Midland books to take trip to White House

By Andrea Fryrear
MRT Correspondent

The West Texas landscape may seem barren, but it has provided a fertile climate for the literary endeavors of Midlanders whose efforts will soon find their way to the nation's capital.

For the past few months, Ellen Hopkins, a freelance writer from Midland, has been collecting books by Midland authors to send to President George W. Bush and First Lady Laura Bush.

Ms. Hopkins said the collection represents a cornucopia of literary talent containing children's books, religious themes, westerns, self-help books, books on the oil industry and even romance novels. As Ms. Hopkins contacted each author to ask for a donation of their work, she also asked for referrals to other authors. She hopes through the network of writers she has contacted, all of Midland's published book authors will be represented in the donation.

Because Laura Bush has consistently promoted a strong reading and education agenda, Ms. Hopkins said the idea to send her a collection of every published Midland author seemed natural.

"It seems fitting because Laura Bush's agenda focuses on reading and education, and because she and the president speak so fondly of Midland, (I thought) that the first lady might find a use for a collection of published books from Midland authors," Ms. Hopkins said.

Although Ms. Hopkins is unsure of the exact use the first lady could have for the collection, she is certain "she'll know Midland is supporting her agenda."

The delivery will serve not only the efforts of the president and first lady, but the careers of

MISD looks at need for Terra Nova

■ Superintendent considers eliminating elementary school test to create more time to prepare for TAAS.

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

Is there such a thing as too much testing?

If certain individuals in the Midland Independent School District have their way, elementary school students may have one less test to worry about.

"That's all we do is test, test, test," said Janet Spencer, a fourth-grade teacher at Greathouse Elementary. "We're right in the middle of giving writing portion, getting ready for the reading and math — and all of a sudden we have another test."

MISD Superintendent Robert Nicks said he will examine the need for the Terra Nova test in elementary schools — and if no clear reason for the test is given — it will be eliminated.

"I'm taking a look at it because it's non-essential testing, and it creates an additional paperwork burden on teachers in terms of preparation," Nicks said. "It dilutes focus from the mandatory test. I would anticipate that this will provide more time and greater focus for our teachers and students on the state test by not diluting that focus."

'I'm taking a look at it because it's non-essential testing, and it creates an additional paperwork burden on teachers in terms of preparation.'

—Robert Nicks, MISD superintendent

The mandatory test in Texas is the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills (TAAS) test. It will be revamped and re-released as the Texas Assessment of Knowledge and Skills starting in 2003.

The future tests will require more studying and a more stringent curriculum. By eliminating the Terra Nova, proponents say more time and attention will be devoted preparing for the new state test.

In addition to the extra preparation and study time that would be available for the TAAS, eliminating the Terra Nova test also would save money the district spends to purchase it annually. The test is usually administered to children in grades K-6, at a cost of $11.75 per test.

At this price and with more than 10,000 MISD elementary students, the Terra Nova costs an estimated $121,000 for the district, not excluding students who are exempted

Two deputies become heroes out of the blue

By Andrea Fryrear
MRT Correspondent

It was about 2:30 p.m. Thursday at the Midland County Courthouse. It was the day after a holiday and things were quiet.

But that soon changed.

A dramatic rescue was about to unfold.

It all started when a frantic woman came running around a corner toward the metal detector at the courthouse entrance where two officers are always stationed. Under her arm was a young boy whose face was an alarming shade of blue.

Bush's daughter must pay $600 for underage drinking violations

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — President Bush's 19-year-old daughter Jenna was fined $600 Friday and her driver's license was suspended for 30 days on charges of underage drinking and trying to use someone else's ID to buy liquor.

The University of Texas student did not attend the back-to-back hearings held to settle two separate incidents. Defense attorney Bill Allison said she was out of town.

Allison entered a no-contest plea to a charge that Bush tried to use someone else's identification to buy alcohol at a popular Mexican restaurant May 29.

Municipal Judge Karrie Key ordered Bush to pay $100 in court fees, perform 36 hours of community service and attend a session where victims of alcohol-related crimes discuss their experiences. If she completes the requirements and stays out of trouble for three months, the charge will be dismissed.

However, the underage drinking

MC looks at future needs after 'master plan' report

By Hillary S. Condon
Staff Writer

It's the incredible shrinking college campus.

As enrollment goes up, Midland College is finding less and less space available for its students and the things that come with students — such as cars, supplies and other things that require room to roam.

Planners estimate if Midland College continues at its current growth in enrollment, but does not increase the amount of space and resources, the campus facilities will be grossly outgrown by the year 2020.

In Midland College's master plan report, it states although the college "has reacted in a tremendous way" to the growth in enrollment, even adding 100,000 square feet of additional space will only match the current need.

Among other things, the study recommended MC build a new academic building and convert the Learning Resource Center (which is almost half office and training space) back to library space only.

MC President David Daniel said the plan offers productive suggestions that follow the school's growth.

"It means the institution is growing, and as it grows, we must find additional space," he said. "We must make our programs represent excellence in all things, and I think that overall, we're meeting it. This long-range plan is a comprehensive and thorough projection of what the institution will need as we move along."

Hanssen pleads guilty to spying for Moscow

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Former FBI agent Robert Hanssen pleaded guilty Friday to 15 counts of espionage and conspiracy to spy for Russia as part of a plea agreement to avoid the death penalty.

Appearing in green coveralls and a shirt with 'prisoner' stamped on the back, Hanssen, 57, told U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton that he spied for Moscow.

Hanssen

When asked how he pleaded, Hanssen replied: "Guilty." Asked whether he understood the charges against him in the agreement that he had entered into with the government, he replied, "Yes, I've gone over it in detail, sir."

Hanssen's lawyer, Plato Cacheris, told the judge that his client had spied intermittently since 1979, but took several breaks, including one from 1992 to 1999.

"He was not a person who spied constantly for 20 years," Cacheris said of Hanssen.

He said that Hanssen had resumed spy activities in 1999, but when the end was near, "he had a premonition that he was going to be arrested." He said that Hanssen had been examined by a psychiatrist who advised against a mental defense, pleading insanity. It would have been an uphill battle to plead innocent, because of all of the charges.

The plea agreement calls for Hanssen to get life in prison, but he was not sentenced Friday. His lawyers asked Hilton to consider Jan. 11, 2002, as the sentencing date.

Under terms of that agreement, Hanssen's family gets to keep their home in Vienna, Va. and the family's three vehicles. As long as his wife, Bonnie, cooperates with authorities, she will receive part of his retirement pay from the FBI.

The agreement provides that Hanssen cannot author or help write any book, article, film or documentary, including giving interviews to writers or media organizations without receiving permission from the FBI first, to ensure that disclosures won't endanger national security. Any profits would go to the U.S. government.

Cacheris told the court that the plea agreement was a victory for both his client and the government. "The death penalty has been removed," he said. And Hanssen promised to report all factors involved in his spying activities, first for the Soviet Union and then for Russia.

Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson said that accepting a plea deal was difficult, "given the gravity of Hanssen's betrayal."

But he said that in choosing that route, "we determined that the interest of the United States would be best served" by an agreement requiring Hanssen to tell what he knows about his activities.

He said the plea deal "will enable our government to assess fully the scope and consequences of Hanssen's activities."

U.S. Attorney Kenneth Melson said the government's decision to accept a plea was based on two five-hour sessions that lawyers had with Hanssen and his attorneys.

"We expect him to be candid with us and truthful with us," Melson said, adding that Hanssen will have to take polygraph tests.

Hanssen pleaded guilty to 15 counts of espionage and conspiracy to commit espionage and six counts were dismissed as part of the plea agreement.

Cacheris revealed that, contrary to original belief, Hanssen had begun his spying activities in 1979. It was first thought that he had started in 1985.

Cacheris said Hanssen voluntarily ceased those activities in 1981, but picked them up again in 1985 and continued until approximately 1991-92.

During that time, he said, Hanssen transmitted sensitive classified information to his Russian handlers.

Talking to reporters outside the courthouse, Cacheris said that Hanssen has information the governments wants.

"How he did what he did is important for the government to know," Cacheris said.

"They're (the government) going to learn things they did not know," he said.

Cacheris said he hoped that Hanssen would be sent to a federal prison at Allenwood, Pa., because it would be convenient for Hanssen's family to visit him there.

"His family very much stands with him," Cacheris said. He said that Hanssen's wife and his family, would get Hanssen's federal retirement benefits, under terms of the agreement.

Cacheris described Hanssen as being in control of his activities and said he had no Russian handlers.

"He never met any Russians," the lawyer said.

Cacheris said that Hanssen "very much wanted to make amends. That's a big reason for this position today."

"They want information they are now going to get," he said, "and Mr. Hanssen's life has been spared." Cacheris acknowledged that if Hanssen "doesn't cooperate truthfully and fully, then can abort the agreement."

Cacheris said he didn't know what Hanssen did with money he was paid for his activities. But he did say that his government benefits "are preserved for the wife," although Cacheris said he didn't know the exact amount.

Hanssen initially pleaded innocent, in May, after plea negotiations broke down.

The Hanssen's live in Vienna, Va., a Washington suburb. Hanssen has been detained at an undisclosed facility since his arrest in March.

The 25-year FBI veteran is accused of giving Soviet and later Russian agents thousands of pages of classified documents detailing some of the nation's most closely held secrets about weapons systems, defense plans and how it spies on other countries.

Hanssen allegedly disclosed the identities of Russian agents secretly working for the United States who later were executed.

Lee County Sheriff Harold Ray Presley, left, is shown in Tupelo, Miss. Presely, the Mississippi sheriff whose kin included Elvis Presley, pushed a deputy clear before both he and the man he was tracking died in a bloody shootout early Friday.

Sheriff in Tupelo, Miss., cousin of Elvis Presley, shot to death

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — The Lee County sheriff, a cousin of Elvis Presley, was killed in a shootout with a suspect early Friday.

Sheriff Harold Ray Presley, 53, died at North Mississippi Medical Center. The suspect, who had fled from a roadblock hours earlier, also was killed and two people were injured, Highway Patrol spokesman Warren Strain said.

Presley had been sheriff since 1993. His father was the brother of Elvis Presley's grandfather, making them first cousins once removed. The late king of rock 'n' roll was born in Tupelo in 1935.

Strain identified the gunman as Billy Ray Stone, 53, of Baldwyn. A few hours before the fatal shootout, Strain said, Stone had fled after he was stopped at a routine roadblock.

"During the chase he went behind a church and gunfire was exchanged, Strain said. "The car chase continued until Mr. Stone wrecked the vehicle and a foot chase ensued."

The officers lost track of the suspect, but then about 5:15 a.m., a homeowner in northern Lee County called the sheriff's department because his dogs were barking.

Presley went to the scene and he and the homeowner went to a shed on the property.

"They opened the door and the suspect started shooting," Strain said. Presley pushed a deputy out of the way and was apparently struck several times but managed to return fire, killing Stone, Strain said.

"He almost certainly saved the deputy from injury or death," Strain said.

The homeowner was also shot and underwent surgery at the Tupelo hospital. Strain said the man was in satisfactory condition.

It was not immediately known why Stone had fled the roadblock in the first place.

When he was first elected, Harold Presley said he received calls from Elvis fans who wanted to buy his campaign signs and added, "God has blessed the Presley family."

He had joined the department in 1988 as a narcotics officer.

Bush proposes cutting global warming aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, after faulting the Kyoto climate treaty for excluding developing nations from its requirements, wants to cut U.S. aid for helping Third World countries combat global warming.

While asking Congress for nearly $4 billion to address climate change, roughly the same as last year, Bush proposes reducing assistance to other countries by $41 million from last year's $165 million. He calls for shifting more responsibility to private industry.

The figures are contained in a June 29 report, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, that Bush sent to House Speaker Dennis Hastert and Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the Senate president pro tem. The White House had no comment Friday.

The 52-page report provides the first public look at an inventory of Bush spending on climate change. The issue, along with Bush's related energy policies, has become increasingly prominent with Bush's reversal of a campaign pledge to regulate carbon dioxide pollution and his rejection of the 1997 Kyoto accord that has been broadly supported but not ratified by any U.S. allies in Europe.

Much of Bush's climate change budget amounts to shifting about $400 million toward areas such as burning coal more cleanly, insulating homes to use less energy and giving tax credits for electricity produced from wind and less-polluting agricultural waste.

Europeans have been unhappy with Bush's condemnation of the Kyoto agreement, which commits industrialized countries to reduce emissions such as carbon dioxide that are believed to trap heat in the atmosphere, warming it like a greenhouse.

Just before heading to Europe, Bush told reporters on June 11 the U.S. should help reduce heat-trapping pollution from Third World countries. "We want to work cooperatively with these countries in their efforts to reduce greenhouse emissions and maintain economic growth," he said.

However, his budget would reduce money for programs intended to assist countries like Brazil, India, Indonesia, Mexico, the Philippines, Poland, Russia, South Africa and Ukraine increase their industrial development with only minimal contributions to global warming.

In his report, Bush says several U.S.-backed projects are ready to be privatized. Those include projects creating more efficient lighting in Mexico and wind power in India, using agricultural waste as fuel for electric power and heat in Brazil and expanded coal-bed methane recovery in China.

"Some programs were reduced to eliminate unrequested earmarks or certain projects approaching commercialization that are more properly funded by the private sector," Bush's report says. "Other higher priority programs were increased."

Critics say the report hurts Bush's credibility.

"The president has said he wants to be a leader on global warming and instead he's not only undermined the Kyoto agreement but slashed the programs he's telling the public are important to him. That's not leadership — that's a sham," said Philip Clapp, president of the National Environmental Trust.

Bush also proposes:

■ $1.1 billion in energy tax credits over 10 years for solar and renewable energy sources to help reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

■ Federal environmental regulators in 2002 "will demonstrate technology for an 85-mile-per-gallon, mid-size family sedan that has low emissions and is safe, practical and affordable."

■ Cutting NASA's climate change research by $90 million, or almost 8 percent from last year's $1.2 billion.

Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., and 35 other Democrats had told White House budget director Mitch Daniels he must turn over any budget and planning documents related to the Bush administration's policies on global warming. The documents were required to be submitted to Congress as part of the Foreign Operations Appropriations Act.

The report notably excludes any price tags for the new initiatives Bush announced last month to study the rise in the Earth's temperature, fund research for technology to cut heat-trapping emissions and bolster coordination among research institutions throughout the world.

President Bush celebrates birthday with family 'in his element'

By Anne Kornblut
N.Y. Times News Service

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — It was a hectic day of family fun, and former President Bush wanted to capture the memories.

But his instant camera was proving stubborn. And so, grinning sheepishly as his son swung at a golf ball nearby, the elder Bush turned to the professional photographers trailing behind.

"Do any of you guys understand these things?" he asked, climbing a grassy hill toward the group.

His son, not to be outdone, called the photographers' attention his way.

"Nobody is commenting on the birthday hat!" the younger President Bush complained.

Camera shutters whirred, capturing the playful duo, and as the elder Bush ambled back toward his son, the image was both powerful and utterly goofy: Two men, father and son, both presidents of the United States, wearing matching baseball caps marked '41' and '43,' the number of their respective presidencies.

"Forty-one gave me the 43 hat," Bush said, clearly tickled at the way his 55th birthday had begun. They teed off, then scooted across the 18-hole course in a golf cart. And that was all by 7 a.m.

For President Bush, it was a fitting start to his first trip to Kennebunkport as president, and marked the beginning of a four-day vacation that promises to be vintage Bush: Days filled with competitive outdoor sports, starting at dawn and ending with a quiet family dinner at home.

And although some of the images had more of an upper-class tinge than his political advisers might like — Bush and his father cast fishing lines off the family boat Friday afternoon, with the family's oceanfront estate not far off — the president was obviously in his element, joking with his father and appearing as comfortable as if he were at his Texas ranch.

AP Photo

President George W. Bush, celebrating his 55th birthday Friday, smiles as his father, former President Bush, steers their golf cart at the Cape Arundel Golf Club in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Bush tended to some official business, taking a call from Russian President Vladimir Putin Friday morning and receiving his daily intelligence briefing. Bush and Putin, in their first direct contact since they met in Ljubljana last month, discussed the Iraq sanctions program and the ongoing conflict in Macedonia, as well as continuing discussions about US plans for a missile defense, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

At the same time, White House officials laid the groundwork for a busy schedule next week, when Bush embarks on a new round of public appearances to promote his vision for education reform, faith-based initiatives, and his version of a patients bill of rights. "The president's going to urge action in the Congress," Fleischer said.

But the action this weekend will be strictly recreational. Before a birthday dinner Friday night, the Bush fishing expedition caught a large fish, apparently a striped bass. The president returns for another round of 7 a.m. golf Saturday, although at least one player on the course Friday, having suffered through the first Bush presidency, expressed frustration at the presidential entourage. "Cripes, we got all this crap again?" shouted the woman, when she spotted reporters standing on the green.

Bush, setting aside his usual tendency to lower expectations for his performance, also announced that he would take over the family title in a favorite Bush sport. Horseshoes.

The president said he would "regain the family championship," prompting his father to raise his eyebrows.

"No. No way," the older Bush said.

Although his brother Jeb and sister Dorothy flew in for the long weekend, the Bush's twin 19-year-old daughters remained in Austin, and Bush said he hoped to talk to them by telephone.

White House officials refused to comment on the sentencing of Jenna Bush, one of the twins, for trying to buy alcohol with another person's identification.

During the golf game, the elder Bush, 77, rode with his son in a golf cart. When he got out to walk, however, he hammed up his performance before the crowd, making wisecracks about his son when the president was out of earshot.

Walking toward the 18th hole, the younger Bush shouted, "We're having a lot of fun out here." His father, muttering under his breath, deadpanned, "Easy for you to say." When the former president missed a shot, he ordered spectators to forget they had seen it, then offered an excuse.

"Nervous in front of a crowd," the former president said.

His camera, meanwhile, was restored to good health in time for the fishing expedition. Its batteries had run out.

POLICE REPORTS

Compiled from staff reports

Robbery

A 16-year-old Midland juvenile was placed at Culver Youth Home Friday after being arrested in connection with the aggravated robbery of a local convenience store.

Midland Police responded to an aggravated robbery Friday at the 7-Eleven located at 4401 W. Illinois. The clerk told officers that at about 12:50 a.m., a juvenile male entered the store and walked directly to the counter showing the clerk a handgun in his waistband. The juvenile demanded all the money and left the store with an undetermined amount. The clerk was not injured.

Investigation following the incident led to the identification and detention of the juvenile a short time later, police said.

Violation of parole: Michael D. Carr, 45, of Midland was arrested by Midland Police officers Thursday at 6:18 p.m. in the 2900 block of West Illinois on a charge of violation of parole. No bond.

Possession of a controlled substance/criminal nonsupport: Shawn L. Cook, 29, of Midland was arrested by Midland County Sheriff's deputies Thursday at 1:20 p.m. in Central Detention on charges of possession of a controlled substance and criminal nonsupport. No bond.

Violation of probation: Mickey L. Kennedy, 41, of Big Spring was arrested Thursday at 3 p.m. in the 100 block of West Industrial on a charge of violation of probation. Bond: $7,500

Possession of a controlled substance: Pablo A. Tagle, III, 20, of Midland was arrested by Midland Police officers Thursday at 10:32 p.m. in the 4400 block of West Wadley on a charge of possession of a controlled substance. No bond.

FINE: Drinking charge to go on record

charge, which stems from an incident in April, will go on her record as a conviction because of the restaurant violation. Bush's no-contest plea had been deferred by Community Court Judge Elisabeth Earle, who found her guilty Friday, fined her $500 and suspended her license.

Jenna's twin sister, Barbara, a Yale University student, pleaded no contest last month to underage possession of alcohol stemming from the visit to the Mexican restaurant.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer declined to comment on the developments Friday, saying it was "a family matter, not a government matter, and it's not an issue the White House is going to get into." He spoke from Kennebunkport, Maine, where the family is vacationing.

BOOKS: 39 authors' works to be sent to Bushes

(From 1A)

Midland authors as well.

"This is a good promotion for Midland," Ms. Hopkins said. "It's a way for us to help the authors further their own cause and agenda as writers."

Like most people, Ms. Hopkins said Ms. Bush may not be aware of the vast number of published authors who live or once lived in Midland.

Thirty-nine separate authors' works will be sent to the White House, and each one has also written a few words about why they chose to be an author in Midland, which will be compiled in a letter that will accompany the books.

Wayne Barton, author of "Return to Phantom Hill," said "for the writer of history-based fiction, Midland is a pretty good place to work." He said the area has an extremely rich history and many of its stories have already found their way into his books.

"But all of us who have written about the area have hardly begun to tap the wealth of material. I know several more good stories from around here, and I hope I'll get the opportunity to tell some of them," Barton said in his explanation of why he is a writer in Midland.

Mary France Beverley is sending two books, "Great Hometown Restaurants of Texas" and "Cowbells and Coffins — The Old General Store." She came to Midland as a school teacher and eventually became a freelance writer. Ms. Beverley said she could find "no reason to leave the area because Midland offers a literary climate that is encouraging to writers."

As the idea for the project developed, Linda Bond, director of the Arts Assembly of Midland, said the Arts Assembly wanted to help Ms. Hopkins in her efforts. Ms. Bond determined the proper protocol and channels in Washington, D.C. while Ms. Hopkins contacted the authors and gathered the books.

Joyce Silverman, community relations manager at Barnes and Noble, also offered her assistance. The book store aided the project by providing some of the more difficult to acquire publications.

"Barnes and Noble was a big help, and so was the Haley Library," which donated a few books to the effort, Ms. Hopkins said. "There has been a lot of effort on lots of people's part, and I don't want to take the credit," she added.

Because all the copies of the books were donated by the authors, the only cost for the project will be time and shipping.

HEROES: Officers save child choking on candy

(From 1A)

Jake Ussery and Andy Acklin, two deputy sheriffs, were on duty at the metal detector.

That turned out to be good news for the child.

Ussery has 14 years of police experience, while Acklin boasts 12 years. To some, they are known as the Blues Brothers. On this occasion, however, "Life Savers" might have been more appropriate.

"This woman just came running around that corner out of the blue.'' Ussery said. "We could tell she was absolutely beside herself."

The young boy, who appeared to be about 4 or 5 years of age, had swallowed a piece of candy that had become lodged in his throat, blocking the flow of air.

"He was wailing his arms and legs, and then Jake looked at me and said 'Andy, do it!'" recalls Acklin.

The boy attempted to reach down his throat and dislodge the candy himself, forcing Ussery, who was worried that he would push the foreign matter farther down, to restrain him. Acklin then twice used the Heimlich maneuver with no results.

"That third thrust got it out though," Acklin said, "along with everything else that was in his stomach."

'That third thrust got it out though, along with everything else that was in his stomach.'
— Andy Acklin, deputy sheriff

The officers sent the mother and her son, who was now breathing normally, into an office to clean up and calm down. When they returned to check on the pair, both mother and son had vanished.

On Friday, both officers and the staff at the courthouse expressed concern for the young child and said they hope the mother will contact them with an update on his condition.

Although the lifesaving technique was successful, Acklin said he was terrified throughout the ordeal.

"When I saw the look in that kid's eyes ... I've never been that scared in my life. It felt like my heart was in between my feet," he said, adding, "It seemed like it took forever, but it probably didn't take 20 or 30 seconds."

Both men said they have performed lifesaving maneuvers on adults, but feel using them on children is an entirely different situation.

"That sort of thing affects you more after it's over because you have time to think about it," he said. "When it happens you just do what you're supposed to do. That's why we train."

According to Acklin, the officers have to be trained in lifesaving techniques and have their training updated every two years.

County Judge Bill Morrow said he and all the staff at the courthouse are "extremely proud that the officers responded so quickly and appropriately."

According to Morrow, the courthouse has only employed security personnel like Acklin and Ussery for about a year and a half. He said because of the high emotions that are often involved in the courthouse's proceedings they wanted to be certain "jurors and citizens feel safe in the courthouse."

While the choking incident was not something the courthouse anticipated using the officers for, Morrow, Ussery and Acklin all feel it proves the value of having security personnel on staff and in visible locations.

"If we didn't have a post at each station, she wouldn't have had anyone to turn to," Acklin said.

SPACE: With enrollment up, MC outgrowing campus

(From 1A)

MC Director of Public Relations Elise Coombes said this was the first time the college has done this type of study — but the need for such a comprehensive long-term plan has been around for some time.

"We wanted to have a plan for the next 10 years," she said. "We need to know exactly what we need and exactly where we need it."

The report showed a steady increase in student population since the college's groundbreaking — from 694 students in 1970, to 2,374 in 1980, 3,672 in 1990, and 5,000 in 2000. If the enrollment continues as projected, future Midland College students may face a serious shortage of space.

In the year 2000, the number of enrolled students called for at least 320,000 square feet of instructional space. The actual number was 230,000 square feet. The report warned that, without the addition of more instructional space, in 2010, the school would be short 170,000 square feet — and short by 260,000 square feet by the year 2020.

With problems with space shortage in the classroom come problems with space shortage in parking as well, Daniel said.

"There will be another parking lot adjacent to the Aaron Building with 398 additional spaces," he said. "We'll also be building more between the Technology Center and the Allison Fine Arts Building. This is helpful not only for our students, but for others using our facilities for meetings and activities."

Those space projections are based on all currently standing structures on and off campus, including the Advanced Technology Center, as well as those under construction, like the Dorothy and Todd Aaron Medical Sciences Building.

"This is what we needed to be more proactive and take it to the next level," Ms. Coombes said. But she said actual construction depends on funding.

Daniel said one of the most critical factors is one that will be solved this fall, when the Aaron Medical Sciences Building is completed.

"The most critical factor is science classrooms and labs, as well as general purpose classrooms," he said. "The Aaron Medical Science Building, which is a collaboration with Texas Tech, will free up some space in the Davidson Health Sciences Building, which will allow our programs to grow in that area."

Daniel said the college currently is considering leasing space to handle additional enrollment during the "prime-time hours," between 8 a.m. and about 1 p.m.

"Most of our students are on main campus during those prime-time hours," Daniel said. "At least 60 percent of our students, maybe more, work 30 or more hours a week at a job. That makes about 8 to noon the highest priority."

He also said the addition of the Advanced Technology Center helped by providing space for technical classes, but the college currently is searching for strategies to increase the number of students in afternoon and evening classes.

"One of the critical needs the college and the community has faced is for technology training, and the Advanced Technology Center has helped a great deal in providing adequate space and facilities," he said.

TEST: MISD may do away with Terra Nova

(From 1A)

from taking the test due to disabilities and other extenuating circumstances. In the 1999-2000 school year, the district paid $144,000 to administer the Terra Nova tests.

This estimate is based on year 2000 numbers.

Despite upcoming budget negotiations and pressures from all sides to save money, Nicks said the cost will not be a factor in his decision to keep or to eliminate the test.

"Money is always a factor, but in this particular case, it's not the prevailing criteria," Nicks said. "Teacher time, in terms of preparation and administering the test is more important to me than money on this particular issue."

Ms. Spencer, who taught fifth grade for 17 years before teaching fourth grade, said the TAAS requirements are already a lot for kids to handle.

"(The TAAS test) really tells me more than a timed test, because some kids take timed tests well — even though they might not be the high-performing students," she said. "Some kids freak out when you set the timer and they know they have 10 minutes. I just think it's too much testing."

She also said many items students need to know for the non-essential Terra Nova are different from items on the TAAS — even in the same grade level.

"For instance in math, in fractions in fifth grade, you do not have to find the unlike denominator, so you work on the concept of fractions and what fractions are," Ms. Spencer said. "And on the Terra Nova, they're filling in unlike denominators, which totally blows their mind if they don't have the concept of fractions down."

Throughout the month of July, Nicks will speak to teachers, administrators and directors to find out if they believe the test should remain in the classrooms. If they do, he said, they had better be pretty convincing.

"I will ask them if there are any prevailing reasons why we should continue a test that's not required, requires money to purchase it and is a burden on teachers," Nicks said. "If they can't come up with some real valid reasons as to why it's a necessity to keep the test, it'll go."

Nicks will make his final decision regarding the Terra Nova by the end of the month.

DEATH NOTICES

Jessie (Chuy) Martinez Rodriquez

Jessie M. Rodriquez, 60, died Friday, July 6, at his residence.

A rosary and vigil will be held on Sunday, July 8, at 7 p.m. at Reyes-Garcia Chapel. The funeral Mass will be said on Monday, July 9, at 11 a.m. at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with Father Jerome Burnett officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Reyes-Garcia Funeral Home.

He was born on May 1, 1941 in San Antonio to Prudencio "Lencho'' and Geneva "Juanita" Rodriquez. At an early age, he moved to Midland with his family where he was reared and educated. In the late 1960s, he moved to Fredrick, Okla. where he resided until 1992. After he returned to Midland, he worked as a concrete finisher. He was a Catholic.

Survivors include three sons, Joel Rodriquez of Texas and Jessie Rodriquez Jr. and Joe Rodriquez, both of Fredrick, Okla.; his parents, Prudencio "Lencho" and Geneva "Juanita" Rodriquez of Midland; seven brothers, Pablo Rodriquez, Guadalupe "Lupe" Rodriquez, Prudencio "Picho" Rodriquez Jr., San Juan Rodriquez, and Freddie Rodriquez, all of Midland, Raul Rodriquez of Odessa, and Tony Rodriquez of North Carolina; four sisters, Angelita Martinez and Gloria Lerma, both of Midland, Josefina Baraquil of San Jose, California, and Dolores Gabaldon of North Carolina; several grandchildren; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins.

Willa Mae Bennett

Willa Mae Bennett, 75, died Friday, July 6, at a local hospital.

Services are pending with Pipkin Funeral Home and Chapel.

C.G. Jones

Services for C.G. Jones Jr. of Midland are set for 3 p.m. Sunday, July 8, at St. Stephens Catholic Church with Father James Bridges officiating. Rosary will be held at 7 p.m. today, July 7, at the Pipkin Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will be held at 10 a.m. Wednesday, July 11, at Seaside Cemetery in Corpus Christi. Pipkin Funeral Home and Chapel is in charge of the arrangements.

Jones died Friday, July 6, in Midland.

He was born Nov. 16, 1933 in Alice to Charles Gatewood Jones Sr. and Julia Ruth Jones. He married Diane Dusenbery on Aug. 26, 1958 in Houma, La. He worked for Getty-Texaco as a petroleum engineer.

He is survived by his wife, Diane Jones of Midland; two sisters, Lessie Hoffman of Corpus Christi and Mona Stepzyk of Mauha Hau Beach, Calif.; and several nieces and nephews.

Gadget-giddy Americans hooked on communications — and monthly bills

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press

SILVER SPRING, Md. — Steve Perna is wired, though not from his morning coffee.

Every day, the car salesman clips a cellular telephone, an e-mail-capable pager and palm-sized personal digital assistant to his waist.

He also carries a laptop and has desktop computers at home and the office.

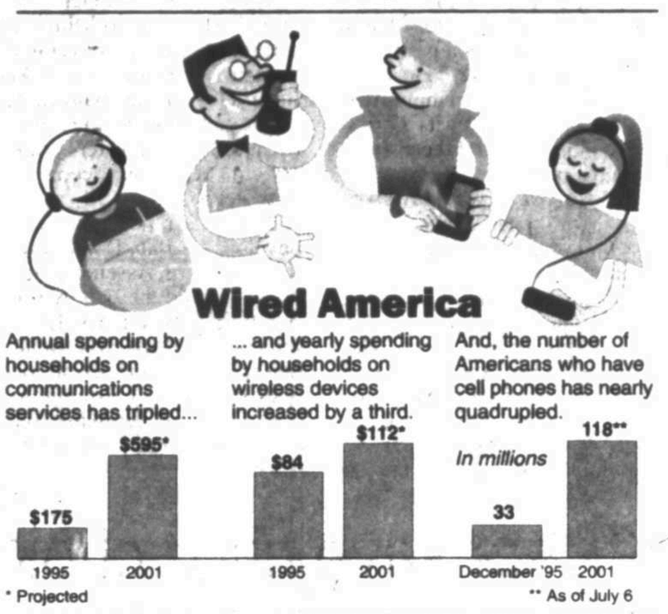
"When you get all those things hanging off your belt it looks like Batman's utility belt or something," joked Perna, who manages online sales for a Lincoln-Mercury dealership outside Washington.

A caped-crusading superhero he is not. But Perna is among millions of people for whom the art of staying in touch and going about their daily business would seem all but impossible without wireless telephones and other electronic gizmos that started gaining popularity in the mid-1990s.

This year, the typical family will spend $595 on communications services — to surf the Internet, use a wireless phone or page someone — up from $175 in 1995, according to the Consumer Electronics Association, an industry trade group.

These modern inventions have created an entirely new category of monthly communications spending — a far cry from the days when people just dropped a check in the mail to pay for the phone, and maybe cable television.

Cell phones and Internet access via a cable modem on a home computer costs Beth Dougherty, 37, a consultant from Fairfax, Va., and her husband more than $200 per month.



What couldn't she live without? Cable TV, for starters. "I love my 120 channels."

Nathaniel Ennis, 35, of Washington, a temporary mail clerk at the International Monetary Fund, uses his home computer to send out resumes and surf the Internet. Add cell phones for him and his wife and premium cable TV, and the monthly communications bill runs about $140.

"My wife and I have been talking about getting a fax, too," Ennis said during lunch in a park near his Washington office, a cell phone tucked into in his shirt pocket.

Michael Powell, who guides telecommunications policy as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, questions how much people can afford to spend on electronic gadgetry.

Powell uses a BlackBerry e-mail-capable pager, three cell phones and a Palm Pilot. At home with his wife and their two sons, he has two computers, two phone lines and a fax machine.

"It's a big chunk of my budget," Powell told The Associated Press.

Some 118 million Americans have wireless phones — nearly four times the number in December 1995, according to the Cellular Telecommunications & Internet Association, an industry trade group.

More than half, or 54 percent, of the 105 million U.S. households have at least one cell phone, according to Forrester Research, a technology research firm in Cambridge, Mass.

One in 10 households has a pager; 6 percent use a Palm Pilot.

"This is ballooning into two, three-hundred dollar communications bills," Powell remarked.

Such costs are certain to climb as the technology is put to new uses.

For example, families moving into 18 houses being built in the Seattle suburb of Renton can look forward to controlling any device, appliance or system in their homes using the TV remote control, mobile phone, personal digital assistant or some other wireless device.

Perna, 43, has his cell phone and BlackBerry pager costs covered by his employers, leaving him with a bill of about $80 a month for Internet access and a home phone line.

His Handspring Visor palm-sized computer was a gift from his wife.

Not everyone sees the need to load up life with technology.

Krystal Williams, who heads to business school at Dartmouth College in the fall, said she recently canceled her cell phone because she didn't use it enough to justify the cost.

But she has a computer at home and wants to get a laptop for school. She also won a Palm Pilot during orientation for business school, but hasn't powered it up yet.

"I think my world will get increasingly high-tech when I start business school, but right now I just can't afford some stuff," said Williams, 27, of Chapel Hill, N.C.

Two years with the Peace Corps in the Dominican Republican taught her that she can live without any of the gadgets.

"People have things because we like to appear we're important," Williams said.

Teen arrested in killing may have been motivated by sexual orientation or race

AZTEC, N.M. (AP) — A teenager was arrested in the slaying of an openly gay Navajo high school student who had been known to wear makeup and carry a purse to school.

Authorities are investigating whether the killer was motivated by sexual orientation or race in the death of 16-year-old Fred Martinez Jr., whose body was found near sewer ponds last month in Colorado.

Shaun Murphy, 18, of Farmington, agreed Friday not to challenge his extradition to Colorado to face second-degree murder charge. He was returned to a detention center to be picked up and brought to the southwest Colorado town of Cortez, near Mesa Verde National Park.

A preliminary autopsy suggested Martinez was bludgeoned and died of exposure. His decomposed body was found June 21 by two children playing near the sewer ponds south of Cortez, where he lived.

Martinez was described by classmates as openly gay, outgoing and happy.

Montezuma County Sheriff Joey Chavez has said Martinez's homosexuality and race might have been motives in his slaying, but authorities have said that is only speculation.

Martinez was last seen at his home June 16, when he left to attend a carnival at the Ute Mountain Roundup Rodeo.

New Bush policy would authorize health care for 'unborn children'

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is poised to classify a developing fetus as an "unborn child" eligible for government health care, giving low-income women access to prenatal care while bolstering the administration's anti-abortion credentials.

Abortion rights advocates call it a backdoor attempt to undermine Roe v. Wade, the landmark Supreme Court decision that guaranteed the right to legal abortion.

The plan, now under review, would make the fetus eligible for services under the State Children's Health Insurance Program.

Specifically, states could consider a fetus "a targeted low-income child" and therefore pay for prenatal care and child birth expenses, according to a draft letter now being reviewed by Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson.

"It is well established that access to prenatal care can improve health outcomes over a child's life," says the letter to state health officials from Dennis Smith, director of the Center for Medicaid and State Operations at HHS.

Abortion rights advocates countered that it's not the fetus that is served by prenatal care but the mother.

"This is the most cynical of politics, and once again, the administration trying desperately to satisfy the demands of the far right wing," said Kate Michelman, president of the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League.

She added that the policy seems to be an attempt to set a precedent establishing the fetus as a person under law, "leading to the criminalization of all abortions."

She and others said they, too, want to provide more prenatal care, and encouraged the Bush administration to support legislation expanding the children's health program to pregnant women. Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y., said she would reintroduce legislation doing just that next week.

Meanwhile, the National Governors Association warned HHS that while some states will embrace the new option and some will immediately reject it, other states will face divisive battles over whether to go along.

The HHS letter notes that the new policy would not take effect until after it was published in the federal register, giving interested parties the opportunity to comment and assuring a vigorous debate over the matter. At the same time, Planned Parenthood said it was investigating its legal options, hoping to file suit stopping the regulation.

"This is a long way from a done deal," said the group's president, Gloria Feldt.

A leader of abortion opponents dismissed the notion that the administration move would have much impact, saying federal law already recognizes rights of unborn fetuses.

"I certainly don't think it's going to have any sweeping impact in other areas of the law," said Douglas Johnson, legislative director for National Right to Life.

HHS spokesman Bill Pierce said the goal is to expand access to prenatal care and give states more flexibility in running their programs, not to promote an anti-abortion agenda.

"States don't have to do this," he said.

The review comes as the administration contemplates another high-profile issue: whether to allow federal funding for research using stem cells that come from embryos. Abortion opponents are lobbying President Bush to ban this funding, while Thompson privately lobbies for it.

Dow falls more than 200 points Friday on bad news from high-tech companies

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow was down more than 200 points Friday afternoon on bad news from high-tech companies EMC and Advanced Micro Devices.

The earnings warnings, combined with an increase in the June unemployment rate, intensified fears that second-quarter results will be even worse than expected and that a turnaround will not happen before 2002.

"A lot of people had bought the idea that the worst was behind us. Obviously that's not the case," said Richard Dickson, an analyst at Hilliard Lyons. "The earnings warnings, particularly in tech, are continuing and that's spreading to the rest of the market."

In afternoon trading on Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrials were off 227.45 at 10,252.41, extending the decline of the previous two sessions.

The Nasdaq composite index was off 67.66 at 2,012.45 after three consecutive daily declines, while the Standard & Poor's 500 index lost 26.98 to 1,192.26, its third consecutive drop.

Trading volume was light because of the Fourth of July holiday earlier this week. Still, analysts said the downturn reflects Wall Street's general uncertainty about where the market is headed.

"The question is still when is the economy going to turn," said Todd Clark, co-head of trading at WR Hambrecht. "With the EMC and Advanced Micro Device misses being so big and really blindsiding the Street, it's caused people to say, 'I'm pulling bids and I'm not going to be buying right now.'"

On death penalty, Europeans hold U.S. to higher standard than China

By Pamela Sampson
Associated Press

PARIS — Even though China puts far more prisoners to death each year than any other country, it is executions in the United States that spark the real outcry in Western Europe, where capital punishment has long been outlawed.

Europeans are troubled that the United States, with its deeply ingrained democratic values, invokes a punishment many consider barbaric and medieval.

"We don't expect the same from China," said Walter Schwimmer, secretary-general of the Council of Europe, the continent's leading human rights institution.

Hands Off Cain, Italy's leading anti-death penalty group, has adopted the causes of a number of death row prisoners in the United States.

Such information is difficult to get in China, which according to the London-based rights group Amnesty International executed more people in the last three months than the rest of the world did in the past three years.

Amnesty said Friday that 1,781 people have been put to death since the Chinese government launched an anti-crime campaign called Strike Hard in April. There have been fewer than 20 executions in the United States in the same period.

Bianca Jagger, center, gestures as she introduces former French Justice Minister Robert Badinter, right, to Kerry Max Cook, a former American death row inmate, Thursday during a break at the first world congress against the death penalty at the Council of Europe in Strasbourg, eastern France. Cook spent 20 years in prison, 13 on death row, before testing of key DNA evidence pointed to another suspect.

"We are not anti-American," said Hands Off Cain's spokeswoman, Elisabetta Zamparutti. "It's just easier for us to know about prisoners from the United States because it is a democracy."

Europe's strong distaste for capital punishment is reflected in many institutions. Abolishing the death penalty is a requirement for membership in the 15-member European Union and the 43-nation Council of Europe.

On June 25, the Council of Europe threatened to remove the observer status of the United States and Japan unless they stopped all executions and moved to repeal the death penalty. The vote came after the execution of Timothy McVeigh, the first person to be put to death under U.S. federal law in 38 years.

Schwimmer said he believes McVeigh should have been spared, even though the Oklahoma City bombing in 1995 took the lives of 168 people and was the worst act of domestic terrorism in the country's history.

"Everyone in Europe was shocked by the first execution under federal law — even in the case of Timothy McVeigh, who was a brutal killer," Schwimmer said.

While the loss of observer status at the Council of Europe would have little practical effect, it could be embarrassing for the United States, which was voted off the U.N. Human Rights Commission in May.

President Bush, who supports the death penalty and vigorously applied it as Texas governor, drew protests when he visited Europe last month.

France, which last let its infamous guillotine drop in 1977, has been particularly critical of the death penalty. In March, President Jacques Chirac appealed for a world ban on capital punishment before the U.N. Commission on Human Rights.

After McVeigh's execution on June 11, French Education Minister Jack Lang told Europe-1 radio that Bush "should examine his conscience." Lang was part of a French delegation that worked on behalf of a U.S. prisoner, Odell Barnes, executed in Texas for rape and murder. Lang and other lawmakers claimed Barnes did not receive a fair trial.

Both the French and British governments insist they persistently press China over the issue during official visits.

Many Europeans consider executions to be barbaric, but a June 12 editorial in France's Le Monde newspaper suggested Europeans also relish having an issue with which to bash the United States.

"It allows them to affirm a moral and judicial superiority over the American power," the newspaper said.

Oil worker for Texas company freed by guerrillas

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Guerrillas have freed a Scottish oil engineer nearly two years after kidnapping him for ransom, the British Embassy in Bogota said Friday.

Alistair Taylor, an oil worker for a Texas company, was released late Thursday to a hostage negotiator by the rebel National Liberation Army in eastern Arauca state, near the border with Venezuela.

"He's tired, he's lost weight, but he's in good spirits and is looking forward to seeing his family as soon as possible," said Johnny Walsh, an embassy spokesman.

Walsh said the 47-year-old Taylor was flown Friday to the capital, Bogota, where he was being examined by a doctor and was staying at the British ambassador's residence.

A brother is already in Colombia, Walsh said.

Taylor — who worked in Colombia for Weatherford International Inc., a Texas-based oil company — had not spoken to the press.

Walsh said he did not know whether a ransom was paid. Rebels had reportedly been asking $3 million for Taylor's release.

The case gained attention earlier this year when the rebels allowed a British journalist to interview Taylor and take video of him in the mountain camp where they were holding him. The British government had been pressing for his release.

Taylor was taken hostage Aug. 27, 1999, in the eastern town of Yopal, an oil center near the border with Venezuela. He was traveling to work in a taxi when two other taxis cut the vehicle off and men got out and grabbed Taylor, Walsh said.

Taylor was one of four foreigners being held hostage in Colombia, according to Juan Francisco Mesa, the country's top anti-kidnapping official.

Campaigners call on U.N. conference to support controls on small guns

By Ed Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON — Nighti Aparo lives in a country awash with guns.

Both her father and brother were slain by Ugandan rebels and she and all four of her sisters were abducted at gunpoint. Her case, cited by the international aid agency Oxfam, is one among millions.

"Half a million people are killed every year by small arms, not to mention the people who are injured, displaced or left destitute," says Oxfam's Sam Barratt.

The guns that killed Aparo's brother and father, he says, probably came from Sudan — part of an illicit international arms trade worth $1 billion annually.

On Monday, the United Nations opens a two-week special session in New York in an effort to control this international black market, which has contributed to millions of deaths worldwide. Campaigners hope member states will reach agreement on ways to trace weapons and on export regulations.

Officially titled The U.N. Conference on the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons In All Its Aspects, the meeting is expected to draw 177 lobbying groups.

According to the United Nations, small arms are designed to be used, carried and maintained by one person — such as pistols, assault rifles and sub machine guns. Light weapons, operated by crews, include grenade launchers, shoulder-fired anti-tank guns and portable missile launchers.

The United Nations reports there are more than 500 million small arms and light weapons in circulation around the world. Between 40 and 60 percent are illicit.

The Omega Foundation, based in Britain, says the number of countries producing small arms doubled between 1960 and 1999, while the number of manufacturers has increased nearly six times.

However, global production appears to be declining, according to the Small Arms Survey of Geneva. It says global production of small arms averaged 6.3 million weapons per year from 1980 to 1998, but in 2000 output dropped to 4.3 million. Three-fourths of last year's production was in the United States, largely for the domestic market, the Small Arms Survey says.

The United Nations says it cannot simply ban small arms, as it did anti-personnel land mines and chemical weapons, as the "international community regards them as necessary for a state's legitimate right of self defense."

Instead the conference aims to draw up a program of action to stop the arms from spreading illegally into conflict areas.

The United Nations says the small arms issue has been "at the forefront" of its agenda since the mid-1990s when "peacekeepers and humanitarian workers found themselves grappling with extraordinary amounts of weapons moving freely between combatants, ex-combatants and civilians."

U.N. studies in 1997 and 1999 have looked at the issues of tracing weapons, destruction of arms and control of manufacturing.

In his foreword to that study, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said the easy availability of small arms leads to more deaths in conflicts, and "a high proportion of the casualties are civilian."

"This has led to millions of deaths and injuries, the displacement of populations, and suffering and insecurity around the world," he said.

Sarah Meek of the conflict prevention organization International Alert says a critical goal for the conference is to ensure weapons are marked so that arms movements can be traced.

"Unless you know how the arms are moving around and where they are being smuggled onto the black market you will never really be able to stop the trade," said Meek.

Another issue the United Nations must tackle is export regulations, says Oxfam.

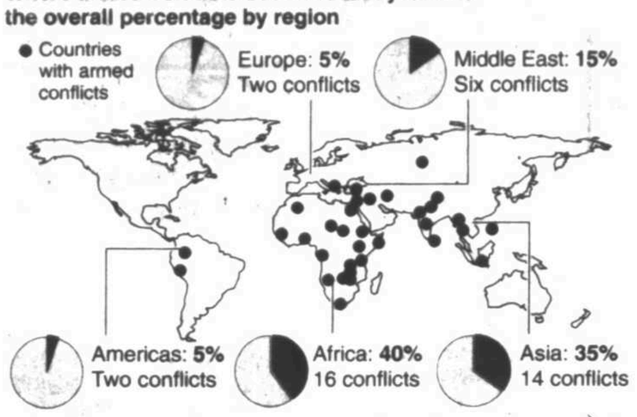
"States must set binding new international standards for responsible arms transfers, preventing the export of weapons where there is a risk that they will be used to commit serious violations of human rights," said Barratt.

Member states must also look at the "end-use" of weapons, he said, and make sure legal shipments of arms are not passed on — as in the case of guns leaking from Sudan into Uganda.

Armed conflicts

On Monday, the United Nations will open a special session in an effort to control the black market on small arms that has resulted in millions of deaths, mostly civilians, in the last decade.

Where armed conflicts occurred last year and the overall percentage by region



NOTE: Some countries have more than one conflict.

Ancient bull bash opens in Spain

PAMPLONA, Spain (AP) — At the stroke of noon Friday, in a storm of champagne spray, ketchup bombs and joyful noise, crazed crowds opened yet another San Fermin, the ancient bull bash that Hemingway made famous.

"Wonderful, no?" asked Eugene Sadaba, a serious-looking Spaniard whose umbrella stopped a heavy rain but did nothing against a sideways deluge of cheap sparkling wine, mustard and soggy flour.

The traditional "chupinazo" — rocket blast in Spanish — signaled the start of 280 hours of nonstop partying, punctuated early each morning by a madcap dash through medieval streets along with six large bulls.

For the faithful, the fiesta is built around daily bullfights, featuring Spain's star toreros and bulls selected from fine old ranches.

Mostly, however, the thrill is consorting at close range with the giant black creatures as they thunder through the heart of Pamplona.

"We came for the culture, the atmosphere...," began Judy Gonsalvez, a 26-year-old accountant from Cape Town, South Africa. Her friend, Jodie Sherwin from Sydney, Australia, cut her off in mid-sentence.

"It's the bulls, baby, the bulls," Sherwin said, with a loud laugh and another long pull from an open bottle.

Tens of thousands came for the festive first day. Organizers expect more than a million to show up before the traditional end, a mournful song called, "Pobre de Mi" — "Poor Me."

Most wore the fiesta's requisite garb: white pants and shirt, with a red sash and kerchief. By mid-afternoon, much of the white was mere backdrop to impromptu paintings in tomato sauce, egg yolk and red wine.

"Just good, clean fun," said Rod Park, 25, a computer specialist from New Zealand who came for six days to party. His shirt and pants were streaked in red and yellow.

The mixed crowd included American pilgrims on Ernest Hemingway's trail, young travelers on European summers and vacationers from nearby France. But the mood was clearly Spanish, rooted in tradition.

At one point after the good-natured storm of foodstuffs in the plaza, rival groups of Anglo-Saxon visitors squared off for a pitched battle with raw eggs and flour.

A young Spaniard waded into their midst and changed their minds with a friendly but firm warning: That, he told them, was not what San Fermin was about.

Habitual San Fermin revelers say the orderly chaos is the part they like best. Crowds seem rowdy, often chanting or singing the same World Cup soccer tournament lingua franca tunes that elsewhere can lead to mayhem.

In Pamplona, however, people laugh off most lurching and pushing. Police stand by in mildly good spirits and ignore with splendid stoicism the rowdy young men who get sick on their boots.

First aid stations stitch up the odd gash from broken glass. On a typical day, crews sweep up 17 tons of smashed bottles.

"Hospitals aren't all that busy," said Marisol Landazabal, a nurse who loves the party. "We put a lot of people in a room.we call the 'coctelera' (cocktail lounge) until they sober up a little. Then they go drink more."

Germany's BMW reinvents British cult classic, the Mini

By Hans Greimel
Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — BMW, known for its Teutonic precision in churning out luxury muscle cars, has undertaken the greatest cult car rebirth since Volkswagen brought back the Beetle.

This time it's the British Mini, the boxy little car famed for its squat silhouette and spartan design that has changed little since it first rolled off the assembly line in 1959.

Untouched, that is, until BMW started building the sleek, updated version that goes on sale in Britain starting Saturday.

"You can't compare the new Mini with the old. It's still a chic product, extroverted, a British icon. But the old is based on a concept 40 years old, and the new is a modern car with BMW quality," BMW spokesman Rudolf Probst said.

To ensure the new Mini lives up to BMW standards, 150 German workers are being flown in on weekly rotations to the Oxford assembly plant to coach their British counterparts on modern Mini making.

It's a risky venture for BMW, which bought Mini in 1994 bundled with Rover passenger autos and the flagship Land Rover off-road vehicle line.

Last year, BMW enraged British labor unions and auto fans by selling the other two loss-making brands into uncertain futures. Many Britons wondered what the Germans had in store for their tiny Mini.

Now, the Mini is to be the cornerstone of BMW's new small car line, following in the footsteps of DaimlerChrysler, which has successfully launched a compact Mercedes A-Class and the ultra-compact Smart car two-seater.

The new Mini goes on sale in Britain two months before its launch on the European continent. It arrives in the United States in March.

Already British demand is outstripping production. Mini has about 3,000 orders, meaning many customers won't be driving their new cars home until October, said Mark Harrison, British spokesman for Mini.

And the new Mini is even winning converts among Mini purists.

"It's not the same as the old Mini, but it's still a fantastic car," said David Hollis, who owns three Minis, one dating from 1963. "There was a backlash at first, but any resentment has faded away."

The original Mini made its debut in 1959 as British Motor Corp.'s version of a people's car. Sales were slow at first, but after Peter Sellers, John Lennon and Paul McCartney began driving customized Minis, the car rocketed to cult status.

The new Mini has a base price tag of $14,420, compared to the $657 sticker on the 1959 Mini. BMW hopes to sell about 30,000 new Minis this year and ramp up production to about 100,000 a year after that.

U.S. hands over serviceman to Japanese police

OKINAWA CITY, Japan (AP) — Ending a stalemate that threatened to cast a shadow over a key security alliance, the United States surrendered an American serviceman accused of rape to Japanese authorities Friday, allowing police formally to arrest him.

Prolonged deliberations by U.S. officials on whether to hand over Timothy Woodland to Japanese police had caused friction between Tokyo and Washington and enraged people on Okinawa, where American soldiers have committed a series of sex crimes in recent years.

"We have every reason to believe that completely fair and humane treatment will be accorded this serviceman," the State Department's No. 2 official, Richard Armitage, said in Washington.

Armitage said he expects Japanese who oppose the American military presence in Okinawa to try to take advantage of the case to promote a U.S. withdrawal, but believes the sergeant was turned over to Japanese authorities soon enough to prevent the situation from getting out of control.

Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi welcomed Friday's handover, but urged Washington to take ensure that troops behave.

"I'd like more efforts taken by the United States in overseeing U.S. servicemen so they are more disciplined," Koizumi told reporters.

Woodland, a 24-year-old staff sergeant, was arrested on suspicion of forcing an Okinawan woman up against a car and raping her June 29 in a parking lot outside a row of bars. The arrest came four days after police obtained a warrant.

On Friday, Okinawan police assumed custody of Woodland at Kadena Air Base, where he has been stationed, hours after U.S. Ambassador Howard H. Baker announced that Washington had given the go-ahead.

"In our discussion with the Japanese government, we have satisfied ourselves that our U.S. service member will receive fair and humane treatment," Baker said in Tokyo after talks with Foreign Minister Makiko Tanaka.

The U.S. government had been reluctant to hand Woodland over because of concerns about his legal defense under Japan's judicial system, which convicts more than 95 percent of suspects whose cases go to trial.

Okinawan police tried to allay fears that Woodland, who has denied the allegations, may be treated unfairly.

"We will pay maximum attention to his rights as well as to the victim's privacy," Chief Detective Isamu Inamine said after Woodland's arrest.

As is customary in Japan, no defense attorney had been present during the pre-arrest questioning of Woodland.

Rafter rallies past angry Agassi in Wimbledon men's semifinals

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — As Patrick Rafter thrust his fist in the air to celebrate his comeback victory Friday in the Wimbledon semifinals, an angry Andre Agassi fired one last shot.

Walking toward the net, Agassi pulled a ball from his pocket and belted it at the lineswoman who had infuriated him in the next-to-last game. She dodged out of the way and the ball slammed against the backstop.

The ugliness tainted a marvelous match worthy of tennis' best rivalry. Rafter was two points from defeat and trailed 5-3 in the final set before rallying for a 2-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2, 8-6 victory.

"I think he pretty well snapped," Rafter said.

The 28-year-old Australian, contemplating retirement after this year, will try for his first Wimbledon title in his second consecutive final. Last year he lost to Pete Sampras.

On Sunday he'll face Britain's Tim Henman or Croat Goran Ivanisevic. Their semifinal was suspended by darkness after a two-hour rain delay Friday with Henman leading 5-7, 7-6 (6), 6-0, 2-1.

Henman pulled ahead by surrendering just four points in the third set, which delighted a partisan Centre Court crowd and thousands of fans who watched a big-screen TV from the picnic terrace at the All England Club. He'll try to close out the victory Saturday and become the first Englishman to reach the Wimbledon final since Bunny Austin in 1938.

The women's final will follow. Venus Williams seeks her second consecutive Wimbledon title against 19-year-old Belgian Justine Henin, who ended Jennifer Capriati's bid for a Grand Slam sweep Thursday.

Rafter and Agassi, meeting in the semifinals for the third straight year, staged another see-saw struggle enhanced by their contrasting styles. Rafter smacked 30 aces and relentlessly rushed the net, while Agassi slugged return winners and scurried from corner to corner, his huffing and puffing audible in the stands.

After Agassi let his lead in the fifth set slip away and the score reached 6-all, he received a code violation for an obscenity. A lineswoman behind the baseline heard the profanity and immediately trotted across the court to inform chair umpire Mike Morrissey, who issued the warning.

"That's quite upsetting and a little classless for Centre Court, to go running up there," Agassi said. "I got upset at a shot I missed, and I didn't think anybody could hear it. But apparently the lady sitting closest to me can."

ROCKHOUNDS

Tengku Bahar/Reporter-Telegram
The Midland RockHounds' Chris Madonna (right) slides into second base but can't prevent San Antonio shortstop Corey Freeman from turning a double play in the second inning Friday evening at Christensen Stadium. The Missions won 11-6 to leave Christensen with a split of the four-game series.

Kelly has another big game as Missions down 'Hounds

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

What was once a house of horrors at Christensen Stadium for Kenny Kelly, has turned into a nice home away from home.

Kelly, who came into the series struggling to even make contact in his appearances at Christensen Stadium, has found a new swing. On Friday, Kelly went 5-for-6 to lead the San Antonio Missions to an 11-6 win over the Midland RockHounds.

Kelly, a former University of Miami starting quarterback, started on Wednesday by getting a single to break out of his 0-for-Christensen slump. He then followed with a 2-for-5 performance that included a home run.

On Friday, Kelly was almost unstoppable as he came just a triple away of hitting for the cycle. Kelly also scored four runs and drove in three more.

The offensive resurgence of Kelly helped the Missions split the four-game series with the RockHounds and has San Antonio tied for the lead with Round Rock in the Texas League West Division with an 8-8 record. Round Rock lost 8-3 at El Paso on Friday.

In what was looking to be a promising series against San Antonio for the RockHounds, who are two games back of the co-leaders with a 6-10 record, turned into a huge letdown with back-to-back home losses. It doesn't get any easier for the 'Hounds over the next week-and-a-half with an eight-game road trip on tap. That road trip includes a four-game swing through Round Rock which starts tonight.

The good news for the 'Hounds is that a 12-game homestand is on the horizon, starting July 16 against Wichita.

On Friday, Kelly and the Missions set the tempo of the game, beginning with the first inning when Kelly scored on an RBI single by Jake Weber.

Midland answered in the bottom of the first when Todd Mensik had an RBI double and Jacques Landry had a sacrifice fly to give the 'Hounds a 2-1 lead. That would be the only lead the RockHounds would have on the night because the Missions answered with two runs of their own in the top of the second for a 3-2 advantage.

After the 'Hounds tied the game at 3-3 in the third with an RBI double by Oscar Salazar, the Missions broke the game open with a three-run fourth, chasing Midland starter Justin Lehr (10-6). San Antonio then added a four-run fifth, putting a pounding on Midland reliever Ray Noriega for 10-4 lead.

The RockHounds had a golden opportunity to start a big rally in the fourth inning with runners at second and third base with nobody out. But the 'Hounds only managed to get one run across and left the bases loaded.

For the game, the 'Hounds left 11 men on base — six of them in scoring position. It also could have been a lot worse for the 'Hounds as the Missions left 13 stranded with eight left in scoring position.

The Missions also had five stolen bases with Willie Bloomquist leading the

Marlin takes pole in Pepsi 400 trial

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — For good and bad, Sterling Marlin will always claim a significant spot in the Daytona history books. He added another entry on the plus side Friday.

Marlin won the pole position for Saturday night's Pepsi 400 on the 10th anniversary of his first Winston Cup pole — also at Daytona — driving his Dodge around the famed 2 1/2-mile track at 183.778 mph. Ward Burton qualified second at 183.072 mph, followed by Stacy Compton (182.678) and rookie Casey Atwood (182.597), as Dodges swept the top four spots and continued to dominate qualifying at NASCAR's fastest tracks.

Dodge also swept the top three spots in the Daytona 500 and the Talladega 500. Daytona and Talladega are the only two tracks that require carburetor restrictor plates to limit speeds.

The image of Marlin on the pole is fitting for this, NASCAR's somewhat uneasy return to Daytona for the first time since the death of Dale Earnhardt in the Daytona 500.

It was Marlin's car that made first contact with Earnhardt, as a pack moved between Turns 3 and 4 on the final lap of the Feb. 18 race. Earnhardt slammed into the wall and was killed instantly.

Immediately after the race, many inconsolable fans blamed Marlin. He received nasty letters and e-mails, and even some death threats.

"I think everyone went back and watched what happened, and it's been 100 percent positive," Marlin said of the reaction after the initial uproar. "Tons of Earnhardt fans sent me mail, or would come up to me in the garage and apologize. They didn't do it, but they were apologizing for the few who did."

Not that the accident should be Marlin's legacy at this track.

He started coming here in 1964, riding the back of his father Coo Coo's pickup truck to watch him race. The first time Sterling raced at Daytona, he finished second.

But there were bigger days to come.

Marlin won back-to-back Daytona 500s in 1994 and '95, then won the summertime race in 1996. Combined with a pair of victories at Talladega in '95 and '96, Marlin enjoyed a three-year stint in which he overtook none other than Earnhardt as NASCAR's pre-eminent restrictor-plate driver.

"I love this place, it's been awful good to me," Marlin said. "I've always enjoyed it here. I know the tragedy in February was awful for all of us, but I know Dale would want the show to go on, and that's what we're all here to do."

Ex-Oiler Childress to be among Texans' owners

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Former Houston Oilers star Ray Childress and the chairmen of two major energy firms are among 10 minority owners of the NFL expansion Houston Texans, the team announced Friday.

Childress, a five-time Pro Bowl defensive lineman, is part of a group of local leaders who bought a combined 30 percent of the team. Texans founder Bob McNair and his family own the rest.

"I am very honored that each of these individuals has decided to invest in the Houston Texans," McNair said. "They represent a wide range of business and community interests but they all share one common bond — they are winners in their fields."

Childress, a Dallas-area native who starred at Texas A&M before playing 11 seasons with the Oilers, currently is chairman of Ray Childress Auto Group, for which he remains visible as a television pitchman. Chuck Watson, chairman and chief executive officer of Dynegy Inc. and owner of the minor-league Houston Aeros hockey team, will serve as a Texans vice chairman, McNair said.

Other minority owners include:

- Kenneth L. Lay, chairman of Enron Corp. and a major proponent of the public funding effort to help build Reliant Stadium for the Texans and Enron Field for the Houston Astros.
- Tilman J. Fertitta, head of Landry's Restaurants Inc. and a former minority stockholder of the Houston Rockets.
- Kirbyjon H. Caldwell, senior pastor of Windsor Village United

Davis Love III of Sea Island, Ga. hits his tee shot on the 11th hole during the second round of the Western Open Friday in Lemont, Ill.

Decision to play pays off as Love leads Western by 3 strokes; Woods makes cut

By Nancy Armour
AP Sports Writer

LEMONT, Ill. — For a guy who wasn't even supposed to be here, Davis Love III is making the most of the Western Open.

Love, who only entered the Western field after missing the cut at last weekend's Greater Hartford Open, shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday to take a three-stroke lead after the second round. He's at 11-under 133 for the tournament.

"After missing the cut last week and committing at the last minute, it is fun to get off to a great start," he said. "I am the most excited guy to be here because I haven't been playing much."

Tiger Woods, in danger of missing the cut after finishing the first round tied for 92nd, rebounded with a 68 and was eight strokes back. Phil Mickelson, who was one shot off the lead after the first round, is seven strokes off the lead.

He double-bogeyed the 18th after putting his second shot in the water and finished with a 2-over 74.

"When you're out there playing, I don't really think about the cut," Woods said. "I'm trying to get back in the tournament, at least give myself a chance going into the weekend. ... At least now I'm somewhat within striking distance going into the weekend."

Brandel Chamblee was second after a 67, and Scott Hoch (68) and Frank Nobilo (69) were another stroke behind at 137. The cut was 1-under 143 and 71 players advanced to the final two rounds of the tournament, sponsored by Advil.

Love got off to a strong start this season, winning at the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am and finishing second in a playoff the next week at the Buick Invitational. He had two more top 10 finishes, but then a bulging disc in his neck caught up with him and he missed the cut at The Players Championship.

"I started probably overworking, putting myself in a position that I wasn't competitive," he said. "That was frustrating. It wasn't because I wasn't working hard or swinging bad. It was just because physically, I couldn't do it."

He took two months off after the Masters, finally returning for the U.S. Open, where he tied for seventh. Worried about overextending himself before the British Open, Love decided to play the GHO and take this week off.

But when he missed the cut, his plans

Pak dominates on familiar course to lead Farr Classic

By Rusty Miller
AP Sports Writer

SYLVANIA, Ohio — It was just like old times for Se Ri Pak.

Pak shot a 9-under-par 62 Friday to take a two-stroke lead in the second round of the Jamie Farr Kroger Classic. She almost matched the course record she set three years ago while winning the first of her two consecutive Farr titles.

"Always here, I have a good memory on every hole," said Pak, who is 50 under in her 14 competitive rounds at Highland Meadows Golf Club. "All day, all week, every year I play well here."

Pak shot a 61 in the second round of the 1998 Farr — then the lowest score ever in an LPGA event, since eclipsed by Annika Sorenstam's 59 earlier this season.

Starting her round on No. 10, she had birdies at 11 and 12, both on 15-foot putts. She strung together three straight birdies to close out the nine, hitting her wedge approach shots to 8, 11 and 8 feet.

Pak, seeking her second win of the year, added four more birdies on the front side — most on relatively short putts after laser-like approach shots.

"This is my favorite golf course of all of them," Pak said.

Yet she missed birdie putts of 4 and 6 feet and lipped out a 12-footer that would have allowed her to threaten Sorenstam's tour record. On her final hole, Pak burned the edge of the cup on an 18-foot downhill putt.

Pak is at 10-under 132 at the tournament midpoint. She opened with a 70, starting Friday tied for 19th and three shots out of the lead.

Conditions were ideal for scoring. After gusting, swirling winds left many in the 139-player field shaking their heads after tossing around their shots in the opening round, there was almost no wind under sunny skies for the second round.

Heather Bowie was alone in second, putting together six birdies and a bogey for a 66 that left her at 8-under 134. She led by four strokes until Pak came out of the pack to pass her.

"I was surprised — very surprised — that 4 under was leading" as she looked at a leaderboard midway through her round, Bowie said. "I had a four-shot lead around the 16th hole and I thought might have a one-shot lead."

Carin Koch, Pak's playing partner, birdied four holes after hitting her approach inside 6 feet. Her bogey-free 66 put her at 135 but paled in comparison to Pak's assault.

"When you see there are birdies being made, it's easier to believe you can make them yourself," she said of playing with Pak. "She made some long putts early but it wasn't until the back nine when she was kind of like radar. She was hitting everything close."

Moira Dunn shot her second 68 late in the day and was fourth at 136.

Meg Mallon, Laura Diaz and Kris Tschetter each shot a 67 and were at 137, with Karrie Webb and first-round co-leader Alicia Dibos among the seven players at 138. Webb shot a 68 in the second round with Dibos coming in with a 71.

Mallon holed a 7 iron on the 154-yard 2nd. With her seventh ace, she trails only Kathy Whitworth (11) and Vicki Fergon and Jan Stephenson (8) in the LPGA record book.

Schlaffers earn honors

Joey Schlaffer, a Midland High graduate and a junior pitcher at Southwestern University in Georgetown, was recently named to the All-Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference team. Also, John Schlaffer, an MHS graduate and a sophomore second baseman at Hardin Simmons University in Abilene, was recently named to the All-American Southwest Conference team.

Joey Schlaffer had a record of 6-3 with eight saves as Southwestern went 40-11 this past season. He was named to the All-SCAC postseason tournament team after going 2-0 without allowing only one run in 14 innings of work.

He allowed 11 hits, struck out 12 and walked just one batter. Opposing batters hit just .212 against him.

John Schlaffer hit .353 and led his team in on-base percentage, runs scored and home runs as Hardin Simmons went 26-16 this past season. John was also named to the all-tournament team for the ASC postseason tournament where he had five hits, including a home run, scored six runs and had five RBIs.

Armstrong bids for third straight Tour win

By Michael McDonough
Associated Press Writer

DUNKIRK, France — Lance Armstrong might own the yellow jersey right from the first day.

He begins his bid for a third straight Tour de France title on Saturday with a 5.1-mile individual time trial in the northeast port of Dunkirk. Time trials are one of Armstrong's strengths, and the Texan who has made a remarkable comeback from cancer will be one of the most formidable contenders in Saturday's prologue.

Last year he was second in the opening time trial, trailing Britain's David Millar by two seconds. He then captured his only stage victory of the race in the 36-mile time trial between Freiburg, Germany, and Mulhouse in eastern France.

Armstrong set a Tour record for time-trial stages longer than 15.5 miles and built a nearly unbeatable lead with two days left in the race.

After Saturday, Armstrong will still have more than 2,100 miles ahead of him. The 20 stages of the Tour take the 189 riders clockwise around France, starting on the northern Opal Coast.

Armstrong's strongest rivals include 1997 champion Jan Ullrich, who has a history of weight problems but is considered in good shape this year. Other riders with a shot at an upset include Spain's Joseba Beloki, who was third last year, and France's Christophe Moreau.

"I disagree that I'm the overwhelming favorite," Armstrong said. "I think there are a lot of guys that are just as strong as me."

SEMIS: Agassi lashes out at lineswoman

(From 1B)

Agassi didn't complain at the time, but his game came unhinged. He lost the next point to fall behind 7-6, then served poorly and committed three unforced errors to lose the next game — and the match.

Before shaking Rafter's hand, Agassi fired a forehand toward the lineswoman at the other end of the court.

"I meant to hit that in the net," Agassi said with a glare that suggested otherwise.

"I'm sure he's very upset," Rafter said. "I thought it was a little bit unfair of that lady to report him. I guess she took the rules a little bit seriously."

Tournament referee Alan Mills said Agassi would be fined $2,000 for the obscenity but would not be punished for the shot that nearly struck the lineswoman.

Agassi was also angered by two rulings four points apart in the fourth set. During the ensuing changeover, chair umpire Morrissey refused Agassi's request to remove the linesman who made those calls.

"You've got plenty of people," Agassi told Morrissey. "Get rid of him. How many is he going to miss before you get him off? Two more? Do you want me to find someone for you?"

Morrissey instead moved the linesman to another location behind the baseline. In the next game, Agassi slammed a serve that landed 10 feet long and just missed the linesman on the bounce.

"I was trying to hit the line, and it just got a little bit away from me," Agassi said.

What really got away from him was the fifth set. He broke in the first game, then had six more break points the rest of the way but lost them all as Rafter kept battling back from the brink of defeat.

Serving at 0-2, 15-40, Rafter intercepted back-to-back bullets from Agassi, blocking the second one with a reflex volley to win the point.

"I guessed the right way," the Aussie said. "I knew if I lost that game, the match was over."

Agassi served for the match at 5-4 but missed four first serves, allowing Rafter to charge the net four times. Rafter also won a rare baseline rally on the 15th shot as he pulled even at 5-5.

On match point, Rafter pulled a looping backhand crosscourt and it landed just inside the sideline for a winner and the victory.

"Maybe one in 200 matches that you play, something like that happens where it turns around for you," he said.

Rafter also beat Agassi in a five-set semifinal last year. This loss, Agassi said, was harder to take.

"I'm just disappointed that I let an opportunity go by," Agassi said. "Nothing comes to mind right now except kicking myself."

At least two linespeople likely favor Agassi doing just that.

Gilder's 65 good for 2-stroke advantage

ADA, Mich. (AP) — Senior PGA Tour rookie Bob Gilder shot a 7-under-par 65 Friday and held a two-stroke lead after the first round of the Farmers Charity Classic.

Gilder, who won the Verizon Classic in February and finished third at the Senior PGA Championship in late May, birdied the final three holes to finish 5 under on the back nine. Mike Hill, Jim Dent and defending champion Larry Nelson were all at 67, while five players were another stroke back.

"I came out (in Thursdays pro-am) and hit the ball real well," Gilder said. "It was a feeling that I had been looking for all year."

Gilder, who birdied two of the first five holes, was 2 under when he chipped in from 35 feet for an eagle on the 526-yard, par-5 13th.

"I was missing birdie putts and then all of a sudden a chip goes in for two birdies," said Gilder, who is ninth on the senior money list with more than $795,000. "Of all the shots that didn't look like they were going to go in, that was one of them."

WESTERN: Leader Love holes out of bunker changed.

"I'm just trying to get back healthy and competitive, and this was going to be a week to come back and make another step forward to get ready for the Open," Love said. "As soon as I got off to a good start (Thursday), I said, 'All right, last week was just a bad one. I'm still on the same path.'"

With none of the leaders breaking away Friday morning, Love made his move in the afternoon. He eagled the par-5 5th when he made a 35-foot downhill putt, and made the turn at 9 under. He just missed birdie putts on Nos. 10, 11 and 12, but came through with the shot of the day on the par-4 13th.

After his drive landed in a bunker on the right side, Love blasted out — and flew right into another trap, this one on the side of the green. His sand shot from about 15 yards hit the green and rolled ever so slowly toward the cup.

The crowd roared as it finally dropped in, and Love responded with a little wave. He added another birdie on 18 with a 25-foot putt.

"I'm very happy with the way I'm playing," Love said. "It's fun to not only be hitting it good and scoring well, but then to also have the chip-ins and the fun putts go in."

Woods was just glad to finally get his swing back. He's been in what, for him, almost qualifies as a slump, finishing out of the top 10 in consecutive tournaments for the first time since 1999, and struggling mightily Thursday to finish at 1-over 73.

He didn't seem to be having any fun, either, yelling at himself, throwing clubs and looking stonefaced throughout the round.

"You just need to go home and relax and unwind and know you need to come out and play well the following day," Woods said. "Put it behind you because, in the end, the round's over, you can't do anything about it."

And a new day brought a new Woods. Not only did he play better — he had birdies on three of his first six holes — he was smiling and laughing.

On the 18th, he raised his putter triumphantly as his 25-foot birdie putt headed for the hole. But it rolled on, missing by an inch. He looked crushed for a moment and then smiled as the crowd groaned.

He thrilled the crowd again on his final hole, the par-5 9th. After reaching the green in two, his 40-foot eagle putt hit the cup, bounced up and then settled back down at the edge, leaving him with a birdie.

Qualifying was originally scheduled for Thursday night, but was postponed because of rain. Drivers also experienced a 3 hour, 10 minute rain delay midway through Friday's run.

Dale Earnhardt Jr., qualified after the rain delay and earned the 13th starting position. He was second-fastest during a clean Happy Hour practice, turning his best lap at 189.577 mph. Kevin Harvick, who took over Earnhardt's car after his death, also qualified late and will start 29th.

By sweeping the top positions, Dodge once again will have its best chance to break into the win column for the first time in this, Chrysler's first year back in Winston Cup racing after a 16-year hiatus.

Burton was racing among the leaders at the Daytona 500 before he got caught in the 19-car crash that changed the complexion of the race with 25 laps remaining. Marlin, Compton and another Dodge driver, Bill Elliott, all finished in the top 10.

"Ward had a car capable of winning here in the spring, I had a car capable of winning at Talladega," Compton said. "I think our speedway program is as good as anyone's right now. We just need to have a little luck. If the stars can align, Dodge can win."

Atwood earned the best starting position of his young career driving the Dodge that his teammate, Elliott, used to win the pole position at the Daytona 500. In a newer car, Elliott qualified 18th.

"The No. 9 team built a few more speedway cars, I don't know why," Atwood said. "But they let me drive this one, and I'm pretty happy about it."

Andy Houston had the fastest Ford, qualifying sixth after missing the last three races — a great way to celebrate the birth of a son earlier this week.

HOUNDS: Missions win

way with two.

Aquilino Lopez (2-3) got the win in relief, while Jason Ellison picked up his fifth save by pitching the last three innings.

Bacon brothers don't plan to trade insults on 'Behind the Music'

Kevin and Michael Bacon

NEW YORK — Although "there's a good level of creative tension," Kevin Bacon doesn't expect to be swapping insults with his brother, Michael, on VH1's "Behind the Music."

"Ours would be so boring that they would have to do a special edition of 'Behind the Music: Most Boring Bands,'" the 43-year-old actor-musician tells People magazine in its July 9 issue.

The Bacon Brothers' new CD is "Can't Complain."

"The thing we don't do is get into petty, backbiting stuff. We don't get drunk and punch each other out," says Bacon, who starred in 1984's "Footloose" and 2000's "Hollow Man."

"We're famous for going to the hotel rooms and actually cleaning them up."

The Bacon Brothers will be on tour through Sept. 3.

NEW YORK — India.Arie says her heroes range from Stevie Wonder and Donny Hathaway to Oleta Adams, Oprah Winfrey, Toni Morrison and "my mom, who taught me everything I know about singing and life."

Her debut album, "Acoustic Soul," combines the warm, folky stylings of James Taylor with the earthy sincerity of Erykah Badu.

But the 25-year-old singer-guitarist tells Entertainment Weekly magazine in its summer double issue that her first show after completing the album was a career low.

"It wasn't good — then they videotaped it and used it as this 30-minute thing on MTV2!"

The career she'd most like to have is "something like Celine Dion's," she says. "I wouldn't want to be that big, but I'd like to have a person attached to my destiny the way her husband is to hers."

A tour with Sade is scheduled to begin July 14.

NEW YORK — Paul Walker plays an undercover detective posing as an import-car street racer in the new movie "The Fast and the Furious."

The 27-year-old, whose previous films include "Varsity Blues" and "The Skulls," now has an import car of his own.

"It's called a Nissan Skyline. It's my toy. The steering wheel is on the right-hand side, so it's really kind of bizarre and going through the drive-through is a problem," he told The Associated Press.

"I pull up to the drive-through window and then I get out of my car, walk around, hand them the cash and then walk back around with the food, get in and go."

"The Fast and the Furious" has taken in $77.9 million in two weeks.

LOS ANGELES — Frances O'Connor plays the "mother" to David, a robot boy programmed to love, in Steven Spielberg's new film, "A.I. Artificial Intelligence."

The robot boy, played by Haley Joel Osment, is placed with O'Connor and her husband (Sam Robards), whose real son is in cryonic freeze because of an incurable disease. The experiment fails, and David is abandoned.

O'Connor, whose previous films include 1999's "Mansfield Park," doesn't believe there will be robots like David any time soon.

"I don't think we'll ever get to the point where we'll re-create people to that level because, I mean we might, but it won't be for a very long time," she says.

NEW ORLEANS — Two Marsalis brothers took their performance in honor of Uncle Sam well into the wee hours on the Fourth of July.

Jason Marsalis, a drummer, and trombonist Delfeayo Marsalis performed modern jazz tunes in a 10-hour celebration that stretched into early Wednesday at the Trinity Episcopal Church in New Orleans.

Jason and Delfeayo are the younger sons of jazz pianist Ellis Marsalis, whose other sons are trumpeter Wynton and saxophonist Branford Marsalis.

Other acts at the event included the New Orleans Trombone Choir, pianist Victor Atkins of Los Hombres Calientes and the Caledonian Society Scottish Dancers and Pipes, who played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The event was organized by Albinas Prizgintas, the church's organist and musical director. Prizgintas also has orchestrated annual 24-hour "Bach Around the Clock" events, in which Johann Sebastian Bach's pieces are played at the church for a full day.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Friday, July 6, 2001:

Your popularity crests this year. You particularly enjoy being with one person at a time, be it for business or personal reasons. You tend to hold a lot in, and you are not always verbal. If you are single, a potential mate could be emotionally unavailable or married. Check people out carefully. Someone special will pop up if you are discriminating. If you are attached, share more of your inner mental meanderings, and trust will build. AQUARIUS understands your interest in life/death issues.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You're in the limelight. Others admire your bright and buoyant ideas. When no one has a suggestion, you show your innate Aries ingenuity. Friendship brings you closer to a loved one. In fact, you deal with a particular love relationship as you would a friendship. Tonight: Let off steam.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ Take off and hop into the car as early as you can. You don't want to be waylaid or asked to do something you would rather not. You choose to indulge a loved one or yourself. You don't need to justify your actions. You work hard enough. Tonight: All eyes turn to you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Deal with a partner head on. Give up on hemming and hawing. Brainstorm with someone and you'll come up with unusual ideas. Seek out an expert opinion. Express yourself, while keeping in mind what would be the most diplomatic thing to say. Tonight: Opt for different.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Others want your impressions and feedback. Think about how much you want to reveal to a key associate or partner. You might opt to say little. Someone still tries to manipulate a conversation. Remember, you're overly sensitive. Tonight: Do something special with a loved one.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Another's brightness and inventiveness work with your goals. Together, you two become an unbeatable force. Somehow you'll discover how much fun you have as well. Don't forget a meeting or get-together. Others count on you. Tonight: Party the night away.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Your creativity encourages others to discuss problems with you, yet you might need to establish boundaries about how much you are willing to do — even if you are flattered. Slow down. Take some time off. Go out for some R&R. Tonight: Early to bed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Funnel your attention to where you can make changes. Get the impression of someone who knows much more about the issue at hand. Helpful advice goes a long way toward resolving the issue. Remember that your adviser has the gift of attachment. Tonight: Be the flirt that you are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ Keep the ball rolling. Don't allow a conversation to close off before you have established understanding. Someone shares many ideas and heavy feelings, which you, as a Scorpio, can deal with easily. Establish greater comfort at home. Tonight: Stay close to home.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ Work with your finances and make sure you can deal with an expense before you make the commitment. Speak your mind to a playful associate. Even when working, you two have a lot of fun. Return calls and catch up on a friend's news. Tonight: Visit a favorite eating spot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ You prove to be most convincing when dealing with funds and a project. You might want to think about asking for a pay raise in the near future. Practice asking with a loved one. You see, it isn't that hard! Meanwhile, indulge yourself with a new item. Tonight: Order in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★ You might volunteer to pitch in before you realize exactly what you agreed to. Spontaneity pushes you in a new direction. Break past a pattern that sometimes prevents you from being as close to someone as you would like to be. Energy soars late afternoon. Tonight: Your smile wins the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ A friend shows you unusual understanding, which could surprise you. Slow down and spend quality time with a loved one. Huddle in and pull back from the hectic pace you have been keeping. A family member invites you for a get-together. Tonight: Put on the breaks.

GOREN BRIDGE

With Omar Sharif and Tannah Hirsch

Rubber Bridge or Duplicate?

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH
♠ A 4
♡ 6 4 3 2
◇ A Q 4 2
♣ K J 9

WEST
♠ J 9 8 6 2
♡ K 8 5

EAST
♠ K 10 7
♡ Q J 10 7
◇ J 10 9 3

SOUTH
♠ Q 5 3
♡ A 9
◇ K 8 6
♣ A 10 6 5 4

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♣	Pass	1◇	Pass
1NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠

Follow the play of this deal, then decide. Was it from a rubber bridge game or duplicate?

The auction was routine. South showed a balanced, minimum opening hand and, with a like hand, North bounced into the obvious game.

West led a low spade. Afraid of losing a trick to the king of spades and having a heart come back, declarer rose with the ace of spades. Since there were five fast tricks available in spades, hearts and diamonds, declarer needed only four club tricks to land the game. That allowed the luxury of losing a trick to the safe hand, if necessary. At trick two, the king of clubs was cashed in case the queen was singleton, then the jack was run to West's queen. With the queen of spades protected from attack, declarer was able to win any other return and cash the winners for nine tricks.

Obviously, the game was rubber bridge, since South showed no interest in overtricks, the lifeblood of duplicate, and instead concentrated on fulfilling the contract.

In a duplicate pairs contest, declarer should play a low spade from dummy to the first trick. There is a 50-percent chance the opening lead was away from the king. Even if the king is with East, there is no guarantee that the defender will switch to a heart. And even if there is a heart switch, declarer can still land the contract, and as many as 12 tricks, by guessing which defender holds the queen of clubs. All in all, the odds of pursuing as many overtricks as may be available by playing low to the first trick are too good to ignore.

Gutsy Miller notches 11th win as Houston defeats Royals, 8-3

Associated Press

■ Pro Baseball

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Wade Miller has often impressed Houston Astros manager Larry Dierker with his fastball. This time, he did it with his heart.

Miller won his fourth straight start, and Houston rallied for five runs in the sixth inning to beat the Kansas City Royals 8-3 Friday night.

Miller (11-3) got through 5 2/3 shaky innings, allowing three runs on nine hits. He walked two and struck out two.

"Miller wasn't good, but he was tough," Dierker said. "He was behind in the count on almost every hitter. But he managed to get some movement on some pitches. He showed some signs of why he won 10 games, but he was lucky to win 11."

Miller is second in the NL in victories to Arizona's Curt Schilling (12).

"It was tough out there," Miller said. "It was hot. I struggled a little bit at first. You have to bear down with runners in scoring position. I give all the credit to the offense, because they came back."

All-Star Lance Berkman went 2-for-4 with a homer and two RBIs, and Vinny Castilla hit a two-run double in the sixth for the Astros, who improved to a season-best eight games over .500. Nelson Cruz pitched two innings for his second save.

Trailing 3-1, Houston jumped on Dan Reichert (7-7) in the sixth.

Julio Lugo led off with a single and stole second before Jeff Bagwell walked. After Berkman bounced into a force play, Moises Alou singled home Lugo, extending his hitting streak to a career-high 14 games.

Richard Hildalgo reached on an infield single, and Reichert gave up the tying run on a four-pitch walk to Daryle Ward. Castilla doubled to center to score two more and chase Reichert.

Jeff Austin came in and gave up a sacrifice fly to Brad Ausmus that made it 6-3. Reichert was charged with six runs and seven hits in 5 1/3 innings.

"It was probably the best slider he's had consistently in several starts," Royals manager Tony Muser said. "I left him in (in the sixth) because he's a sinkerball pitcher and we needed a double play."

The Royals went ahead 3-0 in the second on Carlos Beltran's RBI double and Luis Alicea's two-run single.

Reichert struck out the side in the third, getting Craig Biggio, Lugo and Bagwell looking. Lugo fell back to avoid one Reichert curveball that broke back over the plate for a strike.

The Astros got on the board in the fourth when Berkman hit his 24th home run of the season into the right-field bullpen.

Berkman extended his hitting streak to a career-high 19 games, the best in the NL this season and the longest active streak in the majors. Berkman is hitting .446 (33-for-74) during the streak.

"I got hot there for about two weeks when it seemed like I was going 2-for-4 every night," Berkman said. "You can't really explain it. You just kind of store up the hits while you can get them. You know you can't hit .450 for the rest of the year."

Houston got two unearned runs off Roberto Hernandez in the ninth on Bagwell's RBI groundout and Berkman's run-scoring single.

Padres 8, Rangers 3

SAN DIEGO — Ryan Klesko drove in four runs, and fellow All-Star Phil Nevin hit his 20th homer as the Padres beat the Rangers.

Klesko has knocked in 74 runs, matching Greg Vaughn's 1998 club record for RBIs before the All-Star break. Klesko hit a two-run triple in a four-run fourth and drove in two runs in the fifth before being thrown out trying to stretch his hit into a double.

Nevin, who drove in three runs, hit a two-run homer in the fourth two pitches after Klesko tripled, and added an RBI double in the seventh to finish with three hits. Mark Kotsay also had three hits for San Diego.

The Padres won for the third time in four games. The Rangers were coming off two straight wins over baseball's best team, the Seattle Mariners.

Braves 6, Red Sox 5, 10 innings

BOSTON — Brian Jordan's bases-loaded single in the 10th inning Friday night lifted the Braves to a victory over the Red Sox.

The win was costly for the Braves, however, as shortstop Rafael Furcal could be lost for the season with a dislocated shoulder.

Atlanta's Chipper Jones homered off Pesky's Pole in right field in the eighth inning to tie it at 3, then the Braves added two in the ninth. Boston was down to its last out when Trot Nixon and Manny Ramirez hit consecutive homers off Steve Karsay (1-0) to send the game into extra innings tied 5-5.

Jose Cabrera pitched a perfect 10th for his second save. Sun Woo Kim (0-1) took the loss despite working 1 1/3 hitless innings.

Expos 10, Blue Jays 7

TORONTO — Lee Stevens hit a tying, three-run double in the seventh inning, and Geoff Blum hit a sacrifice fly in the eighth as Montreal rallied to beat Toronto.

Vladimir Guerrero and Mark Smith homered for the Expos, who won their third straight.

Brad Fullmer hit a grand slam for the Blue Jays, who dropped to 14-9 against their Canadian rivals. Carlos Delgado and Jose Cruz Jr. also homered for Toronto.

Graeme Lloyd (7-1) pitched two innings for the win, and Ugueth Urbina earned his 13th save. All-Star Paul Quantrill (7-2) was the loser.

Cubs 15, Tigers 9

DETROIT — Roosevelt Brown homered, doubled and went 5-for-6 as the Cubs posted their first win in Detroit in 56 years.

Matt Stairs drove in four runs for the Cubs, including a key single in a seven-run fifth inning. The total of 24 runs marked the most in the two-year history of Comerica Park.

Eric Young drove in three runs and scored three for Chicago before leaving in the eighth with what appeared to be a minor hip injury.

The Cubs hadn't won in Detroit since Game 3 of the 1945 World Series. The Tigers had their first sellout at Comerica Park since opening day.

Yankees 8, Mets 3

NEW YORK — Alfonso Soriano hit a three-run homer that gave the Yankees a seven-run lead, and the World Series champions extended their longest winning streak in three years to nine games.

Andy Pettitte (9-4), among the seven Yankees All-Stars manager Joe Torre is taking to Seattle, beat Al Leiter (4-8) in a rematch of last year's World Series finale.

Tino Martinez added a pinch-homer off Turk Wendell in the eighth, the second pinch-homer of his career and second in 11 days. He has hit seven of his 17 homers in his last nine games.

Indians 14, Cardinals 2

CLEVELAND — Jim Thome hit three two-run homers to lead the Indians in their highest-scoring game of the season.

Thome connected in the first and third innings off All-Star Matt Morris (10-5), and again in the seventh off Mike James as the Indians bounced back from a tough loss to Boston and won for just the third time in nine games. With a chance to become the first AL player to hit four homers in a game since Cleveland's Rocky Colavito in 1959, Thome struck out looking in eighth against Steve Kline.

Phillies 3, Orioles 2, 10 innings

BALTIMORE — Travis Lee homered in the 10th inning as Philadelphia handed Baltimore its fourth straight loss.

Lee was hitless in four at-bats, stranding six runners, before connecting off Mike Trombley (2-2). The solo shot was his 13th homer this season and second in four games against Baltimore.

Rheal Cormier (5-1) worked the ninth, and Jose Mesa got three outs for his 23rd save in 25 chances. Melvin Mora and Mike Kinkade homered for the Orioles, who fell seven games under .500 (39-46), matching a season high.

Devil Rays 5, Marlins 4, 11 innings

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Russ Johnson singled home the winning run in the 11th inning for Tampa Bay.

Greg Vaughn, who earlier hit a three-run homer, doubled off Ricky Bones (2-3) with one out in the 11th. Johnson singled on the next pitch.

Florida's Derrek Lee forced extra innings with a two-out, ninth-inning solo homer off rookie Victor Zambrano (1-1).

Florida is 1-8 on its 11-game road trip. The Marlins had won five straight against Tampa Bay and are 45-31 all-time in interleague play.

Twins 5, Reds 4

MINNEAPOLIS — Jacque Jones doubled in the go-ahead run in the eighth inning for Minnesota.

Torii Hunter led off the eighth with a triple and Jones followed with a double to center off reliever Chris Nichting (0-2).

Eddie Guardado (6-0) retired four of five batters to get the win in his 468th appearance with the Twins, tying Jim Kaat for second place on the team's career list. LaTroy Hawkins earned his 22nd save in 26 chances.

Pirates 10, White Sox 6

CHICAGO — Reliever Bob Howry's wild pitch put Pittsburgh ahead during a five-run rally in the eighth inning.

John Vander Wal hit a two-run homer for the Pirates, who have won four of five. Carlos Lee doubled twice and drove in three runs for the White Sox, who have dropped five of six.

With Pittsburgh down 6-5 in the eighth, Aramis Ramirez and Vander Wal singled off Howry (3-3). Kevin Young's one-out double tied it.

Athletics 3, Diamondbacks 0

PHOENIX — Mark Mulder pitched seven perfect innings before Danny Bautista led off the eighth with Arizona's lone hit as the Athletics beat the Diamondbacks.

Only Bautista's clean single over the shortstop's head on Mulder's first pitch in the eighth marred an otherwise flawless performance. The 6-foot-6 string-bean left-hander in just his second big league season retired every other Arizona batter.

Angels 6, Rockies 5

DENVER — Shawn Wooten homered and drove in three runs, helping Ramon Ortiz and the Angels beat Mike Hampton and theRockies.

Larry Walker homered, doubled and had four RBIs for the Rockies, who have lost 14 of their last 17 games.

Ortiz (7-6) went 6 2/3 innings. Troy Percival pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 22 chances.

Piazza and Clemens may meet in Seattle

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Mike Piazza and Roger Clemens. Together again. At the All-Star game.

It could happen Tuesday night at Safeco Field, their first meeting since the Rocket threw the remains of a shattered bat in front of the New York Mets catcher during the World Series.

Clemens, 21-3 since July 2 last year, is the likely AL starter.

"It's going to be made into something big," Piazza said before Friday's series opener against the Yankees. "I'm just going to look at him as another pitcher and do the best I can. Whether he strikes me out, I hit a home run, I don't know. I'm going to be excited to be there, and I'm sure it will be interesting."

Piazza returned to the Mets' lineup Friday night, a week after breaking his left big toe fouling off a pitch against Atlanta.

He went 2-for-4 with a solo homer and RBI single as the designated hitter in the Mets' 8-3 loss to the Yankees, the opener of the three-game series. He hoped to catch Sunday night's game, the final one for the defending pennant winners before the All-Star break.

"If he catches and feels OK, I wouldn't put any limitations on him," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said.

Piazza sounded 50-50 after the games. .

"It's a little sore," he said. "I'd like to catch, but if it's still a little tender, it might be best to wait a day."

Florida's Charles Johnson is the only other catcher on the NL roster and if Piazza can't catch, he probably would be replaced.

Piazza, also elected as the NL starter last season, didn't attend the game at Atlanta's Turner Field because Clemens beaned him three nights earlier at Yankee Stadium. Clemens said he didn't mean to hit Piazza, but some of the Mets thought otherwise.

He wants to make the trip to Seattle, even though it means traveling coast to coast following a Sunday night game.

"I really did miss it last year," Piazza said. "I'm looking forward to going. Cal (Ripken) is going to be there, Tony Gwynn, I've never seen that stadium."

Piazza is 7-for-12 against Clemens with three homers and a double during the regular season but went 0-for-3 against the Rocket in Game 2 of the World Series, including his first-inning broken-bat grounder to second. Clemens, charged with adrenaline, picked up the bat's barrel and threw it in front of Piazza.

The two haven't faced each other since, and Yankees manager Joe Torre made sure Clemens didn't pitch at Shea Stadium last month in the first series between the teams this season.

Torre thought it would be better to have the first meeting since the Series take place in the All-Star game, not "in a competitive game like this."

Valentine says he regrets Floyd flap

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Mets manager Bobby Valentine sent Florida's Cliff Floyd a letter Friday saying he regretted the controversy caused by not picking the Marlins' outfielder for the All-Star game.

Floyd said he was so certain he had made the team after talking to Valentine by phone on Tuesday that he spent $16,000 on airplane tickets to Seattle for family and friends. When the team was announced Wednesday, Floyd wasn't on it, setting off an acrimonious "he said" battle, which showed no sign of abating.

Valentine said his letter to Floyd said: "Even if you thought I said you were on the team, it's regretful."

"It's a good gesture on his part," Floyd said. "I try not to knock anybody."

Valentine repeatedly maintained that he ended his conversation with Floyd by saying "anything can happen in the next 24 hours."

ON A MISSION

Mormon missionaries ready, willing to serve

By Saralee Huntsman
Copy editor

It's another 100-degree West Texas summer day and two young men in white shirts, ties and safety helmets are riding their bikes through one of Midland's residential areas.

These young men willing to brave the heat are missionaries — representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

When male members of the Mormon church reach the age of 19, they can choose to leave behind their secular world to serve a mission for two years. What may not be commonly known is that women also may serve missions for a period of 18 months when they turn 21.

"This is a learning experience we can't gain anywhere else, because we are sent for two years to do something that we'll never have the chance to do again as young men," said Elder Eric McAllister, a missionary assigned to Midland. "Most young men are going out and having fun partying, but this gives us a chance to devote all of our time and talents to the work of our Heavenly Father for two years."

The Mormon church has 334 missions around the world in 162 countries with more than 60,000 missionaries spreading the Gospel. The church's worldwide membership exceeds 11 million, according to the church's official Web site.

The words "missionary work" conjure up thoughts of African jungles or Tibetan villages, but there are Mormon missions all over the United States.

A mission covers a geographic area and has a central headquarters. Midland is part of the geographic area covered by the Fort Worth, Texas Mission.

"I was pretty set on going out of the country somewhere. I wanted to learn a different language and get a totally new experience," said Elder Joel Kieper, McAllister's companion (missionaries work in pairs called companionships). "When I opened my mission call, I was initially disappointed, but then as time went on, I talked to others who lived and served in Texas and I started getting excited to go."

McAllister said he wasn't at all discouraged to know he would be going on a stateside mission. "I wanted to go on a mission because I felt it was the right

Mormon devotes 18 months to mission in Taiwan

By Saralee Huntsman
Copy editor

It was definitely a stay-inside day. There was a torrential downpour from a typhoon off the west coast of Taiwan and — having been on the island for just a few days — I had only a flimsy poncho with me, not knowing what a real Taiwan rainstorm was.

It was our day off — also known as preparation day — which meant it was a day to buy groceries, clean our cockroach-infested apartment and do laundry. I took one look outside and knew it was going to be a bad day.

When we stepped outside to go buy groceries, my pathetic poncho flew over my head from the gusty wind and I was almost soaked before I could even get on my bike. Riding against the typhoon wind, the rain felt like needles in my face and I had to squint to see where I was going. Not only was I getting wet from rain above me, but I was soaked clear through from the rain bouncing up from the road beneath me.

When we started up another hill, the wind grew even stronger and all I could do to keep my momentum was shout at the top of my lungs, "I HATE TAIWAN. I HATE TAIWAN. I WANT TO GO HOME!!"

That was my official welcome to Formosa Island (Taiwan). Luckily things got much better after that and I was able to buy a "Made in Taiwan" industrial-strength raincoat and develop my biking legs.

Looking back on my mission, I honestly have to say I loved every minute of it — even typhoon season.

I was still attending school at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, when I received my mission call. My family came to my apartment to be with me when I opened the letter about my call.

My hands shook as I fumbled with the large white envelop. Instead of reading the greeting, my eyes wanted to scroll down to where it said I would be serving. Finally, I started reading aloud from the beginning. "Dear Sister Huntsman, you are hereby called to serve as a missionary of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. You are assigned to labor in the Taiwan, Taipei Mission. You will prepare to teach the Gospel in the Mandarin, Chinese language."

I was ecstatic, flabbergasted and in shock. I couldn't believe I'd be serving in Taiwan. The first thing that came to my mind was the words, "Made in Taiwan" that appeared on practically everything I owned. I was surprised, but excited to know I would be learning a language spoken by a quarter of the world's population.

My first day at the Missionary Training Center was a whirlwind event. I was given a stack of language books I could barely see over and assigned to a dorm room with two other sister missionaries who also would be going to Taiwan. For our class orientation, our teachers came in and began talking only in Chinese. I was lost, but somehow our entire class learned the Chinese words for "hello," "me," "you," "them," "him/her" and "us" that first session.

Our teachers spoke more English during the other lessons and before I knew it, the two months of intense language training had flown by and I was on a plane heading to Taiwan. I had learned enough Chinese to ask for directions, have a simple conversation and teach someone how to pray, but it didn't take long to realize just how little I could understand and speak.

Luckily, my trainer, Sister SoniaWalker, had already been on the island for more than a year and

TAIWAN: Missionary says mission was hard but worth it could speak quite fluently. During the first Gospel discussions we had with those people investigating the church, I sat back in a daze hoping the language I had learned was the same one they were speaking at 90 miles an hour.

Slowly, but surely, I was able to pick out key words I recognized. I spent every spare minute studying the Gospel discussions in Mandarin and listening to the language tapes we had been given.

I look back with amusement on how my first native companion and I used charades to communicate because I had only been on the island for four months and my knowledge of the language was far from fluent. Sister Huang Chongyao knew three sentences in English, thus making it mandatory I speak Mandarin 24 hours a day, seven days a week. She was extremely patient and by the time I was reassigned to another city, my ability to speak Chinese had improved tremendously.

Meeting and talking with others every day helped me learn and speak the language in a relatively short period of time.

Before arriving in Taiwan, I didn't know much about Buddhism — the major form of religion there. As I forged friendships with the people we met, I grew to understand some of the nuances of the culture.

I learned that ancestor worship is basically the cornerstone of Chinese culture and Buddhism. In ancestor worship, a person holds a lighted incense stick before a shrine dedicated to their ancestors, prays for their health and happiness and asks them for blessings.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is focused on genealogy and eternal families, which appealed to many Chinese. With the church's extensive collection of records, people could find out who their ancestors were, what they did and how they lived, instead of just a name written on a shrine tablet.

Christianity is spreading more and more in Taiwan, but there are still many who do not know of Jesus Christ. They have heard stories and believe he was a great teacher, but they do not believe he is the Son of God.

This was the most exciting part about our discussions with people we met going door to door. It brought me great happiness to teach them about our Savior, who was willing to sacrifice His life for us so that we may live eternally with Him and our Heavenly Father some day.

The happiness we can find by following the teachings of Jesus Christ is immense and sharing that happiness with others brought me even greater joy.

It was the joyous moments that kept me going during the harder times of my mission. It wasn't easy going out in the hot noon-day sun with 90 percent humidity knocking on door after door hoping someone would be home and want to hear the message we had for them. It wasn't easy wading through rain and flood water 2 feet deep to an appointment that fell through at the last minute.

And it wasn't easy leaving my family for 18 months with letter writing as the only way of communicating with them. Missions are a time of sacrifice, but with that comes great happiness and a growing experience I couldn't have gained anywhere else.

Finding those who want to learn more about Jesus Christ and then seeing the change that comes after they are baptized makes a mission one of the greatest experiences I have had in my life.

The Wang family, who I taught in Hsinchu (the first city I was assigned to), holds a special place in my heart. Christianity was a new concept for them. The father, Wang Chicheng, was afraid the Buddhist god would punish him for believing in the "foreign god." But after he received an answer to his prayers concerning what he was learning about the Gospel of Jesus Christ, he knew he had to be baptized with his wife and two children.

I consider them my Chinese family and they consider me their daughter. I still keep in touch with them and it makes me happy to know their testimonies are strong and growing as they learn more each day. The daughter, Xianghua, told me she can't wait until she can go on a mission when she is older.

Missions may be emotionally and physically demanding, but they are well worth it. One rainy evening in my third city, Yonghe, we were at the church building waiting for someone who didn't show up because of the rain. My companion and I were about to go back out in the rain to knock on doors when we noticed a teen-age girl standing outside the gates but was hesitant to come inside.

One of the several Buddhist temples in Hsinchu, Taiwan. Buddhism is the main form of religion there.

We went out to her and asked her if she needed help. In tears she said, "You ren keyi ting wo shuo hua ma?" (Is there anybody who can listen to me?)

We told her we could and ushered her inside. She then proceeded to tell us she felt there was no reason to go on living because she had not passed the college entrance exam. Her parents were in the middle of scolding her when she ran out of the house. She didn't know where to go and didn't feel her life had any purpose.

Getting into the best high schools and colleges is extremely important to every student in Taiwan. Academic excellence is drilled into children as early as kindergarten.

When she finished, we told her there was a reason to live and her life did have great meaning. She was skeptical at first, but when we told her she was a beloved child of God, her countenance changed completely and she stopped crying. Because she had felt the spirit of the Lord, she went from being depressed and suicidal to being happy and laughing. That night, my joy was doubled as we watched her leave with a smile on her face.

She later heard all of the required Gospel discussions, came to church every Sunday and was baptized.

Before I knew it, my 18-month mission was over. However, this time I wanted to stay in Taiwan. I had grown to love the language, culture and people. My attitude had done a complete turn-around from that dreaded day I rode my bike in a typhoon to buy groceries.

I have been home from my mission for more than two years and I have been back to Taiwan once for a visit. Even though I have moved on and am now focusing on a career in journalism, I am grateful I had the opportunity to devote a year and a half of my life to serving God and doing His work.

thing to do," he said. "My brother came home from his mission and described to me how wonderful missions are and I thought it would be a great opportunity to serve people."

Missions are completely voluntary and self-funded. The missionaries or their families donate approximately $375 a month to the church to pay for personal expenses. Young men and women desiring to serve a mission don't select where they will go. All mission assignments are chosen and prayed over by church leaders — President Gordon B. Hinckley (prophet) and his apostles.

There also are foreign-language-speaking missions in the United States to teach those who may not have a good command of English. Midland has two Spanish-speaking missionaries, Elder Jeff Parsons and Elder Moises Covarrubias.

In many cases, foreign-language-speaking U.S. missions are more difficult than foreign missions.

"Being out here in Texas, it's harder to learn Spanish because we aren't immersed in the language," Parsons said. "As companions, we only speak Spanish with each other. I try to study Spanish every morning by reading the Spanish 'Book of Mormon: Another Testament of Jesus Christ' and memorizing Scripture or part of a (Gospel) discussion in Spanish."

Covarrubias, whose parents are from Mexico, initially was assigned to speak English on his mission, but when the mission president found out he was fluent in Spanish, he was assigned to the Spanish-speaking Fort Worth, Texas Mission.

"At first, when I found out I was going to be English-speaking, I was kind of disappointed because I wanted to go to South America," he said. "But then I realized it didn't really matter where I was going because I was going to go where the Lord wanted me to go. I realized once I got to Texas why I was here."

Missionaries are willing to go whey are they called to serve because they believe their mission assignment is divinely inspired.

Lee High School graduate Austin Gray, 18, who is preparing to serve a mission when he turns 19, said, "I really don't mind where I will get called to go because I want to leave it up to the Lord. I don't feel that I really should decide where I go because this is God's work."

Missions begin at the Missionary Training Center in Provo, Utah. During their stay, which can last from three weeks for English-speaking missions to two months for foreign missions, missionaries learn the religious discussions they will be teaching. The center is staffed by teachers proficient in 48 languages to teach intensive language courses.

'There are a lot of people who don't really want to talk to us but that's OK. We just need to keep in mind that there is someone out there wanting to learn more and if we quit, we'll never be able to find them and tell them.'

— Elder Joel Kieper, Midland missionary

The center in Provo is one of the largest, but the church's Web site lists 14 other training centers located around the world.

Male missionaries have the title "elder" before their last name because of their ordination to that priesthood office. Female missionaries are referred to as "sister" and their last name.

Approximately 75 percent of the church's more than 60,000 proselytizing missionaries are men between the ages of 19 and 26, 18 percent are single women and 7 percent are older couples, according to the Web site.

Covarrubias, who has three months left of his mission, said, "The mission has been a growing experience for me. It is the first time I've been away from home. I have more confidence in myself right now and I know I can do whatever I need to do when I get home."

While on the mission, however, the daily routine is more demanding than an average workday schedule. It is estimated missionaries will work an average of 60 to 65 hours a week.

Missionaries wake up at 6:30 a.m. every day for personal Scripture study and Gospel study with their companion. By 9:30 a.m. they are out the door proselytizing, teaching discussions or doing community service until 9:30 p.m. They have one-hour breaks for lunch and dinner. They then have one hour to return phone calls and get ready for bed before lights out at 10:30 p.m.

Besides the rigorous schedule, missionaries also can face a lot of rejection. McAllister said about 90 percent of the doors they knock on are never opened. But this doesn't stop them.

"There are a lot of people who don't really want to talk to us, but that's OK," Kieper said. "We just need to keep in mind that there is someone out there wanting to learn more and if we quit, we'll never be able to find them and tell them."

Woman joins convent after 20-year career as Marine

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mary Perrot suffered through boot camp on South Carolina's Parris Island. She learned to shoot straight enough to earn the rank of Marine gunnery sergeant. She served six months in Operation Desert Storm.

Now, after 20 years in the military, she is signing up for a different tour of duty. The 47-year-old woman is studying to become a nun.

"There's an element of commitment and dedication in both the sisterhood and the military," said Perrot, who lives with three sisters of the Roman Catholic Ursuline order. "I'm still working with a group of people for a common purpose. There's also a sense of discipline in both worlds."

Perrot was stationed all over the United States, and in Japan and Saudi Arabia. She worked briefly as a substance abuse counselor for military men and women, then served mainly in finance and accounting jobs. She enjoyed her work and the financial security of being a Marine.

"I wanted to travel so I joined the military," said Perrot, whose athletic build and firm handshake remain even though she has left the corps. "My spiritual journey didn't begin until a few years ago."

Raised Catholic, she had several times experienced what she called "mini callings" to religious work.

"Religion had always caught my attention," she said. "But I always dismissed it, especially early in my military career. I kept saying, 'No way is that a life for me.'"

It wasn't until 1996 that she began to seriously consider becoming a nun.

She was stationed at Camp Lejeune in Jacksonville, N.C., where she expected to stay until she retired, but was then transferred to Okinawa. She was pained by the idea of being so far away from her 10 brothers and three sisters, and interpreted the feeling as a signal from God that she should return to Louisville to be near her siblings and serve her community.

"I was ready to be with my family," she said.

She began reading about spirituality and attending religious retreats. When she returned to Jacksonville for her final stint as a Marine, Perrot began speaking with a sister from the Ursuline order. By Perrot's retirement in 1999, she was ready to enter religious life.

Perrot began her two-year novice period in January 2000. She said she was not troubled by the vow of celibacy, since she had no serious romantic relationship when she left the military.

This is the soul purpose of the entire congregation of the Beacon Light Outreach Ministry. To let the life of Christ be shown in all phases of our life that others might be drawn into the knowledge of and ultimately accept Christ into their lives. With our temporary location at 3100 W. Wall, Room "A" in the Best Inn & Suites, we are trusting that the Lord will bless us to be fruitful & multiply and leave to be established in a new permanent location.

Building on the solid foundation with the love of Christ felt throughout the entire congregation, at God's own appointed time, it won't be long for this "Faith Walk in Christ" to become a reality. This is another Pentecostal Outreach Ministry reaching out to the community area, inviting any and everyone who is looking for a new church home to come and fellowship with us. Our Sunday Services are 10:30am & 7pm. Musicians are welcome and needed.

War games proposal puts focus on wildlife corridor

By Lynn Brezosky
Associated Press

PADRE ISLAND NATIONAL SEASHORE — Few local residents gave credence to initial news reports the military was considering moving the controversial Vieques Island bombing exercises here, a seashore so protected a tire tread on a dune can bring a $5,000 fine.

But once the Navy confirmed it was on the list of possible sites, it started to make sense. It is the longest undeveloped barrier island in the world, separating a narrow bay from Kenedy County, a hot, breezy mainland of mesquite trees and grazing cattle averaging three square miles per human resident.

It matches the qualities that made Vieques Island in Puerto Rico ideal for joint Navy-Marine military practice more closely than any site the military has considered. It's near the sea and free from commercial air traffic. On a map, there's nothing there.

Nothing, environmentalists say, but one of the planet's last havens for a host of endangered species.

Their barrage of awareness about Kemp's Ridley sea turtles, piping plovers, and redhead ducks appears to have worked.

State, local, and federal representatives have vowed to fight the plan. Gov. Rick Perry on Friday added his voice to the mix, saying he was "deeply troubled" about possible environmental effects such bombing could have on the area.

"This area of Texas is a precious jewel of natural beauty and fragile ecosystems," Perry said. "I am highly skeptical that the proposed use of this land for military training exercises is in Texas' best interests."

Meetings scheduled by proponents have been canceled.

"We're delighted," said Pat Suter of the Coastal Bend Sierra Club, "but we're wary. This came about because it was going on in secret. We're just wondering how we are going to make sure it doesn't raise its ugly head again."

While he was publicly critical of the Vieques bombing, U.S. Rep. Soloman Ortiz was working behind the scenes to bring the exercises to Texas. Despite the opposition, he still says people should give the plan a chance; it could bring thousands of jobs and other economic benefits while giving soldiers needed practice ground.

Corpus Christi, the most heavily populated city near the proposed bombing site, is a Navy town with about 15,000 people working directly for or contracting with the military.

"What a bombing range would have done is bring another mission to the area. That would have helped insulate our existing military from base closures," said Ronald Kitchens of the Corpus Christi Regional Economic Development Corporation.

It wouldn't have been the first time bombs were dropped here. Remnants of practice bombing conducted between the early 1940s and 1960s are frequently found, said Padre Island Supervisor Jock Whitworth.

Pelicans fly off sand dunes on Padre Island June 28. Environmental groups are staging a full-scale assault on any plan to use the South Texas shoreline as a warfare training site. Environmentalists hope up to 5,000 people will participate in a three-day protest on the beach next month as a show of force against any plans for using part of Padre Island or the Laguna Madre area as a bombing range, Sierra Club spokeswoman Erin Rogers said Thursday.

Padre Island is about 110 miles long, with about 75 miles of that undeveloped. Its southern tip is South Padre Island, a popular beach resort.

Between Padre Island and the mainland is a hypersaline, shallow bay known as the Laguna Madre. The island barrier keeps the water from mixing with sea, making for a sheltered nesting area for rare birds and marine species.

Eighty percent of all red-head ducks in the Western Hemisphere winter in the Laguna Madre and 50 percent of all fish caught along the Texas Coast originate there. Laguna Madre also is a nursery for the brown shrimp that are crucial to the Gulf Coast's commercial fishing industry. Tuesday, more than 71,000 acres of the area were designated critical habitat for wintering populations of the piping plover, a small shorebird.

The bombing range would mean warplanes and bombardments, noise and trampling. It would mean closing off some 20 miles of coast for 24 hours, several times a year. Adjacent inland areas would be closed for a week at a time.

With his flats boat, 48-year-old Corpus Christi resident Joe Mendez makes a living as a guide on Laguna Madre. Cutting the engine about 90 minutes south of Corpus Christi, he used a push poll to guide the boat close to one of the spoil islands that were created during the dredging of the intracoastal waterway half a century ago. Signs identify the island as a bird nesting area and warn people not to trespass.

White and brown pelicans congregated on the islands, spindly legs balancing them in the shallow water. Porpoises leapt from the waves in groups of three and four.

"They've gone to a lot of trouble to take care of this place," he said. "To open it to shelling is pretty strange."

The inland areas are possibly even more delicate, home to threatened species like ocelot, the Texas horned lizard, and the Coue's rice rat.

"It's not that we don't like the military. We're all patriots," said Tobin Armstrong, a Kenedy County commissioner whose family has ranched on the island for generations. "The problem is this is probably the most unique ecosystem on the North American continent."

Vieques allowed combined training to determine how well insurgent marine, air, and land forces worked together, said Pentagon public affairs officer Lt. Doug Spencer. "Obviously, Vieques is unique in its mechanism, which is why we haven't been able to find a one-for-one substitute.

The Navy is looking at a number of sites as a replacement for Vieques, which President Bush said will no longer be shelled by 2003.

"Maybe South Texas could have, but there was another issue, an environmental issue. What is happening is that the Navy is looking at each facility to find out what each facility has to offer."

Perry 'deeply troubled' by Padre Island bombing plans

By Connie Mabin
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Gov. Rick Perry on Friday said he is "deeply troubled" by possible environmental damage that could occur if part of the South Texas shoreline is used as a warfare training site.

"At this point, I am unconvinced of the merits of such a proposal. I am deeply troubled by the likely environmental impact — from the marring or possible destruction of portions of the Padre Island National Seashore, which is the longest undeveloped barrier island in the world — to the possible devastation of plant, animal and bird species in the area," Perry said.

Perry is the latest public official to offer an opinion on any plans for using part of Padre Island or the Laguna Madre area as a bombing range.

Kenedy County commissioners have voted unanimously to oppose the plan. Earlier this week, Republican state Comptroller Carole Keeton Rylander said the proposal "doesn't make sense," and ordered an economic impact study.

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, who chairs a subcommittee on military construction, has expressed reluctance to support the plan.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, is deferring judgment on the idea until he sees an actual proposal and residents have a chance to say what they think, said spokesman Larry Neal.

The proposal to use 220,000 acres in the sparsely populated county is one idea being considered as an alternative for training now done on Vieques Island in Puerto Rico. The agreement to use that site ends in May 2003.

Supporters say the bombing would help military installations in Texas avoid being shut down or relocated.

The Navy has said there is no formal plan yet for using the area. Officials did not immediately return messages left Friday.

Environmentalists have launched a letter-writing campaign against the proposal and are planning a three-day protest on the beach next month.

Opponents denounce the idea as an ecological disaster that would threaten several endangered species, including Kemp's ridley sea turtles, and disrupt migratory birds.

Perry expressed similar concerns, also saying that military training could interrupt barge traffic on the Intercoastal Waterway, as well as disrupt oil and natural gas pipelines.

"This area of Texas is a precious jewel of natural beauty and fragile ecosystems," Perry said. "I am highly skeptical that the proposed use of this land for military training exercises is in Texas' best interests."

The governor's concern about the idea is helpful to environmentalists' fight against it, said Melinda Taylor, an attorney with Environmental Defense in Austin.

"I'm delighted to hear that the governor has taken that position. I think it's the right position," Taylor said.

Sierra Club spokeswoman Erin Rogers urged Perry to speak directly with Navy Secretary Gordon England.

"We appreciate Perry's opposition, but at the same time we recognize that the Navy is the final arbiter," Rogers said.

Perry spokeswoman Kathy Walt said that as far as she knew, the governor has not spoken with anyone at the Navy or in Washington about the proposal and had no immediate plans to do so.

Man who learned to read at 98 dies at 103

DALLAS (AP) — George Dawson, the grandson of slaves who learned to read at age 98 and published his memoirs last year, has died. He was 103.

Dawson died at his Dallas home Thursday of medical complications from a fall in April. Funeral arrangements were pending Friday.

Dawson

Dawson was a role model to fellow students at the Lincoln Instructional Center in Dallas, where he continued to attend adult learning classes this year. He also spoke regularly to groups of school children.

"He really enjoyed it," said Dawson's son George Jr. "He was really trying to show the young kids that if he could do it, so could they."

Dawson's memoirs, "Life is So Good," inspired readers around the world to live with optimism and never quit learning, said the book's co-author Richard Glaubman.

"He was so connected to life. He brought that out in anyone who encountered him," said Glaubman, an elementary school teacher from Port Townsend, Wash.

Dawson was born on Jan. 18, 1898, in the East Texas town of Marshall. As the oldest of five children, he went to work instead of school.

He said he learned from his parents to focus on the good in life, even though during segregation he had to drink from separate water fountains and could not talk to a white man without bowing his head.

Dawson told The Associated Press last year that he never became bitter or discouraged.

"A man should think how far he can get in life," he said. "Never think you can't."

Dawson's father hired him out at age 12 to a white family for $1.50 a month. When he turned 21, Dawson worked his way across the country, traveling by steam train.

Dawson built levees on the Mississippi, drove spikes for the railroads and worked in a sawmill. He met his first wife, Elzenia, while breaking horses in the Texas Panhandle.

They settled in Dallas, where Dawson worked for a dairy. They had seven children, all of whom went to college. Five survive.

But Dawson said the turning point of his life came the day a literacy volunteer knocked on his door and asked if he'd like to learn to read.

"I never thought I was too old to learn," Dawson said last year. "That was the most important thing I did, to learn one letter from another."

Glaubman said Dawson embraced the attention generated by his book, which Random House reissued last month as a paperback.

"He said 'I've been ignored for 100 years.' He loved every minute of it."

And while Dawson profited from steady sales of the book, his lifestyle did not change much. He razed his run-down house in an impoverished neighborhood, but built another small home on the same site.

"It was very modest house by new house sizes," said Glaubman, "but it was a castle for him."

One of the most poignant moments of Dawson's new celebrity came when he returned in February to Marshall, where he wrote that one of his earliest memories is seeing a black man lynched in the town square.

More than 200 residents — black and white — attended the gathering at the public library.

"It was a very powerful place for him to have his homecoming," Glaubman said.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ Kittens found for rabies test

LANCASTER — All six kittens being sought by authorities in Lancaster for rabies testing have now been found, police said Friday.

The kittens were given away at the Super Wal-Mart parking lot in Lancaster on Monday. The family who gave the kittens away kept one that was sick, and that kitten tested positive for rabies on Wednesday.

As of Friday afternoon, one of the six kittens had tested negative for rabies. The rest should be tested by Monday.

Rabies can be transmitted by bites or when saliva from an infected animal enters a person's body. A series of extensive post-exposure shots can prevent rabies from developing. But once symptoms develop, the disease is usually fatal.

■ Officer arrested on felony

GEORGETOWN — A Williamson County Sheriff's Office corrections officer has been charged with having improper sexual activity with a person in custody while working at an off-duty job.

Bruce Simon, 41, surrendered to authorities Friday after a warrant was issued for his arrest on the state jail felony. He is accused of improper conduct with a female inmate.

Simon, a corrections officer at the Williamson County Jail since 1998, also worked as a civilian contract employee for Aramark Correctional Food Services, a company that provides food to the jail.

The sheriff's office said the incident occurred in mid-June while he was on his off-duty job, overseeing inmates in the kitchen.

On Monday, he was suspended with pay pending the outcome of the investigation.

A disciplinary review board will convene Monday to consider an administrative penalty in which he could be fired.

■ Pair sentenced in child torture

LONGVIEW — An East Texas man received a 15-year prison sentence Friday and his wife was sentenced to 12 years for the torture of their eldest daughter.

Jerrold Loyde Rathbun, 33, and 29-year-old Eva Grace Rathbun pleaded guilty last week to first-degree felony child endangerment. The move came as prosecutors were picking a jury for Jerrold Rathbun's trial.

Investigators say the Longview couple handcuffed the then-8-year-old girl to a door with thumbtacks attached to it, poked the girl's feet with needles and made the child eat cat feces on Sept. 10.

Court records show that Child Protective Services, alerted by school officials about possible abuse, removed the girl from the home Sept. 12, then took her younger sister three days later after hearing the older child's allegations.

State District Judge David Brabham sentenced the two, who showed no emotion.

■ Stowaways found on ship

GALVESTON — Ten men from the Dominican Republic were set to be flown back to their homeland Saturday after they were found hiding in a freighter on its way to Jamaica.

The freighter "Carlos Explorer" left the Dominican Republic on June 29 and was on its way to Jamaica when its crew discovered the stowaways.

Three of them jumped overboard Thursday evening but were later rescued by the U.S. Coast Guard, said Mariela Melero, spokeswoman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's Houston office.

A new standard:

2001 GMC Yukon XL Denali SUV

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

For the first time, the "Professional Grade" folks at GMC are offering the upscale Denali trim level on the GMC Yukon XL. New for 2001, the Yukon XL Denali is distinguished from the regular Yukon XL models by a new "machined" front grille and unique body side moldings.

Built exclusively at the General Motors assembly plant in Janesville, Wis., the new Yukon XL Denali is built on the half-ton (1500 Series) frame, with power coming from an enhanced version (LQ4) of the Vortec 6000 V8 engine. This special Vortec 6000 features cast-aluminum cylinder heads with unique exhaust and intake seats, intake valves and a new cylinder head gasket, equipped with an advanced full-time four-wheel drive system.

New intake and exhaust ports are borrowed from the 2001 Corvette design to allow enhanced air flow in and out of the combustion chamber, increasing engine power. Torque is delivered to the road through a more fuel efficient and enhanced new 4L60-E HD electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission with overdrive and tow/haul modes. A five-speed manual gearbox is not available.

On the road, the Yukon XL Denali turns in a strong, powerful and yes, nimble performance. This large SUV is very easy to drive. An independent front torsion bar together with a self-leveling rear five-link coil spring suspension make the Yukon XL Denali more agile and predictable in a variety of real-world situations. Premium smooth-ride suspension calibrations are engineered to take full advantage of the newfound power and driveline upgrades.

The standard Z55 Autoride suspension package is a sophisticated system that is fully automatic and uses an electronic controller to vary the amount of shock damping on a continuous basis to enhance vehicle control and stability whether the vehicle is loaded or unloaded, pulling a trailer or not. Appropriate damping changes to suit road conditions on a real-time basis can be made in 15 to 20 milliseconds.

Self-leveling rear shock absorbers are also included to maintain a flat attitude with heavy loads or a trailer attached. Michelin Cross-Terrain touring P265/70R17 tires provide the final link to the pavement. These comfortable riding, long-lasting high-traction tires are mounted to attractive six-spoke machined-face cast aluminum wheels.

Inside the cabin, GMC engineers paid careful attention and it shows. Upscale, refined and distinctive easily describe this full-size SUV. Roomy and luxurious, the Yukon XL Denali is the last word in full-size SUV opulence. The driver enjoys a commanding view of the road through a large windshield with an upward viewing angle for reading signs and seeing traffic lights. Displays and controls are driver friendly. Seating is comfortable and all occupants benefit from more room in almost every dimension.

Trim features aid in establishing the Yukon XL Denali as a cut above the SUV herd. They include soothing teal-green instrument lighting, cloth-covered sun visors with pull-out extensions, illuminated visor vanity mirrors, color-keyed and leather-wrapped steering wheel with redundant audio controls, theater dimming of interior lights, leather covered passenger assist handle, distinctive Denali logo stitching on door panels, and black chrome inside door release handles.

Black cherry woodgrain trim encircles the instrument cluster, center console, and door-mounted switches. Nine acoustic floor dampers help achieve one of the quietest SUV interiors on the market and a standard electronic climate control system filters dust and pollen down to ten microns in size. Partitioned air flow helps achieve best-in-class comfort for both front and rear passengers. Exterior running boards also facilitate entry/exit from the vehicle.

Unrisky business:

2001 Hyundai Elantra GLS Sedan

RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Note to Detroit: Look out! For years, the mainstream automakers have snickered at Hyundai's growing pains to establish a beachhead in the United States. Starting with the boxy, inexpensive Excel subcompact sedan in 1986, the first Korean automaker to make inroads was largely dismissed as a "bottom fisher" – destined to peddling cheap cars of dubious quality to unsuspecting consumers. A funny thing happened on the way to the new millennium – Hyundai has become a force to be reckoned with.

After some 15 years, the folks from Korea are no longer a one trick pony. They have quietly developed a respectable portfolio of vehicles – from the subcompact Accent to the Santa Fe SUV and recently the midsize XG300 sedan.

Borrowing a page from the Japanese playbook of over 30 years ago, the Koreans – now accompanied by Kia and Daewoo – are making better vehicles, with very substantial warranties and value laden vehicles at affordable prices. They are winning converts!

Hyundai has introduced the third generation compact Elantra sedan for 2001. Slightly larger than the previous version, the wheelbase is up 2.3 inches with more headroom, rear leg room and hip room in the cabin.

Featuring upscale European styling, the Elantra is only available in the GLS trim powered by a 2.0L DOHC 16-valve four cylinder engine. Consumers can choose between the base five-speed manual gearbox or the $800 optional four-speed electronically controlled automatic transmission with overdrive.

Smoother and quieter than the model it replaces, the Elantra receives the addition of a front subframe, hydraulic engine mounts, eight-counterweight crankshaft, ribbed engine block and integrated intake resonator for improved engine smoothness and noise reduction. On the road, the Elantra delivers a solid ride, strong acceleration and a willing powertrain. Comfortable, quiet and stylish, the new Elantra is the best value yet!

A four-wheel independent suspension system works with front MacPherson struts with offset coil springs, gas-filled shock absorbers and anti-roll bar and rear struts with multi-links, offset coil springs, gas-filled shock absorbers and anti-roll bar to deliver a good balance of handling and control. Michelin Energy XSE P195/60R15 tires convert power to the pavement.

Inside the cabin, the occupants are treated to a high level of standard equipment and creature comforts not often found at this price. Air conditioning, power windows, power locks, power mirrors, AM/FM/cassette stereo, adjustable steering column, remote trunk release, deluxe cut-pile carpeting, deluxe center console, tachometer, six-way adjustable driver's seat, dual overhead map lights and a 60/40 split rear seat are standard equipment.

Tasteful fabrics and textures adorn the passenger compartment. Displays and controls are good and easy to use. The rear seat has ample room to transport two adults in reasonable comfort. Hand grips at all four doors facilitate entry/exit.
