RIVER ON RAMPAGE AT BANDERA — The raging muddy waters of the Medina River encroached on Bandera Wednesday when heavy rains in the wake of Tropical Storm Amelia sent

Chile Demanding Proof For Trio's Extradition

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet said Wednesday that murder indictments in Washington against three former Chilean security officials are only accusations and nobody will be extradited without proof of guilt.

The president's comments at a breakfast meeting with reporters apparently were part of a government effort to head off public alarm.

They were made before the U.S. House of Representatives approved by voice vote a cutoff of all American arms shipments to Chile until the three men are turned over to the United States. Hours after approving the arms measure, the House reversed itself, and decided in a roll call vote — 243 to 166 — not to use an arms cutoff to force extradition.

The Chilean government ordered the arrests of the accused army men at the request of the American Embassy a few hours after a grand jury in Washington issued indictments Tuesday in the 1976 murder of exiled Chilean socialist Orlando Letelier.

The U.S. Congress already has restricted arms shipments to Chile because of human rights violations, and Wednesday's action was aimed at stopping all U.S. arms shipments there. Several House members said that by cutting of the supply of arms, the United States would make it clear it is serious about wanting the three delivered for trial.

Retired Brig. Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, chief of the security unit known as the DINA until its dissolution a year ago, was placed under house arrest, with policemen and a security guard posted outside his suburban Santiago home.

Lt. Col. Pedro Espinoza Bravo, former director of DINA operations, was placed under house arrest in the southern city of Punta Arenas where he commands an infantry regiment. Capt. Armando Fernandez Larios, a former DINA agent, was said to be detained in a military hospital.

The indictment says Contreras ordered the assassination and that Espinoza passed the order on to Fernandez and Michael Townley, an expatriate American who worked for DINA. Townley was deported in March at the request of the United States and cooperated with U.S. Justice Department officials preparing the case.

The indictment says Townley affixed the remote control bomb to Letelier's car about two days before the killing and that he had the help of four Cuban exiles in putting the bomb together. The Cubans also were indicted on the same charges as the three Chileans. Townley is charged with conspiracy.

"I have the impression that the United States has accumulated a series of antecedents, presumptions as the English say, in order to begin a judgment," Pinochet told the reporters.

"Since the judges there (in the United States) cannot establish if they (the accused) are delinquents or not, they ask preventive detention as a first measure," he said.

Pinochet said the arrest order for Contreras, Espinoza and Fernandez would be good for only two months.

U.S. officials plan to ask for extradition within a few weeks. The Chilean Supreme Court must then call hearings to consider the validity of the evidence within Chilean criminal law. If the court decides the evidence indicates guilt, it

Lower Basic Phone Service Rate Slated

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. customers will be able to experiment with "lifeline" telephone rates under an order issued Wednesday by the Texas Public Utility Commission granting Bell a $124.5 million rate increase.

The company had asked for a $214.3 million rate hike.

"We're sorry the commission did not see fit to agree with our request," said Bell attorney John D. Lawrence. "I'm a little surprised to see that (lifeline rates).

It's an opportunity to see if there's a demand for this that's broad enough to justify its implementation."

Lawrence said the company probably would decide next week whether to appeal the rate order in court. Bell recently lost a Texas Supreme Court appeal of its first, $57.8 million rate increase granted by the commission.

The order's section on lifeline, or measured service, rates represents the first such experimentation in the state.

"I really believe this order is the first real, true hope for substantive relief in utility bills that they (consumers) have ever had," Commissioner Alan Erwin said.

The lifeline rates would be optional in 15 cities equipped to record the number of outgoing calls from a single phone number. Bell will be given six months to implement the new measured service rates in these areas with customers having the alternative to remain under the standard monthly service charge if they desire.

Here's how the lifeline rate would work: Customers would be able to make 25 local calls for a flat fee, approximately 40 percent lower than the standard service charge. Any additional calls would cost eight cents each.

The lifeline flat rate would vary according to size of the city. It would be $5 in Houston, $4.75 in Dallas, $4.45 in San Antonio and Fort Worth, $4.20 in Austin, $3.95 in Amarillo, Corpus Christi, Lubbock and Beaumont, $3.85 in Wichita Falls, Tyler, Midland and Galveston and $3.70 in San Benito and Harlingen.

A customer electing the measured service rate could go back to a standard monthly fee if he found his bills were actually higher. However, any change in rates would be subject to a service change order fee, similar to charges for changing phone equipment.

An estimated 63 percent or 1.4 million residential customers would be able to choose measured rate charges. Among the largest discrepancies between Bell's request and the commission's order was in local service charges, which Bell wanted to increase by $76.4 million. The commission granted no increase in standard local service charges.

Long distance, WATS and directory assistance charges will remain the same.

Services which will have increased costs include service connection charges, Centrex phone systems and private lines.

Stock Market Rally Produces Biggest Advance Since 1975

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up its most powerful advance in 3 1/2 years Wednesday in a rally that produced dramatic gains in dozens of blue chip and glamor issues.

Analysts said the euphoric mood was inspired by hopes for a downturn in interest rates, and a "buy signal" from a widely followed Wall Street doctrine known as the Dow theory.

The heady atmosphere was typified by International Business Machines, the long-established No. 1 holding of investing institutions, which racked up a 13 1/2 point gain to 293.

The Dow Jones industrial average soared 22.78 points to 883.49, for its biggest single-day advance since it gained 26.06 points on Jan. 27, 1975. That put the average at its highest closing level since it finished at 887.43 on Aug. 10 of last year.

Advances swamped declines by a 4-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume reached 47.47 million shares, the sixth largest total ever. The record of 63.51 million shares was set on April 17 in the midst of Wall Street's last sharp rally.

The market's recent strength has been credited in part to hopes that interest rates might be topping out after a steady rise over the past several months.

In their apparent preoccupation with that prospect, investors have paid little heed to less favorable news on inflation and the dollar's decline in foreign exchange.

In addition, analysts noted a rush of buying by the many investors who subscribe to the Dow theory.

When both the Dow Jones industrial and transportation averages establish new highs for a significant period of

Texas Hill Country Floods Kill Eight

BANDERA (AP) — At least eight persons were confirmed dead and several were believed missing Wednesday night as authorities battled time, darkness and flood waters to rescue residents and campers stranded by rain-swollen Hill Country rivers in Central Texas.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety said the victims include two women at Bandera, two men at Comfort, and three adults and a 12-year-old boy at Center Point, between Comfort and Kerrville.

The spokesman said the death toll could increase as rescue operations continue into the night.

Two Hospitalized

Two persons were hospitalized after receiving "major injuries" in the Bandera County flooding along the Medina River, deputies said.

A mother, father and two grandmothers from one family were reported missing from the Peaceful Valley Dude Ranch near Bandera. A son and daughter reportedly swam to safety from the family's flooded cabin.

"I'm hoping they're in a tree or something. The kids swam out and were safe," said Grace Kitzman, wife of the ranch's owner.

Entrances to the LBJ Ranch near Stonewall, Texas, were blocked by the raging floodwaters of the Pedernales River. Rising waters failed to reach the house, but came within feet of the stone fence circling the family cemetery where the late President Lyndon B. Johnson is buried.

Rivers Surging

Heavy rains, some up to 20 inches in 24 hours Tuesday and Wednesday, sent the Guadalupe and Medina rivers surging out of their banks at daybreak. Telephone communications with most of the stricken areas were seriously disrupted.

Kerrville, located on the Guadalupe River about 25 miles north of Bandera, resembled a war zone as National Guard troops, Army and state police helicopters and scores of police deposited stunned refugees at evacuation centers.

Jim Robinson, the DPS spokesman, said all youth camps along the rampaging Guadalupe River were warned at daybreak to evacuate or move to higher ground. He said all children at the Guadalupe River camps were believed safe and accounted for.

Camps Evacuated

Robinson said camps along the swollen Medina River in Bandera County also had been evacuated, although deputies were unsure if everyone had been reached in time.

Children rescued from the Serendip Camp on the Medina River were taken to the Pipe Creek Volunteer Fire Department. Refugees from Camp Bandana were taken to a church in Bandera.

More than 150 evacuees crammed into the VA Hospital at Kerrville or into the city's municipal auditorium.

In Austin, east of the flood area, Gov. Dolph Briscoe asked the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration to declare Kerr, Kendall and Bandera counties major disaster areas. The counties could then be eligible for emergency assistance funds and programs.

Robinson said up to 400 people were left homeless in Kendall County and were being sheltered in the high school gymnasium at Comfort.

The National Weather Service said the Medina River had swollen to a record-breaking 45 feet, 35 feet over its banks. Forecasters said the deadly storm — the last of Tropical Storm Amelia — was moving slowly northward, prompting additional flood warnings.

Forecasters called for scattered thunderstorms across the state, with heavy rains on the fringes of the Hill Country and as far north as the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

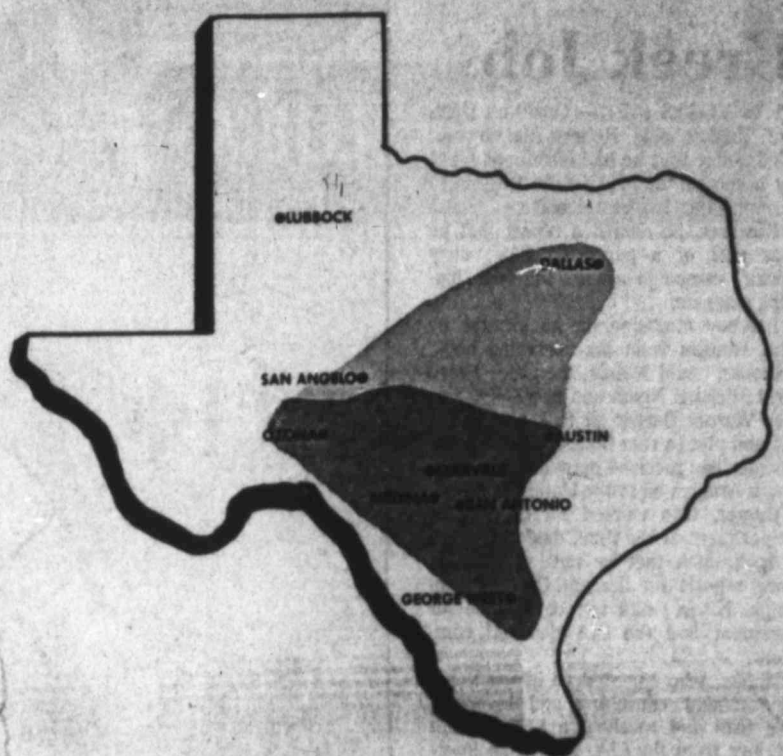

Only one victim was identified by Wednesday afternoon. A Bandera County deputy said Jose Morales, about 70, was found dead in his home in Comfort, where water covered about a third of the town of 1,500.

About 10 miles downstream from Camp Bandana, at Camp Serendip, director Bob Cowan said he heard the river "roaring" about 6:30 a.m.

"In less than three hours, we watched the river take the lower cabins," he said. "We got all 41 kids and counselors out safely. We'll be transporting them into San Antonio later today."

At Medina, police reported the Medina River was flowing through buildings in town. In Bandera, residents called it the worst flood since 1960. Floodwaters began receding about 10 a.m. and many residents discovered they had lost everything.

Cool Temperatures, Rainfall Possible Across South Plains

FOLLOWING weeks of hot temperatures and dry weather, South Plains residents may see a break in the pattern: the National Weather Service is predicting much cooler temperatures and a 50 percent probability of rain today.

A Canadian cool front is easing its way through the Panhandle and forecasters anticipate it will combine with a southeasterly flow of moisture to produce rain and substantially lower temperatures in the area.

Temperatures are expected to range from the low 60s to the high 70s today and Friday. Winds will be 10 to 15 mph. Probability of rain will decrease to 30 percent tonight.

Thunderstorms began to develop across the northern half of the South Plains late Wednesday afternoon.

In a quick shower Floydada recorded 2.0 of an inch of moisture and experienced brief, gusty winds.

A heavier shower fell on Petersburg about 5:30 p.m., where a resident estimated that the area received a quarter-to-a-half-inch of rain.

Both Levelland and Plainview reported traces, while a light shower also was reported just west of Denver City.

Heavy rains, producing rising rivers and extensive flooding, fell in Central and South Texas.

The NWS said the rains were caused by tropical depression Amelia. The heaviest rainfall was in the Hill Country northwest of San Antonio.

Winds generally were southeasterly across Texas, except in the Panhandle, where they were northerly five to 20 mph. Winds gusted 25 to 30 mph along the mid coast and the lower valley.

The afternoon temperatures in Central Texas under cloudy skies Wednesday were held down to the 70s and 80s. Elsewhere, readings were in the 90s. Lubbock recorded a high of 91.

Wednesday's 4 p.m. temperature extremes were 98 degrees at El Paso and 73 in San Angelo.

Man Defends Refusal To Provide Crucial Bone Marrow For Cousin

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "I'm not the monster many people think I am," said David Shimp, defending his refusal to donate bone marrow that could save a cousin dying of a blood disorder.

Shimp, in an interview published in Wednesday's Pittsburgh Press, viewed his refusal as "common sense."

"There's no guarantee when doctors stick more than 100 needles into my pelvis that something won't go wrong," he said. "I could become paralyzed or develop an infection which could affect the rest of my life."

Shimp declined to undergo a bone marrow transplant needed by his cousin, Robert McFall, who suffers from aplastic anemia, a failure of the bone marrow to produce essential red cells, white cells and blood platelets, which help form clots.

McFall, a 39-year-old asbestos worker, lost a suit in Allegheny County Court last week that sought to force Shimp to undergo the operation.

"In our law, there's no duty to rescue someone or save someone's life. Our society is based on the right and sanctity of the individual," Judge John Flaherty said in his ruling.

Shimp, a 42-year-old crane worker, is the only likely donor among McFall's relatives and numerous volunteers tested.

McFall's chances of surviving a year are less than 25 percent unless he receives biologically compatible bone marrow, said Dr. Louis Pietragallo, a physician at Mercy Hospital, where McFall is being treated.

A transplant would increase survival chances as much as 60 percent, he testified at the hearing. Pietragallo described the transplant as a minor operation.

Shimp told the Press he wasn't sure he could physically endure the operation.

"I am just being practical," he said. "What if I become a cripple? Who would take care of my responsibilities?" Shimp is the recently remarried father of a 14-year-old girl.

Shimp said his father died of cancer and that his family has a history of heart disease. He recently spent 14 days undergoing treatment for a sprained back.

"I have aches and pains when I get up. How do I know I wouldn't have them more often after the procedure?" he said.

Publicity about McFall's case and Shimp's refusal has sparked an outpouring of letters to both — from interested donors in McFall's case and people either criticizing or supporting Shimp's position.

"It was my decision alone," Shimp said. "If he (McFall) were my child, and if my health were right, I would consider doing it."

"But he's asking me for a favor I just can't grant."

Board Favors Yellowhouse Canyon Annexation

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Planning and Zoning Commission Wednesday sided with Yellowhouse Canyon Addition residents who had asked to be annexed by the city because of their lack of water.

City planning director Jim Bertram said the commission favored the annexation request as the least onerous of two bad alternatives.

He said the commission reasoned that if the small southeast Lubbock County area were not annexed now, problems would grow larger before the area eventually was annexed. But by including the addition in the city now extra expenses could be avoided, Bertram said.

The annexation by no means will be cheap for the city, as the city must provide a comparable level of municipal services to an annexed area within three years.

Bertram said the city's cost to extend and connect water mains to the area would be $70,000.

A question remains of whether the city must purchase the existing private water

Hughes Aide Reveals Greek Job

LAS VEGAS (AP) — One-time Howard Hughes aide Robert Maheu said Wednesday that he had once been hired by a competitor of Aristotle Onassis to discredit the Greek millionaire.

However, he denied a report that he was part of a purported CIA "dirty tricks" campaign against the late shipping magnate.

Playboy magazine, in an excerpt by Jim Houghan from his upcoming book, "Spooks," said Maheu, then-Vice President Richard Nixon and now-Chief Justice Warren Burger all took part in the alleged plot to ruin Onassis after the shipowner had received permission to carry Saudi Arabian oil to the United States.

Burger, who worked for the Justice Department at the time, denied through a spokesman that he received intelligence reports on the anti-Onassis campaign. Nixon could not be reached for comment and the CIA declined comment.

Maheu, who operated an international management consulting and investigative firm and received a $500-a-month retainer from the CIA, said in an interview Wednesday that he had worked for Stavros Niarchos, another wealthy Greek shipowner and a fierce competitor of Onassis.

He said his firm did a study of the Onassis-Saudi Arabian agreement and concluded that by 1960 Onassis could be making a profit of $200 million a year on the shipments.

"He would have controlled more dead-weight (tanker) tonnage than the United States had under its command," Maheu said. "Here was a man in so much control, the question was where he would have gone next with his profits."

"He could have tied up the world, and our own government hadn't realized the severity of this."

Maheu said he had briefed Nixon on the study made by his firm and that Nixon was surprised at the projections showing Onassis' potential power from the oil shipments. He said Nixon told him to "do everything that can be done to stop it."

"As I began to make our report available, people became alarmed that the government, as an entity, had not been doing this kind of (study)," Maheu said. "Everybody had gone to sleep."

He said he presented the report, which included evidence of alleged payoffs within the Saudi Arabian government, to King Ibn Saud, who was "flabbergasted at the information."

Maheu said that the Arabian-American Oil Co. — which produces and sells the Saudi oil — had challenged the pact in court and that the king, displeased with the prospect of losing face if the alleged bribery in his government became known, allowed the defense of the pact to disintegrate.

About a month later, Maheu said, Onassis called and said he wanted to become a client of Maheu's firm.

"Needless to say, I was busy with other things," Maheu said.

'McCarthyism' CHARGED

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Tuesday the decision by the U.S. Senate to restore the right to deny entry visas to foreigners on political grounds is "a throwback to McCarthyism" and "insulting to Americans." "This step by the American senators indicates that in one more field Washington is returning to the cold war times..." Commentator Boris Orlov said the decision "offers an illustration of the hypocrisy of official Washington with its notorious campaign 'in defense of human rights.'" system. If it must the city's cost will be even more.

The police department would require an additional five cars and five men to patrol the annexed area, without spreading police protection thin in neighborhoods now being patrolled.

Bertram said paving in the addition is substandard, many of the 74 houses on the quarter section are substandard and the water system is "at best, not good."

A $5,000 investment in code enforcement would be required to rid the area of junked vehicles, vacant burned-out structures, of commercial uses interspersed with residences, piles of rubbish and of weed-choked lots, Bertram said.

Community Development funds to upgrade the addition may be slow in coming, even if annexation is not, because of requests for CD funds by other neighborhoods.

Bertram also said the city would have to foot the nearly $4,500 bill for dumpsters.

"That's just the capital estimate," he said. City operations in the area would run more than $112,000 annually while only $38,000 a year could be anticipated in tax revenues.

Bertram said that if the police department would settle for only one additional car and one more officer, the city could break even on the annexation.

But if capital costs are amortized, the city will be "losing money for a number of years."

"The net (gain) is a cleaned-up area which is a lot more conducive living environment," Bertram said, "but money-making it's not."

The annexation, if approved by the city council, also would have to be approved by the U.S. Justice Department to ensure that minority voting strength would not be diluted.

However, since most of the Yellowhouse Canyon residents are black or Mexican-American, Justice Department approval probably is assured and Bertram said the annexation might weigh in the city's favor when a predominantly Anglo area is annexed in the future.

The Planning and Zoning Commission will meet again tonight to formulate a recommendation to the city council on a proposed historic preservation ordinance.

The commissioners also will consider a change in the city zoning ordinance to delineate a zoning difference between convenience store gas sales and service stations.

The city council last week requested a change that would allow convenience store gas sales in a less restrictive commercial zone under certain conditions.

The commission also will consider changing the setback requirements for two-story apartments adjacent to single-family residential neighborhoods.

Zone change requests to be considered by the commission tonight include:

— Jim Borthwick, representing Ham's Food Mart, for a change from C-2 to C-3 for a convenience store gas sales north of 82nd Street and west of Abbeville Avenue — A.D. Brown, representing M.L. Gardner Estates, to change from C-3 to C-4 to locate a used car lot south of Clovis Road and west of Fordham Street — Audrey R. Fiel, representing Southeastern Plaza Inc., to change from AM to C-4 restricted to hotel/retail property south of 19th Street and east of Memphis Avenue to C-2 to construct a telephone company office south of 98th Street and east of Frankford Avenue

— John King, representing Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., to change from T

— Coney Coble for a change from C-3 to C-4 to place a used car lot south of 36th Street and west of Avenue A — Bill Cox, representing Bill Hatchett, to amend the site plan on property north of Loop 289 and east of Utica Avenue

— Jerry Bradshaw to bring a plat for lands north of 26th Street and west of Milwaukee Avenue under Planning and Zoning compliance

— Perry Killman to change from R-1 and C-2 to C-3, property located west of Avenue H and south and north of 82nd Street

Midland Sheriff's Deputy Fired

MIDLAND (Special) — Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith has fired a high-ranking deputy and a correctional officer and suspended without pay a rookie deputy following two separate incidents.

Smith said Capt. Pon Wileman was dismissed from the department, effective Tuesday, for the "improper transportation" of three males and one female prisoner. The four were picked up at various South Texas locations last weekend and were being returned to Midland County.

Jailer Lewis Acree also has been fired for making cigarettes available to some of the Midland County inmates.

A rookie officer, who was unidentified, was "given a vacation for five days without pay," Smith said, for not reporting the incident involving Capt. Wileman.

The incident involving Wileman reportedly occurred last weekend, when Wileman and the rookie officer drove to South Texas on the official business.

The officers stopped at several locations — including Huntsville, Rockport and Corpus Christi — to pick up prisoners who were being transferred to Midland for various reasons.

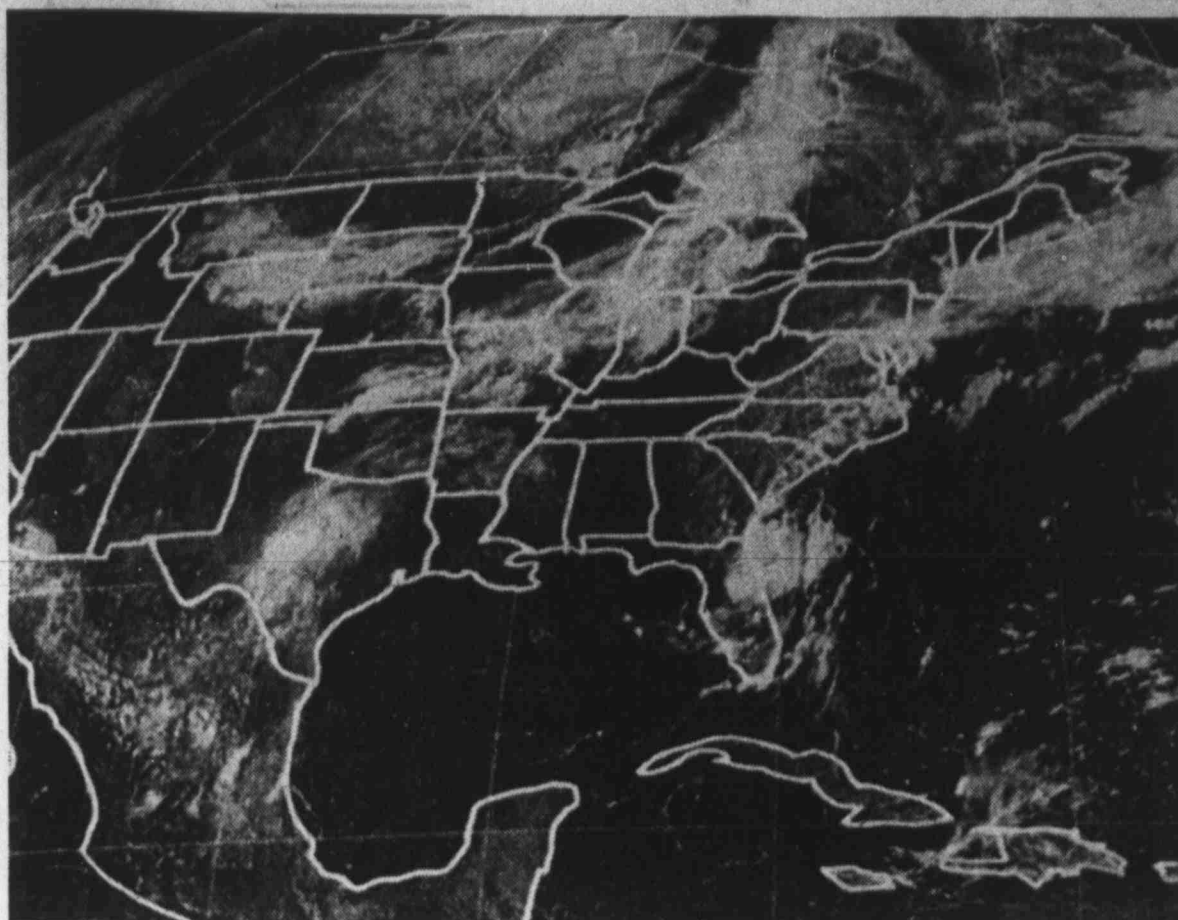

During an overnight stopover in San Antonio, Smith said, some of the prisoners were "not properly shackled." Failure to observe proper transfer regulations, Smith said, resulted in the dismissal of Wileman, a top-ranking deputy who had been with the department on his latest stint about "a year and a half."

Asked, parenthetically, why there was no female guard during the three-day South Texas inmate transfer, Smith said American Indians were granted citizenship in 1924 by Congress.

"Just because we didn't send one." He said it's departmental policy, however, for a female guard to accompany all transferred juvenile females.

Smith said he did not believe the summary dismissals had affected the morale of personnel.

Asked if he expected subsequent investigations Smith said "I don't know of anything more we have to do." Smith said the firings and the incident were the first such occurrences at the department since he assumed office about a year and a half ago.

"We don't have anything. We saw a house with two people on top of it go by," she said, adding that when she and her family heard the waters raging about 6 a.m., "We just barely got out before it hit and took the house away."

In both Medina and Bandera, Army helicopters plucked people out of trees and off rooftops.

The DPS in San Antonio said Ingram and Center Point, other riverfront communities, also appeared hard hit. Spotty communications made it hard Wednesday to estimate the property damage and casualties.

In Comfort, police said the Guadalupe River was 7 feet deep in much of the town. The football stadium was under five feet of water. As waters began to recede about noon, cars were left standing on end, tangled in lifeless power lines, and appliances floated downriver.

In Bandera, Spec. 4 Zachary Foutk, a crew chief on one of the Army helicopters, said, "We saw a big butane truck just floating along the (Medina) river. Lots of cars were pushed aside. Campers, trailers were all rolling along and mobile homes were all torn up. It was a helluva sight."

Bandera resident Claribel Lovelace, 80, said she stood on a chair for two hours with her nose pressed against the ceiling to escape the rising water until she could be rescued.

"My nose was against the ceiling and the ceiling is 8 feet, six inches, she said. "I just had a space about 6 inches to breathe above the water."

Lone Star Accepts Lo-Vaca Settlement

DALLAS (AP) — Lone Star Gas Co. officials say they will accept the Lo-Vaca settlement approved last week by the Texas Railroad Commission.

Commissioners had feared Lone Star would attempt to block the $1.6 billion agreement, designed to end contract disputes with Lo-Vaca's natural gas customers.

The settlement included a provision that allows Lone Star to retain settlement proceeds until all damages are recovered. As a result of its inability to recover past gas costs, Lone Star officials estimate the company lost $42 million.

The commission must still make a final order, and the Lo-Vaca settlement must be approved by stockholders of its parent company, Coastal States Gas Corp.; the Securities and Exchange Commission; and the Internal Revenue Service.

AN EDITORIAL:

Public Also Has 'Rights'

THIS HAS been the "summer of discontent" as far as public employes across the nation are concerned.

If the rumblings from some cities, and postal workers, is any indication, the heat of battle isn't yet over.

Strikes involving public service employes have come to be almost as dependable a feature of summer as heat waves and vine-ripened tomatoes, and there is a reason why. Many union contracts terminate at the end of the state or local fiscal year, which typically runs from July 1 to June 30 in many instances.

THIS SUMMER has been no exception, with the political, emotional and financial spinoffs coming fast and furious.

So far, salary disputes have led to walkouts by sanitation workers in Atlantic City, N.J., and San Antonio; by firefighters in Louisville and Memphis; by transit workers in Washington, D.C.; and by more than 19,000 non-uniformed city workers in Philadelphia.

In Cleveland, police officers staged a one-day walkout to protest the dismissal of 13 colleagues who refused to patrol a public-housing project singly instead of in pairs.

There is a reason for it all, although little reason behind the reasoning.

INFLATION AND approval of Proposition 13 have combined to harden the positions of both sides in public-employe contract disputes.

Aware of the mounting anti-tax sentiment across the country, government workers want to negotiate large raises and benefits while it is still possible to do so. By the same token, state and local officials are determined to keep spending in check, by reducing payrolls, if need be.

The confrontation brings into sharp focus two viewpoints which increasingly involve the average citizen.

PUBLIC-EMPLOYEE unions feel that their bargaining rules should be no different from those governing the private sector.

But several distinctions between government and private enterprise influence the negotiating process.

Government is not profit-oriented and therefore finds it harder than private management to justify reductions in the work force or changes in working conditions.

All that aside, the point is that when any worker takes a job with the City, or State for that matter, he knows full well he is going to work in an area where the safety and well-being of his fellow citizens depends upon him.

If at some future date, he decides he can no longer discharge that obligation, for whatever reason, he should give proper notice and quit. To stand idly by while fires go unthought, while citizens are unprotected against crime and while garbage piles up is inexcusable.

IN TEXAS, there are laws against walkouts by municipal employes.

Unfortunately, some, as was the case at San Antonio chose to ignore them. In so doing, they not only forfeit their jobs but their rights as responsible citizens.

That is the key element which separates the worker in private industry as opposed to those in the public sector.

Such employes may attempt to justify their demands and their actions by claiming that it is the only recourse left to "pressure" municipal management to meet their demands, that public pressure encourages settlements.

IT'S TOO bad. If those who choose to argue such things want a classic example of what happens to a nation and people who carry such practices to the ultimate extreme, Italy is a prime "for instance." As a result, the mail sometimes piles up in mountains, airport services are disrupted, garbage clutters the streets and organized chaos takes over.

The spinoff is a gnawing at the self respect of the people for one another, for the country's ability to "run the railroad," and finally for civilized society itself.

Is that the next step for us in America?

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

In Hopes Of Failure

AMMAN, Jordan—Although Israel's foot-dragging on a West Bank political settlement gets all the headlines, quiet political moves in Syria, Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) will soon pose new obstacles in the form of rising Soviet influence.

On the surface, Moscow has been ominously silent ever since last October when the Carter administration unveiled the U.S.-Soviet "joint statement" of cooperation in pursuing Mideast peace.

That statement aroused a firestorm of political resistance in Washington. In Israel, it was regarded as something not far from treachery.

But just a month later, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat—who yields to no one in fear and loathing of the Soviets—set out on his dramatic "sacred mission" to Jerusalem, Moscow, not a party to Sadat's bold adventure, has been publicly silent ever since.

THE KEY WORD is "publicly." Privately, the Russians have been playing hardball behind the scenes to sustain and enhance their influence in Syria, most militant of the Arab states on Israel's border, and within the PLO.

Since the October war of 1973, Soviet military aid has restored the Syrian military machine at least to its pre-1973 war strength, and probably somewhat beyond it. Moscow is principal purveyor of weapons, food and medical supplies for the PLO.

In addition, at least 150 PLO militants are brought to Moscow each year for full-time scholarships; that doesn't mean reading, writing and arithmetic.

These youthful Palestinian refugees, zealous advocates of a separate Palestine state, are taught the rudiments of guerrilla warfare, subversion and sabotage. They are the future hard core for Palestinian statehood.

BEYOND SYRIA and the PLO, the Soviet offensive in more peripheral areas is taking a traditional path: overthrow of the Marxist military regime in South Yemen and its replacement by a strong pro-Soviet government, together with massive intervention in Ethiopia and the Horn of Africa on Egypt's southern flank.

Jordan represents a special case. Syria, the PLO, Libya and South Yemen have been attacking both Sadat's peace mission and the U.S. for supporting it. Jordan's King Hussein is Washington's oldest and best Arab friend in the Middle East.

But Hussein cannot risk taking the Sadat-U.S. side in the current peace games because of his huge Palestinian population.

Still worse, Hussein was dealt out of any role in attempting to negotiate a West Bank settlement when the Arab summit-conference in Rabat, shortly after the 1973 war, designated the PLO as "sole representative" of the Palestinian West Bankers.

THE KING OF Jordan is compelled to play his few cards with great discrimination. If he backed a U.S.-Egyptian-Israeli deal on the West Bank, he would be charged with selling out the Palestinians and the PLO.

It was made clear to us in Amman that nobody here can accurately predict what Jordan's massive Palestinian population really wants on the West Bank: an independent state or a semi-independent "entity" linked to Jordan.

Referring to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, one of Hussein's top advisers told us: "Mr. Begin has left us no room for maneuver. We are not in the present bargaining game and there is no way for us to get in."

Accordingly, Hussein is quietly stepping up his contacts with a strange assortment of militant Arab states in hopes of enlarging his maneuver area as insurance against the unpredictable future.

JORDAN IS MOVING closer to Syria—and has opened a new connection with the extremist regime of Libya's strongman president, Col. Muammar Qaddafi. Indirectly, this gives Moscow a view into Amman it has not had before.

If President Carter's support for Sadat's comprehensive peace plan fails to move Begin in the right direction fast enough, the Soviet Union will find itself in an enviable position.

That is precisely what Moscow is bargaining for: waiting out the Sadat mission in hopes of its total failure, in which case the militant Arab states backed by the Russians will re-enter the game.

If Sadat should somehow ever agree to a separate settlement with Israel, Moscow would use its growing influence to line up the rest of the Arab world against Sadat and his American sponsors.

This explains why President Carter has courageously allowed himself out on such a long political limb in the U.S., alienating major power sources within the American Jewish community, to pressure Israel for concessions on the West Bank before it is too late. But not even the optimists here, if any are left, would bet much on his success.

JAY HARRIS:

Why Not Best?...

IF THERE HAS been any doubt but that Lubbock is now a metropolis, with all the name implies, the thought should have been dispelled in more ways than one of late.

Not only do we have forced busing, minority court challenges, street demonstrations, crime every hour on the hour and public dragways, we also have citizen tax protests and widely divergent opinions on how to run the place.

And while we can do without most of the aforementioned items, the tax revolt, if that is what it is, has introduced an element which may have as much impact on the City's future as some of the other things.

Having flexed its muscles, the chances are that we may hear more from the somewhat loosely organized group, now known as the Lubbock Property Owners Association, and its "leaders" on future public matters. Don't be surprised to see some political fallout from what has just happened in the months ahead.

AS ONE WHO has constantly urged more citizen participation in public affairs, we think what has taken place here is commendable, to a point.

Just for the record, in suggesting that people get involved, we have always said "responsible and informed" citizens. In other words, those who have done their homework and know what they are talking about.

This is not to imply that those involved in the latest movement here didn't. But, some of the statements issued during the heat of battle, so to speak, if made in a political campaign would have to go down as demagoguery.

There are those who criticized Mayor Dirk West for his somewhat "hard-nosed" stand on the tax issue, when Hizzoner was just doing his duty. And, in view of the City Council's latest action, there are those who will say "See, I told you so, the fat was there all along."

Just for the record, with some minor exceptions, that wasn't fat that made the 29 cents slash possible. It was a major change in policy on the part of the City in the way it handles its finances. It's a risky gamble which may or may not pay off. If it doesn't, next year you can look for a tax boost. Or would "readjustment" sound better?

ON THE OTHER side of the coin is the School Board and its budget.

While the Trustees are to be commended for making the changes they have, there are many persons puzzled as to why the leaders of the Property Owners didn't take a look at both the City and School budgets at the same time. It will be interesting to see what happens now.

Frankly, we want the best for the public schools and higher education in Texas. But, it is misleading to assume that better education automatically comes with more and more spending, especially at the college level.

Education in Texas generally is regarded as a "sacred cow." But more than one knowledgeable critic has said that it also can be the straw that breaks the camel's back as far as state finances are concerned.

ON ANOTHER tack, it is noteworthy that a large number of persons showed up for the Council's "Town Hall" meeting last Monday to "say their piece" for what's right about Lubbock.

No one should have to apologize for standing up for a community that offers its citizens "the best," if it can possibly afford it.

There are those who put down such things as Museums, Civic Centers, Libraries, care for the indigent, good streets and adequate parks—some of the extras as well as the necessities. But, putting such things down is a shortsighted and selfish attitude. Most businesses and industries look for those extras when picking a place to locate.

Any city which can keep its night spots jammed and the path to its "closest" liquor strip busy, ought to be able to afford a little "culture" on the side.

NO ONE SHOULD construe those remarks as putting down sincere efforts on the part of citizens to take a good look at what's going on at City Hall and elsewhere.

As a matter of fact, had citizens taken a greater interest in what has been going on—from Washington to Austin and all points in between—the past 40 years, there is a good chance a lot of what went on wouldn't.

The problem has been—and may still be—that those who profess to want to make changes, to cut back on government spending and taxes, in the final analysis may decide that some of the things the government does for them they don't want to give up.

In brief, it is at the national level that citizens must force changes or the local and state battles will be lost, to inflation if nothing else. In other words, those who would "tight City Hall" are kidding themselves unless they are ready to fight all the way to Washington.

TO SUM IT UP, what we have just witnessed is Democracy in action—with all its faults, and good points.

What we would hate to see is a growing divisiveness in Lubbock, fostered by those who are misled, who have personal axes to grind, who act from selfish motives, who don't or won't take the trouble to look at the whole scene.

Any citizens group which gets involved in public affairs, and its elected, appointed or self-anointed leaders is subject to the same scrutiny that City or School officials are. In other words, it's anybody's ball game. But, be prepared to put your name on the program and say what position you're playing and why.

Lubbock has grown and prospered because its civic leaders in the past have attempted to act in the best interest of all citizens. They have done so openly and without rancor.

For the most part, we feel Lubbock citizens usually have received their money's worth in city and school services. Those in charge must have been doing something right. Otherwise, why did so many opt to make Lubbock home?

IN SPAIN, gasoline at $1.60 a gallon costs about twice as much as wine, bear in mind.

Q. "Why did Thomas Edison regard the phonograph as his favorite invention?"

A. Probably because nobody ever before had come up with anything even remotely like it. Nor had there been any suggestion of such a thing in earlier writings. It was utterly original with him.

In the files at Yale University are the names of more than 7,000 persons who didn't go to school there but claimed somewhere in print that they did.

AN EDITORIAL:

Fence-Menders Bury Hatchet

RONALD REAGAN and Gerald Ford apparently will bury the hatchet long enough to promote the cause of party unity in Texas, one of the states the Republicans have targeted for special attention this fall.

Reagan and Ford will make at least one, and possibly more, joint appearances in the Lone Star state next month to stir up enthusiasm for GOP gubernatorial nominee William Clements and other Republican candidates.

Native sons George Bush, the former CIA director and U.S. liaison to China, probably will join the festivities, if only to keep an eye on the two biggest obstacles to his own presidential aspirations.

While in Texas, Reagan may also put in an appearance—if he is wanted—for Bush's son, George W. Bush, who is running for Congress in the 19th district.

George Bush defeated a Reagan-backed candidate in the primary runoff in June. Both Bush Jr. and his father were miffed by Reagan's verbal support of ex-Odessa Mayor Jim Reese in the GOP primary, and Reagan reportedly is anxious to mend his fences.

ART BUCHWALD:

What Should You Feed Hungry Sleeping Bag?

(Art Buchwald is on assignment for a few weeks trying to find out if there are any Cuban troops on Cape Cod. He left behind his all-time favorite colunns.)

I WAS VERY surprised to read in the newspaper last week that Mrs. Ford said her family was cutting down on their food bills as a way of fighting inflation.

The reason I was surprised was that Mrs. Ford has teen-agers, and there is no way under the sun you can cut a food budget when you have teenagers living in the house.

It isn't the immediate family that costs money—it's feeding everyone else's children that sends your food costs skyrocketing.

In the past most of us could get away with giving a strange child a glass of milk and a cookie.

But in recent years we seem to be sustaining large masses of youth, which I have dubbed, for the want of a better name, the sleeping bag generation.

LAST MONTH MY grocery bill for a family of four on Martha's Vineyard was $791. This is what happened.

Three sleeping bags showed up at the door. A voice from one of the sleeping bags said, "We're very good friends of your daughter Hilda, and she said we could camp on your property when you got here."

"I don't have a daughter named Hilda," I said. "What's her name?" a voice from another sleeping bag asked.

"Jenny."

"That's it," the voice said. "We're good friends of Jenny, and she said we could sleep on your lawn so we won't be arrested and tortured by the police with chains and rubber hoses."

"WE WON'T BE any bother," a voice from another sleeping bag said. "We have stale doughnuts for dinner."

I gave permission for them to camp out on the lawn. When my daughter came home I informed her that three of her dearest friends had arrived and set up camp.

"Boys or girls?" Jenny asked.

"How the hell would I know," I replied.

It turns out that sleeping bags require large amounts of nourishment.

While those of us who lived in the house could get by on bluefish or eggs, the sleeping bags had to be fed steak, ham, imported cheeses, French bread, butter and a good brand of beer.

EVERY DAY MY daughter, who never did find out their names, carried down provisions to the sleeping bags. The zippers would open up automatically and they would consume $60 worth of groceries at a feeding.

In exchange for the food, the sleeping bags strummed music on a guitar in our living room while I was trying to watch the evening news.

After the sleeping bags departed, a new group of sleeping bags arrived and said they were friends of my son Edward.

I probably would have been nicer except that I have no son named Edward. The nearest thing to it was Joel.

While it bothered me, it didn't seem to bother Joel. He took all the sleeping bags to Kronig's Grocery Store where they charged everything to me for a picnic they were holding with some other sleeping bags on the beach.

NOW THAT I'M back in Washington, the sleeping bags are starting to show up here. Many turn out to be friends of the sleeping bags who camped on my property in Martha's Vineyard.

If I refuse hospitality from them I am considered an ogre by my children, Hilda and Edward, or whatever their names are. But if I let them spread out on the grass I'm going to get another $800 grocery bill.

I'm sure Mrs. Ford is telling the truth when she says she's been able to cut back on her food bills. But I figure the only way she has been able to do it is by having the Secret Service boot all the goose-feather sleeping bag acquaintances of her children right off the White House lawn.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. I have been investing in stocks with the same broker for seven years. Because I am retired, I have bought stocks mostly for income. Recently, the broker called me and recommended a new issue which included both preferred stock and warrants. There was no brokerage commission.

I bought some. But I kind of wonder if the broker should have recommended this to a person my age, living on a fixed income. I now think his brokerage house might have had a hard time selling its allotment. What do you think?

A. I really can't fault the broker. Like most preferred stocks, that particular issue pays a high dividend. Based on the total amount of money you invested, the dividend on the preferred produces a high yield. That's what you're looking for — as you should be in your financial situation.

The warrants, which give you the right to buy additional stock in the same company, were included in the offering as what is called a "sweetener." Without the warrants, the new preferred stock probably would have carried a higher dividend. So, you are right in thinking that your money could have been put to work elsewhere, earning a slightly higher yield.

You paid no brokerage commission because the deal was an underwriting. The company which issued the new stock and warrants paid the brokerage houses. Brokers usually sell new issues to their best customers.

All in all, I can't see that you have any kick coming. You shouldn't hold those warrants — on which no dividends are paid — any longer than you have to.

Q. Where and when can I sell U.S. Treasury bonds I own? One is dated 1978-83; the other 1983-94. How long will these bonds continue to pay interest?

A. You sell "treasuries" the same places you buy and sell most other securities — through brokerage houses. If you don't know a broker, your bank will handle the details of placing the order for you. You can sell at any time. You'll get the going market price — less commission and what ever other handling charges are involved.

Because interest rates are now way up, the market prices of all bonds — including Treasuries — are down.

I suspect you're really interested in knowing when those bonds will be deemed and the U.S. Treasury will pay them off at par value. Unless there is a really big drop in interest rates — an unlikely prospect — it's a safe guess that both bonds won't be redeemed until their scheduled maturities. That will be in 1983 for the first bond you mentioned; 1994 for the second.

Q. Besides Social Security, my only income is the interest I receive from $14,000 in corporate bonds I bought through a big brokerage house. The stock market is down and a speaker on a television pro-

Conrail Gives Loss Figures For Quarter

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Consolidated Rail Corp. reported Wednesday a net loss of $60.9 million for the second quarter of 1978, more than double the loss reported for the same time period last year.

This year's second quarter loss came on revenues of $915.3 million, compared to last year's $27.6 million loss on revenues of $867.5 million.

The second quarter loss brings Conrail's loss for the first half of 1978 to $276.9 million on revenues of $1.67 billion. For the same period last year, Conrail posted a loss of $235.1 million on revenues of $1.64 billion.

"The financial results continue to reflect both the expenses required to address Conrail's substantial problems and also the continuing lack of adequate volume and revenue to cover its high fixed costs," said Edward G. Jordan, Conrail chairman and chief executive officer.

Revenue gains in the April-June quarter and in the first half of 1978 were largely attributable to recent rate increases, Conrail said.

But higher revenues were offset by higher labor and materials costs, principally for the accelerated locomotive and equipment maintenance and rehabilitation programs.

The federal investment in Conrail securities amounted to $198.6 million during the 1978 second quarter. This brings the total federal investment in the system to $1.55 billion of the $2.02 billion that Congress appropriated when Conrail was established.

LOCUST BATTLE CONTINUES

ROME (AP) — The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization has called for stepped-up efforts against the invasion of locusts in the Horn of Africa and said the battle will have to be fought through 1980. A report issued Tuesday after a three-day meeting of the agency's Desert Locust Control Committee said operations should be aimed at reducing locust swarms in Somalia and Ethiopia to a minimum before they escape to breeding areas by mid-September. The FAO has warned that the outbreak could easily develop into a major plague spreading from the Himalayas to Africa's Atlantic coast.

Commodities Scandals Feared

CHICAGO (AP) — A boom in commodity trading and recent changes in government rules could lead to "a lot of scandals," the chairman of the Chicago Board of Trade says.

Until last year, all commodity brokers were members of one or more of the nation's 10 commodity exchanges, of which the Board of Trade is the largest. The exchanges had strict capital requirements and other rules that were designed to protect customers.

In return for membership, brokers were able to trade on the exchange for fees smaller than the fixed commission rates charged to the public.

Last year, however, the federal government ordered an end to the dual commission rates, thus eliminating the economic inducement for brokers to belong to commodity exchanges.

As of Dec. 31, 1977, 120 of the 232 commodity brokerage firms registered with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission were not members of an exchange.

The non-member brokerage houses deal directly with the public, then route their orders through a brokerage firm that belongs to an exchange.

"I think you're going to see a lot of scandals, and a lot of people in the industry are concerned about what to do," said Ronald Young, Board of Trade chairman.

Young labeled the non-member firms as the "hot new game in town." The Futures Industry Association says that the value of commodities traded yearly has risen from $200 billion in 1972 to nearly $1.2 trillion today. The number of commodity salesmen has nearly doubled since June 30, 1977.

Young says most salesmen and their firms — including the non-member firms — are reputable and dependable.

Barry Lind, a broker and director of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, said it takes at least $500,000 to establish a company that is a clearing member of the Merc. But he said it takes only about $50,000 to establish a non-member firm.

"I don't think you can let just anyone who wants to become a broker," Lind added. "I don't think you can allow anyone who wants to become a brokerage firm either."

Lind and Young pointed to the collapse last month of TMI Commodities Inc. of Des Moines, Iowa.

TMI, a non-member broker, was forced into bankruptcy when an account failed to meet margin calls after a downturn in soybean prices. The company's 100 customers stand to lose as much as $550,000, according to Thomas Flynn, the court-appointed trustee of TMI.

Panel Rejects Local Aid Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposal for $2 billion in aid for two years to local governments was turned down Wednesday by a House Government Operations panel.

The program, called Supplementary Fiscal Assistance, was designed to replace a temporary anti-recession assistance program that expires Sept. 30.

The intergovernmental relations subcommittee voted the measure down with both its chairman and that of the full committee casting "no" votes. They said, however, that efforts to deal with city problems through more effective legislation would have high priority next year.

The subcommittee chairman, Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C., termed the proposal irresponsible and inflationary.

"The administration represented it as a measure targeted to help distressed cities, but it would allocate money to 70 percent of all local governments in the United States, including the wealthiest communities," he said.

Fountain said the proposed legislation contained a faulty formula that would have given relatively prosperous Greenwich, Conn., $8.03 per capita and financially strained Yonkers, N.Y., only $2.38.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the full committee, said "Everyone on the subcommittee seemed to be in agreement that the program had serious flaws."

"No alternative proposals or suggested improvements had been offered, so the subcommittee was in the position of having to send forward an admittedly defective program or hold it up so more work can be done on it."

"It isn't as if the federal government would be leaving the cities in the lurch by delaying this program," he added.

"Federal grants to state and local governments topped $70 billion last year and now account for 26 percent of all state and local expenditures."

NINE ACCUSED IN BOMBINGS
ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The government Wednesday accused nine alleged right-wing extremists, including two soldiers, of detonating more than a dozen bombs in Greece. Under a tough, new anti-terrorism law, the accused could receive sentences of life imprisonment. All nine men denied the charges.

Debt Limit Raised To $798 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation raising the legal limit on the national debt to a temporary $798 billion through next March 31 was passed Wednesday by the Senate and sent to President Carter.

The vote was 62 to 31. The House had passed it July 19 by 205 to 202. Without such an increase in borrowing authority, the government eventually would face a financial crunch.

At midnight Monday, the ceiling automatically plunged from its previous temporary $752 billion level to its permanent $400 billion mark.

That drop in the ceiling prompted the Treasury Department on Tuesday to suspend sales of U.S. savings bonds at banks, although the department's decision did not affect people who buy bonds by having money withheld from paychecks.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said a refusal to raise the debt limit would embarrass the United States — "the richest nation in the world refusing to pay its honest debts. It would be a foolhardy thing to do."

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., said the Senate action was "not a happy occasion. However, it must be done."

Curtis added: "It's a vote to pay the bills the government owes."

Convicts Flee Dentist's Office, Captured After Crime Spree

JASPER, Fla. (AP) — Two convicted robbers who walked out of a dentist's office and allegedly went on a six-day spree of kidnappings and robberies were recaptured Wednesday after an all-night police manhunt in nearby swamps.

Authorities said James Wilkes Jr., 30, of Valdosta, Ga., and Murphy Staffins, 25, of Chamblee, Ga., were captured in Florida about 24 hours after the robbery of a rural bank, just across the border in Georgia.

They were taken to the Hamilton County jail at Jasper, Fla., pending the filing of charges, officers said.

DUTY RULES CHANGED

HONG KONG (AP) — China has announced that tourists now are allowed to bring gold and silver items, educational films and books and certain kinds of medicine into the country without paying import duties, two Hong Kong Communist newspapers reported Tuesday.

The search shifted abruptly from the Atlanta area to south Georgia on Tuesday after two gunmen held up a branch bank about 12 miles south of Valdosta.

Their trail was picked up by bloodhounds early Wednesday, a state police spokesman said. The hunt then concentrated on the nearby swamps.

"All right, Jimmy, throw down your gun and come out," Chief Deputy Sheriff Walter Wacter of the Lowndes County, Ga., sheriff's office yelled as the two were finally tracked down.

As Wacter and other officers pointed weapons at the dense undergrowth, Wilkes and Staffins dropped their pistols and came out with their hands over their heads, said Sheriff Robert Carter of Lowndes County.

Officers said the men were armed with a .38-caliber revolver and a .45-caliber pistol, which may have been taken in earlier incidents.

Carter said they had stripped to their pants and shoes "and had been pretty well worked over by mosquitoes and yellow flies during the night."

Authorities said Wilkes and Staffins were among three inmates who escaped a dentist's office at Jesup, Ga., where they overpowered a guard last Thursday. They were inmates in the Wayne County (Ga.) Correctional Institution.

Still being sought is Jose Collazo, 30, of Columbus, Ga., who was believed to be hiding in the Miami, Fla., area.

Wilkes and Staffins are wanted in connection with the robbery or kidnapping of 10 persons in Georgia and Florida since their escape, according to Lt. D.E. Brown, in charge of the Atlanta police department fugitive squad.

Authorities said Wilkes was serving 20 years for robbery, Staffins was serving nine years for robbery and burglary and Collazo was serving 12 years for robbery and auto theft.

Mystique, Power Of Gold Last Through Ages

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
"O cursed lust for gold,
"To what dost thou not drive the hearts of men!"
"The Aeneid," Virgil, 70-19 B.C.
Gold. The dream at the end of the rainbow. The ring that ties two people together. The symbol of man's hope and of man's greed.
It is neither the rarest metal in the world nor the most expensive. But gold has a mystique that has lasted through the ages and has helped push its price to record highs in recent days.

"What's so special about gold?"
"It's a historic thing," said William Butterman of the Bureau of Mines. "It has a very ancient reputation ... It's very durable in a chemical and physical sense
... It's quite rare and was even more so in ancient times."

James Jolley, Butterman's colleague at the bureau, had another explanation.
"There's a lot of charisma about it," he said.

Jolley is an expert on platinum, which is both rarer and more costly than gold.
Worldwide platinum production in 1977 is estimated at just under three million troy ounces, compared to 38.5 million troy ounces of gold and 318.4 million troy ounces of silver. A troy ounce equals 1.097 regular ounces.

Platinum is selling at almost $250 an ounce, while gold — even after its sharp rise — is just over $200.

Platinum, however, doesn't have the same appeal.

"It's just a white metal," said Jolley, adding that gold's yellow color is unique among natural metals.

Gold is easy to shape and polish; it doesn't rust, tarnish or corrode. Because of its relative scarcity, it is prized as one of the few things which, in a time of soar-ing inflation and currency fluctuations, will always be worth having.

Most newly mined gold goes for jewelry and dental purposes. The rest of it is bought and sold, then bought and sold again, and again, by investors who swap paper certificates rather than actual gold bars.

The drawing power of gold goes back before the birth of Christ and it seems just as strong now as it was then. The Egyptian King Tutankhamen was buried in a solid-gold coffin more than 3,300 years ago; today, thousands of Americans are flocking to exhibitions of articles from his tomb.

Gold was, in part, responsible for the exploration of the Americas.

"Get gold," was the message Spain's King Ferdinand gave his conquistadors when he sent them to the New World in 1511. From 1492 to 1600, more than eight million troy ounces of gold — much of it mined by slaves or stolen from temples — came from South America. The Soviet Union and South Africa are today's biggest gold miners, but during the 17th and 18th centuries, South American mines produced up to 80 percent of the world's supply.

The discovery of gold in California and Australia in the mid-19th century marked another expansion in production. More of the precious metal was mined in the 25 years from 1850 to 1875 than had been mined in the preceding 350 years.

Exploration and modern technology have boosted production, but gold remains a rare commodity. The amount mined in 1977 throughout the entire world is the equivalent of just less than 2,000 tons. In contrast, the United States alone produced more than 600 million tons of coal in the same year.

The United States holds more gold than any other country — 277 million troy ounces, or 8,600.6 tons. About half of it is kept in Fort Knox; most of the rest is in mints in Denver and Philadelphia and government assay offices in New York and San Francisco.

In 1717, Great Britain became the first country in the world to link its currency directly to gold; other nations followed through the years until all of the world's money was tied to the gold standard.

In 1933, to prevent bank depositors from withdrawing money in gold, President Franklin D. Roosevelt imposed a ban on private ownership of the metal by U.S. citizens. The ban was incorporated in the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. That act, in conjunction with a separate world agreement, also fixed the price of gold at $35 an ounce.

In 1968, the world's central banks agreed to let the price of gold on the free market fluctuate. Three years later, after a series of complex financial developments, including a drop in the value of U.S. currency, President Richard Nixon cut the link between gold and the dollar.
The world monetary system was off the gold standard.

The move set off sharp increases in the price of gold on the free market, but the prohibition on American ownership of gold remained until December 1974, when Congress lifted the ban. There were predictions of a new gold rush, but the surge of demand failed to materialize. The price edged steadily up, but stopped just short of $200 an ounce.

HELP IN HIRING VETS

MESSAGE — I see a lot in the papers about the government attempting to get businesses to hire veterans. As an employer I am very interested in cooperating in this attempt. In fact, I am asking your help in hiring veterans.

We have contacted the Veterans Administration and can't seem to get satisfaction. We are a small company and do not have an organized training program. However, individuals hired by our company have an equal chance to advance in both pay scales and promotions regardless of their race, creed, religion or sex. We have been in business for over 30 years and hope to continue growing and prospering. I need some help from you regarding how I can hire some of these veterans who need employment. Thank you. — B.G., Houston.

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — I have asked the Veterans Administration to contact you and seek a list of jobs you have open. These will be listed in the V.A. Jobs Bank, which is available to all veterans seeking work. You may also wish to advise the Texas Employment Commission of your job vacancies, if you haven't done so already. TEC gives preference to veterans seeking work.

CONFISCATED IVORY

MESSAGE — A friend of mine told me that I might be able to get some help from you in solving a problem concerning the confiscation of an ivory shipment by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

My business partner purchased some ivory figurines in India which he wanted to have shipped to London. The figurines were combined for the shipment with some macramé wall hangings, destined for the United States. Our plan was to send the entire shipment to this country, then separate out the figurines and forward them to London. However, once the ivory was brought into the U.S., it was confiscated by U.S. Customs. We would like to get the ivory to London. Any help you can give us would be greatly appreciated. D.R., Houston.

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Customs turned the ivory over to the Fish and Wildlife Service which advised me that it was seized because the importation violated the Endangered Species Act of 1973. One objective of this legislation is to halt the killing of endangered animals in the wild by drying up the international market for them. The Fish and Wildlife Service, as a consistent policy under this act, seeks forfeiture of all imported items such as these ivory figurines. Forfeited items are devoted to educational purposes.

Muriel Humphrey Tells Panel ERA Limit Should Be Moved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Muriel Humphrey, one of two women in the U.S. Senate, told a subcommittee Wednesday that "plain common sense" requires extending the time for state legislatures to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment.

"Building a consensus on fundamental social issues is never accomplished quickly or easily," said the widow of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, who is completing her husband's term. She opened hearings by a Senate Judiciary subcommittee into a proposal to lengthen the time that states have to ratify the ERA.

Mrs. Humphrey, D-Minn., quoted her husband as urging ratification of the ERA in order to "allow women to take their share of responsibility for the successes and failures of the future."

As for herself, she said: "plain common sense tells us that we should permit the ongoing debate in the states to continue."

The ERA, which would outlaw discrimination based on sex, must be ratified by 38 states by March 22, 1979, to become part of the Constitution. To date it has been approved by 35 of them, but four have since rescinded approval. The validity of that move still is in question and the Justice Department has said it is up to Congress to decide. The states that have rescinded approval are Kentucky, Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska. Kentucky's action was vetoed, however.

There has been no previous request for a time extension on ratification of a constitutional amendment. Until some amendments earlier in this century, Congress put no time limit on the ratification process, although the Constitution gives Congress the power to set such a limit. The limit on the ERA is seven years.

House action on the request for an extension is expected by the middle of the month and supporters say they are confident of success. A move is expected to be made on the House floor, however, to require a two-thirds vote rather than a simple majority for approval of the extension.

Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., told the senate subcommittee he supports extension but believes it can only be done by a two-thirds vote. But Patricia M. Wald, assistant attorney general in charge of legislative affairs, said the Justice Department believes the deadline can be extended by a simple majority.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, added fuel to speculation that opponents will filibuster the extension when it reaches the Senate floor.

Garn said that if the legislation does not permit states which have already ratified the ERA to withdraw their approval he would "support amendments designed to protect what I understand to be the integrity of the amending process."

Among those in front row seats as Mrs. Humphrey testified was Phyllis Schlafly, a leader of a national campaign against the ERA. Absent was former presidential aide Midge Costanza, who had headed the Carter administration's drive for extension. Miss Costanza resigned Tuesday, saying her style of advocacy conflicted with that of the administration.

Mrs. Humphrey was not questioned by subcommittee members after her testimony. The other woman senator, Maryon Allen, D-Ala., attended as a member of the subcommittee.

Rioters Fired On In India Protests

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police fired on rioters during a demonstration in western India to protest the renaming of a university after a leader of the untouchables, the lowest of the Hindu castes in Indian society.

Reports reaching New Delhi Wednesday from the Western state of Maharashtra said one person was killed in the clash Tuesday. About 65 persons have been injured in a week of clashes between members of different Hindu castes. The violence followed a state government decision to rename a local university after the late Bhimrao R. Ambedkar, an untouchable leader and one of the drafters of India's constitution.

Petition Asks Tax Freeze For Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A new citizens group is circulating petitions asking that Houston city taxes be frozen at January 1977 levels.

Leaders of the Tax Protest Group say they will force recall elections if Mayor Jim McConn and the city council ignore their objectives.

More than 200 persons attended a Tuesday night meeting launching the petition campaign.

"We are tired of sitting around waiting for an answer to our tax problem. We mean business," Anne Wheeler, wife of a school teacher, told the cheering group.

Many in the group represent civic clubs in the northwest Houston area where city property tax hikes this year were as high as 400 percent.

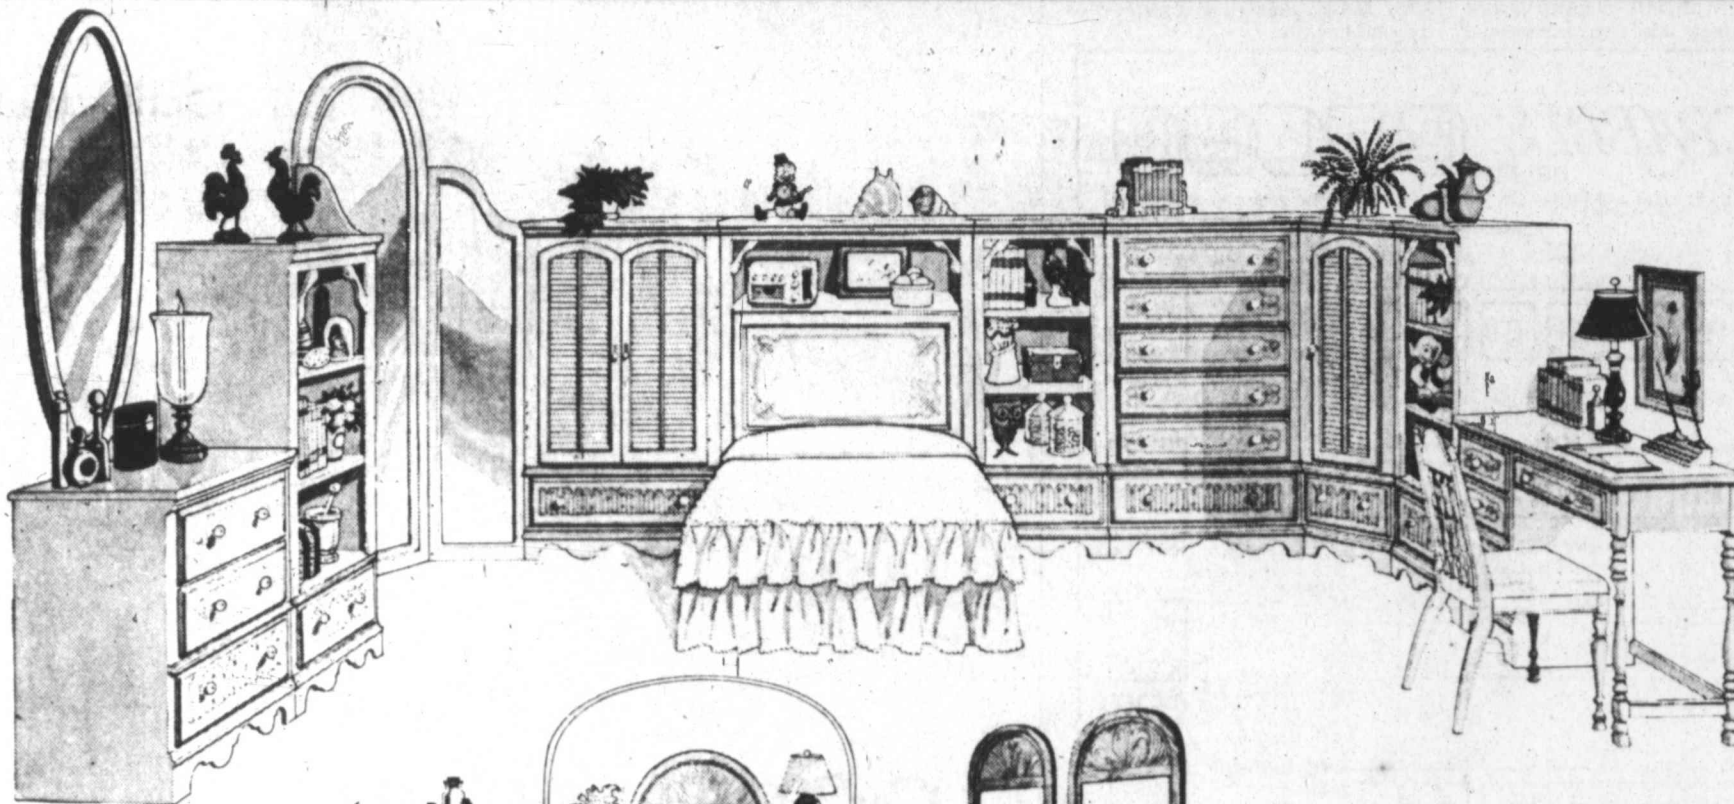

Two petitions are being circulated. A "Fair Taxation Ordinance" petition asks that taxes be frozen at the 1977 level until all taxable property in the city can be revalued. A charter change petition seeks an initial tax limitation of one half of one percent of assessed valuation.

Loophole Befuddles Regulators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators said Wednesday they cannot stop a Maine bank from issuing what it calls "loophole certificates."

The plan by the Casco Bank & Trust Co. of Portland, Maine, was devised to get around a minimum purchase requirement in the new high-yielding money market certificates.

A new law creating the certificates requires a customer to make a minimum investment of $10,000. However, the Maine bank said the law does not prevent it from lending a customer the money if he cannot meet the minimum requirement.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Co., in a letter to the bank, agreed with its position.

"Part 329 of the FDIC's regulations restricts the payment of interest on deposits. The staff of the Legal Division has reviewed the basic operation of 'Loophole Certificates' and has determined that as the certificates are structured they do not violate Part 329," the agency said. The letter was signed by acting general counsel Reford J. Wedel.

Bank president John M. Daigle had written the FDIC July 14 expressing concern about newspaper accounts regarding the investigation of the certificates.

The money market certificates have yielded higher interest than most other bonds in the past month because they are tied to the interest rate on 26-week Treasury bills.

Beginning Thursday, the certificates will yield an interest rate of 7.362 percent at commercial banks and 7.612 percent at thrift institutions.

MOURNING COMRADES — A New York fireman places a comforting arm around a weeping comrade Wednesday after the roof of a burning supermarket gave way, plunging six firemen to their deaths in the inferno below. (AP Laserphoto)

Six New York Firemen Killed In Roof Collapse

NEW YORK (AP) — The roof of a burning Brooklyn supermarket collapsed Wednesday, plunging a dozen firemen to an inferno and killing six of them. Grim-faced firemen, many with tears streaming from their eyes, took their comrades' places.

One of the men plummeted to his death after waving to his wife and children as they watched the fire.

At least 27 firemen and one policeman were hurt in what authorities said was the worst single-fire disaster to strike the New York City Fire Department in more than a decade. Some 20 customers and store employees escaped injury.

Twenty-three of the injured were hospitalized, at least one with serious burns.

"When the firemen were up on the roof — I'll never forget it as long as I live," said Joan Guinan, a badly shaken resident of the neighborhood in Sheepshead Bay, which separates the eastern tip of Coney Island from the Atlantic Ocean about 12 miles from mid-Manhattan.

The injured firemen either were on the roof or were fighting the flames elsewhere in the blazing two-story Waldbaum's supermarket. About 150 firemen had responded to the four-alarm blaze.

"It's hard to accept," said Mayor Edward Koch, who rushed to the supermarket. "It indicates how much we owe our firemen. It's just overwhelming. It's very difficult to talk about."

The dead men included William O'Connor, 30, whose wife and children were at the scene before the roof collapsed.

"His wife came to the fire ... and he waved to her from on top of the building," said Pat Halpin, a friend of the family. "Then the roof caved in and he was reported missing. That was the last she ever saw of him."

The other dead men were Charles S. Bouton, 38; Harold Hastings, 40; James McManus, 45; George S. Rice, 38; and James Cutillo, 38.

Later, Koch went to Coney Island hospital to offer his sympathy to the injured. Clad in a sterile yellow gown, green mask and rubber gloves, the mayor stopped at the side of the most seriously burned fireman. The man lifted his bandaged left hand, and Koch cradled it in his own.

The worst fire in the department's history claimed the lives of 12 firefighters in 1966 in the Madison Square area of Manhattan, at Broadway and 23rd Street. Ten of those victims died beneath a collapsing ceiling.

Richard Vizzini, president of the Uniformed Firefighter's Association, said, "Our union is outraged. For many months we have been warning the city of such a conflagration and such a loss of life." The union is engaged in contract talks with the city, and a chief demand is more manpower.

The Waldbaum fire apparently broke out on the second floor, in an area where an extension was being built onto the main building.

The store had just opened for business and a cashier, Virginia Marrone, recalled: "A workman came down stairs and said, 'There's a fire in the men's room. Get out of the store!'"

20 In Supermarket

There were about 10 employees and an equal number of morning shoppers in the supermarket at the time.

"They didn't know it was that bad," Miss Marrone said. "I picked up the microphone and told everyone to get out. Some people — would you believe it — wanted to be checked out" with their groceries.

As apparatus from 30 different companies came roaring into the quiet middle-class neighborhood, helmeted firefighters scrambled from their trucks.

They deployed about the blazing building, some climbing ladders to the roof to chop holes and ventilate the area beneath.

Dozen On Roof

"There were at least a dozen firemen on the roof," said a neighborhood businessman, Max Taretsky. "All of a sudden six or seven went down. A few — three or four, I suppose — got to the edge and went down the ladders."

Koch said that the deployment of men on the roof to ventilate the burning building was standard firefighting procedure, based on the judgment of superiors as to whether the roof was safe.

"Sometimes that judgment is erroneous," the mayor conceded. "In this case the roof gave in and the firemen were thrown into this pit. They were over the worst part of the fire."

Firemen Complain

Koch was told that some firemen had complained that not enough men had been dispatched to the scene in answer to the original alarm. The firefighters union is currently in contract talks with the city.

But the mayor replied that top department officials had assured him that everything that needed to be done had been done.

Firemen sent out an emergency call to the Transit Authority for one of its heavy cranes to lift sections of the collapsed supermarket roof in quest of trapped firemen.

A citywide strike of the Operating Engineers union had tied up all such transit equipment. However, the union cleared a crew to man a crane and it was dispatched to the fire scene.

Chile Seeking Proof On Trio

can order trial of the men here or allow their extradition. A number of informed sources and observers think trial here is the most likely.

Pinochet said extradition was a judicial problem upon which he could not comment. "But I must recall that to solicit the departure from the country of a person it is necessary to present proof. Until now, everything is based on presumptions," he said.

Pinochet expressed irritation at reports of his friendship with the 49-year-old Contreras but did not deny them. He said Contreras had been his student at the army war college and later his aide when Pinochet was assistant director of the school. He did deny that Contreras had been one of his advisers.

Late Tuesday, the Interior Ministry issued a statement asking the Chilean public to be conscious "of the fact that the formulation of charges does not constitute proof of the guilt of those to whom it is imputed. The charges ... will have to be properly proved before Chilean judicial power, whose independence and rectitude leave no doubt," it said.

Yantis Appointment Rejected By Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators Wednesday overwhelmingly rejected Hugh Yantis' appointment as chairman of the state insurance board even though several declared he was a fine man and well-suited to the job.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who appointed Yantis, said Yantis had served Texans well and he regretted the nomination was not confirmed.

The 27-1 vote against Yantis was a courtesy to Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, who portrayed Yantis as "play-acting and pretending" to be pro-consumer.

The Senate, however, overrode the bitter protests of Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, in voting 23-5 to confirm Dorsey Hardeman to the Texas Water Commission.

Tradition Cited

Traditionally, senators automatically "bust" an appointee if his hometown senator opposes him.

Only Sen. W.T. "Bill" Moore, D-Bryan, flouted the longtime Senate tradition by voting for Yantis.

Moore described Yantis "as one of the best appointments a governor of Texas has made in many years."

He said senatorial courtesy "went out the window" when Doggett was elected, because so many state appointees live in Doggett's district that he can dictate virtually all important state jobs.

Schwartz was not entitled to senatorial courtesy on Hardeman's nomination, and got support only from Doggett and Sens. Gene Jones of Houston, Bill Meier of Euless and Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi.

Recommendation Fails

Before asking the Senate to reject Yantis, Doggett first tried to recommit his name to committee but failed. The vote was 15-13, and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby ruled an absolute majority — or 16 votes — was needed.

Doggett hoped to bypass a vote on Yantis so the Senate could reject him in 1979, and the new governor would appoint a replacement. Yantis had said, however, he would foil such tactics by resigning before Briscoe left office.

Doggett said in 11 years as executive director of the Texas Water Quality Board, Yantis' policy "was one of non-enforcement and permissiveness." Under Yantis, he said, "non-compliance (with water quality standards) was tolerated and expected," especially by the "biggies" — major corporations.

Further Charges

As chairman of the insurance board, Yantis dismantled the fire marshal's office, Doggett said.

As time for confirmation neared, Doggett said, Yantis has become a "temporary consumer crusader."

"He's a real tiger for his beliefs," Doggett said, "but I don't believe a tiger can or will change his stripes."

Schwartz described Hardeman as "prejudiced and bigoted" and a schemer who as a senator "would do anything he could to you when your back was turned."

"If Hardeman knew how to steal it, he would steal it," said Schwartz. "Senator Hardeman has been guilty of arrogance, insolence and ignorance since the first day I met him. ... There's no truth in him."

Hardeman, 75, served in the Senate until 1968, when W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, defeated him. Snelson, however, supported his appointment as water commissioner.

Hardeman's term expires in August, 1979.

Briscoe now has an opportunity to appoint a successor to Yantis, 63, who has been insurance chairman since September, 1977.

By a 17-0 vote, the Senate confirmed 36 other gubernatorial appointees, including:

Good Neighbor Commission — Arnaldo Ramirez Sr., Mission.

Texas Youth Council — Ruben Schaeffer, El Paso, and Don Workman, Lubbock.

State Insurance Board — Durwood Manford.

Texas Department of Human Resources — Jerome Chapman, Austin.

Tax Relief Package Passed By House; Senate Action Due

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton bargained and cajoled and finally won a 113-20 House vote Wednesday for a package of property tax relief constitutional amendments.

House action sent the measure (HJR1) to the Senate for further consideration — possibly today. The final version probably will be drafted by a joint conference committee.

If both chambers approve a single measure by a two-thirds majority, the constitutional amendment will be submitted to the voters at the Nov. 7 election.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe said it looked to him like the stalled special session was moving again toward doing what he wanted it to do — use the state surplus to cut taxes.

"I am confident that through the legislative process, which at times is slow and cumbersome, members of the Legislature will send to the people of Texas and to my desk a series of proposals in which they can take pride," Briscoe said.

School District Plan

Clayton said he hoped the House would suspend its rules and expedite another part of the bargain — a $450 million promise by the state to reimburse school districts for money they would lose to tax relief in the next two school years.

The "school district reimbursement fund" bill was quickly introduced and whipped through the House Appropriations Committee Wednesday.

Clayton gained some liberals and lost only a few conservatives in the compromising that brought success to his constitutional amendments package, which twice had failed to win the necessary 100 votes.

(Rep. Joe Robbins and Froy Salinas of Lubbock and Jim Rudd of Brownfield voted with the majority in supporting the amended resolution and in giving the measure final House passage.)

A major change added language requiring the Legislature to establish statewide standards for appraising real estate for taxation and creating countywide appraisal offices.

The new provision embraces the essentials of Orange Rep. Wayne Peve-to's three-debated bill to bring about greater uniformity in property taxation throughout the state.

Rep. W.S. Healy, D-Paducah, objected strongly to putting the "Peveto language in the guts of the Constitution, where we'll never get rid of it and it will bankrupt every landowner in the state."

"Smarter Than He Looks"

"I'll tell you, he (Peveto) is smarter than he looks," Healy said. Peveto just grinned.

"I suggest you look at it again and wipe off your glasses," said the constitutional amendment's sponsor, Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad.

Chief provisions of the House-approved measure would:

— Drop the constitutional mandate that intangible property, such as stocks and bonds, be taxed.

— Require the Legislature to exempt up to $10,000 of the assessed value of each homestead from school taxes, plus another $10,000 exemption for the elderly and disabled.

Von Dohlen said the school district reimbursement fund would include $325 million to finance the $10,000 exemption for the elderly and disabled and a $3,500 exemption for other homeowners.

Agricultural Land Tax

— Tax agricultural land on its income-producing ability, not its real estate value. The school district reimbursement fund includes $125 million for this purpose.

— Exempt one car per family from property taxes.

— Limit the growth of state spending to the percentage by which Texans' total personal income grows every two years. Excluded from the limit would be spending to reimburse school districts for property tax cuts.

— Require an absolute majority of the Legislature — not just of those voting — to pass tax bills or cut exemptions.

— Mandate public notice and hearings before local governments can increase revenue from property taxes, including through reassessments.

Referendum Dropped

Dropped from the measure that failed in the House last Friday and Monday were provisions allowing voters to roll back property tax increases and setting up statewide initiative and referendum — the method Californians used to cut their taxes through Proposition 13.

Also cut from the proposal was a ban on state personal and corporation income taxes.

Clayton, who started his compromise efforts Tuesday night, said if the measure goes to conference, "I am going to appoint conferees that will stick hard and fast" to what the House approved.

The Peveto language might have tough going with the Senate, which voted Monday to kill a property appraisal uniformity bill.

Californian Proposes Do-It-Yourself Coffin

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — The opportunity for do-it-yourself handiwork has reached the final stage — you can get plans to build and decorate your own coffin.

Dale Zamzow is offering a coffin plan and instructions for $2.75. The price is not very stiff considering that the ready-built finished product might cost $4,000 and you would never see it.

How many people, after all, have a chance to choose the style and decorating of their own casket? he asks.

"You can have fun with it while you're here. It makes a tremendous stereo cabinet."

Zamzow said his design for a home-made casket is simple. "Anybody can do it," he said. "If you want to be very plain, you just need a couple of pieces of plywood and a couple dozen nails. If you want gold leaf, go ahead and put it on."

As a boy, Zamzow said, he lived across the road from a cemetery where his father worked.

"There was a funeral daily there," he said. "It keeps you from being afraid of dying. You see people being planted all the time. I used to go out and play ball between the tombstones."

Now a systems analyst in an electronics firm, he decided to market the coffin plans when he got to talking with some friends about the cost of living, which led to the inevitable observation by someone that "You can't even afford to die nowadays."

He said he has sold 200 sets of his plans after putting an ad in a San Jose newspaper, and two national magazines.

Begin Says Egypt's Conditions Endanger Existence Of Israel

JERUSALEM (AP)—Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Wednesday the conditions Egypt demands before more face-to-face peace talks can be held would put Israel "in direct danger of being destroyed."

Begin was responding to a recent statement by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who said further direct Israeli-Egyptian talks are impossible until Israel agrees the return of all occupied territory is non-negotiable.

Begin said the world now better understands Israel's position and described as "distortion" and "travesty" efforts to make Israel look like the main obstacle to peace in the Middle East.

The prime minister spoke to an Israel bonds conference a few hours after U.S. envoy Alfred Atherton arrived from Egypt and reported to Begin on his talks with Sadat. Atherton told reporters the United States no longer expects direct Egypt-Israel peace talks to follow Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's forthcoming trip to the Mideast.

Begin said the world news media have "suddenly discovered that President Sadat at zig-zags, from the point of view of peace negotiations, and that he proves intransigent, and that his policies may be an obstacle to peace. That is the beginning of the reopening of the eyes of public opinion."

Begin lauded as "sweeping and far-reaching" Israel's peace proposal, which agrees in principle to return of the occupied Sinai to Egypt and offers limited self-rule to the 1.1 million Palestinian Arabs in the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip. It calls for a continuing Israeli army presence in the West Bank and Gaza.

Until two weeks ago, Begin said, the world press reported that "Egypt wants peace, President Sadat is the peacemaker; Israel does not want peace, Israel wants land, and I am an obstacle to peace." That view, Begin said, was a "travesty of justice and distortion of truth."

The Israeli leader said he is convinced Sadat wants peace "but on his conditions."

If Israel agreed to Sadat's demand for total withdrawal, Begin said, the entire country would be within range of hostile artillery.

Begin said he would not get involved in a name-calling match with Sadat, who compared Israeli leaders Sunday to thieves.

"Our peace plan is no danger to any Arab state or to any Arab resident," he said.

Speaking of Sadat's offer to guarantee Israel's security, Begin said "it would be the highest expression of irresponsibility to rely on such guarantees instead of real security."

Atherton, after meeting with Begin, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman, conceded that the American "expectation is that there will be no talks."

The ambassador declined to characterize his mission as a "failure" and said Vance would continue to work for a resumption of direct peace talks when he visits Jerusalem and Cairo.

However, talking to reporters in Washington Tuesday, Vance said nothing new or dramatic should be expected from his trip. He is due in Israel Saturday and goes to Egypt early next week.

After meeting with the Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers in Britain two weeks ago, Vance said he hoped to arrange a new round of direct talks by mid-August at a U.S. outpost in the Sinai Desert, set up to monitor the Arab-Israeli truce.

Vance Mideast Trip Not Expected To Bring Direct Peace Talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — The United States no longer expects direct Egypt-Israel peace talks to follow Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's forthcoming trip to the Mideast, American mediator Alfred L. Atherton said Wednesday.

"Our present expectation is that there will be no talks," Ambassador Atherton conceded to reporters here after a 1½ hour meeting with Prime Minister Menachem Begin, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

Atherton, who arrived earlier Wednesday from Cairo, said he reported to the Israeli leaders on his talks with President Anwar Sadat.

The ambassador declined to characterize his mission as a "failure" and said Vance would continue to work for a resumption of direct peace talks when he visits Jerusalem and Cairo.

However, talking to reporters in Washington Tuesday Vance said nothing new or dramatic should be expected from his trip. He is due in Israel Saturday and goes to Egypt early next week.

After meeting with the Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers in Britain two weeks ago, Vance said he hoped to arrange a new round of direct talks by mid-August at a U.S. outpost in the Sinai Desert, set up to monitor the Arab-Israeli truce.

In Cairo, Wednesday, a top policy-maker er in the Sadat government said Egypt was willing to continue peace talks with Israel through the United States but would not bargain directly because Israel "is negotiating in bad faith."

Dr. Osama el Baz, who helped drafted Sadat's historic speech to the Israeli Parliament last November at the opening of the peace drive, said Israel's hardline policy threatens "the peace option in general."

In an interview with The Associated Press, El Baz said the only realistic solution to the Arab-Israeli conflict "must entail Israeli withdrawal from 99 percent of the territory of the West Bank (of the Jordan River)." Otherwise, he said, the agreement would not hold up because it would be unacceptable to the Palestinians.

Area's Backing Sought For Revenue Bond Plan

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Texas lost at least 21,000 jobs last year because its governing bodies could not issue revenue bonds to entice interested companies, a Texas Industrial Commission member said Wednesday in a hearing on a proposed constitutional amendment to give cities and counties that power.

Commissioner Jackie St. Clair of Austin spoke to 21 area city and county government and chamber of commerce officials at 9 a.m. at the KoKo Palace.

Fifty-five industries went instead to New Mexico, Louisiana, Oklahoma and other neighboring states because revenue bonds could be issued there to help them build plants, St. Clair said.

Bill Albright, executive vice president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, said directors of that organization had passed a resolution supporting the amendment.

After the hour-long hearing, George Miller of Lubbock and the Jobs for Texans political action committee asked that area city councils and county commissioners courts be solicited for resolutions urging its approval in November.

St. Clair and Jerry Heare, director of community development for the industrial commission, are helping conduct hearings in 23 Texas towns and cities.

They emphasized that the issuance of revenue bonds would not cause an increase in taxes. The bonds would have to be paid back with money made by the company, they said, and the guidelines would be constructed so that the credit of

City Tax Reduction Wins Praise

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The same group which last week was contemplating a recall of city council members Wednesday praised the council for proposing a 20 percent reduction in city ad valorem taxes and an increased homestead exemption for the elderly.

Lubbock Property Owners Association chairman Gene Medley said in a letter to Mayor Dirk West, "We believe that you have set an example for other cities, our state and the entire nation to follow."

"You have demonstrated that even in a metropolitan city, all citizens can voice their opinions and those opinions will be carefully considered," Medley said.

West said he was "tickled to death" to get the letter and said he felt the association had been helpful to the city by stimulating interest in the budget process.

In an all-day work session Tuesday, the city council proposed a $67.9 million budget for next year by slashing $4 million from City Manager Larry Cunningham's proposed budget.

The budget reductions mean the tax rate can be cut by 29 cents — from $1.41 to $1.12 per $100 valuation — and homeowners over 65 will have their homestead exemption increased from $3,000 to $10,000.

And city council members emphasized they will continue to look for additional ways to cut the budget until a final hearing on the document Aug. 24.

"As long as there's time, we should continue working on the budget," West said. "We should not close our minds to any ideas while there's still time."

Reduced services accounted for $740,000 of the $4 million shaved from the original budget proposal, including the elimination of brush collection, a 17 percent reduction in street lighting on thoroughfares and transferring the responsibility for uniformed school crossing guards to the Lubbock school district. Requiring city residents to dispose of their brush in trash dumpsters would save the city $568,000, but would eliminate 35 city jobs.

However, City Manager Cunningham said Wednesday the brush collection employees would be reassigned to other duties. See BUDGET Page 12.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We have a 30-year-old daughter who developed severe pain and redness in her right foot and ankle. After X-rays and blood tests the doctor said it was cellulitis. She was treated, and after two or three weeks the condition cleared up. We heard this can return and even enter her bones and become very serious. Can you explain what cellulitis is, its after-effects and possible complications? — Mr. and Mrs. C.W.

Cellulitis is inflammation of the skin and underlying soft tissue, usually from the staph or strep germ. Your daughter apparently had a superficial infection, which usually will clear with antibiotics such as penicillin. In more serious forms the infection can spread through the body. Bacteremia (blood infection) is a serious complication. In other forms, where other organisms are involved, infection may extend deep into underlying tissues. But I doubt, since your daughter's was treated successfully, that she need fear recurrence.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor examined my prostate and told me it was enlarged. He said it was a simple enlargement, not malignant. What is simple enlargement, and can it become cancerous later on? — J.E.

It means your prostate, for one reason or another, has become larger than normal. Doctors have an idea of the status of the gland by feeling it. One hard to the touch may be malignant. If it has a rubbery consistency, the chances are it is not. The only real test, though, is through biopsy. A simple enlargement may, but usually won't, become cancerous.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been bothered by a vaginal discharge for about eight years. Doctors have called it a yeast infection. I have tried creams locally, but after I stop it returns. I wonder if this is normal. I am 63. Isn't there something I can do to get rid of this problem besides the creams, which, as I said, just don't help? — T.F.

There is something you can do. After eight years I am surprised it has not been suggested. Often oral medicine is needed to control a yeast infection. You should return to your doctor and inquire about it. See my booklet, "Vaginitis: The Hidden Ailment," for an in-depth discussion of these troublesome female ailments. Send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My granddaughter's doctor X-rayed her abdomen to find out why, after five months of apparent pregnancy, he could detect no heartbeat or other signs of life. It was thought there might be either a tumor or a dead fetus, and water was accumulating. She appeared to be about eight months along size-wise. Three months later she gave birth to three healthy little girls.

Is there a possibility that the X-rays caused damage? And what is the likelihood of her having triplets a second time? — E.W.

The greatest hazard time for X-rays during pregnancy is during the first three months. I would anticipate no problems here. A more accepted method of detecting multiple birth possibilities in pregnancy is with ultrasound. I suspect that in many cases where pregnant women write me expressing X-ray concern, ultrasound was what was done, not X-ray.

I have seen widely varying estimates of such things as odds of a woman having triplets or repeating. One figure cited for having a repeat triple birth is 1 in 59 million! But don't bet on it, grandmother. For the first triplet birth, odds are 1 in 7,500.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 16-year-old girl, 5-foot-5, weighing 120 pounds. The past week after jogging an hour a day I've been getting sharp pains in my legs that start at my ankles and shoot upward. Is this the shin splints one hears about? — A.E.S.

Perhaps. Shin splints are pains caused by stress on certain leg muscles in the lower legs. They can occur from any unaccustomed vigorous leg exercise. They heal themselves with rest.

Is angina pectoris dangerous? Is there a cure? If you would like to learn more about this heart condition, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Those South players who opened with two notrump and found themselves as declarer at seven notrump or dummy at seven clubs reaped an undeserved harvest of IMPs in the Cavendish invitation tournament.

There were 12 top tricks at either clubs or notrump and the diamond finesse represented the play for 13. It was on and seven came flying in.

BARE LOOK

Peasant blouses are fetching, but not when they slip off the shoulder to reveal bra straps. Strapless bras work well here.

The bidding in the box shows how Jacoby and Pettis reached the proper, sound contract of six notrump.

Jacoby's two-notrump rebid was forcing. In modern expert bidding, after a two-over-one response, the two-notrump rebid is an absolute force and in general shows just a balanced 13 to 15-point hand. This time, after Pettis raised to the notrump game, Jacoby bid four notrump to indicate just what he did hold, balanced 19 or 20 points. Thus, Pettis jumped to six notrump.

Good bidding did pay off here. In this expert field, just two pairs out of 20 reached seven, while four pairs out of 20 stopped at a mere game. Therefore, those who bid six showed a profit.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Recently you gave very explicit directions on how to solve the problem caused by the splashing of the toilet bowl cleaner on the rug, bleaching out the color, and, in some cases (mine included), making downright holes in the carpet.

I did what you said, borrowed two crayons (blue and green since my rug is patterned) from a little friend.

First, I vacuumed the rug thoroughly. Then I took the crayons and covered the spots heavily, especially in the places where the cleaner had made the white holes. Heated up my iron, got some paper towels (very necessary because the heat makes the wax adhere to the paper and not your iron) and pressed the area that I had just colored.

My husband was astonished because he sat and watched this whole procedure.

My rug is perfect, one would never know what had been done.

I say kudos to your column! — Nanci Simons

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

My mother always kept her darning and hand-mending in a bread box that did not keep bread well, but which was too pretty to throw away.

One of my college friends did a real double take one morning during a vacation visit to my house when my dad called down and asked if he had any clean socks and my mother replied: "Yes, in the bread box, of course."

It was the "of course" that really got her! — Celin Schoens

Tune In Tomorrow

By JON-MICHAEL REED
NEW YORK — "One Life to Live" debuted on July 15, 1968, and last week the cast and crew gathered on the show's sound stage for a champagne and cake anniversary celebration.

The show's star, Jacquie Courtney (Pat Kendall), explained that since she's divorced in the story from Paul Kendall, she'll henceforth be known as Pat Ashley, the character's maiden name. To further commemorate Pat's break from the past, she's been given a new job as a talk show hostess and a new set to go along with her promotion from a newspaper women's editor to her new slot. And to launch the "Pat Ashley Show" on the "OLTL" show, Pat's first guest is none other than legendary TV figure Hugh Downs.

Courtney shared cake-cutting honors with "OLTL's" producer, Joseph Stuart, who proudly proclaimed that the show has trounced its competition during the last several weeks. In fact, a telegram arrived from a competing show's sponsor that read, "Lay off." Agnes Nixon, who created "OLTL" and currently head-writes "All My Children," forwarded her congratulations to Stuart for "beating you know whom in the ratings."

Couple Repeats Wedding Vows

Carolyn Jean Larson and Randy Lee Laird were married at 4 p.m. Saturday in the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Ted Dotts officiated.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Larson and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Laird.

The bride attended Texas Tech University. The bridegroom attended South Plains College.

The couple will live in Lubbock.

HIDDEN PICKLE MEAT LOAF

1 lb. ground beef
1/4 cup wheat germ
1 egg
1/4 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper
3 tbsps. dill pickle liquid
2 or 3 dill pickles, sliced lengthwise
3/4 cup grated Cheddar cheese
Chopped tomato, optional
Mix together beef, wheat germ, egg, salt, pepper and 2 tablespoons pickle liquid. In a shallow baking pan, press half the meat mixture into a 7x5 rectangle; top with pickle slices, then cheese. Spread remaining meat mixture over cheese; press edges with fork to seal loaf. Brush remaining pickle liquid over loaf. Bake in 350 degree oven 40 minutes. Serve with chopped tomato if desired.

Among the celebrants, probably none was more joyful than Jeff Pomerantz (Peter Janssen), who's been cast in the Broadway-bound play, "Semmelweis," written by Howard Sackler who also scripted "The Great White Hope."

Kathleen Devine (Pam Shepherd) winked when asked if she was "serious" with her current beau, Conard (c.q.) Powkes (Don Hughes on "As the World Turns"). Since Conard wasn't working the day of the "OLTL" bash, he joined Kathleen and admitted that their relationship bloomed last year when they played the conniving, kidnapping, murdering team of Alan Ramsey and Fay Chandler on "Search For Tomorrow."

Speaking of which, "OLTL" producer Stuart acknowledged that his show recently used heightened, melodramatic story devices to perk up the ratings. "But they were primarily used to serve as a springboard for more in-depth character development and to intrigue the viewers in the personal human relationships which we continue to explore long after the fireworks have died down."

The story sparks on "OLTL" have been exciting recently, but it will require tuning in tomorrow to see if the embers glow or expire.

SHORT TAKES:
MARK TAPSCOTT has recovered from a recent illness and has resumed his role of Bob Anderson on "Days of Our Lives." Mark will be the grand marshal of a Dayton, Ohio, air show this week.

STEPHEN BOLSTER, last seen as Mark Galloway, one of Susan Stuart's beaus on "As the World Turns," but probably best-remembered as Ted Clark, Rachel's second husband on "Another World," has joined the cast of "One Life to Live" as Roger Landover, the production head of Pat Ashley's TV show within a TV show.

JOHN GABRIEL (Seneca Beaulac on "Ryan's Hope"), who was once the opening act for Joan Rivers' nightclub routine, opened his own cabaret turn in Manhattan recently. Glad-handing John were his wife, Sandy Gabriel (Enda Thornton on "All My Children"), and his screen romantic interest Nancy Addison (Jill Coleridge on "RH"). Just for good measure, half the cast of "RH" and several "AMC"ers including Kathleen Noone (Ellen Shepherd) who is herself a former big-band singer, gave John standing ovations.

CHILD ACTRESS Martha Nix is being torn apart emotionally between her adopted parents and her natural mother as Janice Horton in "Days of Our Lives." Off-screen, Martha recently won the title of Little Miss for Orange County, Ca. Unfortunately, she had to forego further state competition because of her heavy schedule of being torn further apart emotionally on "Days."

JOINING the cast of "Another World" is Laura Malone as Blaine Ewing and Ben Hammer as Bill Simpson. Only weeks ago Hammer was portraying Max Chapman on "Guiding Light."

Tune in tomorrow to see where he shows up next.

Search Begins For 'Midge' Costanza Successor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The search for a successor to Margaret "Midge" Costanza as President Carter's chief aide on women's rights began Wednesday following her abrupt resignation.

"There will definitely be a successor named to Midge's position," deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said.

Several persons are under consideration for the job, he said, adding he assumed the post will continue to bear a $56,000-a-year salary and title as assistant to the president.

Former New York congresswoman Bella Abzug, co-chairwoman of the newly created National Advisory Commission for Women, said Wednesday that she was beginning to compile a list of names to suggest to the White House. She declined to say who was on the list.

Assessment Rulings Announced By Hill

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said Wednesday that one attempt of the 1977 Legislature to lower taxes on recreational areas for condominiums and residential developments was unconstitutional.

However, he said another move of the same legislature to let deed restrictions on such property affect tax values was legal.

The opinion was asked by Harris County Attorney Joe Resweber, concerning assessment of property owned by nonprofit associations for the use and benefit of their members. He said a typical situation was where owners of a residential subdivision or condominium complex provided a common recreation area. The common areas are held in the name of a nonprofit tenants' association which maintains the facilities and assess membership fees.

The attorney general said one provision called for assessment on a "nominal value" in respect to all property taxes for the total properties. He said this was illegal because the constitution says that market value is the only standard to use in evaluating property.

The provision "which requires that property be assessed at market value but that certain deed restrictions be considered, is constitutional," the attorney general said.

'Gator Comes To Call

INDEPENDENCE, La. (AP) — Joe Lee was sitting at home when the bell on his front gate rang. He looked outside, and didn't see anyone. But the bell kept ringing.

Finally, Lee's wife went outside and discovered that the visitor was a 9-foot alligator, ringing the bell with its huge tail.

Mrs. Lee called for her husband, who tied up the alligator with a rope and called state wildlife agents, who frequently are asked to remove alligators who wander into residential areas.

said she feels Miss Costanza's resignation is a "great loss."

"I regret Midge felt she had to leave," Mrs. Abzug said. "But she had been in a difficult position in recent months which had been of deep concern to those of us in the women's movement.... I think she did a good job in the White House. She was extremely helpful to us."

Miss Costanza delivered a letter of resignation to Carter on Monday. It became public Tuesday, after she had left for a two-week vacation.

Once Carter's liaison with minorities, women and various interest groups, Miss Costanza's position in the White House was downgraded three months ago. Her office was moved to the basement, her staff was cut and her responsibilities narrowed to women's issues only.

Her letter said that she has had to spend too much time and energy "discussing whether I have spoken out too much, what my relations are to your other senior staff, or where my office is located." She also mentioned differences in style between herself and Carter's closest advisers.

"If we could declare a recess and stop the wheels of government so that we could reconcile our diverse methods, we could perhaps come out ahead and serve the people at the same time," Miss Costanza said.

She said that was not possible, so she would "continue to search for solutions to the issues that originally brought us together in another capacity outside the White House."

Granum said he assumed that meant outside of government, and friends say she has not obtained another job.

In a two-paragraph reply released by the White House on Wednesday, Carter accepted the resignation, effective Sept. 1, "with regret," praised her work as invaluable, and said her "achievements have benefited me as president and the people of our nation."

Granum confirmed that Carter tried unsuccessfully to dissuade Miss Costanza from resigning. She did agree to his request to delay her departure for a month to help bring about a smooth transition, Granum said.

'77 Miss USA Clings To Tree As Flood Covers Dude Ranch

BANDERA (AP) — Kim Tones, Miss USA of 1977, spent most of Wednesday morning with some 20 other persons clinging to tree branches alongside the roof of a dude ranch camp house to escape flood waters that inundated the Texas Hill Country.

Steve Muller, a Houston businessman staying at the Peaceful Valley Dude Ranch, said Miss Tones was his stranded companion atop the roof.

"She had the tree reserved next to me," Muller said.

The Houston man and his two teen-age sons escaped rising flood waters with only their swimming trunks.

"Something woke me up about 4 a.m.," Muller said. "I put my foot out of bed and found out I was in six inches of water. I knew then something was wrong because the water should have been 30 feet away. It rose about a foot in 30 seconds."

Muller said he, Miss Tones and others climbed onto the main house's sloping roof, latching onto overhanging branches from nearby trees.

"The tree seemed about as good as any," Muller said. "We were just clinging to the branches. I was holding a little 1-year-old girl for one of the other guests."

Muller said the guests kept climbing higher and higher as the water rose around them. He said the water stopped rising only after they had reached the top of the roof, 20 feet above the ground. "The water was only about a foot below us," Muller said.

Seventeen-year-old Mike Muller said Miss Tones was a big help. "She was keeping us all awake and keeping our spirits up," Mike said.

Owner Art Kitzman said Miss Tones, a Houston native, has been a regular visitor to the dude ranch for several years. "She was really lucky," Kitzman said. "She was actually in the water and managed to catch the last tree before she would have been swept away."

Miss Tones, 22, her sister, Valerie Reissig, 25; Valerie's husband, Lee, 25; their 18-month-old son, Jay; her other sister, Patricia, 21; and her mother, Geraldine, were vacationing at the ranch, located near the Medina River.

William A. Tones of Houston, Miss Tones' father, said she told him "she got out of bed around 4 a.m. and stepped into a pool of water."

"I'm glad she's a physical education major," he said of the former beauty queen.

Tones said none of his family was injured in the ordeal. They were picked up by a helicopter at 10:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Miss Tones was reported resting at a private home in Bandera.

Cuban Official Says Oswald CIA Agent

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — An official serving at the Cuban embassy in Mexico City at the time of Lee Harvey Oswald's alleged visit there in September 1963 said Wednesday the man he met was not the same man who killed President John F. Kennedy.

Eusebio Azcue Lopez offered the testimony as part of a Cuban presentation before an international tribunal designed to show that the CIA assassinated Kennedy and tried to blame Cuba for it.

No concrete evidence was offered to prove either point.

The eight-member tribunal has been convened to investigate "imperialist crimes." It was meeting as part of the 11th World Festival of Youth and Students, which has attracted more than 20,000 persons from 145 nations.

Enrique Marimon Roca, a member of the Cuban investigating commission which looked into CIA activities in Cuba, said there was a concerted CIA effort to make Oswald appear sympathetic to the Cuban revolution. In fact, he said, Oswald had been a CIA agent since 1958.

The visit by a man identified as Lee Harvey Oswald to the Cuban consulate in Mexico City seven weeks before the assassination has been cited by some to cast doubt on the official theory that Oswald acted alone.

On Sept. 27, 1963, a man named Oswald went to the Cuban consulate in Mexico City and, according to the testimony, asked for a visa for a two-week stay in Cuba while enroute to the Soviet Union.

Azcue said he denied the visa to Oswald because Oswald told him he did not have a Soviet visa. After an angry exchange, Azcue said he ordered Oswald to leave.

Azcue was in Cuba at the time Kennedy was killed and said that, after seeing pictures of the assassin, he concluded that the man he had met in Mexico City was a different person.

The Mexico City Oswald was of "medium height, thin with narrow shoulders, about 35 years old," he said.

The Oswald who killed Kennedy had a "thick face and a straight nose. He was very young, in radical contrast with the hard lines of the face of the man who asked for the visa," Azcue said.

Marimon offered no evidence to back up his claim that the Dallas Oswald had been a CIA agent for five years before the assassination.

He described as a hoax Oswald's alleged membership in the so-called Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

Oswald was said to have been active in the pro-Castro committee in New Orleans in 1963, but Marimon said the committee had no office in that city and that Oswald's name did not appear on any membership lists.

Juan Felafel Canahan, a self-described Cuban double agent, said that one of the reasons the CIA wanted Kennedy eliminated was because Kennedy apparently had become reconciled to the existence of a communist state in Cuba.

St. Valentine's Massacre Wall For Sale

CHICAGO (AP) — If the idea of a recreation room wall built from the bullet-scarred bricks that served as the backdrop for the St. Valentine's Day Massacre appeals to you, George Patey will be glad to oblige.

It seems he's grown tired of it and is willing to dump the whole thing.

The rise to fame of the ordinary garage wall came on Feb. 14, 1929, when Al Capone settled a quarrel with a gentleman named Bugs Moran in front of it.

Some of Al's boys lined up seven of Bugs' boys in front of the wall and in the Chicago fashion of the day the gunmen — dressed as policemen — fired more than a hundred rounds of ammunition at their targets.

Patey, a promotion man from Vancouver, B.C., has owned the wall since 1967. He says that in the past he has turned down offers of as much as $1,000 for one of the 417 bricks. But now he wants to sell the whole thing intact.

Patey has tried various schemes to make money off the wall, but none of them has lived up to his expectations. He's gained a bit of notoriety from his investment, but not much money.

"I bought the wall just before I left for a trip to Singapore," he said. "I arrived there and was sitting at the terminal and I picked up the paper and saw my name on the front page of the Singapore paper."

Why did he buy the thing in the first place?

"Initially, I was handling the opening of a Roaring 20s-theme restaurant and I thought the owner might like it, but he didn't. So I just kept it. I really didn't know what I was going to do with it."

Jelly, Shirts Included In Recalls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recalls of electric cord adapters, grape jelly and sweat shirts have been announced by a pair of government agencies.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that Black and Decker is recalling its No. 86-210 extension cord adapters because of potential shock hazard.

The adapters were packaged with Black and Decker electric hedge trimmers during the spring of this year and distributed nationwide.

According to the Towson, Md., company fewer than 1,000 of the 200,000 adapters sold could have metal contacts protruding through the molded material, posing a shock hazard.

The adapters are orange and carry the number 86-210 on the outside.

Consumers should closely examine the adapters for any metal showing through the outside surface. Those with metal showing will be replaced by any Black and Decker service center.

Persons with questions may call Black and Decker collect at 301/828-2955.

The safety commission also disclosed the recall of some women's sweat shirts made in Hong Kong for Huk-A-Poo Sportswear Inc., which may not meet federal flammability standards.

His wax museum with gangster figures poised before the wall was a bust. The wall failed, too, as a curiosity at a shopping center and a nightclub.

Patey got wind of the wall and its promotional potential when the S.M.C. Cartage Co. garage on North Clark Street was being wrecked.

"It was a very spontaneous thing. I saw the announcement in the Vancouver paper at 8 a.m. and it was before noon that I contacted Mayor (Richard J.) Daley's office. I guess I just beat everyone to it."

Daley's office put Patey in touch with the wrecking company.

"They tore down the wall where the Moran-boys had been lined up, and shipped it to me wrapped like fine china. It took seven barrels, one for each guy killed," Patey said.

The bricks have been whitewashed many times, and some aren't even original, but still the wall fascinates many people, he said.

Now, the wall is dismantled and in storage.

"It's taken so much of my time I haven't been able to look after my other interests," Patey said.

He won't say what he originally paid for the wall, "because its not like a work of art, but it's certainly individual."

Real Equality Means Paddle More Girls

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — The federal government, after giving the back of its hand to the discipline program in the Bellevue School District, is denying that its order means more girls should be spanked.

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare found that in 1975 teachers in the district paddled 30 boys and only two girls. It ordered steps taken to eliminate sex discrimination.

Shirley Amiel, an anti-child-abuse activist who initiated the probe into sex discrimination in the district, said the order means teachers should find more girls to spank, even though school and HEW officials deny it.

"It's pretty bizarre," she said. "It's a turn I could not have foreseen. The government says, 'Beat the same number of girls' bodies as you do boys' bodies."

Mrs. Amiel had asked the federal agency to investigate sex discrimination in discipline, curriculum, counseling, employment and athletics.

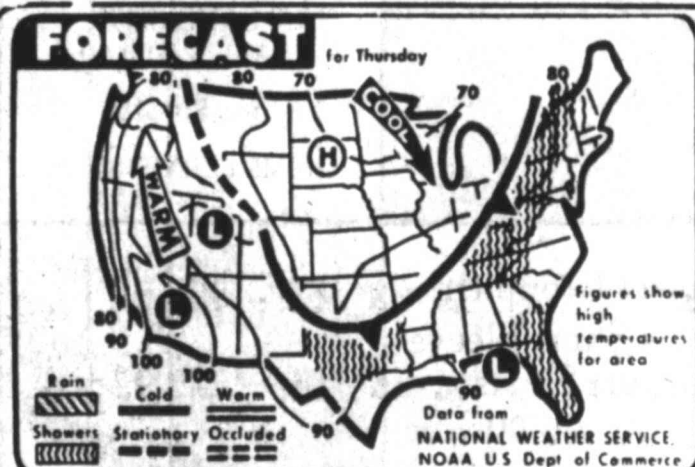

The findings, sent to the district last Friday, indicated that there was sex discrimination in discipline, course offerings, counseling services and athletics, although the district's affirmative action efforts in employment were found to be satisfactory.

If the district does not correct the situation in three months, it will lose its federal funding. Some $850,000 was received this year.

Valerie Carlson, Bellevue affirmative action officer, said the district will correct the problems. "But we're not going to go round up girls to spank in order to comply," she added.

Ron Lux, an HEW spokesman, said the findings mean "that if a boy and a girl are misbehaving and a teacher feels that paddling is appropriate, both should be punished equally."

"We're not condoning corporal punishment, we're just saying it should be applied equally and equitably," he said. "And to reach compliance does not mean that they need to paddle more girls."

WEATHER FORECAST — Wide areas of showers are forecast today over Florida and Georgia, and part of Texas, according to the National Weather Service. More showers are predicted from Tennessee north into New York State. The weather will be generally hot, but a little cooler in the north central part of the nation. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge Okays Postal Contract Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge, citing the nation's desire to avoid a mail strike, cleared the way Wednesday for the largest postal union to begin ratification of a controversial new contract.

Officials of the American Postal Workers Union, anxious to complete a ratification to end threats of wildcat walkouts, said ballots would be mailed to 300,000 postal workers Thursday.

The union's president, Emmet Andrews, said that despite calls by local union leaders for the contract's rejection, he remained confident the proposed agreement would be ratified.

The ballots are to be returned by Aug. 23, and the results should be tabulated within four days, union officials said.

In the two weeks since a tentative agreement was reached, postal workers in New Jersey and California have staged temporary wildcat walkouts in protest, local union groups have rejected the contract in a variety of non-binding votes and some local leaders have threatened to lead new strikes, which are barred by federal law.

The union resumed preparations for the ratification after U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker refused a request by a union dissident to block the vote on the grounds that it would violate the union's constitution.

John Richards, president of the Pittsburgh area local, contended that a rejection of the contract last week by a union advisory committee required union leaders to return to the bargaining table with the U.S. Postal Service rather than submit the agreement to the rank-and-file.

But Parker ruled that the decision to send the contract to the membership was "fair and reasonable."

"If the referendum indicates approval of the tentative contract, it will increase the possibility of labor peace," the judge said. "If the referendum indicates disapproval, the mandate for further bargaining or arbitration will be clearer."

"The public interest in uninterrupted mail service is obvious," he said, adding that a rank-and-file vote "would further the public interest more than an injunction restraining such a referendum."

Man Charged In Brownsville Death

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A Matamoros, Mexico, man was charged Wednesday with capital murder in connection with the death of a local girl whose body was found July 25 in a wooded area here.

Justice of the Peace Ed Sarabia ordered Alberto Hernandez, 21, held without bond on the murder charge. Bond of $50,000 was set on a charge of attempted rape stemming from another incident.

Diana Zarate, 14, was reported missing July 3. Her decomposed body was discovered near a local park.

Detective Lt. Pat Tamayo said Hernandez showed up at police headquarters Tuesday to ask why investigators had been to his home to ask questions. Tamayo said Hernandez was arrested when he identified himself.

Initial investigation concerning the death failed to turn up many clues. However, a local juvenile officer began looking into several recent reports of attempted rapes in the city.

A 13-year-old girl who looked through police mug shots identified Hernandez as her assailant, Tamayo said.

Police theorize Miss Zarate's assailant tried to rape her. She was strangled with her belt.

Administration Asks Moderate-Income Tax Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration asked Congress Wednesday to rewrite a proposed $16.2 billion tax cut bill so that it would give more tax relief to people with moderate incomes.

The administration also wants capital gains to be hit harder by taxes than is proposed in a tax cut bill approved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal was seeking agreement on amendments to channel more of the bill's benefits to taxpayers with incomes less than $40,000 and stiffen the proposed alternative tax on capital gains.

The percentage of basic tax relief in the committee-approved bill rises sharply with income. The benefit for an average family of four with $15,000 income and deductible expenses of 23 percent would be $77, for one with $20,000 income $146 and for one with $40,000 income $486.

In a party-line vote, the House Budget Committee rejected a Republican move Wednesday to leave room in the 1979 budget for the GOP's version of the tax bill, which would cut taxes by one-third over three years.

The committee agreed to a revenue figure of $446.8 billion. That would accommodate a tax cut as high as $19.4 billion in calendar 1979.

The committee's chairman, Robert Gialmo, D-Conn., said he favors a tax cut considerably lower than that figure. But the budget should reflect the reality that Congress will probably expand the $16.2 billion cut the Ways and Means Committee has approved.

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., sought to have the budget accommodate a reduction of $28 billion, which would cover the GOP plan. Conable was defeated, 17 to 8.

It was not known exactly what the administration had in mind for restructuring the individual income tax cuts, but the Blumenthal amendments were said to include a revision of the proposed new tax rates to make them more favorable to the lower brackets.

The administration also contends that committee-approved changes in the capital gains tax also benefit predominantly higher-income taxpayers.

The administration wants taxpayers to be allowed to subtract five percent of their Social Security taxes from the income taxes they owe — an effort to soften the blow of increased Social Security taxes that take effect Jan. 1. The committee-approved tax cut also would take effect Jan. 1.

Another proposed amendment would bid for labor support. It would increase the present $35-a-person general tax credit to $100. The AFL-CIO wanted an increase to $150. The committee-approved bill would abolish the credit, but instead raise the personal exemption a taxpayer is allowed to take for himself, his spouse and each dependent from $750 to $1,000.

A tax credit is a reduction of the amount of taxes paid to the government after all deductions have been allowed.

The administration also was reported trying to work out an amendment to increase a proposed alternative tax on capital gains. The committee bill would institute such a tax as a substitute for the so-called minimum tax on the rich.

The minimum tax is a 15 percent levy aimed at making sure that wealthier persons pay some amount of tax in cases where they have found ways of paying little or no tax.

Capital gains are profits from the sale of assets, such as property or stocks, that have been held at least a year.

The committee voted to exempt capital gains from the 15 percent minimum tax. Carter strongly opposed the capital gains exemption.

As a minor concession to the administration, the committee agreed to create a new alternative tax of 10 percent, which would apply to the exempted capital gains and would be paid only if it exceeded the taxpayer's regular taxes.

In practice, such a tax would apply only to a few persons with heavily sheltered incomes — incomes on which little or no taxes are paid — and yield an estimated total of only $120 million for the treasury.

Since the tax-writing committee has finished its work on the bill, any amendments would have to be offered on the floor when the House debates the measure. Leaders hope this will be about Aug. 15.

Life Support Battle Continues

HOUSTON (AP) — A court appointed attorney asked a juvenile court judge Wednesday to continue an order preventing termination of life support equipment that is keeping a 12-year-old girl.

The Harris County Welfare Unit, however, asked Judge W.H. Miller to terminate the county's responsibility for the child and, in effect, return custody to the parents.

Miller indicated he would rule during an afternoon session.

A temporary injunction against removal of the support systems expired just minutes before the morning hearing began.

Masil Gray has been in extremely critical condition after suffering smoke inhalation in a July 16 fire at the welfare unit's Burnett-Bayland Home.

Miller postponed a Monday hearing until Wednesday after lawyers advised him the child could die at any time in that brain waves continued to register a flat response and her kidney and liver functions had deteriorated.

The county became Masil's legal guardian July 3 after Nora Nixon, the mother, testified at a hearing the runaway daughter was in need of counseling.

Mrs. Nixon and Orville Gray, the child's father, were in court Wednesday.

George Ford, attorney for the welfare unit, argued Wednesday there now is no real issue before the court.

"We feel privacy of the family is a consideration and no one is attempting at this time to terminate life support procedures."

Attorneys for the parents, however, backed an argument by Ramona John, the lawyer appointed by the court to represent the child.

Lawmaker Excoriates Bar Exam

AUSTIN (AP) — Law school graduates must go through a "Mickey Mouse procedure" and undue waiting to take the state bar exam, a state senator complained Wednesday.

"I don't know of another profession where you have to mill around for nine months at clerk's wages, all at the convenience of the licensing agency," said Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz, D-Galveston, at a Texas Sunset Advisory Commission meeting.

The panel reviewed staff reports on the Texas Turnpike Authority and the Texas Board of Law Examiners, which prepares and grades bar exams. Unless the 1979 Legislature extends the board, it will terminate Aug. 31, 1979.

The advisory commission will recommend to the Legislature whether the board and 14 other agencies should be eliminated, changed or continued.

Summer law school graduates must wait until the following February to take the bar exam, Schwartz said, because the examining board eliminated October and November tests.

A prospective lawyer also must waste time obtaining an attorney's letter of recommendation before he can take the bar, said Schwartz, a lawyer.

"It's a Mickey Mouse procedure," he said. "It's a waste of time for the attorney who writes it and a waste of time for the student who has to get it."

A commission staff report recommends that the $20,000 annual compensation to the five board members be reduced to their actual expenses. The board members were paid at $25.98 per hour in 1977, compared to the average hourly pay of $22.79 for judges.

The staff also recommended making the open meetings and open records acts applicable to the board, appointing non-lawyers to the board and dividing the law exam into parts.

Hill Vows To Fight EPA Houston Probe

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said Wednesday he will fight the Environmental Protection Agency in court if it insists on basing Houston pollution controls on traffic reduction.

The Democratic nominee for governor commented on an EPA study indicating automobile use in the Houston area must be reduced 20 percent below 1987 forecasts if federal clean air standards are to be met.

"That's an impossible goal," Hill said. "No city which is growing at the rate of something like 1,000 persons a week can hold its traffic levels constant, much less reduce them 20 percent, without a tremendous sacrifice in growth."

Hill said everything possible will be done to clean up the air in Texas.

Mercy Vessel's Crew Aids Vietnamese Refugees

By The Associated Press
Somewhere in the South China Sea, a converted Navy landing ship waits to do the job no government wants.

A fishing boat arrives crowded with Vietnamese fleeing their homeland. Now the crew aboard the old Navy vessel goes to work. A sick child is treated. Food is given.

The tiny fishing boat then sails on, becoming just a speck on the western horizon bound for any place that will let its passengers land. And on the mercy ship they debate whether the little craft and its human cargo will make it.

"Officially, we couldn't tell them what direction to take, or even point them the right way," explains W. Stanley Mooneyham, president of World Vision International, the humanitarian organization that chartered the landing ship to use as a floating aid center for Vietnamese boat people fleeing across the South China Sea.

"The neighboring countries barely tolerate our activities because they are unhappy about accepting the refugees. There seems to be a conspiracy against the boat people. It is ludicrous that human life is held so cheaply," Mooneyham said in an interview after returning from Southeast Asia.

Since the World Vision ship began its $50,000-a-month mercy mission in early July, President Carter has ordered American flag carriers to pick up Vietnamese refugees found in distress at sea. Ship owners are being assured that the United States will take the responsibility for their resettlement. No refugees are known to have been picked up yet.

Mooneyham said this was one step toward "changing the inhumanity that since 1975 has encouraged international shipping to pass by Vietnamese refugees without helping them, actions unique in the history of western civilization."

Much more is needed, he asserted, "because we know large numbers of refugees are drowning at sea." Accurate figures on human losses are not available because the boat people set out in secrecy.

But eyewitness reports from surviving boat people suggest that up to 50 percent drown. Some of the 1,800 refugees who arrived in Malaysia one recent week reported that 200 of their number drowned en route.

Since the end of the Vietnam war in 1975 a total of 40,000 boat refugees have landed in Thailand, Malaysia, the Philippines, Indonesia and Australia, most of them in the past 12 months. There are 21,000 waiting in camps for resettlement, and the flow continues unabated.

Mooneyham said that when he broached his idea for a mercy ship in January and February "all five governments in the area, the United States and the United Nations officially discouraged me. One official said, 'God, don't give them enough gas to get to Australia.'"

Mooneyham said, "I got the feeling that the more we saved, the bigger the problem for the world. But I knew the boat people were not vicious people. They just wanted to live in freedom."

World Vision, a Christian charity that gets its money from donations, located an old World War II Navy landing ship that had been used to haul supplies between Singapore, Saigon and Hong Kong.

The organization leased it and added portable living units to provide a first aid clinic and living quarters for two Chinese nurses, an Indian doctor, an American captain — Burt Singleton, from Palos Verdes, Calif. — and a crew of nine.

A mechanic and an interpreter rounded out the ship's complement, and it has been roaming the South China Sea about 100 miles off Vietnam, traveling a course known to be favored by the boat people.

"We have family food packs aboard with 10 days supply, charcoal braziers, and gasoline," Mooneyham said. "When the boats leave Vietnam they are as lightly supplied as possible because of the risk of detection."

"We give the sick first aid, and we provide a compass for ships that need it."

Officials were concerned about the mercy mission because most Asian points barred vessels arriving with Vietnamese refugees. "We will pick up people if we have to," said Mooneyham, but so far they have gotten by with aid and assistance to the boats they encountered at sea.

Mooneyham said, "What we need to do is internationalize this problem. I believe America has a unique and specific responsibility to these debris of the war, but so does mankind. To abandon these boat people now is an unconscionable act."

South Asia Nations Set Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five Southeast Asian countries, once considered "dominoes" by the United States will discuss a new relationship, based more on trade than on weapons, in a two-day foreign ministers' conference beginning here Thursday.

The five — Thailand, the Philippines, Indonesia, Singapore and Malaysia — are members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which has in some respects taken the place of the defunct Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

They stand as refutations of the "domino theory," which held that if Vietnam or Laos fell to communism, the rest of Southeast Asia would surely follow.

Three years after the end of the Indochina War, the ASEAN nations have thriving economies, and the strife in Southeast Asia is among the communist countries. China is quarreling with the Soviet Union and with Vietnam, which is at war with Cambodia.

"I don't think anyone accurately predicted what has actually happened," said one senior American official at a background briefing this week on the ASEAN conference. He asked not to be identified.

"After 20 years of excessive involvement (in Southeast Asia) and three years of traumatic aversion (following the fall of South Vietnam), we hope these meetings will establish an appropriate level of U.S. involvement," the official said.

The United States intends for the agenda to include no military issues, which it prefers to reserve for individual talks with the countries that have U.S. military relationships.

The conference will concentrate on the terms of trade. The ASEAN countries would like a special deal with the United States, giving them preferential tariff treatment.

A U.S. official said, however, that the response to that request, if the ASEAN countries raise it directly, will be negative.

"We won't give regional trade preferences," he said, for fear that other regional groupings would request similar preferences.

The administration also is not prepared to deal with a problem faced by Indonesia, which is a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Congress has decided that OPEC members cannot qualify for the general trade preferences that the United States extends to most friendly nations. Indonesia has protested that it is only a small member of OPEC and needs the preferential tariff treatment.

"We're very sympathetic to Indonesia," the official said, "but to open that issue with Congress now would be to risk the entire preferential tariff structure."

The State Department also plans to acknowledge "a special responsibility" to aid the refugees from the war, but to urge that the ASEAN countries try to absorb more of them.

Nicaraguan Minister's Home Attacked

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Three men in a stolen taxi fired shots at the residence of Foreign Minister Julio C. Quintana on Wednesday but no one was injured, police said.

Quintana was home at the time, officials said. The bullets caused slight damage to the house, located about 10 miles south of the capital.

A series of attacks on government officials began about a month ago when unknown assailants threw bombs at the house of Minister of Economics Roger Blandon. The homes of several other officials have been attacked since then, but nobody has been injured.

Police said the owner of the stolen taxi, Fernando Silva, came to police headquarters to report the loss of his vehicle and was detained for questioning. However, police said he was not a suspect.

Political unrest has been simmering in Nicaragua since the Jan. 10 slaying of Pedro Joaquín Chamorro, editor of the newspaper La Prensa which for years opposed the government of President Anastasio Somoza. Some of the six persons arrested as suspects in the Chamorro case testified in court that high government officials were behind the killing.

WHITE NAMES PRESS SECRETARY AUSTIN (AP) — Mark White, Democratic candidate for attorney general, said Wednesday that Sanford Mark (Sandy) Dochen will be his campaign press secretary. Dochen, 28, was news director of KLB radio in Austin from 1972 to 1977.

ALWAYS A STEP AHEAD....

Poll Shows Democrats Now Minority Over U.S.

By LOUIS HARRIS

When Americans are asked about their political party affiliation, only 43 percent now view themselves as Democrats, compared with 50 percent in 1976. Fifty-one percent now consider themselves to be either Republicans or independents, while on the eve of the last presidential election, Democrats outnumbered Republicans and independents by 50-46 percent.

These are not massive shifts, but they are significant because they indicate that under President Carter, Democratic Party fortunes and loyalties appear to be eroding. Voters seem to be less party-oriented than ever before, according to a recent Harris Survey of 1,500 adults nationwide. This decline in party loyalties hurts the Democrats more than the Republicans, since the Democrats have enjoyed a better than two-to-one edge in party affiliation in modern times.

Of particular interest in these findings about party loyalty is the pattern among key groups in the electorate that have strayed from the Democratic reservation.

—Among blacks, Democratic affiliation has now slipped from 80 to 66 percent; a drop of 14 points in less than two years. Republican affiliation has not budged from the eight-percent level that existed in 1976. But the number of blacks who view themselves as independents, free from any basic party affiliation, has doubled from nine to 18 percent. The black vote has been one of the fundamental strengths of the Democratic Party in modern times, and, indeed, President Carter would have lost the election by almost four percent if he had not rolled up a massive 88-12 percent majority among blacks. But now, almost a third of that vote cannot be taken for granted by the Democrats. The example of Mayor Charles Evers in Mississippi, who is running for governor as an independent candidate, may well be a prelude to other such black candidacies in the future.

—Among union members, Democratic affiliation has fallen off from 58 to 49 percent since 1976. The number of union members who see themselves as independents has risen from 20 to 30 percent. This may explain why organized labor has had little success in getting such legislation as the labor reform and common situs picketing bills through a heavily Democratic Congress. Democratic senators and congressmen probably sense that the trade union vote is no longer straight Democrat and that the rank and file might not even agree with the positions of their union political action groups.

—Among women, Democratic Party affiliation has dropped from 51 to 42 percent since 1976. Republican Party adherence has stayed constant at 25 percent, but the number of women who say they are independents have risen from 21 to 26 percent. In recent years, women have become far more politically aware, particularly about legislation affecting their status, such as ERA ratification.

—In the South, Democratic Party affiliation has now slipped from 62 to 52 percent. The number of Southerners who consider themselves Republicans has risen from 12 to 17 percent, while the number who say they are independents has gone up from 19 to 25 percent. This is a surprising trend, for it has been commonly assumed that with a man from the Deep South in the White House, the Democrats would increase their strength in that region. However, the facts show quite an opposite trend, and the South cannot be taken for granted by the Democrats.

—In the other regions: The Democrats have lost sizable ground in the West, where Democratic Party affiliation has dropped from 52 to 41 percent since 1976, while the number of those who say they are Republicans has risen from 28 to 31 percent, and independents from 18 to 21 percent. In the Midwest, the number who consider themselves Democrats has dropped from 42 to 35 percent, and in the East, from 46 to 42 percent. In both the Midwest and East, however, Republican Party affiliation also has declined.

What is happening is that the general decline in party loyalties that cut back the Republican Party base to 18 percent in 1974 is now seriously eroding Democratic strength. The first concrete effects of this may well be found in races for state legislatures and the Congress, where voters traditionally vote the "party" and Democratic candidates have benefited in the past.

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Slick Greens Help Nicklaus' Chances

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — The greens of Oakmont, glass-slick and rattlesnake-treacherous, could be the decisive factor in the 60th PGA national championship that begins today.

"This is where it'll be won," Lee Trevino said, tapping his foot on one of the rolling, undulating putting surfaces that will test touch, talents and temperaments of the world's finest shotmakers.

"It's just like it was in '51," said 66-year-old Sam Snead, who won his third PGA title that year on this same 6,989-yard, par-71 layout in the hills of Western Pennsylvania.

"One time I marked my ball and the greens were so slick the coin moved, slid down the hill. Yeah, really. The coin moved."

"You're going to see as many four-putts here as you see three-putts in a normal tournament."

After a couple of practice rounds, Ol' Sam decided he'd had enough, packed up and went home.

"I'll let almost anybody in the field reach every green in regulation, then let me place the ball on the green — place the ball, and I'm not talking about 100 feet. I'm saving 30 or 40 feet — and they'll have a tough time breaking 80," said former Masters champ Charles Coody.

And those slick greens only enhance Jack Nicklaus' role as the favorite to acquire a record-matching fifth PGA crown. He comes in as a winner in his last two starts, the British Open and Philadelphia. He's very obviously at the top of his game. And, in addition to his other accomplishments, he's generally regarded as the best fast-green putter in the world.

"If I had a 6-8 foot putt I had to make, that's the man," Snead said and pointed to Nicklaus, "that's the man I want to putt it."

"He is, without doubt, the greatest player the world has seen," said Byron Nelson, winner of five major titles and a record 11 consecutive tournaments in 1945.

"He's unreal. He is, far and away, the greatest player who's ever lived."

"I've played against most of them, Hogan, Hagen, Sarazen, Snead, Palmer, Player. None of them are even close to Jack."

"He could win 20 majors," Nicklaus' British Open triumph at St.

Andrews — perhaps the most personally rewarding of all his victories — marked the acquisition of his 15th major professional title and ended the speculation that, at age 37, his best golf was behind him.

"From the standpoint of doing what I had to do, that's the best I've ever played in a major championship," Nicklaus said in Scotland. "Barring injury, I see no reason I can't continue to play good golf for another 10 or 15 years."

The only question about his game concerns his preparation. He was forced off his normal schedule by the Philadelphia event, a designated tournament he was required to play. He got in two practice sessions last week, then took a break and didn't return until Wednesday.

Should he falter, the usual lineup of challengers is waiting to make a run at the final Big Four event of the year.

Chief among them is the flamboyant Trevino, winner of one tournament and a five-time runner-up this season.

Other major contenders include South African Gary Player, who touched off a string of three consecutive victories in the Masters and is enjoying his best American tour ever; leading money-winner Andy Bean who combines enormous power with a deceptively effective putting stroke; and Tom Watson, the dynamic redhead who last year threatened to supplant Nicklaus as the game's No. 1 performer.

Also on hand are the always-dangerous Tom Weiskopf, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green, slump-ridden defending champion Lanny Wadkins, U.S. Open titleholder Andy North, Jerry Pate and Johnny Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open on this course with a record-setting final round of 63.

And, too, there's Arnold Palmer, who's recent efforts make him something more than a sentimental choice. The 48-year-old living legend has played extremely well in his last few starts and made a run at the title in both the Canadian and British Opens.

CAMERA TIME — Fans turn their eyes and cameras on a relaxed and smiling Jack Nicklaus as he steps off the sixth green during Wednesday's practice round at Oakmont (Pa.) Landry Foresees Few Changes THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry says he expects to make no major changes because of the National Football League's "new look" for 1978, a 16-game schedule and a controversial rule affecting pass receivers.

"I can't think of anything radical we might do," Landry said during a break in training at the Cowboys' camp at California Lutheran College. "Certainly we're not going to stand still, but the changes we do make will be subtle."

The Cowboys open their four-game pre-season schedule against San Francisco Saturday night at Texas Stadium. They'll play the first Monday night game of the 1978 regular season against Baltimore, also at Texas Stadium, on Sept. 4.

"Basically, the additional two games will present a real problem of wear and tear on all teams," said Landry, the only coach the Cowboys have ever had and now in his 19th year at the helm.

"I envision a greater use of running-backs in games to keep them fresh for the whole schedule. I think that would be your biggest change."

Although Dallas backup quarterback

Danny White also serves as the team's punter. Landry doesn't believe there will be more dual purpose athletes on the rosters.

"We pick up two more to make it 45 this year," he explained. "So we should have enough people without resorting to double duty."

It was noted that the Cowboys were using a 3-man defensive front rather than their normal four during one of the drills at Cal Lutheran.

"No, we're not changing," said Landry. "But we have to show the 3-man line to our offense because they'll be seeing so much of it this season."

Asked if the Cowboys would ever entertain the idea of going to a 3-man front, Landry replied: "I believe we won the Super Bowl because of our defense. We are not inclined to change a successful part of our game."

The new rule that prohibits a defensive back from hitting a receiver five yards beyond the line of scrimmage could affect Landry's thinking.

"With the 4-man front, we don't have as many people back there protecting against the pass," he said. "So we can't double up on receivers as much. But I'll have to wait and see how the rule affects the defense."

Landry, who has built the Cowboys with draft choices through the years, said he doesn't expect any significant changes in his 1978 lineup.

"It's a possibility we will have basically a stand-pat team," he said. "The draft appeared to be thin overall. These things happen in cycles."

Bear Chases Alonzo, Not Father-Son Combo

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — As far as the NCAA is concerned, Bear Bryant needs 41 victories—not 62—to pass Amos Alonzo Stagg as history's winningest college football coach.

With all due respects to the late Stagg, the NCAA is refusing to credit him with 21 victories his son says he recorded at Susquehanna University in 1947-52.

With Alabama's Bryant beginning to close in on Stagg's all-time mark, Amos Alonzo Stagg Jr., has petitioned the NCAA to add 21 victories to his father's name, which would push the total to 335. Bryant, who isn't hiding his desire to go out as college football's all-time winner, is preparing for his 34th year as a head coach and now has 274 victories.

Amos Alonzo Stagg Jr., 79, was quoted as saying the extra 21 victories would make Bryant "earn his place in history."

However, the NCAA's statistics and research department begs to differ.

"The senior Stagg was in his early 80s at the time of the Susquehanna thing," said an NCAA spokesman. "The junior Stagg was the head coach and he says his father was a 'co-coach.' We are satisfied with the validity of the records."

The junior Stagg insists, however, that his father won the Susquehanna games.

"Why the NCAA doesn't correct this error is something that is beyond me," he was quoted as saying. "My father won the games... and should be credited accordingly. Then, if any coach should break his record, he would have to win 336 games."

Stagg's recognized total of 314 triumphs came in a 57-year career. Stagg died in 1966 at the age of 103.

"As far as we are concerned, the matter is closed," said an NCAA spokesman.

Odom Picks Squad For Oil Bowl Tilt

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Before the upcoming high school football season even gets under way, James Odom is one coach who will either have a victory or a defeat under his belt.

Of course, he is hoping for the former, rather than the latter. But in either case, he's donating it to charity.

"I'm sorry," he can say when someone knocks on his door. "I gave a screenpass and a zig out at the office."

Odom, Sherman's Tommy Hudspeth and Charlie Johnston of Childress make up the coaching staff that will lead a group of Texas all-stars against an elite squad from north of the Red River at the 41st Shrine Oil Bowl Classic in Wichita Falls on Aug. 12.

The Oil Bowl is used to raise money for the crippled children's hospital in Wichita Falls.

"From what I've been told, it's an outstanding bowl," said Odom, who when not coaching all-stars directs the Monterey Plainsmen. "The kids enjoy it and have a lot of fun."

But as anyone might guess, fun isn't the only thing Odom and his group are after—a win would be nice, too. That's why he went after "some of the best talent in the state."

"There's no doubt about it," he emphasized. "We tried to pick the cream of the crop. But we also wanted to stay in the area (around Wichita Falls). The crowd likes to see area kids play. But we still went after the best."

Odom doesn't have to tell anyone that. He can let his roster do the talking.

Twelve of the players on the team played Saturday night in the North-South All-Star game in Houston. Only one of the 26 players has not signed a letter-of-intent. And, for toppers, only two did not ink up with a major university.

Included in the Texas bunch are Ron Reeves and Greg Isarel, a pair of Monterey exes who are headed for Texas Tech this fall. Reeves, an all-star in both football and baseball, will play quarterback. Isarel is expected to see action as a defensive back.

Odom said he, Hudspeth and Johnston huddled after school ended last May and worked out the roster. Final additions and subtractions were made at the coaches school in Houston last week.

Because of the lack of time between the Aug. 6 reporting date and the night of the game, Odom said things would be kept pretty simple.

"We (the Texas and Oklahoma staffs) agreed to use a basic 5-4 defense," he explained. "We've also traded offensive sets."

Odom said the Texas team would run the veer offense.

"That's one of the reasons we chose Reeves and (Mike) Brannon as our quarterbacks," Odom said. "They are both experienced at running the veer, so they shouldn't have any trouble catching on."

Brannon, a Baylor signee, directed the Brazoswood attack last year.

With only a couple of weeks remaining until the stars report to their respective colleges, Odom said the workout for the Oil Bowl is "a good opportunity to get some extra hitting under their belt."

Texas Tech recruits total six (including Oklahoma's starting signal caller Randy Paige of Oklahoma City Southeast). Oklahoma University will be represented by four stars from Texas.

Coaching the Oklahoma squad will be Gene Smith, Dan Sulviand and Larry Coker.

BUT PETE...—Cincinnati Reds Pete Rose is consoled by umpire Gerry Crawford after Rose's leadoff hit to centerfield bounced over the fence and was a ground-rule double in the first inning at Atlanta Stadium Wednesday night. Ram's Kicker Confident And For Good Reason FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — He confidently says he intends to be All-Pro this season, and although a longshot for that honor, Los Angeles Rams' kicker Rafael Septien seems to have a knack for getting what he wants.

A few years ago, Septien decided he wanted to leave his native Mexico City and get a free college education in the United States. A soccer player, he practiced kicking an American football for two days, took a plane to Louisiana, and booted a couple of 60-yard field goals for the Southwest Louisiana coach, securing his college education.

Septien, a darkly handsome 5-foot-9, 170-pounder who has made movies and commercials in Mexico, went on to gain All-Southland Conference honors his final two years at Southwest Louisiana.

New Orleans selected him in the 1977

National Football League draft, but he was cut — a momentary setback that led to what he now considers bigger and better things. After being released by the Saints, Septien joined the Rams less than a week before the start of last season.

Showing composure rare for a rookie, he moved into the regular kicking job, finishing his first pro campaign with the fourth best field goal percentage, .600, in the National Football Conference. He hit 32 of 35 extra point tries, including a stretch of 28 straight.

"I couldn't have asked for things to work out much better than they have," said Septien, 24. "I know I was disappointed when New Orleans cut me, but it turned out to be the best thing that could happen. I'm here with a winning team, have a year's experience, and am confident about my kicking."

"I know it seems like I've been lucky, but I believe you create your own luck." Last season, Septien proved he had good range — frequently kicking off into the end zone — but had trouble making field goals from outside the 40-yard line.

Astro's Streak Halted At Eight By Giants 4-2

By The Associated Press
Terry Whitfield swatted a three-run homer as San Francisco snapped Houston's eight-game winning streak with a 4-2 decision.

Whitfield's fourth-inning blast, his eighth homer of the season, followed a walk to Darrell Evans and a single by Willie McCovey off loser Tom Dixon, 5-8.

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Bill Madlock's double and Jim Dwyer's run-scoring single.

Houston tied the score in the bottom half of the inning on a single and stolen base by Terry Puhl and Jose Cruz' RBI single against winner John Montefusco, 8-4, who gained his first victory since June 25.

CUBS 3, CARDS 2
Mike Vail's two-run triple in the first inning backed the seven-hit pitching of Mike Krukow and Bruce Sutter, leading the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It marked the Cubs' 11th triumph in as many meetings with the Cardinals this season and kept them four games behind the division-leading Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East.

INDIANS 5, ROYALS 2
John Grubb smashed a home run and Tom Verzer added an RBI double to highlight a four-run sixth inning, boosting the Cleveland Indians to a 5-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

The Indians, who swept the three-game series from the Western Division leaders, trailed 2-0 after three innings. They cut the margin to 2-1 in the fourth on an RBI single by Duane Kuiper.

PHILS 8, METS 6
Garry Maddox drove in four runs, three with his ninth home run that capped a five-run second, and the Philadelphia Phillies hung on to outlast the New York Mets 8-6 in a Business Persons' Special Game before 32,382 fans.

The Phillies gained an 8-0 lead in the first five innings and escaped with the win despite a five-run rally by the Mets in the eighth, featuring a hit batsman, two stolen bases, a double, a triple and Lee Mazzilli's two-run homer.

PIRATES 3, EXPOS 0
Bruce Kison and Kent Tekulic combined on a three-hitter and Phil Garner hit a solo home run as Pittsburgh beat the Montreal Expos 3-0.

Kison, 3-3, struck out seven batters, including the side in the sixth, and walked only two before needing ninth-inning relief help from Tekulic, who notched his 18th save.

loser Dan Schatzeder, 4-3, gave up six hits, including Garner's homer, and walked two batters in 7 2/3 innings.

REDS 6, BRAVES 2
Pete Rose doubled, singled twice and hit a home run in his first four times at bats and Tom Seaver hurled a three-hitter in leading Cincinnati to a 6-2 triumph over the Atlanta Braves.

Rose, whose National League record-setting hitting streak ended at 44 games against the Braves Tuesday night, led off the game with a double. He then singled home a run in the second and led off the fourth with a single before sending a drive over the right field fence in the sixth for his fifth homer of the season.

BREWERS 5, ORIOLES 3
Larry Hise and Sal Bando blasted home runs and Mike Caldwell notched his second straight victory as the Milwaukee Brewers took a 5-3 decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

Prior to the regularly scheduled game, a two-out, 10th-inning single by Mike Anderson gave the Orioles a 6-5 victory in the completion of a contest suspended after nine innings by local curfew Monday night.

GAME DELAYED
NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees were tied 5-5 after 12 innings Wednesday night when the game was delayed by rain.

It was the second rain delay of the game.

Rose Turns To Batting Crown

ATLANTA (AP) — "I was disappointed because I felt I could have gone on," Pete Rose said Wednesday, reflecting on the end of the strongest challenge ever made toward Joe DiMaggio's record of hitting in 56 straight games.

"Now I'll concentrate on leading the league in hitting," said Rose, who saw his streak end at a National League-record tying 44 games when he struck out on a Gene Garber changeup to finish an 8-for-4 night Tuesday against the Atlanta Braves.

The scrappy Cincinnati Reds' third baseman insisted he wasn't angry at Garber, but he questioned why the bearded relief ace went with his best pitch in that situation — Atlanta leading 16-4 with two outs in the ninth — rather than challenging him.

"I'm not saying anything about him bearing down," Rose said. "I just said he should challenge somebody. I had one pitch to swing at that was a strike."

"I thought he won the World Series. Did you see him jump up? All I know is he don't challenge the hitter. Most pitchers in baseball just challenge a guy in that situation. He was just trying to in-and-out, up-and-down you."

The Cincinnati captain said, "If Phil Niekro had been pitching and I got five pitches, I guarantee you three would have been fast balls. I wouldn't have seen the knuckleball, his best pitch. I'd just as soon not talk about Garber. I don't want to give him the ink."

Rose said his hitting streak "helped stimulate the team. We made a move during the streak. It's not a complete loss last night because the other teams lost last night, too."

The Reds are lodged in a battle for the NL West pennant, trailing the San Francisco Giants by one-half game and leading the Los Angeles Dodgers by one game. Both West Coast contenders also lost Tuesday night.

Rose had bounced a sixth-inning single to right field Monday night on a rare Niekro fastball to extend his streak to 44 games, tying the all-time NL record set by Willie Keeler of the Baltimore Orioles in 1897.

The end came on the combined effort of Garber and rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams, who made a miracle catch of a vicious liner by Rose in the second inning.

"I hit a ball that was halfway into center field and the guy caught it," Rose said of the shot, which the lanky, 6-foot-5 Williams speared behind his back, holding on as he fell to the ground.

Rose drew a walk on a 3-2 pitch to open the game, grounded out to shortstop in the fifth and lined into a double play in the seventh on his first appearance against Garber.

It was a streak without luck, Rose said.

"Almost every night I've hit shots. I've said all along I could have had 20 more hits in the streak. I've been getting the meat of the bat on the ball a lot. You would think a guy would get lucky one time in 44 games. But all of my hits were clean hits. There wasn't a one off somebody's glove."

Rose, talking with only a handful of sports writers at his Atlanta hotel, was asked what this would do with his contract negotiations at the end of the year. He was told that the New York Yankees had asked DiMaggio to take a $5,000 cut after his streak in 1941 because of World War II.

"I hope World War III don't start," said Rose, adding that he did not want to talk about contract negotiations.

He said he felt no sadness at the streak ending, but believed he would have gotten his hit had McWilliams, in only his fourth major league appearance, remained in the game.

"I thought I would hit Garber, too," he said. "He's not the best reliever in baseball. He probably doesn't think I'm the best hitter in baseball."

"I hit three balls harder last night than probably eight of their hits. But, that's baseball."

Rose said he stayed up until 4:30 a.m. watching a television replay of the game, and it wasn't until then that he thought the ninth inning pitch he fanned on was a ball.

"The last one might have been too close to take," he said. "You don't want to end the streak arguing with the umpire. Besides Jim Quick was doing a good job back there. It was too close to take and put the pressure on him."

He said he was confident that No. 56 was within his grasp had he been able to return home Friday night with the streak still going.

"I was swinging the bat good."

Miami Lawyer Seeks To Stop Fight Blackout

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Miami lawyer who successfully ended television blackouts for Super Bowls said Wednesday he will protest the planned regional blackout for the Muhammad Ali-Leon Spinks heavyweight fight.

Ellis Rubin said he would send formal complaints today with the Federal Communications Commission, the American Broadcasting Corp., and several congressional committees. If necessary, he said, he will go to court.

Promoters of the Ali-Spinks fight plan to prohibit live television broadcasts of the Sept. 15 fight within all of Louisiana and a 200-mile radius outside of New Orleans. That area includes Jackson, Meridian and Hattiesburg, Miss.; Mobile, Ala.; and Pensacola, Fla.

"If the people of Louisiana and the other areas are alerted to this, I think there will be tremendous public outcry," Rubin said in a news conference. "One man has announced that he will censor out a whole state and parts of three others. I don't think he has that right."

Rubin was referring to Bob Arum, head of Top Rank Inc. of New York, the agency promoting the heavyweight crown bout. Arum was in Argentina and could not be reached for comment.

Rubin also chided Ali for making a highly publicized visit to New Orleans and not working to ensure that local fans can see the fight on live television. He held up a newspaper photograph of Ali playing with a young boy at the local Children's Hospital.

"I wish Muhammad Ali would work so that this child and all the others like him could see the fight," Rubin said. "I can't understand why Ali would allow himself to be exploited like this."

During the visit earlier this week, Ali told several thousand fans that he visited to give the city some "live live" because of the blackout.

Rubin came to New Orleans at the request of Armand Quaranto, a retired horse trainer. Quaranto said he called Rubin because of his success in getting the Super Bowl broadcast in the city where it is played.

He first filed suit in 1970 and finally won his case several years later. When the 1978 Super Bowl was played in the Superdome, New Orleans viewers watched it live in television.

Rubin said his complaints will allege that the blackout would violate anti-trust and federal communications laws. He said the exemptions that allow local blackouts for sporting events specifically cover only football, basketball, baseball and hockey.

Northcutt was captain of the Monterey golf team last year and was named to the all-district and all-regional teams. He tied for sixth place in the state golf tournament last spring.

Also signing with WTC were Phil Kuss of Sweetwater, Ken Lawrence of Albany, Scott Barrett of Pampa, Brent Jacobs of Amarillo, Robert Harrison of Lindsay, Okla., and Mike Mahan of Midland.

Dalhart Run Set

DALHART (Special) — The Empty Saddles Running Club will hold a 5,000-meter run here Aug. 12, starting at 9 a.m.

The race will be broken down into three divisions, men's open, women's open and over-40. Registration is $4 per person.

The race will start at the Empty Saddle Monument, located at the top of the underpass on U.S. Highway 87.

Herrera Asks To Be Traded

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas placekicker Efren Herrera asked the World Champion Cowboys to trade him Wednesday, saying the team hasn't offered a salary commensurate with his standing as the top kicker in the National Football League.

"At this time, I'd like to be traded," Herrera said. "If they don't think as highly of me as I think of myself, it's time to move on."

Herrera, who is being fined $500 per day for each day he misses training camp and currently owes $6,500, said, "It's gone too far. I don't think they have any plans for me here. Maybe it's time to move to another team which appreciates me more than the Cowboys."

Herrera was believed asking a salary of about $80,000. The Cowboys have offered an estimated salary of $45,000.

Asked if he will report to camp without a new contract, Herrera said: "No way. But I don't want to retire."

Herrera was asked to estimate his chances of coming back and said, "I couldn't say it's even 30 per cent."

Tex Schramm, president and general manager of the Cowboys, said, "As a negotiating ploy, I don't consider the request very seriously. It's old hat. We will enter the season being as strong as possible at every position including placekicker. This could or could not involve trading Herrera."

Schramm added that if the Cowboys can accommodate Herrera and at the same time benefit the team they would do so.

The Cowboy position is that Herrera is under contract for an additional year, his option year, and is in violation of that contract.

"His union bargained an agreement which provided for him becoming a free agent and offering his services on the market," said Schramm. "Our position is he should fulfill his contract and the union agreement."

Bucky Woy, Herrera's agent, has said he's not negotiating with the Cowboys any more.

Woy called Schramm this week during a radio program and Schramm told Woy, "We don't negotiate contracts over the radio."

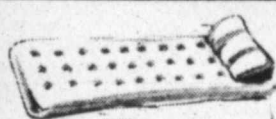

We are pleased to announce the addition of W.W. Thomas to our used car sales dept. W.W. invites all his friends to drop by and see him.

Comedienne Totie Fields Dies In Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Totie Fields, the once-notorious comedian who entertained millions by poking fun at her weight and the medical problems that plagued her in recent years, died Wednesday of an apparent heart attack.

Miss Fields, 48, was stricken at home Wednesday morning, and was pronounced dead at Sunrise Hospital about 40 minutes later. Dick Mayne, chief deputy Clark County coroner, said Miss Fields had awakened, and "was talking to her husband. She gave two gasps and collapsed... she did not suffer."

A popular performer on the glittering Las Vegas Strip and on television, Miss Fields had made a comeback after a leg amputation, two heart attacks and breast cancer.

She was chosen Entertainer of the Year by her colleagues in January and was to have opened a two-week engagement Thursday night at the Sahara Hotel.

In 1976, she was hospitalized for minor surgery but developed phlebitis in her left leg, which eventually was amputated above the knee.

TOTIE FIELDS

The 4-foot-10 entertainer, who had weighed 190 pounds, lost 80 pounds while in the hospital.

But even the loss of a leg gave her fuel for a new routine.

"They put me in a crib with two sides and cut my leg off," she once said. "How was I to get to a refrigerator?"

Following the surgery for removal of her leg, Miss Fields returned to Los Angeles for therapy, and while there suffered two heart attacks.

In October 1977 she again was hospitalized in Los Angeles, that time for exhaustion, and a cancerous right breast was removed.

Born Sophie Feldman in Hartford, Conn., Miss Fields began her show business career when she was 4, singing on a radio station. By the time she was 14, she was playing at resort hotels in upstate New York.

Her first big break came in 1963 when Ed Sullivan saw her at the Copacabana in New York and booked her on his television show, where she made more than 40 appearances.

She made her Las Vegas debut in 1966 when she opened in the lounge at the Riviera Hotel. She moved to the club's main room in 1971 and remained there until 1974, when she signed an exclusive contract with the Sahara.

She appeared 125 times on The Mike Douglas Show. Douglas said Wednesday that Miss Fields was "a close personal friend as well as a close, professional friend."

"Her great courage in dealing with her many health problems in recent years will always stand out as an example to everyone," Douglas said.

Much of Miss Fields' humor was aimed at her weight. She once donned an ostrich feather gown "that every fat woman dreams of buying but wouldn't dare."

Her manager, Howard Henderstein, said he and his wife had planned to have dinner at Miss Fields' home Wednesday night. "She was feeling terrific, just great," he said. "We had a magnificent 18 years together."

Miss Fields is survived by her husband of nearly 30 years, George Johnston, who also was her musical director; two daughters, Jody Childress of Las Vegas and Debbie Johnston of Los Angeles; a brother, Eddie Feldman of Boston, and a sister, Rose Youlovsky of Las Vegas.

Comedian Foster Brooks, who plays at a number of Strip hotels, said Miss Fields was a "tremendous talent and a fine lady. The Strip will miss her."

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

P.D.Q. Bach Discoverer Tries To Blend Serious, Fun Music

NEW YORK (AP) — Does a bassoon make you giggle? Ever snicker at a harp or smile at a symphony?

Peter Schickele stands ready to take umbrage — or embrace you as a fellow spirit. All depending, of course, whether he is Peter Schickele, 43, serious composer, or the pedant's greatest — or most regrettable — discovery, P.D.Q. Bach (b.1807-d.1742).

In his various personae, Schickele is responsible for the "No, No, Nanette," "Fanfare for the Common Cold" and the "Toot Suite"; religious music, including a setting of the mass; some music for the long-running nude musical, "Oh, Calcutta!"; 14 film scores and dozens of other compositions — serious and silly.

His idols are J.S. Bach, Mozart and Spike Jones.

It is all music, he insisted in a recent interview, but it can confuse an audience.

"The one big goof I made in all this is in not using a funny, phony name for the professor," he said. "Not as a secret, but as a signpost: to say that if your hearing Professor Goosebump or whoever it was going to be, you knew that as the P.D.Q. Bach stuff, and 'Peter Schickele' would be saved for my other composing."

"The problem now is that people hear the name Peter Schickele they assume it is going to be funny."

Anyone who was once the lone bassoonist in Fargo, N.D., and later the only music major at Swarthmore should be hardened to that sort of thing, especially anyone who once opened a concert by swinging Tarzan-like to the stage, or who wrote a "Pervertimento" for bagpipes, bicycles, balloons and strings.

Schickele, indeed, is no frustrated tragedian in baggy pants and squirting flower, disdaining every pie he throws.

"Very often when you get to know some celebrity a little bit, you find out that they are frustrated something else. The trouble with me is that I like P.D.Q. Bach too much," says Schickele.

Which does not mean, however, that he will always indulge those who laugh at bassoons.

"My serious music is not thorny, I'm not an angry person, but it is also very quiet, very pastoral and... just not funny," he says.

Schickele takes some pains to separate his masks. P.D.Q. Bach emerges at Christmas each year in New York, flits across the country and then goes to earth in the spring. Schickele reserves his summers for quiet work, in his Brooklyn brownstone or at a summer home in Woodstock.

His summer projects include a chamber opera and a concerto for brass quintet and orchestra. Another P.D.Q. Bach album — "P.D.Q. Bach in rehearsal" — is in the works.

Schickele's message — if the word is not too pompous — is that the listener should relax and enjoy the music. "So long," he adds, "as it is understood that I very much believe in the passion and the intensity of music."

"There should be no brick wall between serious pieces and not so serious pieces. There should be a continuum, a rainbow. There should be a lot of things in the middle."

Califano Gets Speech Award; Jokes About Honor's Namesake

WASHINGTON (AP) — A speakers' group honored HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. on Wednesday for his "courageous" attacks against smoking. It gave him an award named after one of history's most famous cigar-smokers, Winston Churchill.

Califano noted the irony, telling the International Platform Association, "I can't help wondering what Winston Churchill, that lover of big Havana cigars, would think of your choice for this honor."

The late British prime minister once belonged to the association, a professional organization for speakers and booking agents. It gives out the Winston Churchill Award annually, and past recipients have included John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon for their 1960 presidential debates.

The group singled out Califano's speech last Jan. 11 in which he branded smoking "slow motion suicide" and called it "America's public health enemy No. 1."

The health, education and welfare secretary repeated those statements and other warnings that smoking caused 320,000 Americans to die prematurely last year; that 4,000 teen-agers pick up the habit every day, and that 100,000 children under age 13 smoke a pack a day.

"What we're saying about the subject is based on indisputable facts, not claims," declared Califano, adding that the cigarette industry has reacted to his campaign "as if it had been attacked by killer bees."

"Smoking seems to strike an extraordinarily tender nerve," said Califano, citing bumper stickers "all over North Carolina" that say: "Warning: Joe Califano is dangerous to my health."

President Carter is visiting a tobacco warehouse in Wilson, N.C., Saturday at the invitation of a Democratic candidate for Senate.

Califano said after the award ceremony he did not think the president's visit would be interpreted as indicating that the government's support for the anti-smoking campaign is diminishing. He noted that Carter said in North Carolina last March 17 that the HEW secretary "has a responsibility to adequately inform the public" about the health findings on cigarettes.

Califano said "not even the most dreamy-eyed hoper" expects everyone to stop smoking, but that small tobacco farmers will need help from the government as more Americans kick or never take up the habit.

"We are sensitive to the plight of tobacco farmers," he said.

Elia Kazan Writes Fourth Novel

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "As a writer I'm not a stylist like Walter Pater or Norman Mailer or Truman Capote," remarks Elia Kazan, the director turned novelist. "But I'm a better story teller, and I'll tell you why: because I've directed films, and that's pure story telling."

Kazan's has been an extraordinary career. Greek-born, he became an actor, first working with the Group Theater and in a few films ("Blues in the Night," "City for Conquest"), then helped revolutionize the American theater with his realistic direction of "Death of a Salesman," "The Skin of Our Teeth," "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

He won Oscars for his direction of "Gentleman's Agreement" in 1947 and "On the Waterfront" in 1954, and was a prime force in launching the film careers of Marlon Brando, James Dean and Warren Beatty.

Ten years ago, Kazan turned novelist with "The Arrangement," which rode the bestseller lists for 37 weeks. He followed with "The Assassins," "The Understudy" and now "Acts of Love," his first study of a woman.

"I expected to be criticized by women's libbers," he said during a visit from his New York home. "But it hasn't come yet. I don't think I can be accused of being a male chauvinist. I've always had strong women's roles in my films. For instance, 'Baby Doll' to 'A Face in the Crowd,' not to mention 'A Streetcar Named Desire.'"

"The girl in 'Acts of Love' is not brilliant: she was carelessly educated. But she is independent, and she knows about men. There is a passage in which she describes men by their sexual behavior. That is something only women can do: be a participant as well as an observer of the sexual act. Men can't perform both roles."

During the past decade, Kazan has directed only two films, "The Arrangement" and "The Last Tycoon." The movie of F. Scott Fitzgerald's final, fragmented novel was not successful.

"But I feel positively about the picture," Kazan insisted. "I thought Robert De Niro gave a superb performance, and the scene of his firing at the studio was among the best I've done. The weakness was in the love story, which was unfulfilled."

"I liked the picture, but I'm afraid it had no immediacy. That's what is needed nowadays: a film must be a novelty or people will stay home and watch TV. Moderately interesting movies are no longer possible. It's much easier to pass the time at home with a can of beer in your hand. Only the sensational films can succeed, like 'Star Wars' or 'Close Encounters' — or porno movies."

Kazan, 68, hasn't entirely given up directing for the literary life. His next book will be a sequel to his film "America, America," a semi-autobiographical movie about a young Greek's advent to the United States.

"That's still my favorite film," said Kazan, "with all its faults, it remains my best work. It is full of longing."

"With the advance for 'Acts of Love,' I have enough money to last me four or five years, and I'll work on the sequel. I've finished 200 pages and I've got about 400 to go. Then I'll make the movie."

"America, America" has never appeared on television because Kazan owns it and refuses to have it interrupted with commercials.

"I plan to bring it out this fall, I hope on Public Broadcasting," said the director. "I can't stand to watch my films on television because of the commercials. Recently I saw 'On the Waterfront' for the first time on TV because IBM sponsored it with only one commercial break."

Abandoned Mines Warning Issued

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mine Safety and Health Administration has issued a warning of the danger of exploring abandoned mines.

"Every year, especially in summer, a number of trespassers in quarries, sand and gravel pits, abandoned underground mines and other mining properties become fatality statistics. They are unfamiliar with the dangers of the mining environment and walk into accidents with no suspicion of the perils all around them," said Administrator Thomas J. Shepich.

Recently, he said, five persons have drowned in ponds in abandoned quarries, four others were killed in cave-ins, three in falls over quarry walls, two by falling down shafts, two were asphyxiated, one person was electrocuted and one was killed in an accidental explosion.

EXECUTION ORDERED

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan has ordered the execution of two Chinese charged with operating a heroin processing factory. Radio Thailand reported Wednesday. The radio said police arrested the men April 21 and seized a large quantity of heroin processing equipment and about 68 pounds of the drug. No date was announced for the execution by firing squad.

Panhandle Grasshoppers Battled

DISCUSS LIVESTOCK MARKETING — Kenneth W. Stokes, left, a Texas A&M graduate student in agricultural economics, and Dr. T.R. Greathouse, Texas A&M vice president for agriculture and renewable resources, discuss research dealing with livestock production and marketing systems that Stokes is conducting. The student is a recipient of the Tom Slick Research Fellowship. Agricultural research relevant to all of Texas but of particular importance to Southwest Texas is resulting from the fellowship program that was launched several years ago by the Tom Slick Memorial Trust of San Antonio.

Selling Weakens Cattle Futures

By Reuters
CHICAGO — Live cattle futures ended unchanged to off 55 points Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.
October was weakest, slipping 95 points for a time, with only June at the previous day's close. Volume was estimated at 25,982 contracts. April gained 37 points early, but follow-through was lacking.
Short profit-taking provided much of the upside movement at times but selling prevailed finally as cash cattle and beef continued weak. The discount of futures to cash and lack of deliveries also made for scattered buying.

Houston Bullhorn Ban Unconstitutional

HOUSTON (AP) — Portions of an anti-noise city ordinance placing restrictions on the use of bullhorns have been declared unconstitutional by a federal judge.
U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals said the prohibition against sound amplification equipment is too broad because it does not take into consideration whether use of the equipment is disruptive.

Wholesale beef was unchanged to off 1 1/4 cents at 82 cents a pound for all weights. Cash cattle were steady to off $1 with the top at $56 per hundredweight.
Slaughter was estimated at 142,000 head. The six markets expect 9,100 head to arrive today.

Feeder cattle futures closed 65 points lower to 25 higher on 2,302 sales. April was weakest with September at the high. January skidded 100 points and October gained 37 in erratic swings early in the day.

Selling on weak cash cattle and beef forced prices to two-week lows with short covering at times providing the only upward action.

Cash feeders were up $2 to off $1 on a top of $74 in Kansas City. Receipts are expected to be 6,100 head today.

Hog futures rallied at an early break of 80 points in distant August and finished five to 32 higher led by nearby October. February climbed 120 points before resistance set in. Volume was 6,324 trades.

Aggressive short covering was touched off by improved tone to pork products after early softness, even though cash hogs slanted downward. The discount of futures to cash also prodded buyers at times.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up 1 1/2 cents at 80 to 81 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash hogs were steady to off 75 cents on a top of $49 per hundredweight in Peoria.

Six-market arrivals are expected to total 23,000 head today. Wednesday's kill was estimated at 268,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures were down 112 points to up five on a turnover of 6,143 contracts. Nearby August was weakest with only May higher.

ties that eat them. A long dry spell, however, permitted an unusually high hatch which has been eating its way across parts of Texas, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska and Wyoming all summer.

Though grasshoppers prefer grass and weeds, once they have eaten the supply they move on to whatever is available — anything from stalks of grain to tender tree bark. The Panhandle ranchers were especially threatened because the grass on their range was the grasshoppers' first choice.

The TDA and USDA personnel who participated in the clean-up were on the job before sunrise. They rose at 4 a.m. and drove 30 or 40 miles each day to the destination from a base in Perryton.

Aerial applications began as soon as the sun rose. Though the fields had been marked with flags at their boundaries, the men on the ground were there as a double-check to signal the pilots if a wrong approach was made.

Through the morning they kept in contact with the planes by radio.

The range was sprayed with eight ounces of malathion per acre, an amount that has been called safe in the environment. No cropland was eligible under the program.

To insure against pesticide drift, spraying continued only until the wind reached 12-15 miles per hour. Once the heat became intense, spraying stopped also.

Thermal heat waves in the summer catch the pesticide and move it. Spraying usually lasted until late morning.

In the afternoon the men went back in to the fields to estimate the grasshopper count. If only one jumped up a square yard as the men moved through, they figured that 99 per cent had been killed.

They also marked off new boundaries for the next day's spraying. By the end of the two weeks, 292,000 acres had been treated. The men worked through the weekends until the job was completed.

Brown said the program is over for this year. The funds have run out.

Besides, he said, "You must spray before the grasshopper reaches maturity and lays its eggs." And that point is past now.

Soviet Grain Purchases Reach 14.8 Million Tons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russian purchases of U.S. grain for the year ending Sept. 30 have reached 14.8 million metric tons, the Agriculture Department said Wednesday.

The department was announcing the sale to the Soviet Union by an undisclosed private exporter of an additional 250,000 tons of corn.

That brought the totals to 3.5 million tons of wheat and 11.3 million tons of corn. A metric ton is 2,204.6 pounds.

The sales must be reported to the government within 24 hours, but names of the traders and the price are not released.

U.S. officials last fall told the Russian government buyers that they could purchase up to 15 million tons of grain in this second year of a five-year agreement between the two powers.

Under the pact, the Soviets must buy a minimum of six million tons of wheat and corn a year and may buy up to eight million without seeking further consultations with officials here.

Because of a reduced Soviet grain crop last year and price-depressing surpluses of wheat and corn in this country, U.S. officials encouraged the extra purchases this year.

Drought Blamed For Cattle Decline

AUSTIN (UPI) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown Wednesday said drought conditions are mostly responsible for a drastic decline in the number of cattle in the state.

The Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said that, as of July 1, the number of cattle and calves in the state amounted to 13 million, down from 16.6 million at the same time last year.

"Texas cattlemen have been reducing their herds for the past few years as the latest cattle cycle winds down, but the drought has forced many to liquidate more than they wanted to," said Brown.

"Dry pastures have forced many producers to feed very heavily, and with the cost of hay and other supplemental feeds rising, it has not been possible to hold back as many animals as they would like for breeding stock."

Brown said this year's crop is expected to be the smallest and poorest since 1971.

GRAIN FUTURES

CHICAGO (AP) — Corn prices dipped sharply and other grains and soybeans also registered losses Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Increased grain sales by farmers and a rush of speculative selling pushed corn prices downward by 1/4 to 6 cents as no news emerged to prop them up.

Corn prices, which were 1 to 2 1/2 cents lower at the open, skidded far enough in early trading to trigger commission house selling, and "chart selling" also was a factor as prices Tuesday for December corn delivery reached their lowest level since March.

Crime Details Aired At Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a voice devoid of emotion, a convicted loan shark testified Wednesday that he set fire to three buildings, told of beating a man with a blackjack and expounded on the ties that bind accomplices in murder.

He also said that a "sit-down" occurred between officials of two Mafia families after he threatened a man who now is a Dade County, Fla., judge and the man allegedly appealed to one family for help.

"It was just a job," Gary Bowdach, 35, said of his admitted arson and beatings and of his one admitted murder. "Some of the things had to be done because your reputation was at stake."

As for the ties that bind in a murder, he said: "You have to have an extraordinary amount of trust with each other to go out and commit a murder. Your partner becomes closer to you than your wife — because your partner knows things that your wife doesn't."

Flanked by U.S. marshals, Bowdach made the statements in his second day of hearings before the Senate permanent subcommittee on investigations. He is appearing under a grant of immunity from the Justice Department.

Although Bowdach testified about three arson jobs — one which he said he committed because the owner was paying him his ex-wife with rubber checks — much of the questioning centered on the burning of a wholesale florist warehouse in Tampa, Fla.

Bowdach testified he was told that job was to be done at the request of Santo Trafficante, reputed head of mob activities in Tampa.

Bowdach said he watched a meeting between Trafficante and one of Bowdach's accomplices in Miami in January 1971. Shortly after the meeting, he said, the partner told him "we had a torch job to do in Tampa at Trafficante's request and for a friend of Trafficante's."

The arson, he said, was to be done on day of the Super Bowl pro football championship game — a date selected because the owner would be at the game and thus have an alibi.

Bowdach said he and two other men drove to Tampa, were given a key to the warehouse and were told that flammable fluid was waiting for them in the building.

"Arson for profit is about the easiest thing to get away with next to homicide," he commented.

Asked whether he and the others took any steps to draw suspicion from the owner, Bowdach replied: "We were instructed to make it appear that the arson was done by people who would not want the business in the neighborhood," which was changing to a predominantly black residential area.

Bowdach said he used spray paint to write on the wall words such as "white honky, pigs and things that would be connected to racism." He said he sprayed the letters "BLAC" — and then I ran out of room."

Bowdach also testified that an accomplice told him of two murders that the accomplice had committed.

Although he did not have first-hand knowledge of either slaying, he provided details as to where the alleged slayings occurred, the type of weapon used and how the accomplice disposed of the bodies.

On Tuesday, Bowdach told how he and others killed a partner in whom he had lost faith but whom friends in high places had told him was his responsibility.

Predictors Of Potholes Find Business Booming

WORTHINGTON, Ohio (AP) — As long as roadways wear out, Farah and Karam Majidzadeh will be in business.

The couple's business involves predicting when potholes will form so that roads can be improved before the holes develop. Their company, Resources International Inc., may be the only firm in the Midwest using nondestructive testing to diagnose roads, parking lots and bridges for current or potential structural problems.

Their method involves a device called a "Dynaflect," which uses sensors and sound waves to test pressure points on the road and report the findings via a computer printout. The machine is towed in a trailer without disruption to normal traffic.

Engineers then use a computer to analyze the results, pinpointing the time when a road can be expected to crumble.

The tests often disclose shoddy construction and workmanship "which is more common than people think," Majidzadeh said. "The tests show where corners were cut when the road was being built."

Preventive maintenance can help avoid serious structural problems if damage is detected early enough, he said.

"Seventy percent of our roads are falling apart," Majidzadeh said. "Billions of dollars are being spent on repairs. If we can save a client even 10 percent on maintenance, it's worth it."

The average life of a concrete road is eight to 10 years, Majidzadeh said, but

Pope Alludes Again To Imminent Death

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Pope Paul VI visited the grave of a former Vatican diplomat and said once again that his own death cannot be far away.

The 80-year-old pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church was driven Tuesday from his summer palace in Castel Gandolfo to Marino to pay homage to Cardinal Giuseppe Pizzardo, who died in 1970 at the age of 93 after serving in the Vatican's diplomatic service under five popes.

"We hope to be able to meet him after death, which for us cannot be too far away," the pope told the local crowd.

Charges Filed In Worm Scheme

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The operators of a Denver-based worm franchising scheme that grossed $1.9 million have been charged with securities fraud, theft and sale of unregistered securities by Minnesota authorities.

Their firm, Worm World Inc., claimed it sold more than 10 million worms a week and that franchised worm growers could gross as much as $50,000 a month. Authorities say no investor in Minnesota achieved a return, let alone a profit.

The company's listed president, David Pearlman, turned out to be a waiter in a Denver restaurant and was president in name only, attorneys say. He was not charged.

The felony complaints were filed in Ramsey County District Court on Monday against Worm World and two of its principal representatives, Thomas Myron Roth and Donald Lee Lewis, both of Denver. Minnesota authorities say Roth and Lewis owned and managed the business.

The Minnesota State Securities Department used a search warrant to examine Worm World records and compile this picture of the company.

It had grossed at least $60,000 from Minnesotans and took in a total of about $1.9 million during an 11-month period ending in May. The company is known to have operated in South Dakota, Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas, Alabama, Delaware and Pennsylvania.

Worm World sold "earthworm grower programs" through newspaper classified advertising, telephone solicitations and seminars throughout Minnesota. They claimed the business was "phenomenally" profitable and that a few hundred dollars investment could gross between $500 and $5,000 per month, and as much as $50,000 a month. It called the market "unlimited" for ecology, agriculture, land reclamation, organic waste conversion, organic gardening, reforestation, fish bait and food supplements.

The company said its worm was highly reproductive and could be raised at home. It even guaranteed to buy worms raised by investors to meet demands.

Minnesota officials say they couldn't find any investor who sold worms back to Worm World. The worm was a "manure" worm which would die in other environments like agricultural fields, and that no worms are used in sewage treatment

Super Ship Project Requires Precision

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — Newport News Shipbuilding is building a super tanker that will be so heavy when fully loaded it never will be able to enter any present U.S. port.

It is almost like building a boat in your garage and then discovering it's too big to get through the doors.

The ship is called ULCC-1, which stands for Ultra Large Crude Carrier, to distinguish it from a VLCC, or very large crude carrier.

ULCC-1 is the largest ship ever built in the Western Hemisphere. When it is launched, probably in October, ULCC-1 will be 1,185 feet long, 228 feet wide and as tall as a 14-story building, not counting its four-story radar mast.

It will be able to carry enough crude oil — more than 3,000,000 barrels — to power the entire nation for several hours, a shipyard spokesman said.

When loaded, it will draw 74 feet of water — enough to keep it out of every U.S. port.

The man in charge of building ULCC-1 says it hasn't posed any special problems.

Commercial Ship Manager W.C. Hayes says Shell Oil Co., the tanker's owner, wasn't always so easily convinced.

One technique that worried Shell was the yard's plan to have the bow of the ship built in Baltimore, floated into the front of the dry dock and then lined up with the stern section that has been under construction since last September.

How, asked the Shell engineers, do you get the pieces lined up? Hayes, who had engineered similar techniques in adding center sections to a dozen oil tankers, assured them it was simple.

When the bow section was jockeyed in place last month, it lined up within one-eighth of an inch of a perfect fit.

"You take a hunk of steel that big and set it down that close, and it's pretty precise," Hayes said.

The ship is being put together in building block fashion, Hayes said. Huge blocks, weighing 600 to 800 tons, are welded together and outfitted with all their pumps and pipes while they are still on the ground.

Then a 900-ton gantry crane lifts them from the ground, lowers them into place

Increase In Oil Price, 'Currency Basket' Seen

PARIS (AP) — The world's oil producing nations will recommend an "effective" oil price increase of 10 percent for the last three months of the year and promote a move toward a basket of currencies for pricing oil, a weekly newsletter reported Wednesday.

"Arab Report and Memo," an English-language newsletter published here, said that Sheikh Ali Khalif Al-Sabab, the oil minister of Kuwait, will call a meeting of the ministerial council of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in September to discuss the proposals.

The newsletter said that "one outstanding question of significance" about adopting the basket system is whether the dollar should be included. "A move toward a basket of currencies... could increase the dollar value of oil by at least 10 percent. But if the dollar should continue its slide, the increase could be much more than that," the newsletter said.

Oil prices currently are set in dollars, but several OPEC members favor using a group of currencies because of the recent decline in the value of the dollar. Another Paris-based publication, "Arab Oil and Gas," reported Wednesday that crude oil production in OPEC member countries fell 9.1 percent in the first five months of the year from the same period a year ago.

The publication said overall output in OPEC countries is running at 27.78 million barrels a day compared with 30.58 million barrels last year.

The greatest decline came in Saudi Arabia, where daily output has fallen 16.6 percent to 7.6 million barrels from 9.1 million last year, the publication said.

Police Report Shows July Crime Increase

Though many Lubbockites enjoyed a mid-summer vacation last month, city criminals apparently took no time off, as a criminal statistical report released by police indicates a crime increase in virtually all categories over June.

Burglaries once again led the monthly crime summary, with 375 such incidents in July compared with the 337 burglary reports in June.

And the $273,641 in cash and property that persons lost to burglars last month made up about 40 percent of the total goods, valued at $681,011, taken during July.

Day residential burglaries accounted for the most reports, with 112 homes being broken into during daylight hours. Night residential burglaries, totaling 101, ranked second, while businesses burglarized during the night were third with 71 cases reported.

So far, burglary detectives have been able to clear only 47 of the cases reported last month.

Similarly, robbery reports in July were up almost 55 percent over like incidents recorded during June.

Of the 31 reported robberies last month, 16 occurred along Lubbock streets, and victims lost a total of $3,797 in cash and goods to bandits.

The robbers used firearms in 18 of the holdups and police have cleared 11 of the cases.

Lubbock police recorded two homicides during July, the July 15 shooting death of Joe Hernandez, 18, of 509 Flint Ave., and the July 27 shooting death of 33-year-old William Tommy Wright of 1318 25th St.

Robert Jimenez, 19, was charged with voluntary manslaughter in Hernandez' death and Billy Mack Harris, 33, of 2206 E. Bates St. was charged with murder in connection with the Wright slaying.

The July slayings brought to 19 the number of homicides so far this year.

Assault reports, however, took a 12 percent dive during July. Last month 79 assault incidents were recorded, while 90 were logged in June.

Of the July assaults, police statistics indicate a firearm, knife or other dangerous weapon was used by the assailant in 32 of the cases. So far, police have cleared 60 of last month's assault cases.

Rape and attempted rape reports remained at 13 for the second month, and police have cleared eight of the July offenses reported.

Mexican-American Chiefs Hold Varied Road To Power Theories

By TERRY LEONARD
Associated Press Writer

Marches in Texas to protest alleged police brutality against Mexican-Americans have left a trail of tears and frustration. But Mexican-American leaders contend the anger and sorrow that spawns demonstrations is a unifying force in a drive for equal rights.

"A person who has been voiceless and powerless now has a feeling he is part of a movement whose time has come," said Ruben Sandoval, a San Antonio civil rights lawyer.

Some observers, however, believe the movement lacks unity of purpose and the strategy necessary to attain equality in what they feel is a hostile society.

Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, said Mexican-American leaders try to mobilize and unify on any possible issue.

He said the key is political power and the recognition of that power by the Establishment.

Hispanics, Bonilla said, will become the largest ethnic minority in America during the 1980s, and they are sending a message to astute politicians.

However, a Mexican-American political scientist at the University of Texas said that message has been dispatched to Washington time and time again, and for three decades it has fallen on deaf ears.

"Politicians will continue to ignore that message until Mexican-Americans become united at the polls," said Dr. Armando Gutierrez.

Unless Mexican-Americans can convince politicians on all levels that they will no longer be a rubber-stamp Democratic vote they will never have real political power, he said.

"Politicians take the Mexican-American vote for granted. They court it during election years but when it's time for concessions they side with political conservatives who demonstrate a willingness to cross party lines to make a difference in an election," said Gutierrez.

President Carter is a case in point, said Gutierrez. He courted the Mexican-American vote when it was politically expedient. But now Mexican-Americans feel betrayed because they can get no real concessions from the administration, he said.

"Forget politics," said Brownie Trevino, Dallas director of the American GI Forum. "We are not unified to the point we can exert influence on politicians from outside the Southwest. Before we gain real political power we must have a unified Hispanic movement that includes Cubans and Puerto Ricans on the East Coast."

The ultimate goal of the movement, says Bonilla, is "to attain equality for Mexican-Americans in education and unemployment."

Other Mexican-American leaders agree with Bonilla. But they do not all agree on how the Hispanic community must change itself before it can expect to be an equal force in American society.

"I don't see it as necessary to give up any part of our culture or Spanish-speaking ability. Assimilation by birth is assimilation enough. It is our sacred right to preserve our culture," said Bonilla.

The real problem, he said, is the "Alamo mentality" in Texas. "People yelling at you to 'go back to Mexico,' or 'back across the river, wetback.'"

Sandoval said there is no question the Mexican-American community must change. But he said the extent and responsibility of any change depends on both the "Establishment" and the Hispanic community.

"We can't seek rights and ask for something that we do not understand," said Sandoval. "We can assimilate, but do not ask us to obliterate our culture and our history."

Luciano Perez, Lubbock's director of human relations, said the Mexican-American community will change as a result of the "natural progression of life." He said "There is criticism within the Hispanic community that we are losing a lot of our culture to the Anglo world."

Perez thinks the essential aim to attaining equality is a need to achieve "financial and political independence."

He said the Mexican-American community needs to train its people and develop its own economy. He said it needs to build Mexican-American businesses that feed on other Mexican-American businesses and reduce its reliance on public money that is subject to cuts.

"There is more than a hint of truth that Mexican-Americans have been discouraged from a lot of things, including economic development," said Perez.

Trevino said a large part of the responsibility for education and employment within the Mexican-American community falls on the Hispanic middle class, which he said all too often is prejudiced against its own people.

Mexican-American leaders agree that diversity within the movement has held back the cause of civil rights. But in the issue of police brutality they see they key to drawing the broad-based support any civil rights movement needs.

"It touches everyone from the most affluent to the poorest," said Sandoval, "and the increased slaughter has only helped to motivate us more. What is the difference between police violence and being shot by some lunatic because of activism?"

Candidate Sentenced But Keeps Running

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A lawyer running for election as district attorney of New Orleans was sentenced Wednesday to one year at hard labor — but said it won't hurt his political prospects.

"This is not an issue in the campaign," said Joseph N. Marcal III. He said he intends to appeal.

Marcal was convicted of public bribery. He had been accused of paying a Criminal District Court clerk to send a narcotics case to a judge considered lenient on drug violators.

District Judge Baron B. Bourg of Houma, La., imposed sentence. Bourg was called in to hear the case after all New Orleans district judges excused themselves.

Bell Suspends Union Officials

The president and vice-president of the local Communication Workers of America Tuesday were suspended from their jobs by management at Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

Sherry Lindsey and Glenn W. Smith, president and vice-president, respectively, of the local CWA have been suspended from their jobs for 10 days without pay. Both work in the inner switchroom at the downtown telephone office.

Bob Dunbar, division manager for Southwestern Bell, said management's action stemmed from CWA's activity in honoring a picket line July 26 at Bell's downtown headquarters.

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers was picketing a non-union contractor and 150 CWA members honored the picket line.

Dunbar said reason for the suspension was because "we considered it improper action on their part in keeping employees from coming to work at their scheduled times. In excess of 60 employees were kept off their jobs, and that requires strong disciplinary action on our part," Dunbar added.

Jordan 'Innocent' In Party Incident

WASHINGTON (AP) — It wasn't pie — or even mud — in the eye for top presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan on Tuesday night. It was chocolate mousse in the face.

To hear his friends tell it, Jordan was "minding his own business" at a private Georgetown party when an unidentified man appeared suddenly and hurled a handful of the gourmet chocolate pudding at a stunned Jordan.

"He certainly wasn't happy about it," said Gerald Rafshoon, who is in charge of remaking President Carter's image. Rafshoon, who also attended the party, said Jordan "was very mad. The mousse was all over his suit and face."

Rafshoon, a close friend of Jordan, said he didn't see the incident but heard about it later from Jordan.

"We haven't the slightest idea who it was or why he did it," Rafshoon said.

"He could have wandered in off the street. But the guy ran away pretty fast."

Rafshoon said Jordan was "minding his own business, as usual" and did nothing to provoke the attack. "He was strictly innocent," said Rafshoon.

Jordan is no stranger to publicity about his private life. Last winter the top Carter aide was involved in an incident at a local bar where he reportedly spit Amaretto and cream, a sticky drink made with almond liqueur, at a young woman. Jordan denied it, and the White House issued a 33-page defense of him.

The latest flap occurred at a party given for the popular rock group Fleetwood

Mac, in town for a concert. The party was attended by about 200 guests, including President Carter's son, Chip, White House aides Tim Kraft and Rick Hutcheson and a handful of senators and congressmen and record company executives.

The rock group had an appointment with President Carter on Wednesday afternoon, but the meeting was cancelled because the wife of one of the musicians was in the hospital.

In an interview, Rafshoon said Jordan is often hassled when he appears in public.

"Hamilton just can't go out anywhere anymore without people bothering him," Rafshoon said. "It's a real nuisance. And it happens a lot. Even in restaurants, complete strangers come over wanting favors. There are a lot of sickies and nuts who do things like that."

Rex Granum, deputy press secretary said, "It was an unfortunate incident. Hamilton Jordan was minding his own business. It's unfortunate that this sort of thing happens."

Rafshoon said Jordan will make no effort to find his phantom assailant. "We are not going to pursue the matter," he said.

Speaker See GOP Making Few Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans will be lucky if they reduce the 287-146 Democratic majority in the House by five seats this year, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said Wednesday.

The estimate by the top House Democrat came after House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes said the GOP has a good chance to take over control of the House in the November elections.

Reporters told O'Neill that Rhodes had also accused Democratic members of voting for high-spending programs and then going home and posing as conservatives.

O'Neill said Rhodes was well supplied with money and propaganda and "they are going through their biennial attempt to buy the Congress. They will fail."

The amendment was attached to a bill (H.R. 3350) establishing the federal government's authority to regulate deep sea mining in international waters. In part, the bill provides federal backing of companies such as U.S. Steel and Sun Oil, which are partners in international consortia set up to mine the ocean's floor's wealth of copper, cobalt and other minerals.

Rep. John Breaux, D-La., a supporter of the amendment, said: "The Department of Commerce already has come up with the programs and the ability to move forward on this problem of our resources in international waters."

Rep. Joe Skubitz, R-Kans., an opponent, noted that the Interior Department already has jurisdiction over mineral extraction from the U.S. Outercontinental Shelf, and that to put the Commerce Department in control further out in the ocean "makes no sense and could create a bureaucratic nightmare."

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Mattox, Archer, Brooks, White, Jordan, Krueger and Gammage voted "yea."

Eckhardt, Pickle, Poage, Wright, Hightower, Young, de la Garza, Burleson, Mahon, Gonzalez, Lujan, Runnels and Kazen voted "nay."

METRIC SYSTEM Defeated, 75 for and 302 against, an amendment to delete $275,000 for salaries and expenses of the 17-member U.S. Metric Board. The amendment was proposed to H.R. 13467, an appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate. The board is in charge of the nation's ongoing voluntary conversion to the metric system. The object of the amendment was to eliminate the board's operating funds and thereby render it useless.

Rep. Philip Crane, R-11, sponsor of the amendment, criticized government involvement in metric conversion. He said: "Let us return from the air to the ground. I can just see an Illinois farmer, when buying fertilizer, asking for so many kilograms per hectare. It would not happen..."

Rep. Robert McClory, R-11, an opponent, said the Metric Board is "a vital necessity...The principal concept underlying the board is that it is to act to coordinate and plan for a voluntary shift to the metric system."

Members voting "yea" favored abolishing the U.S. Metric Board.

Hall, Robert, Mattox, Archer, Hightower, Burleson, Runnels, Gammage and Kazen voted "yea."

Wilson, Eckhardt, Brooks, Pickle, Poage, Wright, de la Garza, White, Jordan, Mahon and Gonzalez voted "nay." Collins, Teague, Young, Lujan, Krueger and Milford did not vote.

SENATE

MEALS FOR THE ELDERLY Adopted, 59 for and 29 against, an amendment to the Older Americans Act (H.R. 12255) to authorize $100 million in fiscal 1979 and $120 million in 1980 for home-delivered meals for the elderly. The bill was later passed.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., the sponsor, said: "Many of these home-bound persons will end up in institutions and nursing homes if adequate care is not provided to them in their homes. Home-delivered meals are a vital part of the home services..."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., an opponent, cited the high cost of the program, adding: "Nothing is more near and dear to the hearts of all of us than adequate care for America's elderly, and adequate nutrition being the key element in that. But there are some limits to these budgets..."

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D, and John Tower, R, did not vote.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R, and Peter Domenici, R, voted "yea."

RHODESIAN ECONOMIC SANCTIONS Adopted, 59 for and 36 against, an amendment to soften U.S. economic sanctions against Rhodesia. The amendment permits President Carter to lift the U.S. trade embargo if the Rhodesian government makes a substantial effort to negotiate with guerrillas fighting it and holds free elections. It was proposed to S. 3075, later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., a supporter, said the amendment would preserve U.S. stature as an "honest broker" in the effort to find a peaceful solution to the move toward majority rule in Rhodesia. He called it preferable to an immediate lifting of the trade embargo.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an opponent, said the Senate should vote instead for his amendment to immediately resume trade with Rhodesia.

Senators voting "yea" favored adoption of the amendment. Many Senators voting "nay" wanted to immediately lift the sanctions.

Bentsen and Domenici voted "yea." Tower and Schmitt voted "nay."

TURKISH ARMS BAN Adopted, 57 for and 42 against, an amendment to repeal the 42-month-old embargo on U.S. military aid to Turkey. It was attached to S. 3075, a bill later passed and sent to the House. The amendment places future aid to Turkey under frequent congressional review, and expresses congressional displeasure with the Turkish army's continuing occupation of nearly half of Cyprus.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., a supporter, argued that the arms embargo "has not worked and there is no good reason to suppose that it will work as intended in the future." The ban, he added, has "poisoned" U.S.-Turkish relations and forced the U.S. to give up access to important intelligence installations in Turkey.

Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., an opponent, said lifting the embargo would be "condoning aggression" by Turkey against Greek Cypriots. He claimed elimination of the ban was being proposed "without a single concrete action to remedy or to rectify that aggression."

Senators voting "yea" favored lifting the arms embargo.

Bentsen, Tower and Schmitt voted "yea." Domenici voted "nay."
