White House spokesman Mike McCurry pauses during his daily briefing Friday at the White House. McCurry was confronted by a White House Press Corps eager to know if and when President Clinton would give his account of events related to his alleged affair with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

Lawyer: Lewinsky would testify if given immunity

■ Attorney William Ginsburg says the former intern would testify in exchange for immunity from prosecution that she had a sexual relationship with Clinton, but would not accuse Clinton of asking her to lie about it.

From wire reports

WASHINGTON — The lawyer for Monica Lewinsky has told prosecutors that in exchange for immunity from prosecution his client would testify that she had a sexual relationship with President Clinton, but that she was not prepared to flatly accuse either the president or his close friend, Vernon Jordan, of asking her to lie about it, investigators involved in the case said Friday, according to a N.Y. Times report.

Such testimony would further heighten the humiliation for Clinton over his relationship with Lewinsky, who came to the White House as a 21-year-old intern fresh out of a small college in Oregon. It would undercut the threat of an obstruction of justice case against the president or Jordan. But it would leave the question of whether Clinton perjured himself in a deposition in the Paula Jones case, where he reportedly said he had no sexual relationship with Lewinsky.

The special counsel, Kenneth Starr, has rejected the offer as insufficient.

With intense legal pressure bearing down Friday on Lewinsky, Whitewater prosecutors alerted her attorney that

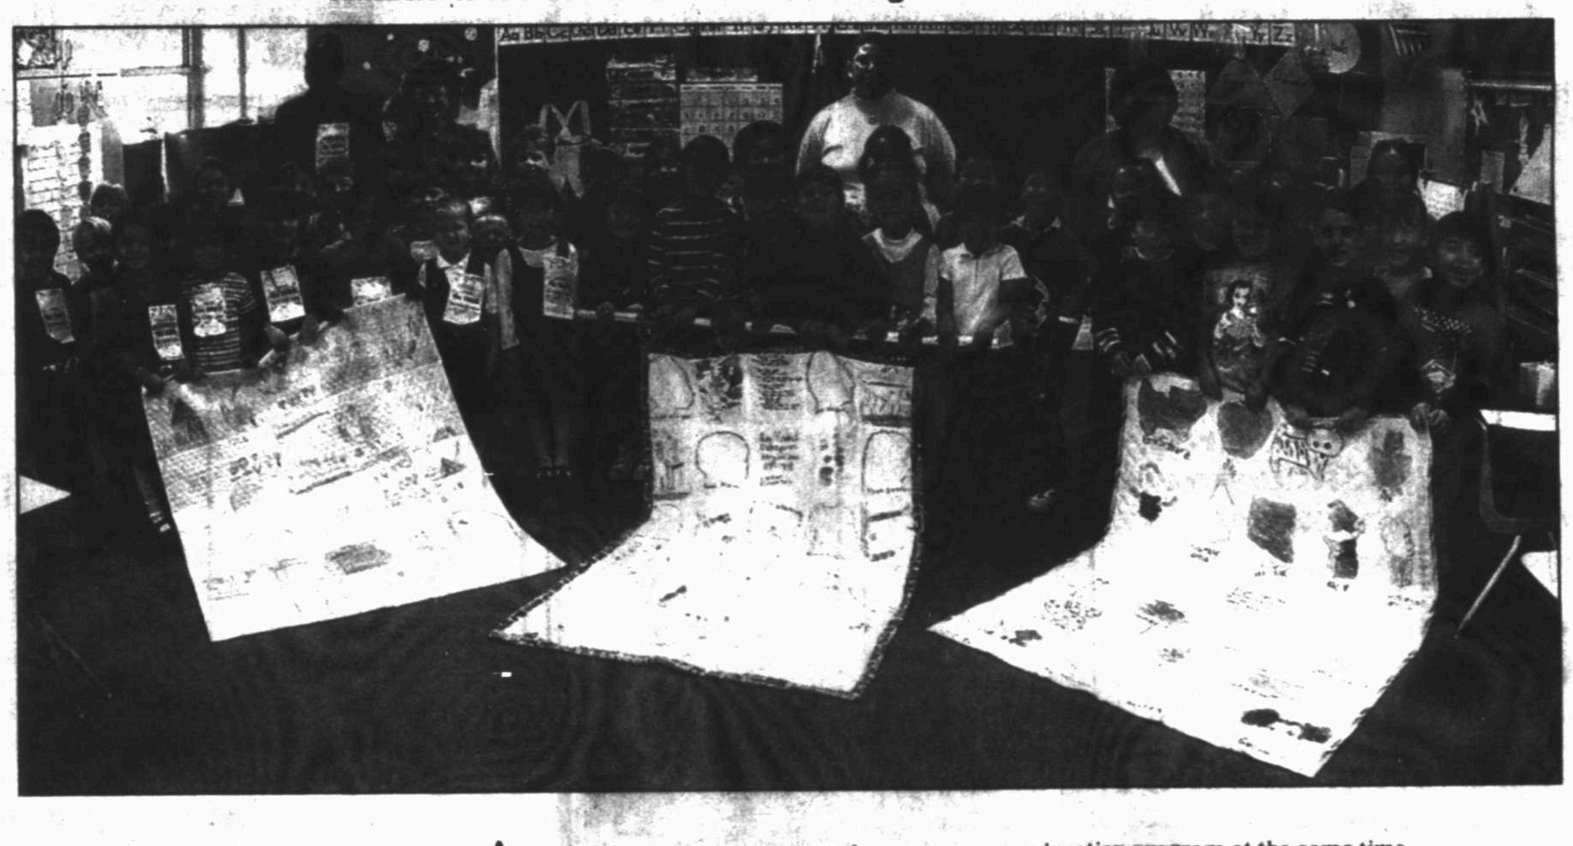
Three kindergarten classes at Lamar Elementary School made quilts that are to be donated to Allison Cancer Center. Teachers of two of the school's six kindergarten classes have cancer.



Kindergartners reach out to cancer victims

Story by Richard Enos

A little love and concern can make a cancer patient's life a little easier.

Lamar Elementary School staff and students protect their own and that love and protection extends to two kindergarten teachers currently fighting cancer.

One teacher currently is recovering from breast cancer, while the other is losing her battle with bone cancer.

To reach out to the teachers and other cancer victims in Midland, three kindergarten teachers and their students created quilts that will be donated for patients to use at Allison Cancer Center.

Teachers Mary Madrid, Judy Buckalew and Hope Sanchez provided the quilts for the children and the students provided the illustrations.

The quilts are an act of kindness, but also serve a functional use. When a patient undergoes chemotherapy, their immune system is weakened and they get cold easily, Ms. Madrid explained.

She said the quilts were one way the students could help out and learn about MISD's character education program at the same time.

The curriculum calls for schools to teach nine core character traits: citizenship, compassion, courage, diligence, fairness, honesty, integrity, respect and responsibility.

"It's also teaching them citizenship and responsibility," Ms. Madrid said. "(It's) that they have a responsibility to the community. We're responsible for taking care of other people."

Ms. Madrid's class is studying letters of the alphabet and several weeks ago covered the letter 'Q.' The teacher decided it was a good time to learn about quilts.

Connie Thomas, Lamar's assistant principal, said the lesson taught the children about compassion and life. The kindergarten teacher with bone cancer has been fighting it for about two years. She just recently stopped teaching and uses a wheelchair.

But while she was teaching, she was treated with respect and kindness, Ms. Thomas said.

North urges pro-lifers to elect those who'll 'stand for the sanctity of life'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Proclaiming himself to be a stalwart for the "sanctity of human life," Oliver North challenged fellow pro-lifers at the West Texans for Life annual banquet Friday night to campaign to abolish abortion, especially "heinous" partial-birth abortion.

"We (as a nation) got here because we weren't paying attention," North, 54, said of the legalization of abortion 25 years ago by those "nine men in black robes."

The nine justices on the U.S. Supreme Court in deciding Roe vs. Wade in 1973 ruled that states may not prohibit a woman's right to have an abortion in the first six months of her pregnancy. The 1973 decision "authorized doctors to kill those children," North said.

"We can change it," North pledged. "I deeply believe that everyone of those lives is precious in the eyes of my Maker and Savior.

"It is up to us, people like you

Physician's group files bankruptcy, doctors to continue seeing patients

From Staff Reports

Midland's first physician's cooperative group, Midland Odessa Medical (MOM), filed for bankruptcy protection Friday in U. S. Bankruptcy Court.

The organization filed two Chapter 7 petitions under the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. One petition was filed by Midland Odessa Medical Management Inc, and a second by Midland Odessa Medical Group, a professional limited liability company. Both petitions estimate the number of creditors owed by the organizations at between 200 and 999.

The petitions were signed by K. Michael Conaway of Midland who is listed as president of the corporations.

All of the physicians involved in the group are seeing patients and will not be affected by the shutdown, according to Dr. Sheldon Viney, former chief executive officer and one of the founders of the organization.

"We decided to shut down to protect the assets and make sure that everybody gets paid," Viney told the Reporter-Telegram Thursday. The bankruptcy peti-

Russia faces decision on how to bury last czar — with glory or restraint

MOSCOW (AP) — The skeleton is small and brittle, charred by acid and darkened by swamp mud. The skull, smashed by rifle butts, has a hole where the face would be.

Eighty years after he was executed and six years after his bones were exhumed, the remains of Russia's last czar are still lying under a plastic dome in a police morgue in the central city of Yekaterinburg, a haunting reminder of unsettled history.

A commission set up by President Boris Yeltsin is expected to rule this month that the skeleton belongs to Nicholas II. That would pave the way for his funeral, perhaps as soon as this year.

But Russians are split on how to bury the last czar — with glory and ceremony or with quiet restraint? Should the nation honor the last "Emperor of all the Russias," or simply inter a discredited despot?

Tellingly, Nicholas' remains are not the only ones trapped between the past and present: Russia is also divided over whether to bury its most famous communist, Vladimir Lenin — the revolutionary leader who authorized Nicholas' execution and whose embalmed remains are still on display in Red Square.

Yeltsin, who will have the final say, has urged burial for both. But for the moment, he has left Lenin's fate aside and is pushing for the burial of the last czar.

"From a historical point of view, by burying the emperor and his family, we will be putting a very clear end to this tragedy," says historian Sergei Mironenko, director of Russia's State Archives.

AP Photo

Alexei Nikitin, chief of the group of scientists in Yekaterinburg who examined the exhumed bones of last Russian czar, Nicholas II, and his family, lays out the vertebrae belonging to the czarina's chambermaid, Anna Demidova, in the central forensics lab in Yekaterinburg on Tuesday. In the foreground are the skulls of the deposed czar and czarina: Nicholas' skull is on the right; the czarina's is on the left.

Nicholas II — a weak but imperious ruler — was executed by fervent Bolsheviks on July 17, 1918, along with his wife, five children, doctor and three servants.

To prevent the remains from becoming religious or political relics, the revolutionaries did their best to destroy the 11 bodies, burning them with fire and acid, blasting them with grenades and dumping what remained in a swampy, unmarked pit outside Yekaterinburg.

"There was no real burial," says Mironenko. "All there was was a cover-up to a murder."

Exhumation of the bones began the day after Yeltsin was inaugurated as Russia's first elected president in July 1991. The symbolism was potent: At the same moment Russia set out toward a new future, it also was reclaiming its past.

The investigation eventually lost steam, but was revived a few months ago when Yeltsin ordered his commission to finish its work in January.

Vladimir Solovyov, the chief investigator, has so far treated the case like a criminal probe — conducting batteries of DNA and other forensic tests and determining the cause of death.

He says his report concludes that the nine exhumed skeletons belong to Nicholas, his wife, three daughters, doctor and three servants. Two of the corpses — the fourth daughter and Nicholas' only son, Alexei — were burned to ash and scattered, Solovyov said.

Two of the daughters, Maria and Anastasia, were only a year apart, and DNA testing cannot distinguish between siblings. Russian scientists believe the missing daughter is Maria, but some experts have suggested it is Anastasia.

Solovyov's conclusion is based on reams of forensic data, including DNA tests by government labs in Britain and the United States. Persistent doubts by some Russian exiles and conspiracy theorists led the Russian Orthodox Church in 1995 to ask for additional tests, but church officials said this month that they plan to concur with the investigation's conclusion.

Irish premier demands independent inquiry in effort to heal wounds of Bloody Sunday

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (AP) — After praying Friday at the site of the British army's worst killing in Northern Ireland, the prime minister of Ireland demanded an independent inquiry into Bloody Sunday so its bitter memory can be laid to rest "once and for all."

Prime Minister Bertie Ahern, who also laid a wreath at the monument, said he expected British Prime Minister Tony Blair to approve "an independent judicial inquiry to examine the events of that day — precisely what happened — so that we do see justice and fairness and that these issues can be laid to rest once and for all."

"An apology would be useful, but frankly an inquiry that discloses the truth of that day is really what is required," Ahern said.

The monument to the 13 Roman Catholic men and teen-agers shot dead at the end of a protest march on Jan. 30, 1972, marks a watershed event in the Northern Ireland conflict — one that radicalized hundreds of Catholic youths to move from street protests into the ranks of the IRA.

The 13 deaths and the exoneration of the British paratroopers involved will be the focus of protest marches Saturday in London and Glasgow, Scotland, and Irish-American groups will picket British embassies in several U.S. cities.

Many thousands of Catholics are expected to retrace the original marchers' steps in Londonderry itself Feb. 1.

Civilian witnesses are unanimous that the soldiers fired deliberately at an unarmed and panicked crowd, who were marching in their thousands against the British government's policy of interning Irish Republican Army suspects without trial.

But the English judge who investigated the event that year concluded that while some soldiers' shooting "bordered on the reckless," the IRA fired first and some of those slain were probably handling weapons, even though the troops recovered none.

"Nobody disputes the innocence of the many hundreds of civilian victims of bombings and shootings committed by the IRA. But Bloody Sunday is different. The killers were exonerated and the victims were maligned — people who had no guns and no bombs," said Denis Bradley, who as a priest in 1972 administered last rites to some of the dying.

Blair, seeking to keep both Northern Ireland's militant Catholics and pro-British Protestants involved in peace talks, is expected to offer an official apology soon and launch a new investigation into the event.

Catholic activists have compiled a catalog of witnesses' oral testimony, backed up by audio and film records, which indicates that not only British paratroopers who confronted the protest march were involved in the shooting.

The new evidence indicates that army snipers on Londonderry's 17th-century walls overlooking the Catholic Bogside district killed three protesters.

Pope offers message of hope to Cuban youth

■ Pontiff repeats appeal for more Catholic education in communist Cuba.

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press

CAMAGUEY, Cuba — Bent, weary but still quick of wit, an elderly pope on a historic mission sought Friday to rally Cuba's young people to Christ and to building a "new society" of love and reconciliation in a land of aging revolution.

In a sermon to tens of thousands at an open-air Mass, Pope John Paul II also appealed for a second day running for more opportunity for Catholic education in communist Cuba, where church schools were ordered closed soon after the 1959 communist revolution.

"The church has a duty of providing a moral, civic and religious formation," the pontiff declared. "(A duty) to be undertaken without fear."

John Paul's schedule later Friday — the third day of the unprecedented five-day papal pilgrimage to this Caribbean island — included a visit to the heart of Cuban education — the University of Havana — to meet with Cuban intellectuals.

Limping, hand trembling, eyelid at times drooping, the 77-year-old leader of the Roman Catholic Church has looked weak since his arrival in Cuba. But Friday morning's reception in Camaguey seemed to revitalize the traveler from Rome.

At the Mass in Agramonte Plaza, a buoyant chorus of 500 sang and swayed to a brassy salsa beat as the bulletproof popemobile headed toward the square through this city of colonial buildings and hidden gardens in central Cuba.

Some 50,000 people filled the plaza, many bused in from distant communities. In the tropical sun, nuns in long white habits shaded their heads with paper Vatican or Cuban flags.

During pauses in his homily, the crowd chanted and cheered — at one point "Viva el Papa!" from a group of Mexicans.

"Are they Cubans who appear to be Mexicans?" the pontiff quipped back in Spanish. "Or Mexicans who appear to be Cubans?"

The crowd roared.

Later they chanted, "We see it! We feel it! The pope is here with us!" and the smiling pope replied, in the tropical heat that reached the 80s, "I see it, I feel it, the sun is here with us."

Not everyone in the congregation was so enthusiastic.

Rows of local communist officials sat expressionless and unresponsive throughout. But many ordinary Cubans also appeared subdued.

"They are receiving this with serenity," said one visiting observer, Spanish Bishop Jose Sanchez. "They don't want to be boisterous because they are not sure this is going to last."

He was referring to the greater tolerance for religious expression being shown by President Fidel Castro's government. It is this openness that the pope is trying to build on, especially with his appeal for greater "space" for Catholic education.

In a sermon Thursday, the pope scolded the communists for having denied parents the right to choose a Catholic education for their children.

He returned to the theme in Friday's Camaguey homily on "youth," declaring that Catholic education would aid in the "sowing of virtue and spirituality for the good of the church and of the nation."

Cuba's pre-revolutionary Catholic schools were primarily havens for a white elite in this mostly mulatto and black nation. Currently, the government allows only catechism classes on church grounds.

As usual on his foreign trips, the pontiff, in both his sermon and an associated written message, appealed to youth to avoid the emptiness and evils of modern life: "alcohol, the abuse of sex, drug use, prostitution."

But he also honed his message to the reality of "this bright island," where material shortages and the hostility of a giant neighbor, the United States, have made life hard and deflated the hopes of many young Cubans.

John Paul repeated his criticism of trade embargoes, like America's against Cuba, calling them "deplorable because they hurt the most needy."

Yet the answer to the deepest problems doesn't lie in politics, the pope said, but in returning to Cuba's "Christian roots."

"Do all that you can to build a future of ever greater dignity and freedom," he declared. From within the church, he said, young people can contribute to "a society which is ... new: the Cuba of reconciliation and love."

People across this beautiful but poor island were watching the pope's progress on national television, looking for hints that he might help change things for the better in Cuba.

"The immense majority — immense — support Fidel," retired sugar mill worker Felicito Gonzalez, 74, assured a reporter in Havana. "But there are many, many problems here. Perhaps this great world personality can help us."

In one potential concession, the Vatican announced Thursday that Cuban officials had agreed to consider freeing some prisoners who had sought the pope's intercession. Human rights groups say Cuba holds almost 500 political prisoners.

The pope travels to Cuba's second city, Santiago, on Saturday and celebrates a farewell Mass on Sunday at Havana's Plaza of the Revolution.

Pope John Paul II embraces a Cuban girl after delivering his remarks at a mass dedicated to youth in Camaguay, Cuba Friday. The mass included a condemnation of the U.S. economic embargo. The Pope is on the third day of a five-day visit to Cuba.

U.N. inspector: Iraq determined to hide truth

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations may never learn the truth about Iraq's banned weapons if Baghdad continues to refuse U.N. arms experts free access to all sites, the chief inspector warned Friday.

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson called Richard Butler's report "deeply disturbing" and denounced Iraq's stand as "unacceptable." But the 15-member Security Council appeared no closer to agreeing on decisive action than last year, when Iraq first barred inspectors from presidential palaces and other sensitive sites.

Richardson said Washington would consult its allies to seek a diplomatic solution and repeated that "we are not ruling any option out." Some council diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said such hints of military force no longer carry much weight.

China's U.N. ambassador, Qin Huasun, said Iraq's "dignity and legitimate security concerns should be taken into due consideration."

Russian Ambassador Sergey Lavrov said the council must "avoid any steps," such as military force, which would provoke Iraq into expelling all U.N. inspectors and shutting down electronic surveillance operations.

Butler appeared before the council to report on talks this week in Baghdad, in which he repeated U.N. demands for access to all suspected weapons sites.

The inspectors are trying to determine whether Baghdad has complied with U.N. orders issued at the end of the 1991 Persian Gulf War to eliminate long-range missiles and weapons of mass destruction. That is the main condition for the council to lift crippling economic sanctions imposed in 1990 after President Saddam Hussein's forces invaded Kuwait.

During the Baghdad talks, Iraq's deputy prime minister, Tariq Aziz, proposed a moratorium on U.N. efforts to enter restricted areas until April. In the meantime, technical experts from both sides could evaluate other material gathered by the teams.

If the access issue remained unresolved by April, new talks could be held to find a solution. Council President Alain Dejammet of France said all members considered the moratorium "unacceptable" and said efforts would be made next week to agree on an unanimous response.

British Ambassador John Weston said that the United Nations must respond to Iraq's latest defiance if it wants "to retain any credibility."

Given the differences, however, it remained unclear whether such a response would go beyond the series of statements issued by the council since October, when Iraq ordered American inspectors to leave the country.

Baghdad rescinded the expulsion order at the request of Russian Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov.

In his report, Butler accused Iraq of "grave instances of attempts to mislead the commission and the council."

Study: 'La Entrada' would increase value of Texas exports to Mexico

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

"La Entrada al Pacifico" could have a significant impact on the West Texas economy, according to a study made for Motran Alliance Inc. by economist Ray Perryman.

Development of the "La Entrada" transportation corridor — a system of highways linking West Texas to Mexico's Pacific port of Topolobampo — would increase the value of Texas exports to Mexico to $7.171 billion by 2005, up from the current $4.7 billion, he said. By the year 2020, when the corridor would be fully developed, that figure would grow to $11.4 billion in exports to Mexico and $22.5 billion in imports from Mexico.

"If we captured an additional 10 percent of the potential volume of Texas trade with Mexico, in 20 years the La Entrada corridor would gain 50,000 jobs and $3 billion in output," Perryman said.

Growth, he said, would come in the form of support services such as distribution, warehousing and production facilities. The Midland-Odessa area also would benefit because 40 percent of all U.S. goods Mexico buys are made in Texas, and it is advantageous to make products close to distribution points, he said. Already, Midland-Odessa exports products from the local petrochemical complex and, he said, a surprising amount of services such as architecture and engineering.

Perryman said that much of Mexico's production activity involves the assembly of components manufactured elsewhere, and development of the La Entrada corridor would bring those goods through the region.

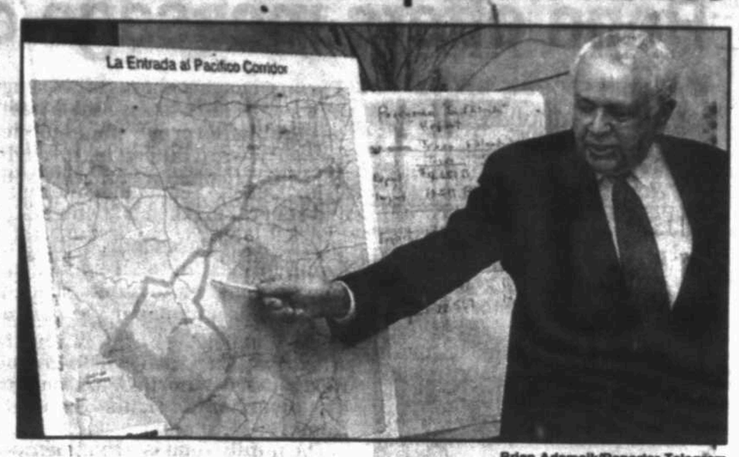
"If we were able to capture just 2 percent of the Asian trade" that comes primarily through the Los Angeles-Long Beach, Calif. port, "that would mean over 2 million truck trips annually and the creation of hundreds of thousands of jobs for Texas and Mexico. These numbers are significant," Perryman said.

Perryman's organization also studied the economic links between Midland-Odessa, Lubbock-Amarillo and San Angelo. He found that trade activity potential in the transportation corridor between Midland-Odessa and Lubbock-Amarillo was $15.7 billion, rising to $33.5 billion in 2020 while potential between Midland-Odessa and San Angelo was $10 billion currently and $21.9 billion in 2020.

"There is enormous potential," he said. "We will gain if we coalesce and become a region despite our geographic distance. It makes sense to work together to bring about the best transportation system we possibly can," Perryman said.

Statistics from the U.S. Department of Commerce rank Lubbock as the fourth-fastest growing exporting center in the nation, with Midland-Odessa ranked 10th.

He praised Motran's efforts to expand transportation facilities in the West Texas area and develop the La Entrada trade route.



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Charles Perry, above, president of Motran Alliance Inc., said that the alliance commissioned economist Ray Perryman to study the expected impact of "La Entrada al Pacifico."

"This group has worked aggressively in making its case that if you can develop this logical corridor that has ready markets and established distribution facilities in place, it will open numerous possibilities and foster vibrant economic activity. This is a project for our children and our grandchildren; it's a long view of the future."

Charles Perry, president of Motran, said Perryman was asked to undertake the study to provide support in justifying new highways to the governments of both Texas and Mexico.

"The most immediate need is 30 kilometers of road out of Ojinaga that need improvement; the roads between Durango and Mazatlan are in good shape."

He said that Motran members will be traveling to Chihuahua City in February to deliver a copy of the report to help the state government get aid from the Mexican federal government.

He also predicted that "La Entrada" signs, already erected in Midland-Odessa, will be located all the way to Chihuahua City this year.

"We work with both Mexico's federal government and various state governments, and they're getting the message that a lot of the potential for western Mexico is being lost," Perryman said.

INTERN: Lewinsky's lawyer seeks negotiations with Starr

the former White House intern is an investigative target likely to be indicted. With his State of the Union speech looming, President Clinton decided not to address the matter for now, according to the Associated Press.

Out of public sight and with no word when he would fulfill his pledge to quickly give a full accounting of his relationship with the young intern, Clinton huddled with legal advisers and decided not to hold a news conference Friday or over the weekend.

New details emerged about efforts to get Ms. Lewinsky to cooperate. Ginsburg confirmed that prosecutors offered her immunity the first day the FBI approached her a week ago, provided she participate in a sting operation against Clinton and his long-time confidant, Verdon Jordan. She didn't accept.

Lawyers and others familiar with the contents of taped conversations now in the hands of Whitewater prosecutors said Ms. Lewinsky told her friend Linda Tripp that she performed oral sex on Clinton numerous times. The sources, insisting on anonymity, said Ms. Lewinsky asserts on the tapes that Clinton had been seeing at least four other women, three of whom worked at the White House, and that she was angry about it.

Ms. Lewinsky was 21 when she went to work at the White House in 1995. In the taped conversations, she expressed "a high-school kind of jealousy, sometimes anger, sometimes frustration" about the president, according to one source.

The tapes also quote Ms. Lewinsky as saying that the alleged sexual encounters were "not frequent, not daily, not weekly, but infrequent: more than 10 times, less than dozens," said the source. At the same time, the source also said the tapes reflect Ms. Lewinsky telling Tripp that "as the physical relationship winds down, there are more and more phone calls" between Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky.

Clinton has emphatically denied having a sexual relationship with Ms. Lewinsky. She also has denied that the relationship was sexual in an affidavit in the Paula Jones' case. White House spokesman Lanny Davis declined to address whether Clinton's denial covered oral sex.

New polls for CNN/Time and Fox TV indicated the Lewinsky matter was taking a sharp toll, with Clinton's approval ratings dropping 10 points to 49 percent in the last week. Nonetheless, a White House official said the president had decided not to address questions before Tuesday's State of the Union address, giving aides time to examine documents subpoenaed by Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr.

Meanwhile, prosecutors and lawyers for key players in the investigation engaged in intense legal posturing.

Ginsburg disclosed that Ms. Lewinsky could be facing indictment and sought fresh negotiations with Starr over possible immunity. Prosecutors are looking at the possibility Ms. Lewinsky perjured herself and that Clinton and presidential confidant Vernon Jordan conspired with her.

Ms. Lewinsky received a subpoena to testify before the federal grand jury, while FBI agents obtained a search warrant for her home, sources close to the investigation confirmed.

In addition, a courier service in Washington was subpoenaed Friday by Starr for records and testimony about nine packages it delivered from Ms. Lewinsky at the Pentagon, where she then worked, to the West Wing of the White House last October through December. Employees of the courier service were expected to appear Tuesday before the grand jury to testify. Jordan, who has denied wrongoing, also is expected to testify Tuesday.

Subpoenas were delivered Friday to the Pentagon, where Ms. Lewinsky and Tripp worked together last year, and to the U.S. mission at the United Nations, where the U.S. ambasasador, Bill Richardson, has acknowledged offering Ms. Lewinsky a job late last year.

Inside the White House, a debate gripped Clinton's inner circle as aides tried to determine how much the president should say about his relationship with the woman. There is evidence Ms. Lewinsky visited the Oval Office several times, received gifts from Clinton and may have even gotten phone messages from him at her home.

An individual familiar with the taped conversations of Ms. Lewinsky said they show that among the gifts Clinton gave the woman was a dress, a hat pin and a copy of Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass."

Officials familiar with the debate said the president's legal team, including private attorney David Kendall, longtime friend Bruce Lindsey and White House counsel Charles F.C. Ruff were urging a measured response, concerned that it would not be wise to release too much detail until the criminal and civil cases played out more.

His political team urged a quick, and more complete accounting of all the documents they have gathered to provide the public a plausible explanation for his contacts and gifts to her that would support his strong denial he never had a sexual relationship. They were urging a presidential news conference, perhaps before the Super Bowl on Sunday.

LIFE: Catholic bishop urges loving, active opposition to abortion

and me, all across this nation ... to change it."

North, who is a combat-decorated U.S. Marine and who was a member of President Reagan's National Security Council staff in the 1980s, spoke to more than 600 people in the pro-life audience at Midland Center.

"We have a remarkable opportunity to change the course of human history" at the beginning of a new century. "We are the greatest, most prosperous, most productive, most generous nation on Earth," North said. "We've produced the highest-quality products with the hardest working people on the planet. We live in a nation that has been blessed with bounty beyond measure ... and resources so vast."

But those are material blessings, he noted. Now, the nation must seek spiritual and moral values.

"Those of us who believe in the sanctity of human life must go about electing those (politicians) who will stand for the sanctity of human life," said North, who noted that about 35 million unborn babies have been killed by abortion in the 25-year history of Roe vs. Wade.

"I am blessed (to be able) to speak for those who cannot speak for themselves."

North, who recalled that he had killed enemy soldiers in war and held dying Marines in his arms, said that he became aware that his purpose in life was not "to wear medals on my chest.

"The good Lord put me here for a reason," North said. "One of those reasons is to try to save the lives of others. I spent a lot of time in the Marine Corps trying to save the lives of my Marines."

Today, "I spend a lot of time trying to save the lives of (unborn) children.

"I know what is it like to take the life of another human being," said North, a native Texan who now lives in Virginia. "I've done it on battlefields in faraway places. Marines have died in my arms. I personally took the lives of enemy soldiers. I don't look back on those moments with any great sense of accomplishments."

North lamented that Oregon voters last year made their state "the most dangerous place on the planet for senior citizens." Physicians there are now "allowed to kill their (older) patients" under prescribed conditions, said North. He expressed alarm over the "mad scientist" who in Chicago announced that "he was planning to play God by cloning human beings."

North noted that Vice President Al Gore this week addressed the National Abortion Rights Action League's annual conference and "pledged to further the efforts of killing children" instead of lending his support to the pro-life rally this week in Washington, D.C., on the 25th anniversary of Roe vs. Wade.

Before North's talk, Catholic Bishop Michael Pfeifer of the Diocese of San Angelo urged pro-lifers to lovingly but actively oppose abortion clinics.

"How sad it is that here in the beautiful city of Midland, dedicated to life, that we have an abortion center," Pfeifer said. "We need to continue to work, as I have often done myself, to make sure that this center does not continue. We have to actively protest this center. As Christians, we are called upon to do everything we can to support life and to overcome a culture of death. To be pro-life means to respect life at every stage of life from the womb to the tomb."

In noting that "morality is not determined by a democratic vote," Pfeifer said that "God did not give us that privilege.

"When the right to life in the mother's womb is no longer sacred, no other life" will be honored, Pfeifer said. "And reasons will be found to justify their violations," such as by abortions. "Our response must be rooted in prayer and perseverance. Without God's help, we will never overcome this evil."

QUILT: Children learn to treat people with kindness

(From 1A)

"That's what we taught them. It's very hard for them to understand," she said. "A girl went home and said 'I've got to make a blanket for sick people.'"

Yet the children do understand how to treat people with kindness, Ms. Thomas added.

"We had concerns about putting a teacher in a wheelchair in a (kindergarten) classroom because there's a lot of energy," she said. "It was hard to think about that, but parents and kids are handling it well. The kids wheeled her around."

Ms. Madrid said the woman's grandson, who is a student at Lamar, met her at her car each day and helped her into her wheelchair and carried supplies for her.

Ms. Buckalew said the quilts were a way for the children to brighten other people's days.

"I think it's a wonderful idea," she said. "The kids really enjoy doing it. They know the purpose and they enjoy doing it and they like to make people happy.

The kindergartners enjoyed making the quilts.

"I like them because I like to draw a lot," Katie Wilett said. "(We give them) to a hospital that takes care of people who have cancer, so they can be warm."

Eglae Sanchez (no relation to Ms. Sanchez) said she's helping someone in need.

"They need some blankets," she said. "(Cancer patients) have like a shot that makes them cold. They need blankets to make them warm."

Lamar has dealt with cancer and terminal illnesses before.

"We also lost a teacher two years ago to cancer," Ms. Thomas said. "It's just an issue we always seem to be facing."

The late third-grade teacher is honored by a plaque in the hall near the school office.

Arafat, winding up visit, rejects Israeli offer as 'peanuts'

Arafat denied his frequent public calls for a 'jihad' meant he was urging a holy war against Israel. 'You have to understand our terminology and our Arabic language,' Arafat said. It's a call for establishing a Palestinian state, he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yasser Arafat wound up his talks here Friday rejecting as "peanuts" an Israeli offer for a limited pullback on the West Bank and praising President Clinton's endorsement of Palestinian aspirations.

"We cannot accept it," Arafat said angrily of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's offer to cede up to 10 percent of the territory if the Palestinian Authority took tougher actions against terrorists.

Israel has turned over Gaza and 27 percent of the West Bank to the Palestinians. On Thursday, Arafat demanded an additional 60 percent. Netanyahu said that ceding more land would expose Israel to attack and that it would be "suicidal."

Arafat on Friday accused Netanyahu of widespread violations of Israel's agreements with the Palestinian Authority, but said he was going home hopeful "we can break the deadlock" in Mideast negotiations.

A statement Thursday by Clinton supporting Palestinian aspirations "to live as a free people" gave Arafat a boost.

"I think this is a very important declaration of President Clinton," the Palestinian leader said. "I think what President Clinton declared is very clear."

While Clinton did not specifically endorse the Palestinian state Arafat aspires to set up on the West Bank, with its capital in Jerusalem, the carefully prepared phrase differed from previous U.S. constructions.

And Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, at a news conference Friday, said Clinton's intention was to show Arafat "his understanding of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Told Arafat's aides were saying this brought the United States closer to endorsing the idea of a Palestinian state, Albright said: "What you hear and what you see is what it means. And that is what the president meant; it is that he believes that the Palestinian people have that aspiration and it should be respected."

The State Department spokesman, James P. Rubin, said later that it was up to Israel and the Palestinians to take up the statehood issue in their negotiations, and that declaring a U.S. position now would be "premature."

The statements by Clinton and Albright on Palestinian aspirations were only one indication the administration was expanding its role in the stymied Mideast peace process.

The next move probably will be talks in Europe between Netanyahu and Arafat brokered by Albright. She insisted again Thursday on a sizable and credible Israeli pullback on the West Bank.

Declaring that remained her position, Albright confirmed Clinton had decided on a strategy of urging a phased Israeli troop withdrawal timed to Palestinian actions against terrorism.

"From our perspective, we think that what has happened here is that the president laid out a reasonable way to try to bridge the gaps that have existed there, and a way to get the peace process back on track," Albright said Friday. "We have made some suggestions."

Arafat, at his news conference, minimized the U.S. initiatives. "So far, we haven't heard any specific proposals," he said.

He also denied his frequent public calls for a "jihad" meant he was urging a holy war against Israel. "You have to understand our terminology and our Arabic language," Arafat said.

It's a call for establishing a Palestinian state, he said.

Launching into an attack on Netanyahu, the Palestinian leader said Netanyahu was bent on populating Arab neighborhoods and the West Bank with Jewish settlers while not implementing a promise to free Palestinian prisoners.

At the same time, Arafat said, "what he is offering us is peanuts and we cannot accept it."

However, Nabil Shaath, a member of Arafat's delegation, said in an interview that key PLO leaders were ready to affirm that all sections of the PLO Charter calling for Israel's destruction were null and void.

Shaath said Arafat made the offer in talks with Clinton on Thursday.

Netanyahu, meanwhile, has called for a public meeting of the Palestine National Council to rescind the provisions so the Palestinian people would be told their leaders want peace with Israel.

"The PLO Executive Committee is the alternative to the PNC," Shaath said. "In its absence, the PLO Executive Committee will explain the decisions of the PNC regarding the charter to the Israeli and American sides."

Although Arafat accepted a belated invitation to tour the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, he said his tight schedule didn't permit him to make the tour. He said he would do so the next time he visited Washington.

The museum initially didn't offer Arafat a VIP tour, so he had taken the exhibit off his schedule. The museum reversed itself this week, however, under pressure from the Clinton administration, Jewish groups and some of its own directors.

Lewinsky 'devastated, fearful,' lawyer says

■ Former intern's attorney admits he is seeking deal with Kenneth Starr granting Lewinsky immunity in exchange for her cooperation in investigation into president's role.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Monica Lewinsky was "surrounded" by FBI agents and government lawyers and quizzed for more than nine hours, her lawyer says. And now, a week later, she remains "devastated, concerned, upset and fearful."

"I have a 24-year-old lady facing three of the most powerful people in the United States: President Clinton, lobbyist Vernon Jordan and independent counsel Kenneth Starr," said lawyer William Ginsburg in an interview with The Associated Press, part of a media offensive Friday to portray Lewinsky as a naive victim of powerful legal forces.

Starr issued a statement calling any suggestion Ms. Lewinsky was mistreated "wholly erroneous."

Ginsburg acknowledged he is seeking a deal with Starr's office that would grant her immunity from prosecution in return for her cooperation in the investigation of whether President Clinton sought to have her lie about an alleged sexual relationship between the two of them. Late Friday, discussions between Ginsburg and the independent counsel's office reopened for the first time in four days.

Ginsburg said Ms. Lewinsky's ordeal began Jan. 16. She was "lured," he said, to a swank hotel at an upscale shopping mall near the Pentagon, where she had worked until the day after Christmas.

"She was immediately surrounded," Ginsburg said on CNN. "She was urged to talk, to cooperate, to be debriefed. ... They wanted her cooperation, and wiring her and intervening on phone calls was part of what they wanted."

From 1 p.m. until at least 10:30 that night, Ms. Lewinsky was questioned and had no access to legal counsel, he said. While she was not arrested, "there was enough intimidation by the process, including the presence of FBI agents and U.S. attorneys, as well as words said to her about the imminence of prosecution, that she felt it was necessary to stay," Ginsburg said.

The authorities increased the pressure by threatening to bring her parents in under subpoena and question them as well, he said.

While at the hotel, Ms. Lewinsky telephoned her mother for help. Her mother took the train to Washington from New York, and Ginsburg, a Los Angeles civil attorney who had known the family for years, was contacted and flew to Washington the next day.

Starr said Ms. Lewinsky was under no pressure. She spent much of the time at the hotel drinking juice and coffee, eating dinner at a restaurant, strolling around the adjacent shopping mall and watching television, he said.

On Jan. 7, on the advice of another lawyer, Frank Carter, Ms. Lewinsky had signed an affidavit asserting "I have never had a sexual relationship with the president." Ginsburg said she stands by that statement "at this point."

His client clearly has been targeted for indictment by the independent counsel, Ginsburg said.

"I would like to get her at least as good a deal as Linda Tripp got," he told the AP, referring to Ms. Lewinsky's friend who went to authorities with tape recordings of Ms. Lewinsky detailing the alleged affair and cover-up. Discussions last weekend that could lead to an offer of immunity in exchange for cooperation were fruitless, he said, and he appealed to Starr to reopen talks.

"Everything is open, available and on the table," Ginsburg said.

While White House aides sought to portray Ms. Lewinsky as flighty and flirtatious, at the Pentagon she was described as a hard worker who often wore black to work — primarily dark turtleneck sweaters and slacks. She worked at a desk outside the office of department spokesman Kenneth Bacon, handling his schedule and often going on Pentagon trips where she transcribed remarks for the news media.

She routinely was in the office by 7 a.m., working most nights until 7 p.m. or later, colleagues said. They described her as a staunch Democrat who was fascinated by politics and spoke often of her experience as a White House intern.

Ms. Lewinsky went on six foreign trips with Bacon, accompanying then-Defense Secretary William Perry and, last year, Defense Secretary William Cohen. Two trips were to Europe. Other destinations were Russia and other states of the former Soviet Union, Australia, the Mideast and Bosnia.

Because of the paperwork Ms. Lewinsky handled, she had one of the highest security clearances in the government, "top secret, special compartmented intelligence." But that didn't mean she actually read much highly sensitive material, officials said.

Payoff for White House interns is a picture with the president

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Monica Lewinsky won a coveted spot as one of the 1,000 unpaid White House interns selected annually to handle a variety of mundane chores for President Clinton's hard-pressed staff.

The interns, many of them the sons and daughters of prominent Democratic contributors, work fulltime during the summer or up to 25 hours a week while at college. They answer telephones, open the mail and handle odd jobs around a bustling executive mansion where presidential aides are often demanding and irascible.

Lewinsky, who came to the White House as a 21-year-old psychology major fresh out of Lewis & Clark College in Portland, Ore., in the summer of 1995, allegedly carried on a sexual relationship with President Clinton.

Clinton has denied it. Lewinsky denied it in a Jan. 7 affidavit submitted in Paula Jones' civil suit against Clinton for allegedly propositioning her for oral sex in 1991.

Some interns use the contacts gained as volunteers to move into paid positions. Lewinsky, who began work on the staff of then-White House Chief of Staff Leon Panetta in the summer of 1995, did exactly that, winning a paid position at the White House Office of Legislative Affairs in December 1995.

Lewinsky left the White House for a $30,658-a-year political post at the Pentagon in April 1996 to serve as an assistant to Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon. Lewinsky traveled widely in the post, with trips to Europe, Australia, the Persian Gulf and Asia.

She left that job last Dec. 26.

For most White House interns, the biggest fringe benefit is having their group photo taken with the president at the end of their internship.

Only about one-third of the 250 interns working in the White House complex at any given time are in the "general vicinity of the West Wing" where the Oval Office and the president's senior aides have offices, according to White House Press Secretary Mike McCurry.

Few have contact with the president, who "doesn't get an opportunity to encounter all interns," McCurry explained.

Clinton has made it clear that the relationship he had with Lewinsky was "a proper one," McCurry said. "She was an intern here, she clearly worked in and around the building. But I can't describe in any great length the nature of the relationship."

Interns undergo the same FBI background checks and personnel checks required for all White House staffers.

McCurry said Friday that White House officials have uncovered no evidence that would raise questions about Lewinsky's credibility.

Clinton assures Cabinet: 'I'll be fine,' urges focus on work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fighting scandal allegations, President Clinton assured his Cabinet on Friday he is innocent and urged them to concentrate on their jobs. "I'm going to be fine and you will be, too," he declared.

Clinton summoned department chiefs for a preview of Tuesday's State of the Union address but felt he also had to address the startling accusations that he had an affair with a young intern, Monica Lewinsky, and then urged her to lie about it.

"The president started out by saying that the allegations are untrue, that we should stay focused on our jobs and that he will be fine," Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said later. Albright and three colleagues dispatched to brief reporters all said they believed Clinton's denial.

Stressing Clinton's directions, Albright said, 'The American people would be ill served if the president of the United States and his Cabinet did not focus on what we have been asked to do or he has been elected to do."

Though shaken by the sudden controversy, Clinton and his staff pushed ahead with work on Tuesday's speech before a joint session of Congress. The president remarked to chief of staff Erskine Bowles that he was so far ahead with his speech preparations that his remarks would be stale by Tuesday. Bowles, with a straight face, told him not to worry.

In addition to the many proposals that have been leaked, one official suggested Clinton would propose using expected budget surpluses to prevent the Social Security system from going bankrupt when the baby boom generation begins retiring.

He also is expected to announce a $7 billion initiative to recruit new teachers, the first time the federal government would have involved itself in hiring educators.

In another area, Clinton will propose tax credits for small businesses to create pension plans. The initiative also would make it easier for workers to make contributions to individual retirement accounts (IRAs) by payroll deduction. Also, employees in 401(k) retirement plans would be fully vested in employers' matching contributions after three years; currently it takes five years.

White House officials wrestled over whether Clinton will have to say something Tuesday night about the sex-and-perjury allegations that some feel could threaten his presidency. Late Friday, a senior official said it was "highly unlikely" Clinton would try to explain his side of the story before the State of the Union.

"We won't know until ... Tuesday likely what the environment is for giving the speech," spokesman Mike McCurry said. "And that, I think, would be the thing that would affect that question the most."

Aides hoped Clinton could address questions about his relationship with Ms. Lewinsky before the speech, probably in a news conference.

Crude falls below $16 a barrel for 1st time in 4 years

New York (NYT) — Crude fell for a fourth day, closing below $16 a barrel for the first time in almost four years, as ample supplies overwhelmed a world market weakened by low heating-fuel demand and an economic slowdown in Asia.

Prices also fell after United Nations Security Council members were unable to formulate a response to Iraq's interference with UN weapons inspectors. Crude was buoyed in early trading by speculation that the UN could take action against Iraq, which pumps about 1 percent of the world's oil, following a report from the top weapons inspector.

Prices fell because "people see that physical inventories are very adequate and there's no weather demand," said Tom Bentz, director of energy trading at High Yield Analytics Inc., a New York-based brokerage. At the UN, "diplomatic efforts will be exhausted first before any bombs are dropped."

Crude oil for March delivery fell 30 cents, or 1.9 percent, to $15.74 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the lowest for a contract closest to expiration since April 8, 1994.

Heating fuel demand has been lagging because of warmer weather in the prime heating fuel markets of the U.S. Demand has been 10 percent lower than normal on average across the U.S., according to Weather Derivatives Inc. of Belton Missouri. Distillate inventories, which include heating oil, are about 10 percent higher than a year ago, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

The growth in Asian demand for oil is predicted to slow. The International Energy Agency last week reduced its previous December estimate for 1998 demand from Asia — excluding China and OPEC member Indonesia — by 2.4 percent, or 230,000 barrels a day, because of an economic slowdown. That would cut the regional growth in demand to 370,000 barrels a day.

At the U.N., condemnations by U.S. and U.K. ambassadors at the United Nations over Iraq's refusal to grant access to U.N. inspectors suspected weapons sites were ignored by oil traders as they were balanced by more conciliatory comments from Russia and China.

A subcommittee of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet Monday and Tuesday in Vienna to discuss production and prices that are now at their lowest since April 1994.

The committee will likely discus whether OPEC's decision to raise production quotas this year by almost 10 percent is the reason for low prices, though traders say there's little chance the group will change their quotas before a full OPEC meeting in June.

"I think (Monday's meeting) will be all talk, no action," said Rich Redash, an energy futures analyst at Prudential Securities in New York.

Most traders agreed that since only three oil ministers, from Iran, Kuwait and Nigeria, will be present at the meeting, they won't be able to alter quotas, and in case, a change would be unpopular with some OPEC members.

"They'll try and talk the market up but without a full meeting they can't do anything," said Bentz.

February heating oil fell 1.18 cents, or 2.6 percent, to 44.44 cents a gallon, the lowest closing price for a contract closest to expiration since March 14, 1995. February gasoline was little changed at 49.52 cents a gallon, up 0.10 cent.

Endeavor, Mir race toward their Saturday rendezvous

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The gap between Mir and Endeavour narrowed orbit by orbit Friday as the shuttle chased the space station some 240 miles above Earth for one last astronaut swap.

The shuttle is scheduled to rendezvous with Mir on Saturday afternoon to deliver the last American to stay aboard the space station.

Astronaut Andrew Thomas couldn't wait to get to Mir, and Mir's David Wolf couldn't wait to see him. Wolf has been living on the Russian space station since late September; Thomas will stay until early June.

Endeavour trailed Mir by 900 miles in the afternoon.

The shuttle was loaded with supplies for Mir, including an air conditioner, spare computer, food and water. The seven-member shuttle crew also had gifts for Wolf and his two Russian crewmates, including pocketknives, chocolates, and fresh oranges and lemons.

Thomas packed his own goodies — family photos, books, music cassettes, computer games, and songbooks and guitar strings so he can play the guitar that's already on Mir.

The 46-year-old Australian-born engineer will be the seventh American to live on Mir as practice for the international space station, which is to be assembled in orbit beginning in June. He will spend most of his mission with two Russian cosmonauts who will be launched from Kazakstan next Thursday.

Thomas never expected to see Mir. He signed on as a backup to Wolf, figuring it would be fun to learn Russian spacecraft systems in Russian. Last summer's devastating collision between Mir and a cargo ship resulted in a shakeup in the astronaut lineup, however.

Kaczynski's family deals with pain, guilt — and his silence

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Dissecting layers of their legal and personal nightmare, Ted Kaczynski's brother and mother spoke Friday of the harrowing days that led up to his admission that he is the Unabomber.

"On the day he attempted suicide, we wanted to rush over there and throw our arms around him and say, 'We love you; you're not alone.'" David Kaczynski told The Associated Press.

But that was impossible. Ted Kaczynski has not spoken to his family in over 12 years and in court on Jan. 8 — the day the suicide attempt was reported — he resolutely ignored them.

That also was the day Ted Kaczynski asked to be his own lawyer. And it was the day his 47-year-old younger brother could not stop crying.

"I never was a person who cried," said David. "But seeing Ted, the dam just broke. ... It was so sad because he was choosing his delusion and rejecting those who cared about him.

"He was so alone in the world and he was willing to die so senselessly."

Wanda Kaczynski, setting out coffee and cake Friday in the apartment the family rented near the courthouse, spoke lovingly of Ted, even as she wonders if she will ever speak to him again.

On Thursday, Ted Kaczynski, 55, agreed to a plea bargain in which he pleaded guilty to 13 federal charges covering five Unabomber attacks in exchange for a sentence of life in prison without parole.

For his 80-year-old mother, the most shocking moment came when a prosecutor read off the hateful words her son had written about the people he had killed.

Covering her eyes, she said: "I hope that some day he's able to acknowledge what he did to the people out there, that he can realize it, because I don't think he does."

She wishes they had read some of the other passages from his journals — the descriptions of nature and the wilderness, "what he called his 'sacred places.'"

"I can only assume he wrote those other things during one of his (mental illness) episodes," she said.

Mowbray found innocent in retrial concerning husband's 1987 death

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A woman imprisoned nine years before winning a new trial in the death of her husband was found innocent of murder Friday, ending a decade-long crusade to prove he killed himself.

Susie Mowbray gasped as the judge read the verdict. Several members of the audience in a standing-room-only courtroom applauded.

Afterward, her daughter and son rushed over to hug her.

"Thank God it's over. We have been living with this burden and this hell for 10 years," said Mrs. Mowbray, adding that she thanked her family, attorneys and the jurors.

Shortly after the verdict was read, she emerged from the courthouse with her son, daughter and mother beside her.

"The outcome of this trial was due to the improper handling of the evidence by members of the Cameron County law enforcement officials involved in this case," said the jury's foreman, Edward Saldivar.

"The prosecution was unable to prove beyond a reasonable doubt the guilt of the defendant," he said.

Mrs. Mowbray's son, Wade Burnett, said, "That shows an enormous amount of courage."

The lead prosecutor, Bill Hagen, said he was disappointed with the eight-woman, four-man panel's verdict after two days of deliberations in the murder retrial in the 1987 slaying of Mrs. Mowbray's husband.

"I believed in the case or I wouldn't have tried it, but I have to agree with the jury," Hagen said, adding he respected the decision.

Kristin Mowbray, Bill Mowbray's only child, said she and her family were "extremely disappointed" by the decision.

"She got away with murder, literally, and we know the truth and a lot of people know the truth," said Mrs. Mowbray, 27. "As the victim's family, in a criminal decision we have absolutely no choice but to live with the ruling."

Jurors, trying to decide whether Mrs. Mowbray killed her husband or whether he killed himself, deliberated about 10 hours before reaching their verdict.

'The outcome of this trial was due to the improper handling of the evidence by members of the Cameron County law enforcement officials involved in this case.'

— jury foreman Edward Saldivar

The panel received the case Thursday following a dramatic courtroom outburst by Mrs. Mowbray, who burst into tears and shouted, "I didn't do it!"

Mrs. Mowbray, 49, was accused of shooting Mowbray in his sleep for $1.8 million in insurance money. She insists he killed himself because of financial troubles at his Brownsville Cadillac dealership.

"This is how the justice system is supposed to work. This says that first trial was a farce," said Robert Ford, one of Mrs. Mowbray's defense attorneys.

In 1988, she was convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison. But she was released last year after serving nine years when an appeals court ruled prosecutors suppressed blood evidence contradicting their homicide theory.

Prosecutors based their case on the theory that Mowbray could not have shot himself because he was found in his normal sleeping position covered with a blanket and there was no blood on his right hand or arm.

They also argued that Mrs. Mowbray lied about what happened the night of the shooting, telling authorities she heard a moan, saw her husband's elbow in the air and had reached out to touch him when the gun went off.

In media interviews, Mrs. Mowbray said she and her husband talked before he died and that he counted down before the deadly blast.

Mrs. Mowbray did not testify at the retrial.

"There's only one reason when somebody does not tell the truth, and that's because the truth will hurt them," Hagen told jurors during closing arguments.

But defense attorneys argued prosecutors had lied by suppressing evidence prior to Mrs. Mowbray's first trial, then seeking out other evidence that would support their homicide theory.

"The truth is the state of Texas has wholly failed in its obligation to prove Susie Mowbray is guilty, and now justice must be served," defense attorney Eduardo Rodriguez said in closing arguments.

In the 1996 appeals court ruling, prosecutors were accused of suppressing a forensic expert's report that said no blood was found on the nightgown Mrs. Mowbray wore the night of the shooting.

That expert, Dr. Herbert MacDonell, told jurors in the retrial that he believed it was more likely that Mowbray committed suicide.

Bolstering that argument, the defense presented evidence showing Mowbray was in dire straits at the time of his death. His dealership was broke, his right-hand man had taken a job elsewhere, and he faced criminal prosecution by the IRS.

First Norplant contraceptive case ends in mistrial

EDINBURG (AP) — A state district judge on Friday declared a mistrial in the first of thousands of lawsuits over the Norplant contraceptive after one plaintiffs' attorney argued that another lawyer asked his client to lie.

Mike Slack, who represents Candy Alonzo, never mentioned the alleged violator's name, but defense attorney Tony Canales said it was Arturo Gonzalez, who represents plaintiff Maria Munoz.

Judge Mario Ramirez Jr. granted the mistrial, according to The Monitor (McAllen).

Canales then asked an appellate court in Corpus Christi to grant an emergency ruling to overturn the mistrial decision. His decision was not immediately available.

Slack requested the mistrial before testimony began Friday and Ramirez immediately held a hearing to determine whether the case should continue.

Audrey Ashby, a spokeswoman for Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories, the Pennsylvania company that manufactures Norplant, said she could not comment because of the gag order imposed by the court.

Canales produced a June deposition in which Ms. Munoz said she had never met Dr. Anthony Peter Lucci.

After Ms. Munoz heard Lucci's testimony, she apparently said she had seen him and that her attorney made an incorrect statement. She said she was advised to deny having seen Lucci.

Canales noted that when Ms. Munoz was deposed, Gonzalez was with her and he said at the time: "I will represent to you that she has not seen Anthony Lucci."

On Wednesday, Lucci insisted on cross-examination from Canales that he had interviewed Ms. Munoz.

Gonzalez refused to comment on the mistrial. When asked if he had lied, Gonzalez walked away.

Canales said if the mistrial stood, he would seek sanctions of at least $500,000 from plaintiffs to cover expenses. He said that amount doesn't include attorney's time, which he estimated costs $25,000 per day.

Slack said the alleged impropriety was so serious that his client could not get a fair trial. His motion for a mistrial was immediately joined by David Caso, who represents plaintiff Elizabeth Rios.

"This cannot be cured," Slack said. "the reported impropriety imposes prejudice on Miss Alonzo."

In his objection to the mistrial, Canales said, "They are trying to get a mistrial because they are losing the case."

Plaintiff's attorney Joe Chapa argued to Ramirez that Canales could not make such a claim.

"He has not beaten us," Chapa said. "That is grossly unfair and misstated."

Gonzalez' firm, Quinn & Laminack of Houston, represents the other three plaintiffs: Ms. Munoz, Veronica Torrez and Sivia Cortez.

Attorney Rick Laminack said: "Lawyers haven't acted properly in handling this matter and there are serious disagreements over what happened."

Laminack told the court the only thing he and Slack agree on is that they don't agree.

Slack and other plaintiff's lawyers moved to seal to the proceedings, arguing the information that would come out could be misinterpreted and lead to other grounds for a mistrial. Ramirez overruled their motion.

The trial — the first of thousands of Norplant lawsuits to be heard in court — was in its eighth day. Ramirez had estimated it would last up to four weeks.

The five women were suing the Norplant makers, alleging they were deceived about the severity of the drug's side effects.

A gag order prevented all parties from speaking outside the court.

Plaintiffs show Oprah clips, say program unfairly emphasized anti-beef claims

AMARILLO (AP) — Cattlemen who believe a 1996 episode of "The Oprah Winfrey Show" unfairly portrayed the risks of U.S. beef and mad cow disease used a few high-tech tricks of their own in court Friday.

In rapid succession, jurors saw nine incidents in which Ms. Winfrey and co-defendant Howard Lyman referred to the feeding of processed livestock to cattle as "feeding cows to cows," or in similar terms.

The idea was to demonstrate how the program tried hammering home the theme, which the plaintiffs said was unfair.

"We're not creating any cannibals," testified plaintiff Bill O'Brien, owner of Texas Beef Group, an Amarillo-based feeding operation.

Winfrey attorney Charles Babcock later presented a series of stand-alone statements of his own, mostly made by his client. Almost all were softened by cautionary phrases like "could" and "may."

Babcock pounced on O'Brien when he complained Ms. Winfrey's remarks were taken out of context.

"That's exactly what you were doing this morning," Babcock said. "You were taking a few words and you were characterizing them."

Plaintiffs also complained that remarks promoting beef safety were edited out, resulting in consumers panicked about the threat of the disease in the United States.

One example of a clip that didn't make it into the show featured William Hueston, a mad cow expert for the Agriculture Department at the time, who said: "I was in Great Britain last week and ate beef. I'll go back next week and eat beef."

The practice of rendering dead livestock into pelletized feed was common in England until it was discovered that mad cow disease, or bovine spongiform encephalopathy, probably was spreading that way.

A month before the broadcast, the British government linked BSE to a similar human sickness. The practice was outlawed in the United States last summer.

A plaintiffs' chart showed that most of what Lyman said made it into the final cut, while only a fraction of the statements by Hueston and beef industry spokesman Gary Weber were left in.

Jurors had seen both the uncut and edited versions of the April 16, 1996, program on Wednesday.

A group of Texas cattlemen claim the show triggered a market plunge that cost them $10.3 million in the weeks following the show. They're also seeking unspecified punitive damages from Ms. Winfrey, her production company and Lyman, whose grave warnings about beef prompted the host to announce on the air that she was swearing off hamburgers.

O'Brien detailed how the West Texas cattle market crashed to 10-year lows in the wake of the show. He cited industry figures showing a drop from 62 cents per pound on April 16 to 55 cents eight days later.

"The Oprah show scared people and scared the markets," said O'Brien, who described the cattle market as "dead" in the days following the airing. "The markets reacted to the way the show was produced and the way it was delivered."

The defense blames the beef industry's price drop on drought and other factors.

The lawsuit is based on a 1995 Texas law holding liable anyone who makes "false and defamatory" statements about perishable food products.

Oprah brings star power to the Panhandle

AMARILLO (AP) — She two-stepped with Patrick Swayze, was serenaded by Clint Black and tried on a 13-carat diamond ring supplied by a genuine millionaire oilman.

Texas is an awfully big place to squeeze into one show, but Oprah Winfrey gave it a pretty good shot in her first episode taped in the city where she's on trial, accused of defaming several cattlemen.

"Guess you all heard I was in town," Ms. Winfrey told an audience of about 300 Thursday night during taping of a show to air nationally on Monday.

Despite the trial that brought her here, Ms. Winfrey showed no ill will at her new studio away from home, the Amarillo Little Theater. In fact, she paid homage to the Lone Star State throughout the show and plans to do so again with another Texas-themed program.

After Swayze told a story of roasting a side of beef during an excursion, Ms. Winfrey quipped, 'You had beef, did you? That's just fine by me.'

The in-studio entertainment for the first show came from three native Houstonians: Swayze, Black and his wife, actress Lisa Hartman.

Swayze presented Ms. Winfrey with a black cowboy hat, then gave her a crash course in the ol' Texas two-step. Later, Black crooned for her and the overwhelmingly female audience.

One of the show's highlights came during the dance. While a taped Black song played, Swayze paired off with his wife. Seeking a partner, Ms. Winfrey pulled an unsuspecting Barry McNutt from the crowd and cut a rug.

"I'm off (from work) tomorrow," McNutt said afterward. "But I imagine I'll be calling in and telling them to watch Monday."

Black sang his Grammy-nominated single, "Something That We Do," while Ms. Winfrey and Ms. Hartman observed from the audience in the hastily converted theater. Painters were still putting on last-minute touches minutes before showtime.

Other Texas celebrities offered taped greetings to Ms. Winfrey. Singer LeAnn Rimes talked up the State Fair in Dallas, near her suburban hometown, Garland; actor Lou Diamond Phillips, a native of Corpus Christi, hyped Texas beaches; and Houston Rockets star Charles Barkley pitched his adopted state's attitude.

"The best thing about being in Texas is everyone has a big ego, so I fit in good here," Barkley said, drawing raucous applause.

Dallas entrepreneur Mike Mullen showed up in person to take his search for a wife to the airwaves. He showed off the gigantic engagement ring he's waiting to give Mrs. Right.

Ms. Winfrey, fighting a cattlemen's lawsuit claiming she hosted an unfair show about mad cow disease to create fear of U.S. beef, made a few thinly veiled references to the trial.

A gag order prevents her from talking about the case, but she came close:

■ While steaks sizzled in the background during the taped introduction, Ms. Winfrey said: "Of course, you're in Amarillo, so there's beef, beef and more beef."

■ After Swayze told a story of roasting a side of beef during an excursion to nearby Palo Duro Canyon years ago, Ms. Winfrey quipped: "You had beef, did you? That's just fine by me." She made a similar remark in reference to Ms. Hartman's purple leather pants.

■ She autographed a fan's T-shirt that depicted Ms. Winfrey in a boxing ring with a gloved bull on front and the phrase "What's The Beef?" on the back.

Don't go nuts over viruses

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

If you don't like today's column, blame it on a computer virus.

That's only fair. Viruses have become everyone's favorite high-tech scapegoat, routinely accused of causing almost any computer problem that is hard to fix or understand.

I don't blame people for being afraid. Viruses are real, and the worst ones are capable of ruining the data on your hard disk. Besides, we are most afraid of what we don't understand. And lots of people don't understand viruses. When you combine all that, you get a monster as potent as the one that lived under my bed when I was 6.

There's a fellow I know who uses three separate virus-checking programs, all of which start up and run in the background every time he turns on his computer. Like a lot of crazy ideas, there's a basis in logic for that. Viruses are created so fast it's unlikely any one virus-checking program will catch every virus. With three programs running, it's less likely that a virus will slip by his screening.

But, meantime, his computer moves as slowly as the train that blocked the highway that day you were late to work. All those programs bog things down. Besides, virus programs often are trigger-happy, suspecting viruses — and sounding an alarm — when none are there.

Take sensible precautions, just as you do with burglars. But don't get so elaborate that you cripple your computer.

It helps to understand that a virus is simply a computer program — no different than a word processor or game. It has a few talents. One is for wrecking things (like destroying your data) or causing mischief (like playing funny sounds, or putting strange messages on your screen). The other talent is hiding from detection.

We used to explain viruses by reassuring people that they can hitchhike into a computer only on another program. In those days, we'd say you didn't have to worry about word processing documents or e-mail. Nowadays, there are some viruses that are disguised as attachments to e-mail and as macros (tiny programs that work within a word processor) that are part of documents. However, with those exceptions, the old rules still hold — an e-mail message or a word processor document isn't a conduit for a virus.

There are two major ways for viruses to enter your computer: from programs you download and through programs you bring home on a disk. While there have been cases of virus-infected commercial software, that problem is as likely as being struck by a meteorite.

I tell you all this to explain that you are 99.9 percent safe from viruses if you don't download programs from the Internet and only use commercial programs that have been installed from the original CD. If you fall in that group, you can safely ignore viruses. If you are cautious, you can occasionally run any of the commercial anti-virus software.

If, on the other hand, you are in a high-risk group, then it does make sense to use a commercial anti-virus program every time you add software or download it. You'll find good programs from Norton, McAfee or Quarterdeck at the software store. Make sure you take advantage of the update feature. Most programs offer updates — either from the company's Web site or at the store — that update them to recognize new viruses.

Once you've done all that, worry about something important, like why you spend so much time in front of the computer.

MCI, Yahoo! plan access service

By Charles Haddad
N.Y. Times News Service

When American Online closes its deal to buy CompuServe early this year, it will have nearly 13 million subscribers. But that's not intimidating two new challengers, who plan to take on the world's leading provider of residential Internet service.

MCI and Yahoo have announced that they have formed a joint venture to offer a new Internet service. Called Yahoo Online Powered by MCI Internet, the new service will be marketed primarily to Net newcomers. It will launch sometime by the end of March.

"We feel what we're putting together jointly is the easiest setup for getting connected," Jeff Mallett, Yahoo's chief operating officer, recently told The Baltimore Sun. "The new user coming in here will be able to get the best, easiest service for getting access on the Web, period."

Of course, that's what AOL says it offers, as does Atlanta-based MindSpring Enterprises.

MCI and Yahoo are no lightweights. Based in Washington, MCI is the second-largest long-distance

Giants, regional Bells get behind data standard

By Chris Albritton
AP Cyberspace Writer

NEW YORK — Some of the biggest players in the computer and telephone industries are teaming up to offer Internet access so blindingly fast that clicking through Web pages could be as easy as flipping through a book.

Some of the phone companies hope to offer the service, which would work over ordinary home telephone lines, early this year.

Computer users would have to get new modems — for about $200 — but not new PCs.

Microsoft Corp., Compaq Computer and Intel Corp., along with the nation's five regional telephone companies, are developing a single national standard for the service, which is known as asymmetrical digital subscriber line, or ADSL.

ADSL currently is available in a few locations around the country, but the equipment used in one place is not necessarily compatible with the hardware used elsewhere.

ADSL would be cheaper and

Timeworn copywright law needs an overhaul

By Andrew J. Glass
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Johnny Cash was not at all happy. A World Wide Web music site in far-off Slovenia had posted a perfect sound print of "Ring of Fire," one of the singer's biggest hits. From there, it could be freely downloaded on the Internet — to anywhere, by anybody.

Given the rapid growth of technology and the slow pace at which the law reacts to changes in cyberspace, Cash may soon have even more reason to be unhappy.

Cable modems, now coming into wider use, let fans download whole albums in a matter of minutes. And new digital platters allow them to store the equivalent of eight music compact disks on one re-recordable disk — or even to use their computers in home entertainment centers as online "juke boxes."

"Maybe I should be flattered that someone in Slovenia likes my song," Cash told a House subcommittee in 1997. "But," he added, "when he or she makes it available to millions of people, this hardly seems fair."

Cash, who has performed for prisoners and presidents, hopes President Clinton will prod Congress this year to come to his financial rescue, and that of his fellow artists. But that may prove hard to do, given the lingering Wild West culture of the Internet and a swirl of competing

Tribe to start a version of lottery in cyberspace

By Jon Swartz
N.Y. Times News Service

An Idaho Indian reservation will launch the first national online lottery Tuesday, taking advantage of a loophole in federal law that bans Internet gambling.

Some experts say the move could usher in an era of legal cyber-wagering.

The online endeavor, called US Lottery, will be run by the Coeur d'Alene tribe, which has a legal on-site casinoin Worley, Idaho; and UniStar Entertainment Inc., a Milford, Conn., company with overseas gambling operations.

Whether U.S. citizens can legally participate in the new lottery depends on the laws in their state.

Matt Ross, spokesman for the California attorney general's office in Sacramento, said Californians

I'm stupified, baffled, befuddled and otherwise severely let down. Here it is, over 72-hours after the sex scandal at the White House broke and still, no one has devoted the time to constructing a Monica Lewinsky home page. HOWEVER ... go to a search engine of your choice and you'll find numerous links to stories about Lewinsky, the former White House intern who has said she had an affair with President Clinton and then said she was urged by him to lie about it.

Dear Amy: My teacher said I can use these four Web sites for my report, but how can I print it all out to hand it in?—Wesley, Austin, TX

Dear Wesley: When you visit a Web page you can tell your browser to print that page. You could staple your report to the Web site pages and hand it in, but I have a better idea. Ask your teacher if she would be willing to read your report online. If she is, check out http://scrtec.org/track/tracks/s00505.html to see what an "online" report can be using TrackStar. TrackStar uses three frames. It's awesome because your words appear in one frame, the Web site you are talking about appears in another frame, and the links to all of the sites are in the last frame. It's something anyone can do. To learn more, go to http://scrtec.org/track/ and try it.

SATURDAY, JAN. 24, 1998

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 24, 1998:
This can be a dynamic 12 months. Do not lose focus; keep your eye on the big picture. You could easily get discouraged, but you need to get past that. Don't waste this banner year in temperament. Friendships mean more to you than ever. Consider taking a course or seminar that you have wanted to for years. If you are single, romance is likely to flow into friendship, or vice-versa. If attached, you can build together toward one of your goals. Get involved as a team, with a cause close to the heart. SAGITTARIUS is your friend.

BORN TODAY
Actor Ernest Borgnine (1917), actress Nastassja Kinski (1960), evangelist Oral Roberts (1918)

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★★ You stabilize communications, firm up a trip and draw others into a fun day outing. Browse a flea market or favorite area. The change in scenery renews you and recharges communications. Explore anything new. Tonight: The more unusual, the better.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Intuition is strong with a partner and a loved one. You visualize a scenario different from your significant other. Discussions are animated and open. You don't realize that you are putting yourself down. Tonight: An intimate dinner.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★★ You finally hit the bull's-eye. You have waited long enough for this to happen. Visit and share good news with friends. Celebrations have an odd, somber tone; maybe everyone has the winter blues. Don't worry about it. Tonight: You are the party!
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ You get more accomplished than you anticipated. You need time off from the grind. You might find it necessary to go into the office, to complete some additional work. Try to understand a boss and where the demands really come from. Tonight: Off to the movies.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ A loved one has news that you feel ambivalent about. You don't understand what is going on with him. Let your loving nature reveal itself. A change in plans is not out of the question. Fun happens when you relax and hang out. Tonight: Full of spice.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ You come from a point of stability and happiness. Though you feel limited in some way by a partnership, you love your home life. You can't convince another to think like you. Be independent, and create more of what you want. Tonight: Invite others over.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ Communications excel, and you are busy on the phone, sharing with others. Run errands, then make time to meet a friend for a bite to eat. A difficult partner hasn't changed. Talk all you want, but it is time to make a decision. Tonight: Favorite spot, favorite people.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ You might opt to put in some overtime, even as tired as you are. You are concerned about finances and want to take a stronger hand in managing them. Rather than going on automatic, review options, and make strong decisions for your future. Tonight: Take it easy.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★★ You are ready to make a commitment to a loved one. You are full of enthusiasm, energy and good vibrations. You can make it happen. Listen to instincts, and share plans. Brainstorm about an idea, especially it's long-term ramifications. Tonight: Pleased as can be!
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Your fatigue causes you to look at what is happening in your life rather negatively. Think through a decision; if you can, postpone it. Responsibilities involving family feel weighty. Take a walk, to clear your thoughts. Tonight: Early to bed for a good night's sleep.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ A serious talk clues you in that things are going in the direction you want. Celebration is in order. Bring friends together, and share good news. Weigh the pros and cons before getting involved in a key cause. You don't have to be the center of the action. Tonight: Do your own thing.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Take time to visit an older relative. You might not appreciate the slant he puts on a money situation, but he means well. Caring exudes. You might opt to work today, and make extra money; that might be the best way to replenish your finances. Tonight: Out and about.

Cracked rib hasn't kept Prince Charles from carrying out all his engagements

LONDON — A cracked rib isn't going to stop Prince Charles from trekking through the Himalayan foothills next month.

The 49-year-old heir to the British throne hurt his rib last week when he fell off a horse while fox hunting on the north Wales border, St. James's Palace said Friday.

Prince Charles hurt his rib last week when he fell off a horse.

"A cracked rib is obviously uncomfortable, but it hasn't prevented him from carrying out his engagements — and it won't," said a spokeswoman, speaking on customary condition of anonymity.

The cracked rib is the latest of a series of riding injuries for the prince. He broke his arm in 1990 while playing polo, and four years later gave up league polo, partly because of a back injury.

Two scenic walks in the Himalayas are planned during the prince's 10-day tour of Nepal, Bhutan and Sri Lanka, which starts on Feb. 2.

LOS ANGELES — Robert Duvall had to dig deep into his own pockets to make his latest film, a pet project he began work on 13 years ago.

Duvall, who appeared in "The Godfather" and "Apocalypse Now," spent $5 million to make "The Apostle" — which he wrote, directed and starred in.

"People think I'd be able to get financing easily," Duvall said in an interview published Friday in The Outlook, a Santa Monica newspaper. "I think that's only if you're one of the top, top, top guys like (John) Travolta or (Tom) Hanks."

His accountant assured Duvall, who won an Academy Award for "Tender Mercies," that bankrolling his own film would be a good idea.

The role of Euliss "Sonny" Dewey, also known as the Apostle, was conceived by Duvall 13 years ago when he visited a small Arkansas church. But it was put on the backburner for long spells while Duvall made other films.

"The Apostle," released in some cities Friday, opens around the nation Jan. 30.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The heirs of Hank Williams Sr. want to prevent the release of some radio performances by the country music icon.

A lawsuit filed in November in Davidson County seeks to halt Legacy Entertainment Group Inc. from releasing performances recorded in 1951 for a radio show called Mother's Best Flour. Legacy bought the recordings last year from former Williams bassist Hillous Butrum.

Neither Butrum nor Legacy has any rights to release recordings of Williams, according to the lawsuit filed by PolyGram Records Inc. and Williams' children — Hank Williams Jr. and Jett Williams.

According to the lawsuit, any recordings by Williams are bound by an agreement he made in 1947 with MGM Records. PolyGram now owns the MGM catalogue.

The recordings may not be distributed until the lawsuit is settled or goes to trial, a judge ruled. A trial date has not been set.

PARIS — Israel cannot content itself simply with providing a haven for persecuted Jews, says violinist Yehudi Menuhin.

"That's finished," Menuhin, 81, said in an interview published Thursday in France's Le Figaro daily. "There is a more important mission which is Israel's and Israel's alone: organizing peace in the Middle East."

Menuhin also warned Israelis against keeping Jerusalem — a holy city for Christians, Jews and Muslims — for itself.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The "Festival U98" crusade will be a father-son affair now that Billy Graham has decided to join his son, Franklin.

The May festival will be only the the second time the Grahams have joined in a crusade.

The May festival will be only the second time the Grahams have joined in a crusade. In 1995, they took part in a four-day event in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

Billy Graham, 79, has been slowed by Parkinson's disease. His only other crusades this year are in Tampa, Fla., and Ottawa, Ontario.

Franklin Graham, 45, was appointed in 1995 as first vice-chairman of Billy Graham's worldwide evangelistic association, leaving him in direct succession to his father.

About 150 churches are involved in the crusade, which is billed as an ecumenical gathering. It will be held at University Arena, the University of New Mexico's basketball facility.

AWARE: Government hasn't fully enforced Internet high rolling laws cannot legally participate unless the tribe strikes an agreement with the state. Currently there is no agreement with the Coeur d'Alene tribe, but Ross said the state has reached agreements with other tribes to permit online pari-mutuel betting in California.

Tickets for the US Lottery pick-six game will be $1 each, and the jackpot will start at $1 million per week.

The US Lottery is seizing on a provision in the Federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act of 1988 that allows tribes to use computers and telecommunications devices to operate noncasino games such as bingo.

"That principle could be extended to lottery, which is considered by some a distant cousin of bingo," said Sebastian Sinclair, an analyst with Christiansen Cummings Associates, a New York gambling consulting firm. However, he added, "There is a lot of gray area there."

US Lottery organizers say they will only accept bets from people in the 33 states that have state-run lotteries (including California, Oregon and Washington), the District of Columbia and any foreign country.

Industry observers say more people will be eligible to play the new game than any other lottery in the United States.

There are already several multistate lotteries in the Northeast and Midwest, but players must buy the tickets in person.

"We're giving peoplea legal, safe option to gamble from the comfort of their home," saidTabatha Sturm,a UniStar spokeswoman. "We're not competing with the states, but rather expanding a multibillion-dollar industry."

It is illegal in the United States to place or accept bets on the Internet, but dozens of companies run Internet casinos from foreign locations such as the Caribbean and Central America.

These sites let high rollers place sports bets and play games such as interactive baccarat, video poker and roulette 24 hours a day from their computers.

Although it is illegal for Americans to play these games, the government has not generally gone after individuals.

However, a bill in Congress — the Internet Gambling Prohibition Act of 1997 — would force Internet service providers to block online casinos from their systems. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Arizona, also would establish jail terms of up to six months and fines of up to $2,500 for individuals who gambled online.

A congressional staffer familiar with online gambling said it would be hard to prosecute the US Lottery because of the legal loophole and because Indian reservations are considered sovereign nations.

"Those lands are run by their own rules," said a government official who requested anonymity. "I'm not sure what we could do to stop it even if we wanted to."

However, industry sources say US Lottery has put aside a "hefty legal fund" in case the federal government challenges the operation or the Kyl bill is passed with an amendment that outlaws online Indian gambling.

Mark Dohlen,chief executive of Starnet International, a company with online gaming operations in Antigua, said the biggest risk US Lottery runs is competing with state lotteries — which brought in $35.8 billion last year.

"There are some legal issues there; they're trying to do this in Uncle Sam's back yard," said Mark Dohlen,chief executive of Starnet. "We, and I suspect several Indian reservations, won't go there."

A spokeswoman for the California Lottery in Sacramento had not heard of the national online lottery and had no comment.

US Lottery organizers expect big business — fast.

The UniStar spokeswoman predicts thousands of consumers will either call in their bets (208-665-3866) or place them via the Web site, www.uslottery.com, every day.

SPEED: Development 'exciting' for home Internet access easier to install than the two best-known means of getting high-speed data into the home — specialized telephone lines and cal modems, which use the heavy coaxial cable that connects to your TV set.

Also, ADSL would allow people to talk on the phone while their computer is connected to the Internet via the same line — something that can't be done now.

The agreement on technical standards is to be announced next week at the ComNet trade show in Washington.

With the use of these new modems, the World Wide Wait would evaporate. ADSL modems would let consumers browse the Web at 1.5 million bits per second, or bps. That's 30 times faster than the fastest modems now commonly available.

ADSL is also a continuous connection: Your computer would be in constant touch with the Internet. You wouldn't have to use your computer's dialer program to call America Online or some other Internet service.

"We're seeing the demand for people like me — small office, home office — who need bandwidth. The cry for bandwidth is huge."
— Ann Jansen, spokeswoman for the ADSL Forum.

The new standard is an "exciting development" for home Internet access, said Ann Jansen, spokeswoman for ADSL Forum, a group of companies that make products for the various ADSL standards now in limited use.

"I'm the perfect person as to who they're after," she said. She has a home business and wanted faster access. Installing a specialized high-speed line was too complicated, so she decided to wait for ADSL.

"Now we're seeing the demand for people like me — small office, home office — who need bandwidth. The cry for bandwidth is huge," she said.

Bandwidth is a measure of how much data can be stuffed through the wires and cables of the country's telecommunications networks. ADSL has a theoretical upper limit of 8 million bps, enough to transmit the complete works of Shakespeare in five seconds.

Users could use the ADSL connection to link to any Internet service provider they choose. Currently, most charge about $20 a month for unlimited access. ADSL service would entail an additional charge on your phone bill; U S West, for example, charges $40 a month for its ADSL service available already in Phoenix.

ADSL looks like a very strong competitor to cable modems because it doesn't require any complicated setup and only a minimal investment is needed by the telecommunications companies.

Cable systems, in contrast, need big investments for upgrades before their lines are capable of carrying two-way communications. So far, Internet access via cable is available in only about 10 percent of the country. In addition, cable modems cost up to $500.

Ameritech and GTE Communications Corp. plan to offer the new standard on a limited basis early this year. BellSouth expects to do so during the second-quarter, and SBC Communications is aiming for the middle of the year.

Bell Atlantic, which had been leaning against joining the consortium, said Tuesday that it has decided to take part.

Microsoft and Compaq representatives declined to comment.

The fastest modems available today run at about 52,000 bps, although they are advertised at 56,000. An alternate home service, ISDN, for Integrated Services Digital Network, tops out at 128,000 bps, but requires installation of a second telephone line.

Cable modem speeds vary wildly, from 1.5 million bps to more than 10 million, depending on the cable system.

COPYRIGHT: New law makes it a felony to download copyrighted material interests pressuring the nation's lawmakers over related liability and access issues.

Come spring, the same panel to which Cash addressed his complaints last year hopes to send a bill to the House floor. As drafted by the Clinton White House, the bill would make needed, if minor, changes in U.S. law that, in turn, would enable the Senate to ratify a set of new international intellectual property treaties negotiated in 1996 in Geneva, Switzerland, by delegates from about 100 nations.

Cash has plenty of company among those who want Congress to hit a new high note in copyright law, which has remained essentially unchanged since 1976, well before the Internet sprang to life.

One ally is musical producer and Berkeley School of Music administrator Preston Pearson.

"It is imperative that Congress pass copyright legislation that takes in consideration the Internet as a major broadcast medium," Pearson said. "Congress must recognize that the Internet will increasingly become the method most used to distribute audio and music."

And perhaps in time, he might have added, feature-length movies as well.

"The real problems are not in U.S. copyright law, but are to be found elsewhere in the world," said Steven Metalitz, counsel to the Creative Incentive Coalition, which is lobbying for passage of the treaties. Coalition members include Microsoft Corp., the software giant, and trade groups representing the nation's movie, book, newspaper, recording and cable industries.

"Unless Congress acts, most other countries are unlikely to ratify the treaties," Metalitz said.

But that coalition has run up against another one, composed mainly of the nation's telephone companies, online access providers and non-profit educational and library groups. This cohort wants be held free of liability for the acts of copyright pirates. It also wants the Senate to hold off ratifying the Geneva treaties until an accord is reached on their goals.

The alternative legislation that they back, sponsored by Sen. John Ashcroft, R-Mo., would in the words of a one of their spokesmen, Todd Troutner, guarantee "that both commercial and not-for-profit providers of Internet access will not be held liable for activities of which they have no knowledge or over which they have no control."

So far, the two powerful groups seem too far apart to forge an early compromise. Privately, both sides acknowledge that they face the risk of holding each other in perpetual check.

Those who favor the approach being taken by Clinton and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, claim the alternative Ashcroft approach would take U.S. law farther from the conformity with the newly proposed world copyright standards.

"They don't see a big up side for them in the treaties," said Metalitz, whose group is pushing the Clinton-Hatch process.

Meantime, late last year, Clinton signed the No Electronic Theft Act.

The new law makes it a felony to download copyrighted material over the Internet, even if the individual claims no profit from the act. It is aimed at closing the so-called "LaMacchia Loophole" in the long-standing Copyright Act.

Through Internet bulletin boards, David LaMacchia, a graduate student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, encouraged purchasers of copyrighted computer software to upload these works, using a password. He then urged others, who had a second password, to download the materials for their personal use — without authorization or payment of royalties or licensing fees to copyright owners.

Since LaMacchia claimed no financial rewards from his activities, the U.S. District Court of Massachusetts dismissed the case after his arrest in 1994. Nevertheless, in its ruling, the court invited Congress "to change copyright law to address such cases" — which is what the lawmakers have just done.

provider and maintains an extensive Internet network. It also provides Internet access.

Yahoo, based in Santa Clara, Calif., runs the Net's most visited World Wide Web site, which is also the most popular search engine. It averages some 26 million visitors a month.

Now Yahoo wants to leverage its name recognition to establish another Internet access provider. Its service will give subscribers immediate access to its famous directory and its fledgling news, travel and financial services.

Neither company would discuss the financial details of their new partnership. They said the cost of the service has yet to be decided.

Crestview team to head up mission to northern Uganda

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

In just over a month, Crestview Baptist Church's Don Norris will leave with a small team of Church members to establish a church sponsored mission in one of the most remote areas of the entire world - northern Uganda.

Norris, Crestview's minister of education, and five others will fly into Entebbe March 3, then take a 10-seater Cessna which will be set down in a grass field just outside of Moyo, an area just south of the Sudan.

"It's a small team, but it impacts our entire church because we're supplying financial resources and other things the mission board has requested of us," Norris said.

"Our church has always been very mission-minded, but we've taken this to the next level. We're not just helping one church this time, but we're supporting and working with a district that is working with 16 Baptist churches."

Norris said the church became aware of such a "critical need for help" from Southern Baptist missionaries currently stationed in Uganda.

Norris defined critical need as "obtaining little tracts of land to build a church on; building a mudbrick building that will serve as an education-conference building; training of the pastors and lay leaders, and helping the leadership in administration matters, such as how to set up books and bookkeeping. We'll supply them with manual typewriters and enable them to begin the process of keeping records and setting up their own file system."

In addition, the mission funds will purchase bicycles, which is the primary mode of transportation in the northern district of Uganda. Most pastors, in fact, have to walk great distances to reach neighboring churches. Hand-held amplification systems will also be purchased, which will serve as microphones for the pastors of those churches assisted.

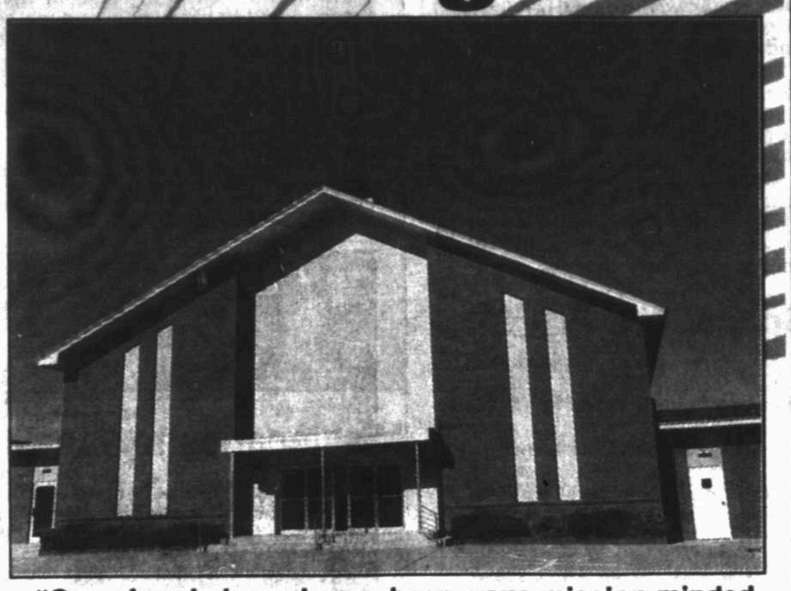
"There's basically no electricity in northern Uganda," Norris said. "There's pretty much no means of communication with the outside world."

The region has also been inundated by Sudanese refugees, making the estimated population of the Moyo district I million.

Norris said the area, heavily influenced by spiritism, or voodoo, is sorely in need of Christianity.

"This is an area of great need; it's big time third world," Norris said. "They were on the road to modernization until the civil war under now-deceased President Idi Amin.

"With such mass killing because of the war, the infrastructure of the country fell apart. That war took Uganda to the darkest of third-world countries. It's just been in the last three years that they've begun to come out of that situation."



"Our church has always been very mission-minded, but we've taken this to the next level.

Norris said the safety of the missionaries is relatively assured although there still exists "pockets of rebel resistance. Anywhere in that area (violence) could erupt."

The building that will be constructed with the missionary funds is mudbrick, and includes only holes that serve as windows and doorways. The Moyo district is very close to the equator and hot virtually all year; actual doors and windows are seldom necessary.

Norris, who first traveled to Moyo last fall, said he is quite excited about the upcoming trip, which will total two weeks, one of which will be spent in the primitive Moyo district. Norris will also be teaching the Ugandan pastors the Old Testament during his stay. Although some of the pastors speak some English, the natives speak the Madi dialect; scripture will hopefully soon be translated into the Madi dialect after the mission is complete.

"The people are lovely," he said. "They're so beautiful and gracious. If war would leave it alone, they could really do some things to improve their living conditions.

"I fell in love with (Moyo). (Last fall was) the first time for me to be out of the country. We can learn something from these folks, such as how to show love to one another. Isn't it interesting they truly know how to love even though they have been in the midst of some of the darkest and most hideous crimes?"

Nicklaus' streak

The United States Golf Association on Friday did not offer a special exemption to Jack Nicklaus for the 1998 U.S. Open, ending Nicklaus' run of consecutive majors played at 145 with the Masters this April.

No exemptions were granted for the U.S. Open, but a rules change allowing the top 20 on the final World Golf Rankings of the previous year into the tournament meant that three big names not otherwise eligible — Tom Watson, Fred Couples and Jumbo Ozaki — can play.

Nicklaus has played in all four of the majors each year since turning pro in 1962 and has played in 152 of the professional majors dating back to the 1957 U.S. Open.

"Obviously, I hate to see anything come to an end, but all good things must come to an end someplace," Nicklaus said. "As I've said many times, I don't want to be competing when the USGA thinks I might be taking up a spot for some younger player, somebody who can be more competitive."

Contrasting coaches square off

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — They share the first name and the same goal at the Super Bowl. Except for that, Mike Shanahan and Mike Holmgren have very little in common.

The difference is obvious in their faces. Shanahan's eyes are deep set and piercing, a study in concentration. Holmgren's walrus mustache gives him a look of whimsy, sort of like a football Pooh bear.

Guess which one of tools around town on a Harley.

Knowing Holmgren's love for motorcycle transportation, a local dealer drove a truck full of bikes from Green Bay to San Francisco before the NFC championship game. "I was planning to ride on the Saturday before the game," Holmgren said, "but it rained like crazy so I couldn't do it."

No problem. The cycles were then driven down the California coast to be at the coach's disposal before the Super Bowl. He takes one to practice every day. "One day I rode up the coast," he said. "It was a beautiful day. It's my way of kind of relaxing."

Shanahan takes more traditional transportation. He is, after all, a more buttoned-down guy.

"It's been pretty intense," Shanahan said, referring to Denver's ride through the playoffs and into the Super Bowl. "We've got a job to do. That's my demeanor all the time. I'm just kind of serious all the time, a little bit too intense, but that's me."

Green Bay coach Mike Holmgren poses with the Lombardi Trophy, which is awarded to the Super Bowl champion. He's already won one, and he'll go for another Sunday in San Diego.

Life never seems to be easy in the land of District 4-5A basketball for the Midland Lee Rebels, but at least the three-point shot has been a cure-all for any woes that might crop up.

LEE
San Angelo 68
Midland Lee 69

Lee canned 12 three-point shots Friday night at Chaparral Center to survive the San Angelo Central Bobcats 69-68 and climb to 4-2 and a tie for second place in the 4-5A race with both Abilene Cooper and Abilene High, both winners Friday over the Odessa schools. And all three of the second place teams are a full two games behind the league leading Midland High Bulldogs, idle Friday.

This was supposed to be one of those easy walks in the park, considering that these same Bobcats finished the first half of the district race with a 0-6 ledger.

But nothing is easy in this league for Lee. Just like last year, they scramble for everything they get.

"I told you guys before the game that nothing was going to be easy in this thing," Lee coach Jon House told his team after the game. "You're fortunate that I'm just a good guy."

Then House said, "We get down by 15 points, lead by 18 and win by one point. I don't know how to explain that, but it seems like we have to make everything we do an adventure.

"Don't get me wrong. I'm not taking anything away from San Angelo because they are six or seven points away in this district from having the same record that we do. They came to play and we didn't."

Down at one time by 15 points in the first half, Lee rallied to knot the score at 31-31 at the half and then went on a 3-point roller coaster, hitting seven treys in the third quarter, five by 6-6 guard Robert House, who ended the night with 17 points. House had missed from 3-point land on six of his previous tries before hitting five in a row. And three of them almost crossed the Texas border. But he helped power Lee to a 55-37, 18-point lead with the streak.

"It's not like we were turning Robert House loose," said Bobcat coach Kevin Pope. "He's 6-6 and can shoot over you and some of those shots came from the parking lot. He can do that."

Robert House said it took time for him to get used to the 2-3 zone of San Angelo and a word of advice from Coach House, err, Dad House might not have hurt either.

"(Dad) made me mad at the half, saying I missed all those shots," Robert said, "but when I got the look I wanted from the zone, I hit one and got on fire. If you are a shooter, you can't worry about the missed shots. You just keep shooting. That's what shooters do."

Blake Hinsley, who had 15 points, canned five more treys for Lee and Charncy Ephriam, who had 27 points, hit for two more.

But the Bobcats also had the 3-point charm, hitting 10 themselves, six coming form Terrence Fields, who is one of the better players in 4-5A basketball. Fields led all scorers with 32 points and he hit two 3-point shots in the last eight seconds of play to make the game tight indeed. Ronald Rodgers added 18 points and Jason Brumm 11.

"We played a good game, but I don't know how good it was," Pope said. "In all honesty, Lee was probably looking forward to Midland High next Tuesday. But we have come a long way. This year we're competing against

Andrews claims 4-4A showdown

ANDREWS — Jacob Lopez scored 30 points for the second time this week as the Andrews Mustangs won the battle for first place in District 4-4A, defeating defending champion Sweetwater 66-63 Friday.

The boys' win followed an upset of sorts as the Sweetwater girls turned the tables on Andrews' Lady Mustangs with a 50-39 win. The win now puts Sweetwater's Lady Mustangs in a tie with Andrews at the top of the 4-4A girls race.

But it was the boys, and Lopez in particular, who stole the show for the Andrews' faithful. Lopez' 3-point basket with just over two minutes to play in the first half gave Andrews a 29-28 lead. It was a lead Andrews would never turn over.

"We took them seriously and have been practicing all year for this game," Lopez said.

It showed. Andrews, which has now won five cosecutive games, had an answer for everything Sweetwater, a state Final Four team of a year ago, threw its way. Sweetwater senior Derrick Franklin, who has already earned one 4-4A MVP title as a junior, got his points (19 in all) and rebounds (11), but Andrews didn't let the big man go wild. Franklin never scored more than six in any one quarter.

Andrews, however, got its points when it needed them the most, and that put distance between the two teams. During one stretch in the second half, Lopez had seven points, Shaud Williams hit for three and John Kimberlin added a couple of free throws to complete a 12-4 run, and Andrews had a 59-49 lead, its biggest of the game. Then after Sweetwater cut the lead to four with under three minutes to play, Lopez, hit one of his four treys in the game, to push the lead to seven. Although Sweetwater fought back and had two

MHS' Jackson commits to UTEP

Midland High quarterback Camar Jackson made the decision Tuesday to play his college football at the University of Texas-El Paso.

Of course, this is only a verbal commitment that is not binding until the NCAA college signing day on Feb. 4, but Jackson says the decision is binding.

"In fact, I haven't had too many schools talking with me," Jackson said. "I've been talking with New Mexico, but I never made a visit there."

Jackson did visit UTEP and liked what he saw.

Jackson

"Everything seemed really nice there," Jackson said. "I like the whole concept. The program is nice and the teachers seemed like they wanted to help."

MHS coach David Browning was glad that Jackson is getting this chance to play football at UTEP.

"Camar will be a credit to any school he goes to," Browning said. "I think he will be a great athlete in the WAC conference and I'm excited for him. I think UTEP is looking at him as quarterback/athlete type of player because he can do a lot of things for you. He doesn't have to be a quarterback."

Jackson said that making the decision early relieves some of the recruiting stress.

"I really didn't know if I was going to have any more choices to make and I wanted to make sure I had a place to go," Jackson said. "It was sort of stressful trying to figure out if I would play anywhere. This relieves a little of

Pirates plunder Jacks in last minute

ODESSA — Even a self-imposed "cool off" period failed to make a difference. Odessa Jackalopes' Coach Joe Clark was still livid after a 6-5 Western Professional Hockey League loss to the Lake Charles Scorpions before 4,661 at the Ector County Jack Shack Friday night.

The winning goal came 23 seconds from the end and was set up by a penalty call on Jeff Triano — Jeff Triano?, the consummate defenseman and candidate as most unlikely to be guilty of holding. The penalty came at 18: 47, just when it seemed the teams were headed for a shootout.

"We didn't lose. I feel that game was taken away from us. The call was made on a play in which the guy got off a shot and Billy (Pye) made a great save," Clark said in an unembellished quote translation.

"It was a nothing call," Clark fumed. "Even when they went ahead 5-4, everybody on our bench knew we were going to tie it."

With 12: 57 gone, the Jacks did tie on a picture goal. Paul Berrington and Tom MacDonald set up Patrick Lampron on a pass across the goal mouth. Lampron, perched on the right edge, found net before Goalie Mark Cavallin could get back to protect the open side of the net.

The loss proved especially galling since Lake Charles is

Sampras wins on hardcourt, on felt tables

MELBOURNE, Australia — Pete Sampras is winning on the courts by day and at the casinos by night, cruising through the Australian Open while pocketing thousands of dollars in petty cash at blackjack.

Sampras, the defending champion, advanced to the round of 16 Friday with a 7-5, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Magnus Gustafsson, and there isn't a seeded player in sight until at least the semifinals.

It's been so easy for Sampras, that it seems too easy, as if somewhere he's in for an ambush.

He goes up next against Hicham Arazi, the little man from Casablanca, who did Sampras a big favor by knocking out giant Mark Philippoussis in the first round: Arazi, a 5-foot-9 baseline scrambler, should be a perfect foil for Sam-

Harbaugh likely finished with Colts

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Quarterback Jim Harbaugh's days with the Indianapolis Colts may be numbered.

He has heard that the Colts will likely take either Peyton Manning or Ryan Leaf with the No. 1 pick in the April draft. If that happens, Harbaugh likely will be too expensive to keep.

"I haven't officially been contacted by the Colts, but my agent (Leigh Steinberg) and I have heard ... that they are going a different direction (at quarterback) and I don't figure in their plans," Harbaugh said. "I understand their position, and it's not a great shock. But I am going to miss Indianapolis."

Central takes revenge on Lady Rebels

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The road just keeps getting tougher for the Midland Lee girls basketball team.

Friday night, the Lady Rebels went up against District 4-5A contender San Angelo Central, having surprised the Lady Bobcats in the first half of district play. That wasn't to be the case this time, as Central crushed Lee 68-47 to hand the Lady Rebels their sixth straight district loss. Lee (6-16 overall, 2-6 in district) hasn't won a district game since beating Central at home in December.

The Lady Rebels had to come back from a deep hole, falling behind 24-11 at the end of the first quarter and never mounting a serious threat. Camille DeLaCruz led the charge for the Lady Bobcats with 19 points, including four 3-pointers. Kanesha Randle had 17 points and 10 rebounds for Central.

Junior Keke Strambler and sophomore Rochelle Warren scored 14 apiece for Lee, which will play crosstown rival Midland High Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Chaparral Center in a district game.

Lee won the junior varsity game 42-34.

OTHER 4-5A GAMES: Without even setting foot on the court Friday night, Midland High took over sole possession of first place in the district. That's because Abilene Cooper, who shared the top spot with the Lady Dawgs, lost to Odessa High 70-63. At 5-2 in district, Midland High now sits a half-game ahead of Cooper, Central and Odessa Permian, all of whom are 5-3.

Permian stayed in a tie for second by defeating Abilene High 86-83.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — A controversial goaltending call with a half-second left in overtime gave Chicago a victory over New Jersey on in a game Dennis Rodman missed after his first brush with trouble this season.

Rodman was sent back to Chicago by coach Phil Jackson after missing the team shootaround Friday morning.

In the end, though, it came down to an alley-oop inbounds pass from midcourt that was grabbed by Jason Caffey as Nets rookie Keith Van Horn scrambled late onto the court after a timeout. As Caffey was ready to dunk the ball, Jayson Williams came over and attempted to block the shot.

Referee Tommy Nunez called goaltending and the Nets, with only four players on the court due to Van Horn's tardiness, were out of luck.

4-4A: Andrews boys win battle of Mustangs chances from 3-point land to win the game, Lopez' shot really did the trick.

(From 1C)

"Jacob Lopez has been steady as a rock," Andrews coach George Byerly said of the junior, who also had five steals.

Although only 11-14 overall, the win moves Andrews to the top of the district standings with a 4-0 record. Sweetwater falls to 13-9 and 3-1. For Andrews, it is a nice feeling after starting last year's district race at 1-4 before rebounding with a playoff spot and bi-district title.

"After the horrible season, even with the bi-district win, we were someone to contend with," Lopez said. "We will not go around now, thinking we are the No. 1 team in the district. We think we are 0-0 and try to win every game."

Byerly said with more big games on the horizon, this is one his team can build upon.

"For one game, it can't get much bigger," said Byerly, who starts four juniors. "They (Sweetwater) had the experience of playing in big games and we are a young team. These are the type of games we need to go through.

The Sweetwater girls came into their game, holding a grudge against Andrews. After all, Andrews went to Sweetwater in the first game of the season and came out with a 43-29 road win. With Andrews standing at 5-0 in district and Sweetwater at 4-1, getting revenge was the top priority.

"There was a little (of the revenge factor)," said Sweetwater guard Lindsay Lepard, who had 15 points. "We knew we had to beat them on the road. It would be tough but we knew what we had to do."

What Sweetwater, 23-5 and 5-1, did was shake off a bad start and keep Andrews at a safe distance by shooting the ball well. In the third period alone, Sweetwater scored points on nine of its 10 possessions. Although Andrews still had its chances, down by only eight with a quarter to go, it made their climb, an uphill one.

"That was the turning point," Andrews' coach Roger Goldsmith said of Sweetwater's third-quarter run. "They were playing extremely well. It wasn't anything bad on our part.

"(For the game) We struggled offensively and Sweetwater played a heck of a game."

Still, Andrews' players can take pride in that they are still tied for 4-4A top spot, and Goldsmith wants his players to regroup and start over Tuesday versus San Angelo Lake View.

"I told them we would be in good shape win or lose," Goldsmith said. "Before this game, the district race was a long way from being over. Still is. In this district, we have teams which are close. What matters is who puts their best game on the floor. In the first round, we did that. Tonight, we didn't."

Sweetwater also knows its biggest challenges are still ahead, having to follow this win with wins at Big Spring and at Lake View.

LEE: Rebels bomb away

everyone. Last year we couldn't compete against anybody. It's a big step up even though we don't have a win to show for it."

However, Lee coach House thought it was not so much looking forward to Midland High as it was coming off an emotional game against Odessa Permian Tuesday where the Rebels again had to erase a huge 17-point Mojo lead to win the game. Lee turned in 14 treys in that game.

"We've had a lot of emotional games with Permian in the past couple of years and I thought we were lackadaisical out there tonight," House said. "And, maybe, the Midland High game affects this game too. But if we play like we did tonight, we won't have to worry about beating Midland High."

The third quarter 3-point shots may be contagious at the Chap because Lee's Ken Myer hit five 3-pointers in the third quarter and scored 30 points to lead the Lee junior varsity (14-8, 4-2 in district) to a 50-43 victory over the Bobcats. Myer scored 23 of Lee's 25 points in the second half, 21 in a row and had six treys in the game. He scored all of Lee's 16 points in the third period.

In the sophomore game, Lee won 85-63 to climb to 17-3 for the season as Kyle Kelley hit for 22 points and Sal Torres for 10.

JACKS: Odessa shocked

one of the teams Odessa must catch to earn one of the two wild card playoff berths. Another is San Angelo, which invades the Shack tonight for their third meeting with the Jackalopes this week.

San Angelo has a 10-point lead over Odessa, but last night's game was one of five games the Jacks have in hand and a win would have been very big.

"We know we played well on defense and offense and we'll shake this off and bounce back tonight," Lampron said. As for the call on Triano, he said, "I've never seen anything like it."

Lake Charles goes to 21-20-5 with the win and Odessa slips to 16-29-3. It was the team's first home appearance since Dec. 28.

Dan Lavergne's goal on a Ryan Equale assist gave Odessa a 1-0 lead at 6:05 of the first period. Going into the second period, goals by Bobby Wallwork and Graeme Townsend made it 2-1 Lake Charles.

Odessa's three-goal second period (Paul Berrington, Equale and Lampron) made it 4-3 Odessa, heading into the final 20 minutes. Berrington scored at 0:28 and Equale at O:38 on 5 on 3 and 5 on 4 opportunities.

The Scorpions returned in kind with Mark Malgunas and Ryan Daniels scoring at 4:28 and 5:05 of the third period..

The winning goal by Townsend came on passes from Wallmark and Lee Leslie with a Shootout just seconds away.

Several fights broke out during the game, one matching Paul Fioroni and ex-Jack Mike Henderson. Another pitted Don Margettie against Greg Bailey, another former Jackalope. The Fioroni-Henderson battle drew five minute fighting and 10-minute misconduct penalties.

JACKSON: UTEP gets QB

the stress. I'm glad it's done."

Jackson is the third Midland athlete to commit to a college to play football. Midland Lee tight end Brian Boyd decided last week to go to the University of North Texas and Lee offensive tackle Dana Shank has cast his lot with Sul Ross University.

It was also reported in the Reporter-Telegram Thursday that Lee fullback Stacy Jones might visit Cisco Junior College this weekend. He never considered that visit, but he has talked with both Texas Christian University and Texas A&M about walking on next fall. He has also talked with New Mexico, but an offer has not been made.

In the end, Jones, an honor student, may even decide not to play football at all. But he still has some options.

Lee running back Josh Norman is still scheduled to make a visit to Southern Methodist University this weekend. He has already visited Nebraska, California, Texas A&M and Kansas. He has also had an unofficial visit to Texas Tech where his brother, John, is playing.

Super Bowl can be kicker's dream or worst nightmare

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — Game on the line, clock ticking down, 69,000 in the stadium and millions of TV viewers focused intently on one player.

Jason Elam or Ryan Longwell could be that player. They're the Super Bowl kickers.

"That's all I've been thinking about since I've been here: five seconds to go, down by one, 48-yard field goal," Denver's Elam said. "I think it's every kicker's dream. It's also every kicker's nightmare — the Scott Norwood syndrome."

"I'd look forward to it and cherish the opportunity. I go into every game prepared to kick the winning field goal," said Longwell, a rookie salvaged by the Green Bay Packers off the waiver wire last summer. "If you're scared of that situation, you probably shouldn't be here."

Kickers have provided memorable Super Bowl moments.

Norwood lived the nightmare when his 47-yarder sailed wide left and Buffalo lost 20-19 to the New York Giants in 1991. Twenty years earlier, Jim O'Brien's 32-yarder with five seconds left lifted the Baltimore Colts a 16-13 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Elam, a third-round draft pick by the Broncos five years ago, enters Sunday's game having attempted just one field goal in more than a month. He made a 43-yarder in the Broncos' 24-21 playoff win over Pittsburgh.

He was 26-of-36 on the year, the lowest percentage of his five NFL seasons, and missed two kicks, including a 29-yarder, in the Broncos' 34-17 regular-season loss at San Francisco on Dec. 15.

Longwell has kicked five field goals in six tries in the postseason. He made three of four in the NFC championship game, which the Packers won 23-10 over the 49ers, who cut him in the preseason.

"I originally thought I might be here with the 49ers," said Longwell, who got his chance with the Packers when Brett Conway got hurt during training camp. "I had kind of come to the consensus that I wouldn't play football this year, that I would go back to Cal and finish up my master's degree.

"But Green Bay took a chance with me and I think I've made the most of it."

Elam has envisioned different scenarios for Sunday's game.

"I sit and visualize every possible situation that might happen, the crowd noise, the field, if it's rainy or windy or not, just whatever. That's the way I'm going into it."

Elam was 20-of-23 from inside the 40-yard line, but just 3-of-8 from the 40-to-49-yard range and 3-of-5 beyond the 50 during the regular season.

Green Bay kicker Ryan Longwell (8) and holder Craig Hentrich celebrate Longwell's field goal against San Francisco in the NFC title game.

Longwell was 21-of-25 inside 40 yards and 2-of-4 from 40-to-49 yards; he made his only kick from beyond 50 yards.

Although everybody loves to be a hero, these kickers hope their teams win by a landslide.

"The Super Bowl is too important a game for the teams and the players to come down to a kicker," Longwell said. "That's why you feel sorry for Norwood."

Tagliabue supports some form of replay

By Barry Wilner
AP Football Writer

SAN DIEGO — A modified version of instant replay has the support of a key NFL precinct — the commissioner's office.

In his state of the league address Friday, commissioner Paul Tagliabue said he would back a reinstatement of instant replay to aid game officials' calls on critical plays only.

But he said he wanted to limit replays to critical plays, the kind that can make or break a season.

Tagliabue seemed at ease during his one-hour news conference, and why not? He just oversaw negotiations for new television deals that brought the NFL nearly $18 billion over the next eight years.

Tagliabue also said:

—a regular-season game in Mexico is a possibility;

—many team owners have agreed to keep ticket prices stable;

—franchise player designations must remain in any future collective bargaining agreement with the players' union;

—an expansion franchise for Cleveland is a near certainty;

—progress has been made in the interviewing and hiring of minority coaches;

—the league is looking into the effect of casino gambling on the sport.

But the meatiest issue certainly was instant replay, which was used from 1986-1991, but then was dropped when it caused lengthy delays, wasn't conclusive enough at times, and made on-field officials timid in their decision-making.

Last year, the competition committee, headed by Mike Holmgren and George Young, proposed a new replay system built around coaches' challenges. It was voted down 20-10 (it needed 23 votes to pass) because many coaches objected to using timeouts to make challenges.

Tagliabue said Friday a similar plan might pass this March at the owners' meetings in Orlando.

"I think a likelihood is that it would be adopted in a form that Mike and other coaches recommended to the ownership last year," Tagliabue said. "With the coaches' challenge system, replay review on the field by the referee, and a very limited number of plays subject to review in the game, so you don't affect the pace of the game or other aspects of the game competitively."

Freeman returns for Packers' last practice

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Antonio Freeman, Green Bay's leading receiver, returned from a stomach flu on Friday to participate in the Packers' final full workout before the Super Bowl.

"He's better, much better," coach Mike Holmgren said after the 1 hour, 40-minute practice. "But he did not practice as many plays as he normally would. He should be fine by tomorrow."

The Packers will hold a 45-minute walk-through at Qualcomm Stadium on Saturday afternoon in their final tuneup for the Denver Broncos.

"All the physical work is done now," Holmgren said. "The stuff is in the can. Now we just need to mentally get ready to play."

The Packers replaced receiver-kick returner Don Beebe on the active roster with practice squad receiver Ronnie Anderson, who was promptly made one of four inactives.

Beebe, the first player to reach six Super Bowls, was placed on injured reserve with a strained hamstring.

In addition to Anderson, the other inactives were: safety Blaine McElmurry, guard Joe Andruzzi and defensive tackle Jermaine Smith.

Helmets off for the Broncos

It was helmets off, hats on for the Denver Broncos.

The Broncos wore caps in their final full practice before the Super Bowl, continuing a no-helmet tradition on Fridays following victories.

"I think the only reason we won football games was because the players didn't like wearing helmets," said coach Mike Shanahan, who began the custom in 1996.

"You'd hear in the fourth quarter of a close game, 'Let's get going — hat day.' "

Denver concentrated on special teams and red-zone situations for most of the 90-minute session at the San Diego Chargers' practice site. Crowd noise blared from speakers as the Broncos called offensive signals, the same approach the team uses before all road games.

Shanahan said the week's practices had gone well: "It was very similar to what we do in Denver. I wanted to keep the same continuity and we were able to do that."

A helicopter from KFMB-TV, the station that caused a stir when its chopper circled the practice field Monday, was back. This time, the helicopter was higher and caused no disruption.

The Broncos will have a 20-minute walk-through at Qualcomm Stadium on Saturday.

"We just want to get in the stadium, run around and get the feel of the surface," Shanahan said.

Afterward, the Broncos will pretty much be confined to quarters at their hotel.

"No one else will be allowed in the rooms. There will be no families with the players," Shanahan said. "We want to treat this like a normal road trip."

The coach said Denver's four inactives for the game are defensive end Ernest Jones, defensive tackle David Richie, linebacker Jon Hesse and wide receiver Sir Mawn Wilson.

Pigskin gets wired up as Super Bowl gets technical

By Paula Story
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO — Tune in, log on, touch down.

Any way you look at it, the Super Bowl is so wired this year you could call it the Cyber Bowl.

There are stadium seats with armchair computers that allow fans to view instant replays, call up player stats and watch the live telecast.

For the millions of fans not lucky enough to have a ticket, the NFL offers an interactive web site, with a live global cybercast, views from six camera angles (including the blimp), and international audio reports in five languages.

"There is nothing that will substitute for the live game, but this is a darn good consolation prize," said Ann Kirschner, vice president of NFL interactive. "The fan is totally in control."

The NFL has been online for the past two Super Bowls, but this year, Kirschner said the explosion in technological advances brings nearly every part of the stadium experience to the web.

"It's like being in the stadium, and in some ways it's better than being in the stadium," she said.

Last year, about 250,000 fans logged on, and this year, they expect an even bigger audience. Giants coach Jim Fassel, NBC analyst Bob Trumpy and former Dallas Cowboys executive Gil Brandt will be online with live analysis and answers to the questions computer-messaged to them during the game by cyberchair quarterbacks.

About 600 lucky fans who will be at the stadium may find themselves with a ChoiceSeat. The interactive computers developed by the Tulsa-based Williams Network Applications are debuting at the Super Bowl with the hope fans will want the technology at their home stadiums.

SUPER: Coaches don't have much in common

(From 1C)

When the folks from Disney World extended the traditional winning quarterback invitation to the winning coach, Shanahan politely declined should the Broncos win Sunday.

"The players play the game, the players win the game," he said. "An endorsement like that, from my persepective, should be given to the players."

Disney World? Holmgren's face lit up at the thought.

"That's one of my favorite places in the whole world to go!" Holmgren exclaimed. "I love that place!"

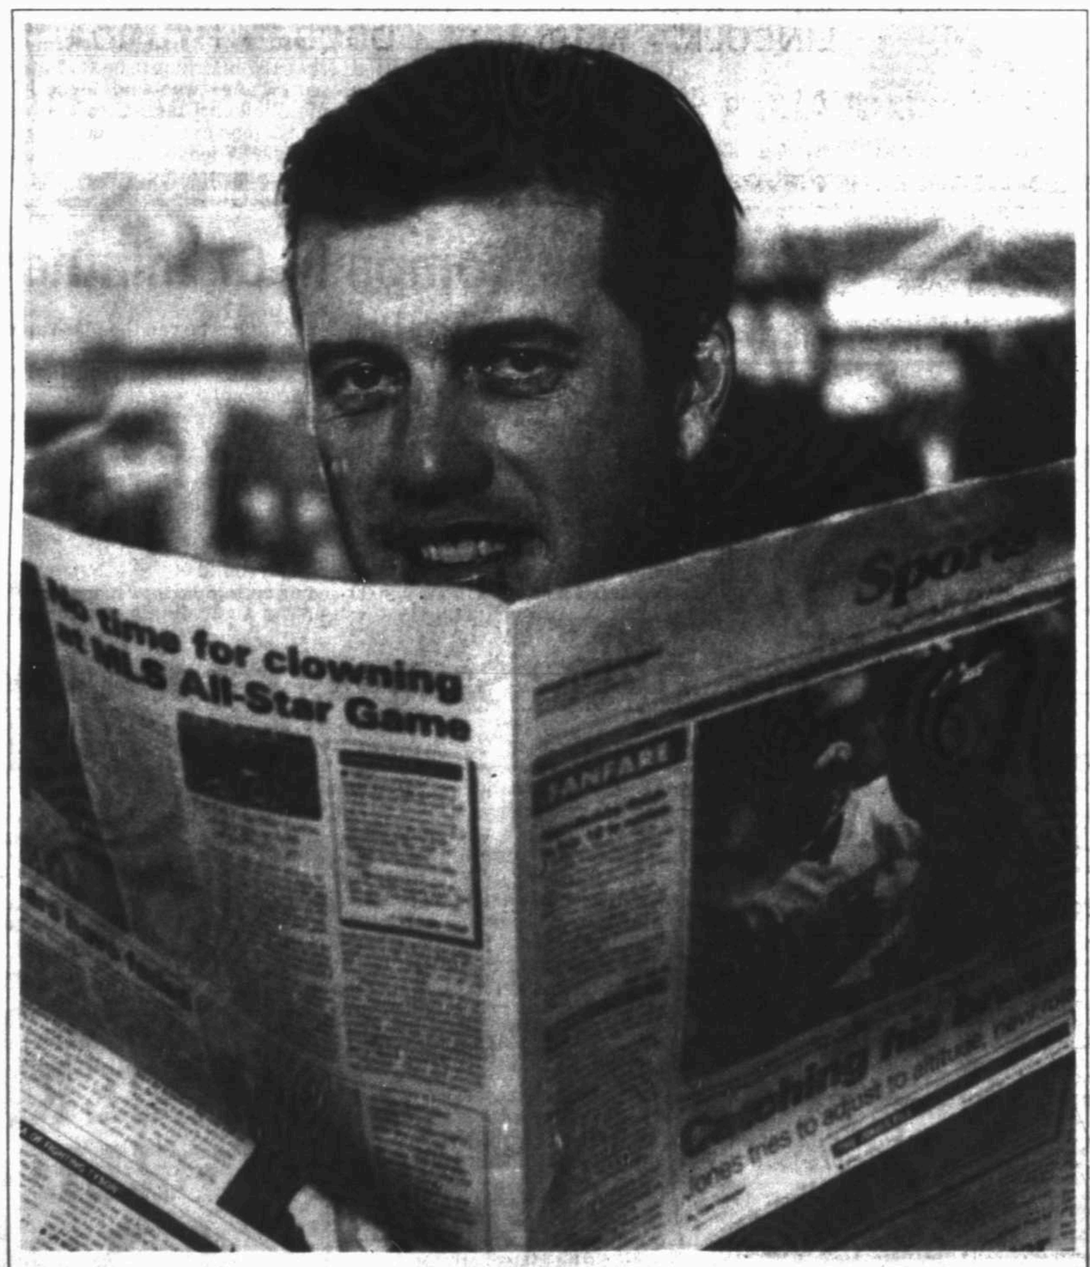
He won't be able to make it, either, though, because of a packed postgame schedule in Green Bay. But you could just see the wheels turning, oooooooh roller coasters and cotton candy. Let's see if I postpone this meeting and cancel that one. ...

Holmgren chuckled. "I was asking them, 'Can I pick my time?' And they didn't go for that."

Shanahan doesn't think about stuff like that. Instead, his game face is squarely in place, 48 hours before the kickoff.

"We don't talk about winning football games," he said. "We talk about preparation for the game. When you see them focus on the preparation of the game, you have a chance for success when Sunday rolls around. We've done that. I'd be surprised if our team didn't play well.

"Talk is cheap. Let's show people what we can do on the football field."



"Encourage your children to read a newspaper every day. It will make them stars in the most important game of all—the game of life."
–John Elway, Quarterback

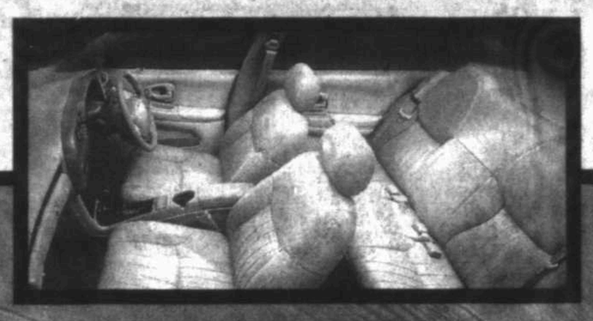
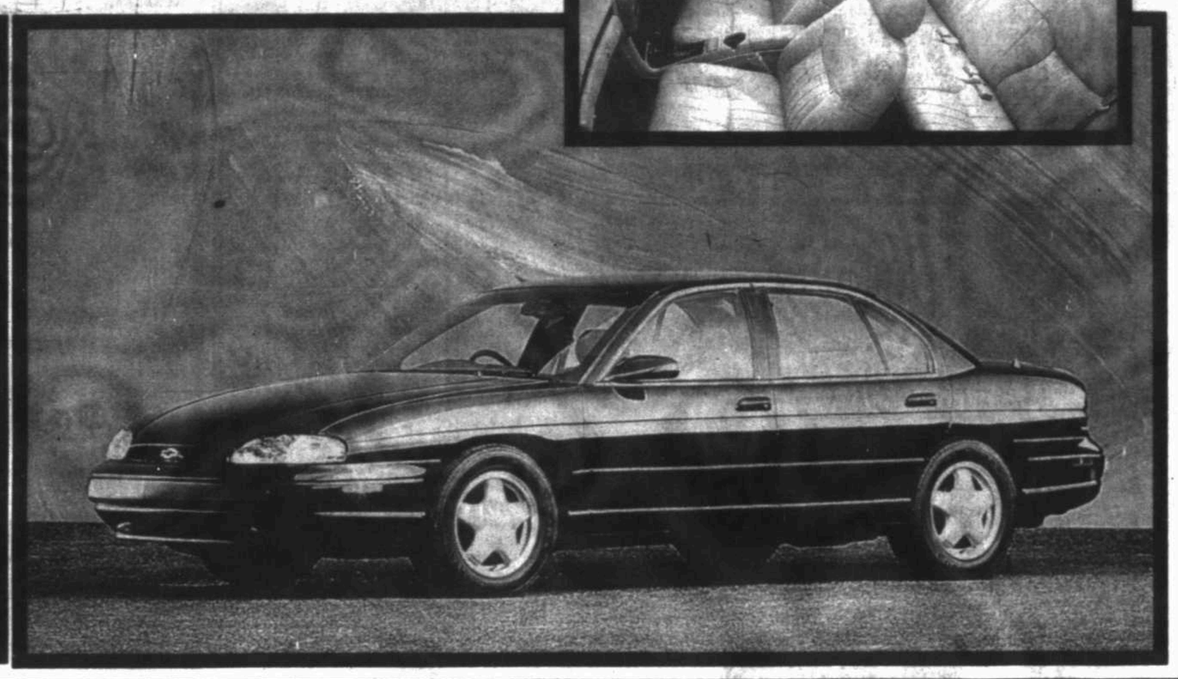
Chevrolet is proving that they have a few surprises left





RoadWorthy!

By Ken Chester, Jr.

Presented to a waiting public back in 1995 and designed to lead the charge into what would become the "Genuine Chevrolet" lineup. Cars and trucks known for value, dependability and usefulness. Entering its fourth model year, the people at Chevrolet are proving that they have a few surprises left for the motoring public. I recently took their newest "winged warrior" — the Lumina LTZ for a spin.

Big Shoes to Fill

With the demise of the "Texas sized" rear drive Caprice and the awesome Impala SS models, the front drive Lumina has become the largest sedan offered by the bowie folks. Built in GM's Oshawa, Ontario, Canada assembly plant, the LTZ represents evolution based on a solid platform. In an attempt to inject some excitement into their popular family sedan, Chevrolet introduced the Lumina LTZ model during the '97 model year. For 1998, the automaker has made the 3800 Series II V-6 available as a $500 option. By specifying the R9S Performance Package you get the 3.8L engine, P225/60R-16 blackwall Goodyear Eagle RS-A tires, power four wheel disc brakes, Ride and Handling Suspension, robust 4T65-E four speed automatic transmission and sixteen inch machine faced wheels. I know what you are thinking — this is a Lumina sedan, right? Yeah, as much as the Impala SS was a Caprice! I spent some time driving this lethal combination. It's by far the most fun you can have on four wheels! By now you know how I feel about this engine — the handling and suspension system that comes with this package just makes the experience even more enjoyable. With the AR9 five seat layout and the $695 optional leather seating, this Lumina takes the driver into a completely different realm. Displays and controls are good and the driver has a decent view of the road. The $93 optional Delco AM/FM/CD stereo sound system was simply awesome. Back seat passengers enjoy decent room, even with the front seats pushed all the way back. Consumers that need to haul a small child can opt for a child safety seat — built into the center of the rear seat for $125 additional. The engine hood is self-propped by two hydraulic cylinders and fluids are easy to reach and are clearly marked. I register just a couple of gripes: no oil pressure or battery volt gauges, and the lack of rear cupholders.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment for the Lumina LTZ includes: dual airbags, four wheel disk brakes with anti-lock, daytime running lights, side-impact door beams, and PASS-Key II Theft Deterrent system. Optional safety equipment includes the OnStar system (dealer installed), which when linked to the OnStar Center, provides an extra measure of safety twenty four hours a day, seven days a week. Traction control is not available. EPA fuel economy for the 3800 Series II V-6/4T65-E powertrain is 19 city/30 highway. The retail sticker price for the Chevrolet Lumina LTZ starts at $19,745, with destination charge $550 additional. While the overall supplies of the Lumina are good, you may have to search for an LTZ. At press time, there were no rebates on this car. ■

Home on the road

By Tom Yates

The First Time Out

Like any trip you should prepare. The difference is you have to prepare your home on the road differently from loading luggage in the car or packing bags for a trip on an airplane or train. If you have a destination in mind now is the time to break out the atlas or road maps and find out the best routes to travel. You should also consider buying a campground guide so you can locate a campground near your destination. It's also not a bad idea to call ahead and make reservations. You can find campground guides at your local RV supplier or in many bookstores. Some states also have a campground owner's association that may supply a free directory of campgrounds. Another good place to look for camping spaces is in state parks. Like private campgrounds many states allow you to make reservations ahead of time, though you may not be able to reserve a specific camp site.

Handling the Simple Stuff

Take your RV or tow vehicle and trailer to the gas station and fill the fuel tank. From there go to a propane fueling station and have your propane tank filled. If this is your very first time out it's a good opportunity to practice driving in close areas maneuvering the rig. With full fuel tanks the next step is to ready the unit itself. If you have an outside electrical connection hook up the unit's shore power connection (the big extension cord that supplies 120 volt power to the unit.) the night before you leave. Next, turn on the refrigerator so it will be cooled down by the time you hit the road. Make sure your refrigerator is set on "120 volts" if it doesn't have an automatic changeover. If you can't hook up the shore power start the refrigerator on propane.

Advance Preparation

If you're leaving early in the morning load the rig the night before. Whatever your departure time, start loading food and clothes in reverse order of their use. Obviously the amount you load up depends on how long you're going to be gone. Remember that you do have a limited amount of carrying capacity. If you take along everything you may overload your unit and cause damage. For the trip to your destination you can fill the water tank to 1/4 or 1/2 of capacity depending on how long the trip is. You only need enough water for a few toilet flushes and a meal or two. When you get to the camp site you will have a water hookup. If you're going to be dry camping, or boondocking as it's often called, you can top of your water tank at a fueling stop before you get to the campground. The more water you store on-board the less other "stuff" you can carry.

Empty the Tanks

Speaking of water and tanks, be sure your holding tanks are empty before you leave. There's no need to carry extra weight. Also make sure you have chemicals for the holding tanks. Most camp grounds sell the chemicals. Next, check engine fluids and tire pressures to be sure everything is right. If you're towing a car, hook up the tow bar and check turn signals, brake lights and safety cables/chains to be sure they're working. Next make a final interior and exterior walk-around inspection to check to be sure all storage compartment doors, cabinets and refrigerator doors are shut. Look for loose objects that aren't secured or tied down etc. Make sure the step is stored.

Final Checklist

Before you leave make sure the house is locked up, and mail and newspaper deliveries are stopped or picked up by a neighbor. Since this is the first trip of the season, start off slow and easy to get the feel of your vehicle. Don't forget unless you're a truck driver this is a much larger vehicle than you're used to driving. Stop after the first twenty-five or so miles and do a walkaround check of the vehicle. Check each tire by feel, check tow vehicle lights, safety chains/cables, tires and turn signals and brake lights. While on the highway stop every 100 miles or so, or every other rest stop, and check your tires, outside of unit, tow vehicle etc. You won't lose as much time as you think, and you may save time if you catch a problem before it becomes a disaster.

Lincoln Continental redressed in bold new statement of style

By BOB PLUNKETT
SPECIAL REPORT

Catching a shuttle to the airport typically entails a ride in one of Lincoln's full-size Town Car sedans, which seems to be the preferred conveyance of limousine operators, but recent experience resulted in a cushy cruise in another type of Lincoln that orients around a front-wheel-drive mechanism rather than Town Car's rear-wheel mode.

This other full-size Lincoln, looking classy with bold chrome grille and new sculptured face for the revised editions of 1998, rolled to a stop beneath a hotel's porte cochere as it flashed a chrome nameplate: Continental.

The badge tracks back more than half a century in Lincoln lore representing a car which at times has been both dashing and daring, often innovative and sometimes even iconoclastic — like the "Continental Kit" that fostered cars modified with spare tire mounted to a back bumper.

Recent Continental iterations trace to a major overall of 1995, which produced a new platform in a package loaded with both trappings of luxury and enough mechanical and electronic hardware to dazzle but perhaps also confuse even the most adept techno-wired driver.

Continental for 1998 reduces the technical confusion in a redesigned package with plush new interior fittings.

One tester's introduction to the revisions of Continental occurred while ensconced in the leather-lined rear quarters of that airport limo, and let me tell you: It became a pleasing commute with big-car comforts and the smooth and soothing ride quality of a, well, a limousine.

Later, a week's experience of living out of a new Continental for at-home driving chores revealed that this new version doesn't forfeit handling finesse and drivability for the plush suspension and all of those on-board comforts.

And everywhere I steered it, Continental caused eyes to follow and heads to turn as it elicited admiring glances from the slick styling of this year's facelift.

The new face of Continental begins with shapely molded composite hood capped by chrome glints of a turbine-vaned grille, which now mounts to the front of all Lincoln vehicles as common signature.

More chrome as accent appears in flanking clear-lens reflector headlamps that wrap around the abbreviated front corners and seem to flow smoothly into side sculptured bodyside cladding.

Frontal overhang on Continental was pared for this design, but in balance the rear deck was extended to create a strong new tail treatment. Although overall dimensions remain essentially the same, revised proportions present a dynamic, windswept shape.

The tail, also with composite deck, protrudes for two additional inches this year and the extension carves out more trunk space inside.

Within Continental, the fresh layout installs a new instrument panel covered in textured suede, with polished bird's-eye maple wood dotting the panel as ritzy accent.

This Lincoln particularly impresses when you climb inside the spacious cabin — it swamps you in luxury, with plush leather seating, power everything, conveniences set at every location and a superior level of interior quietness.

One of Continental's few options concerns front seat configuration. Standard are sporty twin buckets with center-mount gear shifter and console with armrest that flips to reveal an optional cellular phone, but a no-charge alternate brings a 3-person bench with column-mounted shift lever and fold-out armrest concealing a cellular phone.

The rear bench easily seats three adults. Airport commuting time spent back there demonstrated that this was indeed a comfortable space for long legs and tall torso. For a big car, it's also surprisingly easy to drive.

With a rigid chassis and this year's simplified suspension, it performs with agility around curves, holding steady with little body roll.

Variable-assist power steering responds quickly to driver's input but returns to center rapidly. Continental's big disc brakes tie to electronic anti-lock action, and the standard traction control system employs engine torque reduction and brake pedal pressure to enhance vehicle control through various pavement conditions.

Electronic wizardry in the previous Continental extended beyond a dazzling electronic display of instruments in the dashboard to a computer-based command system which could remember and regulate driver preferences for seat and steering wheel positions, adjustments to mirrors and radio dials, even steering and suspension.

When first encountered, this complex system of commands and options intimidated and confused, making a driver think you'd need a crash computer course to learn to operate it.

Continental's revision this year eliminates confusion and simplifies the system, leaving easy-to-understand aspects like memory settings for seat position but deleting in standard configuration choices for suspension settings.

Now, standard Continental rides on non-variable gas-charged shocks and uses lower spring rates to create soft ride sensations. Suspension springs carry over from the previous edition, with steel coils in front and air springs in back tied to an automatic leveling system for stability.

The variable suspension becomes an option within a Driver Control Package, which includes selective ride control and memory system for preferences, plus touch controls added to steering wheel. Continental's powertrain feels gutsy. Changes in the engine's governing microprocessor make this a quicker car, with snappy acceleration when you pound the pedal.

The all-aluminum 4.6-liter V8 Ford engine, with dual-cam configuration and 32 valves, stocks sequential port electronic fuel injection and produces 260 horsepower.

An electronic 4-speed automatic transaxle, which has a non-synchronous overdrive gear and lockup torque converter, shifts quietly and doesn't intrude on driver patterns.

Standard configuration of Continental includes many power-operated convenience items, but premium gadgets in addition to the Driver Control Package appear on a list of optional equipment, like a JBL audio system, personal security package and Lincoln's RESCU (Remote Emergency Satellite Cellular Unit) communications program, which links to global positioning satellites and a hands-free cellular phone and can pinpoint the vehicle's earthly location and summon help when asked. ■
