Woman Receives Slight Wounds as Car And Motorcycle Crash

Two persons were critically injured and two others received less serious hurts in automobile accidents Sunday afternoon as the highways of Wichita county were filled with vehicles headed for the various resorts near here or for drives through the country.

The accidents Sunday afternoon brought the total number of injured in such mishaps to 15 within the last two days, the largest number of casualties in so brief a period in several months.

Cole Y. Wilson of Iowa Park suffered crushed ribs and injuries of the skull and probable internal injuries when the car in which he was driving turned over at the intersection of the road leading to Westmoreland pool and the Seymour road about 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The machine failed to make the curve onto the Seymour road and crashed into a telephone pole on the north side of the road, police reported.

Companions Escape

Wilson was taken to the Hargrave-Walker hospital in a car which was at the scene of the accident. His condition was described as critical by Dr. M. M. Walker at the hospital. Lee Bridges, who was riding with Wilson at the time of the accident, was taken to the Wichita General hospital, where he received treatment for bruises and cuts. His condition was not serious, according to attendants, but he probably will remain in the hospital until Monday.

Half Of Severed Ship's Crew Awaits Death In Sight Of Horrified Crowd

NORTH HEAD, Wash., June 16. (UP)—One of the lifeboats taking 21 of the 30 members of the stricken freighter Laurel's crew from the wreck, overturned in the surf near here tonight.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 16. (US)—With the fate of half of her crew of 32 a mystery and the doom of the rest apparently sealed, the steamship Laurel was battered in two today by furious seas on Peacock Spit, at the mouth of the Columbia river.

Although other crafts were standing by and the desolate beach was lined with horror-stricken spectators, there was considered small hope of saving the 15 drenched and shivering men who could be made out clinging to the rigging and crawling across the sloping deck of the after-half of the ship.

The forepart—for the ship broke in two just forward of the bridge—was drifting out to see with no sign of life aboard.

The wreck, north of the river mouth, is too far from the beach to permit a line being shot to the precariously clinging men, and too far in-shore to allow ships to come within three-quarters of a mile of the wreck from the sea-ward side.

While a southwesterly gale drove the roaring seas across the Spit and gusts of rain veiled the high headland of Cape Disappointment, the two halves of the ship pounded farther and farther apart, until at dusk, a half-mile of churning water separated them.

The stern was resting upon a comparatively even-keel, grinding upon the submerged sand ridge over which she broke in two but the forward part of the broken ship was blowing and plunging off seaward.

PERILS OF TRIP OVER ATLANTIC FINALLY TOLD

Relatives of Three French Airmen Hear About Close Calls

YANKEE NEGLECTED

Art Schreiber Given Little Attention on Le Bourget Arrival

PARIS, June 16. (AP)—Armeno Lotti Jr., with the successful eastward flight of the Yellow Bird hardly over, tonight said: "We will try to make it the other way next time; Paris to New York and without stops anywhere." Lotti added: "Perhaps officialdom will permit us to try it, now that we have proven we can do it." Whether the return flight would be attempted this summer was not said.

PARIS, June 16. (AP)—Three gallant Frenchmen swopped out of the clouds this evening to the acclaim which had awaited them two days for being the first to blaze the name of France on the dangerous air route over the Atlantic that so many have attempted and few traversed.

ART'S CAREFUL

PARIS, June 16. (US)—"I'm not kissing any girls I don't know," said Arthur Schreiber, the Yellow Bird stowaway, when a group of pretty Paris girls tried to embrace him tonight. Schreiber who ranks as the most modest of the group of four who came over on the Yellow Bird, has limited his activities here thus far to signing his initials on bits of paper for souvenirs.

Jean Assolant, Rene Lefevre and Armeno Lotti Jr., had been taken to the heart of France tonight for their flight without stop from Old Orchard, Maine, to Comillas, Spain, only a few miles short of their goal of French territory. They supplied that missing link in two hops today and came down out of the clouds at 8:47 p. m. (1:47 p. m. C. S. T.) to be hugged, kissed and cheered by their relatives and a large crowd that awaited them at Le Bourget airport.

Problem Unsolved

Assolant gave the audience a thrill by his dramatic touch in streaking over the field at 150 miles an hour and landing while the Yellow Bird still was going more than 60 miles an hour.

"The last quarter hour was the worst," he said as he jumped from the cockpit and his mother smothered him with kisses. Lotti summed up the experience of all of them when he said "the transatlantic flying problem has not been solved."

How close tonight's heroes came to finding a watery grave like many

Methodist Board of Temperance Comes Out in Praise Of Six Civilian Slayings by Uncle Sam's Prohibition Enforcement Officers

By FULTON LEWIS
Universal Service Correspondent

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The Methodist Episcopal church, through its board of temperance, prohibition and public morals, today officially approved, without qualification, six recent killing of civilians by prohibition enforcement officers.

The church also essayed to take to task under the characterization of "the bootleg press" the newspapers that have published accounts of the killings and brought the situation to the attention of the public.

The killings cited, and individually defended and approved, are the DeKing case in Aurora, Ill.; the Jacob Hanson case near Niagara Falls, N. Y.; the I'm Alone case, in which a seaman was drowned; the killing of Ottmer Herman, a 21-year-old alleged rumrunner in Washington by Policeman Rouse, subsequently cheered in the house of representatives; the killing of 17-year-old J. W. Kendrick by three dry officers in Abingdon, Va.; and the Virkula slaying at International Falls, Minn., a week ago.

The comments consisted of blanket approval in all cases. In the Abingdon killing, the church board declared:

"This case was of several Virginia officers who were brought to trial on account of the death of an automobile driver alleged to be violating the prohibition law. The first accounts looked rather bad. The dead 'boy' it seems was a 'college student' and was inexcusably murdered. Unfortunately for the wet propagandists the case came to trial and a great deal of evidence was introduced which developed the actual facts. The jury refused to convict the officers."

J. W. Kendrick, 17-year-old student of Emory and Henry college, a Southern Methodist school, according to the testimony brought out in the trial of one of the three Virginia officers, was shot through the back of the head by Deputy Sheriffs James Crowe, and William Worley and town Policeman James McReynolds on the midnight of May 6 while riding in an automobile driven by his friend, Paul Phelps.

The defense admitted through the trial that Kendrick had not violated the prohibition law, and that the accused officers did not suspect him of having violated it. In point of fact the defense attempted to show that Kendrick was not in the machine at all.

The trial resulted in a hung jury when 11 jurors insisted on a one-year sentence and the twelfth held out for five years. The retrial has been set for the September term of court, and all three officers are free on $5,000 bond each.

In commenting on the DeKing case the Methodist statement said:

"The second case was that of the DeKing killing in Aurora, Ill. That seemed perfectly horrible until the facts were ascertained and broadcast. Now the most intelligent people know what happened and see considerable significance in the fact that the grand jury refused to indict the officer involved."

The Illinois attorney general is now investigating the failure of the grand jury to indict the officer on the strength of charges that the county prosecuting attorney, who ordered the raid in which Mrs. DeKing was killed, failed to present all the facts of the case when he brought the matter before the gand jury.

Concerning the killing last year of Jacob Hanson, exalted ruler of the Elks' lodge of Niagara Falls, when accosted on the road while driving home, by two customs border patrolmen, the Methodist statement said:

"The third case was that of Jacob Hanson, in North New York. We are not acquainted with the details of this matter, but we notice that the jury has declined to convict the officer who shot Hanson."

Concerning the I'm Alone case, the state says:

"That case has gone to arbitration, but the discussion of it by the United States state department was so illuminating that American opinion seems to be about unanimous while British opinion quickly showed that it would tolerate no defense of the smuggler."

On the Rouse case, the board said Officer Rouse, "killed a rumrunner in the act of committing two felonies," adding:

"The rum-runner had made an assault upon him by the use of poisonous gases produced by a smoke screen devise. Officer Rouse was completely exonerated by the grand jury."

The smoke screen device in this case was found to be the usual kerosene base smoke, with no poisonous addition, so far as has been disclosed.

In regard to the Virkula killing, the statement says:

"And now the air is full of out-crys about the 'murder' of a man on the Minnesota-Canada border—from first account, the action of the officer does not seem to be defensible but past experience prompts us to wait for later and perhaps more reliable facts."

The Methodists' attack on the press follows:

"Such wet journalistic champions as the Chicago Tribune have run the gamut of abuse and sobs in regard to the 'outrages' by officers of the law who are attempting to suppress criminal bootleggers.

"This outrage propaganda is particularly hurtful because it is getting the people into a frame of mind where they will not believe anything they see in the bootleg press. It will be made more difficult to secure adequate punishment of any officer who in the future may in fact make unwarranted use of his weapons in the enforcement of the prohibition law.

"The people will be inclined to think that the bootleg press is trying to 'frame' him as a means of injuring prohibition."

BULLET TAKES LIFE OF YOUNG CAFE OWNER

Wellington's Public Square Scene of Fatal Gunplay Late Sunday

PAINTER HELD IN JAIL

Mat Austin Declines Preliminary Hearing On Death Charge

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, June 16.—Halted as he strolled through the Wellington public square, Jimmy Johnson, 23-year-old cafe owner, was shot and instantly killed by a bullet from an automatic pistol at 2:30 Sunday afternoon.

Mat Austin, 27, a painter, is in jail under charges of murder in connection with the shooting.

Johnson went face down on the pavement under the gaze of a dozen on-lookers. Austin, seized at once, made no effort to escape. Eye-witnesses said that Austin had approached the slain man with the words:

"You've been saying things about me and I'm going to take it up."

The shooting followed after Johnson had taken a few steps away, witnesses told police. The single bullet fired entered Johnson's shoulder blade and went through to the heart, physicians declared.

Austin Sunday afternoon waived an examining trial and refused to make a statement, county officials reported. Efforts to determine the motive for the shooting were unsuccessful except for inferences drawn from the brief conversation that preceeded the shot.

Johnson is survived by his widow. No funeral arrangements had been completed late Sunday.

He captured the reptile several months ago. It licks out menacingly at those who approach Sides' motor car and writhes with appreciation when given an egg. The tame snake breaks the egg by muscular contraction. Shortly after it has swallowed the meal a dull "pop" is heard inside its coils.

A Mysterious Messenger

There were times in her young and joyous life when Adele Castle scrutinized appearances with a lively and inquiring gaze and seriously asked herself whether the shadow of a mystery was not hanging over her father's head.

Outwardly, at least, Virgil Ellsworth Castle's life conformed to the standards that govern the conduct of cultured and affluent people. Although of medium stature, he looked quite distinguished. He had fine features and carried himself with an air. His tastes were excellent and he possessed a natural polish of manners. Though 50, he danced well, could swing a golf club expertly and he knew how to tell a story effectively. He was fond of high-flavored cigars, liked to wear a flower in his buttonhole and he adored his daughter.

Adele, being of a generation whose idols are rarely accepted on faith, wondered about him at times. She wondered rather hopefully, for in the eyes of youth there is an added fascination about a man who harbors a mystery. She was wondering about him this morning as she faced him across the breakfast table with its gleam of linen and its sparkle of old silver.

Fresh and lovely she looked in her pale-blue negligee, her face attractively tanned from a month of tennis and swimming and social whirls at a fashionable watering place in Maine, the slender line of her neck curving into a small, determined chin, her hair the color of blueberries in hazy sunlight, snuggled close to her face, like folded raven wings.

As was his habit, Virgil Ellsworth Castle was consuming the morning's news along with his eggs, toast and coffee.

"I see there is to be another expedition to the north pole," he observed.

"Splendid!" said Adele, and her keen dark-brown eyes seemed to say that life was a gorgeous and intriguing affair when one was only 20. "The world is getting too stuffy. We need more breathing space."

She sipped her coffee and gave Mr. Castle a long, wondering glance.

"It looks like civil war in Mexico."

"Horrid! Why can't people be chummy and nice instead of always fighting?"

A thick and stately manservant entered to announce that a lady wished to see Miss Castle.

"Somebody from Cartier's, probably," said Adele carelessly. "I was in there yesterday to see about a costume for the Mummer's Frolic. Please ask her to wait, Wambley."

Mr. Castle lighted one of the long, brown cigars he always smoked half way before departing for his office.

"Picaroon makes rich haul in fashionable suburb." As he read the caption a disapproving wrinkle appeared on his high forehead, surmounted by thick hair faintly sprinkled with gray. "Can't understand why the police permit a crook like that to run amuck. It's a scandal!"

"Oh," said Adele lightly. "The Picaroon isn't doing any particular harm. Only amusing himself. And he is such a deliciously romantic character."

"That's youth's way of seeing things," commented Mr. Castle with a whimsical sigh. "Always fascinated by anybody and anything that is mysterious and unconventional."

Adele regarded him archly. "You are quite fascinating yourself, you old dear."

"You are an outrageous flatterer. I'm nothing but an old duffer."

"Only 50. That's young these days. And you are not a day too old to be mysterious—just as mysterious as The Picaroon."

"But not quite so wicked, I hope."

"Who knows?" said Adele with mock gravity. "I often wonder about you, dad. I've been wondering a lot of late."

"Really?" Mr. Castle's fond smile sobered a little. "Let's hear."

"Oh, it's nothing I can put my finger on. It's the way you look sometimes and the little things you do and say—but mostly the things you don't say. Don't deny it, you old fraud, because I have been watching you. People sometimes talk to hide their thoughts, don't they! That's what you have been doing this morning."

The Headline

Mr. Castle looked embarrassed. As if to hide his expression, he puffed a big cloud of smoke from his cigar.

"You have been talking about the north pole and Mexico and The Picaroon," Adele pursued, "and all the time your mind has been on something else."

"You are an extraordinary young lady," Mr. Castle remarked.

"And I have an extraordinary father. The north pole, Mexico, The Picaroon—stuff and nonsense! You have been holding something back. I have good eyes, dad. I can read the headlines in your newspaper clear across the table. There's one headline you haven't said any-

Veterinary Professor Fully Admits Sharing Love Nest With Leora Hix, Brutally Slain Ohio Co-Ed

Prior to his coming to the United States five years ago for further training, Mr. Yu was connected with the Methodist organization in Korea. He did one year's work in Clarendon college, and has spent the last four years in S. M. U. During the coming year, it was announced Sunday night, the Ansil Lynn league will devote a large part of their usual missionary budget to the support of Mr. Yu's work.

Drawing a comparison between Korea and the United States resolves itself into a listing of many opposites, according to the talk given by Mr. Yu Sunday evening. For instance, in his native land the conventional title "Mr" follows the surname, instead of preceeding it. And instead of sounding like "mister" it is a term sounding like "sahban," the second syllable being accented, and pronounced with the French nasal effect. The corresponding title for the ladies sounded like "prim" in Mr. Yu's translation, which would seem to be entirely fitting in some cases.

"Christian missionaries have been working in our country about 40 years. In the last 10 years they have done their greatest work. If I want to become a citizen of your political state, I must answer a thousand questions; but if I want to join your Christian church, I am welcome to walk in. The Christian missionaries have done more toward the establishment of peace in the world than all the politicians and diplomats."

SUIT TO TEST RECENT LAW

Raley's Case Against County Goes to Trial

The constitutionality of a newly enacted law forbidding Texas counties to plead the statute of limitations in certain delinquent tax suits, will be tested in Wichita county's defense of an $18,000 claim made by Guy C. Raley, tax collector, in a suit to go on trial for the second time in the 78th district court Monday morning.

Wayne Somerville, county attorney, and Harvey Harris, special attorney for the county, have announced that they expect to carry the fight on the new bill to the supreme court should the case be decided against them.

Mr. Raley is seeking a refund of commissions he claims to have turned into the county treasury for delinquent tax collections covering the years 1923-1925. The law repealing his right to the commissions has since been declared invalid by the state supreme court.

Council to Consider Water Improvement

The city council will consider recommended improvements in many municipal facilities, chiefly in the waterworks system, outlined in the annual report of George D. Fairtrace, city manager, which was completed Saturday for submission to the council meeting Monday night.

Raising of the spillway, construction of a dam at the head of and a canal around the lake, a new filtration and pumping plant, a flume from the lake to the plant and additional trunk main lines were advised in the report. Other needed changes in municipal facilities were outlined. The report also showed a cash balance of $127,558.44 for the city under the city manager type of government, as compared with a deficit of over twice this much last year.

YEGGS FAIL TO "CRACK" SAFE

Daring Daylight Attempt "Amateurish," Says Chief

An attempt was made to break open a safe in the Bass-Mer and company barber supply shop, 817 Scott street, early Sunday afternoon according to Frank Burns, chief of police. One man suspected of connection with the attempt was under investigation at police headquarters Sunday.

The shop was entered through a door, leading into an adjoining garage, which had been pried open. A sledge hammer and other tools, taken from the garage, were used in the attempt to break into the safe. A show case had been shoved in front of the door to the shop to hide the operations of the knob-knockers, it was said. Nothing was taken from the place.

The safe was badly battered, the knob and handle having been knocked completely off and the hinges bearing the scars of heavy blows from the hammer. The crudeness of the job and the manner used in attempting to open the safe indicated that the work was probably done by amateurs, Chief Burns declared. The suspect will be held for further questioning Monday.

MEXICAN WAR VETERAN DIES

William Fitzhugh Buckner Next to Last Survivor

PARIS, Mo., June 16. (AP)—William Fitzhugh Buckner, 101 years old, believed to have been next to the last surviving veteran of the Mexican war, died at his home here today.

One of the thousands of young men who responded to the country's call for service in the war with Mexico, William Fitzhugh Buckner survived that international struggle by more than 80 years.

In January, 1928, he rounded out a century of life. A few months later a perusal of the records of the pension bureau at Washington disclosed that the fingers of one hand were too numerous to count the living veterans of the Mexican war.

At that time, besides Mr. Buckner, there were only two others, Richard Albert Howard of Sterling City, Texas, and Owen Thomas Edgar of Washington, each three years his junior.

Mr. Buckner had a picturesque and somewhat adventurous career and at 100, although white-bearded, the years had failed to change his erect stature developed by his military training as a youth.

Born in Caroline county, Virginia, Jan. 27, 1828, Mr. Buckner had taken up his residence in the central West when a young man. He was only about 18 years old when the war with Mexico began, and enlisted in Company A, First Missouri mounted volunteers, under Col. Alexander William Doniphan.

As a member of the expeditionary force that marched to Mexico from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Mr. Buckner with his regiment participated in several important engagements, including the battle of Taos, N. M.

Hoover's Wheelhorses in Congress Gallop Wildly About as He Worries

By FRASER EDWARDS

WASHINGTON, June 16. (US)—Chaotic is the only adjective that can adequately describe the situation in congress today, created by Senator Borah's bold move to limit tariff revision to the agricultural schedules.

Confusion over the farm bill was slight in comparison. Administration leaders in the senate are running around in circles threatening to abandon any tariff revision at this session or to "make" a bill on the senate floor, if the Borah resolution is adopted.

President Hoover is represented by the general revisionists as being in a highly disturbed state of mind. Democratic leaders are in a stew over the best course to pursue. Republican leaders in the house, who see their handiwork in the Hawley bill about to be torn to shreds, are raging to say the least.

The rank and file in the senate is torn by conflicting desires to get away from a summer recess and to participate in the grab provided in the Hawley bill. They will be reminded that the recess is off, if the Borah resolution is adopted, by 11 electric fans of the old baroom type, which have been installed over the week-end.

While none of the leaders seem to have the vision to predict the ultimate outcome of the adoption of the Borah resolution, there appears to be more than enough votes to insure its passage, which will play havoc with the Republican program.

White House visitors declare positively that President Hoover is opposed to the Borah resolution. Although he is not satisfied with the Hawley bill, the president is said to be willinging to have tariff revision restricted strictly to agricultural products.

The president was said to have been as busy over the week-end as Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the senate and an advocate of general tariff revision, trying to round up votes against the Borah resolution. His success in that direction will be indicated by the vote cast by Senator Allen of Kansas, who, with his colleague, Senator Capper, was called to the White House.

Like Abou Ben Adhem, Allen's name leads all the rest on the senate roll call. Since he was appointed to the senate at the instance of Mr. Hoover he is regarded as a bell-wether of administration desires. Yet Allen publicly declared himself in favor of the Borah resolution before consulting the president.

Unless Allen is convinced over the week-end that the resolution is not broad enough to include a revision of the cotton textile schedules, he will vote for it. And if he does it will be a "tip off" that Mr. Hoover has been given another rebuff by the senate with some of his best friends participating in it.

De Priest Plans Party For Solons But He Bars Two

WASHINGTON, June 16. (AP)—Rep. De Priest, the negro Republican member of the house from Illinois, has invited Republican members of congress to attend a benefit musicale and reception Friday night at the Washington auditorium. Only exceptions were made—Representative Pritchard of North Carolina and Representative Vestal of Indiana. The former refused to accept an office adjoining that of De Priest in the house office building and Mrs. Vestal has been reported active in a move within the congressional club to blackball the wife of the negro representative.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps Her So Much

Pittsburgh, Pa.—"I was just completely run-down. I had tired, heavy, sluggish feelings and I could not eat. I was losing in weight. I read so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what a good medicine it is, that I started taking it. I have taken eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and about the same in tablet form. This is one medicine a woman should have in the house all the time. I am improving every day and I sure am able to eat. I am willing to answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ella Richards, 21 Chautauqua St., N. S. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Garden Club Members Join Vote To Select City's Official Flower

By MRS. L. N. CASON
Record News Society Editor

All over the country they've been naming the city flower. Now we are going to name Wichita's. And if ever a city had flowers to choose from, Wichita Falls has had this spring and early summer. That "daffodil, that comes before the swallow dares," had hardly slipped away when lilac made the city fragrant and bridal wreath and spirea turned bushes to dripping snow. Then the larkspur; it bloomed in a carpet of beauty. Pinks and purples and orchids and whites and that deep true blue of the delphinium. With it, poppies made the earth glorious. And poppies this year, upset in our minds, the old lines.

"Pleasures are like poppies spread;
You seize the flower—the bloom is dead."

At the Garden club, organized at a most enthusiastic meeting of the civic department of the Woman's Forum something over two weeks ago, Mrs. Frank Timberlake told how to keep poppies fresh. That they can remain fresh, we know, for we have seen them used as most gorgeous decorations. Roses, there are always. Sweet peas are bountiful.

The Garden club is sponsoring the naming of a city flower. Votes are to be sent to The Record News. Each day, a blank will appear in the morning paper for you to use in casting your vote—or votes. Mrs. Frank Timberlake, president of the Garden club, has appointed as auditors, to assist in the counting and classifying of these votes, Mrs. Landon Cullum, Mrs. Ola G. Hamlin and Mrs. O. B. Kiel. Members of the Garden club are waiting to cast their votes.

Any Forum member, by the way, is eligible to membership in the Garden club. The original members were Mesdames Ben G. Oneal, L. L. Boardman, C. L. Burns, Louise Miller, Walter Campbell, C. E. Bailey, W. W. Cook, A. G. Holmes, C. P. Burton, T. M. Conrey, Bert Bean, Rhea Howard, Frank Timberlake, R. L. Hargrave, Fred Weeks, O. B. Kiel, Leslie Humphries, John Merrick, John Wagner Caldwell, W. H. Myers of Henrietta, J. L. Elkin, Ola G. Hamlin, Landon Cullum, Hubert Harrison, Fred Crouch, W. M. Cason.

Since the organization, the following members have added their names to the Garden club: Mesdames O. E. Maer, R. D. Kennedy, Newton Maer, Charles Tucker, Ivan Murchison, C. E. McCutchen, Billy Staniforth, E. B. Gorsline, Luther Hoffman, Emil Hermann, Carey Hunter, Frank Mercer, Marvin Smith and Carrie Joline.

Wichitans are asked to help name a city flower by popular vote. All that is required is to fill out your blank and send it in. Someone may like the sunflower; some one may vote for the daisy. You have your choice.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

We wonder how long they have been electioneering. In the path of the lava flowing down from Vesuvius, they have been using new processes to make new discoveries and among them are signs painted on the walls of Pompeii that prove they electioneered before A. D. 79. Three of the signs, read: "Mansa Sabinus never gets drunk," "If you care for good bread and better plays, vote for Cleonius Prisus," and "Vote for Julius Politius, a man as handsome as the god Apollo."

Here are prohibition, agriculture, morality and physical perfection advertised.

A. A. Milne's dramatization of Kenneth Graham's "Wind in the Willows," is quite as charming a thing as we have read. The "Duck's Ditty," when spring comes to the duck pond, gives the tone:

"Duck's tails, drake's tails,
Yellow feet a'quiver;
Yellow bills all out of sight
Busy in the river."

We have just read an order of King Henry VIII for one of the ladies of honor of Catherine of Aragon, one "right dear and well beloved lady Lucy," and it includes three loaves of bread per day; three and a half gallons of ale; a sirloin of beef; a piece of beef; a stroke of roast and a piece of mutton; a mess of porage; a gallon of wine (after supper), one preket and four sizes of wax with eight candles and one torch and at every time of "our" moving, one whole cart for the carriage of her stuff. King Henry was a generous provider.

Oxford university is making Ambassador Dawes a doctor of civil laws almost immediately on his arrival.

Mrs. Rinehart says we elect our president but draft their wives to quite as definite a public career. It is a career that is at times rather bitterly criticised.

Britain's first cabinet minister is Miss Margaret Grace Bondfield — "Saint Maggie," to British laborites. Her career began nearly 40 years ago in a London sweat shop.

In 1864, at the beginning of the evolution controversy, Benjamin Disraeli exclaimed: "The question is this: Is man an ape or an angel? I, my lord, am on the side of the angels?" But Benjamin Disraeli, would, were he living now, in all probability, listen to the scientific argument.

At an orchid show held in 1928 in New York, an American grower displayed under glass, a single plant bearing two flowers. The plant was valued at $10,000 and it represented 42 years of nurturing care.

We love beauty. But 42 years spent in bringing to perfection that only a few could see and no one touch, seems to us 42 wasted years.

"Our yesterdays follow us."

Have you ever, in approaching a bridge across a river, as your train goes higher and higher, noticed how small the ugly things on the ground seem? We are not much given to moralizing, but we have wished we could always look at ugly things from far above.

June Bride-Elect Honored at Party By Mrs. A. Kriss

Honoring Miss Evelyn Bailey, whose marriage to Nathan Harris of Fort Worth has recently been announced as an event of June 25, Mrs. A. Kriss, entertained Friday evening at 8 o'clock at her home, 1304 Harrison, with a lovely bridge party.

Pink and green was the color motif in decorations and in refreshments. The house was full of lovely flowers, sheafs of pink gladioli emphasizing the color scheme.

In the games, Miss Babetta Joseph received the high prize award and Miss Bernice Dan, the low. Mrs. Harry Freundlich was fortunate in receiving the cut prize. The honoree was presented with a lovely gift.

An ice course was served in pink and green crystal service on the tables which were covered with lovely Italian cutwork cloths.

The guests list included the honoree, Misses Babbette Joseph, Martha Bergolofsky, Bernice Dan, Grace Persky, Clara Persky, Bernice Persky, Dora Blank, Rosaline Joseph, Geo. Cohen, Eudice Weinstein, Odessa Katz, Mrs. Harry Freundlich and the hostess.

DIVORCE LAWS UNFAIR TO MAN

Alimony Diggers Can Get What They Want

If an Alimony Coupon Were Attached to Every Marriage License More Men Would Be Encouraged To Wed, Because They Would Be Protected From the Women Who Regard Matrimony as Easy Graft.

A young man writes me: "I have a certain respect for the gold-digger. That is her business and she is frank about it, and if a man loses to her he should be game enough not to howl about it. A girl who spends her evening entertaining a fat, stupid, old man deserves every cent that she gets out of him. She gives her smiles and her youth to a man who bores her to tears and she earns her money. Moreover, he walks into her parlor with his eyes open.

The real cheat, the real gold-digger, is the wife who makes a fine man's life miserable for 25 or 30 years and then when he tries to free himself from her, holds him up and robs him of everything he has, or fastens herself upon him like a leech for the balance of his life.

"Many men, for the sake of keeping a home together for their children, endure marriages that are a martyrdom. Their wives are cold and hard and indifferent to them and never show any tenderness or affection or sympathy or understanding. Often they are querulous and complaining, or shrewish and ill-tempered. But the men stand by for their children. During all of this time they work hard and support their wives in comfort and luxury. Perhaps they manage to accumulate some property. Then when the children are grown and on their feet, the men feel that they have done their duty and are entitled to a little peace and happiness in what is left of their lives, but if they get divorces from these women who have made them so unhappy it costs them about everything they have saved up and sells them into slavery besides to pay alimony.

"That is why I shall never marry unless divorce is made easier and less expensive to a man. It isn't pleasant to think that a wife can make life a hell on earth for her husband and then take away from him every cent he has scraped together by toil and self-denial, and force him to go on supporting her to the end of her days."

I agree with my correspondent that the divorce laws are cruelly unjust and unfair to men, and that they promote grafting among women who regard marriage as an avocation instead of a vocation, and who consider that the easiest money in the world is alimony. It is an open scandal that many women marry with one eye on the altar and the other on the divorce courts, for well they know that once they get their clutches on a man they can always keep their greedy hands in his pockets so long as he has a penny in them. Such women do not even try to do their duty as wives, or to make a success of marriage.

In reality they want their marriages to be failures, and they look forward to divorce as a means of ridding them of their husbands and giving them back their freedom, and at the same time providing them with a steady income.

A banker told me not long ago that of the hundreds of women who came in on the first of every month with their alimony checks, a large proportion of them deposited the money in the savings department. They had a good living outside and their alimony was just so much velvet. And the banker added that much of this alimony was blood money wrung from men who were having a hard struggle to get along, men who had poor jobs that barely sufficed them a living.

Of course, our alimony laws are based upon the theory that women are poor, helpless creatures who cannot earn their own bread and butter and who must have some man to support them, but this is not the case nowadays when practically every woman is trained to some gainful occupation, and where a girl often earns a better salary than the man she marries. Certainly it is absurd in such a case to grant the wife alimony if the marriage goes on the rocks. The woman is just as capable of making her living as the man is. She has taken her chances, as he has, in the matrimonial lottery and when she loses out she should be a good enough sport to accept the result as the an does.

Nor should a woman be able to collect alimony unless she can prove by disinterested witnesses that she has been a good wife. The lazy, trifling, no-account woman who doesn't even make her man physically comfortable; the half-time wife who spends her summers in Europe and her winters in Florida and leaves her husband to shift for himself; the spendthrift wife who keeps a man's nose on the grindstone by her extravagance; the peevish, fretful, ill-natured wife who torments her husband like a gadfly, gets no more than she deserves when she loses her job. She deserves no reward for having failed in her duty as a wife.

But there are other wives who do deserve some payment for years of faithful devotion and the kind of service that money cannot recompense. There are women who marry poor men and who cook and slave and pinch nickels for them, and who make of themselves the stepping stones on which their husbands walk to success, and these wives have a right to share in whatever their husbands have accumulated. They have earned their part in it, and when their husbands outgrow them, or tire of them, they should not be turned out penniless, like wornout old work horses to starve.

Divorce is common and it is going to be commoner. We will never go back to regarding marriage as an indissoluble union. More and more men and women are going to feel that if they have made a mistake in marriage the sensible thing is to rectify it as they would any other mistake. And this being the case, I believe that every young couple during the days of courtship should discuss and decide on what they will do in case their marriage turns out a failure.

The idea of an alimony coupon being attached to a marriage license is shocking to our old-fashioned ideas of the until-death-do-us-part marriage, but it would be a modern improvement that would save a lot of trouble in many cases. It would automatically weed out the woman who marries for divorce court loot; it would cause many a wife who is now loafing on her job to get busy if she knew she would be left flat unless she could show that she had given good service and been pleasant.

And it would keep young men from being scared off matrimony, because they would know they would get a square deal, and, in the event that they and their Marias failed to agree, they would only have to pay what they had contracted to pay.

French Fliers Land in Paris

Countrymen Acclaim Trio Who Crossed Ocean

others who had preceded them was told when Lotti received newspapermen in the dining room of his father's hotel.

"Our motor stopped in mid-ocean and really we were scared," he said.

Stowaway Neglected

Assolant interrupted him with, "speak for yourself, Armeno, say you were scared. I did not have time to be scared."

Arthur Schreiber, the 22-year-old stowaway, was rather neglected by the French enthusiasts but managed to get in a word. "Yes, there was a time when it did look bad."

It developed that the trouble was due to a leaking valve which the fliers thought had been fixed up before they took off from Old Orchard.

"When we felt the motor drying up on Friday night," Assolant said, "we took a quick look over the side and decided we had reached the shores of France between Biarritb and Bordeaux. We made up our minds to land there. No one was on the beach when we landed. Lotti had to borrow a bicycle from the parish priest to go to Comillas for assistance."

Flier Wants Mother

Assolant added succinctly: "I went to sleep."

Aviation Minister Laurent-Eynac and Norman Armour, American charge d'affaires, with representatives from the foreign office and the American embassy, were waiting at the field but the first words of Assolant, first man out of the plane, were: "Where is mother?" Mother was right there.

"I would like to get a glass of white wine," Assolant said immediately after his mother let him escape from her embrace. The aviators were taken to the headquarters of the 34th regiment where the aviation minister and Commandant Renoise officially received them.

"Where do I come in," asked Schreiber.

"You were lucky to have come in at all," one Frenchman remarked.

Lotti admitted that the weight of the stowaway undoubtedly prevented the Yellow Bird from reaching France. "We had dispensed with every ounce of extra weight, not even taking bananas or gum boots, and Schreiber endangered our lives by his act. It is safely over now. I bear him no hard feelings but when I was startled 20 minutes fro Old Orchard by his hand on my shoulder I wanted to wring Schreiber's neck.

"I made Schreiber sign a rude contract aboard the plane providing for a 50-50 split of all newspaper earnings with Assolant and Lefevre. I have signed him up with the same syndicate as myself so the stories won't repeat and spoil each others value. I have signed Schreiber for $20,000 for an exclusive story for a syndicate."

Lotti added: "Schreiber was an unwelcome guests aboard the plane but he will now be my guest at my hotel because of my warm friendship for Americans.

ZOO POPULAR

13,000 Visit Exhibits At Scotland Park On Sunday

A record-breaking crowd, estimated at 13,000, visited the Wichita Falls Municipal zoo Sunday, according to C. C. Bunnenberg, city park superintendent. This is the largest crowd to visit the zoo since its opening.

Explanations for the large number of visitors may have been a combination of "the beautiful weather, the weather prophet, and the baby monkey," Mr. Bunnenberg declared. "The weather prophet" is a ground hog, which was recently presented to the zoo and which has attracted a great amount of attention since its arrival a few days ago.

Business prospects and the general financial outlook for the state were reported good by representatives at this meeting, it was said.

M'DONALD AND DAWES CONFER

Naval Disarmament Discussed Informally

line with the renewed disarmament movement. Others interpreted it merely as giving notice that other nations would be welcomed, in short that Great Britain and America did not regard the problem as exclusively their own.

The much discussed proposal for a visit by the premier to Washington did not come up in today's conversations, both parties asserted.

The premier with his own hand wrote out a summary of the conversation with agreement by General Dawes and handed it to the newspaper men.

Conversation "Satisfactory"

It said:

"We have had a conversation regarding the present position of the question of naval disarmament as between the United States and Great Britain. It has been informal and general and most satisfactory.

"His excellency (Mr. Dawes) proposes to refer to the subject at the Pilgrim's dinner in London on Tuesday night and I shall do the same almost at the same time at Lossiemouth and that is intended to be the beginning of the negotiations. We both wish to make it clear that other naval powers are expected to cooperate in these negotiations upon the successful consummation of which the fate of the world depends."

Dawes Given Document

After reading the statement to the large group of reporters, Mr. MacDonald and the ambassador shook hands and posed for photographers. The premier handed the statement to Mr. Dawes, remarking: "It is a very historical document and I have great pleasure in handing it to General Dawes to take back with him."

Mr. Dawes and his party took leave of their host and Mr. MacDonald's entourage and drove to Aviemore, 40 miles away to catch the 6 o'clock train for London.

All along the journey from London the progress of Ambassador Dawes was watched with keen interest by the British people. His untraditional speed in presenting credentials to King George and then his almost immediate journey northward to chat with the premier captured the popular imagination.

It had been widely reported that he brought the British premier an invitation from President Hoover to visit him in Washington for discussion of the relations of the two natons.

There prevails a strong feeling over here that the American president and the British chief of state are determined that their nations together shall take vigorous leadership in the settlement of the armament problem as the first requirement for world peace, so Gengra: Dawes everywhere has been hailed with every evidence of sincere cordiality.

The 50 reporters and photographers waiting outside the baronial residence could see the two in cheerful colloquy. The premier was writing and looking up over his spectacles now and then to catch the American's nod of agreement. General Dawes puffed his black pipe placidly. When they finished preparing the statement, the ambassador turned and saw the waiting reporters, some of whom he had known on both sides of the ocean.

He waved his hand and grinned his captivating boyish grimace. Then the two came out and Mr. MacDonald read the statement.

Each commemorated the meeting by planting a young larch tree in the mansion lawn.

A few minutes later the good byes were said and the ambassador motored 30 miles across the highland moor to catch a 6:05 p. m. train at Aviemore for London. He had arrived at Forres at 1:33 p. m.

"Our interview was most satisfactory," the American ambassador told representatives of the American Press. "It was marked by no difference of opinion. It was very evident that the prime minister had given most earnest thought to this problem of world importance and that successful solution of it was a matter first in his heart."

The impression made on him, he added, was that the premier was a man of sincere courage and honesty of purpose. Their discussion, the ambassador insisted, was confined strictly to the question of naval disarmament. Debt settlements and other international issues were not mentioned.

which he was riding with his wife and a Ford sedan driven by W. G. Webb of Bowie. The accident occurred at the curve west of the entrance to Lakeside park on the old lake road.

Hamilton received a compound fracture of the left hip and thigh, a severe cut on the left hand and numerous cuts and bruises on the body, according to Dr. Everett Jones at the Wichita Falls Clinic hospital where the injured man and his wife were taken. Three ambulances answered the call to the scene of the wreck, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton being brought to the hospital in Hines and Merkle machines. The injured man's condition was serious, Dr. Jones stated, and he will remain in the hospital for several weeks.

Side Car Crushed

Mrs. Hamilton received severe bruises on the left shoulder and knee. Her condition was not regarded as serious, it was said. She was riding in a side-car of the motorcycle at the time. The entire left side of the cycle was swiped by the crash, Mr. Hamilton being thrown across a ditch over water at the side of the road, according to police reports.

A collision at the corner of Seventh and Holliday streets about 7 o'clock Saturday evening resulted in injuries to five men and one woman. The gas tank on one of the cars was smashed in the collision and the liquid became ignited, the four occupants of the car receiving minor burns before they could get out of the machine.

Miss Gladys Powell, 1418 Sixteenth street, suffered burns on the face, scalp and arms, and lacerations and bruises. She was reported resting well at the Hargrave-Walker hospital Sunday.

William Youree, R. M. Fisher, and C. J. Jackson, occupants of the burned car, received minor burns, bruises and cuts and were given first aid treatment at the Hargrave-Walker hospital.

M. M. Johnson, 1710 Fillmore street, and Olin Hearn, 1905 Lucile street, who were in the other car, received bruises and cuts. They received first aid treatment at the Wichita General hospital. Firemen were called to the scene of the crash to extinguish flames which quickly spread over the wrecked automobile.

Don Faulkner, age 9, was struck by an automobile in front of 909 Van Buren street about 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The boy was not seriously hurt, according to the physician's report.

Boy Injured

A collision between an automobile and a truck at the corner of Oak and Virginia streets about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon resulted in minor injuries to Jack Lauderdale of the Gaines Motor Sales company, and Perry Cowan, 903 Virginia street.

Oliver Woodard, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Woodard, 1201 North Seventh street, received a broken leg when his motorcycle skidded on the street car tracks downtown and fell on him early Saturday evening. He was taken to the Hargrave-Walker hospital for treatment, and was reported resting well Sunday night.

V. G. Lay, who lives on Wichita street, received a deep gash on the neck and other injuries when the car in which he was riding turned over on the Henrietta road. When taken to a local hospital, after a Burris ambulance had been called to his home by a motorist who had picked the injured man up, Mr. Lay refused treatment and walked out of the hospital, according to attendants. The ambulance driver stated that the injured man had bled profusely from the cut in his neck.

Herbert Kaufman's ◇ ◇ ◇ HOPELESS CRIPPLES ◇ ◇ ◇ Daily Editorial

THE TOWN'S full of one-legged and armless men who still manage to hold first rate positions despite a few missing parts. They may need crutches but their ideas don't. They didn't lose their heads when they lost their limbs.

Pluck escaped amputation, so they remain in running condition. Paralysis isn't necessarily a disqualifying affliction unless it strikes the spine. Nobody is hopelessly maimed while his wishbone is left.

The only total cripple is an able bodied quitter.

Yellow streak is deadlier than yellow fever. Derricks are en route to lift battleships, but there isn't enough horsepower on earth to raise people higher than their ambitions, or shove a hangback to the fore. Surgery daily recreates faces, features and organs but can't put heart in a coward, any more than engineering has yet devised a gasoline engine to go without spark plugs.

Charity's funds are solely for helplessness. Philanthropy's billions for deserving causes. And they refuse to rob the important and the worthy to feed and foster folk who won't help themselves to grab able opportunity. Even socialism, in its rabidest frenzy, doesn't contemplate a paradise for drones. Democracy pledges nothing beyond the right to work with any tool of wit or craft. But its guarantees do not include stabilized forms of employment or the privilege to exist at community expense because available jobs may not momentarily suit individual preferences.

ROBOT IS a new name but efficiency and mechanical progress are familiar to the dimmest centuries. Ages, ancient and modern, have endeavored to reduce production costs and to simplify essential fabrication. Archimedes specialized in such inventions. Roman history is rife with their mention. But no "robot" ever aspired to be a substitute for the five senses. It isn't designed for brain tasks. It can't think, and therefore permanently threatens none but sluggards, who won't exercise the faculties that God gave them, the versatile kit with which purpose attains every objective, wilderness becomes metropolis, peasants gain kingdoms and illiterate immigrants evolved to realty magnates and merchant princes. There are just as fat fish in the sea as yesterday caught, but they are not jumping ashore to locate unoffered hooks. Granted that your line is empty, your bait can's full. Blind men, who saved their vision when they went sightless, contrive to recognize the main chance when they meet it.

Determination isn't thwarted by barriers. Pulitzer would have been the same potent journalist, had he always read Braille. Pearson's career wasn't aware of his infirmity. Frances Hubert discovered the secrets of the ant hill in the eternal dark.

Deafness shut Edison's ears, not his laboratory. And bed-ridden Nellie Revell, incapacitated from her neck down, received no demoralization orders from headquarters. The country's largest magazine subscription agency was developed by a mutilated boy with a wheel chair office. Where there's a will, there's more than one way to do anything.

4,000 Years of a Dream

IF YOU STUDY ancient history you sometimes learn some curious things. Prof. James H. Breasted, director of the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago, has found that the Egyptians of 2000 B. C. had political and social problems just like our own.

In politics, they were using the cry, "Turn the rascals out," and wondering if it would ever be possible to set up a government that would be both just and efficient.

In their social organization they were despairing of the future and bewailing the sins of the younger generation, the follies of the rich and the general uselessness of trying to improve the lot or raise the intelligence of the ordinary man.

Professor Breasted reveals that the Egyptians of 4,000 years ago, crying for a governmental housecleaning, were completely confident that if only the rascals who sat in high places could be removed—perhaps they had treacherous cabinet members and nit-wit representatives, even in those days—everything would be serene, forever after.

"How little could these earliest social dreamers foresee that after 4,000 years their spiritual posterity would still be looking fondly for a new age—after they had turned the rascals out!" he remarks thoughtfully.

Probably these ancient Egyptians finally succeeded in throwing their set of rascals out, just as we, from time to time, have done, and afterwards, beyond doubt, they were puzzled and disillusioned to observe that things went on much as before. For one of the hardest things in the world to understand is the fact that all human progress is made very gradually. It is seldom visible to the naked eye. Sometimes, indeed, it looks like the reverse of progress.

But, after all, we do move forward. We still have the same problems that tormented the Egyptians 4,000 years ago; but we are handling them just a bit better. There is a shade more happiness in the world now than there was then; a trifle less cruelty, ignorance and malice.

These old Egyptians dreamed shining dreams of a reign of justice, freedom and peace. They never saw their dreams fulfilled; and we, 4,000 years after their time, have not seen them fulfilled either. But the important thing is that the dreams have persisted. We still have them, and we are still clinging to them.

Despite all the pessimism that is so popular nowadays, we have somehow managed, in these 40 centuries, to edge just a little bit closer to that fulfillment. And every man who dreams the old dream and hopes the old hope is, by the mere fact of dreaming and hoping, making the way a little bit smoother for the next 40 centuries.

A Pest Brings Riches

THE LOWLY rabbit, which used to be the chief pest of farmers in New Zealand and Australia, is now providing those people with a good deal of prosperity.

When rabbits were first introduced into the lands down under, they nearly ate the farmers out of house and home. So rapidly did they multiply that crops were devastated. Farmers used to organize great drives to round them up and exterminate them.

Then someone discovered that America was a marvelous market for felt hats. And rabbit skins are used in the making of felt. So, now, according to Maj. W. H. Cochrane, assistant secretary of the Bush Terminal in Brooklyn, many shiploads of rabbit skins reach New York annually from New Zealand and Australia, to make hats for the American head.

The result, of course, is that the same farmers who used to curse the rabbit are now making money off of him, and the ships that bring the pelts to this country are taking back autos, radios, plumbing equipment and other adjuncts of prosperity.

A Lesson in World Peace

DURING the years since the world war, when the wisest national leaders in the world have looked eagerly for some way out of the menace of armed conflict, it has grown more and more evident that one of the most significant facts on earth is the 3,000-mile undefended frontier between the United States and Canada.

Here are two nations that have found out how to get along in peace. They have found out so well, and are so confident about it, that they have taken it for granted that nothing can ever make them go to war with each other; thus they leave their frontier unguarded, without a soldier or a warship along its length.

Now the English are beginning to realize the significance of this fact. If Ramsay MacDonald and Herbert Hoover confer this summer on naval reductions, the Canadian frontier will surely stand in the forefront of their conversations. It shows what two nations can do if they try. It gives Britain and the United States a mark to shoot at.

100 Airplanes a Day

ANOTHER indication of the tremendous extent to which the aviation industry is expected to develop in the near future can be seen in action taken at the recent convention of the airport section of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

This organization recommended that all cities of 100,000 persons or more must build their airports so as to be able to handle a traffic of at least 100 planes a day. In addition, it was estimated that at least $500,000,000 will be spent on airports in the United States this year.

Figures such as these show how aviation is progressing. At present only Chicago reaches the 100-planes-per-day figure. If the small cities are to attain this level soon—and the industry's leaders believe they will—the business of aviation will have to expand to many times its present size.

thing about, although you have mentioned most of the others. It's the one in the upper left-hand corner—something about the mysterious Mr. Graves. Your mind has been on it all the time, although you have kept silent about it. Isn't it true, dad?"

Mr. Castle gazed awkwardly at the tip of his cigar. For a moment a startled look had come into his fine, gray eyes. Now he forced a smile.

"Careful! You are overworking that wonderful imagination of yours. Well, your mother was the same way. It runs in the family."

Adele's eyes grew thoughtful beneath the long, overhanging lashes. She had surprised a secret of some sort. She had noted her father's quick alarm as she alluded to the mysterious Mr. Graves.

For months she had been conscious of a wall rising between them, threatening to shatter the tender and delightful intimacy they had maintained ever since the death of her mother had drawn them closer together. Misgivings had crept into her mind, but they had been vague and shapeless things. She had sensed a mystery, dim and rather alluring. But now she glimpsed the dark outlines of a tragedy, and it made her afraid.

"Tell me, dad," she said softly. "Something is worrying you. What is it?"

He looked at her fresh, eager face across the table, noting the sensitive nostrils, the vital curve of the mouth, the firm little chin, the robust, captivating loveliness of her. She was a strange mixture, this exquisite daughter of his—a commingling of modern sophistication and the tender and wholesome sentiments of another generation. The sight of her was a stimulant. The smile he gave her was one of sheer affection and pride.

"There, now. That's enough of that. You must put those absurd notions out of your head. It's nothing, really. I have only been working a little harder than usual. A certain financial difficulty arose—something that——But it's practically over now. It will be happily settled in a little while. Dear me! A quarter after 9! I must go."

She fixed him with a keen, level, doubting gaze. She reached across the table, picked up the newspaper, and read the prominent caption in the upper left-hand corner.

POLICE STILL IN PURSUIT OF THE MYSTERIOUS MR. GRAVES

Headquarters Reported to Have Covered Fresh Clews Which May Lead to Arrest of Elusive Swindler

Who Is Mr. Graves?

She lifted her troubled gaze from the paper and looked at her father. Mr. Castle, who ruled his downtown office with the stern discipline of an autocrat, winced slightly beneath that steady, searching gaze. The indulgent smile with which he tried to mask his uneasiness was not wholly successful.

"Who is the mysterious Mr. Graves, dad? I didn't read the papers while I was away."

Her father had risen and stood with one hand resting on the chair. "Mr." Graves? Oh, nobody in particular. It's only a name, just as the Picaroon is only a name. Nobody knows who the man is."

"You are not very lucid, dad."

"Well, you have probably heard of Daniel Forester's operations. He cleaned up ten millions in ten months. It was the grossest kind of swindle. Forrester is dead now, but the police are still looking for a certain individual who is supposed to have been his partner. His true name isn't known, but somehow he has come to be designated as the 'mysterious Mr. Graves.' That's all there is to it."

"All, dad?"

"All that really matters. I doubt whether the mysterious Mr. Graves will ever be found."

"But this newspaper says the police have discovered fresh clues."

"Newspaper gossip," said Mr. Castle contemptuously. He deposited his half-smoked cigar on the tray, crossed over to where she sat and, as was his habit, turned up her face and kissed her. In a moment he was gone.

Adele remained seated, gazing at the door that had just closed behind him. She had noticed that, in contrast with his former brisk and buoyant step, his feet seemed to drag a little. He was not holding himself quite so erect as formerly. And his parting kiss, although just as tender and affectionate as in the past, had seemed a little hurried, as if he had wanted to run away from something. And there was the alarmed, almost guilty look that had come into his face when she mentioned the mysterious Mr. Graves.

Something must be wrong!

In a sober mood she went to her room, rang for her maid and dressed. Within the space of half an hour life seemed to have taken on a graver tone. It seemed as if an epoch had run its course between grapefruit and the final sip of coffee. Until now there had been little of a serious nature in her life. The death of her mother had been a sad affliction, but it had come so early in her life that it was now but a pale memory.

Then there had been a private preparatory school on the Hudson, and then college. There had been the usual gay affairs, the usual light flirtations the usual youthful pranks and frolics. Life had smiled on her, and she had smiled brightly back.

Now, in a twinkling, all was changed. Ever since her childhood a rare intimacy had existed between her father and herself. Even in the midst of studies and amusements she had always looked upon her father as the dearest, noblest, most wonderful man in the world. A strong and simple affection for him had followed her from childhood through early and rampant youth.

Now he was in trouble of some sort, and it seemed all the graver by reason of the secrecy he maintained. It was the first time within her recollection that he had failed to confide in her. There was something disturbing, almost sinister, in his silence on this occasion.

While the maid combed and brushed her blue-black hair, a question came back to her time and again: Who was the mysterious Mr Groves? A suspicion engendered by her father's evasions would not leave her mind. She tried not to think of it; it was to harrowing. And yet—

She shrugged her slight shapely shoulders. After all, she knew nothing definite. She was rearing a structure of ugly surmises on a few symptoms of nervousness and abstraction on her father's part. Her fears seemed a little fantastic when she viewed them in the light of reason. Virgil Ellsworth Castle was above suspicion. Everybody was willing to admit that. Probably it was as he had said ,that he had been working too hard of late.

Her fears were almost gone when the maid left the room. She stood at the window looking out over the park that sparkled in its autumnal draperies. There was a fresh, colorful charm about the lift outside. She couldn't resist the spell of it. Her heart grew lighter, her young blood coursed a little faster. The shadows were momentarily gone.

Miss Conway

The stiff-backed manservant appeared at the door.

"The lady is still waiting, miss."

Adele started a little. She had quite forgotten the woman from Cartier's.

"I'll see her at once, Wambley," she told the servant, and even as spoke she thought it a little strange that Wambley, with his inbred and rather absurd sense of class distinction, should have referred to the caller as a "lady."

Soon, however, the visitor was ushered in, and this little incongruity was explained. Instead of the person she had expected there entered a woman of 30 or so, fastidiously garbed and strikingly handsome. She gave Adele a quick look of appraisal, softened by a faint smile.

"Miss Castle," she said briskly, yet with an engaging manner, "I have come to tell you something unpleasant. Shall I broach the painful subject gently and easily, or shall I plunge into it at once?"

"I think I should prefer the plunge," said Adele bewilderedly.

"Good! That will save time. Miss Castle, your father is in trouble."

Adele winced. The speaker's subdued tone and the friendly shading of her voice failed to temper the bluntness of her statement.

"I don't understand you," she said a little coldly.

The woman's eyes of light green scrutinized her. They were shrewd, farseeing eyes, with a glint of amusement in them.

"That's unfortunate," she murmured in a tone that conveyed the faintest hint of doubt. "Explanations are such awkard things. Won't you accept me on faith and believe me when I tell you that your father is in desperate difficulties and that something must be done at once?"

Adele's thoughts went back to the scene at the breakfast table. The woman's statement, terse and inexplicit though it was, coincided with the fears that had taken shape in her mind during her talk with her father.

"Won't you tell me who you are?" she asked.

"My name is Miss Conway. Please don't ask me to identify myself further. I am quite unimportant. My only mission here is to take you to the house of a gentleman who will give you all the details and suggest how your father may escape from his troubles."

"Who is the gentleman?" asked Adele guardedly.

"Doctor Moffett."

"I have never heard of him. Why does he wish to help my father?"

"That's a natural question. If I were trying to deceive you, which I am not, I should tell you that Dr. Moffett is a kindly and altruistic soul who derives his pleasure in life by doing good to other people. That's not quite the case."

The statement had a persuasive effect on Adele. She saw that Miss Conway was a clever and fascinating woman, one who would not waste breath on useless lies.

"What is his object, then?"

"It's a selfish one. Dr. Moffett is ready to suggest an arrangement that will benefit himself and, incidentally, help your father. That's the whole, unvarnished truth." She wriggled a blazing solitaire on her finger. "My car is waiting. Will you come?"

Adele passed to the window and looked down. She saw a fine car with graceful streamer lines and a chauffeur at the wheel. It was quite a prepossessing sight, one that seemed to disarm all suspicions in advance. She turned to Miss Conway and surprised a smile that caused her eyes to contract for an instant.

"I'll be ready in a moment," she declared.

She ran into the library, closed the door and called the Manhattan club on the telephone. She told the attendant that she wished to speak to Mr. Paul Ainsworth. After a brief wait she heard Paul's bored and drawling voice on the wire.

"Dear," she said in a subdued tone, with a cautious glance at the door. "This is Adele. Will you do something for me?"

"If it's an engagement for an afternoon tea—" began Paul cautiously and with distaste.

"It isn't. Listen and don't interrupt. There's a Chippenwaite sedan outside our house. In 10 minutes I shall step in and drive away accompanied by a very charming and mysterious lady. You would adore her, Paul—you dear idiot! When we start, you are to follow discreetly. We shall probably drive to somebody's house somewhere. If I fail to come out—no interruptions, please! If I fail to come out within half an hour, you know what to do. That's all. Hop to it!"

With an excited laugh she closed the connection on Paul's remonstrances, then ran to another room and changed into a smart street dress. The selection of a hat took a minute or two, and by that time she saw a taxi cruising slowly beneath the window.

"Good old Paul!" she sighed.

Then, with her most gulleless and unsuspecting look, she returned to Miss Conway and announced that she was ready.

The Day Book of a New Yorker ◇ ◇ ◇ Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

AND THEY GET EXCITED, TOO!

NEW YORK, June 16.—Croquet is coming back into popular favor. A stroll through Central park on a sunny afternoon will disclose a dozen or more couples, busy aiming the little wooden balls through the wire wickets. All studiously followed by a gallery of do-nothings. After playing a strenuous game, the principals pull up their wickets, replace them in their wooden boxes and tote them home with them.

And, maybe, talk about their exploits with as much gusto as the golf fiends.

Too Much Education

The hat men in town, who are out to make America hat-conscious or something, seems to be heartily opposed to higher education. Seems the college boys have jammed as $28,000,000 straw hats down over the ears of the industry. The college boys they say, started the bare-headed craze doffing not only their top-pieces but a cool million or two each year from the industry.

Equity Reaches' Out Toward Hollywood

There is bound to be quite a bit of trouble over the Actors' Equity association's action in forcing a closed shop in the motion picture industry. With so many of the legitimate actors, members of Equity, going into the movies, Equity has decided to unionize the thousands of film flicker face and sound emoters.

The movie magnates can fight back by refusing to employ Equity members at all, but Equity, being associated with the American Federation of Labor, may be able to call off all carpenters and machine operators.

For the benefit of the layman who might be interested, Equity demands a 48-hour week, not the long hours now imposed on movie actors; no voice substitution without the consent of the actor substituted for; minimum length of work must be one week; all rehearsals must be considered as actual work.

Equity already has imposed, with success, its demands upon the legitimate producers. Some may say it is too domineering in theatrical matters but certainly it looks out for the welfare of the actor.

Restricted Melodies

They say that the song writers, who migrated from Broadway to the Hollywood land of glittering stuff that really is gold, are having their troubles in turning out tunes for the picture stars to warble. Such a thing as "range limit" must be considered.

It seems that arrangers are personally calling on the former silent stars for singing tests. After jotting down the octaves the luminary can cover, the arranger, or composer, goes back to figure out a melody within those notes.

Fortune Comes His Way

A sort of Alger story. I'd call this. Norman Hall, late of Liberty Magazine and former newspaper reporter, is going out to Oklahoma to collect a fortune.

The story is that he went out to the state a year ago on a story using a millionaire ranchman convict in the Oklahoma state penitentiary as his source of material. Through various means the ranchman received a pardon, largely because of Hall's interest in his case. The pardon saved the millionaire six years at hard labor and he is reported to have turned over one-third of his property to the scribe as consideration.

New Bull Circle For Collingsworth

Special to The Record News.

WELLINGTON, Texas, June 16.—That interest in better dairying in Collingsworth county is still widespread is evidenced by the fact that second bull circle for this county is being organized. C. C. Stinson, county agent, is now in Missouri where he is selecting 15 heifers and four bulls for the members of the second bull circle, and this will bring to Collingsworth county additional blooded Jersey cattle that can have nothing but favorable effect upon the local dairy industry.

Members of the second bull circle are J. E. Gentry, Sid Jackson, Travis Clement and A. A. Neeley.

The bull circle idea is given wide encouragement by all civic organizations of Wellington, as well as by many individuals over the county, as it is realized that the business depressions of the spring and summer months can be eliminated if the farmers of the county will give more attention to the production of dairy products and to the raising of hogs and poultry. In this manner, the farmers would have marketable products the year round and the farmers as well as the merchants would realize greater profits in a year's time.

Health And Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

(Copyright 1929 by The Bell Syndicate Inc.)

No More Hospitals

"The commonest thing we do is the thing we know least about—eating. Someday people will learn how to eat, and there won't be any more hospitals." No—that is not a quotation from one of my articles, nor was it written by any rabid anti-medical advocate. It came from the lips of one of America's great business men, Henry Ford. Of course, Mr. Ford was using a shocking figure of speech to startle his interviewer. We will probably always need hospitals for the injured and for those totally ignorant about correct living.

In the interview, Mr. Ford urges the cler— to take up the study of diet and to preach a religion of good living. Some ministers are already doing this, but I hope that Mr. Ford's suggestion will stimulate many more to add dietary teaching to their sermons about good living habits.

Sometime ago, when lecturing in Denver, I had a nice visit with Doctor Bell, who is a minister of the Episcopal church, and who is actually spending a large portion of his time in teaching his congregation the principles of correct eating. Doctor Bell has found out as Mr. Ford has so aptly said, "That there are such great changes of mental attitude to be obtained by correct habits of diet, that it would better pay the clergy to attend to the commoner and more respectable habits, such as eating, than to some of the bad results of bad eating."

Many in the medical profession will foolishly fear that this will result in the giving of what doctors call "misinformation." Such fears are without foundation. Many of our best ideas regarding diet have come from the layman or, at least, from those who have not been recognized as ethical, licensed physicians of the dominant school of medicine.

The masses are hungry for practical information about correct diet. The one who sets himself up as a teacher of dietetics will not last long if his theories are not sound and if good results do not follow from such teaching.

The Bible is full of instruction about living a clean, healthful life. The hygienic laws of Moses were good for the people of that day, and many of them cannot be improved on at the present time. New prophets of clean living will arise, and if the medical profession remains too concerned with surgery and microscopes, we may yet find that our best health teachers may come from the clergy and the laity.

Instead of spending so much money to enlarge our prisons, and instead of different communities boasting about how many new hospitals they have, perhaps the day will come when some of this money and energy will be diverted into channels for health education. Is it too much to hope that the number of hospitals and jails might actually be decreased if we had commissioners of health who made a serious study of eating, which is the commonest thing we do to develop sickness and crime? If our public officials cannot realize that this is what the people need and want, we may still hope for help through both the financial and inspirational assistance of such clear-thinking business men and philanthropists as Mr. Ford.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Sugar Poisoning

Question—A. T. asks: "Will you please tell me what sugar poisoning is? Is it curable and how should it be taken care of? Do people get it on their hands only? When one has it, does drinking alcoholic liquor make it worse?"

Answer—From your question I would be led to believe you are suffering from some form of eczema caused by using too large an amount of sugar. Try leaving sugar out of your diet entirely for a short time. Alcoholic liquor would make such a condition worse until you are completely cured of the general acidosis which makes you so susceptible.

Sandwich Fillings

Question—Mrs. M. P. asks: "Will you please make some suggestions on making vegetable fillings for sandwhiches of wholewheat bread? My husband is a carpenter and has to take his lunch. Also, will you print your recipe for making peanut butter dressing for cauliflower?"

Answer—I will be glad to send you an article on the subject of making wholesome sandwiches, but cannot take the space to give you this information in the Question and Answer department. The peanut butter dressing is made by thinning the roasted peanut butter with milk or cream. You may use any reasonable amount of this dressing over the cauliflower or any other salad.

Headache After Meals

Question—H. G. F. asks: "Will you please tell me what might be the cause of a headache in and just above the eyes after meals?"

Answer—The kind of headache you write about is usually caused from an irritation of the gastro-intestinal tract, as in gastritis, duodenitis or colitis. Bad mixtures of food which produce stomach irritation are perhaps the most responsible for the sudden headache just after the meal.

SPUDDERS COP 11TH STRAIGHT AND NEAR LEAD AS STEERS LOSE

INDIANS BEATEN IN 11TH INNING

Galloways Rally to Snatch Victory by 8 to 6

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 16. —Unable to hold a four-run lead, acquired in the seventh inning, the San Antonio Indians were beaten by the heavy hitting Spudders of Wichita Falls 8 to 6 this afternoon in the second game of the series, after a three-hour struggle through 11 innings.

The victory was the eleventh straight for Jim Galloway's men, and they neared first place as a result of today's play, with the leading Dallas Steers losing to Houston. Only a game and a half separate the Steers from the Spudders, while Wichita Falls increased its margin over the third-place Sports to two and a half games.

The Spudders southpawed the tribe into submission with Wiltse, Galeria and Taber each taking turns on the slab while George Washington Payne, a right-hander, finished the game by striking out the mighty Casey.

Subway Andy Messenger held the Spudders scoreless until th fifth inning when they scored their first run to tie and they scored again in the seventh to take the lead.

Galeria Relieves Wiltse

The Tribe put over five runs on four hits in the home half, during which Galeria relieved Wiltse with two down and retired the side.

Messenger was relieved by Glaser after he had walked Bennett, first batter up in the eighth, and Stapleton and Swenson followed with a pair of slashing singles, scoring Bennett. Sullivan's single off Glaser and a double play scored Stapleton and Swenson.

The Indians seemed no match for the Spudders at the bat, for the latter after knocking Subway Andy off the hill, took Glaser's measure for eight hits in the last three innings to net them three runs.

In the meantime the Indians were helpless before Taber and Payne getting only one hit in the last three innings, although Taber was inclined to wildness and walked two batters, which called for his removal.

How Spudders Won

The Spudders scored their two runs in the eleventh when with one down Casey dropped the ball on a long run for Bennett's drive. After Stapleton flied to Casey, sending Bennett to third, Swenson beat out a hit to Riley, on which Bennett scored, while Sullivan and Crouch followed with a couple of singles, scoring Swenson.

Stapleton's grounder was a slow roller down the first base line with Riley standing behind the bag to field the ball, but it hit the bag and hopped up to Riley's chest. Riley falling on the bag as Stapleton reached the bag, but Stapleton seemed to be safe and Umpire Erwin declared him so, although the crowd booed the decision.

The Indians scored their first run in the fourth when Casey beat out a hit in front of the plate, advanced on Riley's grounder to Turgeon and tallied on Meyers' two-bagger to left.

Spuds Score in Sixth

The Spudders scored in the sixth on singles by Turgeon and Fitzgerald and Flippen's error on Bennetts grounder. Sullivan's single and Lapan's double netted a run in the seventh.

The Tribe regained the lead in the seventh when Flippen walked. Messenger was safe on a bunt as Swenson threw wild to Turgeon, and Tate followed with a single, scoring Flippen. Ballew then struck out for the third time and Casey was purposely passed, after which Nason doubled to center, scoring Messenger and Tate. Casey scored on Riley's sacrifice to Fitzgerald and Wetzel's single scored Nason for a total of five runs.

The clubs will play the last game of the three-game series here tomorrow. Bill Goff probably will hurl for the Spudders.

Next Week

Next week nothing happens to speak of—except the following: The Intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, with two of the finest crews in the world entered—California and Columbia — with Cornell to challenge them both; the Paulino-Schmeling battle on Thursday night; the start of the U. S. open golf championship, with Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Horton Smith and eight or 20 other stars all set to face one of the hardest tests in golf at the Winged Foot course. Not to forget the continuation of the Athletic-Yankee duel and the four-cornered war in the National league.

This will be New York State's high-power week in sport. A short while ago young Mr. Simpson ran the 100 yards in 9 2-5 in Chicago, without the help of wind, a short track of incompetent timers. He ran the fastest 100 ever run where every detail was correct.

Things have been happening all around the map, but in one week the state of New York puts on the greatest crew race, the great golf championship and the most important prizefight of the year.

The talent enlisted comes from Spain, Germany, California, Georgia and most of the sporting map worth talking about.

But New York furnishes the Columbia and Cornell crews for Poughkeepsie; Walter Hagen, Johnny Farrell, Gene Sarazen, Mac Smith, George Voight and several others for the U. S. open. Which is a fair percentage. Also the Yankees and the Giants in the two pennant races. All of which is a pretty fair percenta e from one state that covers about as much sporting territory as any landscape between the Himalayas and the Sierras.

Who ill win these events? California is about as good a bet as any at Poughkeepsie. Bobby Jones and Horton Smith each have a great chance at Winged Foot. The Schmeling-Paulino party is about 50-50 at this moment, where the later stages may furnish a clearer bunch.

Michigan Speed

Dear Sir: The prideful Blue of dear old Yale has clothed a long and honorable list of pole-vaulting champions.

Far above Cayuga's water cross-country championships for years were permanently a part of the Cornellian fabric as the Ithacan hills.

California collegians ha e long since taken the humor out of Steve Farrell's epic, "They's no one can throw them weights like them policemen," but it is doubtful whether any university ever developed more than 50 per cent as inspiring a list of champions in one event as has Michigan in the sprints.

Among the list of intercollegiate champions, East and West, are Hahn, Craig, Seward, Bond, Smith, Johnson, Burke, Wittman, Hubbard, Leschinsky, Hester, and now Eddie Tolan bursts into the group as possibly the greatest of the lot.

In the Big Ten championships Tolan ran his qualifying heat in 9.3, and then whipped George Simpson in a 9.5 final. Later in the day he pulled abreast of the flying Buckeye at 200 yards in the 220, but the desperate Ohioan plunged ahead, to win by an eyelash in 20.6, with the balance of the field—good men, too —far in the rear.

Collectively these men have probably turned in more points in championship events than any group of specialists from any institution. Tolan was an interscholastic champion when he entered Michigan, but the balance, for the most part were merely good high school boys and nothing more.

Stephen Farrell has developed 10 of the group and Farrell's sprinters have long been the fastest collective starters of any group there is. Steve may yet live long enough to coach the sprinters on one of America's Olympic teams, but it is doubtful.

Olympic teams are directly under the jurisdiction of the A. A. U., and in the opinion of the Middle West they are the most artistically man-handled and unerringly mismanaged of anything known to civilized or ancient man. Unless one's mamma or Auntie Clarissa happens to be a blood relative you're just simply a nobody, and the bungling of this grotesque outfit each four years successively established new world's records that it alone is capable of exceeding.

In the mean time, as long as Farrell is active he will continue to turn out championship sprinters. The "Steve start" is about the fastest thing uncovered. Michigan sprinters are in the lead at 10 yards. They're out in front here even when they're occasionally whipped.

There is no finer influence on college athletes in America than that which Steve exerts at Michigan, and if some one could only show him on which knee to balance his tea cup he might yet become an Olympic coach and end these successive defeats the A. A. U. succeeds in inflicting each four years.— WOLVERINE.

The Athletics were about 14 games better off this season than they were at this time last year. And last year they finished only about two games out. Which means that either the Yankees have got to be 14 games better through the last three months than they were a year ago or the Athletics have got to be 14 games worse. Or thereabouts.

As far as we can figure it out, Paulinos jaw has never struck as hard a fist as Schmeling's right hand, and Schmeling's right hand has never struck as tough a jaw as Paulino's. If you can dope anything out from this complication you are entitled to your guess.

The best single bet on the Poughkeepsie regatta is that a crew beginning with a big C will win.

Baer Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

NEW YORK, June 16. (US)—We agree with the college professor who refused to give a girl her diploma 'cause she tried to graduate with bare legs.

She walked up to the platform in a beautiful white gown that was mostly waist.

It was trimmed on the bottom with knees that looked like artichokes and shinbones that you could have stropped a razor on.

The professor was so shocked that he took another look.

He said "young lady, you don't want a diploma, you want a medal for looking like a channel swimmer."

We want to warn the stockingless sex that everybody cannot get away with it. When a Jersey mosquito sees a bare calf he is going to sharpen up his beak and go right into the meat business.

And con't think a hoss-fly is going to stay on a Kentucky mule when he sees a beautiful ankle.

However, all ankles are not beautiful. After the debutante age, ankles start to look like a dozen crullers.

We are right in the maze of progressive fashion. Mother tries to dress like daughter and daughter is dressing like the baby.

The result is that fat ladies are stumping around in short skirts that would look all right on a parlor lamp.

In a few more seasons, they will throw away all their clothes and just wear the buttons.

MEYER VICTOR IN FATAL RACE

Keech, Killed at Altoona, Deprived of Honors

ALTOONA, Pa., June 16. (AP)—Lou Meyer today was officially declared winner of yesterday's automobile race at Tipton bowl by officials of the American Automobile association. Ray Keech, who was killed in a smashup in the 121st lap, had been designated the winner previously.

The ruling is subject to the approval of the national contest board of the A. A. A. The drivers in the race were given 24 hours to file a protest. It was reported that a protest would be filed.

In announcing winners yesterday, it was pointed out, officials failed to consult rules under which the race was run. The original announcement gave Keech first place, Meyer second, and Cliff Woodbury, who was injured, third, the order in which they stood at the time of the accident.

A. A. A. officials ruled however, the race did not end until the drivers not involved in the crackup were flagged down in the 121st lap when outerguard rails along the track began collapsing.

The following is the revised standing of the first five drivers, with the prizes they will receive: 1—Lou Meyer, $4,500; 2—Cliff Bergere, $2,000; 3—Deacon Litz, $1,500; 4—Ernie Triplett, $1,200; 5—Fred Winnai, $1,000.

BUCYRUS-ERIE COMPANY

The Bucyrus Erie Co. resulted from a consolidation in 1927 between the Bucyrus company and the Erie Steam Shovel company. The corporation is the largest manufacturer of excavating machinery. Its products include quarry and mining shovels, railroad type shovels, tower excavators and other devices. The Bucyrus company plants are located at South Milwaukee, Wis., and Evansville, Ind. The Erie plants are at Erie, Penn. In the later factories the smaller types of steam shovel and gasoline-air shovels are made. The plants contain all essential equipment and the company owns property which can be used for any necessary expansion.

For the four years to and including 1926, net income was about on a level but declined somewhat in 1926 and 1927. Sales volume in 1928 was satisfactory but the earnings were affected by the charges applicable to the consolidation. Net income in 1928 was $2,687,177. This compared with $2,937,919 in 1927.

There is no funded debt. Capital stock outstanding includes $6,830,000 in 7 per cent cumulative preferred shares of $100 par; $2,095,560 in convertible preferred of $5 par and 4,800,000 in common of 10 par. The convertible preferred is entitled to assets of $7.50 a share before the common and to non-cumulative dividends not exceeding $2.50 a year. Receiving that amount in those years where the common gets $1 a share. All classes of stock have one vote a share. Regular dividends are being paid on the cumulative preferred stock. On the convertible preferred the present rate is 62½ cents a quarter. On the common stock 25 cents a quarter is being paid.

As of Dec. 31, 1928, total current assets were $13,818,805, current liabilities $2,517,497 and net working capital $11,301,308. Book value of stock has not been computed because good will, patents and other intangibles were not reported separately.

POLICE ARREST SEVEN IN RAIDS

Liquor Seized Varies From Beer to Champagne

Three raids on bootleggers in the residential part of Wichita Falls Saturday night and early Sunday resulted in the arrest of seven persons and the confiscation of a large quantity of assorted liquors. The raids were made by officers A. L. Stubblefield and F. E. Summers of the city police force, armed with search warrants sworn out after investigations.

Six of the arrested persons were released on bond, but one, arrested at an address on Twelfth street where the officers seized four gallons of whisky, was held at the city jail. He will be turned over to federal authorities for investigation, it was said.

Three negroes and two white men were arrested in a servants' house in the rear of an address on Alma street when the officers found over 35 gallons of beer in the place. All were released on bond.

Seven pints of champagne were seized at an address on Taylor street and one woman was arrested. She was also released on bond, officers said.

Today { At the Theaters

MAJESTIC: "Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in "The Man I Love." Jan Garber's band. Marion Harris, "The Song Bird of Jazz." Paramount news.

STRAND: "Kid Gloves," with Conrad Nagel as the dapper gangster, beloved of Lois Wilson's "Ruth." Mack Sennett talking comedy. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: "The Office Scandal," with Phyllis Haver. Crime carried into the newsroom. Raymond Hatton at the city editor's desk. Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: Bill Hart in "Singer Jim McKee." Chapter four "Police Reporter." Comedy.

It isn't so much a question of who actually bumped off big Champ Tracy, you see; the question of why, and how can they hang it on the brunette without involving that newspaper man, are the elements that sustain interest at high pitch with the crowds who are seeing Phyllis Haver and Raymond Hatton in "The Office Scandal" at the Olympic.

Its really surprisingly free from scandal, this story. The hard-boiled exterior with which Phyllis created a near-sensation in "Chicago" has been retained in proper measure for her sob-feature writer for the Dispatch. Raymond Hatton—if he doesn't create a character as it is, you feel that he created it as it should have been. There are some places for Andy and Jerry to get by, but they just do squeeze through, and it's a nice comedy.

Martin Warns Against "Forgetting God" in Search for Pleasure

Many Places to Eat and Sleep But Not Enough Homes, Teacher Tells Bible Class

Judge P. A. Martin, addressing the Men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning, drew a picture of a pleasure-loving, restless people and lifted a warning against forgetfulness of God. His address was entitled, "National Accountability to God," and he drew his story from the story of the fall of Judah. A brief sketch of the address follows:

"The lesson today is in a sense purely historical, yet, like all lessons in the Book of Books, it contains a world of valuable meaning for men and nations. It is the story of the final downfall of the Kingdom of Judah. The weak king and weak people, forgetting the advice of the prophet of God—forgetting God in fact—had yielded allegiance to the king of Egypt, the arch-enemy of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, and his powerful warlord of the ancients in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month and the tenth day of the month laid seige to the city of Jerusalem with his entire army and for six months his legions invested the city and then, famine-weakened and war-weary, the Jewish men of war and their pusillamimous king slipped out by a secret gate and fled leaving the common people to a fate worse than death. The victorious soldiers of Media and Persia came in; they broke down the walls of the city; burned the temple, the king's palace all the public buildings; they pursued the king and his retinue of soldiers and captured them; they killed the sons of the king before his eyes and then put out the eyes of Zedekiah and took him and all the principle people of the kingdom to Babylon as slaves, leaving only the poor of the land, as vine-dressers and husbandmen—and thus the sun of Israel's nationality sank in a sea of blood and carnage.

Forgot God

Why, you ask, did this national calamity happen to a people called "God's chosen people?" The answer is simple: they forgot God. They lapsed into idolatry from generation to generation; they persecuted the prophets and laughed at the commands of the God of Abraham; they weakened themselves in the practices of the worship of Bael and Ashtoreth and finally their national identity was taken from them and from that day on until this day, although brief spasmodic efforts to attain national identity have been put forth, they have resulted in defeat and Israel has been a scattered and a subject nation. Many different temporary sovereigns have ruled them and sought to gather them together again and devout Jews all over the world have been asking the time-worn question of all apparent powers "wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom of our father David?" And the question remains unanswered yet.

There stands out not only in this history, but in the history of many, many other powerful nations of the past the lesson of national accountability to God and there are truer words than those of our golden text. "Righteousness exalteth a nation but sin is a reproach to any people." The fact is that the religious impulse, centering its every energy upon a Divine being, binds a people together as nothing else can bind them and when that impulse follows the concept of a God like Jehovah; a Christ like His Son and a spirit like His Holy Spirit it gives birth to a people who are invincible in war and irresistable in the arts of peace. Such is the lesson of history.

You remember the simple story of the "Cotter's Saturday Night" told by the bard of Scotland; how he describes the family scene, as they gather at night around the fireside for family council and family news of the day and then:

"The priest-like father reads the sacred page."

Then kneeling down, to Heaven's Eternal King
The saint, the father and the husband prays."—

And how the bard, after describing the family devotions breaks into such ecstasy as this:

"From scenes like these Old Scotia's grandeur springs
That makes her loved at home, revered abroad:
Princes and Lords are but the breath of kings,
An honest man's the noblest work of God."

Yes, it was cottages and homes like this that produced the covenanters of Cromwell, who with songs and prayers and praises to God put to flight the proudest army the cavaliers of King Charles could muster and from such homes and such scenes come the bone and sinew of national strength today in all Christian countries.

Too Few Homes

If you ask me what is the greatest menace to our nation today I will answer that it is the same as that which destroyed the kingdom of Judah; the danger of forgetting God, in our struggle for wealth and pleasure and pastime. We have plenty of places to eat and sleep; but not enough homes in our land. We have plenty of costly and beautiful temples, but not enough simple religion. We have plenty of schools and colleges educating the minds and bodies of the youth of the land, but not enough of the education of the heart.

Modern machinery has so shortened the hours of labor for men and women alike that the present generation has on its hands a leisure undreamed of by our ancestors. Into the lap of our own dear country a wealth of leisure and luxury has been thrown by a bountiful Creator. What are we doing with it? Are we making good use of the time and the talents we have? Are we living lives that glorify the Giver of these great gifts? These are burning questions to those of us who would endeavor to perpetuate our national greatness and hand down to future generations the priceless heritage we inherited from our strong and courageous pioneer parents.

There are certain signs of the times that give us pause. The club has taken the place of the home; the card-table has largely succeeded the spinning-wheel and the needle; the moving-picture theater has emptied the pews of the temple of worship; the automobile has relegated old Dobbin to the background and made possible attendance upon every entertainment in a radius of a hundred miles; the radio has brought better music upon the air than the piano or organ in the home or the church; the paved highway calls to dim distances and a restless, dissatisfied people run from shore to shore and almost from pole to pole seeking entertainment; orgies unheard of in the years gone by are indulged in by the idle rich and millions are spent in the chase of the rainbow of pleasure, while all around us are those who have not been fortunate enough to either make or inherit the means to join the ranks of pleasure seekers and they too are idle—millions of them idle and penniless and also dissatisfied. Are we losing our sense of national accountability to God? Are we too turning our backs upon Jehovah and setting up altars to Bael and Ashtoreth?

The taste of the people for some new thing to think and talk about is pretty well illustrated by the attention given to a Texas citizen who has undertaken, for a certain price, to push a peanut up Pike's Peak with his nose and is now engaged in this useful and laudable undertaking. If he succeeds he will be an attraction on the stage or lecture platform until somebody does something more ridiculous. The crowds of idlers who watch this daily progress up the mountain couldn't be persuaded to attend a prayer meeting or a Sunday school. Like the Greeks St. Paul found at Athens are we not spending our time "in nothing else but either to hear or to tell some new thing?" And alas! the civilization of the Athenians went down and even their language is a dead tongue."

Attorneys to Conclude Plea In Oil Case

Arguments in the $500,000 damage suit brought in by H. M. Ford against the Roxana Petroleum corporation ,on trial in the 30th district court at Graham all last week, will be completed before Judge Allan D. Montgomery Monday. FILES GIVEN TO HISTORY CLUB

Plains Society Presented With Short Collection

Special to The Record News.

CANYON, Texas, June 16.—An immense newspaper collection containing valuable historical source material upon the history of the Panhandle during the last two decades has just come to the library of the Panhandle-Plains Historical society in the O. D. Short collection.

The collection, built up through the untiring efforts of Mr. Short during the years 1911-1927, has been deposited with the society through the courtesy of his brother, Harvey H. Short of Brazil, Ind., and Miss Laura V. Hamner of Amarillo.

When Oscar D. Short came to Amarillo in 1911 he set out to make himself an authority upon the history of the Plains and to collect a vast amount of interesting material to be preserved for the future. He collected, thousands of newspapers, scores of pamphlets, magazines, trade journals, and other literature upon the development of the Southwest.

Until this material is catalogued, there is no way of telling just how many copies of newspapers the collection contains, but there is a fairly complete file of Amarillo News since Mr. Short's connection with it. There are files of the Wichita Beacon, San Francisco Daily Bulletin, the Star Telegram, Fort Worth Record and Denver Post.

Besides these papers, there are incomplete files of many other papers from this and neighboring states. There are specimens of free lance journalism, a conspicuous example being the stormy Ferguson Forum.

The collection contains hundreds of trade journals, Southern Lumber, the Nosebag, the Texas Outlook, the Dearborn Independent, and numerous files of religious and fraternal literature.

Several past ventures of Panhandle journalism are represented; among these are the old Amarillo Panhandle, the Amarillo Tribune, and the Plainview Journal. A great mass of pamphlets contain campaign literature for Woodrow Wilson, issued in 1911. Railroad bulletins and literature issued by development companies give accounts of attempts to colonize the Panhandle more thoroughly during the last 18 years.

A great number of old school books, some dating back into the fifties, fine examples of obsolete methods of pedagogy, round out the collection and give another indication of its varied interest.

Sharp Decrease Listed In Attendance Here

Further progress into the usual summertime numerical depression was recorded Sunday by 30 local church schools, the total attendance dropping off 332 from that of June 9.

Nine of the 30 reporting schools registered gains, but as usual, the losses by other churches more than offset the small advantage. The First Baptist church reported an attendance of 1,060 Sunday, approximately 200 less than the average figure.

Sunday's total attendance reached 6,854, with no report received from the Hill Crest Mission.

Tams Burney Wasn't Sick Exactly, But Needed Something to Build Him Up—Says Orgatone Did It

"People suffering from stomach trouble and a run-down condition, certainly ought to try Orgatone, for it's the best ever," said Tams Burney, the well known news agent of Marietta, Oklahoma.

"For a long time," he continued, "I had not been feeling like myself. Not sick exactly, but just seemed to be completely run-down and had very little life and energy about me. My appetite was very poor and I felt dull and sluggish, and some days hardly cared whether I worked or not. I had lost several pounds in weight and was evidently in a fair way to a more serious condition.

"What I needed was just an all 'round' building up and Orgatone has done that very thing. Almost as soon as I began taking it, my appetite improved and my tired, worn-out feelings began to leave me. I have taken four bottles now and besides getting back the weight I lost, I have picked up several additional pounds. I thoroughly relish all my meals and all my old time energy and strength have come back to me. So I say anyone in need of a first class stomach medicine, one that will straighten them out all around should try Orgatone."

A dull, dragging feeling of the body, a sluggish mind, dull memory, despondence, depression of spirits, nervousness, stomach trouble, weak back, headaches and general debility, are among the various symptoms of the condition from which a surprisingly number of people suffer. They simply need something to tone up their system and to assist the vital organs in performing their proper functions. Orgatone is a scientific bile treatment which produces a limpid flow of healthy bile from the hepatic cells and is being used with most gratifying results by thousands of people right in this section.

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy, but a new scientific preparation and is sold in Wichita Falls, exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative.—Adv.
