The State No. 1-A is the company's only drilling venture in Arizona so far, but Dowling is working geology in other areas of the state, Corrick added.

The privately-held Midland has activity in Texas, New Mexico, and Kansas, and has worked plays in Florida and Michigan.

"We generally work large plays of the wildcat variety," Corrick said. "We have several frontier plays and some conventional, close-in ones."

Tony A. Martin

Martin named to bank board

Terry M. O'Donnell, chairman of the First City National Bank of El Paso, has announced the recent election of Tony A. Martin as advisory director to the bank's board of directors.

Martin, chairman of First City National Bank of Midland (formerly Midland National Bank), joined First City in 1967, with previous experience in insurance and mortgage banking.

Martin graduated from Amarillo College, in the same town where he grew up. Martin has served Midland in the past by presiding over United Way of Midland, being vice president of the Midland Industrial Foundation, and serving as treasurer, member of the executive committee, and on the board of directors for the Texas Research League.

First City National Bank of Midland and First City National Bank of El Paso are members of First City Bancorporation of Texas, a 61-member statewide bank holding company with assets of $16.6 billion.

SII packs cargo-sized golden parachute

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — The so-called golden parachute executive protection package announced by Smith International Inc. late last week is believed to be the broadest ever adopted by a major California company and one of the broadest in U.S. corporate history, authorities on corporate compensation say.

Under Smith's executive-severance plan, 31 "designated key" executives of the Newport Beach-based energy services company would be entitled to certain benefits if they were to lose their jobs within two years of a "change in control" in the ownership of the company's stock.

According to a number of researchers who have studied such compensation plans, this is an unusually large number of executives to be protected by a golden parachute.

"Thirty-one is a very high number," said Richard Lambert, co-author of a Northwestern University study done last year that examined the golden parachute plans of 70 U.S. companies.

That Smith would include so many executives — including some in middle management — in its golden parachute plan prompted one New York City investment banker who asked not to be identified to call the arrangement "repugnant" and to ask, "How is this going to help the shareholders?"

But Smith strongly defended the arrangement, saying it was necessary to ensure management stability at a time when the company was being talked about on Wall Street as a prime takeover target. Smith's stock is depressed and the company recently thwarted a bid by Los Angeles-based Whittaker Corp. to buy a controlling interest in the company.

Whittaker, Smith's largest shareholder, with a stake of 8.3 percent, has put Smith on notice that it will oppose a bid by Smith to reincorporate in Delaware and to allow directors to be elected on a staggered basis — tactics designed to insulate the company from a hostile takeover.

In a proxy recently mailed to shareholders, Smith said that Whittaker apparently would oppose the bid because it "believes (that) there will be decreased institutional interest in the company" and that the deal would hurt "the liquidity, as well as the price potential, of Whittaker's holdings."

Golden parachutes are executive perquisites that have ballooned in popularity because of the takeover and acquisition fever that has affected hundreds of U.S. corporations in the last few years.

Many corporate officials, apprehensive that their companies might be taken over, have adopted compensation programs that would take effect if the executives were let go after control of the company had changed hands.

One recent survey, done by the New York-based executive search firm of Ward Howell International, estimates that 100 of America's largest companies now have such plans.

Smith's package is especially noteworthy because it is so broad-based, affecting employees down through the ranks of middle management.

Most golden parachute plans affect fewer than 10 executives, regardless of company size, compensation studies by Northwestern and others show. For example, Hughes Tool Co., a Smith competitor, recently adopted a golden parachute program similar to Smith's, but the Hughes plan affects only the company's top four officers.

"When you get above 15, the question is whether they are key or not," observed Abe Nad, owner of Directorship, a Weston, Conn., newsletter that recently surveyed companies about their golden parachute programs.

The severance package, approved by Smith's board last July, was disclosed in its 1983 proxy statement sent to shareholders in advance of the annual meeting scheduled for May 19. The package does not require shareholders' approval.

In recent months, Smith has been struggling to cut costs to cope with the slump that has settled over the nation's domestic drilling industry. It has laid off more than 6,000 workers, about 45 percent its work force, and it closed a drill bit plant in San Bernardino, Calif., last month.

Smith officials said that the plan covered so many people because they wanted to be fair to all employees that the company considers key. "We're taking the same pie and cutting down through middle management," said Raymond Schuler, Smith's general counsel.

However, perhaps indicating the company's sensitivity to the way the program may be viewed by employees, shareholders and the general public, a company spokesman said, "Sometimes, these programs are misconstrued; it can appear the executives are feathering their own nest, but that's not the case."

Investors try to make loser winner

By TheLos Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A group of private investors believes it can make a go of Los Angeles-based McCulloch Corp., even though Black & Decker Manufacturing Corp., which owned the company the last 10 years, gave up and put the money-losing chain-saw maker up for sale last fall.

Sale of the company in a so-called leveraged buyout to 13 individuals, headed by McCulloch President Donald V. Marchese, was completed late last week for undisclosed terms. (In a leveraged buyout, the investors borrow against a company's assets to finance their purchase of the company.)

Towson, Md.-based Black & Decker had said that the unit posted an after-tax loss of $26 million in the fiscal year ended last Sept. 26, as the market for gasoline-powered chain saws slumped. Its sales are estimated at more than $100 million annually.

Black & Decker's ownership of McCulloch began in controversy, after the Department of Justice challenged the acquisition in 1973 as anti-competitive. Black & Decker had another chain-saw maker among its subsidiaries. Th department challenge was later settled.

McCulloch was founded by the late Los Angeles entrepreneur Robert P. McCulloch, whose many interests included the development of a lightweight portable chain saw for consumer use. Black & Decker bought him out for 550,000 shares of Black & Decker common stock, then worth approximately $66.3 million.

Marchese, whose 13-member investor group also includes six other McCulloch employees, is optimistic about the future of the company, despite Black & Decker's decision to give up.

"We're anxious about this business. We think it has a great opportunity for the future. McCulloch has a personality that will continue in the marketplace," he said.

Marchese believes there are a number of reasons why McCulloch will prosper under private ownership. One factor is the single focus of the operation, he said. Unlike Black & Decker, a diversified maker of tools, McCulloch management will not divide its energy among a number of other businesses.

Except for some minor restructuring, the company will not change, he said.

"McCulloch will continue to market and manufacture gasoline engine products on a world-wide basis with an emphasis on product quality, safety and the needs of the market," Marchese said.

He said the primary change under the new ownership would be to control costs. It is premature to talk about employee layoffs, he said, but he added that the restructuring "will cause us to reconsider our needs."

The company's principal manufacturing facility is at Lake Havasu, Ariz. It employs 800 workers at the Arizona site and another 200 in Los Angeles.

Marchese said a principal reason the new ownership believes that the company can be saved is the recognizable name identity of its products. He cited a recent marketing study that showed McCulloch chain saws to be the No. 1 brand in the field.

An improvement in the national economy should help sales generally, he said.

Black & Decker and McCulloch spokesmen both refused to disclose terms of the sale.

"We're not trying to be cute," said Louise Hoblitzell, vice president of corporate communications at Black & Decker. "The sale is complete, but there are audits going on, and until they are complete, we'd rather not disclose the terms."

Extortion admitted

HOUSTON (AP) — An unemployed Texas City man has admitted he wrote Amoco Oil Co. officials threatening workers and property at a refinery in his hometown, saying a contractor was hiring illegal aliens in preference to local residents.

Robert Lee Hambrick, 25, pleaded guilty to extortion Monday. He agreed to a plea bargain arrangement in exchange for the government's recommendation that he be sentenced to no more than a year in prison.

The charge carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor, calling the case unusual and noting that Hambrick was apparently under stress when he made the threats in a letter, released him on a personal recognizance bond and set sentencing for May 4.

The letter accused Brown & Root Inc., contractors of a $1 billion modernization project at the Amoco refinery, of hiring illegal aliens instead of local residents.

Dollar slumps; Gold up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar slumped against most key currencies, including the shaky British pound, in listless trading early today when Europe's money markets opened after a four-day Easter holiday. Gold prices rose.

Foreign exchange dealers reported markets stalled as U.S. interest rates remained static and the eight currencies of the European Monetary System settled down after a March 21 realignment.

The dollar lost ground Monday in trendless trading in Japan and the United States. European markets were closed Friday and Monday.

Most dealers agreed that the British pound, badly jolted in recent weeks by a burgeoning dollar and uncertainty about North Sea oil prices, was heading higher.

Sterling was pegged at $1.4930 today, nearly 1½ cents up from Thursday, when it cost $1.47925 to buy one pound.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar closed at 238.60 yen, slightly down from Monday's late rate of 239.45 yen.

Other European rates compared to Thursday's late levels:

7.2475 French francs, down from 7.2725.

2.4145 German marks, down from 2.4250.

2.0662 Swiss francs, down from 2.0827.

1,438.50 Italian lire, down from 1,444.80.

2.7230 Dutch guilders, down from 2.7323.

1.23145 Canadian dollars, slightly down from 1.23325.

Midlanders find dust made itself at home

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

While many people spent the weekend shaking off Friday's fierce windstorm, one Midland couple returned from vacation Saturday to find an unsettling sight — a heaping helping of West Texas dirt that barged into their house and made itself at home.

Meanwhile, Texas Electric Service Company crews busied themselves making final repairs on some of the estimated 150 service calls they made after Friday's blast. Some apartment managers and store owners were either picking glass out of their merchandise or facing the prospect of sifting silt from swimming pools.

Genie and Don McCartney, 4716 W. Storey Ave., drove in from Dallas Saturday afternoon to discover that Friday's wild winds — which reached a peak gust of 76 mph — busted open their locked back door and ushered in the dust.

Mrs. McCartney said Monday that dust also poured through a hole in the roof, which had been covered temporarily before an air conditioning unit was installed.

"You know how it is when the windows are closed and the dust gets in," she said. "Can you imagine what it was like with the door open? I promise, there were 2 inches of dirt everywhere in the house."

Mrs. McCartney, who is allergic to dust, said the fine dirt drifted throughout the house, filling crystal stemware, clogging appliances and burnishing what had been light pink carpet.

> "I've still got more cleaning to do. If I could have gotten a bulldozer, if I could have gotten heavy equipment, I would have. I don't think we'll ever get it out."

"I like brown carpet all right. It's just that I picked out pink," said Mrs. McCartney, who, along with her family, devoted four hours Saturday to cleaning the mess. "I've still got more cleaning to do. If I could have gotten a bulldozer, if I could have gotten heavy equipment, I would have. I don't think we'll ever get it out."

Mrs. McCartney said the dirt was so thick, her husband suggested they leave a layer of topsoil on the kitchen floor and recoup their losses by growing cash crops.

"Maybe the money from the vegetable garden will go to offset the carpet cleaning costs," she said.

Dave Dorchester, a TESCO spokesman, said Friday's storm triggered a flurry of about 150 "trouble tickets," or repair orders, for company maintenance crews.

"In the Midland area, we finally had a total of, I believe, seven poles broken off. We had literally dozens of services broken to individual residences — and maybe service to three or four residences around them — from having wires cut by flying tin and debris."

Dorchester said about 25 customers in Westview Addition lost power for about three hours in the worst of the outages.

"So it (Friday) was a fairly active day," he said. "A lot of times, with that much wind and that sustained, you get a lot more damage."

Pryor Shoe Store, which had its windows punctured and shoes scattered by the winds Friday morning, was open for business that afternoon, according to Ava Leefultz, a store employee.

"We just kind of cleaned it out the best we could and told the people to come on in," she said. "We had as good a day as usual."

The Quail Hollow apartment complex, 3001 N. Midland Drive, and the Cabana Motor Inn, 712 W. Michigan Avenue, both lost fences to the whipping wind.

Sylvia Finch, Quail Hollow manager, said the gale also spirited away a small swing set and sullied the swimming pool.

"Our pool is yucky, and we have a lot of cleaning to do," she said.

Terry Bryant, maintenance construction supervisor for the Texas Highway Department in Midland, said the winds crumpled several signs — including three large signs along Interstate 20 — but no damage estimate is yet available.

Bryant said many highway signs are made to break away on impact, making some wind damage inevitable. But "this one is a little worse than usual," he said.

Wind's force

A stockade fence at Quail Hollow apartments, 3001 N. Midland Drive, was only part of the destruction caused by Friday's severe windstorm.

The wind also felled four Faxon Yucca cacti, part of the landscaping at the highway department complex on the north service road of I-20, about a half mile east of Loop 250.

Bryant said they planned to replant the six-foot tall Yuccas Monday, but something — or someone — other than strong winds carried the plants off during the weekend.

"I thought that was pretty low," Bryant said.

Church members help those less fortunate than they

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

MEXICO — Within the outstretched arms of persons in need, a man can sometimes discover his own spirituality.

The arms may be dust-caked, beaded with sweat, bent or broken. They may be of a different color, national origin, ideology, and may speak of the fears and hopelessness shaped by hard journeys through life.

The furrowed, leathery faces looming beyond may be those of strangers, yet their hearts beat with the same yearnings for meaning as those of any other person who has walked an often cold world.

For a man to take those outstretched arms in love is to reach into the wellsprings of self.

Just ask Charlie Elliott or any of 100 other persons from First Baptist Church who last week shared their faith and ministered to the physical needs of those less fortunate than they within four primitive villages in Mexico.

Only a mountain-sentineled river separates San Vicente, Zacatonal, Piedras and La Union from Big Bend National Park and the United States, but in terms of materialism they are light years apart. Here, entire families spanning several generations share the same mud-thatched homes and walk the same cratered streets, all in a never-ending struggle to survive and find purpose.

Since 1968, First Baptist Church has sought to make their lives a little more comfortable and filled with a greater awareness of the Creator.

"Our purpose," said Elliott, "is to fulfill the Great Commission in Matthew 28:19-20: 'Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.' Christ compells us to go out and tell the world."

First Baptist initially turned toward the lost and needy in Mexico through its Midland Spanish-language mission, Emmanuel Baptist Church. For five years its pastor traveled to San Vicente on his own, witnessing, ministering to physical needs, sharing love. In 1968, Elliott and 25 other persons felt called to expand the church's ministry in Mexico, and each spring has seen the missionary work become more expansive.

Charlie Elliott

"We try to minister to the whole man," explained Elliott, who is activities director at FBC. "We take care of their physical needs first — it's hard to tell a man about God when he's hungry or when his teeth hurt."

Hundreds of villagers, he said, lined up after each Bible study last week to be treated by doctors Ken Courtney of Midland and John Adams, a missionary to Kenya.

Those villagers were lucky. Before they saw Christian faith transformed into practice, only half ever breathed the air of life.

"When we first went down there in 1968, 50 percent of the children were born dead due to stagnated-water," said Elliott. "We dug wells...and now there is a water faucet at every home. The (live) birth rate has (risen) to 90 percent."

The greatest impact of the missionary work, however, may be on the young persons and adults of First Baptist Church who annually give a week of their lives to the effort.

"It changes the people who go down there; I've seen them transformed," said Elliott. "They become stronger in the Lord...Once our people get down there and see the love of the people, it's like a trap, because they win your heart. Once you go, it calls you back. You remember the little kids running after the trucks crying, 'We'll see you again next year.' It's changed our church from a great one to a greater one through concern for people all around the world."

Elliott, too, has seen a change wrought in himself.

"Each year," he said, "I come back very grateful for our freedom in our country: Freedom to worship, freedom to work and excel, freedom to express myself. I have a great feeling of gratitude for the way God has blessed our country.

"It's a terrible feeling to see a man die in a dirt home in a little village, or a woman dying of an operable tumor, to see broken limbs that have no hope of ever being straightened. It makes me so humble, to come back and realize I had wanted a new car or a new home. But most of all, I come back prouder in my faith. It fills me with obligation to go out and work while it's daylight because darkness is coming."

But sometimes even in darkness lies the promise of light.

In the blackness of one oppressive night in La Union last week, missionaries from First Baptist ventured outside their adobe shelter to pray beneath the jeweled heavens. They then sang a hymn to God.

As their voices died away, the stillness of the night gained dominance again only for a moment.

And then they heard it, echoing through the streets of a primitive adobe village in a world far removed from their own.

It was the answering chorus of a Spanish hymn of love and hope.

Three more rabid skunks found in Midland County

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Midland County's rabies problem continues to mount with the discovery of three rabid skunks during the past nine days.

Animal Control officials reported that a skunk was found chasing a dog on County Road 90 about a mile east of the city limits on March 27. Officers of the county constable's office are checking to see if the dog was exposed during the incident.

A second skunk was trapped inside a shop at Midland Regional Airport March 28 and Animal Control officers were called to remove the animal.

Also on March 28, a skunk was found in a horse barn at the Midland Polo Grounds. A dog involved with the skunk has been restricted to a 90-day home quarantine for observation. A spokewoman for the High Sky Veterinary Clinic said the dog has a current rabies vaccination.

The three skunks were shipped to Austin for testing Friday and the results returned positive Monday, according to Rice Freeman Zachery, Animal Control spokeswoman.

Ms. Freeman Zachery said the three cases bring to 22 the number of rabid animals — 21 skunks and one horse — found within Midland County during the past 12 months. Since Jan. 1, 16 skunks and the horse were discovered and tested positive for rabies.

"Midland is experiencing an epizootic of rabies in skunks," she said. "This is the animal equivalent of an epidemic. Vaccination of pets is vital, as it protects not only the family pets, but the family itself."

Ms. Freeman Zachery said because people rarely come in contact with wild, rabid animals, vaccinating pets creates a buffer between the rabid animals and humans.

"From the public health standpoint, that's the only way to protect the human population," she said.

Funds available for nutrition program

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

While a fiscal squeeze tightened the belts of many federally-funded programs nationwide and left them empty-handed, the Texas Health Department is holding a fistful of dollars for interested local agencies.

The Texas Health Department has spare change for any local health agencies, community action programs or neighborhood health clinics which would like to sponsor a nutrition program — a Texas Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC).

According to Catherine Litteer, nutritionist and chief administrator of WIC in Austin, the federally-funded health program, designed to prevent malnutrition during pregnancy and early childhood, needs a sponsoring agency in Midland County.

"Some pregnant women simply can't afford a nutritious diet, and many more don't know how to plan one," Ms. Litteer said.

Barbara Keir, WIC's eligibility/outreach coordinator in Austin, said there are 52 local WIC projects throughout the state, providing food assistance and nutrition education to low-income pregnant women and mothers nursing their infants. This program has gained a solid reputation as a preventative health and nutrition program that actually saves federal dollars.

WIC provides food assistance and nutrition education to low-income pregnant and nursing women and children up to 5 years old. Eligibility requirements include a limited income and applicants must have health- or nutrition-related problems.

"The consequences of poor prenatal nutrition can be anemia, toxemia, prematurity, low birth weight, complications in delivery or other maternal or infant illnesses," Ms. Litteer said.

According to Ms. Keir, any Midland County agency interested in sponsoring a WIC program will receive funds to begin a clinic. Local health professionals would be hired and trained to screen applicants for eligibility. Participants would be given a "food voucher."

"The people would come once a month to the clinic for vouchers, but more importantly, they would come for nutrition education," Ms. Keir said.

The monthly education classes would provide information on how to buy and prepare nutritious meals, reaching a goal of changing dietary habits that will improve participants' nutritional status, she added.

"The program is designed to help these people out in a time of need, offering them nutritional education that will last a lifetime.

"This is a supplement program," Ms. Keir said. "It is not intended to provide everything they need in their diet. It's to teach them how to use their food dollars wisely — to get the most from their food dollar. People don't realize the relationship between diet and good health."

Ms. Keir said the voucher, or food card, can be used at a designated grocery store for a month's supply of "allowable foods," such as milk, eggs, fruit juice and iron-fortified cereal and infant formula. She added that the grocery stores would be reimbursed by the state.

Ms. Litteer said benefits of good prenatal nutrition, achieved through WIC, have been documented in a study conducted by the Harvard University's School of Public Health.

According to a THD news release, the Harvard study "found that every $1 spent to aid pregnant women avoided $3 in hospital costs that would have been spent for treatment of their babies. The cost to taxpayers is less to prevent complications than to pay costs resulting from complications."

For more information, interested agencies may contact: WIC Program, 1100 W. 49th St., Austin 78756, or Ms. Litteer at 512-458-7632.

College for the deaf will probably remain open

BIG SPRING (AP) — A college for the deaf here, one of three such institutions in the nation, can stay open if the Texas Legislature approves the latest budget recommendation for the school, an official said.

Sam Hill, vice president of The Southwest Collegiate Insitute for the Deaf, said the House Committee on Higher Education has recommended giving the school $3.9 million, far less than the $11 million the school wanted, but more than had previously been recommended.

The latest figure "is $1.9 million more than the Legislative Budget Board had recommended, and $900,000 more than the governor had recommended," Hill said.

The school won't be able to do some needed renovation projects, Hill said. But, he added, "If we can keep that amount of money — get it through the full Legislature — we can operate on a shoestring."

Dean of Students Dominick Bonura said last month that the need for the college has grown. Beginning this spring, he said, more than 14,000 deaf students born during a 1964-65 rubella, or German measles, outbreak will be old enough to attend college.

If colleges for the deaf are not available, those students must attend mainstream classes on regular college campuses.

The two other colleges exclusively for the deaf, Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., and National Technical Institute for the Deaf in Rochester, N.Y., only can accept 1,800 students between them.

Hill said some students at the Big Spring school are being forced to live in substandard housing because of the age of the buildings.

He estimated that a minimum of $500,000 will be necessary to renovate the former U.S. Air Force barracks now used for classrooms.

Hill said anything less than the $3.9 million will not allow the college to operate at its current level.

Odessa woman charged with attempted murder

ODESSA — A 20-year-old woman has been charged with attempted murder in connection with the Monday morning shooting of an elderly Odessa man.

Jo Beth Morgan of Odessa is charged with attempted murder, a second-degree felony, and bond was set at $25,000 by Municipal Court Judge Otis Moore.

Joe Ray Blackwell, 70, of 7213 W. University Ave., was reported in stable condition today at Medical Center Hospital. He suffered two gunshot wounds to the head during the shooting, which occurred about 10 a.m. Monday in an alley behind 2729 Deering Drive.

According to an Odessa police spokesman this morning, Blackwell was interested in purchasing an ice cream or snow cone truck when he received a phone call from two young women Sunday night. The women told Blackwell to meet them Monday morning so they could show him where to find such a vehicle.

Police said Blackwell and his wife met the two women at the intersection of Sixth Street and Dotsy Avenues. The four then drove to the alley, where one woman left the car walked to a fence and peeked over. The woman suddenly turned around, gun in hand, and shot Blackwell in the face and the right temple. Both women then fled the scene.

Police said Blackwell had recognized one of the women and the suspects were apprehended later Monday. No charges have been filed against the second suspect.

Police declined to say what prompted the shooting.

Shooting victims still in MMH

A Midland man has been arrested in connection with an aggravated assault Saturday, while two men were reported in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital today with injuries they received in separate weekend shootings.

Bond has been set at $5,000 for Toby Jack Engle, P.O. Box 5642, in connection with an altercation Saturday morning at Misty Trailer Park on County Road 130 about a half mile east of County Road 1200.

According to a sheriff's department spokesman, no one was injured during the incident, in which Jerry Peters, 31, argued with a man who later pulled a gun and threatened Peters.

A sheriff's department investigation continues into the Friday night shooting of Arizona Lee Simpson, 40, of 2312 Cottonwood Ave. Simpson suffered a shotgun wound to the lower left leg Friday after he was shot during a disturbance at North Parker Acres Trailer Park about 7:15 p.m.

The sheriff's department is also investigating the shooting of Carlos Urias, 36, who was reported in satisfactory condition at MMH today with a gunshot wound to the left knee. Urias was injured after an altercation with another man about 3:45 a.m. Sunday at 204 E. Wolcott Ave.

Midland man charged in accident

A Midland man was charged Monday with driving while intoxicated in connection with a multi-car accident on Interstate 20 near Midkiff Road late Sunday.

Further charges are pending today against John William Shalosky, 39, according to a police department spokesman.

According to police traffic reports, Shalosky's vehicle was traveling in the wrong direction in the eastbound lane of I-20 about 11:55 p.m. when the car collided with a vehicle driven by Daniel Jiminez Palomino. Shalosky's car reportedly then spun around and struck a pursuing police car.

Shalosky, a police officer and seven people in Palomino's vehicle suffered minor injuries and were treated and released from Midland Memorial Hospital.

Men charged with illegally carrying guns

Two Midland men, including one who suffered mutiple gunshot wounds during a Sunday morning shootout at a southside nightclub, have been charged with unlawfully carrying weapons on a licensed premises.

According to Midland police, Arturo Payan Franco, of 1927 E. Pecan Ave., and Salvador Garcia of Odessa were charged in connection with a shooting incident which occurred about 1:30 a.m. Sunday at the Mio Bario Pobre lounge at 1706 Rankin Highway.

Franco suffered wounds to the abdomen, chest and right knee and was reported in stable condition today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Woman reports theft of rings

Midland police are investigating several burglaries reported Monday, including a December theft of two rings.

Pamala Sue Steadman, 4406 Crenshaw Drive, told police Monday the two rings, valued at $1,938, apparently were stolen some time during December.

Eladio Martinez reported jewelry, cash, a movie projector and several other items valued at $1,629 were taken from his home at 1106 E. Pecan Ave.

According to police reports, Martinez said the items were stolen sometime between Saturday and Monday. Entry was reportedly gained by breaking a den window.

Helen Collins, 1203 E. Pine Ave., reported two color television sets valued at $898 stolen from her home Monday. Police reports indicate entry to the house was gained by breaking a window with a brick.

In other burglaries reported Monday, Baker Hallford, 2305 Castleford Road, told police a cassette player, a television set and a radio were stolen from his home sometime between March 29 and Monday. The merchandise, and a back door broken to gain entry, are valued at $460, according to the report.

Also Monday, a Midland fire truck and three firemen were called to assist the Gardendale Volunteer Fire Department.

Firefighters battled a fire that destroyed a log house on Cottonwood Road about 10 p.m.

According to fire department reports, the blaze probably was caused by sparks from the chimney.

DPS officials to discuss local crisis relocation

Two nuclear civil protection planners from the Texas Department of Public Safety will be on hand at 7 p.m. tonight in City Hall Council Chambers to discuss and answer questions about crisis relocation and the nuclear disaster planning for Midland County.

Bill Dourte and Bob Ewing, with the DPS's emergency management division, were invited to the public meeting after a forum sponsored by the League of Women Voters indicated a need for more public education about crisis relocation, according to Bob Edgerton, Midland's civil defense coordinator.

The meeting is open to the public.

Odessa man arrested in connection with rape

ANDREWS — Arthur Leroy Atkinson, 39, of Odessa was arrested at 4:30 a.m. Sunday in Odessa and charged in connection with the reported rape of a Seminole woman here Saturday night.

The incident allegedly occurred about 7:30 p.m. Saturday in a van on a lease 10 miles north of Andrews in Andrews County.

Atkinson was arrested in Odessa. He is in custody in Andrews County Jail in lieu of $35,000 bond set by Peace Justice Rusty Bartley.

Two arson suspects arrested

ODESSA — Two suspects have been taken into custody in connection with the Monday fire which destroyed the former Rusk Elementary School building which was being used by the YMCA.

"It was just about totaled," said an Odessa Fire Department spokesman. "It was an arson fire."

The blaze erupted shortly before 4 p.m. Janis Hight of the fire marshall's office is handling the investigation.

Squash Romano

By The Associated Press

2½-pound spaghetti squash
¼-pound stick butter
4 small scallions½ cup grated Romano cheese

In a large saucepot cover the squash with water; bring to a boil; boil gently until tender when pierced with a fork — about 30 minutes. Halve lengthwise; remove seeds and fibrous portions. With a fork scoop out the long strands into a shallow baking dish (9 by 9 by 1 inch); keep hot in a low oven. In an 8-inch skillet melt butter, stirring in scallions.

DEAR ABBY

No 'secret games' — at any age

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: For a 27-year-old woman, I've been through a lot. I attempted suicide three times and was institutionalized twice because I was so filled with guilt and self loathing I didn't think I deserved to live.

I am now recovering with the help of a therapist who has helped me realize that I was a victim.

My problems began when I was sexually abused by my stepfather from the time I was 8 until I was 14. I never told anyone until my younger sister became pregnant by him when she was 13. Because of her testimony and mine, Dad was sent to prison for seven years. (My mother divorced him.)

I just learned that he is out on parole and going to marry a young widow with two small daughters. I don't know if she knows about Dad's record, but if she doesn't and he molests her little girls, I would never forgive myself for not warning her. Should I be the one to tell her? — ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

DEAR ANON: Discuss this with your therapist. In any case, I agree, the woman must be told.

Your letter gives me an opportunity to repeat this advice:

Parents, keep a sharp eye on your little ones. They are never too young to be told that they must not allow anyone to touch their private parts, or to involve them in any "secret" game-playing. Stress the importance of reporting such incidents immediately, particularly if the older person makes the child promise not to tell anybody.

Studies show that most children are sexually abused by a trusted family member or friend — rarely a stranger.

"Parents United" has an excellent self-help program, and the organization exists nationwide. Please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Parents United, Inc., P.O. Box 952, San Jose, Calif. 95108, for the address of the chapter nearest you.

DEAR ABBY: "No Identification, Please" asked how single fathers of daughters take them to the bathroom in public places.

When my daughters were 2 and 3, I traveled almost constantly in my consulting business. Since I didn't want to be away from my children so much, I took them with me. We went to more than 40 states, South America, Europe and Asia. The girls loved traveling, and we never had a bit of trouble.

When the need arose in public places, I always looked around for a friendly looking woman to take them to the bathroom. No one ever refused. The only place I ever had any difficulty was in the airport in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, where approaching a strange women could cause extreme difficulty. I saw a family sitting in the waiting area, the woman properly veiled, the father looking fierce but friendly. I asked him if he would mind asking his wife to perform this small service for me. He was most cooperative and she was delighted to help. My girls made new friends and I wound up with a new client!

My daughters still travel with me in the summertime, but they're old enough now to handle those matters by themselves. -- COLORADO DADDY

(Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Elegant kiwifruit

By The Associated Press

8 medium-size ripe kiwifruits
¼ cup fresh lime juice
1½ cups sugar
1½ cups water

In a 2-quart saucepan over moderately low heat, stir together sugar and water until sugar dissolves; bring to a boil; boil, without stirring, for 5 minutes to make a syrup; reserve.

Cut a very thin slice from each end of each kiwifruit; halve crosswise. With a teaspoon gently hollow out pulp from each half, leaving at least ⅛-inch surrounding skin, to make "shells." Reserve shells in freezer. In an electric blender or food processor, puree pulp — you should have about 2 cups puree.

In a medium bowl, stir together reserved syrup, puree and lime juice. Turn into a 9 by 9 by 2-inch pan; freeze until mixture begins to harden and is partly frozen — about 1 hour.

A new concept in photography services is now in Midland at Foto-Makers. Foto-Makers has merged with Marc Camera to offer you complete photographic service under one roof. To celebrate, Foto-Makers is offering fantastic bargains on equipment and processing. Now through April 9, save 20 percent on all cameras, lenses, filters and bags and 25 percent on all 35mm film processing. Foto-Makers offers one-day service on all color and black & white film processing. In addition to Foto-Makers photograpic center in the Imperial Shopping Center, Midkiff and Wadley, there are two convenient drive-in locations at 4321 W. Illinois and 1408 N. Big Spring. Foto-Makers is open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

New at Foto-Makers: complete photo store

A new concept in photography services has arrived in Midland with the merging of Marc Camera with Foto-Makers. Now all your photographic needs can be met under one roof. Foto-Makers now has a complete line of cameras, lenses, filters, bags, dark room supplies, and still offers you one-day processing of your color and black & white film. Of course, the specialized services of Foto-Makers are still offered, such as the Foto-Makers quality control system, personalized help with your photography questions and the latest in processing equipment to insure quality prints quickly.

Foto-Makers' philosophy is one of helping customers make the best possible photographs, and owner Sada Cumber deligently works toward this goal. As a certified photographic counselor, he is available at all times to help you with advice about your camera, and tips on how to get the best possible shots from each roll of film you shoot.

Along with all of the services now under the Foto-Makers roof, Cumber is pleased to announce that passport photos can be made at Foto-Makers at the lowest price in town–$7.99 for four photographs. And of course, two hour E-6 Ektachrome slide film processing will soon be available at Foto-Makers.

Foto-Makers has the oldest photo lab in Midland, as well as the largest. It is located conveniently in the Imperial Shopping Center, Midkiff and Wadley, and has two drive-in locations at 4321 W. Illinois and 1408 N. Big Spring. Fotot-Makers guarantees one-day service on all color and black & white processing. If the film is in by 9:30 a.m., it will be out by 4 p.m. Of course, this quick, one-day service is an important feature of Foto-Makers, especially when you need to have your prints in a hurry. But Cumber emphasizes that even with this one-day service, quality is never sacrificed. With almost 110 years of color processing experience combined among the employees of Foto-Makers, the most important thing to them is making sure their prints are consistantly of the highest quality.

These high-quality prints are also bigger than most. Foto-Makers' prints are 37 percent bigger than others on 35mm negatives. Another plus for customers is the Discount Club Card. This card is free, and entitles you to a discount on film as well as one free processing after you have paid for seven. For example, film which regularly sells for $3.30 a roll is $2.83 a roll with the Club card. All film is fresh, stored under refrigeration.

Ask for a free copy of Foto-Makers monthly magazine which features tips on how to use your camera more effectively. This magazine has many helpful articles for photographers, and include tips on taking photos at special events, and taking shots from television. For more advice on photography, come by the store on Saturdays. Cumber is available for the day to answer your questions about photography and your camera.

Foto-Makers specializes in restoration of old photographs, and can also blow up your photographs to any size you wish. If you need frames, here is where Foto-Makers have the edge. They have a wide selection of fine oak, teak, acrylic, beveled glass and gold-tone frames which cannot be duplicated in any shop in Midland. These frames come in all sizes.

For complete one-stop photographic shopping, come by Foto-Makers in the Imperial Shopping Center, and for all processing, use any of the three convenient locations. All locations are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

The beauty of the Hummel porcelains has not faded since Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel created the first one in 1935. Come see the large selection of these beautiful pieces at Graham's Pharmacy-Crawley's Rexall Drug, located at 319 Dodson in the Village. Graham's is truly your one-stop place to shop for gifts, sundries, prescriptions and home accessories. They are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Graham's has large Hummel gift selection

The beauty of Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel's figurines are world-reknown. Since the first one was made in 1935, millions have found the charming figures, plates and commerative pieces to bring beauty and joy to their homes. The Hummel figurines and plates featured at Graham's Pharmacy-Crawley's Rexall Drug are the perfect gift for Mother's Day, or for any special occasion. There is a wide selection from which to choose at Graham's and you can be assured it will be an appreciated gift.

Another popular item for collectors are the lavishly-gowned porcelain dolls which are hand painted. Costumed in velvets and laces, these dolls are made by skilled craftspeople, and are guaranteed to please any female you know.

Of course, graduation is just around the corner, and there's no better place to shop than at Graham's. There are backpacks; a sorter bank which sorts your coins, drops them into slots and has space for bills; wallets; travel sets for men and women; colognes and perfumes; jewelry; jewelry boxes; make-up mirrors; pen and pencil sets; hair ornaments and many, many more exciting and beautiful gift items for that special graduate.

When you need a special card for a special event, look no further than Graham's. They have a wide selection of greeting cards from American Greetings, as well as stationary, office supplies and school supplies.

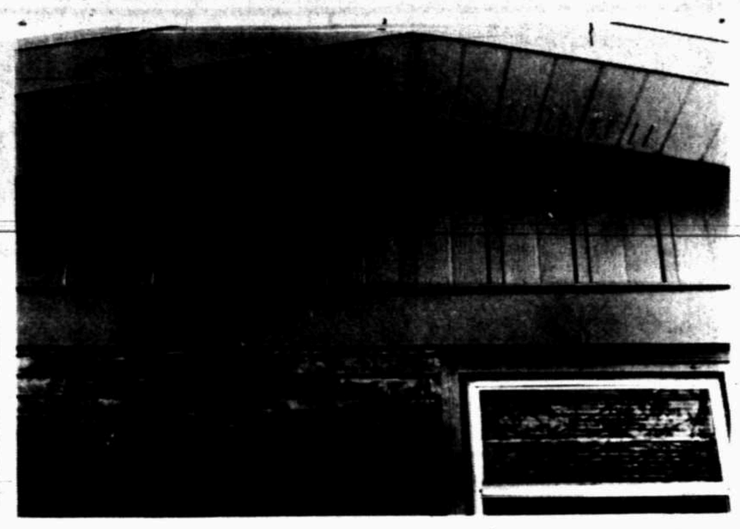

Graham's is noted for its fine selection of Pfaltzgraff pottery and Fitz and Floyd gift items, as well as for their large stock of fine glassware, vases and ceramics. Other unique gift ideas are their Early American styles of aprons, pillows, wallhangings and kitchen accessories by American Legacy. Of course, they still have one of the largest selection of wood gift items in town, and many of these are the Early American design.

If you collect miniatures, come by and see the delightful selection of miniature figurines at Graham's. In fact, Graham's probably has something just right for you or for someone dear to you. It's the perfect place to shop. No running from store to store to find the right gift, or the perfect accessory for your home; just come by Graham's and see their selection of gifts. You'll find it all right under one roof.

Now, while the wind blows, and the sand filters throughout your home, you might welcome the clean, healthy air you get from the Hepanaire HP50 air cleaner. Graham's Pharmacy is a dealer for Hepanaire, which offers immediate benefits of cleaner, healthier air and is a valuable aid for allergy sufferers.

Graham's offers complete prescription services, including family profile records, computerized accounting system and keeps a record of your prescription for tax and insurance purposes. Registered professional pharmacists Paul Keele and Wesley Graham assure you of the finest in prescription medicines. There is also free delivery on all prescriptions in the Midland city limits.

Come by Graham's Pharmacy at 319 Dodson, just off Andrews Hwy in the Village Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., or you can call for prompt prescription service at 684-0569.

This is just one example of Revere vertical, maintenance-free steel siding. You can throw that paintbrush away forever with Revere permanent siding. Guaranteed for 50 years not to rust, chip, peel, crack or blister, this siding is just one of the many maintenance-free exterior products installed by Lewellen Construction. Call Bill Lewellen for more information and come by his booth at the Midland Home Show, held at Midland Park Mall April 11 through 16.

Throw that paintbrush away, says Lewellen

Now that Spring is here, we look forward to being outdoors during the weekends, enjoying the warm weather and doing those things we've put off through the winter—sprucing up the lawn, home repairs, and facing the fact that we're going to have to paint the house. Well, we all know there are a lot better ways to spend your time off during these balmy Spring days than painting, and there is a solution.

Lewellen Construction offers you a vacation from painting with maintenance-free exteriors. And the beauty of these exteriors is–they're truly beautiful. Revere vertical siding, for example, offers the board-and-batten style which adds not only to the beauty of your home, but gives you the plus of no painting–ever. And this is just one of the beautiful styles of vertical siding offered by Revere. According to owner Bill Lewellen, the Revere siding offers a non-prorated warranty of 50 years, and it's transferable if you sell your home. This warranty protects you against defects such as rusting, splitting, chipping, flaking, cracking or peeling.

Since 1801 Revere has meant quality products for the home. Paul Revere was more than a great patriot, he was a skilled artisan and craftsman who made his living with metals. This tradition of excellence, dating back to Paul Revere, is carried on in Revere's complete line of color-coordinated siding, soffit and fascia systems. Lewellen Construction, too, has a reputation that stands behind the installation of any of the maintenance-free products he carries.

Lewellen Construction has been in the siding business for seven years, and during that time has specialized in U. S. Steel and Revere siding, soffits and fascia, storm windows, gutters, trim, storm doors and vinyl siding. "I'm always happy to have prospective customers talk to my former clients," says Lewellen.

For more information about installing beautiful and durable Revere vertical siding to your home, call Lewellen Construction at 686-8007. If you'd like to see Lewellen and examples of maintenance-free exteriors, come by his booth at the Midland Home Show which will be held at the Midland Park Mall April 11 through 16. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily.

Swanson's death mourned

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainers mourned perennial glamour queen Gloria Swanson as a "wonderfully vibrant lady" who was a "thorough professional" during six decades on stage and screen.

Miss Swanson died in her sleep at New York Hospital early Monday, less than a month after her 84th birthday.

Although medical officials did not disclose the cause of her death, friends said she entered the hospital a week ago for treatment of a slight heart attack.

"She was a wonderfully vibrant lady whose name was synonymous with Hollywood," comedian Bob Hope said in a statement. "She had an aura of glamour that few stars before or since have displayed."

"We just keep losing all the greats," said actress Bette Davis.

Actor Buddy Ebsen recalled her as "a delight and a thorough professional."

A tiny woman, Miss Swanson attributed her longevity and well-preserved appearance to a life-long interest in nutrition. In her later years she co-authored with her sixth husband, William Dufty, a book about the harmful effects of too much sugar.

Miss Swanson was born March 27, 1899, in Chicago, the daughter of an Army captain, and as a child lived in Florida, Texas and Puerto Rico.

During a visit to Essanay Studios in Chicago in 1913 she was hired as an extra at $13.25 a week; within a year she moved to Hollywood, and appeared in a series of Mack Sennett comedies.

When she was 19, director Cecil B. DeMille cast her as a sophisticated woman in "Don't Change Your Husband."

She made six films for DeMille; he made her a star, with lavish productions and costumes, including a gown made of ermine tails and a hat modeled on a Chinese pagoda. She left for Paramount in 1921, making 10 films in two years, then formed her own company.

Her first of six husbands was Wallace Beery, the burly character actor of many major Hollywood films. Others were cafe owner Herbert Somborn; the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray and Irish sportsman Michael Farmer.

Judge won't reduce, increase John De Lorean's $5 million bail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean, accused of cocaine trafficking and described in court as a "financial cripple," listened intently as his lawyer tried and failed to have his $5 million bail reduced.

U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi on Monday rejected defense motions to cut bail in half for the former sports car manufacturer. He also rejected prosecution motions to double the bail.

Takasugi said government allegations that De Lorean has access to more than $17 million hidden in Switzerland appeared to be based on mere speculation. The claims and counter-claims by both sides on the issue rate "very low on my scale of believability," the judge said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Dylan has said nothing about allegations that he assaulted a photographer at Los Angeles International Airport, the singer-songwriter's manager says.

"We have no information at all, we don't know anything about it," Jerry Weintraub said Monday. "I'm sure he's at home right now writing a song about it."

He said he expected that Dylan, 41, would at some point call him about the battery complaint filed Sunday by free-lance photographer Gary Arloian of Los Angeles.

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Wanted: a presidential pardon for Watergate security guard Frank Wills, convicted of shoplifting a $12 pair of sneakers.

The request was made by Mayor Kenneth A. Gibson who says in a letter to President Reagan that "the majority of the criminal perpetrators of the break-in have won national acclaim and great wealth while Wills has been bounced from job to job."

A spokesman for the mayor, Bernard Moore, said Gibson also told the president that people "believe Wills has been unjustly treated because he is a black American."

Wills, 34, of North Augusta, S.C., was a security guard at the Watergate hotel and office complex when on June 17, 1972, he found tape on the latch of the door of the Democratic National Committee offices. Investigators linked the break-in and subsequent coverup to President Nixon's re-election campaign, and Nixon resigned in 1974.

King's death recalled

MEMPHIS, Tenn (AP) — Workers marching in the city where Rev. Martin Luther King was slain 15 years ago vowed to preserve the civil rights leader's memory by fighting for full employment and an end to the economic policies of the Reagan administration.

"There was a dream that Dr. Martin Luther King had and it's our job to keep that dream alive. There was a dream that he had that every man should have a job," said James Butler, president of New York Local 420 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, at Monday's march.

About 250 workers attended the march. In the years just after the assassination, as many as 10,000 attended the annual tribute.

"You're heard about 12 million people out of work nationally and Reagan is talking about staying the course. We don't want cheese and butter, we want jobs," said The Rev. Samuel B. Kyles, who was a local lieutenant for King.

King was gunned down April 4, 1968, when he was in Memphis to lead sanitation workers in a pay protest. An escaped convict, James Earl Ray, confessed to the slaying and was sentenced to 99 years in prison.

Chanting "Reagan must go," and carrying placards demanding jobs, the marchers set off at 11:25 a.m. from Clayborn Temple and snaked along the littered streets of an economically depressed neighborhood and headed for the Lorraine Motel, where King was fatally shot.

Black businessmen and civic leaders paid $144,000 for the Lorraine at a foreclosure sale last December and hope to convert it into a civil rights museum and a shrine for King.

Organizers called the demonstration "a march for jobs and justice."

"It is our union's obligation to see that this union makes a difference in the election in 1984," said Gerald W. McEntee, AFSCME international president.

Heavy fighting reported in El Salvador province

AP Laserphoto

Residents of Verapaz, El Salvador, stand over the bodies of civil guards slain in Monday's attack by rebel forces. Verapaz is about 35 miles east of San Salvador.

VERAPAZ, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas battled government troops in four towns in San Vicente province, killing 15 in combat and sabotaging phone and power lines in the economically strategic province, local sources said.

Alleged rebel assailants also shot to death the rightist mayor of another town during one of the worst outbreaks of violence in San Vicente in the past seven months of the civil war.

A guerrilla column estimated by townspeople at more than 300 attacked a civil defense outpost of about 25 men Monday at Verapaz, 35 miles east of the capital, killing 11 guards and an army soldier and leaving three wounded, the townspeople said.

They said the rebels recovered at least 10 automatic rifles after the prolonged firefight and were able to retreat before army reinforcments arrived.

In the town of Guadalupe, three miles to the south, another rebel force attacked simultaneously, killing one civil defense guard and carrying off ammunition, military sources there said.

Another civil defense guard reportedly was killed by rebel attackers in the nearby village of San Emigdio.

"The fighting was pretty intense and the subversives only let up for a few seconds at a time," Humberto Montoya, a civil defense commander in Guadalupe said.

Some of the mourning relatives and friends of the 11 men killed in Verapaz, a town of about 6,500, said they wished the town had no civil defense.

"Tell the sergeant that he should stop this business of patrols," said one peasant who asked not to be identified. "When they (the guerrillas) see that we have weapons they will come back to attack, and they have better weapons then we do."

Able-bodied men are obliged or pressured to serve as civil defense guards in small towns throughout much of the country. Generally, the men must patrol with a rifle one day out of every 10 in Verapaz.

In Guadalupe, the 30 civil guards abandoned their posts at dawn and fled, and guerrillas burned down the civil defense post before fleeing towards an abandoned coffee plantation on the 2,200-meter San Vicente volcano that towers above the town to the east.

Military sources said assailants Sunday killed the mayor of another town about six miles east of Verapaz.

The military sources and members of the ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance party said rebels dragged Eleazar Cruz Iraheta from his home in the town of Cayetano Istepeque, shot him and left his body near the townhall, scattering guerrilla leaflets as they fled.

Cruz Iraheta, 40, was a member of the rightist party, police in the provincial capital of San Vicente said.

San Vicente, in the central part of El Salvador, is considered a key province because of its importance as a sugar-growing area. The two main east-west highways of El Salvador cross the province, and power lines crossing it bring electricty to four eastern provinces.

The lines are frequently toppled by guerrilla dynamite charges. Power was restored to the eastern provinces late Monday after nearly two full days without electricity.

Reagan administration not denying Nicaragua role

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is doing nothing to discourage mounting evidence that it is actively backing anti-Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua, feeding speculation that it is involved.

Although U.S. officials are insisting that anything the administration is doing is legal, some members of Congress are expressing grave doubts.

One key senator wants Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to explain what is going on.

Allegations have surfaced in recent days that forces fighting the leftist Sandinista government have been largely financed, armed and trained by the United States, or by nations with close ties to Washington, notably Honduras and Argentina.

They include statements made to American reporters by some of the insurgents themselves.

While there haven't been allegations that any Americans are actually in Nicaragua, American advisers in neighboring Honduras are said to have helped train insurgents at bases there.

Reporters for the Washington Post, who were allowed to travel with the guerrillas in Nicaragua, said they were shown such American weaponry as sophisticated anti-tank weapons and radio equipment in the hands of guerrillas who boasted of U.S. support.

The New York Times on Sunday quoted an unidentified Honduran as saying he had first-hand knowledge of American involvement in training and arming the rebel forces before they recently entered Nicaragua from Honduras. It said the account was largely confirmed by two members of the Senate Intelligence Committee and by a highly placed administration official, whom it did not name.

The administration, peppered with questions for the past two weeks, has said nothing to discourage rampant speculation that it is behind the insurgency.

In what has become the standard administration response, Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, said Monday he couldn't comment on the latest allegations because any involvement would involve intelligence activities, which are confidential.

"It has been for many, many years, a standing position of the U.S. government not to comment on alleged intelligence activities and I am not at liberty to vary from that policy," Romberg said.

Asked why he automatically put an intelligence tag on certain questions, such as a claim that the insurgents were using U.S.-supplied arms, Romberg said, "If it were happening, I would presume it to be a covert operation, which by definition is an intelligence activity."

However, the line between what is an intelligence activity and what is not can be very thin. For example, a charge by an official of leftist Grenada that the United States was preparing an invasion was denounced by Romberg as "ridiculous."

But a charge by Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto that the United States was involved in "an undeclared war" on his country gets no response.

Asked whether the administration could pull a cover of intelligence over any activity it didn't want to comment on, Romberg replied, "That would imply bad faith, and I would reject that."

Reports of U.S. involvement in efforts to topple the Sandinista government first surfaced in November of 1981 when stories appeared that the administration had earmarked $19 million for a covert operation. The administration's silence then, plus subsequent events, have fed the notion that the reports were true.

Romberg said Monday that any administration activity is legal, but some lawmakers are worried.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., the vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said in an interview last week that the Central Intelligence Agency has reported behind closed doors on actions in Nicaragua "which we cannot see in compliance with the law."

He said the committee will want a new report after returning from the Easter recess. He also said Shultz and Weinberger should be called to testify on whether U.S. actions are in compliance with the Boland amendment, which bans U.S. financing for any effort to topple the Sandinista government by force. The amendment is named for Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

CIA officials are said to have testified behind closed doors that the U.S. effort in Nicaragua has limited objectives, such as stopping the smuggling of arms to leftist insurgents in El Salvador. However, the guerrilla movement has made clear its aim is to oust the Sandinistas, who seized power in 1979 from the late dictator Anastasio Somoza.

The anti-government rebels include former National Guardsmen who served under Somoza. In one of the few public comments, U.S. officials say they don't favor a return to power by the so-called Somocista elements.

Referring to the Boland amendment, Moynihan said, "The most important thing at issue is not whether this is a good law or a bad law, it is that it is a law, and it is not optional to obey the law in our government."

A group of 37 House members sent President Reagan a letter last week saying they believe that "U.S. supported anti-Nicaraguan forces may be involved in the current hostilities" in violation of the Boland amendment.

Nicaraguan, Costa Rican cabinet ministers discuss tensions

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua (AP) — Cabinet ministers from Nicaragua and Costa Rica discussed growing tensions between the neighboring countries, including charges that Nicaraguan troops are staging cross-border raids.

Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge and Costa Rican Foreign Minister Fernando Volio Jimenez met Monday to discuss the alleged raids and a territorial dispute over the San Juan River separating their countries.

Volio Jimenez said he presented Borge with proof that Nicaraguan troops have carried out cross-border raids aganst suspected rebels in Costa Rica. He said he was assured that Nicaragua will attempt to prevent such raids in the future.

Borge did not comment on the alleged raids, but after the three-hour meeting he said Volio Jimenez had told him that Eden Pastora, a leading opponent of the Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, had been expelled from exile in Costa Rica.

Borge, a founder of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, also said he had been denied a visa to enter the United States after being invited to speak at Harvard and Johns Hopkins universities.

He did not explain why he was denied a visa but said President Reagan and any other U.S. official who wants to visit Nicaragua is welcome to do so because "we're not afraid of them."

The territorial dispute between the two Central American nations stems from an 1858 treaty that gives Nicaragua sovereignty over the San Juan River but grants Costa Rica the right to freely navigate the waterway. The river forms a natural boundary along about 80 miles of the Nicaragua-Costa Rica border.

In recent months, Costa Rican officials have protested the alleged harassment of Costa Rican vessels on the river by Nicaraguan soldiers and border guards.

Borge told a news conference that a bilateral commission would study the problem.

After the meeting in this Pacific port, 150 miles south of Managua, Borge said Volio Jimenez told him that Pastora — the revered "Commander Zero" of the Nicaraguan revolution — was expelled from Costa Rica on March 28 and went to Mexico.

Pastora and former Nicaraguan junta member Alfonso Robelo are leaders of the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, an exile group advocating the overthrow of the Sandinista government which they claim has shifted too far to the left.

Pastora gained prominence by leading a small group of guerrillas who took 1,500 hostages in a daring raid on Nicaragua's national palace in August 1978. The act is widely believed to have sparked the all-out insurrection that led to the downfall of Anastasio Somoza's dictatorship 11 months later.

In other developments, the official government newspaper Barricada said Monday that about 100 rebels have been killed in clashes with Sandinista troops in the past three days of fighting in north and northeastern Nicaragua.

The rebels' clandestine radio station claimed, in turn, that the insurgents had repelled two battalions of government troops that tried to "penetrate the zone near the Siuna gold mine" in an isolated region of Zelaya province about 240 miles northeast of Managua.

The government claims that the rebels, with covert assistance from the United States, are conducting raids into northern Nicaragua from bases in Honduras.

France expels accused spies

PARIS (AP) — The Socialist government has ordered 47 Soviets expelled on suspicion of spying in France's biggest purge ever of East bloc citizens, the French news agency reported today.

The Soviet Embassy confirmed a mass expulsion but would not identify or give the number of deportees.

Oleg Chirokov, Paris bureau chief of the Soviet news agency Tass, told The Associated Press he and another Tass journalist, Vladimir Koulikovskykh, were among those being expelled and would leave France today on a special plane being sent from Moscow.

India claims 'self-defense'

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Authorities say police acted in self-defense when they fired on thousands of rioting Sikhs during a road blockade and general strike in Punjab state, reportedly killing 24 demonstrators.

Another 500 protesters and police officers were wounded in Monday's violence, according to Indian news agencies.

In New Delhi, meanwhile, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government issued a report saying law and order was "well under control" during the past 12 months.

Aghanis react to shooting

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A Soviet soldier shot and killed an unarmed Afghan student in Kabul, triggering a riot in the Afghan capital, a Western diplomat reported here today.

Angry Afghans screaming "Death to the Soviets" broke windows on the soldier's jeep after Sunday's shooting and attacked a nearby military truck. Security forces loyal to President Babrak Karmal's pro-Moscow regime broke up the crowd and took the soldier away, the diplomat said.

Heavy reinforcements of Afghan soldiers remained in the area for some time after the shooting, said the diplomat, who gave his report on condition he remain anonymous.

Oil spill clean-up delayed

KUWAIT (AP) — Efforts to contain the giant oil spill threatening the Persian Gulf states' shores and water supplies are being derailed by the politics of the Iraq-Iran war.

Heavy, low-grade crude oil has been gushing into the blue waters of the gulf since Iraq bombed Iran's offshore Nowruz oilfield on Feb. 11. Iraqi helicopter gunships aggravated the spill with a March 2 attack on a rig in the Nowruz.

Unidentified Soviet diplomats board a bus as they leave their Paris embassy, bound for the airport and a Soviet plane to Moscow.

Yet only now, with the slick threatening the desalination plants that are a vital source of fresh water for the Arab sheikdoms, are the eight nations of the gulf coming to grips with the emergency.

Grenada fears armed attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grenada's Foreign Minister Unison Whiteman says a Miami-based counter-revolutionary movement is in the "final stages" of preparations for an armed attack on the leftist government of his island nation.

Whiteman said the movement is being backed by the American government and that he plans to discuss his allegations Wednesday with the congressional Black Caucus and the Organization of American States.

550 British to visit Falklands

LONDON (AP) — Relatives of 166 British servicemen killed in the Falklands war with Argentina last year flew from London today for their first visit to war graves on the islands.

The South Atlantic trip, sponsored by the Defense Ministry, has taken months to plan and involves about 550 wives, parents and other relatives, including 100 children.

CBS to air Afghan tapes

NEW YORK (AP) — Videotape described by CBS News as the first ever to show Soviet soldiers and war machinery in Soviet-controlled areas of Afghanistan, will be broadcast on the network's "Evening News" in three segments starting tonight.

Peter Larkin, CBS News' foreign editor, said the footage was shot during a five-week period by Erik Durschmeid, a Canadian citizen who lives in Paris. Larkin said Durschmeid entered Afghanistan on assignment for CBS News after obtaining a visa seven weeks ago.

Two escape over Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — Two young East Germans managed a rare escape over the Berlin Wall by swooping along a steel cable strung between rooftops on opposite sides of the border, police said today.

The daring night flight occurred Thursday but was kept secret until now for undisclosed "security reasons," a police spokesman said.

A West Berlin accomplice made the escape possible by securing the 90-yard cable to the rooftop of a West Berlin house and using his car to provide the necessary tension.

Authorities said the two men, ages 23 and 24, secured their end of the cable to the roof of a six-story house near the wall in East Berlin's Treptow district.

Nine killed in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Nine people in a remote Philippine village reportedly were hacked to death and then beheaded last week, but officials disagree as to who carried out the massacre.

The Philippine police said the killers, who numbered around 15, were believed to be members of a religious cult, but an army report said they were suspected Communist guerrillas.

The massacre occurred in San Antonio village in Misamis Oriental Province, 500 miles southeast of Manila. The victims reportedly belonged to two families living in one house and included a woman and three children.

IRA says wrong man killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army says it killed the wrong man when it dispatched two gunman who murdered a Protestant factory worker.

The IRA Provisionals issued a statement Monday night saying they regretted the killing of James McCormack, 45, and extending sympathy to his family.

Inspector Jim Craig said two men shot McCormack as he watched television Monday in his house in Bangor, west of Belfast. His wife, Margaret, was shot in the legs but was reported in satisfactory condition.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa's party won majority control of the new black-dominated parliament. Soon after, Britain began to normalize relations with Zimbabwe. New elections, overseen by Britain, brought Mugabe, a major guerrilla leader, to power. Independence was won on April 18, 1980.

Mugabe to pursue killer of daughter, senator, visitor

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe today vowed an all-out effort to capture the killers of a white senator, his daughter and a British visitor.

He also promised extra security, including private guards, for farmers living in dangerous areas.

Mugabe issued his statement two days after Sen. Paul Savage, 70, his 20-year-old daughter Colleen, and a British woman were slain by some 20 gunmen who attacked the Savages' ranch while they were having an outdoor barbeque. The name of the visitor is being withheld until relatives are notified.

Betty Savage, the senator's wife, was wounded in the attack.

"We shall give no quarter to those who would turn our hard-won independence and cherished peace into an occasion for lawlessness and murderous escapades," said Mugabe.

He said the attack was "designed to serve the selfish interests of certain political malcontents and those of states hostile to our independence."

"The government will leave no stone unturned in its efforts, already underway, to track down, apprehend and bring to justice those responsible for this heinous act," he added.

The Savages and their guest were marched at gunpopint from the barbeque, ordered to raise their hands aand shot one by one with bursts from AK-47 assault rifles, witnesses told police.

Paramilitary police, troops and tracker dogs backed by helicopter gunships today combed the bush surrounding the Savages' ranch, located between the southern Matabeleland towns of Colleen Bawn and Gwanda, 80 miles south of the provincial capital of Bulawayo.
