Fatal accident

One-year-old Heather Lynn Estrada Pickens died early Sunday when this car, driven by her mother, was hit by a 1979 Chevrolet pickup truck driven by 17-year-old Lonnie Vick Williamson of 3301 Delano. The girl's mother, 20-year-old Diana Kim Pickens of 4412 Dengar, was in critical condition this morning with severe head and face injuries at Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. The accident occurred at the intersection of Andrews Highway and Midkiff Road about 12:35 a.m. Sunday. Witnesses told police Williamson, an electrician, was traveling at a high rate of speed and ran a red light at the intersection. He was jailed and the case is to be turned over to the district attorney's office for further investigation.

Pioneer 10 spacecraft leaves solar system

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — The Pioneer 10 explorer sped from Earth's solar system today, the first man-made object to pass the farthest known planets — a symbol of humanity's aspirations hurtling into eternity.

Scientists cheered and applauded as the 570-pound spaceship — the first to challenge the unknown beyond Mars — became the first artifact of the space age to sail beyond the nine known planets.

"It's sort of like Columbus discovering the new world," said assistant flight director Alan Fernquist.

Space agency workers handed Jack Dwyer, chief of spacecraft operations, a trident — the three-pronged spear carried by the mythical god Neptune — as Pioneer passed Neptune's orbit.

Bearing a gold-plated message to any other residents of the cosmos who might someday find it, Pioneer 10 began its endless voyage among the stars.

The ship crossed the orbit of Neptune at 7 a.m. CDT at 30,558 mph. Though Pluto normally is the outermost planet, its egg-shaped orbit has brought it closer to Earth than Neptune for the next 16 years.

"The name Pioneer is very, very appropriate," said John Wolfe of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, where Pioneer's journey was coordinated.

"Pioneer 10 was a pathfinder... It's got so many firsts, but the biggie is that it is leaving the solar system," said Wolfe, who was chief scientist during Pioneer's dramatic encounter with Jupiter in December 1973.

Launched March 3, 1972, the little ship safely crossed the asteroid belt, a band of giant rocks beyond Mars that some scientists feared would smash it.

As Pioneer closed on Jupiter, rapidly intensifying radiation fields seemed destined to destroy it, said retired Ames engineer Charles Hall, who was project manager.

But the radiation, although "500 times the lethal dose for a human," peaked before it was severe enough to cook Pioneer's electronics.

"The spacecraft has performed beyond all hope or expectation," Hall said. "I don't recall anything that it was supposed to do that it didn't do."

It covered 3½ billion miles and only one scientific instrument failed. It was designed to last 21 months; it is working after 11 years.

Just in case there's anyone out there to stumble across the ship, a plaque bolted to Pioneer's side will tell them what sort of creatures sent it.

The plaque shows a naked man and woman — their undress the cause of consternation a decade ago — the location of the sun, and a chart of the nine planets. An arrow indicates Pioneer came from the third planet from the sun.

"It's like a note in a bottle that you throw overboard in the middle of the ocean," Wolfe said. "The plaque was put aboard for us, not for them. We're sending a symbol out because we kind of think we're not alone in this universe."

Pioneer still is collecting data and NASA expects to be in contact with this most distant emissary of humanity for another decade.

As it pufls still farther from home, Pioneer will search for the far edge of the heliosphere, the tear-shaped bubble in space where our sun's influence is supreme.

Dial Pioneer and make longest long-distance call

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Until 10 p.m. CDT tonight, callers can dial a special extra-long distance telephone number to hear a message from Pioneer 10, the first man-made object to leave the solar system.

For 50 cents, curious listeners can dial 1-900-410-4111 and hear inscrutable beeps and screeches from outer space.

The space noise, which sounds like computers' electronic talk from "Star Wars," takes four hours to travel from the robot probe 3.5 billion miles away to Earth's receivers.

Those who call are thanked for making "the longest long-distance phone call ever," by a spokesman for TRW Inc. on an explanatory tape that plays with the transmission. TRW, based here, designed and built Pioneer 10.

"It's so people can call and hear live sounds from the edge of the solar system by the first human-made objects to leave it," TRW spokesman Julian Levine said Friday.

The special telephone link began shortly after 6:30 a.m. CDT and was to continue through 10 p.m., Ms. Levine said. The cost of the call is automatically tacked onto a caller's phone bill.

Some people who called too early today were told the number was not in service. It had not been scheduled to be connected until 7 a.m. CDT, and TRW officials could be reached in the predawn hours to determine if the early startup resulted from those calls.

Pioneer's path crossed the orbit of Neptune at 7 a.m. CDT today.

Computer lets woman walk in graduation

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Nan Davis' high school graduation ended in tragedy: an auto crash left her paralyzed from the waist down. But five years later, her college graduation ended on a note of personal triumph.

With 1,300 fellow Wright State University graduates and thousands of spectators watching, Miss Davis, 23, stepped from her wheelchair and walked 10 feet to receive her diploma. It was the first time she had walked in public since her graduation from St. Marys High School in 1978.

Her steps were made possible by a camera-sized computer that told her paralyzed muscles how to move and then triggered electrical impulses to move them.

"The last time she walked in public...was in high school, and she wanted to walk in her college graduation," said Dr. Jerrold Petrofsky, executive director of Wright State University's National Center for Rehabilitation Engineering and developer of the computer system that enabled Miss Davis to walk.

The dramatic walk came Saturday near the end of a two-hour commencement ceremony at the University of Dayton Arena. With Petrofsky and fellow researcher Dr. Chandler Phillips supporting her arms, Miss Davis' stepped forward to the commands of the computer.

"This is a special day for all of us," she said when she reached the podium to receive her bachelor's degree in elementary education. She then delivered a 60-second speech that ended, "Thank you all, and congratulations."

Miss Davis was a high school sprinter and planned to run track in college until the graduation-night crash. Her mother, Louise, said Miss Davis was a passenger in a car being driven by a friend, who wasn't injured in the one-car accident.

Last November, Miss Davis became the first paraplegic in Petrofsky's research project at Wright State to walk with the aid of computer-controlled electrical stimulation. To take those first steps, she wore a safety harness and held on to two steel parallel bars.

AP Laserphoto

Petrofsky said Miss Davis now can walk 50 to 60 feet using only canes for support.

"It's a fraction of what she's capable of doing," he said.

In Petrofsky's system, eight sensors on Miss Davis' body monitor the position and movement of various body parts. The sensors tell the computer the position of the legs, so the computer knows which muscles to electrically stimulate next to achieve coordination. Up to 36 electrodes are placed on Miss Davis' paralyzed muscles to force them to move.

Last fall, the computer used to help Miss Davis walk was stationary, about the size of a room wall, Petrofsky said. The computer she used to walk for her diploma was about 4 inches by 6 inches and less than an inch thick.

Soviet leaders to name president

An Analysis

By STEVEN R. HURST

MOSCOW (AP) — The top Soviet leadership, its ranks thinned by death and its two most powerful figures thought to be seriously ill, will meet this week and probably name a president, filling a job left vacant since Leonid I. Brezhnev died seven months ago.

When Yuri V. Andropov moved swiftly to succeed Brezhnev as Communist Party chief last November, he also was widely expected to become president.

Andropov's failure to assume that prestigious but largely ceremonial post or to install one of his supporters as president is viewed as one of the most telling signs that the Kremlin has been wracked by internal power struggles since last November.

If a new president is now chosen, as most Soviet sources predict, the selection would be approved by the national parliament, known as the Supreme Soviet, at its summer session opening Thursday. However, the actual selection of a new president and decisions on any other major job shifts will be made at a preceding plenary session of the 300-plus central committee.

Who will become president is uncertain, although official Soviet sources have said Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, 74, is the most likely candidate and would probably turn his military duties over to Deputy Minister Vasily I. Petrov, 66.

Western diplomats who follow events surrounding the Soviet leadership are skeptical, however, that Ustinov would give up his powerful defense post for the presidency.

The central committee traditionally meets a day or two in advance of the parliamentary meeting to sign off on major personnel and policy decisions of the ruling Politburo.

Only 11 men now serve on that secretive body, led by Andropov. He turns 69 on Wednesday and is reportedly suffering from a number of serious ailments, including heart and kidney problems, diabetes and perhaps Parkinson's disease.

His chief Politburo rival, ideologist Konstantin U. Chernenko, 71, also has been ill recently with pneumonia and has not looked healthy in subsequent public appearances.

Sources who saw both men last Monday claimed they looked very frail. Andropov appeared worse, they said, unable to walk unassisted or to seat himself without help during a banquet for visiting Finnish President Mauno Koivisto.

Politburo membership fell to its lowest number in recent history with the May 29 death of Arvid Y. Pelshe at age 84. His death capped a 17-month period in which the top three Soviet politicians died or retired.

Mikhail A. Suslov, long the party'sNo. 2 man, died in January 1982. Brezhnev, after 18 years as Kremlin leader, died 10 months later. Andrei P. Kirilenko, for years viewed as Brezhnev's successor, was retired two days after the former Soviet leader suffered a fatal heart attack.

In the meantime, only Geidar A. Aliev, the 60-year-old former party boss in the southern republic of Azerbaijan, has been elevated to the ruling body and many Soviet sources believe that his promotion had been agreed upon before Brezhnev died.

After taking over from Brezhnev as party leader, Andropov made 16 major personnel changes, instituted a tough worker discipline campaign and a crackdown on corruption. His hold on power seemed to be increasing until mid-March when he reportedly was hospitalized with heart and kidney trouble.

Soviet sources said that during Andropov's hospitalization, Chernenko was able to rally enough party leaders to block a plenary session of the central committee slated for the end of March.

The Chernenko faction was said to oppose Andropov's domestic policies and personnel changes.

The Andropov faction — thought to include Ustinov, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, Leningrad party boss Grigory V. Romanov and Ukraine party chief Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky — responded to the challenge by naming Gromyko first deputy premier.

Collection displayed in honor of Flag Day

On June 14, 1777, a flag was introduced to this embattled nation. It held 13 bright stars in a field of blue and 13 stripes of red and white. The "Flag of 1777" soon gained widespread acceptance throughout the 13 colonies, symbolizing the land, people and ideals of the nation.

In honor of the flag and the country it symbolizes, June 14 has been named a day of national observance, celebrated by public and private displays of the national flag.

On Tuesday, the Midland Elks Lodge, 2501 W. Illinois Ave., will display a collection of eight U.S. flags in recognition of Flag Day. Spanning the nation's history from the American Revolution to the present, the collection will feature the Continental Navy's "Don't Tread On Me" flag and the Bennington Flag, the first U.S. flag flown in battle. Also on display will be the "Avenue of Flags," a collection of modern flags from different states and nations.

At 5 p.m. Tuesday, Boy Scouts from Midland's Troop 270 will perform a short ceremony and salute to the Flag at the Elk Lodges. The public is invited.

Begun unofficially by the Elk's Club in the late 19th century, Flag Day wasn't nationally recognized until President Woodrow Wilson established it as an annual national celebration in 1916. Since then, June 14 has become a day for homes and public buildings to display the "Stars and Stripes" and a time for many patriotic organizations to put on parades and programs.

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Tuesday for south Florida, the Northwest and stretching from Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana to Texas.

Cooler temperatures forecast

Fair skies and cooler temperatures are in store for Midland tonight and Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service forecast.

Tonight should be fair with the low in the low 60s and winds north-northeast at 5-15 mph. Tuesday is expected to be fair and cooler with the high in the mid-80s and winds north-northeast at 5-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 97 dropped seven degrees short of the record 104 set in 1947. The overnight low of 65 compares with a record low for this date of 57 set in 1979.

With no precipitation expected, monthly and yearly rainfall amounts should hold steady at 0.02 of an inch and 2.19 inches, respectively.

Sunset tonight is at 8:55 p.m.; sunrise Tuesday comes at 6:42 a.m.

Beach Boys a hit at White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beach Boys lead singer Mike Love paid first lady Nancy Reagan what may be his highest compliment.

"She's a 'California Girl,'" Love said in dedicating the rock 'n roll group's hit song to Mrs. Reagan during a performance at the White House on Sunday.

For president and performers alike, it was an upbeat end to what began as an embarrassing faux pas two months ago, when Interior Secretary James G. Watt banned the Beach Boys from giving a Fourth of July concert in the nation's capital.

Watt had decided that rock groups attracted the "wrong element" and instead invited Las Vegas casino singer Wayne Newton to entertain at the Independence Day concert on the national Mall.

The secretary later learned, however, that the Beach Boys' fans included the president, his wife and a number of other top Reagan administration officials, and apologized to the rock group. The entire episode, including Sunday's performance, attracted a great deal of news coverage.

"We are very honored and proud to have you here at the White House," the president said. "It's everybody's house."

"If you did not believe our whole family has been fans of yours for a long time, just look at Nancy," said the president, pointing to a beaming first lady standing arm-in-arm on stage with Love.

"We were looking forward to seeing them on the Fourth of July," said Reagan. "I'm glad they got here early."

President and Mrs. Reagan greet members of the Beach Boys at the White House on Sunday. The group entertained participants in the Special Olympics that were held on the South Lawn.

The Beach Boys attracted hundreds of thousands to the Mall when they gave free Independence Day concerts in 1980 and 1981.

Watt was invited to the White House concert, which followed a reception in honor of the Special Olympics, but the Interior Department said he was in Florida to deliver a speech.

On the makeshift stage inside an enormous white tent where 800 guests were seated at round tables, the Beach Boys, some of them dressed in shorts and sneakers, seemed to enjoy the attention, especially when a standing ovation and shouts of "More! More!" led to two encores.

"I think that this is an audience which isn't altogether replete with undesirable elements," cracked Love. "I think we have a lot of very desirable elements here. So we are going to go ahead and do our thing."

The guests included Eunice Shriver Kennedy, who founded the Special Olympics for retarded youngsters, and her family; Ethel Kennedy, widow of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, and several of her children; and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and his son, Edward Jr.

Also appearing were Christopher Reeve, star of "Superman III," which the Special Olympians had viewed before coming to the White House, as well as actors Robert Vaughn and Susan St. James and sportscaster Frank Gifford.

The Beach Boys sang songs they made popular in the 1960s such as "Good Vibrations," "Fun, Fun, Fun," and a surfing medley including "Surfing USA."

Mrs. Reagan, proclaiming "I like the Beach Boys," had called the group to apologize after Watt made his remarks.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, who attended the concert as a guest, said afterward: "With this performance, the Beach Boys are back in good graces at the White House."

The first lady invited them to entertain at the picnic lunch and reception when she learned they were playing at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium after a Team America soccer game.

The group's performance earlier in the day at RFK Stadium was also a big hit. There were more than 50,000 fans on hand for the 55-minute performance, prompting Love to "thank all you undesirable elements for coming."

Weinberger: Policy to help countries' defense

No plan to use American troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even though the limit on military advisers to El Salvador could be more flexible, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says he can't foresee a situation requiring American troops in Central America.

"We do not see any contingency in which American troops would be used or needed in Central America," Weinberger said Sunday after he was asked if there was a plan for sending U.S. troops to stop an invasion by communist of Soviet-backed troops.

"The basis of our policy" is helping governments such as El Salvador's defend themselves, Weinberger said during an appearance on the CBS television program "Face the Nation."

The U.S. government's self-imposed limit of 55 military advisers for training Salvadoran troops to fight leftist guerrillas was too rigid, but it does not interfere with the administration's objectives, he said.

"Any rigid limit has got great disadvantages because the needs fluctuate as far as training is concerned," he said. "You may have a situation in which it would be very desirable to have 60 people down there training for two weeks, and then you go back to 40.

"From time to time it would be desirable to have more, but if the El Salvadoran government has now decided, as they seem to have, to do more of their training in Honduras then I think the limit that is there...is workable enough," he said. More American advisers have been recently sent to Honduras to train Salvadoran troops.

Weinberger denied that the United States has embarked in Central American on a Vietnam-type course of increasing military involvement. Nothing indicates "a steadily or an inexorably increasing" American participation," he said.

But the secretary said the United States has an interest in keeping Central America from becoming a "nest of communist or Marxist-led organizations that make the defense of the continental United States more difficult."

On a related matter, Weinberger said the Soviets have been shipping to Cuba "improved, more modern combat aircraft than they have had in some previous years."

Asked if the aircraft were "nuclear capable," Weinberger said, "Yes. Some of these could be considered to be nuclear capable, but whether they are actually or not, we aren't prepared to say at this time."

On the question of defense spending, Weinberger said any congressional cuts in the Defense Department's budget could hurt the United States' effort to catch up with Soviet military power.

Because the Soviets dramatically increased their defense spending in the 1960s and 1970s, they "secured a lead in a number of important areas that we are now trying to balance out," he said.

On arms control, Weinberger said he thinks the Soviets have been trying to block deployment of any of intermediate-range weapons. But "if they see we are going ahead with that deployment they may become very much more serious than they have been in the past about negotiations," he added.

NATO is scheduled to begin deployment of cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe this December unless an agreement to limit intermediate-range missiles is negotiated.

Body of criminal woman with 13 aliases finally identified

DALLAS (AP) — Police knew little more than that she had lived a life of crime and anonymity, with 13 aliases and a long arrest record. But now they say the mystery is over — the body of Marianne Day will be exhumed from a pauper's grave and shipped home to Kentucky.

"She was one of our own, no matter what had happened to her in the past years," Ms. Day's uncle told the Dallas Times Herald in a telephone interview from his home in Owensboro, Ky. "A family is a family, and she was part of the family."

The 33-year-old woman was known only by her 13 aliases after she was shot to death in suburban University Park in April.

But publicity about the case brought phone calls to police last week from a former roommate and Ms. Day's ex-husband, a fire chief for the Navy in California.

The woman's family in Kentucky is paying at least $1,000 for her body to be exhumed from an unmarked pauper's grave and shipped home.

"We loved her, even if there were undesirable parts to it (her life)," said the uncle, who asked not to be identified.

Ms. Day, who had a 10-year-old daughter, last was seen by her relatives more than three years ago, when she visited her mother before moving from California to Texas, said the uncle.

Police in Texas and California had known about Ms. Day's criminal activities before she was shot to death during what they believe was a narcotics-related robbery April 9. A man who also was shot remains in a coma at Presbyterian Hospital of Dallas.

During his efforts to identify the woman, University Park police Sgt. E.L. Holman discovered she had used 13 names while accumulating a long arrest record in Texas and California.

Holman initially identified her as Raven Lashbrook. Her death certificate listed her as Maranda Sonderson. Authorities in Ellis County, where she was arrested on a weapons charge last year, knew her as Andrew Jackson Spencer III.

"Nobody who was aware of her death knew who she really was," Holman said.

The 5-foot-3, 100-pound woman, who had jet-black hair and tattoos on her stomach, was recognized by a former roommate when she read a newspaper account of efforts to identify the body. She called Holman and said she had lived with the woman in Berkeley, Calif. She also provided names and old phone bills with numbers, including one in Owensboro, Ky.

Holman called the Owensboro number and spoke with Dorothy Day, the dead woman's mother. After Holman described the woman, Mrs. Day realized it was her daughter.

"She had last spoken with her daughter in March," Holman said. "She was unaware her daughter had been killed."

Autopsy report reveals children were poisoned

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — Two children, whose father has been charged with fatally poisoning the youths, died after drinking cyanide, an autopsy report confirmed.

The bodies of an 8-year-old girl and a 5-year-old boy were taken to the Dallas County medical examiner's office for autopsies, and Erath County jailer Jerry Perkins said Sunday that the examinations confirmed cyanide poisoning as the cause of death.

Delbert Black, 33, is accused of forcing his children to drink a mixture of cyanide, sugar and syrup in his mobile home in rural Erath County, between Stephenville and Hico.

Amy Annette Black and Richard Loyd Black were dead on arrival Friday at Hico City Hospital, where they were taken by two men who said Black told them he thought they were poisoned.

Later Friday, officers went to Black's mobile home and found a can of cyanide-based ant poison and "a bottle of syrup, a jar of sugar and a large glass with it all mixed together," said Erath County sheriff's deputy Randy Merriman.

The neighbors said Black had been despondent over his divorce and had called his wife about 5:30 p.m. Friday, telling her it was "time for us to die."

Warrants for Black's arrest were issued shortly before midnight Friday, and Black was arrested without incident Saturday after a 24-hour search with bloodhounds and horses. Black was trying to hide in a dairy barn near Hico, Erath County Sheriff Jack Perry said.

Merriman said Black had been charged with trying to kill his 25-year-old wife Sylvia in February, but the case had not come up for trial and Black was free on bond. The couple was separated in February and divorced in May, neighbors said.

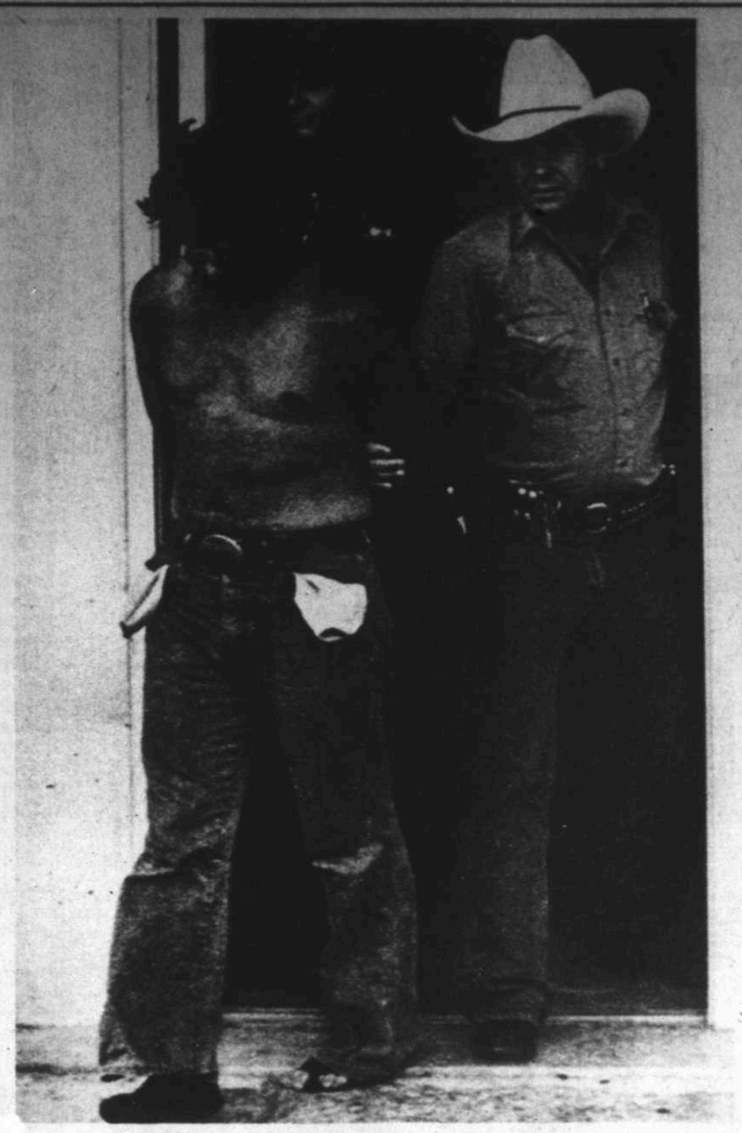

Two and a half hours later, a man identifying himself as Black called his landlord and said "he had poisoned his kids and had taken some of the stuff himself and was fixing to go and die quietly."

Black was arraigned Saturday night in Hico on two counts of murder. Hamilton County Justice of the Peace Joy Cook set bond at $100,000 on each count.

In their divorce, Mrs. Black won custody of the two children, with Black having visitation rights on weekends, neighbors said. They said the children were visiting Black Friday at his trailer house outside this community 75 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

Black's ex-wife worked as an X-ray technician at Hico City Hospital, but was not on duty when the children were brought to the hospital, officials said. Merriman said she had to be hospitalized and sedated after learning of the children's deaths.

Marty Bell, one of the men who brought the children to the hospital, said Black drove up in front of his trailer home in Hico and sat in his car for a while, then ran up to Bell and Gary Reed and asked them to take the children to the hospital because he "couldn't make it."

Delbert Black is led from the Hico City Hall by law enforcement officials late Saturday afternoon. Black was taken into custody on a farm outside of Hico, just 24 hours after his two children had been fatally poisoned with cyanide.

Premature girl in stable condition

HOUSTON (AP) — Doctors have upgraded the condition of a 14-ounce baby girl born 4⅓ months premature, a a spokeswoman for Hermann Hospital says.

Melissa Michelle Maurer, born June 1, was taken off the critical list Sunday and is in serious but stable condition, said Sarah Sharpless, assistant director for Life Flight.

Melissa weighed 18 ounces at birth but lost more than 5 ounces in less than one week. A blood tranfusion brought her weight back to 14 ounces.

Murder conviction may soften fact of priest's homosexuality

ODESSA (AP) — The murder conviction of James Harry Reyos might help soften the sting in Denver City of testimony that portrayed a popular local Catholic priest as an active homosexual, a prosecutor said.

Reyos was sentenced to 38 years in prison and fined $5,000 Saturday after being convicted of killing the Rev. Patrick Ryan, whose nude, bound body was found by a maid in an Odessa motel room Dec. 22, 1981.

"The verdict was important," said prosecutor David Rosado. "Since these people were not spared the details, the verdict was important. I think it was a balm to some bruised souls."

One of the jurors in the trial said the conviction was based on Reyos' "confession and characteristics."

Ryan's body was identified after his Denver City parishioners became worried when he was absent from a Christmas Eve church service. Denver City is 80 miles northwest of Odessa.

Reyos maintained the priest was killed by another man who had a homosexual encounter with Ryan.

Ryan's brother Rodger, of San Jose, Calif., who sat through the trial, said he was "happy" with the verdict.

"I wasn't interested in the length of the sentence," he said. "I just wanted justice done."

Ryan's brother said the guilty verdict gave his brother "somewhat of a pardon from those terrible descriptions" of him in the trial.

"The character assassination of the previous days was very detrimental; Paddy was put on trial before the people this week," he said.

The decision to levy the fine against Reyos stemmed from the jury's belief that the defendant needed to make "stronger restitution" to taxpayers for the cost of the trial, one juror told the Odessa American.

"We did not convict because of homosexuality (or because) we wanted to bring some sort of clarification of the priest's reputation," added the juror, who asked not to be identified.

One juror said the panel "tried to choose a period of time that would help (Reyos) learn something from a prison term and come out of prison a better person that what he is."

Trial to begin in extortion plot

HOUSTON (AP) — A $15 million extortion attempt that involved five bombs planted in a chemical refinery and led federal agents on a manhunt through three states was set to move to trial today with the case of the alleged mastermind.

John Marvin McBride, a 46-year-old gun shop owner from Durango, Colo., was to go on trial this afternoon for allegedly threatening to blow up a Gulf Oil Chemical Corp. refinery.

McBride, who prosecutors say was the brains behind the bomb-extortion plot against Gulf's Cedar Bayou plant near Houston, is the first of four defendants to stand trial.

McBride, his common-law wife, Jill Renee Bird, and two other Durango men, were charged in a 12-count indictment in October with conspiracy, attempted extortion, illegal use of explosives, illegal transportation of explosives across states lines, mailing a threatening letter and threatening to damage a facility.

If convicted, each could be sent to prison for 105 years and fined $105,000.

U.S. District Judge Gabrielle McDonald ruled last week that the four should be tried separately.

One defendant, Michael Worth, 34, will be tried in two separate proceedings. Worth's attorneys said the judge's decision will allow their client to argue that he once was part of the alleged plot, but had to be forced to carry out the scheme when he tried to back down.

A fifth defendant, Timothy K. Justice, 30, also of Durango, pleaded guilty to two charges and agreed to testify for the government. Prosecutors said Justice has admitted planting the explosives.

On Sept. 28, Gulf officials received a six-page letter that said the Cedar Bayou chemical refinery and another Gulf plant had been sabotaged. The letter said 10 bombs hidden inside the Cedar Bayou plant would be detonated unless $15 million were paid by midday Oct. 3.

Gulf shut down Cedar Bayou, about 30 miles east of Houston, for five days. Five bombs were found, and one exploded harmlessly. The others were defused.

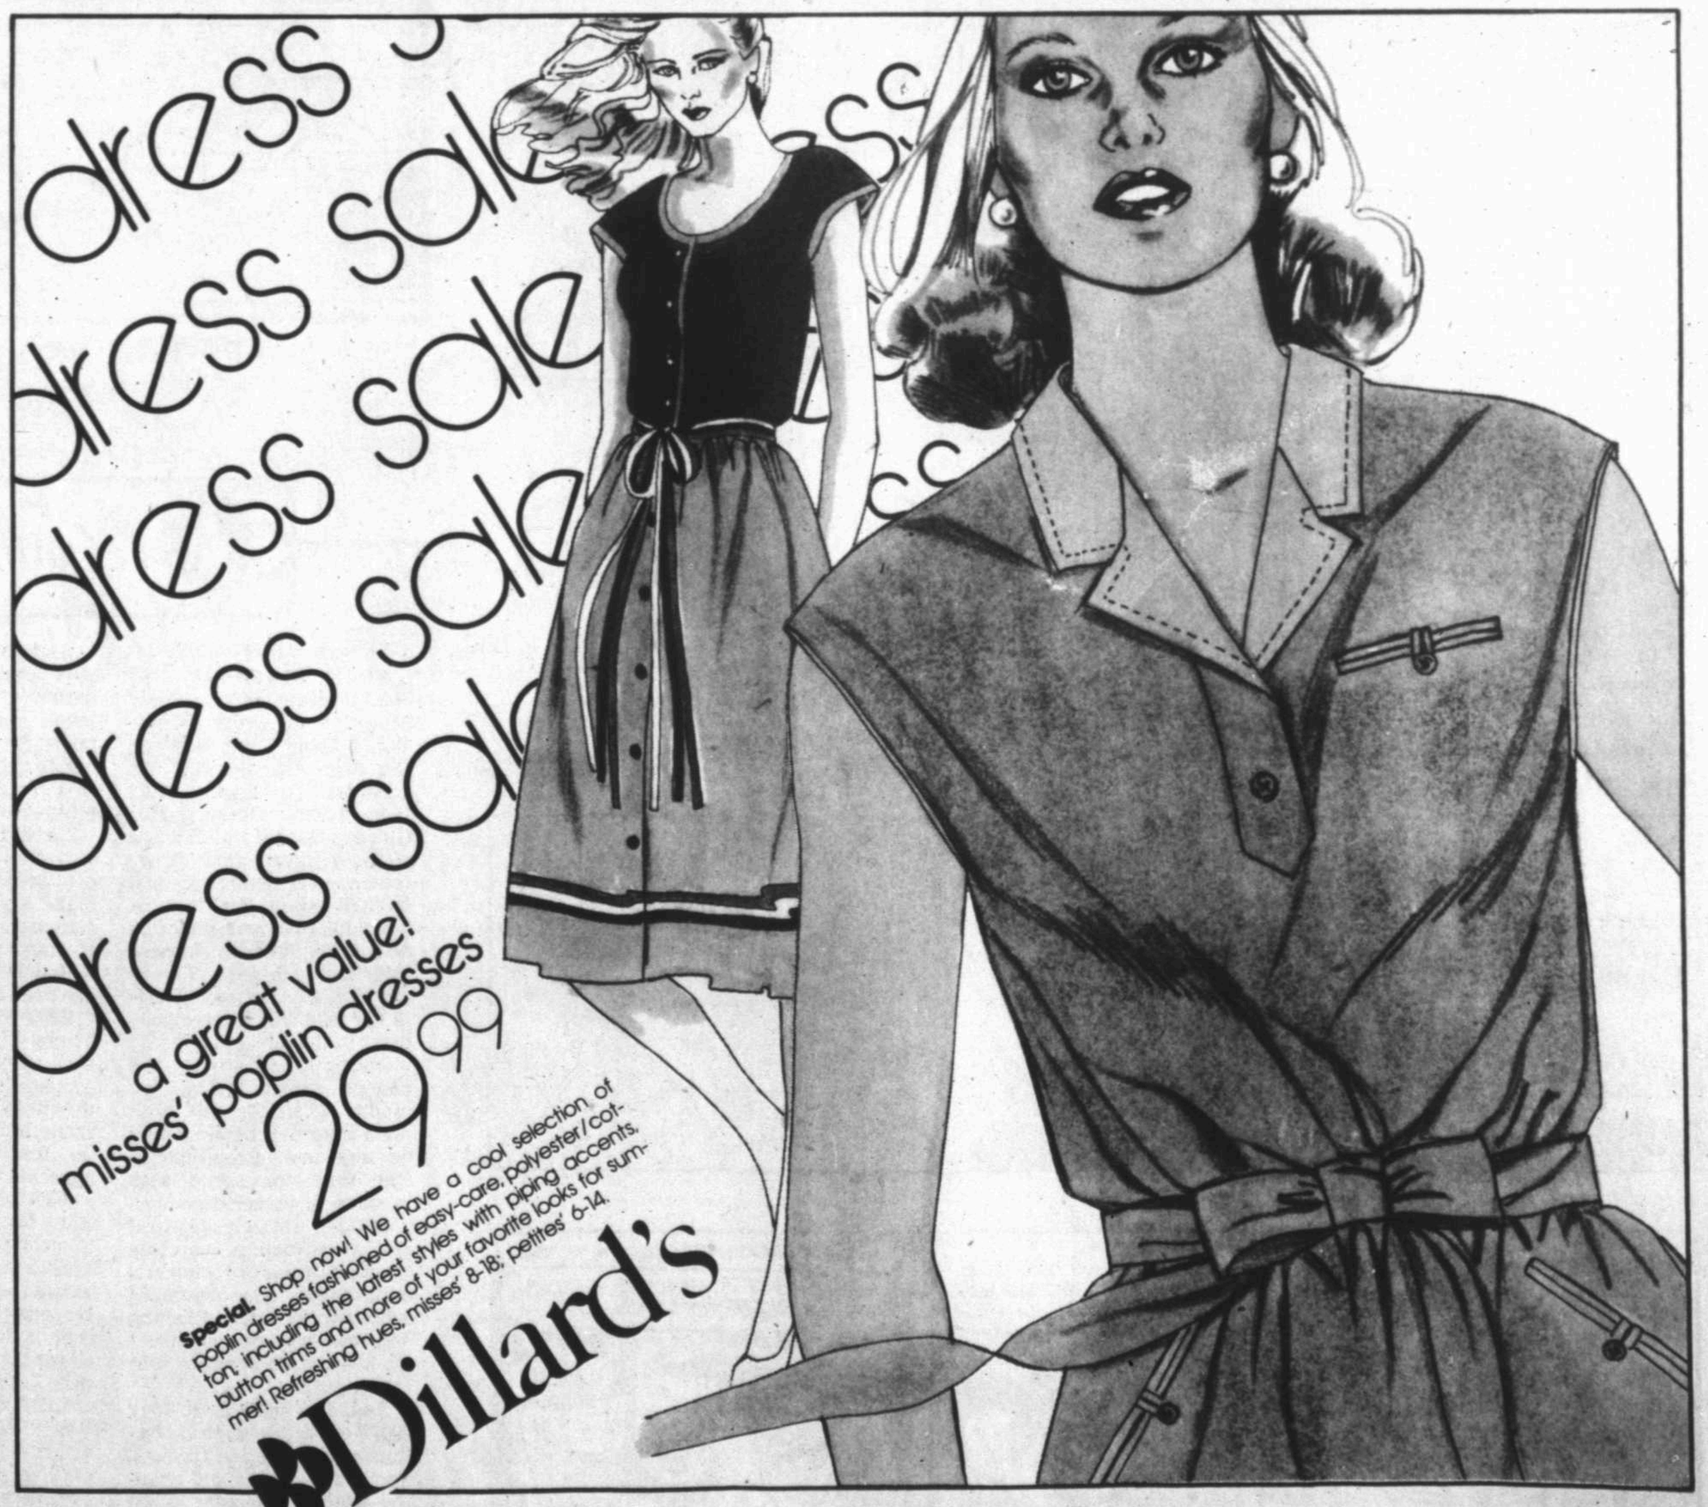

The day before the deadline expired, Worth and Theodore McKinney, 45, were arrested in Apache Junction, Ariz., while on a phone with a Gulf security official, allegedly discussing delivery of the money. Ms. Bird, 34, McBride and Justice were arrested within a week.

Initially, federal authorities in Colorado said Ms. Bird, 34, would not be prosecuted because McBride had agreed to disclose the location of additional bombs.

No other explosives were found, and Texas prosecutors withdrew the immunity promise, contending the government had been coerced into the agreement.

Ms. McDonald and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans refused to dismiss the indictment against Ms. Bird, who has been living in California since she was released on bond. She has appealed the rulings.

The other defendants remain in jail in lieu of $1 million bond each.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, June 14, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Harriet Beecher Stowe, who wrote "Uncle Tom's Cabin," was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: troubador Burl Ives, actress Dorothy McGuire, Brooklyn Dodger pitching great Don Newcombe, actor Gene Barry and football's Ben Davidson. A home improvement project is an excellent investment now. Your career begins to move ahead at a faster pace. Those in the arts will receive good news in the fall. Trust family member. Once a need for change is met, life will be much easier. Consult with mate or partner before taking on any new commitments. The time you spend with loved ones is precious.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look before you leap where business or romance is concerned. An argument erupts if you insist on having your own way. Secret agreements can help advance your career goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your co-workers are enthusiastic about a pet project. Pool your talents and share the profits. Romance is on the upswing. A fine day for a heart-to-heart chat with mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Handle routine tasks with care. Attention to detail helps you avoid costly mistakes. Be willing to break old habits and take risks. Love at first sight is a distinct possibility now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New people and interests add glamor to your life. Make sure you are properly remunerated for your creative and artistic efforts. Get in touch with someone who has been on your mind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel brings great satisfaction now. Be willing to meet someone more than half way to clinch a lucrative deal. Something that was lost will be found. Sign contracts, agreements.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Romance is dazzling. Someone may ask you to make a commitment. Personal ties mean greater financial responsibilities. A project that is launched today will prove highly profitable in the near future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Work with someone who wants to improve profits. The path to success will become smoother. Find ways to avoid unnecessary conflict. You need to be consistent when dealing with teenagers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can overcome hurdles by using greater tact. Teamwork is favored. Do not try to force your ideas on others. A motherly person offers you excellent advice. Follow it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Bridge the generation gap by becoming a better listener. It is time to make sweeping changes. In time, others will realize their mistake! You look forward to spending the evening with someone special.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial matters are in the spotlight. Do not give up on someone who has "insurmountable" problems. Member of opposite sex challenges you to a battle of wits. You win!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be in too much of a hurry today. Attention to detail is critical if negotiating contracts. The opposition you have encountered recently disappears. Loved one is now in your corner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The past may be recalled but it will not touch you. Being a pro-company employee pays off handsomely. A promotion or raise is in the offing. Look your best. Romance beckons.

Genetic code explored

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — So what's that funny man Rich Little doing on a serious TV special about genetics?

"When I hear it," the master impressionist explains, "I can picture a voice." And he proceeds to mimic the world's most recognizable rasp — Humphrey Bogart's.

It's a stunt to show that despite the way it sounds, no two human voices are exactly the same. "The pitch and tone comparisons," our narrator declares, "show an obvious counterfeit...our ear deceived by a delightfully entertaining fake."

"The Body Human" is back, on CBS tonight with an hour-long program callled "The Living Code." The subject is heredity, and the genetic "messages" that produce, with each human born, "a genuine original...never created before and quite impossible to duplicate...the one and only you."

The production, like others in the Emmy-winning series, is first-class — dramatic, often exciting, sometimes disheartening, never condescending or exploitative.

"The Living Code" is the 14th program in the series that began March 16, 1977, with a show called "The Miracle Months." CBS has at least two more planned.

Using a character like Rich Little to illustrate a point has become a trademark of "The Body Human," which has proven itself, over the years, extraordinarily adept at explaining the complex machinery of life to the average viewer.

"The Living Code" examines genetics in a half-dozen distinct segments — some of them playful, like the one involving Little or another in which a woman's murderer is caught in a genetic web of blood, tissue, hair and saliva. Other short sequences illustrate the way genes are responsible for shared features, as well as variety. A "living portrait" involving 500 members of the same, extended family reveal extraordinary similarities in smile and hairline, though eye color and other features may differ wildly.

In one, unhappy episode, doctors try to save 9-year-old Billy Brown, whose normally treatable leukemia is complicated by a genetic flaw. But in another segment, Ginger and Russ Mathis, unable to have children because of a shared genetic complication, are given a second opportunity — through artificial insemination.

"The Body Human" is worth watching for the narration, which is stylish and distinctive Alexander Scourby, considered by some to be the ideal narrator, has an uncanny ability to dramatize a scene with inflection.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠85 ♡AK862 ◇Q875 ♣65
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Even though you do not have the values for game, it is still incumbent upon you to probe for the best contract. Bid two diamonds. If you don't locate a fit there, you might elicit a heart preference from partner.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ872 ♡6 ◇K1093 ♣52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—You want to force to game. A jump to three spades would be invitational, and four spades might not be the best spot. But a bid of two diamonds would not be forcing, because partner made a limited rebid. The only practical solution is to jump to three diamonds.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ872 ♡6 ◇K1093 ♣52
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Same hand, different auction. This time North's rebid is unlimited, so a simple change of suit by you is forcing. Bid two diamonds. You don't want to jump and rob yourself of bidding room — you might need it later.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ9762 ♡7 ◇854 ♣942
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—North is showing a maximum no trump with good heart support. So you can count six tricks with only 5 of North's points. The other 13 should give you reasonable play for game. Bid four hearts — at this vulnerability, the reward for making game is particularly attractive.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q87652 ♡J10 ◇AKQ6 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Don't make the lazy bid of four spades. You are in slam territory and you need to advise partner of that. Cue-bid four diamonds. Perhaps partner only needs to know that he doesn't have two fast losers there to become interested in slam.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q6 ♡73 ◇AJ92 ♣KJ763
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

Presidential trends

Most people are more than willing to tell an incumbent American president how they would do his job. It usually isn't the way he's doing it.

But most people also concede that the presidency is a next to impossible task to perform admirably. It calls for letter-perfect decision-making ability, keen instincts and statesmanship. The task has not been eased by the new technological revolution; the burden has only become heavier and the consequences of failure remain just as dire.

Recently, an article in Presidential Studies Quarterly noted that "the requirements of presidential leadership of the American economy have, since the 1960s, changed considerably from those of earlier periods. The federal government has increasingly been called on not only to insure high growth with low inflation — difficult enough to achieve in their own right — but to do so while using its powers to regulate, tax and spend to respond to a variety of social, political and regional interests."

The new demands placed on the president mean he must understand and play a greater role in the "rapidly expanding range of subjects emerging from the new technological revolution. That need arises because capability of the new technology to propel the United States back into a position of undisputed world economic leadership or to relegate the nation to second-class status.

It will mean President Reagan and those who follow him in the Oval Office will have to better understand what is happening technologically, to make tough decisions on and to educate the public about the changes.

Viewing the scope of the challenge, the magazine asks "can the institutional presidency, can the president cope with the implications of this fundamental technological transition?"

The only answer to that question is that the president must be prepared to meet the challenge because U.S. prosperity will depend on the decisions he makes.

When trees talk

Trees periodically spring prominently into the public consciousness. Joyce Kilmer celebrated them in verse which subsequently was set to music. The late ventriloquist Edgar Bergen's wise-cracking dummy, Charlie McCarthy, proudly traced his ancestry to a tree.

Trees are now getting renewed attention because botanical scientists have determined that they can communicate with each other. One tree, invaded by voracious insects, can alert another to the peril, the scientists say, and the tree getting the message defends itself by secreting a chemical which makes its leaves unpalatable to the marauding bugs.

The discovery could well cause alarm among some people, particularly those who have read the essays of William Bolitho. It was Bolitho's contention that all of nature was just biding its time until it could get rid of that hated, grotesque, two-legged thing called a human being.

But trees have proved to be so sweet tempered that it is doubtful that they would enter into any conspiracy to do away with humanity. They have been mutilated and felled by the millions to make way for ugly shopping malls and housing developments – without a word of complaint.

So it can be assumed that trees, even if they should learn to talk vocally, pose no real threat to us. That's particularly true in Notrees.

Safer airliners

The question no longer is what must be done to reduce loss of life in fires like that aboard an Air Canada plane recently, but rather why hasn't it been done. The record is replete with examples of safety recommendations not followed by the Federal Aviation Administration and improvements not made by the airlines.

Reports from survivors, including a courageous crew, from physicians and from inspections of the burned-out plane indicate that a short circuit in an electrical pump in a lavatory started the fire. Dense smoke spread through the plane's interior as its pilot brought the craft in to Cincinnati airport for an emergency landing. Passengers who survived evidently did so by following two basic rules: They stayed low, and they kept their faces covered.

All things inside a plane that are not metal — carpeting, seats, paneling — pose dangers because the plastics or foams of which they are made burn quickly and create dense, deadly smoke. The victims in this accident may have died of the fumes, or may have been so weakened by them that they could not escape the flames that raced through the plane once its doors were opened. In either event, the Federal Aviation Administration should tighten its fire-retardant standards, which this plane met.

The standards were issued in 1972. Since then there has been more research into reducing flammability and toxicity. But, for example, one "fire-blocking" material that can be put around passenger seats to lengthen the time during which passengers can survive has been tested but not put into regular service.

The aviation agency has concentrated its efforts on the post-crash fire, which is obviously a problem as well; it hopes that development of a fuel additive would keep engine or fuel-line fires from spreading in a crash. But time after time, crash after crash, the National Transportation Safety Board has made recommendations that the aviation agency has not followed. Since the mid-1960s the board has suggested more than three dozen moves to help combat cabin fires. In 1973 it recommended smoke detectors in airliner lavatories; the detectors still are not required. In 1976 the board recommended requiring automatic fire extinguishers in lavatories; in 1981 the idea was dropped because the agency didn't think that there was a problem.

No one can prevent all accidents. But some deaths might be prevented. In 1979 a congressional committee concluded that airliner cabins required more safeguards against the spread of fires and toxic smoke. Next month, when a congressional committee again looks at airline safety, it must go beyond assigning blame and ensure that this time the public gets results.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Army disaster coverup probed

WASHINGTON — The Army's inspector general is investigating shocking charges that officials knowingly let last year's disastrous paratroop exercise in California proceed despite dangerously high winds — and then tried to cover up their fatal error. Six troopers were killed and more than 150 injured during the March 30 exercise at Ft. Irwin.

Jack Anderson

The mass jump by more than 2,200 82nd Airborne Division paratroopers — the men who put the "R" in the Rapid Deployment Force — took place in full view of the press. In the official report following an investigation, the deaths and injuries were blamed on "undetected high winds."

But according to sworn statements given to I.G. investigators, the winds were in fact detected — but were simply ignored. My associate Donald Goldberg has seen some of the statements made to the I.G., and sources say the charges are being taken "very seriously." They should be.

Detailed allegations of deliberate falsification of wind velocity readings and subsequent coverup were made by a master parachutist assigned to observe the exercise. He and an Army chaplain, also a master parachutist, witnessed the mass jump from a spot near where most of the injuries occurred.

According to the observer's affidavit, he and the chaplain saw a safety officer take wind measurements behind an ambulance instead of out on the field.

"I asked the officer taking the wind readings if he knew how to take the readings, and he replied that he did," the observer testified. "I asked him if I could use his anemometer, he handed it to me and I stepped from behind the ambulance and turned the anemometer into the wind.

"The wind reading at that time was 30 knots, with frequent gusts to 40 knots. Smoke on the drop zone had been released and it was staying right on the ground, which indicated extremely high winds."

As the observer — and the safety officer — knew full well, the highest wind velocity considered safe for parachute exercises is set by the Army at 13 knots, equivalent to just under 15 miles per hour.

The observer's statement continued: "I then turned to the (safety officer) and said that the correct wind readings were 30 gusting to 40, and if personnel were dropped I would promise a thorough investigation."

But the fix was in, and the safety officers evidently knew it. The observer testified: "A radio message came over the radio... at that time saying in an unusual manner, sort of a sarcastic tone, 'I'm reading 10 to 12 (knots). How about everyone else?'"

So the drop proceeded. Four troopers were killed on the spot and two more died later. According to the official report, five of the six died of head injuries from hard landings in the high winds, or from being dragged along the ground before they could cut their chutes loose. Most of those injuries were also caused by the high winds.

But when the observer reported what he had witnessed, he was told not to tell anyone. Not satisfied, the observer told the exercise safety director, who checked with his superiors. He told the observer that "there was a hold on all information about the drop and that we were not to discuss the airborne operation with anyone for now." Subsequent orders came down reiterating this secrecy lid.

"Every time we asked, we were again told... that we were under orders not to discuss any information with anyone," the observer said in his sworn statement.

Footnote: The inspector general would not comment on the investigation.

A FAN IS BORN: It was a twist on an old Hollywood flick. All it lacked was a hard-boiled stage manager to tell Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq: "You're going out there a dictator. You'll come back a fan."

The star was Kirk Douglas. He was visiting Afghan refugee camps in Pakistan and was mightily impressed by what he saw: the Pakistanis giving aid and comfort to thousands of Afghans who had fled their Soviet-occupied homeland.

"The president's office had agreed to have Douglas make a call," according to a confidential U.S. Information Agency synopsis of the episode. "But as he (Zia) began to hear reports of what Douglas was saying about Pakistan's warm generosity, he changed the call to a dinner. Later, he changed it again to a preliminary call and then dinner."

But shortly before dinner, the 64-year-old actor suddenly felt woozy. "The president came out into the hallway to see what was wrong.... Douglas was feeling lightheaded and dizzy," the USIA reported. "Douglas was taken to the president's own bed, where President Zia removed his shoes." Zia sent for his personal physician to examine Douglas.

The star's indisposition was temporary and not serious. After he was moved from the president's bed to his hotel, Zia sent flowers and several messages of concern.

"The visit was an extremely successful one," the USIA concluded.

JOHNNY ONE-NOTES: Life on the Managua cocktail circuit can be oppressively doctrinaire even for a devout leftist. One left-wing source — a "revisionist Sandinista" now in exile — reports that Nicaragua is a haven for all kinds of leftist extremists, from Palestinians, Irish and Cubans to Bulgarians, Chileans, Argentines and Uruguayans.

"All those aren't so bad," he said. "The ones you have to run from are the North Koreans. All they do is talk about Kim Il Sung. It's enough to drive you crazy."

INSIDE REPORT:

Family ties keep negotiations safe

WASHINGTON — Strengthening the family link between President Reagan's national security adviser William P. Clark and Ambassador Paul Nitze, Reagan's chief negotiator on nuclear weapons in Europe, has all but ruled out misunderstandings of the kind that angered the White House last year.

Just before Nitze returned on May 17 to the Geneva talks with the Soviets, Clark took him on a horseback ride for nearly two hours in the Washington environs. Clark's wife, Joan, and Nitze are cousins, a little-known fact that, despite their differences on the Euro-nuke issue, has brought the two together.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Last year Nitze and his Soviet counterpart reached an informal agreement that was immediately rejected by Reagan — and the Soviets. With Clark's power now rising to a peak, and the president counting heavily on Clark's personal control of the arms talks, no such embarrassment is likely in the future. Nitze knows he has an open door or telephone line to his cousin-in-law anytime he wants to use it.

DODD STAYS LOOSE

Before his surprising endorsement of Sen. John Glenn for the Democratic presidential nomination, Massachusetts senator Paul Tsongas tried to enlist another New England liberal in Glenn's candidacy: Connecticut's Sen. Chris Dodd.

Dodd told Tsongas it was far too early for such a final decision. But friends say that what really mattered to Dodd was the fact that in endorsing Glenn he would be alienating several other senators who are presidential candidates, particularly Alan Cranston, a power as Senate Democratic whip, and Sen. Gary Hart. As liberal leader of the anti-Reagan policy in Central America, Dodd might need Cranston's support in future Senate votes.

A footnote: A seminal reason for Tsongas' endorsement of Glenn is his need to shore up his standing among moderate and conservative Democrats back home, particularly those in the camp of former governor Edward King. Tsongas could be vulnerable to a conservative Democratic challenge in his re-election bid next year.

HAIG'S WARNING

Former secretary of state Alexander Haig quietly warned his successor, George Shultz, in the aftermath of the Enders-Hinton sackings that he had better stand up for his Foreign Service bureaucracy fast — or lose his influence within the State Department.

That was the background of Shultz's rather emotional remarks praising both Assistant Secretary of State Tom Enders and Ambassador to El Salvador Deane Hinton at a carefully-orchestrated State Department tribute 10 days ago. The Enders-Hinton sackings were engineered from the White House, not Shultz's seventh-floor emporium at State.

Two days later, in a separate gesture of reconciliation, national security adviser William P. Clark, who had arranged the ouster of the two Foreign Service diplomats, made a conspicuous appearance at a small housewarming in Enders' new Georgetown house. That did not come close to erasing the impact on the aggrieved Foreign Service of Shultz looking weak when he was upstaged by the White House.

CORCORAN'S REAGAN PLEDGE

Partly as a result of a private letter from Rep. Tom Corcoran on Jan. 26, President Reagan has promised neutrality in Corcoran's soon-to-be-announced primary campaign against Sen. Charles H. (Chuck) Percy, despite Percy's three terms and his chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The letter from the Republican conservative was "to assure you that ... no hard feelings" resulted from Reagan's speech at a Percy fund-raiser in Chicago in mid-January and his refusal to drop in at Corcoran's reception in the same hotel the same evening. Corcoran was not an announced candidate, although the president had every reason to believe he would run.

The race for the Republican nomination between Percy and the three-term congressman may turn on national security issues. Percy is vulnerable to charges of being insufficiently pro-Israel and of opposing Reagan's tough arms control posture. One poll taken by Illinois Republicans shows that defense and foreign issues, not the economy, are uppermost in the voters' minds, with Percy in an exposed political position on both.

CHARLEY REESE

Motivation education's problem

There seems now to be a public consensus that, taken as a whole, the public education system is a failure. As usual, there is also a consensus that it requires more money.

Charley Reese

Rather than follow the crowds, we might do well to look more closely at the problem. For example, the same public school system which most say is now a failure continues to produce brilliant students with extremely high grade point averages who do extremely well in universities and beyond.

How can a bad system produce good students?

As usual, what is left out of public discussions these days are individuals. Clearly, in the public school system as it now exists, there are resources which enable some students to acquire a sound education. If you look at the origin of these excellent graudates, you can see they are fairly well distributed.

From this, we can infer that in almost any public school system, the means for acquiring an education are there, provided the student is motivated to seek it. We should not forget, while decrying all of the basket-weaving courses, that physics, chemistry and math courses are also now available in nearly all of the public schools. In other words, many students are electing to take the soft courses rather than the tough ones.

The solution being offered is to narrow the student's choices and to force the student to take more of the harder courses. This may be a wise policy, but it is hardly the fault of public education that in the past students have not done so. In short, it was not that the system was not providing the students with opportunities it was that the students were not electing to take advantage of them.

With this in mind, we may be throwing rocks at the wrong crow. I don't think a public education system can motivate a student. Good teachers can encourage and even inspire an already motivated student, but I don't believe even a master teacher can motivate a student.

Suppose, rather than reacting with the usual cliches and recriminations, we really thought this thing through. Suppose we start with the basic premise that primary responsibility for children rests with their parents. Suppose we then decide that it is public policy that all children should receive as sound an education as they have the capacity to utilize. Suppose further that we, as a matter of public policy, make available even to the poorest of parents public education facilities which they may use to fulfill their parental responsibility in educating their child.

Suppose then we decide that an uneducated child who has passed through 12 years of public schooling is prima facie evidence of failure — not of the public school system — but of the parents to fulfill their responsibility. Accordingly, we might pass a law which levies an appropriate penalty against parents for neglect of their responsibility to their child. For the sake of supposing, let's say the penalty is a $1,000 fine or 500 hours or mandatory public service as a volunteer teacher's aide.

As radical as this may strike you, I believe such a law would do more to elevate SAT score averages than pumping $20 billion more into the public school system. The school system cannot motivate a child, but government, acting on behalf of the public, might be able to motivate those parents who neglect to motivate their children.

You see, what's changed is that in our relatively affluent welfare state many people no longer see the necessity of education as a preventative to poverty and hardship. The fierce desire to provide education that marked an earlier America came from parents who had experienced bitter poverty and hardship and saw education as a means for their children to escape such a fate. In an easy credit society which pays token takers $15,000 a year and also provides food, housing and medical care to the non-worker, the need for education is not so obvious.

Students from families who still do value education continue to do well. The resources are there. Maybe they can be improved, but unless the problem of motivation is attacked, no real progress will be made.

Barbara Cash, co-owner with her husband Bill of the Chino Gun Shop, discusses with a reporter a rising community interest in the purchase of guns. There have been reports of a rise in the sales of guns and locks in the area in the wake of the murders of four people in Chino Hills (Calif.), June 5.

Mental patient wanted for questioning in death of four

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — Friends and relatives of an escaped mental patient who is accused of brutally slaying four people will be questioned in Pennsylvania by investigators looking for clues to his whereabouts, a deputy said today.

Two San Bernardino County sheriff's deputies made the trip East in an effort to trace Kevin Cooper, 25, who escaped from a Pennsylvania mental hospital, then from the California state prison at Chino, sheriff's Deputy Alexis Tanner said.

FBI agents also are involved in the case in both California and Pennsylvania, he said.

Authorities in Mexico meanwhile continued a hunt for the suspect, said Capt. Ruben Cardenas Gonzalez of the Tijuana Police Department. California authorities have said they think Cooper may have fled to Mexico.

Cooper, 25, is charged with the June 5 slayings of F. Douglas and Peggy Ann Ryen, both 41, daughter Jessica, 10, and neighbor Christopher Hughes, 11, at a posh home in the Chino Hills.

The only survivor of the attack at the family's rural Chino Hills horse ranch was the Ryens' son, Joshua, 8, whose throat was slit. He remained hospitalized in stable condition at Loma Linda University Medical Center today.

Cooper was mistakenly placed in the minimum-security section of the Chino prison after a Los Angeles burglary conviction, despite a notice from Pennsylvania authorities that he was an escaped mental patient wanted for questioning in a kidnap and rape, said Robert Bales, assistant superintendent of Chino prison. Cooper escaped from Chino's prison just a few days before the Ryens were slain.

A car stolen from the Ryens' home the day of the killings was found Saturday in Long Beach. After initial tests, the car was taken to San Bernardino for further examination, authorities said.

"We don't have any results as to what if anything was found" in the car, said sheriff's Deputy Ron Gilbreth.

Detectives were hunting for Cooper along the Mexican border and in Long Beach, where the Ryens' white Buick station wagon was found in a church parking lot Saturday.

San Bernardino County sheriff's Deputy Tom Neely said Cooper might be closer to capture than reports have indicated.

"There's a lot of stuff they're (the detectives) keeping so they can zone in on this guy without him knowing it," Neely said Sunday.

Congress tackling budget, taxes, salaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money is the topic in Congress this week as legislators try to patch together a compromise budget plan and begin their final push to repeal a law requiring the withholding of taxes from interest and dividends.

In addition, the Senate may reconsider votes it took last week to limit senators' outside income.

Budget negotiators from the House and Senate were resuming bargaining today on domestic spending, revenues and defense in an effort to resolve the differences between budgets that have been adopted by each chamber.

During three days of meetings last week the conferees set out their negotiating positions for the hard bargaining that is expected this week.

Overall, $5.2 billion more than President Reagan has recommended would be made available for the programs. But the figure is likely to go much higher as the negotiators move on to education and health programs this week.

In addition, the negotiators have agreed to set aside up to $10 billion in a "contingency fund" for recession relief programs.

Meanwhile, the final drive is beginning this week to repeal the law — due to take effect July 1 — that would allow the withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividends.

Both houses, under pressure from the banking lobby, have voted by lopsided margins to repeal the 1982 law, but with different provisions.

When the Senate takes up withholding late Tuesday or on Wednesday, it will have two options: accept a House-passed bill that does nothing but repeal withholding, or repeal it and — at the same time — impose tougher reporting requirements and penalties.

Senate passage of simple repeal would send the bill to Reagan, who earlier vowed to veto any such measure. Otherwise, negotiators from the House and Senate will have to work out differences between the two bills.

The issue of senators' pay, meanwhile, could crop up in the Senate Tuesday or Wednesday if several members add a pay increase to the restriction voted last week on outside income.

In a dizzying series of votes the Senate ended a controversial 6-month-old practice of allowing unlimited fees to the 100 senators for speeches and instead restricted such earnings to 30 percent of their salaries. At the sae time, the Senate denied itself a 15 percent pay increase which would have raised its salary to the $69,800 earned by members of the House of Representatives.

In other Senate action, debate was beginning today on legislation to largely deregulate the cable television industry and restrict the regulatory authority of city governments over cable television. A final vote is due Tuesday.

Households report crime dip of 1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of U.S. households victimized by theft or violence declined 1 percent in 1982, when blacks, high-income people and city dwellers were most vulnerable to crime, a new report says

Members of nearly 25 million households were victims of some type of crime last year, according to a report released Sunday by the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The decrease from 1981 was almost entirely the result of a decline in the number of households with a member who reported a personal property theft while away from home, the report said.

Victims of robbery or aggravated assault were more likely to be members of black households, the report said. At least one burglary or attempted burglary occurred in 10 percent of all black households last year compared to a 6 percent rate among white households.

Taken from the bureau's National Crime Survey, the report's figures are generally conceded to be the most comprehensive available crime statistics. Based on interviews with 50,000 Americans, the figures include both crimes reported to the police and those which are not reported.

"The percentage of households touched by other crimes (rape, robbery, assault, pocket picking, purse snatching, motor vehicle theft, household larceny and burglary) did not fluctuate greatly between 1975 and 1982 and showed no discernible trend," the bureau said.

Dioxin causes skin rashes; Other effects uncertain

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Dioxin often is described as the most toxic substance made by man. But although it can cause severe skin inflammations, it has few other known health effects on humans, toxicologists say.

"The most toxic means that, in the smallest quantity, it causes the most harm of all its chemical relatives," said Dr. James Eason, a clinical toxicologist and pharmacist.

"You could be exposed to less of it to get the same toxicity as more of something else," said Easom, assistant director of the Massachusetts Poison Control System in Boston.

DIOXIN HAS BEEN SHOWN to cause fatal illnesses in laboratory animals. But there has been no proof that dioxin causes cancer or any fatal abnormality in humans, said Dr. Robert Snyder, chairman of Rutgers University's Graduate Program on Toxicology.

Officials recently added an abandoned herbicide plant in Newark to the list of dioxin-contaminated sites nationwide. Samples taken by federal Environmental Protection Agency investigators found levels of dioxin ranging from 58 parts per billion to 1,200 parts per billion. The EPA considers 1 part per billion to be hazardous to human health.

"I think what makes people frightened about it is the extremely low doses with which it affects some species of animals," Snyder said in a recent interview.

He added that researchers may discover long-term effects on humans, including cancer, "but we just haven't picked them up yet."

Dioxin, a generic word referring to several chemical compounds, is a white powdery substance produced as an unwanted byproduct of the manufacture of pesticides and weed killers. Dioxin itself has no useful purpose and appears only as a contaminant during chemical reactions.

Among the substances contaminated by dioxin was Agent Orange, the chemical used during the Vietnam War to destroy jungle vegetation that veterans' groups claim caused numerous illnesses.

DIOXIN'S POTENCY in small amounts is the reason scientists testing for it wear protective clothing, including hoods and oxygen masks. Easom said it is not known whether dioxin enters the body through breathing, eating or skin contact.

In Newark, the state Department of Environmental Protection earlier this month sealed off the former Diamond Alkali Co. plant, which produced Agent Orange during the 1960s. Traces of dioxin also have been found at a neighboring plant and a nearby home.

The substance also has been found at several sites in Missouri — leading to the federal offer to buy out the town of Times Beach. And scientists are testing for the substance at various locations in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The New Jersey Health Department, in a question-and-answer brochure for residents, says experiments have shown dioxin can cause cancer, birth defects, miscarriages and death at low doses in animals.

Easom and Snyder said that when humans have been accidentally exposed to dioxin, they suffered temporary liver impairment, temporary reduction in the white blood cells that fight infection, unwanted hair growth and chloracne, a serious skin inflammation.

Chloracne results in blackheads and cysts like normal acne, but an affected area is covered totally, with no normal skin visible, Easom said. It usually appears on the victim's face and neck, he said.

Employees threaten to strike

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — About 2,550 mechanics, cleaners and stock clerks have threatened to strike Republic Airlines on Wednesday, claiming they are paid less than their counterparts at other airlines.

In a 1,277 to 746 vote, employees in 24 cities represented by District 143 of the International Association of Machinists rejected the company's latest contract offer, local president Guy Cook said Sunday.

The union members voted to strike at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday unless an agreement is reached on a new contract. Under current provisions, top-scale mechanics at Republic have a base hourly wage of $14.40.

"We're prepared to go back to the table at any time," said Cook, who added that no new negotiations have been scheduled.

Illegal laboratory shuts down

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An illegal laboratory capable of making $250,000 worth of methamphetamine a day has been shut down by police who were drawn to the smell of chemicals in an empty house.

Capt. James Fee said agents found the functioning drug-making lab in a garage when they went to the house to arrest a woman on charges unrelated to the drug operation.

The house was empty but officers decided to investigate further Saturday when they noticed a strong smell like methamphetamine, also known as speed, Fee said.

The lab contained $1.5 million worth of speed and was capable of making five pounds a day, worth $50,000 a pound, he said.

Plane lost wing before crash

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — A homemade, experimental plane that crashed at an air show, killing its pilot, lost a wing moments before flipping into the ground and bursting into flames, witnesses said.

"As it was coming in for a low pass on the field, less than 100 feet (from the ground), the wing came off," said Leonard Rosenberg, one of thousands of people at the air show at Morristown Airport when the crash occurred Sunday.

The Federal Aviation Administration was withholding the name of the pilot, the only person aboard, pending notification of relatives.

Children watch TV, fire in room

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Five children left alone in an apartment watched television even while smoke from a fire poured into the room, and had to be carried and shoved out, two young rescuers said.

The blaze left no one injured and may have been caused by a short circuit, fire officials said.

Emerson Pinellas, 11, and Damon Thomas, 13, rushed in Friday night to save the youngsters, ages 8, 5, 4, 2 and 6 months.

Reunited church begins first week

ATLANTA (AP) - With the books closed on a fractured past, the reunited Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) was urged by its first leader to "see with new eyes, with an enlarged vision."

The Rev. J. Randolph Taylor of Charlotte, N. C., a diplomatic, warm-mannered Southerner elected overwhelmingly to the top office as moderator, made the remarks as the new denomination began its first week of working together.

Taylor, 54, co-chairman of a joint team that worked 14 years on the reunion plan before it was finally approved by the two denominations, won the top office Saturday on a sweeping first ballot over two Norten candidates.

He said Presbyterian reunion, after 122 years of separation since the Civil War, was "delivering a message to the American people" that regional, racial factionalism has ended, that "the war is over, that the nation is basically one."

City worker finds body in creek

NEW AUGUSTA, Miss. (AP) — Authorities say they would question people today in hopes of identifying a slain man whose body was dumped over the U.S. 98 bridge at Coleman Creek.

A deputy for the Perry County sheriff's office said a city waterworks employee discovered the victim on Saturday.

Montt makes promises of elections in 1984

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Efrain Rios Montt, president of Guatemala's military government, says elections for a constituent assembly will be held sometime during the second half of next year.

He made the statement Sunday evening in his weekly broadcast message to the nation. The announcement came shortly after the departure of U.S. special envoy Richard Stone, who visited Guatemala over the weekend.

Before leaving Sunday morning, Stone said Rios Montt soon would announce "another step toward the democratization of the country."

Rios Montt's announcement came less than a week after Gen. Jose Guillermo Echeverria Vielman wrote an open letter urging the government to hold elections that would "satisfy the popular will" and "end Guatemala's international isolation."

Echeverria Vielman, who was the army's senior active officer, was discharged from the service after the letter was made public last Monday.

Rios Montt, a retired general, came to power after a March 1982 coup that ousted the military-dominated regime of President Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia.

Reports of death confirmed

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The government confirmed today that captured rebels admitted during recent interrogations that they kidnapped and killed six foreign tourists, including two Americans, last July.

But Deputy Secretary of Information Justin Nyoka said the confessed kidnappers had been unable to produce the bodies when taken to the kidnap scene north of the Matabeleland city of Bulawayo. Therefore, he said, the government is not yet presuming that the two American, two Australian and two British tourists are dead.

"We have to remain skeptical at this point," Nyoka said. "More than one of the dissidents now in our custody has admitted to kidnapping the tourists, but they were not able to find the graves when taken to the scene and their reports are not the only ones we have received."

He said the suspects will be questioned further.

Americans Brett Baldwin, 23, and Kevin Ellis, 22, both of the Seattle area; Britons James Greenwell, 18, and Martyn Hodgson, 35, and Australians William Butler, 31, and Tony Bajzelj, 25, were kidnapped by armed rebels on July 23 while on a tour across Africa.

In a ransom note, the rebels said they would kill the captives unless the government released two top aides of opposition politician Joshua Nkomo. The government ignored the demand and instead mounted the largest manhunt in the country's history, sending thousands of soldiers after the kidnappers in the rugged Matabeleland bush.

The two aides, former guerrilla spy chief Dumiso Dabengwa and former Zimbabwe Army Deputy Commander Lookout Masuku, were acquitted of treason charges earlier this year but were detained again immediately after their acquittal.

In Canberra, Australia, Foreign Affairs Minister Bill Hayden said Sunday fresh evidence in Zimbabwe suggested the six tourists were dead. He said the government was seeking confirmation of the information that the tourists were killed the day after their capture.

Enraged guard shoots in stadium

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — An enraged stadium guard faces murder charges after firing his shotgun nine times at taunting, rock-throwing soccer fans, killing one, wounding several others and causing a stampede that hurt about 30 more people.

The guard, Angelo Grasso, 54, was captured by police and charged with murder Sunday after he fired into the crowd in Catania Stadium and tried to flee, police said.

Police said the incident occurred shortly before the second division match between Catania and Perugia started in this eastern coastal city, the second largest on the Mediterranean island.

They said the unarmed guard caught a group of young, rowdy fans urinating behind the stands on the wall of an adjacent apartment building.

The guard, who lived in the building with his wife and five children, chased them off with angry words. But the fans hurled insults and rocks at him once they were in the stands in the end zone.

Parliament member killed

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A member of Parliament was killed when his car collided head-on with a bus in central Thailand, police said today.

Boonyiem Sophon, 49, a Lower House representative of the Thai Nation Party from Burirum province in northeastern Thailand, was killed Sunday while on his way to visit a friend in Samut Songkram province, 50 miles southwest of Bangkok, a police spokesman said.

Both vehicles skidded off the road and the bus driver fled the scene, the spokesman said.

Thousands of donkeys to be shot

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government plans to order the shooting of at least 67,000 donkeys starting next month to ease drought conditions in the black homeland of Bophuthatswana, according to a Johannesburg newspaper.

The Sunday Express said troopers will shoot the animals to save dwindling pastures for cattle and goats.It quoted Agriculture Minister E.M. Mokgoko as saying there are 67,947 donkeys in Bophuthatswana, and, "They are useless animals. All they do is eat up the valuable, scarce grazing."

Some donkeys might be spared if villagers prove they need them, but at least 67,000 will be slain, Mokgoko was quoted as saying.

Bophuthatswana, with a population of 1.3 million, is one of the black tribal homelands established by South Africa's white-minority government as part of its racial separation policy.

Hiroshima protests nuclear test

TOKYO (AP) — The mayor of Hiroshima, the first city in the world to suffer an atomic bomb attack, today sent a telegram to the Soviet ambassador to Japan protesting a reported underground nuclear test by the Soviet Union, city officials said.

In a cable to Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Pavlov, Mayor Takeshi Araki called on Soviet authorities to exercise "good sense" and halt all nuclear tests, the officials said.

The Soviet Union reportedly detonated a powerful underground nuclear explosion in east Kazakhstan on Sunday.

Hiroshima, in western Japan, was destroyed by a U.S. atomic bomb dropped in the closing days of World War II.

Top commander killed in battle

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — One of the top commanders of the Afghan insurgents fighting Soviet and Afghan government troops was killed in a battle outside the Afghan capital of Kabul, a pro-rebel news agency reports.

The account by the Afghan Islamic Press said commander "Fazal" was killed Wednesday during a guerrilla ambush on a military convoy on its way from the capital to the eastern city of Jalalabad. It said he was among five guerrillas killed when warplanes defending the convoy attacked the ambush site.

Fazal reportedly was one of the masterminds behind the recent sabotage of Kabul's power system that left parts of the city without electricity for weeks.

There are an estimated 105,000 Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan helping the Marxist government of President Babrak Karmal fight the anti-communist guerrillas. The Soviets sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 as the rebels were extending their control over much of the country.

'Jedi' compared to U.S. plan

MOSCOW (AP) — "Return of the Jedi," the latest installment of the "Star Wars" series, is described in a Soviet newspaper as an escapist film capitalizing on the desire of Americans to ignore their problems.

But journalist A. Lyuty, writing in Sunday's edition of Sovietskaya Rossiya, added that "we must pay tribute to American reporters who accurately draw a parallel between the movie fiction...and the extravagance of the current administration."

He referred to President Reagan's proposal for a space-based, high-technology, anti-missile system that has been dubbed the "Star Wars" proposal.

Lyuty is a U.S.-based journalist for the official Soviet news agency Tass.

Drugs part of sports scene

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

It has become almost routine.

Lonnie Smith, left fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals acknowledges that he has a drug problem and is starting treatment at an undisclosed site arranged for by Cardinal management. Another athlete with what is known euphemistically as "a chemical dependence."

Smith is the second baseball player this year known to have voluntarily committed himself for drug treatment. Relief pitcher Steve Howe of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who had been treated last year for alcohol and drug problems, went back for treatment last month for the second time.

But they're far from the only ones.

Howe's Dodger teammate Ken Landreaux has been there; so have Smith's teammate Darrell Porter, Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos, Alan Wiggins and Juan Bonilla of the San Diego Padres, numerous basketball players and football players.

Not to mention other athletes who have acknowledged troubles with alcohol alone.

"It'll probably be a lot easier for him," Raines says of Lonnie Smith, whose problem was disclosed Saturday by Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog. "He's not the first and he has Darrell Porter right there to help him."

Why this seeming epidemic among athletes? In part, says one expert, because of what appears to be a national drug problem among people under 30.

"I'm not sure that athletes have the problem any more or any less than the rest of the population," says Art Bills, a counselor at South Oaks Hospital in Amityville, N.Y., where athletes have been treated for alcohol and drugs and where Art Schlichter of the Baltimore Colts went, hoping to be rid of his gambling habit.

"Athletes do have a lot more money to spend and a lot of free time and they're susceptible to some of these fast-lane characters who hang around. But even then, sometimes it seems like the entire population of young people has become involved with drugs,"

Like Howe, who had not given up an earned run this season, there was nothing in Smith's play that indicated a problem. He was hitting .311 for the season and had two hits Friday night, the final game he played.

Herzog said he was unaware of any trouble until Smith came to him Thursday and asked for help. And Porter, who was treated for both alcohol and drug addiction in 1980, said: "I wasn't aware of it. I didn't know."

Howe acknowledged this spring that he had had a problem with cocaine. The drug that Smith was using was undisclosed.

But Bills says their strong on-field performances aren't surprising. Some drugs, including the highly popular cocaine, can stimulate performance short-term performance. It is only over longer periods — sometimes weeks, sometimes months — that users' lives finally deteriorate.

"Cocaine is a stimulant," Bills says. "If someone isn't using too much, it can get him up for a game. If he shows up a little hungover he can take a little snort and feel better. One reason cocaine is so popular with the fast crowd is that it allows them to stay up."

But then comes the long run.

Cubs use muscle for third straight win

Midland's Cubs made it three a row over the Beaumont Gators with a lusty 18-11 Texas League win Sunday night at Cubs Stadium as the wind blew and base hits flew in all directions.

Midland collected 21 of the game's 33 hits. Eleven of the Midland hits went for extra bases and with three innings still to go, Tom Lombarski, Don Hyman and Carlos Lezcano all had shots at hitting for the cycle. In fact, Lezcano needed only a single to complete the feat, but struck out in his final at bat.

Still, Lezcano, who joined the team only recently from Iowa, had a game high five runs batted in. That, however, edged Trey Brooks, one of four Cubs to collect three hits, by only one. Brooks extended his hitting streak to 14 games.

SEVEN OF Midland's extra base hits were doubles and three were homers. Beaumont had three doubles and a homer by John Kruk among its 12 hits off three Midland pitchers. Kruk, who homered with one on in the ninth, has hit four homers this season, all at Cubs Stadium.

Midland's 12-batter, eight-run fifth inning wasn't enough to win, but it did put the Cubs so far in front they were never challenged.

Lombarski drove his eighth homer over the centerfield fence to start a three-run second. Catcher Don Hyman doubled home a run in the fourth and then contributed a low-liner over the left field fence for two runs in the eight run fifth. That came right after a two-run single by Brooks and a two-run double by Lezcano.

Lezcano's two-run homer came in the sixth.

OPPOSING pitchers still can't decide what to do with Mike Anicich. Sunday they walked him three times, bringing his total to six for two games. The Gators pitched to him twice. The result: a double and single. Either way it didn't seem to matter. He scored four times.

Bo Laughlin, 3-1, the one-time major league pitcher trying to come back from a serious injury, won the series opener, but was the loser Sunday, lasting 4 1/3 innings and being charged with nine of the runs.

Carlos Gil, 4-5, coming on in relief of starter Ron Richardson, turned in one of his most encouraging outings in several appearances to pick up the win. Richardson had a no-hitter for three innings and then, just like his previous start, a bunch of little things began to pile up in the fourth inning and before it was over, Ron wasn't around.

Steve Garcia's bunt to lead off the fourth, spoiled Richardson's no-hitter by default when everyone went for the roller toward first and no one covered the bag. Then a walk, bloop single, walk, infield hit and a pop up that nobody could get to and Gil was walking in from the bullpen. The rally gave Beaumont a brief 4-3 lead.

Ken Pryce, 4-0, gets his first start of the year tonight in the series opener against San Antonio.

CUB PRINTS—Pitching Coach Glenn "Goose" Gregson and wife, Jan, welcomed a daughter Sunday morning...Jay Loviglio broke into the Cubs lineup with a double and single in six trips.....Anicich jumped his average to .290. He's hitting .403 since May 9...When Hatcher doubled, it raised his total to 20. Last year at Salinas, he had just 18 for the entire year...

Ryan's no walk game a first ever

By Associated Press

Nolan Ryan is once again tied for the top spot on baseball's all-time strikeout list. And he could care less.

The Houston flamethrower is also still No. 1 on the career walks chart. And he couldn't be happier.

Ryan, firing fastballs at 99 mph, fanned 11 San Diego batters Sunday — to tie Philadelphia's Steve Carlton with 3,535 lifetime strikeouts — as the Astros downed the Padres 2-0.

But what pleased Ryan the most about his five-hitter was that it marked the first time in his career that he pitched a complete game without walking a single batter.

Ryan said he "didn't feel as strong" in the later innings, but the radar gun that measured one of his first-inning heaters at 98 mph caught a ninth-inning fastball at 99. He also extended his major-league of games with 10 or more strikeouts to 147.

Padres Manager Dick Williams — who Ryan with the California Angels in the early 1970s — was also impressed.

"I had him for nearly three years and I never saw him with better control. To me, it's like another no-hitter," Williams said of Ryan, who has pitched a major league-record five no-hitters.

Ironically, when Ryan was with California, Williams had a standing offer to buy a new suit of clothes for any Angels pitchers who recorded 18 groundouts in a game. Ryan asked Williams to tailor a deal more suited to his talents, and the manager said he would reward Ryan for a complete game with no walks.

"Needless to say, I wore blue jeans all year," Ryan said. "I still am."

Phillies 5, Pirates 4

Pete Rose, again filling the role of pinch-hitter deluxe, singled in Joe Morgan with two outs in the bottom of the 11th inning to lift Philadelphia.

Rose, who has not started any of Philadelphia's last five games but has gotten into each one, came through after Morgan drew a one-out walk and went to third on Joe Lefebvre's single. After Ivan DeJesus struck out, Rose singled on the first pitch from Rod Scurry, 2-5.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 3

A crowd of 38,635 at Chicago's Wrigley Field saw a Jody Davis grand slam, a two-run shot by Keith Moreland and a near-brawl, along with the Cubs' ninth victory in their last 11 games.

Moreland put the Cubs ahead in the second inning with his eighth homer, which came off Bob Forsch, 4-5.

Then in the fourth inning, Forsch hit Bill Buckner with a pitch, prompting Buckner to start toward the mound. Both benches emptied but no punches were thrown. When order was restored, Ron Cey singled and Larry Bowa walked, setting the stage for Davis' 10th homer of the season and the first grand slam of his career.

The large crowd brought attendance for the three-game series to 116,107 — the largest three-day total ever at Wrigley Field.

Reds 3, Dodgers 1

Mario Soto held Los Angeles hitless for 6 1-3 innings and finished with a three-hitter while striking out eight.

Pedro Guerrero lined a single to left for the Dodgers' first hit off Soto, 8-4.

Braves 3, Giants 2

Dale Murphy upped his major league-leading home run total to 17 with a pair of blasts to account for all of Atlanta's runs.

Pascual Perez raised his record to 8-1 by allowing eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. Gene Garber pitched the final 2 1-3 innings for his fifth save.

Murphy belted No. 16, a two-run shot, in the third inning. Murphy's 17th broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth. Both homers were off Andy McGaffigan, 2-7.

Mets 9, Expos 1

Tom Seaver hadn't been getting much support since returning to pitch in New York this season. But the Mets banged out 14 hits — including a two-run homer by George Foster (No. 11) and a two-run pinch-double by Rusty Staub — and Seaver did his part by throwing a four-hitter.

Abbott defies medical odds

By Associated Press

There was no way Glenn Abbott was ever going to pitch in the major leagues again.

The Seattle Mariners right-hander had undergone major arm surgery, then contracted viral meningitis.

"I couldn't even throw the ball last year," Abbott said. "There were a lot of negative thoughts going through my mind. Up until the end of January of this year, I was still suffering from a 20 percent hearing loss and blurry vision from the meningitis."

Then, on Sunday, in his first appearance since Oct. 3, 1981, Abbott limited Kansas City to four hits, going the distance to beat the Royals 8-1.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 6

Dwight Evans homered twice, and Tony Armas and Jim Rice each homered. But the Red Sox didn't snap their seven-game losing streak, longest since 1981, until the ninth inning with the help of a bunt single and a bases-loaded walk. The Orioles had won six in a row.

Jerry Remy started Boston's winning rally with his bunt single. Evans then doubled and Rice was walked intentionally, loading the bases for Wade Boggs. Boggs walked on four pitched from Tippy Martinez.

John Shelby hit a three-run homer for Baltimore.

Brewers 6, Yankees 5

Cecil Cooper doubled and scored on a two-out single by Jim Gantner to give the Brewers a 12-inning victory over New York. Cooper doubled off Rudy May with one out in the 12th. Walks to Don Money and Charlie Moore, sandwiched around the second out, loaded the bases for Gantner, who hit a 3-2 pitch to end the 4-hour 9-minute marathon.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 5

Willie Upshaw's run-scoring triple in the 15th snapped a 3-3 tie and started a three-run rally that enabled Toronto to hang on for a victory over California. After Upshaw tripled, Lloyd Moseby was walked intentionally with one out. Ernie Whitt, who homered earlier, then singled to score Upshaw, and Moseby scored on a two-out single by Barry Bonnell.

Rangers 4, Twins 3

George Wright rapped a solo homer with one out in the 11th inning to boost Texas over Minnesota. The Twins sent the game into extra innings with runs in the eighth and ninth innings, and the two teams matched runs in the 10th inning.

Tigers 4-3, Indians 1-1

Milt Wilcox pitched a five-hitter to win the opener, and Jack Morris won a duel with Len Barker — although he yielded two more hits — to win the nightcap.

Lou Whitaker drove in two runs with a triple and a single for Detroit in the opener, anbd Chet Lemon homered for the Tigers in the nightcap.

White Sox 12-8, A's 10-1

The White Sox won the opener in 11 innings. Vance Law's sacrifice fly broke a 10-10 tie, and Greg Walker followed with a solo homer. Law's sacrifice fly scored Tony Bernazard, who started the 11th with a triple.

In the second game, Jerry Koosman tossed a five-hitter and allowed only an unearned run. The White Sox broke the game open by scoring six runs in the third inning as Walker and Law contributed RBI doubles.

Boyd, Campbell win Jamboree

C.E. Boyd and Craig Campbell saved all the drama they could muster for the final hole of Green Tree Country Club's Jamboree golf tournament Sunday. They won the title, but it took an eagle to turn the trick.

Boyd sank a 15-foot eagle three putt on the 54th and final hole to pull out a three-round total 204, but then had to watch both Ed Barnes and Larry Chapman miss makeable birdie putts before getting the two-stroke swing that produced victory.

Chapman and Barnes took the tournament lead for the first time Sunday on No. 13, only to watch it slip away on the last hole.

"This was a little closer than you would like it to be, but I had to do something to help my partner. I hadn't done anything else all day," Boyd said after the eagle putt.

Dave Leonard and Rick Rose took third place with a 210, six strokes off the pace. Wayne Youngs, who also eagled No. 18 Sunday, and Tom Tyndle tied Harry and John Bettis for fourth with 211. The Bettis team had the best round of the day with a 69 while all the other top finishers ended with 70s.

Texas Golfathon raises $5,500

MASON (AP) — It was a tough hole, Giles Tippette said, but he was proud of his score of 580 — 108 under par for the 30-mile, par-688 stretch of highway that became a one-hole golf course for charity.

Tippette, a local writer, and druggist Bill O'Banion used a stretch of U.S. Highway 87 from Mason to Brady as one long fairway for a one-hole "golfathon" over the weekend that raised more than $5,500 for a local charity drive.

O'Banion, 28, and Tippette, 48, alternated shots for 9 hours and 15 minutes before Tippette knocked in a three-foot "knee-knocker" before a cheering crowd Saturday on the ninth green of Brady's municipal golf course.

O'Banion's drive began the event early Saturday morning from the courthouse square in Mason.

"We don't have a golf course here," said Tippette, who said he and O'Banion are the only two golfers in Mason.

Par had been established at 688 for the "hole," but O'Banion and Tippette took only 580 strokes — 108 under par and equivalent to three or four 18-hole rounds each.

Rangers bench Sunny

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Texas Rangers manager Doug Rader says Jim Sundberg, starting catcher for the past nine seasons, has been benched while mired in a hitting slump.

"Sunny's not doing anything," said Rader, who has started Bobby Johnson behind the plate in Texas' last three games. "Bobby's getting the chance. If he does something, if he produces, he'll play. The job is open. If I had a chance to win a job, I would do a little more than he (Sundberg) has been doing."

Sundberg has 10 hits in 67 at-bats and has scored only one run.

driven in two, since May 16.

"It's everything lumped together, but mainly it's his offense," Rader told the Dallas Morning News.

"Bobby has been catching some real good games lately," Rader said. "It's not that Sunny isn't, but Bobby is."

The Rangers traded Sundberg to Los Angeles, during the winter baseball meetings.

Moral equivalent of cease-fire now exists

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Chrysler Corp. had planned to replace the last of its V-8 engine cars this summer with models that average 50 percent more miles per gallon, but now it cannot. Demand for the bigger engines has taken off again.

In the last year, half a dozen utilities have given up or delayed plans to convert power plants that burn oil, primarily foreign oil, to domestic coal. Industry officials say a dozen more projects could meet a similar fate.

Booz Allen & Hamilton Inc.'s energy-consulting department ballooned during the late 1970s, as the United States scrambled to find new ways to squeeze the most from each kilowatt and every gallon. Today, much of that business has evaporated, and Booz Allen has dismantled the department.

It was just over six years ago that former President Jimmy Carter, warning of a possible "national catastrophe" if the United States did not resolve its energy problems, outlined a series of measures aimed at cutting national dependence on petroleum, especially imported oil. "Our decision about energy will test the character of the American people," he said, adding that what was required was an effort amounting to "the moral equivalent of war."

Industry and consumers took this campaign to a number of fronts: equipping power plants and generators to operate on U.S. coal, rather than foreign oil; switching to smaller cars and diesel-fueled automobiles; insulating housing; installing solar-powered water heaters and wood-burning stoves; laying the groundwork for a synthetic-fuels industry. In general, they were looking for fuels they could substitute for oil and ways to get the most from each barrel they did use.

NOW, HOWEVER, there appears to be a cease-fire in this "moral equivalent of war." Many of the more ambitious alternative fuel projects have been scrapped, and few new conservation efforts are being launched. Consumers appear to be increasingly complacent, even to the point of renewed interest in big cars.

As the mobilization that came after the two energy shocks of the 1970s recedes, it leaves behind the question of whether the nation is, once again, setting itself up for another crisis.

In the short run, a crisis appears unlikely, because oil supplies are abundant and their price has fallen. Moreover, experts say, recent signs of backtracking come after major gains in making the nation more energy efficient. These, they say, have become permanent parts of U.S. life, much more than they were in 1977. The big-car rebound will be limited and only if there is substantial backsliding among consumers and industrial energy users will major problems recur.

"Most people, I think, accept conservation as a part of life," said Jean Crowder, spokeswoman for the California Energy Commission. "It's not so much that it's not happening as it's not new anymore."

On the other hand, the easy gains from conservation have been achieved. Further efficiencies will require heavy investment that is unlikely to occur with the lessening pressure for energy savings.

ALTHOUGH MOST forecasters agree that the United States is still vulnerable to a disruption in the supply of imported oil, statistics show that the country has come a long way in cutting its dependence on petroleum. The United States consumed an average of 15.6 million 42-gallon barrels of oil a day last year, down more than 10 percent from 1980 and almost 20 percent from 1978. Oil imports are running about 3 million barrels a day, half their 1979 rate.

Boston-based Gillette Co., for one, figures that it uses 40 percent less energy in the production of each razor blade than it did in 1973. Its St. Paul, Minn., plant has increased production but uses almost 50 prcent less energy than it did a decade ago. The gains, said Cameron Beers, the company's energy manager, are the result of "a lot of little things by a lot of people," things such as switching to more energy-efficient light bulbs.

"We still have a long list of things we are working on," he said, but added, "It isn't as easy. The low-cost, no-cost things are done."

"We're not telling people to turn out the lights anymore," said Stanley Kolodkin, who heads Xenergy Inc., a Boston-based consulting company. Increasingly, he said, further gains can be achieved only through large investments, such as computer systems and more efficient electrical generating systems. And at a time when no crisis looms, these investments are not likely to demand a share of most companies' recession-shrunken profits.

As consumers throughout the world have learned to live on less energy, the average price of oil on world markets has fallen to less than $29 a barrel, down 20 percent from mid-1980. Meanwhile, petroleum is being produced from vast new sources, such as the North Sea and Mexico. The once-feared Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries now finds itself on the defensive, exerting as much of its waning influence as it can muster to prevent oil prices from sliding any further.

DECLINES IN OIL use have come about to some extent because high oil prices forced consumers to find permanent ways to use energy more efficiently. But a prolonged worldwide recession — triggered, in part, by the 1979 oil shock — also has dampened demand. So a big question for energy forecasters is how much oil consumption will rebound as industry puts its blast furnaces, truck fleets and boilers back to work.

There are many indications that economic vigor moves less in lock step with energy consumption than it used to. W. D. Hermann, chief economist for Standard Oil Co. of California, estimates that whereas it took 29,800 barrels of oil a day to produce $1 billion in U.S. gross national product in 1972, the figure was only 24,500 barrels in 1982, after adjustments for inflation.

"Fundamentally, we'll never use as much energy per capita as we used to," Atlantic Richfield Co. President William F. Kieschnick said, but he added that there will be "zigs and zags on that fundamental."

Potential oil supplies still far exceed demand, which means that there is little immediate danger of an energy crunch, barring a massive disruption of Middle Eastern production.

Robert A. Gough, senior vice president of Data Resources Inc., said, "We're still vulnerable, but we're not nearly as vulnerable as we were in the past." Even with vigorous economic growth, he said, "the slack out there is enough to mitigate any potential problems ... under any economic scenario that's plausible over the next 18 months."

Eric R. Zausner, Booz Allen's chief energy consultant, observed, "It's going to get tight again, but not in the next few years."

TEXACO INC. Chief Economist Tor Meloe projects that oil supplies will be more than adequate to meet demand at least through 1995, assuming the economy grows by 3.5 percent annually through the end of the decade and by 2.4 percent a year during the 1990s.

Other economists agree that oil demand is not likely to grow enough to cause a shortage through the remainder of the decade. But some analysts point to recent history as proof that complacency about energy can be shortsighted. Despite the lesson of the first OPEC-engineered price shock in 1973, the U.S. economy had grown more dependent than ever on foreign supplies when the second crisis hit five years later.

"People are used to the (most recent) price drop. They go back to their old habits," said Harold K. Sperlich, president of Chrysler's North American automotive operations. "The demand could rise to the point where OPEC could get their act together and push us around again .... When you've been shot in the head twice by somebody, it doesn't take a genius to figure out these guys are holding a loaded gun."

Sperlich argues for higher taxes on gasoline and a fee on oil imports to discourage growth in fuel use.

The consumer's return to "old habits" has been most visible — and painful — to the auto industry. After the last oil shock forced it to spend billions to retool its factories, Detroit suddenly finds itself with twice as much small-car manufacturing capacity as it needs, and unable to keep up with a new demand for larger, more powerful models.

BIG CARS captured barely 10.4 percent of the domestic car market in 1981, half their share in 1977. But this year the figure is up to 13.5 percent, according to Ford Motor Co. estimates.

General Motors Corp. and Ford have warned the government that their new-car fleets will fall short of federally mandated average mileage targets this year for the first time since standards were set in 1978. The market for fuel-stretching diesel-powered cars has almost vanished, while sales of recreational vehicle sales this year are expected to be almost double what they were three years ago.

Governmental sources say they fear that in the face of demand for larger cars, the auto industry will begin to press to have fuel-efficiency standards loosened. Thus, they say, the United States could begin to backtrack on the gains of the past decade.

Analysts quickly point out, however, that the biggest of this year's cars use much lessifuel than the muscle machines of a decade ago. Chrysler's 1983 fleet, for example, is expected to average 28 miles per gallon, more than double its typical mileage during the early 1970s.

Phillip D. Patterson of the Department of Energy estimates, moreover, that only a fifth of the 90 percent improvement in new-car fuel economy during the 1970s and early 1980s can be attributed to consumers shifting to smaller models. Other fuel-saving consumer choices — buying a diesel-powered car, for instance, or one with a manual transmission — bring the total to about 37 percent.

MOST OF THE remainder, Patterson said, was achieved by auto manufacturers' moves, such as down-sizing models, improving engines and transmissions and adjusting aerodynamic design. Therefore, he argues, even if consumers revert completely to their old buying habits, they will reverse only a portion of the gain. With a complete return to 1978 automobile characteristics, for example, Patterson said new car mileage would fall by 9.3 percent and fuel use swould rise by 11 percent per car.

Colin Loxley of Wharton Econometrics Forecasting Associates, a Philadelphia company associated with the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, describes the recent switch in consumer automobile tastes as "a minor loss on top of an already big gain."

More significant in the broader energy picture, he said, is a shift in how much motorists use their cars. With the inflation-adjusted cost of gasoline more than 10 percent lower than it was in 1981 and supplies abundant, consumers have begun abandoning their car pools and taking longer vacations in their automobiles, he said. This summer, for example, campgrounds and national parks are expected to see their largest crowds in years.

University Lands board considering lease sale

The Board for Lease of University Lands is contemplating a sale of oil and gas leases in late November or early December, 1983, at the Midland Hilton Hotel. A list of tracts you wish to have considered for offering at the sale should be sent to the University Lands office, in an envelope marked "Request for Tracts for 72nd Sale," no later than August 29.

The requests should be sent to:

Manager of University Lands, Oil, Gas and Mineral Interests, P. O. Drawer 553, Midland, TX 79702.

Should the sale be held, the selection of tracts offered will be based on designation of preference as far as practicable and possible. It will be helpful, therefore, if you designate your 1st, 2nd, and 3rd choices in the list submitted.

At its first meeting after August 29, the Board will review the tracts requested, and a brochure setting out the terms and showing the tracts to be offered for sale will be distributed soon thereafter.

Piney Woods mills humming

HOUSTON (AP) — Sawmills across the Piney Woods of East Texas have started humming again as housing demands increase.

But industry officials say the recovery has been a long time coming.

"Lumber has been in recession since 1979, much like the automotive industry," said Edwin H. Barron, head of the forest management department for the Texas Forest Service in College Station.

A wholesale price report showed there has been a 39 percent increase in the price of lumber and a 19 percent increase in the price of plywood since November, Barron said.

While increased demands has raised prices, employment in the forest products industry hasn't risen as rapidly.

"Most mills were on such short work weeks — just getting those back to 40 hours a week will take up most of the slack. There are few new employees. That is fairly typical in this industry. If there is any marked increase in demand, they will go from eight-hour to nine-hour shifts rather than add people," said Alan Miller, public affairs director for Temple-Eastex Inc.

The long-range outlook has some disturbing aspects, Barron said.

"All the factors are here for continued expansion, but the resources base is continually dwindling. Also we have the problem of reforesting those tracts once they are harvested," he said.

"We need to reforest 70,000 to 80,000 acres per year of non-commercial land. We are getting about half that," he said.

Stock market gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, aided by better-than-expected news on the money supply.

But home computer stocks took a drubbing following a surprise announcement of expected losses at Texas Instruments, a major company in that business.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 8.82 to 1,204.93 by noontime.

Gainers outnumbered losers by almost 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Friday the Federal Reserve reported a $100 million increase in the basic measure of the money supply for the week ended June 1.

Analysts had been looking for a much bigger rise. They said the relatively small increase was interpreted by traders as lessening the potential need for credit-tightening by the Fed.

Brokers said buying also was encouraged by talk that President Reagan would reappoint Paul Volcker as chairman of the Fed. Volcker, whose current term expires in August, has widespread support for the job on Wall Street.

Thatcher's daughter writes book on election

LONDON (AP) — The first book on Margaret Thatcher's election victory is due for release Thursday, a week after the voting, and the author can claim an inside view of the campaign. She is the prime minister's daughter, Carol.

Installments of the manuscript were sent to publishers Sidgwick and Jackson daily during the four-week campaign which began after Mrs. Thatcher announced the election on May 9.

Carol, 29, a journalist on the staff of London's Daily Telegraph, calls the book "Diary of An Election: With Margaret Thatcher on the Campaign Trail."

The last entry is for Friday, when the ballots were tallied and the Conservatives established a 144-seat majority over the opposition in Parliament. The complete text went to the printers Saturday and the book was printed and bound in hardcover and paperback over the weekend.

"We hired a fleet of 32 vans to get it out to bookshops all over Britain in time for publication day on Thursday" said managing director William Armstrong.

Tory leader must win seat

OTTAWA (AP) — The first task for Brian Mulroney, the opposition Conservatives' new leader, is to win a Parliament seat so he can guide his party's attack on Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's Liberal government.

Mulroney, who defeated former Prime Minister Joe Clark at a Progressive Conservative convention Saturday night, was faced with the prospect of watching from the gallery at today's House of Commons session.

During his campaign, Mulroney said several Tory members of Parliament were willing to make way for him by resigning from their seats, forcing a special election. It will be the first attempt by the 44-year-old businessman and attorney to win public office.

But the Liberals could cause trouble by creating an opening in a Quebec district, daring Mulroney to run in their territory. Liberals have 74 of Quebec's 75 seats in the current 282-member Parliament and many Quebec districts never have elected a Conservative.

But Mulroney grew up in the mill town of Baie Comeau, Quebec, speaking both French and English — considered essential for any politician seeking support in French-dominated Quebec.

Another important task for Mulroney is to soothe bruised feelings — some caused by his campaign against Clark, others stemming from bitterness over the sudden demise of Clark's short-lived government.

CONSUMER BULLETIN

CHOCOLATE MARSHMALLOW LAYER CAKE

2 egg whites
1 7-oz. jar Kraft marshmallow creme
2 8 or 9-inch chocolate cake layers
2 tablespoons Parkay margarine
1 1-oz. square unsweetened chocolate
3 tablespoons water
1½ cups sifted powdered sugar

Beat eggs until foamy; gradually add marshmallow creme, beating until stiff peaks form. Reserve ½ cup for garnish. Spread one layer with remaining marshmallow creme mixture; top with remaining layer.

Melt margarine and chocolate with water over low heat, stirring until smooth. Remove from heat. Add sugar; beat until smooth. Spread on top of cake allowing frosting to drip down sides. Garnish with reserved marshmallow creme mixture. Serve immediately or chill until ready to serve.

"SECRET INGREDIENT" EASES PREPARATION OF FAVORITE "HERITAGE" DESSERTS

Hearty, old-fashioned "heritage" desserts are not out-of-reach for today's time-pressured family. Since the demand for these nostalgic favorites continues, despite everyone's interest in diet and fitness, many clever homemakers have discovered the secret of using convenience products to cut the time spent in their preparation. Homemake chocolate cake still ranks as America's favorite treat. When there is no time to "make-from-scratch," the cake itself is easily prepared with a mix, then your own personal touch can be added. The Kraft Kitchens suggest a special filling or an unusual frosting.

Chocolate Marshmallow Layer Cake, for example, has a striking creamy filling, prepared with beaten egg whites and Kraft marshmallow creme, the "secret ingredient" which adds rich marshmallow flavor and a velvety smooth texture. The marshmallow creme also provides stability, meaning you can beat the filling mixture to its fullest volume, well in advance of serving, without worrying about the mixture "falling," as egg whites alone will do. This compliment-fetching family treat is easy, using just six ingredients, yet all are "pantry staples," eliminating time-consuming, last-minute trips to the grocery store.

A $5,000 Grand Prize in the 1983 Kraft Marshmallow Creme "Easy Secret Ingredient" Recipe Contest could be yours, if marshmallow creme is the "secret ingredient" in a favorite family recipe, whether a no-fail confection, a creamy frozen dessert or a perfect meringue. The contest is open for entries through September 30, 1983. Just submit the recipe in the most appropriate of the three contest categories–"Make-Ahead Treats," "Special Occasion Desserts," or "Desserts for the Family."

In addition to the best-of-contest Grand Prize, you could win one of three First Prizes of $1000, or one of eleven $100 Semi-Finalist Prizes. In addition, one hundred contestants will be chosen in a random drawing of eligible entries to receive the "Treasury of Sweet Treats Confections Cookbook."

Making a beeline

The peach tree abounded in fruit.

Charles Fisler was pleased with his working honeybees and bountiful tree.

"Did you ever hear of a woman getting pregnant without a man?" asked the white-haired beekeeper. He smiled. "That's what they did."

The bee was the intermediary.

In their instinctive rounds to gather nectar and pollen from blossoms for food for their hives, the worker bees pollinate flowers. By bee, by bird or by wind, pollen from the male anthers is tranferred to a flower's female stigma, which leads to the flower's ovary, where fertilization and new life begins.

The process is repeated innumerable times, just as Fisler's estimated 10 million bees in 200 colonies "all over" Midland County fly thousands of miles in hauling nectar, pollen and water from flower to hive. They are the insect world's cargo air carriers.

In her short lifetime, a worker bee collects only enough nectar to make a fraction of a pound of honey. In a good year, Fisler's bees produce between 12,000 and 15,000 pounds of marketable honey or up to 75 pounds of nature's natural sweetener per hive. "I'd rather have 100." When he robs the hives each fall, he leaves plenty of honey for the bees' food supply. He jars the honey and sells it to grocery stores for $1 a pound. "There's not much money in it."

THE WORKER bee is industrious. Were it possible, the bee would have to fly 150,000 miles to produce one pound of honey.

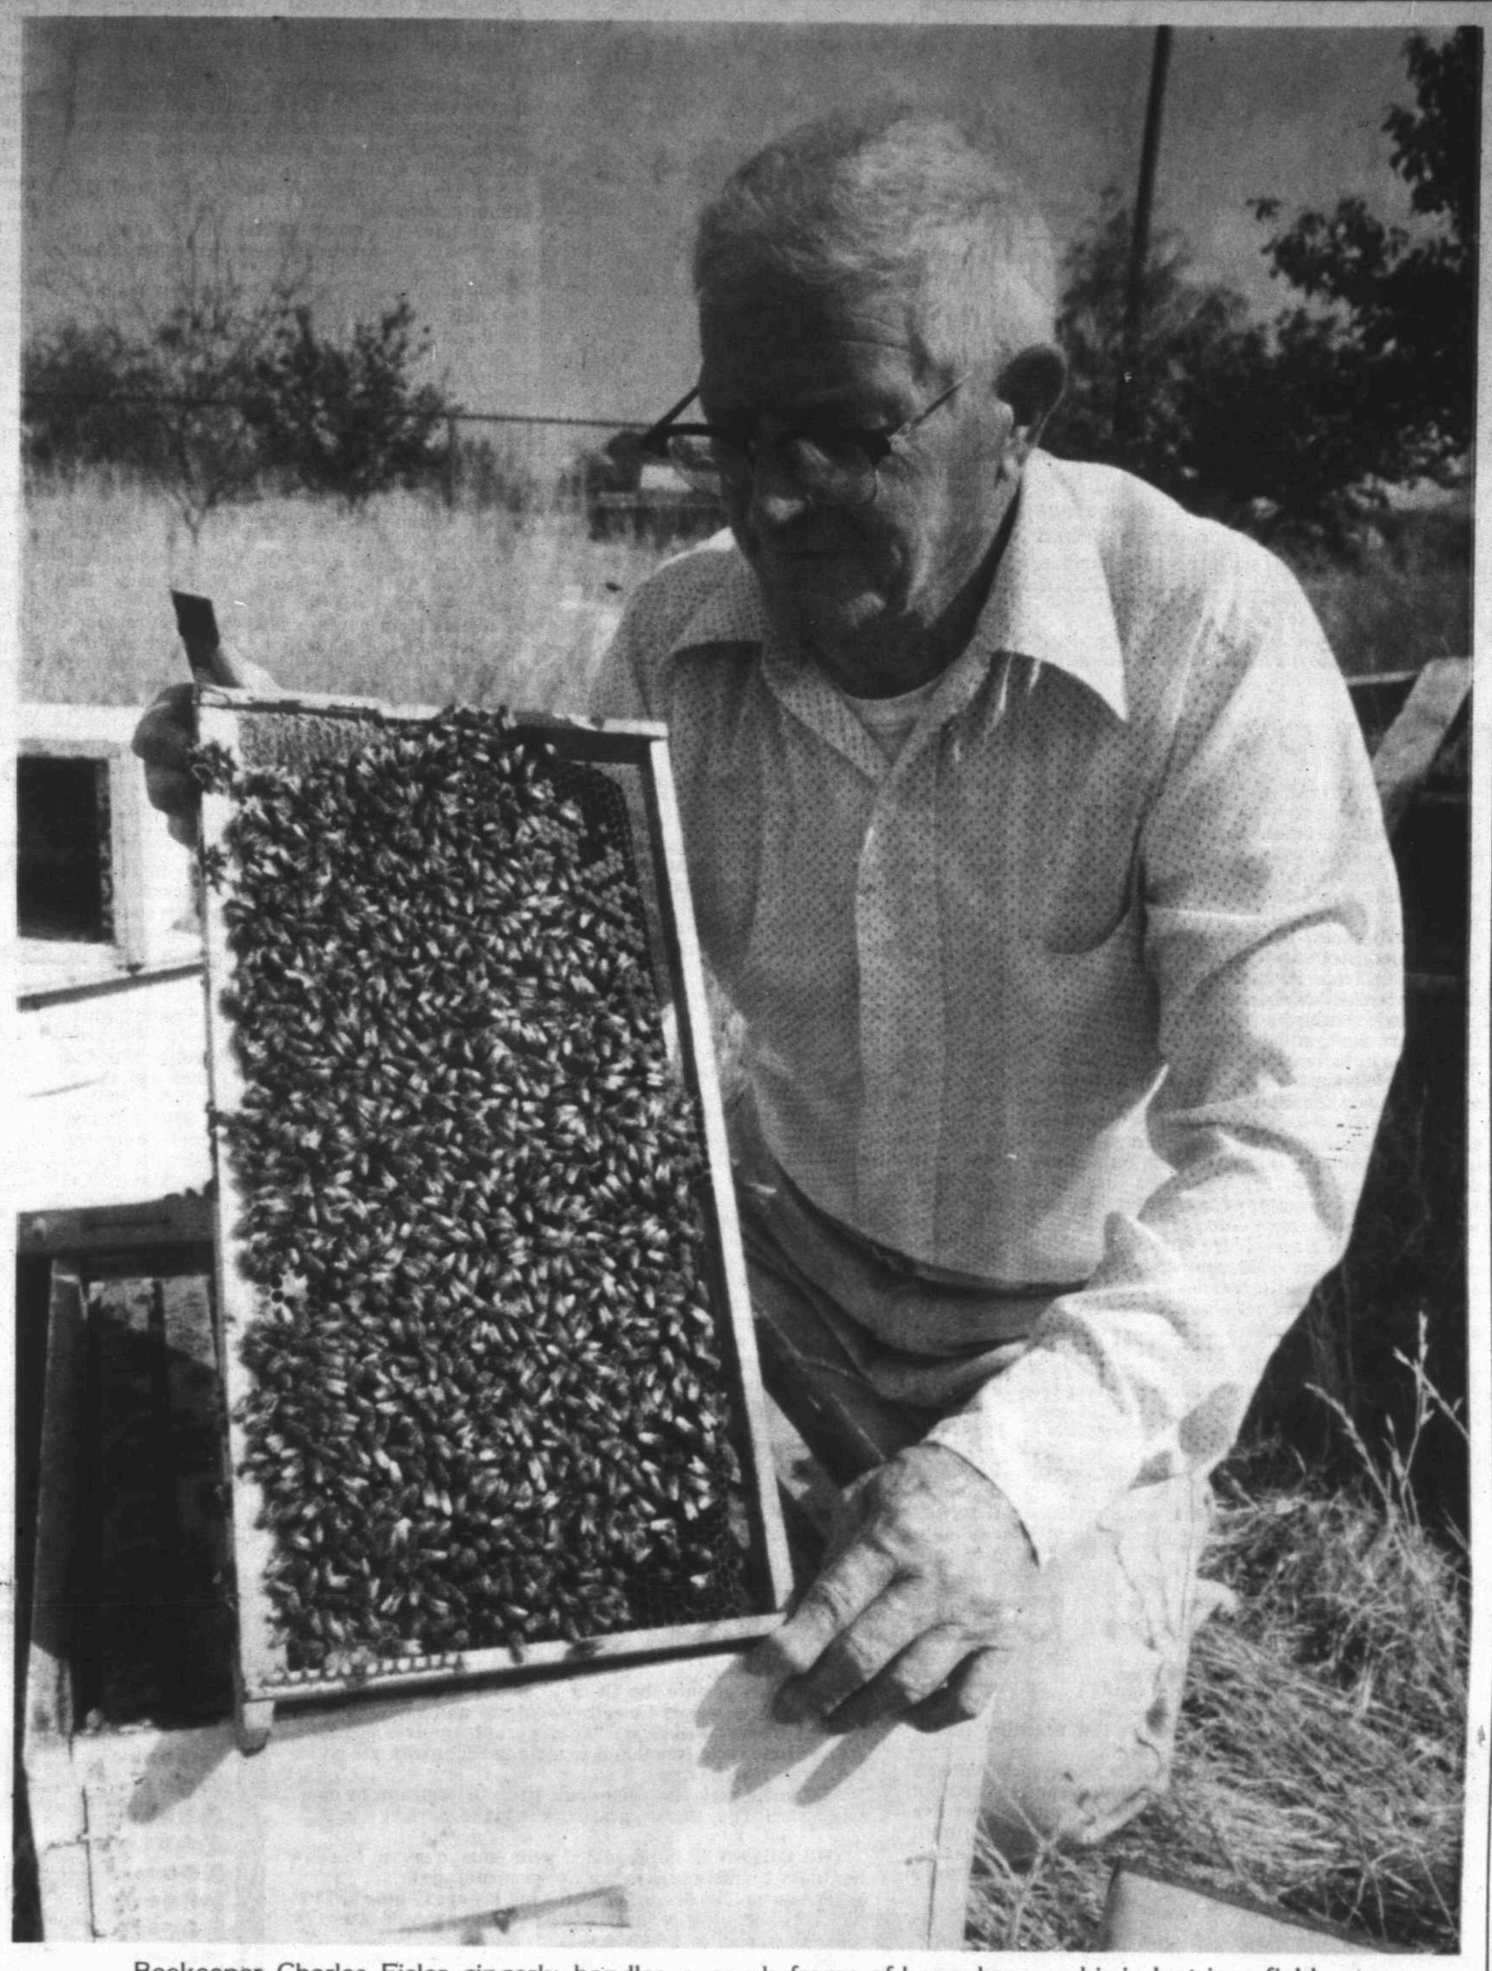

"One bee would never make it that far," Fisler reckoned.

The bee is a mysterious creature which has survived the ages simply because the bee, which may work herself to death in three weeks of air travel, obeys nature's laws.

"Nature's No. 1 law is propagation of the earth," said the 70-year-old beekeeper. "Cross-pollinate if you can, self-pollinate if you must but only expect to try to keep the species alive for a more opportune time.

"It applies to everything. When you get to the basic building blocks, there's not much difference to what that (peach) tree is built of and what we're built of."

The finest product (next to royal jelly) of the bees' art is this dark amber honey, which Fisler examines under the shining sun.

White House, oil producers clash over windfall profits tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of influential Texans are trying to hold President Reagan to a 1980 campaign "promise" they believe he made to try tokk repeal the windfall profits tax on oil. But the White House contends that the "promise" wasn't quite everything the Texans thought it was.

The 1980 excise tax of up to 70 percent on newly decontrolled oil is anathema to the oil industry in Texas, a state considered crucial to Reagan's re-election chances in 1984.

But the tax is also a big income producer for the government, and will provide an estimated $3.5 billion in federal revenue next fiscal year.

And therein lies the emerging conflict between the Texans and the White House.

After the Supreme Court recently upheld the tax's constitutionality, Rep. Kent Hance, a Democrat from Lubbock in West Texas oil country, sent Reagan a letter urging him to "live up to your campaign promise of 1980" and join in a legislative fight to repeal the tax.

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association, composed of about 1,500 independent oil companies and other businesses in West Texas and southeast New Mexico, also sent the president a similar letter.

"It is the belief and perception of the (assócation)...that you are opposed to the windfall profits tax on oil, and campaigned to the effect that you would join in the effort to repeal the tax," said the letter, signed by members of the association's executive committee.

"We respectfully request that you now lead the effort to repeal this tax..." the letter said.

At the White House, however, an administration spokesman noted that the president's 1980 position on the tax was something less than a flat out promise to try to repeal it.

The spokesman, Anson Franklin, cited a 1980 position paper put out by the Reagan campaign, that called for "reducing or eliminating the most destructive elements of the windfall profits tax, when fiscally possible."

Franklin said, "I would emphasize the 'fiscally possible,' and point out that we still have a very serious problem with (budget) deficits."

He also noted that Reagan's proposed budget for the next fiscal year continues to include revenue from the tax "as part of our plan for deficit reduction."

Then the president didn't flatly promise to work for repeal of the tax?

"I'd have to stick with the words that are here in the public record, that everyone could see, and that says that when it's fiscally possible they will reduce or eliminate the worst aspects of the tax," replied Franklin.

So the emphasis is on the "fiscally possible?"

"Well, its' a fact of life at this point," said Franklin.

And Reagan would not be for reducing the tax now?

"Well, it's still in the budget," he said.

A check of other Reagan statements during the 1980 campaign indicates that, although he was highly critical of the windfall profits tax, he regularly qualified his comments regarding its repeal.

Both Hance's office and the Permian Basin Petroleum Assocation acknowledged they were unable to locate any statement in which Reagan flatly promised, without qualification, to try to eliminate the tax.

UT, A&M foster joint programs

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Historically, Texas A&M University and the University of Texas — Aggies and Longhorns — have kept their distance.

Cooperation between the state's so-called flagship institutions has been minimal. It seemed the two schools peered jealously at each other across the hundred miles of gentle hills that separate College Station and Austin.

But that is going to change, A&M and UT administrators say.

"We have too much at stake to go separate ways," says Dr. Arthur Hansen, chancellor of the A&M system.

"We need to work together. On legislative matters this last few months, we've been working hand and glove. And that's the way it ought to be. I see that role expanding: Play to your net strength — play to UT's strength and the A&M (system's) strength and proceed accordingly."

Hansen, the former Purdue University president who took over as A&M chancellor a year ago, and UT system chancellor B. Don Walker are being credited for the new spirit of togetherness developing between the two schools.

Walker said the cooperative impulse is coming from both systems.

"Art Hansen was one of the people who pushed very hard for this for A&M," Walker said. "He was interested. I was interested.

"I think right now we have the finest relationship between the chancellor's office here and the chancellor's office at A&M that I have observed or been a party to.. in my (18-year UT) tenure."

Already, the new era of cooperation is bearing fruit:

—An agreement to combine the shore maintenance facilities for UT's and A&M's marine research ships based on Galveston Island. A&M officials say they are talking to their counterparts at UT about other ways to cooperate in the field of marine science.

—A joint A&M-UT committee studying the possibility of a telecommunications system linking the two campuses with cities across the state. The two universities would jointly finance the project, which would allow people in Dallas or Houston, for example, to watch a lecture being delivered at either campus.

—Very preliminary discussions about collaborating on research in the field of water resources, a matter of increasing concern in the state. Both universities already have well-established water research programs.

—A joint pitch by UT and A&M officials aimed at convincing Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., a new computer research consortium, to locate in Austin. In May, MCC announced it would make Austin its headquarters.

—An agreement between A&M and UT officials and supporters of Prairie View A&M University that would give the predominantly black institution a greater share of proceeds from the Permanent University Fund. As part of the agreement, which averted a possible lawsuit, UT agreed to give Prairie View $60 million over the next 10 years.

PBGC honors anniversary with Noted Speaker Series

In celebration of the Permian Basin Graduate Center's 15th anniversary, the Center and Midland Chamber of Commerce have scheduled a Noted Speaker Series featuring distinguished lecturers in their fields of expertise on subjects of particular interest to Midlanders. Each lecture will be free to the public.

The first speaker will be Percy Greaves Jr., a noted free market economist, lecturer and writer. Subject of his talk will be "Understanding the Dollar Crises." Greaves has written a book with the same title.

Greaves has served as financial editor and research economist for U.S. News and has contributed many articles to the Wall Street Journal. He is one of the country's leading experts on money and monetary problems of inflation and credit expansion, as well as the causes and cures of recessions and depressions.

Greaves also was chief of the minority staff of the 1945-46 Joint Congressional investigation of the Pearl harbor attack.

Percy Greaves Jr.

Greaves will speak at 7 p.m. today in the Graduate Center Auditorium, 105 W. Illinois.

Bees haul pollen 'cargo'

In the world of bees, as in mankind's life, breeding among brothers and sisters is not kosher.

"God made it that way," said Fisler, as he gingerly pulled a comb frame from a hive. A jar would disturb the bees and put them in a dithering flight. "Of course, this is controversial. I've had several people to tell me I'm crazy as hell." He built his case: "Why do you think God scattered the Jews to the four corners of the earth." In-breeding ultimately would weaken a species, he said.

A FLIGHT of bees swarmed about in apparent confusion after Fisler lifted the comb.

"See, they're not mean...I won't put up with a mean bee."

One got entangled in the hair of the photographer, as he was taking close-up shots of Fisler's bees. In mutual alarm, the photographer leaped in excitement ("There's a bee in my hair!"), and the bee stung. Despite his sting, he continue photographing, and the bee died.

Fisler got "popped" four times on the head, but stings don't frazzle or excite him.

"She's in my hair," the beekeeper said calmly. "Get out, girl." He reached up to remove the confused bee. "She's done popped me." He was not shaken.

"You've got so many (bees), there's usually a smart aleck in the crowd."

As in any other community, a hive is made up of a diverse lot: Most bees are industrious; some are lazy and slough off. Most bees are honest; some rob and if caught are cast out of an off-limits hive and are executed. Guards ward off trespassing bees. Most are fastidious; some are slovenly.

WITHIN THE hive are 10 to 12 occupations, noted Fisler.

Worker bees bring in the nectar, pollen and water, store their gathering, clean up the hive, process the honey, care for the young, build the comb and feed the queen bee — the force which holds the hive together.

The scouts, loaded with enough fuel (honey) to sustain their flight, seek out flowering areas within a two-mile radius of the hive.

"Scouts do nothing but hunt for forage."

Most of Fisler's bees get their nectar and pollen from cotton plants and then from mesquite, fruit trees and dandelions.

After making a literal "beeline" back to the hive, the scout does an intricate dance in telling the worker bees how to navigate to the nectar fields.

"Then they go into the fields to gather nectar, pollen and water. In three weeks' time, they're dead" and a new flight of bees takes over," Fisler said. "They work themselves to death."

The drone's sole function is to mate in flight with the queen bee. After that, he dies.

"His whole back end comes out (after mating), and he dies," said Fisler. "They (the drones) work at it and work at it hard."

THE QUEEN IS impregnated with enough sperm to allow her to lay 1 million eggs in her five-year lifetime.

"The queen, she don't do nothing but lay eggs," noted Fisler.

Nature allows only one queen per hive; should there be more, the queens will fight until only one is left alive.

The queen's life begins at the grub stage in the hexagonal cell. Worker bees select only a few larvae and feed them only royal jelly, a creamy substance, rich in vitamins and proteins, from glands in the worker bees' heads. "It's roughly the same as any milk, cow's milk, only it's richer." Mysteriously, the royal jelly fed a seemingly ordinary honeybee grub helps develop what would have been a worker bee into a queen bee.

Unfertilized eggs develop into burly and clumsy male drones, Fisher noted. Fertilized eggs grow into the industrious female worker bees.

While the bees are yet working, Fisler in September will harvest the honey.

Fisler marveled over bees and honey. Worker bees are untiring workers ('til death), are superb architects, navigators and weather forecasters.

"If I had two hands that worked as hard as any two honeybees during the nectar-gathering season, I'd be a rich man."

Bees are "pretty good long-range weather forecasters," he observed. "If it's going to be a good year, they'll start raising a brood around the first of the year. This year, they didn't start until around the 15th of March. They knew it was going to be a rough year. I think they can best help us on long-range weather forecasting.

"It's closer than we can navigate, unless we use a laser beam," he said of the bee's navigation system, which Fisler speculated is keyed to the sun, even on overcast days.

In the bee, "You're dealing with one of nature's highest sense of smell."

Of the product, Fisler said honey "is one of the best foods that we've got."

Fisler allowed that Wahoo McDaniel, a friend of his and of the bees, testified to the goodness of honey. "He said 'I can eat all the honey I want to, but one teaspoon of sugar will make me sicker than a dog.' "

Houston columnist 'snoops to conquer'

HOUSTON (AP) — The movers and shakers of Texas' largest city who are grist for Maxine Mesinger's gossip column still read her column, although they sometimes wince when her typewriter strikes too close to home for comfort.

Celebrities call Miss Mesinger the queen of Southwest gossip columnists, although her work for the Houston Chronicle is not nationally syndicated.

But Miss Mesinger said she "snoops to conquer."

She writes her Big City Beat column for the newspaper, sometimes using her own experiences and relationships with celebrities as subject material. Her column has appeared every day except Sunday for more than 20 years.

Frank Sinatra took her along when he toured Africa. Ed McMahon and his wife throw parties in her honor when she visits Los Angeles. And Barbara Walters lunches with her in New York.

She's a regular for dinner at Houston's most glamorous nightspots. She has chatted on television talk shows with Merv Griffin, Mike Douglas, Gary Collins and David Susskind.

On a typical night at Tony's Restaurant, Miss Mesinger joined a party of 35 people in the cool confines of a wine cellar. Seated together for dinner were Gen. Maurice Hirsch and Rosewood Hotel executives Caroline Schoellkopf and Bob Zimmer.

"Darling, you are simply too chic to have to work for a living," she said to a guest making her goodbye. "And God, so am I."

But she does work constantly, rising early to attend social events in Houston. She writes six newspaper columns, tapes five radio shows and hosts a one-hour celebrity radio talk every week.

Two arrested, one sought in robberies

Two men were arrested and another is being sought in connection with two unrelated armed robberies reported to police over the weekend.

In city jail this morning awaiting the filing of formal charges were a 17-year-old man and a 22-year-old man, both of whom gave police a West New York Avenue address.

In sketchy reports, they were arrested a short time after Damen Woods of the 300 block of West Fort Worth Ave. told officers he had been robbed of $2,000 by two gun-wielding men about 2:45 a.m. Sunday on Fairgrounds Road between U.S. Highway 80 and Indiana Avenue. The arrests took place in the 300 block of North Lincoln Avenue.

The other robbery occurred about 1:45 p.m. Sunday at the Sandpiper Inn, 3838 W. Wall Ave.

Motel employee Patricia Ann Russell told police a man in his mid-20s entered the lobby and took an undisclosed amount of money at gunpoint and may have fled in a light colored pickup truck.

He was described as Hispanic, about 5 feet 5, with short hair and an acne-scarred face.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Plants will enjoy a lukewarm shower

By ELVIN MCDONALD

If you have any indoor plants that haven't been showered for several months, now is an ideal time to pay them some respect. Indoors or out, rinse leaves and stems all over with barely lukewarm water.

After a plant has dripped dry a few minutes, go over it in good light with a magnifying glass. Look for mealybugs, brown scale and tiny red spider-mites.

If you find insects, treat accordingly. Unless it is a large plant heavily infested, remove scale insects including mealybugs by rubbing them with a cotton swab dipped in alcohol.

If caught early, mites can be discouraged by spraying every three days with soapy water. Safer's Insecticidal Soap is more effective against all the bugs I have mentioned and harmless used as directed.

Serious infestations may require more drastic treatment. Malathion works against all pests previously named. Kelthane is a widely used miticide against mites. Synthetic Resmethrin is for white flies, which I find Safer's also controls.

Once a plant is given a clean bill of health, consider its pot. Give big plants in little pots a boost to larger quarters. Monster containers you can't face disturbing will benefit from having the top 2 or 3 inches of old soil removed and replaced with fresh.

Sometimes I suspect the only honest respect we can pay a plant is to add it to the compost. Plants that have been light-starved, bug-eaten or otherwise stressed for too long deserve a new life.

Having a clean garden will make you feel wonderful. Washing plants and pots, repotting, top-dressing, de-bugging — even pulling weeds: such activities needn't be work or drudgery, but rather part of the pleasure of gardening.

Practice them and you will experience the power of positive horticulture.

Q. I recently purchased a living vase, Aechmea fasciata. It has a bloom and two "pups" coming up from the root. What next?

A. Keep your bromeliad in bright light until the bloom begins to fade, then move to where there is some direct sun. Once each week rinse out the "vase" and refill with fresh water.

When the "pups" are several months old, or about a third the size of the parent, unpot, crumble away the growing medium and have a look at the plant's underground parts. Cut off each "pup" with as many roots as possible and pot individually. I suggest a potting mix of 1 part garden loam to 2 each of peat moss, sand and leaf mold.

LIVING TODAY

Now is the time for freezing

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

The berries are bursting, the tomatoes are tempting and the greens are great.

Whether from your garden, roadside stand or supermarket specials, produce in season is abundant and filled with flavor and vitamins.

To hold the goodness of fruits and vegetables at peak (and to save money in the process) buy produce when nature is giving its best and freeze it quickly.

The American Home Freezin' Fest can be a season-long family affair to pluck the best from the earth and put it away for a time when fruits and vegetables are not their plumpest and prettiest.

Some of the better freezables are blueberries, melons, rhubarb, beans, corn, peppers and squash.

They need little preparation before you freeze for your winter treats.

To assist you with this type of food preservation as well as canning and drying of foods, a short course will be offered today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Lee High School Home Economics Department, 3500 Neely, from 9-11 a.m. Programs, presented by Betty Ambrose, Home economics Instructor for Lee High School, and Sharon A. Hillis, will feature current information on the acceptable methods of food preservation. Clinics will be held in the afternoons for those interested in additional instruction. The programs are free of charge and pre-registration is not required.

A Home Food Preservation mailout series with additional tips, techniques and recipes for canning, freezing and drying foods will also be available to the public. Write Midland Country Extension Service, P.O. Box 1070, Midland TX 79702, or call 682-9481, ext. 437.

Observed since 1937, June is the traditional month to salute the dairy industry and dairy products. Here are some tips for storing frozen dairy treats:

-Transport in an insulated bag to protect from thawing

-Store in a tightly closed carton in a freezer unit set at 0 degrees or less.

-Use ice cream stored in the freezer unit of your refrigerator within one week. It will stay fresh for three weeks in a freezer.

-Date the packages as you buy them and use the oldest first.

-Protect frozen desserts from air. Contact with air causes a waxy-like film to form on the surface. After opening, place aluminum foil over the exposed surface to aid in preventing the waxy surface information.

DEAR ABBY

Removed or not, cousins are confusing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: As the mother of 10 children, grandmother of one, aunt of 20, great-aunt of two, and cousin of everybody west of the Mississippi, I have spent years explaining to my offspring the difference between first, second and third cousins, first cousins once-removed, etc. Since my children read "Dear Abby" faithfully, I now have to start all over again.

You told "All Mixed Up" that according to Webster's New International Dictionary, "the child of one's first cousin is properly called 'first cousin once-removed' but often popularly 'second cousin.'" I wish you had gone on to explain that while that may be "popular," it is not correct.

As you (if not Mr. Webster) know, your first cousin once-removed (one generation removed) is the child of your first cousin; second cousins would be your child and child of your first cousin. As second cousins are children of first cousins, third cousins are children of second cousins. A first cousin twice-removed would be your first cousin's grandchild (who would, of course, be your grandchild's third cousin, and your child's second cousin once-removed).

Abby, when you're trying to marry off 10 children, and you're related to everybody west of the Mississippi, you have to know these things. – TERESA BLOOMINGDALE, OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR TERESA: Thanks for telling me in words instead of sending me a genealogical chart. That's where I got into trouble in the first place. I was doing splendidly with my chart until I came upon cousins removed once, twice and a third time, and then I was ready to be removed! That's when I naively turned to Mr. Webster, where I learned a useful lesson: Don't believe everything you read.

DEAR ABBY: I run a small restaurant in Heathsville, Va. We specialize in soft-shelled crabs, which are always fresh and delicious at a reasonable price.

Most of the customers ask for toothpicks. Abby, I was taught as a little girl that it wasn't proper etiquette to pick your teeth in public, so I don't have toothpicks on hand to give out.

Please write back and tell me what I should say to these people who ask for toothpicks. I promise to frame it and put it up where people will see it. Thank you. – MARTHA CURRY

DEAR MARTHA: You may not want to frame this: If you want to succeed in business, your first concern should be to please your customers. Never mind etiquette. If a customer asks for a toothpick, cheerfully provide one. Many small restaurants (and some large ones) keep a container of toothpicks at the register so those who need them can help themselves.

DEAR ABBY: Whenever I read the letters from all the "virtuous" virgins who are saving themselves for marriage, I think of my own situation. I, too, saved myself, and so had my wife until we were married nearly 40 years ago. The only difference was that she kept on "saving herself" – or at least she rationed it out like wartime tires. She maintained that sex was sinful unless used for procreation, and nothing would budge her beliefs. I even showed her an article by the bishop (we're both Catholic) on the proper joys of sex within marriage. She dismissed him as a heretic. After our family was complete, it was total abstinence. If I felt the urge, I could say a rosary or two.

Of course, she helped by becoming frumpy, dumpy and dowdy. She knew she was not in shape, but her excuse was that "it was sinful for a woman to try to be alluring to any man – even her husband."

All went well for 16 years, during which time I became a workaholic. Then a very nice woman my age seduced me. I'm not proud of it, but I don't feel guilty either. I'm not carrying on an affair, and I do manage to stay celibate most of the time, but it sure taught me a lesson in tolerance. I am far more understanding of other people when they show a bit of tarnish. – BIG A. IN VAN NUYS

DEAR ABBY: I'm dating a wonderful woman. She's beautiful, kind, loving and intelligent. There's just one draw back — she's never on time! If I'm to pick her up at 7 p.m., I can always expect to wait at least 30 minutes before she's ready to go.

I am always on time. I hate to be late for anything. If I'm going to be late I would just as soon not go at all.

How can I cure this lovely lady of this terrible habit? — JOHNNY-ON-THE-SPOT

DEAR JOHNNY: Easy. Make an announcement: "If you're not on time, the date is off!"

You may have to cancel a couple of dates, but I promise you, if you follow this advice, you will either cure her or lose her.

Store in metropolis "atypical"

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A bit of rural life lingers on in Arkansas' "metropolis" capital.

The odor in the Farmers Association Sales Office says at once that it's an atypical urban store. Manager Jack Story, 49, says the smell emanates from sevin dust and other products with which farmers battle bugs and weeds while growing our table fare.

To the city-bred, it's a world of strange instruments. Among chisels and punches are a hoof pick, which is a pointed tool for plucking rocks from a horse's hoof, and a hoof parer, a plier-like device which is the horse version of a fingernail clipper.

The front counter offers an Ortho guide to gardening. One counter displays jars of taco sauce, honey, syrup, chow chow. Horse collars hang from a board. A few people still plow by horse or mule, but most horse collar purchases are novelty purchases, said Story, who grew up on a farm near Pocahontas.

The FA has 650 to 700 members who get a dividend at the end of the year, depending on the store's business. Fall is the big season because of the purchases of grain for winter feed of livestock. But spring is the busiest, Story said, because of planting.

The FA's five trucks run routes five, sometimes six, days a week to take the biggest purchases to the bigger farms. But anyone, member or not, can buy at the FA office.

Some city shops have grass seed in sacks. The FA has it in barrels. The labels on the barrels open vistas of specificity: hulled bermuda, Kentucky bluegrass, tall fescue, annual rye grass, perennial rye grass, creeping red fescue.

Corn is not merely corn. The seed box shelves show varieties: earliking, country gentleman, golden cross bantam, trucker's favorite, marcross, butter sweet. There's even popcorn — South American, if you like, or Japanese.

The seeds foodmakers cast into the earth's embrace are downright colorful, from green and brown to yellow and pink. Lima beans, often green on the plate, may be pink when sown.

There is the equipment for electrifying a fence. There is wire — chicken, barbed and otherwise. There are items made of zinc, nickel, aluminum, steel and bronze. There are nails, screws, bolts, staples. There are hooks. There are sump pumps.

Fitzgerald not ready to call it quits

Ella Fitzgerald

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Although she turned 65 in April, Ella Fitzgerald says she has no intention of bringing down the curtain on her singing career.

"As long as I think people want to hear me, and I can try to sing, that's what I love to do," the "First Lady of Song" said before the start of a Sunday night concert.

More than 100,000 people crammed into Point State Park to hear her perform.

"If I'm off for three or four weeks, I want to go back to work because I miss my fans," Miss Fitzgerald said.

She admits to being shy offstage and described a news conference she held Sunday as "like an audition." But she said her apprehensions disappear in front of crowds, largely "because of the reception you receive from the audience."

As for retirement after more than four decades of appearances around the world, Miss Fitzgerald said, "What's the sense of going home and just sitting down and doing nothing?"

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Entertainer Gordon MacRae says he hit "rock bottom" during an appearance in this South Carolina city five years ago when he was so drunk he couldn't remember any song lyrics.

But all that was behind him Sunday when the 62-year-old actor and singer, best known for his stage and film appearances in "Oklahoma" and "Carousel," starred at the third annual homecoming celebration for the North Greenville Alcoholism Treatment Program.

An estimated 600 people at Furman University's McAlister Auditorium gave the singer standing ovations before and after he performed.

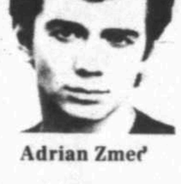

MacRae, honorary chairman of the National Council on Alcoholism, tried to make amends for his disastrous 1978 Greenville concert. He returned for a performance in January at a reduced price.

"I think I'll always have a special place in my heart for Greenville because it was there that I finally came to my senses when I hit rock bottom," he said earlier.

The incident put him on the road to recovery, McRae said, because three days later he entered an alcoholism treatment center.

"You don't realize what's going on until you admit you are powerless over this creeping, cunning, dastardly powerful disease and that your life is unmanageable," MacRae said. "Then you learn that you can believe in a higher power that can restore your sanity...and you can start a new life."

Adrian Zmed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Adrian Zmed, who plays rookie cop Vince Romano on the hit NBC television series "T.J. Hooker," says he's been getting 200 letters a week from mostly teen-age fans since the show premiered last fall.

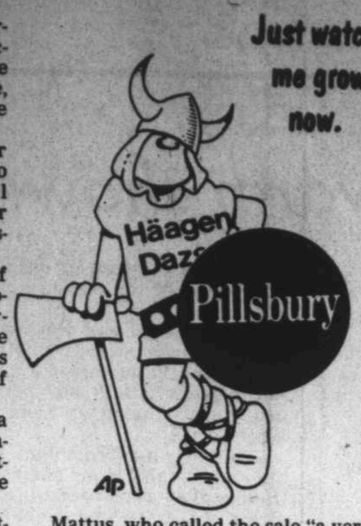

Zmed, 29, said he sees no conflict between his new, sex symbol image and the fact he is the son of a Romanian Orthodox priest in Chicago.

"If you lead a good life, you're not hurting anybody, and if you're not polluting your body, that's good enough," he said in this week's People magazine.

Potential sweet for Haagen-Dazs

NEW YORK (AP) — When 70-year-old Reuben Mattus found the success of his family's premium ice cream business too much to handle, Pillsbury Co. agreed to scoop up the Haagen-Dazs chain.

"Mindboggling," is how Roger Spencer, an analyst at the Chicago office of Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins, describes the potential for growth of Haagen-Dazs under Pillsbury's leadership.

Deals like last week's addition of Haagen-Dazs to the Pillsbury corporate menu are a common occurrence in the world of business. More than half of the nation's business mergers involve the acquisition of privately held companies.

A family often decides to sell a thriving business because the founder wants to cash in on his investment or because he is ready to retire and has no successor.

Or, even more frequently, a shortage of money to keep a business expanding or inability to keep up with the growth of the company leads to a takeover, Jim Allwin, a principal at the mergers and acquisition department of the New York investment firm Morgan Stanley & Co., said recently.

Mattus, who called the sale "a very traumatic decision," said he agreed to it because Pillsbury offered help and guidance without asking him to surrender control over how the business will be run. Mattus said he talked to people whose business had been acquired by Pillsbury and was told they "felt like they were working for their own business. It gave us a good feeling."

Taking over privately held companies is nothing new for Pillsbury.

Among earlier acquisitions are Totino's frozen pizza, Steak & Ale restaurants and the Burger King chain, which has exploded to 3,400 fast-food restaurants from the 36-outlet chain at the time of its 1967 takeover.

Terms of the Haagen-Dazs deal were not released.

Mattus said that before Pillsbury came along, Haagen-Dazs had been turning down unsolicited acquisition offers for years. "I always was frightened by large companies."

Mattus' family began selling ice cream in the United States 62 years ago. In 1962, he launched Haagen-Dazs, a high-priced premium brand with a Scandinavian-sounding name — but which actually doesn't mean anything.

Mattus said he was looking for a name that would make consumers take notice of the product and that he came up with Haagen-Dazs after a friend repeatedly talked about the quality of a Danish ice cream.

"If I had put 'Brown's Ice Cream' or 'Smith's Ice Cream' on the package, it would just have gotten lost in the shuffle," he said.

Haagen-Dazs won a growing niche in frozen food shelves at supermarkets. And the company has franchised 244 ice cream stores, concentrated in New York, New Jersey, California and Florida. Sales now exceed $100 million a year.

Allwin said companies looking to buy family businesses are usually searching for a unique product with growth potential, something that is connected with their business interests.

In the case of Haagen-Dazs, Spencer said the company has recorded double-digit growth in sales volume, has a reputation for quality and immediately will add earnings to Pillsbury coffers.

At the same time, it is ripe for expansion. Pillsbury said it plans to open about 150 new ice cream stores a year, most of them company owned.

Stockbrokers steaming over TV ads

"The ads are silly and ridiculous — and they make me laugh...They paint a very selective view...I know very few people who actually live like that."

— Unidentified broker

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Wall Street stockbrokers are steaming — and not because they've spent too much time in the Caribbean sun.

They're hot over television ads that picture a broker chowing down in a luxurious French restaurant. Later, the broker files his nails in the back of a limousine. Then he's sipping a cocktail at poolside.

Wherever he is, he's hard at play.

"This is the only person guaranteed to make money in the stock market," the announcer says. "It affords him everything you've always dreamed of."

The ads have "caused indignation in the securities industry," said Edward I. O'Brien, president of the Securities Industry Association.

The trade association, based in New York City, wrote a letter to Chemical Bank, which is running the ads, complaining that while the commercials are "cleverly executed," they also are "gratuitous and snide."

O'Brien asked Walter V. Shipley, president of Chemical Bank, to pull the ads. Chemical Bank has declined the suggestion.

"We're a little puzzled by the reaction," said William H. Turner, Chemical Bank executive vice president.

"We traditionally run what we consider are humorous commercials. Our message is simply that it is cheaper to buy stocks through our investor services division than through a full-service broker."

Turner said the ads will run, as planned, through Friday in the New York City area. Chemical Bank has no plans to run them elsewhere.

The dispute bubbles out of a new financial environment. The old territorial lines between banks and brokers have been blurred. Brokers are becoming bankers and bankers are becoming brokers.

It began when high interest rates pushed full-service brokerage firms into money market mutual funds and other high-interest accounts which swiped billions of dollars from bank savings accounts.

Then, when interest rates dropped, discount brokerage firms grew. The Bank of America began offering brokerage services through a discount firm in 1981. And in December, banks won the right to pay money market rates on their accounts.

This, said Chemical Bank's Turner, "creates situations where one industry might perceive another industry to be involved in what they consider to be their area."

Still, brokers feel it's unfair to paint them as living for wealth and leisure. A full-service retail broker makes about $64,000 a year, on average, according to a Securities Industry Association survey of its 138 member firms.

"The ads are silly and ridiculous — and they make me laugh," said an E.F. Hutton broker, who asked not to be identified.

"But they paint a very selective view. I've been in the business five years and I know very few people who actually live like that," he said.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Possible not to get disease if exposed to it

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been wondering about something for a few years and I thought it's about time that I found the answer. When I was in the army a buddy and I picked up a girl at a bar and we both had sex with her. My buddy had a good time and I got gonorrhea. How do you figure that? Also, since I have already had gonorrhea, is it still possible for me to get it again? — Sandy, Queens, N.Y.

Solomon

Dear Sandy: You seem to assume that everyone exposed to gonorrhea contracts the disease, but this simply isn't so. But why some people who have been exposed to gonorrhea do not get the disease is not known.

As for your second question, there is not much evidence to support the idea that contracting the disease provides immunity to future infection. Some people contract gonorrhea on more than one occasion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is in the first grade and when I went to school to see his teacher, she told me that he is not well coordinated and that it is affecting his schoolwork. My husband and I have also noted that he is a little clumsy, but our pediatrician has always said that he is in good health. Would you have any suggestions about what we should do about it? — Mr. and Mrs. J.M., Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. M.: All I can do in response to your question is to suggest some possibilities. One possible reason for clumsiness in children is some form of motor impairment. Another is problems with visual perception that result in poor motor coordination.

Why not let your pediatrician know of your conversation in school? He or she may feel it advisable to explore the matter further at this time, particularly since the condition appears to be affecting your son's ability to learn.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There have been times when I was taking certain medicine that my doctor warned me not to drive. But what about a tranquilizer? My wife tells me not to drive when I take a tranquilizer. I can easily get to work by bus so I really don't have to drive. What do you think? — Abe, Baltimore, Md.

Dear Abe: Under the circumstances, I think you should listen to your wife and take the bus. Since you say it will get you to work easily, why take chances? The results of a study conducted in the Netherlands show that drivers who use drugs that affect mental activity have a rate of serious accidents five to 10 times higher than drivers who do not use such drugs.

The evidence concerning tranquilizers is admittedly very limited. However, a small study of nine male police driving instructors showed that two of them were impaired in their ability to drive after they took diazepam a popular tranquilizer. You may be one of those who are not affected in this fashion but, since you have a choice, why not leave the driving to someone else.

Intensive research will be done on black lung disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new research project will receive nearly $1.8 million this month to find ways of preventing black lung, the crippling miners' disease.

"We will be gathering information that we hope will shed more light on the causes of black lung and how it is contracted by people," said Robert Frantz, co-director of the project at Penn State University.

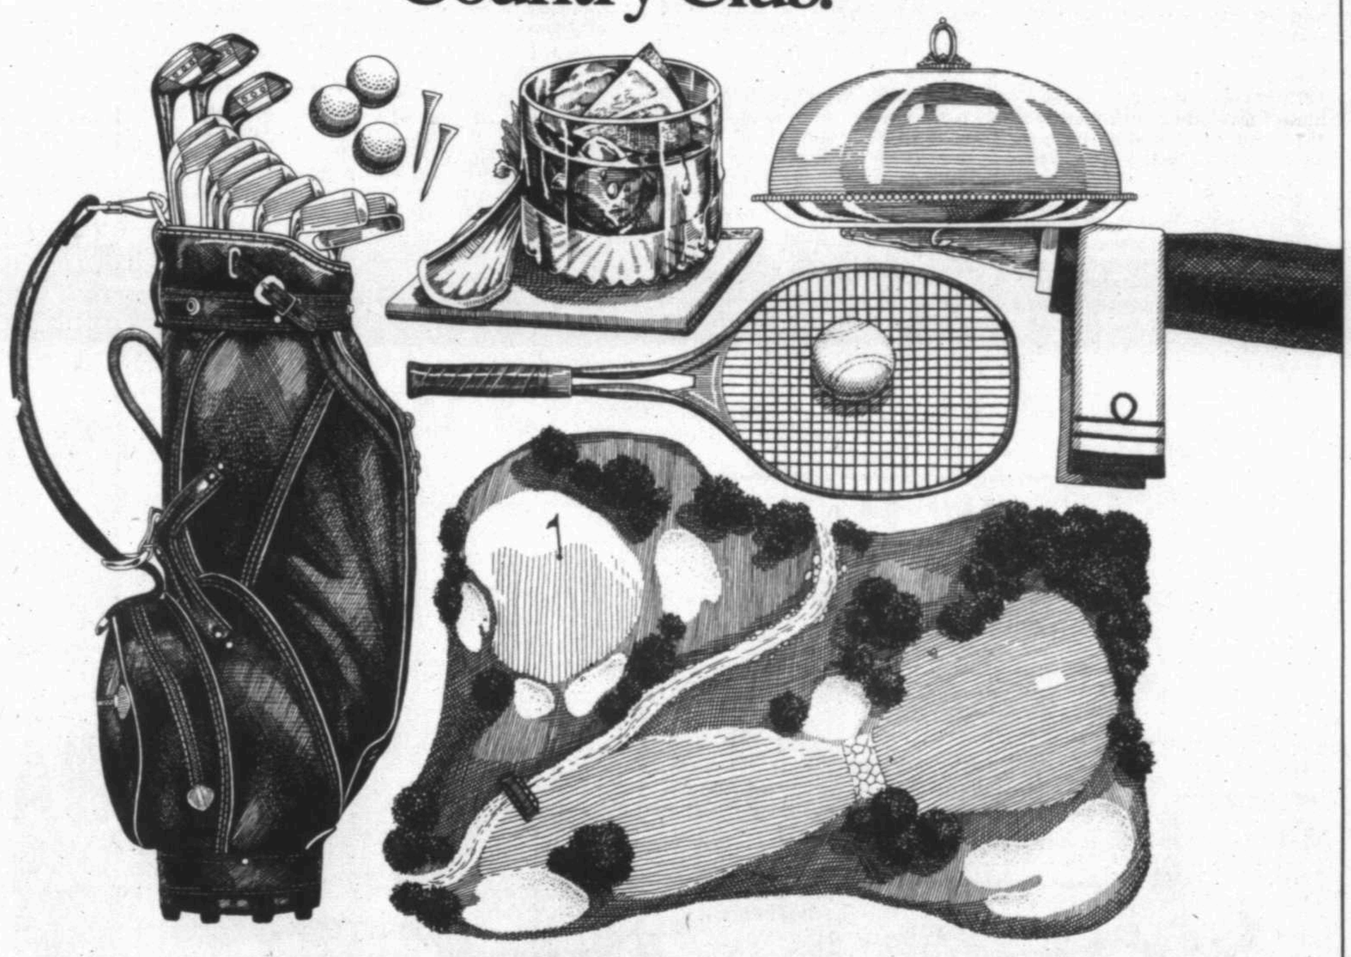

"It's a much more concerted effort involving mining people and medical people," Frantz said.

The new research into respiratory dust will be conducted at Penn State University, West Virginia University, the University of Minnesota and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"This will be the major research center for a coordinated battle against black lung," said Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa.

Mission Country Club.

Never has so much been so easy to attain.

The most beautiful, well-planned, comprehensive golf and country club in West Texas is on its way toward completion. And now, for a limited time and as little as $1500 down, you can be on your way to enjoying the most desirable membership opportunity Midland-Odessa has ever seen.

With its man-made lakes, waterfall, hundreds of trees, and magnificent clubhouse, Mission Country Club is destined to be one of the most dramatic social and athletic gathering places within the Permian Basin.

As part of Mission Dorado, a totally planned residential, commercial and business center sprawling over 2,262 acres, Mission Country Club has been carefully designed to provide an open and comfortable center of activity for members and their families.

Its clubhouse was conceived by world-famous architect O'Neil Ford. And in addition to an excellent championship golf course, Mission Country Club's plans also include a separate Athletic Center, with tennis, racquetball, steam room, exercise room and swimming pool.

Mission Country Club's new 18 hole course is opening in July of this year. An initial payment of $1500 now will secure your private or corporate membership, and entitle you to the immediate use of all existing facilities. Once your initial corporate membership has been acquired, subsequent memberships will be available at a substantial reduction.

Mission Country Club promises to be the most exciting country club in our part of the state. Call us today, or take Highway 80, then exit north to Old Bankhead Highway.

There's never been anything like it. And there's never been a better way to attain such a quality membership.

MISSION COUNTRY CLUB
Let it be yours.

Corpus Christi LULAC leader admits fabricating background

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A 32-year-old man who resigned the presidency of the largest local unit of the nation's largest Hispanic group to run for a position on the city council here says he fabricated educational and work background.

The Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported in a copyright story Sunday that David Salinas' past included addiction to drugs and almost six months in prison on a forgery charge.

Salinas said the newspaper investigation into his background has caused him to re-evaluate plans to run for the city council.

He called a news conference Saturday night to admit that he had fabricated a background including education, past employment and college sports participation to "hide four bad years."

Salinas held the news conference about four hours after a Caller-Times reporter interviewed Salinas at his home to confront him with the allegations.

He had resigned Thursday night as president of LULAC's largest local group, Corpus Christi Council No. 1, to free him to run for public office.

Salinas confirmed he had made up much of his resume after the newspaper came to his home for an interview Saturday.

He is a former director of the local Boys Club and Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Nueces County. Salinas is a partner in the insurance firm of Lear, Smith & Salinas.

He said that listings on his resume that he is a 1972 honors graduate from Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches and possesses a 1974 graduate degree in business from the University of New Mexico are incorrect. But he said he did attend SFA for two years.

A SPOKESMAN in the registrar's office at SFA had said Friday that Salinas accumulated 62 hours of academic credit. Nancy Gabaldon of the degrees office at the University of New Mexico said there is "no record whatsoever' of Salinas attending the school.

He said he was charged with forgery after he forged a $700 check on his mother's bank account to pay for drugs he began using to help control the symptoms of then-undiagnosed hyperthyroidism.

"I got strung out on Demerol," he said. Demerol is a synthetic narcotic. Salinas said an acquaintance "was strung out on it" and had "an endless supply" through a hospital.

He said the friend suggested he try the drug to stop his hands from shaking uncontrollably, a symptom of a condition later diagnosed as hyperthyroidism.

Salinas lied about his past, he said, because he felt he never would have been given an opportunity to work in those organizations or in LULAC if his conviction had been made public.

He said after he was released from Texas' prison system, he applied for a job as a janitor with the Corpus Christi school system.

"I told them the truth, and I asked for a janitor's job. A guy said, 'You don't need to be doing this.' And I got a job working with kids at Zavala," he said, a reference to a Corpus Christi elementary school.

He was later given a job at the Boys Club. After the director left, Salinas became acting director, then director.

He left that position to work for Big Brothers and Sisters.

"I ACQUIRED a very good talent for writing grants. I got caught up in the good of it all, and it got me into a light I couldn't get out of," he said.

Ruben Bonilla, former LULAC national president, "had me speaking all over the place," Salinas said. "So much responsibility was being heaped on me. There was no backing off.

"How do you tell people who trust you, who believe in you? How do you do it without destroying LULAC and the Boys Club and Big Brothers?" he said.

Salinas said he disguised the period of his imprisonment by fabricating a teaching position at the non-existent San Luis School for Indians in Gallup, N.M., on his resume.

TDC records show Salinas entered prison on Dec. 11, 1975 and was released June 2, 1976, Wayman Wooderson of the TDC Huntsville office said Friday.

Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe restored Salinas' civil rights of citizenship Aug. 5, 1977. The partial pardon did not erase the record of his conviction but permits him to vote and hold public office.

Cable television industry must learn to spring better mousetrap

HOUSTON (AP) — The cable television industry "has built a better mousetrap" but must now learn how to spring it on the marketplace, the president of the National Cable Television Association says.

"Everyone in this room knows in his or her gut that the cable industry has built the better mousetrap, but somehow the path that is supposed to be beaten to our doors has become so crowded lately that the consumer can't always find us," Thomas E. Wheeler said as he formally welcomed cable executives to the association's 32nd annual convention that began today.

"Even though we've finally reached the market and though Congress may be on the brink of providing us with richly deserved regulatory relief, not for one minute can we expect the consumer to beat a path to our door," Wheeler said. "We — everyone of us in this industry — have to collectively build that path."

Wheeler's reference to Congress stemmed from the scheduled start of debate today on a cable deregulation bill by the U.S. Senate. His emphasis on finding new ways to convince consumers that they really want cable service embraces the main theme of this convention.

"Remember the line from the motion picture 'Cool Hand Luke?'" Wheeler asked. "'What we have here is a failure to communicate.' Well, what we have here is an enormous opportunity."

The NCTA president noted that the cable industry nationwide still manages to sign up only about half of the homes that it passes, a figure he blamed more on the industry's inability to market itself than on competition from pay TV, microwave TV and satellite operators.

Yet even with only 50 percent penetration, he said, it is cable that can claim responsibility for the well-reported declines in viewing audiences for ABC, CBS and NBC.

"The network chieftains have been heard to declare this hard plunge as something of a mystery," Wheeler said. "There is no mystery as to where the viewers are going. We don't need your 'Magnum P.I.,' your 'Quincy,' your 'Hart to Hart,' or your men and women of 'Hill Street Blues' to solve this mystery.

If the industry really wants to flourish, however, it must find a way to show consumers that cable has something different to offer, he said.

"Potential subscribers believe cable programming is just more of the same," Wheeler said, citing recent research.

What is needed is a national advertising and public relations campaign and the NCTA now is overseeing the creation of a Consortium for Cable Information to take on that job, Wheeler said.

Prosecutors say man's murder not justified by previous abuse

HOUSTON (AP) — A state judge's decision to give a probated sentence to a man who fatally shot his father six times stunned prosecutors, who say the murder "was a slaughter" not justified by the father's abuse of his children.

"It wasn't a death penalty case, but definitely some time in prison was warranted," said Asisstant District Attorney George Lambright.

State District Judge Miron Love said nothing good would have been accomplished by sending the 23-year-old Pearson to prison and sentenced him to 10 years' probation and ordered him to a pay a $500 fine.

Pearson pleaded guilty to murdering his father, Mack Pearson, in December outside a neighborhood tavern.

The elder Pearson, a hulking 6-foot-7, 265-pound man, reviled his son and 18-year-old daughter, Laurie Neal, accusing them of forging more than $1,000 in checks, prosecutors said.

Deciding he could take no more, the younger Pearson went home, grabbed his 12-gauge pump shotgun and returned to the Eagles Inn bar and shot his father twice in the chest. He then followed his wounded father outside, shooting him another four times in the back, witnesses told authorities.

"It was a straight-out execution," said Assistant District Attorney Clay Rawlings, who recommended a 20-year prison sentence. "It wasn't a crime of passion. It was a slaughter."

But Love disagreed.

"Considering all the circumstances, I felt he doesn't need incarceration. As much as anything, the deceased was abusive to the kid and everyone in the family. A prison stint would be more harmful than beneficial," the judge said.

If Pearson completes his probation, there will be no record of the conviction, Love said.

According to Pearson and his sister, the shooting was prompted by years of abuse, fueled by their father's addiction to whiskey.

"He drank so much I never could tell when he was drunk," Mrs. Neal told the Houston Chronicle in a story published Sunday
