Regan says he is 'willing' to testify

Ex-federal judge Lawrence E. Walsh says reports that he has been chosen as an independent counsel are "premature;" related stories — 2,4A

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, is willing to testify before Congress in open hearings on what he knew about the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua, the White House said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes also gave new emphasis to the administration's recommendation that former White House aides tell Congress what they know. Several officials, including former national security adviser John Poindexter and his fired aide, Oliver North, have refused to answer any questions, invoking the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

"We do reiterate, underscore and publicly proclaim that we would like for them to testify; we would like for them to work out a means to testify; we would like for them to tell the entire story; we would like for them to tell it in open session, and we would like for them to do it as quickly as possible," Speakes said.

Regan has said he supported the sale of arms to Iran but did not know profits were being diverted to the Contras. It had been uncertain whether Regan would be willing to testify before Congress or whether the White House would invoke executive privelege and refuse to let him appear.

"Don Regan is willing to testify if the committee thinks he can add anything to their investigation," Speakes said.

"He'd be glad to do so; he'd be glad to do so in open session," Speakes said.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said his committee expects to call Regan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III to testify at closed-door hearings this week.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas quoted Regan as saying to him Saturday evening: "I'll tell you one thing. I'm not leaving the White House."

Some lawmakers in both parties have suggested Regan step down or be dismissed, but Dole said he believes the chief of staff "has done a pretty good job."

As for whether the president, himself, would be willing to testify, Speakes said he did not anticipate a request from any committee for Reagan's testimony. "Generally they don't do that," Speakes said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., speaking on the "CBS Morning News" today, said the president would be welcome to testify before a congressional committee.

In another development, Vice President George Bush was calling his top national security aide to account for all contacts with a former CIA employee who has been described as a coordinator of supply flights for Nicaraguan rebels.

The aide, Donald P. Gregg, disclosed over the weekend that he had arranged a meeting in August between Felix Rodriguez, a former associate of his at the CIA, and U.S. officials after Rodriguez expressed concern that supplies to the Contra rebels were moving too slowly.

ATF agent says 'Harris had done nothing illegal'

By JANE MARLER DEES
and JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writers

A Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent in Lubbock says he investigated Midlander Jim Tom Harris' involvement in a failed Iranian arms sale last February, but turned the case over to the U.S. Customs office in Houston when he found Harris "had done nothing illegal."

"As far as my investigation went, I found it was all just a supposition of something that was supposed to happen, but never did," Resident Agent-in-Charge Vance Johnson said this morning.

"At the point that we got the stuff (documentation concerning the arms sale), nothing had been consummated that would constitute a crime. It was all basically a rumor," Johnson said.

Johnson said he learned of the matter from "an independent source," but would not disclose the name of the source. He did say it was not Harris.

U.S. Customs Agent Vince Moore — the agent customs officials said would know of the case — could not be reached for comment.

The ATF agent's February investigation ties in with Harris' claim Friday night that he turned over all his information to authorities when the deal went bust early last February.

"The federal agencies have had copies of the documents since March," Harris told the Reporter-Telegram Friday night.

Local authorities still won't confirm an investigation of Harris is taking place.

Unconfirmed reports said it was Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter who learned of Harris' involvement in the failed arms sale several days ago and then turned the case over to FBI agents.

Painter is out of town until Wednesday and could not be reached this morning.

FBI Supervisory Senior Resident Agent Ron Butler, who acts as official spokesman for Midland investigations, could not be reached for comment this morning. Butler was also unavailable Friday.

New York bank, Texas Commerce may merge

NEW YORK (AP) — Chemical New York Corp., the nation's sixth largest bank holding company, has agreed to merge with Texas Commerce Bancshares Inc. in a deal worth more than $1.1 billion, the banks said today.

It would be one of the largest interstate banking mergers in U.S. history, creating a holding company with assets of $75 billion, and comes at a time when Texas banks are facing severe economic pressures.

Houston-based Texas Commerce Bancshares is considered the strongest bank in the state, but its recent performance has suffered due to heavy loan losses and nonperforming assets. It has $18.9 billion in assets and is the 26th largest bank holding company in the country.

The decision to unite with Chemical follows legislative action in Texas to make it easier for out-of-state financial institutions to acquire Texas banks, bank holding companies or savings and loan associations.

The Texas measure was enacted amid what some state lawmakers called a "banking crisis." The oil price slump has impaired the loan portfolios of some of the state's banks to the point where an infusion of money from outside the region was deemed the only solution to keeping the banks solvent.

Ben Love, chairman and chief executive of Texas Commerce Bancshares, said: "This partnership will give Texas Commerce a significant competitive edge by being the first Texas bank to diversify so broadly.

"It adds substantial financial resources to the Texas economy at a time of Texas' greatest need...and prospective opportunities."

Texas Commerce, the state's largest banking system with 70 branches, will continue to operate as a wholly owned subsidiary of Chemical. Texas Commerce is considered the most financially stable in Texas, where more than a dozen banks have failed over the past year.

The merger requires approval from the Federal Reserve Board, state regulatory authorities and shareholders. Ken Herz, a spokesman at Chemical's headquarters in New York, said the merger is expected to be completed in the second quarter of next year.

Fugitive killed in Rankin after high-speed chase

RANKIN (AP) — A 33-year-old fugitive from California outraced West Texas law officers before being fatally wounded at a roadblock near Rankin, authorities said.

As he was dying Sunday afternoon, the man told officers the 1986 Mustang he was driving had been stolen in connection with an armed robbery three days earlier in Oakland, Calif., investigators said.

Officials identified the man as O'Dell Turner, but released no information on his hometown. Turner was shot Sunday by a game warden and a constable after firing one shot at the officers from a .38 revolver, Upton County Sheriff Glenn Willeford said Sunday night.

"He jumped out of his car at the roadblock and fired a shot at a game warden and a constable" as he ran toward a mobile home, Willeford said. "They (the officers) returned fire with shotguns."

Turner died about 4:55 p.m., Willeford said.

"I read him his rights and he said the car was stolen in California three days ago," Willeford said. "He didn't say whether he was involved in the armed robbery."

Willeford said he ordered the roadblock after Turner drove at a high rate of speed through Iraan, 20 miles south of Rankin and about 10 miles north of Interstate 10. A computer check revealed the car had been stolen, he said.

"He was clocked at speeds up to 130 miles per hour," Willeford said. "While I gave no orders to shoot anyone, I can say without reservation that I did tell officers that the car must be stopped and the driver not allowed to get away."

He added, "I'm sorry that Turner was shot, but I back the officers 100 percent."

Some state employees apply for food stamps

From Staff and Wire Reports

State welfare agency officials say their caseworkers are being swamped with state employees applying for food stamps this month because their paychecks, due in late December, have been bumped back to early January.

More than 2,000 state employees have applied for food stamps in December, joining other food-stamp seekers from among the 725,000 unemployed Texans.

Some of the 2,000 are being certified as eligible for the assistance because of the change that leaves them without a paycheck for 5½ weeks, said Barbara Musil, a state Department of Human Resources administrator.

Joan Morris of Odessa, Permian Basin program director for food stamps, verified this morning that several West Texas state workers had applied for the assistance. "I couldn't give you any exact numbers," she said.

Ms. Morris said that state workers who head one-parent families in particular may become eligible if they have only a little money in the bank and don't own a late-model car. Food stamp allocation rules hold that — within certain limits — people who receive no income within a particular month are eligible for state aid if they apply during the same month, she said.

Ms. Morris added that the number of new applicants has not been enough to slow down the Permian Basin food stamp allocation system.

One food stamp caseworker told the Austin American-Statesman, "Beginning in October, we were swamped with applications from people because of the bad economy."

In addition, an increase in the number of fraud cases among state workers has food stamp supervisors distressed.

Turner was spotted at 2:20 p.m. driving a Mustang east on Interstate Highway 10, 25 miles west of Ozona in Crockett County, Willeford said.

He outran state troopers and then doubled back, heading west on I-10, the Department of Public Safety said. The car was spotted again and was seen turning north on Texas 349 at Sheffield.

Willeford said Turner wrecked the car when he failed to make a curve near the intersection of Texas Highway 349 and U.S. 67.

The sheriff said he is withholding the names of the officers who killed Turner pending an investigation by his office, the FBI and possibly the Texas Rangers.

After a supply plane was shot down over Nicaragua Oct. 5, sources close to the aid network said Gregg had placed Rodriguez at the airfield where the supply flights were based. At the time, Gregg acknowledged knowing Rodriguez, but said he did not know about Rodriguez' involvement in the supply flights.

Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, said Sunday that Gregg first told the vice president about the August meeting last week.

"Gregg apparently had taken it upon himself to put Felix in touch with various people," Fitzwater said. "He had not previously told the vice president...I think the vice president feels that he should have been told.

"At this point there is no indication of wrongdoing, but we sure want to find out all the facts," Fitzwater said.

He said the report was to be on the vice president's desk today and, after review, to the appropriate congressional committees and to a special counsel expected to be appointed soon to look into Iranian arms sales and profits from them being diverted to the Contras.

Gregg declined comment beyond saying, "I suppose everybody could think of additional questions, but there is nothing more to add."

Meanwhile, Speakes refused to confirm or deny a report in the Washington Post that the United States had provided intelligence information to Iraq. But an administration official, speaking privately, said, "We were not at all attempting to engineer a stalemate as implied in the story. We want to bring about a ceasefire and eventually a settlement."

The newspaper reported today's that the CIA has secretly given Iraq detailed information to assist Iraqi bombing raids on Iran's oil terminals and power plants in the war between the two countries.

The Post quoted unidentified sources as saying the United States has supplied the intelligence, including data from U.S. satellite reconnaissance photography, to Iraq for nearly two years. During the same period, the Reagan administration was covertly selling arms to Iran.

The Post also quoted sources as saying CIA Director William Casey met in October and again in November with senior Iraqi officials to make sure an improved communications link was functioning and to encourage more attacks on Iranian installations.

Speakes also said today that a review of records had not turned up any evidence of that money siphoned from the arms sales went to conservative groups boosting supporters of Reagan's pro-Contra policy and targeted opponents with TV ads.

Speakes said such a practice would be "morally wrong" and "legally wrong" and the White House would "condemn it in the strongest terms."

There were published reports over the weekend that North had helped a conservative group's advertising campaign gain support for Reagan's Nicaragua policy and target members of Congress on the Contra aid issue.

In other developments:

— Dole suggested that a special adviser be brought in as the president's chief aide on the Iran issue. As a possibility, he suggested former Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., of Tennessee, his predecessor as GOP leader and another potential presidential candidate.

— Durenberger expressed doubt about the need for still another investigation by a special joint committee of Congress, which congressional leaders have said will meet after the new session begins in January.

"If this is a 100-piece puzzle, we have 95 of the pieces," Durenberger said of the Intelligence Committee's inquiry. "What we've got now is a problem where this new committee is going to come along and instead of just taking the five pieces left in the jigsaw and try to fit them , they're going to come up with a hundred more pieces."

— In an interview with Time magazine, Casey said the National Security Council, not his agency, ran the covert arms sales to Iran.

Casey repeatedly denied CIA involvement in, or even knowledge of, the diversion of money to the Contras. "I don't know everything the NSC did," Casey is quoted as saying in Time's Dec. 22 issue. "The NSC was operating this thing; we were in a support mode."

— An Israeli newspaper, Haaretz, said Sunday that Saudi Arabian businessman Adnan Khashoggi made $250,000 on a seven-day loan to finance the first shipment of U.S. arms to Iran. Khashoggi said in a television interview last week that he advanced $1 million to Iranian arms merchant Manucher Ghorbanifar "to get things going" in 1985.

Walsh: Reports that he's to be counsel 'premature'

Walsh

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Former federal judge and diplomat Lawrence E. Walsh says reports that he has been chosen as an independent counsel to investigate the Iran arms affair are premature.

Walsh, 74, said Sunday he could not comment on weekend reports by the Los Angeles Times and National Public Radio that he had been chosen by a panel of federal judges to head the investigation into the arms sale and diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

He said such reports were premature and lacked understanding of the process of selecting an independent counsel.

"Let's assume that I am interested in this role, I don't think anything is going to happen for two weeks," he said by phone from his Oklahoma City home. "Let's assume that the FBI is checking my background, well, even if it was expedited, the normal run of those things is two weeks.

"A federal court isn't going to consider anything until they receive that background report," Walsh said.

Walsh left for New York on Sunday, but said the trip "has nothing to do with this legal matter. You can be assured of that."

A Justice Department spokesman said Saturday that the department had not been notified of any appointment.

If named to the post, Walsh, a native of Nova Scotia, would be the seventh independent counsel chosen under the post-Watergate Ethics In Government law, which established a special three-judge court to oversee such investigations.

HARRIS

Midland FBI agent Tom Farris said Friday afternoon he "could not comment one way or the other."

A spokesman for the FBI press office in Washington D.C. said Friday afternoon he "could not comment...because all matters pertaining to arms sales to Iran were being handled by the U.S. Justice Department."

Harris said Friday night, however, the failed arms sale he had involvement in, had nothing to do with the current "arms to Iran" crisis in Washington D.C.

John Russell, public affairs spokesman with the U.S. Justice Department said today "we wouldn't confirm or deny it," referring to whether the Justice Department was investigating the matter.

Russell did say he was not familiar with the case.

Nicaragua says American arrested

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The government said it arrested an American who had maps of military targets stuffed in a sock and claimed to belong to a private espionage unit. Reports in the United States said he was the brother of a congressman.

It was the second arrest in Nicaragua in less than three months of an American alleged to be working against the leftist Sandinista government.

Officials on Sunday identified the arrested man as Sam Nesley Hall, 49, a native of Ohio. They said he was under investigation but was not charged.

They said his case would be treated like that of U.S. mercenary Eugene Hasenfus, who was convicted last month of terrorism, violating public order and criminal association and sentenced to 30 years in prison.

Officials said Hall was arrested at 10 a.m. Friday at the Punta Huete air force base 13 miles northeast of Managua.

"He said he was working for an organization that...specialized in intelligence and espionage on military objectives...and that he was working for the U.S. government interests," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Angela Saballos said Sunday.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Al Laun said the embassy sought permission to see the man "so that we can know if an American citizen is really involved."

Reports in the United States said the man under arrest was the brother of U.S. Rep. Tony P. Hall, D-Ohio.

In an interview with The Associated Press in the United States last year, the congressman's brother said he taught commando tactics to Miskito Indians fighting the Nicaraguan government.

In June, 1985, he told the AP he was working with a Flint City, Ala.-based group called Civilian Military Assistance to aid the Contras. He described himself as a self-employed military adviser and counterterrorist, and said he wanted to help stop the spread of communism. "I firmly believe in the domino theory," he said.

"I like challenge," Hall said in that interview. "I think I'm good at what I do. You have to be a little different."

In Washington, the congressman, who voted earlier this year against continuing aid to the Contras, said in a statement: "I am surprised and concerned over press reports about my brother, Sam. I have received no confirmation from the State Department. I do not share the same views on U.S. policy in Central America as my brother does, but I love him and pray for his safety."

Sen. Patric Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said, "I don't think that this is the last American we're going to see captured in Nicaragua.

"We've been conducting the Central American policy with a wink and a shrug from our government, sending money down to the soldiers of fortune," he said, speaking on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Ms. Saballos said Hall probably would be brought before journalists this week.

Nicaraguan officials said Hall first identified himself as a writer, then as an adviser to the Miskito Indians. The Interior Ministry said Hall eventually told officials he worked for a group called the Phoenix Battalion.

The Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington issued a statement describing the battalion as a unit "which specializes in works of intelligence.

Saudi Arabia recommends 1 million barrel production cut

GENEVA (UPI) — Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest and most influential producer, urged fellow cartel members Monday to cut combined oil output by more than 1 million barrels a day to force up prices to $18 a barrel.

"We are not very far from an agreement," United Arab Emirates Oil Minister Mana Saeed Otaiba said.

But delegates said a political dispute between Gulf war enemies Iran and Iraq held up agreement on the sixth day of OPEC's year-end ministerial conference.

Iran insisted on Iraq's returning to an official OPEC production quota, while the Iraqis demanded the same output allocation as Tehran.

Iraqi Oil Minister Qassim Taqi Al-Oraibi told reporters before a plenary meeting Monday evening that Iraq would curb its output if it does not have an official quota. "If we go without a quota, we will cooperate," he said.

Oil prices rose on world markets in the apparent belief the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would eventually agree on new production restraints to replace the current 17 million barrel-a-day ceiling, which expires Dec. 31.

Britain's North Sea Brent crude for February delivery was up 41 cents to $16.21 a barrel on the European spot market. World oil prices now are in the $15 range.

Delegates said Saudi Arabia proposed an across-the-board cut of 7.27 percent to 7.5 percent in OPEC production for the first nine months of 1987, which would cut the group's daily output to between 15.5 million and 15.7 million barrels a day.

Smaller members like Ecuador, Gabon and Qatar, however, would be allowed to maintain current production levels.

The 13 oil ministers engaged in intensive private bargaining in an attempt to resolve continuing differences among members on the size and sharing of an overall cut in output.

Saudi Arabia's new acting oil minister Hisham Nazer and Kuwaiti minister Sheikh Ali Khalifa Al Sabah acted as intermediaries in trying to persuade Iran and Iraq to accept a compromise, delegates said.

Iraq refused to accept a fixed output quota under the temporary OPEC production ceilings adopted in August and October because it would have been less than Iran's allocation.

Other delegates pointed out there is little difference between what the two countries are producing because of their war.

They said the Saudis suggested one compromise by which Iraq would "voluntarily" cut its production.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, the authoritative oil journal, said Saudi Arabia's King Fahd apparently reversed his earlier rejection of any reduction in the kingdom's production.

PIW said the Saudis realized the impossibility of boosting prices without a drop in production and now are prepared to go along with a cutback, provided other OPEC members do the same.

Saudi Arabia also would expect its output allocation to increase when winter demand for OPEC oil rises in the later part of next year, PIW said.

Oil ministers had hoped for quick agreement when the conference began last Wednesday, but talks bogged down over the Iran-Iraq issue and OPEC's usual difficulties in dividing up the overall production pie.

HOW TO CHOOSE A PLASTIC SURGEON.

Today, you no longer have to live with a nose you hate. Or wrinkles that make you look older than you feel. Or an unflattering figure. Modern plastic surgery can improve these and many other conditions.

If you're considering plastic surgery, you should make sure you select a doctor who is qualified as a specialist in plastic surgery.

Because of the level of expertise needed, a specialist in plastic surgery has completed five to seven years of supervised training. To be a board-certified plastic surgeon, the physician then is required to pass a series of stringent examinations.

However, the average consumer may not know that a doctor can legally claim to be a cosmetic surgeon without specialized training or board certification.

How can you tell?

Check his credentials thoroughly. Is he certified by the American Board of Plastic Surgery? Is he a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons? Does he get good references from his patients? Is he listed in the Directory of Medical Specialists? Is he affiliated with an accredited hospital?

Make sure you check before you choose.

Sylvan Bartlett, M.D., is a board-certified plastic and reconstructive surgeon and otolaryngologist. He is a member of the American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons and the American Academy of Otolaryngology. Dr. Bartlett is a specialist in plastic and reconstructive surgery including hand and microvascular surgery and otolaryngology as it applies directly to problems in plastic surgery.

STATE

"Now we are seeing state workers who are not penniless, hungry or homeless coming in demanding to get benefits. We have found that in some instances these state workers are misrepresenting their situations. Some women are saying they are single when they have husbands or live-in boy friends. Some are saying they have no bank account or new car when they do," the Austin worker said.

"We are finding three to six fraud cases a day, and the number is growing," said the caseworker, who asked that her name not be used.

State Rep. Mike Toomey, R-Houston, author of the bill that changed the state's pay day, said he did not think state workers would take advantage of a loophole in the federal law that outlines food stamp eligibility.

He said he was "astonished and a little disappointed" that state workers would take advantage of the situation.

"I guess they need it," he said, referring to food stamps.

"Bills don't stop coming due, and I still have to feed my three kids, and this is Christmastime," said a University of Texas custodian applying for the food stamps Friday.

The woman, who asked that her name not be used, said her $845 a month take-home pay must cover all expenses for her and her three children.

After a one-hour wait in line, the UT worker got an appointment with a case worker on Dec. 29. At that time, the caseworker would take her financial and personal history and determine if she met the eligibility criteria.

When told she would in all probability not get food stamps until January, the woman said she would not return to the office.

"I was hoping to get help this month, because right now is when I am hurting," she said. "What good is this going to do me next month? That don't do me any good. It is only creating more problems than what I got now."

BANK

"The merger of Chemical and Texas Commerce brings together two institutions with strong corporate and institutional client relationships, and strong regional banking franchises," said Walter V. Shipley, Chemical chairman and chief executive officer.

Under the terms of the agreement, each share of Texas Commerce stock will be exchanged for $7 in cash; nine-tenths of a share of Chemical New York Corp. common stock, worth about $4 a share based on the last closing price on Dec. 12; one share of a new preferred stock valued at $12 a share; and, one share of a new Chemical Class B common stock, the value of which will be based on Texas Commerce's future earnings.

In addition, as part of the consideration paid Texas Commerce shareholders, $300 million book value of Texas Commerce's non-performing assets, or more than a third of those assets as of Sept. 30, will be transferred to a special entity, the stock of which will be distributed to Texas Commerce shareholders.

Driver killed when bomb blows up car used by ex-French minister

PROVINS, France (AP) — An explosion today blew up a car normally used by former French justice minister Alain Peyrefitte and killed his driver, authorities said.

Peyrefitte, who is now mayor of Provins, about 53 miles east of Paris, was not in the car.

Peyrefitte's political office identified the victim as Serge Langer, 51, a mechanic at the City Hall and one of several city employees who served as drivers for Peyrefitte.

He had come to pick up the Citroen BX car which the city puts at Peyrefitte's disposal on weekends, and a bomb apparently exploded when he started the car, the office said.

Peyrefitte's wife Monique said her husband had used his own car over the weekend instead of the Citroen and driven to Paris Sunday night.

WORLD

Mrs. Peyrefitte said the Citroen was usually parked outside their house in Provins.

"Extraordinarily, he (Peyrefitte) wasn't using it this morning and an employee of the City Hall had come to pick it up," Mrs. Peyrefitte said.

She said the explosion was so powerful that "half the car was blown over the wall into the garden" and all the windows were broken in neighboring houses.

Peyrefitte, a senior figure in the neo-gaullist Rally for the Republic Party of Premier Jacques Chirac, has represented the Provins region in Parliament since 1958, and held a number of ministeries since 1962.

Peyrefitte, 61, was justice minister from 1977 until 1981 when the Socialists won power. He had previously been environment minister and in 1976 headed a special gvernment commission on violence, criminality and delinquency.

$6.42 million stolen from post office

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Five gunmen forced post office employees to open the office safes, grabbed $6.42 million in cash and money orders and fled in a stolen van, police said.

Police said Sunday that three of the robbers were dressed as postal workers and that the van was the same type used by the postal service. They said the gunmen bound and gagged six employees at the post office, located at Palermo's main train station.

One police official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the robbery was believed the biggest in Sicilian history and was "certainly the work of professionals." He said the Mafia might be involved.

The haul included $5 million in cash and $1.42 million in postal money orders.

Police gave this account:

The robbers entered the post office at about 9 p.m. and asked for the head of the office, Salvatore Pileri, by name. They bound and gagged three clerks and forced Pileri at gunpoint to lead them to the vault room.

They ordered a clerk to open the safes. One gunman removed the videotape from the closed circuit television camera.

The robbers emptied the safes, tied up Pileri and two other clerks and fled in the van.

Police were notified of the robbery an hour later in an anonymous telephone call.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Swiss government freezes bank accounts linked to Iran arms deal

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss government today froze at least two Swiss bank accounts linked by U.S. investigators to the Iran-Contra arms deal and financing case.

Pierre Schmid, vice director of the Federal Office for Police Affairs, said the action was a precautionary measure while Swiss officials await a formal request by the United States for judicial assistance in the probe.

He said the freeze order took effect immediately and would remain in effect for one month, while Swiss officials await the U.S. request. The Swiss government cannot begin judical assistance proceedings without such a request.

Credit Suisse last week froze one account related to the Iranian arms deal on its own, and said it could not maintain the freeze indefinitely.

Swiss authorities said last week they could not provide any legal assistance to the U.S. government concerning the bank accounts unless they have evidence that criminal activity was involved.

Ethiopian ambassador defects

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Ethiopia's ambassor to Sweden, who is a former defense minister and air force chief, said today that he is defecting because of disagreements with his Marxist government.

Ambassador Taye Telahun called The Associated Press to say "I'm stepping down after 22 months as ambassador for Ethiopia due to disagreements with the government in Ethiopia."

Foreign Ministry press spokeswoman Ingrid Hjelt confirmed that Telahun, 54, a career air force officer who became his country's ambassador in Stockholm last year on Jan. 31, "has defected."

On Oct. 27, Ethiopian Foreign Minister Goshu Wolde told a news conference at the United Nations in New York that he was stepping down to protest what he called a growing dictatorship in his country.

Gary Hart meets with Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev met with U.S. Sen. Gary Hart today for talks expected to touch on arms control and human rights.

The official news agency Tass reported the meeting without giving details.

Hart arrived Sunday for a four-day visit, his second to the Soviet Union since his unsuccessful bid for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984.

In January, 1985, the Colorado senator met with Andrei A. Gromyko, who was then foreign minister. Gromyko now holds the mostly ceremonial title of president.

Conservative groups eyed as receivers of arms-sale proceeds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman is calling for an investigation of allegations that money siphoned from U.S. arms sales to Iran went to conservative groups boosting supporters of President Reagan's pro-Contra policy and targeted opponents with TV ads.

Rep. Mike Barnes, D-Md., said Sunday he would formally request today that the congressional committees being set up to investigate the Iran-Contra matter look into whether conservative U.S. groups got some of the weapons-sale proceeds, as was reported Sunday in The Sun newspaper of Lowell, Mass.

The newspaper did not identify the sources for its story.

"There are now rampant allegations that the monies spent against me and other opponents of the president on Nicaragua by these...groups may have come from the money we have now heard about (as being diverted) from the Iran arms sale," said Barnes, an outspoken opponent of Contra aid and one of the key targets of a pro-Contra televison campaign last spring.

Barnes, who was defeated in a bid to move to the Senate, said in a telephone interview that he had no independent information about the matter.

The Sun said the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, headed by Washington fund-raiser Carl Russell "Spitz" Channell, was among the groups receiving a total of $5 million in diverted funds.

Channell paid $1.5 million for a TV lobbying effort that promoted Reagan's pro-Contra policies, urging viewers to telephone Congress members who opposed the president, said Adam Goodman of the Baltimore-based Robert Goodman Agency, which produced the ads in 1985-86.

In addition, Channell's two affiliated political action committees bought $79,000 worth of election-related TV ads in four 1986 Senate races, and contributed $23,000 directly to a handful of political candidates.

Channell, who also sponsored U.S. speaking tours by Nicaraguan exiles, dismissed as fantasy the allegaton that any Iran arms-sale money went to his non-profit organization, his two PACs or his lobbying group called Sentinel.

"It's all private contributions," he said in an interview last week. He said he raised some $6 million this year for the Contra public awareness campaign.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, said Sunday he did not know whether pro-Contra money from Iranian arms sales went to media campaigns. "We just have no evidence of that at this point," he said.

Known for his ability to raise thousands of dollars through one-on-one solicitation of the wealthy, Channell also has participated in private efforts to support the anti-Sandinista rebels since Congress cut off financing for the Contras, according to sources involved in the Contra movement.

Channell said fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver North assisted his efforts to rally public and congressional support for Contra aid by providing pamphlets and documents on Central America. North, who invoked the Fifth Amendment last week rather than tell a House committee about his role in the Iran-Contra controversy, also spoke to groups from whom Channell solicited money.

Channell denied North played a big role, but The Miami Herald reported Sunday that North "supervised the financing and production" of Channell's pro-Contra effort.

"I have met with him several times. ...We were briefed by him twice. ...He doesn't know anything about domestic politics. I have never heard him in any of his briefings mention domestic politics," Channell said.

The Herald, attributing its information to sources involved in the campaign, said a person who worked with North told of him personally soliciting contributions.

The story quoted a March 1985 memo to North from a Channell subordinate: "Ollie. Very imp. Two people want to give major contribs ie 300,000 and up if they might have one quiet minute with the President." The story did not say whether the request was granted.

TV consultant Goodman said he attended two "briefings" by North with some Channell contributors but said North was not involved in the media campaign.

"North would get up in front of a number of people and give an update on what the situation was in Central America," said Goodman, adding that North did not engage in fund raising or political posturing at the events, which included lavish dinners at Washington's exclusive Hay-Adams Hotel.

Some contributors recalled attending such Washington sessions at Channell's invitation.

"Colonel North talked to us. ...I happen to think Colonel North is a fine young man," said C. Thomas Clagett Jr., of Washington, who gave $1,000 this year to Channell's political action committee, American Conservative Trust. He said he made a donation at the event he attended. "Obviously they wanted money," he said in a telephone interview. "I donate funds to causes I believe in."

As a Marine, North would be prohibited from engaging in any partisan politicking or fund raising.

Channell described his Contra ads as "issue-oriented" rather than related to the 1986 congressional elections.

Location of profits questionable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee, confounded in its efforts to find critical pieces of the Iran-Contra puzzle, will be trying to decide this week whether to keep its investigation going or suspend it until next year.

"I think we've pretty much resolved what happened during the transfer of arms to Iran, how it came about, who initiated it," said Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, a member of the panel. "Those kinds of questions, I think, we have a pretty clear picture of."

But committee has been stymied in answering the question of what happened to the profits from those sales.

"We haven't received a shred of testimony concerning the disposition of that money," Cohen said.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, after a preliminary inquiry made at President Reagan's request, said on Nov. 25 that profits from the arms sales went to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The committee was holding a business meeting late today to assess the status of the investigation. On Tuesday, the panel plans to hear from several witnesses, including CIA Director William Casey.

The committee then will decide whether it wants to call a series of top Cabinet-level witnesses, including Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan.

So far, though, the Senate Intelligence Committee, which has been pursuing the most detailed examination of the financial aspects of the deal of several Capitol Hill probes, has been unable to unravel the mystery.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the committee chairman, said Sunday, "It's like a jigsaw puzzle" and the committee has 95 of 100 pieces.

Appearing on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley," Durenberger said that with the testimony of Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter and Marine Lt. Col Oliver L. North, the committee would have the remaining pieces of the puzzle.

"There are two people in America who can solve this problem today: John Poindexter and Oliver North. Those two people know the facts," Durenberger said.

However, Poindexter, Reagan's former national security adviser, and North, fired as a key National Security Council aide, have declined to testify, citing their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, another principal figure in the controversy, also has cited his constitutional rights in declining to testify before the panel.

"We're just not in a position to know without the testimony of Secord, North or Poindexter," Cohen said.

In the absence of testimony about what happened to the money, the committee has "subpoenaed documents which may or may not be in existance," Cohen said, including possible notes taken during meetings by central figures in the deal.

If the committee is unable to find the documents it wants and still has been unable to get testimony laying out the financial part of the deal, Cohen said, "At that point we'd say, well, we may just have to continue on as a new Intelligence Committee next year, looking at whatever aspects we can" but realizing the major responsibility for the investigation will fall to a special committee that Senate leaders are expected to name Tuesday.

But Durenberger said, "When I look at the facts, I've come to the conclusion that we have all exaggerated their personal liability, of both those fellows. ...I don't think either of those fellows has anything to fear from the facts."

Majority oppose Contra aid

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Americans do not know which side the United States supports in Nicaragua, but six in 10 Americans oppose military aid to the Contras, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll taken before the White House disclosed that profits from arms sales to Iran were funneled to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Fifty-eight percent of the 1,251 adult Americans in the nationwide telephone poll knew the U.S. supports the Contras, the forces who are fighting the Nicaraguan government, but 42 percent did not know.

And while those who knew which side the U.S. backs were more likely to support military aid than those who did not know, majorities of both groups opposed aid.

In August, Congress approved a $100 million aid package for the Contras that would provide $70 million for arms and other military supplies.

Overall, 60 percent of the respondents in the Media General-AP poll opposed military aid, 19 percent supported it, and 21 percent were unsure.

Among those who opposed aid, 37 percent said the money should be used for solving domestic problems and 20 percent said the Nicaraguan conflict was not the business of the United States. The rest cited other reasons.

Among those who supported aid to the Contras, 44 percent said it was necessary to fight communism and 17 percent said it was needed to stop a threat to the United States.

The poll was conducted in mid-November, before disclosures by President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Nov. 25 that millions of dollars in profits from weapon sales to Iran had been diverted to the Contras by administration officials.

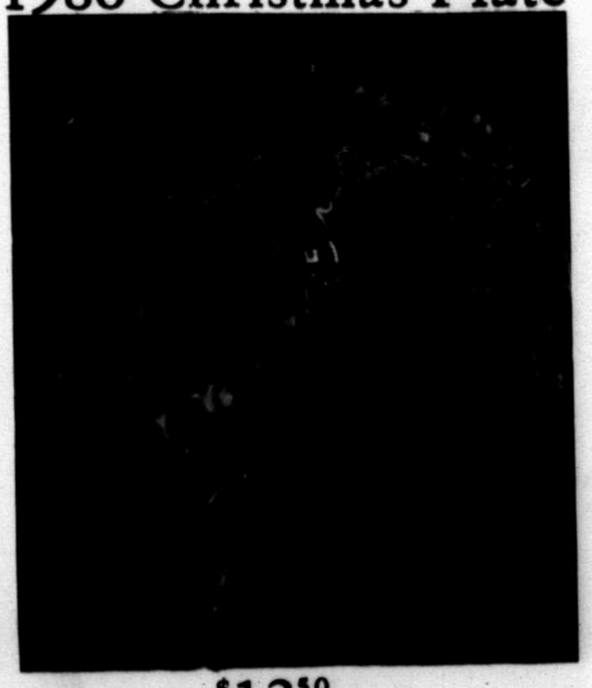

While most people opposed aid to the Contras, a 58 percent majority believed the security of the United States was threatened by communist governments in Latin America. And 49 percent of those who held that belief said the United States should try to overthrow communist governments, while 37 percent opposed such efforts. Fourteen percent were unsure.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,251 adults across the country Nov. 7-14. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,200 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.

Acid eats new car paint at major port

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Airborne acid is eating away at the paint on new cars as they pass through this city, endangering Jacksonville's status as the nation's No. 1 port for foreign automobiles.

"Everybody agrees there is a problem and we need to solve the problem," Mayor Jake Godbold said Thursday.

"It's sulfuric acid and it's coming from somewhere," said Vic McNair, executive vice president and general manager of World Cars Inc., an auto processing firm. "It's eating the paint right down to the bare metal."

McNair said the problem was forcing him to wash, wax and repaint hundreds of new cars, just off the boat, before turning them over to dealers.

BMW has decided no longer to ship its cars through Jacksonville, and other automakers have threatened to make the same move.

"We have had nightmares in what we've been going through," said Margie Foster, port representative for BMW. "We need to find a solution to it."

The acid is not a health hazard because the particles are too large to be inhaled, said Patricia Cowdery, director of the Jacksonville Department of Health, Welfare and Bio-Environmental Services.

"It is not the kind of particles that can cause cardio-respiratory kinds of problems," she said, but added that the pollution might cause minor nasal and skin irritation for brief periods of time.

The problem has been around since the late 1970s, but seemed to worsen this year, said C. Cliff Mendoza of the Jacksonville Port Authority.

An estimated 6 percent to 8 percent of the 520,000 vehicles entering the port each year are affected, forcing auto companies to spend $4 million over the past 10 years washing, polishing and repainting cars, said Godbold, who has appointed a special committee to look into the situation.

"I'm looking at a company going bankrupt painting cars," said McNair, who is repainting 343 foreign cars that were damaged in August. "When BMW pulled out, I decided to do whatever it takes to get someone's attention to what is happening here.

"How would you like to buy one of Margie's $40,000 BMW's that had been repainted?"

City officials say nearby industrial plants, generating stations and ships are responsible for some of the pollution, but that some may also come from as far away as the Ohio Valley.

If ships are responsible for much of the acid, the city must be careful in trying to control the pollution, Mendoza said. "Autos are 30 percent of (the port's) total business. They are critical to us. It is important to keep them here."

But if the city cracks down on emissions from ships "we also stand the chance of losing that portion of the trade," he added. "We want to be able to have our cake and eat it too. We want to keep the cars here, but we don't want to run off the ships."

Royce Lyles, managing director of the Jacksonville Electric Authority, told the mayor's committee it should be examining ways of keeping the fallout off the cars. The panel discussed possible solutions such as covering the cars with a protective wax.

"You are not going to stop the fallout," Lyles said.

"I think that's a very pragmatic approach," McNair said. "The polluters know who they are. If they can't stop it, we need to determine how we can live with their actions."

NATION IN BRIEF

Families of officers killed need continued support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police departments should provide counseling and continued contact for families of officers killed in the line of duty, according to a federally financed report.

Members of police families are sometimes perceived as being more prepared to deal with losses than others, but this is not so, according to the report released Sunday by the National Institute of Justice.

The report cited research showing that two-thirds of nearly 200 police departments that were surveyed lacked formal policies concerning a police officer's death.

Other recent research has found that 60 percent of the surviving spouses of slain police officers develop stress disorders.

The report urges law enforcement agencies to do more to assist families and friends of police officers who are killed, including continuing formal contact between the police department and families and ensuring that psychological counseling is available.

IMF debtors seek way out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nations in debt to the International Monetary Fund are seeking means to avoid imposing unpopular political measures required by IMF in exchange for much-needed cash.

Brazil, the Third World's biggest debtor, plans to ask creditor governments at a meeting next Thursday to delay payments on what it owes them. The government of President Jose Sarney has refused to take the usual step of making an agreement with the fund first.

The fund requires policy measures by the borrower to put it into better position to repay and its remedies are often politically hard for governments to take.

An example happened last week in Zambia, where the government received a $280 million loan from the IMF and was compelled to permit a 120 percent increase in the price of cornmeal.

The proposed huge price increase on the cornmeal, a staple in the people's diet, led to rioting last week, in which at least 15 people died. On Thursday, Zambia President Kenneth Kaunda withdrew the proposed increase.

Two die in plane crash

EL RENO, Okla. (AP) — A small airplane carrying three passengers crashed in Canadian County early Sunday night, killing two men and seriously injuring a third, the Oklahoma Highway Patrol said.

The single-engine Cessna, on its way from Altus to Oklahoma City, went down about 7 p.m. near El Reno, the patrol said. The airplane apparently bounced off Interstate 40 before winding up in a field about 150 yards north of the interstate.

Highway Patrol spokesman Lt. Stewart Meyer identified the victims as Ronald Lynn Harris, 30, of Yukon, who was piloting the plane, and Gary Lee Maloney, age unknown, of Oklahoma City.

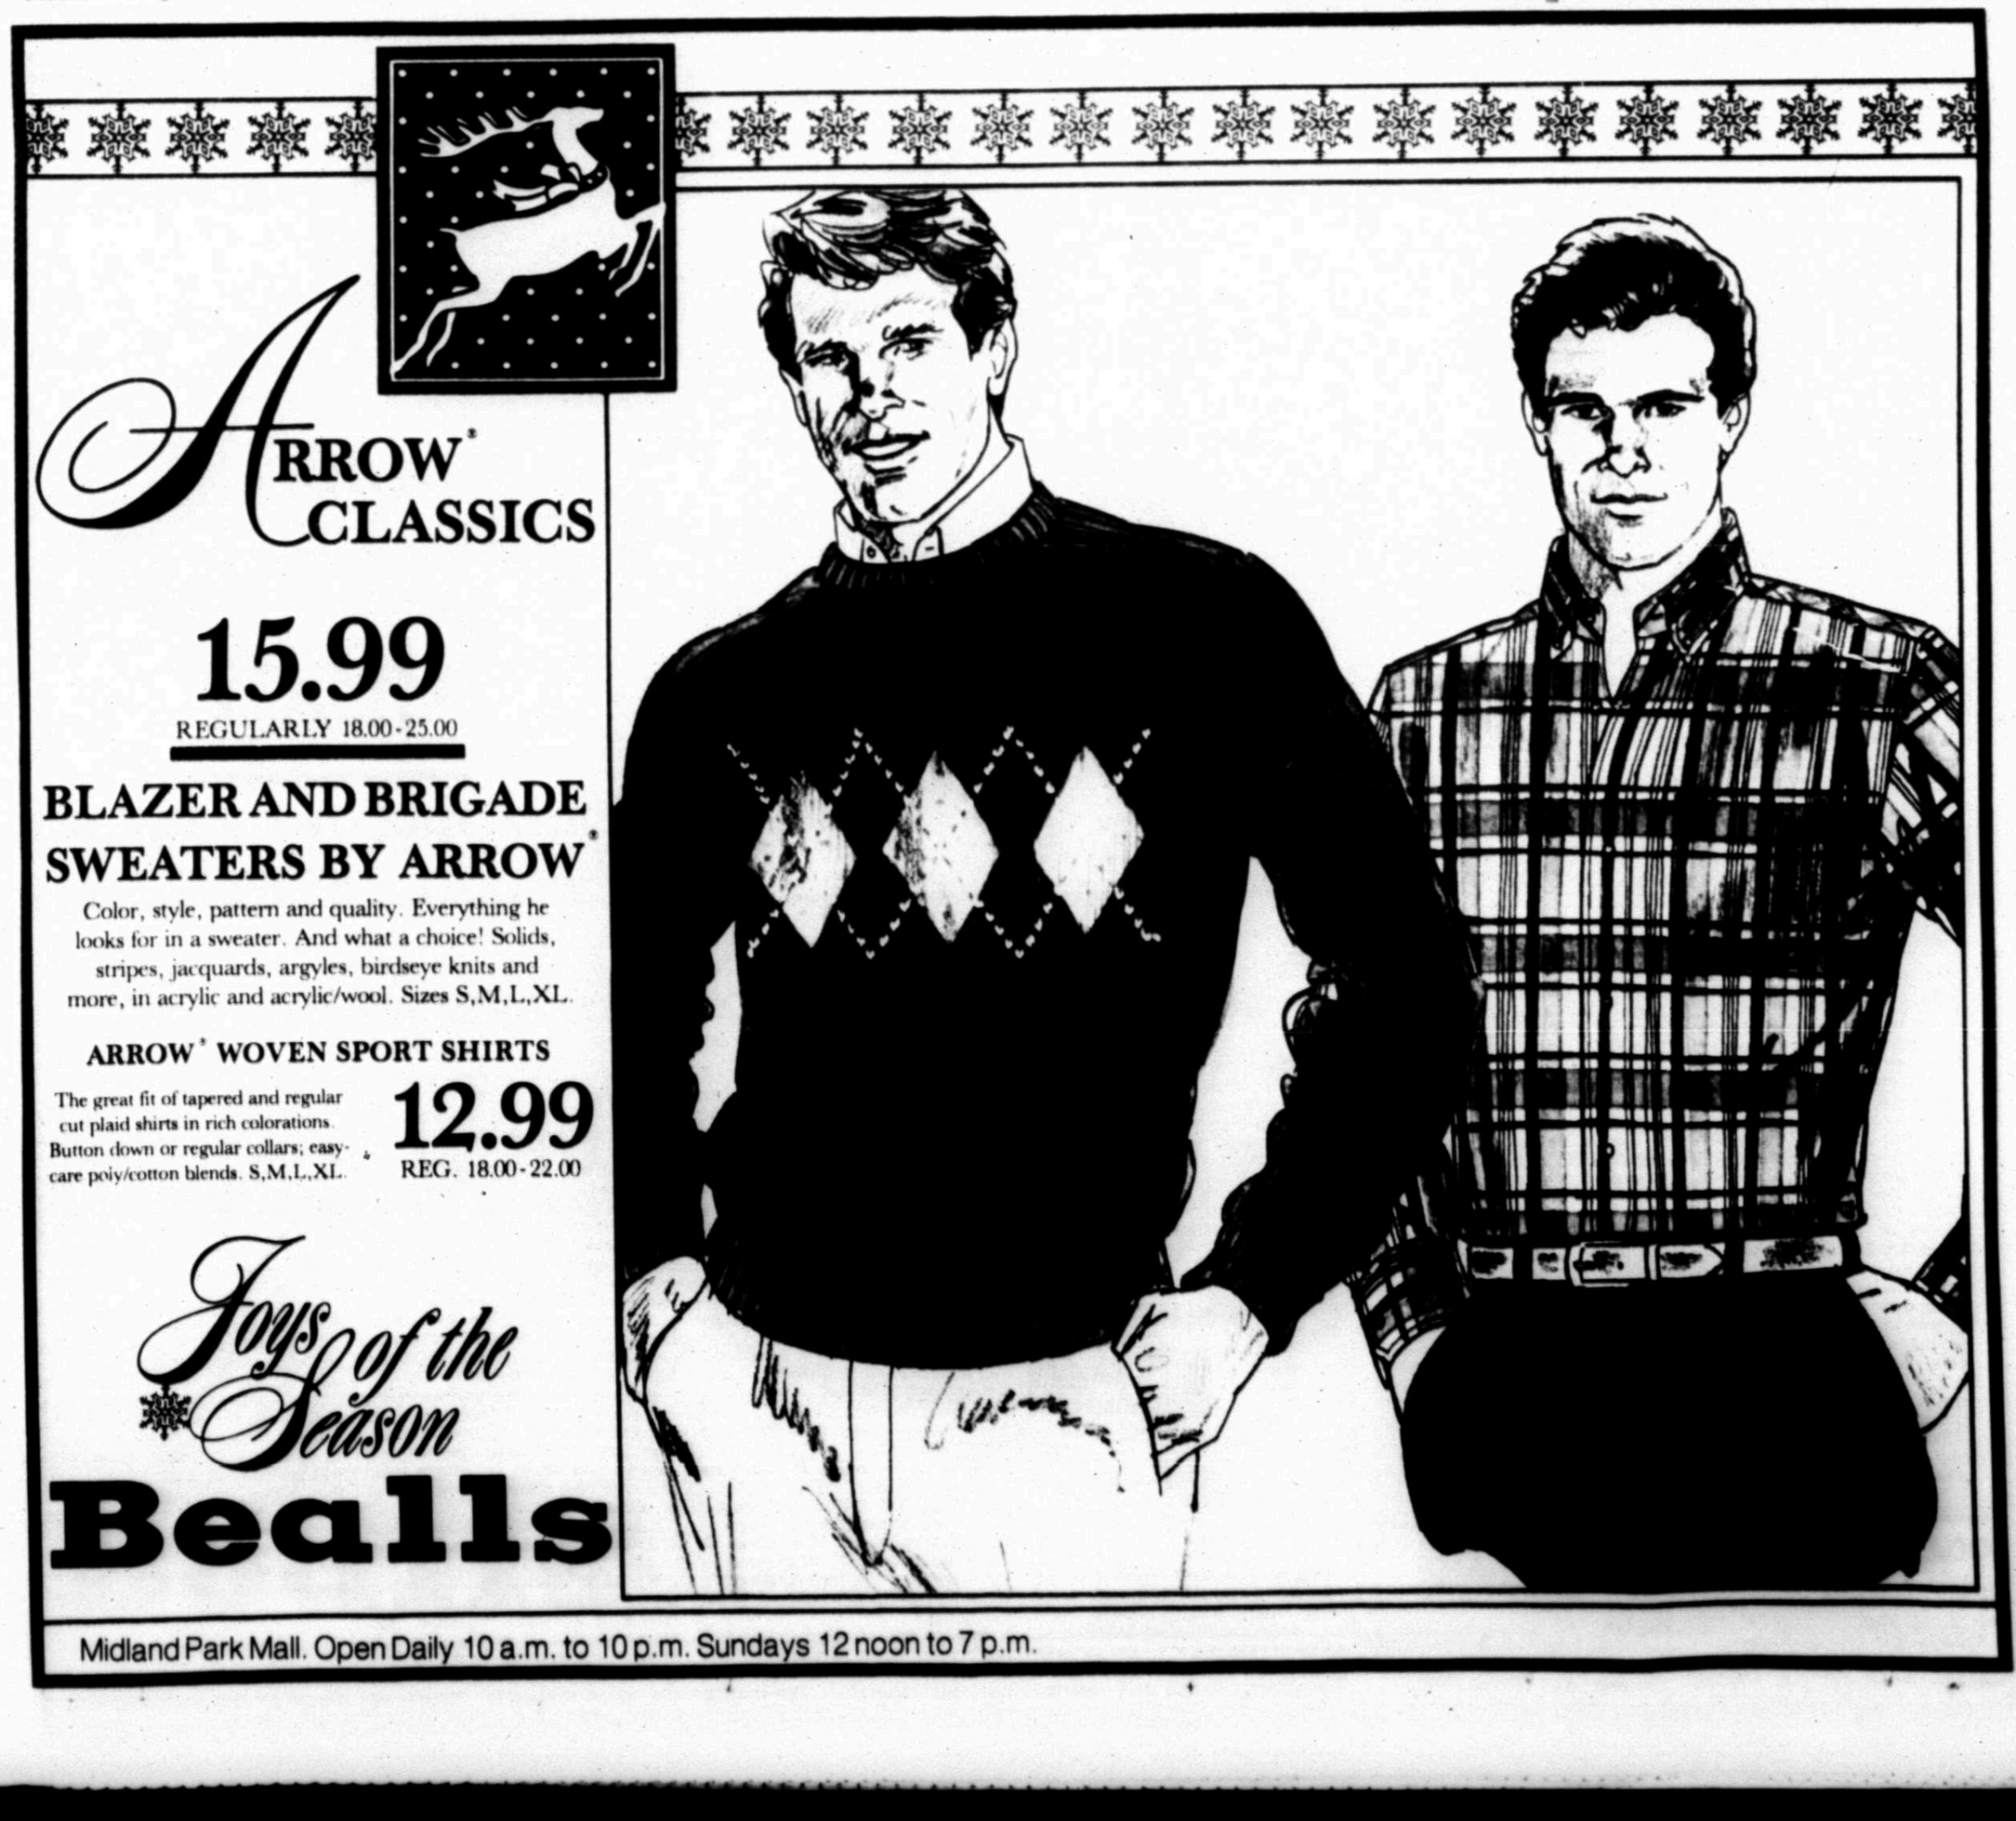

Gary Lee Smith, 31, of southwest Oklahoma City, was listed in serious condition at Baptist Medical Center in Oklahoma City with a broken leg and possible internal injuries, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Witnesses told authorities the plane touched down on the westbound lane of I-40. The plane was seen flying at a very low altitude "probably to avoid the weather," said Meyer.

Meyer said the plane had left the Quartz Mountain Lodge area north of Altus and was scheduled to land at Wiley Post Airport in northwest Oklahoma City, about 16 miles from where it crashed.

Clarence E. Page Airport is located less than three miles from the crash site, but authorities said no emergency landing had been requested.

International need

A monumental mining project underway in Communist China offers a striking illustration of how economic interests can take precedence over environmental concerns in many parts of the world.

With the assistance of Armand Hammer, the American oil millionaire, the Chinese government is starting work on an open-pit mine in barren Shanxi province which by next September will be producing coal at the rate of 15 million tons a year.

The mine will be spread over seven square miles and during its expectancy of 30 years will displace two billion cubic tons of soil. Although the site may appear as a minor wound on the 3,700,000 square miles of mainland China, its potential for disaster horrifies ecologists.

Open-pit or strip mining in the United States has always drawn fire from environmentalists. In those cases where it continues, the mining companies are under strict orders to restore the earth to its original contours. The havoc that will likely follow the Chinese project, however, resists restoration, and this in a country prone to such natural disasters as flood and earthquakes.

The U.S. and Canada are dismayed that in most international conferences on the environment, other nations are reluctant to give up industrial practices which endanger the planet. A case in point is the damage to the ozone layer caused by the emissions of chlorofluorocarbons. While North America is willing to curtail production of these chemicals, matching pledges are unobtainable from the rest of the world.

The unhappy fact is that in nations where economic interests are supreme, environmental concerns are conveniently put on hold — and forgotten.

That doesn't have to be the case in this instance, of course. The United States can help China by showing the way to a solution that will allow the mining project to continue without endangering the environment to such an extreme degree.

Without that kind of international cooperation, the environment likely will continue to take a backseat to the detriment of all those on earth.

Another View:
Mixed trade signs

We're not sure whether three consecutive declines in monthly U.S. trade deficits should be cheered as a turnaround or dismissed as mere short-term variations. Experts disagree. "We didn't turn the corner in the third quarter," says one. "The signs are very strong," says another, "that the turn has come."

But there is no doubt that any decline is better than an increase and that this fall the trade picture is at least temporarily better than before. Some symptoms of improvement are especially promising. Agricultural exports showed a big jump from September to October — lower-priced U.S. farm products sell well abroad and can undercut farm imports here. Manufactured exports have been increasing, too — but not more rapidly than manufactured imports. So whether the drop in deficits continues or falters, it accompanies growth in overall trade, not a recession.

If the foreign-trade symptoms encourage optimism, so do the likely causes of trade improvement. High on the list is a dollar much cheaper than two years ago relative to the currencies of major trading partners. Such a change works slowly, but eventually promotes exports by cutting the foreign price of U.S. goods. A cheaper dollar also inhibits imports by raising the dollar price of foreign goods. That sure effect may now be enhanced by the increased productivity and competitive vigor of U.S. businesses that have set their sights on world markets. If so, the three-month trade-deficit drop is apt to be a trend, not an aberration.

But factors that helped throw the nation's trade out of balance still exist — along with some that threaten to make imbalance worse. Huge federal budget deficits continue to soak up savings from around the world in order to finance U.S. consumption. Few can be confident of lasting growth in world trade and stability in world currencies until the United States convincingly gets a grip on its own overspending.

Likewise, the needed rapid growth of U.S. exports can too easily be blocked by trade barriers intended to keep imports out. Free and rising world trade is by far the best means to correct the unsustainable U.S. trade deficits of this decade. But trade patterns so badly out of balance cause pressures for protection that would distort trade even more.

We hope the recent small decline in U.S. trade deficits is the start of yearslong world-trade improvement. It will be if the United States and its trading partner manage national budgets and trade policies with an eye to international economic growth. If they don't, the improvement will be short-lived.

Policy goes too far

For your information there are PARENTS IN CONTROL of their children. From the school board's perspective, most of us are not accepting our parental responsibilities and, as a result, they are going to do it for us.

I am in favor of the MISD's drug policy as it relates to the school campus and extracurricular activities. However, the 24-hour surveillance policy infringes on my parental rights which I take very seriously.

If the present mentality that is being displayed by the board is allowed to continue, what will happen next? Will curfews, etc., be dictated by the board? They have stepped over the line and into my private affairs and, in my opinion, it is unconstitutional.

Parents and taxpayers please stop and reflect on what is happening. Our rights are being taken away. We must prevent it from happening now. Please show support for PARENTS IN CONTROL (PIC) — either anonymously or outwardly. PIC is made up of average citizens — not necessarily wealthy or with political clout — who are trying to correct an injustice against the students, teachers and more importantly the parents.

The majority of us are trying to be good, responsible parents. It isn't easy and sometimes we fail. However, it is my right as a parent to make decisions regarding the conduct of my child, and I resent unsolicited help. The school board is not the proper authority for handling 24-hour surveillance on extracurricular activity children. The board's actions are not only unconscionable, but in my opinion, unconstitutional.

Arms dealer got 'no help' from agents

WASHINGTON — A New York arms dealer was sure he could count on U.S. intelligence agencies to protect him if he skirted the law to help them get some Soviet weapons they wanted for study. But when he was arrested for trying to sell some rifles and ammunition to Poland as part of the scheme, his contacts hung him out to dry.

Jack Anderson

Solomon Schwartz, three other individuals and HLB Security Electronics Ltd. were indicted for the attempted sale of 500 Ruger automatic rifles and 100,000 rounds of ammo to Poland. Their defense is that the sale was a necessary element in the plan to obtain two Soviet T-72 tanks and some SAM-7 anti-aircraft missiles — and that the U.S. intelligence contacts knew it.

But in secret testimony submitted by federal prosecutors in New York, FBI and Defense Intelligence Agency officials insist they never authorized Schwartz to do anything illegal, although they admit discussing with him the plan to get the Soviet weapons.

Our associate Donald Goldberg has learned that Schwartz, in a detailed affidavit, named the names of the intelligence agents he met with and the dates and locations of the meetings.

Schwartz claims he was first approached by a "free-lance" CIA operative in November 1982, and told about the agency's interest in the state-of-the-art Soviet tanks. Schwartz traveled to Vienna and Warsaw and pursued the complex deal with Polish officials. The Poles insisted that U.S. arms would have to be part of the transaction, Schwartz says.

The arms dealer submitted a report on his trip to a CIA official in the agency's New York office through an intermediary. The CIA later handed the case off to the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Schwartz's claim that he had several meetings with DIA officials is confirmed by closed-door testimony. One meeting took place at DIA offices near Washington, and included two agency officials and a legal adviser. One of the officials was James Hetrick.

According to the Schwartz affidavit, Hetrick was well aware of the arms-for-Poland deal, and told Schwartz: "We take care of our own. We will never let you hang." But Hetrick has denied ever authorizing Schwartz to sell weapons to Poland.

Schwartz says he was given similar assurances of protection by FBI counterintelligence agents in New York who wanted his help in tracking Polish spies in the United States. The agents have admitted meeting with Schwartz, but denied sanctioning illegal activity.

Schwartz says that when he told one G-man that the plan might entail shipping arms to Poland, the agent told him that "it didn't hurt to get a little 'dirty' in this business," because it helped one's credibility.

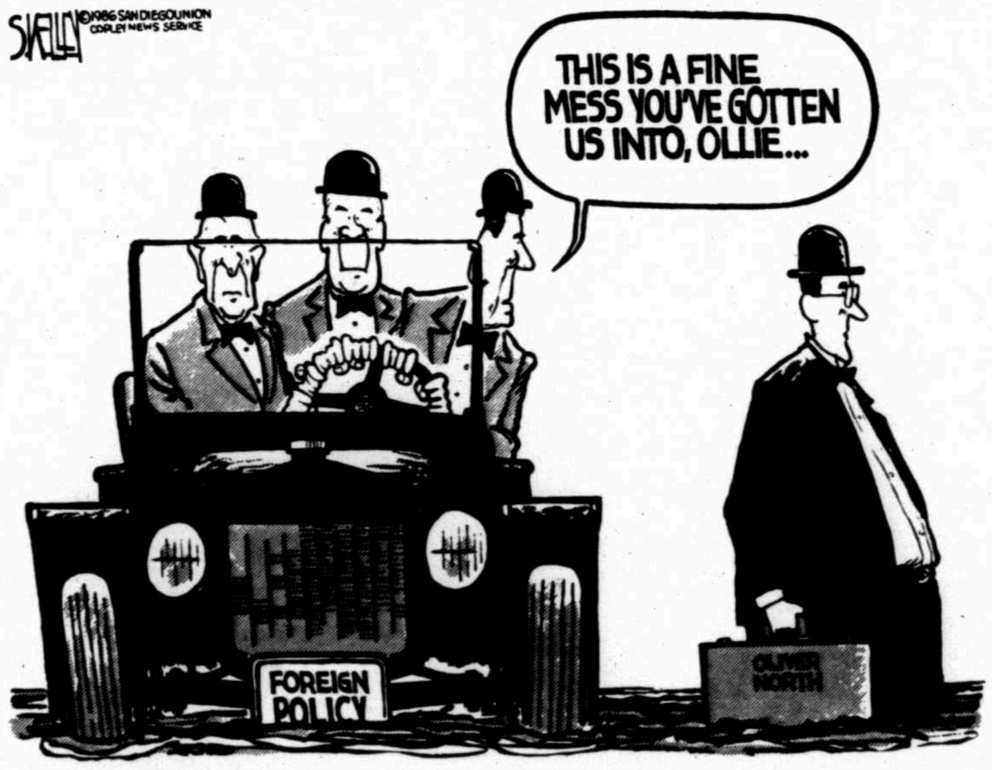

Schwartz swears he met with FBI agents at least five times, the first being on Aug. 23, 1983, at 26 Federal Plaza in New York City. There he was informed of the bureau's interest in information about Polish officials.

As the plot grew thicker, the meetings were more secret. Fearing that he might be under surveillance by Polish agents, Schwartz arranged to meet the G-men in out-of-the-way locations instead of their Federal Plaza office.

His final meeting with the FBI occurred at the Meadowlands, the sports complex across the river in New Jersey. It was then, Schwartz says, that he told the FBI that the Poles wanted U.S. weapons as part of the secret deal.

As it happened, it wasn't the Poles Schwartz had to worry about, but a government informant who was also a business rival of HLB Security Electronics. The informant stumbled onto evidence of the intricate Polish scheme while working for the Customs Service, and Schwartz and his co-defendants were indicted.

Diplomat's death blamed on Soviet beams

WASHINGTON — The death of senior career diplomat Walter Stoessel from leukemia at age 66 is blamed inside the U.S. government on illegal Soviet bombardment of the American Embassy in Moscow by microwave beams designed to intercept secret communications.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Absolute proof cannot be obtained that Soviet beams saturating the embassy were responsible for cancer cells that killed ex-Deputy Secretary of State Stoessel. But inexplicable health problems among embassy personnel (including Stoessel, who was ambassador from 1974 to 1976) have convinced American diplomats that the cancer was induced by the radiation. In the words of one top-level insider, "Walt was killed, pure and simple."

During his ambassadorship, the U.S. government sent furious protests to the Kremlin. After months of dispute, the Soviets finally ordered the KGB and other intelligence operations to tone down the microwave beams. By then it was too late for Walter Stoessel.

POLAND FEARS TEDDY

In contrast to the public explanation that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Christmas trip to Poland was being cancelled because of "a packed timetable," the communist regime privately informed the U.S. it feared the political consequences of his visit.

A statement read at the American Embassy in Warsaw to the U.S. Charge, John R. David Jr., charged that Kennedy's program "would be of an explicitly negative nature" — a reference to the senator's plans to meet with dissidents. "The visit might disrupt the process of national conciliation in Poland," the statement continued, "and have an adverse impact on prospects for improvement of relations between Poland and the U.S."

That frank admission suggests Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's regime had second thoughts after approving the Kennedy itinerary weeks ago and could not risk his visit turning into a focal point of popular discontent.

IRAN'S SHADOW

During his state visit here, President Mobutu of Zaire was privately given this warning: If his efforts to help Jonas Savimbi's civil war against the Marxist-Leninist regime of Angola gets him into trouble, he should not count on any help from the U.S.

That advice was a "caution" signal for Mobutu forced by the shambles of American policy caused by the Iran-contra scandal.

Although Mobutu has made Zaire almost indispensable for U.S. arms shipments to Savimbi's UNITA movement, he would not be involved if the U.S. had not pressured him to provide an arms channel into Eastern Angola. Now he is being told, in effect, that if the mission goes awry, the U.S. might have to disown not only its own role but Mobutu himself.

WHITE HOUSE GAG

White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes forced Education Under Secretary Gary Bauer to cancel a scheduled appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America" to oppose teenage sex clinics on grounds that the issue was too controversial.

Bauer was supposed to confront members of a National Academy of Sciences panel that recommended more sex education. President Reagan in closed meetings has vigorously supported Bauer's position. But Speakes had taken a pasting on the subject during a recent news briefing.

Only the night before, the White House refused to permit Bauer to go on CNN's "Crossfire" program to defend the president against New Republic editor Michael Kinsley. That fit chief of staff Donald T. Regan's policy that enough had been said by the White House at that point.

JUDICIAL POLITICS

Republican Sen. Slade Gorton, defeated for re-election because of a deal over federal judgeships, has enlisted the powerful help of Senate Republican leader Robert J. Dole to try to win his own nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Ironically, Gorton was a top-heavy favorite for a second term from Washington state until he agreed to vote for confirmation of conservative Daniel Manion to an appeals court only if President Reagan would nominate a Democratic homestate friend of Gorton's to be a district judge. When word of that deal got out, Gorton's campaign went into reverse.

Gorton's vote was essential to Manion's confirmation. But his friend, though nominated by Reagan, was never confirmed by the Senate. Presidential hopeful Dole is recruiting senators in Gorton's behalf, even though the 9th Circuit vacancy normally would go to a Californian.

Japan not likely to surrender in this 'war'

A waggish advertising executive once wrote a lovely book entitled, "From the Wonderful People Who Brought You Pearl Harbor." That was a slogan he suggested for a Japanese-made product. It was not accepted.

Charley Reese

For the benefit of those who are products of public education, I thought it would be a good idea to remind people that Japan did launch a surprise attack on the United States 45 years ago this month. Killed about 3,000 Americans as I recall, but that was only for starters.

Yes, the wonderful people who bring us Toyotas, Hondas, Nissans, and Sony-everythings once tried their fanatic best to blow us right out of the Pacific. They killed thousands of Americans — not to mention Filipinos, Koreans, Chinese, Vietnamese, British and assorted other peoples.

In the end we killed more of them than they killed of us. We are not fanatic or even militaristic, but we are pretty savage once someone pushes us too far. Today, when you mention Japan, kids think of Toyota and Honda. When I was growing up, mention of Japan meant Pearl Harbor, Guam, Corregidor, Wake Island, Midway, Guadalcanal, Peleliu, the Solomons, Iwo Jima, Coral Sea, the Bataan Death March, banzai, Jap, Tojo, fascist swine, and finally Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

No other indictment of public education is needed than the fact that not one out of 10 high school graduates can give you more than a blank look if you ask them what Bataan or Guadalcanal are.

There is no point in carrying grudges. The Japanese government that waged war against us no longer exists, though many of the people in the government and in the war effort are still around just as many of the Nazis and the Nazi-maker-possibles are still around in West Germany.

There is also no sense in pretending the war never happened or that the Japanese people have grown to love their conquerors. The truth is that the Japanese, by nature, are not overly fond of anybody who is not Japanese. The war left scars and bitter memories on both sides but far more in Japan because they got the worst of it.

I'm sure that behind the stoic faces of the Japanese industrialists, especially the older ones, there is a secret smile of vengeance as today they wage economic war far more successfully than they did on the battlefields four decades ago. Beyond Pearl Harbor, their military bombers never reached American cities, but their economic bombs have hit many a target.

Much about Japan and Japanese culture I admire. I have nearly a shelf of books by Japanese authors. Like most Americans, I own many Japanese products. True appreciation, however, means appreciation as is, not as imagined.

I worry that too many Americans — elected officials included — seem to have no memory of the past and not a lot of knowledge of the present. First, there is no such thing as friendship between countries. Secondly, whether a country is an ally or an enemy depends on the circumstances. Both alliances and enmities are always temporary. Thirdly, all peoples are what they are regardless of the politics of their governments.

We tend sometimes to be patronizing. Some Americans think because we imposed what we consider a benign occupation government on the defeated Japanese and "taught them about democracy" that why, heck, the little fellows just love us and if we get in a tight spot, why, sure, the Japanese will go out of their way to help us.

I wish there was a way to roll your eyes and shake your head in print.

In military combat, the Japanese almost never surrendered and they are not likely to do so in economic combat either. Nor are they ever likely to go to war on anybody's behalf but their own. Their concept of an alliance is that the United States will provide for their defense while they pursue their own economic objectives. Not that much different from Europe's idea.

Gullible people, however, should not blame the less gullible for taking advantage of them.

State's efforts to aid Contras seems to be 'drying up'

DALLAS (AP) — The Contra aid movement appears to be drying up because of the controversy surrounding the U.S.-Iran arms deal, according to Texans who have been involved in efforts to raise money for the contras.

The Freedom's Friends organization, headed by evangelist William Murray, has gathered 10,000 Christmas presents at an Addison warehouse for Contra families, but he said he is having trouble getting them shipped.

The Texans for a Free Nicaragua organization has 30,000 pounds of medical supplies and clothing for the rebels stored in Grand Prairie. One of its leaders, Gary Bennett, said the group doesn't have the money to ship the supplies.

Officials of civilian rebel support groups say they've had difficulty raising contributions and have faced myriad financial woes since reports that up to $30 million from the U.S.-Iran arms deal was diverted to Nicaraguan Contras.

They say the controversy has damaged public confidence in the private organizations and created a climate of paranoia among government officials who once made themselves available to help civilian groups direct humanitarian aid to the rebels.

In the Dallas-Fort Worth region, traditionally a leading outpost for civilian aid to the anti-Sandinista forces, some rebel-assistance groups say contributions have plummeted, stalling shipments of food, clothing and medical supplies.

Murray's organization, which has raised more than $250,000 to ship $1 million in items ranging from antibiotics to crutches, reports that donations are down by almost 40 percent this month.

Murray said he is asking the Agency for International Development to ship 2,000 presents he received from Japan and hundreds more from across the United States on a military cargo plane bound for the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa. The material then would be trucked to rebel base camps.

Previously, private contra support groups were able to ship nonlethal supplies by including them in shipments transported through a special State Department Nicaraguan Office of Humanitarian Assistance, created when Congress approved $27 million in humanitarian aid in 1985.

Now the Nicaraguan humanitarian assistance office is being phased out.

Officials of rebel support groups also say they're hard-pressed to get any help from Washington since reports that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the fired National Security Council aide, diverted millions of dollars to the contras.

Murray and Bennett said that before the Iran arms controversy they appeared separately at Washington receptions in which North, a leading spokesman for the contra cause, appealed to their organizations to continue private efforts on behalf of the contras.

But the controversy is eating away at conservative groups that have sought to help the contras.

"I'm not trying to bash anybody," said ret. Army Capt. D.L. "Pappy" Hicks, until recently the Head of the Civilian Military Assistance organization in Texas. "But I wouldn't have messed with Iran as long as Khomeini is alive."

Hicks, a veteran of the Korean and Vietnam wars, has journeyed several times into the Honduran jungle, delivering food, clothing and medical supplies for displaced Nicaraguan Indians battling the Sandinistas on the eastern coast of Nicaragua. He's transported several wounded soldiers and ill children to the United States for treatment.

During previous visits to deliver supplies, both Hicks and Bennett acknowledged they also advised rebels on jungle fighting tactics and the care and maintenance of firearms.

'Adopt highway' program works almost too well

ATLANTA, Texas (AP) — Texas' "adopt a highway" program has been almost too successful in Northeast Texas, officials say.

The program might be out of business soon except for the fact that Northeast Texas has so many highways.

The state program, which allows area civic groups to "adopt" a specific section of roadway and help keep the road litter-free, has signed up six times more civic groups this year than in 1985.

The number is still growing, according to Orville Ball, vegetation manager of Atlanta's District 19 office of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Ball said only 12 organizations had signed up in December of 1985, only three months after the program began. But the idea has mushroomed, and 76 organizations now participate in the program throughout the region.

About 20 more organizations are in the process of entering the program, Ball said, and new inquiries come in continually.

He said he believes the adoption program will continue to gain momentum in 1987 because "I don't think interest has peaked out yet."

The program has room to grow because there are a lot of highways to adopt within the huge district that includes Bowie, Camp, Cass, Harrison, Marion, Morris, Panola, Upshur and Titus counties, Ball noted.

Ball said the adoptions are "pretty well spread around the district," but organizations in some counties, such as Harrison and Bowie counties, have responded especially well to the program.

Cloudy days to continue

Permian Basin residents should take caution when traveling to and from work as dense fog is expected to blanket the Permian Basin tonight and Tuesday morning, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Forecasters say tonight will be partly cloudy, becoming cloudy with fog after midnight. The low will be in the upper 30s, with light southeasterly winds.

Tuesday calls for cloudy skies and dense fog in the morning, becoming partly cloudy in the afternoon. The high will be in the low 60s, with light southeasterly winds.

Sunday's high of 59 was 18 degrees cooler than the record of 77, set on the same date in 1933. The morning low of 38 was 21 degrees warmer than the record of 17, set in 1951.

STATE

A high-pressure ridge in the Southeast pumped moisture from the Gulf of Mexico, prompting light rain and drizzle today across much of the eastern half of Texas.

The National Weather Service issued a travelers' advisory for the South Plains this morning as patches of dense fog lowered visibilities to near zero in some areas. Fog was shrouded parts of North Central and Southwest Texas.

The weather service said rain was generally east of a line from Del Rio in Southwest Texas to Paris in the northeast. Clouds blanketed North and South Texas as well as western sections, while skies were clear in the Trans-Pecos and High Plains.

A chance of rain was forecast in East and South Texas today, becoming mostly sunny in North Central Texas and partly sunny in south parts of West Texas by the afternoon.

NATION

Fog reduced visibility today in the Plains and Mississippi Valley as scattered snow and rain fell in parts of the nation's northern tier of states, but most of the country enjoyed tranquil weather.

A storm system over Washington produced scattered rain and snow. There were scattered flurries across northern portions of the Great Lakes and New England. Travelers advisories for locally dense fog were posted in central and north-central Kansas and parts of west Texas. Dense fog was also reported across western Montana, Iowa and Oklahoma.

Today's forecast called for rain from east Texas across the lower Mississippi Valley and the Tennessee Valley into Georgia and South Carolina. Rainshowers should be scattered along the northern Pacific Coast. Light rain or snow flurries should dot portions of the northern Intermountain region.

A local anesthetic is administered to the left eye of 73-year-old James T. Crumley who is to have a cataract removed and a specially-designed optically ground lens implanted by Dr. Sheets.

Seeing eye to eye

ODESSA — In 1980, James T. Crumley, then 67-years-old, began noticing halos around street lights and was having a little trouble locating golf balls. Realizing something was not right, he went to the Sheets Eye Clinic in Odessa for an examination.

He received bad news and good news from the examination.

The bad news he heard from Dr. John Sheets was that he had cataracts developing in the lenses of both eyes. The good news was that surgery to remove the cataracts and implant an intraocular plastic lens would return his vision to normal, or near-normal, but the operation would have to wait until the cataracts "ripened."

Monday, Dec. 8, six years after he first noticed his sight deteriorating, Crumley, who has lived in Midland 23 years with his wife Katherine, of 47 years, underwent about two hours of pre-operation examinations preparatory to having the cataract removed from his left eye the next day.

The examinations checked Crumley's level of vision prior to surgery, including the eyeball pressure, curvature of the cornea, visual acuity in bright sunlight, the condition of the retina and what is generally referred to as the optic nerve.

Ralph Cockrell, a doctor of optometry, explained that the "optic nerve" is not really a nerve at all, but really a part of the front part of the brain that is directly attached to the eyeball. Because of this, he said, the replacement of an entire eye is not possible.

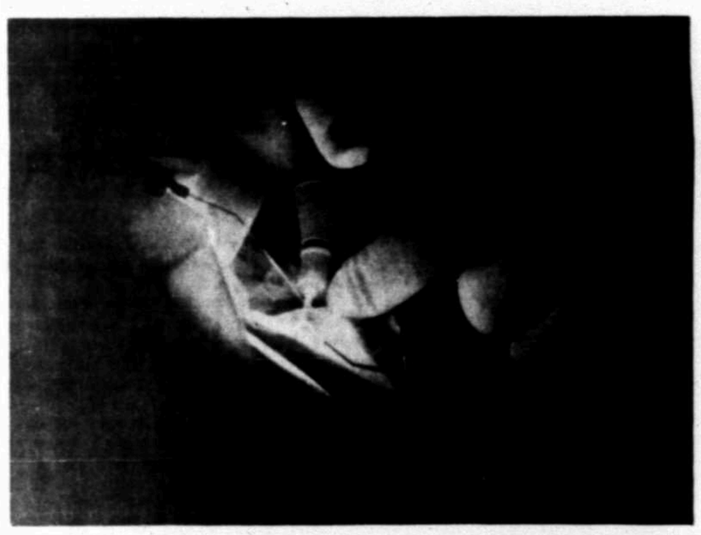

Cockrell also checked Crumley's vision to determine the degree of sight he could expect to have following the operation.

About 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, nurses and medical assistants began prepping Crumley for the operation. A low dosage general anesthetic was administered intravenously that put him to sleep for a few minutes so a local anesthetic could be put in his eye.

About two hours later he was wheeled into one of two fully-equipped operating rooms of The Eyes of Texas, the surgical unit of the Sheets ophthalmological-optometric complex, located at 155 East Loop 338, just south of U.S. Highway 80.

About 11:30 a.m., Dr. Sheets, looking through a microscope, made the first incision in Crumley's left eye and began emulsifying the cataract-clouded lens so a delicate suction device could withdraw it.

Please see EYES, Page 2B

The cataract-hardened lens in Crumley's left eye was first dissolved or emulsified, by Dr. Sheets, so a small suction device could be used to extract the lens prior to insertion of a new plastic lens.

A few minutes after surgery, to remove the cataract-hardened lens that had been impairing Crumley's vision, the 73-year-old retired Texas Electric Service Co. employee drank a cup of coffee and talked with his wife. The Crumley's reside at 4612 Erie.

Fertilizer plant cited as water pollutant, gets OK to expand operations

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An Odessa fertilizer manufacturer — once cited as one of the worst water polluters in the state — has reached an agreement with the Air Control Board for a permit to expand its operations.

Air Board spokesman Walter Bradley said today that parties representing Permian Chemical Co., several nearby firms and the board agreed late Friday to a permit that will allow Permian to add a fourth reactor at its existing hydrochloric acid manufacturing plant on Pronto Road. Permian will also receive a permit for the outdoor storage of potassium chloride. The company uses both chemicals in the production of potassium sulphate, a fertilizer.

Hearings on the request — originally scheduled for June 30, postponed five times and expected to begin Monday — have been postponed indefinitely, Bradley said.

Elvis Lee, senior vice president and general manager of Permian, said the Air Board and the neighboring firms — Texaco Inc., Bo Digby & Co, Chem Central Corp. and Penatek Industries — had been concerned about possible health effects and corrosion of metals from emissions of hydrochloric acid.

"We have satisfied both the Air Control Board and all of our neighbors that we are capable and can control the emissions," Lee said Monday.

In November 1985, the Texas Water Commission cited Permian on its first list of the worst water polluters in Texas. Commission records showed Permian was regularly out of compliance with its solid waste permits and had contaminated nearby groundwater.

At the time Lee said he was "real surprised" that the commission included Permian on its list because the company had been working with the commission to straighten out its problems. None of the pollution involved hazardous wastes, and Lee said Permian has not been named on any subsequent commission lists.

Car salesman helps woman save ranch

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — An auto salesman was so moved by the plight of a 68-year-old woman about to lose her ranch to foreclosure that he has started a door-to-door fund drive to help her.

May Hess bought the ranch near the Northeast Texas community of Talco in the 1950s, but she could lose it unless she raises $5,400 by Jan. 2 to pay a loan she took out to help a sick brother who has since died.

"This lady is as helpless as anybody can be," Bill Stewart says. "I was born and raised on a farm in Petersburg, Texas, and I've known hard times. But not near as hard as what she's gone through."

Mrs. Hess, who is unable to walk without using an aluminum walker or wheelchair, has only her monthly Social Security check of more than $400 and her 30 cows, which have been quarantined until May, she said.

"I'm just counting the days now until January. They aren't many," she said, adding that if she loses the ranch, "I don't care what happens to me."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

The following books are now available for loan from the Midland County Public Library.

"Amadeus: A Mozart Mosaic," by Herbert Kupferberg. Was Antonio Salieri, arch rival of Mozart in the court of Joseph II of Austria, really aware of the greater genius of the young upstart composer? Was Mozart's early death a result of slow poisoning by aqua toffana, or merely kidney trouble, the traditional explanation? It is true that Mozart composed most of his work "in his head," then committed the work to paper almost letter-perfect, without the use of a keyboard? These and many other mysteries are addressed in a highly readable, lucid biography, for anyone whose curiosity was aroused by the award-winning movie, "Amadeus."

"Halliwell's Harvest," by Leslie Halliwell. Halliwell is a familiar name to millions of movie fans for several excellent reference works, notably "Halliwell's Film Guide" and "Halliwell's Filmgoers Companion." In his latest effort, 84 of the author's personal favorites are profiled, which, with only a few exceptions, hearken back to the golden era between 40 and 50 years ago. Halliwell says this about the classic movies now being released on videocassette or broadcast on cable. "Their reshowing may seem to be one of the greatest blessings to society bestowed by television; more people will enjoy them on the box in the corner than ever paid to see them in cinemas on their first release." Halliwell quotes from the script and selects a representative still for each of his selections, which range from "G Men" to "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Father of the Bride" to "Woman in the Window."

"Love, Medicine, and Miracles," by Bernie S. Siegel, M.D. "In these pages is found a precious secret, that of health and well-being," extols Norman Vincent Peale. Indeed, Dr. Siegel's book is a message of hope to those with cancer or other serious illnesses. Siegel is a pediatric and general surgeon in New Haven, Conn., where he started ECaP (Exceptional Cancer Patients) in 1978. There, patients undergo a specialized form of individual and group therapy, where the self-healing powers of mind over body are stressed. Siegel does not claim that the "heal thyself" technique always works, but he shows dramatic examples from his own practice. As he states, "If you are suffering from some life-threatening disease, the change I'm talking about may save your life or prolong it well past medical expectations." He also suggests that the life-affirming principles can help the healthy person to avoid illness.

"A Country Year," by Sue Hubbell. In this unusual and reflective book, somewhat reminiscent of Thoreau's "Walden," we relive the experiences of a 50 year-old beekeeper who makes her home on a small peninsula between two rivers in the Ozark Mountains. Ms. Hubbell's 102-acre farm and apiary is home to thousands of bees, birds, frogs, snakes, and insects which she observes with a naturalist's eye and a writer's appreciation of detail. As author Lewis Thomas says of her work, "These brief pieces of Sue Hubbell's life will keep you reminded that the world is still made of wild things, enchanting and engrossing. ...Get in on the fun."

"Seven Summits," by Dick Bass and Frank Wells, with Rick Ridgeway. You are 51 years old, have successful oil and ranching businesses in Texas, and have just dabbled in mountain climbing, but have hardly achieved amateur standing. So what do you decide to do to make life more challenging? Climb the highest mountain on each of the seven continents of the world, of course. Dick Bass, the Texas, and Frank Wells, the southern Californian, had each shared that private fantasy long before they would meet and decide to make their dream a reality. Writer and veteran climber Rick Ridgeway does a superb job of narrating their joint adventure, as they successfully overcome the odds and climbed Aconcagua in South America, Everest in Asia, McKinley in North America, Kilimanjaro in Africa, Elbrus in Europe, Vinson in Antartica, and Kosciusko in Australia.

Coyotes pin ranchers into seeking means for killing them

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Coyotes have Texas sheep and goat ranchers howling for help in the form of federal approval of a killer chemical banned 14 years ago.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower could decide this week whether to seek a lifting of the ban on Compound 1080, but some argue the answer is to use other methods — from guard dogs to donkeys.

Environmental activists argue that the reasons the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency banned the poison in 1972 remain valid today.

"Compound 1080 is not safe, by any stretch of the imagination," said Dede Armentrout of Austin, regional director for the National Audubon Society.

"Forty years of using poisons has proven these methods don't effectively control the predators," the Humane Society's regional office in Corpus Christi said in an "Action Alert" publication.

Under the policy being considered, ranchers could put collars carrying 1080 on goats and sheep. Because coyotes attack the jugular vein, they would get a fatal dose of the compound.

"It's another tool that's very effective, and certainly there is no doubt in my mind that there will be no impact on the environment by the use of the livestock protection collar," said Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who is executive director of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

For about 20 years, until the 1972 EPA ban, Compound 1080 was used by ranchers to kill coyotes that decimate their herds. In 1985, the federal agency said states could ask for approval of tightly controlled 1080 programs.

If Hightower favors use of the chemical, Texas would become the second state, after Wyoming, to seek approval. The policy would not allow aerial application or other uses of 1080.

The agriculture department has received about 200 letters concerning the compound.

Misuse of 1080 by ranchers was the prime reason it was banned in 1972, according to Roger Mulder, Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman. Some ranchers laced dead sheep or goats with 1080 and left them for coyotes at "bait stations." Eagles and other predators were consuming it.

The agriculture department is convinced coyotes are causing some problems, but not as major as some ranchers are claiming.

"We think they've got predator problems. It's not necessarily a coyote problem," Mulder said.

He said the agency will develop a predator control program, with or without 1080 collars. Most of the control methods have drawbacks.

Fences can help but cost up to $6,000 a mile and coyotes are adept at digging under them.

Spring-loaded devices that eject a cyanide pellet into coyotes are available, but they also can dispense the pellet into other animals.

State trappers are available to track and kill coyotes, but there are too few to go around.

The agency has high hopes for the use of dogs trained to protect herds by scaring off coyotes. In 1978, Durwood Kelley of Lampasas became among the first in Texas to use Great Pyrenees dogs to protect his goats.

"We bought the pups and eight months later we put them out and, dog gone, the predators stopped killing," he said.

Coyotes almost ate Kelley out of business by feasting on his goats. But now, thanks to Caesar, Calamity and the other dogs, the coyotes dine elsewhere.

"They bark once an hour or so. They say, 'We're here,'" he said of his seven dogs that protect 200 goats.

The biggest problem is persuading ranchers that a dog can be their best friend. Stray dogs are almost as much of a problem as coyotes.

"People are slow to catch on to this," Kelley said. "I know I was. Here you fought dogs all your life, then to buy a dog doesn't seem to make sense. But it works."

Further west, near Mountain Home, Joan and Perry Bushong use guard donkeys to protect their sheep and goats. Mrs. Bushong said she is not sure how the donkeys do the job, but they have made a difference.

"What we figure the donkeys do is kick and possibly bite," she said.

EYES

Less than a hour later he was dressing to go home, with instructions to return to the new Sheets Eye Clinic at Cuthbert and Andrews Highway Wednesday for his first post operation examination.

The Midland eye clinic, opened to accommodate the many patients who have traveled to Odessa in the past, is as fully-equipped as the Odessa clinic.

Dr. Sheets said he fully expected Crumley's distance vision to return to normal, probably close to 20/20, within a few days after the operation. He may have to be fitted for glasses for reading purposes, other than that, his vision will be normal, the doctor said.

The reason Crumley will not require the aid of glasses for normal activities is that the lens implanted by Sheets is optically designed to return the patient's vision to as near-normal as possible. The particular lens used in this instance, described as a closed loop design, was designed by Sheets.

Crumley, who retired from Texas Electric Service Co., after "36 years, two months and 15 days when I was 65," says now he golfs at Hogan Park "as often as the weather allows.

He and his wife are birdwatchers and watch birds "anywhere there's water and trees," Mrs. Crumley said.

'Polite' bank robber returns to scene

DALLAS (AP) — A bank robber who employees described as polite but firm said he returned to the institution because a teller gave him too many small bills in an earlier heist.

"You gave me too many $1 bills last time," an employee of the Allied Bank of Dallas quoted the suspect as saying. "I don't want that many ones. Do it right this time."

Police said the robber, a pot-bellied man about 35 years old, then watched Friday as the teller filled a bag with about $5,000 and noted "in a very polite voice" that he had partners in the parking lot and to "please wait" for him to make his getaway.

Employees told officers that the suspect never showed a gun and said to the teller, "It's Christmas so I won't shoot you."

Police said they believe the suspect was the same one who held a gun on a teller at the bank on Nov. 13 and escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

In that robbery, the suspect nearly collided with a bank employee while making his hasty exit. The employee said she paid close attention to the man because he did not say "excuse me" when he nearly bumped into her.

At least 1,200,000 traffic accidents each year—fatal and nonfatal—can be traced to alcohol, according to the National Safety Council.

Clear plastic window shade grips, sold at hardware stores, can be slipped over the edge of a car's sun visors so dirty fingers won't soil the visor fabric.

Chronic squeaking of disc brakes may be due to hard spots on the lining. Replacing the lining or resurfacing the disc should correct this.

If your car is hesitating on acceleration, suspect carburetor trouble. Fuel filter may be clogged, so that the engine is running too lean.

Anti-theft devices—special locks and alarms—do cut the incidence of auto theft, enough to earn a premium discount from some insurers.

Holidays 'charging' forward

NEW YORK (AP) — 'Tis the season to charge now and pay later. But if you plan ahead you won't be snowed in when the bills arrive in January.

Now's the time to determine the best way to finance holiday purchases and make arrangements to meet all your bills. Yet, if the extra burden of holiday spending has buried you too deep in debt, it's not too late to seek professional counseling.

For those shoppers who plan to pay with credit cards instead of cash, the inevitable bills will include the high cost of financing that credit, unless they pay promptly. At an average interest rate of 18.5 percent, it's an expensive convenience.

With 70 percent of those who use credit cards paying only a portion of their monthly bills, there will be an estimated $152.6 billion in outstanding debt on all charge cards at the end of 1986, according to the Bankcard Holders of America, a consumer group in Washington, D.C.

Nonetheless, the 105.5 million Americans who have credit cards — with an average of 6.9 cards apiece — will keep charging and paying the price.

"You have to learn how to use credit and make it work for you, rather than you working for it," advises Luther Gatling, president of Budget and Counseling Service Inc. (BUCCS), a New York organization that offers debt management programs for people caught in the credit crunch.

CNB Graphic

IF YOU'RE RINGING up hefty Christmas charges, read the fine print when your bills arrive, before simply paying the minimum amount, he says. You may be able to start saving money immediately by paying off the accounts with the highest financing charges, while carrying over the debt on the lower interest accounts.

Take a look at other ways to get lower interest rates rather than automatically using the store or bank's extended payment policy, Gatling says.

"A lot of people have savings they don't want to touch, but you can get a lower interest rate if you take a passbook loan against your savings," he says. "Plus, you're more likely to pay it back quickly, because it's your money."

See how much cash equity you can borrow against your life insurance policy, and at what rate, he says.

The new tax law that goes into effect in January will kill the deduction for consumer interest payments and thus make credit even more expensive, says Elgie Holstein, director of the Bankcard Holders of America. But, there are ways around that too, he says.

The interest on a home equity loan, for example, will still be deductible and can be used to pay off credit card debt, Holstein says.

Now's also a good time to shop around for a credit card with a lower interest rate to save money under the new regulations, he says.

BANKS IN TEXAS, Arkansas, Connecticut and the state of Washington all have ceilings that keep interest rates at 10 to 15 percent.

Yet using credit to pay for a lifestyle you cannot afford can lead to trouble, Gatling warns. Here are some danger signs:

- Are you taking a MasterCard advance to pay your Visa bill?
- Do you pay your bills later and later each month, barely meeting the deadline?
- Do you pay only the creditor who's pressuring you the most?
- Do you use credit for everyday expenses like groceries?

If so, it may be time to get rid of some of those credit cards and make no new charges until you can pay off existing bills and get your finances under control.

Cutting back on non-essentials like dinners out may be enough to trim spending for some. But for those who still can't meet their monthly minimum payments and fear they're getting swamped, a credit counselor can help.

Look in the Yellow Pages for a local nonprofit agency, or check with the National Foundation for Consumer Credit in Silver Spring, Md., which has 256 debt management chapters nationwide.

A counselor will map out a strict budget and help you stick to it. They will negotiate an affordable monthly rate of payment with your creditors.

IF YOU FEEL the urge to spend is a deeper seated problem, there are therapists who specialize in the compulsion.

Janet Damon, a Brooklyn psychotherapist, counsels shopaholics with behavior modification, peer support, and relaxation techniques.

She offers some simple advice: If you can't afford to buy someone a present, invite them to dinner or make a homemade gift.

Christmas gift packing, shipping part of regular holiday routine

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

Twelve rules for packing and shipping the 12 days of Christmas:

■ 1. Shop by phone before you ship by mail. There is a considerable range in costs between various shippers, but there are other significant differences, too: speed of delivery, convenience, various restrictions and limitations.

■ 2. If you're using the U.S. Postal Service — among the least expensive options — you'd better get moving. Deadlines for surface mail to most destinations outside the continental United States have already passed.

Within the continental United States, allow 10 days delivery time for parcel post, barring weather delays.

There will be no delivery Dec. 25, except for Express Mail in cities with special delivery service.

■ 3. To avoid standing in line at the post office, mail your packages in the morning or mid-afternoon, or try a contract post office at a neighborhood shop or other business.

The Postal Service customer service department can give you the address of the nearest contract station.

■ 4. To save money, take advantage of the U.S. Postal Service book rate. Not only books, but audio and videotapes and motion-picture film of 16mm or less can be sent by this inexpensive route.

No personal communication may be included, however, and book rate packages do travel slowly.

■ 5. All shippers restrict the weight and size of packages they carry, but these restrictions vary widely. The U.S. Postal Service says odd-sized packages take longer to deliver because they don't fit into mail-processing equipment.

For United Parcel Service, the maximum weight is 70 pounds and the maximum size is a cumulative 108 inches (see No. 6). Purolator Courier won't carry anything more than 125 pounds, 72 inches in length or 120 inches in width.

Trailways and Greyhound buses can't accommodate anything more than 100 pounds, 5 feet in length or a cumulative 141 inches (both do take skis, however).

■ 6. To figure cumulative size, stand the package on its long end and measure top to bottom, as if you were figuring your height from head to toe. Then measure around the package at its widest point, as though measuring your waist or hips.

Multiply the two figures to get the cumulative measurement.

■ 7. Be sure to ask about pick-up and delivery procedures and charges.

Some carriers charge for pick-up or offer a discount if you bring the package to their headquarters.

Some, such as United Parcel Service, Federal Express and Purolator, offer delivery at the other end; others, such as the bus delivery services, generally do not.

■ 8. Don't forget insurance. U.S. parcel post prices include $500 worth of insurance. Most private carriers include insurance in their basic fee up to a certain maximum, usually about $250.

If you're sending something very valuable via private carrier, you must state the value and buy added insurance — usually about 50 cents per $100 of value.

■ 9. When it comes to wrapping paper, string, Scotch tape and strength of will won't do. Use sturdy cardboard shipping boxes and nylon-reinforced strapping tape or 2-inch transparent tape.

The boxes you send will be pushed, stacked, stamped, thrown, bumped along conveyor belts, perhaps even dropped. Make sure they are packed well enough to come through it all in good shape.

■ 10. If you're sending anything delicate, consider having a professional do the packing.

Try one of the many mail-receiving services that have sprung up in recent years. They have the proper packing materials and know just how to pad things to prevent breakage.

Charges for packing vary from about $1.50 to $5, depending on the size of the item and its delicacy.

■ 11. If you're determined to do it yourself, try the box-within-a-box technique.

Find a box that's just a bit larger than the item you're sending. In box No. 1, nestle the item in plastic foam pellets, crumpled newspaper or popped popcorn (some people swear by it).

Then, nestle box No. 1 in more pellets or whatever inside a second box, substantially larger than the first.

If the package is to be mailed, use thick, indelible black ink to write the address, and don't forget the ZIP code and your own address.

■ 12. Remember that most shippers will be closed on Christmas Day, and some won't be open Christmas Eve, either.

Don't count on next-day delivery to get you out of trouble if you're still shopping on Christmas Eve.

DEAR ABBY

Cary Grant's trademark: Style

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: A few years ago, Carrie Dolan, a bright young reporter for The Wall Street Journal, was assigned to interview Cary Grant, who was in the San Francisco area for one of his rare lecture appearances. She began her article this way:

"Recently, I was alone in an elegant hotel suite with Cary Grant. My life has not been wasted.

"Sure, it was a Sunday morning, and we only had coffee. And actually we were alone for only a few minutes while his wife went downstairs to mail a letter. It doesn't matter. There are only two good reasons to become a reporter: to help change the world or to meet Cary Grant.

"Mr. Grant is perhaps the only living man who can inspire lust in any red-blooded American girl — and her mother and her grandmother. He was the one Mae West invited to come up and see her sometime. Mr. Grant is 80 years old. I am 24. It doesn't matter."

Cary Grant, who was every bit as good as he looked, deserved to live a long and rewarding life, and when it ended, to exit peacefully, swiftly and mercifully. And he did — on Nov. 29, just seven weeks before what would have been his 83rd birthday. Not a bad score. He couldn't have written a better ending himself. And the timing was just about perfect.

Over the last half-century, Cary Grant had probably more imitators than any other star of the stage or screen. Not only was he devastatingly handsome, he had a style all his own. The way he walked and talked and moved was unmistakably Cary Grant. Both on the screen and off, he was charming, witty and debonair.

Cary Grant was a superstar in every sense of the word. He wore his stardom with grace and dignity, and for all his fame and adoration, he remained miraculously unspoiled.

When Cary Grant was approached by a publisher and told he could name his own price for his autobiography, Grant replied, "Only half of my life belongs to me; the other half belongs to those with whom I shared it."

He quit making movies more than 20 years ago by choice, but in recent years he made occasional appearances in theaters around the country, billed simply as "A Conversation With Cary Grant." He didn't need much advertising. One small ad would appear in the local newspaper, and the house was immediately sold out. Everywhere he played, he received a standing ovation for simply walking out on the stage. He had no routine; he just sat perched on a long-legged stool in the middle of a bare stage with the spotlight beamed on his famous face, and for an hour and a half he would answer questions from the audience. They loved it. And so did he.

Cary Grant closed his "conversation" with a piece he called "A Meditation," clearly stating that he did not know who wrote it, but it expressed his own sentiments about growing older. And here it is:

"Now Lord, you've known me a long time. You know me better than I know myself. You know that each day I am growing older and someday may even be very old, so meanwhile please keep me from the habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion.

"Release me from trying to straighten out everyone's affairs. Make me thoughtful, but not moody, helpful but not overbearing. I've a certain amount of knowledge to share; still it would be very nice to have a few friends who, at the end, recognized and forgave the knowledge I lacked.

"Keep my tongue free from the recital of endless details. Seal my lips on my aches and pains: They increase daily and the need to speak of them becomes almost a compulsion. I ask for grace enough to listen to the retelling of others' afflictions, and to be helped to endure them with patience.

"I would like to have improved memory, but I'll settle for growing humility and an ability to capitulate when my memory clashes with the memory of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that on some occasions I may be mistaken.

"Keep me reasonably kind; I've never aspired to be a saint ... saints must be rather difficult to live with ... yet on the other hand, an embittered old person is a constant burden.

"Please give me the ability to see good in unlikely places and talents in unexpected people. And give me the grace to tell them so, dear Lord."

Adults' scientific literacy doubted

Copley News Service

In the good old U.S.A. — where computer software designers boast they lead the world in innovation, space scientists say it's possible to make nuclear missiles obsolete and researchers have almost doubled the lifespans of laboratory animals — scientific literacy among American adults has taken a nosedive, says Dr. John Miller, the director of Northern Illinois University's Public Opinion Laboratories.

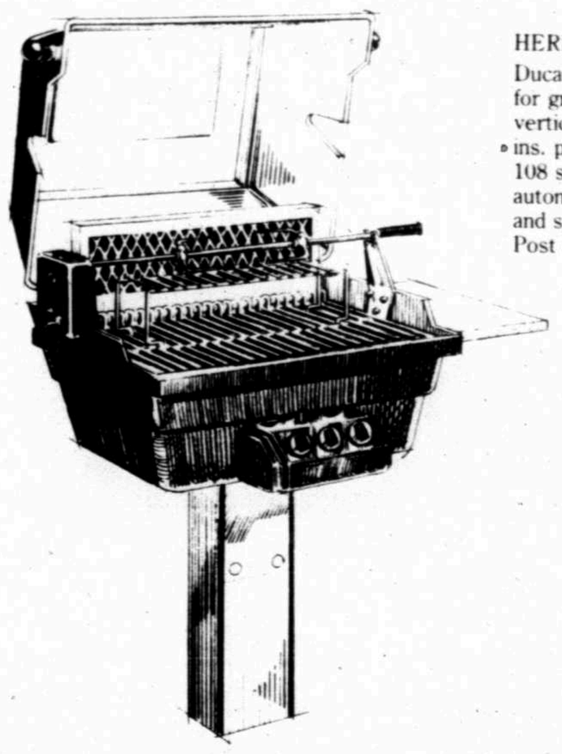

Miller says the percentage of the U.S. population that understands recent science processes, vocabulary and how science and technology actually affect their society has declined from the 7 percent low in 1979 to a new low of 5 percent.

Fertilizer plant cited as water pollutant, gets OK to expand operations

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An Odessa fertilizer manufacturer — once cited as one of the worst water polluters in the state — has reached an agreement with the Air Control Board for a permit to expand its operations.

Air Board spokesman Walter Bradley said today that parties representing Permian Chemical Co., several nearby firms and the board agreed late Friday to a permit that will allow Permian to add a fourth reactor at its existing hydrochloric acid manufacturing plant on Pronto Road. Permian will also receive a permit for the outdoor storage of potassium chloride. The company uses both chemicals in the production of potassium sulphate, a fertilizer.

Hearings on the request — originally scheduled for June 30, postponed five times and expected to begin Monday — have been postponed indefinitely, Bradley said.

Elvis Lee, senior vice president and general manager of Permian, said the Air Board and the neighboring firms — Texaco Inc., Bo Digby & Co, Chem Central Corp. and Penatek Industries — had been concerned about possible health effects and corrosion of metals from emissions of hydrochloric acid.

"We have satisfied both the Air Control Board and all of our neighbors that we are capable and can control the emissions," Lee said Monday.

In November 1985, the Texas Water Commission cited Permian on its first list of the worst water polluters in Texas. Commission records showed Permian was regularly out of compliance with its solid waste permits and had contaminated nearby groundwater.

At the time Lee said he was "real surprised" that the commission included Permian on its list because the company had been working with the commission to straighten out its problems. None of the pollution involved hazardous wastes, and Lee said Permian has not been named on any subsequent commission lists.

Car salesman helps woman save ranch

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — An auto salesman was so moved by the plight of a 68-year-old woman about to lose her ranch to foreclosure that he has started a door-to-door fund drive to help her.

May Hess bought the ranch near the Northeast Texas community of Talco in the 1950s, but she could lose it unless she raises $5,400 by Jan. 2 to pay a loan she took out to help a sick brother who has since died.

"This lady is as helpless as anybody can be," Bill Stewart says. "I was born and raised on a farm in Petersburg, Texas, and I've known hard times. But not near as hard as what she's gone through."

Mrs. Hess, who is unable to walk without using an aluminum walker or wheelchair, has only her monthly Social Security check of more than $400 and her 30 cows, which have been quarantined until May, she said.

"I'm just counting the days now until January. They aren't many," she said, adding that if she loses the ranch, "I don't care what happens to me."

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARY

The following books are now available for loan from the Midland County Public Library.

"Amadeus: A Mozart Mosaic," by Herbert Kupferberg. Was Antonio Salieri, arch rival of Mozart in the court of Joseph II of Austria, really aware of the greater genius of the young upstart composer? Was Mozart's early death a result of slow poisoning by aqua toffana, or merely kidney trouble, the traditional explanation? It is true that Mozart composed most of his work "in his head," then committed the work to paper almost letter-perfect, without the use of a keyboard? These and many other mysteries are addressed in a highly readable, lucid biography, for anyone whose curiosity was aroused by the award-winning movie, "Amadeus."

"Halliwell's Harvest," by Leslie Halliwell. Halliwell is a familiar name to millions of movie fans for several excellent reference works, notably "Halliwell's Film Guide" and "Halliwell's Filmgoers Companion." In his latest effort, 84 of the author's personal favorites are profiled, which, with only a few exceptions, hearken back to the golden era between 40 and 50 years ago. Halliwell says this about the classic movies now being released on videocassette or broadcast on cable. "Their reshowing may seem to be one of the greatest blessings to society bestowed by television; more people will enjoy them on the box in the corner than ever paid to see them in cinemas on their first release." Halliwell quotes from the script and selects a representative still for each of his selections, which range from "G Men" to "Goodbye Mr. Chips," "Father of the Bride" to "Woman in the Window."

"Love, Medicine, and Miracles," by Bernie S. Siegel, M.D. "In these pages is found a precious secret, that of health and well-being," extols Norman Vincent Peale. Indeed, Dr. Siegel's book is a message of hope to those with cancer or other serious illnesses. Siegel is a pediatric and general surgeon in New Haven, Conn., where he started ECaP (Exceptional Cancer Patients) in 1978. There, patients undergo a specialized form of individual and group therapy, where the self-healing powers of mind over body are stressed. Siegel does not claim that the "heal thyself" technique always works, but he shows dramatic examples from his own practice. As he states, "If you are suffering from some life-threatening disease, the change I'm talking about may save your life or prolong it well past medical expectations." He also suggests that the life-affirming principles can help the healthy person to avoid illness.

"A Country Year," by Sue Hubbell. In this unusual and reflective book, somewhat reminiscent of Thoreau's "Walden," we relive the experiences of a 50 year-old beekeeper who makes her home on a small peninsula between two rivers in the Ozark Mountains. Ms. Hubbell's 102-acre farm and apiary is home to thousands of bees, birds, frogs, snakes, and insects which she observes with a naturalist's eye and a writer's appreciation of detail. As author Lewis Thomas says of her work, "These brief pieces of Sue Hubbell's life will keep you reminded that the world is still made of wild things, enchanting and engrossing. ...Get in on the fun."

"Seven Summits," by Dick Bass and Frank Wells, with Rick Ridgeway. You are 51 years old, have successful oil and ranching businesses in Texas, and have just dabbled in mountain climbing, but have hardly achieved amateur standing. So what do you decide to do to make life more challenging? Climb the highest mountain on each of the seven continents of the world, of course. Dick Bass, the Texas, and Frank Wells, the southern Californian, had each shared that private fantasy long before they would meet and decide to make their dream a reality. Writer and veteran climber Rick Ridgeway does a superb job of narrating their joint adventure, as they successfully overcome the odds and climbed Aconcagua in South America, Everest in Asia, McKinley in North America, Kilimanjaro in Africa, Elbrus in Europe, Vinson in Antartica, and Kosciusko in Australia.

Coyotes pin ranchers into seeking means for killing them

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Coyotes have Texas sheep and goat ranchers howling for help in the form of federal approval of a killer chemical banned 14 years ago.

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower could decide this week whether to seek a lifting of the ban on Compound 1080, but some argue the answer is to use other methods — from guard dogs to donkeys.

Environmental activists argue that the reasons the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency banned the poison in 1972 remain valid today.

"Compound 1080 is not safe, by any stretch of the imagination," said Dede Armentrout of Austin, regional director for the National Audubon Society.

"Forty years of using poisons has proven these methods don't effectively control the predators," the Humane Society's regional office in Corpus Christi said in an "Action Alert" publication.

Under the policy being considered, ranchers could put collars carrying 1080 on goats and sheep. Because coyotes attack the jugular vein, they would get a fatal dose of the compound.

"It's another tool that's very effective, and certainly there is no doubt in my mind that there will be no impact on the environment by the use of the livestock protection collar," said Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who is executive director of the Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers Association.

For about 20 years, until the 1972 EPA ban, Compound 1080 was used by ranchers to kill coyotes that decimate their herds. In 1985, the federal agency said states could ask for approval of tightly controlled 1080 programs.

If Hightower favors use of the chemical, Texas would become the second state, after Wyoming, to seek approval. The policy would not allow aerial application or other uses of 1080.

The agriculture department has received about 200 letters concerning the compound.

Misuse of 1080 by ranchers was the prime reason it was banned in 1972, according to Roger Mulder, Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman. Some ranchers laced dead sheep or goats with 1080 and left them for coyotes at "bait stations." Eagles and other predators were consuming it.

The agriculture department is convinced coyotes are causing some problems, but not as major as some ranchers are claiming.

"We think they've got predator problems. It's not necessarily a coyote problem," Mulder said.

He said the agency will develop a predator control program, with or without 1080 collars. Most of the control methods have drawbacks.

Fences can help but cost up to $6,000 a mile and coyotes are adept at digging under them.

Spring-loaded devices that eject a cyanide pellet into coyotes are available, but they also can dispense the pellet into other animals.

State trappers are available to track and kill coyotes, but there are too few to go around.

The agency has high hopes for the use of dogs trained to protect herds by scaring off coyotes. In 1978, Durwood Kelley of Lampasas became among the first in Texas to use Great Pyrenees dogs to protect his goats.

"We bought the pups and eight months later we put them out and, dog gone, the predators stopped killing," he said.

Coyotes almost ate Kelley out of business by feasting on his goats. But now, thanks to Caesar, Calamity and the other dogs, the coyotes dine elsewhere.

"They bark once an hour or so. They say, 'We're here,'" he said of his seven dogs that protect 200 goats.

The biggest problem is persuading ranchers that a dog can be their best friend. Stray dogs are almost as much of a problem as coyotes.

"People are slow to catch on to this," Kelley said. "I know I was. Here you fought dogs all your life, then to buy a dog doesn't seem to make sense. But it works."

Further west, near Mountain Home, Joan and Perry Bushong use guard donkeys to protect their sheep and goats. Mrs. Bushong said she is not sure how the donkeys do the job, but they have made a difference.

"What we figure the donkeys do is kick and possibly bite," she said.

EYES

Less than a hour later he was dressing to go home, with instructions to return to the new Sheets Eye Clinic at Cuthbert and Andrews Highway Wednesday for his first post operation examination.

The Midland eye clinic, opened to accommodate the many patients who have traveled to Odessa in the past, is as fully-equipped as the Odessa clinic.

Dr. Sheets said he fully expected Crumley's distance vision to return to normal, probably close to 20/20, within a few days after the operation. He may have to be fitted for glasses for reading purposes, other than that, his vision will be normal, the doctor said.

The reason Crumley will not require the aid of glasses for normal activities is that the lens implanted by Sheets is optically designed to return the patient's vision to as near-normal as possible. The particular lens used in this instance, described as a closed loop design, was designed by Sheets.

Crumley, who retired from Texas Electric Service Co., after "36 years, two months and 15 days when I was 65," says now he golfs at Hogan Park "as often as the weather allows.

He and his wife are birdwatchers and watch birds "anywhere there's water and trees," Mrs. Crumley said.

'Polite' bank robber returns to scene

DALLAS (AP) — A bank robber who employees described as polite but firm said he returned to the institution because a teller gave him too many small bills in an earlier heist.

"You gave me too many $1 bills last time," an employee of the Allied Bank of Dallas quoted the suspect as saying. "I don't want that many ones. Do it right this time."

Police said the robber, a pot-bellied man about 35 years old, then watched Friday as the teller filled a bag with about $5,000 and noted "in a very polite voice" that he had partners in the parking lot and to "please wait" for him to make his getaway.

Employees told officers that the suspect never showed a gun and said to the teller, "It's Christmas so I won't shoot you."

Police said they believe the suspect was the same one who held a gun on a teller at the bank on Nov. 13 and escaped with an undetermined amount of money.

In that robbery, the suspect nearly collided with a bank employee while making his hasty exit. The employee said she paid close attention to the man because he did not say "excuse me" when he nearly bumped into her.

Steer This Way

By Jim Morris

At least 1,200,000 traffic accidents each year--fatal and nonfatal--can be traced to alcohol, according to the National Safety Council.

Clear plastic window shade grips, sold at hardware stores, can be slipped over the edge of a car's sun visors so dirty fingers won't soil the visor fabric.

Chronic squeaking of disc brakes may be due to hard spots on the lining. Replacing the lining or resurfacing the disc should correct this.

If your car is hesitating on acceleration, suspect carburetor trouble. Fuel filter may be clogged, so that the engine is running too lean.

Anti-theft devices--special locks and alarms--do cut the incidence of auto theft, enough to earn a premium discount from some insurers.

Holidays 'charging' forward

CNS Graphic

NEW YORK (AP) — 'Tis the season to charge now and pay later. But if you plan ahead you won't be snowed in when the bills arrive in January.

Now's the time to determine the best way to finance holiday purchases and make arrangements to meet all your bills. Yet, if the extra burden of holiday spending has buried you too deep in debt, it's not too late to seek professional counseling.

For those shoppers who plan to pay with credit cards instead of cash, the inevitable bills will include the high cost of financing that credit, unless they pay promptly. At an average interest rate of 18.5 percent, it's an expensive convenience.

With 70 percent of those who use credit cards paying only a portion of their monthly bills, there will be an estimated $152.6 billion in outstanding debt on all charge cards at the end of 1986, according to the Bankcard Holders of America, a consumer group in Washington, D.C.

Nonetheless, the 105.5 million Americans who have credit cards — with an average of 6.9 cards apiece — will keep charging and paying the price.

"You have to learn how to use credit and make it work for you, rather than you working for it," advises Luther Gatling, president of Budget and Counseling Service Inc. (BUCCS), a New York organization that offers debt management programs for people caught in the credit crunch.

IF YOU'RE RINGING up hefty Christmas charges, read the fine print when your bills arrive, before simply paying the minimum amount, he says. You may be able to start saving money immediately by paying off the accounts with the highest financing charges, while carrying over the debt on the lower interest accounts.

Take a look at other ways to get lower interest rates rather than automatically using the store or bank's extended payment policy, Gatling says.

"A lot of people have savings they don't want to touch, but you can get a lower interest rate if you take a passbook loan against your savings," he says. "Plus, you're more likely to pay it back quickly, because it's your money."

See how much cash equity you can borrow against your life insurance policy, and at what rate, he says.

The new tax law that goes into effect in January will kill the deduction for consumer interest payments and thus make credit even more expensive, says Elgie Holstein, director of the Bankcard Holders of America. But, there are ways around that too, he says.

The interest on a home equity loan, for example, will still be deductible and can be used to pay off credit card debt, Holstein says.

Now's also a good time to shop around for a credit card with a lower interest rate to save money under the new regulations, he says.

BANKS IN TEXAS, Arkansas, Connecticut and the state of Washington all have ceilings that keep interest rates at 10 to 15 percent.

Yet using credit to pay for a lifestyle you cannot afford can lead to trouble, Gatling warns. Here are some danger signs:

- Are you taking a MasterCard advance to pay your Visa bill?
- Do you pay your bills later and later each month, barely meeting the deadline?
- Do you pay only the creditor who's pressuring you the most?
- Do you use credit for everyday expenses like groceries?

If so, it may be time to get rid of some of those credit cards and make no new charges until you can pay off existing bills and get your finances under control.

Cutting back on non-essentials like dinners out may be enough to trim spending for some. But for those who still can't meet their monthly minimum payments and fear they're getting swamped, a credit counselor can help.

Look in the Yellow Pages for a local nonprofit agency, or check with the National Foundation for Consumer Credit in Silver Spring, Md., which has 256 debt management chapters nationwide.

A counselor will map out a strict budget and help you stick to it. They will negotiate an affordable monthly rate of payment with your creditors.

IF YOU FEEL the urge to spend is a deeper seated problem, there are therapists who specialize in the compulsion.

Janet Damon, a Brooklyn psychotherapist, counsels shopaholics with behavior modification, peer support, and relaxation techniques.

She offers some simple advice: If you can't afford to buy someone a present, invite them to dinner or make a homemade gift.

Christmas gift packing, shipping part of regular holiday routine

By WANDA A. ADAMS
Hearst News Service

Twelve rules for packing and shipping the 12 days of Christmas:

■ 1. Shop by phone before you ship by mail. There is a considerable range in costs between various shippers, but there are other significant differences, too: speed of delivery, convenience, various restrictions and limitations.

■ 2. If you're using the U.S. Postal Service — among the least expensive options — you'd better get moving. Deadlines for surface mail to most destinations outside the continental United States have already passed.

Within the continental United States, allow 10 days delivery time for parcel post, barring weather delays.

There will be no delivery Dec. 25, except for Express Mail in cities with special delivery service.

■ 3. To avoid standing in line at the post office, mail your packages in the morning or mid-afternoon, or try a contract post office at a neighborhood shop or other business.

The Postal Service customer service department can give you the address of the nearest contract station.

■ 4. To save money, take advantage of the U.S. Postal Service book rate. Not only books, but audio and videotapes and motion-picture film of 16mm or less can be sent by this inexpensive route.

No personal communication may be included, however, and book rate packages do travel slowly.

■ 5. All shippers restrict the weight and size of packages they carry, but these restrictions vary widely. The U.S. Postal Service says odd-sized packages take longer to deliver because they don't fit into mail-processing equipment.

For United Parcel Service, the maximum weight is 70 pounds and the maximum size is a cumulative 108 inches (see No. 6). Purolator Courier won't carry anything more than 125 pounds, 72 inches in length or 120 inches in width.

Trailways and Greyhound buses can't accommodate anything more than 100 pounds, 5 feet in length or a cumulative 141 inches (both do take skis, however).

■ 6. To figure cumulative size, stand the package on its long end and measure top to bottom, as if you were figuring your height from head to toe. Then measure around the package at its widest point, as though measuring your waist or hips.

Multiply the two figures to get the cumulative measurement.

■ 7. Be sure to ask about pick-up and delivery procedures and charges.

Some carriers charge for pick-up or offer a discount if you bring the package to their headquarters.

Some, such as United Parcel Service, Federal Express and Purolator, offer delivery at the other end; others, such as the bus delivery services, generally do not.

■ 8. Don't forget insurance. U.S. parcel post prices include $500 worth of insurance. Most private carriers include insurance in their basic fee up to a certain maximum, usually about $250.

If you're sending something very valuable via private carrier, you must state the value and buy added insurance — usually about 50 cents per $100 of value.

■ 9. When it comes to wrapping paper, string, Scotch tape and strength of will won't do. Use sturdy cardboard shipping boxes and nylon-reinforced strapping tape or 2-inch transparent tape.

The boxes you send will be pushed, stacked, stamped, thrown, bumped along conveyor belts, perhaps even dropped. Make sure they are packed well enough to come through it all in good shape.

■ 10. If you're sending anything delicate, consider having a professional do the packing.

Try one of the many mail-receiving services that have sprung up in recent years. They have the proper packing materials and know just how to pad things to prevent breakage.

Charges for packing vary from about $1.50 to $5, depending on the size of the item and its delicacy.

■ 11. If you're determined to do it yourself, try the box-within-a-box technique.

Find a box that's just a bit larger than the item you're sending. In box No. 1, nestle the item in plastic foam pellets, crumpled newspaper or popped popcorn (some people swear by it).

Then, nestle box No. 1 in more pellets or whatever inside a second box, substantially larger than the first.

If the package is to be mailed, use thick, indelible black ink to write the address, and don't forget the ZIP code and your own address.

■ 12. Remember that most shippers will be closed on Christmas Day, and some won't be open Christmas Eve, either.

Don't count on next-day delivery to get you out of trouble if you're still shopping on Christmas Eve.

DEAR ABBY

Cary Grant's trademark: Style

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: A few years ago, Carrie Dolan, a bright young reporter for The Wall Street Journal, was assigned to interview Cary Grant, who was in the San Francisco area for one of his rare lecture appearances. She began her article this way:

"Recently, I was alone in an elegant hotel suite with Cary Grant. My life has not been wasted.

"Sure, it was a Sunday morning, and we only had coffee. And actually we were alone for only a few minutes while his wife went downstairs to mail a letter. It doesn't matter. There are only two good reasons to become a reporter: to help change the world or to meet Cary Grant.

"Mr. Grant is perhaps the only living man who can inspire lust in any red-blooded American girl — and her mother and her grandmother. He was the one Mae West invited to come up and see her sometime. Mr. Grant is 80 years old. I am 24. It doesn't matter."

Cary Grant, who was every bit as good as he looked, deserved to live a long and rewarding life, and when it ended, to exit peacefully, swiftly and mercifully. And he did — on Nov. 29, just seven weeks before what would have been his 83rd birthday. Not a bad score. He couldn't have written a better ending himself. And the timing was just about perfect.

Over the last half-century, Cary Grant had probably more imitators than any other star of the stage or screen. Not only was he devastatingly handsome, he had a style all his own. The way he walked and talked and moved was unmistakably Cary Grant. Both on the screen and off, he was charming, witty and debonair.

Cary Grant was a superstar in every sense of the word. He wore his stardom with grace and dignity, and for all his fame and adoration, he remained miraculously unspoiled.

When Cary Grant was approached by a publisher and told he could name his own price for his autobiography, Grant replied, "Only half of my life belongs to me; the other half belongs to those with whom I shared it."

He quit making movies more than 20 years ago by choice, but in recent years he made occasional appearances in theaters around the country, billed simply as "A Conversation With Cary Grant." He didn't need much advertising. One small ad would appear in the local newspaper, and the house was immediately sold out. Everywhere he played, he received a standing ovation for simply walking out on the stage. He had no routine; he just sat perched on a long-legged stool in the middle of a bare stage with the spotlight beamed on his famous face, and for an hour and a half he would answer questions from the audience. They loved it. And so did he.

Cary Grant closed his "conversation" with a piece he called "A Meditation," clearly stating that he did not know who wrote it, but it expressed his own sentiments about growing older. And here it is:

"Now Lord, you've known me a long time. You know me better than I know myself. You know that each day I am growing older and someday may even be very old, so meanwhile please keep me from the habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion.

"Release me from trying to straighten out everyone's affairs. Make me thoughtful, but not moody, helpful but not overbearing. I've a certain amount of knowledge to share; still it would be very nice to have a few friends who, at the end, recognized and forgave the knowledge I lacked.

"Keep my tongue free from the recital of endless details. Seal my lips on my aches and pains: They increase daily and the need to speak of them becomes almost a compulsion. I ask for grace enough to listen to the retelling of others' afflictions, and to be helped to endure them with patience.

"I would like to have improved memory, but I'll settle for growing humility and an ability to capitulate when my memory clashes with the memory of others. Teach me the glorious lesson that on some occasions I may be mistaken.

"Keep me reasonably kind; I've never aspired to be a saint ... saints must be rather difficult to live with ... yet on the other hand, an embittered old person is a constant burden.

"Please give me the ability to see good in unlikely places and talents in unexpected people. And give me the grace to tell them so, dear Lord."

Adults' scientific literacy doubted

Copley News Service

In the good old U.S.A. — where computer software designers boast they lead the world in innovation, space scientists say it's possible to make nuclear missiles obsolete and researchers have almost doubled the lifespans of laboratory animals — scientific literacy among American adults has taken a nosedive, says Dr. John Miller, the director of Northern Illinois University's Public Opinion Laboratories.

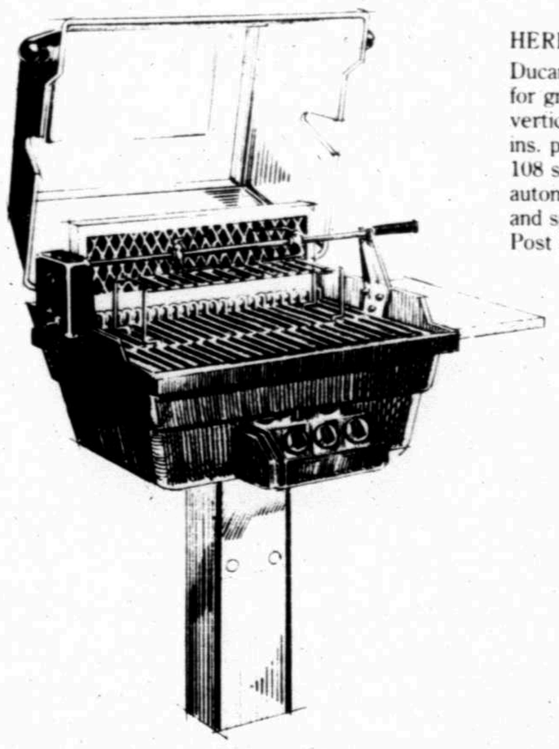

Miller says the percentage of the U.S. population that understands recent science processes, vocabulary and how science and technology actually affect their society has declined from the 7 percent low in 1979 to a new low of 5 percent.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

A.—You have a very good hand, if you can find a fit with partner. As a result of your shortness in partner's suit, you don't have enough to force to game. Bid one spade — if partner passes that, we would bet against your being able to make game in any strain. And to bid two no trump with a singleton in partner's suit is the height of folly.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K7 ♡AQ6 ◇A873 ♣AJ92
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	1 NT	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You don't know yet what partner has in mind, but you should be delighted to cooperate no matter what because your hand is rich in prime controls. A cue-bid now of three hearts tells partner of your sound values and support for his suit.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:
♠95 ♡KQ103 ◇6 ♣AKQ984
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠

What do you bid now?

A.—Here the fact that you have a partscore actually works to your advantage. Without it you would have a problem deciding whether to jump to three hearts or four. With it, you can tell partner that you have a good hand without getting overboard by simply bidding over score with three hearts.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ1073 ♡AK6 ◇Q2 ♣A105
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—In terms of point count you might be minimum for your jump to three no trump, but that doesn't take the character of your hand into consideration. Your black tens give your hand body and your queen in partner's suit should be upgraded. We would accept his invitation (his bid is quantitative, not Blackwood) by bidding six no trump.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J3 ♡K107 ◇QJ63 ♣Q962
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Partner is showing a hand with six spades and only four hearts, so you should correct to four spades. Indeed, you could easily have raised three spades to four rather than persist with three no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AQ5 ♡Q2 ◇KQ103 ♣AQ98
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ♡	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Some players believe that North is showing a very weak hand with long hearts and is asking you to pass. That makes a mockery of constructive bidding. What he is doing is offering you a choice between three no trump and four hearts, and with all your tenace positions you should select the former—having the lead come up to you could be worth a trick.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK95 ♡7 ◇KJ10 ♣AK765
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

Picture this: British Museum pays $5,000 for Rembrandt drawing

LONDON (AP) — The British Museum paid only $5,000 at an auction for a Rembrandt drawing mistakenly attributed to a little-known Dutch artist, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The weekly Observer said the drawing's real worth was estimated at $700,000.

It also said the black chalk drawing, dating from the 1640s or 1650s, was verified last week as a Rembrandt by Peter Schatborn, a leading authority on drawings by the 17th-century Dutch master.

British Museum curator Martin Royalton-Kische, 32, bought the sketch from under the art world's nose at a recent Christie's auction in Amsterdam, the paper said. The curator first noticed it in a Christie's catalog, where it was attributed to Nicolaes Maes, a follower of Rembrandt, according to the paper.

The 8-by-6 inch drawing on pale cream paper shows three men in conversation — one seated, the others standing.

Royalton-Kische, following a hunch, examined other Rembrandt works before reaching the conclusion the sketch was a study for the famous Rembrandt etching, "Christ Among the Doctors," the paper said.

After convincing his superiors at the British Museum to buy the sketch, he arranged for a London dealer to bid for it, the paper said.

"Then we just kept a low profile," Royalton-Kische was quoted as saying, "pretending it was no big deal. But of course I was nervous. If it came off, it would be the biggest coup I had ever made."

Last Wednesday, the first major Rembrandt painting to be auctioned in 21 years, "Portrait of a Girl Wearing A Gold-Trimmed Cloak," sold in London for $10.3 million, the highest sum ever paid for one of his oils.

Allen

The critics on Saturday put Allen's movie exposing the complex relationships among a hypochondriac, his ex-wife, her current husband and her two sisters ahead of the controversial David Lynch film "Blue Velvet," which juxtaposed small town America and sadomasochism.

Lynch was director of the year, and his movie was runner-up for screenplay to "Hannah and Her Sisters." Allen was runner-up for director.

The more than two dozen members of the Los Angeles Film Critics group also gave a career achievement award to John Cassavetes and its new generation award to Spike Lee for "She's Gotta Have It."

Hoskins was selected for his role in "Mona Lisa."

Dennis Hopper won the supporting actor award for his performances in two movies — "Blue Velvet" and "Hoosiers."

Sandrine Bonnaire's performance in "Vagabond" — the best foreign film — won her the best actress prize.

There was a tie for supporting actress between Kathy Tyson for "Mona Lisa" and Dianne Wiest for "Hannah and Her Sisters."

The Los Angeles selections, coupled with similar awards given by the New York Film Critics, the National Society of Film Critics and the National Board of Review, are often viewed as a barometer of Academy Award sentiments.

Oscar nominations will be announced Feb. 11 with the awards given March 30.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Amy Grant, the reigning Gospel Music Association artist of the year, says she has upset some of her Christian-oriented fans with the video for the pop tune "Next Time I Fall."

The duet by Miss Grant and Peter Cetera, former lead singer for the band Chicago, is a smash on the pop charts.

"We've gotten tons of positive feedback," Miss Grant, 25, said in an interview published Sunday by The Tennessean.

"We have had some concerned feedback," because the video doesn't have a religious orientation, she said, adding that she has no intention of abandoning her religious emphasis.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Bea Arthur, Rue McClanahan, Estelle Getty and Betty White, television's "Golden Girls," have won Golden Apple awards as the most newsworthy female stars of the year from the Hollywood Women's Press Club.

Arthur

"It is a witty show," Miss Arthur said Sunday of the reason for its popularity. "We're adorable," Miss McClanahan said.

Jimmy Stewart presented that award, and Cloris Leachman presented the award for most newsworthy male star for Paul Newman, who did not attend because he is directing his wife, Joanne Woodward, in "The Glass Menagerie."

Pia Zadora and Mark Harmon won the Golden Apple as discoveries of the year, and outgoing NBC president Grant Tinker was given the Louella O. Parsons award as the Hollywood personality who presents the best image of the entertainment industry to the world.

The group, founded by Parsons 46 years ago with 10 other Hollywood columnists, also gave Sour Apple Awards to celebrities deemed the year's least newsworthy, with the top dishonors going to Sean Penn.

The Golden Apple award was established in 1970 as a way to honor women.

MOSCOW (AP) — Henry Winston, longtime chairman of the Communist Party USA, has died in Moscow after a brief illness. He was 75.

Winston died Friday at a Moscow hospital where he was undergoing followup treatment for an eye operation he received here several years ago, Mike Davidow, Moscow correspondent for the party newspaper People's Daily World, said today. The official news agency Tass also announced the death.

A party statement in New York said Winston came to Moscow for medical treatment in early November.

A son of Mississippi sharecroppers, Winston became active in the Unemployed Councils during the Depression and later in the Southern Negro Youth Congress before joining the Communist Party. He served in the U.S. Army in the European theater during World War II.

He was sentenced to eight years in prison in 1951 under the Smith Act, which called for the jailing of those who taught or advocated the violent overthrow of the U.S. government. He was released in 1963 and became the party's chairman that year.

During his time in prison, the party said, he was not treated properly for his failing eyesight and went blind after receiving delayed medical attention.

20-year streak latest casualty

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles finally lived up to the preseason brags of their coach Sunday just in time to apply a mercy killing to the death-spiraling Dallas Cowboys.

The Eagles gave a 23-21 coup de grace to the Cowboys, who saw professional sports' longest active victory streak of 20 consecutive seasons go down the drain.

It's only the third time in the past 20 years Dallas' won't be in the NFL playoffs. Last year's NFC East champions have lost six of their last seven games.

"We never thought about knocking the Cowboys out of the playoffs," said quarterback Matt Cavanaugh, who had two touchdown passes. "We were out to play for ourselves, not just hurt the Cowboys."

EAGLES COACH Buddy Ryan made a brash preseason prediction of an NFC East title and a clean sweep of division foes. However, his first division scalp didn't come until Sunday to give the Eagles a 5-9-1 record.

"We didn't play that well I think, but all wins are good wins," Ryan said.

Ryan gave a game ball to Cavanaugh, who started only his second game this season. Cavanaugh threw two touchdown passes to Kenny Jackson, including the 31-yard, game-winner with 3:57 left.

"Cavanaugh did a good job filling in for Randall Cunningham," Ryan said. "He deserved a ball. Our offense did a heckuva job."

Cunningham sat out the game with a bruised thumb.

"Kenny kept saying he could go deep and he did," Cavanaugh said. "He's got a lot of confidence."

The Eagles won although they couldn't stop Herschel Walker, who compiled a club record 292 yards passing and receiving.

WALKER RAN 84 yards for a score and caught a pass for an 84-yard touchdown. He caught 9 passes for 170 yards and rushed for 122 yards on only six carries.

"We couldn't tackle Walker," Ryan said. "We missed tackles and he ran 100 yards. We had him double covered and he catches a pass for a touchdown. What can you do?"

Walker said he was 100 percent healthy for the first time in more than a month.

"My injured ankle had been a very big problem," Walker said. "The loss was very tough. But you have to give Philadelphia credit."

Dallas led 21-16 after Walker's 84-yard scoring reception with 5:01 to go.

The Eagles charged back 57 yards, scoring on two plays.

"That's incredible," Walker said. "We scored, then looked up and they scored."

"It's disappointing to end up this way," said defensive tackle Randy White. "We have a lot of pride and tradition. Now all we can try to do is beat Chicago. I'm not folding up my tent."

DALLAS COACH Tom Landry was philosophical about the season.

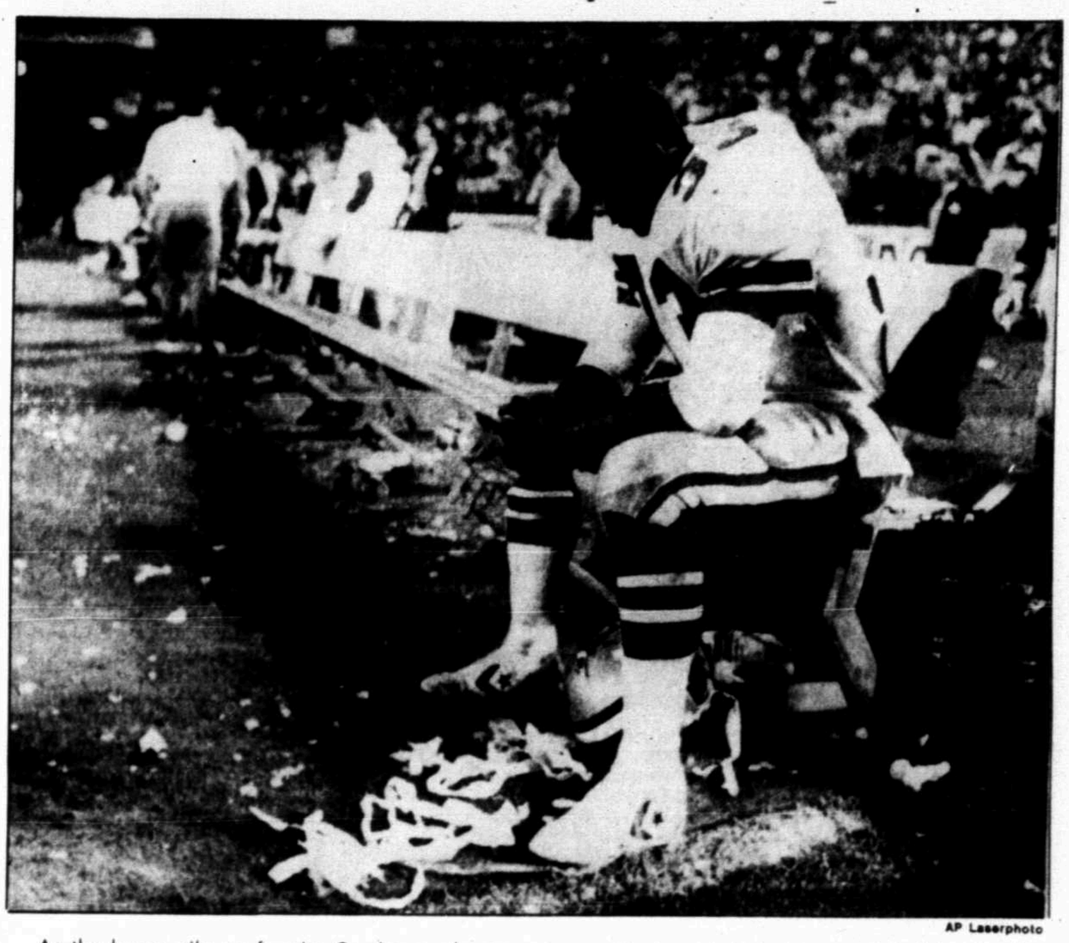

"You don't worry about losing seasons after being up for 20 years," Landry said. "But who knows. Maybe we'll bounce back and beat the Bears."

Landry hinted there could be a new quarterback against Chicago next week.

"Reggie Collier will play," Landry said. "I don't know if he will start, but he will play. It's the last game, and it certainly can't hurt you."

Steve Pelluer suffered two interceptions and was roundly booed although he had two touchdown passes.

"Steve's had a rough season, and that's what happens to young quarterbacks in the NFL," Landry added. "We're disappointed about the playoffs, but sometimes you have to drop down and bounce back."

As the losses pile up for the Cowboys, players like Tony Dorsett take it hard. Dallas has been assured of no better than an 8-8 finish, its first non-winning season in 20 years.

Oilers turn tables, drop Vikings

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers must have thought they were looking in a mirror at themselves Sunday.

Instead, they saw Minnesota commit six turnovers and miss most of its scoring chances. The Oilers eagerly took advantage for a 23-10 victory that dropped the Vikings out of the NFL playoff picture.

"It's nice to see someone else suffering from their own mistakes," Oiler linebacker Robert Lyles said. "Today, it seemed like everything went our way."

The Oilers entered the game with a minus-18 turnover ratio, the worst in the NFL.

But Houston lost one fumble while the Vikings watched their playoff hopes disappear amid three interceptions and three lost fumbles.

The Vikings also lost Tommy Kramer, the NFL's top-rated quarterback, who suffered a bruised elbow in the second quarter and sat out the rest of the game.

One of Minnesota's turnovers set up a Houston touchdown, and another killed a Viking drive at the Houston 1-yard line.

"The coaches are going to be pulling out their hair when they see the films of this game," Viking defensive tackle Keith Millard said. "There's going to be a lot of yelling and screaming."

MINNESOTA, 8-7, was trying to reach the playoffs for the first time since 1982.

"We were filled with false emotion," Millard said. "It was so evident on the field that it was a joke. We should have learned from our mistakes. It seemed like we wanted to go out on the field and left someone else do our jobs."

The Oilers, stung 27-0 by the San Diego Chargers a week earlier, were ready.

Warren Moon, who missed last week's game with a thumb injury, completed 22 of 37 passes for 280 yards and a 10-yard touchdown pass to Ernest Givins and Tony Zendejas kicked field goals of 31, 33 and 36 yards.

AFC logjam thickens; NFC puzzle solved

Associated Press

Not every team in the AFC has a shot at the playoffs heading into the last week of the NFL season. It only seems that way.

While the NFC has made things simple, the AFC playoff picture is one big jigsaw puzzle with a few pieces missing. Not only are the identities of three of the six conference playoff teams a mystery but the methods by which they can earn positions in the chase for the Super Bowl are equally mystifying.

The Cleveland Browns won the AFC Central title on Sunday with a 34-3 rout of the Cincinnati Bengals. If the 11-4 Browns beat San Diego next week, they will have the home-field advantage for all of their conference playoff contests.

The Denver Broncos already have the AFC West title and they clinched the NFC East championship for the New York Giants by beating Washington 31-30 on Saturday.

NFL Roundup

The New York Jets, mired in a four-game slide that has taken them from the top of the NFL to a 10-5 record and a tie with New England for first place in the AFC East, were handed a wild-card slot when Kansas City beat the Los Angeles Raiders 20-17 on Sunday. The day before, the Jets were beaten by Pittsburgh 45-24.

The defending AFC champion Patriots fell to San Francisco 29-24 and must beat Miami next Monday night to win the East. If they lose, the Jets get the division title no matter what they do in Cincinnati on Sunday.

Kansas City can nail down a wild-card berth by winning at Pittsburgh next weekend. Cincinnati must beat the Jets to have a chance at a wild card. Seattle, which took San Diego 34-24 on Sunday, needs a win over Denver next Saturday to stay alive for a wild card.

The tiebreaker combinations are such that they could result in almost anyone getting in, including Miami and the Raiders, both 8-7. If the Raiders win against Indianapolis and Seattle, Cincinnati and Kansas City lose, they make the playoffs. And if the Raiders and those other teams are beaten and Miami downs New England, the Dolphins get in.

The NFC avoided all of that wildness when Minnesota lost to Houston 23-10 and Dallas was upset 23-21 by Philadelphia. Combined with the 49ers' victory, the five postseason berths were secured.

The Giants, 27-7 winners over St. Louis, reign in the East, with Washington the host wild-card team. Chicago, which is in Detroit tonight, owns the Central crown. The 49ers are a half-game behind the Rams, who lost 37-31 to Miami in overtime, in the West, and they meet Friday night. The winner avoids the wild-card game, the loser travels to Washington.

Browns 34, Bengals 3

From the opening play of the game, Cleveland's plan was obvious — throw bombs, force the action and try to outdo the NFL's hottest attack. The Browns did just that, beginning with Bernie Kosar's 66-yard pass to Reggie Langhorne at the outset.

"We wanted to set the tempo, and I think we did that by going deep," Kosar said. "We felt we could go after them and we wanted to attack them. We didn't attack them in the first game (a 30-13 loss)."

Cincinnati, which had five straight 400-yard games in which it had averaged 29 points, was held to 283 yards after gaining 584 a week ago against the Patriots.

49ers 29, Patriots 24

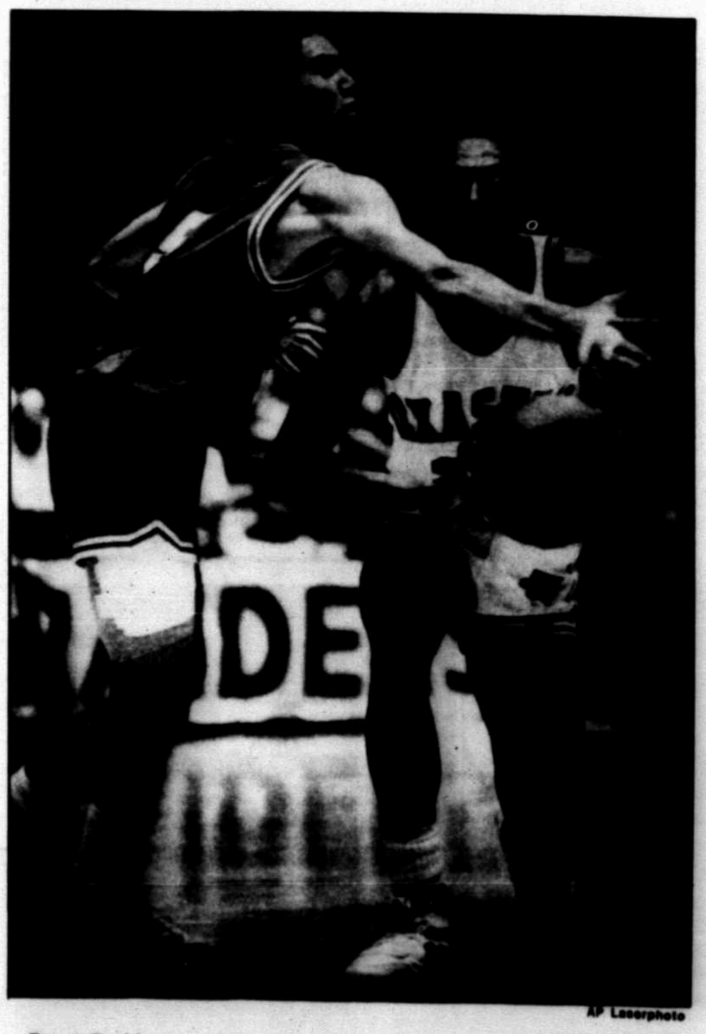

San Francisco used another big-play method to subdue the Patriots — turnovers. The 49ers, who lead the league in takeaways, scored their final 10 points after a fumble recovery and an interception. Ray Wersching's 20-yard field goal followed Tory Nixon's recovery of Tony Collins' fumble. Joe Cribbs' 10-yard touchdown run, which gave the 49ers a 29-17 edge with 7:28 to go, came after Keena Turner intercepted Tony Eason's pass and returned it to the New England 25.

"We've got a little momentum now," San Francisco running back Roger Craig said. "We just have to hold onto it."

The Patriots hope they can hold onto a playoff position, something which seemed certain a few weeks ago when they were winning seven straight games.

"The most frustrating aspect of Nevada-Las Vegas remained atop The Associated Press' college basketball poll, which was announced today, while three teams — St. John's, DePaul and Temple — made their first appearances of the season in the national rankings.

The Rünnin' Rebels, 6-0, received 48 first-place votes and 1,238 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. It was the second consecutive week Nevada-Las Vegas, which was victorious in its only game, 99-88 over Nevada-Reno, held the top spot.

The Southwest Conference's lone representative, Arkansas, fell from the poll after being ranked No. 20 last week after losing to Alabama.

Purdue, Iowa, North Carolina, Illinois and Auburn, held the two through six spots, respectively, each moving up one place from last week's voting. Indiana, which had been No. 2 fell to eighth, one spot behind Oklahoma, after losing to Vanderbilt, 79-75, last week.

Purdue, 5-0, received 12 first-place votes and 1,146 points, 45 more than fellow Big Ten member, Iowa, 8-0. North Carolina, 5-1, the preseason No. 1 choice, had 1,031 points, while Illinois, 7-0 and another member of the Big Ten, received one first-place vote and 978 points.

Auburn, 4-0, received two first-place votes and 875 points.

Oklahoma, which had been ninth last week, got 751 points. The Sooners are 5-1. Indiana, which rallied from the loss at Vanderbilt with two victories to win its own Indiana Classic and improve to 4-1, finished with 692 points, 10 more than Syracuse, which had the same margin over fellow Big East member Georgetown.

Syracuse, 7-0, moved up from last week's No. 12 ranking, while Georgetown, 5-0, which beat Arizona 82-74 in a nationally televised game, moved up from 13th.

Navy, 10th last week, leads the Second Ten followed by North Carolina State, Kansas, Pittsburgh, St. John's, Georgia Tech, UCLA, Kentucky, DePaul and Temple.

Last week's Second Ten was UCLA, Syracuse, Georgetown, Kansas, North Carolina State, Georgia Tech, Pittsburgh, Alabama, Kentucky and Arkansas.

St. John's jumped in at the No. 15 ranking after beating then-No. 11 UCLA 70-63 at Madison Square Garden. The Redmen, 6-0, joined Syracuse, Georgetown and Pittsburgh of the Big East in the Top 20.

DePaul, 5-0, used a nationally televised 75-68 victory over Louisville to joined the rankings.

Temple, 7-1, registered two victories last week, including their Atlantic 10 Conference opener, 68-66 over St. Bonaventure.

Dropping from the Top Twenty were Western Kentucky, Alabama and Arkansas.

Western Kentucky, ranked eighth last week, fell to 7-3 as the Hilltoppers dropped home games on consecutive nights, 60-58 to Louisville and 73-65 to Central Michigan.

Arkansas, 4-1, lost to then-No. 18 Alabama 87-76 last week to fall from the Top Twenty.

Tired Mavs drop out of first place

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks are having their Christmas party back in Dallas today and Coach Dick Motta says the team needs the rest after a stop in Portland.

The Mavericks fell to the Trail Blazers 134-100 Sunday night, the fourth outing for Dallas in five nights.

"Portland could have beaten anybody," Motta said, hoping his players will catch their breath before continuing with the NBA schedule. "When you're on the road and a little tired ... you've got to catch a team down. Portland certainly wasn't down."

The Blazers, opening a 41-22 lead in the first quarter, had seven players in double figures, with Jerome Kersey coming off the bench for 21 points, Steve Johnson adding 19 and Terry Porter 18.

Clyde Drexler topped the Portland effort with 22 points, while Kenny Carr had a career high in rebounding with 21.

"This was a very good basketball game by our team," Portland Coach Mike Schuler said. "Jerome had a nice game. He had the type of game that can inspire us. Carr did a great job. He's had a great year."

The victory, in the only NBA game Sunday night, was the seventh in eight games for the Blazers, boosting their record in the Pacific Division to 14-10, good for third place behind the Los Angeles Lakers and Golden State, respectively. Dallas, 14-8, fell out of first place in the Midwest, percentage points behind Utah.

"I'd say that looking at their team right now, they should be second in their division," Motta said. "They really are playing well, and if they keep that intensity, they're going to have themselves an enjoyable season."

Dallas forward Mark Aguirre led all scorers with 23 points but played only 22 minutes. Sam Perkins added 13 points and James Donaldson led the team in rebounding with eight.

Asked why Aguirre didn't play in the final period, Motta said sarcastically: "We've got to be rested for our Christmas party."

Dallas shot only 38 percent from the field, while Portland finished the game by hitting 55 percent of its shots and outrebounding the Mavericks 57-35.

Bears quarterback Doug Flutie won't have to worry about weather like this tonight in Detroit as Chicago invades the Pontiac Silverdome to play the Detroit Lions.

Bears walk into Lions' den

By HARRY ATKINS

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The future arrives tonight for the Detroit Lions, when rookie quarterback Chuck Long makes his first NFL start in a game against the defending Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears.

"The Bears are definitely the best defensive team in the NFL," Long said. "It's going to be a real challenge. Being from the Chicago area (Long is a native of Wheaton), it's nice to start against the Bears. It's going to be awful tough, though.

"It's going to be interesting and it's going to be a lot of fun, hopefully."

Long's debut comes five years after the man he will replace, Eric Hipple, made an auspicious Monday night start against the Bears to move into the starting job.

This game will match two of college football's recent stars — Long, an All-American at Iowa who was second to Auburn's Bo Jackson in the voting for the 1985 Heisman Trophy, and the Bears' Doug Flutie, the 1984 Heisman Trophy winner from Boston College. Although Mike Tomczak is listed as the probable starter at quarterback for the Bears, Flutie likely will see a lot of action as Chicago, which has clinched the NFC Central title, prepares for the playoffs.

Monday Night

THE BEARS, 12-2, need one more victory to lock up the home-field advantage in their first NFC playoff game the first weekend in January.

Long missed all of training camp because of a contract dispute. Because he was so far behind, Coach Darryl Rogers was reluctant to use him.

The rookie has taken only four snaps from center. Against Tampa Bay, he handed off three times and then, on his first NFL pass, threw a 34-yard touchdown to Leonard Thompson.

"The pressure's off," Long said. "We have everything to win by winning this game. We're not going to the playoffs, so we can't lose. It will be good experience for next season."

Long got a sympathy vote from Bears Coach Mike Ditka.

"There'll be some pressure on him," Ditka said. "But, knowing him and his family as I do, he'll respond. There's not a better pure passer in the game.

"If he sees what we're doing out there, he'll be fine. We do some things he may not have seen. I hope he does well. I just hope he doesn't do too well."

Gary Fencik, the Bears' free safety, said it has been difficult preparing for Long.

"He's only taken four snaps, so there's no film to study on him," Fencik said. "When he was at Iowa, we saw him play on television all the time, but that's not going to help us.

"WE SIMPLY don't know anything about him, other than he's a great young quarterback with a lot of potential."

Johnson, USC talk turkey

LOS ANGELES (AP) — University of Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson has met with Southern Cal athletic director Mike McGee to discuss the university's vacant head football coaching position, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported that Johnson and McGee met Thursday in Atlanta.

"These rumors have come up before and they are just that, rumors," Johnson said when contacted in Miami by The Associated Press.

Johnson's name popped up two weeks ago in the wake of the firings of Fred Akers at Texas and Ted Tollner at USC.

A couple of days later, Johnson made the rounds of Miami media to deny reports he was leaving.

"I denied these rumors two weeks ago and I'm still at Miami," Johnson said Sunday.

Southern Cal announced Monday that Tollner would be released as the Trojans' head coach on Jan. 2.

Gooden involved in police scuffle

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The head of the local chapter of the NAACP says the organization will investigate the arrest of New York Mets All-Star pitcher Dwight Gooden after he allegedly scuffled with police officers.

Gooden, 22, a native of Tampa who lives with his parents during the offseason, was charged with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest with violence and battery on a police officer, after he was stopped for a possible traffic violation late Saturday night.

Four companions also were arrested in the incident. They were Gary Sheffield, 18, a nephew of Gooden as well as a professional baseball player in the Milwaukee Brewers minor-league system; California Angels minor-league player Vance Lovelace, 23; Phillip Walker, Jr., 23, and a 17-year-old Derrick Pedro. Pedro is a distant cousin of Gooden's. Lovelace spent the 1986 season with the Midland Angels.

All except the 17-year-old were booked into the Hillsborough County jail and released on their own recognizance. The teen-ager was handed over to state juvenile officers, Tampa Police Lt. T.L. Cotter said.

Arraignment dates were not set. Police spokesman Johnny Barker said Gooden and the others will be notified of a court date by mail.

According to police reports, the incident began just before 11 p.m. EST Saturday when an officer spotted a Mercedes-Benz and a red Corvette weaving toward each other in separate lanes. The officer pulled over both cars, Cotter said.

As Gooden exited the Mercedes he was driving, the Corvette, allegedly driven by Sheffield, sped away but then returned, Cotter said. A second police car pulled up to aid the officer, then a third private vehicle pulled alongside, the police spokesman said.

Officer Jeffrey L. Smith said in an arrest affidavit that Gooden "exited the vehicle and started yelling, using profane language accusing the officer (Smith) of police harassment, refusing to surrender his license.

"Gooden would not calm down even at the advice of his friends," Smith wrote. The officer added that Gooden continued to yell about police harassment and that a crowd gathered at the scene.

Smith said he was trying to stop Gooden from advancing on him when Gooden grabbed the officer's left wrist and told Smith not to touch him.

When Officer L.S. Wolff tried to subdue Gooden, with what is commonly known as a "choke hold," the pitcher "started struggling violently, swinging and kicking," Smith wrote.

Gooden and two officers were treated for minor injuries at a Tampa General Hospital and released, Cotter said. However, Mets spokesman Jay Horwitz said Gooden suffered bruises on the head and left arm, "and last night he thought his left hand was broken."

The Tampa Tribune reported Gooden was given a blood-alcohol test at Tampa General Hospital, but a police spokesman had declined to reveal the test results.

Gooden's attorney, Charles Erhlich, told the newspaper he believed there was no drinking or drug use involved in the incident.

Horwitz said he spoke with Gooden on Sunday, and the right-hander told him that he had been handcuffed and ankle-cuffed during the incident.

"I don't know what I did," Horwitz quoted Gooden as saying. "They never told me what they stopped me for. I'm in the dark about it."

Cotter said the charges would be reviewed by the state attorney's office. Gooden's attorney, meanwhile, said he'd also look into the matter.

NFL ROUNDUP

this game is that we lost the game in the fashion we usually win ballgames, turnovers," guard Ron Wooten said. "We were disappointed we gave them all those opportunities to do some damage."

Chiefs 20, Raiders 17

Turnovers also cost the Raiders, who lost the ball seven times. Two of those turnovers came in the final period, when a fumble by Napoleon McCallum was recovered by Tim Cofield and Kevin Ross intercepted a Jim Plunkett pass.

"Our defense played a great fourth quarter and our offense made the plays it had to make," Chiefs Coach John Mackovic said as his team moved into position for its first playoff appearance in 15 years.

Dolphins 37, Rams 31, OT

Dan Marino continued to dominate defenses — even one as solid as the Rams have. Marino threw for five touchdowns, including the winning score of 20 yards to Mark Duper 3:04 into overtime.

Marino threw for 403 yards, completing 29 of 46 passes, with three of the scores going to Duper.

The Dolphins took the kickoff to begin overtime. Miami started from its own 25-yard line, and a 35-yard run by Ron Davenport put the Dolphins at the Rams' 32. An apparent interception was wiped out by an offsides penalty, and three plays later, Marino hit Duper in the end zone.

"We're still in it, but we're not the type to kid anybody," Miami Coach Don Shula said of the Dolphins' playoff chances. "We realize it's the thinnest of thin opportunities."

Seahawks 34, Chargers 24

The Seahawks's chances are thin, too, even though they are one of the league's hottest teams. Quarterback Dave Krieg threw four touchdown passes, two in the fourth quarter, and Seattle won its fourth straight.

San Diego's Dan Fouts moved into second place on the NFL's all-time passing yardage list. Fouts completed 21 of 38 passes for 237 yards and a touchdown to push his career yardage total to 40,287, surpassing Johnny Unitas, who had been second at 40,239. Fran Tarkenton is the NFL's all-time leader with 47,003 yards.

Giants 27, Cardinals 7

Joe Morris ran for 179 yards, scored three touchdowns and broke his own club-record for rushing with 1,401 yards. The victory was the eighth straight for the 13-2 Giants, who have won their first division title since 1963 and will host their NFC playoff games if they win next week against Green Bay.

New York built a 17-0 halftime lead and Morris wound up with his seventh 100-yard game of the year. The defense recorded a team-record nine sacks.

Colts 24, Bills 14

Indianapolis, which lost its first 13 games this year, has won both of its games under Coach Ron Meyer. The victory over Buffalo moved the Colts behind Tampa Bay in the order for next year's NFL draft.

Gary Hogeboom ran for one touchdown and passed for 318 yards and two other scores for the Colts. Hogeboom, who came off injured reserve a week ago, sneaked one yard for one touchdown and passed one yard to Tim Sherwin for another. He completed 23 of 33 passes.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly was shaken up early in the game and sat out much of the second and third quarters.

Packers 21, Bucs 7

Green Bay sacked Tampa Bay quarterback Steve Young seven times, while Randy Wright completed 14 of 25 passes for 190 yards to join Lynn Dickey as the only players in Green Bay history to pass for more than 3,000 yards in a season.

Wright, Gerry Ellis and Paul Ott Carruth ran for touchdowns.

The loss before a Tampa Stadium crowd of 30,099 was the sixth straight for the 2-13 Bucs, who were booed and pelted with lemons by the crowd.

Saints 14, Falcons 9

Dave Wilson scored on a 6-yard bootleg run with 1:55 left as New Orleans snapped a three-game losing streak. The Saints fell behind 9-7 on Ali Haji-Sheikh's 43-yard field goal with 5:39 to play, then drove 75 yards in 12 plays for the winning score.

The Saints then had to stop an Atlanta drive, which they did as Rickey Jackson got his fourth sack of the game, dumping Turk Schonert for a 6-yard loss to the Saints' 11. Atlanta appeared to get off another pass, on which Schonert hit Charlie Brown in the end zone, but officials ruled that time had expired before the play began.

OILERS

MOON, WHO has thrown a career-high 26 interceptions this season, didn't have any interceptions against the Vikings.

"I was very conscious about not throwing interceptions today," Moon said.

Rookie Allen Pinkett added a 1-yard touchdown run with 1:58 left in the game.

"It was an important win for us because we really needed a lift off the mat after last week," Moon said. "We played badly at San Diego and we were very conscious of that."

The victory left the Oilers at 4-11 for the season and needing a victory over Buffalo in the Astrodome Sunday to equal last season's 5-11 record.

They're trying to salvage whatever momentum they can going into next season.

"We've eliminated two teams from the playoffs this year, ourselves and Minnesota," Oiler offensive tackl Bruce Matthews said.

KRAMER HIT Allen Rice with a 32-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, and Wade Wilson directed a drive to Chuck Nelson's 40-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Minnesota Coach Jerry Burns was angered in the third quarter when officials ruled Houston safety Keith Bostic intercepted a pass despite a replay from a television end zone camera that showed the ball was dropped.

Prep Roundup

Class 5A Semifinals

La Marque scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter to break open a 7-7 game and defeat Austin Reagan 26-12 at Memorial Stadium in Austin Saturday afternoon in one of the 5A semifinal games.

"I wasn't really supposed to play," said Milton Frank, whose first down early in the fourth quarter ignited La Marque's offense to three touchdowns.

Plano's Trae Brannon batted away a fourth-and-goal pass from the 9-yard line with 44 seconds remaining to preserve the Wildcats' 28-21 victory over Hurst Bell in the other 5A semifinal game, played Saturday afternoon in Texas Stadium at Irving.

A late third-quarter fumble recovery by Plano's Steve Needham helped turn the tide for the Wildcats, who were trailing 21-20 at the time. Quarterback Bobby Schrader ran in a touchdwon and added a two-point conversion early in the fourth quarter.

Class 4A Semifinals

McKinney's Randy Simmons exploded for 288 yards rushing and four touchdowns as the Lions beat the Hereford Whitefaces 39-6 in a 4A semifinal playoff game Saturday night in Texas Stadium.

McKinney scored first on Jay Bob Harris' 29-yard field goal in the first quarter and padded the lead to 17-0 on two short Simmons plunges before Hereford got its only score on Todd Shire's 25-yard TD pass to Kyle Streun in the second quarter.

Simmons put the game on ice in the third quarter with his TD runs of 19 and 28 yards. Wilfred Pryor's 20-yard pass reception from Charlie Honea in the fourth quarter wrapped up the scoring.

West Orange quarterback James Reed ran for two touchdowns and passed for another to lead the Mustangs to a 28-12 victory over New Braunfels in a Class 4A semifinal game at Tully Stadium in Houston.

New Braunfels scored first on Brad Grant's 5-yard run in the first quarter, and the 6-0 lead held through the half.

West Orange Stark scored twice in a two-minute span in the third period to turn the game around. Reed ran 7 yards for the first one, and after a Kevin Smith fumble recovery, Reed tossed a 24-yard TD pass to Derrick Owens.

West Orange Stark added two more touchdowns in the fourth period, as Scottie Littleton ran 9 yards for a touchdown and Reed 17 yards on an option play.

Class 3A Semifinals

Jefferson quarterback Kenneth Henderson hit wide receiver Terry Johnson on second-quarter touchdown passes of 6 and 26 yards that led the Bulldogs to a 26-0 victory over Lampasas in a Class 3A semifinal playoff game Saturday in Grand Prairie.

Jefferson opened up a 20-0 halftime lead. Keith Smith, the game's leading rusher with 136 yards, scored on a seven-yard run, and Ron Jackson scored from 10 yards late in the fourth quarter.

Cuero's Robert Strait rushed for 310 yards and four touchdowns to lead the Gobblers to a 34-7 win over Port Arthur Austin Saturday night in the other 3A playoff action in Katy.

Strait staked Cuero to a 6-0 halftime lead on a 34-yard run late in the first quarter. Port Arthur Austin took a brief 7-6 lead in the third quarter when defensive lineman Kevin Henry rambled 37 yards with a blocked punt.

The Gobblers, however, came right back on Strait's 39-yard burst little more than two minutes later. He scored on 1-yard scoring runs on Cuero's next two possessions.

Class 2A Semifinals

Mart quarterback Lee Miles threw for two touchdowns and running back Wayne Atkinson rushed for 106 yards and two touchdowns as the Panthers defeated Reagan County 35-15 Saturday in a 2A semifinal game in Brownwood.

In the first half, Reagan County quarterback Scott Lipsey scored on runs of 1 and 8 yards, while Mart got TD's on Terrell Pride's 2-yard run and Miles' 16-yard pass to Allen Neuman.

But Atkinson's scoring runs of 15 and 2 yards in the second half allowed Mart to pull out the victory.

Shiner cruised into the Class 2A finals Saturday behind tailback Shawn Carroll and quarterback Gilbert Price, beating Winona 38-0 in Temple. Carroll, a junior, gained 149 yards in 16 carries. Price, a senior, ran for two touchdowns and threw for another to his brother Steven.

Shiner's defense held Winona to two first downs and only 35 total yards and forced the Wildcats to give up five turnovers, including a fumble at the Shiner 1-yard line. The Comanches also recorded six sacks.

Class 1A Semifinals

Burkeville fought from 13 points behind to defeat previously unbeaten Bremond 20-13 Saturday night in Class A semifinal playoff action in Groveton.

An 88-yard "Hail Mary" pass from Darrell Spikes to Alfred Spikes rallied Burkeville past Bremond, which struck first on Tim Scott's 90-yard touchdown return of the opening kickoff.

Throckmorton held Wheeler to two first downs in the second half and quarterback Bill Batchler rushed for a pair of touchdowns as the Greyhounds defeated the Mustangs 21-7 in the other 1A semifinal in Childress Friday night.

Throckmorton fullback Dave Davis carried the ball 31 times for 178 yards, with 126 of those yards coming in the second half as the Greyhounds beat the Wheeler Mustangs 21-7 in their Class A semifinal playoff game.

Six-Man Finals

Irsay to sue over magazine article

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Colts owner Robert Irsay said his lawyers would file suit today against the publisher of Sports Illustrated over an unflattering article about him in the magazine's current issue.

Irsay announced his plans to sue Time Inc. for $100 million during a visit to the Colts' lockerroom after his team defeated the Buffalo Bills 24-14 Sunday.

"They are liars," Irsay said. "I'll tell you one thing, I'm not going to take this lying down. I don't take offense to everything ... (but) let's see what the court says in judgement."

The article, written by E.M. Swift, disputes Irsay's claims that he is a graduate of the University of Illinois, played football there and was decorated as a Marine.

"I've got all the papers to prove they're almost all wrong," Irsay said.

"Sports Illustrated will stand totally behind its story," SI Managing Editor Mark Mulvoy said. "In publishing its story, Sports Illustrated has followed to the letter all its fact-checking procedures and went through the test of every legal check in the legal operation."

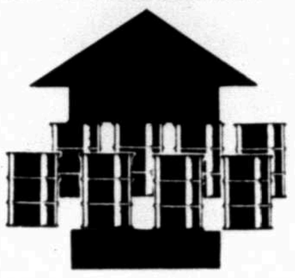

Irsay contended the magazine was looking for a "patsy."

"I'm not a patsy," he said. "Let's see what happens when the suit comes out. If Time and Life, or Sports Illustrated wants to lose a $100 million, that's their prerogative.

"I spent three hours with Ed Swift like a gentleman and showed him my discharge papers from the Marine Corps and the Navy," Irsay said. "I got my birth certificate and all that. He didn't go to my baptismal place, so let's see what the court says in judgment."

Gold rises

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed, but mainly lower, against other major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices rose more than $3 an ounce.

A London dealer said gold was boosted mainly by expectations that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting in Geneva will agree on production curbs to increase oil prices.

A higher oil price would exacerbate inflation, making bullion a more attractive investment than currencies. A price hike would also enrich Middle East countries that have been big gold buyers in the past.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $393.90 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $390.10. At mid-morning Monday, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $394.60.

In Zurich, the bid price was $394.60, up from $390 late Friday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 163.26 yen, up from Friday's 162.98. Later, in London, it was quoted at 163.25 yen.

— 1.6973 Swiss francs, up from 1.6700

— 6.6015 French francs, down from 6.6325

— 2.2765 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2880

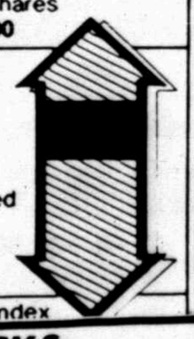

— 1,396.00 Italian lire, down from 1,401.75

— 1.3779 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3785.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound, which was quoted at $1.4338, more expensive than $1.4285 late Friday.

Louisiana senator calls for import fee

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — Louisiana Sen. J. Bennett Johnston is wasting no time in using his new Energy Committee chairmanship to boost support for an oil import fee.

Johnston, D-La., plans for his committee to hold public hearings in January, possibly the day after its first meeting of the new Congress, to hear testimony about the need for protection of the domestic oil industry.

The hearings clearly will be steered toward support of an oil import fee, a tariff to give domestic energy producers a price advantage over cheaper foreign oil.

"It would help preserve a domestic industry of high importance, of great strategic importance to this country," Johnston said in an interview.

Johnston, 54, has served in the Senate since 1973 and, with Louisiana's tradition of re-electing its legislators until dotage, could very well be there into the next century.

That clout is considered valuable to Louisiana, which loses 38 years of seniority when senior Sen. Russell Long retires next month.

Having lost a bid for majority leader this year, Johnston's consolation prize is the chairmanship of Energy, a key post for a senator from an oil and gas state.

He kicks off his tenure with hearings focusing on whether the country needs a domestic oil industry (for which Johnston's answer is ringingly affirmative) and whether the industry can exist in an era of oil prices at $15 per barrel or less (which Johnston doubts).

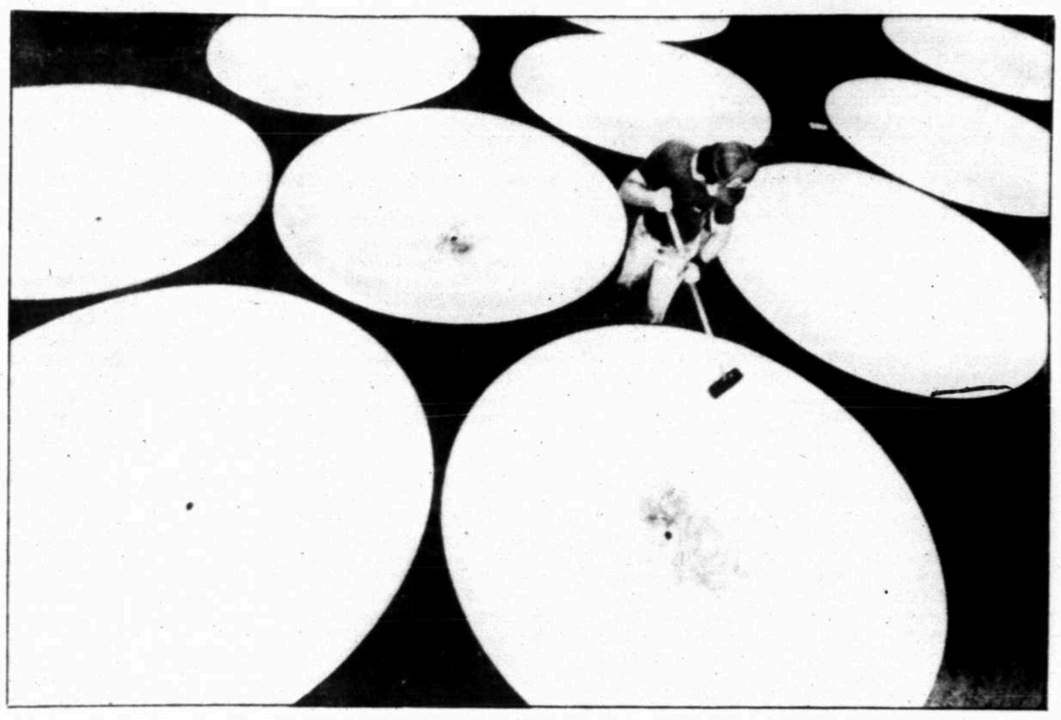

"The purpose of the hearings will be educational as well as getting at the facts," Johnston said, planning to cultivate support for a fee beyond the energy-producing states whose economies are hurting because of low oil and gas prices.

Former Energy Secretary Jim Schlesinger will be one of the witnesses, Johnston said.

The chances for an oil import fee? "With the president's support, we have a good chance to pass it," he said. "Without it, we don't."

The senator's goal is "to get the president to focus on it," but he said that will not be easy if the Iran arms scandal continues to dominate the headlines.

Automakers vying for share of market for cheap wheels

DETROIT (AP) — The $5,000 new car was facing extinction just two years ago, but the species is making a strong comeback as automakers scramble for shares of the rapidly growing market for cheap wheels.

The rebirth came with the successful U.S. introductions of the $3,990 Yugo, built in Yugoslavia, and the $4,995 Korean-made Hyundai Excel, which sold more cars in this country in its first year than any other import.

"We saw a vacuum at the low end of the market," said William Prior, the newly named president of Bricklin Industries, Yugo of America Inc.'s parent corporation.

Now that the waters have been tested, other makers in countries with younger auto industries are jumping in, turning the entry level category abandoned by the Japanese into one of the hottest segments of the new-car market.

"Yugo and Hyundai have reopened the market. Once a few companies start to arrive with brand-new cars, everyone has to get in. That's why five years from now this (segment) is going to be very cluttered," said Maryann Keller, an auto industry analyst at Furman Selz Mager Dietz & Birney in New York.

AP Laserphoto

The success of inexpensive cars like the South Korean Hyundai have caught U.S. automakers attention.

The entry level represents different things to different makers: first-time access to the lucrative U.S. market, an opportunity to hold onto market share or a chance to hook future buyers for more expensive and profitable cars.

"It's the fastest-growing segment of the car business today. Between now and 1987 there'll be about 17 new entry-level cars on the market. The segment should approximate 1 million cars within the next year or so," said Jim Fuller, vice president of Volkswagen AG's U.S. sales arm.

Volkswagen plans to introduce its Fox, made by the German automaker's Brazilian subsidiary Volkswagen do Brasil, in the first quarter of 1987, importing 60,000 at a base price below $6,000.

"The key point is that it allows us access to the first-time buyer. We haven't had a true entry-level product in the VW franchise in the past 13 years, ever since the Beetle went away," Fuller said.

Ford Motor Co. also is aiming at the $6,000 entry-level market with plans to import 75,000 Korean-made Kia minicars under the Ford Festiva nameplate in 1987, Ford spokesman John Sieg said.

Meanwhile, Yugo and Hyundai intend to retain their lowest 1986 prices.

The first Yugos were sold in the United States in late August 1985. Since then, the company has sold more than 35,000 Yugo GV models base priced at $3,990.

Bricklin Industries plans to add sporty and convertible Yugos and introduce the Malaysian-made Proton Saga in 1988 at prices starting below $5,000.

"We will continue looking for the lowest-priced cars at the highest quality we can find," company spokesman Jonas Halperin said. "The philosophy is that we seek out, identify and import into the United States cars that we think that will have a market, even if in very low quantities."

Kaneb Services lays off 60 in restructuring move

HOUSTON (UPI) — Kaneb Services Inc., suffering from the continued depression in the oil and gas industry, said Friday it has laid off 60 people as part of a major financial and organizational restructuring.

About 23 percent of the company's administrative personnel are affected, a total of about 36 people. The exploration and production staff was reduced by 24.

The layoffs, together with other personnel changes, will save Kaneb an estimated $3.5 million a year, the company said.

Diamond M Co., Kaneb's offshore contract drilling subsidiary, also has implemented across-the-board wage and salary reductions. The cuts, effective Jan. 1, are expected to save an additional $1.1 million in the coming year.

"The outlook for oil and gas prices and for offshore contract drilling remains poor," said Chief Executive Officer and President John R. Barnes. "Survival for companies like Kaneb depends on the ability to reduce operating costs as much as possible and to structure debt obligations in such a way that cash can be conserved."

In the nine months ended Sept. 30, Kaneb reported net losses of $145 million, compared to net income of $24 million in the same period of 1985.

Kaneb Services is an international energy services company with operations in oil and gas exploration and production, offshore contract drilling and pipeline transportation.

Developers of biggest mall have plans to build in U.S.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — When it's bedtime in your theme room at the Fantasyland Hotel, you switch off the traffic lights and climb into the back of a Ford pickup truck.

Or you can hop into a gaslit Victorian coach-bed or watch a volcano erupt on the wall while dozing off in a Polynesian catamaran.

The newly opened $36 million hotel is another impossible dream realized by the four Ghermezian brothers, owners of West Edmonton Mall, the world's biggest and wildest indoor shopping complex.

They are planning on bringing their indoor concept to the United States in Bloomington, Minn., and possibly Niagara Falls, N.Y., where winters also are long and cold.

The Iranian emigre developers, launched into business by their father who sold Persian rugs in Montreal, originally planned a conventional mall with only a kiddie train for novelty.

But after three phases of construction starting in 1980, the $792 million mall has evolved into a fantasy-fulfilled wonderland covering eight city blocks.

After checking into the 360-room Fantasyland Hotel, you can:

—Surf on six-foot waves in the Waterpark, where the temperature is 82 degrees.

—Freefall on the 13-story Daring Drop of Doom in Fantasyland amusement park.

—Watch National Hockey League star Wayne Gretzky practice with the Edmonton Oilers.

—Go to church.

—Buy a car.

—Ride in a 40-ton submarine.

—Get married on a replica of Christopher Columbus' Santa Maria.

—Dine on Ukrainian pirogies or spicy Sichuan chicken.

—Roam through 828 stores, where you can spend $50 on a brass golf ball retriever at Abercrombie & Fitch or buy a pair of socks at Sears.

There are entry fees for the 10-acre Waterpark and most other recreations. The looped roller coaster has been closed since June when the rear car flew off the track and three people died.

The brothers Nader, Eskandar, Raphael and Bahman Ghermezian, all in their 40s, say they reach collective decisions by exchanging ideas with each other.

Secretive about their business and private lives, they are not reticent when it comes to the shoppers' mecca they created against initial local opposition in this western Canada oil city of 680,000.

"We call it the eighth wonder of the world," Nader, secretary of the family's holding company Triple Five Corp. Ltd., said in an interview.

"It's like a domed city. You can have the best vacation of your life without going outside. Half the tourists who come to Edmonton are here because of our project. They come from as far as Japan and Australia."

The mall's turnover was $561 million last year, nearly double sales elsewhere in North America for the same amount of retail space.

The 23,500 jobs generated, and the Ghermezians' plan for a $475 million shopping center in downtown Edmonton, have turned local doubters into believers.

CDs creating boom for ailing music industry

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Compact discs are creating a boom for the struggling music industry by offering music lovers stereo recordings free of snaps, crackles and pops.

The technology, relatively unknown three years ago, has sparked such a demand that music retailers said they are worried about running short of popular titles for the holiday season.

Sales this year may reach $1 billion, sparked in part by the declining prices of CD players and a greater understanding and appreciation of the technology among consumers.

In November, a three-disc set released by Bruce Springsteen on Columbia Records, was snapped up by eager fans in a buying frenzy that caught sold out its initial shipment to record retailers nationwide.

"The retail stores love it. They never made this kind of money on records before," said Ray Wasner, an analyst with the Yankee Group, a Boston market research and consulting firm.

Ken Sockolov, manager of a Tower Records store in San Francisco, said compact discs account for about 35 percent of the store's inventory. Two years ago, he said, there were only a handful of CDs in the store.

"We're selling a phenomenal amount. All CD sales now are about 30 percent of our total sales," he said.

Last year, an estimated 15 million compact discs were sold nationwide at an average price of between $15 and $16, almost twice the price of traditional records or cassette tapes.

A NUMBER OF ancilliary business have grown out of the CD boom, ranging from compact disc clubs similar to book-of-the-month clubs to a chain of franchised new-and-used compact disc stores in Southern California.

"It's definitly not a fad," Wasner said.

Compact discs looking nothing like traditional long-playing records. They are much smaller, about 4.7 inches in diameter, and are covered with a silvery aluminum-plastic coating, unlike the traditional black vinyl of records.

According to connoisseurs of fine recordings, the tiny compact discs pack a powerful punch, enhancing the clarity of the performance and adding a "you-were-there" feel to the music.

The discs are played on machines that use laser beams to read thousands of digitally coded musical signals embedded in pits on the playing surfaces. The players reconstruct the codes into music unimpaired by the scratches and warping that can affect conventional records.

When they appeared in 1983, compact disc players were seen as audiophiles' playthings — machines that, for a price, reproduced high-quality sound. The players were quickly snapped up by a relatively small band of classical-music buffs.

But the general audience, including younger consumers who favor rock music, shunned the high-priced devices. Only 35,000 compact disc players were sold in 1983, the first year the machines were available.

"HOW THE product got beyond that was strictly marketing. It took a lot of hard work," said Marc Finer, who was involved in the initial efforts to market the technology for Sony, the Japanese electronics concern.

Compact disc technology was developed by Sony and N.V. Philips of The Netherlands. Sony realized it needed to make the technology accessible to a mass market in order for compact discs to withstand the traditionally stong position of long-playing records and cassette recordings.

Sony and PolyGram, the English music conglomerate, joined forces to form the Compact Disc Group, an industry forum designed to spread the word of compact disc technology.

The group targeted leading rock and classical radio stations in the United States, offering free players and discs in exchange for plugs. In this instance, the plug was for a technology, not a brand name.

"The leading stations would play compact disc recordings day in and day out," Finer said.

The promotion helped bring compact disc technology to the ears of the record-buying public. Even though the music was distorted slightly by the conversion to radio frequency, listeners could hear the enhanced clarity of the compact disc recordings, Finer said.

Although the price of compact disc players has declined to as little as $99, the cost of the recorded discs has remained relatively high. An album that would sell for $8.98 costs between $12.98 and $14.98 on compact disc.

INDUSTRY OBSERVERS said the price of the recorded discs will drop as more factories are built in the United States.

"Most of the major record companies were very reluctant to invest in this technology at first," Finer said.

In November, Capitol-EMI Music commissioned its first compact disc plant in the United States. The factory, located in Jacksonville, Ill., can produce 7 million CDs annually and joins Capitol-EMI's family of compact disc manufacturing sites in Japan and Britain.

The Jacksonville plant's initial product will be a compact disc recording of Pink Floyd's "Dark Side of the Moon." The recording, in its CD form from Engalnd and Japan, already is Capitol's leading CD product with almost 500,000 copies sold, said Capitol spokeswoman Sue Satriano.

Capitol expects to begin releasing its catalogue of Frank Sinatra recordings and those of Nat King Cole as early as next month from the new Jacksonville plant. The move could open new markets of consumers to the compact disc technology.

The giant music company is currently in royalty litigation concerning the possible release of portions of its catalogue of recordings by the Beatles, Satriano said.

"When artists initially negotiated their recording rights, there were no CDs," she said. "Now we have to renegotiate."

IN JANUARY, Columbia Records, a unit of the CBS Records Group, plans to begin converting one of its New Jersey plants to accommodate the surging demand for compact discs. The site is expected to be online by 1990.

"The CD has made very good progress. Its growth pattern is very encouraging. We know the potential for players in the home and we are nowhere near the potential penetration in the marketplace," said Robert Altschuler, a vice president of the CBS Records Group.

Sales of the players, which can cost as little as $99, are expected to top 2 million units this year, according to the Electonic Industry Association.

"That makes the compact disc the fastest consumer electronic product since the advent of television," CD consultant Finer said.

The future of CDs will be enhanced if the price of the discs drops to a level comparable with traditional recordings.

"The only problem is the price of the discs. While player prices dropped, the CD prices have not," said Wasner of the Yankee Group.

Three years ago, discs sold for a discounted price of $16 and a list price of $20. Now, discounted discs sell for about $11 while full price is about $14.

"If prices don't start coming in line with records, I think people will start going back to records," Wasner said.

WITH MORE factories coming online, consumers should expect a better selection of compact disc titles at lower prices, analysts said. About 5,000 titles on nearly 100 labels are currently available on compact discs.

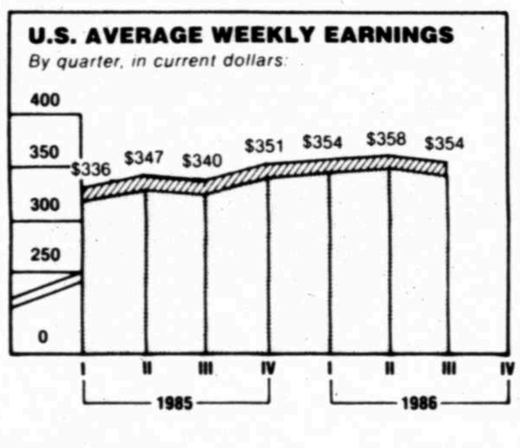

The recent success of Columbia's Springsteen set, though, may not signal the final acceptance of compact disc recordings by the mass consumer audience, Wasner said.

"A Springsteen set comes along every decade like 'Abbey Road' or 'Mad Dogs and Englishmen,'" he said, referring to the popular album by the Beatles in 1969 and a 1970 release by a touring band of rock superstars headed by singer Joe Cocker.

"The progress and growth of compact discs has been very impressive to everyone in the two years since they came into existence in this country," said Altschuler of CBS. "But that does not in my mind say we are witnessing the demise of the LP."

Average weekly earnings

In the third quarter 1986, average weekly earnings for the nation's 81 million full-time workers were $354 a week -- down $4 from the previous quarter, but still $14 higher than in the third quarter 1985.

Hyundai Motor Co., a subsidiary of the Korean Hyundai conglomerate, introduced its Excel models in late February and expected to finish 1986 with U.S. sales of about 160,000, said Max Jamiesson, vice president of Hyundai Motor America Inc.

Hyundai broke the record for an importer's first-year U.S. sales in November, when sales reached 146,470 cars.

The influx of low-end, low-priced imports isn't going to help the U.S. trade deficit or the U.S. unemployment picture, Ms. Keller said.

"But for the consumer, there's going to be more to choose from, and you'll get it at very, very low prices," she said. "How can you hate that?"

FEE

Support of the fee is easy for Johnston, because higher oil prices will help the staggering economy of Louisiana, where unemployment is highest in the nation.

But Johnston insists it is also good for the country.

"The basic, fundamental question is do you need a basic energy industry?" Johnston said. "Yes, we need it because we cannot depend on OPEC or any other group of foreigners to act in our national interest, to furnish us oil when we need it."

OPEC is the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and Johnston predicted its members would not be able to raise prices to an $18-a-barrel level sought by the cartel.

"The (domestic) industry cannot make it through these low-price years without a subsidy," Johnston said.

For the Energy Committee, Johnston's moving up to chairman in the newly Democratic Senate means little policy change. Johnston has worked closely with the former chairman, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who will be ranking minority member in the new Congress.

MALL

Six million tourists are expected in Edmonton this year, coming by charter plane and bus and driving up from the United States, 300 miles to the south.

"We have canceled our vacation to Europe so that we can visit your mega-mall," a Columbus, Ohio, couple wrote in one of 2,000 letters the company says it gets a month from fascinated Americans.

Initially attracted to Edmonton by oil-boom prosperity, lack of competition and a dreary seven-month winter perfect for indoor shopping, the Ghermezians have now turned their attention to the U.S. market.

They break ground in May in Minnesota for a $468 million mall at Bloomington, with plans for later commercial and hotel phases that will out-monster Edmonton.

Approached by 34 cities in North America and Western Europe, the Ghermezians are also close to a decision on a third mega-mall in Niagara Falls, N.Y., or Toronto, an urban corridor of vast potential.

"Within 500 miles of the Niagara-Toronto area there are 154 million people, half the population of North America," said the company public affairs director, Deane Eldredge.

The brothers are leaning toward New York state because of lucrative incentives, including a site 200 yards from Niagara Falls.

"This wouldn't be a mega-project, it would be double-mega," Nader said. But he added that economic feasibility studies were not completed. "We don't build on glory. It has to make sense."

In "The Money Rustlers," a study of self-made millionaires in the Canadian West, authors Paul Grescoe and David Cruise attributed the Ghermezians' phenomenal growth to their skill in acquiring land cheaply and winning tax and other concessions from local governments.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

IRS won't allow deduction of subscriptions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has slammed the door on a widely promoted idea for getting around a provision in the new tax-overhaul law.

The IRS issued a notice that it will not permit full deduction on 1986 returns of the cost of prepaid multi-year subscriptions to business or investment publications. Only the portion of the expense that applies to the first year of the subscription will be deductible in the first year, the agency said Friday.

The same principle applies to prepayment of certain other deductible expenses, such as union dues, the IRS said.

Business inventories pile up while sales drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unsold merchandise piled up in businesses' inventories at the fastest pace in more than two years during October as sales dropped a sharp 1.6 percent, the Commerce Department said.

A prolonged increase in inventories almost surely would lead to production cutbacks that would hamper national economic growth, but economists generally said Friday's figures were no cause for alarm.

A major reason for the 0.6 percent inventory buildup was an October new-car sales plunge that since has eased, they noted.

Residents of 33 states can expect higher taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of 33 states will see their state income taxes increase, in many cases considerably, unless legislatures adjust their laws for the effects of federal tax changes, a bipartisan commission said.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations said Friday that the impact of the new federal tax law will be so broad that many states are likely to alter their income tax structures in response to it.

Louisiana, with a 28 percent rise, would see the biggest percentage impact as a result of the change, the study said. Colorado was listed next at 22 percent.

Deficit deepens year after Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after President Reagan signed the landmark Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, the federal government is deeper in debt than ever.

But even though the Supreme Court knocked out the law's key enforcement mechanism and the budget deficit for 1986 soared to a record $220.7 billion, the jury is still out on whether the ambitious legislation forever has changed the course of federal spending habits or was only an elaborate gesture of futility.

Jury still out in De Lorean racketeering trial

DETROIT (AP) — Jurors in the fraud and racketeering trial of former sports-car maker John Z. De Lorean are still without a verdict after a judged replaced a juror and ordered to deliberate anew.

The dismissal came on the third day of deliberations by the jury, which was ordered to reconvene today.

Mattel expects quarterly loss due to low sales

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Mattel Inc., the country's second largest toymaker, predicts a fourth quarter loss because of lower than expected U.S. sales, including during the crucial Christmas season.

Friday's announcement followed third-quarter losses in its domestic operations that triggered an undisclosed number of layoffs at Mattel.

Offer to purchase Metrocolor Lab dropped

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — A partnership representing Technicolor has dropped a bid to buy Metrocolor Lab from Lorimar-Telepictures Corp. for $72 million because of a federal antitrust lawsuit filed to block the sale.

The purchase offer had been made by Processing Partners, a limited partnership that includes the McAndrews & Forbes Group, which is controlled by New York investor Ronald O. Perelman and is the parent of Technicolor.

The Justice Department filed suit last Wednesday, saying the sale would lessen competition by leaving Hollywood with just two film processing labs. The offer was dropped last Friday.

Chargit, Inc. files for bankruptcy protection

NEW YORK (AP) — Chargit Inc., a pioneer in telephone ticket sales, has filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy law.

The company, which also processes credit card transactions, said Friday in a filing with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court that its financial problems stemmed from weak cash flow.

At the same time the Bowery Savings Bank, which used Chargit as a conduit for payments from Mastercard and Visa to merchants, alleged Chargit had been using the Visa and Mastercard funds for "inappropriate" purposes for years.

Eastern, Continental sales forces combined

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Air Corp. has combined the sales operations of Eastern Airlines and Continental Airlines, the two major subsidiaries that together form the largest U.S. commercial flying network.

Continental-Eastern Sales Inc. will handle all sales activities in the United States for Continental and Eastern, with nine regional offices, airline executives told a news conference Friday.

IADC plans final meeting of 1986

Billy Joel constructs 'Bridge' between present, past

By DIVINA INFUSINO
Copley News Service

Billy Joel is amazed by the sight in front of him.

While talking on the phone from his hotel room in Houston, he watched his tour crew and his wife Christie Brinkley come up to the ninth green right outside his window.

"These guys are actually playing golf. I don't believe this. Pretty soon, they're going to be voting Republican," he snickers. "They've roped Christie into going golfing. And she's actually into it!"

Joel is on his first tour in two and one-half years. Since the last tour, more has changed than just the recreational activities of his road crew.

It's not just that this longtime piano man and pop hit-maker is 37 years old, and that now when he frenetically runs around the stage he tends to sprain his ankle as he did twice so far this tour. Or that the show runs longer than ever. Or even that Ms. Brinkley, his wife for 18 months, and their baby, Alexa Ray, are traveling with him.

"What's really different is the way I'm perceiving this tour. The way I'm perceiving my life these days," said Joel. "Every year since 1970, I was on the road for six to nine months at a time. But after the tour following the 'Innocent Man' album, I took time off to lead a regular life, to catch up with being a human being again.

"I found out what it was like to have a personal relationship again, to have a family. I needed to do that, just to replenish my stock of ideas for material. Otherwise I'd still be talking like I was 25 years old. It's OK to get older as a songwriter, as long as you are maturing and growing.

"The biggest change in my perception came with the baby," Joel continued without much prompting. "Suddenly you're not the center of the universe anymore. A baby expands your concept of time. You start thinking beyond your own lifetime, and it makes you think differently about everything — the quality of food, the air, politics, everything."

JOEL SAID THAT these realizations showed up in his new album, "The Bridge," but not directly and not in his lyrics. "I never write an autobiographical album. If anything, I don't like to give out a lot of information about myself. My emotional, physical and philosophical state is expressed in the music, more than the lyrics."

Really? Then what did the broad range of styles in "The Bridge"— everything from Gershwin-inspired pop-blues to high-energy rock 'n' roll — reveal about their author, a man raised by his mother in the working-class suburb of Hicksville, Long Island, after his father left the family when Joel was 10?

"With the preceding albums, 'Glass Houses,' 'Nylon Curtain' and 'Innocent Man,' I think I went away from my inherent songwriting style," Joel said. "With my earlier albums, 'The Stranger' and '52nd Street,' I was typecast. I felt my feet were encased in clay. I had to get away from that style to do something different. Now I'm not afraid to be the songwriter I was before."

It was those "different" albums, especially "The Nylon Curtain," with its Vietnam lament, "Goodnight Saigon," and its blue-collar protest song, "Allentown," that brought him critical acceptance. Before then, Joel's well-crafted but derivative songwriting was the music that his hometown New York critics loved to hate.

" 'The Nylon Curtain' led to some historical revisionism, it seems. OK, let's perceive Billy Joel differently now that he has a social conscience. Well that's B.S.," he said, his New York accent acquiring more bite. "All my stuff has been about humanity. I'm the first to admit that I'm not dealing with big issues."

JOEL BRISTLES when he's accused of being careerist first, and a musician second: "Really, I just go whichever way the wind blows me. I don't have this great plan, although there are people in this business who do. I've read things about me that said, 'Oh "The Nylon Curtain" was a critics' favorite, but it didn't sell that well, so he followed it with a commercial album, "An Innocent Man.' "

"Give me a break," he huffed. "I'm not that Machiavellian. I can't decide, 'Well, OK, now I'll write a whole bunch of hit songs.' I don't know who can do that.

"My music is really at the mercy of my own imagination — which I don't always like. I'd like to have a little more control over what I'm going to write. But I'll be damned if I'm going to put blinders on my imagination, whether it's not accepted critically or commercially. I just have to go with what I'm feeling at the time."

What was he feeling during "An Innocent Man," a homage to '50s and '60s rhythm and blues? Was he innocent of false accusations? Was he innocent emotionally? The album followed his divorce from Elizabeth Weber, his first wife of many years and former manager.

"I was running around and dating, all the stuff I hadn't done in a long time. I was feeling emotions that I hadn't experienced since I was a teen-ager," Joel said. "I was feeling passionate, love, man, woman, all that stuff. And that album came out of those feelings."

Some thought "An Innocent Man" was more of a rip-off of past rhythm and blues rather than a tribute.

"Yes, I copped a lot of different styles. I'm not denying that at all," Joel said without defensiveness.

"Kansas Still Life" by crop artist Stan Herd is a field-size art work on a farm near Eudora, Kan. Herd normally does conventional-size paintings of Kansas landscapes and Old West murals but has done three works of crop art in the last five years.

Earthen art

EUDORA, Kan. — Every day for several weeks light airplanes and helicopters have been circling over Junior and Elizabeth Neis' 1,000-acre farm on the outskirts of this small Kansas town.

And passengers in commercial airliners that fly over the farm on landing patterns into the Kansas City Airport have been oohing and aahing at the view.

What they see appears to be a gigantic vase containing three huge sunflowers standing on a quilt-covered table top in the midst of acres and acres of wheat.

It is a 20-acre, living, growing mural the size of 14 football fields created from row after row of sunflowers, soybeans, clover and plowed earth in vivid yellow, rust, green and earthen colors. The vase is 400 feet tall; the sunflowers are each 400 feet in circumference.

It is the latest work of crop art by Stan Herd of nearby Lawrence.

Herd, 36, who normally does conventional-sized paintings of rural Kansas landscapes and murals depicting scenes of the Old West, in the last five years has created three works of crop art so immense that it has been possible to view them only from the air.

In 1981 the crop artist did a 160-acre portrait of Kiowa Indian chief Satanta out of wheat and stubble. Two years later he did a 160-acre portrait of Will Rogers in wheat, milo and plowed earth. Both were on farms near Dodge City.

"I grew up on a Protection, Kan., farm. I'm the product of the land, a plowboy at heart," the artist said. "Crop art gets me out of the city, back to my roots."

He said that crop art "satisfies the terrible pangs and powerful pull of wanting to be back on a combine, to be sitting on a tractor again. I miss the smell of the earth out in the country. I miss being in the fields when storms move in, miss watching hawks soar overhead, miss seeing coyotes."

It took him a month and a half, off and on, to do the vase with the sunflowers, which he calls "Kansas Still Life." It is his personal birthday greeting to Kansas, the Sunflower state, which is celebrating its 125th anniversary.

The earthen pot, he noted, represents the Kansa Indians, "the people of the Southwind," who gave the state its name.

As an artist I did it all, plowed the field, planted the crops, fertilized it, irrigated it, cut it.

"I get goose bumps whenever I fly over it," Herd said as the Cessna 172 circled over "Kansas Still Life" 1,000 feet above ground.

"It looks different every time. I see it from the air once or twice a week. On the ground it looks just like another 20 acres of crops. Last time I was up the soybeans were green. Wow! Look at them now. What great fall colors."

The soybeans, forming a backdrop for the vase in the lines on the table-top quilt, were turning to rust color. The sunflowers no longer in bloom were brown. The clover was shades of green, the vase a variety of earthen colors.

"I always have been fascinated with patterns on farmland seen from the air," Herd said. "There are all kinds of images on the ground. Wind blowing across wheat fields forms a myriad of flowing designs. One day out of the blue I thought maybe I should do a huge mural using crops on a farm."

One of the artist's heroes since childhood is the Kiowa Indian chief Satanta, known as the Great Orator of the Plains. Herd did a portrait of Satanta by plowing wheat and milo stubble and turning up the ground to form the Indian's facial features.

He worked from a grid pattern, with each 100 feet of farmland marked off to correspond to one inch in his sketch.

Unlike his paintings and building murals, crop art so far has not made Herd any money. It costs him time and money.

"These huge works of art give me recognition. I have hoped all along some large corporation might see some value in what I'm doing for television commercials. But so far that hasn't happened," he said.

He said that he has contacted officials at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York suggesting he might do a portrait of the late president the size of several football fields in the approach pattern, but has had no response.

He has thought of contacting several major airports suggesting other huge designs visible to passengers as they fly in and out.

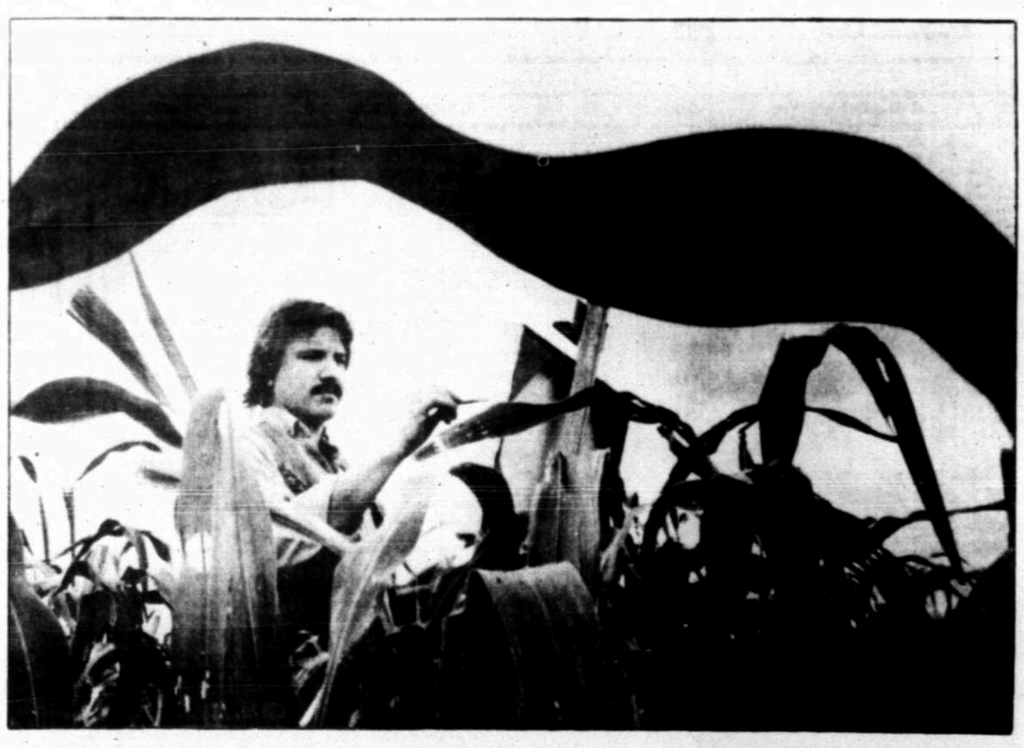

So far, however, it has been strictly a labor of love for him.

But pilot Rod Mohr, 55, based at the Lawrence Airport, said that he and other light-plane and helicopter pilots in the area were experiencing "a bonanza in charters from people wanting to see the crop art at Eudora."

For the Neis family, having a 20-acre mural has been, as Junior, 63, puts it, "just about the most exciting thing that's ever happened around these parts."

"Airplanes circle overhead every day, sometimes three or four at a time. The entire Kansas Art Commission viewed Stan's artwork from the sky and later visited the farm. And we're still earning money from crops harvested from the mural."

In a letter that Jean Kindig of Boulder, Colo., sent to her sister, Elizabeth Neis, she wrote, "I never thought Junior would be a patron of the arts."

Artist Stan Herd paints among cornstalks on a Kansas farm. In addition to landscapes and Old West murals, Herd has produced three field-size works of crop art best viewed from an airplane.

Philippine rebels fire on army patrol in violation of cease-fire

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The army said about 100 Communist rebels fired today on an army patrol camp on Panay Island, and the region's military commander was quoted as calling it a violation of the 60-day-old cease-fire.

Col. Benigno Casio said by telephone from Iloilo City on Panay that 19 soldiers in the camp returned fire and the rebels withdrew. There were no reports of casualties.

The Cabinet meanwhile decided unanimously it would be against national interests for ousted President Ferdinand E. Marcos to return from Hawaiian exile for the funeral of his sister, who died Sunday.

Before her death, a radio station broadcast a tape in which Marcos said he hoped to return for the Christmas holidays.

About 1,000 Marcos loyalists rallied Sunday in Manila to hear speakers condemn President Corazon Aquino's 60-day cease-fire with the Communist New People's Army, which took effect Wednesday.

The government's Philippine News Agency quoted Brig. Gen. Domingo Rio, commander of the Western Visayas region, as saying today's shooting was "a clear violation" of the truce.

Maj. Guillermo Matiling said by telephone from Iloilo City that the shooting apparently was intended as harassment and was not an attempt to overrun the camp, about 235 miles south of Manila.

Casio said rebels encircled the camp and began firing with small arms about 7 a.m. but withdrew because of "the superiority of fire power" from the government forces.

The Philippine News Agency called it the "first major fighting" since the cease-fire began, but quoted the military as saying it may have been the rebels' sixth or seventh truce violation.

The military claims the rebels have violated the agreement by carrying arms in "population centers." A national cease-fire monitoring committee was meeting today to decide if "population centers" include remote towns that long have been controlled by the rebelsin their 17-year insurgency.

Marcos's sister, Elizabeth Marcos-Keon, 65, died Sunday in a Manila hospital of a heart ailment. After today's special Cabinet meeting, presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Marcos had not asked for permission to return for the funeral.

But Benigno said any such request would be refused because a Marcos return "would not be in the national interest." Marcos has lived in Hawaii since being ousted in February in a miltary-civilian revolt.

Special presidential adviser Aquilino Pimentel said the Cabinet decision was unanimous.

Marcos' surviving sister, Fortuna Marcos-Barba, told The Associated Press she informed him of their sister's death by telephone.

"I suppose he would want to come back, but even if he has all the desire in the world, if he would not be allowed to come back, what can he do," she said. She said before the Cabinet met that the family might ask the government to allow Marcos to attend the funeral.

In Honolulu, Marcos spokesman Gemmo Trinidad would say only: "This is a family matter and the political issues related to his sister's death should not be raised."

Police capture Sikh terrorist leader

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police in the northern Indian state of Punjab captured India's top Sikh terrorist leader, Dhanna Singh, the state police chief said today.

Police Director-General Julius F. Rebeiro also reported the arrest of Amrik Singh, head of a small but highly committed terrorist group. Amrik Singh had sneaked back into India after spending two years in neighboring Pakistan, he said.

Dhanna Singh, 32, was arrested late Sunday while he was traveling by bus in Kapurthala district, 215 miles northwest of New Delhi, Rebeiro said.

"This is a big catch...This man was masterminding a lot of the violence," he said by telephone.

Dhanna Singh is the leader of a five-member presidium appointed by underground Sikh militants to take charge of the sect's religious affairs and shrines. The five went underground April 30 after declaring the formation of "Khalistan," an independent Sikh nation.

Amrik Singh, the other arrested extremist leader, was picked up early Sunday in a raid by police and paramilitary troops on his native village of Shahpur Goraya, 280 miles northwest of New Delhi, near the border with Pakistan, Rebeiro said.

The men are expected to be held under the anti-terrorist laws which allow jailing for up to 18 months without specific charges or trial.

Government television said Amrik Singh, chief of the Akal Federation group, confessed to police interrogators that he directed the military training of Sikh dissidents in Pakistan camps for two years.

Pakistan denies training and arming Sikh rebels, but residents of border villagers in Pakistan say hundreds of Sikh youths have sneaked across the frontier to take up arms.

Dhanna Singh had emerged the most powerful leader of the underground extremists after the Aug. 9 capture of Manbir Singh, the self-styled general of the Khalistan Commonda Force.

The Commondo Force has claimed responsibility for most of the terrorist slayings in India since late 1984.

The capture of two extremist leaders capped a series of successes by security forces since they launched a statewide anti-terrorist offensive in Punjab last June.

So far, nearly 175 underground rebels have been captured or killed by security forces.

Sikh militants have killed more than 650 people this year alone in an escalating terrorist campaign aimed at greater autonomy or independence for Punjab, home of the 13-million-member Sikh sect.

The growing terrorist violence has triggered the flight of thousands of Hindus from the Punjab countryside. It has increased national criticism of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's Punjab policy and spurred demands for the dismissal of the 14-month state government dominated by Sikh moderates.

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

FORD F-Series Strengthened

Ford Motor Co. - The leadership position of Ford F-Series pickup trucks— is strengthened in 1987 with a new aerodynamic design, and a host of performance, comfort and convenience improvements.

"The 1987 F-Series pickup meets the challenges of today's marketplace and will help to ensure that Ford dealers remain the industry's tough-truck leaders," said Mr. Robert L. Rewey, Ford Motor Company vice president and Ford Division general manager. "F-Series changes are evolutionary, and are designed to upgrade truck quality, performance and convenience features."

Major refinements include a rear antilock brake system and the addition of electronic fuel injection (EFI) to the standard 4.9-liter in-line six-cylinder engine.

The new brake system, a significant advancement in light-truck brake technology, uses an electronic sensor, an on-board computer and special control valves to help the driver bring the vehicle to straight stops in hard-braking situations by preventing the truck's rear wheels from locking up in most situations, regardless of truck load or road conditions.

"This is particularly important in light trucks because of the big difference in vehicle handling and braking characteristics under empty and fully loaded conditions," Mr. Rewey said.

Addition of standard port fuel injection (EFI) to the Ford 4.9-liter engine increases horsepower by 20 percent and torque by six percent, and will improve cold-start performance.

Ford F-Series pickus for 1987 offer a variety of other functional improvements including:

- A new transfer case for 4x4 models that requires less shift effort than the previous design. Addition of a constant displacement hydraulic pump provides lubrication so that vehicles with manual locking hubs can be towed unlimited distances at speeds up to 55 miles an hour without disengaging the driveshaft.
- Windshield washer reservoir capacity that is increased from 62 to 80 ounces, and a new see-through master brake cylinder reservoir that makes it easier to check brake fluid levels.
- Access to fuses through a removable panel below the steering wheel is quicker and easier than in previous trucks, and five extra replacement fuses are provided.

The 1987 F-Series pickups also feature several refinements that improve ride and handling. For example, a redesigned Ford Twin-I-Beam independent front suspension incorporates adjustable caster and camber for longer tire wear and easier alignment.

New gas-pressurized shock absorbers enhance ride quality over smooth and rough roads, and all-season radial tires on F-250 and F-350 models improve off-road traction.

Noise levels are lowered through such innovations as aluminum drive shafts and hydro-elastic engine mounts.

Aerodynamic design changes produce a more contemporary looking "Ford tough" truck, better fuel economy and less wind noise.

Exterior changes include impact-resistant aero headlamps, wrap-around parking lights, a new grille, fenders and hood, a new chrome front bumper with integral spoiler on F-150 models, plus other styling refinements. With the new aero-type headlamps, only the halogen bulb has to be replaced -- a simple chore that requires no special tools.

On the inside, 1987 F-Series pickups feature an entirely new instrument panel with easy-to-read back-lit gauges, a center mounted speedometer, a large locking glove box, a standard electronic AM radio, four standard climate control outlets and side window demisters.

Standard equipment includes a new steering wheel, interior trim and sew styles, and a shoulder-and-lap safety-belt system with tension relief. The regular cab XLT high series trim level includes flight bench with center fold down arm rests.
