Spill cleanup shows promise

Workers hope to avert more damage on flooded river

■ Officials estimate entire cleanup will take week if conditions remain favorable.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Streaks of gooey crude oil and gasoline, some of it burning, stretched as long as 20 miles down the flood-swollen San Jacinto River, but conditions improved Saturday and optimism grew that serious damage could be averted.

"It's a lot of nasty stuff," said Coast Guard Capt. Richard Ford, coordinator of the cleanup. "I am really hopeful that we will collect a lot of oil there today and we will see a substantial improvement in the next 24 hours.

"This black oil, while it looks bad, has a very, very high evaporation rate. A lot of it has evaporated."

The continued burning of oil and other

Texas-sized divorce case to enter court in showdown

"Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman scorned"
—William Congreve, 1670-1729.

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH — Home-bound motorists that day saw a blonde in a silky black dress ram her red Mercedes convertible into the rear of a green Ford Explorer.

At the four-way stop sign, a younger, dark-haired woman in shorts and anklet socks jumped from the Explorer and confronted the driver of the offending convertible.

They exchanged words. Then they tore into one another.

It was, said witness Debbie Price, "an honest-to-goodness, hair-pulling, biting, scratching girl fight."

The date was Sept. 9, 1992. And though no one realized it, the public was getting its first glimpse of a calamitous and convoluted marital dispute styled Walker vs. Walker.

Ms. Price, then a columnist at the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, didn't know the combatants' identities, but had no problem recognizing a bizarre story.

"The blonde was slapping at the brunette, who seemed to be trying unsuccessfully to get her into a headlock," she wrote. "They were both kicking away. . . ."

Ms. Price eyed the cars and the women rolling around on the asphalt road and concluded that "there's more to this than a smashed fender."

True.

Revising a familiar quotation, Jim Loveless, a lawyer in the tangled legal web, would later summarize it succinctly. "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned," he sighed.

"Every day the heat turns up another notch," added Loveless, who represents insurance wizard Jimmy Walker, 57, in the high stakes divorce case.

Alleging multiple adulterous acts, Wanda Walker, 56, wants at least a $45-million chunk of her husband's estate, valued as high as $60 million.

With a Nov. 7 trial date looming, the City's unemployed live each day waiting, hoping for work

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

There are some Midlanders who struggle valiantly to provide for themselves and hang on to what meager dignity life allows, yet end up in a dark abyss of poverty and starvation.

Some believe this indicates a hole in our social system through which Americans willing to work sometimes fall. Such a fall destroys lives, marriages and sometimes makes criminals out of otherwise good people.

Oftentimes on the ragged edge of this pit are the men who, unable to find regular employment, line up daily by the Texas Employment Commission building at 501 N. Loraine St. About a dozen of these workers were waiting Friday, hoping potential day employers would drive up.

In winter, they use the building to block the freezing

Volunteers treat teen mothers-to-be to day with make-over, lunch, movie

Fifteen-year-old Tanya Torres spent Saturday getting her hair done, eating pizza and watching a movie.

"I haven't gone out in a while since I've been pregnant," said Ms. Torres, who's expecting Jan. 8.

A group of local volunteers — recognizing the demands on young mothers and mothers-to-be who are struggling to complete high school — treated Ms. Torres and about 10 other women to a fall "mothers' day" on Saturday.

The women, most who attend Coleman High School, were given make-overs at Aladdin Beauty College, followed by lunch at CiCi's Pizza and a showing of "The Little Rascals" at the Cinemore Four theater.

"We had a great time," said 18-year-old Sylvia Reynosa, who's expecting Jan. 4.

"Yeah, it was fun," Ms. Torres said.

Susie Graham, child-care director at Coleman High School, volunteered to watch children at St. Mark's Methodist Church while the young mothers and mothers-to-be had a day out.

Bosnians describe peacekeepers as unwanted but necessary

SARAJEVO Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Relations between U.N. peacekeepers and the Bosnian government, awkward in the best of times, are approaching a new low, with defiance by Bosnian troops and a suggestion that the U.N. commander be court-martialed.

Using increasingly scathing rhetoric, Bosnia's Muslim leaders are showing less and less respect for the multinational force assigned to protect their besieged capital, Sarajevo, and escort vital relief convoys across Bosnia.

"UNPROFOR (the U.N. force) is like polluted air — it's polluted, but you can't live without it," President Alija Izetbegovic said this week.

Among the reasons for the heightened tension:

■ For two weeks, an estimated 500 Bosnian government soldiers have refused a U.N. Security Council demand that they leave a U.N.-patrolled demilitarized zone on Mount Igman, overlooking Sarajevo. On Saturday, Bosnian officials agreed to start withdrawing the troops Monday if the peacekeepers could improve security on an Igman supply road often targeted by Serbs.

■ Bosnia's U.N. ambassador, Muhamed Sacirbey, assailed the peacekeeping commander for Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, saying his actions warranted a Security Council review or "a potential court martial." Rose valued the lives of U.N. personnel more than Bosnians, and has "cordial relations" with the Bosnian Serb commander, Sacirbey said.

■ Bosnian officials have stepped up complaints that Rose is too reluctant to use air power to retaliate against Bosnian Serbs for attacks on peacekeepers and civilians. After a Bosnian driver was killed Tuesday in a Serb attack on a U.N. food convoy, Vice President Ejup Ganic said the peacekeepers "allow Serb bandits to intimidate and humiliate the international community."

■ Sniping attacks by Bosnian government soldiers on peacekeepers have become routine. On Thursday and Friday, such attacks in the Sarajevo area drew return fire from French soldiers.

■ Bosnians complain that Rose makes a concerted effort to play up alleged misbehavior by government troops and play down Serb infractions.

Aristide faces hard task: repairing his homeland

By Catherine S. Manegold
N.Y. Times News Service

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The crowds outside the palace gates have thinned. Now, the lines inside are long. Three years after President Jean-Bertrand Aristide became a prisoner of exile and a week after his triumphant homecoming, he is struggling to repair a government so gutted and abused that on his first night back he took his bath in the National Palace with a bucket and a cup.

By Wednesday, the lack of running water made bathrooms so foul that a Cabinet minister said he had to roll up his pants to keep from wrecking a good suit. Carpets are dirty, walls are scuffed and the temperature in some rooms soars past 90 since the air conditioning does not work.

There is no respite. When the president tried to leave the palace once this week, his car was mobbed and banged by supporters desperate for a glimpse of this man who once stirred hope with fiery speeches and sermons. He did not join them but retreated back behind the circle of safety made of U.S. soldiers wearing camouflage uniforms. He has not left the palace since.

Even when he stands outside, gazing at the street where tens of thousands welcomed him with songs and screams last Saturday, he stands behind a thick shield that many Haitians see as a signal of his new remove, the semi-transparent hand of Washington — part protection, part control.

Now, secure within the palace grounds, behind its tall green fence and long expanse of lawn, in a mammoth white building once hung with canvasses by French Impressionists but now stripped, dirty and bare, Aristide presides over a government that can barely function in a country famous for despair.

As he stays out of public view, Haitians at every level of this splintered society are waiting to see if he has made the change from priest to politician. They are watching, too, for signs that three years in Washington quenched his fire and made a puppet of a once-defiant populist.

The nation is waiting for Aristide to appoint a new prime minister and fashion a government that can channel hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign aid to build roads, open hospitals, renovate schools, replant barren mountainsides and tend to the overwhelming needs of 6 million people. But the president is taking the temperature of his countrymen and is taking his time with major decisions.

Some say that is why he has not gone to the streets, where his base is. Others cite security concerns or say impatiently that he is busy or overworked.

Bridge collapse triggers shakeup of Korean leaders

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Kim Young-sam is likely to carry out a major Cabinet reshuffle in response to public anger over the collapse of a Seoul bridge that killed at least 32 people, government sources said Saturday.

Government sources, requesting anonymity, said the reorganization is expected to affect the prime minister, the construction minister and many other Cabinet officials.

In South Korea, top officials are often held responsible for major accidents or scandals even when they are not directly involved.

Prime Minister Lee Young-duk, who was appointed only six months ago, already has offered to resign, and Kim is expected to accept, said the sources, from the ruling Democratic Liberal Party.

Less than a day after the accident, Kim fired Seoul mayor Lee Won-jong and ordered police to thoroughly investigate whether any government officials neglected their duties.

A large section of the Songsu bridge collapsed during Seoul's heavy morning rush hour Friday, sending a packed city bus, a police mini-van and several cars plummeting into the Han River.

At least 32 people were killed and 17 injured. Victims included many middle and high school students.

Officials said the number of victims may increase as rescuers searched the river Saturday. Some bodies might have been swept away in the swift river currents.

Overnight, police summoned 16 Seoul city officials for questioning in connection with the case. Some officials reportedly ignored warnings by civil engineering experts that the bridge needed repairs.

Experts said welding on the four-lane truss bridge, built in 1979, might have decayed over years and been fatigued by heavy trucks that frequently violate weight limits.

S. Korean cartoons show resentment, anger

By Thomas Wagner
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Some cartoons show a happy North Korean negotiator leaving Geneva carrying huge sacks of cash. Others show Uncle Sam smiling vacantly as he is hoodwinked by the North.

But many of the editorial cartoons appearing in South Korean newspapers carry the same reaction to the U.S.-North Korean nuclear accord: the South lost, thanks to Washington's naivete.

South Korea's government supported the deal, which Washington and Pyongyang signed in Switzerland on Friday. But off the record, government officials say the pact rewards their hard-line Communist neighbor for developing nuclear bombs and for threatening once again to attack the South.

The accord requires the North to freeze its nuclear program, get rid of spent nuclear fuel rods, allow international inspections of nuclear sites, and negotiate with the South. It also gives Pyongyang several years to prove it doesn't have nuclear bombs.

In return, it receives $4 billion in international financing and two modern atomic reactors, thanks mainly to South Korea and Japan; 500,000 tons of heavy oil; and improved diplomatic and economic relations with the United States.

South Koreans had mixed feelings about the accord. Some felt North Korea got too much, others said it could help lead to reunification.

The Joong-ang Daily News urged the government to fire the security and diplomacy ministers.

Editorial cartoons went even further.

One showed a glum-looking Foreign Minister Han Sung-joo sitting in his office, bags packed, waiting for President Kim Young-sam to call and fire him.

In South Korea, people who have to accept something they don't want often say they must "eat mustard while crying."

Palestinian government refuses to come to signing

EILAT, Israel (AP) — In an escalating feud with Jordan's King Hussein, Yasser Arafat's government rejected an invitation Saturday to the signing of the Israel-Jordan peace treaty.

The treaty, the Jewish state's second with an Arab country, will be signed at a ceremony on Israel's southern border next week, with President Clinton attending.

Arafat's Cabinet, meeting Saturday in the autonomous Gaza Strip, turned down an invitation to Farouq Kaddoumi, foreign affairs chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said a Palestinian official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

In Tel Aviv, about 5,000 opponents of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's peace policies rallied at the site of a bus bombing that killed 21 people Wednesday. Opposition leaders called on the government to call off talks with Arafat aimed at expanding Palestinian autonomy.

Arafat, who was not invited to the signing ceremony, is angry because the treaty assures Hussein a special role as guardian of Muslim holy places in Arab east Jerusalem, which the Palestinians want as their future capital.

Israel seized and annexed east Jerusalem during the 1967 Mideast war.

A dozen Palestinian youths chanted anti-Hussein slogans and burned pictures of the king in a commercial area of east Jerusalem on Saturday.

In his annual speech from the throne on Saturday, Hussein rejected Arafat's complaints and said Jordan would never abandon its responsibility for the shrines.

Authorities were carving out a site for the treaty signing at a point straddling the Jordan-Israel border, 2½ miles north of the Red Sea port of Eilat.

Barbed wire was bulldozed aside and a patch of sandy wasteland the size of a football field paved to accommodate 2,500 Israeli, 1,500 Jordanian and 1,500 American guests.

Officials said the treaty will be signed in a Bedouin tent made of black goat hair, in a ceremony that includes performances by orchestras from both countries and the release of 10,000 balloons.

Guests will be warned not to stray from the asphalt lest they step on mines laid during the 46 years Jordan and Israel were in a state of war.

The treaty caps an astonishing period of little more than a year in which Arafat shook hands with Rabin at the White House, Israel gave the Palestinians autonomy in Gaza and the West Bank city of Jericho, the Arab states partially lifted their trade boycott of Israel, and Morocco and Tunisia established low-level ties with Israel.

But the march to peace has been marred by a series of terrorist attacks by Muslim militants opposed to compromise with Israel.

WEATHER WATCH

Today partly cloudy, near 80

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high near 80 and east to southeast winds at 10 to 15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a low in the mid-50s.

Monday is expected to be cloudy with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 49, Saturday's high was 86 compared with the record high for that date of 89 set in 1961. The record low for today's date was 33 set in 1936.

STATE

Skies were mostly clear over Texas on Saturday, with the dissipation of a cold front that brought severe thunderstorms, torrential rains and heavy flooding to North Texas.

Winds across North Texas were light and variable, and 3 p.m. temperatures ranged from 79 degrees at Paris to 86 degrees at Killeen.

In South Texas, skies were partly to mostly cloudy and humid conditions persisted where the front had not yet passed. Winds were variable between 5 and 10 mph and temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 82 degrees at Beaumont and San Antonio to 93 degrees at Corpus Christi.

Skies in the Panhandle were clear and winds were generally from the north at 10 mph. In far West Texas, skies were partly cloudy and winds were westerly between 5 and 10 miles an hour. Temperatures ranged from 68 degrees at Dalhart to 86 degrees at San Angelo.

Cleanup operations continued in Dallas, where heavy rain on Friday caused heavy flooding that claimed two lives.

NATION

Thunderstorms moved through the Southeast on Saturday and a cold front lowered temperatures in the Mississippi Valley and the Plains.

A front that brought heavy rain to Texas pushed east, causing showers and thunderstorms in parts of Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee and the Florida Panhandle.

Storms with high winds blew down trees and power lines at Lake Charles and Tioga in Louisiana. Hail as big as baseballs pounded Livingston, Texas.

In the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT, 1.27 inches of rain fell in Montgomery, Ala., and .79 of an inch fell in Birmingham, Ala.

Elsewhere, snow piled up in the Alaska interior. So far this month, the snow depth in Bettles is a record 20 inches.

A cold front in the Upper Mississippi Valley and the Plains states dropped temperatures. The mercury fell into the 40s and 50s in northern Wisconsin, eastern Kansas and the Texas Panhandle. Scattered showers and thunderstorms hit parts of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Low temperatures were mild early Saturday in much of the East, with readings in the 40s and 50s in the Northeast and in the 50s and 60s in the Southeast. A few spots in south Texas and Florida had overnight lows in the 70s.

SPILL: Workers make progress on cleanup effort

fuel leaking into the river aided cleanup since it meant less oil was flowing downstream. Ford also said water conditions on the flooded river had improved and the long streams of oil made recovery easier. He estimated, however, the entire cleanup would take at least a week if conditions remained favorable.

Containment booms were in place and skimmers were being used to vacuum the spill.

At least five pipelines were ruptured. Federal officials said they believed debris on the river, overflowing after torrential rains earlier in the week, punctured the pipelines, spewing gasoline, diesel fuel and crude oil into the waterway. However, swift river currents and fires made close inspections impossible.

The National Transportation Safety Board reported Saturday the fifth line was leaking jet fuel. Ownership of the line was not immediately known, said NTSB investigator George Mocharko.

"No one's admitting to it," he said.

The volatile leaking mixture exploded in flames on the river Thursday, sending 120 people to hospitals and adding to the flood woes of southeast Texas, where 18 lives have been lost.

The fires burned for 36 hours, went out briefly early Saturday, then re-ignited. Pools of gasoline and some oil were ablaze.

The source of the crude oil was a 20-inch-diameter line belonging to Texaco Inc. The company said the line had been idle for weeks but contained 2.1 million gallons of crude in a 24-mile stretch between valve stations. It was not likely the entire quantity would spill, officials said.

Two Colonial Pipeline Co. fuel lines also ruptured, one spilling gasoline into the river and the other diesel fuel.

"Texaco is committed to bringing all resources that are appropriate to protect the environment," said Art Nicoletti, president of Texaco Trading and Transportation Inc.

Texaco said it was tapping into both ends of its pipeline to vacuum the lower levels to minimize the leak.

And while the company said it responded as soon as it determined its line was responsible for the oil leak, Ford reiterated Saturday his belief the company was slow.

"If they are seeing some relief from what they are doing with this tapping effort, then maybe we would have been farther along had they acknowledged that they had a problem sooner," he said.

Ford said a good deal of the spilled petroleum products was trapped in river and channel bends or was going right down the channel.

Natural gas from the fourth damaged line, a 12-inch-diameter conduit owned by Valero Energy Corp. of San Antonio, appeared to be dissipating instead of burning, company spokesman Keith Booke said.

The broken pipelines were believed about 2 miles north of the Interstate 10 bridge near the mouth of the San Jacinto River.

The river empties into the Houston Ship Channel, which in turn drains into Galveston Bay. The 25-mile-long channel has been closed to traffic since Tuesday because of the excessive currents from rushing flood waters.

State officials ordered shutdowns of all pipelines under the river, dubbed "The Spaghetti Bowl" because it is one of the country's most active petrochemical manufacturing areas. However, the remnants in the ruptured lines accounted for the spillage.

Ron Brinkley, of the Texas General Land Office, said state officials believed there would be minimal shoreline impact along sensitive Galveston Bay marshes.

Environmental groups and wildlife officials said the crude oil posed the biggest environmental hazard. Galveston Bay is ringed by sensitive marshes and saltwater estuaries, which provide nursing habitat for fish and waterfowl.

The pipeline interruptions also prompted fears of gasoline shortages, particularly in the Northeast, although futures prices that jumped on trading markets Thursday retreated Friday.

The immediate Houston area was drying out Saturday from flooding that began with the onset of rain a week ago, but the runoff continued to pound counties east and southwest of the nation's fourth-largest city.

In Liberty, a town of 8,000 about 35 miles east of Houston, streets were inundated by the Trinity River and hundreds of people remained at Red Cross shelters.

The river was measured Saturday at 30.1 feet, more than 6 feet over flood stage but down more than a half-foot from Friday's record-high levels.

In Brazoria County, southwest of Houston, residents braced for water from the Brazos River, which was at 31.1 feet, still under the 35-foot mark in 1992 floods.

Holiday Lakes Mayor Norman Schroeder spent Saturday morning rounding up his six exotic birds — four ostriches and two emus.

"I know they can swim," he said. "I don't know how well or how long."

The Red Cross had 44 shelters operating in 33 southeast Texas counties. The agency estimated it had housed nearly 11,000 families.

Thirty-three counties were declared federal disaster areas. Officials opened two more federal disaster assistance centers on Saturday in Polk and Liberty counties. The first three federal centers began taking aid applications from stranded residents in the Houston area Friday.

Also Saturday, mourners filed into a school gymnasium in Anderson, 50 miles northwest of Houston, for funeral services for two siblings, 5 and 8 years of age, who drowned when raging flood waters separated them from the grasp of their mother.

But in the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Liberty, a double wedding just a block from the highest waters of the teeming Trinity River was being celebrated as planned.

"The day is pretty, the sun is shining," Rev. August Pucar said. "We're high and dry. The Mexicans gave us this property in 1832, before Texas was a Republic. They gave us a piece of high ground."

JOBS: Unemployed hope for one day's work

wind, but not the rain and sleet. In summer there is no shade. Day after day these men come, hoping for at least one day's work that will allow them to eat. Some are hoping for work in order to provide shelter. Welfare safety nets for able-bodied men are essentially nonexistent, they said.

There is no hot cup of coffee as they wait in the predawn gloom. There are no doughnuts and there are no smiles.

"Everybody that comes down here is so sad," observed Willie Taylor, one of the men waiting for work.

Some may think day laborers chose the TEC labor pool, working when they want to. This is not the case, however, the laborers said.

"It ain't that they want to be up here," said one man who wished to be identified only as Jay. "No man wants to have a job where you work today and might not have a job tomorrow," he said.

Some in the labor pool have little education, but others have high school diplomas and even a year or two of college, Jay said.

Some have been to prison and are unable to find work because of it. Others don't have a record, but still are unable to find steady work.

Some have a place to call home, some do not. Most make use of soup kitchens in the city. Some of these men had jobs making $15 an hour or more during the oil boom. They were unaware that their companies would soon close down.

'It ain't that they want to be up here. No man wants to have a job where you work today and might not have a job tomorrow.'

—Jay

"You clean yourself up and apply yourself, and some days you go home broke and hungry. And then you try it again tomorrow," Taylor said. "Fate, man — you just got to deal with fate."

It's easy for many to ignore or disdain these laborers. This insignificant cluster of men, however, may be a symptom of a much greater problem.

For many in the labor pool, the odd jobs that come along are the only things standing between themselves and hunger. Some have families they are trying to support.

Keeping food and shelter for loved ones often is a tenuous balancing act for these men, they said. When no work comes, they are often left with their backs against the wall.

"No man can look at his wife when she's hungry, or a little baby," Jay said. "That's what makes a good man go bad," he said.

"Now there's some that's going to be bad anyway," Jay said. "But there are men right over there in the Flats right now, doing crimes, because they got no other choice," Jay said.

The ignominy of their position is a cross for these men to bear. Many believe some TEC personnel and some employers treat them with contempt.

"I graduated high school, I played football. I've even got two years of college. I used to think I was going to be somebody," Taylor said. "Now I feel like a nobody."

One man, Arthur Guess, was angry about missing out on a job Friday.

"I got a car that needs gas in it. I need food in my stomach," Guess said. "Sometimes I stand out here and starve!"

Many times these laborers are taken out to do back-breaking labor in nasty conditions — that conscientious day employers would pay $7 to $15 an hour for — but are paid minimum wage only, one man said. "They'll work the sh-- out of you for chump change," another said.

"You gotta accept it, because you got nothing else," Taylor said.

Some of these men wait from 7 a.m. to as late as 1 p.m. hoping to get work. In a final humiliation, sometimes they are told by a police officer to leave the area and stop loitering, they said.

"Yeah, and I'm thinking — what do you mean I got to move? This is the employment agency!" Taylor said.

"This is what we have to go through out here," Taylor said. "It's tough out here."

At one time, a church group would show up early and provide coffee, biscuits and even a sack lunch for these men who were willing to do a day's work for a day's pay.

"They'd have a little prayer service and give you a little plastic bag with maybe three chicken legs in there," Jay said.

This church bus doesn't come around any more, however. Some in the labor pool blame TEC employees, but nobody seems to know why they stopped coming.

"I don't know. It's like, somewhere down the line society took a turn for the worse," Taylor said.

But at that point, a man driving a pickup truck with lawnmowers in the back pulled up and asked who was good at yard work. Taylor went to work one more day.

Poll shows Texans trust political ads over media

By Libby Averyt
Texas Poll

A majority of Texans trust the television ads of Gov. Ann Richards and challenger George W. Bush, and they believe those ads more than they trust the media's attempts to review the veracity of such commericials, according to the Harte-Hanks Texas Poll.

The poll also shows that almost a fourth of Texans believe campaigning this year has been more positive.

The scientific survey, conducted Oct. 6-15, asked whether the respondent trusted the television political ads of Ms. Richards — the Democratic incumbent — and Bush, her Republican challenger.

Of those polled, 54 percent said they trusted both Ms. Richards' and Bush's television ads. Thirty-six percent said they mistrusted Ms. Richards' commercials, while 38 percent said they didn't trust Bush's ads.

"Both of these candidates have high postive rates with the public. That's fairly rare," said Jerry Polinard, professor of political science at the University of Texas-Pan American in Edinburg.

"Basically, if you trust the candidate, you'll trust the ad ... Bush and Richards are both likable people and I think the public responds to that."

In recent elections, many media have added segments called "fact checks" or "truth tests" to their coverage of political campaigns. News organizations often check factual advertisements, and such checks are then published in newspapers and broadcast on television.

Essentially, the media attempt to provide their readers with a scorecard on the truthfulness of political ads.

But Texans polled said they are less likely to trust and more likely to outright mistrust the accuracy of the media fact checks than they are the adverstisements aired by political campaigns.

While 54 percent of Texans said they trusted both gubernatorial candidates' ads, 48 percent said they did not trust such reports, while 4 percent said they had not seen a fact check.

"Maybe (fact checks) are having more impact on the people who produce and finance the ads than they are having on the public," said Max McCombs, a University of Texas professor and former journalism department chairman.

"And ultimately, that should be the desirable impact. It may be less important what the public thinks, although one would hope the public pays some attention and places some trust in them."

Polinard said candidates and their staffs have been affected by the media's fact checks.

"I think these have had an impact in that whenever (candidates) are cutting their ads, they are aware now that there is going to be some publicity on the ad itself and there is going to be an analysis," he said. "I think the candidates are sensitive to that ... Regardless of how the public perceives it, the campaign people are aware of it. And they also are aware that the people who are go-when you're a teen-age parent or pregnant and a teen-ager, you have so many obstacles to overcome," Ms. Graham said.

TREAT: Pregnant teens have 'mothers' day out'

"I really think they deserve something for themselves. Everything they do is for their child or child-to-be," she said.

The "mothers' day" treat coincided with the annual "Make a Difference Day," a nationwide program sponsored by USA WEEKEND magazine aimed at encouraging people to help others and to commend the people who perform those kind acts.

Saturday's good deed stemmed from such a project last year. The National Honor Society of Greenwood High School sponsored a campaign last year to collect items for young mothers as part of a community service project that was later recognized by USA WEEKEND. More than 60 young mothers struggling to finish school benefited.

Volunteers decided to continue the project this year but with a special day out.

"It's really a kick-off of what we did last year," said Marilynn Scott, a Greenwood High School teacher and sponsor of the National Honor Society.

"We still plan on collecting toys, clothing, personal mothers' needs and school supplies," Ms. Scott said.

The volunteers have already begun a donation drive. They will collect goods through the second week of November and then distribute them.

The group that treated the young mothers and mothers-to-be was just one among various local civic organizations and corporations in Midland that participated in Make a Difference Day.

Volunteers from the Retired and Senior Services Program (RSVP) and the Boys and Girls Club were scheduled to landscape the club grounds, including planting shrubs and flowers.

Boys and Girls Club volunteers also planned to paint a mural over graffiti at Midkiff Road and Neely Avenue, hoe weeds at Tumbleweed Park, and, hopefully, paint the bathrooms at Washington Park.

About 15-20 volunteers from community service agencies, led by Casa de Amigos, were scheduled to patch holes and put in siding and insulation at a home in the 1900 block of East Hudson Avenue.

The homeowner's daughter and three children live in the uncompleted addition to the house.

Refugees return, then disappear in Rwanda

KIGALI, Rwanda — When the Hutu militias began killing Tutsi in April, Ladislas Benimana, a Hutu, harbored Tutsi in his house, his wife and neighbors recalled.

After several weeks, when the militia started raping women, his wife, Catherine Mujawamariya, a secondary school teacher, fled Kigali with their own daughters and several Tutsi women and children they were protecting.

Benimana remained until Kigali fell to the Tutsi rebel army of the Rwandan Patriotic Front in early July, when he fled to the French-protected zone in the southwest, along with thousands of other Hutu uncertain about their fate under the new Tutsi-led government.

But when the new government called on the refugees to come home, and especially civil servants, Benimana, who had worked for the Finance Ministry for 21 years, returned along with his 18-year-old son and 14-year-old daughter.

Two days later, at about 11 p.m. on Aug. 4, soldiers came and took them away, his wife said. She has not seen them since.

The Benimana case is not an isolated one, senior civilian judicial authorities said.

Nsanzuwera, who confirmed that Mrs. Mujawamariya had been to see him, said the Justice minister had instructed police and military commanders on the law of arrest and detention, which bars soldiers from making arrests and requires that anyone arrested be brought before a prosecutor within 48 hours. Nsanzuwera said the instructions were "not being respected."

The senior judge in Kigali, Gratien Ruhorahoza, who did apply the law and released some detainees after determining that there was no basis for the charges against them, was himself abducted from his house by two soldiers and a man in civilian clothes on the night of Oct. 2, Nsanzuwera said. Ruhorahoza has not been seen since.

Amnesty International released a report last week accusing the Rwandan Patriotic Front of engaging in killings, abductions and other human rights abuses. All of the incidents mentioned in the report, except for one, occurred during the civil war, before the rebel front assumed control of the government in mid-July.

Along with the disappearances, there have been persistent reports of returning Hutu refugees' being killed, particularly in rural areas. One senior government official said that in early August about 60 people were executed in the southern town of Butare.

And last month, a patrol of U.N. soldiers saw about 50 bodies in a village 10 miles north of Butare; Rwandan soldiers prevented them from investigating further.

Optimism, hope prevails in Northern Ireland

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

'What we have done is move this process further than anyone believed possible 12 months ago. There is a spirit of hope out there right across Northern Ireland.'

— Prime Minister John Major

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Beneath a lamppost on Belfast's Shankill Road, a rain-slick slab of stone quotes the Gospel according to Luke: "To give light to them that sit in darkness and, in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace."

The memorial is to nine Shankill Protestants who, on Saturday afternoon one year ago, were blown apart or crushed beneath the rubble of an IRA bomb. It is a poignant reminder of a province until recently trapped in a cycle of fear and vengeance — and a marker, too, for the remarkable push for peace since then.

"What we have done is move this process further than anyone believed possible 12 months ago. There is a spirit of hope out there right across Northern Ireland," Prime Minister John Major said Saturday, after meeting the British army commander and police chief in the province.

Back-to-back truces by the Irish Republican Army and Protestant-based "loyalist" gunmen, responsible for most of the nearly 3,200 deaths in Northern Ireland since 1969, would have been unthinkable last October.

At the time the two camps were trying to decapitate each other, with the loyalist Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force assassinating Catholics in an indiscriminate war against IRA supporters.

The IRA's north Belfast unit hoped to destroy the Shankill headquarters of the outlawed UDA on Oct. 23, 1993, but the bomb detonated early in Frizzell's fish shop downstairs, killing an IRA man along with the innocents.

Within the week, loyalists shot dead a dozen Catholics doing their jobs or enjoying a night out: garbage collectors, teen-agers watching TV, a fast-food deliveryman.

The revenge slayings culminated in a UDA machine-gun massacre of rural pubgoers on Halloween eve. The gunmen shouted "Trick or treat!" before opening fire.

That spasm of killings — the worst since the mid-1970s — seemed to poison everything. Gerry Adams, leader of the IRA's political ally Sinn Fein, carried the coffin of the slain bomber, stoking Protestant fury.

Yet Britain is now about to talk to Adams, extremists on both sides are holding their fire, and the British troops and police who patrol Belfast's streets are more relaxed than ever before.

On Friday, Major said his government would hold talks soon with Sinn Fein and he has toured Northern Ireland attracting smiles and warm handshakes from both sides of the political-religious divide.

"I've always been an optimis and in the past I've always been wrong," said Paul Arthur, a Protestant politics lecturer at the University of Ulster.

"But when both sets of paramilitaries say 'Right, violence is off,' you have to be optimistic," Arthur said. "The anniversary of the Shankill bomb brings home how much the situation has changed."

Separated from Catholic parts of west Belfast by a two-story-high "peace line" of walls, the Shankill is a community of open wounds where few trust IRA motives or Sinn Fein peace appeals.

"In Shankill households this weekend people are struggling with their memories . . . At the end of it people hopefully will come away believing that peace is possible," said Mina Wardle of the Shankill Stress Group, which counsels women traumatized by violence and domestic conflict.

Like a tooth ripped from a mouth, only a boarded-up gap and a wreath of flowers mark where the IRA bomb leveled Frizzell's. Locals still find it hard to walk past the site.

"Never again should atrocities like that happen. After 25 years the IRA and loyalists are listening to grass-roots Catholics and Protestants who say enough's enough," said Charlie Butler, a Shankill cabbie who had helped pull victims from the rubble.

Other searchers had come across three corpses mauled beyond easy recognition. It was Butler who saw the clothing and realized the victims were his niece Evelyn, her husband Michael and their 7-year-old daughter Michelle.

Israelis suffer through roller coaster of emotions during week

■ In the space of one week, Israel has eperienced joy over the treaty to be signed with Jordan, and despair over the Tel Aviv bus bombing.

'If someone had told us two years ago that things would turn out this way, we would have locked him in a padded room. What is happening to us now is what we have yearned for for 50 years.'

— Ron Miberg, Israeli commentator

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In the past week, Israel has suffered an extreme confirmation of the old Jewish dictum, symbolized by breaking a glass at a wedding: There is no joy without sadness.

The joy of a peace treaty with Jordan was swiftly followed by the bombing of a Tel Aviv bus that killed 21 people and cast a pall over the Middle East's headlong rush to peace.

The country is divided between those who say the peacemaking is too advanced to be stopped by Islamic fundamentalist terrorism and those who fear that attacks like Wednesday's bombing could sink it.

Having invested so hugely in making peace, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat are unlikely to let the violence stop them. But the question is whether either will survive to see the process through.

Rabin's parliamentary majority rests on a handful of fickle votes. Arafat, having laid down his arms for less than full Palestinian statehood, needs urgently to prove to his people that it was worth the gamble.

The vicious circles that kept the Middle East at war for so long are continuing to gum up the peace effort.

To calm his frightened public, Rabin has sealed off the Palestinian territories, both those still occupied by Israel and the self-rule areas.

That means thousands of Palestinians cannot get to their jobs in Israel, which means more hardship and anger, which means more converts to the fundamentalist camp, which means the inevitability of more bloodshed when Rabin reopens the borders.

Rabin was elected in 1992 largely because Israelis trusted the revered former general to make their streets safe from terrorism while pursuing peace. Thus each successful attack makes him look vulnerable, and the right-wing opposition has been quick to seek a parliamentary no-confidence vote.

Rabin will probably survive next week's vote. But even more daunting issues lie ahead, such as whether to give up the strategically valuable Golan Heights for peace with Syria.

All these complexities overshadow what has otherwise been a stupendous year for the Middle East, from the historic handshake between Rabin and Arafat at the White House last fall to the signing of the peace treaty with Jordan next week.

Peace with Jordan means an enormous strategic gain for Israel, because it no longer faces a serious threat to its eastern flank. Add the 1979 peace treaty with Egypt to the equation, and for the first time in their 46-year history, Israelis can begin to imagine living without the threat of annihilation.

Israel is now aligned with Egypt, Jordan and Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization in an undeclared coalition of interests against Syria, the only country with the capacity to wage full-scale war. The fundamentalists, deadly though their attacks are, pose no threat to Israel's existence.

President Clinton hopes to spur Israel and Syria toward a peace treaty when he meets with Syrian President Hafez Assad in Damascus next week.

On a broader level, old foes like Russia, China and India are now warm friends and business partners, and the international isolation that was Israel's lot for 40 years is virtually over.

King Hassan II of Morocco, who in 1973 sent troops to fight Israel, gave his first-ever interview to Israeli television on Friday night. He condemned the bus bombing and said he hoped to visit Jerusalem soon.

In the newspaper Maariv, commentator Ron Miberg suggested Friday that Israelis look at their situation in perspective.

"If someone had told us two years ago that things would turn out this way, we would have locked him in a padded room," he wrote. "What is happening to us now is what we have yearned for for 50 years."

But it is hard for most Israelis to take a detached view when they are permanently trapped on an emotional roller coaster, blasted by headlines that veer from "GREAT PEACE CELEBRATION" on Wednesday to "ATROCITY" on Thursday.

"People here feel that they have gone a very long way, recognizing the PLO, shaking hands with Arafat, allowing a process to begin that will lead to a Palestinian state. So they expect to be rewarded with moderation, not with buses blowing up in the middle of Tel Aviv," said Amnon Abramovitz, an influential columnist for Maariv.

On Friday, on the sidewalk where the bus blew up, hundreds of memorial candles flickered in the autumn breeze.

Wreaths and bouquets were stacked around a tree to which someone had tacked a handwritten poem:

"Pinch me, I can't believe it this is a nightmare, we are trapped . . ."

"A couple more attacks like the one in Tel Aviv, and the peace process will be destroyed," said Amnon Dankner, an author and commentator.

Haitian economy suffers from poverty

Aristide's dreams must overcome financial ruin

By Charles J. Hanley
AP Special Correspondent

PALMISTE A VIN, Haiti — From his peasant's perch high in the southern mountains, Pierre Joseph can look north toward the sparkling sapphire of the Atlantic, or south down emerald slopes to the Caribbean.

Or he can look down past his bare feet at the pale, dry earth, the sunbaked and pitiful land he probably shouldn't be farming. The curse of Haiti.

"The land just doesn't yield enough," the young farmer said. "That's our problem."

The fall of Haiti's military regime has given its people a glimpse at new horizons of freedom and democracy. But when the cheering dies down, President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and his democratic government must take on an enemy tougher than any hoodlum in uniform: one of the world's poorest economies.

Haiti is a country where national production has shrunk every year for 12 years. It is an economy where most adults have no steady work, a place where at least half the children under age 5 are malnourished.

Aristide has no illusions. He says he just wants to lift his people "from misery to poverty." In this unlucky land, poverty would be a blessing.

And the climb up from misery must begin in the farming valleys, like Palmiste a Vin's, where peasant income is estimated at no more than $100 a year.

Two-thirds of the fast-growing national population of 7 million live on Haiti's limited, severely eroded farmlands, often steep hillsides where trees have been cut away over the decades and the topsoil is washing out to sea.

Each family usually farms no more than an acre, growing corn or manioc or beans using methods little changed over the generations, methods only now being updated in places like Palmiste a Vin via simple agricultural projects.

Agents in a U.S.-financed program are teaching Joseph and other farmers soil and water conservation techniques, instructing them in proper terracing of hillsides, planting of small trees to hold the terrace rows, good seed selection and other basics.

> 'There's potential there in agriculture and tourism and export assembly plants.'
> anonymous World Bank economist

The lean, plainspoken Joseph, 34, welcomes the help. But he knows his people, overcrowding their old family plots, need more.

"We need more jobs, something else to do," he said.

The Haitian economy — like its politics and its voodoo religion — is unique.

It developed as a strange contraption of industrial and trade monopolies for families sitting atop a system of economic apartheid.

The upper class avoided paying taxes on their wealth and import duties on their trade goods, and lived in a hillside enclave above Port-au-Prince, the capital. The peasants and urban poor were taxed to the limit, and lived in a countryside or city slums largely without such public services as schools, health care, electricity or running water.

By the 1970s, the economy stood on three shaky pillars: backward peasant agriculture, with a coffee-export trade enriching just a few; a slowly growing tourism business; and a new sector of foreign-owned factories assembling baseballs, bras, electronics and other products requiring meticulous work and benefiting from Haiti's dirt-cheap wages.

The AIDS epidemic that struck Haiti in the 1980s devastated tourism. The political violence and international embargoes that came later forced the assembly plants to shut down, eliminating 36,000 jobs.

Coffee exports sputtered on, but the peasants suffered from deteriorating roads, disappearing credit, droughts and dislocations of people fleeing political repression. Some were forced to eat their seed grain. More and more turned to food aid. And year by year the population kept growing.

The average Haitian woman now bears six children in her lifetime, the highest fertility rate in the Western Hemisphere.

Returning to power with U.S. help, Aristide and his government thus far have laid out only a short-term plan for emergency economic recovery.

Those who look at the long term are, naturally, troubled.

"There's potential there in agriculture and tourism and export assembly plants," said a well-placed World Bank economist who spoke on condition he not be quoted by name.

"But," he acknowledged, "it's a daunting task, with lots of obstacles."

The executive director of the Association of Haitian Industries, Raymond Lafontant, said he expects only a few thousand assembly-plant jobs to return in the coming months. Many companies have simply moved for good.

And longer term, Lafontant said, Haiti's failed education system is a major problem. Barely half the adults are literate; less than half the children are in primary school.

"Human resources will be the first obstacle to development in Haiti," he said.

A prominent Haitian economist, Gerard Pierre-Charles, dismisses the prospect of significant industrial development.

"In the '70s and '80s they were proud that they created 30,000 factory jobs," he said. But to relieve the pressure on the land, up to 300,000 manufacturing jobs would have to be created in the next 10 years, Pierre-Charles said.

"It's almost a dream."

He agrees with those — like Agriculture Ministry agronomist Philippe Mathieu — who say Haiti must lower its sights and refocus on the land.

"You can't think about the future of Haiti without thinking about that small farmer," Mathieu said.

In the tropical highlands southwest of Port-au-Prince, Joseph and other small farmers clearly benefit from the sessions with technicians of the Pan American Development Foundation.

BATTLE: Divorce to have final showdown in court principals, according to court documents and sworn depositions, are millions of dollars apart in their legal claims.

The warring parties aren't talking in public, and the lawyers are reluctant to discuss the proceedings.

"But if you're gonna play, you gotta pay," said Jerry Loftin, Mrs. Walker's attorney. "This is an extraordinary case with extraordinary rancor."

Insiders compare the saga of marital discord to "The War of the Roses," a darkly humorous Hollywood movie starring Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner.

THEY REFER to the Texas version as "The War of the Walkers."

Perhaps a city called "Cowtown" should expect wild and wooly divorce cases with megabucks on the line. And Fort Worth has had its share, the most infamous involving Cullen and Priscilla Davis.

That dispute turned murderous in August 1976 when a man dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig invaded the $6 million Davis mansion and gunned down four people, killing two.

Mrs. Davis, though critically wounded, survived.

She identified her oil heir husband as the gunman, but he was acquitted after a trial that in 1977 was the longest and costliest in Texas history.

Decidedly less volatile, but still commanding headlines, was the divorce of Sid Bass, one of the billionaire Bass boys, and his wife Anne. That case involved hundreds of millions of dollars, and attempts to keep it under wraps were so stringent that the order sealing the court records was itself sealed.

Likewise, the breakup of Bass confidante Richard Rainwater, a co-owner of the Texas Rangers baseball team, and his wife also was conducted largely in private.

But published reports afterward put the settlement with Karen, his high school sweetheart, in excess of $350 million.

In a divorce with a twist, the romantic disentanglement of tennis star Martina Navratilova and one-time Cotton Bowl beauty Judy Nelson also unfolded in a Fort Worth courtroom.

That noisy melodrama brought the British press to town in droves.

Trigger-tempered Jerry Loftin represented Judy Nelson and, before her, Priscilla Davis. Jim Loveless, who spends many weekends riding his sleek Harley motorcycle, was a key player in both the Bass and Rainwater cases.

NOW THE two are going head-to-head in Cowtown's latest big bucks spousal dispute — just one of 11,108 divorce cases pending in Tarrant County courts.

Given the money, the acrimony, the claims, counterclaims and high profile lawyers, it is little wonder that this is called the "case from hell."

Jimmy Walker grew up in Fort Worth and worked part time at his father's gas station while attending Technical High School. He and Wanda, a Paschal student, began dating at age 16 and were still teen-agers when they ran off to Oklahoma in August 1956 to get married.

By then, Jimmy had enlisted in the Air Force and was stationed in Fort Worth. With financial help from Wanda's parents, he later attended college but never graduated.

After leaving the military, Jimmy landed a job with General Dynamics. To make ends meet, he resumed working nights and weekends at his dad's service station.

In those lean years, Wanda did her part. While raising two children, Jimmy Jr. and Mindy, she worked for a time at an investment company and also sold real estate.

Walker himself decided to try insurance, selling policies door-to-door. This eventually became full time, and involved extensive travel. Often he would leave home on Sunday and return on Friday.

In the mid-1970s, he began making money, friends say, and moved his family to a larger and nicer home. Soon he was building his own insurance agency, American Service Life.

In a series of moves described by friends as brilliant, he expanded his empire dramatically. By the time he sold American Service Life in the late 1980s, for $37 million cash, he and Wanda had acquired many of the trappings of success.

Their worldly goods included furs, jewelry, fancy cars, an airplane and a sprawling, elegant home south of Texas Christian University and Colonial Country Club.

WALKER POURED money into a pool, cabana, high-tech security devices and a weight room with more floor space than most three-bedroom homes. Forever the dedicated fitness buff, he packed the room with the finest custom-made equipment.

And in early 1991 he hired landscaping artist Sabrina Patterson to do the yard.

A former hairdresser, a striking brunette and 29 years old at the time, Ms. Patterson allegedly would become the foremost in a succession of Jimmy Walker's lovers.

Less than two months ago, nine lawyers trooped into state District Judge Sean O'Reilly's courtroom to debate claims in the 30-month-old divorce dispute and related cases.

A participant at the Sept. 8 hearing estimated the day's proceedings cost Walker $2,000 an hour.

"He's got more lawyers than O.J. Simpson," the participant said, neglecting to add that the legal bills might be comparable, too.

The lawsuits:

■ Walker vs. Walker.

Citing her husband's multiple affairs, which he has admitted, Wanda Walker seeks more than half the marital estate plus actual and punitive damages. For all Walker's purported transgressions, she demands at least $300 million.

■ Sabrina Patterson vs. Wanda Walker.

In a countersuit related to the car episode, Ms. Patterson accuses Mrs. Walker of "general harassment." That harassment allegedly included death threats, physical attacks, predawn telephone calls and spying by private eyes and Mrs. Walker herself.

■ MINDY RINGNALD vs. Sabrina Patterson.

Mrs. Ringnald, the Walkers' married daughter and Mrs. Walker's ally, maintains that Ms. Patterson "stalked" her from a shopping center to her home and slugged her in July 1992. This caused Mrs. Ringnald "physical pain, mental anguish, embarrassment and humiliation," for which she now wants an unspecified amount for assault, plus punitive damages.

■ Wanda Walker vs. Jimmy Walker and Sabrina Patterson.

In this lawsuit, since consolidated with the divorce action, Mrs. Walker alleged that the defendants exposed her, if not to the HIV virus, at least to the "reasonable fear of contracting AIDs."

Mrs. Walker claimed that Ms. Patterson once shared her home, but not her affections, with a gay, male hairdresser. Her friend died of AIDs-related causes, according to the lawsuit.

Walker's attorney, David Evans, asked Judge O'Reilly to dismiss the "AIDS phobia" claim, which she recently did. But that order is being challenged through the Texas Court of Appeals.

The appellate action could freeze all the proceedings, which seem to add new layers of lawyers at each turn.

IN HER divorce petition, Wanda Walker alleges her husband spent thousands on clothes, jewelry and gifts for Sabrina Patterson and paid off a $45,000 bank loan for her.

Accusing her husband of fraud, she declared: "Respondent has squandered and wasted community assets by making such grossly excessive gifts. . . ."

For his part, Walker complained that his wife had one of his two highly trained attack dogs put to sleep and that she "domesticated" the other. He maintained also that he was "stalked" by her private investigators.

Worse still, he said, his wife once pointed a pistol at him and then attacked him with a fireplace poker.

According to legal documents, eyewitnesses, sworn statements and friends of the combative parties, this is how the case evolved:

After learning of her husband's philandering in July 1991, Mrs. Walker had a private detective serve Walker with a restraining order barring him from his $3 million home.

THE GATE was locked that day, and armed guards roamed the grounds.

Mrs. Walker sent his clothes, stuffed in garbage sacks, to a hotel where he took refuge.

Later in 1991, Mrs. Walker was told by a household employee that her husband and Ms. Patterson had slept in her marital bed. That night, she summarily loaded the mattress in a pickup truck, hauled it to Sabrina's house and dumped it in a flower bed.

Then the mattress was set ablaze.

Asked under oath if she considered that episode to be "outrageous conduct," Wanda Walker snapped:

"Not when she was sleeping in my bed on my pillow with my husband."

In court papers filed last April by attorney Walker Friedman, Ms. Patterson alleged Mrs. Walker "began a bizarre course of conduct" in mid-1991 and continued for a long but unspecified time.

On several occasions, she said, Wanda Walker kept her and her home under surveillance, simply parking her car in the Patterson driveway "for lengthy periods of time"

At other times, she alleged, Mrs. Walker would telephone at all hours of the night and threaten to kill her.

And not all the alleged transgressions found their way into the court's file. A dirty word once was burned into Ms. Patterson's manicured and terraced lawn and many of her treasured plants mysteriously died.

Despite the animosity, the Walkers attempted a reconciliation after the divorce lawsuit was filed in March 1992. But that interlude ended pretty much in unison with the car wreck six months later.

"That wasn't an accident, was it?" Wanda Walker was asked under oath.

"YES, IT was an accident," she replied.

"It was an accident when you grabbed this woman by the hair and pulled her to the ground?"

"No," she replied. "That wasn't an accident."

Offering her version of Sept. 9, 1992, to police, Ms. Patterson said she jumped from her car, confronted Mrs. Walker and demanded that she leave her alone. Instead, she said, Mrs. Walker grabbed her by the hair and threw her down in the middle of the street, screaming obscenities.

According to Mrs. Walker, Ms. Patterson called her a "crazy woman" and appeared on the verge of striking her.

"What are you going to do, try to hit me like you did my daughter?" Mrs. Walker recalled saying.

"And what happened next?" she was asked.

"And then I said, 'You bitch, you better never touch my daughter again. And I jerked her down and kind of drug her a little bit. And she started to get up, and I jerked her again."

A passenger in Ms. Patterson's car finally pried the women apart, and Mrs. Walker drove off in her crippled Mercedes.

Summoning police from her car phone, Ms. Patterson complained of back pains and said her assailant literally pulled hair from her head. In his report, the officer said Ms. Patterson mentioned her affair with Walker but insisted the dalliance had ended a year earlier.

As the divorce case began to heat up again, Walker allegedly drove to the lake, climbed aboard his 46-foot cabin cruiser and steered it from the slip. Then, the huge engines grinding in reverse, he smashed it into the dock.

That destroyed the stern and the foot-tall, 14-carat gold script lettering: "Wanda's Choice."

As the story goes, Walker told the harbormaster to repair his boat and change the name to "Free at Last," which was a bit premature.

"It tickled me to death," Mrs. Walker said sarcastically, "that he was that kind of man."

With the divorce case now approaching a late autumn showdown, the two sides are hotly debating the extent of Walker's current fortune, principally a holding company called Walker Financial Corp.

On that issue, opposing lawyers concede they are nearly $30 million apart and there's no end in sight on the other disputes.

"I would rather spend every dime we have on attorneys' fees than see Sabrina Patterson get a nickel," Mrs. Walker told her husband, according to court papers.

"And you feel that way, don't you?" she was asked.

"I certainly do."

ing to read the fact checks are much more likely to vote."

Polinard said he was not surprised that 44 percent of Texans said they did not trust media fact checks because of the media's poor reputation with some people.

"If you asked any question with the words 'media' and 'trust' at the same time, you'll get a high percentage of people saying 'no'" — that they don't trust the media, Polinard said.

McCombs agreed, adding that the media faces certain challenges when trying to run fact checks.

"People are very distrustful of what they see in the media," McCombs said. The distrust in the fact checks "is compounded by the fact that the ads, in many instances, are ambiguous and vague. Trying to pin them down, itself, gets slippery ... That makes the media's job more difficult in doing the ad watches."

Ann Arnold, executive director of the Texas Association of Broadcasters, said she was dismayed so many people siad they did not trust the media's fact checks.

"I think it is an important safeguard," she said. "It helps encourage the candidates to be honest in what they put in their political advertising."

The poll also asked whether the campaigning this political season has been more positive, more negative or about the same as in recent years.

The majority of Texans — 52 percent — said the campaigning has been about the same, while 24 percent said it has been more positive and 14 percent think campaigning has been more negative. Ten percent said they didn't know.

Candace Windel, director of The Texas Poll, said negative ads often crop up closer to election day and that the public's perception may change in the next two weeks before the election. But the majority's perception that there is not more negative campaigning this year probably is accurate, she said.

"We really haven't had as much negative advertisements as we have had in past years," Ms. Windel said.

Polinard said this political season seems more calm than in previous years.

"Compared to previous seasons, this has been very even-handed," he said. "But this is not totally unexpected. We know from other surveys that people say they are fed up with the negative advertising."

The poll showed that few Texans actually meet the candidates, with 75 percent saying they had not seen Ms. Richards in person, while 88 percent said they had not seen Bush.

"In a state, especially the size of Texas, you can't take time to campaign in Three Rivers," Polinard said. "The only way you hit the rest of the state is television. Most people are not going to have a chance to see Gov. Richards or Bush, so they'll find out if they like them by how they look on television."

"Most studies show we watch candidates. We don't listen to them," he said. "Television isn't providing more information about what a candidate knows or stands for. It provides answers for questions like, 'Do we like this person? Do we trust this person? Does this person look like someone I'd like to be around?'"

Forty-one percent of Texans also said that seeing a candidate on television gives them more information about the real person than they get in reading about what the candidates says, according to the poll.

And of the 675 people deemed likely voters in the Nov. 8 election, 53 percent of women said television gave them more information about the candidate, while 49 percent of men took that stand.

Ethinicity also seemed to be a factor in how much weight is placed on visual information about a candidate.

Among likely Anglo voters, 47 percent said they place more value on the visual cues thay see on television than they do on printed news accounts of candidates. That number jumps for black and Hispanic voters — to 62 percent and 60 percent, respectively.

"People place much greater weight on non-verbal communication than we thought in the past," Ms. Windel said. "Just seeing people on TV — people place more weight on that. There are probably some people who think that's folly and unintelligent, but my guess is different people synthesize information in different ways."

Windel also said that advanced technology allows the public to keep up with candidates better. If a candidate says one thing in one town and then says something completely different someplace else, the media is more likely to point out those contradictions than in years past.

"Today that is much less likely to go unnoticed," she said. "And the more aware our technology has allowed us to become about those inconsistencies ... the more I think human beings say, 'I don't know if I trust them. I want to look them in the eye.'"

The Harte-Hanks Texas Poll is conducted for Harte-Hanks Communications Inc. by the Office of Survey Research, College of Communications, at the University of Texas at Austin. The poll includes a statewide systematic random sample of 1,002 adults, including 675 people deemed likely voters in the fall election, who were surveyed by telephone. Margin of error for the sample of likely voters is plus or minus 4 percentage points, while the margin of error for the whole sample is plus or minus 3 percentage points.

A smaller sampling of likely voters on the question about trusting Bush's ads caused the margin of error on that question to be plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Music provides relief, encouragement in war-torn Sarajevo

By Roger Cohen
N.Y. Times News Service

SARAJEVO, Bosnia and Herzegovina — Among the scarred streets and alleys of Sarajevo there is one comforting crossroads, where the sound of a Beethoven sonata or a Chopin waltz may be heard.

The music, sometimes flowing, sometimes betraying a student's faltering hand, cascades from the Sarajevo conservatory. In its lightness and otherworldliness, it offers solace in a city still raw with suffering. People linger, flirt, sip coffee in the shelter of the sound of half-forgotten times.

But the music is deceptive in the comfort it offers, for the institution it comes from has been lacerated. Once synonymous with civilization, and the universality of music, the conservatory now shows the barbarous legacy of the Bosnian War.

The solid Austro-Hungarian school contains destruction, physical and spiritual; interethnic suspicions, spoken and unspoken, and tragedy laced with the candid optimism of youth.

The physical toll on the school of two and a half years of war has been onerous. Seven music students and one teacher have been killed. Last year, two Serbian shells came through the ceiling of the concert room, which with its chandeliers and chairs upholstered in blue velvet contrives nonetheless to retain vestiges of a Viennese plushness.

The concert piano, ruined by the shell blasts, is propped unused on a metal leg. A gradual dilapidation has set in as 206 students of a prewar total of 276 have left.

But this suffering is probably no greater than that of any institution of similar size in Sarajevo. What sets the conservatory apart is the intense spiritual battle waged by students and teachers to save their music, and what it means to them, from the encroachment of war.

Their fight, in many ways, is a fight for what is left of the soul of Sarajevo, just as, two years ago, cellist Vedran Smailovic fought his own battle for peace by playing in a city street as shells fell around him.

"I play to defend myself," said Ivana Velican, 14, a piano student. "I mean, I am not — I cannot be — free. But I can sit at the piano. And I can hope that everyone learns to feel the love that I feel."

The difficulty, after a long siege by Serbian forces that has left a tragedy in almost every family, is finding the moral strength to play. Emina Dubravic, the school's director, wrestles with tears every time she reaches for her flute. The uplift of music is offset by the painful memories it stirs.

Mrs. Dubravic was pregnant when the Bosnian War began in April 1992. Just before Serbian shelling of Sarajevo started, she and her husband, Kenan, fled their house in the Sarajevo suburb of Ilidza, now controlled by Serbs. As Muslims, they had been threatened with death.

Their son, Amer, was born in Sarajevo on April 27, 1992. He came into the world, Mrs. Dubravic recalled, "with shells falling everywhere around me." Six months later, on Oct. 13, 1992, her husband, Kenan Dubravic, was killed fighting near his former home.

"It is so hard to play my flute," Mrs. Dubravic said. "You see, my husband would always accompany me on guitar."

Fighting tears, and tremulous lips, she raised the flute and was able to play the "Bosnian Pastorale" by Mladen Pozajic.

Amer watched, transfixed. He has not often seen his mother play. At the beginning of the year he asked, for the first time, where his father was. Mrs. Dubravic did not have the courage to say he was dead. She said he was sleeping.

Then, when Serbian shelling eased in February, she took Amer to the cemetery in the old part of town.

"He walked straight to his father's grave without being told where it is," Mrs. Dubravic said. "It was extraordinary. He said, 'This is where my daddy sleeps.' I had to grab him. He was dusting the snow off the grave and saying, 'I'm just making his bed.'"

Every working day, throughout the war, Mrs. Dubravic has gone to the music school to teach. Once, as she dodged shelling, the two-mile walk took 10 hours. Like many people in Sarajevo, she has fought an inner battle between a desire for revenge and a yearning for reconciliation. The latter has now won out.

"I am trying to give my pupils as much love for their music as possible," she said.

Pope skips mass for health reasons

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II skipped a special Mass for health reasons, Vatican Radio said Saturday.

The pope, who cancelled a trip to the United States this month because of his health, attends a ceremony at St. Peter's Basilica every year to mark the opening of the academic year for Vatican institutions.

But a combination of "the need for the full restoral of his health" and work on an ongoing bishops' synod kept him away from the Friday night Mass, Vatican Radio said.

Cardinale Pio Laghi read a message from the pope instead, the radio said.

For months, the Vatican has denied rumors that John Paul is ill.

He fell and broke his leg April 28 and had hip replacement surgery the next day. He postponed his U.S. trip because he needed more time to recover, the Vatican said.

John Paul plans a trip to Sicily Nov. 4-6. Church officials there said he would limit his activities during the visit.

Since his operation, the pope often walks with a cane.

Judge Ito's reversals raise eyebrows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superior Court Judge Lance Ito keeps no gavel at his bench. When O.J. Simpson asked why, the judge replied: "I don't need one."

Gavel or no gavel, Ito needs to show he's in command of the most visible criminal case in U.S. history in light of recent about-faces he has made on major issues — DNA evidence and jury selection.

"It is creating an impression of indecision or unpredictability about him that is undercutting to some degree what he conveyed (earlier): that he was in control of his courtroom," said Robert Pugsley, a law professor at Southwestern University.

Although Ito's reversals may be a sign of thoughtfulness, they give the impression he is a waffler, or worse, a cruel dangler of false hopes, particularly those of the defense.

It could be that Ito — who's presiding over Simpson's trial on charges that he killed his ex-wife and her friend — is a little bit of everything, a bundle of contradictions. He has offered no extensive explanations for changing his mind. And he has shown no reluctance to do so.

During the first of many pretrial hearings, Ito ruled that the defense could have access to parts of blood samples for independent testing. But he quickly reversed himself after a plea from Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark.

Ito left heads spinning on Tuesday when he rejected a defense request to throw out large amounts of DNA evidence or set a deadline for testing to be done. Just a few days earlier he had hinted strongly that he would take such action because prosecutors failed to adequately explain why evidence was submitted so late for tests.

"I don't know if I can telegraph to one side more openly that you are about to lose," Ito told Clark, who made a spirited bid to get him to read more explanations for the tardy testing.

In another dramatic reversal, Ito on Thursday barred reporters and the public from a part of jury selection to protect prospective jurors from publicity, only to change his mind the next day and reopen jury selection.

Ito himself had asked the prosecution and defense to make the motion to close part of jury selection, and he said he reversed his ruling after the defense decided all proceedings should be open.

Terry Francke, executive director of the California First Amendment Coalition, which opposed the media blackout, said Ito may have just been trying to use his power to try to make the media act in a way that Ito sees as responsible.

Francke said that Ito has few options to directly change the media and can do almost nothing to stop publicity generated outside the courthouse — which appears to be the main source of Ito's ire.

"It's almost as if he is reluctant to use the formal tools that he has and believes that a series of admonitions and scoldings and announced intentions will have their dampening effect," Francke said.

Ito still could cut off cameras in his courtroom after a hearing scheduled for Nov. 7. But history suggests Ito won't go so far. Even in his disputes with the media, he has shown a tendency to use strong rhetoric but tame action.

Groups urge vets of Desert Storm not to give blood

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Military veterans groups are urging Desert Storm veterans not to donate blood because of recent evidence that they say indicates the Gulf War Syndrome could be contagious.

A preliminary survey of Gulf War veterans by the U.S. Senate Banking Committee has raised suspicions that their illnesses may be contagious. However, officials with the Defense Department and the American Red Cross say blood supplies should be safe because donations are not accepted from people who are ill.

Blood donations from Desert Storm veterans had been banned for 15 months because a parasite from a sand fly that causes leishmaniasis could be in veterans' blood.

"I believe (Gulf War Syndrome) very well could be contagious," said Jeanette Martinez, whose husband died of a brain tumor believed linked to his service in the Persian Gulf.

Ms. Martinez, president of the San Antonio Gulf War Veterans of America, said there had been too many instances of spouses and children becoming ill for it to be coincidental.

Dr. Norman Kalmin, medical director of the South Texas Regional Blood Bank, said the bank will allow Gulf War veterans to give blood and cited a Defense Department directive allowing acceptance of such donations as of Jan. 1, 1993.

Carol Picou, a Desert Storm veteran who has testified before Congress about her service-related illnesses, said she has long urged that veterans not donate their blood because the illnesses are showing up in children of veterans.

Bruce Thiesen, national commander of the American Legion, advised Desert Storm veterans in February not to donate blood, citing a Feb. 9 statement by U.S. Sen. Donald Riegle that U.S. firms had shipped material to Iraq that could have been used to construct biological warfare weapons.

San Antonio-area military hospital officials said they had seen no evidence of the Gulf War Syndrome being contagious.

State of emergency: Firefighters battle corporations for business

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press

Sure, firefighters still want to get your cat out of the tree. But they'd much rather check your blood sugar, vaccinate your kids, take you to the hospital and — best of all — send you the bill.

In the past two years, dozens of fire departments nationwide have tried to grab a piece of the ambulance and paramedic business before it is devoured by a merger-crazed health-care industry.

For the firefighters, it's a matter of necessity. Thanks to more than two decades of wildly successful fire prevention programs, firefighters spend less time fighting fires and much more trying to keep city councils from slashing their budgets.

Since 1992, four monolithic corporations have emerged from the ether of investment capital, swallowed 75 of the nation's biggest local ambulance companies in 33 states and positioned themselves as cheaper alternatives to public paramedics.

At least once a week, one of these behemoths buys a local ambulance company. In two years, they have taken control of one quarter of what analysts conservatively estimate to be a $4 billion business.

The private sector, once dominated by moonlighting morticians who slapped flashing red lights on their hearses, now uses satellites to position its ambulances, Wall Street to bankroll its acquisitions and courts and local governments to fight bruising turf battles with a firefighting lobby trying desperately to preserve its place in American culture — not to mention city budgets.

"Fire departments nationwide have made it clear the only way they're going to remain in operation is if they go into the ambulance business," said Dan Smiley, chief deputy director of California's Emergency Medical Services Authority.

"This is survival for both sides, public and private," Smiley said. "Only one can get the call, and both want it."

What they want most is the Medicaid, Medicare and private health insurance reimbursements for a trip to the hospital. Both also want to expand into EMS' logical extension: using those well-equipped vehicles to deliver non-emergency care for profit.

"You're going to see a lot of change in EMS. You're going to see them provide more diabetes screening, medication delivery for the elderly, vaccinations," said Dr. Scott Zietlow, medical transportation chief for the Mayo Clinic.

A new nationwide effort by the firefighters to seize EMS from private ambulance companies is being encouraged by national lobby groups who fear the private ambulance industry is getting too big, too powerful and, most of all, too efficient to withstand.

"What rang our bell is there seemed to be a concerted effort by several large EMS companies in this country to dominate the industry," said Doug Brown, top lobbyist for the International Association of Fire Chiefs.

"If they can knock away EMS from the fire service, they will knock away the fire department."

A brief tour of the battlefield:

—Private ambulance companies have gone to court in at least eight California communities in the past two years seeking to stop the local fire department from taking over the paramedic business.

—Last month, Boca Raton, Fla., fired its private ambulance company so the fire department could get the insurance reimbursements.

—Firefighters are livid in Louisiana, where a regional ambulance company is advertising a "311" emergency service to compete with the publicly staffed 911.

—In Fresno, Calif., last July, the city decided its public paramedics were superfluous to the private sector and eliminated their budget.

—Ambulance giant American Medical Response Inc. earlier this year tried to buy the ambulance company serving Rochester, Minn., home of the Mayo Clinic. Mortified Mayo, worried about losing its local ambulance provider to a giant national firm, stepped in and matched the bid.

—In March, Portland, Ore., narrowly rejected this year a measure to let firefighters handle ambulance service in life-threatening cases.

—In Albany, N.Y., the common council last month settled a feud by giving firefighters a cut of ambulance company insurance reimbursements.

Experts say it's unclear, yet doubtful, whether the tumult has caused any sharp rise in deaths. If anything, the competition has led to vast improvements in response times.

Still, EMS in general is a muddled mix of public, private, volunteer, hospital-based and hybrid systems that veer crazily in quality nationwide from the good to the bad to the extremely ugly.

"There is no uniformity in this country. In some places, you can dial 911 in New York state and get an ambulance that was illegal in Arkansas in 1973," said Jack Stout, who has designed private systems for Kansas City, Fort Worth, Texas, Tulsa, Okla., and the former Israeli-occupied West Bank.

It's still far from decided whether EMS will be dominated by the health care industry or the public safety sector, but it's clear that the private side is creeping up on the guys in the red hats and galoshes.

Among the nation's 100 most-populous cities, the portion relying on the fire department for EMS has dropped from 48 percent in 1981 to 40 percent last year, according to the industry's Journal of Emergency Medical Services.

Cities relying solely on the private sector rose from 17 percent to 19 percent, and those using a combination of both went from 6 percent to 15 percent. The rest used volunteer services, hospital paramedics or a public agency unaffiliated with the fire department.

Hundreds of cities to participate in 5 days of fed-bashing

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press

Less candy than Halloween. Fewer furniture sales than Columbus Day. No groundhogs, no green beer, no questions about what an "arbor" is.

Still, hundreds of cities this week will find a way to mark — honest — National Unfunded Mandates Week.

"It's something that's not easily understood until you explain what it means," National League of Cities spokesman Randy Arndt says.

It means five days of fed-bashing, complete with an orchestrated coast-to-coast chorus of cranky City Council resolutions and outraged mayoral news conferences.

The purpose is to stir public support for a 2-year-old crusade against the hundreds of local programs ordered, but not financed, by the federal government.

Such programs require Kalamazoo, Mich., to attach special hydrocarbon detectors to the smokestack on its wastewater sludge incinerator and tried to make Washington, D.C., put little bumps on its subway platforms so blind people can tell where the edges are.

"That's a very classic example of an unfunded federal mandate," U.S. Transportation Department spokesman Brian Cudahy acknowledges. Subway authorities resisted and are trying to work out an agreement.

The movement's hundreds of targets include a new regulation requiring cities to cleanse rainwater, which carries road salts and other bad things to rivers as it rushes through urban streets.

Grumbles Victor Ashe, mayor of Knoxville, Tenn., which has spent $700,000 on storm sewer consultants, "You might as well call it the consultant relief act."

What these and hundreds of other regulations have in common is they were all ordered by the federal government with no strings, and no money, attached.

That's wrong, local governments say.

That's beside the point, say environmentalists and other activists, who view the anti-mandate movement as a scattershot attack on major federal acts such as those for clean water, clean air and Americans with disabilities.

"Before they were called unfunded mandates, they were called things like civil rights," says Gene Russianoff, a consumer advocate and lawyer for the New York Public Interest Research Group.

The targets are too often worthy things, such as the subway platform bumps, he adds.

"There's a lot of good policy in those laws, whether they are environmental, social justice or consumer issues," Russianoff says.

Others believe the nation's mayors are being duped by corporations and anti-Washington zealots.

"The unfunded mandate movement is a big smokescreen behind which people are trying to dismantle government," says Bruce Hamilton, national conservation director for the Sierra Club.

Hamilton says critics of unfunded federal programs often make their points by citing something that sounds ridiculous, such as Indiana being required to test for a pesticide now used only by Hawaii on pineapples.

"Well, Indiana used to use that pesticide," Hamilton said. "They're taking out their frustration on the most absurd unfunded mandates and using it to dismember programs that benefit everybody."

Nevertheless, the movement, backed by the National League of Cities, U.S. Conference of Mayors and their gubernatorial and county counterparts, hopes to stir public anger just before the off-year election.

The League of Cities has sent out more than 4,000 "action kits" — "Caution! Co$tly Mandates Ahead," the packets warn — so communities can fashion press releases, pass resolutions, write newspaper opinion pieces and quiz their congressional candidates before the election.

Soldiers honor Raye with Fort Bragg funeral

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army Special Forces soldiers honored Martha Raye on Saturday at a funeral that began with Green Berets bearing her flag-draped coffin to her grave and ended with her jazzy theme, "Mr. Paganini."

Her raucous rendition of the song in her 1936 debut movie, "Rhythm On The Range," with Bing Crosby, made her a star. Through three wars, she worked tirelessly to entertain U.S. troops.

Raye, who died Wednesday in Los Angeles at age 78, had requested a grave at Fort Bragg, home of the Green Berets who knew her as "Col. Maggie."

Normally only active and retired Army personnel are buried at a base, but the Special Forces Association asked military brass to make an exception, and they did.

An honor guard from the 7th Special Forces Group Airborne served as pall bearers. The 82nd Airborne Division band played patriotic songs. And about 300 soldiers and civilians came to honor her.

Raye appeared in numerous movies and TV shows, and had her own TV series, "The Martha Raye Show," in the 1950s. In later years, she was best known for her denture adhesive ads.

Raye received a special Academy Award in 1969 and the Presidential Medal of Freedom last November for her support of the Army.

Retired Master Sgt. Tom Squire met Raye when she traveled into the Mekong jungle to entertain his unit of just 25 men during the Vietnam War.

"She came, regardless of the danger. She talked, drank, told jokes, played cards," he said at the funeral. "A lot of times, when the regular Army didn't know what was going on or understand, she would just go."

Raye often gave her home phone number and address to soldiers, and when they called, she greeted them like old friends, Squire said.

When Squire was wounded, Raye visited him in the hospital, he said.

"There were times I don't think some of us would have made it if she hadn't been there to brighten things up," he said.

"You'll Never Lose Our Support..."

Dems scramble to demonstrate independence from president

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Dave McCurdy's nose stretches to Pinocchio proportions as the narrator hones in for the kill: "McCurdy claims he's a moderate independent voice, when the truth is he voted with Clinton 90 percent of the time."

If that ad by Republican Senate candidate Jim Inhofe doesn't get the point across, there is another showing thugs in pink tutus. They're meant to illustrate dance lessons provided for inmates under the Clinton crime bill that McCurdy supported. Even Inhofe's positive ads have a red slash through the names Clinton and McCurdy.

In Oklahoma and elsewhere, Republicans are running against the president as much as their actual opponents, hoping that Clinton's poor political standing will cripple other Democrats.

"There is a real drag," laments McCurdy, the Democrat seeking the seat vacated by retiring Sen. David Boren. "There is no question about it."

So, Democrats are scrambling to demonstrate their independence from the president.

In Tennessee, Democratic Rep. Jim Cooper brags about his disputes with Clinton on health care and other issues. Yet his lead in the Senate race has evaporated, in part because of his worse-than-expected standing among blacks and other traditional Democratic loyalists.

"It is unwise for candidates to run away from Bill Clinton," says Don Foley, executive director of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. "It is seen as cowardly and not genuine."

The Clinton factor is most intense in the South and border states, the region Clinton and Vice President Al Gore call home.

"I don't need or want Bill Clinton to come into my district and campaign for me," said Democratic Rep. Bud Cramer of Alabama. Every time Cramer asserts his independence, GOP rival Wayne Parker reaches for statistics: Cramer, he says, voted with Clinton 83 percent of the time.

In Virginia, the tally for Sen. Chuck Robb is 90 percent, a fact frequently found in Republican Oliver North's speeches and campaign ads. "Bill Clinton doesn't want me in the Senate," North says in an ad. "I consider that a compliment."

The Clinton factor even is creeping into state contests. GOP television ads in Alabama intersperse photographs of Clinton and Democratic Lt. Gov. Don Siegelman, who is seeking re-election.

Bonnie Campbell, the state attorney general and Democratic gubernatorial nominee in Iowa, says a Clinton campaign stop would help "rev up" Democratic voters. But to deflate criticism from GOP Gov. Terry Branstad, Campbell also has vowed, "I would stand up to Bill Clinton in a second."

Catfish industry seeks to shed its unhealthy image

WASHINGTON (AP) — Catfish tastes best to most people when it's coated with corn meal, deep fried and served with fried potatoes and fat-sponges known as hush puppies, with a side of slaw.

That's not what a consumer-group had in mind when it concluded this past week that seafood restaurants are among the healthiest places to eat out. Nevertheless, the catfish industry is trying to shed some of its unhealthy deep-fried image.

Companies are selling pre-marinated and blackened catfish as an alternative. And traditionalists argue that compared with batter, the cornmeal dusting absorbs relatively little fat if the fish is cooked in a good, hot vegetable oil.

"We're working hard to try to encourage people to try to grill and to bake it for all the health reasons," said Hugh Warren, executive vice president of the Catfish Farmers of America, based in Indianola, Miss.

For the first time in nearly 20 years, catfish production is expected to drop, the Agriculture Department reported last week.

The department and industry spokesmen say the reason has nothing to do with a drop in demand, which is rising. Rather, growers stocked their ponds with fewer baby fish because of a price plunge in 1992 and 1993, and the short harvest now means there are not enough fish to go around.

That is good news for people who raise the catfish, and bad news for workers in plants that kill, skin, gut and further process the bewhiskered, scaleless channel cats.

Pond-bank prices hit a very healthy 80 cents a pound in April and have stayed there ever since.

So the people who run fish farms in catfish states such as Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi will have a record year, grossing $340 million off 440 million pounds of catfish.

Fewer growers are enjoying the profits as well. Nearly 1,351 people raise catfish now, down 600 from three years ago, the department estimates.

Processors are getting better prices, too, but at a cost of idle time.

"We're processing everything we can get our hands on," said Walter Harrison, marketing manager for Delta Pride Catfish Inc., a cooperative based in Indianola. Last June, the company ended its night shift on the killing floor in the Indianola and Belzoni plants.

Despite the fluctuations, retail catfish prices keep fairly steady, compared with the price swings for ocean-harvested varieties of seafood. Steady supply and quality control in the face of diminishing ocean supplies helped spawn an aquaculture industry that also includes salmon, trout and tilapia.

At the seafood counter, catfish occupies a place in the price range between cod or pollack on the lower end and red snapper or Dover sole on the high end.

Americans eat an average of 15 to 16 pounds of seafood a year, and Warren says catfish consumption has edged up to account for 1 pound of that total.

Bill Allen, president of the Catfish Institute in Belzoni, Miss., says the market is growing less regional, with California becoming the fifth-largest market.

Food giants like Hormel and ConAgra have gotten into the business as well.

Now growers are at the typical crossroads in food production. Prices are good, so why not produce more?

The Agriculture Department says prices beyond 80 cents a pound could cut into demand.

Clinton demands schools expel gun-toting students

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — President Clinton, whose political woes are causing headaches for California Democrats, demanded Saturday that schools expel gun-toting students and accused Republicans of threatening education reforms with their campaign promises.

Tying the two themes together, Clinton told high school students at a pep rally-packed gymnasium, "We have to prove ... we can still give our kids an old-fashioned, safe upbringing and a good education."

Clinton sought to boost his political standing, especially in the West, with a three-day swing through California, Washington state and later Ohio.

As one of his first acts of the trip, the president signed an executive order requiring school districts to expel for at least one year any student who brings a gun to the classroom. He said the government would terminate funding to states that don't force school districts to comply, although there could be some exceptions.

The directive simply clarifies the intent of a new law, but it gave Clinton an excuse to address voter disgust with mounting crime, a key issue in the midterm elections.

"Young people simply should not have to live in fear of young criminals who carry guns to school," he said at Clarmont High School. "We cannot operate in a country where children are afraid ... You cannot learn in that kind of atmosphere."

To the students cheering loudly and thumping their seats, Clinton said, "You must say no to guns, no to gangs, no to drugs — yes to education, yes to hope and yes to your own future."

With elections nearly two weeks away, the president and his party face the loss of several seats in Congress and perhaps control of the House and Senate.

Despite some progress in the polls, due mostly to successful foreign policy initiatives in Haiti and Iraq, Clinton is still considered a political liability to many Democratic candidates. But he was joined Saturday by three members of California s congressional delegation, including Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif.

"Violence and fear have become epidemic on some of our campuses," said Feinstein, who sponsored the school expulsion legislation.

California, with its huge chunk of electoral votes, is a must-win for Clinton's 1996 re-election hopes. Polls show Clinton's popularity, although still low, has improved in the state recently, and is now above the national average.

Clinton, stumping for Democrats on the eve of an historic Middle East trip, also used his weekly radio address to chide Republicans for their "Contract with America," a campaign wish list that promises support of the balanced budget amendment and congressional term limits.

Clinton said the contract would cut taxes for the wealthy, trim Medicare and reduce education programs, including a new loan program for college students.

North dismisses drug allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver L. North, seeking a Senate seat in Virginia, dismissed as "hogwash" Saturday newspaper reports suggesting he turned his back on rumors that a plane supplying arms to the Contra rebels smuggled drugs back into the United States.

Separate stories in The Washington Post and The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star, which is published jointly on Saturdays and Sundays in Norfolk, carried stories revisiting the 1980s controversy over how North and other Reagan administration officials dealt with the drug smuggling rumors involving the Nicaraguan rebels.

North, campaigning before a Virginia Tech-Pittsburgh football game in Blacksburg, Va., said, "I'll give you a one word reply: hogwash."

The former National Security Council aide in his diary has noted several rumors of alleged drug smuggling during 1984 and 1985. He also told congressional investigators in 1987 that in most cases he had passed the information to the Drug Enforcement Administration or the Central Intelligence Agency.

The Post said the DEA had no record that North had ever notified it about the rumors.

A DEA spokesman, John Hughes, said Saturday, "We have reviewed our files and they don't contain any reference" to North. But the drug agency also said it had found no evidence to support separate allegations by a former DEA agent that the Contras were involved in drug trafficking.

Officials of the CIA could not be reached Saturday for comment.

In a statement Friday, North called it "a moral outrage and a cheap political dirty trick by desperate opponents to even suggest that I or anyone in the Reagan administration in any way, shape or form ever tolerated the trafficking of illegal substances."

Elliott Abrams, a former assistant secretary of state who helped run the Contra supply effort with North, said Democrats who had opposed aid to the Contras regularly charged in the 1980s that the Nicaraguan rebels "were a bunch of drug traffickers and thieves."

"We tried desperately to keep out of the Contra movement anybody involved in drugs or any other kind of illegal behavior," he said in an interview. Twice they kicked leaders out of the movement on allegations they did not consider them "reliable enough to warrant reference to a law enforcement agency," Abrams said.

One of North's diary entries refers to a tip from an aide that a DC-6 chartered for the Contra supply operation out of New Orleans "is probably being used for drug runs into the U.S."

But Abrams said some of the information they got about possible drug smuggling "was really unreliable or based on rumor. ... The notion that we had reliable, factual information and did nothing with it is terribly misleading."

Embassy hosts lunch for Diana

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, Tipper Gore and Gen. Colin Powell were among guests who dined on baked rockfish at a luncheon for Princess Diana at the British Embassy on Saturday.

British Ambassador Sir Robin Renwick and his wife, Lady Annie Renwick, hosted the event, which also was attended by Barbara Walters and former Washington Post publisher Katharine Graham, an embassy spokesman said.

The guests included former Virginia Gov. L. Doug Wilder, Baltimore Mayor Kurt Schmoke, actor Michael York, Saudi Ambassador Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, and Italian Ambassador Boris Biancheri, the spokesman said.

The menu at the two-hour luncheon was artichoke salad, baked rockfish and chocolate mocha.

Diana was in Washington for the weekend as a guest of Brazilian Ambassador Paulo Tarso Flecha de Lima and his wife, Lucia, who is a longtime friend.

MPD recruits train in the field

■ After police academy, future officers go through 14-week program.

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Laura Gilmore has officially been working as an police officer at the Midland Police Department for about a month.

However, she has been behind the wheel of a police unit, making arrests and writing reports for a lot longer.

After completing the police academy, Ms. Gilmore spent 17 weeks in field training, a program started five years ago to give recruits hands-on training in the duties and responsibilities of being an officer.

"It was very stressful," Ms. Gilmore said. "A lot is expected of you. You have someone watching you all the time and you are constantly being evaulated. It's really hard when you actually start driving and responding to the calls yourself. You are under surveillance the whole time."

Upon completion of the police academy, the recruit, called a Probationary Police Officer or PPD, begins the program in Phase 1, which is classroom orientation on how to write reports, fill out forms and learning general orders.

After two weeks in Phase 1, the PPD is then paired with one of the department's 10 Field Training officers. The PPD spends two weeks with each officer during the remainder of the program.

During Phase 2 of field training, the PPD will mainly observe the training officer. However, by the end of that phase and in Phase 3 and 4, the PPD gradually begins to drive and to answer calls and assume duties. Phases two through four are four weeks each.

By the final phase, called the Ghost Phase, the PPD has assumed all duties. During these final two weeks, the training officer is dressed in civilian clothing and simply "ghosts" the PPD.

PPDs are evaluated on a daily and weekly basis on criteria such as attitude, knowledge of procedures and policies and interaction with the public and other officers. Strengths and weaknesses are also noted.

If, during any portion of the program, a PPD is not performing up to the department's standards, the recruit will go through a remedial phase focusing solely on the training aspect he or she is failing. After the remedial phase, the recruit then picks up where they left off in the program.

Midland Christian school starts journalism program

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

They may be few in number, but three Midland Christian High School students are making history as the pioneers of the school's first journalism class.

After studying reporting this semester, the students plan to publish the first issue of the school's newspaper "The True Blue" (the school's colors are red, white and blue). The high school student body recently voted on the newspaper's name from a slate of five choices.

"It (journalism) has been fun. I'm thinking about reviewing alternative metal music," Josh Garrett said.

"For me, it's rap and R&B (rhythm and blues)," said fellow student Marty Ballesteros, noting that he and Josh were initially the only students who signed up to take the journalism course.

"But we campaigned to get Shelby (Scott) to take it," he said.

Shelby recently interviewed the school's football coach.

By Friday, another student, Andy Mott, was joining the ranks of the campus reporters. Although not yet in the class, Andy has already written an editorial about a campus issue.

"Part of the reason we have so few students is that I wasn't in town yet at registration," said Midland Christian English and journalism teacher Kirk Macon.

A former reporter and three-time high school state University Interscholastic League champion, Macon coached his own students to UIL state championship wins during his 10-years teaching with Sonora Independent School District.

'The editors kept leaving. And I found myself doing everything, from writing to laying out the page.'

— Kirk Macon, journalism teacher

Before going into teaching, Macon worked as a special correspondent for the San Angelo Standard-Times, the now-defunct San Antonio Light, Odessa American, Sweetwater Reporter, and Alpine Avalanche.

He said he was bit by the reporting bug as a high school student, while writing for the Sweetwater Reporter, a daily newspaper.

"The editors kept leaving. And I found myself doing everything, from writing to laying out the page," Macon said, laughing at the memory.

He later served as editor for his high school and Sul Ross University newspapers.

Recently named a Certified Journalism Educator by the National Journalism Educators Association, Macon often speaks at UIL and journalism conferences about advising journalism students.

"My Sonora teaching job was supposed to be a job between jobs. Somehow I

Scout troop 'adopts' 'leader-less' pack

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth in a series of articles featuring people who have been helped by United Way of Midland agencies.

WANTED: Volunteer leaders for a group of boys wanting to continue in Boy Scouts.

FOUND: A troop with plenty of volunteer leadership and equipment to share.

In the world of happy endings, this group of boys found the extra leadership they needed to stay in scouting. But it wasn't as easy as reading a wanted ad.

TUNE IN! THE UNITED WAY

This story actually starts about two years ago. The Rev. Isroe Cooper of Greater St. Luke A.M.E. Church was driving down Texas Street one day when he spotted the Boy Scouts' office. He stopped and inquired about starting a troop at his church.

"He said he had someone in mind to lead it," recalled Jody Sneed, senior district executive. "He said they would have to grow their own troop, starting with a Cub Scout pack. The next day Willie Mason showed up at the office asking what he needed to do to start the troop."

'Evil forces' can ruin carefully prepared speech

One of the more interesting aspects of being a journalist — be it of the small-town or big-city variety — is that from time to time you find yourself serving as a member of — and I quote — "a panel of experts," discussing fascinating subjects of monumental proportions, such as "How Best to Get Your Group's Press Releases Published in the Daily Newspaper."

Ott

Like I say, we're talking heady stuff here.

Still, it must be done. So there you are at the head table, seated second from the left, fielding a host of insightful questions from the audience.

At first glance, this would seem to be a snap. After all, if there is anyone who knows about getting press releases in the newspaper, it's you. You've been doing it for 20 years and there aren't many situations you haven't encountered during that time.

So bring on the questions.

You can handle them. And, you can handle this audience, too.

Or so you thought.

Unfortunately, there is something about speaking before a group of strangers that makes even the simplest of endeavors turn potentially dangerous.

Actually, that's not quite right. If the truth were known, there are evil forces in this world — vicious little varmints — who like to hang out at public forums so they can make your life miserable. And, one of their favorite tactics is to ruin your carefully prepared presentation.

How, you might ask, can they do that?

Easy.

They make you look like a complete dunce.

This can be accomplished in many ways, of course, but here are three of the more popular ones:

■ Forcing the audience to sit there with blank stares when you attempt to tell a funny one-liner. This one will be particularly painful because during your rehearsals you were so certain of getting a laugh that you worked an automatic 30-second pause into your delivery. Now, all you get is 30 seconds of awkward silence. Unfortunately, you don't give up. So your presentation deteriorates into a lengthy series of tacky one-liners followed by awkward 30-second pauses.

■ Convincing you that you can indeed handle a cup of coffee and talk at the same time. You ought to know by now that this is an impossible task, especially since you have failed at it many times before, but you decide to try once more. You do just fine for the first 15 minutes or so, skillfully avoiding a direct hit of the cup with your wildly waving arms. Then it happens. In a particularly cocky moment, you lean back in your chair and cross your legs . . . under the table. You know the rest of the story. Your right leg bumps the bottom of the table, causing it to rise abruptly, thus tipping the cup over, resulting in the coffee pouring into your lap.

■ Forcing your mind to go blank in mid-sentence. On the surface, this one doesn't sound all that bad. After all, a blank mind is something we have all dealt with over the years. The problem that results, however, is that when your mind screeches to a halt, so does the tongue. As a result, you are left with nothing but a stupid look on your face. When you attempt to speak, the words do not cooperate. All that spews forth is "uh," "duh" and "huh." NOTE: All is not lost, however. You finally get that big laugh you were so desperately seeking.

(From 1B)

A PPD must have a satisfactory evaluation during the ghost phase of the program in order to become a commissioned officer, according to Officer Adolfo Baesa, one of the department's training officers.

"There is no final exam or test as such," he said. "However, you have to get through that final phase in order to make it."

Ms. Gilmore said changing officers every two weeks was one of the hardest parts of the program.

"What is hard is each officer has a different way that they handle a situation," Ms. Gilmore said. "There really is no wrong or right way to do it, unless you aren't being safe. But, you have to adapt to that officer. Then, when you are on the force, you try to take the best of each of the officer's approachs and adapt it to a way that suits you."

Officers who apply to be trainers must meet certain department requirements, including having served as a commissioned officer for 24 months, having been a patrol officer with the Midland department for 12 months immediately prior to their application and must have no disciplinary action that resulted in punishment within the past six months before applying.

Officers must then go through an department assessment board that will decide whether or not the officer should become a training officer.

Baesa was one of the first Midland officers to go through field training when it started five years ago and he has been involved in the program for two years.

"I got involved in the field training program because I want to see a change in our recruits," he said. "I wanted a more knowledgeable officer on the streets."

He said that a personality conflict with one of his training officers was another reason he wanted to help train new officers.

"It shouldn't be where a personality conflict can keep you off the force," he said. "Our program has come a long way and now, it is your total performance that is taken into consideration."

As a training officer, Baesa admitted that he is tough on recruits, especially in the area of officer safety.

"They need to have respect for themselves without alerting or offending the public," he said. "They need to be safe without looking like making the person feel like a suspect."

Officer Phyllis Blair went through a similar program at a another department, but joined the Midland department 10 years ago when field training was not in place.

"I think it has definately improved the caliber of our officers," Ms. Blair said. "They know the laws better and they have had extensive opportunities to handle different situations."

LEADER: Troop shares skills, equipment with other scouts

(From 1B)

Mason was a member of Great St. Luke's and no stranger to scouting. He grew up in Midland and had been a member of a troop based at the church. He became a First Class scout and worked toward his Eagle badge.

After graduating from high school, Mason joined the service and left Midland for 17 years. When he returned, he looked for a church home and remembered Greater St. Luke's.

Mason helped organize the Cub Scout pack with other volunteers from the church. Toward the end of the school year, it became apparent that the older boys who would advance to Boy Scouts didn't have enough volunteer support. At least two more volunteers were needed and they, needed equipment.

At the annual Scout-a-Rama last March, Mason and the scouts from Troop 70 saw a display by Troop 76, based at St. Paul's United Methodist Church. They were impressed, as were the judges who gave it the President's Award.

When Mason talked to Tom McBrayer of Troop 76, he was invited to bring his scouts as a patrol to Troop 76. They not only had leadership, but equipment.

Cooper visited Troop 76 and agreed. "He's a firm believer that scouting is a Christian outreach to the community," Mason said.

Jim Caldwell is scoutmaster of Troop 76; Mason serves as an assistant leader.

The whole troop has been involved in the merger. Volunteer Max May, who works near the church, picks up the boys on Monday evenings and takes them to the meetings. "That patrol holds together better than any other patrol we have here," he said.

Caldwell said that adding the patrol is no more work than with any boy. "That's what scouting is all about — teaching them a clean way to have fun and keeping them out of the street."

As the leaders sat in a room at St. Paul's, the boys were at work in an adjoining room: the older boys were running the meeting. "The scouts run their own show. These boys are not tied down to anything but their imaginations," May said.

The patrol from Greater St. Luke's has been learning about Boy Scouts. "You go out camping with these guys and you can depend on them," said Mason, who is learning from Caldwell how to be a scoutmaster.

"Once we get a good core of boys, we'll move back (to Greater St. Luke's). But we like Troop 76 and we like being here. This has been one of the most rewarding experiences since I've returned to Midland," Mason said. "Everyone has bent over backward to help. It makes for a real good time for the boys and we all get along great."

Sneed said this is the first time in several years that a troop has been taken in by another. "This has been a great example" to possibly get troops started in south and east Midland.

"I'm working with some Project Blueprint guys and we're trying to do the same thing at Mount Rose Baptist Church."

Sneed said a Venture Grant from United Way has helped pay the membership dues for these youngsters and has helped with costs of summer camp. In addition, the scout office receives "experienced" uniforms and equipment that can be used by the younger scouts.

One day, when enough adult volunteer leadership can be found, Troop 70 will move back to Greater St. Luke's and will share what they learned from Troop 76.

Both Mason and Caldwell see the benefits of partnership.

"They have truly been a blessing in my life," Mason said of the scouts.

"If I didn't enjoy this I wouldn't do it," Caldwell said. "It gives me personal satisfaction to see the boys learning all this. Another patrol means more boys to take care of and that's what we're here for."

Here ... to share their leadership skills and equipment.

Teen gets 45-year sentence in off-duty officer's murder

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas teenager has been sentenced to 45 years in prison for fatally shooting an off-duty Dallas police officer last November.

Dallas County jurors returned the sentence against Davon Lamont Tave, 18, after more than seven hours of deliberation Friday.

Tave was convicted Thursday of murder in the death of Senior Cpl. Richard Lawrence. A co-defendant, 20-year-old Marcus Wicks, is awaiting trial on a capital murder charge.

Prosecutors had sought a capital murder conviction for Tave as well, or at least a life sentence. But they said the jury's decision was understandable given Tave's youth, his lack of a criminal record and conflicting testimony about who fired the fatal shotgun blast.

"We were hoping for a longer verdict," assistant district attorney Hugh Lucas said. "But this is a verdict that we, and the family, can live with."

Tave must serve at least 22½ years before he is eligible for parole. A life sentence would have required him to serve at least 30 years.

Jurors deliberated Tave's sentence after a hearing Friday morning in which his family pleaded for leniency and Lawrence's relatives spoke of their grief.

Lawrence, a 22-year officer, was killed about 3 a.m. Nov. 9 while confronting two men trying to break into a pickup truck outside his far East Dallas apartment. Police arrested Tave and Wicks later that day.

Shortly after his arrest, Tave gave police a statement admitting that he fired the shotgun blast that killed the officer. He recanted that statement on the witness stand, however, saying he was coerced by detectives who told him he could receive probation for cooperating.

SCHOOL: Ex-reporter starts program put down roots and starting building a journalism program and my students started winning awards," Macon said. "I never expected teaching to become a lifelong occupation."

However, he couldn't resist coming to Midland Christian School once he was asked to start the journalism program.

"I don't miss the day-to-day deadlines of reporting," he said.

Now he prefers taking students who are "a little rough around the edges" and teaching them to polish their writing skills.

"The kids at Midland Christian are very aware of political issues," he said. "They logically think things through and make sound judgments. They are outspoken and aren't intimidated."

While he seldom fretted over his own UIL contest entries, Macon said worrying over the results of his students' entries sets him on edge. "Waiting on their results is very nerveracking, much like a football coach," he said.

He has plans for his students to compete in UIL invitational meets, and to tour television and radio stations. (They have already toured the Reporter-Telegram.)

Then there is the plan to publish The True Blue twice a month.

For now, Macon said he is "happy to be here, and happy Midland Christian School has journalism."

"Journalism effects everybody's lives," he said. "People love to criticize newspapers, radio and television news. But we would be lost without them."

MC theater takes new direction with musical

By Elise Coombes

When Theater Instructor John Cimics set about planning a new direction for the college's theatre program, he wanted a play that was geared for all Midland audiences as well as a play that would bring together the talents of the college's theatre, music, dance and art departments.

"You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," based on the comic strip "Peanuts," worked for Cimics on several different levels because of the universal appeal of the musical.

"First of all, I see Midland as being very much a family community, and so I am interested in doing plays that have a family appeal to them, That's part of the deal with 'Charlie Brown.' "It's the most popular comic strip in America. It just appeals to everybody."

The play also worked for the students involved in the production. "By doing a musical we had the chance to offer the most people an opportunity to get involved," Cimics said.

"As far as the students go, it gives them three times the challenge. They've got to be able to sing and dance and act, and by doing this they are getting help from different areas of the college."

Rob Hunt, MC music instructor, and Judy Coleman, MC dance instructor, are helping with the production, and members of the art department have provided technical help with the set.

"We've got so much talent, and we're just trying to find ways to bring that talent together to produce theatre everyone in Midland can enjoy," Cimics said.

The production fits in with Cimics' idea that "theatre is very much a community effort." For the last week the cast has taken "Charlie Brown" into the community with mini-performances before elementary school students and different civic groups to promote the production that begins Friday, Oct. 28.

The play also is building a special relationship among the actors. "When they got together they were strangers, and they have gotten to be real friends. And there's a real sense of family," Cimics said.

Cimics is particularly pleased that "Midland College theatre department is doing theatre at Midland College."

The musical, described as "a day made up of little moments picked from all the days of Charlie Brown...from a bright uncertain morning to a hopeful starlit evening," is based on the comic strip by Charles Shultz.

"Charles Schultz taps into the child in all of us," Cimics said about the appeal of the college's production.

All the familiar "Peanuts" characters appear in the Midland College production: suffering from unrequited love with the "little red-haired girl" is Charlie Brown played by Christie Kidd; bulldozing her way through life is Lucy, played by Mary Schammel; the thoughtful Linus is played by Susan Leibrock.

The sweet, innocent Patty is played by Heidi Hargrove; the sensitive musician Schroeder, relentlessly pursued by Lucy, is played by Jennifer Lancaster; and Snoopy, the World War I flying ace is played by Coby Archa.

The production staff includes John Cimics, director; Rob Hunt, musical director; Judy Coleman, choreographer; and Chyree LeMaster, stage manager.

Performances will be in Midland College's Fine Arts Auditorium 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 28 and Saturday Oct. 29, with a matinee performance Sunday, Oct. 30. The play will continue Friday and Saturday, Nov. 4 and 5 with 8 p.m. performances. A matinee performance is set for 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 6.

General admission tickets are $5, with free admission for Midland College students, with a $3 charge for Midland College employees. Call John Cimics, 685-4643, for more information.

"You're a Good Man Charlie Brown. . ."

"Charlie Brown's" Schroeder, played by Jennifer Lancaster, contemplates the meaning of life and why Lucy won't leave him alone.

Residents wonder what tomorrow will bring after week of flood, fire

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HOUSTON — For many in southeast Texas, it was a week of hell.

Flood. Then fire. Then a plague of oil. Can pestilence be far behind?

In an area accustomed to weather extremes, industrial calamities and unforgivable crimes, the recollection of the past seven days for thousands of people will be the stuff of stories passed along to generations.

"I remember back in '94 . . ." the tale will begin.

"We've had floods, we've had fire. What's tomorrow going to bring? Famine?" Arlene Dunning, 33, of Channelview, asked after her neighborhood was shaken last week, first by the threat of flooding on the San Jacinto River, then jolted a second time when pipelines in the river exploded, igniting the waterway with streams of leaking fuel into miles-long serpents of flame.

"It felt biblical," said Mike Norman, 34, who was on the river when the blast occurred. "It was like hell opening up on the planet."

Experts say the memories — and trauma — can remain painful.

The event itself started with heavy rains, something not uncommon along the Gulf Coast, where hurricanes and especially tornadoes are an accepted fact of life.

It wound up with death and destruction.

Some lost homes and all personal possessions.

"You know they say 'Up the river without a paddle?' That's us," said James Awbrey, whose home was swallowed by the raging San Jacinto. "I've got two babies, my wife and me. We've lost everything."

Others will be forced to remember the loss of loved ones. At least 18 fatalities were blamed on unprecedented flooding in some areas.

"There's a long-term effect that life is out of control," says Mary Armsworth, an associate professor of educational psychology at the University of Houston. "What was predictable is not predictable.

"Loss of home is part of most people's base of operations, base of safety. What represented safety from the rest of the world is no longer there."

For those who lost loved ones, the pain is even more intense.

"That adds another dimension," Ms. Armsworth says. "Everything is magnified. They feel the world is not a kind place, a safe place."

Officials at the Harris County Flood Control District aren't even certain how high the water got on the San Jacinto along U.S. Highway 59 because the river topped the bridge and was so deep they couldn't measure it.

"We want to go out there and see what this thing did," spokesman Frank Gutierrez said. "We've never seen this kind of water before."

State officials, describing their preliminary numbers as modest, estimated more than 1,600 homes and 240 businesses were damaged or destroyed.

And that was before all the water had subsided.

"We've had enough," one weary Liberty firefighter said Friday.

Liberty, along the flood-prone Trinity River, experienced its fourth flood in five years. But this time was different. Instead of just the river bottom, the whole town got swamped.

"It's kind of scary when you figure we've had just local rains," County Judge Dempsie Henley said.

The losses also went beyond human misery.

Animals trapped on an island in the San Jacinto when the pipeline blew were incinerated. A rhino and other exotic species were lost when an animal park flooded near Conroe.

But cowboys saved a herd of cattle that would have been doomed by the Trinity River near Liberty. And in Liberty four people dragged to higher ground a squealing 100-pound Vietnamese potbellied pig called Harvey. A garbage can served as a lifeboat.

"He's the biggest baby in the entire world," grateful owner Rena Brocco, 19, said. "He loves Oreo cookies and sleeps on the couch."

As much as the water flows, so does kindness and compassion. Red Cross shelters were teeming with people offering aid. Newspapers and television and radio stations mounted relief drives. The federal government moved quickly with disaster declarations, then opened relief centers so federal money could get to the hands of those who need it.

"For people who experience disaster, there can be feelings the world is not trustworthy," psychologist Armsworth says. "One of the things helpful when people are traumatized, when the world no longer is safe or benevolent, one of the immediate responses I tell people is to accept relief.

The start of a new week brings new threats. Storms to the north on Friday raised the possibility that heavy rains there would haunt the southeast Texas rivers later.

Forfeited money could help people with drug problems, panel says

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Targeting drug abusers with prevention and education programs was among several suggestions offered by South Texas authorities at a hearing aimed at finding ways to curb drug activity in rural areas.

The forum, held Friday in Del Rio, was the first of four sponsored by the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

One person said forfeited drug money that goes to law enforcement agencies should be used to help people with drug problems.

Julio Frausto, tribal administrator for the Kickapoo Traditional Tribe of Texas near Eagle Pass, said money impounded as a result of drug raids and seizures could be put to better use.

"I'd like to see more treatment centers to help combat alcohol and drug addiction," Frausto said.

Keith Majors, commander of the 81st Judicial District Narcotics Task Force, said a large portion of all drugs smuggled across the border ultimately comes through one of the four counties covered by his task force — Atascosa, Frio, Karnes and Wilson counties.

Interstates 35 and 37, Texas 16, and U.S. Highways 181 and 281 all pass through the area and all have links to the border. The proximity to San Antonio adds to the problem, he said.

"(Drug users and dealers) see our area as a virgin territory — they don't worry about apprehensions as much in our area, because we don't have as many officers," he said.

Majors said it's not just that he has only three undercover officers; the sparse population of the area compounds the problem.

"Once you make a bust, everybody and their kinfolk know who you are," Majors said.

About 15 officials spoke at the two-hour hearing. Some narcotics officials said more agents are needed to help fight the influx of drugs across the border from Mexico.

However, Leonard Lindheim, special agent in charge of the U.S. Customs Service in San Antonio, said the incentive for drug dealers is so great that it's almost impossible to control.

"I don't think that size of the work force alone would make a difference," Lindheim said. "With the kind of potential for profit margin out there, drugs are going to come in."

Typically, Lindheim said, massive quantities of drugs are flown from Latin American countries to just south of the Texas-Mexico border, where the shipments are broken down into smaller packages and floated across the Rio Grande.

The drugs are taken to clandestine warehouses, where they are repackaged, sold, hidden in tractors and other farm equipment, and hauled away, he said.

Despite an increase in arrests, many of the shipments get through, he said.

The number of large cash transactions at banks and money exchange houses along the border has raised Custom's suspicion, he said, and instances of unexplained wealth are visible in poverty-stricken counties along the border.

"You will see Cinderella's castle in Starr County with no explained reason for this wealth," Lindheim said.

County races top election ballot

Midland County voters will be choosing four county or district officials in contested races in the Nov. 8 General Election, as well as deciding the fate of a referendum proposal that would legalize pari-mutuel betting on horseracing.

The four positions to be decided are judge of Midland County Court-at-Law No. 2, county commissioner of Precinct 2, judge of the 8th Court of Appeals in El Paso, and justice of the peace in Precinct 1, Place 2.

Moore best choice

Republican nominee Marvin Moore has been a prosecutor with the Midland County Attorney's Office for seven years, handling exactly the kinds of cases he would hear on the County Court at Law No. 2 bench. That experience s him one step above his Democratic opponent, George Patterson, who is a prosecutor in the district attorney's office handling felony cases.

While their qualifications are similar, we believe Moore's familiarity with the law that will be used in County Court at Law No. 2 makes him the better choice. We urge voters to cast their ballots for Moore.

McCrary for re-election

In the race for county commissioner, Precinct 2, Republican Guy McCrary is opposed by Democratic candidate James Brooks. We endorsed Brooks, a veteran Greenwood Independent School District trustee, in the Democratic Primary and still believe he has a good foundation in dealing with personnel and budgetary matters in the public forum. He is likeable and sincere. But Midland County will be best served if Guy McCrary is re-elected to the Commissioners Court.

He has played a leading role in many of the accomplishments claimed by the court during his tenure. His continued service to the county and all its taxpayers is, as we have said before, even more important now since we have a new county judge and other incumbents are not or soon will not be members of the court. His experience will help in the work that is ahead.

Vaughan best qualified

Judges should be selected on the basis of qualifications and their ability to dispense justice fairly, not on where they reside. Both David Chew, the Democratic nominee from El Paso, and Julia Vaughan, a Midland attorney, appear qualified to serve, but if Chew wins this race all four judges on the El Paso bench will be from El Paso.

Prior to this race, it was virtually an unwritten rule that at least one of the judges on the court be from Midland or Odessa so that the eastern portion of the district would have representation on the bench. Due to El Paso's heavy population advantage, that representation will be lost unless Ms. Vaughan is elected.

When that matter is put aside, however, Ms. Vaughan, a Pecos native who has lived in Midland and practiced law in the appeals courts of Texas for almost 12 years, still is clearly the most qualified. She is certified in civil appellate law and is one of only 10 lawyers in West Texas so certified. She's an oil and gas attorney, an important factor when one considers the number of lawsuits involving oil and gas law that come before the 8th Court of Appeals.

Ms. Vaughan, a widely respected attorney throughout West Texas, is the best qualified and Midland needs representation on the bench of the court. We urge voters to cast their ballots for her.

Pine deserves nod

Robert H. Pine has been justice of the peace in Midland County for 29 years and says he would like one more term before retirement. The Republican nominee essentially enjoys good health, evidenced by the fact that his office still handles the heaviest caseload of the county's two justice courts.

Democratic opponent Manuel R. Lujan, a former Midland police officer who now works as a bondsman, says he would quit that job if elected. He certainly would have to because there would be a definite conflict of interest in serving as a peace justice and setting bonds on criminal suspects that often must go to a bondsman to get the money to get out of jail.

We believe Pine is clearly the most qualified to serve. We urge voters to cast their ballots for him.

Say no to referendum

Voters will also be asked whether they approve of a referendum "legalizing pari-mutuel wagering on horse races in Midland County."

Last time a pari-mutuel wagering referendum was presented, Midland County voters turned it down. At the same time the pari-mutuel betting referendum was presented throughout Texas and a number of counties approved it. As a result, there now are horse racing tracks in Lubbock, El Paso and several other areas within driving distance of Midland.

The primary justification for approving this referendum is that it would help develop a racing industry here and generate income, but that hasn't been the case in some other Texas counties that approved pari-mutuel wagering. So it's doubtful that it would be a lucrative industry here.

We encourage voters to vote against the referendum on pari-mutuel wagering for that reason.

Voters should keep Hutchison in D.C.

Giant-killer Richard Fisher goes head-to-head with U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison on the November election ballot, but despite Fisher's clean-cut image and experience in the Carter administration, we believe Texas voters will sign onto Hutchison's bandwagon once again. The junior senator from Texas has successfully defended herself against implications of abuse of her office while serving as state treasurer, charges brought by Travis County Dist. Atty. Ronnie Earle, and served out the office in Washington that she won by a huge vote margin after U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen joined the Clinton administration.

During her short time in the Senate, Sen. Hutchison has distinguished herself by working to keep military bases in Texas open in an era of base closings. She also attempted to bring some sense to the matter of jailing illegal immigrants in the United States at taxpayer expense. Through a Hutchison amendment to an appropriations bill for the departments of State, Commerce and Justice, the Senate approved use of a United Nations peacekeeping fund to help states pay for the cost of jailing the immigrants.

The senator also offered a bill that would have put an end to retroactive taxes that cost taxpayers more than they bargained for, but Democrats in the Senate quietly killed it — and the emphasis there should be on quietly.

Hutchison is showing promise as an outstanding senator and we encourage voters to send her back to the Senate for six more years.

Monday: Governor, Lieutenant Governor, State Board of Education.

Newt-ologists wonder what future holds

WASHINGTON — Hanging on the office wall of House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., is a note former Secretary of State James Baker scribbled as they suffered through a meeting together early in the Bush administration: "Newt: Thanx — Aein't 'governance' dull!"

Anderson

A Republican leader present at the meeting recently related the scene and its significance: Baker passed the note across the table in the cabinet room during a contentious Republican leadership meeting. Gingrich laughed and nodded. Having trooped to the White House with other conservatives demanding a harder line on certain issues, Gingrich left that day feeling a special fellowship with Baker.

"Baker played Newt like a fiddle," said this GOP source. "(Baker) avoided confrontations with him by flattering him a little bit and by saying 'You and I have the obligation to run the country.'"

The note serves to frame President Clinton's challenge in producing "governance" during the upcoming 104th Congress. Republicans will enjoy at least a philosophical majority in both chambers, and they may win an outright numerical majority. But bipartisanship serves the political ends of both Clinton, who wants to avoid becoming a lame duck with two years remaining in his term, and Gingrich, who will be the next House Republican leader. As each man wages an increasingly shrill campaign against the other this fall, both understand that in a few weeks their swords must be beaten into plowshares.

"He (Gingrich) wants to be a major national leader," says one Gingrich ally. "If Clinton wants to go to him basically as a leader of the country and say, 'We have an obligation to the country and to history,' I think in a way he can co-opt Newt."

Former Rep. Vin Weber, a close friend of Gingrich's, and Clinton political adviser Tony Coelho are both Newt-ologists. Their agendas couldn't be more different, but the advice they proffer for their parties' standard-bearers couldn't be more similar.

"I don't like the word 'co-opted,'" Coelho says, "but I do believe that once Newt becomes the minority leader that my advice to the Clinton administration will be to bring him in on what we're trying to do in the Congress and make him part of the effort." Coelho believes Ginrich's political situation has evolved to where he now needs to emerge as a credible leader. His former role of being a "bomb-thrower" is no longer enough.

Coelho believes Gingrich might make a deal on welfare reform as long as he is co-author of the legislation, while Weber believes small-scale health care reform is also possible in the next session. "That's the test for Newt — his ability to make things happen, not just the ability to stop things," Coelho says.

Weber views Gingrich as the next Ronald Reagan or Barry Goldwater. He advises Clinton to "make the first move," almost immediately following the Nov. 8 elections by — assuming Republican victories — calling to congratulate Gingrich and arrange for an early face-to-face meeting.

Weber has spoken to Democrats who loathe Gingrich, and would love to use the last two years of the Clinton presidency to do battle against him. Weber admits that at some point it might make good political sense for Clinton to pursue that course, but not before he tries to get something done.

GEORGE WILL

Elections could lead to balanced budget amendment

WASHINGTON — Democrats are trying to revive their flagging spirits and reverse their sagging fortunes by attacking the "contract" that Republican congressional candidates have signed. The core of the contract is a constitutional amendment to require a balanced budget, an idea many Democrats and much of the intelligentsia call "simplistic." But now comes James Q. Wilson of UCLA, past president of the American Political Science Association and no simpleton, defending the amendment as a sound response to the current tensions between American's political and constitutional systems.

Will

In an essay for a book on public policy forthcoming from Johns Hopkins, Wilson argues that different eras are defined by different problems. From the founding to the Civil War, the defining problem was the federal government's legitimacy. From the Civil War until the New Deal the problem was power: Under what limits did the federal government operate? From the New Deal until recently the problem was representation: Were all groups appropriately involved in Washington's increasing importance?

The defining issue of today's era, Wilson says, is collective choice: Can Washington, which now acknowledges no limits to its scope and responds to rapidly proliferating factions, make choices that serve society's long-term interests? For individuals, hard choices are unavoidable. But for Americans acting collectively — acting through a federal government that is no longer constrained by either the old constitutional understanding of its limited power or the old stigma against deficit spending — hard choices are avoidable, and thus are avoided.

These changes have come about since mid-century. FDR's policies did not involve a constitutional revolution because most were compatible with then-existing notions of Washington's proper purview. After FDR's first 100 days, states rights were reasserted as serious restraints on federal power. FDR would not have dared to try to do many of the things that have been done since the 1960s, such as federal supervision of elections where minorities are deemed "underrepresented," direct payments for health care for the elderly (with guidelines for hospital and physicians' fees), funds and regulations for local school systems, and so on.

Is there any human want or difficulty that is not now considered a federal policy problem? Policy-making, says Wilson, has been nationalized in the sense that there no longer are arguments about whether the Constitution bars federal action in particular spheres. The last barriers fell in a 12-month period in 1964-65, with the passage of the Civil Rights Act, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act and Medicare.

Thirty years later the public's patience with, and the intellectuals' confidence in, government have been eroded by what Wilson calls frustrations with "an activist government enmeshed in the countless details of everybody's business." Electoral politics has become more disorderly as parties have weakened and factions have multiplied. Elections have become less important because policy-making is increasingly done by courts, bureaucracies and legislatures operated by a political class increasingly ambitious and decreasingly oriented to broad public preferences.

That class has increasingly shifted decisions from arenas where public opinion is most powerful — state and local governments, and private institutions — to institutions such as courts and the central government, where elites have privileged access. No wonder many substantial policy changes, from affirmative action to foreign interventions, reflect not popular desires but elite interests.

Pursuit of these interests by the elite is facilitated by abandonment of the old stigma against peacetime deficits. This abandonment by conservatives as well as liberals underscores why the political class is best understood as a class: it is more united by professional interests than divided by ideas. The change in the mores of the political class regarding deficits serves the convenience of that class, and serves a constitutional — actually, an anti-constitutional — revolution.

Hence, says Wilson, it is no longer as clear as it once was "what, if anything, an election might settle." However, the elections Nov. 8 might produce sufficient votes in Congress for a balanced budget amendment. If so, the rules of collective choice will be re-written, and these off-year elections will have produced change more profound than most presidential elections produce.

RUSSELL BAKER

It's time to watch commercials about fear, hate

Scheduled to be away from home on Election Day, I have just sealed and mailed my absentee ballot.

Russell Baker

My vote for senator went to A. I gather he is unpatriotic and possibly a child molester. I gleaned this from B's commercials. Of course A admits nothing.

Nevertheless, A's spin doctors say that A would vigorously deny all if it were practical to do so without disrupting his vicious television assault on B's character.

I once meant to vote for B, for he has a magnificent jaw as well as teeth so glorious that they would do our state's dentistry great credit. A's commercials, however, exposed shameful moral deficiency behind B's showy jaw.

These commercials declared B to be a hopeless liar. The scales fell from my eyes when I heard this. I had loved B's commercial showing him striding so gracefully through our native heather with his beautiful Irish setter.

This commercial's subliminal message: "Since B loves dogs, he should be elected to the Senate."

However, after A's commercials explained that B was a liar, I realized B's commercial must be a lie from start to finish — all 10 seconds of it. I offered to bet people that the Irish setter was not B's dog and, in fact, wasn't even Irish.

A child could tell B wasn't walking the dog through our native heather because our state doesn't have native heather, just native fast-food franchises.

What finally turned me against B, though, was his own commercial. In it he swore to cut government spending on everybody but me. Being a consummate liar, he obviously meant to strip me of federal funds for life's necessities — police stations, street lights, garbage pick-up. The mendacious swine!

I reasoned that while A might be wanting in patriotism and a child molester, sending him to the Senate would keep him under such a publicity spotlight that he would be forced to curb his unnatural inclinations.

In short, I figured that the Senate might make a new man of A. This is the only persuasive reason I can see for sending anybody to the Senate anymore, now that the only thing they do there is nothing.

Had Father Flanagan got A to Boy's Town when he was a mere lad, A might long ago have become a decent citizen. I decided to use my vote to do the job Father Flanagan never got to.

For Congress my vote went to X even though Y's commercials said X was a tireless womanizer.

Let me assure you I was not swayed by X's beautifully made, magnificently poisonous commercials. These dwelt heavily on the fact that Y's fortune had been made by merging and acquiring orphanages, then downsizing them and spinning them off to movie studios which specialize in low-budget orphan movies.

In fact, the ingenuity that went into Y's shameful business left me convinced that Y was such a clever go-getter that he would never be content to sit quietly in the House of Representatives doing nothing but collecting his paycheck.

Politics almost always comes down to the choice of the lesser evil, and this has never been truer than this year when all campaigning consists of "attack" commercials between dueling evildoers.

Woman needs workers to return special couch

Last Thursday, at 10:15 a.m., at the intersection of Indiana Avenue and "B" Street, a couch, which I was transporting in a short-bed pickup, fell out onto the street as I was traveling. I preceded two blocks to Wall Street not immediately realizing it had fallen out. Before I could turn around and get back to the location, two workers for the city of Midland in a city pickup loaded up and drove off with the couch.

I would appreciate so very much if the men would please contact me at 306 S. Pecos St., or call 682-1782 as the couch is very important to me for a special reason.

I do hope these men see their way to return it to me as soon as they can.

Assault weapons ban is void in Constitution

To answer a recent letter from Lowell Branum (who conveniently neglected to address the issues I raised, especially the U.S. vs. Verdugo-Urquidez, U.S. Supreme Court, Feb. 28, 1990, decision), I don't know why the Sullivan law has not been declared unconstitutional. Perhaps a lack of a "Bill of Rights" in New York's state constitution (felt to be unnecessary as no power to regulate firearms was considered granted to government); the Supreme Court has not ruled on its constitutionality since it began enforcing the 14th Amendment against state actions; and liberal elitist judges and lawyers like your law professor who ignore the very fabric of debate and comment from the framers and founders of our nation and Constitution.

My instructors are George Mason and Washington, Jefferson, the Adamses, P. Henry, Franklin, Hamilton, Jay and Madison, the men at Lexington and Concord who fought to keep their artillery from government control and, finally, the law of nature that declares each of us has the right of self-preservation, therefore having the right to be prepared to meet any likely force against our person with the best weapons necessary, according to each one's own judgment.

Texans have a "Bill of Rights" that the Ninth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution recognizes as rights further retained by the people. The Texas Constitution, Article 1, Section 23, states: "Every citizen has the right to keep and bear arms in defense of himself and the State; but the Legislature shall have power, by law, to regulate the wearing of firearms, with a view to prevent crime." That is why only pistols are regulated in our state codes. Texas Constitution, Article 1, Section 29, states: "To guard against the high powers herein delegated, we declare that everything in this Bill of Rights is excepted out of the general powers of government, and shall forever remain inviolate, and all laws to the contrary thereto, or to the following provisions, shall be void." The "assault weapons ban" is void here.

City needs to post speed zones, lights

We live on Powell Street, between Illinois Avenue and Wall Street. We have been on this corner well over three and a half years and have seen a lot of busy traffic fly down Powell. Within the last three years we have had our fence hit by a drunk driver at 8 a.m. while children were walking to school, in the fall of '93.

Last spring we had a Chow puppy hit and it eventually crippled her and she died. Less than a month ago somebody sole an elderly man's jeep, drove it down the alley and ran into our back fence. We had to replace the fence ourselves. Last Monday our Pit puppy was run down, killed and the loss that has been felt in this house I would not wish on anybody.

Our neighbors' fences have been hit, but people will not slow down. Yet we were told that we had to get a petition with at least 100 signatures and take it to the City Council with 10 people who live on this street to see if it is important enough to have speed zones posted and a blinking light installed at the crosswalk so the children can cross the street to get to school, since people will not stop for them.

My question to the City of Midland is, with all the accidents that have happened on Powell Street, what are you going to do for the parents of the child who gets hit walking on Powell Street? Then will it be important enough to slow down the irresponsible jerks? And what are you going to tell the parents?

Book sale was success thanks to donations, help

The Friends of Midland County Public Library 27th Annual Book Sale held on Oct. 13-16 at the Midland County Exhibit Building was a tremendous success. Many thanks to all library patrons who donated books throughout the past year and also purchased books at the sale.

One hundred percent of all monies from these sales go to the county library, as needed, to purchase special materials and to enhance the library decor.

Books are donated and collected each Wednesday 9 a.m.-noon at our book drop located in the West Building, northwest corner of North Colorado Street and West Ohio Avenue (Ohio entrance). Friends of Library volunteers sort and box these books into categories such as fiction, philosophy, geology, religion, travel and sports. Books of all kinds and types are welcome — paperback, hardback, reference, encyclopedia and especially children books.

The past 15 book sales were managed and coordinated by Mrs. Thomas (Mary) Mann with the help of some 75 volunteers. Sincere thanks to each and everyone. Also we thank the following for participating in this event: Albertson's, Midland Drive and Wadley, for again supplying the carts; Reynolds & Sons Reproduction for printing bulletins and announcements; Midland ABC Moving & Storage (Mayflower) for moving our books; and news media — Reporter-Telegram, radio and TV stations. The news coverage was great.

Thank you Midland for supporting this book sale and your county library.

Organization is not worthy of praise yet

Today I read the praises of one of your readers who supports the efforts of Planned Parenthood having provided her with enough education, protection and screenings to eliminate her need for abortion. This doesn't change the fact that the agency provides for abortions; they will only be worthy of praises, in my opinion, when ALL abortions are eliminated. Killing babies cannot be white-washed away.

Liken this mentality to that of a convict on death row who says, "How about all the people I could have murdered, but I only killed one?"

Better yet, consider the agency worker who must stand before the Creator on judgment day and say, "I provided a lot of young women with sex education in my time, and I only helped kill a few of your babies."

Fed won't be able to cover debt forever

OK folks here's the deal. Our government has an income of $1.2 trillion a year. It is spending $1.5 trillion a year. The gross on-budget debt of the government is $4.3 trillion as of 1993. All realistic estimates now place the on-budget gross debt at $8 to $10 trillion by the year 2004, if we make it that far. These fine distinguished gentlemen that we have in Washington refuse to resolve this spending problem.

The day is coming when the Federal Reserve will not be able to cover this massive debt. When this happens our government will stop at nothing to survive financially. This effort to survive will be at our expense, through massive tax increases on income, property, tax-deferred retirement plans and even illegally confiscating your property. This is the true motivation behind gun control and disarming the American public. An unarmed society cannot revolt against a tyrannical government.

Shouldn't 21st century start with year 2001?

There is an ample supply of characters who believe the Earth is flat or was created a few thousand years ago, that black cats foretell disaster or have nine lives, and that the Trilateral Commission is plotting the end of the United States or that the 21st century begins with the year 2000. I am disappointed to find that Gary Ott is numbered among the latter!

For Gary, and the school children of today who will be writing the breathless "news" articles six years hence proclaiming 1999 the last year of the twentieth century, I ask the following questions: In a pair of twins, do you start counting with the first twin born as number one, or with number zero? In a dozen eggs, do you start counting with the first egg in the dozen as number one, on through 12, or with number zero, on through 11? In the first century, do you think they started with Year Zero, or was the first year of the first century called Year One? In the 21st century, do you propose that the first year be year number zero (year 2000) or should we be consistent and number the 21st century as the years 2001 through 2100? If you insist that year 2000 is the first, number-one year, which century was the one with only 99 years? And why would the number one year end in zero, the number two in one, on through 100 ending in 99?

I fully appreciate that this letter could appear weekly until Dec. 31, 1999, and some "logic-impaired" citizens would still be anticipating the 21st century at midnight, but must the Reporter-Telegram endorse their error?

Hogan Park's course needs to clean up act

I would like to know a few things about Hogan Park Golf Course.

1) Why is it the only golf course in the area to allow fivesomes on weekends? The only reason I can see is that they are trying to squeeze in as many people as possible in order to make more money, but what they succeed in doing is aggravating and losing golfers who are frustrated by being trapped behind a large group that refuses to allow faster groups to play through.

2) Why doesn't the course marshal have the authority to do something about slow play on the course, as marshals do on other courses?

3) Why does Hogan Park rebuild the same green and tee box every year? They still don't have any grass on them.

4) Why does Hogan Park mow and manicure the course while players are playing? Most courses manage to perform these tasks before allowing golfers on the course.

This golf course is one of the most mismanaged businesses in Midland. If it were privately owned and mismanaged this badly, it would have gone out of business. As popular as golf has become, and with Midland always trying to attract people to move here, I believe it would be worth it to fix the mess at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Christianity doesn't take fun out of living

Some time ago, Charley Reese, whose writings we often are privileged to read, made a statement that has "stuck in my craw," as it were. In his word of June 20, that I read in "Sword of the Lord," he said, "The current crop of Christian bashers are essentially making this argument: Christian belief has no place in public debates, in considering public policy issues or in motivating people to participate in the democratic process."

Too often, it seems, many people suppose Christianity is "a negative religion." They assume that it supposedly "takes the fun out of living." Emerson Colaw advises us, "We assert that there is not a single thing in this whole world to which we are not entitled if it will do us good and be profitable." Then, he goes on and explains, "Christianity is against drunkenness, because it is destructive. Christianity is against adultery, because it is a sickness. Christianity is against hate and revenge, because they erode spiritual potential," and bring on violence.

Then, he concludes that as Christians, "Everything that is life-fulfilling is ours to enjoy. Jesus lived life from a great depth of being and with joy! And we are to live that way." All of those who indulge in Christian bashing, then, have never understood the real nature or the real purpose of Christianity. All such, perhaps, need to be pitied rather than censored for they have missed the only way of joy, the only way of peace, and the only way of hope that any of us can every really experience!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 23, the 296th day of 1994. There are 69 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on Oct. 23, 1944, during World War II, the Battle of Leyte Gulf began. The Japanese navy, unable to halt American landings on the island of Leyte, suffered the staggering loss of 34 ships in the battle.

On this date:

In 1864, forces led by Union Gen. Samuel R. Curtis defeated Confederate Gen. Stirling Price's army in Missouri.

In 1910, Blanche S. Scott became the first woman to make a solo, public airplane flight, reaching an altitude of 12 feet in a park in Fort Wayne, Ind.

In 1915, 25,000 women marched in New York City, demanding the right to vote.

In 1942, during World War II, Britain launched a major offensive against Axis forces at El Alamein in Egypt.

In 1946, the United Nations General Assembly convened in New York for the first time.

Readers' view on: political candidates

Both parties are to blame for problems

I just finished reading a column written by William Murchison that was published in the Nueva Vista. Murchison implies that the Democratic Party will lead this country to destruction and that the only savior we have are the Republicans. My response to that is "BUNK."

Issue 1. No party is going to lead this country in or out of anything, but it will take strong men like Senators Barton and Danforth who both defied their party leaders and voted with conscience and not party lines to make this nation strong again.

Issue 2. Murchison describes George W. Bush as a gentleman in his race against Gov. Richards. Gentleman maybe, truthful, NO! Gov. Richards was responding to some of Bush's inaccurate statements about her. The governor was doing what she knows best, confronting her accusers. Unfortunately, politics has become a battleground where personal attacks and misinformation have become the weapons and issues are unimportant. Gee! Maybe no one has told Murchison that politics is not for the weakwilled or the cowardly. "If you can't stand the heat get out of the kitchen."

Issue 3. Republican state senators that attended Lt. Gov. Bullock's fund-raiser recently were basically described by Murchison as wimps because they did not support Lezar. Well this is the way a state Republican committee member described Tex Lezar to me: "He's a clown." Enough said.

Murchison cannot solely blame the Democrats for the shape the country or state is in. It took a concerted effort by a group of men from both parties whose sole interest was to satisfy their parties and themselves and not the people who put them in office. People tend to repeat the rhetoric that they hear from their politicians because they are not informed enough to decide for themselves.

Patterson is only qualified candidate

I feel sure that Midland voters are sophisticated enough to vote for the candidate who is best qualified for the position, regardless of political party.

Therefore, I ask voters to carefully consider the two attorneys running for County Court at Law No. 2. Only George Patterson has 24 years of oil and gas and criminal law experience. Only George Patterson has tried felony cases. Only George Patterson has not been linked with department heads in county government.

So when you vote in the upcoming election, I hope you will join me and vote for George Patterson in the race for County Court at Law No. 2.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Shouldn't judges be picked by qualifications

It was brought to my attention that a local El Paso paper had endorsed an El Paso resident's candidacy for the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals rather than lawyer Julia Vaughan of Midland. That paper characterized the race as an issue of whether a representative from Midland should be a justice on the predominantly El Paso court.

I always thought you select judges based upon their qualifications, not upon where they live. Frankly, I'm unfamiliar with the qualifications of the El Paso candidate. However, I am familiar with the credentials of Ms. Vaughan. She is a graduate of Texas A&M and the Baylor Law School. She earned an advanced degree from Harvard. She is a partner in one of Midland's largest law firms and a recognized expert in trial practices before courts such as the 8th Circuit. She is an expert in the highly specialized area of oil and gas law.

If regionalism is to be an appropriate criteria for election, there is strong justification for choosing a Midland candidate. The Texas Railroad Commission states that 60 percent of this state's oil and gas is produced in the Permian Basin. The Railroad Commission predicts that number to be 80 percent by the end of the decade. We should have someone on our court familiar with the laws affecting our oil and gas industry.

Board names 9 Lee students AP Scholars

Staff Report

Nine students at Lee High School have been named AP Scholars by the College Board in recognition of their exceptional achievement on the college-level Advanced Placement Examinations.

Approximately 10 percent of America's graduating seniors have taken one or more AP examinations. Only about 12 percent of the more than 459,000 students who took AP Examinations in May 1994 performed at a sufficiently high level to merit such recognition.

The College board recognizes three levels of achievement — the AP Scholar with distinction, the AP Scholar with honor and the AP Scholar.

At Lee High School two students qualified for the AP Scholar with Distinction Award by earning grades of 3 or above on five or more AP Examinations, with an average exam grade of at least 3.5. These students are Anurag Agrawal and Hunter Stanco.

Three students qualified for the AP Scholars with Honor Award by earning grades of 3 or above on four or more AP examinations, with an average exam grade of at least 3.25.

These students are Shannon Conkey, Erica Traxel, and April Yeates.

Four students qualified for the AP Scholar Award by completing three or more AP Examinations, with grades of 3 or higher. The AP Scholars are Heath Garner, Steven Lybrand, James Morris, and Sean O'Hara.

AP Examinations, which students take in May after completing challenging college-level courses at their high school, are graded on a 5-point scale (5 is the highest).

Most of the nation's colleges and universities award credit and/or placement for grades of 3 or higher, and more than 1,300 institutions award a year of credit to students with a sufficient number of qualifying grades.

There are 29 AP Examinations offered in 16 disciplines, each consisting of multiple-choice and free-response questions.

The College Board is a national nonprofit association that champions educational excellence for all students through the ongoing collaboration of nearly 2,900 member schools, colleges universities, educational systems, and organizations.

The Board promotes-by means of responsive forums, research, programs, and policy development-universal access to high standards of learning, equity of opportunity, and sufficient financial support so that every student is prepared for success in college and work.

Family mourns loss of children swept away in flood

ANDERSON (AP) — More than 200 people crowded into a small school gymnasium Saturday to remember a brother and sister who drowned in a flooded creek when they were swept from their mother's grasp.

"Just hold on to the happiness they brought and thank God he gave them to you, even if it was for just a little while," the Rev. Hopie Solomon of the McKenzie Chapel United Methodist Church told the mourners.

Anthony McIntosh Calhoun, 8, and his 5-year-old sister, Chandrell, died last week in flooding that has claimed 18 lives in southeast Texas.

The two children, their mother and two sisters were driving home Sunday night in the rain when floodwaters shoved their car off the road into the usually calm creek.

Shanta Calhoun got all her children out and they clutched hands as they tried to flee on foot. But a current took them under and Anthony and Chandrell were lost in the raging water.

On Saturday, the sun broke through the cloudy skies and streamed through the open windows of the Anderson-Shiro Elementary School gym, which is perched on a hill in this tiny rural town of about 300 residents some 75 miles northwest of Houston.

"Everybody's pretty sad about this. You can see how it's touched everybody, how everybody's come together," said Tanaya Washington, 24, a family friend. "I didn't expect something like this to happen so close to home."

During the hour-long service, a couple of relatives overcome with grief had to be helped out of the gym.

Mrs. Calhoun, her husband, Dennis, and two surviving daughters sat at the front. At one point Mrs. Calhoun cried out and collapsed, but she stared blankly at the caskets much of the time.

Dressed in a gray suit and red boutonniere, Anthony was buried in a baby-blue casket. Chandrell, in a pink casket, wore a flowered dress and clutched a rose.

"Their friendly personalities and enchanted smiles will be missed very much," fellow church member Bessie White said.

A man played the piano and sang hymns and several ministers and friends offered their condolences. Many inside cried quietly.

The caskets were closed during the service, but they were reopened briefly afterwards at the family's request. Tearful relatives gently patted the children's arms and kissed their cheeks in a final farewell.

The white gym will filled with relatives, friends, teachers and children who played with "Antoine and Channie."

Workshop to teach managing conflict

Staff Report

A workshop to help individuals, families and business professionals learn the necessary skills to manage conflict effectively will be held Nov. 3 at Midland College. The event is sponsored by the Retired and Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) of Community and Senior Services.

The workshop, "Conflict Resolution: Building Better Relationships," will provide constructive conflict management skills for everyday situations, workplace settings and family relationships.

Participants will be taught to understand good communication and negotiation skills and to appreciate the needs on both sides of the disagreement.

"Even though conflict is common, we often don't know how to handle disagreements. Most of us are untrained in peaceful dispute prevention and resolution techniques," Carla Curtner, RSVP director, said.

Seminar presenters will be: Jim May, marriage and family therapist; William Morrow, attorney and City Council member; Mary Ann Oakley, attorney and member of the Permian Basin Alternate Dispute Resolution Committee; and Willie B. DuBose, mediator-/attorney and former County Court at Law judge.

The workshop will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 3 at Midland College.

The registration fee and lunch is $40 for the general public and $20 for RSVP volunteers. Registration deadline is Oct. 26.

For registration information, contact RSVP at 689-6693.

The workshop will be co-sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging and Midland College.

Flood's victims comfort others at local tavern

HIGHLANDS — Danny Day leans up against the bar, takes a swig of ice cold beer and surveys the raging San Jacinto River that stole his home.

"Heard you lost it all. Sorry buddy," says a friend, patting Day's dripping wet back.

Day had spent the morning on a jet ski, driving over what was once his house. He had also been retrieving his parents' favorite possessions from their flooded house nearby.

"Mamma wanted her furs and Daddy wanted his guns. I got her furs and I'm going back for his guns," says Day, still wearing a life jacket. A knife in a leather holster is strapped over his chest.

He has come to this neighborhood bar perched along the swollen river bank to commiserate with friends and help out whoever needs it. The turquoise blue clapboard shack with a covered deck is called The Fort. For the last four days it has served as a refuge for the flooded Banana Bend neighborhood.

People have come to eat free barbecue, borrow pickup trucks and catch boat rides to view whatever is left of their homes.

It's a close neighborhood of about 100 families, "where everybody helps everybody," Day says.

Like most homes in the river front neighborhood, Day's house was built on 12-foot stilts. About 10 homes like his have completely washed away and dozens more are flooded to the second story. A house across the river from the Fort leans over like an old man on a cane.

Day, a 36-year-old railroad worker, got out at about noon Tuesday with his girlfriend on his jet ski. The water had risen five feet on the stilts. He had never seen the water higher than three feet.

"It was getting scary. It was rising fast," he said, taking another drag from his stogie.

They took nothing but the clothes on their backs.

Lethridge, Raider 'kids' humiliate Baylor, 38-7

■ Youthful Texas Tech win sends Southwest Conference football race into a state of total madness.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

LUBBOCK — Freshman hazing is frowned on these days in the college atmosphere, but the Baylor Bears bent over backwards at Jones Stadium Saturday afternoon to let Texas Tech's not-wet-behind-the-ears kids display their talent.

The result was that the youthful Red Raiders handed Baylor a 38-7 humiliation that threw the Southwest Conference football race into a state of total madness.

Consider the performance of Tech's freshman class:

■ Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge (Lubbock Estacado) completed 14-of-34 passes for 194 yards and two touchdowns and had one rushing TD.

■ Quarterback turned wide receiver Tony Darden (San Antonio Holmes) caught his first career pass (from Lethridge), a 76-yard bomb on third and 25 to set up a Tech field goal. It was the longest play from scrimmage for the Raiders since the Houston game in 1991.

■ Wide receiver Stacy Mitchell (DeSoto) caught his first career touchdown, a 15-yard pass from Lethridge as Tech forged a 31-7 lead.

■ Running back Byron Hanspard (DeSoto) scored Tech's first touchdown with a 34-yard run in the first quarter and led all Tech rushers with 83 yards.

■ Kicker Tony Rogers (Plano) kicked his second career field goal, a 42-yard bomb that gave Tech a 20-7

Aggies survive Owl scare

■ Corey Pullig passes for Texas A&M's only touchdown and saves a Rice score with a tackle on a fumble return.

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

COLLEGE STATION — The Rice Owls couldn't produce a second football miracle. But they gave No. 6 Texas A&M a good scare.

Corey Pullig passed for a touchdown and saved another with a tremendous tackle on a fumble return as A&M fought off upstart Rice 7-0 Saturday for its 26th straight Southwest Conference victory and 14th in a row over the Owls.

It was the 25th consecutive victory at home for the Aggies (6-0, 4-0 SWC). The close loss for Rice (3-3, 2-1) comes a week after a startling 19-17 victory over No. 13 Texas 19-17.

"I hope we gained a little more respect today," Rice coach Ken Hatfield said. "A&M made one more play than we did. We were just one play short of doing it.

"We've played two nationally ranked teams in less than a week. We beat one and came pretty close today against a great team."

The Aggies struck quickly against the 20-point underdog Owls for the only touchdown of the game.

Halfback Rodney Thomas took a short swing pass from Pullig and followed a block by wide receiver Chris Sanders on a 60-yard scoring play less than two minutes into the game.

"We broke down on that play and it cost us," Hatfield said. "Other than that we hung in there pretty good."

The touchdown came after cornerback Donovan Greer had recovered a fumble by Rice's Yoncy Edmonds at

Air McNair 'Tys' on new NCAA mark

■ Heisman Trophy candidate Steve McNair breaks Ty Detmer's NCAA career total offense record.

LORMAN, Miss. (AP) — Steve McNair ran past Ty Detmer to become the NCAA career leader in total offense, and he did it by breaking his own Division I-AA single-game yardage record.

McNair had 649 total yards Saturday against Southern, Division I-AA's top-ranked defense, to end Detmer's three-year stay atop the NCAA career list.

After Alcorn State's 41-37 victory, McNair had 15,049 total yards. He has 4,025 yards and has accounted for 39 touchdowns (32 passing and seven rushing) for the Braves (6-2, 5-1 SWAC) this season.

The senior quarterback broke Detmer's record of 14,665 yards on a 22-

Cowboys expect Arizona ambush

Dallas tight end Jay Novacek (84) smiles at Philadelphia linebacker William Thomas (51) after catching a 14-yard touchdown pass last Sunday.

■ Dallas will not look for the Cardinals to turn the ball over like they did two weeks ago.

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Dallas Cowboys have every reason to believe they will beat the Arizona Cardinals for the ninth straight time — and every reason to expect an ambush.

The Cowboys (5-1) aren't looking for the combination of breaks that allowed them to beat the Cardinals 38-3 two weeks ago in Buddy Ryan's worst coaching defeat. Dallas marched for its first touchdown, then intercepted three of Jay Schroeder's passes and ran up a 28-0 halftime lead by scoring on drives of 23, 18 and 26 yards.

■ TV: Cowboys vs. Cardinals, 3 p.m., FOX.

"Their offense turned the ball over quite a bit and gave us great field position, and we were able to take advantage of that," Emmitt Smith said.

This week, Ryan has shown a wild mistrust in the forward pass, even though Steve Beuerlein hit six during a fourth-quarter drive last week that allowed the Cardinals to tie Washington and eventually beat the Redskins 19-16 in overtime.

"I expect them to run the ball at least 40 times and to play a very conservative offense," Dallas coach Barry Switzer said.

Ryan said Switzer has figured things out correctly. Ryan has had his 2-4 squad work-

Memories, not series, fill October days

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

The afternoon shadows have been slanting across Yankee Stadium this week and there's been a slight October chill in the evening air.

As of Friday, the grounds crew was still working on the field almost daily, mowing the grass and manicuring the dirt. The outfield was green, bright green, and the infield was neat and smooth.

"The ballpark has never looked better, really," Marty Naughton of the Yankees said.

Of course, only one thing would have made it better.

Had it been different, had it all worked out, had there been common sense instead of a strike, at just about 7:07 p.m. EDT Saturday, Jimmy Key of the New York Yankees might've been stepping to the mound to throw the first pitch of Game 1 of the 1994 World Series.

Maybe he would've been facing Deion Sanders of the Cincinnati Reds or Marquis Grissom of the Montreal Expos or Roberto Kelly of the Atlanta Braves or Delino DeShields of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Or perhaps the game would've been played before a sellout crowd at Jacobs Field in Cleveland, energized for the Indians' first World Series appearance in 40 years, or Comiskey Park in Chicago or The Ballpark in Arlington.

Maybe this might've been the weekend that Frank Thomas hit three home runs in a game, the way Reggie Jackson did on that night in 1977, or Greg Maddux struck out 17, the way Bob Gibson did on that late afternoon in 1968.

Cooper powers past Midland Lee spikers

■ Abilene Cooper uses a strong front line to beat Midland Lee in the Lady Rebels last volleyball game of the season.

By Mike Butts
Staff Writer

Midland Lee's volleyball team ended its season Saturday much the way it had played all year.

The Lady Rebels clawed their way back from an 11-2 third game deficit to push their match at the Lee Gymnasium against Abilene Cooper to the limit. But the Lady Cougars power at the net finally overcame Lee's attempt for a sweep of the series in a 15-12, 8-15, 15-11 Cooper win.

Lee ends its season at 5-7 in District 4-5A play. With the win Cooper (7-4, 15-14 overall) solidifies its chances to make the playoffs.

"That's kind of been one of our characteristics," Lee coach Anita Corder said. "We've gotten in a hole all year and then tried to fight out of it and I thought they would (today)."

But the Lady Cougars, with La Quinta Pollard and Jill Monroe doing most of the harm, had 29 kills to Lee's 19 for a decided hitting advantage. In the last game Cooper attacked the ball for eleven kills. But that didn't quite satisfy Cooper coach Beth Wills.

"For us I don't feel like we hit the ball well," Wills said. "My team's full of hitters and I don't feel like we got ourselves in position to hit."

Maybe not. But the Lady Cougars did outhit Lee. Malone finished with seven kills and Pollard had five of her nine kills in the last game.

"(Pollard) just puts the ball down and today was her worst match," Wills said. "(And) when we need a point we can always, always go to Jill. She's the most consistent hitter in the district."

Lee began its comeback in the last game with points off kills by Kasey Wolters and Amber Willis. Roseann Sullivan then served for three points, the last an ace, and Willis served for two to make the score 11-9. But a kill by Christa Black got a side out for Cooper and the Lady Cougars won on Ashleigh Krieger's serve.

"It was hard for us to get motivated for the game," said Corder, whose Lady Rebels were eliminated from the playoffs Tuesday. "We we're just playing it for pride. We talked about trying to go 5-7 instead of 4-8."

Lee broke open a close second game when Willis served three aces in a five-point run for a 14-8 score. But in the third game Cooper's Amanda Seals got two aces in a four-point run and Renee Erfurt served for three points as the Lady Cougars went out to 8-1 and 11-2 leads.

Cooper began the match with heavy substitutions — ten in the first game — because, Wills said, a Lady Cougar missed the bus and Wills wanted to get experience for some players for the playoffs.

Lee ends the season with an 8-15 overall record.

"It (losing) is hard for them because they're competitive," Corder said. "It's tough when you do all you can and come up on the short end of the stick."

Six seniors played in their last game for Lee. And Corder praised their efforts.

"These seniors are a world class group," Corder said. "I started six at the beginning of each game just for them."

Playing in their last volleyball game for Lee were: Farrah Fisher, Kristen Dunn, Marci Stone, Crystal Zachry, Emily Hayes and Sullivan.

The Lee junior varsity lost to Cooper Saturday 15-11, 15-6.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Auburn is No. 1 in at least one poll.

That's where the Tigers are ranked by the Association of College Football Fans, which is run by a high school algebra teacher in Nashville, Tenn., and includes a few hundred people around the country willing to spend $25 to be part of his organization.

But when a team that has won 18 games in a row is only No. 4 in The Associated Press poll and isn't ranked at all by CNN-USA Today coaches survey because of NCAA probation, you take what you can get.

"I used it in our release for the Arkansas game" next week, said Kent Partridge, Auburn's sports information director. "We've tried to back off the poll politicking a little bit, but I couldn't pass that one up."

Partridge admitted he had never heard of the ACFF before this week, when the group's president, Don Harris, sent him a copy of the fans poll after the Tigers upset top-ranked Florida to jump from fourth to first.

Harris formed the ACFF in 1992 after the two major polls had split the national championship.

'Horn QBs downplay controversy after win

■ Backup James Brown replaces Shea Morenz and wins acclaim from Texas fans, known to embrace second stringers.

AUSTIN (AP) — Just what No. 13 Texas needs: a quarterback controversy.

Players and coaches downplayed it, but backup quarterback James Brown won over Longhorns fans and revived a sluggish offense as Texas pulled away from Southern Methodist 42-20 Saturday.

Brown, a redshirt freshman who led Texas to a 17-10 victory against Oklahoma earlier this year when starter Shea Morenz was hurt, replaced Morenz with 1:23 left in the first quarter.

He helped the Longhorns overcome a 7-0 deficit, leading the offense on two quick scoring drives and sending Texas to a 21-7 halftime lead that grew to 35-7 in the fourth quarter before two meaningless scores by SMU.

The show-stealing performance by Brown follows a tumultuous week for the Longhorns (5-2, 2-1 Southwest Conference), who had to put player suspensions and their first loss to Rice in 29 years behind them. SMU fell to 1-7 and 0-4.

"I'm trying to create more depth at the quarterback position," said Texas coach John Mackovic, who had planned on playing both quarterbacks. "It's good for the team. It opens the door for comparisons. I'm pleased with the way that both of them played."

Morenz said, "I am the type of guy who wants to play every single down and every single snap, even in practice. Any time you don't get to do that, it's a little bit frustrating. But I'm just glad everyone did well. I'm glad we won, that's what matters."

When asked if Brown thought there would be a controversy, he said, "I hope not. I don't think so. There shouldn't be."

After SMU put together a masterful, 13-play touchdown drive on its first possession, Texas went three-and-out on its first drive and fumbled the ball to SMU on the first play of its second possession.

Enter Brown, who was welcomed by Longhorns fans like a lost son.

He drew even louder applause when he stared down a ferocious SMU pass rush and hit Curtis Jackson with a perfect 38-yard strike down the left sideline, putting the ball on the SMU 38.

Three plays later, Rodrick Walker, who finished with 107 yards on 15 carries, darted around the left end for a 19-yard touchdown. Replays showed he appeared to step out of bounds at the 3.

"I don't know if it was coincidence, but they made that big play (the pass to Jackson) when James Brown came in," said SMU safety Troy Williams. "That big play was our downfall. After that play the momentum switched."

With Brown still at quarterback early in the second quarter, Walker pulled off a 47-yard touchdown run down the right sidelines that was set up by crushing blocks from pulling left guard John Elmore and left tackle Blake Brockermeyer.

"It's like bringing in another pitcher," SMU coach Tom Rossley said. "It's like going from a curveballer to a fastballer. It gave them a little spurt. It looked like a good move on their part."

Morenz returned later in the second quarter and the two alternated playing time in the second half, each seemingly trying to outdo the other. Mackovic said after the game he had planned to play both quarterbacks.

Morenz finished 13-of-18 for 122 yards with an interception and touchdown passes of 13 yards to Eric Jackson and a 9-yarder to Lovell Pinkney.

Brown was 5-of-7 for 83 yards with a 17-yard TD pass to tight end Steve Bradley and he ran 12 yards for a touchdown. He did not throw an interception.

SMU, which used the single wing, short passes and keeps by quarterback Ramon Flanigan to stymie Texas early in the first half, lost its patience after falling behind.

Successful short throws turned into desperate attempts to go deep, and Texas began having more success pressuring Flanigan, who was sacked five times.

Receiver Mick Rossley, son of SMU coach Tom Rossley, led SMU with eight receptions for 133 yards, giving him 164 career catches, 9th best in SWC history.

On SMU's first possession, Flanigan threw six passes and ran three times on a 13-play drive that was capped by a single-wing surprise.

With Flanigan out of the game, running back Dante Womack took a shotgun snap and zigzagged 16 yards up the middle for a touchdown.

The other SMU scores came in the fourth quarter when Flanigan hit James Whitmore with a 24-yard pass and Womack added a 1-yard touchdown run with 35 seconds left.

The victory put an upbeat ending on a week of upheaval for Texas. Seven players, including Pinkney, had been suspended from a 19-17 upset loss to Rice last Sunday for staying out too late. It was the Longhorns' first setback against the Owls since 1965. The suspended players were reinstated on Monday.

Knake, Collins connect in air 3 times for TCU win over UH

■ Horned Frogs take advantage of four Houston turnovers for 31-10 win.

HOUSTON (AP) — Max Knake threw three touchdown passes to Brian Collins as Texas Christian took advantage of four Houston turnovers for a 31-10 victory Saturday night.

Knake, who completed 19-of-27 passes for 198 yards, threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Collins in the second quarter en route to a 17-0 halftime lead for the Horned Frogs (4-3, 1-2 Southwest Conference).

After Houston (1-6, 1-2) staged a mini-comeback behind reserve quarterback Chad O'Shea, cutting TCU's lead to 24-10, Knake hit Collins with scoring strikes of 29 and 22 yards to seal the victory.

The Horned Frogs balanced Knake's passing with the running of Andre Davis. He punctured Houston's defense with 149 yards rushing on 26 carries, plus he caught eight passes for 73 yards.

Davis had a 12-yard touchdown run in the second quarter and Michael Reeder kicked a 23-yard field goal.

Houston, which snapped a 10-game losing streak against Southern Methodist last week, came out flat against the Horned Frogs, who were ready to take advantage of the Cougars' miscues.

UH had an impressive first drive, moving to the TCU 1-yard line before Jermaine Williams' fumble started a series of errors that helped the Frogs take a 17-0 halftime lead.

Mikyha Martin recovered Williams' fumble at the Cougar 4, starting TCU's first scoring drive.

Linebacker Mike Moulton's interception at the TCU 43 led to Reeder's field goal. John Washington returned a punt 31 yards to the Houston 25 after he appeared to be stopped on the sideline preceding Collins' second touchdown catch.

Collins' final score came after Reggie Anderson recovered a fumble by Houston's Jay McGuire at the TCU 40.

After UH starting quarterback Clay Helton proved ineffective, O'Shea came off the bench to throw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Larkay James. He also led a drive that ended with Trace Craft's 22-yard field goal in the third.

TECH: Bass leads Raider receivers

lead.

■ Wide receiver Sheldon Bass (Odessa Permian) led Tech receivers with three catches for 33 yards.

None of these guys even own a college letter yet. This was the sign Tech head coach Spike Dykes wants to see. This crew should be battle ready by the time the Big 12 goes into gear in 1996.

"The freshman are making some progress. There is no question about that," Dykes said. "We still dropped a pass or two and Zebbie made a couple of bad decisions, but nothing that really hurt. It was one of those days you kind of dream about."

Lethridge, too, feels Tech's talented freshman class will be heard from again.

"Coming into the season, we knew we were going to be a young team, but the competition we have faced early has made us grow up faster than you would think. We've got a lot of room to get better, and we're working hard every day to see that it happens," Lethridge said.

The play of the game that set the tone for this lopsided contest was Lethridge's 76-yard bomb to Darden that set up a 26-yard Jon Davis field goal that gave Tech a 17-7 lead in the second quarter.

"Zebbie to Tony," Dykes said. "I knew that was coming. Those two are best friends. There was no reason for anyone else to even go out."

Lethridge and Darden got on the same beam a year ago.

"Last year, Tony and I were on the scout team as red shirts and we used to throw that pass against the defense. I threw to Tony a lot that way. Now it pays off."

And with the win, Tech's SWC obituary is still on hold. Tech climbs to 2-2 in the conference race and 3-4 on the season, still very much alive in the race for High Cotton. Baylor is also 2-2, but has a two-game conference losing streak after falling to Texas A&M 41-21 last week.

Tech plays host to Texas Saturday and could make a real run at a Cotton Bowl berth with a win there.

"This win is a big lift for us. It can't hurt going into the Texas game," Dykes said.

Baylor plays host to Houston next week.

The Tech defense held Baylor to a meager 154 yards rushing and 67 yards passing. The Bears didn't have a first down in the third quarter when they needed to make a charge. Bart Thomas intercepted Baylor quarterback Jeff Watson twice while brother Zach had his fourth interception of the season and Robert Johnson had another pick. Ryan Donahue also got a fumble recovery to set up a short Tech TD late.

Baylor just didn't appear to be in the game at all. Fullback Brandell Jackson led the Bears with 70 yards rushing, but 66 of those yards came on one offensive play. That run set up Baylor's only score of the day, tying Tech at 7-7 in the first quarter. Baylor was never in the game the rest of the way.

"I take the responsibility," said Baylor coach Chuck Reedy. "We didn't do a good job of getting ready to play. I'm as dissatisfied as I've been as a coach. I thought we were at a point where we'd play at a high level. Obviously, we're not. We now have to reevaluate our goals."

There may be a lot of reevaluation in the SWC before this crazy season comes to an end.

AGGIES: Pullig 'saved the day' for No. 6 Texas A&M

the A&M 43.

Pullig saved a touchdown by chasing down Rice defensive end Andy Clifton as he returned Leeland McElroy's fourth-period fumble 20 yards to the Aggies 43.

"I knew I was the only one with a shot at him," Pullig said. "I knew I had to bring him down."

Pullig was the only player with a chance to make the tackle. A&M then forced Rice to punt.

"That was a big play by Corey on offense and defense," A&M coach R.C. Slocum said. "He saved the day for us on both sides of the ball. Give Rice credit. The Owls made it tough for us."

The Aggies rolled up 395 yards offense but could score only once.

"It was frustrating," offensive coordinator Steve Ensminger said. "It seemed like we were snakebit all game. We're happy to get out with a win. It was a bottom line win and we'll take it."

Rice got to the A&M 23 in the third period, but Dennis Allen intercepted Josh LaRocca's pass in the end zone.

The Owls also drove to the A&M 30 late in the fourth period, but Michael Hendrix batted down LaRocca's pass on fourth-and-6 to preserve the victory.

LaRocca said the fact that played A&M close meant nothing to him.

"Our program is done with moral victories," he said. "We lost the game and it doesn't matter who it was against or what the score was. It's a loss and we're not happy about it."

Thomas rushed 21 times for 136 yards and Pullig hit 17-of-25 passes for 191 yards.

A&M held Rice to 19 yards passing in its first shutout of an SWC team since 1988, when the Aggies beat Texas Christian 18-0.

"We knew Rice would be a tough, fiesty team," said A&M defensive coordinator Tommy Tuberville. "Rice ran a lot of new formations at us and we had to adjust. LaRocca can be a tough guy to bring down."

Rice frustrated numerous A&M offensive attempts, including an interception by Derrick Williams at the Owls 9 late in the first half. Freshman Kyle Bryant also had a 45-yard field goal attempt blocked by Ndukwe Kalu and he missed a 36-yarder.

UNLV back to business

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV returned to the past without apologies Saturday, entrusting its moribund basketball program to the man who had helped Jerry Tarkanian mold it into a controversial powerhouse.

After a tumultuous week of university housecleaning, Tim Grgurich didn't even wait to sign his new contract before holding an early morning practice for an excited group of players.

"For me it was like a blessing," senior guard Reggie Manuel said. "I played for him my first year with Coach Tark. This is the best thing that could ever happen here."

Tarkanian was nowhere to be seen, but his presence was certainly felt as his longtime assistant formally took over the job that Rollie Massimino seemed to have only on a caretaker basis over the last two years.

"Coach Tarkanian, I love him," Grgurich said to loud applause from a group of boosters. "He's part of my family, I'm part of his family. I wouldn't be in Las Vegas now if he didn't bring me here."

Grgurich, whose arrived here late Friday night, ran his new players through a 90-minute closed practice before bringing them and his assistant coaches to a contract signing and news conference at the Thomas & Mack Arena.

There, Grgurich and interim UNLV president Kenny Guinn signed the three-year pact worth nearly $1 million on top of a bar in a hospitality room.

"I've been a head coach before but I never thought I would get back to being a head coach again," said Grgurich, who coached at Pittsburgh in the late 1970s. "I'm glad to be home. This is my home and I'm so happy to be back here."

The new era of UNLV basketball looked suspiciously like the old, as Grgurich brought back former Runnin' Rebel assistants David Rice and Howie Landa to a program that suffered both on the court and in the stands under Massimino's reign.

All that was missing was Tarkanian's shaved head and chewing towel in a practice that players said emphasized Tark's fundamentals of defense and conditioning.

"It's going to be very intense," forward Patrick Savoy said. "But we're all very excited."

Green clinches driving crown

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — David Green clinched the 1994 Busch Grand National championship Saturday, finishing 12th as Mark Martin won the season-ending AC Delco 200 at North Carolina Motor Speedway.

Knowing that he had to finish only 22nd or better in the 42-car field to earn his first series title, Green stayed out of trouble and watched his closest pursuers, Ricky Craven and Chad Little, racing hard in an effort to catch him.

Craven nearly won the race, gambling on a late two-tire change that helped him take the lead and hold it until four laps from the end of the 197-lap event on the 1.106-mile oval.

"I thought I could hold on to the end, but my left side tires were just completely gone by that time," said Craven, who wound up third behind Martin and runner-up Michael Waltrip.

Green, who went into the finale with a 94-point lead, finished with a 46-point victory. Little, who was fifth in the race, was another 17 points behind in third in the season standings.

"Ricky and Chad never gave me any slack, but that's the way the championship's supposed to be," said Green, whose title-winning Chevrolet Lumina is owned by Winston Cup driver Bobby Labonte.

AP Laserphoto

David Green finished 12th at the AC Delco 200 but won the Busch Grand National driving season points championship.

Martin, whose Ford Thunderbird led three times for 104 laps, took the lead when Craven slid high in the first-turn banking on lap 194.

"We just barely had enough today," said Martin, who picked up his third victory of the season and the 17th of his Grand National career. "Craven and those guys made a smooth move taking on two tires. But we kept the pressure on and he just slipped up a little."

Harry Gant, who will retire as a driver next month, at the end of the Winston Cup season, finished fourth in his final Grand National race.

The 54-year-old Gant, who earned his 21st Grand National victory this season, said, "It would have been better to have ended with a victory, or even a second-place finish."

There were 11 cautions periods for a total of 44 laps, but there were no injuries reported.

Repaved oval adds mystery to 500

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Maybe there was no need to cut the AC Delco 500 by 100 miles.

Officials at North Carolina Motor Speedway announced the change for 1995 on Friday. But, thanks to the repaving of the 1.016-mile oval, today's 500-miler is expected to take less time than previous versions.

"They did a good job repaving the track," said Ken Schrader, who will start 24th in the 42-car field. "It doesn't look like the tires are going to give up, so it might be a fast race and short day Sunday."

Darrell Waltrip, starting 22nd, said, "You've got that unknown about the tires and the surface. You're headed into a new venture. It's not a typical Rockingham."

"Normally, you run 10 laps here and slow down three seconds," Waltrip said. "It's not going to be that way this time. It's going to be a grueling race. It's going to take its toll and it's going to be a fast race."

■ AC Delco 500

That's fine with pole-winner Ricky Rudd, who was the fastest of a lineup in which every starter qualified faster than the previous track record.

"There's going to be a lot of guys who are fast in the race and it's going to come down to who is able to save the most car for the end."

One driver who can't afford to save anything is Rusty Wallace, who refuses to give up in the face of long odds in his Winston Cup championship battle with Dale Earnhardt.

Wallace, who has won three straight races at Rockingham, goes into the final three races of the season trailing Earnhardt by 321 points. Earnhardt, aiming for his second straight title and record-tying seventh of his career, needs only to average 29th the rest of the way to clinch the championship.

If he beats Wallace by 50 points Sunday, Earnhardt wouldn't even have to show up for the races at Phoenix and Atlanta.

"We know what all that means, but we ain't going to give them a thing," Wallace said. "They're going to have to earn every bit of it. There's so many things that can happen out there, maybe we're not done yet."

Earnhardt agreed, saying, "We've still got to race for it. Rusty's bunch is not going to just roll over and play dead."

"We've dodged some bullets lately and we've got to have some awful bad luck or do some dumb things not to win it," he added. "It's ours to lose, not his to win."

Does that mean that the usually aggressive Earnhardt will be running conservatively Sunday?

"No way," he said. "We're going to be trying to win some races in these last three before it's over."

Lukas finally returns to stable after accident

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — In the grand scheme of things, today's Remington Park Futurity is little more than an incidental race on the way to the Breeders' Cup Juvenile.

To trainer Jeff Lukas, however, the seven-furlong event is a distance that can't be measured with a stopwatch, a race that will continue long after the horses return to their barn-area stalls.

Today will be the first time Lukas has saddled a horse for a race since Dec. 15, when a frightened Tabasco Cat trampled him, fracturing the base of his skull in a Santa Anita stable-area accident that nearly killed the trainer.

Time since then largely has been a blur to Lukas — a Pasadena hospital, a rehab center, recuperation in his Glendora, Calif., home. It also was a month-long coma, intravenous feedings and wheelchairs, stumbling steps as he learned to walk and talk again along with his two young children.

"It takes time," Lukas said early Saturday while at work in the stable area at Remington Park.

"But that's what it requires. Things slowly have gone in the right direction."

And now this, an accomplishment Lukas approaches matter of factly while his colleagues say it's nothing short of a miracle.

"I worked hard for months to return to where I was and it's gone slow," Lukas said. "But it's been step by step. Now we're going to turn another page and move farther forward."

Lukas is hoping one of those steps will lead him to the winner's circle with Southern Tempo, a 2-year-old he co-owns with Oklahoma City furniture retailer Larry Don Mathis.

The morning line lists Southern Tempo at 9-2, second to highly regarded Evansville Slew in the race pointing toward next month's Breeders' Cup Juvenile at Churchill Downs.

Lukas will be in Kentucky to watch the Nov. 5 race. But he said he has to see how Southern Tempo runs before deciding if the horse also will be there.

In the meantime, Lukas prepares for the nationally televised event the same way he has hundreds of times in the past and simply answers, "No," when asked if he's nervous.

"I am anxious to get it down and I feel good about it, but I am not nervous," he said.

Yanks even Solheim Cup

Associated Press

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Brandie Burton made five birdies and Beth Daniel had four in winning separate matches Saturday and the Americans put a stop to Laura Davies to pull even with Europe in the Solheim Cup.

The United States won three of Saturday's five four-ball matches to even the three-day event 5-5. Ten singles matches remain Sunday in the Ryder Cup-style tournament of the United States vs. Europe.

Burton birdied three holes on the back as she and Dottie Mochrie earned a 2 and 1 comeback victory over Davies and Alison Nicholas of Britain.

With team captain JoAnne Carner watching, Burton preserved the match with a 12-foot par putt on No. 16 that even prompted a high-five from Davies, the LPGA Tour's leading money-winner who had played so well Friday.

"The goal today was not to go back across the road" to the 18th hole, Burton said.

Daniel, paired with Meg Mallon, sank a 30-foot uphill birdie on the par-4 first hole after hitting her drive under a tree. She birdied the par-5 third hole, and the pair was never threatened in a 7 and 5 victory over Annika Sorenstam and Catrin Nilsmark of Sweden.

The American duo avenged a 1-up loss to the Swedes in alternate-shot play Friday.

In other matches, Dale Reid of Scotland and Lora Fairclough of England beat Tammie Green and Kelly Robbins 5 and 3; Donna Andrews and Betsy King beat Trish Johnson of England and Pam Wright of Scotland 3 and 2; and Swedes Liselotte Neumann and Helen Alfredsson scored a 1-up win over Sherri Steinhauer and U.S. Open champion Patty Sheehan, who narrowly missed birdie putts on the final three holes.

Las Vegas Invitational

LAS VEGAS — Jim Furyk, a rookie with a highly unorthodox swing, had three consecutive birdies in a 6-under-par 66 and took a one-shot lead after four rounds of the 90-hole, $1.5 million Las Vegas Invitational.

Bruce Lietzke birdied four of the last five holes and Kirk Triplett birdied 18 and were tied for second.

Furyk, a husky 24-year-old, wasn't too concerned about either the swing or the lead going into today's final round.

Lietzke, 43, shot 66 and Triplett had a 68.

They were followed by Billy Andrade and Guy Boros, son of the late Hall of Famer Julius Boros, another stroke behind at 268. Andrade shot 67 and Boros 68.

Americans Brandie Burton (left) and Dottie Mochrie won their matches to pull the U.S. even with Europe in the Solheim Cup Saturday.

Dan Forsman, Scott Hoch and Australian Steve Elkington were three off the pace. Hoch and Forsman, who shared the third-round lead with Triplett, each shot 70 and Elkington moved up with a 66.

Furyk had the best finish of his brief career this year, a tie for seventh at Tucson. He went into that final round tied for the lead.

"I was a little nervous starting out, and I guess I probably will be tomorrow," he said. "I think anybody would be nervous, leading the tournament."

He began his move to the top with a tap-in birdie after missing a 10-foot eagle putt on No. 3, then scored from 6 feet on 4.

A 10-footer fell on 6 and he made a 15-foot putt on 8. That was followed by a wedge to 10 feet on 9 and the 9-iron on 10.

Lietzke used his over-sized putter to run in a 6-foot putt on 14t a 10-footer on 15, then two-putted from 22 feet for a birdie 4 on 16. He closed within one stroke of the lead with a 14-foot putt on 17.

Triplett gained his share of second with a 14-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

Ralph's Senior Classic

LOS ANGELES — In a day of par-shattering rounds, Jim Dent shot an 8-under 63 to edge past Dave Eichelberger's course record-tying 62 for the second-round lead in the Ralph's Senior Classic.

Combining Herculean drives — several exceeding 300 yards — with more rescues than the Coast Guard, Dent was at 131, one stroke in front of Eichelberger.

After eagles on the par-5 8th (10-foot putt) and par-5 11th (40-foot chip), Dent struggled briefly on his march back to the clubhouse. His approach shot into the 13th green slammed into a eucalyptus tree, and he settled for par on the short par-5. On 14, Dent flew the green, chipped poorly 20 feet past the hole and two-putted for bogey.

Even though Dent hit only a handful of greens on the back nine, several heroic saves earned him a 32 on his last nine holes.

After missing the green again on 16, Dent putted from the fringe, and his gentle 20-foot downhill roll found the middle of the cup for birdie. On the 190-yard 17th, Dent pulled a 5-iron over the green, past the cart path and nearly against a tree trunk. From 20 yards, he chipped up beautifully — making a 4-footer to save par.

If not for his play on the first hole at the 6,340-yard Rancho Park course, Eichelberger would be leading the tournament. Over two days, he has double-bogeyed and bogeyed the routine opening par-4, a 380-yard gentle dogleg right.

Outside of that first bogey Saturday, the senior circuit newcomer played error-free — and frequently miraculous — golf. His 62 tied the course and tournament record, set by Raymond Floyd in 1992.

First-round leader Bobby Nichols, who shot 64 Friday, led off with a 9-iron approach on No. 1 that rattled the flagstick and stopped just 3 feet away. But he missed the near-gimme birdie, and from there his round went nowhere. He finished with an even-par 71 and is now four shots behind.

AIR: Alcorn St. QB break mark

yard run on third-and-21 with 1:26 left in the first half of the Braves' Southwestern Athletic Conference game. McNair scrambled out of trouble, ran to the left sideline, cut back across the field and wasn't tackled until he had a first down and the record. The historic ball was presented to his mother.

"I'm glad (the record chase) is behind. I can control the things I do on the field now," McNair said. "I look forward to the next game and putting it out of reach the best I can."

He led the way as Alcorn State came from behind twice in the last four minutes, scoring the winning touchdown on a 1-yard run with 10 seconds remaining.

"Steve had a brilliant performance," Alcorn coach Cardell Jones said. "There are not enough superlatives to describe that young man. He's a great player."

Against Southern, McNair passed for 587 yards and four touchdowns, taking over second place on the Division I-AA career lists for passing yards (12,924) and touchdowns (107). He was 32-for-58 with one interception.

"If there's a better player in this country, I don't know where he is. You might can go out of the universe and find one, but in this hemisphere, I'd say Steve is the greatest. He proved that," Jones said.

Prior to his game-winning run, McNair hit Robert Hinton for 52 yards to the 1. McNair also had 62 yards on 14 rushes.

"Steve is best under pressure. When the game is on the line, he has just done it so many times in his career ... at least seven or eight times we have had to score touchdowns in the final two minutes to win," Jones said.

Three minutes earlier, McNair threw a 23-yard TD pass to Marcus Hinton for a 34-29 lead. But Southern regained the lead when Eric Randall hit L'jean McKnelly on a 47-yard crossing pattern with 2:15 left.

McNair, playing in his 39th college game, needed 266 yards against Southern to break Detmer's mark. Southern was allowing only 190 yards per game before Saturday.

But McNair was able to break his own I-AA single-game record of 647 yards, set Sept. 10 at Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Detmer, the 1990 Heisman Trophy winner, picked up his yardage at Brigham Young from 1988-91. McNair's record run, with 1:26 left in the first half, gave him 14,671 yards.

Detmer still holds the NCAA career passing record with 15,031 yards, but had a career total of minus-366 yards rushing. McNair has 12,924 yards passing and 2,125 rushing with three regular-season games remaining.

McNair became the Division I-AA total offense leader Oct. 1, also with a 22-yard scramble against Mississippi Valley State. That run went for a touchdown.

McNair also is on pace to break the career and season records for total offense per game. He is averaging 503.1 yards this season, and 385.6 yards in his career.

Former Mississippi Valley State quarterback Willie Totten, who threw most of his passes to Jerry Rice, holds the career mark at 325 yards per game. David Klinger set the single-season record of 474.6 yards per game at Houston in 1990.

Sooners avoid worst record in nearly 30 years with win

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Scott Blanton kicked two 39-yard field goals in the final 6:48 Saturday, rallying self-destructive Oklahoma over Kansas 20-17 as the Sooners avoided their worst record in nearly 30 years.

Kansas (4-3, 1-2 Big Eight) took a 17-7 lead with two third-quarter touchdowns, hoping for its fourth victory over Oklahoma in 30 years.

But Dwayne Chandler scored on a short run to make it 17-14 with 13 minutes to go. Then Blanton, who had missed four of seven attempts from beyond 30 yards, made two pressure-packed kicks.

His 39-yarder with 6:48 to go, following Garrick McGee's 23-yard pass to Albert Hall on third down, forged a 17-17 tie at the 6:48 mark.

Buffs set up showdown with 'Huskers

■ Colorado pulls off a 35-21 win over stubborn Kansas State.

Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Rashaan Salaam ran for 202 yards and two scores and Kordell Stewart had 127 yards and three TDs, leading No. 2 Colorado to a 35-21 victory over stubborn No. 19 Kansas State.

Utah wide receiver Kevin Dyson (1) is tripped by Colorado State defender Andre Strode after catching a pass in the first half. Utah won the battle of unbeaten WAC teams 45-31.

■ Top 25 Roundup

The Buffaloes (7-0, 3-0 Big Eight) posted their 11th straight victory, thanks to Stewart's 60-yard run on a quarterback keeper for the go-ahead score with 10 minutes left and Stewart's 7-yard run with 8 seconds remaining.

Chad May's passing and two second-half scoring runs by J.J. Smith — who had three scores in all — helped Kansas State (4-2, 1-2) draw into ties on two occasions in the second half.

Stewart's long scoring run came on the fifth play of a 71-yard drive, following cornerback Elton Davis' first career interception at the Colorado 29. On first-and-10 from the 40, Stewart ran off the right side on the option, cut back slightly inside the defensive end and outran the secondary for a 28-21 advantage.

Smith's scoring runs of 30 and 3 yards, both late in third quarter, threw a scare into the Buffs, whose defense earlier repulsed three straight Wildcats scoring threats.

No. 3 Nebraska 42, Missouri 7

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Brook Berringer threw three touchdown passes in the second half and Lawrence Phillips ran for 110 yards as third-ranked Nebraska overcame a slow start to beat Missouri.

Nebraska (8-0, 3-0 Big Eight) didn't have a first down in a scoreless first quarter, yet the issue was never in doubt.

Phillips recorded his eighth consecutive 100-yard game and scored on a 5-yard run for the game's first touchdown with 11:15 left in the firt half.

No. 7 Miami 38, W.Virginia 6

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Frank Costa threw for 266 yards and two touchdowns as No. 7 Miami avenged its only Big East loss by beating West Virginia.

West Virginia's 17-14 victory last Nov. 20 cost the Hurricanes their third title in the three-year history of the league, as well as a chance to play for their fifth national championship in 11 years.

On this Saturday, the Mountaineers (3-5, 1-3) were no match for Miami (5-1, 2-0), which won for the third straight time and ran its string of victories over unranked teams to 68.

Costa helped the Hurricanes to a 25-0 halftime lead by throwing a 52-yard touchdown pass to Chris T. Jones and a 54-yarder to Yatil Green.

No. 8 Alabama 21, Mississippi 10

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Jay Barker became the winningest quarterback in Alabama history, scoring the go-ahead touchdown on a 2-yard run midway through the fourth quarter as the eighth-ranked Crimson Tide rallied for a victory.

Barker, who has a 31-1-1 record in four years as Alabama's starting QB, eclipsed the record of 30 wins set by Harry Gilmer from 1944-47. Barker already had the best winning percentage in school history. It now stands at .955.

As usual, the Tide (8-0, 5-0 Southeastern Conference) struggled to beat an outmanned opponent. Ole Miss (2-5, 1-5), after losing the previous week to Arkansas 31-7, led 10-0 at halftime of a game that was halted for 25 minutes in the second quarter because of a severe lightning storm.

Williams rushed 32 times for 118 yards, his sixth game of more than 100 yards.

Oregon 31, No. 9 Washington 20

EUGENE, Ore. — Freshman Kenny Wheaton intercepted Damon Huard's pass at the sideline and returned it 97 yards for a touchdown with 49 seconds to play clinching Oregon's stunning upset over ninth-ranked Washington.

The play climaxed a wild finish that saw Washington rally to take the lead with 7:44 to play, only to have Oregon (5-3, 3-1 Pac-10) come back with two late scores.

After the Ducks had driven 98 yards to go ahead 24-20 on Dwayne Jones' 12-yard run up the middle with 2:40 remaining, Huard directed the Huskies 67 yards to the Oregon 8 and Washington (5-2, 2-2) seemed on the verge of a last-minute comeback victory.

But on first-and-goal, Huard threw to the left sideline, where Wheaton stepped in front of Dave Janoski to make the interception and raced down the field for the touchdown.

No. 10 Florida St. 17, Clemson 0

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Warrick Dunn ran for 133 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as 10th-ranked Florida State shut out Clemson.

The Seminoles, who have not lost a conference game since joining the ACC, go for the record next Saturday against unbeaten Duke in a showdown of ACC frontrunners. Maryland won 21 straight games in the mid-1970s.

Florida State (5-1, 5-0 ACC) sputtered much of the day on offense, but its defense dominated to shut out Clemson for the straight season and give coach Bobby Bowden a 19-0 mark in homecoming games. The Seminoles sacked three Clemson quarterbacks five times and limited the Tigers to 149 yards and nine first downs.

Clemson (2-5, 1-4 ACC) didn't cross midfield until the final seconds of the third period after getting the ball on a short punt by Florida State's Sean Liss at its 48.

No. 11 Michigan 19, Illinois 14

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Amani Toomer returned a punt 72 yards for a touchdown and Remy Hamilton kicked four field goals as No. 11 Michigan beat Illinois.

The loss ruined the Illini's 70th anniversary celebration of Red Grange's six-touchdown, 212-yard performance against Michigan. The Wolverines made sure there was no second coming of the Galloping Ghost; led by linebacker Steve Morrison, they held Illinois to 40 rushing yards this time.

Illinois (4-3, 2-2 Big Ten) was ranked second nationally on defense and hadn't allowed a third-quarter point this season until Michigan (5-2, 3-1) scored 10 in that period to take a 19-7 lead.

The Illini scored on Scott Weaver's 8-yard pass to Jason Dulick with 4:42 to play. But with Todd Collins completing two third-down passes to Jay Riemersma, the Wolverines maintained possession the rest of the way. Collins was 17-of-25 for 177 yards.

Weaver, who was 16-of-24 for 194 yards, played just one series in the first half, going 4-of-5 for 59 yards and throwing a 2-yard touchdown pass to Chris Stelter.

No. 18 Utah 45, No. 12 Colorado St. 31

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Utah blocked three kicks, returned two interceptions for touchdowns and scored on an 8-yard pass from Mike McCoy to Curtis Marsh with 3:46 left to beat Colorado State in a matchup of unbeatens in the Western Athletic Conference.

No. 12 Colorado State rallied to tie it 31-31 on two touchdown by third-string running back Van Ward. But No. 18 Utah responded with a 70-yard scoring drive that ended when McCoy hit Marsh with a lob in the right corner of the end zone.

Colorado State (7-1, 5-1 WAC) had a final chance to tie or win after driving 70 yards to the Utah 10. But on fourth-and-8, Harold Lusk intercepted Anthoney Hill's pass in the end zone and returned it 100 yards with 22 seconds remaining to clinch the victory for Utah (7-0, 4-0).

McCoy, the nation's fourth-leading passer, was 25-of-33 for 210 yards and two touchdowns. Hill was 17-of-37 for 243 yards and one TD, but was intercepted four times.

No. 14 Arizona 34, UCLA 24

TUCSON, Ariz. — Dan White passed for two touchdowns and Ontiwaun Carter rushed for 164 yards and a score as No. 14 Arizona overcome a scare to beat UCLA.

Arizona (6-1, 4-0 Pac-10) stayed alone atop the Pacific 10 Conference while the Bruins (2-6, 0-5) lost their sixth straight.

The Arizona Stadium crowd of 58,817 surpassed the 58,515 for the 1982 Arizona State game.

Arizona ran for 216 yards against the conference's worst rushing defense, and had 427 yards overall while controlling the ball about 12½ minutes longer than the Bruins.

UCLA All-American wide receiver J.J. Stokes returned after missing most of the season with a thigh injury but wasn't a factor.

No. 25 Virginia 34, No. 15 N. Carolina 10

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Reserve quarterback Mike Groh and the Virginia defense both had strong showings as the 25th-ranked Cavaliers continued their mastery of North Carolina with a victory over the 15th-ranked Tar Heels.

Groh, starting the second consecutive game while Symmion Willis recovers from a pulled hamstring, had 256 yards and two touchdowns on 15-of-21 passing as Virginia (6-1, 4-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) won its sixth consecutive game.

Groh, the ACC's passing efficiency leader, helped Virginia to a quick 17-point lead.

No. 16 Syracuse 49, Temple 42

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia-born Marvin Harrison made a memorable visit back home, scoring three touchdowns as No. 16 Syracuse outlasted Temple.

Harrison caught nine passes for 191 yards, both career highs, and scored on passes of 53 and 55 yards. He also had the first touchdown run of his career, 20 yards on a reverse.

Kevin Mason was the other star for Syracuse (6-1, 4-0 Big East), completing 17-of-20 passes for 334 yards and three scores. The completions, yards and TDs represented career bests for Mason, a fifth-year senior. Mason, who also ran 5 yards for a TD in the fourth quarter, led all runners with 66 yards on 13 carries.

Freeman returned a punt 80 yards for one score, caught a touchdown pass for another and set up two more TDs with long returns as No. 17 Virginia Tech beat Pittsburgh.

Virginia Tech (7-1, 4-1 Big East) won its 10th straight in Lane Stadium and has its best record since 1967. Pitt (1-7, 0-4) lost its fifth in a row.

Virginia Tech tailback Dwayne Thomas, who missed the three previous games because of a sprained ankle, rushed for 82 yards and two touchdowns and Maurice DeShazo completed 16-of-29 passes for 183 yards and two touchdowns.

No. 20 Duke 51, Wake Forest 26

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Duke turned three fumbles into 21 points in the first 6 minutes on and the 20th-ranked Blue Devils rolled to a victory over Wake Forest.

The Blue Devils (7-0, 4-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) used an opportunistic defense and the running of Robert Baldwin to keep pace with two-time defending ACC champion Florida State, which beat Clemson 17-0 and plays host to Duke next Saturday.

Duke, with its best record since the 1941 team went 9-0 and played in the Rose Bowl, has put together one of the nation's best turnaround seasons, but against teams with a combined mark of 13-30.

Rutgers 7, No. 22 Boston College 7

BOSTON — David Green's outstanding day ended in misery when he fumbled at the Rutgers 9 with 22 seconds left, forcing 22nd-ranked Boston College to settle for a 7-7 tie.

The Eagles (3-2-1) had driven from their 35 with 6 minutes left to the 9. Green, whose 25 previous rushes for 136 yards included a 60-yard gallop, ran to the right to try to center the ball for a field-goal attempt that might have given Boston College its fourth straight victory.

No.24 Ohio St. 48, Purdue 14

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Bob Hoying threw for four touchdown passes and a career-high 290 yards in just the first half as 24th-ranked Ohio State threw deep and often to beat Purdue.

Hoying, who finished with 304 yards, tied John Borton's 42-year-old Ohio State record with his fifth touchdown pass on the first series of the second half.

Hoying completed 19-of-23 passes in the first half and hit his only attempt of the second half. He hadn't thrown a touchdown pass in Ohio State's last two games and had thrown just eight in the Buckeyes' last nine games.

The 304 yards was the fifth-highest total in Ohio State history and the 290 yards was the most ever in the first half by a Buckeyes quarterback.

No. 21 Brigham Young 34, Texas-El Paso 28

EL PASO — John Walsh threw three touchdown passes as No. 21 Brigham Young used an overwhelming offense to hold off a struggling but feisty Texas-El Paso 34-28 Saturday night.

Walsh completed 26-of-39 passes for 330 yards as BYU edged upwards in the Western Athletic Conference. The victory makes BYU 7-1 overall and 5-1 in conference play. UTEP fell to 3-5, 1-4.

Skip to my Lou: Holtze s gather

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Homecoming weekend was more like a family reunion as Lou Holtz took advantage of a bye weekend at Notre Dame to watch his son walk the same sidelines he did 30 years ago.

Holtz, who was an assistant coach for the Huskies in 1964 and 1965, was in town with his wife and other relatives to visit 30-year-old Skip Holtz, who is in his first year as head coach at UConn.

"I'm just up here as a father and a grandfather," Holtz said Saturday before watching UConn's homecoming game against Rhode Island. "It's nice to be back. There are a lot of memories."

During a news conference that lasted about a half-hour denied reports that he would leave Notre Dame to coach in the NFL for the expansion Charlotte Panthers.

"There's actually no truth to it," he said. "I have every intention of staying at Notre Dame."

Lou Holtz said the season's been a very frustrating one at Notre Dame, with three losses in seven games so far.

He also said it's been difficult watching Skip, who previously served four years under his father as offensive coordinator, struggle through his first season at UConn.

The younger Holtz's team won only two of seven games team going into Saturday's game.

"Now you have to win twice on Saturday to be happy Saturday night," said Lou, who added that he sometimes calls UConn's press box several times during a game to find out how the Huskies are doing.

"You want to see your children happy and successful," he said.

Holtz arrived Friday and spoke with the Huskies that night at Skip's request. He watched the game from a stadium box with athletic director Lew Perkins. He said he didn't give his son any advice beforehand.

"I don't say anything," he said. "I treat Skip like I treat his mother. I don't give advice and I take all of it.

"I have a lot of confidence in Skip. So I don't feel uncomfortable in letting him just being himself. I'm very proud of him."

MHS closer to v-ball playoffs

ABILENE — Midland High defeated Abilene High 15-7, 15-10 in District 4-5A volleyball action here Saturday and the Lady Dawgs now come down to a final home match against San Angelo Central to determine their playoff future.

The Lady Dawgs improved to 7-4 in district play at 16-10 overall and are tied for second place with Abilene Cooper, a winner Saturday over Midland Lee. MHS is guaranteed at least a chance at a playoff spot.

A combination of a win by Odessa High over Cooper and a loss by MHS to San Angelo would put MHS, OHS and Cooper in a three-way tie for second. If Odessa defeats Cooper and MHS tops San Angelo, the Lady Dawgs would clinch the second playoff spot outright.

Toya Zachery led the Lady Dawgs with five kills while Jamee Stennett, Deshawn Berry, Heather Klein and Elesceeya King had three each. Stennett led MHS at the service line, starting off game two with a 9-0 run. Elisabeth Mathiassen served MHS to an 11-0 lead before the Lady Eagles rallied to within 11-9.

"We were thrilled to walk away with win and get out of here with just two games because the officiating was so inconsistent," said MHS coach Terri McColloch said.

Jennifer Allen led MHS in the first game, serving points 1-5 and then 13-15.

"Abilene High was very much improved over the first time we played them," Terri McColloch said. "They had their good basketball player (Tasha Newman) and she can put the ball down. But we did a good job of keeping the ball away from her."

MHS hosts San Angelo Central at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Bus crash injures 7 athletes

MANHEIM, Pa. (AP) — A coach and seven members of Ursinus College's women's cross-country team were injured when their van struck a median and rolled over, state police said Saturday.

The accident occurred Friday night along the Pennsylvania Turnpike about a mile east of the Lancaster-Lebanon interchange in Rapho Township. The women were en route to Gettysburg for an invitational meet.

State police in Bowmansville said Aimee L. Puleo, 26, the team's coach, lost control of the vehicle when she took her eyes off the road to adjust the cruise control. The van rolled over once before landing on its wheels, police said.

Two passengers, Andrea Gaitan and Christine Keyes, were thrown from the vehicle. Also riding in the van were Aisha Faruqi, Lauren Newkirk, Kayse Ramsey, April Brown and Amy Shivery.

Keyes was listed in satisfactory condition Saturday at Lancaster General Hospital. Puleo, Gaitan, Faruqi, Ramsey and Shivery were treated at Lancaster General and released. Newkirk and Brown were treated at Hershey Medical Center and released, a supervisor said.

The women were following a van carrying Ursinus' men's team, which stopped and assisted rescue crew members. Neither team participated in the meet, school spokeswoman Sally Widman said.

NHL players begin search for work

NHL players are finding Finland, Germany and Russia friendly places during the league's labor strife. The same cannot be said of Sweden.

The Swedish Elite League froze out NHL players for all intents and purposes with an announcement Saturday it would only allow them to play if they committed to an entire season.

"We think it would be unfair to let NHLers play for a shorter period," said Tommy Topel, president of the Swedish Elite League. "It could affect the league in an unnatural way. And the rosters have already been set a long time ago."

The vote among the 12 teams was not unanimous, but it was enough to keep most Swedish-born players from returning to their homeland while a work stoppage existed in the NHL.

Wednesday, all 24 Djurgarden players voted in favor of Quebec's Mats Sundin returning to the team during the lockout, along with Tommy Soderstrom, a goaltender from the New York Islanders. Soderstrom later rejected the offer.

"I'm a little disappointed," Sundin said Saturday, after the Swedish league's announcement. "We've been allowed to practice and I was hoping to play in Sweden during the lockout. It's a pity because the Swedish league is the best in Europe. But the Finnish league is also competitive. Using NHLers proved to be a big success for the league and its teams."

Only 50 of the 300 members in the Swedish Elite League's players union were in favor of having NHL players on the teams, according to results of a survey released last week. Later, two teams supported the idea after unanimous votes.

So far, one NHL player has agreed to spend a full season in the Swedish League: Patrick Carnback, who played for the Anaheim Mighty Ducks last season.

Sundin now is looking to Finland as a possible place to play. Many NHL players have been going there of late — and not only Finns.

Shawn McEachern, who plays for the Pittsburgh Penguins, became the first North American-born player to compete in a European league during the lockout when he made his debut in a Finnish League game Saturday night.

"I felt very tired after the long trip," said McEachern, who failed to score as his team, Espoo, lost 3-2 to Helsinki IFK.

Four established Finnish players in the NHL — Jari Kurri (Los Angeles), Teemu Selanne (Winnipeg), Esa Tikkanen (St. Louis) and Christian Ruuttu (Chicago) — played their first game in the Finnish League Thursday night. Norway, Germany and Russia have also welcomed NHL players to their leagues.

Opener defines Charger, Broncho seasons

■ San Diego and Denver meet again after Charger victory on opening day sent the teams in opposite directions.

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

The defining moment of 1994 for Denver and San Diego might have come opening night. That's when the Broncos blew a 17-0 lead and lost to the Chargers 37-34 when the ball slipped from John Elway's hand into Junior Seau's on what looked like a typical Elway game-winning drive.

Now Denver goes to San Diego today with a 1-5 record to the Chargers' 6-0, close to the opposite of what was expected of the teams when the season began.

"I cringe when I think about it," said Elway, who lost another heartbreaker in Monday night's shootout with Kansas City and Joe Montana. "We had great expectations, and that's what makes our record hurt even worse."

San Diego, on the other hand, is the NFL's only unbeaten team, not bad for a club that was 8-8 a year ago and was picked by most everyone for no better than fourth in the AFC West. "All it means," coach Bobby Ross said, "is that we can't finish worse than 6-10."

One reason for San Diego's success is that it's an NFC team in the AFC, a carbon copy of the Washington teams of the '80s that were put together by Bobby Beathard, the Chargers' general manager.

"It always starts with the offensive line," said Natrone Means, the Chargers' version of John Riggins and the AFC's second-leading rusher.

"It's a centerpiece for us. They get us going. Whenever they're in a groove, we're in a groove. They're opening holes, and giving Stan (Humphries) time."

The Broncos are out of the groove.

Monday night's three-point loss was their third of the season by that margin, one in overtime. They also have a seven-point defeat at Buffalo in which Elway couldn't convert with four close-in shots at the end zone in the final minute.

So Denver can be excused if it feels dispirited coming in. "We needed just one more play and we couldn't make it in the end," Wade Phillips said after Monday night's loss.

The weekend opened with Minnesota defeating Green Bay 13-10 in overtime Thursday night.

In other games today, Chicago is at Detroit, Cincinnati at Cleveland, the Los Angeles Rams at New Orleans, Pittsburgh at the New York Giants, Seattle at Kansas City, Washington at Indianapolis, Atlanta at the Los Angeles Raiders, Dallas at Arizona, and Tampa Bay at San Francisco.

Houston is at Philadelphia Monday night.

Buffalo, Miami, New England and the New York Jets are off.

Seattle (3-3) at Kansas City (4-2)

The Chiefs needed that win at Denver, their first in 12 tries there, just to keep close to San Diego.

Now they get the AFC West's other surprise team, Seattle, which started 3-1, then lost two in a row before the bye week. It's the Montana vs. Montana-in-training-matchup. Rick Mirer, the Notre Dame guy in his second pro season, is supposed to be the next Montana, the Notre Dame guy in his 16th.

Mirer and the offense are one reason for the Seahawks' slide.

Seattle has scored only one TD in losses to the Colts and Broncos, and Mirer has thrown three of his five interceptions in those games, a dropoff that's not unusual for a young quarterback.

Montana, on the other hand, is throwing more than ever despite rib, leg and shoulder injuries, with 109 passes in the last two weeks as the Chiefs' once-potent running game sputtered.

Dallas (5-1) at Arizona (2-4)

Buddy Ryan gets a second shot at the Cowboys after the 38-3 embarrassment at Dallas two weeks ago. He won ugly last week at Washington, with Steve Beuerlein back at quarterback in place of Jay Schroeder, Jim McMahon, Timm Rosenbach, Neil Lomax, Jim Hart, etc.

Barry Switzer expects the Cards to play a prevent offense, for good reason —Dallas picked off five passes two weeks ago. "I look at the film and I see runs on first down, runs on second down, runs on third down," Switzer said.

That leaves it up to the Arizona defense to score.

Pittsburgh (4-2) at N.Y. Giants (3-3)

This is where the Giants were supposed to be, but not the way they were supposed to get there. They've lost three straight after winning three straight. So Dan Reeves, who benched John Elway as a rookie, is now suggesting Dave Brown, who's thrown five interceptions the past two weeks, may sit down in favor of Kent Graham if he keeps up the bad work.

Pittsburgh comes in without running back Barry Foster. Rookie Bam Morris will replace him. But even with Foster, this isn't a great matchup offensively for the Steelers. The Giants are much better against the run than the pass and Pittsburgh prefers the ground route.

Houston (1-5) at Philadelphia (4-2) (Monday night)

Why did the NFL give the Oilers all these prime time games? Did it think Warren Moon was still there? Sean Jones? William Fuller? Fuller is in an Eagles' uniform for this one.

So this game is unlikely to have the fireworks of last Monday night's Montana-Elway shootout.

Instead, it may be Billy Joe Tolliver at quarterback for Houston instead of Bucky Richardson, who looks like what he wanted to be — a Canadian Leaguer. Randall Cunningham is NOT a Canadian leaguer, although he is the only old-fashioned triple threat in the NFL — he got off an 80-yard quick kick against the Cowboys last week.

Atlanta (4-3) at L.A. Raiders (2-4)

The Falcons discovered in their 42-3 loss to Deion Sanders and the 49ers that they're not yet ready for "Prime Time." Now they see what they can do against a team that's reaching the desperation stage.

There's a surprise here — the quarterback feuding with his coach is the Raiders' Jeff Hostetler, not the Falcons' Jeff George, who's saying all the right things at Atlanta. Hostetler says all is forgiven between he and Art Shell, but who knows about the guy named Al Davis who sits in the press box, signs the paychecks, and sometimes calls the plays.

Chicago (4-2) at Detroit (2-4)

The surprise here is that the records aren't reversed.

When the division took its bye week, the Bears had won three straight and the Lions had lost three since upsetting Dallas, putting Wayne Fontes' job in jeopardy.

Steve Walsh, the winning pitcher in the Bears' three wins, goes back on the bench in favor of Erik Kramer, the former Detroit quarterback. That's because Dave Wannstedt is an advocate of the rule a player doesn't lose his job to injury.

One of the Lions' problems has been Scott Mitchell's inconsistency, even within games. Two weeks ago, he hit his first 10 passes, then went only 8-for-17 the rest of the way.

Tampa Bay (2-4) at San Francisco (5-2)

The Niners may be the only NFL team to get two bye weeks — this one and the real one next week. San Francisco has won 11 of the 12 games these teams have played — it lost 24-23 in 1980, the year before the dynasty years began.

Deion Sanders says he'll play with the hamstring he pulled on his touchdown trot against Atlanta, but chances are George Seifert will give him a rest. Meanwhile, Sam Wyche is reluctant to throw rookie quarterback Trent Dilfer at the Niners.

"There's no substitute for experience," Wyche said. "When I played for George Allen, he used to proclaim that for every rookie you play you lost one game that season. He's probably not too far, off."

Cincinnati (0-6) at Cleveland (5-1)

The Browns conclude the easy part of their schedule here, although the red flags are out in Cleveland about this game.

"The Bengals felt like they beat us down there in the first game," said Bill Belichick, whose Browns needed a punt return by Eric Metcalf and a kickoff return by Randy Baldwin to beat the Bengals 28-20 opening week.

A strange stat for the Bengals: they had three sacks all season until last week, when they got eight against the Steelers. A not-so-strange stat: they lost anyway.

Los Angeles Rams (3-4) at New Orleans (2-4)

Jim Everett once was supposed to be the "quarterback of the '90s," a potential superstar in a nation's glamor market in Los Angeles. Now he's trying to salvage his career with the so-so Saints and would love to have a big game here.

The Rams are a minor surprise. Chris Miller gave them some decent play at quarterback last week against the Giants' porous pass defense. But Sean Gilbert, their best defensive linemen, and several offensive line starters still are aching.

Washington (1-6) at Indianapolis (3-4)

Unlike Sam Wyche, Norv Turner doesn't mind playing rookies at quarterback. So with Heath Shuler limping with a sprained ankle and shell-shocked after throwing five interceptions last week, Turner is starting Gus Frerotte instead of John Friesz.

Indianapolis' quarterback is Jim Harbaugh, for whom the change of scenery from Chicago — and the running of Marshall Faulk — has done wonders. He's now third in the AFC in passing after going 18-of-22 for 206 yards and two touchdowns in the Colts' 27-17 upset at Buffalo last week.

Philly defensive end Fuller anxious to play old team

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After eight years with the Houston Oilers, William Fuller thought his friends in the organization would keep him informed about the team's plans for him. He was wrong.

And so Fuller admits he's anxious to do particularly well for his new team, the Philadelphia Eagles, when they play the Oilers Monday night.

The defensive end speaks calmly about it now, but there's still a trace of anger in his voice as he talked about the Oilers' decision to allow him to become a free agent following last season.

He's not unhappy with the Eagles (4-2), especially when he sees how the Oilers (1-5) have unraveled.

"I couldn't ask for a smoother transition, both football-wise and off the field," said Fuller, tied for second in the NFL with seven sacks. "It's worked out real good."

He is upset about the way he feels the Oilers let him hang during the off-season, especially after they told him he was definitely a part of their future.

"All of our conversations with management was, 'Hey, you're our guy. We may lose Sean Jones, we may even lose Warren (Moon), but we want you here,'" Fuller said.

It made sense. Even though Fuller is 32, he is among the NFL's top pass-rushers. In the previous four seasons, he has averaged 10 sacks a season.

The reassurances made Fuller feel good about his situation until he started getting signals that made him wonder.

First, negotiations on a new contract went very slow. The Oilers took their time giving Fuller a proposal and when they did, he was insulted by how far under fair market value it was.

Then Houston designated defensive tackle Glenn Montgomery as their protected player under the collective bargaining agreement. That meant the Oilers could match any free agent offer Montgomery might get, insuring he would stay with the team.

Fuller was under the impression he would get the protected designation.

"I can kind of see their rationale," he said. "He (Montgomery) had a great year last year ... and he's a younger player. They were simply looking at it that way."

No one from the front office said anything to him, but Fuller was getting the unmistakable impression he was no longer a part of the Oilers' plans.

"That's fine, I just wished that somebody would have let me know," he said. "There were people in that organization who I thought would let me know, even if top management didn't. Other guys who I felt close enough with, as far as friendship, that they would let William Fuller know the skinny. And it didn't happen."

Oilers coach Jack Pardee insisted the Oilers "sure didn't want to lose" Fuller, who signed a three-year, $8.4 million with Philadelphia.

"William is having a typical William Fuller year," Pardee said. "He's been a good player, hit the Pro Bowl a couple of years ago and had 16 sacks. He's well on track to do that kind of thing again."

Eagles coach Rich Kotite said he believes that out of all the free agents who changed teams this off-season, Fuller has made the biggest impact.

"This man has been outstanding for us," he said. "I can't tell you all he brings to this football team. Not just on the field, but in the locker room, just the way he conducts himself."

COWBOYS: Pass-clumsy Cards to run, run, run

(From 1C)

ing on a low-risk offense featuring runs by Ronald Moore and short screens to fullback Larry Centers, who leads Arizona with 29 catches.

Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin has 29 catches, too. But Irvin, the star of a big-play passing game, is averaging 15.1 yards per grab to Centers' 8.5 yards.

Alvin Harper's average — an NFL-leading 25.4 yards — is even better, but he has only 13 receptions for the Cowboys.

Beuerlein, benched after the first two losses and reinstated as a starter for the Redskins, wasn't overjoyed about the game plan. But he said it was understandable, given the fact he, Schroeder and Jim McMahon have thrown 16 interceptions.

"I'm not going to sit here and hypothesize and try to figure it all out," said Beuerlein, who left Dallas for the Cardinals in 1993. "The bottom line is I'm going to go with the game plan and make the most of it, and when I get a chance to make plays, I'd better make plays."

'You don't need a motivational factor to play the world champions.'
— Buddy Ryan, Arizona Cardinals coach

The Cowboys, who won their third in a row by beating Philadelphia 24-13 last Sunday, never turned over the ball against the Cardinals. Dallas' five interceptions against Arizona went a long way toward making it the best in the NFL in turnover ratio (plus-9) and in team defense (244.8 yards a game).

Compared with the week before the Oct. 9 game, when Ryan said his team would take the Cowboys to the woodshed for "an old-fashioned butt-kicking," pregame talk was relatively low-key. The Cowboys know the losing team can feed off the humiliation of a blowout, and the Cardinals didn't want to have to eat their words again.

Ryan, as usual, said his fourth-ranked defense is the best in football, but he spoke about the Cowboys with uncharacteristic respect.

"You don't need a motivational factor to play the world champions," he said.

Linebacker Eric Hill said the victory over Washington, Arizona's second in three games, restored the team's belief in itself.

"Dallas is the best team in the league right now, but they're not 35 points better than the Cardinals," Hill said.

Smith hasn't had a 100-yard game against the Cardinals since he ran for 112 on Sept. 20, 1992. He was slowed by a hamstring pull two weeks ago and gained only 22 yards, but he scored twice.

He echoed Hill's belief that the rematch will be closer.

"I'm not thinking about another 38-3 blowout," Smith said. "I didn't even think about a 38-3 blowout the first time we met, but I do expect a very tough and physical ballgame."

SERIES: No October classic leaves void

(From 1C)

Maybe Kenny Lofton might've raced back for an over-the-shoulder catch in deep center field, the way Willie Mays did against the Indians in 1954, or Don Mattingly would've finally gotten to play in a World Series, the way Al Kaline did in 1968.

Now, we'll never know because all we have this fall are the October memories.

Baseball fans who tuned into ABC-TV Saturday night saw "Problem Child 2." After the movie, it was "Commish" — obviously not a series based on baseball.

Saturday, for the record, marked the 19th anniversary of Game 7 of the 1975 World Series, the game in which Joe Morgan singled home Pete Rose in the ninth inning, lifting Cincinnati over Boston.

Today, meanwhile, marks the first anniversary of one of the most exciting moments in baseball history, Joe Carter's home run in the bottom of the ninth inning of Game 6 that rallied the Toronto Blue Jays over Philadelphia for their second straight championship. Carter jumped for joy around the bases after joining Bill Mazeroski, who did it in 1960, as the only players to end the Series with a home run.

These days, Carter is moving into his new home in his hometown of Kansas City. Mitch Williams, who gave up the home run, is back at his 3 & 2 Ranch in Hico, Texas, pondering a comeback next season — if there is a next season — with the Phillies, of all teams.

Mattingly, who looked he would finally get his chance to play into late October after a brilliant career that began in 1982, instead could join Ernie Banks, Ralph Kiner, Gaylord Perry and other Hall of Famers who never got the opportunity to play in a Series game.

Had it been this year, he would've gotten to start in his own ballpark, too. Because of the expanded playoffs, including the new wild-card round, the World Series schedule had been flipped this season to open again at the home of the AL champion.

"I still dream about playing in a World Series. I picture myself making the great play — of diving for a ball, getting a big hit with men on base," Mattingly said shortly before the strike began Aug. 12.

As it turned out, Mattingly, was in New York this week. He had come to town to accompany his wife, Kim, who plans to run in the New York City Marathon Nov. 6.

Mattingly, 33, it seems, has been keeping his batting eye sharp. Only it's been by hitting wiffle balls with his three sons in Indiana, not by preparing to face fastballs from Orel Hershiser or curves from Tom Glavine on an October night when the air is chilled and the atmosphere charged.

Bidders must submit a Cashier's or Certified Check issued by a bank satisfactory to the Owner, or a Bid Bond from a reliable Surety Company, payable without recourse to the order of Midland County, Texas, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible bid submitted as a guaranty that the Bidder will enter into a contract and execute bonds and guaranty in the forms provided within ten (10) days after notice of award of contract to him. Bids without the required Check or Bid Bond will not be considered.

The successful Bidder must furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond on the forms provided in the amount of 100% of the total contract price from a Surety Company holding a permit from the State of Texas to act as Surety, or other Surety or Sureties acceptable to the Owner.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. HOMES & CLASSIFIED

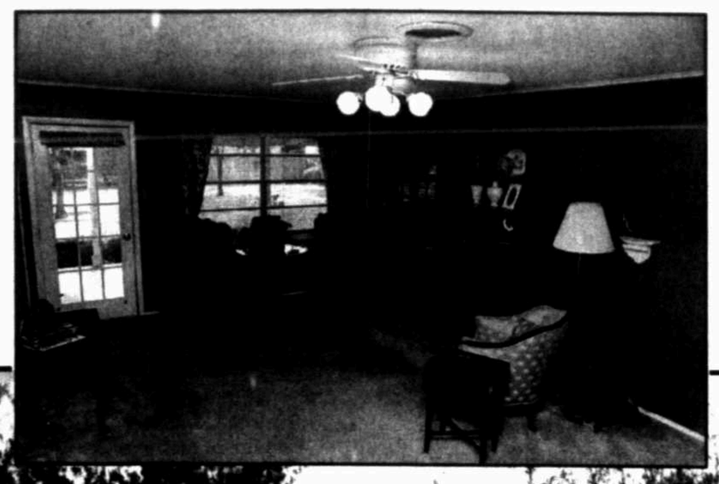
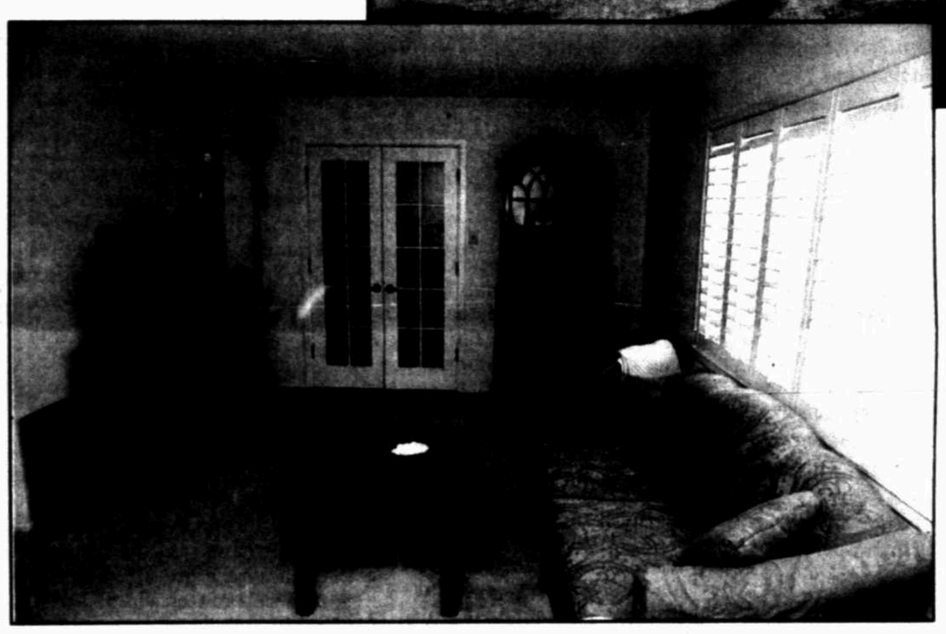
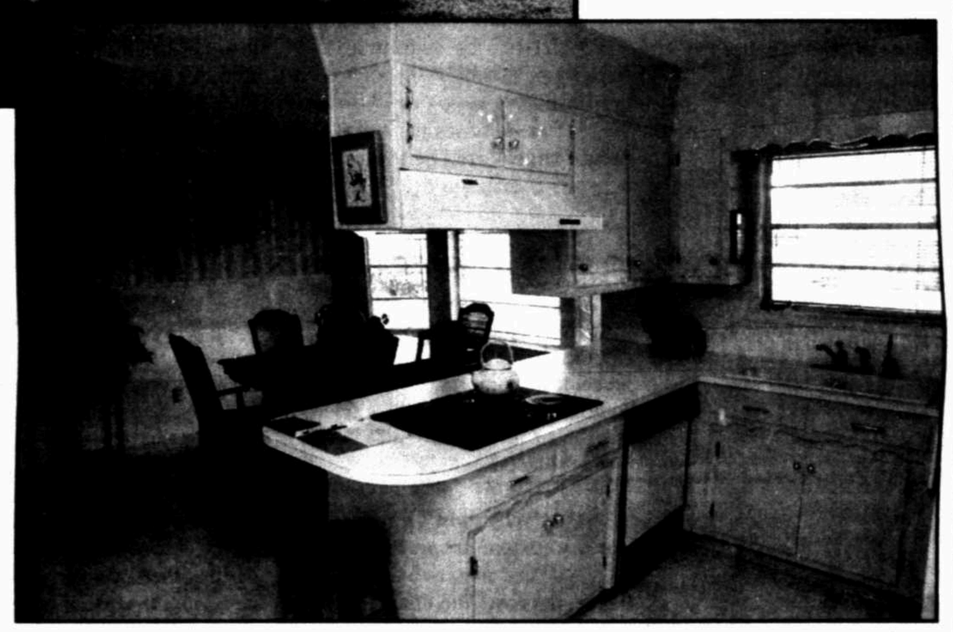
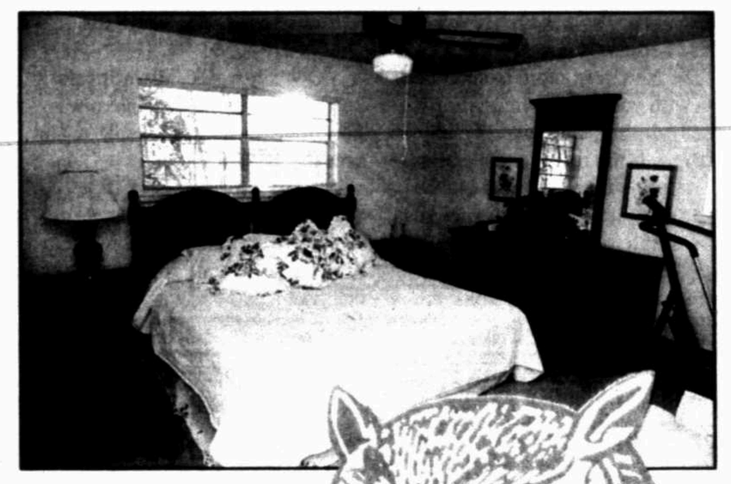
WISE BUY!









Located in a quiet part of Midland and set in huge grounds, this three bedroom home is perfectly suited to a family with small children.

4313 Greenbriar is set on a road that curves between Midland Drive and Wadley. This provides a very convenient location, near to shops and offices, but it retains a peaceful charm because the street is tucked away from the traffic and bustle of the roads.

The interior is compact and homey with lots of the features that one would expect from a more expensive property.

French doors lead the way from the tiled foyer to the formal living areas, and coupled with the plantation shutters lends a rather Southern feel to the home.

The den is very much the focal point of the house, with its large whitewashed brick fireplace and built-in bookshelves. French doors lead out onto the patio and the large south facing windows allow sunlight to flood in.

The kitchen, which is conveniently placed next to the formal and informal areas boasts a tremendous amount of both storage and working space as well as amenities such as a counter top range, a double sink, breakfast bar as well as a breakfast area over-looking the garden.

Other aspects of the property, such as the large closets in the bedrooms, the two-car garage and the large utility room that has masses of built in shelves, all add to the 'livibility' of the home.

Kay Pederson, of Chaparral Realtors, is the listing agent and she is holding an open house between two and four o'clock this afternoon. For a private appointment to view the home, call Kay at 686-7000.

Re/Max owners attend educational seminar

Marilyn Jo Smith
Broker, Co-Owner
Re/Max of Midland

RE/MAX of Midland Owners Marilyn Jo Smith and Anita Noles recently completed a three day educational seminar in Corpus Christi.

Smith and Noles attended the South Texas REALTORS® Convention on the first day of the seminar. They sat in on educational sessions conducted by distinguished real estate professionals such as Mike Brodie, Alex Garcia, David Naster and Ted Jones, with the A&M Real Estate Center.

On day two of the seminar, they attended a risk management seminar hosted by Re/Max of Texas. The purpose of the seminar was to assist owners with the day to day operations associated with the owning and operating of a real estate office.

On the third day of the event, Noles and Smith took an educational MCE Course on the American Disabilities Act. The course gave REALTORS® a better understanding of the federal civil rights law, ADA.

"The course on the American Disabilities Act was important to Anita and I because it brought our attention to the most sensitive and ethical ways to deal with clients and employees with disabilities," said Marilyn Jo Smith.

Smith and Noles, who took over the REM/AX midland office in March of 1994, have developed a strong market presence in the Midland/Odessa area. The Re/Max of Midland office has 24 top producing, highly qualified sales associates to service residential and commercial needs in the area.

There are 105 RE/MAX offices across the state of Texas to service real estate needs.

Mortgage shopping pays off

Peggy Strong, CRS, GRI
Chaparral Realtors

"Shop till You Drop" will definitely pay off for you in making that final analysis for your home mortgage. Purchasing a home is typically one of the largest if not the largest investment a Buyer makes and it only makes sense to shop for the best mortgage. A myriad of details and considerations come into play when determining the best way to enter the mortgage market. Perhaps at one time it was as simple as deciding between FHA, VA, or Conventional. Pour into the formula an Adjustable Rate Mortgage (ARM) and manipulate the time (typically 15 or 30 years). Today's market presents exciting new and innovative methods well worth your time to investigate. Each and every lender has different products arriving daily almost, and not every lender supports every program. I hope you find the following tips helpful in your decision. Please note that they represent literally the "tip" of the iceberg in the new age of mortgage financing and the rates and fees do differ between lenders.

1. Lock & Shop: Lock in a Rate before you shop for a home. A 1% rate increase means you qualify for 8.6% less loan - and the home you love may move out of reach. If rates drop before closing, you can float down to a lower rate. Standard lock-in is protected for 75 days with extensions available for upfront fees. The shorter the lock period, the lower your rate.

2. Get preapproved before you submit an offer! Cash buyers win in bidding wars and often get better prices on their homes. Gain bargaining power with a preapproval subject to obtaining an appraisal and survey on a specific property.

3. Choose an ARM if you plan to have the loan 4 years of less. Even if rates rise an adjustable rate mortgage is a better deal than a 30 year fixed rate loan if you plan to be in the house only a few years. ARM rates start 2.5% to 3.5% below fixed rate loans. The savings in the early years may make up for rate increases later. Windows of opportunities exist to fix the rate at specific times for reasonable fees. Attractive ARM's exist on yearly, 5 or 10 year adjustments. Incredible!

4. Consider a 15 year loan to build a nest egg... for retirement or education. If you borrowed $100,000 at today's rate a 15 year loan would save you $106,000 in interest for $185 a month more than a 30 year loan.

5. Avoid paying points if you plan to move soon... A point is 1% of the loan amount paid at closing. If you borrowed $100,000 and paid 2 points ($2,000) to reduce the rate 1/2%, it would take over 5 years to recover the cost of the points through payment savings.

6. An extra $25 a month... paid to principal would save you $22,872 and knock 2.6 years off the term of your loan. That's if you borrowed $100,000 for 30 years at 8%. Ask for details, but generally speaking, an extra payment per year applied directly to principal can reduce a 30 year mortgage 15-18 years and save thousands and thousands of dollars.

7. Buy and Renovate with 1 Loan! Incorporate the improvements into your home mortgage at a fixed rate. No limit on improvements.

8. New Construction Programs: Permanent and interim financing in a one-time closing upfront...WOW! Buyer can take advantage of today's interest rates and may choose to make interest only payments during first 12 months.

So many choices, what's a buyer to do? Call the Realtor of your choice for the roadmap to guide you through a successful and rewarding experience with a qualified experience with a qualified lender that can match your needs perfectly!

Low interest rates are key to lowest prices

Should you buy a home now?

The home buying consumer asks, "Should I buy a home today?" The answer is a simple "Yes!"

Let's look at some of the benefits of home ownership. Besides fulfilling the basic needs of shelter, prestige and pride of ownership, homeowners also enjoy:

- Security and privacy.
- A possible hedge against inflation
- Investment - with each monthly payment you own more of your home. With improvements you can possibly add top the investment value.
- Cash equity - the dollars you put into your mortgage are invested to hopefully keep pace with inflation and re-cooped at the time of sale.
- Credit - by owning a home you establish financial credibility.
- Tax advantages - real estate taxes and the interest on your mortgage are deductible from your income tax.
- Financial independence - your personal financial program can be built around your ownership of a home.

To Buy opr Not to Buy?

The price of new and resale homes has generally increased ever since the mid 1940's. Delaying the purchase of a home simply allows prices to go higher.

Interest rates are always a buyer's concern. The consumer asks the question, "Why don't I just wait until the interest rates come down and then I'll buy?" While there have been interest rate declines, overall, interest has steadily increased over the past 35 years.

The answer then, is yes, you should buy now so you can realize the lowest possible price and the lowest possible interest rate on a home. If interest rates decrease substantially, homeowners can refinance a home to a lower interest rate.

Interest rate increases:

1/4% = add $.020 per thousand per month on a 30 year mortgage.

1% = adds $0.80 per thousand

TIME IS MONEY!
Waiting to buy could cost you money!

Varying appraisals raise questions; answers presented

Ruth Young
Re/Max of Midland

Appraisal values can very considerably according to purpose of instructions given from the person who orders the appraisal. Appraisals can be done for securing a new loan, for refinancing, for foreclosure, for estate value, for interim financing, for relocation or many other purposes.

Q - "Why didn't I get credit for my custom drapes?"

A - The appraiser estimates value, not cost. Therefore, the cost of capital improvements usually does not add dollar for dollar value. Which amenities would a prudent buyer be willing to pay for?

Q - "Why is my refinancing appraisal higher than my relocation appraisal?"

A - The refinancing appraisal does not include a forecasting adjustment. The bank needs to support historical market prices and not the reality of selling the property in the upcoming market.

Q - "Why is my appraisal so low when the house down the street sold higher last week?"

A - There could be many reasons. To answer, we need to know what the house down the street is like; what is its condition; whether the price you know about is the asking or the sales price; and whether there were concessions built into the price or why was the seller selling.

Q - "Why is their appraised value lower than the price my agent believes I'll get?"

A. You need more communication with your agent and to thoroughly discuss the broker's market analysis. If the real estate agent has had relocation training and knows ahead of time what the instructions from the Relocation firm will be to appraiser on value, time adjustments, condition, concessions, etc. the value should be closer. Most realtors are not appraisers. An appraisal is one persons opinion of value. Probably two appraisals won't be the same value either, although they are done for the same purpose.

Q - Is there more tendency to forecast down than up?"

A - There is no incentive for an appraiser to do so. Relocation appraisers are evaluated on how close their value estimate was to the ultimate sales price, and receive business based on their results.

Q - "How does the appraiser know the interior appeal/condition of other homes on sale in the area?"

A - By investigation; the appraiser will interview people, such as real estate agents, who have been in the interior at the time of the sale.

Prices gain

After falling briefly below the $17 level, prices rebounded to just over $17.50 on the New York Mercantile Exchange late in the week.

Prices, which had been pressured by an easing of tensions in the Persian Gulf and by concerns about oversupplies of energy products, recovered amid reports from the American Petroleum Institute of lower crude inventories and a reduction in refinery production.

Also boosting prices late in the week was a surge in gasoline futures following the break in a major gasoline pipeline between the Gulf Coast and the East Coast.

November contracts for delivery of West Texas Intermediate closed late in the week at $17.54 a barrel. The posted price rose to $16 a barrel.

Boosting its image with those concerned about the environment, U.S. oil and gas producers are increasingly participating in a program to convert unused offshore oil platforms into permanent artificial reefs.

Rig activity

Permian Basin drilling activity picked up while U.S. activity remained unchanged during the week ended October 14, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count rose four to 114, down from 132 a year ago.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active county in the Basin with 22 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 12 rigs and Midland County with ine rigs.

Natiowide, the rig count was unchanged at 828 for the week. A year earlier the rig count wa 860.

BOB LEIBROCK: TOP HAND

Profile of a Top Hand

■ Robert M. Leibrock, a versatile oilman that has played a big hand in the Texas oil industry, will be honored this week as the PBPA Top Hand.

By Linda Bond

There are two things you notice right away about Robert M. Leibrock First, he is a cautious man, choosing his words and his actions carefully. Second, he has taken some chances a cautious man wouldn't — and come up wildly successful.

On the prudent side, Leibrock is a petroleum engineer, a member of a profession which thrives on studying intricate details and laying extensive plans. He likes a safe haven — he and his family have lived in Midland since 1953 and his office has been located in the Wilco Building since 1970.

On the reckless side, Leibrock has never been afraid to rush in where wise men didn't see any opportunity. Perhaps his "look before you leap" attitude has made his far-flung ventures succeed.

He followed the trail of exploration as far as Canada, and even further to Australia. When everyone else was buying up land at the southern end of Big Escambia Creek in Alabama, Leibrock and his partner defied the popular trend. They drilled in exactly the opposite end and found a major sour gas condensate field that contained about 1.56 trillion cubic feet of raw gas. Its ultimate recovery is estimated at approximately 140 million BOE.

Leibrock has had oil and gas success stories all over the globe, but he counts his participation in community service in Midland as one of his most important jobs.

This dichotomy has made him one of the most valued men in the area's oil business. Friday, October 28, at Midland's Petroleum Club, his peers will honor Leibrock with the Top Hand Award of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Leibrock wasn't born in Texas, but he got here as soon as he could. After starting college in Conway, Arkansas, he found his calling in petroleum engineering at the University of Texas in Austin.

"When I was in school I didn't put forth serious efforts until my junior and senior years," he said. "I played football and baseball and that was far more interesting to me than schoolwork. Engineering didn't occur to me until I got through the preparatory work, then I developed a keen interest in it."

He had just gotten started as a trainee with Stanolind Oil and Gas (now AMOCO) in Pampa when Oldtime trucking.

Kelley McClaskey is a third generation crude oil hauler, who wanted to latch on to his roots by rennovating this 1927 Model T, crude oil transport truck, shown here at the Oil Show. McClaskey's grandfather started the family business in the Kansas oil fields near El Dorado, and that's where he found this model. He bought the dilapidated vehicle for $1,200 and spent $9,800 restoring it. The early crude oil transport was capable of hauling only 10 barrels of oil at a time. Oil was pumped into and out of the tank, by jacking up a wheel

"The oil patch has always done deals by networking," says Gary Boyd, director of conventions and expositions for Midland-based Petroleum Listing Service.

This, he added, is the main reason why networking will be the focus of the Annual Deal-Makers Convention, sponsored by PLS and held Monday through Wednesday at the JW Marriot Hotel in Houston.

Boyd said between 300 and 400 are expected to attend, and companies are already sending summary lists of properties they wish to acquire or divest.

A number of keynote speakers have been booked, including Jerry Jones, owner of the Dallas Cowboys professional football team as well as Midland oilman Clayton Williams.

The convention opens Monday evening with a 6:30 p.m. keynote address by Carole Keeton Rylander, Republi-

Iraqi sanctions are key to industry survival

A week ago we reported that Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen would visit King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and that one of the items on the agenda would be oil prices. We further noted that the Saudis may want to raise the price of oil, to help with its pressing financial problems. That would have been good news.

Bentsen is back from that trip and the news is confusing and probably leans more to gloom than good.

In a private meeting with Ray Plank, chairman of Apache Corp., Robert O. Anderson, chairman of Hondo, and Larry Strahan, president of People for an Energy Policy, Bentsen did not offer much encouragment for higher oil prices, but made it plain that there was tremendous pressure on the United States to lift sanctions against Iraq.

Bentsen told the oil policy group that if Iraq were allowed to start selling oil again that it would put another 4 million barrels a day on the market.

"Unless the Saudis make significant production cuts, lifting sanctions could drive oil prices to the bottom," Strahan said.

Strahan, Ray Plank, Roger Plank and Anderson were there to see Bentsen about obtaining Treasury records, including the 1983 study the Reagan administration used to take oil prices lower. Discussion of oil prices was strictly forbidden for legal reasons. Also, the content of Bentsen's private meeting with King Fahd was not subject to scrutiny.

About the Fahd meeting, Bentsen would only say that he went there to talk to the Saudis about getting their financial house in order.

Among some of the suggestions Bentsen left with the Saudis were: improve trade balances and privitize some utilities instead of running them at a deficit. Bentsen also said that he suggested to the Saudis that they establish a more representative price for gasoline, which now sells 23 cents a gallon in the kingdom.

That's the official line. But one would have to be pretty dense to think that Bentsen went to Saudia Arabia just to deliver an economics lesson to the king. One can only suppose, but it would be a pretty safe supposition that oil prices and sanctions against Iraqi were top items on the agenda.

"It is hard to conceive that the U.S. Secretary of Treasury and the King of Saudia Arabia had a meeting and did not discuss oil prices," says Gordon Moody, publisher of an energy newletter published by Bell Helicopter and circulated widely in the Middle East.

In so many words, Bentsen told the Houston oil group that tremendous pressure was being put on the administration — by China, France and Russia — to lift oil-import sanctions against Iraq. And he assured them that if it happened it would not be good for the U.S. oil industry.

"We are walking very cautiously, because of Russia's involvement," Bentsen said.

Russia wants the sanctions lifted because Iraq owes it $60 billion, and cannot pay it without oil revenues. Also, there is speculation that Russia wants to obtain a position in the Middle East — to form relationships with other

HAND: Bob Leibrock honored as Top Hand

World War II broke out and he became a Sergeant Major in the US Army Corps of Engineers in the Pacific theatre. When he came back to the States in 1946, Stanolind was glad to take him back. First, he worked as a research and reservoir engineer in Tulsa, where he met and married Prudie. A real trouper, she traveled with him throughout the southwest in a panel truck while he did experimental work. She went with him to Lubbock and Fort Worth when he was a reservoir engineer and packed up one more time to Midland when he was transferred as a district engineer.

"I initially hoped Midland would be just another stop with Stanolind," he said. "And it would have been but after we had lived here a couple of years we decided the living conditions in Midland far exceeded any place we had ever lived and the school system was better so we made it our home. Then it became apparent that I could do better as an independent than with Stanolind. So George Landreth and I went into consulting. The oil industry was in the doldrums as it frequently is. Oil was $2.50 to $3 a barrel, which seems incredible now, but people were still actively exploring at that time."

Their partnership burgeoned and they were joined by Roy Campbell and later Henry Calloway.

"I would say that when we elected to discontinue consulting activities and become independent operators, we certainly did so with some degree of trepidation and a feeling of uncertainly," Leibrock admitted. "There was no assurance that we would be successful. One thing that helped more than anything else was that we were not only primarily petroleum engineers, but to a degree we were all reservoir engineers.

"We had all had some geology in school, and one of the great things about Stanolind was that the engineers took over development of oil fields once they were discovered. Because of that we had the opportunity to have a hands-on feel of geology. It worked well for everybody because it freed up the geologists to look for more fields and the engineers had the opportunity to develop the fields."

When asked if it seemed that his petroleum possibilities seemed unlimited back in 1955, Leibrock laughed and shook his head.

"The oil business never did seem like it was unlimited to me. To be successful you have always had to be very careful. Initially we were not really wildcatters. We were much more interested in the prospect of extending the field limits of an existing field rather than a rank wildcat. Later on when we were somewhat successful and perhaps a little more adventuresome, we stepped out and drilled what could be called true wildcats."

Then Leibrock's adventuresome side kicked in.

"After you work in a given petroleum provence for a given period of time, you think you've exhausting all the possibilities in the area," he explained. "Then you think you need to look somewhere else. It's completely analogous to 'The grass is greener,' which is not true. A lot of our attempts to find oil and gas were not based on a careful in-depth evaluation to this area."

The first far-flung project was Olds, Ltd, in Alberta, Canada from 1961-64.

"The one thing that distinguished exploration in Alberta from the Permian Basin is that we could still obtain tremendous blocks of acreage through farmouts and acquisition of Crown lands. In this instance we got a farm-out of 60,000 acres from a major oil company, and by drilling a few locations we proved up approximately 270 bcf of raw gas reserves (190 bcf-sales gas), 6,700,000 bbls of condensate and 1,260,000 long tons of sulfur for a total reserve figure of approximately 21 million bbls of oil equivalent (BOE)."

"I initially hoped Midland would be just another stop with Stanolind. And it would have been but after we had lived here a couple of years we decided the living conditions in Midland far exceeded any place we had ever lived...

Bob Leibrock

The figures from Canada were good, but being so far from Texas was "a big negative from the standpoint of being away from my family." Even worse from the family standpoint was his next venture in Australia.

Leibrock was a managing partner with Lakefield Company, formed to operate cattle stations in the Cape York Peninsula of Queensland, Australia.

"We took fewer trips to Australia but the duration of the trips were longer than flying to Canada. We couldn't justify running down there for a week."

Like all his ventures, Leibrock approached Australia cautiously.

"Before we got involved in farming and ranching and elected to obtain leases on the cattle stations, we made a serious attempt to evaluate the economic potential of grazing and agriculture in Queensland. We felt we had talked to enough qualified Australian and American scientists, agronomists and cattle operators who had looked at this and written lengthy reports and technical papers. So we didn't go in blindly.

We had a good feel of what they said, but as far as the farming phase was concerned, it was far more unpredictable than we thought. For example, that they would have a rainy season was predictable, but the variation within any rainy season was unpredictable and could vary radically.

We were arrogant to think because we had to some degree mastered petroleum engineering and some geologic problems that we could master cattle ranching in Australia. I'd have to say that our ranching venture was a mistake and not successful. Strangely enough since our project, there have been a half dozen projects in the Australian tropics, which have without exception failed."

If Leibrock found he was not cut out to be a rancher, he at least succeeded in what he did well. While there he headed an exploration company which ultimately resulted in proving up approximately 600 million tons of bauxite in Queensland.

Oil and gas investor Arlen Edgar was a manager for the partnership at that time. He reminisced, "What impressed me was that Bob had been in Australia only a short time when he realized the timing was not right for independents to undertake oil and gas deals. So he looked into other natural resources. He got into ranching and even took in shrimp fishing and mineral exploration. Incidentally, he tried New Guinea but he was ahead of his time there and drilled a very expensive dry hole. The Australian shrimp fishing and ranching didn't work out, but his mineral exploration led to the discovery of a world class bauxite deposit. It was quite an achievement."

Edgar continued, "I think Bob has unusual powers of concentration and the ability to focus on the subject at hand without distraction. Roy Campbell used to say if you locked Bob in a room with a book on any subject, he would emerge an expert on that subject. Bob's integrity is unquestioned. I've never heard anyone say anything bad about him, and in this business you hear everything."

Through all his adventures, his wife Prudie has been a willing partner.

"My life with Bob has been fun, exciting and educational. While our sons were growing up and he was climbing the ladder we were left alone some of the time, and the boys kept me busy and out of trouble. Since I was a child of the Great Depression, I was somewhat prepared for the supposed hardships. Traveling with Bob in the panel truck in the early days and cold showers in the outback of Australia were matters of little consequence."

She continued with a laugh, "Bob always seemed to be out of town when disorder was the order of the day. Once during a redecorating project the painter said to me, 'We've been here a week and I haven't seen your husband.' I replied, 'He's in Canada.' He said, 'That just goes to show that men are still smarter then women to get away when something like this is going on!'"

The biggest find of his life came with partner Charles E. Marsh II, when they formed their company, Mallard Exploration. Together the two men discovered the sour gas condensate field called Big Escambia Creek, covering about 17,000 acres in southwest Alabama and containing approximately 1.56 trillion cubic feet of raw gas.

"Exxon and other majors and some of the small independents were directing all their efforts to the other end of what was a relatively large geologic feature extending from the northern portion of the Florida Panhandle up through Southwestern Alabama. Their attention was focused on the Florida portion and no one was paying much attention to the Alabama trend. It was a case where our timing was good. We drilled the discovery well. It was sort of exciting but done with considerable apprehension because oil was selling for $3 a barrel and the price of elemental sulfur was depressed. When we did the preliminary test and made rough calculations, it raised some doubt if it was economical to develop. There was extremely sour gas aside from the hydrocarbon components of well stream.

It was producing 40 percent carbon dioxide and 20 percent hydrogen sulfide. It was very dangerous, and we didn't even know HOW dangerous. All those things were turning over in our heads. Fortunately, by the time we got the plant built and on stream, the price of oil had gone to $9 per barrel and the price of sulphur had increased well up to $100 per long ton. This H_2S stream translated into the recovery of 1000 long tons of elemental sulphur per day."

In a masterful understatement, Leibrock adds, "It was a giant gas condensate field and we felt very good about it."

Since '81, he has been the head of Amerind Oil Company, still in the Wilco Building in downtown Midland. The company's major success has been back here in the Permian Basin, where drilling activities in East Lovington, New Mexico, have resulted in proving up reserves of five million BOE.

Bob and Prudie's son, Robert C., is managing partner of Amerind and brings "a level of energy that was sorely lacking" to the business. The younger Bob now makes almost all of the out of town trips. Their other son, Eric, is in real estate in can candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission.

On Tuesday, the first full day of the convention, it opens with a prayer breakfast featuring Dr. Ed Young of Houston's Second Baptist Church.

A variety of panel discussions and presentations are set for throughout the day. The first panel discussion will cover "The Changing Focus of Majors," followed by a second panel discussion, "Strategies for The Nineties: Mergers, Acquisitions & Trades."

Presentations include "Acquisition Pitfalls" by Mark Doering, and "BOE Pricing Analysis" by Strevig & Associates. The third panel discussion covers "Trends in Third Party Evaluations."

The final two presentations of the day are "The 1031 Tax Exchange" by D. King and "TradeBank," by invitation.

The day concludes with the Pelzi Awards Banquet, featuring Jerry Jones, who will present the first Pelzi awards for excellence. The awards are geared toward the producing property acquisition and divestiture sector of the oil and gas industry.

Pelzis will go to the Top Five Transactions of 1993; Surprise Deal of the Year; Exploration Play of the Year; Newcomer of the Year; Deal of the Year; Deal-Maker of the Year; and for Special Achievement. Nominees include Parker & Parsley Petroleum, Hunt Oil Co., Louis Dreyfus Natural Gas, LL&E, Anadarko Petroleum Corp., Apache Corp., Arco, Flores & Rucks Inc., Phillips Petroleum, Amoco Production Co., Coda Energy, Cabot Oil & Gas and Sonat.

"The theme of the Pelzis is to award excellence," explained Boyd of PLS.

The final day of the convention begins with a Power Breakfast featuring Gary Karrass of Karrass Seminars. The breakfast is co-sponsored by Tenneco Ventures, a unit of Tenneco Gas. Karrass is a public speaker on negotiation and has held workshops on effective negotiating throughout the country. He will present a primer on effective negotiating during the breakfast. Karrass will hold two sessions on negotiating following the breakfast.

The two Karrass sessions will be followed by a panel discussion on "Acquisitions & Divestitures for the Mega-Independent: Future Plans and Directives."

Following a lunch break, two presentations are scheduled: "Financing Energy Investments" and "The Environment and Acquisitions."

Two final panel discussions are scheduled next, "Capital for the Small Company" and "Sales Strategies."

The final presentation is an open session on "TradeBank."

There will be a variety of exhibits open both days of the convention.

Included in the convention are two golf tournaments, one set for today at Tour 18 and the second for Monday at Cinco Ranch.

"Oil companies spend $500 to $700 sending employees out on day-long excursions looking for properties," observed Boyd. "Here, they can spend the same amount to send someone to the convention, but have access to all these properties."

PITTS: Tangled policy

(From 1E)

Arab countries, that would enable them to impact oil prices — just as the United States does with its relationship with Saudi Arabia. "They want to do a reverse on the Reagan policy," Strahan said.

Certainly 4 million barrels daily of production cannot be kept off the market forever, and Iraq will be allowed back into the market eventually no matter how badly Saddam Hussein misbehaves. But now is not the right time for the U.S. oil industry. Better to wait and let fast-growing demand expand the market a few million barrels more, before bringing Iraq back.

Odds makers in Washington, D.C., are betting that sanctions against Iraq will be lifted after the election. Others disagree.

Despite all the pressure from Russia and others to lift sanctions, Ray Plank says he does not think they will be lifted soon. "It is not in the best interest of the Saudis or the U.S. at this point."

With a $100 billion deficit, Gordon Moody says the Saudis cannot afford to cut production significantly to make up for Iraqi oil coming back into the market. Nor can the United States — banker to Saudi Arabia — afford to let oil prices drop to the point that the Saudis cannot pay their debt, even though a crash in oil prices would be a tremendous economic windfall to the Clinton administration.

More importantly, in the oil-producing states, if Iraq is allowed to produce oil again, without the Saudis and others making substantial production cuts, it could drive oil prices to under $10. Such a price collapse would bring devastation once again to the U.S. oil industry.

Before leaving Bentsen's office, after a one-hour meeting, Robert O. Anderson is reported to have told the secretary in very honest and descriptive terms that the survival of the domestic oil industry was at stake — that it could not stand any more 1986s.

For the sake of the industry, let's hope Bentsen heard him.

MEETINGS

WTGS speaker to discuss area stratigraphy

R. Michael "Mike" Robinson will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's meeting of the West Texas Geological Society. The meeting will be at Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Robinson will speak on "Stratigraphy of the Midland Basin in Regional and Global Context." A new correlation of 85 well logs provides the data for a continuous set of structure and isopach maps covering one square degree of longitude and latitude from 101 degrees to 102 degrees west and 32 to 33 degrees north. A corresponding set of maps showing paleogeography and tectonics relates each of the above maps to its surroundings in the southwest quarter of North America. A further set of maps of the globe then relates the paleogeographic settings to global plate tectonics. The logs were chosen for an even distribution throughout the study area and they illustrate the stratigraphic development of the Midland Basin from the Early Ordovician up to the middle of the Leonardian Stage.

Robinson is the fourth generation of a family of mining and later drilling contractors. Since 1985 he has been in Big Spring with his family's contract drilling company, Robinson Drilling of Texas.

Cost is $7 and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

Computer users compare word processors

The Computer Users Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Tuesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:20 a.m.

Paul Pause' and Dale Mercer of the Permian Basin Graduate Center will speak on "A Wordprocessor Showdown: Wordperfect vs. Word." Microsoft Word v. 6.0 and WordPerfect for Windows v. 6.0 are the two most popular Windows-based word processors. Many companies are considering the questions of upgrading and/or changing platforms. This presentation will provide an opportunity to compare and contrast, side-by-side, in real time, important features and functions of each of thee widely-used applications. The presenters will show how each program handles various creating, editing, formatting and importing tasks, including working with tables, importing spreadsheets and graphics, creating macros etc.

A disk with compressed files containing over two dozen WordPerfect macros, templates and graphic images will be given to each attendee.

Cost is $12 and reservations should be made no later than 9 a.m. Tuesday by calling 686-7329.

E&P waste disposal topic for SPE group

The Environmental Study Group of the Society of Petroleum engineers, will meet Wednesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

A.L. Hickerson of Permian Bring Sales, will speak on "E&P Waste Disposal into Salt Caverns." Hickerson, founder of Permian Brine, will specify which E&P wastes may be pumped into a Texas Railroad Commission-permitted salt cavern at this time and also about the proposed disposal of other E&P waste streams not presently permitted for salt cavern injection

He earned a bachelor's degree in chemical engineering from Oklahoma State University and worked for 20 years for Phillips Petroleum as a petroleum engineer. He formed Permian Brine in 1958.

Cost of the luncheon is $10 per person.

Petroleum accountants schedule meeting

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will meet Wednesday at the Petroleum Club.

The technical session will begin at 5:30 p.m. Steve Chandler and Mike Mullins with Texaco will present "Preparing Existing Properties for Unitization."

Social hour follows at 6 p.m., then dinner at 6:45 p.m. The dinner speaker is to be announced.

SPE group to discuss electronic conversion

The Production Operations Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Bill Elmer of Conoco will discuss "New Oilfield Applications for Electronic Phase Converters/VSDs." Many oilfields are only serviced by single phase electric power as opposed to three-phase power. Consequently, such fields have not been able to easily enjoy the relatively inexpensive and efficient operation of three phase induction motors. New technology has emerged, however, that removes many of the limitations for the use of single phase power in oilfield applications. Elmer will discuss the power conversion process that makes this possible along with several oilfield applications and benefits.

Cost is $8 per person.

Williams Cos. says quarterly earnings triple

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The Williams Cos., Inc. said third-quarter earnings were more than three times higher, due largely to higher telecommunications sales and a new rate structure for natural gas.

Williams reported a net income of $55.6 million, or 51 cents a share, compared with $18 million, or 15 cents a share, in the third quarter of 1993.

Last year's net income was reduced by $15 million because of higher federal income tax rates.

Through the first nine months of 1994, net income was $171.3 million, or $1.57 a share, compared with $179.7 million, or $1.68 a share, for the first three quarters last year.

The largest third-quarter increase of the seven subsidiaries was WilTel. Its operating profit nearly doubled to $44.6 million in the third quarter, primarily due to a higher demand for switched services and continued growth in private line and equipment sales.

Williams sold the network services operations of WilTel for $1.5 billion cash to Jackson, Miss.-based LDDS Communications Inc. The sale is expected to be approved early next year and did not affect this quarter's earnings.

"The third quarter of 1994 surely will be remembered as a time of major change," said Keith Bailey, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

"But the announced sale of the network operations shouldn't obscure the success of our company as a whole or its prospects for providing superior returns to our shareholders in the years ahead," he said.

Bailey said Williams would have about $1.6 billion in after-tax proceeds from the sale, which will be used for energy investments in North America.

One big change that helped third-quarter profits was a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission order that stabilizes natural gas profits throughout the year.

Without the order, implemented in the fourth quarter, Williams Natural Gas Co. profits were high in the first and fourth quarters — the winter months — and significantly lower in the other two quarters.

Williams Natural Gas reported an operating profit of $10.4 million in the third quarter, compared with a loss of $7.4 million in the same period a year ago.

Operating profit for Williams Field Services was up 18 percent to $28.7 million because of higher gathering and processing volumes.

The other subsidiaries reported a net loss for the third quarter.

■ Northwest Pipeline Corp. had an operating profit of $24.1 million, down from $29 million a year ago. The decrease was blamed in part on increased accrual related to rate issues.

■ Kern River Gas Transmission, a Wyoming-to-California pipeline system half-owned by Williams, had $4.9 million in operating profits, down from $8.1 million a year ago, in part because of a rate refund resulting from a settlement with shippers.

■ Williams Pipe Line Co.'s profit was down 20 percent to $12.2 million because of lower transportation rates, among other factors.

■ Williams Energy Ventures had an operating loss of $800,000, compared with a $1.4 million profit a year ago.

Although the WilTel sale is pending, the company is required to report its financial data under discontinued operations.

Program making artificial reefs of offshore platforms takes off

By Alan Sayre
AP Business Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fishermen and recreational divers in the Gulf of Mexico are finding new areas to explore — thanks to the oil industry.

As domestic production moves out of the Gulf and into deeper waters, a program to convert unused offshore oil platforms into permanent artificial reefs is taking off.

For years, the platforms have been popular fishing spots because they naturally attract sea life.

Now, a government program providing financial breaks to companies that turn their oil rigs into new wildlife habitats is prompting corporations to leave their hardware in the Gulf.

"We don't look upon ourselves as a fishery enhancement program. We are a fishery maintenance program," said Rick Kasprzak of the state's Department of Wildlife and Fisheries. "These platforms attract sea life even when they are producing oil and gas."

Reduced domestic drilling coupled with oil companies heading for deeper Gulf waters have, for the first time, resulted in more platforms being taken out of service than put in use, federal officials say.

Removing the platforms, normally required after production is finished, can cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. With some 3,800 oil and gas production platforms in state and federal waters, the potential cost is enormous.

But the artificial reef program is simple, says Villere Reggio, a recreational planner for the Minerals Management Service.

'We don't look upon ourselves as a fishery enhancement program. We are a fishery maintenance program. These platforms attract sea life even when they are producing oil and gas.'

Rick Kasprzak, Louisiana Department of Wildlife and Fisheries

The government and a petroleum company get together and estimate how much the firm will save by not having to take down a platform. Half the savings goes to a state-administered trust fund. The money is used for fisheries research, maintaining buoys around the platforms and monitoring the reefs.

"If you save $1 million, you send $500,000 to the artificial reef program," Reggio said.

The program also can't hurt the oil industry's tarnished image regarding the environment. The industry faced a public relations nightmare following the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska, which fouled 1,500 miles of pristine shoreline.

"It helps the Gulf environmentally and, obviously, we benefit financially," said Larry Wall, a spokesman for the Louisiana Mid Continent Oil and Gas Association, an industry trade group.

The artificial reef program, which began in the early 1980s, predates the 1989 Exxon Valdez spill.

Currently, 44 platforms have been officially turned into reefs off the Louisiana coast, the Department of Wildlife and Fisheries' Kasprzak said. About 15 more are scheduled to be converted by the end of the year.

The converted platforms vary in distance, from 21 miles offshore to 117 miles offshore in water 91 feet to 345 feet deep, Reggio said. The rigs-to-reefs program also overcomes some environmental obstacles.

One of the most tried-and-true methods of removing old platforms — explosives — has fallen into disfavor in recent years because of the potential for killing marine mammals. Platform removal was stopped for a time in 1987 because of dying sea turtles.

"We have to go through all sorts of precautions when we remove a structure with explosives to make sure we don't hurt endangered species," Reggio said.

Although most of the equipment from a platform can be salvaged, the steel structure is rarely good for much besides junk. After the drilling equipment and all portions of the structure above water are removed and towed to shore, the remaining underwater portion becomes a reef.

Sometimes operators will even cut additional holes in the structure so it makes a better habitat for fish. Buoys are used to warn vessels of the artificial reef's presence.

And what happens when the platforms completely rust through and need to be removed? Officials are not overly concerned. Studies have shown that the steel structures will last for up to 300 years, Kasprzak said.

DI Industries turns attention south to Central, South American markets

N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — DI Industries, the Houston firm that is the nation's second-largest onshore contract oil and gas driller, is looking southward for opportunity.

The company has announced that it will focus on Central and South America in developing new markets.

These foreign markets represent "tremendous opportunities for growth and for business that are significantly more profitable than the environment that continues to exist in the United States," the company said in a statement last week.

A $10 million financing commitment from a foreign bank will assist in the effort, which involves both acquisitions and internal growth.

The move doesn't mean that DI is abandoning the United States, says Chief Executive Max Dillard. About half its equipment will stay here. DI has 88 oil and gas rigs, 26 of them combination rigs capable of both drilling and well workovers.

DI already has a foothold in foreign countries. Its Argentina division recently signed four additional multiyear contracts with the former state-owned oil company to move four rigs from the United States to add to its three-rig fleet now under contract. Discussions are in progress to move an eighth rig to Argentina.

DI has agreed to purchase a four-rig contractor in Venezuela and is moving two more rigs to that fleet. The acquisition, worth $4 million, is expected to close within two weeks. Half of the purchase price is in cash and half in shares of a new convertible, redeemable preferred stock.

DI also has been awarded, through its 80 percent-owned Central American company, two new geothermal projects in Mexico for an electric utility there. These projects will provide almost $13 million in new revenue during the next 10 months.

The new South and Central America strategy will take DI Industries to $100 million in revenues, Dillard says.

In the last fiscal year, which ended on March 31, the company had revenue of $70.4 million, but a net loss of $2.6 million, or 7 cents per share. It also posted net losses in 1993 and 1992.

The company has survived a very tough business climate, says Don Sanders of Sanders Morris Munday in Houston.

DI's stock, traded on the American Stock Exchange, has "languished" in the $1-per-share range for several years, he says.

Borrowing the $10 million is seen as a major accomplishment by Sanders.

"What we will see now is a company that has the capacity and financial muscle to move forward. They can take advantage of opportunities in Argentina, Venezuela and Mexico — that's where the money can be made," he says.

Scurry yields Canyon Reef discovery

Staff Report

A Canyon Reef discovery has been completed in Scurry County, three miles northeast of Ira.

RUWCO OIL & GAS CORP. potentialed the No. 1 Pedernales Unit to flow 138 barrels of 43.3 graity crude on a 20/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 120 psi. The well flowed from open hole interval 6,927 to 6,938 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 7,100 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,938 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,927 ft.

Location is 47 ft. from north and 1,422 ft. from west lines of Section 153, Block 97, Mrs. Lucy Wilson survey.

The operator has requested a field designation of Lucy Dee (Canyon Reef) for the discovery.

Strawn discovery pumps 118 barrels

GREAT WESTERN ONSHORE has completed a Strawn discovery in Borden County, 4.3 miles northwest of Fluvanna.

On potential test, the No. 1 Jones et ux pumped 118 barrels of crude and 40 Mcfd from perforations 7,894 to 7,898 ft.

Scheduled as an 8,500 ft wildcat, the well was drilled to 8,392 ft. and plugged back to 8,329 ft. with 8-5/8 inch casing set at 3,800 ft.

Location is 1,983 ft. from north and 1,083 ft. from west lines of Section 534, Block 97, H&TC survey.

Delaware reopened in Ward gas field

Delaware gas production has been reopened in the Scott field of Ward County, 5.5 miles southeast of Barstow.

PETRO HUNT CORP. plugged back the No. 1 F.H. Scott State, a former Cherry Canyon gas producer and tested it for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,550 Mcfd from perforations 5,510 to 5,665 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid and fractured with 46,000 lbs. 20/40 sand, 19,000 lbs. 12/20 sand and 60 barrels of frac.

Originally drilled to 6,500 ft., where seven inch casing was set, the well is plugged back to 5,680 ft.

The well topped the Upper Delaware at 4,877 ft. and Cherry Canyon at 6,074 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,546 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from southeast and 9,790 ft. from northeast lines of Section 31, Block 33, H&TC survey.

Howard field gets fifth producer

The Double B (Canyon) field of Howard County has gained its fifth producer with completion of a well surrounded by the field's production, 2.7 miles northeast of Vincent.

LAKEWOOD OPERATING LTD. potentialed the No. 1R Wile E "A" to flow 72 barrels of 45 gravity crude and 131 Mcfd on a 12/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 1,200 psi. The well flowed from open hole interval 7,319 to 7,357 ft.

Total depth is 7,357 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,319 ft.

Location is 2,614 ft. from north and 302 ft. from west lines of Section 59, Block 20, Lavaca Navigation Co. survey.

DEVELOPMENTS/7E

HAND: Highly respected

(From 2E)

Austin.

The only hard part about working with his son is having the same name.

"Bob has a different middle initial," Leibrock said, "And some people who know that call us 'R.M.' and 'R.C.' But only a few people do that. Most people just call us Bob, which creates ongoing problems for the receptionist every day."

Bob the younger counts himself lucky to get a chance to work for his father.

"I thought we would be able to work well together, but it has turned out even better than I expected, thanks to Dad," Bob (R.C.) said. "Our interests are similar, but I have been able to concentrate on many of the operational aspects of the business, letting Dad do what he likes best, exploring for -- and especially finding -- oil and gas."

Old friends such as Roy Campbell are still a part of Leibrock's life.

"I regard as one of the highlights of my career, aside from the Alabama opportunity, has been to serve almost continuously on the Elcor board of directors, for all practical purposes from 1965 to now. Elcor is headed by Roy Campbell, and he's done one of best jobs I've ever had the opportunity to observe in building and doing those things necessary to keep the company growing and at the same time maintain sound financial footing."

Campbell returns the compliment from his Elcor office in Dallas:

"Bob is one of greatest guys I've ever known," he said. "He's a real pleasure to work with and a good friend. He has a quiet sense of humor that not all his acquaintances may be aware of. Nobody catches the humor in a situation more than he does, and if everything is quieted down, you can hear his humorous comment on the subject."

Campbell continued, "Bob's hardworking, honest and effective in any situation. He has the ability to cut through to the essential aspect of any problem or opportunity, communicate what should be done in a way that leaves no doubt, then lead in the execution of the action. I've known Bob for over 40 years and you can always count on him to do what he says he will do. He's an outstanding individual. He's been an excellent member of our Board of Directors. As one of the founders of our company, he's been a top contributor all the way through. Back when we first started working together, I didn't know which path Bob would take but I knew it would be successful. That was obvious to all who knew him. He's truly a unique guy."

Leibrock made his commitment to Midland long ago, and he carries through. He's been a trustee for the Abell-Hanger Foundation since 1979 and is Board president for '94-95. He was on the Midland College board of Trustees from '67-78 and president from '75-77. He has served as Board chair for Memorial Christian Church and on the executive board and vice president of finance for the Buffalo Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America. As overseer for the Scouts' Endowment Trust Fund, he helped the fund increase from $19,000 to over $1.7 million over a 10-year period.

"I think community service is a very important adjunct to your overall approach to daily living," he said. "You have to give something back to the community. I personally think one of the things which has made Midland a great community is the high percentage of people who long ago recognized the importance of community service. That service became a habit with them. I think that's truer here than any place we've ever lived."

Looking ahead, Leibrock said, "Midland has a great future. I think oil and gas exploration will continue to be major factor in assuring the great future for Midland, but we are gradually becoming more diversified, and that diversity will play an important role in assuring the city's future."

As to the future of the oil industry, Midland's Top Hand said, "The opportunities to find quality reservoirs are diminishing with time. It's becoming very difficult to develop quality prospects. On the other hand, with the restructuring we're seeing in the oil business as the majors are downsizing and de-emphasizing on-shore programs, I feel opportunities for independents in the Permian Basin have been enhanced considerably. Those independents who take advantage of modern day exploration tools or techniques should be well-positioned to continue to find oil in this area for some time to come.

"Without question the advent of 3-D seismic has to some degree revolutionized our approach to exploration. However, 3-D surveys should be supplemented in every possible way with other sources of information, using good reservoir data to start with and full knowledge of the stratigraphic factors which can make 3-D interpretation very difficult. I feel that with these new exploration techniques and improvement in drilling and production tools, a person who works hard at it can successfully exploit the low reserve areas -- and I think that will be true in this area for a long time to come."

Looking back over his career, Leibrock says, "Obviously I regret the failures and wish had I had avoided those, but as long as success outnumbers failure, you have a fairly good chance of coming out on top. To me success is having the ability to do those things which allow you to live a balanced life in your occupation, along with whatever contribution you can make to your community and family."

His advice? "Hone in on the things that need to be done and don't waste time on areas that don't offer much possibility of successes."

In other words, take risks, but cautiously, cautiously. Like Robert M. Leibrock has in his exciting, successful lifetime.

BRIEFS

RRC fines two Midland oil companies

By Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Railroad Commission has fined two Midland oil companies for unplugged well and pollution violations this past week.

Forjack Operating Co. and Fairchild Petroleum Corp. agreed to pay the panalties without admitting any violation of commission rules.

Forjack was assessed a $3,000 fine for failing to cement production casing downhole and for failing to dewater and backfill three unlined pits on the Meadows Ranch lease in Crockett County.

Fairchld was ordered to pay $500 for one unplugged well on the Blackwood lease in Runnels County.

The commission has assessed $3.81 million in penalties this year, compared with $2.33 million during the same period in 1993, which was a record year for abandoned well and pollution fines.

Parker & Parsley plans public offering

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. has announced the proposed public offering of 4 million shares of its common stock at an initial public offering to be determined based on market price at the commencement of the offering.

The prospective managing underwriters for the offering will be Salomon Brothers Inc., CS First Boston, Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., Goldman, Sachs & Co., Smith Barney Inc. and their international affiliates. The prospective underwriters for the offering also will have options to purchase up to an aggregate of 600,000 additional shares of common stock from Parker & Parsley solely to cover over-allotments.

A copy of the preliminary prospectus supplement and prospectus related to the offering may be obtained from Parker & Parsley upon written or telephone request to Lon C. Kile, vice president, Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 303 W. Wall, Suite 101, Midland Texas 79701; telephone 915/683-4768.

Halliburton to sell compression business

DALLAS (AP) — Halliburton Co. says it has reached a definitive agreement to sell its natural gas compression business to New Orleans-based Tidewater Inc. for $205 million.

The sale, subject to regulatory approval, is expected to be completed by the end of 1994, Halliburton officials said.

Dallas-based Halliburton's natural gas compression business had 1993 revenues of about $50 million.

Halliburton is a diversified company, which provides energy services and products, industrial and marine engineering and construction services and property and casualty insurance.

Tidewater is a diversified energy company that owns the world's largest fleet of vessels serving the international offshore oil and gas industry.

Union Texas buys Fina stake in Britannia field

HOUSTON (AP) — A London subsidiary of Union Texas Petroleum Holdings Inc. has agreed to acquire Fina's estimated 11 percent interest in the Britannia natural gas and condensate field in the U.K. North Sea for some $189 million.

Union Texas Petroleum Limited said it reached the agreements with Fina Exploration Ltd. and Fina Petroleum Development Ltd.

Under the deal, Union Texas will pay Fina some $158 million for interests in three blocks. Union Texas also will pay some $31 million more to Fina when the United Kingdom's Department of Trade and Industry approves the Britannia development program.

The deal needs regulatory approval. Two of the block purchases are expected to close shortly, while the third needs approval from other interest holders in the block.

The Britannia field will be operated by a joint venture between Conoco U.K. Ltd. and Chevron U.K. Ltd. Union Texas' share of development costs for Britannia is estimated at $250 million.

Enron announces plans to form new company

HOUSTON (AP) — Enron Corp. says it wants to sell $200 million worth of stock in a new company for Enron's projects in developing countries. Enron will retain a majority interest.

Forming Enron Global Power & Pipelines would give the Houston energy company a way to recoup some of its investments in the foreign projects, analysts said.

The new company's operating assets would include interests in two power plants in the Philippines, a power plant in Guatemala and a natural gas pipeline system in Argentina.

Under the proposed offering, 8.7 million common shares in Enron Global Power & Pipelines will be issued, with underwriters able to issue an additional 1.3 million shares. The new company's shares will be traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Enron plans to retain between 52 percent and 58 percent of the company's shares, depending on how many are issued.

Enron may use the proceeds to pay down a portion of its $3.2 billion in debt as of June 30, a company spokeswoman told the Houston Chronicle in Wednesday's editions. The company also could use the cash to invest in other projects.

"It's a way of diversifying their risk, recovering some of their investments in their foreign operations and spreading them around more diversified investments," said William Christman, an analyst at Moody's Investors Service in New York.

In addition, paying down debt could improve Enron's credit rating.

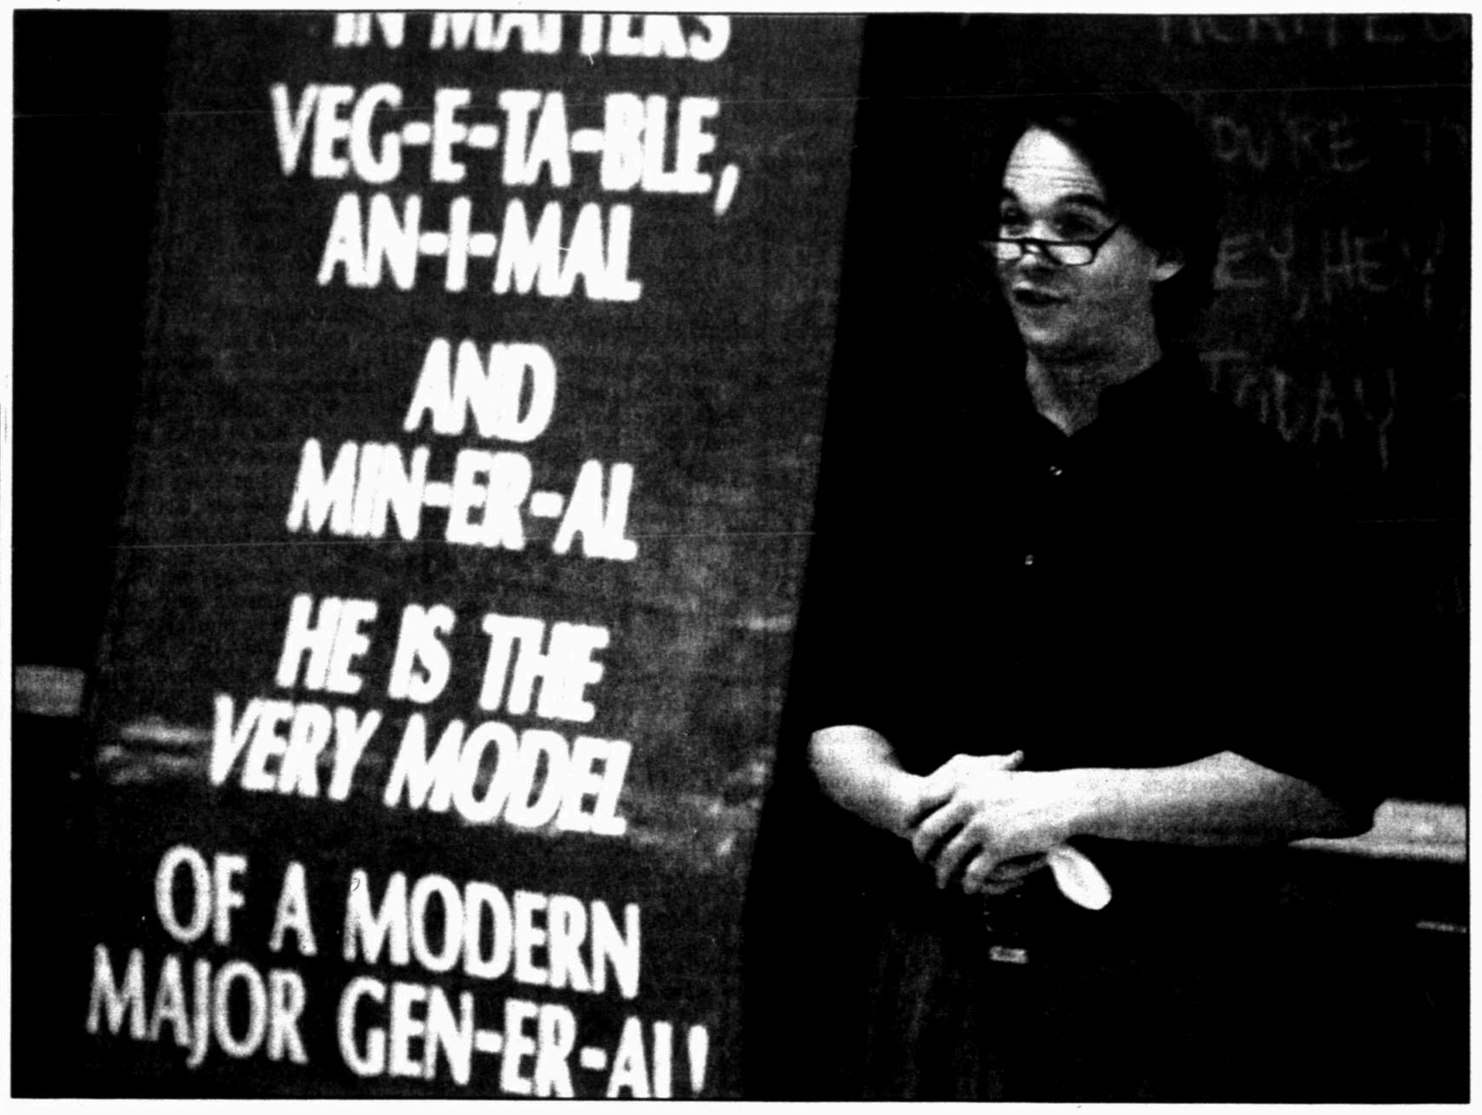
Eddie Coker played the major general, right, while he entertained choir students at Midland High School. Coker, who performed here earlier this year, is to return for the Junior League of Midland Inc.'s Festival of Trees. He will perform at "Breakfast with Santa's Elves" Nov. 12. Coker performed at Midland High School, below, when he was in Midland last spring.



'Smitten by children'

Baritone Eddie Coker enjoys doing concerts for youth

Eddie Coker was in trouble. His sword was stuck, wedged tightly into a space from which he could not free it.

"I was playing a British soldier in an opera," the baritone said, recalling an episode that happened during the early years of the Dallas Lyric Opera.

"British soldiers carry their swords where they swing toward the front. It got stuck between a concrete wall and a wooden set piece propped up on stage with weights.

"I decided to break the sword off between the concrete wall and the set piece."

To Coker's surprise, the sword did not break.

"The set wasn't a piece that could have hurt anybody. It collapsed on top of us," Coker said.

The audience cracked up, Coker said. "They never knew it was me, but we all knew."

The set remained on the floor for the remainder of the first act. The disaster did not stop the opera.

"We kept going. We didn't miss a beat."

There's no fear Coker will have a repeat performance here Nov. 12 when he performs for the Junior League of Midland Inc.'s Festival of Trees.

"It's not opera; it's not opera at all," said Coker, referring to what he has planned for his children's concert here.

"I have eight shows that I do for children. Three of them are opera and five are not. The one that I'm going to be performing at Festival of Trees is not.

"I don't hide behind props and gimmicks. What's special about my concerts for children is their participation. I try to sing really good music for children and not only encourage them to listen, but encourage them to participate.

"And, for the parents, I call it the 'Nutcracker syndrome.' Everybody loves watching 3-year-olds coming out in the 'Nutcracker' in tutus. And the looks on faces of the parents as they watch their kid on stage with me, possibly for the first time, is pretty priceless."

Coker will perform during the "Breakfast With Santa's Elves," set for 8:30 Nov. 12 at Midland Center.

Breakfast is being provided courtesy of Midland/Odessa Burger King. Children must be accompanied by an adult.

Admission is $8 for breakfast and the concert and $5 for the concert only.

Tickets for breakfast and the concert may be purchased between 9:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at Junior League headquarters. Tickets for the concert may be purchased then or at the door.

Coker, who attended Southern Methodist University on a vocal scholarship, writes the music he performs.

"I do rap, country, big band and acoustic rock and these are all songs that I have written," said Coker, who is working on his third album and expects it to be out in February.

The album will include new characters as well as the familiar ones. His other tapes are "The Happy One" and "Say Hello!"

Jackyl is dedicated to rock

Chain saw-wielding front man Jesse James Dupree calls Jackyl a band dedicated to rock 'n' roll.

"Right now the most important thing to the group is that we make people aware there's a new album out there and stress how important it is for people out there to support rock 'n' roll," Dupree said.

"Every time they play a Jackyl record, it's a strike-out against this politically correct music that seems to be the hip thing today.

"The viable music these days has gotten so . . . serious and so sensitive, too oversensitive, it's just drained all the elements that rock 'n' roll should be," he said.

"Rock 'n' roll should be a little crazy, a little destructive, a little dangerous, a hell of a lot louder than it's been being. And we're ready to jerk it way past center in the direction that it all originated."

Permian Basin residents will have the opportunity to sample some Jackyl Wednesday when the band opens for ZZ Top at Odessa's Ector County Coliseum.

"It's entertaining," Dupree said of the group's live stage show.

"People who come to the show are part of the show. We demand a lot from the audience, as much as they demand from us. We have a good time. We try to make sure we give people triple their money's worth."

Admission is $24.50. Tickets for the 8 p.m. show may be purchased at Midland Sound and Odessa's Endless Horizons.

"Come and be a part of the show, be a part of the night," said Dupree, who defines Jackyl fans as having a "good ol' boy" and "good ol' girl" state of mind and not necessarily falling into a specific age group.

"You will be entertained. I'm not saying you will love it. You may hate it, but you will be entertained."

Part of the entertainment comes from watching Dupree play a chain saw. The "instrument" made its debut some years back and became a permanent part of the show.

"You've got to entertain yourself first and in the process entertain the people," said Dupree, recalling the first time he brought a chain saw on stage.

"We just had a chain saw that I carried into the bar one night, and we were doing some destruction, and we broke into this blues tune, and I picked the chain saw up and I started playing it. It just seemed to work."

He has been injured more than once by his "instrument."

Jackyl, above, opens for ZZ Top, right, at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Ector County Coliseum. Tickets, $24.50, are available at Midland Sound, Endless Horizons in Odessa and the coliseum on the day of the show.

David Allan Coe is to perform at 9 p.m. Saturday at Ector County Coliseum. Advance tickets — priced at $12 — are available at Dollar Western Wear in Midland and Odessa and at Endless Horizons and Dos Amigos in Odessa. On the day of the show, tickets are $15 at the coliseum.

David Allen Coe keeps on playing

Neither hurricanes nor fires have stopped David Allan Coe from playing his music.

"I very seldom have anything funny that happens to me . . . I just have things that are terrible that happen to me."

Things "like the microphones just not working halfway through your show, or your amplifiers going off or your sound shutting down or the building catching on fire."

He said that when he was performing at the old Gilley's Club in Pasadena, "the building caught on fire. I was also playing there during a hurricane, and it blew the roof off the place."

During the hurricane and fire he "just kept on playing" and in the fire incident he kept on playing "until they said, 'You've got to get out of here.' "

He followed directions then because they made sense. But this "country outlaw" is seldom if ever in a frame of mind to follow

COKER: Singer enjoys doing shows for youth

lander whose family moved to Dallas when he was 3 — played football, basketball and baseball and dreamed of becoming a professional baseball player.

He first began singing in high school when he joined the school choir his sophomore year. At the time, he considered himself "a closet singer."

"Most of my athletic friends weren't so much down on singing, it just wasn't the athletic thing to do."

His attitude toward a career as a singer changed when a director in college told him athletes made the best actors and theorized that it was because they had received so much training in working as a team.

"It became an athletic challenge; I basically had my sport," Coker said.

Coker made his professional debut with the Lyric Opera of Dallas in 1981; since then he has performed in more than 25 leading roles in opera and musical theater throughout the United States and Europe.

"I was lucky to get a lot of leading roles very early in my career," said Coker, who made "it all make sense sense financially" by having a window-washing company and waiting tables.

"I definitely did my stint with the chorus, but very quickly I was given leading roles to do."

He is working on a variety television show for families and has teamed his efforts with Crescent Films.

"I've raised some of the money and we are very optimistic that the rest of it will be raised in six weeks," Coker said.

Raising the money only accomplishes part of the project.

"First of all, you have to make a pilot and you have to sell it. It's almost like a painting. You can't sell a painting until you paint it. So, we've got to get the television pilot finished."

The two companies are hoping to begin shooting in late November or early December, Coker said.

Since his performances here last spring, Coker married Ballet Dallas dancer Michele Zimmerman.

"It's wonderful," he said of marriage.

Coker still does around 200 shows a year for children and was last in Midland this summer at Pages & Prints Bookstore. His first performance for children is what hooked him on creating and performing more shows for young people.

"I got in a room with about 30 second-graders and got a big group hug at the end of the workshop.

"And as corny as it sounds, I was pretty much smitten by children. I was just like 'Wow, this feels great.' No experience being out in the real opera world had given me that.

"Every artist wants to change the world, and I figured out a concrete realistic way to do my share. It's great to talk about wanting to change the world, but you can't effect change until you do something. So now I do about 150 to 200 shows a year for children."

He's eager to return to West Texas.

"West Texans know how to treat people, and I think that's very important for a performer," Coker said. "We don't want much. When people are kind, it makes all the difference.

"In West Texas, they take care of where the artist is going to sleep, how the artist is going to get around town and where the artist is going to eat. It's West Texas hospitality that you don't find much. And it's got a whole lot of value in my book."

COE: Performer has been into music all his life directions, let alone be told he has to leave.

And when it comes to country music, he isn't leaving, no matter how tough the odds against him become.

"A guy in Austin wrote a great review ... and he started out by saying that it was a crime that David Allan Coe had not been on a major label for over five years but still continues to put out music on his own record label and still sells out concerts," said Coe, who is to perform Saturday at Ector County Coliseum.

A rodeo-styled dance with Johnny Blaine and The Spur Band will follow the David Allan Coe Show. For reserved tables, call Dos Amigos at 1-368-7556.

"And he talked about how I was the first one to fuse country music and rock 'n' roll together, although a lot of other people took the credit for it. He just didn't understand why I was not more successful than I was."

Coe, who has been touring since 1967, knows the answer. He recalled a conversation he had with a friend of his, someone who is "the money man" behind several successful country artists.

When he asked his friend why he wouldn't put money behind Coe, he recalled that his friend said, "'You're unmanageable and no one can control you. They can't tell you what to do, what to wear how to comb your hair and all that. You're your own person, and everybody wants to control the person they are putting their money up against.'

"It's the truth, but I thought it was not a good thing," Coe said.

"It's not just me. I mean they won't play Merle Haggard records on the radio. The won't play Willie Nelson records. They barely play George Jones records."

Age is a factor, Coe said. "They're trying to attract a younger group of people and they are trying to attract them to a younger group of singers."

Yet, Coe said, "a lot of young people are coming" to see his shows, citing as an example a recent College Station concert.

"I hadn't played there since the Willie Nelson picnic, and we had 8,000 people that came to see David Allan Coe. I was the only person on the show. It was an outdoor concert, and there was a hurricane warning. So, we're drawing a lot of people and a lot of college kids."

He also feels his career has been helped recently by the release of Doug Supernaw's recording of Coe's "You Never Even Called Me By My Name." Merle Haggard, Charley Pride, Waylon Jennings and Coe are featured on the song.

And he's pleased with the success that Confederate Railroad, his former band, is having.

"Their album is platinum, and they've had a bunch of good success, and everybody realizes this is David Allan Coe's backup band. These people are just doing David Allan Coe. They just changed their name."

Coe, who plays around 35 different instruments, said he has been interested in music ever since he was a child. He's been writing songs since he was 12 and singing since he was 10.

His father, Donald Mahan Coe, was an Irish tenor who sang for his own enjoyment; his mother, Dorothy Landrum, sang in church choirs.

During his career, Coe — now in his early 50s — has recorded 43 albums and estimates he has appeared on 74 in all.

Early in his singing career, back in the 1960s, Coe took to the stage as a masked man and billed himself as the Mysterious Rhinestone Cowboy.

"Nobody knew what I looked like but what I looked like didn't matter. It was the music that counted."

Coe removed his mask two years later while performing with Willie Nelson.

He landed his first big hit in 1975 with the Steve Goodman penned "You Never Even Called Me By My Name," which Coe recorded as a joke.

His best-known song as a songwriter is "Take This Job And Shove It," recorded by Johnny Paycheck.

In the mid-1980s, he reached No. 1 on the country charts with "The Ride" — about an aspiring country singer who is picked up by the ghost of Hank Williams — and with the soft, string-laden ballad, "Mona Lisa Lost Her Smile."

Coe lives in Branson, Mo., where he and his wife, Jody, operate The Rhinestone Cowboy Store and Museum. On display are country-music memorabilia; for sale are records, books and other items.

This year marks the first season Coe has toured in eight years without Jody on keyboards and singing back-up vocals.

"We have four small children (Carson David, Shyanne, Tonya Montana and Tyler Mahan)," Coe said. "We're at a point in life where we felt she should be home with the children. I kinda feel I should be home with the children, too. With our mail-order business, I hope I won't have to work the road constantly all the time."

He has a daughter, Shelli S. Stephani Coe, who sings professionally in Branson. Ten-year-old Tyler sings with him and joined Coe on his last European tour.

In addition to his music, Coe also is an author.

"I'm working on a lot of books. I've written a lot of books. I've got a new book out now that's called 'Psychopath.' That's my first fiction novel."

He said he hasn't tried to get a publisher. "Psychopath" is self-published.

"It is based on a character from Dr. Sam Shepard, who was accused of killing his wife. He always claimed all his life that it was a bushy-haired man who did it," Coe said in the October 1993 issue of Modern Screen's Country Music.

The "bushy-haired man" provided the inspiration for Coe's book, which is dedicated to Shepard, who was Coe's gym teacher in prison.

Lack of time has kept him from seeking a record contract with a major label or a book deal with a publisher, Coe said.

"I drive my own bus. I don't have a bus driver and it's my choice ... I like to be in total control of my own vehicles."

He's also in control of what songs he sings during performances. There are some he has recorded that he seldom performs.

"Shelli's mother ran off with my road manager and married him ... and I did an album called 'Human Emotions' ... about my feelings at the time .... Then I've got another album out that's called 'Just Divorced' from when I divorced my third wife.

"Those are the songs I wrote when I was going through low emotional times in my life and I don't want to relive that everyday of my life. ... It was good therapy for me to write those songs ... but it ain't something that I want to stand up there and sing every night and relive."

Coe's life today is far removed from the hell-raiser, biker image he had as a young man. As a youth, he was in reform school and prison. He was charged with offenses ranging from possession of burglary tools to the alleged murder of another inmate at Ohio State Penitentiary, from which he was released in 1967.

"Success, to me, was the first time I held a record in my hand with my name on it. Everything has been gravy since then. You took a boy out of the 'pen' who was told he was going to die in the electric chair, and put a record in his hand with his name on it. It was one of the greatest success stories of all times."

Performer spellbinds audience with 'accordion aerobics'

By Thelma Garza
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — When Tejano musician Jaime DeAnda steps on stage, he holds his audience spellbound with an accordion performance like they've never seen.

He doesn't just stand there fingering the keyboard. His whole body gets into the act.

DeAnda specializes in "accordion aerobics." He sings, he dances and he plays his accordion every way but straight — over his head, behind his back, all without missing a beat. It's a style he has developed during his two decades in the music business. Sparked by his love of dancing, it's also a break from traditional conjunto style.

Toss in a special stage appearance by his pooch, Buddy, and revelers are treated to a show they won't soon forget.

The ebullient personality and good looks of this Houston native also are crowd pleasers. He fires up the audience with his famous request, "Somebody scre-e-e-am!" Men applaud him with alaridos (Spanish for shouts), screaming women oblige him and young boys dance and root him on.

"When you look out at the audience and see people cheering and singing your songs, it's the best high you could ever have," DeAnda said.

DeAnda uses four accordions on stage. Each one sounds different, which makes it easier to achieve a variety of notes, he said. Paired with his dancing, it adds spice to the act.

And DeAnda's style seems to meet with the highest approval from the crowd. "They don't just listen, they watch," he added.

The single, 29-year-old "king of accordion aerobics" is lead singer and accordionist for the local conjunto band, Jaime DeAnda y Los Chamacos.

Joining him on stage are bass player Edward Ordonez of Alice, drummer Hector Tello Jr. of Reedville and bajoguitarist Roel Joslin of Alice.

The growing popularity of the group has members touring nationally and internationally much of the time. But they still find time to perform for the demanding hometown crowd.

"Jaime is an excellent performer," said Stella Garcia of Delmiro Garcia Productions and Tejano Thursdays. "We receive calls requesting him."

The unpretentious DeAnda gives much of the credit for his band's success to his brother and manager of nine years, Henry DeAnda.

"When my brother Henry stepped in and took over the band, he set the rules of the game," DeAnda said. "He taught us how to run the band like a business."

Jaime began developing his talent early in life.

By age 5, he was a drummer in his father's band, Las Estrellas de Houston, which played mostly at local bars and house parties.

He began playing the accordion at 13 because "I liked the sound," he said.

Influenced by the Norteno music of conjunto greats such as Ramon Ayala and Juan Villarreal, DeAnda artfully blends new-wave and Norteno music.

Record sales of his latest album, "Se Cansaron, Otra?" on Freddie Records, reflect the successful mixture of the two sounds. "The album is on the verge of going gold," said Freddie Martinez Jr., vice-president of Freddie Records.

The band's talent was recognized earlier in the year at the annual Tejano Music Awards, where it garnered the Best Album of the Year award in the traditional conjunto category for the album "Unrivaled."

The 1994 Pu a Vida Hispanic Music Awards also honored the band with Progressive Conjunto Style and Best Accordionist awards.

"Como te Llamas Paloma," the group's ninth compact disc on Freddie Records, was released this week.

The fans love DeAnda, and he returns their affection. After his concerts, he takes time to sign autographs and shake hands with young and old alike. "Children come out with little accordions for me to autograph," he said. "It's really touching."

He reads all of his fan mail. Though he enjoys receiving mail from everyone, he especially enjoys hearing from children.

Constant requests from fans for accordion lessons have made his schedule even more hectic. He soon will begin production of an instructional video which is being created with input from young would-be accordionists.

The award-winning musician isn't sure if he is regarded as a role model. He does, however, think his video on accordion lessons could be a means of keeping some kids off the streets.

DeAnda loves what he does, and it shows. "I never imagined I could get this far," he said.

DUPREE: Performer is known for stage antics

ed For Destruction." He received 15 stitches between his lower thumb and his wrist.

The month before, he cut himself during the first day of the Woodstock concert when he started playing "Redneck Punk" from the 1992 Jackyl album. He was bleeding enough to smear blood across his face like Indian warpaint.

Known for its stage antics, Jackyl fired three blanks out of a 12-gauge shotgun microphone stand at the Woodstock concert. The shots were dedicated to Janice Joplin, Keith Moon and Jimi Hendrix.

In honor of Hendrix, Dupree set a stool on fire and when the flames were several feet high, sawed it in half with his gas-powered chain saw.

And that's not all. On two separate occasions, Dupree undressed twice during one song, an activity that has landed him in jail on charges of indecent exposure.

"I was making the point that they put a parental advisor sticker on our first record and I'd say, 'Well, they can sticker the record, but they can't sticker our live show.' If somebody pays to see Jackyl, they ought to be able to see as much Jackyl as I want to show them.' And so I dropped my pants to get naked.

"Most of the places I didn't have a problem, but in Long Beach, Calif., and Cincinnati, Ohio, they arrested me for it. I could be oversensitive and say they violated my rights. I could have made a big First Amendment issue and all that stuff out of it.

"However, I don't want to be like they are. I don't want to be too politically correct as far as my rights. I don't want to be oversensitive about it.

"It is my right to decide whether that was artistic freedom or not, but they got a job to do, and it was a tough call. And I was being crazy. And, it's not like it's going to change the world for the better one way or the other.

"It ain't exactly normal to be running around stark naked in front of 5,00 people, and I can understand why it would be a discretion thing as to whether or not they wanted to make a move to arrest me. So I paid the fine and got over it."

The main message this Atlanta, Ga., band wants to get across to the public is, "we are back-to-the-basics of rock 'n' roll," Dupree said.

Here's another example of the type of hand that is a bane to the average player, yet the expert will almost always get right automatically. Again, it involves no spectacular pyrotechnics; just sound technique.

The auction requires some comment. When partner responds to one club with one spade, the odds greatly favor partner having a five-card suit. This is especially true here, where East is surely short in hearts. Therefore, we would have bid four spades with the West cards, a contract that requires accurate defense to defeat. (Try it yourself.)

Defending against four hearts, West led the king of clubs then shifted to a low spade. Dummy's ace was taken and trumps were drawn in three rounds. Declarer then led the remaining club. West grabbed the ace and returned a spade, and declarer eventually had to lead a diamond from hand — down one. Using one of dummy's entries to lead a diamond to the king would have been as futile.

A card-play whiz would make the hand in no time flat. West would not have shifted to a spade with four cards in that suit, since the defender could infer that declarer was almost certainly void in the suit. Therefore, after winning the ace of spades at trick two, declarer would ruff a spade, return to the table with the queen of hearts and ruff another spade. Now trumps would be drawn, after which declarer would exit with a club.

On winning the club trick, West would be faced with a choice of losing plays. Breaking diamonds would eliminate one of declarer's losers in the suit; returning a club would be even worse, permitting declarer to discard both diamonds on the high clubs.

Gin Blossoms push ahead after tragic past

By Eileen Loh
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — After the suicide of guitarist Doug Hopkins, who composed the Gin Blossoms' two phenomenally successful hits, "Hey Jealousy" and "Found Out About You," most fans not only bade a sad farewell to Hopkins, but worried about the future of the band itself.

How could the Gin Blossoms hope to match the resounding popularity of their debut album, "New Miserable Experience," without Hopkins and his paradoxically poppy sound, morose lyrics and sardonic guitar style?

"I miss him, but I'm not one of those people who sit around and think of the past," lead singer Robin Wilson said in an interview. "Actually, the Gin Blossoms are really excited to make a record without any Doug Hopkins songs on it."

Fans weren't so optimistic about the Tempe, Ariz., band's future last December, when a friend of Hopkins' discovered the 32-year-old musician's body at home.

In truth, the Blossoms had authored their own fate. The guitarist and songwriter's devastating drinking problem had disrupted their work one time too many. So Hopkins was fired from the band in April 1992, long before he put a .38-caliber pistol in his mouth and squeezed the trigger.

The split came before the album was completed, before Hopkins' songs exploded onto the charts — before any of them, including Hopkins, realized just how significant his work would be.

Wilson said he worked with Hopkins after he and the band parted company.

"He finally admitted to me that nobody sang his songs the way I did," Wilson recalled.

Of the 12 songs on "New Miserable Experience," Hopkins wrote four (three of which were the album's first released singles), co-wrote two and played guitar throughout. He received credit for his work, but the album's cover photograph featured his replacement, Scott Johnson.

Hopkins had made no bones about his animosity toward his former friends, when the Gin Blossoms, playing his songs, were taking off without him — even though the group hadn't ruled out future collaborations with him.

"It's my song, but I don't enjoy it," Hopkins had said of "Hey Jealousy."

"When it comes on the radio, I turn it off, because I don't really want to hear that. It doesn't make me feel good or anything."

Wilson said that although he felt bad about Hopkins' decline, he and his bandmates couldn't allow the guitarist to drag down the rest of the group with him.

Singer practices what he preaches with free concert

By Malcolm Mayhew
N.Y. Times News Service

For years now, first-name-only Christian singer Carman has preached the word of God through his music — and it has made him extremely rich and popular.

He has sold more than 6 million albums worldwide, has twice taken home Billboard's Contemporary Artist of the Year award, has received five Dove Awards from the Gospel Music Association and has scored platinum success with his video "Revival in the Land."

But for the 38-year-old New Jersey resident, all of this is nothing, a mere shadow, he says, that clouds the real reason God put him here.

"Being popular means nothing to me," Carman said. "What does popular mean? Charles Manson was popular. Hitler was popular.

"It's no secret that you need money in order to live, in order to survive. I know I do. But I give free shows because going to one of my concerts is like going to church. You don't see the pastor standing at the door saying, 'That'll be $20 please,' so I don't charge for my shows. What I have recovered from the land is free, so I freely preach it.

"Popularity has nothing to do with my messages. I just want to be a better person."

Carman is giving a free concert Saturday at Texas Stadium in Irving, home of the Dallas Cowboys.

Starting with his 1982 debut, "Some-O-Dat," Carman has been successfully merging New Age music with Christian philosophies. On his last two records, though, including his new one, "The Standard," he touches a tad more on the political side of sociology, namely prejudice, crime and AIDS.

According to Carman, that's one of the reasons why his new album is called "The Standard." "A standard is a flag that troops raise when they go into battle," he said. "When it comes down, it means they're losing. Right now, as a society, we are losing. Crime, AIDS, all of it is bringing down society. We need to educate our young and learn to love our brothers. Without that, there is no hope."

One of Carman's pet peeves is AIDS education. Get him talking about it and he'll never stop.

Popular comic strip to take its place in pop culture scrapbook

By Robert Saiz Holguin
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Gary Larson knows when to say goodbye.

"You should always leave the party 10 minutes before you actually do," says Larson, who is walking away from his hugely successful comic strip "The Far Side" after 15 years of bizarre and achingly funny installments.

"I just feel like the time is right," he says. "I don't want to let it become something that I've seen happen in some other cartoons, where they simply become little industries and the reason for having done it in the first place seems to have been buried somewhere."

The wisecracking cows, bespectacled scientists, towering beehive hairdos and the rest of Larson's trademarks will now find their place in pop culture's proverbial scrapbook. The final panel bids farewell to millions of devoted fans on Jan. 1.

Reserved and demure, Larson has seen his strip grow into popular lines of books, best-selling calendars, coffee mugs and greeting cards, not to mention the countless clippings that adorn refrigerators and bulletin boards worldwide. His exhibit of science-related cartoons even has appeared at the Smithsonian and resides permanently at the California Academy of Sciences in San Francisco.

Larson's latest venture is a CBS Halloween special entitled "Tales From the Far Side." The half-hour animated program sees Larson's improbable characters through 10 vignettes of "Far Side" cartoons in settings that range from insects on airplanes to space aliens in the Old West.

"It's fairly experimental," he says. "The good news is that we didn't have a network looking over our shoulder telling us what to do. The bad news is that we didn't have a network looking over our shoulders telling us what to do.

"We were all like a bunch of mad scientists running around doing this thing and, as a result, I think it's going to be a real mixed bag of strange things."

Strange is probably an understatement.

The animated piece, created at Vancouver's International Rocketship studios, has no dialogue and relies almost exclusively on sight gags, some less palatable than others. Scheduled to air at 8:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday, the special includes a tale of a busload of zombies headed for the "Dead Ranch," where they proceed to enjoy a hearty meal at the "pancreas breakfast" while others roast brains on the campfire.

"It actually reminds me a lot of my daily work in the sense that there will probably be something there to offend someone, and to confuse and hopefully to laugh at. I made a career based on the big three," Larson says.

"What's happened to me has been so amazing. I've had 15 years of doing something I love," says Larson, who announced his retirement Oct. 3. "So, it's been bittersweet. The letter I wrote to newspaper editors when I announced my retirement was actually melancholy. That's when it sort of hit me."

The reclusive Larson, 44, a graduate of Washington State University, lives with his wife in Seattle. He generally avoids the media and, in this case, apologized beforehand for being a "lousy interview" at his downtown office.

"The Far Side," syndicated daily to nearly 1,900 newspapers worldwide, has built legions of followers through Larson's ability to deliver punchlines that featured a consistent, albeit strange, dichotomy of highbrow academia and utter absurdity. Readers voted it the No. 1 cartoon panel in all major U.S. market surveys for the past 10 years.

'What's happened to me has been so amazing. I've had 15 years of doing something I love. So, it's been bittersweet. The letter I wrote to newspaper editors when I announced my retirement was actually melancholy. That's when it sort of hit me.'

—Gary Larson
Far Side creator

Larson, who may sometimes draw heat for crossing the line of good taste, is his own worst critic when it comes to the comedic quality of his work.

"I think one thing that's important to maintain is a sense of fear, always doubting yourself. ... A good dose of insecurity helps your work in some ways," he says. "I think I finally started to lose that fear and a few times I've drawn things that, in the past, I wouldn't have sent in. So it was a red flag to me that maybe I was sitting on my laurels a little bit."

The scientific community was Larson's first bastion, due in large part to his considerable knowledge of the subject matter. "I never majored in science, but I've always loved it," he says.

In describing the odd nature of his artistic inspiration, Larson relies on simile.

"You know those little snow globes that you shake up? I always thought my brain was sort of like that. You know, where you just give it a shake and watch what comes out and shake it again. It's like that.

"I just get silly inside my head and I start to think about something and in my head I start twisting it around, contorting it and envisioning it in different ways," he says.

Another one of Larson's growing interests is playing music, specifically jazz guitar. A self-described neophyte, Larson has gone as far as constructing a small-scale home studio and says he spends hours poring over complicated musical theories.

And while cartoons always will be in his blood, he admits that his departure from the daily grind of creating comics will allow him the time to pursue a new passion.

"I just love to play," he says. "All your problems are gone, you're immersed in another world."

CARMEN: Singer offers free concert

(From 4F)

"God did not put AIDS on this planet," he said. "Sin put AIDS on this planet. And what are we doing to prevent it? Nothing. The kids in today's pop generation are wearing those red ribbons, but do those ribbons stop AIDS? No. They're just passing along the message that it's OK to have sex, just as long as you wear a hard hat.

"It's like they're preaching the Gospel of Hard Hats, the Gospel of Condoms," he said. "Instead of truly loving each other, they're putting on hard hats and banging hammers against them. They're saying 'Let's get it on,' then they turn around and try to eliminate the price tag of their sins by wearing one of those ribbons. That doesn't make much sense. For me, the Gospel of Jesus Christ is a lot better than the Gospel of Hard Hats."

Even though Carman, a lifelong musician who became a Christian after seeing an Andrae Crouch concert, is one of the most popular faces in music, he knows little of — or, rather, pays little attention to — his mainstream pop counterparts. He does, however, think that the MTV generation is easily influenced by its unofficial spokespeople, like rock and movie stars.

"That's part of the problem of why girls are getting pregnant and people are getting AIDS and crime is such a problem," he said. "We, as performers, have a responsibility to our followers.

"Every one of us is a preacher, a spokesperson for something. I am a spokesperson for God. My followers are Christians. Others artists aren't. Others talk about chaos, death, and even if they do it in an abstract way, some people are going to take that to heart. That's why we have to start examining what we're saying."

Warehouse district becomes home to artists

By Kelley Shannon
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — In cavernous old rooms, abstract paintings hang on huge walls, colorful Latin American folk art enchants passersby and a young sculptor works on his latest creation.

The place is Blue Star, once a bustling railyard for the MKT "Katy" Railroad that has been converted into a SoHo-style, inner-city village for contemporary artists.

What used to be home to Blue Star Ice and Cold Storage Co. and other railroad-connected businesses now houses lofts, studios and galleries for artists, architects and "hipsters who just want to be around all that stuff," said James Lifshutz, co-developer and owner.

Artists who live and work at Blue Star credit the complex with uniting the city's modern art community and with attracting out-of-state attention to San Antonio art.

The warehouse district is located next to the San Antonio River just south of downtown in the shadow of the Pioneer Flour Mill and adjacent to the historic King William neighborhood.

The oldest Blue Star warehouses date to about 1915, and newer ones to the 1930s or 1940s, Lifshutz said. Everything from produce to whiskey was shipped into the rail terminal. As the main tenant, Blue Star Ice provided cold storage space to other businesses.

Turning the old buildings into the modern-day Blue Star was the vision of Lifshutz's father, Bernard Lifshutz, and developer Arthur P. "Hap" Veltman Jr., who bought the six-acre piece of property in late 1985 intending to make it an artists' colony.

Soon afterward, in 1986, a local contemporary art show needed an exhibit site, so the developers provided 12,000 square feet in Blue Star. The show drew 2,000 people and was a catalyst for creation of the non-profit Blue Star Art Space, still the anchor of the complex.

"The contemporary art community in San Antonio just started to become focused for the first time in its history," Lifshutz said. "You don't usually attribute physical location for being as important as it is ... but it's really true."

Jeffrey Moore, executive director and a founding board member of Blue Star Art Space, agrees.

"There was a much bigger (contemporary art) community than any of us knew," he said, explaining that having a cluster of art galleries and studios makes it easier for artists to market their work.

Blue Star Art Space offers a mixture of local and national exhibits in its large, unairconditioned warehouse, which can get sultry during the hot San Antonio summers.

Though Blue Star Art Space was developed early on, the rest of the warehouse district was not. Buildings did not meet city codes and loan money for real estate investment was tight, Lifshutz said.

Veltman, a man well known for developing real estate downtown and along the River Walk, died in late 1988. The next year, James Lifshutz stepped into the project.

Lifshutz and his father obtained a $1 million rehabilitation loan from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and converted about half of the complex into 47 loft apartments in 1991 and 1992.

"They met with immediate success, and we've never had a vacancy since," said Lifshutz. In fact, there is a waiting list to get in.

Some artists complained that the complex might become too trendy and unaffordable. Lifshutz describes the rental price as "at the lower middle range" of the citywide market.

Success of the apartments has allowed for the development of other parts of Blue Star, Lifshutz said. Alongside private artists' apartments and studios now there are retail galleries, the alternative, non-profit Jump Start Performance Co. theater and graduate student exhibit space for the University of Texas at San Antonio.

"It's good exposure," said Nate Cassie, a sculptor and graduate research assistant who helps manage the UTSA gallery. Cassie said the downtown location makes it easier to attract the public to see student art, which otherwise might be shown on campus in far north San Antonio.

"(Blue Star) seems to be definitely getting more acceptance in the community and also regionally and nationally," said Cassie. The complex and its art shows have been featured in national publications.

And the success of Blue Star has led to the conversion of other old buildings and warehouses in San Antonio into affordable apartments designed for artists, Moore said.

Lifshutz said each year new tenants are added that take Blue Star to "the next level." Its first restaurant is scheduled to open later this year.

"Blue Star started off as sort of an esoteric notion and kind of a secret of the art community, but every year more recognition is shown to it," Lifshutz said.

Blue Star owners and managers also expect the city's planned $40 million improvement along the San Antonio River — which will connect downtown to the historic Spanish missions to the south via hike-and-bike trails — to bring new visitors to Blue Star.

"There's a lot going on," Moore said. "And there's a lot more that's going to happen."

'The contemporary art community in San Antonio just started to become focused for the first time in its history. You don't usually attribute physical location for being as important as it is ... but it's really true.'

DOUBLE PLEASURE DOUBLE FUN DOUBLE WORK DOUBLE LOVE

Mothers often will tell you that pregnancy is the easiest part of parenthood — at least your hands are free — and that the years that come after giving birth can be the most rewarding, exciting and frustrating, of your life.

But finding out that the baby you dreamed about, yearned for and now are carrying is, in fact, two babies can be both exhilarating and frightening — long before the babies are born, say members of Midland Mothers of Twins Club (MMOT).

Suzanne Dye, vice president of MMOT, is the mother of 3-year-old Justin and Clint. The fact that her first pregnancy would result in two babies was something of a surprise to her. "I was right at three months (pregnant) when I found out I was carrying twins," she said.

"They did a sonogram and I saw two little heads. It was a big surprise."

Felicia and Herschel Rittenhouse, parents of 16-month-old Jake and Jared, had the same experience. "I was 16 weeks along. It was our first sonogram. We were shocked," said Mrs. Rittenhouse, who is president of MMOT.

"She (the technician) pulled the sonogram up and stopped, and said, 'You do know, don't you?' " Rittenhouse said.

"There was silence. I think we both went into shock," his wife added.

Donna Cunningham, secretary/treasurer of MMOT, said she was surprised to discover her second pregnancy

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Fashion show is highlight of event

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

Many of us have shopped Talbots catalogs and admired their clothes for years, but it was only last May that the company opened a store in Midland and unlocked its trademark Red Door.

McKnight-Harrison

Members of the Midland Woman's Club and their guests were introduced to the store's fall and holiday line at the club's "Festive Fund-Raiser" on Oct. 14. Entitled "Dressing for the Season," the show, one of the first presented by the store in the Tall City, was preceded by a luncheon in the club's Great Hall.

Midland newcomer, Cindy Rendleman, manager of the store and daughter of former Midlander Lou Haskins of Seattle, Wash., was commentator for the show, which as she explained, "features classics that evolve with the times, joining what is established to what is new."

Clothes were shown appropriate for a variety of social settings, from at-home to evenings out, and other events in between.

According to Cindy, this season tailoring is more relaxed and texture is more important. In a nutshell, we learned that plaid is making a fashion statement, and the color grape is popular. Walking shorts and Dress Greys, inspired by menswear but interpreted along strictly feminine lines, sweaters in rich textures and warm autumn tones, classics for daytime wear were crowd pleasers. Both dresses and separates, velvet to crepe, elegant to casual were shown for holiday wear.

We were interested to know that the company was established in 1947 in Hingham, Mass., just outside of Boston, in the Talbots' home and has since become an international business.

Models representing the Woman's Club and its shareholding clubs were Sue Hardwick, Allis Chapman, Violet Smyres, Dell Shettle, Frances Thomas, Fran Schutte, Shirley Rocchio, Virginia Gilbert, Jennie Cook and Dorise Watson.

The luncheon menu included Fruit Salad with Poppy Seed Dressing, Orange Chicken with Seasoned Rice, English Peas with Mushrooms, Wheat Rolls, and for desert, the club's specialty, Lemon Delight. Tables were decorated with topiary trees.

A number of mother-daughter pairs turned out for the event, including Barbara (Mrs. Arlis) Ratliss and Laura (Mrs. Roger) Huitt of Garden City; Jean (Mrs. Pat) Thomas and Sylvia (Mrs. Larry) Cook, Virginia Gilbert and Pat (Mrs. Parker) Humes and Victoria Chapple and Toya (Mrs. Charles) Moncrief. Mrs. Chapple's sister, Irene Sanchez of Panama City, was a special guest.

IT WAS GOOD to see former Midlanders Jean and Darold Hobbs and their daughter, Jennifer, now of Austin, last weekend. Houseguests of Jean's son, Karl Reiter, they came in to see longtime friend Mary Lou Cassidy in her performance in Midland Community Theatre's production of "Gargoyles and Scarecrow Sins."

While Jean keeps the home fires burning and is active in church and community affairs, Darold is employed with the Texas Department of Transportation. Jennifer is a 1994 graduate of Angelo State University.

IN THE WHAT'S NEW Department: Susan Sanders' kitty shower on Oct. 21 for Egan (a.k.a. as DC for Demolition Cat), her Ocicat, may start a new trend in the way of Midland social affairs.

Held in Susan's townhome, the party featured a cat theme comprised of Zeller Schwartz Katz wine (cellar of the Black Cat white wine from Germany), "Fancy Feast" for humans and muffins decorated with cat faces.

Susan's spotted cat was welcomed by over 50 guests. Among them were Egan's "godmother," Sue Kruse of Philadelphia, Pa.; Susan's sister, Lea-Cay Farr of Levelland, and other feline lovers, including Cookie and Fred Wetendorf, Sharla and Bart Hotchkiss, Eileen Piwetz, Nancy Shaw, all of whom have two or more cats; Connie Glover, who only likes cat figurines; Brian Mohr, who claims to like cats but doesn't have one; James Van Stavern, who has birds all the cats would love to get their paws on, and the Memorial Community Clinic staff, which hears daily of Egan's adventures.

According to the invitation, no gift was expected, but Egan's wish list included Gerber's baby food, fake birds and mice, pompoms or other round objects that roll or can be swatted, pipe cleaners and last but not least, catnip.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Fall can be colorful in West Texas

By Deborah A. Benge

Not too many trees and shrubs have dramatic fall color in West Texas, but there are some, and October is a good month to shop for and plant these plants.

Benge

Plants that are grown from seed are just like children in a family — even though they may have the same parents, they are all genetically unique. There will be many similarities but there will also be distinct differences. One child may be blonde with green eyes, while another may be brunette with blue eyes and still another have reddish blonde hair with hazel-colored eyes.

With trees and shrubs there can be some genetic differences in seedlings that you may want to select. A good example of that is selecting for fall color potential. Some trees, due to genetic differences, will have outstanding fall color while a few may have mediocre fall color.

Visiting nursery/garden centers in October to select landscape trees will allow you the privilege of seeing fall color. You'll not only have an idea of fall color potential, but you will be establishing your tree or shrub during the best planting season of the year.

Chinese pistache, Texas red oak, Western soapberry and burning bush are examples of woody ornamentals that can be selected in the fall for brilliant fall color.

Chinese pistache, Pistacia chinensis, is an excellent deciduous shade tree for any home landscape. It matures into a beautiful round canopy made up of small, finely textured, dark green leaves that won't shade out your turf grass. This tree is extremely drought tolerant after establishment with very few insect or disease problems.

The Chinese pistache is the only tree that gives dependable fall color in the warm Southwest, regardless of the fall weather conditions. Fall colors of scarlet, crimson, orange and sometimes yellow can be seen in this excellent yard tree. But this is tree grown from seeds, as opposed to being grafted, so the fall color may vary from tree to tree. That's why selecting your Chinese pistache in October can clue you in to what your tree will look like in the fall once it is established.

A tree with red fall color is the Texas red oak, Quercus Texana, a beautiful red oak that is very similar to the Shumard red oak that is used in many area landscapes. The advantage of the Texas red oak is its smaller size, 30- to 40-foot height, drought tolerance and alkaline soil tolerance. This is also grown from seed and there is a slight chance that some of the seedlings have less than stunning red fall color.

The Western soapberry, Sapindus drummondii, another good landscape tree for the Permian Basin, grows to a height of 20 to 30 feet, has good drought tolerance and is well suited to our growing conditions. The leaves are compound, fine textured and turn a golden yellow in the fall. This tree will send up sprouts, so keep those mowed or clipped off to develop a beautiful single-trunked tree.

One I didn't mention above but worth mentioning is the Texas Ash, Fraxinus Texensis, a good, drought tolerant, medium-sized landscape tree. Ash trees as a whole do not do well, growing fast and dying fast, but the Texas ash is longer lived, fairly fast-growing and has beautiful fall colors of golds, oranges and reds. This tree grown by seed and can be selected for fall color in October.

One more and then I'll stop — Prairie flame-leaf sumac, Rhus Lanceolata, grows to a height of 30 feet, has dark green compound leaves. This tree sets a seed crop that attracts birds and is very striking during winter. This tree gets to strut its stuff in the fall when it turns a brilliant scarlet. This tree suckers and can be used as a screen or kept pruned into a tree.

The next one is grown from cuttings, so you can look for this one regardless of the season and be assured of its fall color. Burning bush or winged euonymus, Euonymus alata, is probably the most outstanding shrub when it comes to fall color. This tough, deciduous shrub looks pretty ordinary during the growing season, but come fall it turns a brilliant red. It also produces an interesting fruit that turns orange-red in the fall. Unlike the common evergreen euonymus japonica shrub, which is a hotel for insects and disease, this species has no known serious pests. Spidermites could be a problem in hot, dry locations. It grows in full sun to part shade at a moderate rate. Show it off by planting it in front of dark green evergreen shrubs. It can be used as a shrub or multi-stemmed small tree. For a smaller shrub look for the cultivar called "Compacta," a slow grower with a denser growth habit.

All of the above-mentioned plants would be good additions to any landscape, but an added bonus is their fall color. Since all of these are grown from seed, you may want to select them now, while they are showing their true colors.

New sunglasses said to help trim golf handicap

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Inventor Jim Shreenan says his sunglasses won't just protect your eyes from damaging rays, they'll also help lower your golf handicap.

Shreenan, a 54-year-old Scotsman who has lived in Melbourne since 1960, has spent five years and his life savings in developing the wraparound sunglasses he says will help golfers line up shots and keep their heads down during their swing.

The glasses have three small cuts in the plastic lenses — two horizontal slits to help see the line and a third, circular cut in front of the left eye — to ensure a consistent set-up.

This makes the golfer acutely aware of head movement during the swing.

Shreenan's glasses, marketed under the name Spot On and selling for about $100, have been endorsed by Greg Norman's coach, Charlie Earp, a leading Australian teaching professional.

"I can't see them proving of much assistance to a professional or outstanding amateur golfer, but it will certainly make a difference to the run-of-the-mill player who has problems keeping his head still," Earp said.

"The glasses are a good aid for players who want to help themselves at practice."

Shreenan said Norman told him the glasses were "a bloody good idea" and gave him encouragement.

The glasses were introduced at the Australian Golf Show in Melbourne this year.

So far, no tournament professionals have used them.

The Australian Golf Union has advised Shreenan that the glasses do not contravene the rules of golf but has sent a pair to the Royal and Ancient Club at St. Andrews, Scotland, for an official decision.

If the glasses were to be ruled illegal, Shreenan says they still would be a useful practice device to make golfers aware of their head movements.

Shreenan devised them after having trouble with his own game.

"I was sick and tired of losing to my mates out on the golf course and then having them tell me afterward that I lifted my head," he said.

"Lifting the head and swaying is the biggest contributor of all to the duffing of tee shots, fairway drives, chipping, bunker shots and putting.

"This device ensures the ball is all I see when I'm standing there ready to hit it.

"Anyone who slices the ball because of head movement will start hitting it straight down the middle. It's a simple idea but it works."

Shreenan, a qualified toolmaker, says the sunglasses don't give instant results, although he has chopped 20 shots off an average round and now goes around in about 90, rather than 110.

"You have to grow into them," he said.

Shreenan estimates using the sunglasses for two months will enable most golfers to trim their handicaps.

He believes there will be a worldwide demand for his glasses.

He has patents in Britain, Japan, Spain and Germany and has applied for a patent in the United States. He plans to market the Taiwanese-manufactured glasses internationally.

"The Japanese and American markets are enormous. There is nothing like these glasses available around the world," he said.

TWINS: Two babies make life busy, fun

would bring her and her husband their second and third children, but that before she received official word, she was beginning to wonder. "I found out with a sonogram at 15 weeks," she said, but she already "felt a lot of early movement." Her twins, Kelsey and Kolby, are 17 months old.

The first thing these parents of twins did — after the surprise wore off — was to start stocking up on baby items, they said.

"We had to borrow a bed," Mrs. Cunningham said, since they had only purchased one. "We were lucky because I had a friend who loaned us about everything. The only think we had to get was a big car seat.

"You really can't prepare for them besides getting stuff."

The Rittenhouses agreed. "We got ready for them — we thought we did, anyway," Rittenhouse said.

"T' e's not anything you can do to prepare for them," said his wife. "The action we took was we started buying everything way ahead of time — diapers, formula — we garage-saled. We had a baby bed and borrowed the other from my sister-in-law.

"We made everything for the nursery — my mother did. Basically, we bought everything ahead of time. I was given a shower and people were really nice to help out."

THE DYES' experience was similar. "We made adjustments, equipment-wise," Mrs. Dye said. "We got cribs, sold two cars and got a van. Mostly we were trying to think about two walkers, two high chairs, two this, two that — too crazy!"

Twins often are born early, and these babies were no exception. Justin and Clint Dye were born May 25, 1991, after 31 weeks of their mother's pregnancy. "They were ... two months premature," she said. "They stayed in the hospital 27 days. They were four pounds, two ounces and four pounds four ounces at birth."

Even though the babies were small at birth, they were fairly large for twins, Mrs. Dye said. "They were the biggest preemies in the unit."

'They have a special unspoken communication. They have names they call each other. When they were talking baby talk, it was like they knew (what the other was saying). Ever since they were little, they played with each other. When they were little, if one would lose his pacifier and cry, the other would crawl over and put the pacifier in his brother's mouth. They have a built-in look-out for each other. They bounce off each other. They cannot leave each other alone, they love each other so much.'

— Suzanne Dye
mother of twins

The Cunningham twins were born four weeks early, their mother said, which was very good for twins. "She was six pounds one ounce, he was four pounds five ounces. I got to take him home at six days and her home at seven days. She had periodic breathing and had to be on a monitor for six months.

"I had them right around Mother's Day, on May 8."

Taking care of one newborn is difficult enough, but when the babies are twins — and probably smaller than single-born babies — they require more than twice as much care as babies born alone.

Because the twins were small at birth, Rittenhouse said, "they had to be fed every two hours."

"It was round-the-clock feeding," Mrs. Rittenhouse said. "It was rough, but it was during the summer so it helped a lot as far as me not having to go to work" as a teacher.

THE COUPLE made the decision that she would go back to teaching after the children were born and her husband would stay home with them. "He never knew when we got pregnant with twins that he was going to have to be Mr. Mom," Mrs. Rittenhouse said.

In the first year of their lives, Mrs. Dye said, her twins also required constant care. In fact, she said, "it's all you do. It's neat for daddy, though, because there's no choice. 'I got a baby and you got a baby.'

"Because they were premature they had to eat every three hours and it took 30 minutes to feed each one. I thought I was going to die.

"Probably the first year was the worst — the real worst was the first three months."

Many expectant mothers want to nurse their babies, but mothers of twins often find that to be an impossible choice. Mrs. Cunningham said her twins "had to eat every three hours, around the clock. I tried nursing and I didn't do real well.

"I had 45 minutes in between feedings the first four or five weeks. I was so tired."

And yes, she agreed, "the daddies have to get involved" because taking care of twins is too much for one person to do.

"My husband enjoys them and spends a lot of time with them," Mrs. Cunningham said.

LIVING WITH twins can be an adventure, the parents said. "I was told that once they started crawling and walking, they would follow each other," Mrs. Dye said. "Well, that was wrong. One would go one way, one would go the other.

"We used (baby) gates massively.

"If we told one 'no,' the other would go do the same thing."

And yes, she said, twins do seem to have a very special relationship, deeper than ordinary siblings. "They have a special unspoken communication. They have names they call each other. When they were talking baby talk, it was like they knew" what the other was saying.

"Ever since they were little, they played with each other. When they were little, if one would lose his pacifier and cry, the other would crawl over and put the pacifier in his brother's mouth. They have a built-in look-out for each other.

"They bounce off each other," Mrs. Dye said. "They cannot leave each other alone, they love each other so much."

But often twins are not the only children in the family. Mrs. Cunningham and her husband, Larry, also are parents of 5-year-old Krisana, who was only 3½ when her twin siblings were born.

"The hardest thing was that our daughter wanted lots of our attention (when the twins were born), and both of us had to take care of babies," Mrs. Cunningham said.

BECAUSE SHE was so young and because taking care of twins is so time-consuming, Krisana's parents made sure she got some extra attention during that time. "I bought her a lot of little presents and wrapped them up — about 12 (of them) — and gave her surprises for a while, and then they all ran out," Mrs. Cunningham said.

Krisana also had an activity book she enjoyed, and her parents made it a practice to do one of these activities every day with her.

"She still asks for 'mommytime.' At least a hour and a half during the day I'm with her" alone, Mrs. Cunningham said. And at bedtime, "they (the twins) go down at 7:30 p.m. and she goes down at 8:15 p.m., so we have 45 minutes with her" every day.

The mothers of twins stressed the importance of organization when caring for more than one baby at a time. "I'm very scheduled," Mrs. Cunningham said. "All three kids are in Mothers Day Out."

Mrs. Dye agreed. Her daughter, 3-month-old Emily, was born from her second pregnancy. "I did it in the right order," she laughed. "If you are going to have twins, have them first."

As for being the parent of twins, she had some advice: "There're two things to having twins. You've got to be organized and you've got to be patient."

MRS. RITTENHOUSE agreed. "It takes a lot of patience and a lot of time. When I get home from school (where she works as a teacher), I have an hour or hour and a half to relax and enjoy them. After that my entire evening is spent feeding, bathing and getting them ready for bed."

That kind of routine takes organization.

"I can't see anyone unorganized having twins because something is going on constantly. You feel like a rubber band," Mrs. Dye said.

"When they were first born, my mom stayed with us for a month and a half," she said. "I couldn't have done it without her. I really appreciate what she did."

After her mother left, she and her husband took over, alone. "Once you are thrown in and have to do it by yourself, you just do it.

"My husband had to go to work and wasn't getting any rest either. He thinks he slept through it, but he didn't."

A lot of the routine household chores had to wait, Mrs. Dye said. "All I can remember doing is babies. The only break you get is when they are napping. You ask yourself, do you need to get that (chore) done or do you need sleep? A lot of stuff waited.

"That's when we start appreciating moms, isn't it."

Living with twins is rewarding too, she said. "Life with twins is busy, constant. You don't have much time for yourself ... but it is a good constant too, it's special."

BUT CONSTANT it is, and the chances for rest come few and far between — especially when the babies are newborns. "The only thing you can do is when you are carrying them (pregnant), listen to your body and take care of yourself because the longer you carry them, the healthier they will be," Mrs. Cunningham said.

"And get lots of rest because you won't get any rest after they are born."

Her advice to mothers-to-be who are pregnant with twins is to take care of themselves while they are expecting. "I think mainly just to get two of everything, and rest and relax."

Mrs. Rittenhouse also advises that any woman who is expecting twins should "join the Mothers of Twins Club. Dr. Madden told me about the club, because he has twins. There are other people there who have been through exactly the same thing."

Though the group does have fund-raisers during the year, it is "basically a support group," she said. "We have functions where we take the twins. We have a Christmas party where we visit Santa. We do lots of fun things."

Midland Mothers of Twins Club meets at 7 p.m. the first Tuesday of every month at First Baptist Church, said Mrs. Cunningham. In the summer months, the group meets at restaurants. For more information call 699-7368.

Silica-gel crystals effective in drying flowers

Associated Press

In recent years, silica-gel crystals have gained popularity because they dry flowers at a steady pace, says Floral & Nature Crafts magazine. This allows flowers to retain their shape and color better than our grandparents ever imagined. What's more, the lightweight crystals don't crush the plants — a downfall of the old methods.

Although you can dry many types of plants in silica-gel crystals, you'll find them especially useful for preserving delicate flowers and foliage. Avoid large thick flowers, however, because they may not dry completely in the center. Also, expect some color changes when drying with silica gel. Red, blue, and purple flowers will deepen in hue, but other shades may fade a little.

To get started, purchase silica-gel crystals at a craft or floral-supply store. Then pick the plants after any dew or rain has evaporated off the leaves, but before the heat of the day. Begin the drying process as soon as possible.

To dry the plants, read and follow the manufacturer's directions carefully. Also, keep the following tips in mind before you cover the flowers:

- Stems don't dry well in silica gel, so it's best to trim unnecessary lengths.
- Because the dried blooms will be brittle, insert wire stems on fragile species before drying while the blossoms are still pliable.
- If you're working with large, rounded blooms, such as roses, dry only one layer of plants at a time. Otherwise, the weight of successive layers may crush the blossoms. For flatter plants such as daisies, you can dry several layers at once.

Twins' educations require planning

By Felix Sanchez
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Identical twins Monica and Veronica Luna decided right around the beginning of their middle school years that the whole idea of being dressed up alike was, like themselves, getting a little old. Problem is, there are plenty of mornings now when the 16-year-old Cypress Creek High School juniors finish dressing for class, bound down the stairs into the hallway and, gulp, they are dressed alike.

Such are the perils of identical twindom, but Veronica and Monica laugh off such episodes. They also are amused by any notion that because they happened to have spent a good part of their elementary and middle school years intentionally separated from each other in classes, they may have some sort of emotional quirks.

Nope, counselors say. Monica and Veronica are the look-alike apples-of-the-eyes of all they encounter, and they have developed into ideal students.

For decades, the common thinking among educators has been to separate twins, particularly identical twins, in the first few years of schooling. The goal has been to foster individual identity, to keep the children from becoming dependent on each other.

Actually, educators and child guidance counselors say keeping twins together has always had as many benefits as separating them. What astute parents must learn is to evaluate each case individually.

"The message is, there are no hard and fast rules. We get feedback from care-givers of all kinds. You can do it in many different ways. There is no one right way, no one set way," said Melanie Seigle, an advanced clinical practioner and staff clinician with the Houston Child Guidance Center.

Seigle, herself the mother of triplets, said educators have had a tendency to split up very young children to foster identification and individuality. There is some thinking now of keeping such children together through the younger years and then working on a year-by-year basis as they grow up.

Primarily, that is because the rules have changed: There are more prekindergarten and preschool children who have been added to the mix, Seigle said. These children have been separated from their parents and put in school, and now, to separate them from each other may be too traumatic.

That has to be taken into account, she said. "The goal, of course, is to help a child manage and cope on their own, and to acquire skills in a developmentally appropriate way." When children are kept together, teachers and parents must monitor behavior to make sure dominant siblings do not take over for the other, answering questions or performing tasks for them. A talented teacher can overcome such behavior, but it must be monitored closely, Seigle said.

Parents and teachers must be aware of any signs of one sibling's frequent overdependence on their twin, or on a parent. Monica and Veronica's parents, Joe and Dwayna, had misgivings about whether to have them separated. Now, the girls are almost inseparable.

"I don't really think about it. It's nice, though, having somebody around to talk to if nobody else is around," says Veronica.

Says Monica: "We go everywhere together. We do everything together. It's just natural to go to school together. Whenever she's not around, it's weird."

The twins shared three classes in the ninth grade, one in the 10th and now one in their junior year. They attended the same middle school, but never had the same class. "It was somewhat traumatic for us. The school's reasoning was that they had learned, supposedly, through studies that it was best to do that," Luna said. "I was afraid if they had different classes ... they would no longer be as close as they had been. We went along with the plan thinking that they would know a lot more of that stuff."

In retrospect, it seemed to work, Luna said. "It allowed them to be individuals, rather than feeding off one another. This way, they were allowed to be their own person. It seemed to impact us more than it did them."

Joan Keener, Veronica and Monica's counselor at Cypress Creek High School, said the two are not competitive — except for boyfriends — and are in the top part of their class academically.

Parents of identical twins or triplets should always consult with teachers and caregivers to determine how their children are developing.

DEAR ABBY

Brother's collect calls costly for sister

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My younger brother is currently serving a one-year sentence in a federal prison. When he telephones me, he must call collect because this is the rule. At first I was glad to hear from him, but frankly, I simply cannot afford to accept all these calls.

Van Buren

I write to him often, but he calls several times a week to chat. Abby, I know he is lonely, but my husband's patience is growing thin — and I don't blame him. Our telephone bills are more than we can handle. In addition to those phone bills, he asks me to send him money for postage stamps, toiletries and money to pay his court fines.

I hate to hurt his feelings, but this has got to stop!

Why does the prison system allow inmates to make unlimited collect calls? Surely the prison administrators realize the burden it places on family members.

Perhaps some of your readers in prison will see this and limit their collect calls to no more than one a month. Sign me ... HAD IT IN ARKANSAS

DEAR HAD IT: Here's your letter, and I hope it helps not only you but others with the same problem.

Tell your brother you will accept only ONE collect call a month, and if he calls more than that, you will refuse his call. Also, send him no money unless you can easily afford it. And by the way, your letter is a "first."

DEAR ABBY: The volunteer aide in the nursing home who went around zipping up all those "forgetful old men" — then realized (too late) that she had zipped up a visiting priest — had that embarrassing experience coming to her.

I have visited elderly friends and relatives in nursing homes and am really burned up by the condescending way some of the employees treat these lovely older people.

They call them by their first names, print their names in a large childish scrawl on the outside of their clothes, and other demeaning things. Their mental capacity is totally ignored. Example: They go around pulling up zippers without bothering to notice with whom they are dealing.

The kinder thing to do would be to quietly ask each one, "Do you need help with your zipper?"

I am a registered nurse, and when I was in training, if we ever called anyone over 16 years old by their first name, we got a proper "dressing down." We were not allowed to refer to a patient as a room number, a bed number — or "the gall bladder in Room 210," etc. We were expected to speak to (or about) them with all the respect they deserved.

Thank you, Abby, for letting me get on my soapbox. You may use my name. — ESTHER POWERS, CINCINNATI

DEAR MS. POWERS: Thanks for a powerful message. (Forgive me, I couldn't resist the pun.)

DEAR ABBY: The numerous accounts of readers in an unzipped condition bring to mind my experience back in 1934 when I lived in New York.

I boarded a Madison Avenue bus and was soon joined by an attractive young woman wearing a fur stole trimmed with silver fox tails.

Something (a draft) alerted me that my zipper was down, so I very swiftly zipped it up.

At 50th Street, my seat partner stood up to get off the bus when she realized that one of her tails was caught in my zipper. It was really jammed — stuck!

I had to get off the bus with her several blocks beyond her intended destination. We attracted such a crowd that a policeman took us into a ladies' dress shop, where the manager used scissors to cut off the offending tail! — JOHN CUSICK, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of marriage, my husband left me for another woman. He married her and lived many years with this second wife. Now he is dead.

People are always asking me, "Are you a widow, divorced or what?" I never know for sure how to answer them. Please let me know. — STUMPED IN PASCO, WASH.

DEAR STUMPED: You are a divorcee. The woman to whom he was married at the time of his death is his widow.

To receive a collection of Abby's most memorable — and most frequently requested — poems and essays, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby's "Keepers," P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Animal's intelligence is relative condition

By Erma Bombeck

Every pet owner I've ever talked to is the first to tell you his animal is the smartest in the world. If it's a bird, it sings along with Aretha Franklin. If it's a cat, it plays the guitar with its feet. If it's a dog, it can call the FBI (collect), catch a Frisbee that takes three days to come down, or program the VCR.

Bombeck

Unless you own a border collie, you will not be pleased with the findings of Stanley Coren's book, "The Intelligence of Dogs." That breed rates No. 1 in intelligence. At the bottom of the list is the Afghan, described as "a perfect fashion accessory."

The author warns that the smarter the dog, the more time you have to spend with it. Although a Doberman is pretty bright, leave one at home alone and it will try one thing, then another, until it tears up your house or finds a way out.

People regard their animals pretty much the way they do their children. They're always brilliant, and if it isn't evident, they are misunderstood — but the potential is there.

I was never ashamed to admit that I owned a lot of pets who were airheads, but they were cute. That was my criterion. What's wrong with that? Some people marry airheads for the same reason.

We had a dog that didn't know what side of the door the snow was on. When he got outside and remembered, he tunneled under the door trying to get back in.

I watch a lot of animal shows, and the narrator is always giving his subjects a lot of credit for intelligence. They never mention the agouti. The agouti is a rodent from South America that was observed by a team of researchers. They noted the animal dug up a sweet potato and did three things: (a) it peeled the potato; (b) it ate the potato; (c) it ate the peelings. Maybe it's a habit the agouti picked up from Oreo cookie eaters who painstakingly split the cookie apart, lick off the icing and then devour the chocolate. Go figure.

I have a theory that animals are as smart as they have to be to survive. If Liz Taylor and Joan Rivers want to carry Yorkshire terriers around in their handbags, why should these dogs learn how to balance themselves on a beach ball and walk across a stage?

My aunt and uncle had a dachshund that grabbed a blanket off the bed and arranged it around him before he went to sleep every night. If he had been real bright, he'd have adjusted the thermostat.

The most intelligent animal we ever owned was a horse named Nipper. We had the animal four years, and in all that time he never permitted a saddle or a human being on his back. Now, that's smart.

Joining hearts; dividing chores

Who ties on the apron when a couple ties the knot?

By Karen Haram
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — It's one thing to say "I do" to marriage vows and quite another thing to say, "I'll do the cooking."

A generation or two ago, when brides took on a new name, most also took on kitchen chores. But cooking customs, skills and interests have changed. So we wondered who ties on the apron when couples tie the knot in the '90s.

We talked to San Antonio couples planning weddings to learn which, if either, of the twosome will be walking down the aisle and into the kitchen. We found no brides who claim to be experts at cooking but quite a few grooms who say they're willing to try, or at least to clean up.

Gail Boettcher, who married Bill Armstrong on June 25, says she works late, "so he'll probably have to cook for the first couple of years."

Unfortunately, neither can cook. "We'll both learn together," she says optimistically.

Boettcher's repertoire consists of grilled cheese and spaghetti. Her fiance likes to grill. "That's about it," she says.

BOETTCHER SAYS they have cookbooks and want to eat at home as much as possible. "We'll probably start with one-dish meals," she says. High on her to-learn list is lasagna, one of her husband's favorites. "I tried it one time and it didn't quite work out," she says.

Patricia Sarabia, who married Tim Wenzel on Sept. 17, has no great desire to learn to cook, even though she's moved into a house with a "fantastic kitchen."

"Tim comes from a family that always cooked from scratch at home. I come from a long line of frozen-food eaters," she said.

Sarabia's cooking inexperience was evident at her bridal shower.

"Tim's mother gave me a present. I opened it and said, 'What is it?'

"She said, 'It's a sifter.'

"I said, 'What's a sifter?'

"She said, 'A flour sifter to sift your flour.'

"My question was, 'Why do you sift flour?'

"She said, 'For baking.'

"I said, 'Have you ever heard of Duncan Hines?' "

To spur Sarabia's interest, Wenzel's mother gave her a recipe box filled with family favorites.

RoxAnne Barrera and Air Force Capt. Walter Calvo, who got married June 4, are at the opposite end of the cooking spectrum. Calvo learned to cook from his mother, a French pastry chef in Miami Beach, Fla. Barrera's mother worked and went to school and was always busy. "We grew up with grilled cheese sandwiches and hot dogs. My dad was in the kitchen more," she says.

BARRERA SAYS she and her husband agree that whoever gets home from work first will start dinner. But she says he's the better cook.

"He tries different gourmet foods. I'm learning from him. I tell him, 'Sweetheart, you cook and I'll clean.' "

Brandy Villastrigo and Matt Dieterle, who graduated from Texas A&M University in May, had June 11 as their wedding day. At college, the couple ate out most of the time.

"I can't cook. He's not that good either. Once we start having kids, I will be the one doing the cooking. I think I'm going to take a cooking class so my husband doesn't starve," she says.

Villastrigo says her skills are limited to "the basics — Shake 'N Bake and breakfast. For dinner meals, the only thing I can really do is broil steak."

Dieterle's specialty is macaroni and cheese.

Villastrigo is confident. "I just think I need to get in the kitchen and do it," she says.

Loretta Soechting isn't sure who will do most of the cooking, her or new husband Kenneth Clark.

"If you ask me, I'd say him. He'd say me. He cooks a lot for a man and we do a lot together," Soechting says.

Their cooking styles are different. "He's very basic, like chicken and rice. I'm more into pastas. I like to do stuff out of cookbooks," she said.

Athough Soechting says her mother is a great cook, she "just didn't learn."

ANGELA MARTINEZ and Ben Carranza were married on June 18. Students at the University of Texas at Austin, the couple has cooked many meals together at school and "basically who cooks is just kind of who is least busy, who doesn't have a test, who is less tired, who doesn't have to work that day, who has a day off," she says.

Martinez says she is comfortable in the kitchen and can handle such dishes as enchiladas and lasagna. Carranza likes to make picadillo con papa and hamburgers and french fries as well as cook on the grill.

Martinez says, "If I do the cooking, he will usually do the dishes," she says.

Lee Fairall, who married Lisa Sayles June 18, says both have decided to "jump in with both feet. We'll probably take some cooking classes to help us."

REGARDLESS OF who cooks, the couple plans to clean up together.

"She's a school teacher and she spends a lot of time at night preparing for the next day, grading papers. The sooner we get the cleaning done, the sooner she can get back to what she's doing," he says.

It's exciting, Fairall says, to be "getting tons of stuff" for the kitchen as wedding gifts.

Good things come in small packages

By Anita Baker
N.Y. Times News Service

IRVING — Bob Testin picked up a purple package of Kool-Aid from the shelves of an Irving grocery store.

An excellent example of packaging, Testin said, pointing to the thin paper-foil package holding a half-ounce or so of powder that expands to two quarts.

When it is empty, it takes up almost no space in a landfill. And while on the shelf, it's the kind of packaging that "would jump up and down and say 'buy me,' " Testin, an associate professor at Clemson University, said during a break at a recent seminar for Fort Worth-Dallas teachers sponsored by the Flexible Packaging Association.

Not so for the rows of milk jugs and egg cartons, which blandly fill refrigerated cases.

"This is not an exciting form of packaging," Testin said while on a tour of the store.

He ought to know. Testin spends hours each semester in grocery stores with his students and isn't above dropping by out-of-town stores when he is on vacation.

"I found some interesting ones in Europe this summer," said Testin, who directs Clemson's Packaging Science Program, one of only three such university studies in the nation.

TESTIN, WHO willingly shares grocery shopping duties with his wife, finds he spends as much or more time studying the packaging as he does choosing the groceries.

'Packaging as much as anything else touches our lives.'

— Bob Testin
expert on packaging

He believes food packaging sometimes gets a bad rap.

"Packaging as much as anything else touches our lives," Testin said. But people tend to remember the negative, like tugging and pulling to open a bag of peanuts on an airplane.

Packaging not only protects the product on the inside from contamination, it often is designed to protect the public from the product — like acid or poisons, he said.

And without packaging, which often contains assembly instructions, warnings or product ingredients, the only link between the manufacturer and consumer would be gone.

Packaging should be kept to a minimum for the sake of landfills, particularly because studies are showing that even food and newspapers, which are expected to decompose, are not breaking down in landfills.

But even when castoff items do break down, the end result can be liquids and gases that can threaten ground water or the atmosphere.

"I do not think degradable packaging is the way it is going to be," Testin said. Students in his class, instead, are trained to search for ways to improve packaging using fewer and cheaper materials.

In making a choice, a consumer must select packaging according to its effect on the environment. Buy the least packaging possible, and if it can be recycled, do it, he said.

THE CLASSIC example is paper vs. plastic bags at the grocery store. If you plan to throw away the bags and not recycle them, plastic ones will put less waste in the landfill, Testin said.

If it is a choice between juice in a plastic jug vs. frozen concentrate, you are environmentally better off with frozen, he said.

"If everyone recycled the jug, it would be great, but 50 percent or less do," he said.

Coffee packaging offers another choice, Testing said, pointing to foil-wrapped packages of coffee next to rows of coffee in cans. He always buys the foil packs and transfers the coffee into a plastic container.

The flexible, vacuum-pack coffee bag weighs 90 percent less than the metal can it replaces, occupies 20 percent less space on the shelf and takes up less room in the landfill, he said.

Disposable diapers continue to trigger debate, although Testin said if his five children were youngsters again, he would use disposable instead of cloth diapers because of the convenience.

"There is not a clear determination which is environmentally better," he said. Cloth diapers increase use of water and detergents while disposable add to the landfill.

WHEN PRACTICAL, consumers should buy products in large quantities, eliminating some packaging, he said, pointing to giant boxes of laundry soap.

But large quantities should be purchased with care, he warned. It doesn't make sense to buy a huge supply if the product spoils before it can be used up or if storage space is at a premium.

The United States has been slow to pick up on several new ways to package milk now being tested in Europe and Canada, Testin said.

Milk in other nations is sometimes sold in flexible containers that collapse when empty. A corner of the package is cut off and the milk is then transferred to a reusable container, he said.

In one respect, packaging has increased in recent years and for good cause: Sadly, many of the products today must be tamper-resistant, Testin said.

Even so, packaging companies continually compete to reduce packaging in order to gain that competitive edge, he said.

Today's bottles and cans contain 20 to 30 percent less material than they did 10 years ago, Testin said. If companies had not thinned the materials, they would have lost contracts with the companies that make the products needed to fill the containers.

Change batteries when change clocks

CAPE ELIZABETH, Maine (AP) — Fire prevention experts estimate that although smoke detectors are in nearly 90 percent of American homes, nearly one-third do not work because of worn or missing batteries.

Research also indicates that working smoke detectors cut the risk of dying in a home fire by nearly half by providing an early warning and critical extra seconds to escape.

As part of a large-scale public education program on smoke detector neglect, the International Association of Fire Chiefs and Eveready Battery Co. have joined in a coalition to promote a "Change Your Clock, Change Your Battery" home fire safety campaign.

Homeowners are urged to change the batteries in their smoke detectors each fall when they change their clocks back from daylight-saving time to standard time. The 1994 time change weekend is Oct. 29-30.

Vinegar can add zing to recipes

By James E. Walters

PHOENIX (AP) — While vinegar has been around for thousands of years, it has been taken for granted too much of the time — including the present, claims expert Maggie Oster.

And that is an even bigger mistake today, she contends in a new book "Herbal Vinegar," because "vinegar provides us with an opportunity to enliven and enhance our favorite foods, allowing us to develop a healthier cuisine, as well as improve our homes and lives."

The book contains more than 175 recipes with vinegar as an ingredient and a number of nonculinary recommendations.

To clean windows, she suggests a tablespoon of vinegar in a quart of water. For clogged drains, pour in a handful of baking soda, add a half-cup of vinegar, wait for 5-10 minutes, then run cold water. To polish furniture, wipe with a soft, clean cloth moistened with a mixture of three tablespoons of vinegar and one quart of water. She says ants will stay away from an area wiped or sprayed with equal parts water and vinegar.

THE BOOK'S emphasis, however, is on cooking and, says Oster, "using vinegar in cooking often reduces calories and the amount of salt in food while adding a bracing tang and penetrating complexity of flavor.

"I've always dearly loved eating and I can't remember a time in my life when I didn't enjoy salads, pickles and other foods flavored with vinegar," she adds.

But it wasn't until much later that she discovered vinegar could be made or flavored with all sorts of exotic ingredients, and, she says, this book is the result of that research.

Also included in the 172-page book is information on growing the best herbs to flavor vinegar, many of them suitable for patio containers or indoor locations. Among those discussed are bay, calendula, fennel, lavender, lemon verbena, marjoram, mint, orange, parsley, rosemary, sage and thyme.

"Flavoring vinegars is among the easiest of gardening crafts and the combinations you can create are limited only by your imagination," she says.

BUT ONE challenge, she says, is choosing the vinegar with which to start since quality varies greatly, depending on method of production.

"The only sure way to tell the quality is by tasting and comparing. Do the quality and flavor of the vinegar you buy really matter when you are going to flavor it at home with herbs, spices, flowers and fruits? To a great extent, yes, although this doesn't mean you have to buy a premium vinegar."

A basic rule: A bad vinegar will not improve with flavoring.

One way to determine preferred vinegars is to have a vinegar tasting.

"The one key difference from a wine tasting is that it is more difficult to keep the taste buds open when sampling vinegars. As a general rule you should taste no more than five or six at a time.

"... Good vinegars have a clean aroma that is not too strong, and a pleasing, full taste. The best vinegars have an intricacy of flavor and aroma that is rich, smooth and subtle. The aftertaste should be subtle and pleasant rather than harsh or biting."

SHE SUGGESTS that the length of time flavorings stay in vinegar is a matter of personal taste.

"Sample the vinegar after a week or so. Usually the greatest amount of flavor is extracted after a month."

She estimates vinegar was discovered about 10,000 years ago, concurrent with wine, since it is the next natural step after alcoholic fermentation.

"Vinegar soon became indispensable as a means of enhancing the flavor of foods and as a preservative for them as well as a curative and cosmetic," she says. "Before the advent of modern technology, vinegar, in addition to salt brine, was a major way of preserving food. The acidic nature of vinegar slows down the growth of harmful bacteria in food."

By law in the United States, vinegar must be of at least 4 percent acidity.

"Herbal Vinegar" is published by Storey Communications of Pownal, Vt. The soft-cover edition has a suggested retail price of $12.95.
