Civil rights bill caught in crossfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's vow to veto a sweeping civil rights bill puts him on a collision course with Congress, which has overwhelmingly endorsed the landmark measure expanding protections against discrimination.

Groups ranging from the U.S. Catholic Conference to the National Women's Law Center hailed the 315-98 vote Wednesday by which the House sent the Civil Rights Restoration Act on its way to the White House.

"It was a tremendous bipartisan victory for civil rights," said Ralph Neas, executive director of the 200-group Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. Republicans opposed the measure by a slight margin, but just four of the majority Democrats voted against it.

The bill, which some veteran lawmakers likened to the great civil rights statutes passed in the 1960s and 1970s, requires entire colleges, school systems, government agencies and private entities to comply with anti-discrimination laws if any program or activity within them receives federal money.

Congress has been struggling with the bill since 1984, when a Supreme Court decision limited the reach of laws protecting women, minorities, the elderly and the disabled to the specific program or activity receiving federal aid.

In letters to House Republicans, Reagan said the bill "dramatically expands the scope of federal jurisdiction over state and local governments and the private sector" and "poses a particular threat to religious liberty."

"I will veto the bill if it is presented to me in its current form," Reagan said.

Both chambers passed the civil rights measure by the two-thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto. Neas said he is confident the margins will hold if Reagan goes through with the veto.

"He's backed down on a lot of things he's said before," Judith Lichtman, director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund, said of Reagan. "It's hard to predict what he'll do this time."

The 6-3 Supreme Court decision came in a case brought by Grove City (Pa.) College. The ruling said only the student aid office was subject to the Title IX statute barring sex discrimination in education because student financial assistance was the only aid flowing into the college.

The result has been what one lawmaker called "an avalanche of discrimination nationwide" — hundreds of cases restricted or dropped, and investigators preoccupied with tracking federal dollars instead of determining if discrimination has occurred.

Opponents of the restoration act said it would have far-reaching and unintended consequences on churches, businesses and individuals. Supporters said it merely restores rights and principles long ago approved by Congress when it resolved that taxpayers should not sub-

Hot check fund origin debated

Resident contends county attorney ads are misleading

By KERRY HAGLUND
Staff Writer

Political advertisements touting county attorney candidate Robert D. "Bob" Miller as the man who established the Howard County Hot Check Department have irritated at least one local resident.

Tommy Tune, Howard College director of community education, contends that the hot check department was formed under the direction of his father, former county judge Bill Tune, before Miller took office.

The advertisements, which have appeared in print and local radio stations, say Miller "established and maintained an aggressive hot check department."

Miller said today the issue is how residents interpret the word "establish."

"I think it shows immaturity to think you establish a hot check department in one day. It took a year to two years to get it going."

To Tommy Tune, however, the advertisements appear misleading.

"When I heard the advertisements I said, 'Hey, wait a minute, that's not right,' " Tune said.

"I remember Dad and Harvey (Hooser) doing it."

According to court records, a motion was made Oct. 13, 1980 by commissioner David Barr and seconded by commissioner Paul Allen to approve then county attorney Harvey Hooser Jr.'s recommendation that a part-time clerk be hired in the newly-created hot check department.

Commissioners at that meeting unanimously approved the hiring of Melba Soles as clerk.

Formation of the hot check department began in September 1980 in response to an attorney general's decision that collection of hot checks by justice of the peace offices was illegal.

Miller served as county attorney from January 1981 to December 1984 and is now running against Hardy Wilkerson for the 1989-1992 term. Miller said today that it was under his leadership that the hot check department developed.

"I said (in the advertisements) I established a strong, aggressive department — the tools were there. That hot check department never got going until I was there."

"He made some improvements on it, there's no question about it," said Hooser, who reported that he, Bill Tune and Mike Barton, a county attorney's office employee, started the department "from scratch." Hooser was recently appointed by commissioners to complete the unexpired term of former county attorney Tim Yeats, who resigned Jan. 15 to concen-

Sniper hits four in Alamo City

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former mental patient opened fire with two six-shooters near the Alamo, shooting four people at random and trading shots with police before he was wounded and taken into custody, authorities said.

Marvin Duncan, 55, shot in the left thigh by police, was charged with six counts of attempted capital murder, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said. Bond was set at $1.5 million.

The most seriously wounded victim, Deborah Reyes, 29, was shot in the chest and stomach and was in critical condition at Brooke Army Medical Center late Wednesday, said hospital spokesman Sgt. William Banks.

The three others, shot at point-blank range, were not injured seriously, officials said.

Witnesses said the shooting, which took place in the week that marks the 152nd anniversary of the fall of the mission to Mexican troops, resembled something from a movie.

"All hell broke loose," said Todd Tarble, 20, who was waiting for a bus about three blocks from the Alamo when the shooting began.

"He had two guns in his hands. I've never seen anything like that. The guy was acting like John Wayne. This guy was crazy," Tarble said.

Duncan was listed in good condition at Medical Center Hospital.

Court records show Duncan was placed in Rusk State Hospital for the mentally or criminally insane in October 1980 after being found incompetent to stand trial on an attempted murder charge.

He was released in March 1981 to stand

Local accident victim moved from intensive care

HERALD STAFF REPORT

A Big Spring man is in stable condition in a Lubbock hospital after he suffered injuries in an accident south of Big Spring Saturday morning.

Kenneth Bennett, Sterling City Rt. Box 109A, has been moved from the intensive care unit of St. Mary's of the Plains Hospital, and his condition has improved from critical to stable, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Bennett was injured in a one-car accident on Todd Road — six miles southeast of Big Spring — at about 2 a.m. Saturday, according to a Department of Public Safety report.

It stated that Bennett's vehicle was unable to negotiate a curve on the roadway "due to alcohol intoxication." The vehicle then ran off the road and struck a metal pipe fence, the report noted.

A portion of the fence pierced the windshield, injuring Bennett, the report added.

According to the report, Bennett then drove himself to Scenic Mountain Medical Center. DPS troopers did not come in contact with him until at least two hours after the accident, and were unable to locate the accident site until daylight because of his "confused mental recollection."

A fund to help defray Bennett's medical bills has been established at First National Bank.

Report: AIDS infection spreads during childbirth

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON — The AIDS virus infects the lining of the cervix, which may help explain how the deadly disease spreads during sex and childbirth, according to a study released today.

The research suggests, though doesn't prove, that the woman's cervix might be infected directly during intercourse through contact with virus-laden sperm. Experts knew that infected women may have the AIDS virus in their genital sections, but it was unclear where this virus came from.

It appears that the cervix could be an initial site of infection during intercourse and a source of virus that later infects sexual partners and infants during birth.

"This shows pretty clearly that the source of the virus within the genital secretions is actually cells within the cervix," said Dr. Martin S. Hirsch, senior author of the study at Massachusetts General Hospital.

The report, published in this month's Annals of Internal Medicine, was based on tissue samples taken from four AIDS-infected women. The researchers found the virus in endothelial cells that line blood vessels in the inner layer of the cervix, as well as in germ-eating macrophages and other blood cells within the cervical tissue.

"It's interesting and raises possibilities that perhaps the cervix could be infected directly by the virus, rather than get there through the blood," said Dr. Jay A. Levy of the University of California, San Francisco.

The new research adds one more site to the growing list of targets of the AIDS virus, known as HIV.

The virus kills by destroying helper T-cells, the blood cells that orchestrate the body's immune defenses against all kinds of microscopic invaders, among them the AIDS virus itself. However, experts have learned that the virus also infects other types of blood cells as well as other parts of the body, including the eyes and the brain.

Last month, Levy and others published a report showing that the AIDS virus also infects the rectum and colon. This could explain one way that the disease is spread during anal intercourse.

Many experts have assumed that for an AIDS infection to occur, the virus must enter the bloodstream, through a tear in the body's tissues or a venereal lesion.

The discovery of infected rectal and cervical tissue, however, suggests this might not always be necessary. Instead, infection might occur by direct viral contact with the rectum and the female sex organs.

Hirsch noted that the cervix continually sloughs off cells into the genital secretions. These could be one means by which infected women pass the AIDS virus to men during intercourse.

About 40 percent of babies born to infected women catch the virus themselves, either before or during birth. Hirsch said it's possible that some of them get it by contact with the infected cervix and genital secretions.

The study raised the possibility that delivery by Caesarean section might lower the risk to the newborn but says there is no proof of this.

All the women tested in the study were heroin users.

Dallas rape victim says: 'I hope he catches it'

DALLAS (AP) — A woman who carries the AIDS virus says she hopes the man who raped her catches the deadly disease, but fears he might spread it to other women.

The woman said Wednesday the attack Sunday occurred as she was menstruating, boosting the odds that the rapist contracted the deadly disease.

Because blood contains a higher concentration of the AIDS virus, the risk of sexually transmitting the disease is greater during menstruation, a spokesman for a San Francisco AIDS Foundation said.

"I hope he catches it," said the woman, 24. "It would serve him right. That's what he gets for going around raping people."

But the woman, a former intravenous drug user who learned on her birthday in December that she had tested positive for exposure to the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said she hopes her assailant realizes he might be putting women's lives at risk if he rapes again.

The woman told police she was attacked as she walked to a friend's apartment from a convenience store late Sunday. The man came up from behind and stuck a knife against her stomach, forcing her into a park, she told police.

The woman said she did not tell the man she carried the AIDS virus, but added, "I would've told him if he'd asked. But he didn't ask."

She said she didn't tell him she was an AIDS carrier because she was afraid.

Dallas police Sgt. Larry Lewis said the incident is only the second time he has heard of a rape victim having AIDS, and the first time he has received a report that a victim was menstruating when raped.

San Francisco's AIDS Foundation spokesman Jon Cole said there is no way to calculate the odds of the rapist contracting the AIDS virus. He said the viral transmission rate from female to male is relatively low, although contact with the woman's blood increases the risk.

Aspirin makers to back off advertising

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — The head of the Food and Drug Administration said today the agency hopes to make a decision in a few months on whether aspirin manfacturers can advertise claims that their products help reduce a first heart attack.

FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said he was pleased with a voluntary agreement from the nation's aspirin manufacturers Wednesday not to make such claims until data from a recent study can be fully analyzed.

Young, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," said people with high blood pressure, liver disease, gout or ulcers face the risk of bleeding complications from aspirin and should seek the advice of a doctor on its usage.

He also said that while there is some evidence that healthy men between the ages of 45 and 85 might use an aspirin every other day to reduce the risk of heart attack, there is no evidence that it would help women or younger men.

"We didn't want to see people get hurt. We felt it important to get the facts in..." Young said. "We hope to make our decision within a few months."

Summoned by a letter that reminded them of the FDA's regulatory power, aspirin manufacturers met for more than an hour on Wednesday with Young, who then announced the agreement at a news conference.

Young said the agency was concerned that aspirin ads citing a recent medical journal study could be misleading.

"The manufacturers agreed to exercise voluntary restraint and refrain from further promotion of the study results until the facts of the study are known and the necessary analyses were completed and appropriate physician labeling made available," Young announced in a formal statement.

Though he called the action "voluntary", Young said later on public television's "MacNeil-Leher News Hour" that if the manufacturers "go and make a misbranded claim then we could take action. ... The extreme action is to call the product misbranded and seize it."

The commissioner insisted that the meeting was not called in response to advertising already run, saying he was "so busy" that he never read, listened or watched advertising.

Young said the meeting was prompted by publicity surrounding an aspirin study published Jan. 28 in the New England Journal of Medicine.

In the study, more than 11,000 physicians over the age of 40 took one aspirin every other day, while another group of physicians took placebos, or fake aspirin. At the end of 57 months, the study showed that those taking aspirin had 47 percent fewer heart attacks.

Young said the study was incomplete and the FDA has not approved aspirin for use in the prevention of an initial heart attack.

Until the FDA analyzes the study and formulates formal physician instructions on the use of aspirin against first heart attacks, Young said drug companies cannot promote aspirin for this use.

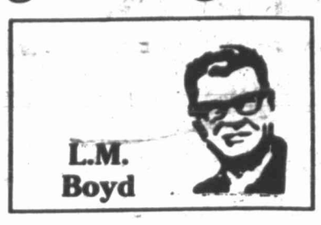

There are no loopholes in the agreement for ads already prepared, he said.

"From this time forward, any ads in the pipeline will not be grandfathered (escape enforcement)," said Young.

William C. MacLeod, director of consumer protection at the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates drug advertising, refused repeatedly at the news conference to say if his agency had taken any action regarding ads by aspirin manufacturers, nor would he say that inappropriate ads had been run.

In a Feb. 24 letter, Young "invited" the drug manufacturers to attend a meeting at his FDA office to discuss the aspirin findings.

sidize discrimination.

"Those who dip their hands in the public till should not object if a little democracy sticks to their fingers," summed up Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Before passing the bill, the House voted 266-146 against a GOP substitute that would have scaled back the measure's impact on corporations and allowed more schools to avoid compliance with civil rights laws on religious grounds.

The final bill also contains a Senate amendment that invalidates Title IX regulations barring discrimination against women who have had or sought abortions and requiring college health plans to cover abortions if they cover other temporary disabilities.

Several House members who supported the bill said they regretted that it included the anti-abortion provision. The National Right-To-Life Committee called it a significant victory while the Catholic Conference called it "an essential improvement."

The restoration act says entire institutions and government agencies must comply with anti-discrimination statutes if any program or activity within them receives federal aid. The broad coverage also applies to the private sector if the aid goes to a corporation as a whole or if the recipient principally provides education, health care, housing, social services or parks and recreation.

trial, but Bexar County prosecutors dismissed the charge in favor of a civil commitment to San Antonio State Hospital. The records did not indicate Duncan's status at the state hospital.

Duncan took a taxicab downtown about 9 a.m. Wednesday, and about three blocks from the Alamo he pulled out two .357-caliber Magnum revolvers and began shooting from inside the cab, got out and continued firing, authorities said.

Taxi driver Frank Esquivel, 42, jumped from the cab when the shooting started. He said the man said nothing during the four-mile ride. "I have no idea what set him off," he said.

Homicide Lt. Albert Ortiz said the gunman was methodical in his shooting.

"From the time he was picked up at his residence, throughout the shooting he remained calm and his actions were deliberate, not hurried," Ortiz said.

Duncan has been arrested numerous times since 1973 on charges including assaults and an attempted murder charge, said Police Chief William O. Gibson.

"As to why the suspect began shooting, we don't know why, with the exception that he wanted to gain some attention," Gibson said.

As passers-by dived for cover, officer Donald Kawazoe, on his way to work, saw the man and ordered him to stop.

The two traded shots and the gunman fled and confronted Park Ranger Bennie Burley.

Program paid $450 in February

The Big Spring Crimestoppers program paid out $450 in rewards to informants who supplied information about two crimes in February.

A $200 reward was paid to an informant for information which led to the arrest of five persons for the sale of drugs, primarily to high school students. A 1977 Pontiac also was confiscated in connection with the case.

Another confidential informant was paid $250 for information leading to the recovery of a stolen pickup truck in Snyder. This incident also uncovered evidence that led to the arrest of a suspect in the burglary of the Rainbarrel General Store, 1010 11th Place.

"It's very clear the hot check department — the research, setting it up, were done well before (Miller) took office," Miller's opponent, Hardy Wilkerson, said today.

"For him to take credit for things other people have done.... I don't think it's fair to the people who really did the work."

Money from the hot check fund is used to defray expenses of the county attorney's office and pay hot check department employee salaries. The fund, which consists of hot check collection fees, has a balance of $8,996, County Treasurer Bonnie Franklin said today.

Hooser said he used initial monies collected to convert a storage room into what is now the county attorney's office.

The department became self-supporting almost immediately, he said, noting that its full-time employee is paid from fees collected on checks.

"Taxpayers aren't out a dime to run the hot check department."

Miller also answered questions today about a 1983 reprimand for improper use of funds from the hot check department during his term as county attorney.

"There wasn't any misuse of funds — they didn't like the way it was spent," Miller said, refering to the now-disbanded state Prosecutor's Council, which investigated Miller's use of hot check funds.

Miller said he used the funds to buy gifts for his employees, including flowers for employees at his private practice, whom he said took numerous calls related to the collection of hot checks.

Funds also were used for a Dale Carnegie class.

"I did it for the improvement of that office and the morale," Miller said.

The funds, which totaled about $1,800, were repaid by Miller, according to published reports from 1983.

BOB MILLER

HARDY WILKERSON

Wilkerson, referring to the reprimand, said voters "can apply their own weight to it."

"He's using his experience as one of his tools; if you look at experience, you have to look at the whole record."

When asked whether he had a prior arrest record — an issue raised by Miller — Wilkerson today said he was arrested on charges of resisting arrest by Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission Agent James White a couple years ago, but said no formal charge was filed.

The incident occurred when one of Wilkerson's clients was arrested, and, according to Wilkerson, was treated roughly during the arrest process.

"I was attempting to defend a client's rights; it might have been naive, but it was justified."

Miller said he has never been arrested.

Voters will go to the polls Tuesday to decide the fate of the two-man race.

Deaths

Johnnie O'Brien

HOUSTON — Johnnie Katherine O'Brien, 92, Houston, formerly of Big Spring, died Saturday, Feb. 27, 1988 after a lengthy illness.

Services were Wednesday at the Worship Center of the Second Baptist Church, Houston, with Dr. E. Edwin Young, officiating. Burial was at Memorial Oaks Cemetery.

She was born Jan. 17, 1896 in Wise County, and married Philip Dick O'Brien Oct. 1, 1911. He preceded her in death in 1974.

She helped her husband in the church by her organizational skills, Bible teaching, and establishing summer camp programs for Christian youth.

She was honored as Golden Gardener by the Texas Garden Clubs, Inc. during its anniversary year in 1978.

She is survived by her children: Doris Wayne Mason and S. Marie Greer, both of Big Spring; Dr. Richard F. O'Brien and Dr. Robert B. O'Brien, both of Houston; one brother, James Matthews, Moran; five sisters: Dona Reed, Colorado City; Della Fox, Abilene; Dora Fambrough, Merkel; and Faye Matthews and Jane Matthews, both of Odessa; four grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren.

Amnesty applicants continue to respond

EL PASO (AP) — The number of people applying for immigration amnesty here has risen steadily since the end of the holidays, but numbers still are far below last year's estimates, an official says.

The El Paso Legalization Center had 24,819 amnesty applicants as of Feb. 23, said Pedro A. Reyes, the center's deputy chief. Last year, officials predicted that as many as 50,000 people would apply for amnesty in El Paso.

Reyes said he expects the numbers to keep increasing before the May 4 deadline.

"Maybe we won't get 300 per day, but we do expect a strong, steady flow," he said. "We will be kept busy, that's for sure."

The amnesty program allows aliens who have lived illegally in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, to apply for temporary residency. After 18 months, they can apply for permanent residency, and they eventually can apply for citizenship.

One reason people might not be applying in the numbers expected is that they might believe their border crossing cards, or "micas," can keep them from being deported.

Mexican citizens who can prove they have jobs in Mexico can obtain the border crossing cards, which allow them to visit the United States for up to 72 hours to visit or shop.

The Legalization Center is open Monday through Saturday, meaning amnesty applicants have 54 working days to apply before the deadline.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service, which sponsors the program, is paying for radio and television commercials to inform potential amnesty applicants that time is slipping away. In one TV commercial, a man is shown running into a train depot and barely missing the train.

District clerk repays money stolen from car

PECOS (AP) — District Clerk Juana Jaquez has repaid the $4,000 in Saragosa relief money that was stolen from her vehicle last September.

Ms. Jaquez told police she withdrew the cash to distribute to victims of the May 22 tornado that devastated Saragosa, but that the distribution plans fell through. She told police the money was stolen Sept. 29 from her truck at a car wash before she had a chance to redeposit it.

She handed Saragosa Foundation president Tony Gallego a check Monday for $4,094, which included interest that would have been earned.

The money will go to the foundation's Children's Endowment Fund, designed to benefit the 22 children who lost one or both parents. Ms. Jaquez set up the fund a few weeks after the tornado.

Golf balls investigated

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Air Force officials say an investigation has been ordered into the use of tax dollars to buy souvenir golf balls at Brooks Air Force Base.

A spokesman at Brooks told the San Antonio Express-News the investigation was ordered by the Air Force Systems Command headquarters at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland.

Maj. Thomas H. Lillie will look into circumstances surrounding a June 1987 order to use $436 in appropriated funds to buy 24 dozen Ben Hogan golf balls with the Human Systems Division insignia on them, the newspaper said.

Lawyers argue open meetings violation

AUSTIN (AP) — Two water commissioners who allegedly violated the Texas Open Meetings Act by discussing a permit application outside a hearing were not even on speaking terms, says a state lawyer representing the commission.

Assistant Attorney General Ginny Agnew said Wednesday there was "ill will" between the commissioners. "They just didn't talk to one another."

Ms. Agnew argued, however, that state decision-makers must be allowed some leeway to talk about matters in private without violating the Open Meetings Act.

A lawyer for Charles Acker, who alleged that the commissioners had violated the act, said he was shocked at the state's argument.

Acker sued after the commission, on a 2-1 vote, denied his application for a waste discharge permit for a Huntsville mobile home park.

According to court records, Acker contended that commissioners Paul Hopkins and Ralph Roming had discussed his application in a men's restroom during a recess of the hearing.

State District Judge Jerry Dellana of Austin granted a summary judgment for Acker, and the attorney general, on behalf of the commission, appealed to the 3rd Court of Appeals.

On Wednesday, Ms. Agnew told a three-judge panel that the trial judge erred in granting judgment without a full hearing because there were disputed facts in the case and the conversation — if it took place — "did not rise to the level of deliberation."

"There has to be a point when people can talk outside a public forum, and it still does not rise to the level of deliberation. I would urge here that there has been substantial compliance" with the Open Meetings Act, she said.

"I admit a line has to be drawn — and drawn carefully — in each case, and that's the reason for sending it back to the trial court," Ms. Agnew said.

Austin lawyer Jeffery Hart, who represented Acker, said he was shocked to hear the attorney general's office argue that substantial compliance is all that is required under the Open Meetings Act.

"If that type of principle is allowed, it would eviscerate the Open Meetings Act. It would swallow the act as a whole," Hart said.

Bruce Bennett, another Austin lawyer representing Acker, said the final order denying Acker's application mentioned water quality as one of the reasons but that was never discussed by the commission in public.

"That type of stuff guts the Open Meetings Act," Bennett said.

Chief Justice Bob Shannon of the appeals court said he thought requiring an agency to say exactly why it had rejected an application would be "adding a lot to the Open Meetings Act."

"I think you should come away with an understanding of why an agency did what it did," Bennett responded.

Ms. Agnew said, "There has to be a way in which agency members can meet and hold a conversation without deliberating" in violation of the law.

The Society of Professional Journalists, Austin chapter, filed a brief in the case, saying the trial court had acted properly in holding that the commission's action denying the permit was void.

The appeals court recessed without an immediate ruling.

Jury asks judge two questions

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal court jury deliberating a negligence suit that sought millions of dollars from Soldier of Fortune magazine asked two questions of the judge, including why the publication's managing editor didn't testify.

The six-person jury, which heard two weeks of testimony, asked the questions of U.S. District Judge David Hittner during nearly nine hours of deliberations since getting the case Tuesday afternoon.

The jury retired without making a decision Wednesday and was scheduled to resume deliberations today.

Attorneys for relatives of Sandra Black contend the military magazine was negligent in publishing an ad that led to Mrs. Black's slaying at her home in Bryan three years ago.

Jurors wanted guidance from Hittner on where and to whom exemplary damages would go. They also inquired why the Soldier of Fortune managing editor did not testify. To each question, Hittner referred them to instructions delivered in his jury charge Tuesday.

Attorneys for both sides refused to speculate on the nature of the questions, saying they would withhold comment until after a verdict.

Within the charge, jurors were being asked seven questions about the magazine's alleged negligence, the ad itself and damages.

Gary Wayne Black, 18, the victim's son, and Marjorie Eimann, 64, her mother, were seeking $22.5 million in the suit against the self-styled "Journal for Professional Adventurers."

Opinion

Views of other Texas papers

Says problem in Dallas is criminal

Death hardly seems a proper companion for a police force with as much youth and vigor as that in Dallas. Yet life for this city's police took another turn for the macabre on Friday, when off-duty officer Gary McCarthy, 33, was gunned down as he tried to protect a supermarket manager carring $10,000 back to his store from the bank. ...

So the Police Department suffered a devastating loss of talent as well as life from its ranks this past weekend. It also sustained its third tragedy in six weeks: Officers James Joe and John Chase were killed in January. They too were young and promising. ...

It is time for everybody to go home — go home to the ethical values that inform every ethnic group in Dallas, go home to the spirit of civic collaboration across many cultures, go home to the understanding that the number one problem in this city is not racial but criminal. All are threatened. All must band together against chaos.

Dallas Times Herald

Lauds PUC's denial of rate hike

The Texas Public Utility Commission appears to be taking a sensible approach to the financial problems facing Gulf States Utilities Co. That approach is gratifying, for in past years, the PUC has been accused of being pro-business and too eager to grant GSU's requests for rate hikes.

Consumers no doubt will be pleased by the PUC's decision to approve only $1.6 billion of GSU's $3.1 billion request for the costs of its River Bend nuclear plant, leaving the other $1.5 billion in limbo. That action could cause GSU's rates to decrease in Southeast Texas, and that would be a welcome relief to ratepayers.

We're concerned, however, about the PUC's decision allowing GSU to resubmit at a later date its request for the other $1.5 billion in construction costs for River Bend. If GSU is permitted to repeatedly submit this item, it could eventually get all or most of what it wants.

At some point, the PUC should figure out how much of GSU's request for River Bend will be permanently disallowed so that consumers won't be stuck with the tab for massive cost-overruns or the legal costs associated with repeated requests.

Says face educational facts of life

Sooner or later, Texas must face the educational facts of life. It must choose between hiring more teachers at lower pay or having fewer teachers at better pay.

It can't have it both ways. And the sooner teacher organizations, school administrators, boards of trustees, judges and legislators face up to this fact, the better it will be for the school children and taxpayers of Texas.

Reducing class sizes, rather than using technology to help teachers do a better job with larger classes, is counter-productive. The money pie is just so big; the spiral in tax rates must end.

Our suggestion is to compress the 12-year curriculum into 11 years.

This would require fewer teachers, who could be paid for teaching 30 more days per year, increasing their incomes while students receive more days of schooling in 11 years than they now get in 12.

That, and better management of financial, facility and personnel resources, would benefit the teachers, the taxpayers and the students. It is a solution the Select Committee on Education should study.

Don't ignore the housing issue

As warm weather comes, those who flood shelters during the winter begin returning to the streets and concern for their plight often wanes.

Attention, however, must remain focused on the problem, because rather than subsiding, it is increasing.

The problems are complex and range from providing care and rehabilitation for alcoholics and mentally ill people who find themselves without homes — to providing affordable housing for the working poor.

The housing issue is receiving little attention in the current presidential campaighn, though we will be watching for it to emerge.

It's an issue worthy of more attention than it has received, one which will increasingly move to the forefront.

Seeing through the mist

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

On the right

Crowded primaries are such an eclectic and temperamental mess, observers are naturally attracted to signs and symbols. We are told now that by hard calculation, Sen. Albert Gore has decided to become a hawk, almost as though he had yesterday approached his parents and told them he was going to join the Marines.

Jesse Jackson is a new man, a shriven presidential candidate who is substantially free of left-wing cant and ritual anti-Semitism.

But insights into personality are held to be of especial value. Thus Bob Dole's graceless remark to George Bush — "Stop lying about my record" — is said by pundit David Broder to have hurt Dole as much as his loss in New Hampshire hurt him. It may be that many voters' conception of Robert Dole is permanently altered by having witnessed this scene.

A similar event happened to me once. In 1952 I was at the railroad station in Stamford, Conn., to witness a whistle-stop event featuring President Harry Truman and Democratic candidate for Senate William Benton. Truman appeared, as was traditional in those days, at the rear of the caboose and began his five-minute adjuration (a total of 10 minutes had been assigned to each of the railroad stops, Hartford-Greenwich).

A 12-year-old boy perching on a tree limb 20 feet above the track yelled out in soprano voice, "Tell us about the red herring, Harry." That year was the high noon of McCarthyism, and Truman had flippantly dismissed the indictment of Alger Hiss as a "red herring," but now Hiss stood convicted.

Truman's reply could not have been more inept if it had been maliciously scripted for him by Everett Dirksen. "Young man, that is no way to speak to the president of the United States." There was a general sigh of embarrassment all the way around at this pompous, self-important handling of youthful iconoclasm. The lines left to be said were hurried through and the train pulled out. Others there never thought quite the same about Harry Truman.

This may have happened to Bob Dole, who is a man with a temper — a characteristic that hardly disqualifies him from the presidency, one should note. The man against whom Truman was inveighing at Stamford that day was Dwight Eisenhower. And Ike's temper — though celebrated in the books as short-lived, however explosive — in the case of Truman reached all the way to Inauguration Day.

The tradition was always for the president about to be sworn in to get out of his car, walk into the White House and escort the incumbent into the car. Eisenhower refused to do this. He simply sat in the car and waited for Truman to join him. Perhaps Truman then said to him, "That is no way to treat the president of the United States, General."

There are abundant reasons to oppose Dole. Mine have to do with his amorphous positions on public issues. That he has voted on Reagan's side 87 percent of the time, or whatever the figure is, tells us nothing more than that he thought it politically wise to vote on that side at that time, on that issue.

His public appearances as a primary candidate have consisted in giving both sides on an issue, and then going on to the next question before aligning himself with one or the other side.

The best sample of this has been his attitude toward the INF Treaty. At first he was simply opposed to it. Then he wanted to see it, before deciding finally — and now he is an enthusiast for it, opposition to the treaty having given way to the juggernaut of disarmament popularity.

These are the reasons for finding Mr. Dole less than an ideal candidate, not his short temper. A very good case can be made for a shorter temper at the White House than is sometimes exhibited. Lyndon Johnson's temper was an instrument of executive dynamism.

Dole will live to fight again, and of course Bush is back in the race. The withdrawal of Pete du Pont is an important development for conservatives, whose votes have been distributed among several candidates.

Pat Robertson is simply not going to win the nomination, and is therefore of interest only in the way that George Wallace was of interest to Nixon: A vote for Wallace was a vote Nixon was not going to get for himself. A vote for Robertson is a vote that would otherwise probably go to Kemp.

It is the surpassing mystery of the season why it is that Kemp does not reflect the strength his principles rally. Perhaps the reason for it is the centrifugal forces set up by Haig, de Pont, Robertson. There is this final opportunity for Kemp, who will do well in Minnesota, and who, unlike Dole, is unlikely to attract attention to any character flaw.

It's a case of saint and sinners

By ART BUCHWALD

Art Buchwald

The first time I saw Jimmy Swaggart was on TV in my kitchen at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. I was making porridge when this voice boomed out, "You are a sinner and you are damned to burn in hell until you beg forgiveness and cleanse your soul" — or words to that effect.

I was so amazed at how much Swaggart knew about me I sent him a check for $50.

The next Sunday I got up and turned on the set. In truth, I was hoping he would announce the names of those who had sent him $50. But Swaggart had other fish to fry. He took off after people who bought or sold pornography and said the wrath of God would fall on us and we would be eaten by worms and slugs — or words to that effect. Then he started crying and I sent him a check for $100.

I stopped watching "Saturday Night Live" so I would be fresh when I turned on Swaggart in the morning. I couldn't believe it, but I wanted him to punish me.

The reverend was unmerciful. He railed at me for my obsessive avarice. He said his God was better than my God. He marched up and down the stage and then stopped and pointed his finger directly at me, promising a plague of locusts in my washing machine — or words to that effect. He gave me no chance so I sent him $500.

Did I feel better after I sent off the money? Of course I did. I had been engaging in immoral behavior ever since I attended the University of Southern California, but Swaggart was the first preacher to call attention to it. I now had someone to beg forgiveness from.

The winter went along as winters do. Swaggart called me a thief, a liar, a scurvy nonbeliever and words to that effect. I, in turn, wept as I sent him checks so he would forgive me.

Then the Jim and Tammy Bakker story broke, and I thought to myself, "Surely Jimmy Swaggart will forgive one of his own." But what makes Jimmy a great preacher is he doesn't discriminate.

If you slip, you go right down into the cellar with those who have offended the Lord. Swaggart was not going to punch anyone's ticket who had committed adultery on church time. Nobody was as tough on Jimmy and Tammy as Swaggart.

I was so impressed with his instance I sent $500 to him and a supplementary $250 for bashing Jimmy Bakker.

Then it happened. I was watching the Olympics when the announcer said Jimmy Swaggart was being investigated by his church for having been caught with a prostitute in a pornographic situation that was too weird to be described on television.

I dropped to my knees and cried, "Say it isn't so, Jimmy."

But Jimmy came on TV a little later and said it was so, as buckets of tears flowed down his cheeks. My first idea was that it was a frame-up. Then I thought to myself, it if isn't a frame-up, Swaggart is going to need money. I sent him a check for $200.

The thing that bothered me was that all these months while Swaggart was accusing me of being a sinner, it turns out he was the meanest transgressor on the tube. Did this make him better or worse than me?

"The real sin," a fundamentalist taxi driver told me, "is not the atrocity Swaggart confessed to, but the outrage he committed against evangelical broadcasting. People who watch ministers on television want them squeaky clean. I can see the Lord forgiving Swaggart for his sexual misconduct, but I would not bet on the electronic preachers out there who depend on their checks every Monday morning."

Beyond the realm

Of mice and men: It can be rat race

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

From the News to Use and Sometimes Abuse file comes the following tidbit of medical information:

JUNCTION CITY, Wis. (AP) — Sue Hall's fourth-grade science students are saying "rats" to junk food after a month of experiments in which they compared school-food and junk-food diets by feeding them to rodents.

It seems that Ms. Hall has devised a novel way to teach her charges the dangers of eating too many Snickers. For the past month her students have studied what happens to rats when they eat nothing but french fries and candy bars.

The results of the experiment weren't particularly surprising to anyone except a fourth-grader. The two rodents — cutely named Sweetie and Boss Hog — experienced rapid weight swings, loss of appetite, hyperactivity, a dulling of their fur and various other symptoms displayed when one has overloaded on chocolate.

As part of the experiment, Sweetie and Boss Hog's rodent counterparts — Rascal and Casey — dined on food provided by the school's cafeteria.

Surprisingly, these rats lived (just joking, school cafeteria employees); seriously, they experienced steady weight gain, were calm, and had shiny fur and alert eyes, Ms. Hall noted.

"They let the children pet them," she said.

Wouldn't you, if the alternative was a month of Mars' Bars?

I am not one to feel too sorry for rats, but it does seem that every time scientists — or fourth-graders — get a wild idea, our furry, little friends get the shaft.

It's bad enough that God or whoever decided that these little souls would be rats. Imagine being a soul drifting around the cosmos waiting to be born:

"Gee, I wonder what I'll be?" one soul would ask. "Will I be a scientist, or an astronaut or what? Maybe I'll be a president of some country, and win the Nobel Peace Prize."

Just then a voice would would shatter the soul's musings.

"Soul number 26857697, calling soul number 26857697, it's time," the voice would say.

"Over here," the soul replies. "So tell me, what is it? Am I going to be an engineer, or a scientist, or ... "

"You're a rat," the voice answers.

"A what?"

"A rat. You know — small, furry little thing. Likes cheese, I hear," the voice says.

"I know what a rat is," the soul replies. "Are you sure there hasn't been a mistake? I could have sworn I was destined for something a little more impressive."

"Nope. No mistake. Says right here on the manifest: Soul 26857697 — rat. Came straight from the big guy."

You mean, H-H-H-He decided to make me a rat?" our poor soul asks, slightly bewildered. "Was it something I did?"

"Hey listen," the voice says. "Not everybody can be an Einstein, you know. Some of us have to pull the dirty jobs sometimes. Tell you what — if you do good on this gig, we'll see about a promotion somewhere down the line."

"Can I have that in writing?" the soul asked.

"What's the matter? Don't you trust me?" the voice said. "Listen, I don't have all day. Brace yourself — here you go."

"Wait a minute! I've got anoth ... " POOOOF!

I don't know about you, but if I was a rat, I would seriously consider atheism.

And that's not the worst of it for our beady-eyed little friends, either. Even if they don't go through life hounded and despised, rats spend their days on the receiving end of experiments devised by sadistic teachers or mad scientists.

So please, kind people, next time you spot a rat scurrying across your kitchen floor, consider its plight.

Then nuke the little beast.

Polygraph bill stalls

WASHINGTON (AP) — A small group of conservative Republicans stalled final action Wednesday on a proposed ban on the use of lie detectors by private employers to screen job applicants.

Criticized as "inaccurate instruments of intimidation," polygraphs could no longer be used in evaluating job applicants under the bill co-written by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah.

Likewise, random testing of employees already on the payroll also would be prohibited under the legislation sought by labor unions and civil liberties groups.

Swaggart in lawsuit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A $90 million lawsuit filed by a preacher who claims evangelist Jimmy Swaggart defamed him with charges of adultery is due for court review just as Swaggart faces suspension from his church for sexual misconduct.

The Rev. Marvin Gorman is scheduled to have a court hearing this afternoon on his appeal of the dismissal of a suit he brought against Swaggart and others last March.

The Assemblies of God, the nation's largest Pentecostal denomination, is deciding how to punish and rehabilitate Swaggart, who was reportedly caught by Gorman at a New Orleans area motel with a prostitute last October.

Imports feeling pinch

DETROIT (AP) — The American buyer's love affair with the foreign car is being soured by three straight years of price increases that have added as much as $6,000 to the sticker for a German car and $3,000 for a Japanese model.

Buyers taking a second look at American cars are finding the offerings of General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. have improved since the early 1980s and can save them as much as $2,000.

Instead of matching their foreign competitors increase for increase, the Big Three have begun holding down prices to take advantage of currency fluctuations that have pushed up import prices.

"They are all looking at 1988 as the year of the return of the domestic (car) or the start of that return," said Chris Cedergren, industry analyst with J.D. Power and Associates in Agoura Hills, Calif.

Girl may leave hospital soon

CHICAGO (AP) — A 9-year-old girl whose lower legs were amputated after she suffered frostbite has recovered well enough to ride a bicycle and could be "on roller skates" next week, hospital officials say.

Darlwin Carlisle may leave the hospital within two weeks, Dr. Paula Jaudes, who is supervising Darlwin's care at La Rabida Children's Hospital and Research Center, said Wednesday.

"I expect that we'll have Darlwin on roller skates a week from Friday," said physical therapist Roberta Kuchler-O'Shea, who is helping the Gary, Ind., youngster learn to use artificial limbs.

A construction worker found the girl locked in the freezing bedroom attic of her family's apartment Jan. 17. Authorities believe the girl was left there several days earlier by her mother, who has pleaded innocent to felony neglect.

Doctors at the University of Chicago's Wyler Children's Hospital determined they could not save Darlwin's lower legs, and they amputated Jan. 23. The girl later was transferred to La Rabida to be fitted with artifical limbs.

According to hospital spokeswoman Kris Bangert, custody of Darlwin is to be decided by the state of Indiana.

The child's father, James Carlisle, of Fort Wayne, has said he wants custody. Foster parents are also an option, Ms. Bangert said.

While at La Rabida, Darlwin has learned how to put on her artificial legs and progressed from walking with the help of parallel bars to using a walker, Ms. Jaudes said.

The girl should be able to walk unassisted by next week, she said.

Ms. Kuchler-O'Shea said Darlwin is learning to resume activities she could do before, such as bicycling and roller skating.

The girl has learned to pedal a stationary bicycle and has received a real bicycle.

CHICAGO — Darlwin Carlisle, 9, tries her artificial legs at La Rabida Childrens Hospital earlier this week. Darlwin's lower legs were amputated because of severe frostbite suffered after she was found abandoned in a vacant Gary, Ind. house in January.

Shultz on road again

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Reagan is sending Secretary of State George P. Shultz on a new round of talks with Mideast leaders in search of a formula for negotiations to end the 40-year Arab-Israeli dispute.

Leaving at the windup of a North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit meeting, Shultz planned to stop first in London to see King Hussein of Jordan and then to fly to Jerusalem.

On Friday, in a fast-paced sequence, he will meet separately with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, go to Egypt and Syria for talks with leaders there — and immediately fly home.

German hostage freed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — West German hostage Ralph Rudolf Schray was freed by his pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem kidnappers in Beirut before dawn today and whisked to the Syrian capital of Damascus, officials said.

In a statement issued in Bonn, the West German Foreign Ministry confirmed Schray's release, saying Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher thanked the Syrian government for its efforts.

"Schray is now in Damascus and will soon be handed over to the to the German Embassy there," the statement said. "He is in good physical condition."

U.S. pressure builds

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Organizers called a three-day-old general strike against Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega their most successful yet, and the United States stepped up economic pressure on Panama's military strongman.

On Wednesday, doctors joined businesses in the strike, which organizers said would continue at least through today. They also said they would increase street demonstrations that have brought scattered violence to the capital.

Strike leaders said participation in the stoppage was expected to fall off slightly today. Nonetheless, they said it had halted 85 percent of the nation's economic activity and called it an unqualified success.

The strike already has lasted longer than five previous ones called last year to demand the ouster of Noriega, who was indicted in the United States last month on charges of trafficking in cocaine.

NATO leaders end summit with vow to defend the west

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The NATO allies vowed today to defend the West with both conventional and nuclear forces, and President Reagan declared that "we're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

The first NATO summit in six years ended with a communique expressing the alliance's determination to "prevent any kind of war or intimidation." Reagan followed up with a tribute to NATO's 40 years of peacekeeping.

"The North Atlantic Alliance is the most successful in history," the president said. He said the medium-range nuclear weapons treaty signed by the United States and the Soviet Union last December was "a direct result" of alliance unity.

"It goes without saying that our allies support this treaty and every leader solidly reaffirmed its value," Reagan said. " ... I reiterated the strong bipartisan support that exists for the alliance in the United States."

"We cannot and will not put our peace and freedom and that of our children and their children at risk," he said. "We will never trade that credibility (of deterrent) at the negotiating table and we will not give it away through neglect."

Reagan, making probably his farewell appearance before a high-ranking NATO gathering, proclaimed: "The state of the alliance is excellent. We're strong, we're united, we're prosperous and we're free."

Following Reagan's four-minute statement before reporters, Secretary of State George P. Shultz hailed the two-day summit. "Here was freedom on display," he said. "It was a very moving experience."

The secretary seemed fatigued from his recent Middle East peacemaking tour, and was leaving immediately for another round of talks with Arab and Israeli leaders on Reagan's orders.

After courtesy calls on his Belgian government hosts, Reagan headed back toward Washington aboard Air Force One. He was scheduled to arrive at the White House in time to observe his 36th wedding anniversary on Friday.

NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington said the summit "gives me some satisfaction" because of the 16 alliance leaders' good will and harmony as they charted future policy.

The final communique said alliance strategy must be "based upon an appropriate mix of adequate and effective nuclear and conventional forces," and that NATO's remaining short-range nuclear weapons must be improved "where necessary."

The communique avoided the term "modernization" of short-range missiles because of the opposition of West Germany, where most of the weapons are based.

Carrington said the allies were concerned that some people might think "modernization" might signal introduction of new, more destructive weapons. "Modernization actually means weapons that are more accurate and possibly less destructive," he said.

The allied leaders expressed solid support for Reagan's efforts to negotiate sharp reductions in U.S. and Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles, and renewed their endorsement of the December agreement between Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to ban ground-launched, medium-range missiles in Europe.

Carrington said he was heartened that Gorbachev has recognized the East-West imbalance in European conventional forces that favors the Eastern bloc and "is willing to do something about them."

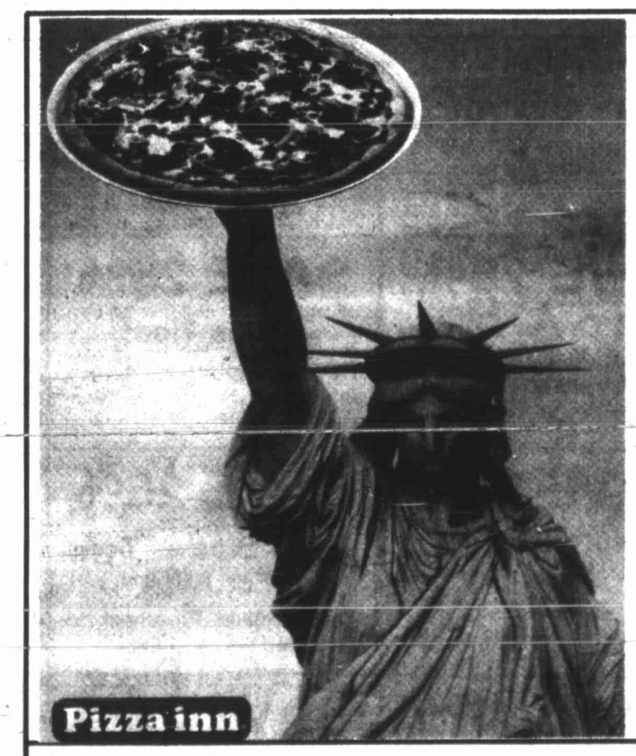

The allied leaders reaffirmed their determination to defend the West "for the forseeable future" under a strategy of deterring a Soviet attack with nuclear weapons.

They said a key goal of the alliance was to seek to "gradually overcome the unnatural division of the European continent."

Names in the news

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Actress Molly Ringwald, whose movie "For Keeps" was criticized as glamorizing teen-age pregnancy, is doing a commercial aimed at keeping teen-agers from getting pregnant, a spokeswoman says.

Ms. Ringwald is recording the 30-second spot for a state program called Parents Too Soon, said Audrey Stewart, a spokeswoman for the program.

The public-service announcement, which Ms. Ringwald is doing at no charge, will be sent to radio stations across Illinois and may be broadcast as early as this month, Ms. Stewart said Tuesday.

Illinois officials criticized Ms. Ringwald's movie shortly after its premiere in January.

"For Keeps" features the actress as a middle-class teen-ager who has a baby, marries her boyfriend, finishes high school and goes off to college with her husband — both on full scholarship.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Reagan played pizza deliveryman for NATO Ambassador and "junk-food freak" Alton Keel.

Air Force One, taking Reagan to a meeting of NATO leaders Tuesday, also carried three pizzas across the Atlantic, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Fitzwater said the pizzas were purchased in a Washington suburb by deputy White House chief of staff Kenneth Duberstein.

Keel, a former national security adviser, is a "junk-food freak," Fitzwater said.

HONOLULU (AP) — Entertainer Bette Midler, who grew up in Hawaii, and her husband have purchased a $1.5 million piece of the islands that was confiscated in a federal drug case.

Midler and husband, Martin von Haselberg, paid cash for the 38-acre parcel on Kauai Island, which includes a partly completed tri-level home and a panoramic view of the Pacific Ocean and a river, said U.S. Marshal Faith Evans.

Midler attended the University of Hawaii before moving to New York to pursue her career as a singer and actress.

The property, near the town of Kilauea, was among 141 acres seized by the Justice Department in 1986 after authorities charged the owners had purchased it with money from illegal drug sales, Evans said Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rudolf Nureyev will dance three performances of "Giselle" during the American Ballet Theater's three-week engagement in Los Angeles, Artistic Director Mikhail Baryshnikov announced.

Nureyev will play Count Albrecht in the 1841 romantic ballet on March 17 and 18 with Marianna Tcherkassky as Giselle, and on March 19, with Alessandra Ferri as Giselle, Baryshnikov said Tuesday.

Nureyev first danced with the ABT in 1962 and has done a wide variety of ballets with the company, including "Giselle" and his own staging of "Raymonda."

The ABT will perform at the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles March 1-20. The schedule does not list Baryshnikov as dancing during the engagement.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rock sensation Michael Jackson thrilled the United Negro College Fund with a check for $600,000.

"There aren't many days like this," UNCF President Christopher Edley said after accepting the check from the singer at a jam-packed news conference Tuesday.

Jackson, wearing a striped shirt and bright red blazer, waved as more then two dozen camera crews and twice as many still photographers took hundreds of pictures of the reclusive superstar.

"Thank you. I'm very honored and very thankful," Jackson said during his 15 seconds at the microphone. "I love you all. Thank you."

The check represented the proceeds from Jackson's scheduled Thursday night show at Madison Square Garden, his first solo performance in New York.

Jackson earlier created a "Michael Jackson Scholarship" for the UNCF. In the past three years, 97 students have received financial aid through the program.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Country Music Hall of Fame is putting together a black, white and silver exhibit honoring the "man in black" — Johnny Cash.

The $70,000 exhibit is scheduled to open March 23, the Hall of Fame said Monday.

"This collection provides unprecedented documentation of country music's most distinguished career," said Hall of Fame Director Bill Ivey. "It is extraordinary which is due to Cash's unusual level of cooperation and interest, and the availability of his extensive personal archives."

At Cash's suggestion, the entire exhibit is being mounted and displayed with black, white and silver graphics. It will be divided into sections devoted to various periods of Cash's life.

This is the third biographical exhibit at the Hall of Fame. Dolly Parton and Willie Nelson also have been honored.

Cash's hits include "I Walk The Line," "A Boy Named Sue," "Folsom Prison Blues" and "Ring of Fire."

Odor may lead to bad relations

DEAR ABBY: "Irritated in Tampa" indicated that she lived in an "affluent condominium complex" and was regularly offended by the odor of fish cooked in a neighboring condo. You suggested that she speak to the offending neighbor — or write a pleasant note, with a copy to the president of the homeowners' association.

Good grief! Why did you suggest that she take this petty complaint to the president of the homeowners' association? That is certainly not what I would call the good-neighbor policy. I can't think of a more surefire formula for open warfare! I once received a "note" from my next-door neighbor soon after I moved to a new home. She complained about the way I parked my car. Had she said, "Gee, I wish you'd move your car down about three feet so I can see my flowers," I'd have gladly done so. Instead I received a rude letter that I've kept on my desk for about a year, and every time I come across it, I boil.

Abby, you are right about 99.9 percent of the time, but lawyers send notes with carbon copies — not friends and neighbors.

SEETHING IN CAPISTRANO

DEAR SEETHING: All right, I blew it, but there's no ill wind that doesn't blow some good — a fitting analogy for this fish tale. Read on:

DEAR ABBY Having been in the home-building business for a number of years, I've known that airsealing doors and windows can do more than "keep out the cold." Weather stripping prevents offensive private odors such as cigarette smoke, cooking meat, fish, onions, garlic, etc. from escaping into shared areas such as hallways and stairwells, thus promoting neighborly peace by avoiding the need for confrontations!

I hope this helps. Sign me ...

ONE FOR HARMONY

DEAR ABBY: In regard to the condo dweller who complained about her neighbor cooking fish frequently: Adele Davis said that most fish is overcooked; when you can smell it, you've already cooked it too long.

Just thought the rest of the world should be let in on this hint.

JEAN M. DAVIS, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I have a cooking tip for "Irritated in Tampa": Instead of complaining to her neighbor, suggest to the neighbor that she sprinkle a little powdered ginger on the fish while it's cooking, and there won't be any fish smell. Also, if she's frying the fish, tell her to put a few little balls of peanut (the size of a pea) in the skillet. Result: No fish odor! Sometimes I call myself "Dear Abby," but my name is...

RUTH B. JONES, BELLFONTE, PA.

DEAR ABBY: About fish odors: I should think all "affluent condos" would have a ventilating fan in the kitchen. Perhaps after "Irritated in Tampa" writes to the president of the homeowners' association, she will receive instructions as to where this fan switch is located, and how to turn it on. Also, how about buying a couple of cans of air freshener?

CHARLES IN VANCOUVER

DEAR ABBY: Since when is it against the law to cook fish? Fish is highly recommended by health experts. Eating large amounts of fish that are rich in specific polyunsaturated oils appears to reduce the chances of blood platelet cells sticking together, thereby reducing the chance of heart attack.

Are people who live in "affluent condos" not supposed to cook strong-smelling foods? How about cabbage, mustard and turnip greens, and brussels sprouts?

I hope you hear from plenty of other fish lovers.

FISH LOVER IN TACOMA

DEAR ABBY: If you burn a scented candle while cooking fish, there will be no fish odor whatsoever.

LOVES FISH

Swann member for 50 years

The Coahoma Extension Homemakers Club met recently at the home of Theresa Parks.

The club designated the meeting as "Hattie Swann Day," in recognition of her 50-plus years as a member.

She joined the club in 1936 and has been an active member since that time. She was presented with a plaque and gifts.

The business meeting was conducted by Doris Hale, president. Frances mason read the devotional.

Ten members answered roll call. Council report was given by Frances Mason. The members voted to furnish cookies twice during 1988 for the Big Spring State Hospital, and to continue to collect aluminum cans to sell. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund.

The next meeting will March 10 at 9 a.m. at the home of Hattie Swann.

Showing at the Ritz are "Moving," an R-rated comedy starring Richard Pryor and "Vengeance: The Demon," an R-rated horror film.

Showtimes for "Moving" are 7 and 9 p.m. "Vengeance" will show at 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

"She's Having a Baby," opens at the College Park Cinema.

The movie, which stars Kevin Bacon and Elizabeth McGovern, is a romantic comedy about a young couple having their first child.

It's rated PG-13 and show times are 7:10 and 9:10 p.m.

Held over at the Cinema is "Satisfaction," a PG-rated movie starring Justine Bateman. Show times are 7 and 9 p.m.

Matinees for all four movies are given at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Howard gains split

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

Howard College's Hawks dropped the first game of a doubleheader at Jack Barber Field Wednesday despite a late-inning rally, 10-8.

The Hawks turned the series around in the second game by winning 29-9. That game was called because of darkness, according to assistant Hawks mentor Greg Henry.

The first-game win put Western Oklahoma up 3-0 in their four-game series with Howard.

Western chased Hawk hurler Greg Kroeger from the mound in the fifth inning; pitching four-and-a-third innings, he gave up 12 hits, 10 earned runs and walked one batter, striking out two.

Winning pitcher Mark Morris pitched five and-a-third innings for Western before being relieved by Willie Wolbert.

Morris gave up seven earned runs on seven hits and walked eight batters, striking out three. His record goes to 3-1.

Reliever Wolbert took the mound for Western and pitched an inning and a third. He gave up one hit and no runs, walking one batter and striking out none.

Western finished the first game with 10 runs on 13 total hits, including a four-homer fifth inning. The Pioneers' third baseman made one error.

In the first inning Howard scored one run, a move they repeated in the second, third and fourth innings.

In the first Western scored two runs. The Pioneers went scoreless until the fourth, where they picked up two more.

But the Pioneers' big inning was the fifth, in which six runs crossed the plate for Western.

Lead man L.T. Twyner walked; Mike Walden hit a single into right and David Smith hit a three-run homer to make the tally 7-4 for Western Oklahoma.

Rusty Quebedeaux liked the looks of Kroeger's first pitch, so he slammed it over the wall in left field for a solo trip.

Kaufman, Western's third baseman, followed suit with a solo homer over the 375-foot sign to make the score 9-4, Western.

After a conference on the mound, Kroeger remained in the game, but not for long.

Howard College Hawks outfielder Jose Rubiera scampers to first base during a recent baseball game matching the Howard College Hawks against Vernon College. Wednesday at Jack Barber Field, Howard spilt a doubleheader with Western Oklahoma.

Willie Wolbert hit a fly ball for Western's first out, but Rodney Tartsah watched a low pitch pass and knocked the second one Kroeger offered out of the ballpark.

Kroeger was evacuated; Ernie Sanchez, in his second day to wear an HC uniform, came onto the mound and to his credit not a single Western run scored for the remainder of the game.

Sanchez's two and two-thirds innings saw one hit, no runs, two walks and three strikeouts; Howard finished the game with eight runs on 10 hits and committed no errors.

"We played well in the first game," coach Henry said early today.

"We just didn't have a defense against all those home runs. They hit six home runs on us and had 10 runs, all earned; but we made no errors and played some excellent D."

Henry said, "Their third baseman, Kaufman, went three for three against us with a single, a double and a home run.

In the second game, though, Howard made up for its three consecutive losses by treating Western Oklahoma to a hitting display.

The Pioneers contributed six errors to the Hawk rout.

Western sacrificed two pitchers to Howard hitters during the game, which was called after four and a half innings because of darkness.

Already leading 13-9, Howard erupted for 16 runs in the fourth inning.

"Our big innings were the first and the fourth," said coach Henry. "In the first inning, (Ernesto)

Katrina Thompson

Lady Steers' sports will lose valuable leader

By SARAH LUMAN
Staff Writer

No ordinary high-school shooting guard is Big Spring's senior Katrina Thompson — a Division-I NCAA basketball prospect, she is an extraordinary athlete whose credentials off the court rival her statistics on it.

At 17, she's already a three-year veteran of starting lineups for the Lady Steers since coach C.E. Carmichael took over the program three years ago.

"It's going to be strange," Carmichael said as he contemplated next season, "going out there without her to run things for us.

"But whatever college she goes to, Katrina Thompson is going to be an asset, not only to the basketball program but to the entire campus," said her coach.

"She's had all this success, won about every award in this school, and she's handled it all very well," he said. "She not only handles herself well, but she has a lot of class.

"She's not very loud, but when she makes up her mind to do something, then she does it.

"We've had, in the past two years, a combined record of 34-7, and Katrina has been a big part of that."

Indeed she is — through district Thompson averaged 19.4 points per game. She made 63 of 76 free-throw attempts — a phenomenal 82.9 percent — and went 50.7 percent from the field.

Thompson provided the team with more than astonishing statistics, though.

"We'll miss her basketball skills," Carmichael said. "But what we'll miss as much, if not more, is her leadership ability."

That the soft-spoken senior demonstrates off the court as well. Thompson carries a 94 grade point average, Carmichael said.

She is also second vice president of the student council — of which she has been a member since eighth grade — and a member of the National Honor Society. She is involved in Students Against Drunk Driving, too.

Thompson, a three-year volleyball player and track participant, will play golf this spring, for the first time.

Big Spring Lady Steers' senior guard Katrina Thompson (22) lets fly with a jumper against a 2-4A opponent. Thompson closed out a very productive basketball season by being named 2-4A's Most Valuable Player.

She plans to visit North Texas State University in April — the Division I school is looking for a guard who can handle the ball well.

"The coach told me," Thompson said softly, "that if she finds that guard, she'll be starting."

She plans to major in social work. "I wanted to major in child psychology," she said, "because I like working with children, and when I see the way some parents abuse their children, it makes me so mad.

"But if I major in social work, I'll really have more opportunities to help (the children). If I major in child psychology, what I'll be able to do will be limited.

"But in social work, there'll be more variety of opportunities available in the field."

Thompson smiles — she is a very attractive girl — when asked how a 17-year-old finds time to do so many things well.

"I just made up my mind to do it," she said. "I knew I could. I'm never at home, I'm on the go all the time, until after 10. That's when I do my homework."

She is the second of three children of Dickie and Gladys

Massie MVP

Howard College sophomore Stefanie Massie was named the Western Junior College Athletic Conference's Player of the Year in an all-conference listing released Tuesday afternoon.

Massie was the lone Howard College player named to the team.

It was a troubled year for coach Don Stevens' Queens, who finished the season with only five players on the team. In October, Stevens dismissed five players from the team for disciplinary reasons. Two more defected at the same time.

Two of the remaining players did not return after the semester break, and late in the season starter Karen Mitchell left the team because of health reasons.

STEFANIE MASSIE

But despite it all, Massie still had a very productive season. The 5-11 forward led the nation in scoring early in the season, and led the conference in scoring the entire season.

She closed out her JC career averaging 27 points and 10 rebounds per game. Only Odessa's Nelda Roy (11) averaged more caroms per outing.

She scored a career-high 50 points against Southwest Christian College Nov. 19 at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Region play up in air

Things are still pending as far as the Region I-AA boys basketball tournament, awaiting a district judge's ruiling.

The earliest the judge will make a decision is Friday morning," said tournament director Linda Conaway.

The controversy all stems from a protest by Hale Center Independent School District. David Shires, a Shallowater basketball player was ruled ineligible for postseason play by the UIL in a Tuesday meeting with officials from both Hale Center and Shallowater.

Shires moved from Lubbock to Shallowater for this school year, and was ruled eligible for competition by District 4-2A executive committee in December.

But Hale Center, which lost to Shallowater 68-60 in bi-district play last Thursday, had filed a protest over Shires' eligibility. Hale Center won the protest and was allowed to advance in the playoffs.

Shallowater ISD then requested a temporary restraining order. The restraining order arrived shortly after Tuesday's Canadian-Hale Center game started, and play was stopped after two quarters, with Canadian leading 30-20.

If the appeal is decided by Friday, and Shallowater wins, then Shallowater will play Canadian at 7 Friday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, to see who will advance to regional tournament play.

If the judge denies the appeal, Hale Center and Canadian will finish the second half of their game, starting at 7.

Regional tournament action won't start until Saturday morning. The winner of the Canadian-Hale Center-Shallowater game, will play Haskell at 9 a.m. Morton and Coleman will play at 10:30 a.m.

The winners will play for the regional championship later that night at 7.

Grayson makes finals

MIDLAND — Former Coahoma basketball star Shanna Fowler will be playing for a berth in the national junior college tournament tonight when the Grayson Lady Vikings play the Odessa College Lady Wranglers in the championship of the Region V tournament.

The Lady Vikings defeated the South Plains Lady Texans 63-55 last night to advance to the finals. The contest marked the meeting of Fowler and former Big Spring star Teresa Pruitt, playing for South Plains.

Fowler scored three points in the game and Pruitt scored nine. South Plains finishes the season with a 19-10 mark.

Odessa College defeated McLennan 84-50 to advance to the finals.

Game time is 7 p.m. at Chap Center.

Steers in tournament

The Big Spring Steers will play the Abilene High Eagles in the opening round of the Abilene Independent School District Invitational Baseball Tournament today at 2 p.m.

The Steers are 0-3 and Abilene is 3-1.

Smith hits second ace

Howard Smith recorded a hole-in-one Wednesday at the Comanche Trail Golf Course.

It was the second hole-in-one in Smith's 30 years of golfing. The ace came on the 156-yard 15th hole. Smith used a nine-iron.

Witnesses were John Stanley, Ervin Daniels, Nile Cole, Emery Parrish and Llody Duncan.

Thompson

Thompson. Her older brother Eric now attends Howard College. Her younger brother Richard, 10, plays basketball for the Big Spring YMCA.

Though her parents don't push, she said, they know what their children can do. So they expect top performance; in return, they support their children in everything they do.

"My mom and dad — I really feel for them," Thompson said. "They've gone to all our games. Richard plays basketball at the Y, and they go to his games on Monday and to my games on Tuesdays and Fridays.

"My (older) brother, since he was in eighth grade and I was in sixth, has played basketball and football and run track. My parents — I don't think they've ever missed one of our games.

"We went to every football game and basketball game and track meet, and to every baseball game of my brother's," she said.

"We support each other, my brother and I, in everything we do. I go to all his games and he comes to all mine.

"It really helps me a lot."

She credits an uncle for lending moral support to her sports endeavors, too, and mentions Steer sophomore Chris Cole, whom she has been seeing steadily for six and a half months, as another support. "Chris is so understanding.

"Other guys I've dated, our relationships never lasted very long. I'm so busy, and they'd get a little bit jealous. But Chris is very supportive, and he's so understanding."

The demands of Thompson's life may ease a little this spring.

"I'm more relaxed," she said. "When we were playing basketball, I was tense all the time.

"But now, I'm playing golf," she said, smiling. "I don't really know how to play, so I'm just out there, but the coach (Mickey Finley) has really helped me a lot. He's the one who asked me to play.

"I said, 'I've never held a golf club in my life,' and he just said, 'I know you can do it.' So now we have plastic balls for me to hit and a tape for me to watch so I can learn how, and it's a lot of fun."

That's one of the keys to Thompson: her energy comes from her enjoyment of everything she does. She describes the turnabout in BSHS girls' basketball this way:

"It was terrible. Before (Carmichael came), we didn't really have a program.

"Coach Carmichael just knows more about basketball — and he makes it fun. We did quite a bit of running this year, but our coaches before just tried to run us to death, and we didn't work much, really, on basketball.

"He hates to lose, and he's really tried to drill it in to all of us to hate to lose, too. I do. I can't stand it when we lose.

"But we're not used to winning yet — our whole school is not used to winning. So when we win, we're excited.

"And coach says, like when Canyon and Levelland play and they're all serious about it, when you win and you don't have any enjoyment in it; you haven't really done anything."

This season, the Lady Steers won 28 games. Thompson still aches for the team because of the two losses, especially the last one in the bi-district match with Canyon's Eagles.

"I wasn't scared this year," she said. Her 15-point performance that night topped a perfect game in ballhandling. Thompson brought the ball downcourt for every Big Spring possession, and suffered not a single turnover.

"Last year, I was so scared my hands were frozen solid," she said. "Everybody talked about Canyon this and Canyon that. But this year, I knew they could be beaten. I knew they had been. Monterey did it, and we could have beaten Monterey.

"So I knew we could play and I knew we could win. I guess it wouldn't have hurt so much if I hadn't had my hopes so high," she said wistfully.

Winning has become a habit at Big Spring — and Thompson predicts the habit will continue and improve into tradition. "Pam (Gill) will get better, and Tami (Wise) will be back, and Peggy (Smith) will be back, and Gisila (Spears).

"We're gonna be great next year."

For the first time in many years, Katrina Thompson won't be playing basketball in Big Spring next year. She began by shooting free throws at the Elks Hoops Shoot.

"I won every year," she said. "Then I'd go to Pecos and win, and go to Arlington or Grand Prairie or go to Lubbock.

"I started when I was 10 years old, in the hoops shoot. That's why my free throws are so good. Then I started playing in the sixth grade."

Where will Katrina be next year?

"Hopefully," said Thompson with that quiet smile, "she'll be at North Texas."

Massie

Massie is considered a top major college prospect but hasn't decided where she'll attend college yet.

Conference champion Odessa College placed two players on the first team. Forward Nelda Roy and Linda Broomfield head the squad. Roy averaged 11 rebounds and 18 points per game, while Broomfield sported a eight rebounds, 16 point average.

Sharing Coach of the Year honors were South Plains' Lyndon Hardin and Odessa's Ken Hefner.

Castro walked to lead us off. Ruby (Jose Rubiera) had a single and (Joey) Allen walked.

"Then Randy Deal, our catcher, came up and hit a double into right field to score Castro and Rubiera. That left Allen on third and Deal on second, and Darren Glenn, our DH, came up and hit a three-run home run.

"Then Camarillo struck out, our first out. Jerry Camara came up and singled into left field, and our first baseman, Kenny Frederick, walked.

"Jay Williams hit to the shortstop, scoring Camara on an error. We had two outs and Castro came up again and got a base hit," Henry said.

"Ruby hit a double to drive in Frederick and Castro scored our eighth run."

Al Benavides started for the Hawks, pitching two and two thirds innings and giving up six hits, four earned runs and three walks. He struck out one batter.

Gareth Buresch took the mound for one third of an inning. He gave up four hits and four runs.

Derek Matlock came on to pitch one third of an inning.

Joe Watters finished the HC pitching chores with one and two-thirds innings, in which Western had no hits, no runs and no walks.

In the fourth inning, Howard batters literally battered Western's pitchers.

Spyhalski, running for Deal, scored on Glenn's third home run of the game. Camarillo singled. Camara singled.

Frederick's double brought them both home; Williams' double drove in Frederick, and Castro hit a two-run homer

Rubiera walked, Allen singled into left field and Deal walked to load the bases with Hawks. Glenn hit a triple to bring all three runners home and Camarillo singled to score Glenn.

The inning ended on Williams' ground ball out, with Howard outscoring Western 29-9.

Howard is now 11-4 while Western is 5-3.

State hoop tourney begins

AUSTIN (AP) — The 38th annual University Interscholastic League's girls' state basketball tournament opens Thursday, with six schools making their first appearance.

North Mesquite in Class 5A; Wilmer-Hutchins in 4A; Brownfield in 3A, Shallowater and Bloomington in 2A; and Byers in Class A are all first-time entrants.

North Mesquite, which comes in with the tournament's best record of 35-0, is led by 6-foot post Teresa McMillan. The Stallions will face a familiar foe in Clear Creek on Friday.

Clear Creek, 31-2, lost to North Mesquite 70-51 in a regular-season game. The Wildcats are led by 5-10 forward Linda Kennedy.

In the other 5A semifinal game, Austin Lanier will try to use its hometown advantage against Duncanville. Lanier, 35-2, is paced by 5-6 guard Teresa Cobble, who had a career-high 33 points earlier in the year.

Duncanville, which also lost to North Mesquite during the regular season, uses a potent inside game made up of 6-4 post Cinietra Henderson and 5-10 Shanell Thomas. Duncanville, 34-2, also have three other players over 5-10. The Pantherettes are making their 12th appearance in the tournament, the most by any team this year.

In 4A, Levelland is making its sixth trip in the past seven seasons and will take on Wilmer-Hutchins in one semifinal matchup Thursday.

Levelland has won 28 straight and is 33-1. Melissa Peay, a 5-9 guard, leads Wilmer-Hutchins, which comes in 28-8.

Calallen, which has made it to the final four 11 times and six in the last seven years, plays Pflugerville in the other semifinal game.

Stacy Brown, a 5-6 guard, is top player for Calallen, which has won 29 straight games and is 34-3. Pflugerville, 27-6, is led by 5-7 forward Jennifer King and is making its first appearance since 1979.

The 3A semifinals feature two of the three undefeated teams in the tournament in Ingleside, 34-0, and Hardin-Jefferson, 33-0.

Ingleside plays Brownfield, 28-8, in the first 3A semifinal game Thursday, while Hardin-Jefferson takes on Brownsboro.

Brownfield uses a double low post offense with 5-10 Sheryl Swoopes and Deborah Williams. Brownsboro has won 23 straight and one of its eight losses is to Class A semifinalist Larue LaPoyner. Point guard Sandie Everett runs the Brownsboro offense.

In the first 2A semifinal Friday, Shallowater plays Godley, followed by Grapeland and Bloomington.

Guard Johnna Pointer leads Shallowater, 30-5, which finished second to Morton in District 4-2A. Godley, 35-2, is led by 5-10 post Kendra Abbott in its third straight trip to the tournament. One of Godley's losses is to Grapeland.

Grapeland counts on 6-0 post Trenia Willis for scoring. Willis had a high game of 50 points this season in a 105-42 win over New Waverly. One of Grapeland's losses was to 3A semifinalist Hardin-Jefferson, 103-97.

Bloomington, 26-5, rebounded from two straight district losses to make the state playoffs, led by 5-11 post Rhonda Whitfield.

Class A power Nazareth makes a return to the final four after a one-year absence. The Swiftettes, who are 32-2 and come in with a 24-game winning streak, have appeared in the tournament 11 times in the past 13 years and have won eight state titles, six of those in a row.

They will play Moulton, 33-3, which has also made 11 trips to the tournament, the first coming in 1950. Two of its three losses came in warm-up games against 5A opponents, and its only regular season loss was to 5A semifinalist Austin Lanier.

LaPoyner, 32-1, will play Byers in the other semifinal Thursday.

DALLAS — Texas Christian University Horned Frogs' guard Danny Hughes (10) drives around Southern Methodist University Mustangs' Eric Longino (43) in the first half at Moody Coliseum Wednesday night.

Ponies earn co-championship with 87-54 victory over TCU

By The Associated Press

The hard part is over for Southern Methodist and the Mustangs could earn their first outright Southwest Conference basketball title since 1967 tonight while watching television.

If Arkansas loses to Houston then the crown goes to the Mustangs. If the Razorbacks win then they have to do it again Sunday in Lubbock to tie SMU for the title.

Then SWC officials would draw names out of hat to determine the top seed in the Post-Season Classic next week.

SMU won its first co-championship in 26 years Wednesday night with an 87-54 victory over Texas Christian.

In other Southwest Conferences games Wednesday night, Texas defeated Texas A&M, 64-58, and Baylor blasted Texas Tech, 91-49.

SMU Coach Dave Bliss got a wet suit out of the victory in a post-game celebration but didn't mind.

"There's nothing I've wanted more for my team than for them to be Southwest Conference championships," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss. "There's a lot of things neat about being on national tv and being in the NCAA playoffs but winning the title is something that happens over a hard two month period."

Somebody knew something!

A 40-foot banner with "SWC Champions" on it was lowered from the ceiling after the game.

Carlton McKinney scored 20 points and Todd Alexander added 16 to pace the Ponies.

SMU now owns a 23-6 overall record. They are 12-4 in SWC play.

Arkansas and SMU split in their head-to-head meetings. If the Razorbacks win the remainder of their games, they would have an equal record with SMU in games against the rest of the conference.

"We know Arkansas has a couple of tough games," Bliss said. "I'm just happy that we did our work. Arkansas is a very tough team and capable of tying us."

SMU, which barely defeated TCU 51-48 in Fort Worth, overwhelmed the Horned Frogs with a fullcourt press to post a 48-30 halftime lead.

TCU went 6:05 without a point to start the second half as the Mustangs ran away.

"They just blew us away," said TCU Coach Moe Iba. "We didn't execute and get back on defense. SMU is certainly a deserving champion."

It was SMU's largest victory over TCU since the Ponies beat the Frogs 96-60 in 1974.

John Lewis scored 21 points to lead TCU while Todd Willis added 14. TCU is 9-17 and 3-12.

"This is what it's all about," McKinney said. "This is what we worked for--to be champions."

McKinney added "We'll be watching on TV tonight. Go Coogs."

Super-sub Alvin Heggs came off the Texas bench to score 17 points and lead the Longhorns past the Texas A&M Aggies 64-58.

Heggs, a junior transfer who is Texas' second-leading scorer, hit 11 of his game-high total in the second half and was 7-of-10 from the field. He played despite a badly sprained ankle that has kept him out of practice all week.

Sophomore guard Travis Mays followed Heggs with 14, including 10 in the first half.

Donald Thompson and former Longhorn Doug Dennis paced the Aggies with 16 points each. Texas A&M's leading scorer Daryl McDonald was held to 12.

Texas, which has won eight of its last nine, improves to 16-11 on the season and 10-5 in front of the biggest SWC crowd of the year of 9,933.

Texas A&M drops to 15-14 and 7-8.

Thomas Gipson's dunk with almost three minutes gone in the game gave the Longhorns a 7-0 advantage that they never relinquished.

Texas led 30-25 at the half.

"We're not used to this kind of crowd," Texas Coach Bob Weltlich said. "We were trying so hard. It's like when you're little and trying to please your parents."

Center Darryl Middleton scored 28 points and guard Michael Williams added 23 to lead Baylor to a 91-49 win over Texas Tech.

The Bears moved to 10-5 in conference play and 20-9 overall, winning their twentieth game for the first time since the 1947-48 season.

Texas Tech, in its worst loss ever, fell to 9-17 for the season and 4-11 in the conference.

Texas Tech guard Sean Gay, who averages 15 points per game, scored only four points. Guard Todd Duncan led the Red Raiders with 16 points.

Baylor coach Gene Iba then took out Middleton and Williams, first and third in scoring in the conference, and replaced them with freshman Melvin Hunt and junior college transfer Bert Brown.

Panthers walk deck

By The Associated Press

Pittsburgh wants nothing to do with these Pirates.

Seton Hall is 2-0 against No. 7 Pittsburgh and 6-7 against the rest of the Big East. The Pirates are 2-0 against the Panthers, 18-10 against the rest of the country.

Seton Hall completed a regular-season sweep of Pittsburgh on Wednesday night with a 83-79 victory over the Panthers.

"I can't explain what happened," said Pittsburgh center Charles Smith, who scored 25 points. "We just weren't the Pitt team we have been in the past."

"We match up with Pitt pretty well," said Seton Hall forward Mark Bryant. who had 23 points and 13 rebounds. No. 1 Temple 75, St. Joseph's 62

Freshman Mark Macon scored a season-high 35 points as Temple finished the regular season 26-1 and 18-0 in the Atlantic 10.

The game was marred by several fights, and at one point both coaches were shouting at each other on the sidelines.

Temple trailed 10-4 and then scored 19 consecutive points. Ivan Brown and Henry Smith scored 15 points each for St. Joseph's, 14-13 and 9-9.

No. 6 North Carolina 97, No. 13 Georgia Tech 80

J.R. Reid scored nine of his 24 points in a 23-4 second-half burst as North Carolina, 22-4 and 11-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, ended Georgia Tech's seven-game winning streak.

The five-minute run stretched a six-point lead to 90-65 when Reid capped it with a basket with 4:10 left.

Duane Ferrell scored 23 points for Georgia Tech, 21-7 and 8-5.

No. 8 Kentucky 80, Georgia 72

Ed Davender scored 20 points and had eight assists as Kentucky clinched a share of the Southeastern Conference title.

Toney Mack scored 21 points for Georgia, 15-14 and 7-10, which lost its eighth consecutive road game.

Clemson 79, No. 9 Duke 77

Grayson Marshall's short jumper with 1:11 left and Tim Kincaid's four free throws in the final minute gave Clemson, 13-13 and 3-10 in the ACC, its second victory in its last 10 games.

With the score tied at 72 with 1:33 left, Marshall drove the lane and made a 13-footer to give Clemson its first lead since midway through the opening half.

Quin Snyder's free throw cut it to one point with 45 seconds left. But Marshall, playing with influenza, made the front end of a one-and-one eight seconds later.

Snyder scored 20 points for Duke, 20-6 and 8-5, which lost three straight for the first time in four seasons.

No. 10 Michigan 105, Northwestern 67

Glen Rice scored 25 points and Gary Grant added 24, including 17 in the first half, as the Wolverines, 23-5 and 12-3, took a 53-26 halftime lead.

Loy Vaught scored 22 points off the bench for Michigan. Jeff Grose scored 14 points and Shon Morris had 13 for Northwestern.

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

From the Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MARCH 4, 1988

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is an extremely bad time to take any risks, especially of a financial nature, which could severely hurt your situation. It would be advisable to double-check everything today, then do so again.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A careless co-worker could cause you a big set-back and, although this may annoy you, you should find out the reason for this person's actions.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) This is not a good day to rely on the luck of the draw. Instead, stick with tried-and-true methods. Go along with your mate's wishes tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Keep out of arguments at home and with others, since a royal row would probably ensue. Go out and visit a bed-ridden friend this evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Much care should be exercised while in motion today, especially while driving. Don't make any unpleasant wisecracks.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Curb your spending, and try to save more money in case of an emergency. This is not a good time to begin any long-term projects at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may feel as if you are "in a rut," but making any drastic changes would not be wise at this time. Don't be critical of your good friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't lose your temper if your mate is going against your wishes, as there is probably a reason for this person's actions, so be more understanding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Avoid a group of people where you feel disputes may arise this evening. You can rely on your intuition more than usual at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Have more respect for authority, and obey every rule and regulation which applies to you. Maintain a calm attitude today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new acquaintance is trying to make you discontented, so stop and think about your lot in life; you'll realize you are very lucky.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Before you get into an argument over the amount of a bill, check it carefully and be absolutely sure that it's not correct.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be sure to keep your end of any agreements you have made, or you could get into some hot water. Get plenty of rest tonight.

If Your Child Is Born Today

He or she will have a keen ability to understand problematical affairs which most others find difficult to comprehend. Your talented progeny would do well in such fields of endeavor as medicine, law or psychiatry, and much success can come from helping others.
