Reagan budget just 'starting point'

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON — Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole said today he doesn't think President Reagan's $1.024 trillion fiscal 1988 budget "has a prayer" of being accepted by Congress.

The president's budget plan also was being dismissed as unworkable by congressional Democratic leaders.

"I don't think the budget itself has a prayer," Dole, R-Kan., said on the CBS Morning News. He added, "I think it's a starting point; that's about all that can be said for it."

Dole said the administration deserved credit for its effort, but he added, "to reach their numbers, they probably used some smoke and mirrors just as Congress does from time to time."

"We ought to stop the rain dance about all the little figures in the budget, and move on in, see what we can do and do it as quickly as we can," Dole said.

"The administration wants to work with Congress. We want Congress to take us seriously," Budget Director James C. Miller III said as Reagan's new budget, calling for further increases in defense spending and another round of deep cuts in domestic programs, was delivered to lawmakers Monday.

"I'm tired of hearing statements that the budget is dead on arrival," Miller added. "The budget will be dead on arrival only if somebody on Capitol Hill kills it. It was alive when it left our quarters."

The budget calls for sharp cuts in many favorite Reagan targets: food stamps, student loans, housing and mass transit programs.

It proposes cutting in half over the next five years farm subsidy programs while increasing defense spending annually at about 3 percent on top of inflation over the same period.

To generate additional revenue, it relies heavily on sales of federal assets and loans, and calls for user fees for many federal services.

How much is that?

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's a trillion?

The budget that President Reagan proposed to Congress on Monday is expressed in journalistic shorthand as the nation's first trillion-dollar budget.

Actually, written out, it's a $1,024,000,000,000 budget.

A trillion is a thousand billion or a million million. Since the moon is 250,000 miles away, it would take two million round trips to complete a trillion miles.

A trillion would represent 5,376 trips to the sun.

If that's hard to picture in dollars, let President Reagan explain it. In a speech to Congress on Feb. 18, 1981, he said it would take a stack of thousand-dollar bills piled 67 miles high to equal $1 trillion. By comparison, he said, a stack of thousand-dollar bills four inches high would be equal to $1 million.

A trillion is enough to give $250 to every man, woman and child in the world.

Panel forms county data department

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The Midland County Commissioner's Court defended Monday's creation of a new $173,308 department as "necessary" to keep from adding more employees as the county's workload continues to rise.

On Monday three commissioners and County Judge Bill Ahders unanimously approved the creation of a data processing department. Commissioner Win Brown was absent.

"We've got to do something to keep from adding on new employees," Commissioner Durward Wright said.

Commissioner Guy McCrary said the new department will improve the county's service to the taxpayers.

"The proposal makes a lot of sense. I think it also means better service to the taxpayers," McCrary said.

Commissioner Scott Welch also was in support of the new department.

"I feel like this is the route to go. I think this is totally necessary," Welch said.

Two new employees — a manager and operator — will maintain the county's computer system and help employees learn how to use their computers.

And about $103,000 of the new department's budget will be used to buy a central processing unit that will link up all the county's computers.

The department's budget will come out of an estimated $1.8 million in reserve county funds, Wright said.

District Clerk Vivian Wood said connecting the county's separate computer systems will help save time and manpower.

"I think it's important the offices are tied together in order to access records so you don't keep doing things by hand over and over again," she said.

By connecting separate systems the county can save about $47,000 a year spent by the district clerk and elections administrator, said Bill Finch, computer consultant for the county.

Gunman surrenders after holding hostage at DFW

GRAPEVINE (AP) — A gunman who took a 10-year-old Florida boy from an airline ticket counter and held him hostage while demanding a flight to Egypt surrendered after being told he could leave the country, an airport official said.

Eight hours after taking the child from his parents and younger sister, firing a shot and forcing his way through a security gate at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, the gunman gave himself up at 11:39 p.m. Monday, airport spokesman Joe Dealey Jr. said.

The child, Mike Caruso Jr. of Sunrise, Fla., was not injured during the incident, which snarled Delta Air Lines service at its regional hub, Dealey said.

The boys parents, Mike and Cindy Caruso, were within 100 feet of the gunman and their child as airport Officer Gary Pinkston concluded the negotiations for the surrender at Delta's Gate 10, Dealey said.

The gunman, identified as Solah Kas Abou-Kassem, was assured that no harm would come to him "and there would be some amicable way for him to leave the country should he surrender," Dealey said.

The man was being held in Dallas in lieu of $750,000 bond on investigative charges of aggravated kidnapping and terroristic threat, authorities said.

Dealey said authorities were not sure why the man wanted to go to Egypt.

"We thank the Holy Father for the return of our son. Surely the presence of the Lord is in this place," the Carusos said in a statement released through Dealey's office. "We would like to thank all our family and friends and everyone who prayed with us for the safe return of our son."

At one point during the negotiations, Delta had a Boeing 737 taken to Gate 10 at the request of the airport's Department of Public Safety, said Henry Conley, district director of marketing for Delta.

After the gunman took the boy, he fired a pistol into the ceiling as Caruso ran after them and raced to the security clearance area as bystanders ran or dove for cover, Dealey said.

Terminal 4E was immediately shut down, but the rest of the airport continued normal operations, Dealey said.

Conley said 85 flights were due out of the terminal, a secondary hub for Atlanta-based Delta. Of those, he said 52 were canceled. The remaining 32 were diverted or delayed. The incident affected 6,000 passengers, he said.

"We weren't concerned with money tonight," Conley said.

Residents oppose concrete plant

By RICK BROWN
Staff Writer

Residents of a Midland County neighborhood west of the city limits fear a proposed concrete plant will adversely affect their health, livestock, vegetation and property values, they said during a Monday night meeting.

But the man who wants to build the installation said earlier Monday he has no plans to change the location of the proposed plant.

"They're just blowing this thing way out of proportion," said Troy Vines, president of Troy Vines, Inc. Vines' company has applied for a permit from the Texas Air Control Board to build the plant about a mile west of the city limits near the intersection of State Highway 158 and FM 1246.

"We not going to put anything in the air to hurt anyone out there," he said.

Abuse of Odessa girl investigated

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Ector County Sheriff's Child Abuse Division continues to investigate what one deputy described as "the worst case of child abuse I've ever seen."

Examination of the 3½-year-old girl by doctors revealed she had about 200 scars, some old, some new, said Deputy Roy Gladden, including a cigarette burn above her left temple "that went all the way to the bone" of her skull.

According to Gladden, the child had been repeatedly raped, "vaginally and anally," and suffers from "second degree syphilis," he stated.

Gladden said the girl's left eye was blackened and the left side of her face was deeply bruised. Remarking about a split in the middle of the little girl's upper lip, that ran from the gum line to the bottom of the lip, Gladden said it indicated she had been struck "with tremendous force." The child also has a broken nose, he said.

A 28-year-old man and his 22-year-old wife remained in the Ector County jail today in lieu of bonds totalling $80,000 in connection with the case.

Monday, Peace Justice Manuel Valles set bond for Genevevo Dominguez, 9003 W. University, at $50,000 on a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child, $10,000 on the charge of injury to a child and at $5,000 on the charge of failure to report child abuse. His wife, Guadalupe Dominguez of the same address, was charged with injury to a child and failure to report child abuse. Valles set bonds for her totalling $15,000.

Verdict still out on state judge selection

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The debate has gone from quoting Thomas Jefferson to accusing the chief justice of power grabbing, from town meetings to inside the Texas Supreme Court.

The debate is over how Texans select their judges. A movement, led by Chief Justice John Hill, is pushing for a merit system that would allow the governor to appoint all judges. On the other side, a rivial group has labeled the merit system "political patronage" and wants to keep the current elective system for judge.

And in the middle, drowned out by the larger lobbies, is another, less-visible movement to reform the way judges are picked — such as non-partisan or off-year races — while keeping the elective system.

The merit system works like this: Special commissions — picked by the governor, lieutenant governor, House speaker, State Bar of Texas president and the two major party leaders — would submit names of attorneys they think are qualified to serve as judges. The governor would appoint judges from that pool, and the Senate would confirm the nominations. Judges would then face periodic retention elections, in which voters could decide to keep or remove the judge.

Hill's Committee of 100 has led the merit selection forces and lists Lt. Gov. Hobby, Speaker Lewis, former Supreme Court justices and other state and local leaders among its rank. Committee of 100 members have traveled the state, drumming up support for merit selection.

Senators agree on homeport funds, disagree on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both U.S. senators from Texas applauded funding for Navy homeports in Galveston and Corpus Christi contained in President Reagan's $1 trillion-plus budget, but offered differing opinions on the plan's total worth.

The Texas homeports were allocated $67.8 million in the president's 1988 budget, submitted to Congress on Monday. Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, a Democrat, and Phil Gramm, a Republican, both said they would fight for retention of homeport funding during congressional debate.

"These are the first requests the Defense Department has made for funds to begin actual building of the new homeports in Galveston and Corpus Christi. Now we're going to have to fight to make sure they stay in the budget as it moves through Congress," Bentsen said.

Figures released by Bentsen's office show the president's plan allocates $29 million for construction of a homeport for two guided missile frigates and three minesweepers at the Port of Galveston in 1988 and an additional $1.7 million in 1989.

Corpus Christi would get $38.8 million to begin building facilities needed to support a recommissioned World War II battleship and a variety of support vessels, according to Bentsen's office. Another $31.9 million would be allocated in 1989 under the Reagan proposal.

The homeport plan, which was supported by both Texas senators in Congress last year, is part of a strategy aimed at disbursing the U.S. fleet in order to protect it against a Pearl Harbor-type attack.

Gramm said construction of the homeports on the Gulf Coast would produce 15,000 jobs and draw an additional $250 billion in revenue into the state.

"From Texas's point of view is a good budget," Gramm said. "It provides full funding for homeport in Corpus and Galveston and a total military construction budget of $252 million. That's just buildings.'

Also contained in the president's budget were allocations for construction of several new water resources projects in Texas totaling $30.7 million as well as continuing projects worth $91.3 million.

"The budget includes money for several of the Texas projects that were part of the Water Resources Development Act signed into law last year," Bentsen said.

But while Gramm expressed confidence in the administration's budget figures Bentsen was skeptical. Both predicted a tough fight in Congress.

"The budget meets the Gramm-Rudman target," Gramm said. "It does it without raising taxes. It does it without controlling spending."

The target for the 1988 budget year contained in the anti-spending bill is $108 billion and the Reagan proposal predicts a shortfall of $107.8 billion.

Bentsen disputed the figures used by the administration to compose the entire budget and questioned whether the president's proposal was reasonable.

"Congress and the president are going to have to work together to reduce the federal deficit, but I'm not satisfied that the president's budget is realistic," Bentsen said. "According to the Congressional Budget Office, it overstates revenues and understates the deficit by some $10 billion."

The administration is proposing to meet the Gramm-Rudman deficit cap through deep spending cuts in dozens of domestic programs and user fees and government property sales that Congress rejected in earlier years.

BUDGET

While the chief emphasis in the new budget proposal is on deficit reduction, it also outlines a number of hefty increases: a three-fold increase, to $1 billion, in funds to help find new careers for displaced workers who have lost jobs in import-battered industries; an enhanced $500 million program to combat AIDS disease; and $1 billion in new funds to modernize the nation's air traffic control system.

Law enforcement, foreign aid and space programs also would get big increases.

But early indications were that the new budget might be headed the way of the past two Reagan budgets, which were largely ignored.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., who will open congressional hearings on the budget Wednesday, said: "It looks to me like the budget does not really have a future."

Despite its claim of $42 billion in deficit-reduction measures, Chiles contended the Reagan budget would actually fall far short — perhaps by as much as $27 billion — of meeting the administration's own goal of reducing the federal deficit to the $108 billion target contained in the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law.

Chiles and Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., called for a "budget summit" among congressional and White House budget writers to come up with an entirely new package. "I have problems with the budget," Byrd said.

Rep. William H. Gray III, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said the budget raises "some fairness questions," noting that military spending authority would rise $23 billion under Reagan's plan, while his Medicare and Medicaid requests decreased.

And he said proposed user fees and other revenue increases in the new budget proposal, while not called a tax increase, amount to one just the same. "It's time for us to be straight with the American people," Gray said."A tax by any other name still smells the same."

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., called the Reagan budget "bad news for the health and well-being of elderly Americans" with its proposed increases in Medicare premiums and reductions in federal health care programs.

On Monday Dole depicted the Democrats' fire "the annual rain dance of criticism."

"The president's budget proposal marks the starting point for work on a final product," Dole said. "Remember, it's easy to criticize and there's no shortage of critics around here. So I would urge anyone in Congress who has a better idea to come forward with a plan that gets us there."

COUNTY

A connected computer system would allow the district clerk to pull names off the voter registration lists in the elections office computer.

The two offices pay about $47,000 a year for several services including pulling names off an elections' list and sending them to the district clerk, Finch said.

However, the county also ended up paying $3,950 to get out of buying another computer from Abacus Computers.

The Abacus computer would not fit in with a centralized system and Abacus agreed to accept their $10,800 computer back for a $3,950 settlement, Wright said.

Not other payments was made on the system, he said.

In other action, the commissioners approved of keeping hourly salaries for part-time employees, mileage reimbursement, salaries and travel expenses the same as last year.

The hourly rate for part-time employees will remain at $6.40 this year. County employees will also continue to receive 23 cents a mile for mileage.

The travel expenses for four categories will remain the same this year, with county trappers receiving $1,400 a month, county commissioners receiving $350 a month, Justices of the Peace receiving $200 a month and the county welfare agent receiving $25 a month.

Militant Filipino farmers cheer rebels as peace talks resumed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 500 militant farmers raised clenched fists and cheered Communist rebel negotiators today as the rebels entered new peace talks with the government. A former senator urged both sides to guard against dogmatism and U.S. interference.

A senior official meanwhile expressed doubt that President Corazon Aquino will suspend part of her government's draft constitution to meet a key demand of Moslem rebels for ending their separate Islamic insurgency in the south.

The farmers, who marched from central Luzon island to demand land reform, cheered as the three negotiators for the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front arrived at the State Auditing Office for talks with the government.

The Front represents the Communist New People's Army, which has been waging a guerrilla war for nearly 18 years. The two sides remained far apart on an agenda for the talks, but pledged to work in good faith toward agreement.

"We'll find out how they respond to our written proposals," said Front negotiator Satur Ocampo. "Hopefully, we can find common ground to begin the substantive negotiations."

During the closed-door session, a government staff member distributed what he said was a Front list of 10 priorities for the talks.

They included release of remaining political prisoners, punishment of military and government officials guilty of human rights violations, an end to torture, disbanding of civil militias and private armies and a "thorough reorientation and reorganization" of the armed forces.

CONCRETE

He emphasized that the plant was not a cement plant, but a "concrete batch" plant, an installation that mixes concrete from cement, sand and rock.

He was confident that the proposed $200,000 plant would emit about 10 percent of the amount of dust allowable under Air Control Board regulations, he said.

While Vines did not attend the meeting, his son, Jody, told the more than 70 residents and landowners gathered at Scharbauer Elementary School that the plant would emit about three tons of dust yearly when operating at full capacity.

"Our dust emissions will be minimal," the younger Vines told the gathering. "We are using the highest technology available."

Chairing the meeting was Glenda Hart, No. 7 Mesquitetree Lane, who heads the Northwest Midland Clean Air Committee, the group of residents opposing the plant's construction.

Sitting beside her 13-year-old son, Toby, who has a severe respiratory ailment, Mrs. Hart told the gathering she would carry her oppostion to the legal limit to protect her family.

"This could immediately put him back to a critical situation," she said of her son. "I'm willing to carry this to the point of watching and monitoring and filming and getting this declared a nuisance.

"I will carry it however far, because his life hinges on it," she said.

Other residents said they also had moved to the rural community to escape the city's pollution. In addition, concerns voiced included the plant's effect on a veternary clinic, livestock and a nursery located in the area.

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Jody Vines, son of Troy Vines, the man who wants to build a concrete plant in a neighborhood west of the city limits, was another attendee at the Monday night meeting, which was held at the Scharbauer Elementary School multi-purpose room.

The older Vines earlier Monday pointed out that a school district "bus barn" proposed for the community also could adversly affect the residents' health. Mrs. Hart said she was unconcerned by the buses, because her son is not allergic to the unleaded fuel they use.

Mrs. Hart asked the residents to join her organization and solicited donations for the estimated $6,000 that she deemed necessary to hire an expert witness for the Feb. 2 Air Control Board hearings on the installation.

Several residents, apparently unconvinced by the younger Vines' reassurances, asked where they should send their donation checks.

Also addressing the meeting was Joe Nuessle, former city attorney and a resident of the community, who told of his recent visit to Austin, where he identified a potential expert witness and met with Air Control Board officials.

Current City Attorney David Reagan told the crowd of City of Midland opposition to the plant, which revolves around two issues.

The city master plan calls for annexation of the area at a future date, he said, adding that most of the area is designated for residential use. The plant's industrial nature could affect property values in the area, he said.

Also of concern to the city is the possibility that plant emissions could under certain weather conditions create fog that might hamper aircraft landing a Midland Regional Airport, he said.

Reagan said that municipal plans to oppose the plant's construction, including a proposal to contribute $1,000 to the committee expert witness fund, are scheduled for presentation to the City Council at their Jan. 13 meeting.

Also attending the meeting was Midland County Commissioner Winfree Brown, who told the residents that asphalt paving of their caliche roads may be necessary if Vines' concrete trucks use them.

Bill Jackson, president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, also attended. Jackson has said that several trustees have unofficially told him of their opposition to the plant.

In addition to concerns about the proposed plant's location within a half mile to the Scharbauer school, two future MISD schools — an elementary school and a junior high — also are planned for the area if development continues, he has said.

JUDGES

They say the big bucks that lawyers dole out for judicial campaigns taints the judiciary and leaves an appearance of favoritism.

Also, merit selection proponents say, good judges — especially in the urban areas — are routinely voted in and out of office because of the top of the ticket. For instance, Houston Democratic judges were thrown out en masse during the Reagan landslides of 1980 and 1984, while qualified Republican judges have fallen from office during strong Democratic years like 1982.

Voters, they argue, cannot possibly cast informed ballots on 50 or 60 judicial races in metro areas. Instead, partisan politics or high-dollar media campaigns decide elections, leading to instabilty in the judiciary.

But those who favor electing judges say the current system works well and accuse the "reformers" of wanting to take power from the people and replace it with backroom politics with a chosen few making the decisions. A merit system would not take politics out of judicial selection, they say.

Supreme Court Justice Franklin Spears helped form the Committee of 250 to oppose Hill's Committee of 100. The result has been hard feelings and a deep split on the Supreme Court and among lawyers across the state.

Spears says Hill wants an appointive system so he can have a say in shaping the state judiciary. Spears even implies that Hill is unqualified to be chief justice. Six members of the high court favor keeping the elective system, with Justices Raul Gonzalez and Robert Campbell not taking a stand.

Justice-elect Oscar Mauzy says Hill is using the merit selection effort to boost his chances for another run for governor in 1988.

Hill denies all the charges against him, saying that he wants a more qualified, independent, apolitical judiciary and that judges have no business running million-dollar campaigns.

"We are losing a lot of good judges today because of the political hassles," Hill says. "I don't have any personal motivation. I'm a product of the elective system. But there's no room for Republican justice or Democratic justice. There's just justice."

Hill, ironically, is a former president of the Texas Trial Lawyers Assocation, the plantiffs' lawyers lobby that is most adament against merit selection. Labor and consumer groups also have come out in favor of the current system, as well as the political director of the state Republican Party and many Democratic Party officials.

"It's not a merit system at all," says Mack Kidd, an Austin trial lawyer and TTLA lobbyist. "It's political patronage." He says corruption, partisan politics and court-stacking are common in states with an appointive system. And, he notes, only a minute percentage of judges are turned out in retention elections, which he calls "a joke."

Charles Herring, a co-founder of the Committee of 250, says the merit system is "anti-democratic" and contends that although some judicial reform is needed, an appointive sytem is the wrong way to go.

"It would substitute backroom politics by the few for election by the many," says Herring, the Travis County Democratic Party chairman.

At the root of the problem, some acknowledge, is the Supreme Court itself. For decades, business and corporate interests controlled the court. In the last decade, however, the pendelum has swung in favor of plantiffs, whose attorneys finance most of the Supreme Court races.

Those for merit selection deny that it will lead to a pro-defense judiciary, although the trial lawyers say defense-oriented judges are what the "reformers" really want. Merit selection advocates, meanwhile, say trial lawyers want to maintain their judicial influence, especially on the Supreme Court.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, has filed a merit selection bill almost identical to the package Hill's groups endorses. The measure has failed in past sessions, largely becasue it lacked a powerful lobbying effort. But this time, with the debate heating on both sides and top legislative leaders commited to changing the system, selection of judges could divide the Legislature as deeply as it has divided the Supreme Court.

AIRPORT

Airport officials said Caruso, 32, and his wife, 30, are employees of American Express and were being transferred from Florida to Phoenix. They were en route to Airzona with their son and daughter, Rosey, 6, and were at the ticket counter for a switch in flights at the time of the incident.

Dealey said the man had demanded a plane to fly him to Egypt and was threatening to kill the boy unless he got his wish. He appeared to be "very excited, very agitated," Dealey said.

FBI and police had contact with the gunman and could see him moving around inside the Gate 10 area of Terminal 4E in the vicinity of a variety of concession stands, he said.

A group of about five people emerged from the terminal about 9 p.m., five hours after the incident began.

"We were stuck in a little cubbyhole right next to where he was," said one of them, Don Frerking of Richardson, Texas. "We were about 10 feet away from him."

Cliff Marler of Oklahoma City said he was standing in the Delta ticket line when the gunman "grabbed the little boy whose parents were standing in line."

"When he took off with the little boy, the father took off running after the guy with the gun. When (the gunman) saw the father running after his kid, he fired up into the ceiling," Marler said.

"I saw him grab the boy, put a gun to his head, raise it up in the air, shot it, then they went off to the right of the counter," said Dave Helmke of Euless, Texas. "I went away from the ticket counter and went behind a seat and hid."

Delta passengers hid during incident

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Passengers and bystanders dove for safety when a gunman fired a shot after taking a 10-year-old boy hostage at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Others in busy Terminal 4E said they hid behind counters or waiting room seats after the gunman grabbed the youth from a Delta Air Lines ticket line and fired into the air.

"The first thing we heard was the shot," said Warren Barrow, who was waiting for a flight with his wife and 9-year-old son.

"We immediately dove to the floor. I crawled on top of my son and put coats and things around his face, his head and his body," Barrow said.

People standing in the Delta ticket line said they were stunned at the sight of the armed man and watched as he grabbed the boy. But passenger Chester Beaver said the situation developed so fast that "the parents of the child didn't really notice" at first.

Seconds later, "the father took off running after the guy with the gun," said Cliff Marler of Oklahoma City.

"When (the gunman) saw the father running after his kid, he fired up into the ceiling," Marler added.

Other witnesses said the gunman threatened to kill the boy and told his father to back away.

Dave Helmke of Euless, Texas, feared for his own safety when he saw the man put the gun to the boy's head, shortly before firing into the ai Oklahoma City.

Central State Hospital in Norman was asked to trim its patient load by 140, Eastern State in Vinita by 130 and Western State in Fort Supply by 50, Lowther said.

The Norman facility is being asked to cut 280 employees. Eastern must lose 270, and Western 50 workers.

"These figures are not quotas," Lowther said. "They are basically target planning goals."

Central and Eastern state hospitals each employ about 700 people and care for approximately 350 patients. Lowther said he did not know how many patients or persons are at Western State Hospital, which is considerably smaller than Central and Eastern.

Lowther said 10 task forces from across the state have been formed to help decide what type of patients and employees can be cut. Representatives of hospitals, community health centers and the department's administrative staff make up the task forces.

He said the task forces will be looking at patients who, with proper community-based programs, can be safely placed back into local communities.

"Obviously, we don't want patients in the hospitals if they don't need to be there."

Lowther said the plan to reduce patients and employees was devised earlier this year in response to reported 16 percent cuts in the department's budget.

He said administrators hope attrition will help account for some of the expected 600 job cuts, but the chances are slim very many workers will leave their job voluntarily.

Lowther said about the only way the department could keep from forcing layoffs is if the state's budget outlook improves.

Produce smugglers can end up in a pickle

EL PASO (AP) — Tasty, cheap fruit and vegetables could end up being very costly to those who try to sneak produce across the Mexico-U.S. border, where Agriculture Department inspectors stay busy.

Avocados stuffed in the hollow spaces of car doors, limes under vehicles and drunken birds in coat pockets are just a few of the smuggling techniques witnessed by Charles Parker, assistant supervisor at the USDA in this border city.

"I've even seen people take gallon cans of jalapenos, fill them with mangoes and reseal the cans," said Parker.

One contraband avocado can net a fine of $50, depending on circumstances, said Phil Garcia, assistant officer in charge of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in El Paso, one of the two busiest ports of entry along the border.

When culprits refuse to pay a fine, the USDA's office in Washington, D.C., gets involved and offenders may find themselves before a judge. In those cases, fines could be as high as $1,000, said Garcia.

Most people pay and the offending fruit is examined and destroyed, he said.

Other federal agencies are on the lookout for drug and alien smugglers, but the USDA is watching for pests that could wipe out U.S. crops, such as the dreaded citrus canker, a bacterial disease that ravaged Florida's billion-dollar citrus industry in 1984, or the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Avocados can carry the avocado seed weevil, a cousin of the boll weevil that has attacked cotton crops in the neighboring Mexican state of Chihuahua. Potatoes can transmit the potato smut, a fungus, and fowl and hen eggs could have Newcastle's disease, a respiratory ailment that affects poultry.

The agency tries to make the public aware of the dangers of bringing in produce. Still, some people either are ignorant of the rules or don't think them important, said Garcia.

At times, there's a lighter side to smuggling attempts.

"One time a guy came through declaring absolutely nothing," he said. "I saw him in our secondary inspection area and he still declared nothing. Then his little daughter pipes up and says, 'But what about the mangoes in the back seat, daddy?' That cost him $50."

Birds are another common contraband. Smugglers use tequila and other alcoholic beverages to stun the otherwise noisy creatures into silence.

"I've often seen birds under the influence at other border points," said Garcia, who worked at Eagle Pass, Texas and San Juan, Puerto Rico, before arriving in El Paso a year ago. "A parrot chewed its way out of a cage and was ambling down a hallway. Looked like it was trying to make a getaway."

Drunken birds are tucked into pockets and handbags or taped to the inside of bumpers, said Parker.

"These are small birds and a teaspoon of alcohol to them is an abuse," said Garcia. "Half the time the birds don't live."

Most people entering the United States don't try to smuggle prohibited items, said Garcia. Those who do are often tourists returning with a pet or with food gifts from relatives. Some are border residents who shop in Mexican towns for cheap groceries.

Others are smugglers catering to the black market in exotic birds, such as sparrow hawks, said Garcia.

"That violates not only our regulations but U.S. Fish and Wildlife regulations about bringing in birds of prey without permits," said Garcia.

El Paso and San Ysidro, Calif., across from Tijuana, Mexico, are the two busiest ports of entry along the border, each handling about 12 million vehicles a year, said Garcia.

In 1986, the USDA in El Paso issued 850 fines and collected $17,940 in penalties for contraband that included 29 instances of egg smuggling.

Pecos craftsman rides tall in handmade saddle

By NANCY BENTLEY

PECOS (AP) — Tourists often enter the Pecos Saddle Shop, owned and operated by Gary Oden, hoping to pick up an authentic Western souvenir of their visit. But they find more than souvenirs.

Located at 123 S. Oak St., across from the West of the Pecos Museum and the Judge Roy Bean replica, the shop is a natural focus of visitors to this West Texas town.

They aren't disappointed. The old-West decor includes a stuffed mountain lion, the skin from a black bear killed in the Davis Mountains and highly prized Western antiques.

But the tourists also find the modern trappings of the working Western rancher — jeans, shirts, boots, hats, saddle blankets, spurs, tack and stable gear of every description — flanking them on each side of the long narrow shop.

The unmistakable smell of tanned leather fills the shop. On display to see and touch are one of the main staples of ranch life in West Texas, roping saddles.

But Oden's saddles are not ordinary. Each one is custom made, right down to the saddle trees he buys from a maker in Marathon.

It's in the back of the shop that Oden plies his trade of 18 years, hand-crafting and tooling top grade rawhide into rodeo trophy saddles and custom made roping saddles.

Oden, a descendant of the pioneer Ligon family in West Texas, seems to have inherited his share of the family's artistic talent. He follows his uncle, Earl Ligon Jr., in the craft of saddle making.

One of the highlights of Oden's career was the selection of one of his collector's saddles, made to commemorate the 1983 centennial of the West of the Pecos Rodeo, for exhibition in the "Handmade and Heartfelt" Contemporary Folk Art Exhibiton.

The exhibit premiered in the Laguna Gloria Art Museum in Austin in September, and will travel throughout the state of Texas this year.

The saddle selected for the exhibition features the centennial rodeo logo and an oak leaf design carved into the left sweat leather of the saddle.

On the right sweat leather, Oden hand tooled a barrel racer, a steer roper and a man with a megaphone, all set in a roping arena. Barrel racing and steer roping originated at Pecos rodeos, and his designs recall that history. The man with the megaphone represents the many years that Pecos rancher Buck Jackson announced rodeos here before and after the days of microphones and loud speakers.

Oden has handcrafted more than 100 saddles, reaching the 100 mark, by coincidence, while he was making the centennial rodeo saddles. He made 12 of the centennial saddles, nine as trophies for the winners of rodeo events in 1983, and three for collectors.

Saddlemaker Gary Oden begins working on a saddle in his Pecos shop recently. Oden, a descendant of West Texas pioneers, has hand-crafted more than 100 saddles.

Anti-nuclear dump group seeks meeting with Bush

LUBBOCK (AP) — An umbrella organization opposing possible storage of nuclear waste in the Texas Panhandle hopes to meet with Vice President George Bush to present its arguments.

Delbert Devin, president of the Nuclear Waste Task Force in Dimmitt, said the task force delegation would include Carl King, representing Texas corn growers; Bill Cleavinger, representing state sugar beet growers; and a representative of a Hereford-based group also opposed to the nuclear dump.

Devin said petitions bearing approximately 57,000 signatures would be presented to the vice president showing opposition to the Department of Energy's proposals for possibly locating a high-level nuclear waste dump in Deaf Smith County. The county is one of three prime locations under consideration for the repository.

"We think it is important that he (Bush) knows the people are greatly concerned not only in the Panhandle but all across Texas," Devin said. Many of the signatures were collected at last year's state fair in Dallas.

The petitions claim the repository could pose a threat to the West Texas region's agriculture industry and Ogallala Aquifer, an underground water supply for the area.

But whether or not Bush gets to see the petitions this week or hear the task force's arguments is in question.

Devin said Bush agreed last month to hold the meeting, and he said the task force was going ahead with its plans to meet with Bush on Thursday.

Linda Casey, a spokeswoman for the vice president, told The Avalanche-Journal that Bush has no meeting scheduled Thursday with the Nuclear Waste Task Force, nor its members. "We don't know anything about the meeting," Miss Casey said.

Devin said the task force would also spend Wednesday, Thursday and possibly Friday meeting with other Washington officials, including Panhandle U.S. Reps. Beau Boulter and Larry Combest and senators Phil Gramm and Lloyd Bentsen.

"I've had people thank me," said Garcia. "In one case, the wife was carrying contraband, but the husband didn't know. He did know she like to bring stuff over, but since he was the driver of the car, he was the one fined.

Grand jury indicts three men in DEA agent's death

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted three men arrested in connection with a drug bust in which a federal drug agent was killed.

The indictments were returned Monday against Felipe Molina Uribe, 29, of Pharr, Jesus Garcia Nieto, 24, of Mexico, and Benito Cavazos Lamas, 25, of McAllen.

Uribe was indicted on charges alleging that he killed William Ramos, an agent for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, while Uribe was under arrest and trying to escape.

Another count alleges Uribe used a .38-caliber pistol to kill the 30-year-old agent.

Uribe was wounded when gunfire erupted during the New Year's Eve drug bust at a grocery store parking lot south of Pharr.

All three men were indicted on charges of conspiring to possess with intent to distribute 300 pounds of marijuana, and possession of 300 pounds of marijuana.

Agents seized a van containing 300 pounds of marijuana at the scene of the shooting, in the community of Las Milpas.

Uribe remained hospitalized under guard today in McAllen with a gunshot wound to the leg. The other two men were held in the Hidalgo County Jail.

Ramos was the first DEA agent to be killed in almost two years, but was the second Rio Grande Valley narcotics officer to be killed in two months, authorities said.

Council in hot water over city spa

DALLAS (AP) — Detractors upset by the cost and location of the city's new health spa say they aren't sure if the facility will work.

City officials gave tours Monday of the $115,000 spa called the Dallas Fitness Center. The center is located in trendy North Dallas amid dozens of other private health clubs. The location has prompted criticism from those who say the facility can't compete in the area.

Dallas City Council member Diane Ragsdale wonders why the money spent for the treadmills and a sauna couldn't have spent to update the city's 39 recreational centers.

"If we're going to do that kind of thing, we might as well do it across the board so that everyone has access to that quality of programs," Ms. Ragsdale said.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Knowing which side your bread is buttered on will keep you solvent and moving up the career ladder. Others admire you for being creative, original and alert. Shrewdness counts big in real estate, banking negotiations. Work at building happier, more productive relationships, inside and outside of the family. Travel brings good luck and extra cash. Expect a positive response to a romantic query.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: 13th U.S. President Millard Fillmore, hot air balloon inventor Jacques Montgolfier, "New Yorker" cartoonist Charles Addams, writer-producer William Peter Blatty, Arkansas Gov. Orville Faubus, newscaster Doug Kiker, slugger Johnny Mize, singer-actress Shirley Ross, actress Erin Gray ("Silver Spoons").

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New job benefits are part of the picture. Let mate or a close ally take the lead. Differences with your co-workers can be resolved through intelligent compromise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You must move quickly in regard to employment interests. You are on the verge of an important breakthrough. You could win a legal battle out of court.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Family-related ideas need clarification. New understanding stems from a candid conversation. Do not promise more than you can deliver.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family tensions can make progress at work difficult. Try not to discuss financial matters or other sensitive issues. A telephone call brings exciting news from loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Show more initiative where a proposal or partnership is concerned. You may decide to change a date. Good timing is the secret to your success in business.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can conclude a lucrative financial deal now. Keep romantic feelings under wraps when at work. Creative ideas win applause.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Meaningful communications arrive today. Complete unfinished tasks before starting a new project. You make an excellent impression or someone you meet for the first time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your rapport with a loved one is at an all-time high. A project benefits from congenial teamwork. You could be luckier in love now than in recent years.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Influential person offers to back a pet project. Be realistic. There could be strings attached. A change of lifestyle means greater personal comfort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Try to get more mileage out of creative ideas. New job benefits are possible. A chance meeting could have all the earmarks of a new romance. Do not ignore your feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for real estate dealings. A check or bonus adds to your enjoyment of the day. Talk over your social plans with loved one now to avoid embarrassment later on.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A message may not make sense. Find out more details before making an important decision. An exhilarating trip may be on your agenda. Sales people fare extraordinarily well. A bonus is possible.

Pass	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

There are times when you have so many attractive lines available, that the simplest is obscured. Today's hand is a case in point.

Let's suppose that, as South, you become declarer at four hearts on the given auction. After partner's redouble you passed the bidding back to him in case he wished to penalize the opponents. However, when instead he chooses to support spades, the jump to game is your obvious action.

West leads the king of clubs and you take time out to consider your options. You have nine top tricks, and your tenth will have to come from the heart suit. You can try two finesses, but that is likely to fail because West almost surely has both honors for his takeout double. Similarly, your chances for a 3-3 break are remote because the takeout double virtually guarantees four cards in the other major.

A better chance is to find East with the nine of hearts, which will limit your losers to two hearts and a club. However, all these possibilities overlook the sure-trick line—you can ruff your fourth heart in dummy with the ace of trumps!

To make sure nothing goes wrong, cash your winners first. Win the ace of clubs, cash the ace-king of diamonds for a club discard, then cash the ace of hearts and continue with the jack. West can win and shift to a trump, but it is too late. Win in hand and continue with another heart. West wins, but no matter what he does, sooner or later you will gain the lead with a trump to ruff your last heart with dummy's ace. It's so simple you would be surprised if we told you how many experts had a blind spot on this hand.

Principal files suit against Rivers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Victoria Principal has filed a $3 million invasion of privacy suit against comedian Joan Rivers for allegedly broadcasting the actress' unlisted phone number last month.

Ms. Principal, 36, who plays Pamela Ewing on the television series "Dallas," said in the Superior Court suit filed Monday that she suffered "humiliation and anguish" and required medical care after being besieged by fans' calls.

Ms. Rivers, 49, telephoned Ms. Principal Dec. 15 during the comedian's "Late Night" talk show, on which she was interviewing Ken Kercheval, who plays Cliff Barnes on "Dallas," the suit says.

The call was made "with the express intention of asking Principal embarrassing questions about her personal and private life," the suit alleged.

The actress was not home, but the number was mentioned on the air and soon her phone was ringing incessantly, said her attorney, Gerald Edelstein. The nature of the calls was "all over the lot," Edelstein said.

Ms. Principal quickly changed her phone number, he said.

"We really feel that Ms. Rivers' conduct was malicious, provocative, way beyond the bounds of decency and violated our client's right of privacy," Edelstein said. "I guess we'll see how funny she is in a court of law."

The suit seeks unspecified general damages and $3 million punitive damages.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Rock star Elton John was resting comfortably today after an hour of exploratory surgery on his throat that went "very, very well," the hospital said in a statement.

"It is hoped he will not need further surgery. There's every possibility he will not," said the statement from St. Vincent's, a private hospital in Sydney.

The hospital did not say what was ailing the 39-year-old entertainer, who has canceled all remaining performances in 1987, including a 32-date American tour. It said he was in satisfactory condition.

John said Monday when he was admitted to the hospital that he had suffered spasmodic bouts of pain during a recent 15-month tour that included 200 concerts.

Throat surgeon John Tonkin said the pop singer would remain in the hospital for a week, during which time he would not be allowed to speak. Tonkin said John will not be able to sing for several months.

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University's J. David Hellums, one of the nation's top biomedical engineer, was honored with the Merit Award by the National Institutes of Health.

The award recognizes Hellums' past record of scientific achievement and demonstrated leadership in the area of basic blood platelet research, said Claude Lenfant, director of Washington-based National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, when making the announcement Monday.

For over a decade, Hellums has been active in research on reactions of human blood platelets in response to various physical and chemical stimuli with emphasis on the influence of stresses induced by flow conditions.

Platelets are blood cells which play important roles both in thrombus formation and in arterial disease.

Hellums holds the Foyt Family Professor of Engineering and is dean of the George R. Brown School of Engineering.

Prospective candidates for the award do not submit applications, but are singled out for consideration by the institute staff or members of its national advisory council, Lenfant said

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Actress Stephanie Beacham, who plays the reigning villainess on ABC's "The Colbys," says her failed marriage taught her to treat men like playthings instead of necessities.

"I will never, ever rely on another man. This is one of my reasons for wanting a financially successful career," the British actress says in next week's edition of TV Guide.

Ms. Beacham, who has two children with actor John McEnery, said McEnery left shortly after the birth of their 9-year-old daughter. The two remain legally separated.

"I admit to a great weakness for you men, but simply because my need is there, it doesn't mean I can rely on you, or expect anything of you," she says. "I regard you as more my diversion or my plaything — not the mainstream of my financial or emotion nourishment."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energetic rocker Bruce Springsteen can count more than one-fourth the nation's adult population among his fans, a survey shows.

Pollster Louis Harris pegged Springsteen's popularity on a telephone survey conducted Nov. 26-Dec. 2 that showed 27 percent of U.S. adults questioned consider themselves Springsteen fans.

The survey was conducted among a cross-section of 1,250 people nationwide, with a statistical precision of plus or minus 3 percentage points, Harris said.

A Harris release said 46 percent of those questioned had a positive impression of Springsteen and that the survey indicated he is popular for his hard-rocking music and "his apparent caring about the less fortunate."

Springsteen contributed thousands of dollars to food banks in each city he played last year.

HONOLULU (AP) — Frank Sinatra is helping Tom Selleck track down a killer.

The singer has begun filming a guest appearance on Selleck's television series "Magnum, P.I."

"All we want to give away of the storyline is that he plays a retired New York police officer who has come to Hawaii to find a killer and he teams up with Magnum," a spokeswoman for the series, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Monday.

The episode featuring Sinatra is expected to air in February, the spokeswoman said.

TORONTO (AP) — Margaret Laurence, a novelist who influenced Canadian literature for a quarter of a century, died Monday of cancer. She was 60.

Ms. Laurence worked as a reporter for the Winnipeg Citizen after graduating from college. She lived in Africa for seven years in the 1950s and wrote a travel book, novel and short stories based on her African experience.

"The Stone Angel," in 1964, became the first in a cycle of five works called the Manawaka novels.

"A Jest of God," "The Fire-Dwellers," "A Bird in the House" and "The Diviners" followed and received critical acclaim. Ms. Laurence also produced three children's books and was an ardent campaigner for nuclear disarmament.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Dale Mitchell, who made the final out in Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers, died Monday of a heart attack. He was 65.

Mitchell, an outfielder, played 11 major league seasons with the Cleveland Indians and the Dodgers. He led the American League in hits and triples in 1949, and batted .300 or better seven times between 1946 and 1953. Mitchell, pinch-hitting for Dodgers pitcher Sal Maglie, took a called third strike to end the only perfect game in Series history.

Showing the way

With his recent crackdown on dissent, South Korean President Chun Doo Hwan has erected a new barrier across his country's path to democracy, raising fresh concerns about America's strategic ally in the western Pacific. The Reagan administration should judiciously exercise its considerable influence in Seoul to encourage a smooth transition to democratic rule, averting a political crisis such as that which rocked the Philippines.

Two factors contribute to a relatively stable environment under the authoritarian Chun regime. Unlike the Philippines, South Korea is reaping the benefits of a robust export economy, with a growing middle class sharing in the prosperity. Secondly, the national discipline required by the threat of a hostile and fanatical regime in North Korea, only 25 miles north of the capital, means South Koreans have grown somewhat tolerant of restrictive government measures. North Korea's threats to disrupt the 1988 summer Olympics in Seoul have heightened invasion fears, giving Chun even greater latitude in restricting civil liberties.

Nonetheless, the government's new hard line against its opponents is making more difficult the crucial task of rewriting the constitution to provide for a democratic government when Chun steps down 15 months from now. The Reagan administration already has made clear that it expects the South Korean leader to honor his pledge to leave office in early 1988.

During recent weeks, the regime has quelled public protests organized by the lawful opposition, which is demanding a direct election to choose Chun's successor, rather than have him selected by the ruling Democratic Justice Party. To block a public display of support for a direct election, Chun lined the streets of Seoul with 70,000 riot-equipped policemen, who repelled the demonstrators with tear gas. Such suppression of dissent can only inflame the most radical elements in South Korea's already-volatile political structure.

The economic miracle that transformed South Korea from a nation of poor peasants three decades ago to an emerging industrial power must now be followed by a political leap to democracy, the missing ingredient essential to the country's continued stability.

Recognizing success

One of the principal delights of the presidency for Ronald Reagan is the opportunity it provides him to recognize the heroism and achievements of his fellow Americans.

Reagan, therefore, was never in finer fettle than when he conferred Presidential Citizen's Medals on Richard "Dick" Rutan and Jeana Yeager, pilots of the ultra-light plane Voyager, which made history's first non-stop, unrefueled flight around the world.

The Voyager's circumnavigation represented as much a triumph in human endurance as a scientific marvel. It is truly amazing how these intrepid Americans survived the nine days of being crammed into a cockpit the size of a telephone booth in a paper and plastic contraption that looked like it might have come off of Leonardo da Vinci's doodle pads.

Their exploit ranks right up there with those of Charles A. Lindbergh and John Glenn. They proved, moreover, that despite the setbacks this country has suffered in the year just past, America can still stand the rest of the world on its ear with feats of personal courage and technical progress.

Another View:

Smoking's dangers

The 595 billion cigarettes smoked by Americans last year laid the groundwork for plenty of death and disease. But smokers aren't the only ones who will suffer. A new report by the National Academy of Sciences confirms what many scientists have long proclaimed: Nonsmokers who live and work with smokers also face health risks. That finding should spur the federal government to protect all citizens from the hazards of involuntary smoking.

Compiled at the request of the Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Health and Human Services, the academy report cites scores of recent studies that prove that passive smoking is dangerous for adults and children alike. According to the report, non-smokers who live with smokers may face a 35 percent higher risk of getting lung cancer than those who do not. Of last year's 12,000 lung-cancer deaths among non-smokers, the report found, one quarter were caused by environmental tobacco smoke. The cancer risk for non-smokers increases every additional year they live with a smoker.

Children of smokers have similar bad luck. Epidemiological studies reviewed by the academy show that smokers' children are 20 percent to 80 percent more likely to suffer respiratory problems than other kids. Smokers' infants suffer twice as many attacks of pneumonia, bronchitis and respiratory infections as non-smokers' children. They also suffer more wheezing, coughing, ear infections and slower growth than non-smokers' children — and are hospitalized far more frequently. For some children, the consequences of breathing smoke-contaminated air while young is severe lung disease later in life. In the academy's view, the danger is so great that parents should do everything they can to protect small children from smoky environments.

The academy's study makes clear that smoking presents a more serious public-health threat than is generally acknowledged. It threatens not just the health of non-smoking adults — who can elect to accept the risk — but also of youngsters unable to choose their environment. If parents and smokers decline to curb the risks others face, the government should consider labeling tobacco smoke a dangerous air pollutant.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Jan. 6, the sixth day of 1987. There are 359 days left in the year. This is the Roman Catholic Feast of the Epiphany.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 6, 1838, Samuel Morse publicly demonstrated his telegraph for the first time, in Morristown, N.J.

On this date:

In 1412, according to tradition, Joan of Arc was born.

In 1540, King Henry VIII of England married his fourth wife, Anne of Cleves. The marriage lasted about six months.

In 1759, George Washington and Martha Dandridge Custis were married.

In 1912, New Mexico became the 47th state.

In 1919, the 28th President of the United States, Theodore Roosevelt, died at his home in Oyster Bay, N.Y., at the age of 60.

In 1942, the Pan American Airways Pacific Clipper arrived in New York after making the first round-the-world trip by a commercial airplane. The trip, which required more than 200 hours flying time, began Dec. 2, 1941.

National treasures missing, scattered

WASHINGTON — How do you mislay Revolutionary War cannons? It isn't easy, but the National Park Service managed to do it.

Jack Anderson

Cannons, muskets, brass candlesticks, archival documents and a wagon were among the historical items that couldn't be located at eight parks, historical sites and recreation areas surveyed by the Interior Department's inspector general.

Two other $40,000 "surrender cannons," treasured reminders of the October day 205 years ago when the British surrendered and "the world turned upside down," were found to be in badly corroded condition from exposure to the elements at the Colonial National Historical Park in Yorktown, Va.

The inspector general's auditors concluded that many irreplaceable artifacts were rusting and rotting, while others were stored in conditions that invite theft or deterioration. No one can tell for sure what may be missing, because the records of the museums associated with the eight historical areas are in hopeless disorder. Here are some of the problems detailed in the inspector general's report, which was obtained by our reporter Tyler Clements:

— Many historic objects are stored in barns where they are subjected to mildew, excessive humidity, freezing and insects. "One storage area's floor was covered wall to wall with small, dust-covered objects," the report states. "Another park had a garage full of objects tossed on top of each other from wall to wall and floor to ceiling."

— Twenty-nine percent of the museums' catalog cards are missing. The cards are supposed to give the historic artifact's description, history, estimated value and exact location, but many were found to carry inaccurate information. At the Yorktown museum, for example, catalog cards were in "complete disarray, scattered all about rooms in stacks, trays and boxes."

— At Independence National Historical Park in downtown Philadelphia, the museum's records indicated that it has 2,000 pieces on loan from the city of Philadelphia. The correct figure is 4,000. The North Atlantic Region's general ledger shows artifacts worth $3.3 million; it should show $8.4 million worth.

— Appraisals are years out of date, the auditors found. In 1981, for example, several silver objects were stolen from the Edison National Historical Site in West Orange, N.J. The thief was caught and tried. The court recognized the stolen items' value at a mere $8,700, because that was the valuation placed on them in the last appraisal — 21 years earlier.

— The National Catalog, which theoretically contains descriptions of the entire National Park Service collection, lists only about 4 percent of it. According to Park Service curator Ann Hitchcock, the collection has approximately 26 million objects. The National Catalog lists only 1 million.

— All seven museums audited were found to have inadequate fire and burglary protection. Two had been the scene of major thefts, and the Cape Cod National Seashore museum was broken into undetected because "the intruder alarm system had been turned off by park employees."

ALIEN ANCHORS AWAY!: The Navy can award all its contracts for mooring and anchor chains to the only U.S. manufacturer of heavy nautical chains without competition, the comptroller general has ruled. A Canadian chain maker had protested the Navy's sole-source procurement from Baldt Inc., but the comptroller general rejected the complaint on grounds that Baldt might go broke without the Navy contracts and the company's existence is in the interest of national security. "The normal concern of maximizing competition is secondary to the needs of industrial mobilization," the decision explained.

Health plan asks New Deal question of GOP

WASHINGTON — Given conflicting advice from his administration and party, President Reagan must soon decide whether to propose government-financed health care for the chronically ill elderly — a choice setting the ideological tone for his final two years in office.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Conservatives at a pre-Christmas meeting with chief of staff Donald T. Regan got the impression the catastrophic health insurance scheme proposed by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) was dead. Nobody at the White House thinks so. Not only is the president's course yet to be determined, but this really seems a choice that can be made only by Ronald Reagan himself.

His decision transcends health care. It goes to what kind of Republican party emerges in the Reagan Revolution's fading days: champion of free markets and private enterprise, or mimic and miniaturizer of Democratic social welfare programs — what Barry Goldwater once called the "Dimestore New Deal." The emotional intensity is seen in deepening animosity between presidential aides and conservative activists.

Catastrophic health care has been thrashed out in two Cabinet-level free-for-alls chaired by the president. HHS Secretary Otis Bowen has been supported by Labor Secretary William Brock and, surprisingly, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. Beryl Sprinkel, Council of Economic Advisers chairman, has led opposition including Budget Director James Miller, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Energy Secretary Donald Hodel.

Only a $4.92 addition monthly to every taxpayer's Social Security payments, says Bowen in these meetings, will give peace of mind to elderly Americans needing "acute" care. But what will happen when they realize prolonged illness is not covered? Then, say opponents, the Dimestore New Deal will go big league, with the government's share of health care expanding dramatically.

That Ronald Reagan even considers this course can be partly ascribed to the deftness of Otis Bowen. The 68-year-old physician and former two-term governor of Indiana has impressed White House insiders with the way he works the president. While reminding Reagan of his own health care plan as governor of California, Bowen calls attention to three months hospitalization by his late wife before she died of bone cancer. Such anecdotal evidence weighs heavily with Reagan, and has been laid on heavily by the plan's supporters.

But more than Doc Bowen's persuasive powers are involved. Republicans not bound by ideology think it is good politics. When asked by us over CNN last weekend whether he thought an expanded federal role in health care was suitable for the Reagan agenda, White House political director Mitch Daniels replied: "I sure do."

Daniels does not agree with members of Don Regan's "shovel brigade" who think a health plan might deflect congressional assaults on Iranian arms sales. But he is influenced by 1986 election losses he attributes to public apprehension over Republican care for the elderly. GOP members of Congress echo that view in White House meetings.

A health care bidding war with Democrats does not sit well with conservative activists. Senate Republican Leader Robert J. Dole informed one New Right leader that he was being lobbied for the Bowen plan from the most conservative senators. The New Rightist responded that he had heard Dole was saying the same thing; the prospective GOP presidential candidate denied it.

When conservative spokesmen met with Don Regan for a half hour at the White House Dec. 22, experts from the Heritage Foundation and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce jumped him on the issue. According to several accounts, the chief of staff promised — two or three times — that the Bowen plan would not be accepted.

But Regan didn't rule out something resembling Bowen. At the White House, the feeling prevails that this is an issue "whose time has come." Daniels feels conservative think tanks and New Right activists have been enticed into opposition by insurance companies represented by lawyer Peter J. Ferrara, a former Reagan White House aide who has led criticism of the Bowen plan.

That infuriates Ferrara. For Reagan's political adviser to suggest something wrong with opposing a transfer of identical insurance coverage from the private to the public sector is, he says, "ludicrous and outrageous."

When the president went west for his Palm Springs holiday, he carried with him a 21-page issue paper — considerably longer than what is usually given him — offering arguments and options. In the lowered profile of Regan's prime ministerial role, the decision is the president's. He must signal whether Republicans, even after six Reagan Revolution years, still try to mimic the New Deal.

CHARLEY REESE

Perspective needed to know weaknesses

You're walking down a city street when a man confronts you with a .44 caliber black powder pistol and demands your money.

Charley Reese

In a few seconds these thoughts run through your mind: Black powder pistols are obsolete. New technology replaced these antiques nearly a century ago.

Look at this guy's shabby and soiled polyester suit. Obviously, he's the economic equivalent of the Third World. I myself have $25,000 in my checking account, $250,000 in stocks and CD's, and several good pieces of real estate. My Pierre Cardin jacket and Gucci loafers probably cost more than this jerk has ever seen at one time.

Listen to this guy's bad grammar. Obviously an uneducated oaf. I have two earned Ph.D.s and a Phi Beta Kappa key.

And look how he crudely resorts to a threat of violence to get what he wants. If he had reached the higher stages of spiritual development like me he would know that violence is senseless and primitive. Man has now reached the stage where meaningful dialogues can resolve differences.

Then the man blows your guts all over the sidewalk, takes your wallet, and shuffles off. As you lay there with your life oozing out through your Arrow shirt, it occurs to you that something is wrong. Words spin around in your fading consciousness. Maybe one of them is "perspective." Maybe there is a phrase from Machiavelli, that awful man whose work you read in college.

You see, everything has its time and its place and its usefulness. The technology necessary for effective combat is relatively simple. Killing is just a matter of applying force to frail flesh. A black powder pistol will still kill. So will a $5 kitchen knife.

Nor does education and affluence mean a lot in physical combat. All a soldier needs is strength, stamina, reflexes, eyesight, ruthlessness, and as little imagination as possible.

Since World War II, which was the last time we fought technologically advanced countries, over 100,000 Americans have been killed, mostly by peasants and mostly with weapons of simple technology. Many of these killers of Americans probably couldn't read a simple instruction manual.

Machiavelli, who had the gift of insight, said there are four things in this world: men, iron, bread and money and of these, men and iron are the most important, for with them you can get the bread and money.

Unless we Americans get our heads on straight, our country could become an affluent, high-tech corpse of a nation. The ability of a nation to wage war has nothing to do with how many quartz watches, personal computers, wine coolers, make-up, and perfumes it consumes. It has nothing to do with advertising or the entertainment industry. It has nothing to do with litigation. It has nothing to do with the percent of high school graduates or with how socially advanced the society is. It has only to do with men and iron.

North Korea has a 600,000-man army. Nicaragua has 50,000. Cuba has 200,000. The Soviet Union has about 5 million. They may not be equipped with advanced computers but they have plenty of very good assault rifles and machines guns and nobody has improved on these for the infantryman, who does the decisive work of warfare.

We have an army of 700,000 — 10 percent of which are women and nearly 33 percent of which are minorities, percentages that are unrepresentative of the population. Nearly half its wartime combat strength depends on National Guard and Army Reserve units. The individual ready reserve pool is almost empty. We do not even have the will power to force businesses to give their Guardsmen and Reservists leave with pay for their military training, much less enact a military draft.

Now, we have shown our enemies two things since World War II. One is that we are unwilling to use nuclear weapons. Two, without them, we could not kill enough Koreans, Chinese, or Vietnamese to win the wars.

Remember: perspective. Remember, men and iron can take bread and money.

Hotel fire cause speculated, suits begin

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Lawsuits seeking a total of $19 million have been filed on behalf of two victims of the Dupont Plaza Hotel fire, charging hotel management with negligence in the blaze that killed 96 people and injured more than 140 others.

The suits involve a Puerto Rican man who died and another man who was injured. They were filed Monday in U.S. District Court, one day after commonwealth Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon said investigators found proof the New Year's Eve fire was set intentionally.

The family of 63-year-old Juan Rosario Torres, who worked at the hotel, is seeking $9 million in damages. Its suit charges Torres suffered greatly before his death because of the "intentional, negligent and careless acts of the defendant."

The suit names as defendant Hotel Systems International of Santa Monica, Calif., which attorneys for the plaintiffs said owns the Delaware-based San Juan Dupont Plaza Corp.

A second suit, seeking $10 million in damages, was filed by Jose Aponte Rodriguez, who was in the casino when the fire broke out. Aponte Rodriguez suffered a broken ankle and a concussion.

The suits contend the 20-story luxury hotel was negligent in failing to install fire-prevention measures such as a sprinkler system, fire walls, and lighted exits, and for failing to have a safe evacuation plan.

Torres' suit also accuses the hotel of "closing and sealing the casino doors and entrapping the decedent." Hotel officials have denied the casino exits were locked at the time of the fire.

Hotel management did not immediately respond to the suit.

The New York Times today quoted a high-ranking federal investigator in San Juan as saying the fire started after an arsonist ignited furniture stored in plastic wrapping "in the ballroom area" of the hotel.

The newspaper quoted the unidentified official as saying investigators were seriously considering the possibility the arsonist may have intended only to damage property, not destroy the hotel or kill guests.

It said the burning of both the plastic wrapping and the furniture, which apparently was made mostly of synthetic, petroleum-based material, "caused intense heat and a great deal of poisonous smoke."

Hernandez Colon and other authorities have refused to name suspects, but have noted that the Teamsters local representing about 250 Dupont Plaza workers was engaged in a contract dispute with hotel management.

The locals had voted to strike at midnight New Year's Eve. Talks between the two sides broke down shortly before the fire started. The union has denied involvement in the fire.

Lawyers for the hotel summoned Dupont Plaza employees to a nearby hotel Monday for questioning in their own investigation.

Luis Izquierdo Mora, the island's health secretary, said Monday that 20 people remained hospitalized, one in critical condition. Pathologists at the Institute of Forensic Sciences had identified 72 bodies by Monday night.

Many victims were charred beyond recognition, requiring experts to use dental records, X-rays, autopsies and personal effects to identify them.

Andrew Vita, head of a special 30-member team from the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, said Monday he hoped to conclude his arson investigation today.

Rivera Cruz said physical evidence from the scene was shipped to the bureau's laboratory in Rockville, Md.

Analysis of that evidence won't be completed "until sometime later this week," and results will be shipped to Puerto Rico officials, said bureau spokeswoman Dot Koester.

Among attorneys for the Rosario Torres family are Lugo & Berkowitz, with offices in Hato Ray. Also helping is Speiser, Krause & Madole of New York, lead attorneys for plaintiffs in the 1980 Stouffers Hotel fire in Harrison, N.Y., which claimed 26 lives. That suit was settled for $49.5 million, the firm said.

The attorney for Aponte Rodriguez, John P. Coale, said his Washington-based law firm, Coale, Kananack & Murgatroyd, represents 50,000 Indians in connection with an insecticide gas leak at a Union Carbide plant that killed more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India in 1984. The case is still pending, he said.

Survivors finish vacations, identify loved ones killed

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Richard and Elizabeth Bird spent two days in the hospital after inhaling smoke while trapped in a room of the burning Dupont Plaza Hotel on New Year's Eve.

But the Quincy, Mass., couple decided to stay in Puerto Rico and complete the last week of their vacation.

"We're comfortable, and we like the island," Bird said Monday, dressed in the shorts and shirt given him by the Red Cross.

Ninety-six people died in the fire that swept through the lower floors of the 20-story luxury Condado Beach hotel. More than 140 others were injured.

"I know it sounds corny, but everything tastes a little different, smells a little different and looks a little different," said Bird.

Mrs. Bird said she felt fine Monday, but that for several days she experienced respiratory problems as a result of the five hours she, her husband and nine other people spent trapped in a hotel room Dec. 31.

Smoke flooded the room, so the group stuffed towels underneath doors. They were led to safety by firefighters who guided them down a smoke-filled corridor.

For other survivors, their stay in Puerto Rico was prolonged by the painful task of identifying loved ones killed in the fire.

"It was such a relief when we got the identification," said 28-year-old Robert Cohen of Menlo Park, Calif. He and his stepmother, Judy, planned to leave Monday, the day after the charred remains of his father, Al, of Hamden, Conn., were positively identified.

Seventy-two of the 96 bodies were identified by late Monday, according to the Institute of Forensic Sciences. The process was slow because pathologists were forced to use X-rays and dental records to identify some of the most badly burned remains.

Pio Rechani, the institute's director, predicted that pathologists would be able to identify all but one or two of the bodies, many of which were found in the mezzanine-level casino that bore the brunt of the fire.

Many Puerto Ricans were identified first because "of the clothes and the property they had on them," he said.

Congress opens for business; Wright, Byrd named to posts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats are reclaiming control of the Senate and a new speaker is coming to power in the House of Representatives as the 100th Congress, already beset by partisan bickering and internal squabbles, opens for business.

The House and Senate, each facing a transition in leadership, were convening at noon today.

First, there will be the traditional opening-day ceremonies.

The House was electing Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, as 48th speaker of that chamber, where he will oversee a 258-177 Democratic majority.

In the Senate, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia will resume the post of majority leader based on the Democrats' 55-45 edge there. Byrd had been majority leader until Ronald Reagan's 1980 landslide election swept Democrats into the minority.

The 1988 election — the race to succeed President Reagan — was on the minds of many legislators as ambitious legislative agendas for the new Congress were being laid out.

Democrats, controlling both houses for the first time in six years, have been cautious about appearing to be too harsh in their attacks on Reagan, who has been weakened by the swirling controversy over the Iran-Contra affair.

Yet they insist they will pursue their own list of priorities and present an alternative, beginning well before Reagan outlines his legislative plans in his Jan. 27 State of the Union address.

In addition, legislation was due to be introduced today in both houses to create separate House and Senate committees to investigate the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, who will head the 11-member Senate panel, said Monday he expected the committee to begin public hearings by mid-February and wrap up that phase of the investigation by the end of July. A proposed Senate resolution creating the panel calls for it to make a final report by Oct. 30.

House leaders also are expected to introduce a resolution creating a similar 15-member panel in that chamber.

Democratic leaders in the House and Senate said they also hope to revive and pass and $18 billion measure to clean up the nation's waterways that Reagan killed with a pocket veto last year.

Trade legislation, often attacked by Reagan administration officials as protectionist, is also high on the Democratic list of legislative priorities, with the symbolic introduction of a bill due in the House this week.

Meanwhile, skirmishing over the president's proposed $1.024 trillion fiscal 1988 budget began even before the new Congress convened. Reagan sent the outlines of the plan to Capitol Hill on Monday.

Democrats said the savings claimed in the spending plan were inflated, thus the mandated deficit target of $108 billion would not be met.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., incoming chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, called on the president to work out a budget compromise.

"Mr. President, give us a chance to sit down with you," Chiles said. "Why don't you convene a meeting, call us together. Let's come up with a five-year plan that really addresses the deficit."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, the outgoing majority leader, said he hoped Congress would "avoid the annual rain dance of criticism" over the president's budget.

While wrangling was beginning on major issues, there also were some institutional conflicts yet to be settled.

In the House, Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, is challenging Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., for the chairmanship of the House Armed Services Committee.

Although Aspin is favored to retain his post in the contest likely to be resolved this week, Leath said he is confident he will prevail.

In the Senate, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., is trying to hold off an attempt by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., as the top Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Man appeals to Supreme Court for right to 'own flesh and blood'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A man whose ex-girlfriend gave birth after she married another man says he is the father and is asking the state Supreme Court to keep him from being "denied my own flesh and blood."

George Edward Cline, 33, says he wants the right to visit and support the child, who was born about four months after Cline and Juanzell Hall separated in 1980, said attorney Brenda McGee, who was scheduled to argue the case today before the Supreme Court.

Cline's efforts are opposed by the child's legal parents, who deny that Cline is the father, and by the state attorney general, who has said unmarried men who father children have no legal claims to the offspring.

"I think it's crazy," Cline said Monday. "It's like being in the Twilight Zone. I don't see how I can be denied my own flesh and blood."

Ms. McGee, who would discuss Cline's case only if the child's sex was kept confidential, said Cline and other men in his situation were victims of sexual discrimination.

State paternity laws, which compel fathers to support their offspring, can require a man submit to medical tests to determine if he is the natural father but do not require the same tests for men trying to prove the same fact.

"What my client is trying to do is to show he is the father. If he's not the father he will go no further," Ms. McGee said. "He deserves the same rights the law gives a mother trying to make a natural father support his child."

Cline was unaware that Miss Hall was pregnant when the pair separated, Ms. McGee said. Miss Hall married James Henry Drew Jr., before giving birth.

When Cline discovered that his former girlfriend had given birth, he went to juvenile court to stake a legal claim to the child, Ms. McGee said.

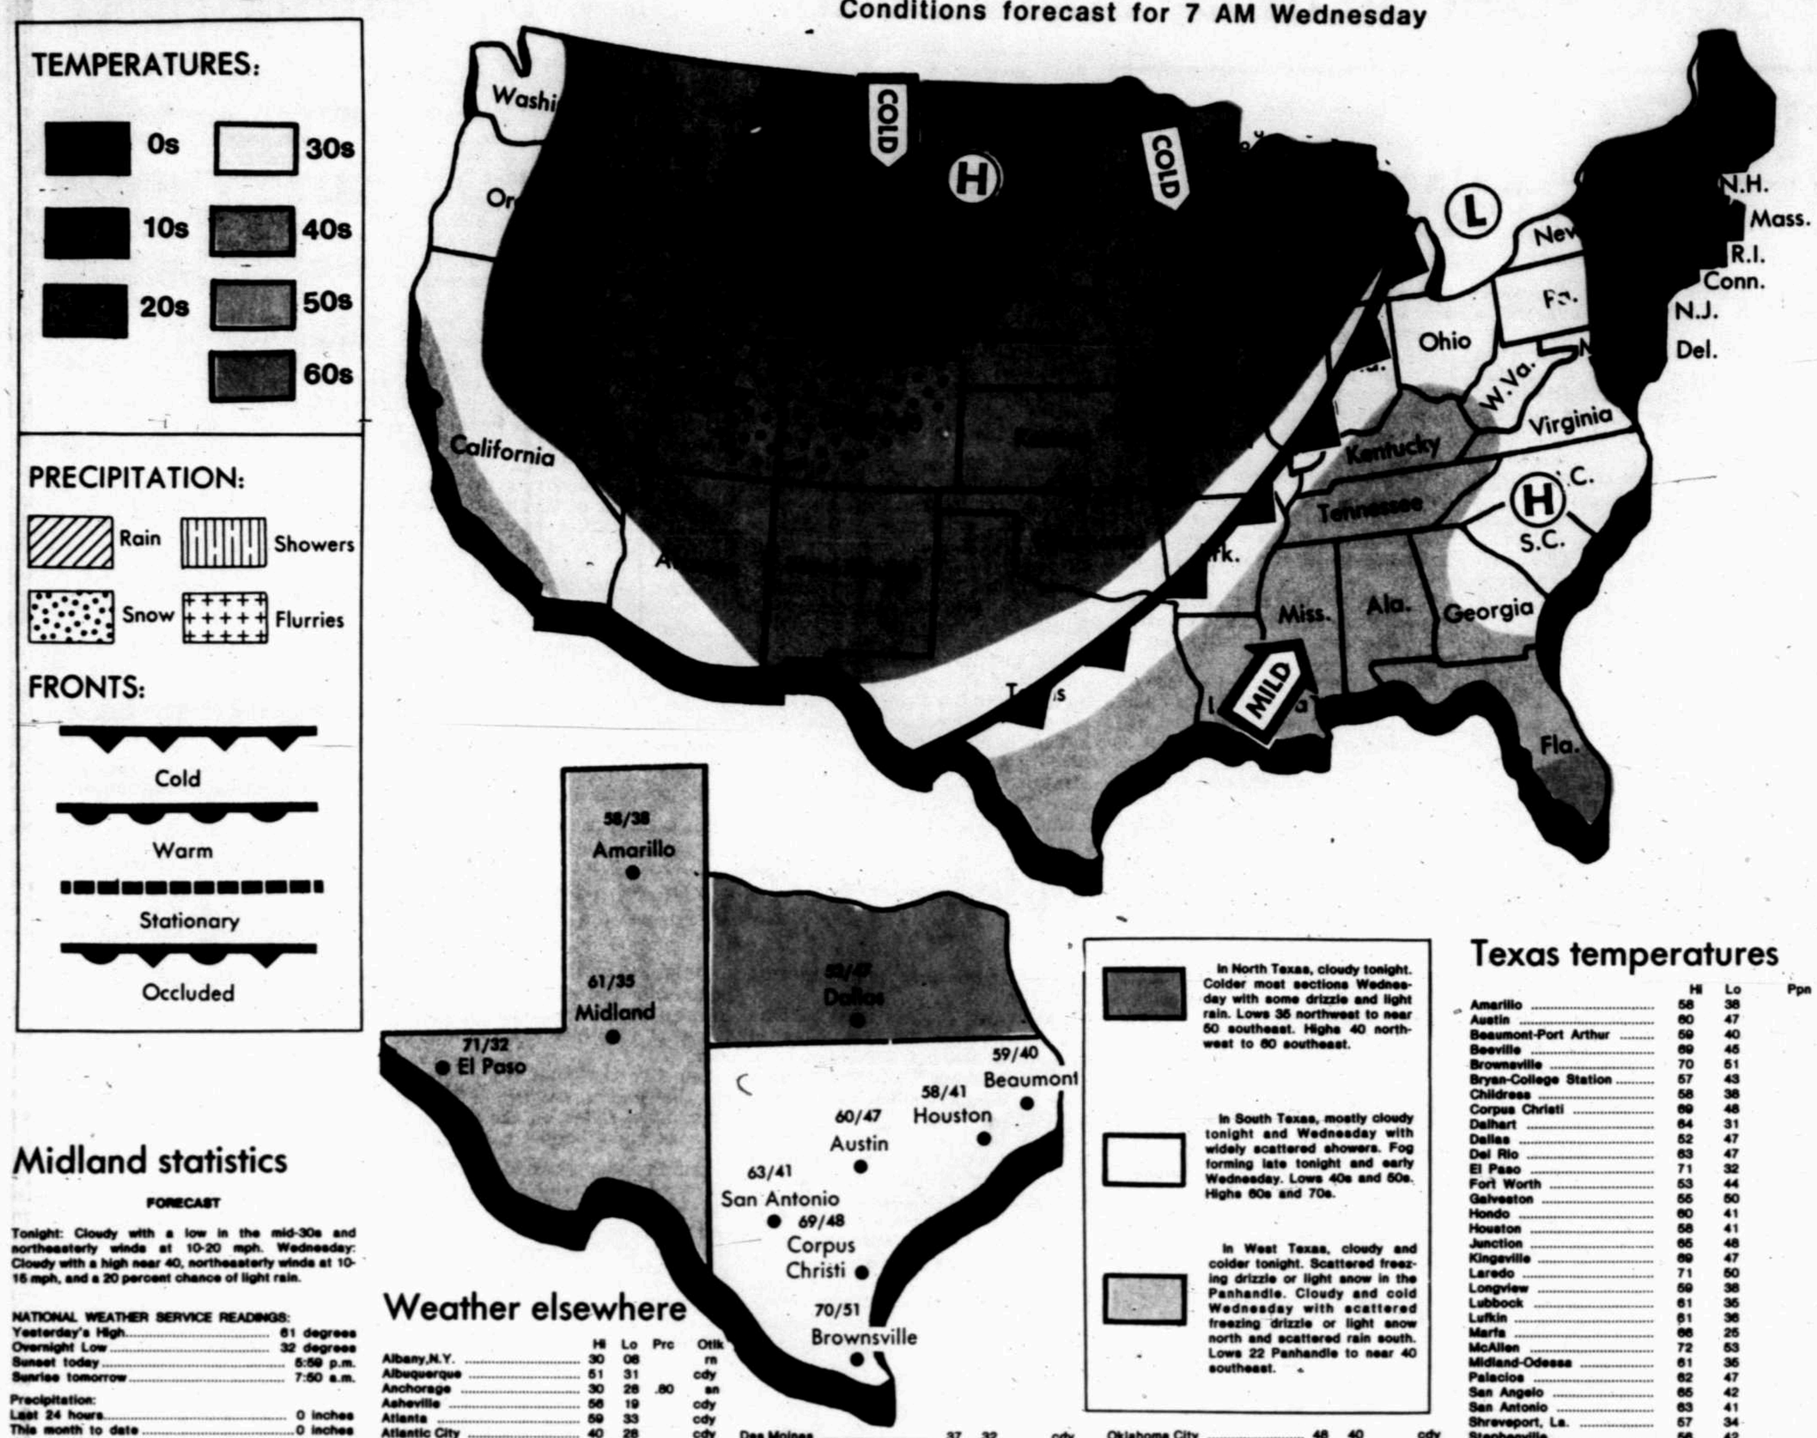
WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 AM Wednesday



In North Texas, cloudy tonight. Colder most sections Wednesday with some drizzle and light rain. Lows 35 northwest to near 50 southeast. Highs 40 northwest to 60 southeast.

In South Texas, mostly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with widely scattered showers. Fog forming late tonight and early Wednesday. Lows 40s and 50s. Highs 60s and 70s.

In West Texas, cloudy and colder tonight. Scattered freezing drizzle or light snow in the Panhandle. Cloudy and cold Wednesday with scattered freezing drizzle or light snow north and scattered rain south. Lows 22 Panhandle to near 40 southeast.

Cold, cloudy day likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Colder, cloudy weather is in store for Midland-area residents on Wednesday, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service. The NWS, located at Midland Regional Airport, is calling for a high of near 40 and a 20 percent chance of light rain.

Cloudy skies and a low in the middle 30s is predicted for tonight. Winds will shift to the northeast at 10-20 mph in the late evening. On Wednesday, winds will remain out of the northeast, decreasing to 10-15 mph.

Monday's high was 17 degrees below the record high of 78 set for that date in 1948. Today's 32 degree low was 19 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1970.

STATE

Dense fog developed over wide sections of South Texas today as forecasters warned of the possibility of freezing drizzle or light snow over the Panhandle tonight and Wednesday.

The heaviest fog was noted around Austin and San Antonio and travel advisories were posted.

Clear skies were the rule behind a line extending from Del Rio to Wichita Falls. Otherwise, mostly cloudy skies were noted across Texas.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 30s and 40s in North and West Texas, while readings in the 40s and 50s were noted in South Texas. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 32 at El Paso and Marfa to 60 at Brownsville and Corpus Christi.

A pacific front extended southward through the eastern part of the Panhandle and the South Plains. Westerly breezes from 5 to 15 mph were the rule behind the front, with some gusts noted over 30 mph.

NATION

A storm that left broad sections of the West covered with snow was centered over northwest Kansas today, dumping more snow, kicking up winds and aiming at the upper Midwest.

Elsewhere, a high pressure cleared skies across much of the nation from New England and the Ohio Valley into the Southeast.

The Plains storm prompted a winter storm watch for much of central and southern Minnesota and travelers' advisories for northwest Wisconsin.

The low pressure system was expected to move across the central Plains today, spreading snowfall amounts of from one to four inches from western Nebraska and South Dakota into Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Ex-deputy police chief gets job as Odessa inspector

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 22-year veteran of the Odessa Police Department Monday officially ended his law enforcement career and accepted employment as a Code Enforcement Inspector with the City's Planning and Inspection Division.

K.R. Jones is scheduled to begin work in his new job about Jan. 16 at a pay cut of more than $13,000 from his annual salary as deputy chief.

The 47-year-old veteran was terminated Dec. 8 by Chief Alan Stewart for several alleged violations of the police department Code of Conduct.

The alleged violations included: accepting gifts, loans, fees, etc., that might influence him in discharge of his duties; associating with a known gambler; unauthorized personal use of a city vehicle; knowingly filing a false expense report and accepting a favor from a licensee whose license is subject to approval by the chief of police.

Jones asked for an appeal hearing on his termination, which was to be held at 9 a.m. Monday. However, San Antonio attorney Joseph Scuro Jr., hired by the city at a rate of $100 per hour, City Attorney Joel Roberts and Michael McLeaish, representing Jones, went behind closed doors and hammered out a settlement before acting Administrative Services Director Diane Dahlberg could convene the hearing.

Shortly after 10:30 Monday morning, Scuro emerged to say an agreement had been reached and a news release would be available in about an hour.

The news release simply stated Jones had resigned and would be appointed as a Code Enforcement Inspector with the city of Odessa and that, by mutual agreement, both sides would decline further comment.

As to the fate of a $2.1 million lawsuit Jones had threatened to file against the city, McLeaish declined specific comment but said, "As a personal matter, I wouldn't want to sue my employer."

Jones had no comment as he left the second floor police department administrative offices.

Stewart also declined comment beyond saying he felt the matter had been settled in the best interests of the department and the community.

"I'm just happy the controversy is now over, at least for a short period of time," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see what happens next in the saga of 'As the Badge Turns.'"

Ector County Attorney Gary Garrison was less than happy with the settlement, questioning where the settlement left his office, since one of the accusations against Jones was that he had interceded with Garrison to have a DWI charge against a local doctor dismissed.

Garrison has categorically denied any deal was made with Jones, saying the case was never prosecuted because "there was no case."

The man took a breath test, Garrison says, and there was no alcohol in his blood.

Garrison also questioned the thoroughness of the police department's internal investigation, saying he thought it strange no one contacted him regarding the allegation against Jones.

At least two attorneys responding to subpoenas on behalf of clients for Monday's hearing questioned the validity of the subpoenas, saying they had been unable to find any state statute that provided for subpoena power for an administrative hearing.

City attorney Roberts, later asked about this, said the subpoenas were issued to assure no question could later be raised about whether Jones was granted full due process rights.

As to the legal standing of the subpoenas, Roberts said they were actually requests to appear, since no contempt provision or punishment was involved legally. The subpoenas had no force of law and, therefore, no one could really have been forced to appear as a witness in the proceeding, he said.

One attorney also questioned why the city hired an outside attorney to represent the city's interest when five assistant city attorneys are on staff and the city attorney is paid about $60,000 a year to represent the city in legal matters.

When Jones assumes his new position with the City Planning and Inspection Division Jan. 16., his record will show that he left the police department in good standing, since his separation from the department will show a voluntary resignation rather than termination.

Arlington Municipal Judge Richard Carter, right, addresses a Midland Crime Stoppers board meeting here Monday. David Cobos listens as Carter discusses the most common crimes solved through the Crime Stoppers program.

Judge talks with anti-crime group

State Crime Stoppers council member visits city

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

For the first time in the history of the 11-year-old international Crime Stoppers program Monday, a Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council member came to Midland to visit with the local organization's board.

"We should be embarrassed no one from the council has been out here before," said Arlington Municipal Judge Richard Carter, chairman of the Texas Crime Stoppers Advisory Council.

Carter was in Midland-Odessa Monday on unrelated Crime Stoppers business, and said he took advantage of the opportunity to meet informally with local leaders.

He noted Midland had "received recognition for being one of the most productive (Crime Stoppers programs) in the world" last year at an international conference in Edmonton, Alberta.

The informal discussion, held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, led to 1987 Crime Stopper plans.

Although Crime Stoppers is an apolitical organization, Carter said Governor-elect Bill Clements is "100 percent committed to Crime Stoppers. He was in office when it was first created. The record is there."

Carter told the Midland Crime Stoppers board said the council is hopeful the coming state legislative session will bring additional funding as did the last session. Last year, $450,000 was allocated to the state program, he said.

The money went to miscellaneous needs such as computers and promotional items, as well as continuing education of board members, police officers and members of the news media.

And though he said he didn't know how much money would be set aside this next year, Carter confirmed, "You will not see Crime Stoppers slide backwards in Texas."

A recent study by the U.S. Department of Justice showed the conviction rate on people indicted by the Crime Stopper program is 95.9 percent, Carter said. Carter added, however, that figure doesn't necessarily show which crimes have the highest conviction rate.

"That really depends on local programs. I will say Crime Stoppers gets the most media attention when its talking about homicides and sexual assaults. These are the ones that are most shocking."

Carter added that greater emphasis is also being placed on fighting narcotics.

"Crime Stoppers is very successful in the securing of search warrants and of seizures of drugs. Many times we can seize, but maybe not get indictments. Narcotics are hard to identify; they don't have serial numbers or anything."

The program has also been a great aid in solving murder cases, Carter said.

"It's amazing how many unsolved murders are solved clearly in Crime Stoppers. We're not necessarily stopping murders, but we're making a dent."

Odessa-born Teen Court wins friends in Oregon town

From Staff and Wire Reports

HARRISBURG, Ore. — The Odessa Teen Court keeps winning friends and influencing people. This time from as far away as Harrisburg, Ore.

A municipal judge there says she thinks a Teen Court that's met with success in Odessa, Texas, could be the ticket to controlling teen-age crime in Oregon.

Judge June Simmons heard about the program during a conference last summer. The premise behind the idea is simple — teen-agers are less likely be become repeat offenders if a jury of their peers hands out the punishment.

She said last week that Odessa's program has proved young people stay out of trouble following a Teen Court appearance. And she said the program is saving the community thousands of dollars.

Midland, Texas, has also moved to begin a Teen Court.

Very few changes would be required in Oregon law to implement a similar program, the judge said.

"Mainly, it would take the cooperation of municipalities, judges, juvenile departments and law enforcement officials," she said.

The young people who face a teen-age jury plead guilty. If they accept and complete the sentence handed down by their peers, charges are dismissed.

The sentences generally involve community service or work to pay for damage. Cases handled by the teen-age juries include traffic violations and misdemeanors like public intoxication, vandalism and disorderly conduct.

Ms. Simmons said defendants may reject the sentence assessed by the teen-age jury and, like all who plead innocent, go before the local municipal or juvenile court.

Defendants, as part of their sentences, must serve on the teen-age jury at least once.

"Teen Court is a concept that I find to be very intriguing," Ms. Simmons said. "The use of use peer pressure might be valuable in helping prevent young people from becoming repeat offenders."

Ms. Simmons plans to have a report on the Odessa program ready for the Jan. 22 meeting of the Linn County Juvenile Services Commission.

4-H picks Midlander to represent state

Richard Triplitt

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Richard Triplitt, a 17-year-old Midland County 4-H Club leader, has been selected as one of seven statewide 4-H Club members who will represent Texas at the National 4-H Conference this April in the National 4-H Center in Chevy Chase, Md.

"He (Triplitt) has developed some great leadership capabilities in 4-H," said Jill D. Pronger, assistant Midland County agent for home economics for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "He has excelled in all that he has attempted."

Triplitt is a "great example" of how the 4-H Club program can help youth develop leadership and citizenship qualities, said Ms. Pronger, who works with boys and girls in the 4-H program. "He gives you a good feeling about the future."

Ms. Pronger said that the main goals of 4-H are "to help boys and girls development good citizenship and leadership qualities, to become well-rounded individuals, and to develop a good self-image." Approximately 250 Midland County boys and girls from the third-grade through age 18 are in the 4-H program here.

The week-long 4-H conference which Triplitt will attend will include leadership and citizenship activities in Washington, D.C., and is the "single opportunity" for teen-age youth to actively participate in the development of 4-H programs at the national level, said Ms. Pronger.

Delegates to the annual conference must be high school juniors or seniors and be actively involved leaders in their county and district 4-H organizations.

Triplitt, who is a Midland High School senior, has served as president of the Midland County 4-H Council and the Midland County 4-H Horse Club, was sergeant-at-arms for the Midland County 4-H Shooting Sports Club, and has served as a delegate to the West Texas District VI 4-H Council for three years.

Last year, Triplitt was recognized at the National 4-H Congress in Chicago, Ill, for his achievement in 4-H horse record-book competition.

Shane Lowrie, assistant Midland County agricultural agent, said that Triplitt "comes across as a person who will take charge of a situation" but who "doesn't have to be pushed to accomplish something."

Triplitt is "smart enough to realize what's right from wrong," Lowrie said. "He doesn't get involved in activities that are kind of questionable. He's made a fine contribution to 4-H programs."

Marian Farr, TAEX home economist, said that Triplitt's parents, Ted and Dona Triplitt, have encouraged their son, just as they did their older daughter, Cindy, 21, who also excelled in 4-H Club projects. Cindy, a student at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, was awarded an $8,000 Houston Livestock Show & Rodeo scholarship.

"They have been very supportive," Ms. Farr said of Triplitt's parents. "He's a well-rounded type of guy" who does well in academics and in athletics.

Mrs. Triplitt said that her son "sets goals and ideals" and makes a concerted effort to accomplish those goals. Ted Triplitt, a geophysicist and a coach for 4-H horse judging, said that their children "put out a lot of effort" in fulfilling their goals.

Triplitt, whom TAEX agent Earnest Kiker described as a "keen" leader, has returned much to the 4-H program that has served him well.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, talks with his wife Wendy, who works as a director at the Office of Management and Budget, recently in Washington, D.C.

By ANDREW MANGAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — To celebrate his supreme triumph — final passage of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction bill — Phil Gramm munched a Burger King hamburger and stared at a chilling magnum of champagne as he sat alone in his colonial home.

His wife, Wendy, had planned to join in the revelry, but got an urgent last-minute call from Vice President George Bush at her post as an administrator for the U.S. Office of Management and Budget.

"When you have two people who both work more than 12 hours a day, and who both have totally inflexible schedules, then when something out of the ordinary has got to be done, that's when you run into problems," says Gramm, a Democrat-turned Republican who is Texas' freshman senator.

The tall, lean 44-year-old native Georgian and his wife both are doctors of economics working with equal vigor to help the Reagan Administration cut as much government spending as possible, excluding the defense budget.

Gramm's controversial deficit-slicing bill calls upon Congress to balance the federal budget by 1991, and its passage has seared his name into the history books.

Mrs. Gramm, 41, works just as tirelessly in her post as administrator for information and regulatory affairs at OMB, where she and a staff of 66 review federal regulations and watch over the flow of information through the federal bureaucracy.

Says President Reagan: "They are two of the hardest working, brightest people on the Republican team — possessed of great common sense and integrity."

"It's like being on a conveyor belt," Gramm says. "We're used to it. But if someone got on it who was not used to it, they'd get flipped."

State will appeal ruling against prison system

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state's prison system faces fines of more than $800,000 a day for not complying with court orders, but the state's attorney said Monday he probably will appeal the ruling.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice issued a ruling Monday that levies the huge fines, starting April 1, against the Texas Department of Corrections for failing to comply with the court's orders, which include more employees, better classification of inmates and improved medical care.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, noting that the Legislature has tripled prison spending since Justice's first order in the Ruiz case in 1980, encouraged the attorney general to appeal the fines.

"I strongly object to the idea of fines levied against the state of Texas by a federal judge because this is a fine on the taxpayers," he said.

The fines, a result of a contempt of court motion filed by inmates, could cost the state about $24.5 million a month, said Scott McCown, the special assistant attorney general handling the long-running Ruiz inmate lawsuit against TDC.

Freak accident leads to joint probe of Datsun

DALLAS (AP) — Investigators will inspect a Datsun sports car in an attempt to determine whether mechanical malfunctions caused the vehicle to race out of control in a spectacular, fatal accident last week in a mall parking lot.

Sherry Dorn, an officer in the traffic division, said Monday that city officials are coordinating the investigation with federal officers.

Last Tuesday, a 1982 Datsun 200SX driven by Sara McLeod, 21, of Lake Charles, La., struck Sarina Blackman, 26, and her mother, Juanita Thompson, 46, of Flint, Mich., after careening wildly through the parking lot of the fashionable Galleria mall in north Dallas. Ms. Blackman was killed and her mother was injured.

Ms. McLeod, daughter of Louisiana state Sen. William L. McLeod, told police that when she started the car, it slipped into reverse and raced for a quarter of a mile before striking another car and a wall.

Dallas police said the incident will be referred to a grand jury.

The Washington-based Center for Auto Safety has requested a federal probe of the Datsun 200SX and wants the car recalled.

Sam Cole, a spokesman for the organization, said Monday that the Department of Transportation has refused requests to investigate the 200SX.

However, Hal Paris, a spokesman for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, an investigative arm of the DOT, said a Texas A&M engineer has been directed to examine the 200SX and report back to his agency.

Cole said his agency has forwarded complaints to the DOT claiming the Datsun 280ZX and 300ZX can suddenly accelerate out of control.

"The problem occurs when you shift from park to reverse," Cole said. "The car won't stop until the driver hits something or turns off the ignition."

Japanese consumer groups investigating the problem blame the sudden acceleration on a faulty cruise control system in Nissan models, but the manufacturer disagrees, Cole says.

"The thing is it happens to everybody in the same way," he said. "I have actually talked to people who say they saw the pedal go to the floor or felt the accelerator draw away from their foot."

State avoids paying for liver transplants

DALLAS (AP) — Thirty-three states provide funds to help needy patients pay for liver transplants, but Texas considers the surgery experimental and doesn't provide such funds.

In Dallas, now a national center for the surgery, doctors say the operation has an 80 percent success rate but the cost of the procedure makes it practically unaffordable, doctors say.

Dr. Goran Klintmalm, director of the transplant program at the Baylor University Medical Center, said its ironic that the state will pay for intensive care to prolong one's life but won't pay for a transplant that could save it.

Klintmalm said he is frustrated by Texas regulations calling them a "front to keep from paying for surgery."

However, Abner Bryant, assistant deputy commissioner of the state Department of Human Services, said the high cost of transplants has played a part in the decision to classify the surgery as experimental.

"We have to stay within the budget set for us by the Legislature," Bryant said.

Although the state will pay a maximum of $50,000 for children, the cost of previous hospitalization is deducted from that amount, leaving little for transplant surgery.

The lack of state funding means patients must rely on voluntary contributions and private fund-raising efforts.

Dances, raffles and bake sales have been held in the hometowns of potential recipients Barbara Edwards, 47, and Dustin Nichols, 7.

Doctors say Ms. Edwards' bills could exceed $120,000. Her family, in Mason, has sent letters to churches and newspapers in an appeal for help.

"Barbara Edwards is your friend. She is your mother, daughter and your wife. She is you," said one letter.

Linda Nichols, Dustin's mother, said the $90,000 down payment on the the $250,000 needed for her son to qualify for an operation is "a price on my son's head for living."

Identical twins' achievements mirrored in academic success

Tony and Tim Precella

By NICK WOLDA

NACOGDOCHES (AP) — Tony and Tim Precella shared just about everything while growing up.

Now, both are sharing the distinction of perfect college records.

The identical twins just graduated from Stephen F. Austin State University with perfect 4.0 grade point averages. It was a first for the 63-year-old school.

The brothers majored in mathematics and minored in computer science. And both had the same schedule throughout their four and one-half years of school.

But both will downplay the perfect grades, saying, "We really didn't expect this."

"We feel lucky just to graduate," Tony said. "Four years ago we didn't even think that much about going to college."

But that certainly wouldn't be questioned by anyone who's seen their past record. What most people don't know is that both really don't think they're intelligent.

"We're more common-sense smart than book smart," Tim said. "We just put forth the extra effort."

Both Tony and Tim grew up in the Nacogdoches School District labeled as slow learners. It wasn't until eighth grade that a teacher recognized their talents.

"We were always in the slowest reading classes, the slowest math classes," Tim said.

The turning point came in the ninth grade when a teacher put them both into an algebra class. "We thought it was a mistake in the administration," Tony said.

Both said the many years of the slower classes affected them.

Now they see the world as a dichotomy — always with a contradiction. Many conflicts abound. The two can't decide on anything.

"I really don't know why we're this way," Tony said. "But we see the world in many different aspects. Sure we want to be rich, but we are both so lazy."

"As far as school, we both don't think we're exceptional students," Tim said. "We're just happy to graduate, and now we're continuing our education."

Both will stay in Nacogdoches for two more years as they will enroll in SFA's graduate school.

"Everyone asks us, 'Why don't y'all leave Nacogdoches, leave SFA,'" Tim said. "But we have to stay here. It's a difficult time with the family."

Tim speaks of his parents' divorcing as reason for staying home. They said they couldn't leave their mother.

"If it hadn't been for Mom, we wouldn't be here today," Tim said. "We probably wouldn't have gone to college." Adds Tony, "We wouldn't have gone to college."

The two said their father did not encourage their educational goals, which added to their determination to succeed.

"It's helped us in the long run," Tim said. "When someone tells me I can't do anything, I'll go out and do it to prove I can. Tony's the same way."

Before attending SFA as freshmen, the two also didn't want to go away and live in a dormitory.

"Really, that's another reason for not going away to school," Tim said. "We didn't want to live in a little crowded room."

And now, the brothers feel they've put so much into the math department at SFA that they don't want to leave the department that has trained them the last four years.

"Why go anywhere else?" Tim said. "This university has done a lot for us. We've spent many hours getting to know all the people here."

Though the two wouldn't say which schools or companies were offering them opportunities, they said letters were arriving every day at their Nacogdoches home.

"We could see ourselves working for NASA someday," Tim said. "We don't know; we haven't thought about it."

GRAMMS

Mrs. Gramm has been working closely with Bush, since the resurrection of his task force on governmental regulations in late December.

"The task force reviewed existing regulations for two years," she said. "This time, it will be focused on what legislative changes are needed."

Though the Gramms regularly rub elbows with the president and vice president, the glamor of their high-powered positions wore off quickly, leaving them scrambling for "high value time" together and with their two sons, Marshall, 13, and Jeffery, 11.

"When he first came to Congress, Phil was at home at night, and then he was gone on the weekends" Mrs. Gramm says. "Now, in the Senate, the demands on his time are much greater."

With 30 to 40 invitations a night and inescapable demands that the senator return to Texas as often as three times a month, time has become the most valued item in the Gramm family.

"We plan the things we do with our children, as intensively as I plan a campaign," Gramm says. "We pretty much have dropped the Washington social circuit. I'm like the old farmer. When I'm through with work, I want to go to the house."

Camping, fishing and hunting are what the Gramms do to get away from the pressures and retain close ties with the two boys, although Mrs. Gramm says she could use a variation from time to time.

"I kind of complain, like 'All our activities are, you know...We go horseback riding and we go hiking and we go hunting — which is all wonderful fun. But give me a daughter! Then we could go to the Kennedy Center, or someplace like that.'"

Gramm's idea of a great weekend is to go to Williamsburg and look at the ships in port, his wife says.

"Everybody's seen an aircraft carrier, or even a submarine. But we've even gone farther down to these other ships — tanker-type ships. We haven't done that in a while. Since Phil's been in the Senate, he's been going back to Texas a lot more often."

The key to what keeps the Gramms humming along 12 hours or more a day — sometimes seven days a week — is their commitment to their country and a kinship with the ideals espoused by Reagan, they say.

"Very few people get the opportunity to serve, and when ordinary people from ordinary families get an opportunity to serve their country, it's simply something you can't turn down," Gramm says. "We owe this country a lot. Wendy's grandfather came to this country basically as an indentured servant and my grandfather came here at the start of this century."

The Gramms taught economics at Texas A&M before getting into politics. Gramm was at A&M from 1967 through 1978, when he was elected to the House, and Mrs. Gramm's stint ran from 1970 until 1978, when she moved to Washington to work for the Institute for Defense Analyses.

"The lifestyle we had in College Station was very informal," Mrs. Gramm says. "When we had kids, the kinds of entertaining we did was to have everybody over for hot dogs and chili and invite all the kids and have 40 people around. We had a great yard, a great swimming pool, and we'd play water basketball."

But those days are long gone, and the drill now includes high-level meetings with government officials, task force activities and an eye toward the 1990 Senate race.

Hightower thanks cheering crowd for his re-election

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Thanking a cheering crowd of employees for doing a job that helped win his re-election, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower Monday took the oath for his second term in office.

"It really is because of the efforts that you've been making — your creativity, your energies that you put in over the last four years — that I'm able to stand here and take this oath," Hightower, 43, told a crowd of several hundred Department of Agriculture staffers who watched the noon ceremony in the Capitol rotunda.

Hightower defeated Republican poultry lobbyist Bill Powers in the November election, garnering 60 percent of the vote.

"Thank-you, the employees of the Texas Department of Agriculture, for the work that you have done," he said. "The people of Texas have said in this last election that they like what you are doing."

The fiery Hightower acknowledged that many Texans don't care for his populist-brand of politics but said his hard-working staff won over voters.

4-H

Triplitt, who said he was a 4-H "tag-along" as early as age 4, said he "really got into" 4-H at age 9.

"Setting goals has meant a lot to me," he said. "You set goals, and if you give up on them, you are not going to succeed. You've got to set your goals high to get anywhere. If you don't follow through, you are not going to do real well in life."

Triplitt, who turns 18 Wednesday, said that 4-H has helped him prepare to "face reality" and responsibilities.

And Triplitt said that his sister "has always been a great help to me. She has always been there when I needed her."

PRISON

McCown said he was disappointed but not surprised by Justice's decision. The judge made errors in his ruling, McCown said, and the state probably will appeal the decision to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

"There are quite a few things the 5th Circuit will reverse," McCown predicted. "I think there were some definite mistakes made" by Justice.

For instance, McCown said Justice did not believe TDC made efforts to comply with previous court orders until the inmate's attorneys, Bill Turner and Donna Brorby, filed a contempt of court motion against the prison system. "That's one of his fact findings that's completely erroneous," McCown said.

But even with TDC's efforts to comply, McCown conceded that "there's no way the department could comply with all the orders by April 1st."

Ms. Brorby, however, said Justice treated TDC fairly by giving them several months to comply with his orders. "I can't see anything in this order that can't be done by April 1st," she said.

Ms. Brorby said the proposed fines seem high and the $800,000-a-day figure probably represents what the state would have to pay if it fails to comply by with any of the orders by April 1.

Gov.-elect Bill Clements, McCown, Turner and key prison officials plan to meet with Justice in Tyler on Friday to discuss TDC's court problems. But McCown said pressuring Justice to change his ruling would be inappropriate.

Clements was traveling the state Monday, but his spokesman, Reggie Bashur, said Clements wants to work out the prison problems with Justice during their meeting Friday. "He wants the judge to know that the Clements administration will act in total good faith to comply with the court's orders and try to satisfy all the parties," he said.

Bashur said the governor-elect is confident the compliance problem can be worked out before the fines take effect.

Gov. Mark White issued a statement Monday that urged the attorney general's office to appeal Justice's decision. "In my view, the state of Texas operates a safe, secure and constitutional prison system," the governor said.

The TDC board meets next Monday to recommend a prison budget to the Legislature. Kirk Brown, TDC's general counsel, said the recommended budget "will reflect compliance" with court orders.

Epstein-Barr Virus Group holding second meeting

From Staff Reports

The Epstein-Barr Virus Group will hold its second meeting at 7:30 p.m. today in the Pastoral Care Social Work Conference Room, Midland Memorial Hospital.

Dr. John Foster Jr., a neurologist in private practice in Midland, will be the guest speaker.

According to a number of U.S. researchers, many of those plagued by continuing or recurring bouts of a number of the following symptoms — low-grade fever, aching joints and or muscles, sore throats, headaches, exhaustion and undue fatigue, short-term memory loss, depression, irritability and sleep disturbances — may be afflicted by a relentless and chronic manifestation of a common organism: the Epstein-Barr virus. The most common symptom is undue fatigue.

It is estimated that 90 percent of the U.S. population is exposed to EBV by the time they are 30 years old. Researchers have assumed that, like other herpes viruses, EBV normally remains dormant in the body after the initial infection.

Dr. Stephen E. Straus of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, Bethesda, Md., suggested in 1984 that chronic illness associated with EBV infection may not be uncommon.

The virus was first discovered in 1964 by British researcher Dr. M.A. Epstein, who identified a herpes-like virus in some malignant tumor cells from a patient with Burkitt's lymphoma. This type of lymphoma is common among children in hot, humid regions of Central Africa, where rainfall and mosquitoes are numerous.

The following year, Drs. Gertrude and Werner Henle, researchers connected with Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., discovered that EBV was linked with infectious mononucleosis.

It has since been linked with cancer of the paranasal sinuses, the most common cancer of men and the second most common cancer of women in some parts of southern China and among Chinese who have settled in Singapore and Malaysia. This form of cancer is rare in the United States.

The local Epstein-Barr virus group will meet at 7:30 p.m. the first Tuesday of each month. For more information call the Rev. Alan Williams, chaplain at Midland Memorial Hospital, 685-1566.

Budweiser Clydesdales to visit Midland Park Mall

From Staff Reports

The world-renown Budweiser Clydesdales will be dressed in full regalia for their visit to the Midland Park Mall from 2-5 p.m. Saturday. On Sunday from 2-5 p.m. they will be at Winwood Mall in Odessa.

The visit is courtesy of Standard Sales Co., the local Anheuser-Busch wholesaler.

Originally from Scotland, the Clydesdale breed was used in North America to pull delivery wagons in the late 1800s before the introduction of motorized vehicles.

The Clydesdales were known then, as they are today, for their grace and agility, a notable fact since they are nearly twice the size of thoroughbred or standardbred horses. Each horse weighs from 1,700 to 2,300 pounds and stands six feet tall at the shoulder.

In 1933, August Busch Jr., presented the first Clydesdales hitch as a gift to his father in celebration of Prohibition's end. They have since become the company's symbol and one of the most widely recognized symbols of corporate America.

For additional information about the Clydesdales' visit, call Ned Rollins of Standard Sales Co., 563-1092.

Burglary of vehicle being probed

Police Roundup

From Staff Reports

The Midland County Sheriff's Office is investigating the burglary of a vehicle containing tools valued at $650. According to reports, hand tools used to handle draft beer dispensers valued at $550 and assorted parts for the dispensers valued at $100 were stolen from a 1985 Chevrolet Chevette.

Reports said the tools were owned by Permian Distributing Co. of Odessa. The burglary occurred Monday about 7:40 p.m., reports said.

Midland police are also investigating a burglary that, according to reports, occurred between Dec. 30 and Monday. Reports said two stereo speakers valued at $500, a turntable valued at $450, a tuner and amplifier valued at $400, a tape deck valued at $400, and a world globe valued at $50 were stolen from a residence in the 200 block of Ridglea Drive.

In other reports, a 28-year-old Midland man is being held in lieu of $7,500 bond following his arrest for possession of cocaine. According to police reports, Antonio Jesus Bonilla, 1601 E. Walnut Ln., was arrested at 7:10 a.m. in the 1600 block of Garden Lane. Bond was set by Judge James Brazell.

"You're pathetic. You can't do anything right!"
"You disgust me. Just shut up!"
"Hey stupid! Don't you know how to listen."
"Get outta here! I'm sick of looking at your face."
"You're more trouble than you're worth."
"Why don't you go and find some other place to live!"
"I wish you were never born."

Basin Aviation's charter service gives you a competitive edge

Every good business person knows it's important to maintain a competitive edge in the marketplace. The question is, "How can that be done?" Jerry Morelock of Basin Aviation says many companies have established and maintained just the edge they need by utilizing Basin's aircraft charter service.

For 10 years Basin Aviation, which is located at Midland Air Park, has been getting people to their desired destinations on a truly timely basis. While the major airlines limit not only your schedule, but also your destinations, Basin Aviation can be ready on an hour's notice to fly even to those small towns your company services. "We service approximately 9800 airports, while the airlines service only 1700," Morelock says.

There's no hassle with lay overs, cancelled flights, long lines, missed planes and baggage claims while your valuable client is sitting, waiting on you (or worse yet, calling your competitor).

The incomparable flexibility that Basin Aviation charter service gives you can change your professional life. You can move faster and more decisively in your travel. Your business trips will be more time efficient. You'll be on your way to a new-found freedom.

Robert C. Hardy of Hardy Security Consultants in Napa, California explains the flying advantage like this, "The airplane adds at least a quarter of a person in terms of my output—another 500 manhours a year."

That's a competitive edge!

One thing many people don't realize is that in many cases charter flying (when the plane is full) is no more expensive than airline traveling, especially if the destination is a smaller town.

To meet their customers' needs, "Basin Aviation has the biggest selection of charter airplanes of anyone in the Permian Basin," Morelock says.

He describes their airplanes as six newer-type aircraft, equipped to handle from four to eight passengers, so you can make your travel time with your associates pleasurable and productive.

Basin's smallest charter plane, designed to accomodate four passengers, cruises at 160 mph.

For the times you need a six passenger plane, Basin has three different planes. Their 210, a single engine six passenger plane, cruises at 200 miles per hour. Also with cruising capabilities of 200 mph is the single engine Saratoga, six place plane. Moving up to Basin's six passenger, twin engine plane you can enjoy a cruising speed of 220 mph.

For eight passengers, Basin offers charter services in a Cessna 421 and a Conquest I. The Cessna 421 is a twin engine plane which will cruise at 250 mph.

Morelock takes greatest pride in their biggest plane, the Conquest I. This turboprop plane has a luxurious, roomy interior with pressurized comfort and a cruising capability of 300 mph.

Whatever aircraft meets your charter needs, you can count on getting a seasoned Basin pilot. All of Basin Aviation's charter pilots have 15 plus years of flying experience and are airline qualified.

Start 1987 off right by letting Basin Aviation help you develop a competitive edge. See how efficient 24-hour charter service can help you serve more people, more efficiently. Call 685-7000 or 563-3472 and schedule your first charter now.

Basin Aviation has the largest selection of charter airplanes in the Permian Basin. The luxurious interior of their largest charter aircraft, the Conquest I, comfortably accomodates eight passengers. Call 685-7000 or 563-3472 for your next charter.

Chicken fried steak is still king in Texas, especially at Cattleman's

Cattleman's Steak House, 3300 N. Big Spring, is famous for its delicious chicken friend steak, fresh salad bar and friendly staff. Start the new year off right by enjoying a delectable meal at Cattleman's.

Lots of things may change with the coming of the New Year and an abundance of New Year's resolutions, but one thing is sure to stay the same. "Chicken fried steak is still king in West Texas," and especially at Cattleman's Steak House, says owner Bill Henkel.

Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, is known for the "Best Steaks in the West." Their chicken fried steak is exceptional because they make their own, instead of using pre-battered steaks like many places do. Add to that the delicious cream gravy and french fries or baked potato, and you have the beginning of an extraordinarily good, Texas-style menu.

Be sure to start your meal at the huge salad bar where you can pile on the crisp lettuce, cherry tomatoes, carrots, sprouts and more toppings than you can imagine. Finish it off with the dressing of your choice and add a dab of potato or pea salad or strawberries. Cattleman's knows the meaning of fresh salad and selection.

Appetizers range from mountains of golden onion rings to fried zucchini and sauteed or fried mushrooms. This is only the beginning for those Texas-size appetites.

Your choice of fine steak, seafood, veal or even prime rib will arrive, cooked to your order of perfection. Dinner steak, ribeye and club steak are some of your choices. Sirloins come in many sizes and the T-Bone steak, an old favorite, will satisfy even the biggest appetite. For the ladies, Bill has added an 8 oz. ribeye.

Now their selection also includes veal and chicken parmesan, chicken kiev, ham and cheese croissants, along with lasagna and spaghetti. These special menu items rank right up there with the other fine dishes, Midlanders have enjoyed at Cattleman's for years.

Cattleman's chicken strips, steak fingers, hamburgers, barbecue sandwiches and club sandwiches are always favorites.

Perhaps, you're hungry for seafood. Cattleman's serves delicious fried shrimp, oysters, catfish, frog legs and scallops. Their flounder, lobster, sole, trout, salmon, and red snapper are equally tasty. You can imagine how good the seafood platter is.

Whatever you select will be great with fries or a big baked potato with butter, sour cream, cheese and bacon bits.

Children love the "Kiddie Corner" on the menu. The same great food is served to satisfy their appetites.

A glass of delicious ice tea, a soft drink or cup of coffee will be perfect with your meal. Cattleman's also has a good selection of wines, champagnes and premium beers.

Blueberry cheese cake, pecan pie, ice cream, cherry cheese cake or apple pie at Cattleman's will make your lunch or dinner even better.

Bill and Pat point out that Cattleman's Steak House is famous not only for delicious food, but also for an efficient, friendly staff. That's what makes Cattleman's come to mind on those special occasions.

Start the new year off right by dining at Cattleman's. Enjoy lunch or dinner at Cattleman's, Monday-Friday. On Saturday you can have the best dinner of your week at this fine steak house. If the parking lot is full, don't worry. It's nearly always full and the wait is never too long at 3300 N. Big Spring, where chicken fried steak and customers are king!

Art from Your Graphics Are Showing sets the mood for better 1987

For 11 years, Pat and Percy Tate, owners of Your Graphics Are Showing, have faithfully served their Permian Basin customers through the ups and downs of the years. Now, the fresh look of the gallery reveals the optimism and hope with which they are facing 1987.

Your Graphics Are Showing, which stocks the widest variety of prints in the area, is constantly adding new works to the available selection. "The fact that we are a limited edition gallery dictates that we always have new art," Percy said.

As the hopes of Permian Basin residents are renewed by oil prices inching their way up, it's a good time to invest in a new print that will reflect that mood at home or the office. "Art is really a very emotional thing. It's probably one of the last things you add in a room, but it's the emotional thing so it sets the mood of the room," Pat explained.

Your Graphics Are Showing makes selecting a print a pleasure. "We show all of our images framed in some way," Pat said.

Because the limited editions are already matted and framed, they are ready to go, and customers know from the beginning what the total price will be. If, however, you want to custom select the mat and frame, that can also be arranged at Your Graphics Are Showing.

Another aspect of Pat and Percy's commitment to the community is revealed in their attitude that quality art can be an affordable investment. Eleven years ago when they first opened the shop, print prices began at $21. Today, they begin at just $29. That's not much of a change for that many years.

Because the Permian Basin has been facing some challenging economic times, Percy said they negotiated a five percent price reduction from their supplier. Pat and Percy added five percent to that, so customers are enjoying regular prices that are 10 percent lower than might normally be expected.

In addition, there's still a good selection of prints that were included in the store's Christmas Sale. These are still reduced 25 to 40 percent.

Whether you select one of the sale prints or one of the new ones, Pat suggested that they make tremendous gifts, perhaps for Valentine's Day. While many people are concerned about selecting art for friends, Pat said it is amazing how few pieces that are bought as gifts are exchanged. People seem to know their friends' preferences better than they realize.

As the Permian Basin looks for a brighter year in 1987, it's time to reflect those hopes and good wishes in the art displayed at home and the office. You'll find just what you need at Your Graphics Are Showing in Plaza Center, Monday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Pat and Percy Tate, owners of Your Graphics Are Showing, are looking forward to a better year in 1987 for their customers. A new print from their gallery in Plaza Center is a good way to set the mood for the new year.

Ever wished you could see your company's name in the headlines? You can! The Business and Industry pages, published each Tuesday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram, give you the opportunity to tell your story.

The Business and Industry pages offer advertisers a unique format. The articles and pictures on the pages let readers know what various businesses have to offer.

The pages are not just for one type of business. In fact, the pages feature consumer businesses, as well as commercially-oriented companies. There are furniture stores, travel agencies, restaurants, temporary services, home improvement experts, chimney sweeps and more that take advantage of this format.

Both advertisers who offer services and those who are selling a product have been very satisfied with the response they have received by advertising on the Business and Industry pages.

What's really amazing is that your business can be on these pages for a remarkably reasonable rate. If you've never taken advantage of this unique advertising format, ask your account executive about the special introductory offer which begins next week (deadline is Thursday, January 8).

All it takes to begin advertising on the Business and Industry pages is a call to the retail advertising department at 682-5311. Ads on this page are set up on a contract basis. The number of articles and pictures an advertiser gets is determined by the size of the ad that is run each week on the pages. The advertiser pays only for the ad, thereby spreading the cost out over a 13 or 26 week period (the introductory offer varies from this).

Advertisers do not have to worry about writing the articles or taking the pictures themselves. The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an advertising feature writer that will take care of that. When possible your articles will be coordinated with special events, such as grand openings and seasonal sales.

Put your business in the headlines of the Business and Industry pages, call 682-5311 and ask for your account executive or the retail advertising department.

MHS gets revenge in key district win

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Lady Bulldogs moved into sole possession of first place in the District 4-5A basketball standings Monday night with a 43-41 victory over cross-town rival Midland Lee.

The Bulldogs improved their record to 3-0 on the year while San Angelo, which was open Monday, is in second at 2-0. Midland Lee fell into a tie for fourth with Abilene Cooper at 1-2.

Like a meeting earlier this year in the championship game of the Del Rio tournament, Monday's cross-town battle was close and hard fought. It was also revenge for the Bulldogs, who lost the first encounter, 72-70.

THE REBELS took the early lead but couldn't pull away from the stubborn Bulldogs. After holding a 10-8 lead in the first quarter, Lee pushed it to 18-13 late in the second only to end up trailing 20-18 at halftime.

The seven straight MHS points to end the half was stretched to 15 in the third quarter when the Bulldogs jumped out to a 28-20 lead and appeared to be on their way to a rout.

However, Lee came back with six straight points of its own to pull within four by the end of the quarter, 30-26.

After holding leads as big as four and six points in the fourth quarter, the never-say-die attitude that plagues both teams came out in force from the Rebels. Twice in the final eight minutes, Lee pulled within one point only to misfire on opportunities to go ahead.

There was also a two-point deficit three different times, including the final 30 seconds when Piette Mayfield hit one of two free throws to reach the final 43-41 score.

Bulldog Amy Cumings missed a pair of free throws with 15 seconds left to play and Lee got the rebound.

Guard Roz Eaden worked the ball down court for Lee and, as the clock was winding down, passed off to Mayfield, who had her shot rejected cleanly by Cumings to preserve the win.

WHILE THE game was exciting from a scoreboard point of view, it was also very sloppily played. Both teams committed 21 turnovers and neither could be accused of a good shooting eye.

For the game, the Bulldogs were 16-of-42 (38 percent) from the field and 11-of-26 (41 percent) from the line. For Lee, the numbers were: 18-of-47 (38 percent) from the field and 5-of-13 (39 percent) from the line.

Still, the victory was gladly accepted by Bulldog coach Jane Young.

Tuesday's Results: Midland High 43, Midland Lee 41; Abilene Cooper 67, Odessa High 61; Abilene High 55, Odessa Permian 51.

Friday's Games: Odessa Permian at Midland High; Midland Lee at Odessa High; San Angelo at Abilene High; Abilene Cooper idle.

"It wasn't the prettiest game we've ever played but we won and I'm extremely happy," said Young. "Next time we play, though, I expect a totally different ball game."

Both coaches looked at fouls as a telling point in the game, especially for Lee, which lost Melissa Hart to fouls with 4:17 left to play and Regina Calicutt with 1:08 remaining.

"Lee got into foul trouble when Melissa went out," said Young. "I thought with all the injuries Lee had they did a good job. They're just not getting their kids healthy. When Lee isn't able to fast break and press, it hurts them a lot."

"I thought, considering, we played real well today," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson, referring to injuries to three key starters in her lineup: Calicutt, Hart and LaVette Wallace.

"I thought we played well and I thought they played very well. This game could have gone either way."

Despite the loss, Lee's second in three 4-5A outings, Stephenson is still optimistic about her team's chances.

"We'll bounce back. Look for us to be there. We've played three good teams and that's all there is to it."

IN OTHER district action Monday, Abilene Cooper notched its first 4-5A win with a 67-61 victory over Odessa High. Also, Abilene High defeated Odessa Permian, 55-51.

On Friday, both teams return to 4-5A action with the Bulldogs hosting Odessa Permian at MHS Gym and Lee traveling to Odessa High. Both games are slated for 8 p.m. starts.

Around the league, San Angelo is at Abilene High while Cooper has an off day.

MHS, Lee set to tip off 4-5A season

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The worst thing about Midland High and Midland Lee playing in the District 4-5A opener tonight is that the outcome will have little impact on the final district standings.

The best thing about the Bulldogs and Rebels hooking up early in the season is that the outcome will have little impact on the final district standings.

The coaches of both teams are able to make a case for either argument, and neither Jack Stephenson of MHS or Paul Stueckler of Lee is sure which side of that argument he is on.

"It's great if you win it, but it's not if you lose," says Stueckler of the new format.

The rearrangement of the district schedule takes much of the drama from the battle of Tall City teams which last year took the playoff chase down to the final game and beyond. After MHS won the final regular season meeting, Lee grabbed the playoff berth winning a one-game playoff for second place.

Final game theatrics won't happen this season, at least not at Chaparral Center between Lee and MHS in the regular season.

Instead, both sides will be trying to get off on the right foot in district play when they hook up at 8 p.m. tonight at Chaparral Center.

"I've got mixed emotions about playing it early," said Stephenson. "Last year that game meant so much, but this way we've got time to recover regardless of which way it goes.

"If you lose, it won't leave the same bitter taste in your mouth. But it was always such a biggie when we played at the end."

A case could be made for this being a "biggie," even if it is the season opener. With the district as much up for grabs as pre-district records around the league would indicate, the team that puts together a few wins early could accumulate enough momentum to carry the district race.

Right now, no one is ready to pick a favorite let alone a winner. Just two district teams have managed to win more games than they've lost, and Odessa Permian and San Angelo barely top the .500 mark at 9-8, while Lee sports the better record among the Tall City teams at 8-9. MHS is 6-11.

"I'm never truly happy with our record unless we're undefeated," said Stueckler. "But I feel we've got a good chance in this district because no one else is undefeated either. This team has got the potential to be good."

Brian Bosworth

Switzer bids Bozworth farewell

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth has apologized for things he has said and done this year, but his college football career is over nonetheless.

Bosworth, the Sooners' two-time All-America, apologized Monday night for a string of events that have occurred this season, saying he was "terribly embarrassed" by the concern he had caused the university and its officials.

Still, the colorful leader of the nation's best defense has played his final game at Oklahoma, Coach Barry Switzer said. Earlier Monday, Switzer issued a statement saying it would be in the university's best interests if Bosworth did not return for his final year of eligibility.

Bosworth, a fourth-year junior with one season of eligibility remaining, is expected to graduate in May. It was widely felt he would pass up his final year to join the National Football League.

"I deeply regret those situations that have blemished the image of the University of Oklahoma, and I hope that I can rectify the embarrassment I have brought to the university," Bosworth said in a statement issued through the school's sports information office.

"The Boz" has been in the headlines all season. In a preseason Sports Illustrated article, he talked about learning how to install stray bolts in cars at an Oklahoma City General Motors plant. He later said UCLA played "girls football" after Oklahoma had beaten the Bruins, 38-3.

He was banned by the NCAA from playing in the Orange Bowl because drug tests showed he had used steroids. He later blasted the NCAA for its drug-testing policy, and during the Orange Bowl game wore a T-short that, using the NCAA initials, read "National Communists Against Athletes."

In his statement, he apologized for virtually everything he had said or done this year that brought negative publicity. He particularly apologized for embarrassing Switzer, University President Frank Horton and Athletic Director Donnie Duncan.

"General Motors has been a very loyal supporter of our program and I hope the Sports Illustrated article has not adversely affected them," he said.

He retracted the UCLA remarks, as well as statements he made about former Texas Coach Fred Akers.

"I also want to apologize to Walter Byers and the NCAA for protesting their drug program," Bosworth said. "I know the drug program is in the best interest of the student-athlete and I should have been sensitive to the NCAA."

Bosworth already was known for his controversial off-the-field statements, earrings and multi-colored hairdo, but his shirt slogan drew sharp criticism. In Oklahoma, one newspaper editorial described his behavior as "crude, tasteless, disgusting sideline antics."

Switzer, who has called Bosworth the greatest linebacker in school history, issued a three-sentence statement indicating Bosworth no longer had the option of returning next year.

"After having discussions today with Brian Bosworth, I have decided it would be in the best interests of the University of Oklahoma football program that he forgo his senior season of eligibility in 1987," Switzer said.

"Brian is one of the greatest players to have ever performed for the Sooners. I am sure his future with the National Football League will parallel if not exceed his career accomplishments at the University of Oklahoma."

Duncan said he discussed Bosworth's actions with Switzer after the Orange Bowl, but said he did not direct Switzer to take any action concerning Bosworth.

"We had a tremendous game on the field with a tremendous group of kids. I thought that should have been the focus," Duncan said. "Obviously, Brian has his own personal views. I don't want those confused with the university's views."

Asked if Switzer's statement meant Bosworth could not play for the Sooners in 1987, Duncan said, "That's correct."

Horton, who said he supported Switzer's decision, said the school has received dozens of letters about Bosworth.

"In the case of Mr. Bosworth, we had letters beginning probably last fall in relation to a Sports Illustrated article," Horton said. "We have had expressions of concern from a variety of directions related to his actions."

Former Rebel traded to Yanks

Velarde caught by surprise

By BOB BRUNDAGE and ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writers

Life in minor league baseball can hold a few surprises. Just ask former Midland Lee Rebel Randy Velarde.

Velarde, who holds a host of Lubbock Christian College baseball records, spent most of the 1986 season with the Class A Appleton Wisconsin Foxes in the Midwest League as well as a few weeks with Buffalo in the AAA International League. He'll be somewhere else in 1987.

On Monday, New York Yankee officials confirmed month old trade rumors which sent Yankee pitcher Scott Nielson and infielder Mike Soper to the Chicago White Sox for pitcher Pete Filson and infielder-outfielder Velarde.

It was all news to the former Rebel star.

"I'm very surprised," said Velarde when a reporter informed him of the trade. "I guess the White Sox no longer have plans for me in their organization. I'm more than willing to go over there (Yankees) and give them what I know about baseball. I'm very surprised they wouldn't call me because just the other week they sent me my contract for next season.

"But of course I'll go wherever they tell me. The only way I was not going to play was if I just decided to hang it up. As long as I can play the game, I'll play. It's my first love."

The Yankees assigned Velarde's contract to Albany-Colonie of the AA Eastern League.

Velarde isn't the only one who hadn't heard of the trade. Appleton General Manager Larry Dawson was also surprised to hear the news.

"I hadn't heard anything about it," said Dawson. "I'd heard reports of Filson, Soper and Nielson but nothing about Randy. Now that I think of it, though, I do remember something about a player to be named later and that was probably Randy."

VELARDE SPENT most of the 1986 season at shortstop for the Foxes but had "a tough season" with the bumpy, uneven infield in Appleton, said Dawson.

Velarde's problem was fielding. From 524 chances he was tagged with 52 errors at shortstop and had a fielding percentage of .901. It wasn't much better in the outfield, though. In only 15 chances, he had two more errors.

Then, there are his statistics at third base, a position he played for eight games at the end of the season. Velarde was perfect in 20 tries.

MC rolling again

From Staff Reports

MESA, Ariz. — Midland College had no trouble bouncing back from their season's only loss with a 107-64 stomping of Navajo (Ariz.) Junior College in the first round of Mesa Rotary Shootout Monday.

Mookie Blaylock led all scorers with 21 points as all five starters and one reserve reached double figures. Alex Stanwood scored 16 points, Lincoln Minor scored 14, Todd Duncan added 13 and Billy Ray Smith and Herman Henry each chipped in 10 to lead the rout as the Chaparrals moved to 14-1.

MC now takes on Herkimer County College of New York in a second round game tonight at 9:15 p.m. Herkimer, ranked No. 3 in the latest NJCAA poll, took an easy 75-62 decision from Cypress (Calif.) late Monday.

All of coach Jerry Stone's players that made the trip reached the scoring column, but the Chaps were minus one player due to injury and another due to grades. Tracy Davis left the team over break because of grades, while Juan Hewitt is still nursing an injury.

Iowa plowing under Big 10

Associated Press

College Roundup

First-year Coach Tom Davis and the unbeaten Iowa Hawkeyes are already having a season worth remembering.

Second-ranked and unbeaten Iowa continued the fastest start in the school's college basketball history Monday night by beating Wisconsin 78-63 for its 14th straight victory.

Pressure defense and aggressive work on the boards again carried host Iowa in the Big Ten game. Three Wisconsin players fouled out trying to guard the taller and faster Hawkeyes.

No. 5 Syracuse 89, Providence 85

Junior center Rony Seikaly scored a career-high 29 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as unbeaten Syracuse won a Big East game in Providence.

The Orangemen, 13-0, trailed 72-65 with 7½ minutes remaining before rallying behind Seikaly and Howard Triche, who scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half.

The Friars outrebounded Syracuse 52-41, but three Providence players fouled out, including Dave Kipfer, who scored 20 points.

No. 6 Purdue 89, Michigan 77

Troy Lewis scored 39 points, the most by a Purdue player since Joe Barry Carroll in 1979, and the Boilermakers beat visiting Michigan in a Big Ten game.

Lewis scored 16 of Purdue's 18 points during a first-half surge for a 45-35 lead at the break. Lewis wound up making 12 of 15 field goal attempts, including 2-of-3 from three-point range.

No. 7 DePaul 81, Furman 64

Dallas Comegys scored 18 of his 22 points in the first half as unbeaten DePaul had little trouble with visiting Furman.

The Blue Demons, 11-0, led by as many as 17 points in the first half.

Comegys, who also had 10 rebounds, left the game with 13:57 remaining after he collided with a teammate under the basket and landed on his back.

No. 8 Temple 77, Geo. Wash. 73

Senior guard Nate Blackwell scored 20 points, including a tie-breaking jump shot with 57 seconds left, as Temple beat George Washington in an Atlantic 10 game.

No. 12 Illinois 79, Michigan State 72

Junior guard Glynn Blackwell scored 24 points and helped key a 16-0 streak in the second half that sent host Illinois past Michigan State in a Big Ten game.

The Illini trailed 53-47 with eight minutes remaining, but their backcourt of Blackwell and Tony Wysinger keyed the decisive burst.

No. 14 Pittsburgh 67, Akron 65

Tico Cooper scored on the rebound of a missed foul shot with 53 seconds left, helping Pittsburgh hold off visiting Akron.

The Panthers were behind 65-63 when Rod Brookin made a foul shot and then missed his second, but Cooper scored on the followup for the lead.

No. 15 Navy 91, East Carolina 66

Preseason All-America center David Robinson scored 31 points and became the first Navy player to pass the 2,000-point mark as the host Midshipmen beat East Carolina in a Colonial Athletic Association contest.

No. 17 Duke 82, William & Mary 46

Quin Snyder scored 19 points as Duke rolled over William & Mary.

The Blue Devils, 10-1, won their 21st straight game at home and 31st in a row over a non-conference opponent.

Cougars roll; Hogs squeak by

Associated Press

SWC

Houston posted a 50-point win over Pan American — the Cougars largest victory margin in more than 13 years — while Arkansas squeaked to an overtime win over North Texas State in non-conference basketball action.

Senior Greg Anderson scored 20 points to pace six Cougars in double figures as Houston beat Pan American 87-37. Houston beat Texas Lutheran by 64 points on Dec. 19, 1973.

Rickie Winslow and Darrell McArthur scored 11 points each for Houston, which held Pan American to the lowest total points for an opponent since Midwestern scored only 36 in 1951.

Houston improved its record to 11-3, while the Broncs fell to 6-4.

North Texas State's Keenan DeBose goaltended on a short hook shot by Arkansas' Andrew Lang with 1:15 left in overtime, allowing the Razorbacks to escape with a 99-96 win over the Eagles in Little Rock.

Freshman Razorback Ron Huery sent the contest into an extra period when he made a jump shot from inside the foul line with five seconds remaining. North Texas did not have time to launch a final shot.

After the Eagles took a 90-88 lead on a five-footer by Eugene Jemison, Lang scored on a tip-in and Wilson made a steal and dunk that gave the Razorbacks their first lead since two-thirds through the second period.

The teams traded baskets until Jemison made two free throws to tie the game at 96. Lang maneuvered inside and tossed up a five-foot hook shot, which was goaltended by DeBose.

Huery added a free throw with seven seconds left and a three-point attempt by NTSU's Tony Worrell was short at the buzzer.

Shawn Baker led the Razorbacks with 19 points. Worrell, who hit seven shots in a row before missing his final attempt, finished with 29 points for the Eagles.

Arkansas improved its record to 9-5, while the Eagles fell to 5-8.

Pacers rip Mavs on home court

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

Indiana Pacers Coach Jack Ramsay had a simple explanation for his team's NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks: perfection.

"On the road, we are usually a little tentative, but tonight we played perfect," Ramsay said followed Indiana's 144-135 victory in Dallas.

Others were quick to give the bows to Ramsay.

"Credit Coach Ramsay," Dallas star Mark Aguirre said. "Their execution on offense was tremendous. We were getting after it, but we just couldn't stop them like we wanted to do."

Indiana forward Wayman Tisdale backed up Aguirre's assessment.

"We knew we would have to work hard because Dallas is tough at home," Tisdale said. "But we were ready and determined to win.

"They made a lot of runs at us, but we didn't fold and Coach Ramsay called some very strategic timeouts. Whenever they made a run, he called time to stop their momentum and to keep us calm out there. It really worked."

In Monday's only other NBA game, Philadelphia defeated the Los Angeles Clippers 108-102.

Tisdale and center Steve Stipanovich scored 27 points each for the Pacers, who committed only five turnovers as they ended Dallas' four-game winning streak. The Mavericks, who are 13-2 at Reunion Arena, also had won nine straight on their home court. Dallas' only other home loss was on Dec. 5 to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Aguirre paced Dallas with 28 points, Rolando Blackman had 24 and James Donaldson 23. Donaldson led all rebounders with 15.

The Pacers also set a pair of Reunion Arena records. Their 144 points were the most ever scored by a visiting team against Dallas and their .653 field-goal percentage was the best ever by a visitor.

76ers 108, Clippers 102

Charles Barkley handled the offense and Maurice Cheeks took care of tge defense as Philadelphia handed the Clippers their 12th straight loss.

Barkley scored 38 points, his second straight 30-plus point performance, and pulled down 12 rebounds. Cheeks had a career-high nine steals, two short of the NBA record set in 1976 by Larry Kenon with the San Antonio Spurs.

UTEP routs San Diego State

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Senior center Mike Richmond, recovering from a knee injury, came off the bench to score 14 points to lead Texas-El Paso to a 77-58 Western Athletic Conference basketball victory over San Diego State.

Four other players scored in double figures for the Miners, who raised their WAC record to 2-0 and their overall mark to 12-2. The win was the sixth in a row for UTEP.

Quintan Gates, Wayne Campbell and Chris Blocker scored 12 points apiece for the Miners and Chris Sandle added 10 for UTEP. Gates was the game's leading rebounder with 12.

Center Gerald Murray, scoreless as a starter in the last two games, came off the bench to score a career-high 20 points and pulled down 10 rebounds to lead San Diego State, which fell to 0-2 in conference play and 2-10 overall.

The game was close for the first 12½ minutes. UTEP took control by outscoring San Diego State 13-1 to turn a 23-21 lead into a 36-22 advantage late in the first half.

It was 38-24 at halftime. The Aztecs got as close as eight points twice early in the second half, but the Miners outscored them 16-2 to make it 60-37 with 10:25 remaining. Reserves saw extensive action after that.

70 million watch Miami-Penn St.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's telecast of the Fiesta Bowl was watched by about 70 million people, the second-largest audience ever for a college football game, the network said.

The prime-time telecast of last Friday's game between Miami and Penn State received an average 25.1 rating and 38 share across the nation to lead all programming last week, NBC officials said Monday. No. 2 Penn State defeated No. 1 Miami, 14-10, for the national championship.

Network researchers had said a viewing audience of 70 million would be the largest in the history of college football. On Monday, however, they said further checking had revealed that the 1980 Rose Bowl was watched by 72.4 million people.

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was lower in quiet European trading this morning. Gold prices rose to over $400 an ounce.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose 0.53 yen to close at 159.18 yen from Monday's 158.65 yen. Later, in London, it was quoted at a lower rate of 159.00 yen.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.4730 to buy one pound, more expensive than $1.4725 late Monday.

Other midmorning dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Monday:

—1.9245 West German marks, down from 1.9315

—1.6202 Swiss francs, down from 1.6280

—6.3705 French francs, down from 6.3900

—2.1735 Dutch guilders, down from 2.1815

—1.37345 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3773

Financial markets in Italy were closed for a national holiday.

In London, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended gold price of $401.70 a troy ounce, up from $399.00 late Monday.

In Zurich, gold was selling at a bid price of $401.60 at noon, up from $399.00 the previous day.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold rose the equivalent of 62 cents to close at a bid $402.18.

Silver bullion prices rose a penny on the London market where the metal was trading at a bid price of $5.39 a troy ounce, compared with Monday's $5.38.

Dow hits record

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market soared to record levels Monday as investors ex-tended an early 1987 buying spree following late December's tax-related selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 44.01 to 1,971.32, topping the previous closing high of 1,955.57 set Dec. 2 and the previous biggest one-day point increase of 43.41 points set Nov. 3, 1982.

The average ended Friday with a 31.36-point gain.

Gainers outnumbered losers more than 7-to-1 among issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Volume on the Big Board came to 181.85 million shares.

SPR targeted in budget cuts

By Vic Ostrowidzki
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON – The Reagan administration and Congress are on a collision course over the president's plan to slash the amount of oil that the government pumps daily into the nation's Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

The president proposed in his budget Monday to cut the so-called oil-fill rate from 75,000 to 35,000 barrels in fiscal 1988, which starts Oct. 1. Several oil-state members of Congress, who wield enormous influence over energy issues, immediately denounced the idea.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Texas), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he plans to oppose it, and a spokesman for Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, (D-La.) said the senator, who heads the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, was "vehemently opposed" and "would lead the charge against it."

Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Texas), chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, will also fight the proposal, an aide said. Rep. Mike Synar (D-Okla.), who heads the energy subcommittee of Brooks' committee, added that Congress has not forgotten the oil crisis of the 1970s.

Synar said current low prices are a good reason to keep adding to the reserve, which is a government stockpile of crude oil designed to supplement the market in case world oil supplies are severely disrupted. The oil is stored along the Texas and Louisiana Gulf coasts in five sites, four of which are underground caverns and one a conventional salt mine. A sixth, the Big Hill site near Beaumont, Texas, is currently under construction.

A White House spokesman said the president's proposal would save more than $225 million a year at current prices. Reagan also believes sufficient oil is already stored to meet any contingency caused by import disruptions, the spokesman said.

The president proposed last year a complete stop to filling the reserve, contending that could save $8 billion by 1990. He also argued that the government had lost $3 billion on the reserve business since November, 1985 as a result of plunging international oil prices that eroded the reserve's value from $14 billion to $11 billion.

Reagan backed down last year in the face of congressional opposition and after he received warnings that a halt in purchases would anger European allies who have been under pressure from Washington to build up their own oil reserves.

The president's new plan was part of his $1.2 trillion fiscal 1988 budget in which he claimed that by the end of 1987, the reserve – currently holding 516 million barrels of crude oil –will contain 534 million barrels, equal to U.S. imports from all countries for more than 100 days or to those from the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries for nearly 200 days.

The president said there is no need to fill the reserve at the 75,000-barrel-a-day rate in view of the world's surplus oil production capacity totaling more than 10 million barrels a day.

Oil prices dip below $18

United Press International

Oil prices see-sawed on world markets Monday as traders cashed in on profits made in the two-week rally unleashed by OPEC's agreement to cut production and establish an $18-a-barrel price target.

Britain's benchmark North Sea Brent crude and the West Texas intermediate — the key U.S. crude — had shot up by about $3 to the $18 range by the end of last week following announcement of the OPEC accord on Dec. 20.

On the European spot market, where oil is sold to the highest bidder, Brent lost 5 cents to $18.05 a barrel Monday. On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas intermediate for immediate delivery slipped by 18 cents to $17.95 a barrel after closing at an 11-month high Friday.

"The market can't go up forever without a correction," said Don Wharton, vice president of energy futures at Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in Boston. "We had a nice gentle round of profit taking that was to be expected."

Oil industry sources said Abu Dhabi, one of the United Arab Emirates and an OPEC member, has informed customers it is increasing its crude oil prices by $1.15 to $15.55 a barrel.

At least seven OPEC members already have notified clients that they are raising their crude oil prices to official levels set by the 13-nation cartel, the Middle East Economic Survey reported in Nicosia, Cyprus.

The publication said OPEC maverick Iraq will impose fixed prices for its crude but will continue to ignore its national output quota of 1.46 million barrels a day assigned by the cartel.

Iraq was the only holdout in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' decision to reduce production by 7.2 percent for the first half of 1987 in order to return to a fixed pricing system based on an $18-a-barrel average by Feb. 1.

A.W. Clausen, chairman and chief executive officer of the Bank of America, talks with reporters at the bank's headquarters in San Francisco.

BankAmerica directors vow to stay independent

New York Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Directors of the BankAmerica Corporation Monday unanimously rejected a merger proposal from the First Interstate Bancorp and vowed to fight for BankAmerica's independence.

"We're going to come out fighting with everything we have," said A.W. Clausen, the bank's chairman and chief executive officer.

BankAmerica also said that it would soon file a registration statement for raising additional capital and that it may issue equity securities. It did not say how much it hoped to raise or how it would market the shares.

First Interstate, in a statement late Monday, said it was "disappointed" by BankAmerica's rejection. It also said it was "regrettable" that the board had made the decision without first discussing the matter with First Interstate. The Los Angeles banking company said it would "continue to study the situation and review its options." First Interstate is considered likely to keep pressing its offer.

BankAmerica's rejection had been expected. The board had previously asked First Interstate to withdraw its bid.

At a news conference after the board's meeting here, Clausen called the First Interstate proposal "wholly inadequate, highly conditional, of questionable marketability and clearly not in the best interests" of shareholders or customers.

As for raising capital, the bank has been reluctant to initiate a common stock offering because the price of its stock is depressed, and a new offering would further dilute the value. Clausen said that it was too soon to talk about specifics and that it might be premature to talk about new common stock, hinting that the bank might issue preferred shares instead.

Bank officials said they might sell shares either to a big institutional investor, such as another financial institution, or through a public offering.

Dow Jones soars to record high

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — So far, Wall Street loves 1987. The stock market had one of the best days in its history on Monday as the Dow Jones industrial average soared to a record level that is within reach of the vaunted 2,000 mark. "Today is amazing!" said Jack Baker, head trader for Shearson Lehman Brothers, as he tried to catch his breath at the end of a hectic day that saw the closely followed Dow move up a record 44.01 points, to 1,971.32.

The size of Monday's increase surprised many experts, especially since it followed a 31.36-point jump in the Dow on Friday, the first session of the new year. In the two business days since 1986 became history, the blue-chip average of 30 stocks is up nearly 4 percent.

Market experts think the turning of the calendar may very well have had a major effect on Wall Street, especially since investors are now working under a new set of tax laws.

"With the change in the tax law, it was the first time that people were forced to take long-term capital gains," said Peter DaPuzzo, a senior executive vice president at Shearson, referring to the fact that the tax rate on profits made in the stock market rose on Jan. 1, compelling many investors to cash in before then.

This phenomenon, Wall Street experts say, weakened the stock market at least during December, and perhaps even earlier. It created a pent-up demand for equities that could not be satisfied until last Friday, with the new law in place.

"You created a false sense of weakness," said Stanley Salvigsen, the chief investment strategist at Merrill Lynch & Co., who said many investors had recently increased the amount of cash in their portfolios.

A good deal of that cash on Monday was pumped back into the stock market, allowing the Dow to top its previous record single-day gain of 43.41 points, set on Nov. 3, 1982, the day after that year's congressional elections.

While blue-chip stocks got a large amount of attention from investors yesterday, the rest of the market did not suffer from neglect. The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.38 points, to 144.39; the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index 5.74 points, to 252.19; the American Stock Exchange's market-value index 4.58 points, to 272.07; and NASDAQ composite index 7.93 points, to 361.19, in over-the-counter trading.

All those improvements, with the exception of the Amex's, were record one-day performances.

On the Big Board, the average share rose 90 cents, and advancing issues swamped losers by an very lopsided 1,613-to-171 margin. Trading volume, although well below record levels, rose to 181.9 million shares ,from 91.9 million shares on Friday, when many investors were still absent because of the New Year's break.

"You would have expected bigger volume if the institutions had been in there with both feet," said John Havens, head of block trading at Morgan Stanley & Co., who like other professionals questions whether the rally is real or transitory.

Programmed trading contributed somewhat to Monday's rally, especially in the first 15 minutes of the session, when the Dow jumped off to a 21-point gain, according to experts.

Black chamber told to be persistent

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

The three things the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs should emphasize in 1987 are networking, advocacy and and procurement, according to James Fuller, the chamber's vice president for education.

He told members at Monday's meeting that those three things stood out at a seminar chamber members attended in Dallas on Dec. 19. The meeting, sponsored by the Dallas Minority Business Development Agency, featured a speech by James Richardson Gonzales, national director of the MBDA. "The three things that I got from that meeting is that, first, as a chamber, we should do a vigorous job of networking," Fuller said.

Second, chamber members have a responsibility to function as advocates, to change the educational process so that young people know what debits and credits are, he continued. And third, he told members, "We must emphasize procurement. This is where we've fallen short as a minority, because we haven't known the inroads of getting business. This is a new arena for many of us, so we have to be persistent."

Robbyne Fuller, president and chief executive officer of the chamber, said that "By networking and letting people know what we do, that means dollars. This is not a job for just one person: there's a job for everybody."

In keeping with the chamber's goal of building a strong network, guest speaker David Thayer, director of the Permian Basin Bid Center, told members how his organization helps create business for local concerns.

The Bid Center celebrated its first anniversary Monday, and according to Thayer, has 374 clients, brought $3.1 million in new business to this area, and saved or created 20 jobs so far, which is beneficial, since Ector County has the highest unemployment rate in the state, he said. He said that for 1987, he has multiplied the results by three, setting a goal of $10 million in business this year.

Asked how the Bid Center can help entrepreneurs, Thayer stated that "There are very definitely opportunities for individual entrepreneurs," and that at least 70 of his clients are one-man operations. He added that a number of government contracts are set aside for minority or woman-owned businesses.

"The business is out there, and the people who keep at it are finding work," he said. "It takes a commitment of a lot of time and paperwork. It's like selling Fuller Brushes or encyclopedias: the more doorbells you ring, the more sales you make."

Domestic car sales surge 27.6 percent

DETROIT (AP) — A rush by buyers seeking a last-minute tax break in mid-December propelled domestic car sales by the eight U.S. automakers to 27.6 percent above the corresponding period last year, the companies said Monday.

The automakers sold 210,654 cars between Dec. 11th and 20th, compared with 165,132 in the same period a year ago.

Sales by Ford Motor Co., the nation's second-largest automaker, rose sharply to 65.6 percent above the year-ago period. Sales by General Motors Corp., the largest automaker, were up 11.5 percent, and sales by third-ranked Chrysler Corp. rose by 23.2 percent.

"I think what we're looking at is a rush to buy cars before the end of the year to take advantage of the expiring sales-tax break," said David Healy, automotive analyst with the New York brokerage house Drexel Burnham Lambert.

Dresser, Ingersoll-Rand announce joint venture

WOODCLIFF LAKE, N.J. — Ingersoll-Rand Co. and Dresser Industries, Inc. have announced the formation of Dresser-Rand Co., a 50-50 joint venture proposed by the two companies on June 19, 1986.

The new company comprises the world-wide reciprocating process compressor, turbo compressor, gas turbine, steam turbine and electric machinery businesses of Ingersoll-Rand and Dresser Industries. Major markets served by the new company's operations include petroleum, gas, petrochemical, chemical and electric power industries.

Theodore H. Black, formerly Ingersoll-Rand vice president, is president and chief executive officer of the new company.

Ralph W. Ytterberg, senior vice president-operations of Dresser, is chairman of Dresser-Rand's management committee.

Dresser-Rand president Black said, "These businesses have been suffering in a severely depressed market environment. The major factors contributing to this environment are substantial excess manufacturing capacity in the industry, market potential currently centered in international markets rather than in the U.S., and increasing competition from German, French, Italian, Japanese and other international manufacturers.

"Our consolidation," he continued, "will create a significant world-wide supplier for this class of equipment for the energy and petrochemical markets. This joint venture provides the opportunity for substantial efficiencies in manufacturing, marketing, and research and development to create an organization that is a world-class competitor."

Dresser-Rand's operations have annual sales exceeding $800 million.

Desk & Derrick to host PBPA vice president

Col. Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, will address the Midland Desk & Derrick Club at the Petroleum Club on Thursday, beginning at 7 p.m.

His topic will be "The Function of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, the Federal Regulations we are faced with and its Projections for 1987."

Spannaus, a retired U.S. Air Force Colonel who served in the military for 26 years, received his bachelor's degree in political science from Troy State University and a master's degree in military science from the Air Force Air University.

Questar, Universal plan merger

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Questar Corp. and Universal Resources Corp. have announcement agreement to merge in a deal valued at about $100 million.

The agreement is subject to approval of Universal Resource's shareholders at a special meeting expected to be held in March. Universal Resource's board of directors already has unanimously approved of the deal.

Questar is a Salt Lake City-based diversified energy company. Its main subsidiary is Mountain Fuel Supply Co.

Universal Resources is a Dallas-based oil and gas exploration and production company with about $100 million in assets.

Under terms of the agreement, Questar has agreed to purchase about 53 percent of Universal Resources' outstanding common stock from certain major shareholders for $3 per share.

Those shareholders also have granted Questar an irrevocable proxy to vote their shares in connection with the proposed merger or any other acquisition proposal.

Universal Resources, which has 10,142,487 shares outstanding, also has granted Questar an option to purchase up to 2,018,355 shares of authorized but unissued common stock at $3 per share.

The option is exercisable in whole or in part until the merger becomes effective.

Questar may purchase Universal Resources shares in the open market or in privately negotiated transactions, prior to Universal Resource's shareholders' special meeting in March. The purchases are subject to applicable restrictions under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act.

Questar may also purchase Universal Resource's 15¾ percent subordinated debentures due 1996.

R.D. Cash, Questar chairman and chief executive officer, said if the merger is approved, Universal Resources initially will operate as an independent unit of Questar with the same management team. Charles B. Ponder is president of Universal Resources.

Questar spokesman R. Curtis Burnett said the merger will give his company access to the midcontinent region of the country.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Canada could reverse role, become importer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Canada, one of the top three foreign oil suppliers to the United States, could begin importing crude from the U.S. Gulf Coast to central Canadian refineries for the first time if oil prices remain depressed, Petroleum Intelligence Weekly says.

Intreprovincial Pipeline, which transports most of Canada's oil production, is laying the groundwork for a linkup with U.S. pipeline systems in the Chicago area in a move that would allow crude to begin flowing north from the Gulf Coast by late this year, the authoritative oil journal said.

Six Ontario refineries with a combined capacity of 500,000 barrels a day — or 28 percent of the Canadian total — could begin using crudes brought in through the U.S. superport in Louisiana, it said.

"This startling development points up how seriously the second largest producer among Western industrialized nations regards a new forecast that it could switch from a major oil exporter to a net importer if oil prices remain low," the weekly said.

Texas rig manufacturer eliminates 300 jobs

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Marathon LeTourneau Co. has laid off approximately 300 employees at its manufacturing operation for off-shore oil drilling platforms.

The company's work force is now down to about 150 employees, following the New Year's Eve layoffs, said spokesman Gilbert Elizondo.

William K. Trimble, president of Marathon LeTourneau's Gulf Marine Division, said the layoffs were due to the continued depressed state of the off-shore oil drilling industry. He said Marathon would continue to bid for work but could not predict when and what would be available.

Shell Oil schedules debenture redemption

HOUSTON (SWN) Shell Oil Co. announced that it will redeem all of its outstanding 14-1/4 percent debentures due 2011.

The redemption price will be 110.69 percent of the principal amount, plus accrued interest to February 2, the date fixed for redemption. The debentures may be redeemed at Citibank, N.A. at the receive and deliver department, 5th Floor, 111 Wall Street, New York, New York 10043.

The funds used to redeem the debentures are from the recent sale of Shell Oil's agricultural chemical unit.

Coastal buys gasoline, convenience stores

HOUSTON (SWN) The Coastal Corp. has purchased eight Premier brand retail gasoline and convenience store outlets in Houston. The units which surround the Houston area, will be supplied by Coastal's Corpus Christi refinery through the company's Almeda Products terminal.

Coastal said it will operate the eight service stations, marketing gasoline under the Derby brand name which will add eight million gallons per year to branded gasoline sales.

Coastal and its subsidiaries currently market Derby brand gasoline through more than 750 stations in 20 states, from Wyoming to Florida.

A major expansion was completed earlier in the year with the acquisition of 154 Joy stores in Florida and seven other southeastern states, as well as the long term lease with purchase option of the 27 unit Sunshine convenience store chain in south Texas.

National Gypsum completes property sale

DALLAS (SWN) — National Gypsum Co. has completed the sale of its oil and gas properties to private investors at an undisclosed purchase price, said John P. Hayes, chairman and chief executive officer.

The sale concludes a series of divestitures which the company previously announced its intention to complete by year end. The business segments which have been divested include the Cement Division, Binswanger Glass Co., Binning's Building Products Division, Decorative Products Division and the energy properties.

Indonesian company discovers new oil field

JAKARTA (UPI) — P.T. Caltex Pacific, the largest foreign oil-producing company in Indonesia, has discovered a new oil field 47 miles west of the giant Minas field in East Sumatra.

It was the second Caltex oil find within a week.

The discovery well, Giti No. 1, tested high-quality oil at a rate of as much as 320 barrels a day, the Indonesian state-owned oil company Pertamina said.

Located in the Coastal Plains-Pekanbaru Block, the Giti No. 1 well was completed as an oil discovery after testing at rates ranging from 202 to 320 barrels a day.

The discovery well is less than two miles from a Caltex Pacific Indonesia oil-gathering pipeline, which will allow an easy link-up for production purposes.

Late last week Caltex discovered another new oil field only six miles from the giant Minas field. That field, also in East Sumatra, flowed oil at the rate of 1,493 barrels a day.

Conoco, partners find oil in Eyptian desert

OKLAHOMA CITY (SWN) — Affiliates of Texas International Co. and Conoco, along with the Egyptian General Petroleum Corp., have discovered a new oil accumulation on the Khalda concession in Egypt's western desert. The discovery is 23 miles northwest of the Salam field, which the companies brought onstream in December.

The Kahraman South No. 1 well achieved a combined daily rate of more than 1,400 barrels of 40-degree API gravity oil from tests in two intervals of the Lower Cretaceous and one in the Jurassic Masajid formation.

Choke sizes on the tests ranged from 20/64-inch to 50/64-inch. Another well is planned during 1987 to evaluate the discovery.

Union Texas confirms Gulf discovery

HOUSTON (SWN) — Union Texas Petroleum announced that a recently completed well drilled on Eugene Island Block 371 in the Gulf of Mexico confirms the discovery of significant natural gas reserves the company made there in late 1984.

Located in 410 feet of water 110 miles south of Morgan City, LA, the confirmation well, called the Eugene Island Block 371 No. 2 well, penetrated 200 feet of net productive pay below 2,500 feet. The well was not flow-tested.

In December 1984, Union Texas announced that it had discovered natural gas in the first well the company drilled on Eugene Island Block 371. The discovery well tested at a rate of 4.1 million cubic feet daily through a 20/64-inch choke with 1,950 pounds-per-square-inch flowing tubing pressure.

Engineering design plans are now underway for a permanent production platform on the block. The company estimates that the field, when fully developed, will be capable of producing at rates greater than 60 million cubic feet of natural gas daily, beginning in the fourth quarter of 1988.

Union Texas has a 100 percent interest in Eugene Island Block 371. The company acquired the block for $6.8 million in the May 1983 federal offshore lease sale.

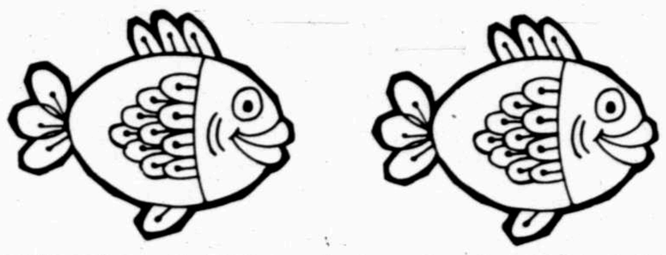
'Unique' inventor designs men's neckwear with difference

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service



LOS ANGELES — It happens a lot to Gary Fisher. He'll be in the bathroom of a posh restaurant, minding his own business, when a stranger notices splashing in his tie.

"The guy catches something out of the corner of his eye," Fisher said. "Ten minutes later, I'll be back at my table and the guy will come up to me and say, 'My wife and friend don't believe me but I saw a goldfish in your tie.' I've had people win bets."

Fisher, a 36-year-old former schoolteacher who has designed three-dimensional ties for Stevie Wonder and NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff, has had worse experiences with his live goldfish neckwear.

"Once I wore the tie to a sushi bar and the cooks freaked out," said Fisher.

To understand about Fisher's ties, one first has to meet their curious creator. A visit to the designer's home is a claustrophobic trip into sensory overload, a bombardment of trinkets and gadgets that close in from every direction.

Fisher, who dresses like a walking rainbow, invents and lives in a small rented guest house, a cramped home choking with collections of toy cars, flamingos, novelty sunglasses, porcelain plates, decoy ducks and assorted knickknacks — all covered, he noted, with 10 years of dust.

EVERY PIECE of furniture and most of the floor are smothered in toys, plastic dinosaurs, picture frames, shells, sculptures, masks, political buttons and Gumbys. A 20-inch-wide path is left for walking and for eating meals. Visitors must leave large coats and bags at the door to lessen the chance of knocking something over. Fisher's cataract-plagued dog, Cheetah, makes for some nervous moments.

"It's ridiculous. I can't even sit on the couch," said Fisher, who prefers calling himself unique as opposed to eccentric.

Every inch of the kitchen — countertops and stove included — is layered with shells, magnets and bric-a-brac. A space the size of a foot has been cleared on the floor so Fisher can plant his foot and lean toward the refrigerator. The bathroom is inundated with shells, old dusty magazines and bottles, while dozens of tiny mermaids and hula girls make their home on the sink. For sleeping, Fisher has cleared a body-size space on his bed that is also covered with collectibles. Lights must be turned on during the day because kites, stained glass and pictures hang from all windows and block the sunlight.

"I exist. I don't live," said Fisher, who seems to revel in the chaos.

Out of this madness, Fisher, fed up with working for an architectural design firm, launched his own line of ties, oh-so California-style.

"I want to be different," said the Los Angeles native, wearing lavender pants and pastel-striped shoes. "If everyone is drinking Perrier water, I won't drink Perrier water. If everyone is roller-skating, I won't roller-skate. I set the trends."

ENCASED IN clear plastic and generally sold for $35 apiece out of his home, Fisher's dozens of ties have included one for dentists (with a miniature bottle of mouthwash, dental floss, mouth mirror and toothbrush); photographers (with miniature camera, slide, film and photo); a Dr. Ruth tie (decorated with contraceptives); a musician's version (Stevie Wonder's publicist ordered one with a miniature musical score sheet, sunglasses, harmonica and tiny record album); a Hollywood variation (such as a gift ordered for Tartikoff with a tiny television set, NBC logo and slate board).

"It's a walking advertisement," Fisher said, adding that a dentist attracted a family of clients when they noticed his tie at a restaurant.

His tie is good to wear at work because if you splash blood or saliva, you just wipe it off, he noted.

But the most outrageous is the goldfish variety, which for $95 comes with a battery-powered aerator, two fish, fish food, a lifetime guarantee against springing a leak and a half hour's worth of verbal instruction.

Talk show emcee Tom Snyder wore the tie on an all-animal television show after Fisher contacted producers. But Fisher still hopes to see his wares on the Johnny Carson or David Letterman shows.

The fish, which must be kept in their own bowl, are to be transferred to the tie for a night on the town. An opening at the tie's top and the aerator clipped to the owner's belt or placed in the back pocket keep the fish alive.

"Once a night I'll change the water if I wear it from 5 at night to 2 in the morning. My body temperature gets real hot so I'll go in the bathroom and change half the water.

"You also have to remember to feed them in the morning or late at night when you get home so they don't go to the bathroom in the tie," he said.

THERE ARE OTHER drawbacks to the fish tie. Fisher's neck sometimes aches from the tie, which is attached by Velcro strips and weighs about ½ pound. Excited admirers often squeeze the tie, squirting cold water out of the top and onto Fisher's shirt. The same thing happens when driving over bumps.

"When I wear this tie everyone wants to talk to me," said Fisher, who loves the attention. "I'm hoarse by the end of the night. People want to know where did I get the tie? How do the fish breathe? What are their names?

"I'll be in a restaurant and people will call me over and say, 'Let's see your tie.' I tell them I'll come over — but only if they're not ordering seafood."

Old mechanical wristwatches newest fashion

By ROBIN and
PATRICIA HARRIS
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The final touch of elegance for the well-dressed gentleman of today is very likely to be an ancient mechanical wristwatch that must be wound every 24 hours and which has been lying unused and unwanted in a drawer for years.

The previous owner probably cast it aside in favor of one of the new, uncannily accurate electronic quartz models from Japan that have revolutionized watchmaking by automatically running a guaranteed five years on a tiny battery the size of a pea.

The aging, second-hand timepiece has suddenly become such a fashionable favorite that Sotheby's and Christie's, the two leading international fine arts houses, will each hold two auctions just for them in the coming year.

FOR ANYONE who doubts their amazing comeback in popularity, we cite this bit of evidence: On Oct. 28, Sotheby's had an auction at its New York show rooms for well-worn windup watches. The average selling price for the more than 200 pieces offered, many of them 30 to 40 years old, was between $3,000 and $4,000, roughly tripling their original value.

The total, exceeding even Sotheby's most optimistic advance estimates, came to nearly $1.1 million, an all-time world record for watch auctions, and it dramatically notified the industry that antiquated articles it had dismissed as obsolete were once more in great demand.

Even knowledgable jewelers are at a loss to understand how and why these hand-me-down relics have become so desired again, with absolutely no promotion efforts.

The trend has been rising quietly abroad for several years, but has only recently reached the American market. Dealers began to take notice after an exceptionally beautiful mechanical masterpiece from the prestigious Patek Phillipe firm brought the winning bid of $165,000 at a Christie auction in Geneva; another went for $77,000 in Milan.

FOR AN EXPLANATION of the reasons causing this old watch revival, we called on Daryn Schnipper, Sotheby's resident authority on the field of horologics, which is the correct word for instruments that keep track of the time of day.

"There is an obvious parallel with the interest in vintage automobiles, but there is also an important difference," says Ms. Schnipper.

"Except as ornate showpieces to be exhibited on special occasions, old cars, which are generally unsafe on public highways, have no intrinsic value. But a venerable wristwatch does much more than report the time, it also serves as striking and unusual jewelry.

"The people who are buying them for these high prices don't really care whether they are accurate to the split second, like the quartzes from Japan, and they certainly don't feel that a daily winding is too exhausting. They wear them as they would wear any other jewelry, for the attention it attracts.

"And I also believe there may be another factor involved, a subconscious resistance to the overly automated existence we live in today. Winding your watch every morning is a highly personal habit which almost makes your watch a part of your whole personality."

A RUMOR, later proven to be completely wrong, that the great old watchmakers in Geneva, watch capital of the world for centuries, were planning to discontinue traditional mechanical products and switch to the new electronic models is thought to be the spark that stimulated the revival of old pieces.

One of the oddities of the renaissance is that an ancient specimen is worth more if it is of stainless steel instead of gold.

"It is just because the top Geneva firms always made about 10 of gold for each one of steel, so the latter are very scarce and buyers prize them as conversation pieces." says Ms. Schnipper.

But the crowning paradox of this strange market is that the biggest, most avid auction customers are invariably Japanese, who launched the quartz revolution. They regard a well-aged Swiss model with a distinctive band as the ultimate in status symbols.

OUR ADVICE is to look around home and search for any heirloom variety wristwatch that might have been forgotten years ago. If it is in good running order and from a quality maker, take it to either Sotheby's or Christie's and they will include it in their next auctions, take a 15 percent commission and send you the rest of what it brings.

Those venerable timepieces are not being produced any more, and the best source for them is individuals who are willing to sell them.

At Sotheby's, the person to contact is Ms. Schnipper, 1334 York Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021, (212) 606-7000. At Christie's, it is Jonathon Snellenburg, 502 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, (212) 546-1000.

Boots still popular footwear

EL PASO (AP) — When the urban cowboy fashion craze rode off into the sunset, it apparently went barefooted, leaving behind a strong hankering for boots, the footwear of the West.

Boots are enjoying an enduring popularity in markets far beyond the Southwest, where the cowboy footgear is not a fashion, but a tradition, industry watchers say.

Boots were an integral part of the Western wear look made famous by the John Travolta-Debra Winger movie hit "Urban Cowboy." The fad faded, and many people hung up their Stetson hats and retired the wide belt with the big buckle. But they kept wearing the boots.

"In the urban cowboy era, you strolled out in a costume. That was very short-lived," said Frank Scivetti, vice president for sales and marketing of Justin Boot Co., a division of Fort Worth-based Justin Industries. "Now it's not uncommon for a man in a three-piece suit to be wearing a pair of boots."

Justin Industries, a conglomerate that also owns Nocona Boot Co., is one of the leaders in the high-quality, hand-crafted segment of the bootmaking trade. Its biggest competitor is Tony Lama Co. Inc., an El Paso family business that grew up to become a corporation with shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Justin and Tony Lama both limped through a sales decline starting three years ago, but executives of the two companies believe better days are ahead.

Lama now employs 850 people and had $67 million in sales in 1985. Ninety percent of the company's business is boots, but it also sells belts, wallets and other leather products.

The golden age for the two companies were the Western wear boom years of 1980-82. They both hired armies of workers, and Justin added Nocona to its holdings. Pressed to keep up with demand, both Justin and Tony Lama also built new plants in El Paso, the border town that is the capital of Western bootmaking.

"It probably wasn't a very bright thing to do, in retrospect," Scivetti said. "We're back down to our basic market, which is substantial."

There still are 16 boot manufacturers in El Paso, but employment, which peaked at 3,300 people in 1982, has stabilized at 1,300, just slightly less than the average of 10 years ago.

Hector Venegas, a labor market analyst for the Texas Employment Commission, said the urban cowboy fad introduced people in the Northeast and Midwest to the comfort and style of boots, and many have remained loyal to the cowboy footwear.

Prompt payment cures doctor's ailing books

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago, I clipped the enclosed column from my local newspaper. I have found it very relevant and I think that it needs to be rerun periodically. At times, I have enclosed copies of this column to patients who have been delinquent with their accounts, and while some have been understanding, others have drawn tremendous objection to receiving any kind of pressure to pay for services rendered.

Over the years, physician overhead has increased tremendously. My current overhead is close to $100,000 a year, and in addition, due to various circumstances, I render nearly $100,000 per year of free services or reductions in my fees. Nevertheless, I still have tremendous problems in getting patients to compensate me for my services, and I know that I am not alone, as nearly every physician has the same problem. Sign me ... AN M.D. WITH $154,000 ON THE BOOKS, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR DOCTOR: I'm glad you wrote. I liked this letter when I ran it in October of 1980, but I like it even more today. As a valentine to the many doctors and dentists who share the same leaky boat with you, I repeat it with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: As a physician, I know this problem is a genuine source of concern to almost every physician.

It may come as a surprise to many, but not all doctors are rich! Far from it. We have house and car payments to make, children to raise, and business expenses just like anyone else trying to make a living. Add to that the exorbitant premiums for malpractice insurance.

People wouldn't think of going to the grocery store, filling station or beauty parlor without cash, a check or credit card. But they come to their doctor's office and say, "Bill me," or, "My insurance company will take care of it."

Abby, some insurance companies wait 60 to 90 days (and longer) to pay a bill — assuming it's covered – and sometimes it's not covered!

Unfortunately, the doctor has to pay his rent, office help and family expenses within 30 days.

If after three or four months the doctor hasn't received a dime from the patient or his insurance company, it's customary for his office to phone the patient and request payment, whereupon the patient usually becomes highly indignant! This person would probably froth at the mouth should his paycheck be held up for one day! Yet, that's what the doctor's bill is — his paycheck.

It's unfair that the doctor is usually the last one to be paid, and sometimes he's not paid at all! Sign me ... AN M.D. WITH $35,000 ON THE BOOKS

DEAR M.D. I'm using your letter as a reminder to those who owe their physicians — and their dentists, too.

DEAR ABBY: My partner and I are expecting a baby in June. Since we are not a traditional married couple, it may not occur to our friends to give us a baby shower. Therefore, we are wondering if it would be acceptable for us to either ask a good friend to host it at our house (we would pay all expenses) or hers. Or would it be all right for us to host it ourselves? — EXPECTING IN OAKLAND

DEAR EXPECTING: It makes no difference whether the expectant parents are traditionally married or not. I see no acceptable way to ask for gifts or to host your own shower.

Floyd to compete in pageant

Angela Kaye Floyd, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy C. Floyd, will compete in the 1987 Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant Saturday at the Chapparal Center, Midland College Campus.

Participants must maintain a "B" or better average and be involved in a volunteer service, contributing 12 hours of time to a charitible organization.

Contestants are judged on scholastic achievement, volunteer service, interviews, speech or talent and form presentation.

The winner will recieve a $500 cash scholarship, portrait, official crown, sash and trophies plus an all-expense paid trip to state pageant in Dallas. At state, the winner will compete for over $3000 in cash and prizes plus an all-expense paid trip to the national pageant in Kansas City, where scholarships and prizes will total more than $70,000.

Miss Floyd is sponsored by Jimmie C. Floyd and Staley Operating Company.

Skiwear: Functional, fashionable

Hearst News Service

Neon colors, bold metallic appliques and leather-with-brass details are the hottest looks schussing down the slopes this season. But if these ski togs appear too pretty to be protective, look again — skiwear designers and manufacturers are zeroing in on details that make garments functional as well as fashionable.

Consider the double collars on one-piece suits. Stylish to be sure, yet the flashy collars provide a buffer against the cold and wind-blown snow. Then there are snazzy drop-shoulders and full-cut sleeves that allow for unrestricted arm movement. And the drawstring waists on one-piece suits facilitate quick adjustments.

On the coldest days, longer and roomier European-style jackets are ideal, since they provide greater coverage and warmth. Parkas frequently feature zip-off sleeves; this double-duty detailing allows a jacket to become a vest during warmer conditions. Zipper-covering windflaps, in sporty designs, bolster insulation when the temperature drops. And while colorful two-tone stitching on ski clothes is certainly a fashion statement, it also acts as reinforcement.

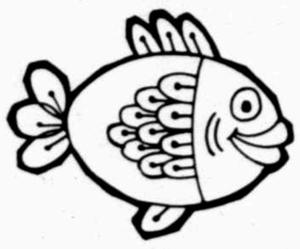
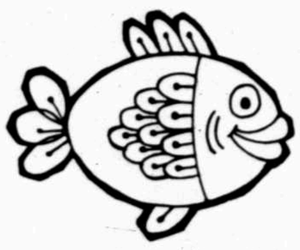
'Unique' inventor designs men's neckwear with difference

By NORMA MEYER
Copley News Service





LOS ANGELES — It happens a lot to Gary Fisher. He'll be in the bathroom of a posh restaurant, minding his own business, when a stranger notices splashing in his tie.

"The guy catches something out of the corner of his eye," Fisher said. "Ten minutes later, I'll be back at my table and the guy will come up to me and say, 'My wife and friend don't believe me but I saw a goldfish in your tie.' I've had people win bets."

Fisher, a 36-year-old former schoolteacher who has designed three-dimensional ties for Stevie Wonder and NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff, has had worse experiences with his live goldfish neckwear.

"Once I wore the tie to a sushi bar and the cooks freaked out," said Fisher.

To understand about Fisher's ties, one first has to meet their curious creator. A visit to the designer's home is a claustrophobic trip into sensory overload, a bombardment of trinkets and gadgets that close in from every direction.

Fisher, who dresses like a walking rainbow, invents and lives in a small rented guest house, a cramped home choking with collections of toy cars, flamingos, novelty sunglasses, porcelain plates, decoy ducks and assorted knickknacks — all covered, he noted, with 10 years of dust.

EVERY PIECE of furniture and most of the floor are smothered in toys, plastic dinosaurs, picture frames, shells, sculptures, masks, political buttons and Gumbys. A 20-inch-wide path is left for walking and for eating meals. Visitors must leave large coats and bags at the door to lessen the chance of knocking something over. Fisher's cataract-plagued dog, Cheetah, makes for some nervous moments.

"It's ridiculous. I can't even sit on the couch," said Fisher, who prefers calling himself unique as opposed to eccentric.

Every inch of the kitchen — countertops and stove included — is layered with shells, magnets and bric-a-brac. A space the size of a foot has been cleared on the floor so Fisher can plant his foot and lean toward the refrigerator. The bathroom is inundated with shells, old dusty magazines and bottles, while dozens of tiny mermaids and hula girls make their home on the sink. For sleeping, Fisher has cleared a body-size space on his bed that is also covered with collectibles. Lights must be turned on during the day because kites, stained glass and pictures hang from all windows and block the sunlight.

"I exist. I don't live," said Fisher, who seems to revel in the chaos.

Out of this madness, Fisher, fed up with working for an architectural design firm, launched his own line of ties, oh-so California-style.

"I want to be different," said the Los Angeles native, wearing lavender pants and pastel-striped shoes. "If everyone is drinking Perrier water, I won't drink Perrier water. If everyone is roller-skating, I won't roller-skate. I set the trends."

ENCASED IN clear plastic and generally sold for $35 apiece out of his home, Fisher's dozens of ties have included one for dentists (with a miniature bottle of mouthwash, dental floss, mouth mirror and toothbrush); photographers (with miniature camera, slide, film and photo); a Dr. Ruth tie (decorated with contraceptives); a musician's version (Stevie Wonder's publicist ordered one with a miniature musical score sheet, sunglasses, harmonica and tiny record album); a Hollywood variation (such as a gift ordered for Tartikoff with a tiny television set, NBC logo and slate board).

"It's a walking advertisement," Fisher said, adding that a dentist attracted a family of clients when they noticed his tie at a restaurant.

His tie is good to wear at work because if you splash blood or saliva, you just wipe it off, he noted.

But the most outrageous is the goldfish variety, which for $95 comes with a battery-powered aerator, two fish, fish food, a lifetime guarantee against springing a leak and a half hour's worth of verbal instruction.

Talk show emcee Tom Snyder wore the tie on an all-animal television show after Fisher contacted producers. But Fisher still hopes to see his wares on the Johnny Carson or David Letterman shows.

The fish, which must be kept in their own bowl, are to be transferred to the tie for a night on the town. An opening at the tie's top and the aerator clipped to the owner's belt or placed in the back pocket keep the fish alive.

"Once a night I'll change the water if I wear it from 5 at night to 2 in the morning. My body temperature gets real hot so I'll go in the bathroom and change half the water.

"You also have to remember to feed them in the morning or late at night when you get home so they don't go to the bathroom in the tie," he said.

THERE ARE OTHER drawbacks to the fish tie. Fisher's neck sometimes aches from the tie, which is attached by Velcro strips and weighs about ½ pound. Excited admirers often squeeze the tie, squirting cold water out of the top and onto Fisher's shirt. The same thing happens when driving over bumps.

"When I wear this tie everyone wants to talk to me," said Fisher, who loves the attention. "I'm hoarse by the end of the night. People want to know where did I get the tie? How do the fish breathe? What are their names?

"I'll be in a restaurant and people will call me over and say, 'Let's see your tie.' I tell them I'll come over — but only if they're not ordering seafood."

Old mechanical wristwatches newest fashion

By ROBIN and
PATRICIA HARRIS
Hearst News Service

NEW YORK — The final touch of elegance for the well-dressed gentleman of today is very likely to be an ancient mechanical wristwatch that must be wound every 24 hours and which has been lying unused and unwanted in a drawer for years.

The previous owner probably cast it aside in favor of one of the new, uncannily accurate electronic quartz models from Japan that have revolutionized watchmaking by automatically running a guaranteed five years on a tiny battery the size of a pea.

The aging, second-hand timepiece has suddenly become such a fashionable favorite that Sotheby's and Christie's, the two leading international fine arts houses, will each hold two auctions just for them in the coming year.

FOR ANYONE who doubts their amazing comeback in popularity, we cite this bit of evidence: On Oct. 28, Sotheby's had an auction at its New York show rooms for well-worn windup watches. The average selling price for the more than 200 pieces offered, many of them 30 to 40 years old, was between $3,000 and $4,000, roughly tripling their original value.

The total, exceeding even Sotheby's most optimistic advance estimates, came to nearly $1.1 million, an all-time world record for watch auctions, and it dramatically notified the industry that antiquated articles it had dismissed as obsolete were once more in great demand.

Even knowledgable jewelers are at a loss to understand how and why these hand-me-down relics have become so desired again, with absolutely no promotion efforts.

The trend has been rising quietly abroad for several years, but has only recently reached the American market. Dealers began to take notice after an exceptionally beautiful mechanical masterpiece from the prestigious Patek Phillipe firm brought the winning bid of $165,000 at a Christie auction in Geneva; another went for $77,000 in Milan.

FOR AN EXPLANATION of the reasons causing this old watch revival, we called on Daryn Schnipper, Sotheby's resident authority on the field of horologics, which is the correct word for instruments that keep track of the time of day.

"There is an obvious parallel with the interest in vintage automobiles, but there is also an important difference," says Ms. Schnipper.

"Except as ornate showpieces to be exhibited on special occasions, old cars, which are generally unsafe on public highways, have no intrinsic value. But a venerable wristwatch does much more than report the time, it also serves as striking and unusual jewelry.

"The people who are buying them for these high prices don't really care whether they are accurate to the split second, like the quartzes from Japan, and they certainly don't feel that a daily winding is too exhausting. They wear them as they would wear any other jewelry, for the attention it attracts.

"And I also believe there may be another factor involved, a subconscious resistance to the overly automated existence we live in today. Winding your watch every morning is a highly personal habit which almost makes your watch a part of your whole personality."

A RUMOR, later proven to be completely wrong, that the great old watchmakers in Geneva, watch capital of the world for centuries, were planning to discontinue traditional mechanical products and switch to the new electronic models is thought to be the spark that stimulated the revival of old pieces.

One of the oddities of the renaissance is that an ancient specimen is worth more if it is of stainless steel instead of gold.

"It is just because the top Geneva firms always made about 10 of gold for each one of steel, so the latter are very scarce and buyers prize them as conversation pieces." says Ms. Schnipper.

But the crowning paradox of this strange market is that the biggest, most avid auction customers are invariably Japanese, who launched the quartz revolution. They regard a well-aged Swiss model with a distinctive band as the ultimate in status symbols.

OUR ADVICE is to look around home and search for any heirloom variety wristwatch that might have been forgotten years ago. If it is in good running order and from a quality maker, take it to either Sotheby's or Christie's and they will include it in their next auctions, take a 15 percent commission and send you the rest of what it brings.

Those venerable timepieces are not being produced any more, and the best source for them is individuals who are willing to sell them.

At Sotheby's, the person to contact is Ms. Schnipper, 1334 York Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021, (212) 606-7000. At Christie's, it is Jonathon Snellenburg, 502 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022, (212) 546-1000.

Boots still popular footwear

EL PASO (AP) — When the urban cowboy fashion craze rode off into the sunset, it apparently went barefooted, leaving behind a strong hankering for boots, the footwear of the West.

Boots are enjoying an enduring popularity in markets far beyond the Southwest, where the cowboy footgear is not a fashion, but a tradition, industry watchers say.

Boots were an integral part of the Western wear look made famous by the John Travolta-Debra Winger movie hit "Urban Cowboy." The fad faded, and many people hung up their Stetson hats and retired the wide belt with the big buckle. But they kept wearing the boots.

"In the urban cowboy era, you strolled out in a costume. That was very short-lived," said Frank Scivetti, vice president for sales and marketing of Justin Boot Co., a division of Fort Worth-based Justin Industries. "Now it's not uncommon for a man in a three-piece suit to be wearing a pair of boots."

Justin Industries, a conglomerate that also owns Nocona Boot Co., is one of the leaders in the high-quality, hand-crafted segment of the bootmaking trade. Its biggest competitor is Tony Lama Co. Inc., an El Paso family business that grew up to become a corporation with shares traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Justin and Tony Lama both limped through a sales decline starting three years ago, but executives of the two companies believe better days are ahead.

Lama now employs 850 people and had $67 million in sales in 1985. Ninety percent of the company's business is boots, but it also sells belts, wallets and other leather products.

The golden age for the two companies were the Western wear boom years of 1980-82. They both hired armies of workers, and Justin added Nocona to its holdings. Pressed to keep up with demand, both Justin and Tony Lama also built new plants in El Paso, the border town that is the capital of Western bootmaking.

"It probably wasn't a very bright thing to do, in retrospect," Scivetti said. "We're back down to our basic market, which is substantial."

There still are 16 boot manufacturers in El Paso, but employment, which peaked at 3,300 people in 1982, has stabilized at 1,300, just slightly less than the average of 10 years ago.

Hector Venegas, a labor market analyst for the Texas Employment Commission, said the urban cowboy fad introduced people in the Northeast and Midwest to the comfort and style of boots, and many have remained loyal to the cowboy footwear.

Prompt payment cures doctor's ailing books

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago, I clipped the enclosed column from my local newspaper. I have found it very relevant and I think that it needs to be rerun periodically. At times, I have enclosed copies of this column to patients who have been delinquent with their accounts, and while some have been understanding, others have drawn tremendous objection to receiving any kind of pressure to pay for services rendered.

Over the years, physician overhead has increased tremendously. My current overhead is close to $100,000 a year, and in addition, due to various circumstances, I render nearly $100,000 per year of free services or reductions in my fees. Nevertheless, I still have tremendous problems in getting patients to compensate me for my services, and I know that I am not alone, as nearly every physician has the same problem. Sign me ... AN M.D. WITH $154,000 ON THE BOOKS, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR DOCTOR: I'm glad you wrote. I liked this letter when I ran it in October of 1980, but I like it even more today. As a valentine to the many doctors and dentists who share the same leaky boat with you, I repeat it with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: As a physician, I know this problem is a genuine source of concern to almost every physician.

It may come as a surprise to many, but not all doctors are rich! Far from it. We have house and car payments to make, children to raise, and business expenses just like anyone else trying to make a living. Add to that the exorbitant premiums for malpractice insurance.

People wouldn't think of going to the grocery store, filling station or beauty parlor without cash, a check or credit card. But they come to their doctor's office and say, "Bill me," or, "My insurance company will take care of it."

Abby, some insurance companies wait 60 to 90 days (and longer) to pay a bill — assuming it's covered — and sometimes it's not covered!

Unfortunately, the doctor has to pay his rent, office help and family expenses within 30 days.

If after three or four months the doctor hasn't received a dime from the patient or his insurance company, it's customary for his office to phone the patient and request payment, whereupon the patient usually becomes highly indignant! This person would probably froth at the mouth should his paycheck be held up for one day! Yet, that's what the doctor's bill is — his paycheck.

It's unfair that the doctor is usually the last one to be paid, and sometimes he's not paid at all! Sign me ... AN M.D. WITH $35,000 ON THE BOOKS

DEAR M.D. I'm using your letter as a reminder to those who owe their physicians — and their dentists, too.

DEAR ABBY: My partner and I are expecting a baby in June. Since we are not a traditional married couple, it may not occur to our friends to give us a baby shower. Therefore, we are wondering if it would be acceptable for us to either ask a good friend to host it at our house (we would pay all expenses) or hers. Or would it be all right for us to host it ourselves? — EXPECTING IN OAKLAND

DEAR EXPECTING: It makes no difference whether the expectant parents are traditionally married or not. I see no acceptable way to ask for gifts or to host your own shower.

Floyd to compete in pageant

Angela Kaye Floyd, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy C. Floyd, will compete in the 1987 Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant Saturday at the Chapparal Center, Midland College Campus.

Participants must maintain a "B" or better average and be involved in a volunteer service, contributing 12 hours of time to a charitible organization.

Contestants are judged on scholastic achievement, volunteer service, interviews, speech or talent and form presentation.

The winner will recieve a $500 cash scholarship, portrait, official crown, sash and trophies plus an all-expense paid trip to state pageant in Dallas. At state, the winner will compete for over $3000 in cash and prizes plus an all-expense paid trip to the national pageant in Kansas City, where scholarships and prizes will total more than $70,000.

Miss Floyd is sponsored by Jimmie C. Floyd and Staley Operating Company.

Skiwear: Functional, fashionable

Hearst News Service

Neon colors, bold metallic appliques and leather-with-brass details are the hottest looks schussing down the slopes this season. But if these ski togs appear too pretty to be protective, look again — skiwear designers and manufacturers are zeroing in on details that make garments functional as well as fashionable.

Consider the double collars on one-piece suits. Stylish to be sure, yet the flashy collars provide a buffer against the cold and wind-blown snow. Then there are snazzy drop-shoulders and full-cut sleeves that allow for unrestricted arm movement. And the drawstring waists on one-piece suits facilitate quick adjustments.

On the coldest days, longer and roomier European-style jackets are ideal, since they provide greater coverage and warmth. Parkas frequently feature zip-off sleeves; this double-duty detailing allows a jacket to become a vest during warmer conditions. Zipper-covering windflaps, in sporty designs, bolster insulation when the temperature drops. And while colorful two-tone stitching on ski clothes is certainly a fashion statement, it also acts as reinforcement.

Envoy's try at restoring U.S.-Arab relations may be impossible

By ED BLANCHE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Following secret arms shipments to Iran, U.S. envoy Richard W. Murphy faces a major task in restoring Washington's credibility with the United States' Arab friends when he visits the region this week.

Murphy has scheduled stops in Egypt and Jordan as well as Israel. But the trip may be a mission impossible.

As supporters of Iraq in its war against Iran, Egypt and Jordan were embarrassed by disclosures that Washington sent weapons to Iran and that Israel was involved.

The moderates fear the scandal has made America's word so unbelievable that it could harm chances for reviving the Middle East peace process.

With America's traditional Arab allies feeling betrayed, most officials and commentators in the Arab world believe Murphy's Mideast swing will do little beyond wave the flag and seek to contain the damage.

An analysis

"The American administration is only out to shore up its credibility, which has received a severe setback as a result of the sinister (arms) affair," said a Kuwait-based Arab diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In the eyes of many Arab moderates, U.S. credibility already had been sliding since the failure of Washington's peacekeeping effort in Lebanon in 1983 and the Reagan administration's inability to break the deadlocked Arab-Israeli peace process.

Arab trust also was dented by Washington's reluctance to provide Jordan, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia with weapons they wanted last year.

The peace process has been stalled for two years. There has been little apparent initiative from Washington to rekindle it in the face of Arab rifts deepened by the Iran-Iraq war.

Egyptian and Jordan officials declined comment on Murphy's visit.

But Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak told Cairo's al-Ahram daily Dec. 3: "I expect grave consequences in the Middle East because of the disclosure that the arms deal has enabled countries unfriendly to the United States to work actively against her, and double the dangers threatening the area.

"I hope something could be done in the very near future so as to maintain (U.S.) credibility because I'm afraid it's started to deteriorate."

King Hussein of Jordan expressed shock over the Iran disclosures. Sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said he was particularly bitter because he played a prominent role in Operation Staunch, a U.S. effort to persuade other countries to stop arms sales to Iran.

The Middle East Economic Survey, a respected weekly newsletter, said Arab moderates feel stranded.

"The general sentiment in the region is of vacuum and uncertainty emanating from Washington, magnifying the state of unsettlement and flux in which the area is already suspended."

It said that with the Reagan administration so deeply plunged into self-examination following the clandestine arms deal, "the pursuit of any remotely controversial foreign policy initiative would appear unlikely."

The Israelis, too, see little prospect of Murphy's visit producing any significant breakthrough.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said last week: "If there was any real chance for a political breakthrough, we would see (Secretary of State) George Shultz here."

Former Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban noted Dec. 30 in The New York Times: "If 1987 is to be a year of American paralysis, it is unlikely to be a year of Middle Eastern negotiations."

The ascension to the prime ministry last October by Yitzhak Shamir of Israel's right-wing Likud bloc also may make Murphy's task more difficult.

Shamir has been less flexible than his predecessor, Shimon Peres, on key issues such as a role in peace talks for the Palestine Liberation Organization. Both Egypt and Jordan insist on PLO involvement.

The Arab moderates' dilemma was brought into sharp focus by an upsurge of violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of Jordan and the Gaza Strip last month.

The U.S. decision to abstain, rather than veto, a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the Israeli army's action against Palestinian demonstrators was seen as an attempt by Washington to soothe the moderates.

In an apparent bid to patch things up with Egypt, the United States last month offered after two years of refusals to refinance Cairo's $4.5 billion military debt. Egypt, hard hit by economic problems, has had difficulty making the $500 million annual interest payments.

Washington's offer to cut the interest rate from 14 percent to 7⅛ percent would save Cairo $225 million a year for each of the next four years. But Mubarak said Monday he was not satisfied with the U.S. offer.

Navy ship fired on in Persian Gulf

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — A U.S. Navy helicopter was fired on Monday by a merchant ship in the southern Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said. The helicopter took evasive action and was not hit.

The incident, which officials said was the first time in memory that American forces had been fired on in the region, occurred as the helicopter, based on the destroyer O'Bannon, was conducting routine operations over the gulf.

The identity and country of registry of the merchant ship, which fired a surface-to-air missile at the helicopter, are not known, according to a Pentagon statement. The Defense Department said it was investigating the incident.

The helicopter, an SH-2 used for antisubmarine warfare, saw the missile coming and moved out of the way, the Pentagon said. The missile missed by about 500 yards. The helicopter was about three miles from the merchant ship when the missile was fired and was about 38 miles from its mother ship.

AP Lasergraphic

A Pentagon official said the helicopter did not identify itself to the merchant ship, either before or after the shooting. After the shooting, the O'Bannon tried unsuccessfully to hail the ship and to pursue it.

It is not uncommon for merchant ships in transit to and from Iran or Iraq to be attacked in the Persian Gulf, including by helicopters, the official said. The merchant ship may have thought it was being attacked, he said.

Although the Navy helicopter was armed with torpedos, it would not have responded to the attack by shooting back under these circumstances, the official said.

The O'Bannon is one of five Navy ships assigned to the Middle East Force, which has the Persian Gulf region as one of its operating areas. The ships often watch over American merchant ships in the gulf. In one episode last May, one of the Navy ships warned off an Iranian vessel that was approaching an American merchant ship, fearing the Iranians were planning to come alongside and inspect the American vessel.

London bridge 'section' comes falling down

LONDON (AP) — Part of a London bridge came tumbling down when it was whacked by a tall crane on a barge, forcing authorities to close the busy span across the River Thames to traffic for nine hours until early today.

The collision Monday afternoon knocked an eight-foot section of paneling from the bridge into the cold water.

A police statement today said temporary repairs were made. It said damage was limited to the fiber glass and reinforced steel structures around the bridge's pedestrian walkways, which were cracked or pushed in.

Earlier, Assistant Bridgemaster Keith Bywater said the bridge was closed because it was feared loose parts from the walkways might fall onto the road section of the bridge below.

Closure of the century-old, Gothic-looking span near the Tower of London caused heavy traffic jams Monday in the City of London, as the capital's financial district on the north bank of the Thames is known. Traffic normally loops around the Tower of London to cross the bridge.

"We're not even letting dogs walk across," said a policeman trying to deal with the knots of traffic.

The road section of the bridge was raised to let the barge, the Sampson III, pass upstream at about 5 p.m. Monday, but the jib of the crane hit the bridge's pedestrian walkways high overhead.

Alan Walburn, a porter in an apartment building on the south bank of the river, said he heard loud noises as the jib scraped the walkways, which link the bridge's two towers 141 feet above water level.

The impact knocked an eight-foot section of paneling from one of the walkways into the Thames, he said.

Police said they interviewed the crew of the Sampson III and sent a report to the Port of London Authority, the state-owned body responsible for Thames shipping.

They said the collision caused the jib of the crane to collapse onto the barge's stern, causing damage but no injuries.

Ill-fated airline had several problems

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — A Brazilian jetliner that crashed into a forest near Abidjan had mechanical and other problems on its next-to-last flight, passengers and an airline source said Monday.

Only two of the 51 people aboard the Boeing 707 survived the crash Saturday.

An official of the airline, Varig, said the flight recorders had been found and were in the hands of the Ivorian Civil Aviation Department. He said they would be examined Tuesday.

A Varig source told The Associated Press a mechanic for another airline made repairs on the plane shortly before it left this West African capital Saturday on the return flight to Rio de Janeiro. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said she did not know the exact nature of the problem or repairs.

Antonio Jose Schittini Pinto, the company official leading Varig's investigation, said he did not know of significant problems with the aircraft. He said in a telephone interview that it was examined before takeoff and would not have been permitted to leave if anything serious had been found.

The pilot told the control tower soon after taking off early Saturday that he had engine problems. He reported later that one engine was afire and he was trying to dump fuel before returning to the airport.

Officials of the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board were scheduled to conduct an investigation here. The U.S. Embassy said representatives of Boeing and of Pratt and Whitney, which made the engines, were accompanying the team.

A Varig spokesman in Rio, Marcelo Correia Lima, said the plane was believed to have been in "perfect condition" and the flight time of 15,698 hours since its last overhaul two years ago was well within Boeing's recommended limit of 18,000.

Varig bought the jet in November 1968 and had sold it to the Brazilian air force for delivery this year, Lima said. He added that it had been flown a total of 56,632 hours with 14,806 landings and takeoffs.

John Diffenderfer, an American businessman based in Abidjan who arrived Friday on the Varig jet, said the departure from Rio was delayed more than an hour because of problems that were not specified.

He also said personnel of Air Afrique told him the plane had problems landing in Abidjan. Air Afrique handles most operations at Abidjan airport.

One of those killed in the crash was an American, Stanley Cleveland, identified by Abidjan business sources as the head of a privately owned steel company named Societe Togolaise de Siderurgie in nearby Togo.

A pamphlet distributed by the company said he had been a career diplomat in the U.S. foreign service for 27 years.

Soviets conclude anti-drug operation — 'Poppy '86'

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities have concluded an anti-narcotics operation codenamed "Poppy 86" that resulted in more than 4,000 arrests and the destruction of thousands of acres of illegal crops, Pravda reported today.

The Communist Party daily, as part of a campaign against illegal narcotics, published a long interview in which Interior Minister Alexander V. Vlasov answered questions from newspaper readers on the drug problem.

For decades, the Kremlin refused to acknowledge the existence of drug addiction in the Soviet Union, saying it was a phenomenon peculiar to capitalism.

But Vlasov, who oversees the uniformed police, said this long "silence about the extreme danger of drug addiction blunted social vigilance, deflected the attention of the militia, medical profession, society, families and schools. Willingly or unwillingly, this eased its spread."

Narcotics and addiction have been given greater attention in the official press under Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, part of his policy of increased openness on selected social themes.

As a result, Vlasov said, law enforcement agencies launched a major campaign against drug production and trafficking.

Previous press reports have said Soviet drug users consume mainly products from poppies — such as opium and heroin — as well as hashish and various types of marijuana that grow wild or are cultivated in southern regions.

'87 marks Year of Rabbit

PEKING (AP) — This is the Year of the Rabbit and hundreds of people lined up at post offices Monday to buy the annual commemorative stamp, the official news agency Xinhua reported.

China has issued a stamp for each of the last eight lunar years, and Xinhua said they have become very popular with the nation's many stamp collectors.

The lunar calendar has 12 years, each with an animal symbol.

"I came at three this morning only to find 40 people already waiting here," Xinhua quoted 16-year-old student Huang Guoqiang as saying in one post office line.

It said some queues were more than 400 yards long by 7 a.m.

Cyclone batters islands

MORONI, Comoro Republic (AP) — A weekend cyclone battered the Comoro Islands in the Indian Ocean and left dozens of people missing, thousands homeless and caused major damage, the Interior Ministry said Monday.

It gave no precise figures, but 24 people were reported missing in the devastated village of Mboingoma on Moheli island, and residents said many fishermen at sea when the cyclone struck early Sunday have not been accounted for.

The Interior Ministry estimated damage at tens of millions of dollars.

On Grand Comoro island, many villages were destroyed, with homes, schools and medical centers blown down by winds reaching 93 mph that were accompanied by violent rain, it said.

The storm still was in the region and was a danger to the four islands off the southeast African coast.

Libyan pilot down in Sicily

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — A Libyan pilot made an emergency landing at the Sigonella NATO base in Sicily when his twin-engine airplane nearly ran out of fuel, the Italian news agency ANSA reported Monday.

The pilot, who was not identified, told authorities he was flying to England to see his mother Sunday when was forced to radio the military base for permission to land because his Cessna 172 was nearly out of gasoline, ANSA said.

Magistrates in Catania and Siracusa were investigating the incident, the agency said. Sigonella, a North Atlantic Treaty Organization air base, is between the two eastern Sicilian coastal cities.

He was being held Monday by Catania police, ANSA said.

More than 200 new Nazi war crime suspects may be found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An official of the Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies says he has discovered more than 200 new Nazi war crime suspects by reviewing confidential World War II immigration files compiled by international relief agencies.

Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the center, predicted the documents would yield many more suspected Nazi war criminals, including a large list of people living in the United States.

The documents, some held by the International Red Cross, had been kept secret to protect the privacy of refugees, Hier said Monday.

The files were obtained about three months ago, the rabbi said. Since then, he said, the Wiesenthal Center has notified governments of at least seven nations of suspected war criminals living within their boundaries. He said the files disclosed 17 suspected war criminals living in Britain, 50 in Australia, 44 in West Germany, 26 in Canada, 13 in Sweden, three in Venezuela and one, a Treblinka death camp guard, living in Brazil.

Hier did not provide a complete breakdown of the 200 figure.

"In about two weeks we expect to produce a large list of those in the United States," Hier said before a news conference.

Red Cross spokesman Gene Jeffers in Washington said he was seeking comment from the International Red Cross in Geneva, Switzerland.

West German Justice Ministry spokesman Juergen Schmid confirmed receipt of the list.

"We received it on Friday afternoon," Schmid said, adding that Chancellor Helmut Kohl's office also had received a copy.

"We are already checking it. After our check has been completed we will send the names to the appropriate prosecutors' offices for further investigation," Schmid told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

He said the names on the list also would be furnished to the Nazi Documentation Center in Ludwigsburg.

NATION IN BRIEF

President pleased by rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was described as pleased by a rally of conservative supporters who denounced liberals and the news media over the Iran-Contra affair.

The rally Monday across the street from the White House drew about 200 people, including White House Communications Director Patrick J. Buchanan, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Education Secretary William Bennett.

"The liberals could not beat this president in two free and fair elections, and they're not going to bring him down with a media scavenger hunt," Buchanan said at the rally.

"The problem isn't Ronald Reagan giving arms to Iran," said Kemp, a likely presidential contender in 1988. "The real problem is the liberals giving aid and comfort to the Sandinista government."

James Carey, vice chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission, told the group, "I've had enough of an unelected, power-hungry news media trying to force their views down our throats."

Raw milk sales banned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled that raw milk is unsafe for humans to drink and banned interstate sales of unpasteurized milk, while leaving it for states to decide how to regulate the product within their borders.

The decision by U.S. District Judge Norma H. Johnson, according to background documents in the case, apparently would affect interstate sales of only one major dairy, Alta-Dena in Los Angeles, believed to be the last in the nation to market raw, or unpasteurized milk or milk products.

The court's order, filed Dec. 31, follows a long legal battle by Public Citizen, a self-styled consumer lobby, to ban all sales of raw milk.

According to Sidney M. Wolfe, a medical doctor and director of Public Citizen, more than 1,000 people have contracted serious diseases and 20 have died since 1980 because of consuming raw milk products, even though many states have banned their sale. The most dangerous infection associated with raw milk is called Salmonella Dublin.

Old policy to cover costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's hospital costs will be covered by a policy he received as governor of California, and if any expenses are left over, he will pay for them himself, a spokesman said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that Bethesda Naval Hospital would charge Reagan the standard interagency rate paid by members of Congress and the Cabinet and other government officials.

Reagan underwent a prostate operation and is expected to be released in a few days.

Speakes said he didn't know exactly how much Reagan's bill would be, but when the president was hospitalized in August, 1985, and had colon cancer surgery, it came to $423 a day.

Speakes said the president's bill will be paid first from the Blue Cross-Blue Shield policy of the California Legislature's retirement system, which he joined when he was governor of California.

Truck owners to get break

WASHINGTON (AP) — An automotive safety group asked Ford Motor Co. to offer extended warranties and compensation to owners of Courier trucks imported from Mazda Motor Corp. to cover problems with blown head gaskets.

About 46 percent of the 330,000 Couriers sold in the United States from 1978 to 1982 have engines built by Mazda, according to John King, a manager in Ford's parts and service division.

The private Center for Auto Safety sent a letter to Ford Chairman Donald Peterson asking the company to offer a plan matching the one Mazda provides on its comparable model, the B2000.

PUBLIC NOTICE
REQUEST FOR PROPOSAL

Midland County is soliciting proposals from qualified individuals or firms for engineering services required by the County for implementation of a community development project under the Texas Community Development Program (TCDP) funded by the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA).

Proposals will be considered by the County Commissioners at a meeting to be held at the Midland County Courthouse. In order to be considered, proposals must be submitted prior to 5 p.m. on January 19, 1987. Midland County reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

Upon receipt, all proposals will be thoroughly evaluated by the County. Once this evaluation has been completed, all responsible offers will be placed in rank order. All offers will be notified of this ranking and of the County's intent to initiate negotiations with its first choice. Should negotiations with the County's first choice fail to produce a satisfactory agreement, all negotiations with the first choice will be terminated and the County's second choice will be notified and so on. These procedures will be followed until a satisfactory agreement in contract has been approved and executed.

Proposals should include a statement of the engineering firm's qualifications to provide the required services, resumes of key personel in the firm, and a list of client references, particularly with reagard to this type of public facilities project. Midland County will be constructing water works improvements with its 1986 TCDP grant funds.

Factors to be considered in selection of an engineering firm are as follows:
1. Previous experience in providing engineering services for public facilities project in Midland County;
2. Previous experience in providing engineering services for similar projects for other cities and/or counties;
3. Qualifications of key personel to be assigned to this TCDP project;
4. The engineer's ability to furnish adequate professional liability insurance for this project; and
5. The engineer's ability to furnish the services of a Resident Project Representative to observe construction of this project.

Please submit proposals to the following address:
The Honorable Wm. B. Ahders
County Judge, Midland County
P.O. Box 421
Midland, Texas 79702
