BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin—The Senate investigating committee, concluding its hearings on the Colorado River flood of July, last week saw the interests of washed-out farmers in the river valley all but forgotten, as lawyers cleverly transformed the committee investigation into an electioneering campaign in behalf of bond issues in 15 or more towns and cities to build competing municipal electric generating or distributing plants. A. J. Wirtz general attorney for CRA and Everett Looney, attorney representing the City of Austin in the hearings, grabbed the headlines and effectively tied the hands of the private power companies, by obtaining, through Attorney General William McCraw, an injunction forbidding the Texas Power & Light Co. and the Central Power & Light Co., from presenting their side of the controversy to the voters. An obscure district judge, Raymond Gray, of San Saba, issued a sweeping temporary order on an ex parte hearing, forbidding the power companies and their employees from in any manner presenting facts or arguments against the bond issues to the voters of affected towns. The method resembled that employed by the Hitler government in holding a German election, where only a "yes" vote is desired or permitted. The elections will have been held by the time an appeal court can review the order of Judge Gray and rule upon its justice. Bond issues carried by sweeping majorities in Lampasas, Burnet, Marble Falls, Fredericksburg and Bastrop. In Goose Creek, however, voters turned down the proffered PWA grants, and rejected the bonds.

CARMICHAEL PASSES

Death last Saturday took from the ranks of State officials H. H. Carmichael, director of the Department of Public Service, and executive head of the splendid State police force which has been built up during the past two years, since the Rangers and the Highway patrol were combined. Col. Carmichael, a World War veteran with a distinguished service record, had been assistant state adjutant general several years prior to his appointment as safety director. He was quite and efficient, and had done an excellent job of ironing out the difficulties which arose inevitably in merging the modern highway patrol with the antiquated Ranger force. Homer Garrison, director of the Highway patrol will temporarily direct the State police pending appointment of Carmichael's successor.

ALLRED WILL NOT QUIT

Gov. Allred has revealed that he will not resign as Governor to take his place on the Federal bench until his term expires, January 17. His previously considered plan to resign this month was abandoned under pressure from his friends, and from Mrs. Allred, who felt he should serve out his term. Allred considered resigning to go on the Federal bench when certain political forces threatened to oppose his confirmation as Judges, in the belief that the fact he was already serving would strengthen his claim to the judicial post. But following the issuance of a letter by Senator Tom Connally, declaring he would support Allred's confirmation, although he was not nominated by the junior Senator, Allred's friends advised him the opposition movement to his confirmation would get nowhere, and the Governor decided to remain in office until his term is out. He indicated no special session will be held. There was also some suggestion here that indictment of Rennie Allred, Jr., brother of the Governor on charges of violating the Federal hot oil act, might have influenced the governor's decision. The case will be tried in the Houston Federal court—and which Allred was appointed, and many here believe he wants it disposed of before he goes on the

Johnson Hospital Near Completion

Work on the Dr. Bruce Johnson Hospital is nearing completion. All that is lacking now is the finishing touches, building sidewalks, and cleaning up. Rock work was completed last week.

Dr. Johnson expects to move his office to the new building the latter part of this week so he can be there to direct the final stages of the work.

The hospital contains ten rooms and will be equipped to take care of several patients at a time. Loraine is proud of the hospital.

EAST SIDE SINGERS TO MEET HERE SUNDAY

The East Side Singing convention of Mitchell County will meet at the Methodist Church here Sunday afternoon, according to Moody Richardson, president. Singing will start promptly at 2:00 o'clock. Everybody is invited to come and bring your song book.

Protest Mexican Oil Dumping

From the North Texas Oil & Gas Association to all U. S. Customs collectors in Texas, and to Treasury Secretary Morgenthau this week went a resolution of protest against imports of Mexican oil. The resolution points out that since the contract of the importing company with the Mexican government calls for importation of more than seven million barrels of oil at prices less than the market price of competing West Texas crude, the imports violate the Federal anti-dumping statute of 1921, which provides that when a U. S. industry is injured by importation of commodities at less than fair value, a special dump duty shall be levied. The Federal law provides customs appraisers shall notify the Secretary of the Treasury, when alleged dumping occurs, and withhold appraisal reports until the Secretary makes an investigation. The resolution points out that the Mexican oil, sold for 70 cents a barrel in Mexico, is worth substantially more and competes with West Texas crude selling for $1.20 at seaboard refineries.

AUSTIN NEWS NOTES

A movement to recommend W. D. McFarlane, defeated Congressman of the Wichita Falls district, to W. Lee O'Daniel as State Tax Commissioner, was reported in Austin this week, but supporters of McFarlane were said to have encountered a counter-move in the O'Daniel camp to seek to abolish the office, and put the collection of franchise and pipeline taxes under direction of the State Comptroller, who collects most other taxes. Advocates of the plan say a considerable saving could be effected. Reports also reached here that Edward Clark, Secretary of State and former secretary to Gov. Allred might be reappointed by O'Daniel. Abe Mayes, of Atlanta, house member is said to be seeking the post, as an "original O'Daniel supporter." Chief interest here centers in O'Daniel's selection of a Highway Commissioner to succeed John Wood. Despite the fact the appointment logically would go to an East Texan, the name most frequently heard is that of R. L. Lucas, of Fort Worth, undertaker and a director of the Texas Good Roads association. Friends of Walter Woodul, defeated candidate for Attorney General, who was endorsed by O'Daniel, are also booming the lieutenant governor for the post. Gerald C. Mann, nominee for Attorney General, and Bascom Giles, for Land Commissioner, plan to take office immediately after they can qualify after the November January elections, according to informed sources here. The earliest date after they receive their election certificates would probably be around December 1.

W. H. Nix Loses Hogs By Poison

W. H. Nix said Monday that the old saying that poison will not kill a hog is erroneous. He lost three good ones Monday by giving them slop from a bucket in which he mixed poison this summer when he was poisoning worms on his cotton. He left the bucket in the field until Sunday when he put the slop in it. He gave the slop to the hogs Monday morning and all three of them died before three o'clock Monday afternoon. He asks that we urge other farmers to use caution in using the container in which poison has been.

COTTON WAREHOUSE OPENED HERE SATURDAY

A government cotton warehouse was opened in Loraine last Saturday in the Martin building with O. E. Stevenson in charge. The cotton being stored is that on which the government is making loans.

Shortly afternoon Tuesday a total of 366 bales had been placed in the house and it is expected that approximately 1000 bales can be stored in the building.

KENNEDY SISTERS TENT SHOW COMING THURSDAY

The Kennedy Sisters Tent Show has been playing in this section each fall for many years will make a visit to Loraine this week, playing on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"The Hillbilly Governor," a timely play just off the press, will be the feature attraction of the three-day bill and will be given either Friday or Saturday night.

In accordance with custom, Thursday night will be ladies night, with one lady being admitted free if accompanied by a paid adult ticket. New vaudeville, plays and performers are promised.

PARADE OPENED FAIR LAST FRIDAY

Although the community fair opened Thursday when exhibits were received and arranged it was not officially opened until Friday when the parade was held. The parade was more than two blocks long and was led by the high school band in their classy uniforms, the pep squad and drum corp, also in uniform, added color to the parade. Horses, automobiles, school buses, tractors and bicycles were in the line of march. Rev. J. A. Seagraves, who was a cowboy for many years before entering the ministry, acted as parade marshal.

Mrs. Annie Taylor is visiting relatives in Ennis this week.

Fair Exhibits Good But Small In No.

Exhibits in the community fair this year were good in quality but the quantity was not as good as a year ago. Only 151 exhibits for both men and women were on display.

In the men's division the feed exhibits were exceptionally good. Albert Givens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Drew Givens, won the blue ribbon on his maize in the boy's division and also in the general exhibit. J. W. Rieburg placed first on open cotton and E. S. Kingston second. On the cotton stalk first place went to E. S. Kingston and second to C. W. McAnally. J. W. Rieburg got first place on white corn and J. L. Johnson second.

In the women's canned goods division Mrs. Oscar Baumann was heavy winner, having received 18 ribbons on her exhibit. Mrs. J. W. Rieburg and Mrs. T. F. Faulkenberry also received several ribbons each. Mrs. T. W. Evans placed first on peach preserves.

In the pieced quilt exhibit Mrs. T. W. Evans received first place. Mrs. John Lindsey second, and Mrs. Emma Leggett third. Applique quilts Mrs. Lee Durden first place, Mrs. Owen Leggett second.

An exhibit of old relics and hand painted articles drew much attention. Mrs. Max Hallman displayed some hand painted articles, and Mrs. M. H. Godfrey some hand painted pictures that were really good.

The Loraine school had two exhibits that attracted a great deal of attention. The general exhibit displayed all kinds of school work, especially in the lower grades. The F. F. A. boys had an interesting exhibit featuring root rot resistant maize.

LOONEY SCHOOL TO OPEN MONDAY, OCT. 3.

Registration of pupils in the Looney school will begin next Monday, October 3, at 8:45, after which classes will last throughout the day.

All students are urged to be present for registration Monday morning. Patrons will be welcomed.

B. D. Smith Jr. is principal and Mrs. Smith and Miss Mayme Lou Bedford are teachers in the school.

APPRECIATION

As general manager of the fair I wish to extend my appreciation to the committees who helped in any way to put the fair over. I am especially grateful to the high school band and others who took part in entertaining the crowds.

Time Turns Back

Clocks were turned back one hour Sunday September 25 throughout a large portion of the United States as daylight saving time was concluded for 1938. An employee in New York's municipal building is shown here turning the tables on Farther Time.

Gym Bonds Carried Wednesday

Voters of the Loraine Independent School District Wednesday approved the issuance of $5,000 in bonds to supplement an issue voted last spring. The money is to be used, provided a PWA grant is secured, to do repair work on the present building and to equip both the new and old buildings.

Only 91 voters voted Wednesday, giving the issue a majority of 42, 69 voted for and 22 against the issue.

CONGRESSMAN MAHON ATTENDS FARM MEETING

Dallas, September 26.—Congressman George H. Mahon was a guest at a special staff meeting of the Farm Security Administration in the regional offices here today at which the recently broadened base for rural rehabilitation loans in the counties comprising the Nineteenth Congressional District were discussed.

The program has been broadened to accommodate the special needs of agriculture in those areas where the type of farming made it difficult for farmers to follow the standard plans as they were originally set up. C. M. Evans, Regional Director, told the Congressman. Ranch loans, particularly, will be easier to service under the new policy. Evans reported.

J. M. Neely left Wednesday for Temple where he will take treatment in a sanitarium.

First Conference Game Here Friday

The first conference game of the season for the Loraine Bulldogs will be played on the new athletic field here Friday afternoon, beginning at 3:00 o'clock. The game will also be the first conference game for the Roby Lions.

Both the Bulldogs and the Lions have had poor starts this season. The Bulldogs have lost to Dunn and Post but have two touchdowns to their credit while the Lions have been unable to score in their two games. On this basis the two teams seem to be on a fairly even footing and the game Friday afternoon should be a hard fought one.

The Roby Lions always furnish tough competition. Last year the Bulldogs barely nosed them out with an extra point and the year previous the two teams tied. If you want to see a good hard fought football game, the first of the season for the local lads on home ground, do not fail to see the game Friday.

The Bulldogs have improved wonderfully since they started working out. Last Friday night at Post they held the strong Post Antelopes to a 39 to 0 margin. The Antelopes are really strong but at times the Bulldogs looked like veterans but of course being light and inexperienced they were no match for the heavier and experienced Post team.

The story will be different here Friday afternoon, we hope. Both teams are inexperienced and as far as weight goes neither has much over the other.

COTTON GINNING REPORT

The census report shows that 4,309 bales of cotton were ginned in Mitchell County from the crop of 1938 prior to September 16, as compared with 5,065 bales for the crop of 1937, according to special agent Wilson.

ATHLETIC COMMITTEE ASKS COOPERATION

The Athletic Committee of the Loraine High School issued a statement this week asking the cooperation of the public at the football game with Roby Friday afternoon. There is no fence around the athletic field and we ask that each of you please pay the men in charge as you enter the field. Each one will be tagged when he pays and the field will be patrolled to see that each one has a ticket. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

FIDDLERS CONTEST DREW LARGE CROWD

The old fiddlers contest Saturday night closing the entertainment features of the fair drew one of the largest crowds to Loraine we have seen in many a day. The old fiddlers closed the program after the band had given a short concert. Charley Neel of Loraine won first place and the $5.00 prize and J. H. Wall of Abilene won second place and the $3.00 prize in the old fiddlers contest. Only seven fiddlers entered the contest.

The high school band rendered a concert each night during the fair and drew considerable comment on their playing ability. Friday night after the band concert a program featuring songs drew much applause.

A public address system for Friday and Saturday night programs was set up by R. R. Cooper of Big Spring.

Harry Hallmark suffered slight injuries at the Producers Gin Wednesday when he was caught in a belt. Part of his clothing was torn off and his arm bruised but he was not seriously injured.

GIN REPORT

Thursday at noon the four Loraine gins had ginned a total of 3,255 bales from this year's crop. Most people believe the crop is more than half gathered.

Germans, Poles, Hungarians

Covet Part of Czech Nation

CZECHOSLOVAKIA AND HER MINORITIES DISTRIBUTION

Foreign

"After 20 years of peace we were overtaken by a violent crisis. Dynamic political forces . . . from neighboring states threatened our lands . . . England and France, two democracies, informed us that arbitration could not solve the difficulty . . . The government could do nothing but accept the suggestion of the two powers . . . Nothing else remained, because we were alone."

Thus, to her angry, downhearted populace, little Czechoslovakia explained why Sudeten borderlands were being ceded to Germany. Two days had passed since faithless England and France had capitulated to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's demand for immediate "release" of the 3,500,000 German Czechs whose protests have kept Europe in a dither all summer. Further delay would bring invasion; it was the better part of valor to surrender. The terms: Predominantly German areas would be ceded immediately, while part German areas would be given a plebiscite. In return, Adolf Hitler would join in guaranteeing Czechoslovakia's future.

But even while Europe began breathing easier, new troubles were brewing, mostly caused by the hopeless conglomeration of nationalities from which the Czech nation was carved 20 years ago. (See Map.) The troubles:

In Prague itself, democracy gave way to semi-dictatorship as Premier Milan Hodza's cabinet resigned, replaced by that of Gen. Jan Syrový, one-eyed army chief. Meanwhile, blood splattered throughout Sudeten as Czech troops quelled Nazi riots.

In Warsaw was heard a growing cry for "liberation" of 82,000 Poles in the Silesian Teschen belt which Poland lost to Czechoslovakia in 1920.

In Budapest, Hungarians demanded annexation of 700,000 Magyars in Czech territory contiguous to Hungary.

In Treviso, Italy, Premier Benito Mussolini decided treaties meant nothing in modern Europe, therefore urged complete split-up of Czechoslovakia to satisfy Czechs, Germans, Magyars, Poles, Ruthenians, Slovaks.

Meanwhile, Britain's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and France's Premier Edouard Daladier ate crow. In Paris, a crisis threatened in protest against the Franco-British scheme whose stench almost paralleled that of the notorious Hoare-Laval plan for Ethiopia's partition. Three cabinet members resigned. In London, where the "sell-out" created equal protest, Neville Chamberlain had good reason to worry about his job.

As the prime minister boarded his plane for Godesberg, Germany, and his second conference with Adolf Hitler in a week's time, there were some indications that Der Fuehrer might eventually reject the Sudeten settlement, might demand complete division of Czechoslovakia among Germany, Poland and Hungary.

Only definite fact was that Germany had bluffed her way into Europe's No. 1 position, relegating both France and England to the classification of second-rate powers.

Domestic

New England had already weathered three days of rain when tropical storm warnings were posted on Florida's east coast. By midnight the hurricane was safely past Florida, far at sea. Next morning Jacksonville warned North Carolina's capes, but high tides and wind had already spread the word. By noon the weather bureau at Washington ordered storm warnings posted from Atlantic City to Eastport, Me.

By late afternoon the storm hit Long Island's fashionable West-hampton with a 90-mile wind, a 40-foot tidal wave. Luxurious homes on the sand dunes were blown to sea and bodies were scattered for miles along the beach. The storm's full force had struck the island from Montauk down to Queens and Brooklyn.

Roaring across Long Island sound, it brought flood, wind and fire to Connecticut in a night of horror that cost $30,000,000. At Providence, R. I., waves that broke 1,000 feet into the city left 25 feet of water in some streets. By the time it reached Massachusetts, four days of rain had already swollen rivers to flood stage. As only a hurricane can, it ripped northward into New Hampshire and Vermont, thence across to Montreal where it took two more lives before playing out. Behind was a picture of amazing desolation that stretched across six states.

Next day began the biggest rehabilitation job since 1937's spring floods. With more than 400 dead, with property damage standing above $400,000,000, with thousands homeless, many communities were so hopelessly shattered they could not help themselves. To the rescue came the Red Cross, U. S. coast guard and WPA, while from Washington President Roosevelt ordered all federal agencies to give every possible assistance.

● Shortly after midnight, Southern Pacific's Chicago-bound Californian pulled onto a siding at Tor-tuga, Calif., making way for the Los Angeles-bound Argonaut. Though brakeman Eric L. Jacobson threw the switch, Argonaut thundered through, crashed head-on into the Californian to kill 12, injure 100. Told that he had opened a closed switch, brakeman Jacobson became hysterical, shrieked over and over: "I'm not crazy, but I don't know why I did it!"

Politics

All summer the U. S. has waited for Franklin Roosevelt to say yes or no regarding his third term candidacy. Only known facts were (1) that he would retire if a strongly liberal congress approved his legislative program by 1940, and (2) that, having control over the Democratic party, he would then be able to name his successor. Thus it was obvious why he strove to defeat such "obstructionist" senators as Iowa's Gillette, South Carolina's Smith, Maryland's Tydings and Georgia's George.

But by last week, as primary season closed, the President's only ma-

NEW YORK'S O'CONNOR
Biggest fish in a summer's angling.

For success had been against New York's Rep. John J. O'Connor, defeated by administration-blessed James H. Fay, one-legged war veteran. Though Representative O'Connor won Republican nomination (he entered both tickets), Candidate Fay is a safe bet next November since he carries both American Labor party and Democratic endorsement.

Since little John O'Connor has been able to hook in a summer's angling, at best his so-called "purge" was only 25 per cent successful. This means the President's program will not be completed by 1940, also that his tremendous personal popularity would bog down if he attempted to choose his successor. Though he can win votes for himself, he cannot do it for others.

Apparently two choices remain open. Either Franklin Roosevelt will run for Democratic renomination or he will head a new third party, a step not considered unlikely in view of his recent promise to support liberals, whether Democratic or Republican.

● In Massachusetts, ex-Gov. James M. Curley staged a comeback, won Democratic gubernatorial nomination over the incumbent, Gov. Charles F. Hurley. Opposing him next November will be 46-year-old Leverett Saltonstall, liberal Republican, who scored three times the vote of his three opponents combined.

● In Wisconsin, where popular Gov. Philip F. LaFollette could be beaten only by a Democratic-Republican fusion ticket against the powerful Progressive party, November's gubernatorial race will again find three candidates: Governor LaFollette, Democratic Robert Henry, Republican Julius P. Heil. Most interest will center in the senatorial campaign, where Democratic Sen. F. Ryan Duffy must face Republican Alexander Wiley and Progressive Herman L. Ekern, currently lieutenant governor.

Lesson for October 2

THE ONE TRUE GOD

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:2, 3; Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:28-34; 1 Corinthians 8:4-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.—Deuteronomy 6:5.

Today we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus and related New Testament passages. It is appropriate to point out that, far from being out-moded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent re-study and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards. As interpreted by the Lord Jesus and applied to our daily living, the truth of these commandments should be brought home to every boy and girl and man and woman in our Bible schools.

The lessons begin at the right point, for the first commandment properly deals with our conception of God. What a man thinks about God determines his entire outlook on life. We begin right when we declare that there is but one God.

I. The Truth Stated—There Is One True God (Exod. 20:2, 3).

Jehovah means "I will be what I will be," or "I am that I am." (Exod. 3:14). His very name declares God to be the self-existent, eternal one. How infinitely gracious then is the use of the word "thy" in verse 2! He—the great I AM—is my God.

There are many things concerning which we do not speak dogmatically. There are even Christian doctrines about which spiritual and earnest men may honestly differ, but regarding God we say with absolute assurance and complete exclusiveness—there is but one true God. If He is what He claims to be, if God is not to be declared to be a liar, then it is beyond the realm of possibility that there could be any other God. Hear it, ye men and women of America who in an enlightened land and age bow down in heathenish worship "before the god of gold, the god of self, the god of wine, the god of success, the god of fame, the goddess of pleasure, the god of licentiousness." The one true God says, "I am Jehovah. thou shalt have no other gods before me."

II. The Truth Explained.

1. God is our Deliverer (Exod. 20:2). He who brought Israel out of the bondage of Egypt is the one, and the only one who can deliver men from the bondage of sin. If you think that a sinner is not in bondage read Titus 3:3 and Romans 6:16 and then read the verses following in both passages, and not only see but follow the way of deliverance.

2. God is our Saviour (Isa. 45:22). Again note that "there is none else" who can save. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

It was this verse that led one of the world's greatest preachers, Charles Haddon Spurgeon, to accept Christ as his Saviour when he was just a humble lad. Perhaps some boy or girl who reads these lines may do likewise, and become a great instrument in God's hand. Teacher, perhaps the Spurgeon of the next generation will be in your class today. Win him for Christ!

3. God is Love (Mark 12:28-34). In 1 John 4:8 the truth is stated in all its glorious simplicity. "God is love." He not only loves us, and calls on us to love Him, and enables us to love both Him and our neighbors, but He "is love." Love is of the very essence of God's nature. He is the source of all true love. He is love.

It was for this reason that Jesus replied to the question of the scribe as He did, directing the whole life of man into love toward God and his fellow man.

It is worthy of careful note and emphasis in our teaching that the recognition and appreciation of this truth on the part of the scribe brought him near to the Kingdom of God, but not into it. He was "not far from," but he was not in it. It is terrifying to think how close men may come to entering without doing so. Reader, have you entered into eternal life through Jesus Christ?

4. God is our Father (1 Cor. 8:4-6). Paul is speaking of the eating of meat offered to idols, and points out that such false gods are really nothing. This is true not only of the idols of wood and stone, but of supernatural beings, demons worshipped by primitive peoples. There are such spirit beings, active even in our day in such cults as spiritism, but they are not divine, not true gods (v. 5).

The true God is a Father, yes "the Father," of whom are all things and we in Him (v. 6). As there is but one God, there is also but one Lord, Jesus Christ through whom the one God has wrought all things, and through whom we also come to God. If we have Christ we have all; if we have not Him we have nothing. Is He your Saviour?

Aunt Tibby's Trunk

By
D. J. WALSH

"BUT, Mazie," remarked Bert Howard to his pretty little wife, "it isn't quite fair that Aunt Tibby should want to come back so soon; it's less than three weeks since she left, and she had been here six months. I have no objections to your aunt; she's a nice old lady, if a bit eccentric, but you always work so hard entertaining her that you wear yourself out. Between worrying over her comfort and fussing about the safety of that old cowhide trunk, home becomes a place of torment for me instead of a haven of rest."

And then Mazie, whose bobbed crown of glory was decidedly of the shade beloved by Titian, and with a temper to correspond, replied thus: "If you were properly interested in the welfare of your family you'd want to keep Aunt Tibby here all the time! Do you fancy that she herself would be so particular about that old cowhide trunk, as you are pleased to call it, if it didn't contain valuables? She told me—no, I won't say she exactly told me, but she gave me to understand, and I know all the family have the same impression—that in it she carries her stocks and bonds. She has bequeathed the trunk to the one in whose home she happens to die."

"Mazie!" exclaimed Bert, putting his arms around his wife, "waiting for 'dead men's shoes' is sorry business! Do what you can for your aunt without making your family unhappy, but put all such ideas as you've just mentioned out of mind; they are unworthy of you!" and Bert stopped to kiss his wife good-by.

The first evening of Aunt Tibby's arrival Mazie began, "Barbara! do sit still! You'll make Aunt Tibby nervous!" or "John! don't walk so heavy!"

Aunt Tibby had been with them several weeks when she came down with a cold. The doctor called pronounced the trouble pneumonia. "Which at her age," said he (Aunt Tibby was 86), "is a serious matter. You had better get a nurse." Aunt Tibby had been so humored by her niece, however, that the nurse could do little to suit her, and Mazie was obliged to fetch and carry, to run up and down stairs until, ten days later, Aunt Tibby sank into her last sleep.

After the funeral the relatives who had gathered from far and near demanded that the will be read at once. So the old cowhide trunk was brought down to the living room and opened in the presence of all. It contained Uncle David's army uniform, a few books, half a dozen packages of old newspapers—and a long letter written by Aunt Tibby herself.

This was addressed to her relatives in general and was a sort of confession. In it she stated that her income since Uncle David's death had been limited to a pension of $6 a month. That in some way the story had been circulated that this old trunk contained valuables and she had never contra-

On the Highway

It is a curious trait in human nature that we will take off our hats when a woman enters an elevator, and be most apologetic if we bump into somebody inadvertently; but the instant we get our hands on a steering wheel we damn all mankind—woman and man alike.

Too often, we are inclined to look upon traffic guides and regulations designed primarily to keep us from having a good time, when the truth of the matter is, they have been devised solely for our convenience and comfort.

dicted it, fearing if she told the truth some one might put her in an old ladies' home, an institution she detested. She trusted her relatives would pardon her and that the old trunk would be kept for her sake; that it might prove a magic casket to the owner, just as it had to her.

The trunk was left with Mazie, as she was the only person who displayed the least desire to possess it. After everyone had departed she threw her arms around her husband's neck and cried, "Oh, Bert, can you ever forgive me?" Judging by the sigh of contentment she uttered Bert's answer was satisfactory.

Aunt Tibby was right; the trunk did prove a magic casket for Mazie. It stood in the upstairs hall where she had to pass it many times a day and whenever she was seized with envy, stubbornness or a desire for finery she could not afford, one glance at the old trunk was sufficient to dispel such feelings in a twinkling.

SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Kneeland, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the summer to Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him he will be "useful" as his secretary there. Hale is joined at lunch by Fred Ainsworth, an unpopular college mate, also at Halcyon, who leaves him with a premonition of unpleasant mystery. He is met at the train by Mrs. Wilbur Nash, whom he questions about the menace, and experiences a disturbing premonition. The premonition is barely eased by the comfortable hospitality of Hosanna, Kneeland's elderly sister, and her friend, Ruth Forbes, middle-aged sophisticate. In his room, Hale finds a soiled paper, printed, "This place dangerous." Hale meets the rest of the strange group—Dr. Craig, psychiatrist friend of Bert Kneeland, nervous young son of Casper, and beautiful but moody Joan Kneeland, niece of the house. Ainsworth drops in at his room, questions him about his reactions, and tells him of Bert's hopeless love for his mistress cousin, and that Mrs. Forbes is down and out. The whole group seems to get on each other's nerves. Later, Hale sees Hosanna furtively meeting a shabby man in the woods.

"Good morning," Hale said. "Has everyone else had breakfast?" He added with his likable grin, "I'm ashamed of myself."

Rose responded warmly. She approved of the new arrival and his pleasant ways.

"Miss Hosanna hoped you would sleep late, sir. She says you've had an illness. She ordered me not to ring the breakfast gong. Everyone has had breakfast but Mrs. Spencer Forbes. Your breakfast is right here on the sideboard, sir. If you will choose what you like . . ."

She added as Rex strolled toward the sideboard, "Breakfast hours are so irregular here that we serve in the English way."

"I like that."

Hale lifted the lids from several silver dishes that shimmered over electric flames, and regarded their contents with enthusiasm. "I like these, too," he added. He selected a hot plate and helped himself generously to scrambled eggs, bacon, and creamed potatoes. Rose poured his coffee and offered him hot muffins.

Hale's spirits were soaring again. His forebodings of the previous evening seemed absurd. Even that odd encounter between Miss Hosanna and the unpleasant stranger appeared normal in the light of this brilliant day. Perhaps she had been called to the aid of a sick neighbor, or something of the sort, and the man had brought her home. No doubt there was a natural explanation of the episode. Hale ate a big breakfast and told Rose how good American food tasted to him.

While his second cup of coffee was being poured Mrs. Spencer Forbes strolled in. Her pale mask brightened slightly at the sight of the young man. It developed that she was glad to have company for the meal. She had had a beastly night—but then she always had beastly nights. She hadn't done any sleeping, really, since she was a girl. She prowled around the house at night a good deal. She ate sparingly of toast and coffee.

"Are you bathing at eleven?" Mrs. Spencer Forbes wanted to know.

"Of course."

"Then you can teach me to swim. You needn't waste time teaching Joan. Unless you're a wonder she can put circles all around you."

"I am a wonder. I'll challenge Miss Kneeland to a race and you can be referee. Incidentally you can take your first lesson observing our form."

"Or forms—both of which are beautiful, I know."

Mrs. Spencer Forbes sighed, and bit wanly into a slice of toast.

"I knew it would be like this," she said discontentedly. "At night when I'm in my war-paint and lit up I can still hold my own, after a fashion. But in the cold light of the morning after—"

"You're looking exactly like Lilian Russell this minute."

"I don't doubt it. She's been in her grave for years."

Hale offered her his cigarette case, held his lighter for her, and grinned into her strange eyes. They were like pale blue-gray sapphires, with odd moving lights in them. Something in their expression, as they met his eyes, sent a little chill down his spine. She was a cold-blooded creature, if there ever was one. He could not imagine Mrs. Spencer Forbes sparing anything that stood in her path. She laid her hand on his arm, as he stood beside her chair, and the touch added to the chill. He could feel the coldness of that hand through the thin sleeve of his white flannel coat.

"You're a nice boy," she told him. "You're a pleasant addition to our mixed society here. I hope you will be none the worse for it, but I'm not sure. Anyway, you're in for some jolts."

"Everyone here is so confoundedly mysterious," Hale grumbled. "Looked at en masse and on the surface, you're a delightful lot. Individually each of you seems to be—"

"Well, what do we seem to be?"

"Vultures, waiting for their prey," was the answer that came to Hale's mind. Verbally he continued to take Mrs. Spencer Forbes lightly. She had been very decent to him from the hour of his arrival.

"Very high-strung men and women, impatiently waiting for something to happen," he said.

Mrs. Spencer Forbes uttered the sinister little laugh he had heard before.

"I don't think that was what you wanted to say," she observed. "But we'll let it pass. Now I'll go and get ready to dazzle you on the beach. It's after ten."

He escorted her to the staircase and then strolled out of the house and looked around him. His earlier sense of well-being had departed. He felt restless and at loose ends. He circled the house at a little distance, taking it in from various angles. It had a long frontage, and a one-story wing excrecence on each side. He was again impressed by the strange silence that enfolded it. Even at the rear of the building all bert was courteous in manner and expression but had little to say after the brief exchange of greetings. In his bath outfit he made Rex think of a plucked chicken. Joan looked as if she had not slept well. She made a few perfunctory comments on the beach, the temperature of the water, and the like. Hale noticed that young Kneeland kept his eyes on her face while she talked.

When they reached the beach Herbert aroused himself from the lethargy that enveloped both cousins that morning and led Rex to the men's bath-houses. There were two of these—one used by Craig and Herbert, the latter told him, the other by Ainsworth and Casper Kneeland when he was at the Camp. "Come in to dress with us afterward, if you like," Herbert said indifferently. Hale promptly accepted the invitation. He told himself that he must not encroach on "Uncle Cass." Really, he had a strong wish to avoid the intimacy of sharing a bath-house with Ainsworth. Craig appeared almost at once. Her-ing made me tired. This year the least thing does it. I'm paying the piper for being an idiot last winter. I burnt the candle at both ends. I was out most of the night almost every night. All the girls I knew were doing the same thing and most of them are paying for it, just as I am. I'm certainly getting enough sleep now to build me up," she ended.

"Your cousin doesn't look very well," Rex allowed himself to say. "Bert's all right, or he would be if he thought so. His trouble is worry."

Evidently Joan Kneeland thought she had said enough. She shot forward and Hale swam by her side in silence.

"It's a revelation," he said at last, "to be perfectly well all one's life, and then suddenly discover that one is vulnerable. I've just had that experience."

"I know you have," she broke in eagerly. "I suppose that's why I spoke as I did. A fellow feeling, you know."

She had turned her head to look at him. There was an odd expression in her eyes. Hale responded to that look.

"It worries one, too," he said. "Most human beings are used to ordinary physical ups and downs. They have sensations every day that would frighten you and me. They take them as the trifles they are. We don't. We magnify them. We remember that the good die young," he ended more lightly. "We decide that we are pilgrims here. Heaven is our home."

She laughed a little.

"Of course you do understand." Her voice held vitality. She was looking at him with so much interest that his head swam a trifle. They reached the float and sat down on it with their legs hanging over the side. For a time they were silent. Hale was afraid to speak again. If he did he might shatter the odd sense of intimacy that now enveloped them. For a few moments they looked out over the sunlit sea and shining beach, down which Miss Hosanna and Mrs. Spencer Forbes were making their way to the water's edge. Three heads bobbed on a wave not far from the float. Craig's was in the lead, Herbert's next, Ainsworth's some distance behind.

Craig reached the float and climbed up beside them. Hale was annoyed but received him affably. Her little laugh and her tone had both been friendly. He realized, too, that she had been observing him more closely than he had known. This was a pleasant discovery. As if underlining it she spoke again, ignoring Craig's arrival.

"You don't know how nice it seems to have someone come among us who can laugh and joke," she said. "We're a dull lot. I usually have two or three girl friends here, but I haven't asked them this summer. They'd expect to be entertained every minute and I don't want to bother with them." Then she drew Craig into the talk. "Aren't we dull, Doctor?"

"Most of us are a bit on the sober side," Craig agreed. "But you're not, and Bert oughtn't to be." "I wasn't, but I am. I'm afraid I'm going through the process known as 'settling down.'" "Not a bit of it. You're too young for that."

Craig spoke with such unusual emphasis that Hale glanced at him curiously. Craig did not see the look. His eyes were on the girl between them, and Rex was struck by his expression. It was a long look—thoughtful, deeply intent, slightly puzzled.

"You needn't waste time teaching Joan."

the doors were firmly closed, though the temperature had mounted again and the morning was very warm. The woods that crowded so close to the house looked dark and mysterious, even in brilliant sunshine.

When he re-entered the house he took in its general architectural plan. There was a wide central hall on both the first and second floors, with big rooms at the right and left. The lower right wing held the living-room, the dining-room and some sort of a library or study as he discovered through its open door. The left wing held a long library and billiard room. The kitchen, he inferred, was in the rear of these. The central hall was spacious and the living-room and library on either side of it had wide windows facing the sea.

There were evidently plenty of bedrooms upstairs, on each side of the upper hall. The screened-in verandas along the front and right wing of the house were finished as outdoor living-rooms, with gay chintz and painted wicker furniture. It was all very comfortable. Just the same, it was rather odd that there wasn't a cat or a dog around the house or grounds. Hale said as much to Rose when he met her in the upper hall an hour later.

"We had a nice dog, sir," she told him. "It was a Pekinese that belonged to Miss Joan. It wasn't much larger than a kitten, and that cute and clever you wouldn't believe it. It got kind of delicate and sickly. Then last month it got lost. We all hunted for it but we couldn't find it. Miss Joan offered a big reward. She thought it might 've strayed off in the woods and got picked up. But Joe found it two weeks ago under one of the tents. It was dead and in such a state he buried it right away. In May the same kind of thing happened to Jane's cat. Jane's the cook, you know. It was just beautiful—that cat. It was jet black with green eyes. It disappeared one day and was found dead on the road. It must 've been killed by a car. Since that we haven't had any pets. It looks," Rose added sedately, "like animals don't seem to thrive here."

"They certainly don't," Hale agreed and went on to his room. It was almost eleven. He did not know whether the family put on their bathing suits in the house or in the bath-houses. He had discovered on his bathing suit in his own room, adding a bath-robe for the journey to the shore. He carried his flannels to redress in a bath-house. He had a suspicion that wet bathing clothes worn into the house would make no hit with Miss Hosanna. On the path to the beach he saw two figures in bath-ropes in front of him and promptly caught up with the Kneeland cousins. Herbert said quickly, "Hale's going to use this one with us." Both men seemed to understand the reason, for both smiled—Craig slightly, Herbert with a sudden flash of teeth that made him look like a school-boy while it lasted.

Hale left his bath-robe in a corner and hurried down to the water's edge. Joan was already there, looking lovelier than ever in a green bathing suit with orange-colored cap and shoes. Mrs. Spencer Forbes and Miss Hosanna had not yet appeared. Neither had Ainsworth. Hale issued his challenge for a swim to the distant float. Joan's reply was to plunge into the surf and start seaward with swift, clean strokes. She was a good swimmer, but he passed her easily, less than half-way to their destination. Then he looked back over his shoulder. She was steadily falling behind and seemed tired. He slowed down, let her come abreast of him, and after that swam steadily by her side. She bit her lip.

"I'm no match for you," she admitted. "Doctor Craig can give you a run for your money. I'd like to see a match between you."

"I'll suggest it," Hale promised. He was content to swim beside her, moderating his stroke to suit her and watching her face.

"I'm not doing as well as usual this summer," she told him, with a hint of resentment. "Last year noth-

Origin of 'Yankee Doodle' Is Traced to Dutch Words Meaning 'Little John's Toot'

For all our American pride and pleasure in the song "Yankee Doodle," neither the origin of the tune nor the derivation of the two words in the title has ever been determined with certainty. So Harold Davis reminds us in a recent issue of American Speech.

Mr. Davis reviews the various arguments and shows that any number of derivations have been suggested, but the real purpose of his article is to make known some new evidence.

It seems that there were recently discovered, in the basement of the Calais free library in Calais, Maine, 42 diary-notebooks which once belonged to James S. Pike. This Pike was a versatile fellow, having been a famous newspaper correspondent and American minister to Holland from 1881 to 1886.

In one of these notebooks was found a draft of a letter, written from Holland in 1884, "To the Ed. of the Boston Advertiser." This letter reports on Pike's investigation into "Yankee Doodle" and a most enjoyable letter it is. Here, we can only give you a summary:

"Yankee," Pike said, quite likely came from "Jan-tje," meaning "Little John." "Doodle" probably came from "doedel" which the Dutch used as a part of their description of a Scotch bagpipe. It meant "toot."

Thus Pike found the origins of "Yankee Doodle" in the Dutch "Jan-tje Doedel," meaning "Little John's toot."—From "The Pleasures of Publishing" (Columbia University Press).

Insects and Flowers

Some flowers are sweet-smelling at night and scentless during the day. When this is the case one can be sure that the insects which fertilize the flowers are nocturnal in habit. Flowers which are sweet-smelling during the day are fertilized by insects which fly during the day. Some flowers close up during the day and open during the night; others do the opposite. Insects and flowers are mutual friends, but both of them have their enemies. There are insects which prey upon flowers, and there are flowers—or plants which use their flowers—to prey upon insects.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Sugar, Sirup and Molasses; Describes Correct Use of Sweets, Peerless Body Fuel

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE is an old saying that good things come in small packages. That is particularly apt when we pause to consider the nutritive value of sugar in its various forms. For two scant tablespoons of sugar supply as much caloric value as does three-fourths cup of cooked farina, or one and one-third eggs, or the lean meat of one lamb chop.

Sugar is a highly concentrated fuel food which burns quickly and completely in the body furnace.

The Sugar Bowl Is a Dynamo

It has been said that our present day civilization could not have reached its present heights without the driving force that sugar gives to men and women. And it is a fact that until comparatively recent times, only the very wealthy could afford this quick energy food which we now consume at the rate of more than 4,000,000 tons a year, or more than 100 pounds annually for every man, woman and child.

This peerless fuel food was once regarded almost as a medicine because of its ability to relieve fatigue and sustain vitality. And no wonder! For sugar is transformed into heat and power in less time and with less effort than any other foodstuff.

A Real Stimulant

While starchy foods require an average of from three to four hours for digestion, the body begins to burn a ration of sugar from 10 to 30 minutes after it is eaten.

It reaches the blood and muscles in a few minutes—as rapidly in fact as alcohol! That is why concentrated sweets, which are largely sugar, are so effective in combating fatigue.

Athletic coaches are well aware of the unique power of sugar as a stimulant and restorative of energy. That is why school and college youths are so frequently given highly sweetened beverages and other concentrated sweets before engaging in athletic competition.

Military leaders also appreciate how it increases endurance, and sweets are an important part of the soldier's ration. During the World War civilians were urged to reduce their consumption of sugar in order to make larger amounts available for the army, and most people found it difficult indeed to forego this agreeable food.

Indispensable for Most People

Sugar is such an indispensable ingredient in cakes, cookies, pies, puddings and ice creams, it is so necessary in beverages, on breakfast cereals and with fruits that it seems a great hardship to do without it even for one meal.

We are extremely fortunate, most people will agree, to live in an age when sugar is so high in quality and so reasonable in price. In the Thirteenth century when sugar was introduced to England through India, it cost the equivalent of ten dollars a pound in the monetary terms of today.

Refined sugar is now priced at a few cents a pound and one pound supplies over 1,800 calories! Moreover, when you buy a branded product, backed by a well-known name, you have the assurance that quality and purity are of the highest.

Moderate Use Desirable

Like all sources of great power, however, sugar must be handled with care. Too much sugar may prove as disastrous as too little. Possibly because of this, several false notions have grown up regarding this splendid food.

It is often charged that sweets cause indigestion, and it is true that when consumed in excess, they may ferment and result in irritation. Therefore, moderation should be the watchword.

But that is an excellent rule to follow in regard to all kinds of foods. For when consumed to excess, any food ceases to be beneficial.

It has also been charged that sweets are harmful to the teeth. But recent investigations suggest that the teeth are far more likely to deteriorate because the proper minerals and vitamins have not been included in the diet.

It is, however, desirable to restrict the amount of sugar given to children. That is because it quickly satisfies the appetite and may therefore decrease the consumption of other good and necessary foods, particularly those containing an abundance of minerals and vitamins. Children therefore can best take sweets in the form of sweetened puddings, gelatin, cooked and fresh fruits, and fruit juice and milk beverages.

The quick pick-up of sugar can be obtained in many forms besides the sparkling crystals of granulated sugar with which we are most familiar, or the brown sugar which is quite similar in composition, except for a larger moisture content, despite popular notions to the contrary.

Most fruits contain easily digestible sugars, the percentage in dried fruits ranging from 50 to 75 per cent. Milk sugar is also easily digested. Honey, molasses, corn sirup and the popular blended sirups are usually eaten in combination with other foods and are therefore unlikely to be consumed in too large amounts.

Corn sirup is often added to milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals, breads and desserts. It helps to make these foods more palatable and adds 60 calories with every tablespoon. It is so easily digested that it is often used in infant feeding.

Molasses provides significant amounts of both calcium and iron and is a good sweet for growing children. One and one-half tablespoons of molasses supplies as much calcium as one and one-half cups of diced carrots. It is a wise mother, therefore, who uses it in making the cookies that children like so well.

The mixed or blended sirups that are so popular with griddle cakes and french toast on cool fall days, also add palatable appeal and energy values to the diet.

For in whatever form sugar is consumed, it remains nature's shortcut to press-the-button heat and quick, healthful stimulation.

PLANNING BOARD BEHIND O'DANIEL PROGRAM

Texas Planning Board today was prepared to throw all its resources behind the industrialization program of W. Lee O'Daniel, nominee for governor.

O'Daniel met with the planning board in Fort Worth and appeared to be particularly impressed with the work of the board in respect to mapping and the assembling of information required by financial interests which might make industrial investments in Texas.

"I can see where your board and its program fits into the plan
I have for the industrialization of Texas," O'Daniel said after hearing members of the board report on their activities.

The planning board's 10-point program for the social and economic development of Texas was outlined to the gubernatorial nominee by W. M. Massie, Fort Worth, chairman; E. A. Wood,
Austin, director; E. L. Kurth, Lufkin, who is in charge of the board's forestry work; C. S. Clark Austin, chairman of the board's water resources committee; Hull Youngblood, San Antonio, who stressed the need for correction of freight rates and better health control; and Tom Cotton, Amarillo, who discussed the need for encouraging mining.

Since its creation in 1935, the planning board has gathered a mass of information and data on the resources of Texas and much of this information already has been disseminated to industrialists who have requested information on Texas resources.

Numerous industrial surveys have been made by the Board's technical staff and these will be used by O'Daniel when he launches his campaign to bring new industries to Texas.

Christmas Is Coming Also Thanksgiving

Texas Breeder-Feeder Association By T. C. Richardson, Secretary

Turkey-time approaches, and turkey raisers who think ahead will come out best in the annual competition in supplying festal tables. It takes at least four to five weeks of good full feeding to put a good market finish on turkeys, and longer if they are not already in good condition and health. At this time, therefore, it is time to make plans for the home-stretch with turkeys which are to be sold for Thanksgiving.
Three or four weeks later will do for the Christmas crop.

It is the finish, the last few pounds put on the breast and other thick parts of the turkey carcass, that determines the grade and the price per pound. It is false economy, therefore, to stint the feed at this stage. On the other hand every pound of this "finish" weight adds to the value of each pound of the original frame. The best figures available show that it takes from 4½ to 6 pounds of grain (including mash feeds) to make a pound of gain in turkeys, and the average cost of feed grains over several years has been $5.40 to $7 per hundred pounds of turkey. At the lowest imaginable price turkeys pay well for the grain and mash necessary to put them in first-class market condition.

An idea has been broadcast that the demand is now largely for smaller turkeys, 10 pounds or so.
One of the largest turkey shippers in Texas says the 15 to 16 pound turkey is still in best demand. Even if the former were true an unfinished turkey would not be acceptable. The writer knows city dealers who buy thin turkeys at their own price and fatten them for their trade, making a two-way profit. The farmer who sells this kind of turkeys is losing both ways—the sale of the grain to the turkey at a good price, and the city feeder gets paid for the small labor of feeding.

"Turkeys are becoming so plentiful that consuming centers are getting more critical on the quality, and I believe that in the future we will find a greater spread between Southwestern turkeys and Northwestern turkeys unless our quality is improved," says A.

W. Jacobs, Extension Economist of the Oklahoma A. and M. College. The Northwest and the Pacific Coast have no better turkeys than the Southwest, but they have been crowding us out because they do a better job of finishing.

The feed crop in the Southwest is excellent and will distributed, and all grains and elements of mash feeds are cheaper than for several years past. Most of this section has also had good rains to keep the ranges green. Everything is in our favor for turning out a turkey crop in prime condition this season, and at a low cost. It takes 1 to 1½ pounds less grain to make a pound of grain on good green range than without it, but if green range is lacking and all the feed were bought and the turkeys given all they could eat for four to six weeks before going to market it would still be profitable.

Nobody can forecast the ruling price, but everybody knows there will be a differential in favor of the prime and No. 1 grades. The grower has spent several months and some money producing a skelton which has little market value as such. Properly "upholstered" with the few extra pounds of juicy meat which full-feeding produces in a few weeks, the framework has an added value of its own. Failure to pad it with juicy flesh is the reason some people fail to make a profit from turkeys.

Many of the best turkey producers grade their flocks and full-feed only the best developed ones for Thanksgiving, and grade again before selling, holding back the lower grades for a later market. No turkey should go to market until it is free of pin feathers, which is a sign of maturity. Don't worry about over-weight—make them fat and let the weight be what it will.

From a Rust Proof Tank Guaranteed 20 Years

RUST... that destructive enemy of metal... eats
the very heart (the tank) out of many water heaters of a heater. It sends each year thousands of otherwise good water heaters to the junk heap.

But no more will rust cause such widespread damage to automatic gas water heaters because Ruud now equips its newest model with tank of silvery MONEL—the metal developed by science to resist rust!

For twenty years of clean hot water service automatically controlled go modern with Ruud.

SENIOR NEWS

The Senior Class would like to thank everyone who bought something from the Seniors either Friday night, Saturday night.

Everyone who "fished" seemed proud of his gift even if some of the boys did get dolls and the girls got tops. It may be a surprise to everyone but some of the Seniors found out that Marion Rhodes was a good cook. At least he is a good candy maker.

If anyone has any extra dishes to be washed we would recommend Kenneth Hoover. If you need a candy taster call on Iona Callahan. If you want some one to eat your candy just holler for Helen Compton and Doris Meadows. Mrs. Ison seemed to be pretty good at wrapping the gifts. Call on her about Christmas time.

All of the Seniors are anxiously waiting the arrival of the Senior rings. Here's hoping they arrive soon.

JOKES

Mrs. Ison: Why did you tie a string to that olive you just ate?

Mr. Ison: How did I know I would like it?

Jack Lankford: Waiter, look at the ends of this sausage.

Waiter: Yes, sir. I see nothing wrong with them.

Jack Lankford: Well, don't you think they are rather close together.

BAND NEWS

The band has been very busy this week. Wednesday night we went to Hermleigh and played about a 30 minute concert to help advertise the fair and the cheese plant.

Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night we played concerts down at the band stand.

Bulldogs Defeated by Post

The Bulldogs met defeat again Friday night when the powerful Post Antelopes defeated them by a margin of 38-0.

Several boys received minor injuries but all will be ready for the first Conference game here next Friday with The Roby Lions.

Although the score didn't indicate it, there was a marked improvement in the team. Their blocking and tackling showed a marked improvement. The team was in fine spirit and will be in fine spirits and will have plenty of pep for the Roby Lions.

Everyone is asked to be present and please pay the men who are to try to collect. This will be a hard job as there is no fence around the field. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Since school started the pep squad girls (Bow Wows) have been working hard marching and making our uniforms. We are proud of our uniforms and hope everyone will be pleased with them. Our drum corp has been organized this week. We have ten girls that are drawing straws to see who will play. They are Wylene Brown, Louise Hallmark, Wanda Faye Richey, Aillene Hallmark, Frances Rhodes, Loise Glass, Faye Chamness, Margaret Glass, Elizabeth Hock and Doris Mahoney and Nina Groom will be our bass drum beater throughout the season. I am proud of our pep squad and drum corp and we are glad to welcome our new comers.

We wish to express our appreciation for the way Mr. Williams, as well as the rest of the faculty has cooperated with us, and we will do our best not to cause conflicts.

We are proud of our sponsors Miss Edith Wilkerson and Mrs. Bruce Johnson. We know they will be the best we can get. Mrs. Johnson, who was a former member of the McMurry drum corps is in charge of our drum corps. Miss Wilkerson sponsor of the seventh grade and principal of Loraine Grammar School will sponsor the pep squad. We girls appreciate the way they have taken an interest in us because sometimes we feel as if no one is backing us.

We are behind the Bulldogs win or lose and all of you football fans help us yell for them on the sideline this year.

Well, Well folks! Here we are again with more chatter. Let us hope for the best.

The students as a whole seemed to be very disappointed in the Fair. It was said that there would be all kinds of rides for entertainment, but as we soon found out, there wasn't a single ride there. But most of them seemed to have made the best of it; so will let it go at that.

News Flash! War, War, War! Will the people ever quit talking about this terrible thing? Can't they see how much better it would be to say peace and to have peace instead of war?

The answer is No, not as long as Hitler is alive, which reminds me that a bright history student casually remarked the other day, that the world would be better off, if some one would shoot Hitler. And don't ever think that that statement wasn't sanctioned by the class! We sometimes wonder (that still sounds funny can have so much patience with us. But after all we only have one more year after this one in dear old L. H. S. So why not have a little fun along with a lot of work. Or don't the teachers think its all fun.

Three Times in Row President's 'Purge' Attempts Prove Futile

Roosevelt Unable to Transmit Personal Popularity to His Followers; Political Prestige Suffers Irreparable Damage; Forced Realignment Seen Complete Flop.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—There was quite a sermon, for me, in the telegram of congratulations that Virginia's great leader, Sen. Carter Glass, sent to Senator George upon the occasion of Senator George's victory in the attempted New Deal "purge" in Georgia. I don't know why that telegram was not more widely printed, but it was typically like Carter Glass, so cryptic, so full of meaning, that I am going to reprint it here:

"Senator Walter F. George, Atlanta, Ga.
"God bless you, Walter. Likewise, the sovereign State of Georgia."
"Signed, Carter Glass."

To get its true meaning, one has to recall that Senator George was the third Democratic senator, in a row, who was openly opposed by President Roosevelt; the third marked to be "purged" from the Democratic party and the third in a row to be victorious over the President's ill-advised attempt to dominate voters of a state, and, in due course, the congress of the United States, by personally picking the Democratic party nominees.

Next, Mr. George had been subjected to perhaps the strongest New Deal slap by the President, of any of the nine senators whom the President originally described as men behind the times. It will be recalled how Mr. Roosevelt, with Senator George on the platform, spoke his blessing of United States Attorney General Cummings at Barnesville, Ga., and announced his conclusion that Mr. George represented the past, not the future. It was on that occasion, too, that Mr. Roosevelt uttered the now famous: "God bless you, Walter; I hope we will always be friends."

The third feature to be remembered is that Mr. George won, that former Governor Talmadge was second and that the New Deal candidate was third in the race, and that Mr. George's victory was so overwhelming that there was no need for a run-off primary—the method in the solid Democratic states of choosing between the two highest candidates from the primary vote. This means that a majority of the voters—more than 50 per cent—voted for Mr. George.

President's Prestige Has Suffered Heavy Damage

Couple these facts with Senator Tydings' victory over Rep. David J. Lewis for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Maryland, and Sen. "Cotton Ed" Smith's substantial margin over Governor Johnston in South Carolina, and it appears to me that several conclusions are proper and justifiable. Mr. Roosevelt went into South Carolina in behalf of Governor Johnston and he went into Maryland to promise construction of several huge Chesapeake bay bridges and to point to the good qualities of Representative Lewis. Yet, the President's wishes were well ignored.

The conclusions I have reached—and I believe they will stand the most critical test—are:

1. Mr. Roosevelt is unable to transmit to his followers the same personal popularity that he has enjoyed since entering the White House.
2. His prestige as a political leader, which undoubtedly was slipping to some extent before, has now suffered irreparable damage.
3. The congress that will be elected in November will be the most independent, indeed, probably the most obstreperous, that the President has faced, and that spells trouble in a big way.

4. There can be no discounting the influence that victories for the conservatives, like those won by Tydings, Smith and George, will have on the rest of the country in the November elections. It is an honest statement, I believe, that there are numerous voters who have been wavering between the New Deal and the conservative school of thought, and a large percentage of them will turn to conservative candidate when they have a chance. They will be influenced strongly, and that fact worries the New Deal thinkers at the moment.

'Purge' but Step In Plan Of Political Realignment

But there is yet another thought in this connection. I refer to the President's program for a realignment of political groups in this country. He has called for it; of that there is no obvious doubt. The "purge" of the senators marked for political destruction was one of the early steps. So, it is significant that Mr. Roosevelt's early maneuver in the direction of a forced realignment has succeeded to the extent of a complete flop. The thing that started out to be a beautiful swan-like dive became a belly-buster, much to the chagrin of the great thinkers who surround the President and give him such poor political advice.

There will be a condition in the next congress that will be worthy of watching. Surely, no one will expect Tydings and Smith and George and Clark of Missouri and six or eight other senators to go out of their way to support a Roosevelt program in which they may not believe. There is the nucleus. There were already 20 or more senators of that mind. With those re-elected after overcoming the "purge," it seems reasonable to suppose that as little political credit as possible will be given to the President.

House members nearly always keep in close touch with the senators of their respective states, particularly if they are of the same political faith. They will take encouragement from the forthrightness of their seniors and, quite naturally, will be bolder and more outspoken. It will be much more difficult for Democratic Leader Rayburn to hold his majority together in the house of representatives because of this new-found courage and, in some cases, resentment.

All of which leads into a third phase. Few Presidents have been able to withstand bushwhacking from Capitol Hill. It confronts Mr. Roosevelt to an unparalleled degree because of the "purge." Thus, a further analysis seems to offer evidence, at least a hint, that Mr. Roosevelt's control of the Democratic party may be broken. If it is not now an accomplished fact, I see no reason to expect that the President can control the Democratic national convention of 1940. That, after all, is one of the things at stake in the President's ill-starred "purge" attempts.

Some Heads May Fall; New Spokesmen Appear

In consequence of these things, I have an idea that there will be many, many moves made during the next session and in the session just before the 1940 convention designed to take the Democratic party out of the hands of the Roosevelt advisers. I think you will see delegates being groomed here and there, 18 months before they are to be formally chosen. I believe also that state political bosses will become quite active next summer as they watch which way the wind blows. Some will guess wrong, some right. Some political heads will fall and new spokesmen will appear on the scene.

All of these things, I predict, will happen, barring one thing. That one thing is war. If there is a general European war on the horizon, then we may expect a different course of political events in the United States.

What I am about to say, now, is not said in discredit of the President. It is merely voicing a fact in politics. If there be a general war abroad, and, more particularly, if American relations become involved in it, then Mr. Roosevelt unquestionably will appeal for solidarity of public opinion, for unanimous support for the government of the nation. His spokesmen and henchmen will be busy as bees showing him to be the only man for the job, the only man capable of saving the nation. That happened in Woodrow Wilson's time and it has happened in every other war, and it will happen again.

Political Destruction Of Roosevelt Threatened

I know that Mr. Roosevelt is no more anxious to have the United States become involved in war than you or I. He realizes its cost in blood, as well as the disarrangement of world economies that follows. And if war comes, he naturally will want a united nation back of him. But, coldly and abstractly, I repeat that war conditions are the only set of circumstances that I see now which may prevent a thoroughgoing movement on Capitol Hill for the political destruction of Mr. Roosevelt. When I say, political destruction, I do not mean to imply, or to hint that opponents of the President within his own party want to send him to oblivion. They will seek—they are seeking, now—to dethrone him in every way except as titular head of the party. They want the guidance to come from old Democratic leaders and they want adherence to old Democratic principles. That is to say, the long-time oracles of the Democratic party have witnessed stupidity, sheer dumbness, on the part of the young squirts who have crowded close to the President, and they want to send those quacks back to the oblivion from which they came. Further, the old line Democrats want to avoid a wide-open split in their party. Unless that can be done in 1940, there will be a Republican victory followed by exactly the same conditions that wrecked the Republicans after the "purge" that the voters gave the G. O. P. in 1932 and 1936.

THE LOCAL CIRCLE

The Local Circle met Monday, September 26, in the home of Mrs. K. L. Taylor with Mrs. Tom Bennett assistant hostess. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Harold Martin. The minutes were read and approved and the report from the treasurer was heard. In the social service work there had been five bouquets, fifteen trays, and sixteen visits during the month. Various committees were appointed for the ensuing year.

The devotional was led by Mrs. Lillie Bennett using as her theme, "Character", and as her scripture reading Ephesians 6:1-10, stressing some of the wonderful characteristics of some of the Bible characters, and also of some great men we have had during our lifetime, using as an example Thomas A. Edison. Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. M. Bruce. "Yield Not to Temptation" was sung, led by Mrs. W. R. Martin.

A very appropriate reading was given by Mrs. Harold Martin on "What to Forget." Mrs. W. R. Martin sang two spiritual songs, "Deep River," and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," accompanied by Mrs. Taylor at the piano.

In concluding the program the Lord's Prayer was led by Miss Isla Bruce. Several interesting quiz games were played which were conducted by Mrs. Taylor, after which refreshments of angel food cake, cookies and ice cream were served to thirteen members.
