Fritts' Statement Blames Hamilton Youth's Liquor Testimony

GRAND JURY TO SIFT SLAYING CHARGES TODAY

Prisoner's Signed Statement Assumes Full Blame For Two Deaths

CHARGE FIRST DENIED

Fritts Claimed Three Pals Responsible For Shooting

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, Texas, Oct. 28.—The action of Earle Hamilton in testifying before a Haskell county grand jury in a series of investigations into alleged liquor violations was named as the reason for the slaying of the younger Hamilton and his father, D. W. Hamilton, of near Rochester, in a statement signed by Bill Fritts, which Clyde Grissom, district attorney, said today he had in his possession.

Fritts is charged with the two murders. District Attorney Grissom said that the statement, made Saturday, places full responsibility for the shooting of the Hamiltons on Fritts.

Fritts Makes Denial

Fritts, until Saturday, had stoutly denied complicity in the killings ever since he surrendered to officers at Judd, near Rochester, Friday, after he had eluded posses for nearly two days. Answering questions of officers and newspaper men in the Abilene jail, where he was taken for safe keeping after his arrest, he asserted he was accompanied on his visit to the Hamilton house Wednesday night by three companions who alone were responsible for the shootings.

Immediately upon receipt of the statement, District Attorney Grissom prevailed upon District Judge Bruce Bryant to call a special session of the grand jury, which will meet here to investigate the case at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Young Hamilton had testified before a recent grand jury which later indicted Fritts on six counts for alleged liquor violations. He was to have appeared as a witness in the trial of Fritts, originally scheduled for today.

Shooting at Home

Both he and his father were called from their home on last Wednesday night by a man who engaged in conversation with them for a short while and then shot both down. Fritts was charged with the shooting after Mrs. Hamilton had talked to officers and given a description of the man who had come to her home on the fatal night.

Reports that two other men were arrested at Rochester and are being held in connection with the slayings yielded no new developments Sunday night. District Attorney Grissom said no charges had been filed against them if, as it is reported, they are held.

Mr. Grissom would not reveal whether Fritts would be brought before the Haskell county grand jury Monday. He further would not reveal whether the prisoner is in jail at Abilene or at Haskell.

Trio to Seek Release From Kidnaping Charges

BEAUMONT, Texas, Oct. 28. (AP)—Seeking release from charges of kidnaping preferred by Kendall county authorities, Mr. and Mrs. H. Golden and Mrs. Floy Sharp, Mrs. Golden's sister, will appear in district court here Thursday in a hearing on application for writ of habeas corpus.

The three were released from the Port Arthur jail on court orders last Thursday, pending the hearing. Each posted bond of $25.

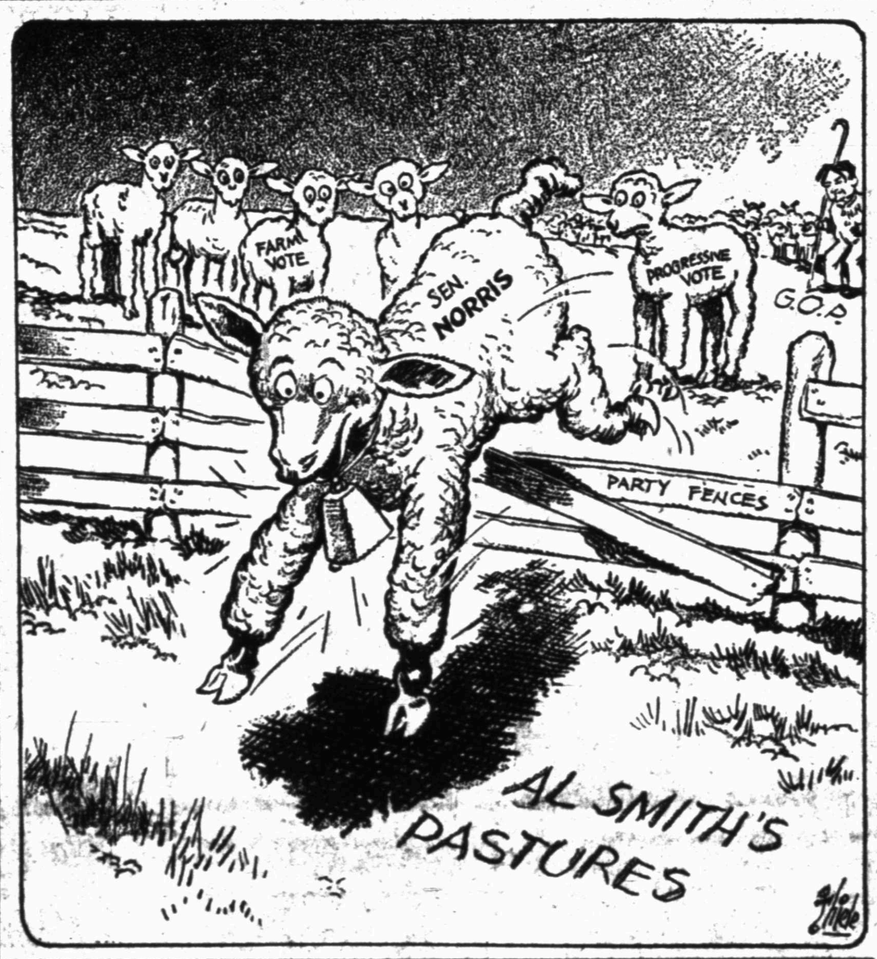

The charges grew out of the alleged abduction of Dorothy Gregory, Boerne, Kendall county, high school girl, last week. The girl is in Port Arthur with the three accused persons.

Female Contingent Holds Balance of Power In U. S. Election

(There never has been an attempt by any governmental agency to determine in advance the number of persons entitled to participate in a national election. The Associated Press, through its correspondents, has gathered these statistics and herewith shows the number eligible to vote on Nov. 6. The figures are approximate because registration has not ended in all states. In many cases the registration was determined county by county. In cases where figures were not obtainable, estimates were made by various state officials.)

(Copyright, 1928, by Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (AP)—Forty-three million men and women, by far the largest number ever registered, have qualified to participate in the battle of ballots at the presidential election on Nov. 6.

The total marks an increase of nearly 14,000,000 over the vote cast in 1924 and makes the figures of former years appear small in comparison.

Increase Is General

From coast to coast and from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande statistics gathered by the Associated Press tell the same story—that of unprecedented determination of voters of both sexes to participate actively in the contest of 1928.

All of those entitled to vote will not do so, however, for a study of the vote of other elections has shown a considerable percentage not exercising their privilege. A conservative estimate based on other years would indicate the stay-at-home vote at 15 per cent. The estimated increase in actual votes cast, nevertheless, would be about 6,500,000 over 1924. This would make the estimated vote more than 35,500,000, compared with 29,091,417 four years ago.

More Women Register

One of the surprising results noted in the 1928 tabulation is the tremendous increase in the number of qualifying women voters. Political leaders and state officials generally agree that the women will hold the balance of power. Every state has shown a startling jump in the female registration. It has been impossible to ascertain the total number of women entitled to vote but, based on the known segregation of registration it is estimated that in the larger cities women will cast between 35 and 45 per cent of the total vote. The percentage probably will be smaller in towns and rural sections.

The registration in Texas this

MORAN AND MACK

Better known as the "Two Black Crows," will appear in The Record News daily, starting today. Here is humor with the "mor" emphasized. The Two Black Crows are the best-known entertainers in the amusement world. Thousands have laughed at their discourse on the stage and over the radio, and thousands more will now be able to chuckle over their printed discussions.

Don't miss this feature. It's diverting, amusing, laughable.

Dr. S. A. Barnes Transferred To Oak Cliff; Dr. McKenney Retained

Pastor of Floral Heights Church Goes to Dallas Pastorate; Other Changes Here and in District

Dr. S. A. Barnes, for nine years associated with Methodist activities in Wichita Falls, and for the last six years pastor of the Floral Heights Methodist church, was transferred to the Oak Cliff Methodist church at Dallas, Texas, by action of the North Texas Methodist conference at Denton Sunday, Associated Press dispatches to the Record News said.

Reports of the conference's activities further stated that Dr. S. S. McKenney, pastor of the First Methodist church, would be retained here. The congregation of the church met last week and petitioned the North Texas body to return Dr. McKenney to his present pastorate.

Barcus Comes Here

Dr. Barnes, the conference provided, is to be succeeded by the Rev. E. R. Barcus, for the last year pastor of the First Methodist church at Denton, and brother of J. Sam Barcus, until recently president of Southwestern university at Georgetown, Texas.

The change is to be effective at once. The Rev. Barnes Sunday was in Denton attending the conference, but members of his family here said they would leave for Dallas the latter part of the week.

Other ordinances of the Denton conference affecting Wichita Falls include the appointment of J. E. Wade to be in charge of the Wichita Falls circuit. Mr. Wade, who at present is pastor of the Blue Grove Methodist church, will succeed Rev. W. D. Cook, who has been in charge of this circuit for the past year. C. J. Fender, at present district evangelist, was named field secretary of the mission board.

Formed New Church

Dr. Barnes, in departing from his pastorate here, leaves behind him an outstanding record of work. Coming here in 1916, he served as pastor of the First Methodist for three years, at the end of that time being at the head of a congregation of about 1,200 members. In 1919 he divided the First Methodist church, forming the Floral Heights congregation, leaving the First church under the leadership of the Rev. W. L. Tittle, whom he will succeed as pastor of the Dallas church. After the division, he left for Paris, Texas, where for three years he was presiding elder of that district.

He returned here late in 1921, resuming leadership of his old congregation at the Floral Heights church, and has remained there ever since. At the present time the church has about 1,600 members.

In addition to building this congregation, after forming the groundwork for the First Methodist church, the Rev. Barnes has been

QUEEN OF AIR STARTS RETURN TO GERMANY

Frank Ernest Nicholson Wires Parents Here Of His Plans

TO WRITE OF FLIGHT

Son of Judge E. W. Nicholson Gets 'Big Chance,' Father Says

NAVAL AIR STATION, Lakehurst, N. J., Oct. 29 (AP).—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin took off on its its return flight to Germany at 1:54 a. m. today.

Dragged tail first from the hangar, the greatest of all airships lifted easily into a moonlight night and was soon but a vanishing smudge against the stars

The Graf Zeppelin, famous dirigible, was ready to take off from Lakehurst, N. J., on its return flight to Germany early Monday and among its select list of passengers was Frank Ernest Nicholson, a Wichitan, it is believed here.

Mr. Nicholson wired his father from New York that he was being sent on the flight by his publishers, E. P. Dutton and company, of New York, and that he was under contract to write a book describing the second ocean flight of the giant Zeppelin. His impression was that the dirigible would take off on the flight Wednesday, according to the telegram, which follows:

"County Judge E. W. Nicholson,
1515 Tenth street,
Wichita Falls, Texas.

Am flying to Germany Wednesday on Graf Zeppelin. My publishers sending me to write book about trip.

Frank Ernest Nicholson."

Associated Press reports Sunday night of the list of passengers did not include Mr. Nicholson's name. It was supposed here, however, that owing to the delayed plans of the writer, his name at the last moment was not registered.

Mr. Nicholson's first book, "Favorite Jokes of Famous People," which is still appearing in installments in the Record News, was published only last week by the Dutton company. The Record News began publication of the series several months ago when Nicholson's efforts attracted the attention of a popular eastern newspaper syndicate. In addition to these activities Nicholson is a contributor to leading newspapers and periodicals over the country and soon is to see the publication of his first novel, entitled "Wax," a story of the Spanish Dons of early California.

Flight Is Opportunity

Mr. Nicholson's parents regard their son's flight on the Graf Zeppelin a singular opportunity, as only a limited number of the best and most widely known writers were booked as passengers. The passenger list, itself, they are informed is curbed by limitations.

Neither Judge nor Mrs. Nicholson expressed the slightest fear for their son's safety when informed that he would make the trip. Their only reaction, apparently, was an extreme pleasure that their boy would be among the first few to make the historic flight back to Germany.

"I'm glad Frank will be along," the judge said. "It will be a wonderful trip, and one that he will remember all his life."

"I hope he lands safely," said Mrs. Nicholson, displaying not the slightest fear that the huge dirigible, which braved adverse weather successfully on its recent maiden trip to America, would fail in its second flight.

With the publication of "Wax," and the book about the Graf Zeppelin flight, Nicholson will be fairly well established in the business of giving the public something to read, a pursuit he began only a few years ago. He has, at times, written scenarios at Hollywood, and recently was engaged with a moving picture concern writing titles for the silent drama. In addition, he is an artist, and his volume of "Favorite Jokes" is illustrated with his own drawings.

DEATH AT UNVEILING

ROCHEFORT, France, Oct. 28. (AP)—One man was killed and two wounded today when police broke up a demonstration against the unveiling of a monument to the late Premier Emile Combes. Before the combatants had been separated, the nose, chin and ear of the statue had been smashed with hammers.

Speaker Foresees 'Wet' Supreme Court Judges

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 28. (UP)—Assuming the probability that a majority of the United States supreme court judges would die within the four-year period beginning March 4, 1929, when the next president takes office, and that the appointment of so-called wet judges would be disastrous to law enforcement, was the theme of a speech delivered here today over radio by W. J. Losinger, superintendent of the Arkansas Anti-Saloon league. The speech was an appeal for votes against the Democratic ticket.

Student Confesses Series of Raids And Killings

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 28. (AP)—George Harsh, youthful college sophomore, who admitted he killed two men "for a thrill" during a series of spectacular holdups, and his alleged confederate, Richard Gray Gallogly, 18-year-old freshman, today were held incommunicado in the city jail. Police announced evidence in the case probably would be submitted to the Fulton county grand jury Tuesday.

Gallogly, whom Harsh implicated in his confession to police detailing the series of holdups, was returned here today from Athens, Ga., where he was arrested yesterday. The youths were not permitted to talk to each other.

While Harsh, according to A. Lamar Poole, chief of detectives, has made a "full, honest and truthful confession," in which he took all blame for the killings and declared Gallogly was the driver of the car they used for the holdups, counsel has warned the youths not to talk further, and police declined to permit them to be interviewed.

$200,000 Fire in Tiny California Community

EUREKA, Cal., Oct. 28. (AP)—Wildwood, a community 30 miles south of here, known as the "Little Italy of Humboldt County," was swept by disastrous fire today which burned away more than 10 buildings and did property damage estimated at $200,000.

CAMPAIGN HOT IN FINAL WEEK

Both Parties Plan Whirlwind Finish

The greatest political activity ever known here in a presidential election is now being recorded in Wichita county, according to political observers and leaders of all parties.

With the election a week away, both the Hoover and Smith forces are rushing into the final drive with speeches and individual campaigning for votes.

Monday night sees the Smith forces making two major efforts and the Hoover forces three.

Ben Allred and Joe Carrigan of Wichita Falls are speaking at a rally in Charlie. It will be out of doors and will start at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. H. C. Currington will introduce the speakers.

The radio program by the Democratic women will be broadcast over KGKO here, starting at 9 o'clock.

O. B. Colquitt, former governor of Texas, will address a rally at Henrietta on behalf of Herbert Hoover and under the auspices of the anti-Smith organization.

Rev. Arthur Jones of Memphis will speak for Hoover at Odell, and residents of Harrold will hold a rally which has been arranged by Dr. T. A. King of Vernon, chairman for the Wilbarger county anti-Smiths.

Allen Claims Predicted Demo 'Mud' Is Here

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (UP)—Former Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas, director of publicity for the Republican national committee, declared in a formal statement tonight that his forecast that "major tactics of Chairman Raskob in directing the Democratic national campaign for the final weeks would be an increasing crescendo of mud, slander, misrepresentation and fabrication," has been "fully verified during the past week."

Judge's Home Guarded After Bomb Explosion

CHICAGO, Oct. 28. (AP)—A police guard today was assigned to the home of Judge William J. Lindsay, Democratic candidate for state's attorney of Cook county, because a bomb explosion last night wrecked a garage in the rear of the building where the candidate lives.

A guard had been assigned to the building, a three-apartment structure, until last week, when Judge Lindsay requested it be withdrawn.

Five Persons Killed At Street Intersection

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 28. (AP)—Five persons were killed at a street intersection here today when a truck in which four young men were taking an injured companion to a hospital crashed into a large sedan containing a party of Halloween masqueraders.

The dead:

Walter Tanzer, 21; Mary Mehl, 17; Mildred Copriva, 17; Henry Schwappler, 21; Clayton Copeland, 20.

Waxahachie Man Killed In Collision of Cars

GREENVILLE, Texas, Oct. 28. (AP)—Joe Bayless, 54, of Waxahachie was killed and three others injured when two automobiles collided today 12 miles from here on the Dallas pike.

The injured were Mrs. Joe Bayless, her brother, Jess Tyler, both of Waxahachie, and Mrs. V. S. Castle of Winnsboro. None of the three were seriously hurt.

Vote Campaign to Be Made Permanent Work

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 (US)—The "get out the vote" campaign of the National League of Women Voters, carried on since last January, by radio and otherwise, will be continued after election in the form of a political education program, according to announcement today of Miss Katherine Ludington, chairman of the committee in charge.

"Sharper" Cue Artists Attract Court Injunctions

LOCKHART, Texas, Oct. 28. (AP)—Complaints by untalented cuemen that they had been inveigled into playing for money with sharpers have resulted in injunction suits being filed against proprietors of five pool halls in Caldwell county. The five were indicted for operating gambling halls.

RAINS COVER WICHITA AREA

Oklahoma and North Texas Greatly Benefited

Wichita county and a large area extending more than 100 miles in every direction received a slow, beneficial rain Sunday which was continuing Sunday night. For the 24 hours ending at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon, the precipitation was .45 inch here, and it was generally the same over the district.

A young cloudburst at Rochester resulted in a 3½ inch downfall. North, in Oklahoma on the Katy railroad, the dispatcher reported better rains than in Wichita Falls. This was in the vicinity of Forgan, Woodward and Elk City. Forgan had a hard, two-hour rain.

Althus reported a rain similar to that of Wichita Falls. Likewise the rainfall from here south to Stamford was about the same as in Wichita county. From Stamford to Abilene and Spur the precipitation was lighter. The territory from Fort Worth to Childress was about the same as Wichita Falls.

G. C. McGown, county agricultural agent, said that the rain is welcome as it will replenish the watering holes for the livestock and also will tend to put a good season in the ground for the winter wheat, oats and barley.

"We really need about two days like this," Mr. McGown said. "The cotton won't be hurt although the picking will be delayed. About two inches of rain, followed by a freeze would be worth many thousands of dollars to the farmer."

Robinson Takes Rest Before Final Charge

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 28. (AP)—Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic vice presidential nominee, placed a ban on campaign activities of all kinds today and took advantage of Sunday to rest for the last stretch of his extensive tour next week.

Denver Post Declares For Hoover and Curtis

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (US)—Republican national headquarters received word today that the Denver Post had declared for Hoover and Curtis.

Hoover Yields to Request That He Visit Colorado on Last Tour

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (UP)—Herbert Hoover has yielded to requests from Colorado Republican leaders and tonight changed his Western itinerary so that his special campaign train will cross that state, instead of going by way of Nebraska and Wyoming.

The Republican candidate also will make more stops than first announced on his way west to California to vote, it was revealed in the complete itinerary made public here tonight.

Colorado, which has six electoral votes, was listed as "doubtful" earlier in the campaign, but reports from there recently indicate Hoover now has a distinct lead. It was said at Hoover headquarters that it is not any worry about the state that brought about the change, which was decided upon in a conference today between Hoover and his advisers.

By some, it was urged as more important to go through Nebraska than Colorado, because of the declaration of Senator Norris, Republican independent of that state, for Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Smith Mulls Philadelphia's Great Reception on Eve of Final Foray

CENTERVILLE, Md., Oct. 28. (UP)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith rested in the shade of the Mason-Dixon line today, contemplating the effect of his bewildering reception in Philadelphia, the heart of stauch Republicanism and planning his invasion tomorrow of doubtful Democratic Maryland.

The Democratic presidential nominee could hardly believe suggestions that the city of Republican brotherly love might be carried by the Democratic national ticket, but his campaign manager, John J. Raskob, at whose home he is staying, could. Raskob issued a statement claming the Philadelphia reception "can mean nothing but victory." Smith had nothing to say.

The day's discussion at the Raskob estate also concerned expectations of a similarly enthusiastic and riotous parade and speech in Baltimore Monday. Smith will arrive in Baltimore at 3 p. m. and will parade for one hour. He has not revealed the subject of his night speech, in accordance with his custom.

The Weather

OKLAHOMA and WEST TEXAS: Monday and Tuesday cloudy, probably showers.

EAST TEXAS: Monday, partly cloudy, showers in northwest portion; Tuesday, partly cloudy, showers in north portion.

Weather conditions for Wichita Falls and vicinity for the 24-hour period ending at 5 p. m. Sunday as reported by the Texas Electric Service company were as follows:

Maximum temperature 69
Minimum temperature 56
Precipitation ..... .45
Northeast breeze.

CHURCH CALLS NEW MINISTER

San Antonio Pastor to Be Asked to H. Heights

The congregation of the Highland Heights Christian church voted to act upon the recommendation of the church board of elders and deacons to extend a call to Rev. Patrick Henry, pastor of the South Side Christian church of San Antonio, to accept the pastorate of the Highland Heights Christian church, at a meeting called after the Sunday morning services.

Dr. Paul Henry Packard, present pastor of the Highland Heights Christian church, will conduct his last services Sunday. He resigned a few weeks ago to re-enter evangelical work.

An answer is expected from the San Antonio minister within a few days.

tion machinery to obtain an early indictment.

The youths, students at Oglethorpe university here, are members of wealthy and prominent families. Harsh, the son of the late George Harsh, wealthy shoe manufacturer of Milwaukee, Wis., made his home with a sister, Mrs. J. S. Disosway, wife of a broker. His mother is expected to arrive here tonight. Gallogly is the step-son of Dr. Worth E. Yankey, prominent physician, and is a member of an old family here.

Robbed for Thrill

Harsh's alleged confession stated the series of robberies, which resulted in a pair of murders, was committed for a "thrill."

The series of holdups covered by the confession extended over a period of less than three weeks, beginning Oct. 5 when the pair robbed a drugstore and a coffee shop, both in the vicinity of Emory university.

Other robberies were staged the following night, and the first of the two murders was committed. Two drug stores and a barbershop were successfully held up before the pair entered a grocery store where they met with resistance from L. V. Ellis, manager, and E. E. Meeks, a grocery clerk, opening fire in making his escape, Harsh shot both men, wounding Meeks fatally, the confession said.

Ceasing their activities for more than a week, while police sought Roy Dickerson, an escaped bandit, as a suspect in the series of robberies, Harsh and Gallogly sought "new thrills" on the night of Oct. 16. This time they entered the drug store managed by Smith and again met resistance.

Youth Wounded

Though mortally wounded, the manager opened fire and before Harsh made his getaway he received a hip wound.

It was that wound which led to capture of the pair. The trousers which Harsh wore on his last venture were sent to a cleaner where police found them blood smeared and with a bullet hole in the hip. With this evidence Harsh was arrested and after denying all knowledge of the series of crimes, finally made the "complete confession" announced yesterday by the police.

Sunday School Figures Lower

Sunday school attendance figures for Sunday fell somewhat below figures for Oct. 21.

Attendance in the 24 churches submitting reports showed 5,340 Sunday school pupils, while the total for Oct. 21 was 6,694.

Sunday school attendance as reported by the various churches was as follows:

The annual flower carnival will be opened the following morning for two days in the Fritz Motor company building, where a number of features in addition to an elaborate floral display will be presented by the forum.

U. S. Voters To Show Big Gain

year is 1,500,000; the vote in 1924 was 657,509.

Texas, which is being watched closely by both Republicans and Democrats this year, had no registration of voters. Governor Moody estimates the voting strength at 1,500,000 but expects a vote of only 800,000, based on past experience. The poll tax receipts issued in 1924 were 1,195,239.

New York Gains

New York, the home state of the Democratic presidential nominee, scene of an intense battle for the prize of 45 electoral votes, has shown an enormous jump in registration. Both major political parties are claiming the benefit of the increase. The total "up-state" potential vote in the empire state, which is normally Republican, is about 19 per cent over the 1924 figures. In the city of New York, consistent Democratic stronghold, the registration leaped from 1,500,113 in 1924 to 2,023,694 this year, an increase of over 34 per cent.

California, home state of the Republican standard bearer, has also shown a substantial climb. The vote of four years ago was 1,281,778 and the 1928 registration is 2,312,816.

Pennsylvania, bulwark of Republicanism for generations, visited Saturday by a Democratic presidential nominee for the first time in years, has kept company with other populous states in the East in the steady upward registration trend. The 1928 figures are 3,943,000 compared with the vote four years ago of 2,144,852. Philadelphia has registered this year 424,044 men and 306,453 women compared with the vote of 338,579 males and 141,743 females in 1924.

Foreign Vote Big

Chicago shows a registration this year of 1,386,631, compared with the vote of 1,064,895 four years ago.

The so-called foreign vote, center of conflicting claims by the rival major parties, will be the largest in history, according to the foreign language information service of New York city, which has completed a survey of 852 publications printed in 16 languages. The total number estimated is 7,500,000, compared with 6,200,000 in 1920.

Dr. Hubert Work, chairman of the Republican national committee, attributes the increase largely to women.

John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, says it is "most important to the future well being of our country to note the increase."

Plan 5-Cent Gas Tax

MONTREAL (AP)—New Brunswick is considering raising the tax on gasoline to five cent per gallon, following the lead of Quebec and Ontario provinces, where the five-cent tax now is in operation.

NEW THEATER MANAGER HERE

B. V. Warren Arrives To Assume Duties

B. V. Warren has arrived in Wichita Falls to take up the management of the Strand and Majestic theaters, replacing Hans Smith, who was recently transferred to Tyler. Mr. Warren has been associated with the Dent theaters for two and one-half years, and comes here from Tyler.

Mrs. Warren and their two children will arrive about Nov. 15 to join Mr. Warren.

"Six Reason s Why We Should Vote for Governor Smith" will be the subject of a paper by Mrs. L. T. Burns in an appeal to the women of the area within reach of KGKO.

The complete program is as follows:

"Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," chorus; "Why It Is Necessary to Work for the Democratic Party Today," talk by Mrs. A. H. Carrigan; "My Old Kentucky Home," chorus; "Six Reasons Why We Should Vote for Governor Smith," Mrs. Lester T. Burns; "Religious Intolerance," Mrs. M. M. Adickes; "Sidewalks of New York," chorus with solo accompaniment; "Why I'm a Democrat," Miss Johnnie Morgan; talk, Mrs. J. A. Kemp; "Swanee River," chorus; "How Al Smith Stands on Immigration," Mrs. W. E. Huff; talk, Mrs. H. B. Patterson; "Listen to the Mocking Bird," chorus; "Why We Should Stay Within the Democratic Party," talk by Mrs. G. R. Davidson of Electra.

Elaborate plans are being made by the women for the rally in the Memorial auditorium Friday night, Mrs. Smedley said. The speakers will be announced in a day or two.

Meantime activitiy of many different kinds to stir women of the city and county to greater activity are being pushed by the women. Telephone calling is to be redoubled, so that every woman and every home in the city will be called at least one time. Additional names of new members of the Smith-Robinson club women will be announced in a day or two, and many more will be ready by the end of the week.

Playground Concert Postponed By Rain

The program by the Wichita Falls Playground band which was to have been given Sunday afternoon in Scotland park, was postponed because of the rain and wet grounds by C. C. Bunnenburg, superintendent of parks. Mr. Bunnenburg said the concert will be held either next Sunday or a week from Sunday, the date depending on the time open on the date book of Paul Seeds, director of the band.

EAST SEYMOUR HOMES LOOTED

Burglars Get $200 While Residents Sleep

Special to The Record News

SEYMOUR, Texas, Oct. 28.—Seymour and Baylor county officers were presented with the problem Sunday of recovering loot stolen from two Seymour residents while they slept.

Thieves entered two residences in East Seymour early Sunday morning and took valuables and money amounting to approximately $200. While A. Starkey was asleep the burglars stole from his home a valuable watch and $42 in cash. The thieves then entered the home of R. E. Bryan and secured $105.

Officers reported late Sunday that no traces as to the identity of the thieves had been obtained.

Wichita County Election Supervisors To Be Named By Major Parties Today

Supervisors will be named by both of the major political parties in Wichita county here Monday, according to announcements made Sunday.

Edgar Scurry, county Democratic chairman, will be assisted by J. B. Hatchitt and other prominent Democrats in naming the supervisors for the Smith forces.

Notices of a meeting of precinct chairmen have been sent to Republican precinct chairmen to meet in the Woman's Hoover headquarters in the Hamilton building Monday night to name their supervisors.

One supervisor will be named for each box in county by each party. This is a procedure permitted by law, and which gives the public, as well as interested parties, a definite check on election judges and clerks. They observe the conduct of the election and also the counting of the ballots, so that the chance of error or crookedness is minimized.

Any qualified voter may challenge any other voter on election day at the polls, so that the chance of a person voting illegally is still further reduced.

Man Who Chooses Wife a Little Above Him Is Wise, Says Miss Dix

It Is a Wise Young Man Who Chooses a Wife He Can Look Up to, Says Dorothy Dix, for a Man Unconsciously Patterns Himself After His Wife, and by Her He Stands or Falls.

The old conception of the proper relationship between husband and wife was to place the man on a pedestal and have the woman burn incense at his feet.

Needless to say, man evolved this charming theory, and mighty soothing and pleasant it has been to his vanity to have his superiority complex thus ministered to and to have some one upon whom he could continually look down. Nor did the idea lack its appealing points for women, for it robbed the wife of all responsibility and permitted her to slump and become merely her husband's rubber stamp.

But the trouble with theories is that they don't always work out and in real life the husband is not always a giant and the wife a pigmy; the husband is not always an oracle and the wife a moron. On the contrary, very often the gray mare is the better horse. Frequently the wife has more intelligence, is better educated, has had a better social upbringing, and has even more business sense and is more of a go-getter than her husband.

Nor is this to be deplored. As a matter of fact, when a couple are not evenly matched, it is far better for the man himself, and for the general interest of the family, for the wife to be the superior one. It is better for a man to marry above himself, as the phrase goes, than to marry below himself.

There are many reasons for this. One is that in this country, at least a man takes his social position as a general thing from his wife. She boosts him up or pulls him down. She decides whom they shall know and he gravitates to her crowd.

When a woman marries she can open the doors of her own set to her husband, but a man cannot force his friends to accept his wife unless she belongs to their own lodge. Mary may marry a very rough diamond of a man and take him with her into the houses of the elect, but if John marries an uncouth woman every door will be barred to her.

It is the wife who makes the atmosphere of the home. If she is a cultured woman, she makes it a place of beauty and refinement, and gathers a delightful circle about her, but no matter how cultured and refined a man is he cannot give this stamp to his home, nor bring about him the people with whom he would like to associate if he is married to an illiterate and common woman.

Why a wife finds it easier to lift her husband up to her level than a husband does to lift his wife up to his level, must forever remain one of the inexplicable mysteries of matrimony. It just happens that way in life. If a man marries a broad-minded and tolerant, sympathetic woman, he almost invariably becomes broad-minded and tolerant and generous too, but if he marries a woman who is mean, prejudiced, little and stingy, he becomes hard and narrow and mean, too.

Over and over again I have seen the wife perform the miracle of making a silk purse out of a sow's ear. I have seen a woman who married a man with little education and no social training prune his grammar and pronunciation and polish his manners until he had the speech and bearing of a gentleman. I have seen fine wives develop all that was good in their husbands' souls, and alas, I have seen the reverse of this.

I have seen greedy women and women who wanted money and the things money buys turn men into thieves. I have seen hard, selfish jealous women make men forget the mothers who bore them. I have seen dull, unimaginative women, without understanding or appreciation, put out the fire of ambition in a man's soul and kill his every aspiration.

But I have known very few who ever really improved their wives. I have known very few neat men who ever taught uneducated wives to love to read and improve their minds. Very few generous men who ever opened the hand of a tightfisted wife.

It goes without saying that it is more important that children should have a superior mother than a superior father, because the mother's influence is greater than the father's. She molds their characters. She makes the environment in which they grow up. She forms their ideal. She sets her indelible stamp upon them.

If the mother is intelligent, she sees that her children have an education, but if she is uneducated, she lets the matter drift and they go to school, or not, or study, or not, as they choose.

If the mother is ambitious, she pushes them on. She is a driving force in their lives. She holds them with a grip of iron to some purpose in life, to making something of themselves. She is like a fluttering flag of glory forever before their eyes. But if she is unambitious and happy-go-lucky, she raises up the kind of boys and girls who take life easily and are satisfied just to drift through the world.

If the mother has high ideals of honor and honesty and duty, she raises up the men and women who cannot do a mean or scurvy trick, but if she has low standards of conduct, she rears the hoodlums and wild girls who fill our jails and reformatories.

It matters little how fine a man a father is, if his children have a weak or vicious mother. She blocks his every effort to impress his ideals upon them, and he is helpless in the face of her greater influence over them.

So it is the wise young man who, in selecting a wife, picks out one to whom he can look up, rather than one on whom he can look down.—Dorothy Dix.

LONGER SKIRTS GAINING GROUND

Paris Leaders Show New Trend Takes Hold

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, Jr.

PARIS, Oct. 28. (US)—Real hope that at last the fashionable world is succumbing to the demand that skirts be lengthened is seen by the fashion dictators of Paris in the costumes shown over the week end.

It has been a long battle, for women seemed unwilling to surrender to the dictum of longer skirts, but the experts thought they saw on Saturday and today signs of victory. The smarter women, they ventured to assert, are inclining toward greater length, although they admit that a great majority show little sign of surrender.

Patou Determined

Jean Patou, among the leaders in the ranks of the fashion czars, is determined to win the battle both for longer skirts and higher waists, saying:

"I want to see mystery once more assert its control over women's frocks. I am resolved that we shall from now on see less of the feminine leg. I believe it is more clever even for a woman with perfect legs to wear a fairly long skirt, showing glimpses of her limbs only in certain movements and attitudes, rather than to constantly display them—a display that forces them on our attention with embarrassing persistence."

Patou believes in things practical for sports wear, but in gentler feminine effects for evening. The success of this idea was evidenced by public appearances during the week of Senora de Alzaga-Unzue, wife of the wealthiest of all the Argentinians and long a leader in the cosmopolitan society of Paris. She and the American born Countess de Jumilhac, formerly Constance Crowninshield Coolidge, are often seen at the races. She appeared in simple tailored sport clothes, while at the Ritz dances and other functions she was noted in frocks of mousseline de soie or the new type of satin which is almost as light in weight.

Single Color Scheme

Where Chantal and Chanel specialize in contrasting effects, Patou's sport clothes frequently carry a single color scheme. This is shown in the costume of Comtesse de Monstiers, in the Bois yesterday—a grey tailored suit cut in the simplest fashion that costs so dearly, and relieved only by a white dotted effect somewhat similar to what is known in the United States as dotted Swiss.

Other gowns worn at the Ritz during the week that caught attention were those of Lady Castlerosse and Madame Catharine. Both carried the new volant effect produced by a series of skirts trimmed at the hem and mounting upward toward the waist in narrowing circles. The sensational character of this scheme is modified by the fact that it is carried out in milder colors.

SCHOOL ENTERS DRAMATIC TILT

Grandfield High to Enter First Competition

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Oct. 28.—Grandfield high school will be represented for the first time in its history at the state dramatic contests to be held at Oklahoma university at Norman, during the latter part of November.

A Carolina folk play, "Fixins," has been chosen by Miss Nell Chism, dramatic art instructor, as the play to be presented. A cast composed of three students will be selected soon, and work will start. Miss Chism intends to have every member of the Players' club compete for the parts, and then, if material is lacking, to select actors from the entire school.

An award is given for the best play presented and also to the best individual actors who are in the state contests, Miss Chism stated.

O' These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (US)—The family of Pavliches, Mr. and Mrs. Rosie, Johnnie, Sam, George and Olga went out last week for a Sunday picnic in the country. They had a fine collection of lunch bags and boxes, packed here and there in the family Ford.

When they reached a fine green, with shade trees at the edge of it, they parked the car, climbed over the fence and proceeded to enjoy lunch, throwing paper bags everywhere.

A fine looking man with white hair and loud golf stockings, came upon them suddenly, found his golf ball embedded in a chocolate cake, and roared like a lion. He would tell the club manager, and he left.

The club manager appeared and waxed wroth, whatever that is.

"What do you think this is? A public park? Who did you think you were? Didn't you know this is the exclusive Westchester Biltmore Country club, and that no one has the right even to walk on the greens, much less scatter lunch?"

"All right, all right," said Mr. Pavlich, "but don't get so mad about it."

"I should say not," said Mrs. Pavlich, "I suppose you think that's the right way to get a lot of new members to your club? I'd like to join after the way you act! You're the kind of man who could spoil everything—and—"

But the manager was gone before they all got over the fence.

Credit the manager with one laugh.

An elderly man, resident of a fashionable suburb of New York, advertised in a highbrow magazine in New York, for two women to come and live at his home. He wanted educated, intelligent women, and they must be good bridge players. One of them must be old enough to run his servants and manage the home, and superior enough to act as hostess when he entertained. The other could be younger—he wasn't particular about age. So she could play a fine game of bridge.

The gentleman, who is a widower asked that the ladies give him three nights a week at bridge, and the other evenings they could do what they pleased. If they wished, they might entertain their friends there. He wanted them to feel at home.

The older woman, who managed the house, he would pay a salary, quite a substantial one. The other would have all expenses paid but no salary.

Two women have taken the offer. They are high class women, and are friends. They hail from Philadelphia. They say the man is a very fine type, and there is no hokum about his offer. He is lonely and wants bridge company, and congenial people around the house.

The suburbanite says that the reason he got such good results is that he advertised in a magazine read only by high class, well educated people. He felt sure he would get the right kind of answers, and he did.

Six Wichita Falls Acts to Open 'Discovery Week' at Olympic Tonight

"Discovery Week" opens at the Olympic theater with the Monday evening performance, the vaudeville bill beginning at 8:15 o'clock. Six vaudeville acts will be included in the Monday evening program. A complete change of acts will be offered each evening during the week.

Alec C. Ross, local show man, is directing the performances. Henry Brown of New York city, head of the Brown Theatrical agency of New York and Chicago, is to be in the city during the entire week, to choose a winning act for presentation at the Majestic theater, and to offer contracts to such talent as he may choose.

The Monday evening program will include the following acts: Thompson's Hawaiians with Maxine Crowson; "variety dance with Ruth Annette Finley; "Romono" with Harley Herndon and Charlotte Sutton; song and dance by Marjorie Faye Hoenschiedt; Oriental dance by Juanita Burgess; "That Funny Blackface Comedian" Rusty Beard, and Paul Seeds band with Phyllis Seeds, also dancer.

Mr. Ross has booked entries from every art, dramatic and musical studio in the city.

"Discovery Week" is an effort to discover new talent for the vaudeville stage.

Football Queen To Be Selected

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Oct. 28.—The annual crowning of the football queen, one of the high-points of school activities throughout the term, will be held in the high school auditorium, Nov. 15, school officials recently announced.

The chosen queen will be crowned by Captain Sidney McLain, who will be assisted by his knights, members of the football squad. The manner of choosing the queen this year will be different from that of previous years. Spectators will cast their votes for a queen out of twelve candidates, upon admittance to the entertainment that night. When all votes are in they will be counted, and the candidate having the largest amount of votes will be called to the stage and crowned as Football Queen of 1928.

CHIC CHERIE — Latest Fashions

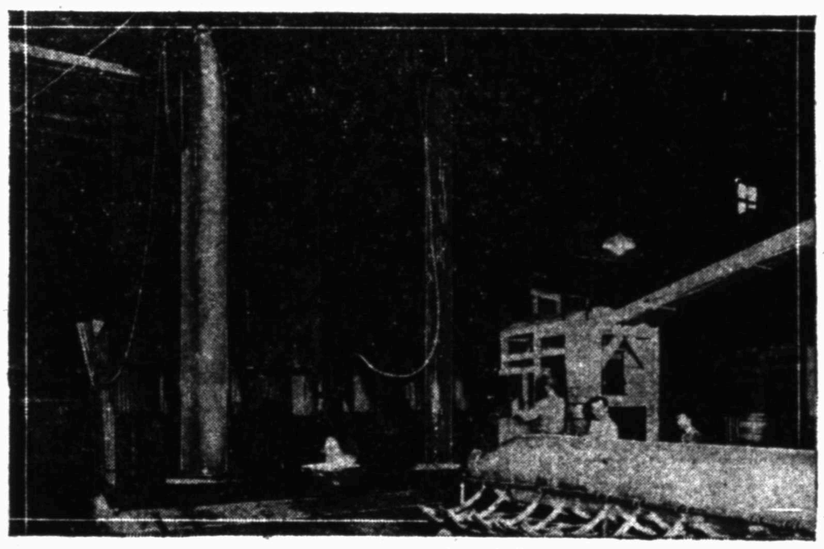

One way or another they all get a fur coat. Dina has decided on this full-length coat of nutria lined with a modernistic fabric which shows when the coat is worn open. It can, however, be buttoned snugly around the throat and the stole collar makes a comfortable muffler. Dina is wondering about the partial payments.

On the other hand, when Emily goes to buy a fur coat, she can ask for bigger and better fur coats almost indefinitely. She's the only person we know who can ignore the annoying consideration of price. This coat is black caracul and the scalloped treatment of the front and cuffs show that even furs are being giddy.

Cherie has another system still. She does like this spotted sports coat—of leopard with stripes of suede. The flaring high collar and the wide cuffs are new this season—fur coats are no longer merely coats, but show a satisfying recognition of unusual style features. In the more or less background are two other coats—shown here to let you see that the short jacket of kidskin (right) is back again with a stole collar and that the three-quarter coat is also known to style. The three-quarter coat is collarless and trimmed with a fur bow. Cherie's system of buying? Oh, "Charge it," and then she has a month or two to worry about paying.

This illustration shows molten glass being drawn into cylinders in the plant of the Wichita Falls Window Glass Company

Daylight West of the Rockies

SHEDDING daylight into homes west of the Rockies is really the job of the Wichita Falls Window Glass Company. It is an interesting and dramatic business. Making perfectly smooth, highly polished window glass from mountains of fine sand, salt cake, soda ash and lime keeps 235 skilled workers employed in this busy Wichita Falls industry, whose product is extensively sold in nearly all principal markets west of the Rockies.

It takes lots of gas to keep a lake of molten glass at a temperature of above 2,400 degrees, especially when it is 30 feet wide, 114 feet long and 5 feet deep. Because Wichita Falls supplied the large amount of fuel for this purpose, at a low cost, this plant was located here some twelve years ago. Good transportation facilities, convenience to a large and growing market, ideal living conditions for workers, are other sound reasons why this industry continues to grow and expand in Wichita Falls.

Lifting a cylinder of glass 44 feet long and 40 inches in diameter out of a molten pot of liquid is a ticklish business. It must be done steadily and without interruption. It is done by electricity.

The TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY supplies dependable electric power to the Wichita Falls Window Glass Company.

This dependability of service is obtained from our local generating station, supplemented by several other large, strategically located generating stations. So, if there is an interruption of service at any one source of electric energy, another is immediately switched into use, permitting even a fragile cylinder of glass to continue its process of creation without interruption.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By GRANT DIXON

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The oralizers at the Jamaica racetrack were recalling stories of the doings of "Shoestring" Bill. Most of them had dealings with him, some in the long ago, and all agreed that he was a "hunch" as well as a system player.

"It was funny the way he turned one of old Joe Vedig's jokes back on Joe," said one of them. "'Shoestring,' you know, usually bet $2 at a crack in those days. He had caught a 25-to-1 shot in the first race and was paid off with a $50 bill and two ones. Two dollars was his entire capital on starting out that day, and he had gone without breakfast so as to be able to make a bet.

"When he was paid off he made a beeline to the restaurant—it was at the old Sheepshead track—and ate up his original capital. He got back in the ring in time for the third race, and found his choice was quoted at 10 to 1.

"He handed the $50 bill up to Joe Vendig, who, without giving him a chance to say the usual $2 on——, promptly called out to his sheet writer, 'five hundred to fifty,' naming the horse and grinning at 'Shoestring.' Poor old Bill gasped, turned pale, swallowed hard and finally gulped out:

"All right. Let it ride."

"Vendig was tickled pink and told everybody within range of his booth how he'd made Bill 'bust his $2 rule."

"But it wasn't so funny a few minutes later, when Bill's choice led the field home and Bill cashed his $500 ticket. He rubbed it into Joe by going around in front of his stand and thanking him publicly for forcing his hand.

"I remember one of his lucky hunches," said another bookie. "It was up at Morris park. Billy Oliver had a horse called Lord Badge that hadn't shown anything fast. One day Oliver entered Lord Badge in a mile race, and he was so little fancied that the books all quoted 40 to 1 against him.

"'Shoestring' was turning them over that day—paralyzing his winnings. He was standing at the paddock entrance to the track when the bugler called the field out. As Lord Badge passed 'Shoestring' he turned his head toward Bill and snorted, showering him from head to foot with lather that had gathered around his bridle bit.

"Did Bill wipe that off? He did not—at least, not until after the race. What he did do was to hustle around the ring as far as his money would carry him, betting $10 with each bookie until he had wagered $100, all he had. And he cashed in $4,000, for Lord Badge won off all by himself."

Work Started on New Mangum Masonic Hall

Special to The Record News.

MANGUM, Okla., Oct. 28.—Work has been started on the new Masonic building, located at the northeast corner of the square. The lower story will be occupied by a modern theater, operated by Sam Fringer, proprietor of the Empress and Nusho theaters. The Masonic and associated lodges, including Eastern Star, DeMolay and Rainbow, will occupy the second floor, and the lodge offices will be located on the third floor. The building will be 50 by 150 feet, and will be constructed of brick with stone trimming.

New Poultry Company Opens in Mangum, Okla.

Special to The Record News.

MANGUM, Okla., Oct. 28.—Another new industry for Mangum was opened for business Saturday. It is the Teter-Williams Poultry and Egg company, owned by L. E. Teter and V. P. Williams, who have been operating similar establishments in Altus, Quanah and Hollis. The business is located in a new brick building near the Rock Island tracks, and will mean much to the poultry raisers of this section.

It Is A Brave New Day

COMMANDER H. C. MacDONALD apparently has joined the lengthening list of aviators who gave up their lives in the effort to fly the Atlantic.

He was not, like the rest of them, an accomplished flyer. Indeed, he was little better than a novice. If he had made the crossing it would have been a marvel. His plane, according to reports, carried barely enough gasoline to get him across even with the most favorable winds; the chances seem to have been something like 100 to one against his success.

Foolhardy? Surely. But we seem to be living in a new age of knighterrantry, where sheer physical bravery is prized above all other virtues, and where a man who can prove that death does not scare him is the greatest of us all.

Perhaps this new attitude is a good thing. After all, modern life, in its daily routine, is pretty well sheltered. Most of us go from the home to the office or shop, day after day, with never anything more pressing to worry us than an overdraft at the bank or a bungled bit of work that draws the ire of the boss. We are far removed from elemental conflicts of daring chances. Nothing more perilous than a congested street crossing ever enters our lives.

Into all of this padded safety came the airplane. The inevitable reaction was overpowering. Straightaway we turned back the pages of history and plunged into a worship of raw heroism.

The result has been a long list of deaths. A great many splendid young men—and women as well—whom the world could not well afford to lose have died in ocean flight. Some of them planned well and some of them planned poorly; some of them were sacrificed to their own incompetence or heedlessness, and some of them were sacrificed to North Atlantic blizzards. It does not matter. They are gone, and there is not so much nobility in the world that we do not miss them.

But it is not all a dead loss. The modern world has somehow made us forget that fundamentally man is an unconquerable spirit. These young aviators have brought it to mind again. The mere fact that there are so many, many young men who will rush to fling away their lives rather than let the challenge of the open sea pass unanswered is a cheering portent. It means that the fiber of the race has not softened. The spirit that drove Columbus and Eric the Red out on the unknown sea in flimsy cockleshells is not dead.

That is the significance of flights such as the one that cost Commander MacDonald his life. The waste is tragic, appalling; but we are all the better because MacDonald, and others like him, have proved to us that the race can still breed men who can laugh at death in the dark.

Probing the Wilds

A PARTY of scientists will head up the Amason river shortly in an effort to find a lost city of Phoenician origin on the banks of the unexplored Aripuana river, in central Brazil.

The city, described by Indians, is said to have been unvisited by white men. Relics brought out by Indians indicate that the city may have been founded by the ancient Phoenicians; the long and dangerous trip of exploration and discovery will begin this winter.

Then he mere possibility of a Phoenician city in the Amason country is sufficiently interesting; but even more important is the fact that the Brazilian country is still so rich a field for the explorer. With both poles discovered, and with a railway line traversing central Africa, it had seemed that all the unknown places had been reached. But Brazil still can challenge the adventurer. There are still plenty of unplumbed fastnesses in the tropical jungles surrounding the Amason.

CHANGE OF POLICY ANNOUNCED

On the first day of November all prohibition enforcement officers will be under civil service. At that time there will be a good many men who have been in the enforcement office that will go out, due to the fact that they failed to pass the examination required. These men who failed to pass the test, regardless of whether or not they have been effective and true officers of the law, will be let out. There are many who believe such a test will fail to raise the standard of the service which is the real purpose of the law placing such officials under civil service.

SMITH WILL BRING OUT VOTES

For some political persons and societies, distressed by "the growing listlessness" of the voters have been pleading with them to come to the polls and be counted. Against our old friend "General Apathy" a host of complaints have been filed; some of them, it is comic to remember, very lately and by eminent hands. It seems to have been assumed that people have a moral obligation to get excited when there is nothing to get excited about.

STYLE GOES TO SMALL TOWNS

Clarksville, Texas, a town about one-half the size of Childress, has enacted an ordinance which prohibits the erection or location of filling stations in the residence districts of the city without a permission from the city council, and requiring the persons wanting to erect such a building to secure the consent of a majority of the adjoining property owners. In many of the larger cities similar ordinances have been passed, but we believe this is the first small city to go so far.

SHERMAN HAS GOOD IDEA

Now comes the announcement that Sherman is to observe Halloween in Madri Gras fashion. There will be music and merriment and fun aplenty for every one. And along with it a wide-awake group of merchants will take advantage of the opportunity to "show off" some merchandise to the big crowds. That's a good idea and we predict right now that, on the night of Oct. 31, Sherman will be packed and jammed with people.

The Room Under the Stairs

The Baffling Story of a Man Who Read of His Own Murder

By HERMAN LANDON

Copyright by G. Howard Watt — Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

Synopsis of Preceding Installments

Thomas Dean, successful young novelist, has hidden from the world his old name Paul Forrester, because the latter was connected with a self-defense killing out West, and Dean still carries the scar of that encounter. But a series of circumstances swirls him into a vortex of mysteries. First he reads a deathbed confession of the murder of Paul Forrester, five years before, made by Martin Lamont, wealthy business man, on a visit to New York, and witnessed by Dennis Littleby, famous lawyer, and Dr. John Ballinger, well-known doctor. Then a mysterious lady, Viola Gray, visits him and Lieutenant Shane finds the remains of the murdered man in "The Room Under the Stairs," of Dean's deserted family home. A watch marked "P. F." completes the identification, although Dean finds pieces of another watch cry, "P" at the scene of the murder. Later an attempt is made on his life by Freddie Mills, a hired assassin, and Dean's subsequent appearance alive produces a startling effect on both Miss Gray and Dr. Ballinger. Finally, after Dean has heard a woman's screams through the dying man's telephone, Lamont is murdered, and Dean trails the lawyer to a hidden room in the latter's house. There he finds Shirley Lamont, the dead man's daughter, held as prisoner and is discovered by Littleby, who warns them both and mysteriously vanishes. Trapped together they can find no way out of the secret room. Meantime, Lieutenant Shane finds Miss Gray in "The Room Under the Stairs" at the old Forrester home and shares her discovery of an important piece of paper. Together they set out for Littleby's house. Trapped together Dean and Shirley are nearly suffocated by a gaseous cloud that descends on them in the secret room, but a sudden ring at their telephone shows that Littleby is willing to make terms. Appealing to his chivalry, the lawyer forces Dean to suicide to save the girl.

Back to Life

For a moment longer Littleby stood as rigid as if all his faculties had suddenly congealed into a lump. Then his hand whipped out, clutching an object that gleamed with a steely flash in the light. The girl gave a tremulous, warning cry. Two cracks came in such quick succession they sounded like one, followed by a splintering sound; then the room went dark.

Dean ducked just in time to hear a bullet whistle in murderous glee above his head. Then he rushed forward again, straight toward the spot where he had seen Littleby just before the second bullet obliterated the light. The lawyer was moving toward the wall, doubtless making for one of his mysterious exits. Dean floundered in the dark, conscious only of a burning rage and a fixed determination that the lawyer should not escape. A gentle draft fanned his hot face, signifying that an opening had appeared somewhere. He sprang directly into its path, collided with a fleeing form, felt a random blow scraping his cheek, and clutched a flying coat tail.

"This way, Lee!" he shouted horasely. "I've got him!"

No answer came, but he thought nothing of it. Just then a vigorous jerk at the coat tail sent him bounding forward, lurching wildly against the sides of a narrow opening. A grim vindictive fury was burning in his veins, a savage determination to inflict primitive justice on Lee's tormentor. The lawyer twisted and squirmed while he ran, struggling with all the strength and agility of a man in despair to free himself of the pursuer's dogged grip. They were out in the hall now, and a short distance ahead a dim light told the direction of the stairs. Dean hung on with an exultant ferocity, all his sensibilities submerged in a single purpose, and it seemed a little odd that such an all-important purpose was to be attained through his grip on a prosaic thing like a coat tail.

Then, in a twinkling the coattail was gone. At the turn in the hall, Littleby made an unexpected plunge to the side, and Dean's head crashed dizzyingly into a post. For a moment he stood dazed, seeing the attainment of his flaming purpose slipping away from him, but the sounds of the lawyer's tumbling progress down the stairs revived the zest of the hunter. In a moment he was following, reaching the lower hall just in time to see his quarry dash through a door.

In a few seconds, Dean, too, was at the door. To his surprise it opened easily; he had expected that the lawyer would shoot the bolt on the inside and utilize the delay thus gained by attempting an escape through the window.

He rushed inside, stared in a dim light at the four massive walls surrounding him, but the lawyer was not there. His darting eyes fixed on an inner door, then he hurried forward.

He was half way across the room when the door came open and Littleby stepped through. He was smiling—a thin, malignant smile that seemed to spread a glow of triumphant venom over his face.

"Too late, Dean," he murmured softly. "I win."

Dean heard nothing; neither did he see the transfiguring glow of malicious satisfaction in the lawyer's face. He could feel nothing but a tingling, puls-quickening ecstacy in the thought that at last he stood face to face, on a footing of equality, with the monster who, to gain as yet inscrutable ends, had terrorized Shirley Lamont. His fingers itched with a strange and savage craving that he had never known before, enraptured his senses and blinding him to the pistol that gleamed menacingly in the lawyer's hand.

He leaped forward, his fist described a lightning curve, and the pistol halted in its quick upward movement and fell to the floor. A blow on the jaw silenced the lawyer's outcry and sent him whirling to the floor. In a moment Dean was upon him, all his explosive frenzy gathering for a fresh blow.

But the blow did not land. A glance into the lawyer's fear-stricken face, and of a sudden the brutish, exultant strain left him. His muscles grew limp; in a twinkling his fierce vindictiveness changed into an innocuous sense of contempt. Littleby, with ashen face twitching in a spasm of fear, seemed so feeble that Dean experienced an instant revulsion. He got up, cheated of his vengeance by a palsied old face.

"Stop that whining," he said disgustedly. "I wish to Heaven you were twenty years younger!"

Checkmated

Littleby, at first uncomprehending, struggled to his feet. He cast a designing eye at the pistol, but Dean kicked it under the bed. A sullen, maliciously calculating look transplanted the terror in the lawyer's face.

"It's just as well you changed your mind," he muttered, a silken venom in his tones. "Rather fond of Miss Lamont, aren't you, Dean?"

"Shut up!" said Dean hotly, "or I may forget that you are only a weakling."

"How impetuous we are!" The lawyer, still breathing hard, was rapidly recovering his composure. "Miss Lamonte is a very charming young lady, and you are still young enough to be impressionable. The intimacy of common peril makes excellent soil for romance to sprout in. The young lady has suffered a grievous loss, but that only makes her more susceptible to the appealing qualities of any one who is ready to offer her sympathy. I'll wager, Dean, that you made the most of your opportunity. Now don't get into a huff, please, and don't look at me as if you were ready to tear me to pieces. Where do you suppose Miss Lamont is now?"

Dean started. The loathing died out of his face, giving way to an expression of stark bewilderment. If a sudden he threw the door open and looked out. In the dusk and silence that reigned everywhere there was no sign of Shirley Lamont.

Littleby chuckled complacently. "That's what comes of being so hotheaded. You supposed Miss Lamont was following, didn't you? But she wasn't. She never got through the opening. It closed automatically behind her while you were doing violence to my coat tails."

Dean stared at him in consternation, but gradually his face cleared.

"No matter," he said. "Miss Lamont can stand imprisonment a few minutes longer. I'll find her as soon as I've disposed of you."

"How will you find her?" asked the lawyer mockingly.

"I'll get an axe and smash the walls, if necessary."

"Unfortunately there is no such implement handy. Even if you find one, the walls are quite substantial, and it will take you some time to demolish them. And really, Dean, you have no time to waste. In ten minutes—fifteen at the most—Miss Lamont will be dead."

A look of incredulity, followed quickly by one of horrified comprehension, came into Dean's face.

Littleby regarded him gloatingly.

"I see you understand," he murmured. "Yes, the arselene is at work again. Turned on full force this time. It acts quickly when the entire current is turned on."

A gasp of horror broke from Dean's lips. He sprang on the lawyer, standing erect before him with a faint leer on his thin lips, but in a moment he saw the futility of violence. He threw open the inner door, the one Littleby had stepped through a few minutes before, but all he saw were the usual fixtures of a well-appointed bathroom.

"Quite useless, my friend," said Littleby. "It would take you a long time to find the contrivance that governs the flow of arselen, and by that time—Well, you can guess."

Dean, conquering his tumultous anguish, took out his watch.

"I'll give you precisely sixty seconds," he said evenly, "to shut off your devilish arselen. If you refuse, I'll choke you to death."

Littleby gave him a long, appraising look. "I believe you would," he said quietly. "You are crazy enough for anything. But how could such violence benefit Miss Lamont?"

"Thirty seconds," said Dean.

"Thirty hours would be all the same. Life would be of no use to me unless I succeed in my present enterprise. You and Miss Lamont stand in my way. If you win, I might as well die. But I don't intend that you shall. There is only one thing can save Miss Lamont's life, but you fooled me the last time I suggested a compromise. You shan't fool me again. Care to hear my terms?"

With a gesture of complete indifference he folded his arms across his chest. Dean looked down at his watch. Its serene ticking shrieked in his ears like a thunderous knell of doom.

Suddenly he jerked up his head and stared fixedly at a door to his left, directly opposite the bathroom. A dull, booming sound came.

Littleby awoke from his sublime composure with a gasp and leveled a startled glance at the side of the room.

"A shot?" he muttered, then whirled round as the door leading to the hall came open. In the doorway stood Lieutenant Shane, with a uniformed officer at his side, and behind them appeared the powerful figure of Doctor Ballinger.

"Hear anything?" asked Shane, casting an oddly incurious glance about the room, his eyes resting for a moment on Dean's pale face.

"Something that sounded like a shot," replied Littleby, evidently ill at ease.

The lieutenant chuckled dryly. "I guess you wouldn't have heard it if there hadn't been a communicating door between this room and the one where Lamont was murdered." He glanced for a moment at the door through which the booming sound had come: "Maybe it doesn't fit quite tight at the bottom."

"What—what of it?" stammered Littleby, seemingly bewildered and also greatly worried. "And what does this intrusion mean?" he added making an unsuccessful show of dignity.

"It means," said Shane," that Dr. Ballinger, Officer Buckley and myself have been making a little experiment. I'm sure you don't mind, Mr. Littleby. We have demonstrated that, with the door closed, a shot fired in the room where Lamont died can't be heard by a person standing on the balcony. The walls looked as though they were almost soundproof when I examined them, and our experiment proves it. Get the idea, Mr. Littleby?"

For a moment the lawyer stared uncomprehendingly at the three faces in the doorway, then a great tremor shook him, an ashen pall rushed across his face, his lips twisted into a ghastly smile; a devastating terror seemed to come over him.

"It's quite plain," he said, in a weak, hollow voice.

Dean had watched the scene through a blur. It seemed so grotesquely trivial by contrast with the agonizing fear that was uppermost in his mind. He rushed toward the door, scattering the little group standing there.

"Lee—arselene—ax!" he shouted incoherently. "We must find an ax—quick!"

"You'll have to hurry," said Littleby in a voice strangely unlike his own, yet edged with malignant sarcasm. "I fear you will be too late, Dean. I win there, anyhow."

Doctor Ballinger followed as Dean rushed breathlessly from the room.

"Hold on!" he shouted, seizing the novelist's arm on the run. "Where to? What was that you said about arselene?"

Dean turned, looked into the physician's eyes for a moment, saw something in them which upset all the inchoate suspicions of the past and instantly won his confidence. He blurted out a few rambling illuminating statements.

The doctor loosed a few curt and blistering invectives at Littleby's expense, thereby completing his conquest of Dean's confidence.

"Wait here," he said brusquely.

In a few moments he was back, carrying a huge ax, and Dean conducted him up the stairs and down the hall toward the point where an apparently impregnable wall bolcked their progress. The novelist dealt a thunderous blow with the ax.

"Run and get an antidote of some sort," he shouted hoarsely as he swung the ax back over his shoulder. "You've got something at your office haven't you? It will probably be needed by the time we break through."

"Antidote?" echoed the physician grimly. "There is no antidote for arselene."

The ax bit into the wood with a resounding crash. Time and again Dean struck, working with desperate strength.

"Let me have a chance at it," said the doctor after a while.

Dean continued the whacking, refusing to let Ballinger relieve him. Even though he had the strength of a bull, the doctor lacked the terrific incentive that put power into Dean's blows. A grim and savage melody thundered in his brain; a picture, at once enchanting and terrible, flashed in and out of his mind as he worked. The seasoned pine timbers shivered and groaned with each fresh assault. The ax bit hungrily into the wood, each crashing blow sinking deeper and deeper, as if the inanimate implement felt the ecstasy of fury that governed the man wielding it.

Life or Death?

"Marvelous!" muttered the doctor "Never saw a man of sedentary habits wield an axe like that, Bravo!"

With a long, splintering din the obstruction yielded. Dean dropped the ax and squeezed through the ragged hole.

"One at a time," he said hoarsely as Ballinger started to follow. "If these hellish fumes get me before I can get her out, then it's up to you."

He sprang forward, floundering in a welter of stinging, sense-drugging vapors, shouting Lee's name, fumbling for her in the misty gloom. No response came; his voice grew husky, each intake of breath seemed to blister his lungs and scorch the lining of his nose and throat. His head felt as if ravaged by fire; an insidious weakness was stealing over him with despair. What if he should be overcome before he could find Lee in this swirl of horrors? What assurance was there that Ballinger would succeed where he had failed? And if both of them succumbed—

A husky shout rose from his tortured lungs. His feet encountered an obstruction, something soft, yielding. In a moment, staggering over his limp burden, he was hastening toward the opening, guided by Ballinger's anxious shouts. He passed his burden through the aperture into the doctor's waiting arms.

"To the balcony!" cried the doctor.

Carrying the unconscious girl between them, they reached the balcony and stretched her out on a wicker sofa. As the doctor made a hasty examination Dean looked despairingly into her rigid face, fringed by hair in tumultuous disorder. With a provokingly methodical air, Ballinger produced a needle from a leather wallet, dipped it into a small vial and inserted the point in the girl's arm.

Health And Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

The Unlimited Expanse of the Mind

The body of man is inferior to the bodies of many of the animals. He is not able to run as fast as the deer, nor swim as fast as the seal. Although nature has endowed man with a very limited physical capacities, she was kind enough to place within his skull the ability to use the powers of nature in extending his environment. Even a trained athlete can only run at top-speed for a few seconds at the magnificient rate of about 20½ miles per hour, yet through the application of his brain upon his environment, man has been able to build automobiles which can travel more than twice as fast as the greatest speed limits of most country highways, and he has been able to build aeroplanes with a speed of 250 miles per hour or even more.

One man's ears cannot hear another man's voice at a greater distance than a few hundred yards and yet, with the use of the telephone and the radio, we are able to hear a voice speaking on the other side of the earth—a wonderful accomplishment of mind over matter. Not content with this, some scientists are even contemplating speech with other planets, providing they are inhabited with intelligent beings.

Our eyes are so contructed that the farther away an object is, the smaller it appears, so that at a distance of two miles apart one man cannot recognize another and yet, with the use of the telescope, we are able to extend our vision as far as the rounded contour of the earth will permit.

When an object is as small as one-thousandth of an inch it is invisible to the naked eye and yet, with the aid of the microscope, we can literally see the bacteria on the back of the flea. No doubt, within a very few years television will be so developed that we will be able to see events happening on the other side of the world. These accomplishments have only developed with the same rate of speed that man's brain has improved.

The complicated structure of the modern sky-scraper is no more developed over the simple hut of the aborigine than the brain of a modern man is over the brain of his primitive ancestors. The skull now houses knowledge and culture where formerly it harbored superstition and curiosity.

The body of man has neither fins nor wings, but man's brain applied to mechanics has enabled us to stay under water longer and descend to greater depths than can a whale, and we may fly faster and ascend higher than any bird in existence.

If, even within the course of one or two generations, we have seen such a tremendous progress in the conquest of mind over matter, may we not look forward with anticipation into the future? It is certainly worth while to follow the laws of nature for preserving health and life that we may long enjoy the discoveries of civilization and watch for the many new wonders just ahead, but hidden by the veil of the future.

The mind of man is of such marvelous complexity that we should take full advantage of its powers for eternal study and observation. Age should make no difference. From the moment of our first breath to the last but inevitable moment of our life, we should profit from every corcumstance.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Shoes

Question: Buddy asks: "How much bigger than the foot should the shoe be? Some say a half inch longer, and others say the big toe should touch the end."

Answer: The toe should never touch the end of the shoe, and the shoe should be large enough to allow a reasonable spread of the toes. This not only helps keep the arches of the foot strong, but tends to keep down the nervousness created through wearing shoes which are too tight.

Bloating From Too Much Flour

Question: Z. Y. Z. asks: "Does flour make blood? I eat as much as a 5-lb. sack of pastry flour a month. I suffer from extreme pains in the pit of my stomach, and am very nervous, bloat a lot."

Answer: I do not wonder that you are nervous, bloat a lot, and have pain in the pit of your stomach if you eat so much flour. Would not it be sensible to leave flour entirely out of your diet for a while, and use more of the green vegetables combined with such food as eggs, milk, or meat? Try living for a time on the weekly menus published in this column, using some one kind of fruit as a meal in place of those meals containing starchy foods.

No Medicines Recommended

Question: Mrs. E. W. B. writes: "I am an anemic person and would like to ask your advice. I have been taking your codliver oil tablets two months and they don't seem to do me any good. Will you kindly advise me what to do. Am ver yanxious to gain in weight."

Answer: You must be mistaken, as I do not have any codliver oil tablets or any other remedies to sell. If you wish to gain in weight you can not do so successfully by using any special preparation or food. First, cure yourself of any disorder from which you are suffering, eliminate destructive emotions, and then living on a well balanced diet will bring about the best results. If you stuff to gain you will only bring on such disorders as biliousness and digestive troubles.

FAVORITE JOKES OF FAMOUS FOLK

As Told by Them to FRANK E. NICHOLSON

By CLAIRE LUCE

Miss Luce, or rather Mrs. Clifford Warren Smith, began her New York theatrical career in "Little Jesse James," and in the short space of two years became one of Flo Ziegfeld's glorifications. She created a sensation when she was chosen to replace Mistinguette in a Paris revue two years ago. Since her return she has headed the cast of two of Ziegfeld's final follies. Claire Luce is also one of the country's most accomplished women fliers.

Claire Luce

"I like the gag," she told me, "about the Serbian general. It happened during the war between the Serbians and the Bulgarians. The Bulgarians had captured the Serbian general. Without their general the Serbians were a total loss, so they were willing to make most any concession for his return.

"Battles were temporarily postponed so that a parley might be engaged in. The Serbians opened negotiations by offering to trade back two Bulgarian majors for their general.

"The adversary went into conference. After due deliberation they replied that they would not trade, as they did not believe the two majors were worth the general. The Serbians then offered two majors and two lieutenants.

"The enemy again went into conference. At least the spokesman said:

"'We, the Bulgarians, have decided not to return your general for anything less than twelve cans of condensed milk.'"

VERNON MAINTAINS PLACE IN PREP DISTRICT FOOTBALL RACE

POWER SHOWN BY AMARILLO

Sandies Loom As Team To Beat For Title

STANDING OF THE TEAMS

Teams	G.	W.	L.	Pct.	Pts.	OP.
Amarillo	2	2	0	1.000	197	0
Vernon	2	2	0	1.000	37	7
Lubbock	2	2	0	1.000	38	6
Wichita Falls	2	1	1	.500	19	19
Electra	3	1	2	.333	31	32
Quanah	3	0	3	.000	7	145
Plainview	2	0	2	.000	0	120

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS

Lubbock 13, Electra 6.
Vernon 12, Wichita Falls 7.
Amarillo 102, Quanah 0.

Two contenders for the class A championship of district No. 1 of the state scholastic prep loop were eliminated in last week's games. Electra and Wichita Falls were defeated by Lubbock and Vernon, respectively, practically putting the defeated clubs out of the race as one of the three teams left with unsmirched records is almost certain to be unbeaten.

Vernon, Lubbock and Amarillo are the unbeaten teams, each in two games. Amarillo Sandies continued their phenomenal scoring. Victors the previous week over Plainview by 95 to 0, the Sandstorm last Saturday buried Quanah under a 102 to 0 score.

Amarillo is the favorite to win the district class A title in view of its two easy victories to date. Vernon's green team has shown unexpected strength, particularly in its defeat of Wichita Falls. Lubbock defeated Electra only after a gruelling, uncertain battle.

There is the possibility, of course, that Vernon or Lubbock will defeat Amarillo. For that matter, the Sandies face Wichita Falls, and the Coyotes might "comeback" to upset the favorites. But Amarillo doubtless is the team to beat, to win the class A title in this district.

Schwartz and Roberti Among Boxers Who Sail

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (UP)—The boxing exodus began tonight when Corporal Izzy Schwartz of New York, recognized as world flyweight champion by the New York State Athletic commission, departed aboard the Cunard liner Carolina for France.

Schwartz will meet Emil (Spider) Pladner in Paris next month in a bout under the promotion of Jeff Dickson. Pladner will be required to weigh in over 112 pounds and Schwartz' title will not be at stake. Schwartz expects to take part in other bouts before he returns.

Roberto Roberti, the Italian heavyweight who came here broke last year, will return to his native Italy Saturday for a three months' rest and visit. In 22 bouts in this country Roberti grossed $38,000 and of this sum he has saved $25,000. He lost only one bout and that a close decision to Phil Scott, the English heavyweight.

Roberti has purchased a home in New Jersey and will make his home in the United States on his return. He was forced to cancel his last two bouts because of illness and injuries.

Charley Hahn, New York wealterweight, and his manager, Harry Neary, will leave for South America aboard the S. S. Vandyck. Hahn will engage in bouts at Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

Andrew Routis, featherweight champion, will sail for France Dec. 8 along with Frankie Genaro, recognized a world flyweight champion by the National Boxing association, Jack McVey, negro middleweight, and Joe Jacobs, manager of the trio.

Al Brown, New York negro, recognized as world bantamweight champion by the N. B. A., is now on his way to France.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—An old established Chinkadee claims to be worth 250 years.

That's plenty of chronological plunder for any one man to pack around his gears.

The veteran rice plunger's name is Chung-Yun. He claims to have been born in 1678.

His story is robustly remarkable.

Nobody can dispute facts like those. If you dispute stories of great age in Chinese circles all you've got to do is to look at some of those laundry bundles on the top shelf.

Chung-Yun has four rules for longevity.

1. Keep a quiet heart.
2. Sit like a tortoise.
3. Walk sprightly like a pigeon.
4. Sleep like a dog.

And after you do all that, marry an animal trainer.

What use is a quiet heart when you live near the elevated, a Ford factory and a public playground?

And squatting like a tortoise would be great. Especially when the boss came in and found you doing some turtle setting-up exercises when you should be working like a beaver.

Walking sprightly like a pigeon is easy. One slug of bootleg and you will flutter like a dove.

Sleeping like a dog is more difficult because it is hard to get both legs under your chin.

We always claimed that our own rules for long life were more beneficial and practical.

1. Never carry a bundle by the string.
2. Count your fingers after shaking hands with a Philadelphia lawyer.
3. Never sleep with windows open while you are in a submarine.
4. Keep your feet dry when taking a bath.

Walter Re-Elected Senator

Walter Johnson, veteran pitcher, will return next year to manage the Washington American league club with which he played for 21 years. Johnson (right) is shown signing a three-year contract with Clark Griffith, president of the Senators.

Jack Gets Two and a Half Million For 41 Rounds of Pugilistic Work

Dempsey to Ask $500,000 For Next Fight, and He'll Get It—And Be Worth It—Runyon Opines

By DAMON RUNYON
(Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service)

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—For fighting 41 rounds, William Harrison Dempsey, the Manassa Man Mauler, got in the neighborhood of $2,545,000.

It may be an odd hundred thousand or so out of line one way or the other, but that was just the "breakage," as they say at the mutuels tracks, in Dempsey's financial hey-day.

Fix the figures in your mind—two million and a half.

That is plenty of money. That is means.

Now then that you're cogitating the immensity of two million and a half, let me tell you about another Dempsey, the man from whom the Manassa Man Mauler took the name of Jack, and who was called "The Nonpareil."

That means "little, but good," or words to that effect.

"Nonpareil" Got $2,000

For fighting 45 rounds, Jack Dempsey, "The Nonpareil," got a total of $2,000.

But that was less $1,000 put up by Dempsey's backer.

The remaining $1,000 was ripped down the center, as the boys say, leaving "The Nonpareil" $500 for his "bit."

And when he paid his expenses, he had just $63 left for himself.

"Them was the happy days."

I have been poking into the archives.

On Dec. 13, 1887, near Flushing, where the Wild Rose of Long Island, Mr. Will Farnsworth, resides, "The Nonpareil" fought Johnny Reagan 45 desperate rounds with skin-tight gloves.

"The Nonpareil" won it.

He was middleweight of the world, and veterans tell me one of the greatest gladiators that ever lived.

Read It and Weep

Here is "The Nonpareil's" own financial statement of the fight.

Read it, and weep.

Total stakes $2,000
Backer draws his $1,000
Remaining for split $1,000.
Dempsey's share $500

Expenses

Six weeks' board for a man and trainer $120.
For trainer, $25 per week, $150.
Companion at $7 per week for board and $15 per week for salary $122.
Incidentials, not including charges for boat, stakes, rope, etc. $3o.
Total $437.
Balance to Dempsey $63.

For fighting 48 rounds, William Harrison Dempsey got around $2,895,000.

I have merely added his seven rounds with the terrible Sharkey man to the 41 with Georges Carpentier, Louie Firpo, Tom Gibbons and the gentleman who used to be Gene Tunney, now Mr. James Joseph.

Throw in Jess Willard, Billy Miske and Will Brannan, and the present Dempsey's score would be approximately three million dollars for 59 rounds.

As compared to the original Jack Dempsey's $63 for 45 tough rounds, Mr. James Joseph Tunney, the former Gene, didn't do badly in 31 rounds.

They stand him around $1,600,000.

He got about $200,000 for the first fight with the present Jack Dempsey, $900,000 for the second, and $500,000 for the affair with the Rock of Down Under.

It is said the Manassa Man Mauler is thinking of $500,000 as the price of his return to the ring.

He'll get it. And he'll draw it.

I don't care who he fights. He'll draw it.

Luis Firpo in Training For 'Comeback' Attempt

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 28. (UP)—Daily public training now confirms the report that Luis Angel Firpo is trying to get into shape to return to the ring for another attempt to win the world's heavyweight championship.

For three years, since he fought Erminio Spalla, Firpo has been in retirement, although the erstwhile "Wild Bull of the Pampas" has talked frequently of "coming back" to try for the title he so nearly won from Jack Dempsey in 1923.

DUNN'S ESTATE TO WIFE

BALTIMORE, Oct. 28. (AP)—The estate of Jack Dunn, owner and manager of the Baltimore Orioles, was bequeathed to his widow, Mrs. Mary Dunn, by his will which was probated here today.

TUB TAKEN

Theft of Bathtub Gives Officers Perplexing Problem

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 28. (US)—The authorities were mystified today by the theft of a bathtub. Two men entered the home of Mrs. E. Smith, disconnected the tub and walked off with it.

GRID PLAYERS, FANS SERIOUS

Game Is Grimly Staged And Devoid of Humor

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (UP)—There's not a grin in a gridiron.

For two months each year, the American public settles down to take its sport with grim and deadly seriousness.

This unfortunate state of affairs arrives simultaneously with the football season and endures from the first kickoff in October until the last goal post has been uprooted in December or January.

One would imagine there was something peculiarly sacred about football that set it apart from other sports, so intense and so sadly serious is the devotion it arouses. The same public which will howl gleefully: "Take him out!" during a baseball game, or will roar with delight when a boxer is bunged in the eye, sits hunched prayerfully cheering methodically at a football game.

It's Fine Sport, However

Now football is undoubtedly one of the finest of sports and occasionally picturesque—and occasionally dull. If it weren't for a nip of frost in the air and a nip of gin on the hip, many an impartial spectator would be bored by a great deal of it. The answer to that one is that there are practically no impartial football spectators.

Half the crowd comes happy from a football game, but there is no humor, no amusement, in the happiness. It is made up of seven parts of relief and three of animal satisfactiop in victory.

One would not expect football players to conduct themselves after the manner of the four Marx brothers, and there is no denying that the fundamental character of the sport requires intense application. But the deadly seriousness of the game extends from one week-end to the next. There is no release for the fervor thus pent up, except in explosive demonstrations of loyalty, physical or vocal.

He Gets Precedent

There was a coach up in Massachusetts last fall who used to take his little squad to the movies a couple of afternoons during the week. The team was one of two in the entire country which was neither beaten nor tied in 1927.

Football's demand for intense devotion are not confined to the players, unfortunately. It is their privilege to "die for dear old Rutgers." They are even admonished to do so. The trouble is that the entire sports loving public has acquired the attitude of profound respect for the necessity of taking one's football seriously, and somewhat sorrowfully.

Spring Tour Hints Giants May Train in Southwest

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (UP)—The New York Giants may train in the Southwest in 1929, it was indicated today when the annual exhibition tour was announced with New Orleans, Dallas, Fort Worth and other Southwestern cities on the 1929 spring schedule trip. The Yankees will train at St. Petersburgh, Fla., the coming spring for the fifth consecutive year.

Renault Rejects $7,500 Offer to Battle Firpo

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (UP)—Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, who has been inactive for some time but was one of the leading heavyweight contenders when Jack Dempsey was champion, today turned down an offer of $7,500 to meet Luis Angel Firpo in a bout in South America. Firpo is in training for a "comeback."

Halfback Who Sustained Broken Neck Dies

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 28. (UP)—His neck broken in Friday's football game between Arnold college and Milford Preparatory school, Theron Kelly, 19, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., died late today in Drake hospital.

Kelly, halfback on the Arnold eleven, received his injury when while carrying the ball he was brought down by a flying tackle.

HUGGINS MAY WRECK YANKS

Even Lou Gehrig Mentioned As Trading Material

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (UP)—Baseball managers are only human, after all, and worry more about their golf scores than about the big, outstanding problems of the national pastime. But little Miller Huggins, whose big, outstanding problems won him yet another world championship earlier in the month, admitted today he had something to think over besides fishing and real estate as he departed for his St. Petersburg, Fla., winter home.

Huggins is in the embarrassing position of being manager of a club which has breezed through two successive world series without a single defeat, and yet is about due to go the cleaners. The Yankee machine is a pretty good machine at that, but it is not a 1929 model.

Col. Jake Ruppert and the diminutive Huggins remind one of a genial old-fashioned automobile owner and his faithful chauffeur out for a ride in the family chariot which has seen many years of service.

The good colonel is talking about enlarging the seating capacity of Yankee stadium to make room for more than 100,000 fans.

"Maybe we should leave room for a ball club, too, boss," suggested Hug, who has a mental picture of how far things would run with the team in the second division.

One of the first problems to be considered is next year's line-up. At present, the tentative Yankee lineup for 1929 is made up of eight big "ifs" and Lou Gehrig. And the funny part of that is there has been talk of New York trading the big first baseman.

Babe Ruth will be as good as his legs in 1929, which leaves the Babe propped up on a couple of question marks.

Earl Combs probably will recover from his fractured wrist sufficiently to resume his place in center field, but Bob Muesel, aging and indolent, presents a real problem to Huggins. The chances are that long Bob will be traded to some club which can use a veteran outfielder.

The Yankees haven't a permanent third baseman, and their keystone combination is crippled, uncertain, and a puzzle for any manager. Lazeri is one of the greatest second basemen in baseball when right, but the thing that troubles Miller Huggins is: will Tony be right in 1929?

Lary and Reese Problems

Lary and Reese, the youngsters purchased from the Pacific coast league, are a splendid pair of boys who did a big, outstanding job of loafing and benchwarming all last season, once they found out they had been sold to the Yankees. The outstanding busts of 1928, simply because they wouldn't exert themselves. And now Huggins doesn't know whether they really are any good or not.

Behind the bat, there is Benny Bengough, and that's all. The pitching staff looked good against the Cardinals in the world series, but perhaps that shouldn't be mentioned in its behalf. Huggins has got to get himself some pitchers. He kept saying so all last season, and got by on good intentions. But good intentions don't pave the road to many world championships.

St. Petersburg, besides being Hug's winter home is the training camp of the New York Yankees. The chances are that quite frequently this winter when the little manager looks out through the palmetto grove to the grassgrown field where the world champions will gather in the spring he will be trying to picture to himself another winning ball club.

Redman Hume, Southern Methodist university's football adding machine, donned his seven-league boots again yesterday and as a result his point total for the year is now more than double that of his nearest competitor.

Hume ran 119 yards in four dashes for the goal line Saturday and was on the sidelines half of the game. Burgess of A. & M., in spite of three scoreless Saturdays remained in second place, tied with Beavers of Arkansas who scored twice for his team yesterday.

These Advance

Akers of T. C. U. and McElreath of Baylor crowded in among the first division scorers at the expense of Zarafonetis of A. & M., Potter of Baylor and Kiersky of Baylor, all of whom failed to add to their total Saturday. Dale of Arkansas added three more place kicks for point after touchdown to lead in that department with eight successful boots out of nine. No field goals were scored during the day and Potter of Baylor remains the only conference player to have made that kind of a tally.

Hume and his mates fattened their team total to 196 and took a comfortable lead over Baylor, the team that led last week. Arkansas whose totals last week showed more opponents points, than points of her own profited enough on the day to get out of the red, but Rice sank deeper in this respect, having scored only 63 points against 103 for her opponents.

Scoring Power

As a whole the conference has displayed immense scoring power, 127 touchdowns and 68 points after touchdown having been recorded to date for a total of 830 points. The fact that only one field goal has been kicked and that almost half of the attempted points after touchdown have been wild, however, indicates a weakness in this department. Team scoring leaders:

DAILY DOPE

By LARRY DAILEY

GAMES INVOLVING regional championships and some that have bearing on the mythical national title, if there is to be such a thing in this year of numerous great football teams, marked play last Saturday. There were only two games in the Southwest conference. The unbeaten Texas Longhorns maintained their place in the race by eking out a 13-6 decision over Rice. The playing of the Steers by the Owls to a near-standstill was a surprise—if the grid fans can be surprised in these days of upsets. Arkansas trounced Texas Aggies in a game that contributed nothing to the conference titular situation as each had been previously defeated.

T. C. U. continued its undefeated march by trimming Texas Tech. The Frogs are the only conference gridders who have not been beaten this year, including non-conference play. Their season's record of maintaining an inviolate goal line was broken Saturday, however, when Tech scored a touchdown. The score was 23 to 6, and was the fourth or fifth game this season that the Frogs have won by the margin of three touchdowns.

S. M. U. FLASHED unexpected scoring determination by running up a 60 to 7 count on Trinity. The Ponies, of course, were conceded victory but not by such a large score. Baylor also did a deal of touchdown-making at the expense of St. Edwards and by a 48-7 count.

THE COMPARATIVE ease by which Nebraska smothered Missouri featured play in the Missouri valley region. The Huskers won, 24 to 0, reversing a triumph last year by the Tigers. Oklahoma also secured revenge for previous losses to Kansas State, by winning at Norman, 33 to 21. Iowa State and Kansas fought a scoreless tie.

GEORGIA TECH continues to rank as a foremost club in the south, following its trimming of North Carolina. Vanderbilt, ranking with Tech as the foremost machine below the Mason and Dixon line, and with the Tornado unbeaten, flashed tremendous power in annihilating Virginia, which two weeks ago held Princeton, 0 to 0. The score was 34 to 0. Georgia defeated Tulane. Tennessee, conqueror of Alabama the previous week, outscored Washington and Lee. Virginia Military institute and Maryland played another no-decision, scoreless tie. Alabama ran a crusher over Sewanee.

Army's veterans loom as the foremost warriors of the east and as among the greatest in the country following their decisive defeat of a strong Yale team, by 18 to 6. One of the best Harvard teams for years upset the favorite Dartmouth eleven, 19 to 7, thus eliminating one of the few remaining teams in that section that had not been beaten or tied. Pennsylvania also sustained the first blot on its 1928 escutcheon when Navy rallied from three previous trouncings this season and won a gruelling duel, 6 to 0.

CARNEGIE TECH retained its undefeated mark by beating Pittsburgh in a hard-fought clash. Princeton beat Cornell by a field goal, 3 to 0. Princeton has not lost a game but the tie with Virginia mars the record of old Nassau. Amherst defeated Wesleyan in the first of "little three" encounters. Brown beat Tufts. Columbia defeated Williams. Fordham was better than Washington and Jefferson. West Virginia trounced Lafayette. New York university, another of the scattering unbeaten and untied hosts, ran up another huge score, this at the expense of Colgate, 47 to 6. Penn State and Syracuse played a 6 to 6 tie.

IOWA AND Minnesota played the feature game in the middle west, and was as expected, it was a bitterly fought engagement. A missed kick for point after touchdown cost the Gophers a tie and the 7-6 victory of the Hawkeyes enabled them to stay in the contention for the Western conference title. Illinois, 1927 Big Ten champion, also remain in the race in their efforts to repeat, by beating Northwestern. Ohio State is the third Big Ten team with a clean record, following its victory Saturday over Indiana. Purdue defeated a weak Chicago team as expected, though the 40-0 rout of the Maroons was startling. Michigan sustained its fourth defeat of the season—this from Wisconsin. The Badgers have not been beaten this season but a tie with Purdue mars their record.

NOTRE DAME'S indifferent club was good enough to trim Drake. Marquette went up from the middle west to the east and fought Holy Cross to a tie.

Parents Witness Shooting of Son

ASBURY PARK, N. J. Oct. 28.—Swift justice was promised tonight to Joseph Farrugio of Neptune, accused of the murder of Harold Johnson, star fullback of the Neptune High school eleven. The boy died in Ann Mary hospital at Spring Lake Saturday, from five bullet wounds.

In a final effort to save the victim's life, blood transfusion was called for by the attending surgeons. Twenty-five schoolmates, the entire football squad, presented themselves at the hospital ready to let their veins be opened for the dying athlete.

After all were examined, Henry Johnson, brother of the wounded lad, was selected. A quart of blood was pumped from his body into his brother, but Harrold suffered a sudden relapse and expired.

The shooting took place in the Johnson home Oct. 14, when Farrugio called with his two daughters, Josephine, 19, and Marianne, 17. The intruder asserted, according to the police, that Harrold had wronged one of the girls and demanded immediate marriage.

The parents of the boy were present. The father urged the lad to marry the girl, it is said by police, but the youth insisted that he was blameless in the matter.

According to the police, Farrugio drew a pistol and fired a shot that struck Harrold. Mrs. Johnson fainted. Johnson, who had sprung at the intruder, turned to aid his wife, whereupon Faruggio is declared to have fired four more shots.

After the shooting, Farrugio and his daughters were captured in Perth Amboy, where the father was held for assault, without bail, and the girls detained as witnesses. On Johnson's death the charge against Farrugio was made for murder in the first degree and the county prosecutor promised an immediate trial.

PONIES, FROGS LOOM CHAMPS

Poor Showing Against Rice Lowers Texas Rating

Rice	0	2	.000

(By The Associated Press)

Two Southwest conference clubs stood out in bold relief today as the result of Saturday's flare-ups in the Texas pigskin circuit, not the least spectacular of which was the feat of the belabored Rice Owls in holding the highly respected Texas Longhorns to a 13 to 7 decision.

Southern Methodist university and Texas Christian university for the moment look like the class of the league. The Christians chalked up their sixth victory in as many starts at the expense of the Texas Tech Matadors, 28 to 6, while the Methodists were running wild again, this time over the prostrate forms of the Trinity university Tigers. When Hume and company called it a day the count was 60 to 7 in favor of the Ponies.

Those who had picked the Longhorns to fight it out with the Mustangs for the bunting were not exactly heartened by the showing of Littlefield's machine against the lowly Owls, whom the Pones walloped 53 to 13 just a week ago. Whether the gridsters from the capital city purposely stumbled over their own feet for the benefit of Mustang scouts was another question. It appeared, to all accounts, that they were doing their best to squelch the Owls but couldn't get organized.

Aggies Out of Race

The Aggies left no further doubt of their inability to stand the pace by dropping another conference decision to the Arkansas Razorbacks, 27 to 12, at Fayetteville. It gave the Porkers a final standing of .667 for their actual conference schedule, with wins over Baylor and the Aggies and a loss to Texas. The remainder of their games take them out of the state.

In view of their clean-cut victory over the farmers, whom they passed silly, the departure of the Razorbacks probably is not regretted by several conference mentors.

Baylor's sizzling 48 to 7 victory over the St. Edwards' university Saints would indicate that Coach Morley Jennings' outfit of youngsters has at last struck its stride and that its win the previous week over Centenary was no flash in the pan. While not of championship calibre, the Saints have proved formidable in all their games against conference clubs. Gilliland, elusive halfback, led the Bears in their furious assault on the St. Edwards' goal line, ably assisted by Weir Washam. Observers have said all along the Bruins had the material to get in the thick of the conference scrap if Coach Jennings could whip his collection of high school stars into a machine. It looks now like the Bruin mentor might give his wellwishers a run for their money.

Big Games This Week

Two conflicts on the boards the coming week-end should go far to decide the eventual conference champions. While the Southern Methodist-Texas university clash at Austin looks like the prime attraction, the battle between Baylor and the Texas Christian Horned Frogs at Fort Worth might have an equally important bearing on the title chase.

The winner of the fray at Austin is more a less of a certainty to finish either at the top or in that immediate vicinity. The engagement at Fort Worth, to all appearances, will decide the other title contender. Something like the bracketing system in tennis. The Mustangs and Frogs, if the dope runs true, should finish ahead in their respective contests. Such an eventuality would lend support to the prediction that those two ancient rivals will settle things between them when they clash at Dallas Thanksgiving day.

Three other members of Dr. Penick's little circle will be out of the spotlight this week. The Aggies apparently have picked a team they can whip in the Denton Teachers, whom they take on at College Station. Rice entertains the Southwestern university Pirates at Houston, while the Arkansas eleven goes over to Shreveport for a muss with Louisiana State.

Aggie-Sewanee Tilt May Be Abandoned

COLLEGE STATION, Oct. 28. (AP)—Despite continued rumors that the annual Texas A. & M.-Sewanee game, a feature of the state fair of Texas at Dallas for several years, would be discontinued, no comment has been made by A. & M. officials.

The Aggie-Tiger contract has one more year to run.

The poor showing of the Tennessee team against the Farmers, and especially their recent 60 to 0 loss, has brought speculation that the contract would not be renewed.

Anti-Saloon League Head Attacks Smith

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (US)—An annual message by the President of the United States against porhibition would be worth $25,000,000 a year to the liquor traffic of the world, F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the anti-saloon league declared today.

McBride assailed Gov. Alfred E. Smith on his proposals for Volstead law modification and state control of liquor.

McCallum Protests Vernon Victory And Players

Victory of the Vernon high school football team over Wichita Falls last Saturday will be protested, it was announced last night by Coach Bud McCallum of the Coyotes.

The protest will be made on the questioned eligibility of two Vernon players—Herbert Stevens and Byron Phillips, linemen. McCallum charges that Stevens is 21 years old, a year over the Texas Interscholastic league age limit. He also alleges that Phillips is ineligible because of having participated in the limit of four years of prep competition prior to this football season.

McCallum says he warned officials of Vernon school before the game that he would protest the contest in the event the players involved participated in the game.

McCallum intimated that he would suggest the replaying of the game in Wichita Falls.

MYSTERY IN AIR

Racing 'Dope' Put on Air By Unidentified Station

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (US).—Uncle Sam was on the lookout today for the operator of what is probably the most mysterious and unusual broadcasting set the radio division of the department of commerce has ever had to contend with.

According to a complaint received by Federal Radio Commissioner Ira E. Robinson, a radio man of mystery is broadcasting race track information to "a band of poolroom thieves" from the Laurel, Md., race track.

NOTED GUNMAN DIES IN DUEL

Detective Kills Machine Gun Expert

CHICAGO, Oct. 28. (US)—"Killer" George Darrow, henchman of "Polack" Joe Saltis and leading machine gun manipulator of the latter's crew, was shot and killed today in a man-to-man gun duel with Detective Sergeant Thomas Curtin.

Darrow's real name was Otto Kosteneck.

Curtin had walked into John J. Corcoran's saloon, where the duel occurred as Darrow, said by police to have killed six men, was wielding a shotgun and shouting "I'll kill you."

Curtin whipped out his revolver and fired twice, both bullets piercing Darrow's side. The later staggered about, then lifted his shotgun and fired wildly at the detective, who returned the fire, this time fatally. But in his death throes, Darrow clung tenaciously to the few minutes of life left to him, and crept out of the saloon toward the curb where a waiting sedan had been parked, only to find it gone. The car and its sole occupant had disappeared after the first shot.

The duel climaxes a situation that authorities believe is the opening of a new gang war between Joe Saltis, sought for 160 days now by federal officers, and a crew of rival beer toters.

Darrow is believed to have gone to Corcoran's saloon to ascertain whether the place was being provided with beer by the rival beer runners. He had gone armed, it is said, with the idea of intimidating Corcoran back into line as one of Saltis' patrons. Just a few minutes before he was slain, he entered the saloon, apparently from the sedan that had waited for a time, and ordered everyone within to "stick 'em up."

Thomas and Connally To Speak in Mangum

Special to The Record News.

MANGUM, Okla., Oct. 28.—Two prominent speakers will be in Mangum next week in behalf of the Smith-Robinson campaign. The first will be United States Senator Elmer Thomas of Medicine Park, Oklahoma's only Democratic senator, who speaks at the courthouse next Wednesday night, Oct. 31. He will be followed on Friday night by Congressman Tom Connally of Texas. Mr. Connally is recognized as one of the greatest orators in the house of representatives, and is a deep student of national affairs. He will tell his Mangum audience why he is supporting the Democratic nominee.

NEW AUTOGYRO PLANE SHOWN

U. S. Army Experts Evince Interest in Model

PARIS, Oct. 28. (UP)—The autogyro plane invented by Juan de la Cierva was tested by U. S. army officials today. The demonstration was witnessed by former Senator Henry F. Hollis, who is seeking American and Canadian rights on the autogyro patents, now held by the British government.

Lieut. Victory Bertrandias of the U. S. aviation corps, made a test flight in the "windmill" plane and handled the controls part of the time.

"United States aviation leaders are interested in obtaining the autogyro for experimental purposes," Hollis said.

All observers of the test were enthusiastic after Rawson, the mechanic who was present in absence of La Cierva, explained the mechanism of the machine.

For Safer Flying

LONDON, Oct. 28. (UP)—Juan de la Cierva, Spanish inventor of the autogyro flying machine, expects to make civilian flying as safe and as cheap as automobile travel with a new model autogyro which he demonstrated today.

The new model was demonstrated to Lieut. Victor Bertrandias of Dayton, Ohio, of the engineering department of the United States aviation corps. La Cierva said he hoped the machine would revolutionize aviation.

Only one such machine as was demonstrated today exists. It weighs 1,400 pounds when loaded, has an 80-horsepower motor and a speed of 100 miles per hour, he said. It uses about five gallons of gasoline per 100 miles.

The inventor flew his autogyro, which rises and lands almost vertically, from London to Le Bourget, France, and thence on a short European tour recently.

He said he believed the eventual cost of the new machine would be about the same as the cost of a medium priced automobile.

In today's tests La Cierva personally made three flights, bringing the strange machine to a landing at an angle of about 30 degrees with the ground.

DANE WINS PRIZE

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 28. (UP)—The Nobel prize in medicine for 1928 was awarded to Prof. Charles Nicolle of Tunis, for his efforts in combatting typhus, it was announced today.

What's better than a seat right on the forty-eight yard line,

When your team has got a touchdown and the game is going fine?

What's better? Why that's easy! You can multiply your joy

By pulling out a Little Tom and lighting it, my boy!

GRAHAM, Texas, Oct. 28.—The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Club's circle No. 3 expect to sponsor a public treasure hunt Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock for the benefit of the Graham auditorium fund, for which prizes will be given to the lady and gentleman finding the treasure. The hunt will start from the Country club and clues will be placed all over the city and in prominent suburbs and parks. The different circles have used different methods of raising funds for this purpose, the quota for each one of the circles being $250 or more.

SCHOOL PLANS HEALTH CLINIC

Iowa Park Children to Be Examined

Special to The Record News.

IOWA PARK, Texas, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Reeves Overbey, chairman of the P.-T. A. health committee, reports that a health clinic will be held for the first four grades of the Iowa Park ward school within the next few days.

This work will be under the direct supervision of Mrs. R. R. Brubaker, Mrs. T. B. Reeves, Mrs. J. C. Murphree and Mrs. M. L. Hines, and is planned by Mrs. Overby as follows: The parents of each pupil will be visited by the sponsors of the different rooms, who will acquaint them with the plan and purpose of the work; later, investigations will be sent to each mother to be present during the examination of her child. A baby specialist, a general practitioner, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, also a dentist, will be present each day. These will be assisted by Mrs. Steinkoeing, district health chairman, and Miss Olson, county nutritionist.

Mrs. Overbey says that the examinations will probably take at least four days and then she will soon be able to announce the date selected, the names of the committee that will assist her, and the names of the physicians who will conduct the examinations.

TENNESSEE HAS 'DIRTY' BATTLE

Both Sides Vitriolic; Demos Are Best Organized

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 28.—In spite of much missionary work by a group of highly intelligent and progressive editors and the ferment of a new generation of youngsters, the spirit behind the Scopes evolution trial is still abroad among many Tennessee voters.

Appeals of the basest sort are being made by some irresponsible elements of both sides. One woman justified the circulation of literature bearing a photograph entitled "$7,500 a year Tammany negro boss and his white secretary" by saying "you ought to see what the other side is saying about Hoover." And plenty is being said.

This is all in spite of excellent leadership of high type on both sides, and of newspapers which are trying to keep the campaign clean. Prejudice is so aroused in Tennessee that it is uncertain what will happen to these 12 electoral votes. Harding got them by a margin of 13,000 in 1920 when an exceptionally popular candidate for governor helped him. But in 1924 Davis carried the state by 28,000. This is about Tennessee's normal Democratic majority.

Immigration Issue

Smith will lose lots of it because of prohibition, religion and immigration which is a live issue here because of the native antipathy of Tennesseeans to Southern Europeans. Smith, it is charged, wishes to admit more Latins and the fact that he only suggests revision within the present quota limits does not save him from severe criticism among his own supporters.

So far as issues are concerned there is nothing in sight which would enable Smith to offset completely the losses he is bound to suffer from prohibition, religion and immigration. If the Democrats win it will be through superior organization.

Democrats have a high pressure organization going now after a bitter primary fight over the gubernatorial nomination. All Democratic ex-governors, senators and congressmen as well as defeated Democratic aspirants are stumping the state. There are 150 Democratic speakers on the stump. The Democratic national committee has just agreed to match any fund the state would raise up to $35,000 and the state organization has raised its share so the remainder of the campaign will be well financed, particularly day workers.

Two Scripps Papers

The most important opposition comes from George Milton, Chattanooga editor and a former associate of McAdoo, and from the Scripps-Howard papers at Memphis and Knoxville. The Luke Lea papers and the Stahlmans are supporting Smith.

Republicans are suffering from disrupted organization due to the fight of Rep. J. Will Taylor to retain control of federal patronage. He still is national committeeman but his influence has been seriously undermined by a group of business men who wish to create a higher type of Republican organization than has existed in the past. Incidentally this group has made it possible to finance the Hoover campaign in Tennessee. Republicans, however, are short on organization and will be somewhat weaker than the Democrats in election day organization—which is a serious disadvantage.

State Is Uncertain

Because of internal differences, electric power is being stressed by Democratic speakers although the proximity of Muscle Shoals and the importance of other hydro-electric sites on the Tennessee river normally makes this a question of much concern to this state industrially.

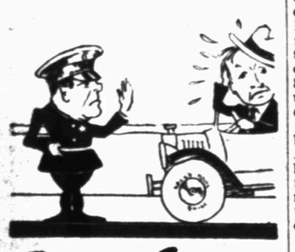

Col. Luke Lea, former senator and publisher, who knows Tennessee about as well as anyone, predicts Smith will carry the state by 30,000 to 40,000. Other Democrats are not so sanguine and feel Smith will be lucky if he gets 10,000. Republicans claim the state by 30,000. When gentlemen of Tennessee thus differ, it behooves the visiting correspondent to take no sides but to list the state as uncertain.

Agriculture Supervisor Speaks at Grandfield

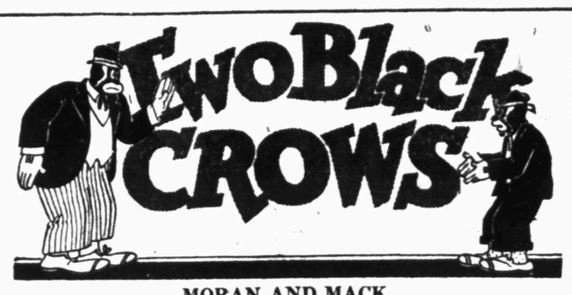

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Oct. 28.—R. Floyd, assistant state supervisor of agriculture, visited this school Thursday afternoon and met the agriculture classes.

Mr. Floyd spoke on the subject of honors to be won by judging teams, the most important of which are trips offered by some of the railroads to Kansas City to the Royal Stock show and to the Memphis, Tenn., dairy show.

MORAN AND MACK

Mack: You'se so smart, can you tell me why Mr. Coolidge is like Mr. Hughes?

Moran: Say, you must have gone to one of them colleges when they learn you more QUESTIONS than ANSWERS.

Mack: Do you give up?

Moran: Do I give up? I never had it.

Mack: Well, ask me why.

Moran: What?

Mack: Not what, why.

Moran: Well, why is Mr. Coolidge like Mr. Hughes?

Mack: They's both got whiskers—

Moran: Coolidge ain't got whiskers.

Mack: Let me finish. They's both got whiskers—EXCEPT Coolidge.

Moran: That don't make sense.

Mack: You don't think I'd waste it on you if it did, do you?

Moran: If you think that's a good conundrum, we both got sense—except you.

MAJESTIC: Richard Dix and Ruth Elder in "Moran of the Marines." Our Gang comedy. Football short subjects. Topics of the Day. Paramount News. Fables.

STRAND: "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Pathe Newsreel.

OLYMPIC: "Discovery Week" program each evening this week. On the screen, "The Desired Woman," with Irene Rich. Comedy. Fox Newsreel. Bill Saling at Wurlitzer organ.

MISSION: Last times of Ted Wells in "The Crimson Canyon." Comedy. "Mullen's Musical Maids" on vaudeville bill.

GARDEN: Last times of Harry Carey in "Burning Bridges." Comedy.

GEM: Last times of "Jesse James," starring Fred Thompson. Comedy.

The week's theater program holds an unusual number of attractions for Wichita Falls theater fans.

The Olympic theater will open "Discovery Week" Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock with six acts of vaudeville given by the best amateur and professional talent in the city. The vaudeville program will be changed each evening of the week, and six or seven acts will make up each program.

◇ ◇ ◇

Programs include comedy skits, dancing, songs and specialty acts From this group of acts will be chosen the best number to be staged for at least two evenings at the Majestic theater.

◇ ◇ ◇

Two midnight matinees are on schedule for Wednesday evening in celebration of Halloween. A "Midnight Ramble" is on the Wednesday evening program at the Mission theater. The program for the ramble will be a complete change, but is as yet unannounced.

The other midnight show will be given at the Strand theater when the house also will offer an entirely new bill. Each show will begin at 11:45 o'clock.

◇ ◇ ◇

"Moran of the Marines," starring Ruth Elder, transatlantic aviatrix, and Richard Dix, is attracting favorable comments from theater fans. The picture runs through Wednesday at the Majestic theater.

◇ ◇ ◇

The Olympic theater is showing Irene Rich in "The Desired Woman" on the program for the first part of the week. A London society woman battles for right amid the primitive environment of an outpost in British India and wins.

Starring with Irene Rich is William Collier Jr., whose boyishness makes him an ideal contrast to the worldliness of the "Desired Woman."

◇ ◇ ◇

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," playing this week at the Strand theater, will afford many a Southerner his first opportunity of seeing the play.

And it is staged amid the appropriate music. It gives opposing sides in the War Between the States due credit for deeds accomplished.

There are tears in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," but think how nice it is to be able to see Eliza making the flight across real ice.

◇ ◇ ◇

Clever child actors abound in the staging of the picture. "Topsy" is made real to those who have known her only by her remark that she "just growed." There are other things brought home in the picture, but you'd better see them for yourself.

Irene Rich in "The Desired Woman," now playing at the Olympic theater.

Hiram Johnson Foe Offers to Withdraw

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 28. (UP)—Minor Moore, Los Angeles, Democratic nominee for United States senator from California, tonight made public a letter to Hiram Johson, incumbent Republican candidate in which he offered to retire from the race if Johnson would renounce the Republican presidential candidacy of Herbert Hoover.

Moore's letter contained a lengthy attack on Hoover's New York speech and attitude toward Boulder Canyon dam and Muscle Shoals.

In the letter Moore told Senator Johnson that Hoover had "denounced your own record on the Boulder Dam question" and urged that the senator renounce Hoover's candidacy and denounce his position.

Moore charged that in his New York speech Hoover had "emphatically declared himself unalterably opposed to government construction and operation of hydroelectric power plants."

Moore said he was "persuaded, in view of Mr. Hoover's attitude, that the solution of Southern California's problem for water supply will be long delayed if he should be elected."

'Lost' Algonquins Rival Bootleggers

CHICAGO, Oct. 28. (US)—The "lost tribe" of Algonquin Indians, chased north in Revolutionary war days, found in Baffinland by the Rawson-McMillin expedition, still retain old legends and myths—but they rival American bootleggers, according to Dr. William Duncan Strong of the Field Museum of Natural History, who arrived home today.

"Their legends and myths prove beyond doubt they are the old Algonquins," Dr. Strong said. "They live in constant fear that the warring Iroquois, who chased them north, will follow them and drive them still further into the recesses of the frozen North."

Dr. Strong said the Indians and Eskimos are sold no whisky or other alcoholic drinks, but they prepare "a mixture of molasses, water and yeast that is extremely potent and almost as vile in taste as our own modern bootleg liquor."

Death Interrupts Pair's Reconciliation

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 28. (US)—Greeting her husband from whom she has been estranged for several years, Mrs. Leo A. Solarski dropped dead. The couple planned to start life anew and Mrs. Solarski came here from Chicago. As her husband, a hotel auditor, stepped forward to meet her in the station she collapsed and died.

WHARTON SENTENCED

CHICAGO, Oct. 28. (UP)—Charles Wharton, former assistant state's attorney, was sentenced to two years in Leavenworth penitentiary in connection with the $133,000 Evergreen mail train robbery. Nine men participated in the robbery, one of the most spectacular ever staged in the state of Illinois.

GAS OVERCOMES MENTAL STUPOR

Wisconsin Scientists Claim Important Discovery

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 28. (UP).—A miraculous demonstration of awakening persons mentally dead was made by University of Wisconsin scientists before the seventh annual convention of the Central Neuro-Psychiatric association.

Two patients from the state insane asylum were aroused from mental and physical stupors lasting over many months by administration of a gaseous mixture. The patients sat up, moved naturally, and talked lucidly.

Dr. William F. Lorenz, co-experimenter with Dr. Arthur S. Lovenhart, likened the experiments to lifting a curtain in a darkened room, watching it slowly fall again as the patients lapsed back into cataleptic state.

Experts Divided

A carbon dioxide and oxygen mixture administered by Dr. Ralph Walters produced the stimulus. Psychiatrists, amazed at the demonstration, were divided in their opinion, some holding with the experimenters that the stimulated activity caused removal of inhibitions, while others argued that the inhibitions were removed first resulting in activity.

Margaret, 29, emaciated, in catalepsy 16 months without talking, appeared as dead, showed no response to touch or command, but waved arms and cried "get back" repeatedly after the gas was administered. She sat up, discussed her case, and talked coherently with Dr. Lorenz.

When awakened she thought the demonstration room was a motion picture theater.

"Do you like to sleep?" a doctor asked.

"Oh, no."

"When why do you do it?"

"I don't know."

"Why don't you eat?"

"I don't think I should."

"Wouldn't you rather eat than have to be fed through that tube they stick in your nose?"

"I don't know that I would."

Natural Reaction

Tears rolled down her cheeks as Margaret discussed her case. Dr. Lorenz said this was a natural emotional reaction.

She relapsed into catalepsy slowly as the effect of the gas wore off. A pin prick caused no reaction.

The second demonstration was on a negro, Albert. He arose, screaming with fright, but talked freely after being allowed to lie down. He thought he was in a church.

"I'm from Georgia," he answered to a question as to his home.

He knew he was confined to Mendota hospital, he said.

The demonstrations were offered as a discovery of the means of breaking into profound stupors which may be developed eventually into physiotherophy and in inquiry into the conditions causing individual catalepsis.

Aged Husband Wins Case Against Young Wife

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. (US)—Marietta Bailey Provost, former show girl, was found guilty of misconduct, as charged by her husband, Cornelius W. Provost, by a jury which awarded Provost a divorce. He is 68 years old and a former member of the New York Stock Exchange. Mrs. Provost is 35 years his junior.

Robert Renshaw, described first as an artist, and later as a federal agent, attached to the narcotic division, was named by Mr. Provost.

Election Night in Wichita Falls To Be Marked by Big 'Whoopees'

Plans are advancing rapidly in Wichita Falls among the organizations of the city for big "whoopees" on election night, Nov. 6.

At least two radios will be installed in the Elks club to tune in on stations over the country for returns while the Elks are enjoying their election night dance, according to E. F. Fruechte, exalted ruler of the local lodge.

The Little Rovers orchestra will tune up for the Elks that night, and the election returns will be received as long as they continue to come in.

Maskat temple is bringing Paul Whiteman and his orchestra to the Memorial auditorium that night and has announced that arrangements for a special wire from the Texas Election board have been made and that those attending the concert will hear the election returns as they come in.

ELKS TO CALL ROLL TONIGHT

All Members of Wichita Lodge to Meet

Monday night will see all members of the Wichita Falls lodge No. 1105 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks assembled in the lodge rooms for the annual roll call, it was announced by E. F. Fruechte, exaulted ruler, Sunday night.

"Attendance by every member of the lodge is mandatory, according to a notice I received from the grand exalted ruler, unless a sufficient excuse is received in writing," Mr. Fruechte explained.

The largest attendance of local Elks on record is expected at this meeting, it was said Sunday.

Progress Made In Combatting Leprosy

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (US)—Leprosy, the dread disease of the ages, is so far responding to medical treatment that eight lepers have been given a probational release from the national leprosarium at Carville, La., the United States public health service announced today.

The release of these lepers means that they are no longer a menace to public health, the service said. Pointing out that the leprosarium has been in existence seven years, the service continued:

"During that time 37 lepers have been released or paroled as being no longer dangerous to the public health. Only one of these lepers has suffered a relapse and has had to resume treatment. More than 300 lepers are now under treatment at this institution."

Gasoline Tax Brings In $1,225,000 in Month

AUSTIN, Oct. 28. (AP)—Approximately $1,225,000 was received from the tax on gasoline during September, S. H. Terrell, comptroller of public accounts announced today. The two cent per gallon tax became effective on Sept. 1, having been reduced by operation of law from three cents.

The decrease will cause an average reduction of about $600,000 monthly, Terrell said.

Hubby's Jibes About Weight Just Too Much

CHICAGO, Oct. 28. (US)—Mrs Myrtle Furth today sought a divorce from Lester X. on the grounds of cruelty and infidelity. She said she had forgiven the infidelity, but could not forgive his taunting remarks about her increasing weight. She asks $600 monthly alimony.

Bond Amendment Before City Dads

An amendatory ordinance on bond procedure in connection with the recently passed $250,000 city of Wichita Falls bond issue will be presented to the city council for passage under the emergency clause at the Monday night meeting of the council, it was learned Sunday.

The amendment to the ordinance was made necessary when Clay, Dillon and Vandewater of New York, market attorneys on the bond issue, suggested that the ordinance providing for the manner in which the bonds will be paid, should have one section on the levy changed. The change would split the levy of the general fund into three parts to be distributed against the street, general and park funds. It was explained as being purely a routine ordinance, but one which is necessary for the sale of the bonds.

The amendment of the plumbing renewal licenses in the city which will come up for third and final reading. A public hearing on the C. B. Felder request to install an auto laundry at Tenth and Bluff streets also will be held.

Gen. McCoy to Fly On Last Inspection

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 28. (UP)—Gen. Frank R. McCoy, chairman of the American electoral mission in Nicaragua, will make final inspection by airplane early next week of provisions for the presidential election Nov. 4, it was announced tonight.

General McCoy has invited two Nicaraguan members of the national election board, one from each party, to accompany him.

The principal American election officials were called here this week by General McCoy for a final conference. They have returned to their stations.

DIPTHTHERIA SCARE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. (UP)—Capital schools had a diphtheria scare this week as 61 students were quarantined in one day by health authorities. Three deaths from the disease have occurred this month. In addition to the 61 removed, 16 had previously been found with advanced cases of diphtheria.

Queen Unveils to Begin New Order

MOSCOW, Oct. 28. (US)—Their first definite step to put personally into operation throughout Afghanistan the ideas of Western civilization gleaned on their trip to Europe was taken by King Amanullah and his beautiful consort, Queen Souriya, at a great durbar at Kabul, the Afghan capital.

According to advices reaching Moscow, the central part of the personal leadership assumed by the local couple in the westernizing of Afghanistan, was the discarding of her veil by Queen Souriya.

The ceremony of the royal unveiling at the durbar, it is reported, was solemnly carried out, and produced a strong impression on the minds of Afghan subjects. Acting as a symbol of the new ideas, Queen Souriya appeared before her subjects at the durbar, and was solemnly unveiled in the presence of the king. At the same time it was solemnly proclaimed that the exposure of the face by women was not a violation of the Islam laws.

Courtiers promised to follow their queen's example.

Grandfield Bridge Contract Delayed

Special to The Record News.

GRANDFIELD, Okla., Oct. 28.—Another delay has been experienced in the letting of the contract for a bridge to span the Deep Red drainage ditch north of town.

According to information, the contract should have been let last Tuesday by the state highway commissioners, but through some misunderstanding, it is said, the commissioners failed to consider it.

According to one of the highway commissioners, the commission was under the impression that the contract was to be let by the county and the state was to pay two-thirds the cost of the bridge and the county one-third. The county commissioners did not have that understanding.

It was announced that the commissioners would let the contract immediately.

BLUMENFELD MUM

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 28 (UP)—Ralph Blumenfeld, editor of the London Express, declined here to discuss adverse comment by Newton D. Baker and others on his new league for peace plan. "I shall have to study those comments carefully before I reply to them," said Blumenfeld as he arrived here with other members of a British news men's party.

SKELETON IS FOUND

EL PASO, Oct. 28. (UP)—A partly buried skeleton was found in a hillock a short distance over the international boundary in Mexico. Officials believed it was that of a United States negro soldier, one of several who engaged in a skirmish with Villistas in that section in 1919, when Villa attacked Juares.

QUITAQUE, Texas, Oct. 28.—At a recent meeting of the entertainment committee of the chamber of commerce, A. D. Walters, who is representing the Langever Decorating company of Fort Worth, was present and outlined a proposition of decorating the city of Quitaque on or about the 20th of November for the inauguration of the first passenger train scheduled to make its run over the new South Plains-Fort Worth and Denver railway into Quitaque on Nov. 22. The entertainment committee closed a deal whereby A. D. Walter will have charge of the decoration.

Each citizen is urged to take part in beautifying Quitaque.
