Group threatens to kill hostages if U.S. attacks

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground group today threatened to kill three American hostages and one Indian hostage if U.S. forces attack Lebanon.

The threat came in a handwritten Arabic statement from Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine that was delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency. The previously unknown group issued a statement Wednesday claiming it kidnapped the four teachers.

The statement issued today was accompanied by a photograph of hostage Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City. The photograph showed Polhill with two sub-machine guns pointed at his head.

The Pentagon announced earlier this week it had postponed indefinitely the departure for home from the Mediterranean of the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy and her 11-ship battle group. Another carrier, the USS Nimitz, which had been scheduled to relieve the Kennedy, is also operating in the Mediterranean.

The Pentagon gave no reason for the change in plans. But informed sources who requested anonymity said the Reagan administration decided it should keep two carriers in the Mediterranean in light of the wave of hostage-taking in Lebanon.

Today's statement said: "After it was ascertained for us that the United States harbors the intention to attack Lebanon with the help of other Western nations, the Islamic Jihad Organization for the Liberation of Palestine declares it will execute the four American hostages as an initial countermeasure upon the occurance of this aggresssion. Other operations will follow in adequate places."

The Indian hostage is a resident in the United States but not a U.S. citizen.

Angry students from Beirut University College, where the four were teachers, burned tires and blocked traffic in west Beirut today to protest the abductions, which took place Saturday at the school.

The Wednesday statement said the four were taken because they were carrying out "American intrigues."

The Anglican Church, meanwhile, received assurances that envoy Terry Waite is safe and continuing his mission to win freedom for hostages. But Waite's wife and other close relatives said they remain concerned about his safety because of his absence and prolonged failure to contact relatives or church officials.

Also Wednesday, the U.S. State Department announced restrictions on travel to Lebanon to force U.S. citizens to leave the country. The estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Lebanon will be given 30 days to leave before their passports become invalid.

Conditions in Lebanon have become so chaotic, with the abduction of 11 foreigners in the past two weeks, that no Americans can be considered safe in Lebanon, the U.S. government said.

Of 26 foreigners missing in Lebanon, eight are Americans. One of them, Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent Terry A. Anderson, has been held nearly two years.

Waite was last seen in publicly Jan. 20 when he left his Beirut hotel to negotiate with the Shiite Moslem group Islamic Jihad, believed to hold Anderson and American education Thomas Sutherland.

Concern for Waite's welfare had been building, especially after a Kuwaiti news agency report the kidnappers put Waite under house arrest after negotiations bogged down.

But in a statement from London, the Church of England said late Wednesday that it had been reassured about Waite's well-being by leaders of the Druse community in Beirut who spoke with representatives of the Shiite community.

"They have now informed the archbishop's office in London that Mr. Waite is continuing his discussions and will return on the completion of his mission," the church said.

Waite's wife, Frances, said today she is still "very concerned" about her husband. "I sincerely hope all is well with him," she said in a statement issued in London.

And Waite's mother-in-law, Joan Watters, said late Wednesday she remains very worried. "I will not be happy until I see Terry in the flesh," she said from home in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

The four college instructors were kidnapped by gunmen posing as Lebanese police. Wednesday's statement said they were "conspirators under the pretext of education."

Battered women's center honors new facility

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

By August, the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children should have a new facility, it was announced Wednesday.

Since the nature of the center's work precludes the new location from being revealed, a "symbolic" groundbreaking was held and attended by more than 50 people.

Clemencia Prieta, the center's new executive director, thanked everyone who "provided a little money and support for the center." Ron Hanna, a former board member of the center, called the occasion a "great day in history for the Battered Women's Center."

A check for $450,000 from the Mabee Foundation was presented at the ceremony. The Davison Foundation donated $50,000 to the project, the City of Midland $75,000, and the Abell-Hanger Foundation donated funds for the operation of the center, according to Pam Williams, public relations director for the center.

"We have all of the funding for the building," Ms. Williams said. "We are asking now for organizations to donate funds to help decorate and furnish the facility."

Ms. Williams said the current center can hold 32 women and children, but she said 16 women and 37 children are now living there. The facility serves a 15-county area.

The new facility, which she said will be built on a site in the county purchased by the center, will have 16 bedrooms, counseling rooms, a conference room, day-care center, a playground in the center of the facility, and office space. Capacity of the new center will be 64 women and children.

The center provided shelter, food, transportation, legal assistance and counseling to 560 women and children in 1986, and hopes to be able to aid nearly 700 victims in 1987, Hanna said.

Ms. Williams said the center, which serves a population of 363,000, is funded by the United Way of Midland, United Way of Odessa, United Way of Andrews, Texas Department of Human Services, and the Texas Council on Alcoholism, and private donations.

Keith Jobe, board member and chairman of the center's building committee, presided at the ceremony.

Among other attendees were Mayor Carroll Thomas, County Commissioner Scott Welch, City Council member Robert Rendle, Wayne Merritt, president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, William Bell, project architect, Dave Leonard, project builder, Police Chief Richard Czech, Midland County Chief Deputy Jim Chancellor, and members of the M-Squad from the Chamber of Commerce.

Filipino government averts Marcos' homecoming

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said today it thwarted plans by deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos to return from his Hawaiian exile, and about 200 mutinous soldiers ended a rebellion they apparently staged to aid his return.

In an address broadcast live on government television, President Corazon Aquino said the mutineers' 61-hour seizure of a broadcast center was part of an attempted coup designed to block approval of her proposed constitution. She called the new charter "essential to the preservation of democracy in the Philippines."

"Here was a clear attempt to disrupt the first principle of democracy, which is civilian supremacy, by those specially charged with its preservation," she said in the speech 45 minutes after the rebellion ended.

A plebiscite scheduled Monday on the new constitution is considered the first electoral test of Mrs. Aquino's support since she was swept into office in a military-civilian uprising that ousted Marcos 11 months ago.

Mrs. Aquino sad she ordered that the military rebels be court-martialed and that the civilians who joined them be charged with rebellion. After several earlier coup attempts, she was criticized for leniency toward the participants.

Government spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Marcos' unauthorized plan to return to his homeland aboard a special plane was blocked by the Philippine consul general in Honolulu.

The announcement and Mrs. Aquino's speech appeared to mark the end to the most serious challenge to date against her government.

The rebellion began Tuesday when about 500 troops attempted to seize communications and military centers around Manila but were prevented by loyal government troops.

In Honolulu, an angry Marcos met with reporters at his home Wednesday night and said U.S. government officials had ordered him not to leave Hawaii for the Philippines.

"I feel that now I am being treated like a prisoner," Marcos said. "I will be prevented from boarding any plane for the Philippines." He said he wanted to go back because, "My country is in a crisis."

However, pressed about whether he had planned to return, he said, "I am aware of no such plan."

Trade Minister Jose Concepcion, interviewed from Manila on NBC's "Today" show, said the quashing of the coup attempt has strengthened Mrs. Aquino's hand.

"She's under firmer control of the country, and the coup (attempt) to a large extent has swung to her favor. It has brought more 'yes' votes," he said, referring to Monday's plebiscite.

Concepcion was asked if he believed Marcos was behind the coup attempt.

Midlander's Medal of Honor commemorated

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Of the 42 soldiers who won Congressional Medals of Honor for bravery in the Korean conflict, 12 are still alive.

Independent geologist George O'Brien Jr., a Midlander for the past 30 years, was a second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps when he received the medal, the highest award given to an American.

O'Brien won his after waging a brutal defense against the attacking enemies — which outnumbered his platoon — on an important hill position in Korea in 1952.

A plaque to honor this now-retired Marine, whose spirit the late President Dwight D. Eisnehower said "reflects the highest credit upon himself and enhances the finest traditions of the United States Naval Service," was given to the city Wednesday by the Houston Chapter of the First Marine Division Association.

Tears welled up in O'Brien's eyes as Brig. Gen. William H. Gossell, United States Marine Corps Reserve, reiterated Eisenhower's description of the night O'Brien, then 26, earned his medal.

The text of Eisenhower's citation explains that night in Korea.

Four-year-old speller 'too young' to represent school at contest

HOUSTON (AP) — A 4-year-old spelling whiz's hopes of being in his school's spelling bee were dashed after school officials said he was too young to compete.

Rohan Varavadekar has been busy memorizing words and winning competitions in anticipation of his school's spelling bee. He hoped to win it and go on to the national competition in Washington, D.C.

Where is that? "Way far away. Where presidents are," he said. "It's the capital of the United States."

But a second-grader was named winner of the competition Tuesday night.

"Last week, they (officials at the private school) told us we couldn't go to the final because he is too young for it," said his mother, Kranti Varavadekar. "I have no gripes about that, except that they let him win so much and get his hopes up."

But Betty Moore, principal of the non-denominational private school, said officials had told the parents from the beginning that because he is a pre-kindergarten pupil, Rohan was ineligible to compete beyond the school contest.

She said he has been allowed to take part in other contests just for the experience.

Among Rohan's repertoire are words such as abbreviate, Velcro, tholoid.

"That's my favorite," he said of the latter. "I don't know what it is. It's just so funny."

Rohan's homework is in a third grade-level reading and math book. He learns reading, math, Spanish and music.

His parents are hoping that he will be allowed to skip kindergarten and enter first grade, but they also worry he will miss his childhood if he advances too fast.

"At school, they give him extra work," Mrs. Varavadekar says. "The school is very good. He loves his teacher, and they are aware that he is gifted."

"We were only discouraged that he wasn't allowed to be in the spelling bee," said Rohan's father, Arvind, a Bechtel engineer who graduated from high school at 14.

The boy also speaks Marathi, a dialect of his parents' native India, and he has memorized the capitals of all 50 states.

"His memory is good," Mrs. Varavadekar said. "When he was 3, I would say prayers to God, and one day he said them with me. They were in Sanskrit, high language. I thought, 'How did he learn that?' Whatever I said, he knew it."

Stance on tort reform issue unclear for many Democrats

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Democratic Party activists have received conflicting reports on where their party stands on civil justice reform.

When the Legislature convened earlier this month, Perry Bradley, state Democratic Party vice chairman emeritus, sent a mailing to past delegates of party conventions that encouraged them to support tort reform and to join the pro-tort reform Texas Civil Justice League.

After Democratic Party Bob Slagle caught wind of the letter, he dispatched telegrams to delegates reminding them that the official party platform opposes major changes in torts — personal injury and product liability law.

Bradley, who until this summer was the party's vice chairman for fundraising, sent the letter on behalf of TCJL, the umbrella tort reform lobby. It lists his title and includes a seal on the envelope that looks similar to the Democratic Party emblem.

He notes that San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, a Democrat, suports tort reform and he asked Democrats to join TCJL.

Slagle's telegram, however, said, "I strongly urge you to join" Texans For Civil Justice, a rival organization opposed to tort reform. He called TFCJ the "good guys," said Bradley "misrepresented" the AFL-CIO position on tort reform and emphasized that Bradley "was NOT acting on behalf of the Democratic Party."

"All I did was set the record straight," Slagle said. "The Democratic Party platform opposes massive tort reform. The Republicans support it. It's nothing personal between Perry and myself. I'm his best friend."

Bradley could not be reached for comment, but tort reform lobbyist Jerry "Nub" Donaldson said Bradley is "one of our strong allies." The letter and telegram, Donaldson said, will not affect tort reform's outcome in the Legislature."

'Dial BANG' criticized as too accessible to terrorists, criminals

MILWAUKEE (AP) — People across the country pick up the telephone every day to dial BANG, and Aaron S. Zelman fires off a round of mail-order ammunition.

But Zelman's Worldwide Ammo Inc., believed to be the nation's first mail-order ammunition company selling to the general public, is under attack from critics who say it gives terrorists and criminals easy access to ammunition.

Since Congress approved mail-order ammunition in November, the Milwaukee-based company has been filling an average 200 orders a day, Zelman said.

"Yesterday, I personally handled 100 calls between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m.," he said in a recent interview. "We're going into another printing of our catalog, which we hadn't expected to do for a long time yet. We're putting new phone lines in."

Callers dial a toll-free number whose last four digits spell BANG.

Before Nov. 15, only licensed dealers could buy ammunition via mail order. Congress then changed the Federal Gun Control Act of 1968 to allow customers to receive ammunition through commercial delivery, not the U.S. Postal Service.

Opponents were quick to criticize.

"Terrorists and criminals now have virtual access to ammunition, no questions asked," said Michael Hancock, general counsel in Washington for the National Coalition to Ban Handguns. "Now all they need is cash or a credit card."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., a former police officer who was wounded while on duty, has introduced legislation that would rescind the change in the law.

"It's a very dangerous problem potentially," said Craig Floyd, Biaggi's legislative assistant. "As it now stands, it makes virtually unenforceable state laws on selling ammunition to drug addicts, underage persons, convicted felons and illegal aliens."

Lisa Navarez of Guns and Ammo Magazine, a Los Angeles publication covering the shooting sports industry, said Worldwide Ammo was the only mail-order ammunition supplier for the general public about which she knows.

Zelman "won't have a corner on the market for long," Hancock said. "It's too profitable."

Before the change in the law, the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms kept records on sales to licensed dealers. Spokesman Jerry Rudden said the agency wouldn't comment on the mail-order sales.

The National Rifle Association, the nation's largest gun-lobbying group, disagrees with opponents of mail-order sales.

"There's never been any evidence that the prohibition on ammunition sales by mail resulted in a reduction in violent crimes," said Richard Gardiner, assistant general counsel for the Washington, D.C.-based association.

Zelman, who's been a federally licensed firearms dealer for seven years, began selling mail-order bullets as soon as it became legal. He has partners who've invested in the company and a full-time assistant.

"We're filling a need," he said. "There are 100 million gun owners in the country, more than 99 percent of them law-abiding, and we're selling them ammunition at 20 to 30 percent discount."

Lebanon now off limits to Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration declared Lebanon off-limits to Americans because of the threat of kidnappings, and identified publicly for the first time the radical group that may be responsible for the recent abductions of foreigners.

Announcing the imposition of passport restrictions, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Wednesday: "The situation in Lebanon, in West Beirut in particular, is so chaotic that we do not believe that any American citizens can be considered safe from terrorist acts."

Violators could face up to five years in prison, he warned. The estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Lebanon will be given 30 days to leave before their U.S. passports become invalid.

The step — similar to a ban on travel to Libya — represents an acknowledgement that the United States is unable to protect U.S. citizens in Lebanon. It also may make U.S. military action against terrorists less risky by reducing the number of Americans who might be targeted for retaliation.

At the White House, a senior administration official said that a small faction within the Hezbollah organization, operating in southern Lebanon, may be responsible for the seizure of 11 foreigners — including three Americans — over the last two weeks in Moslem west Beirut.

"There is a cell within the Hezbollah headed by a man named (Imad) Mugniyah which is relatively small that may well be the group that has done this," said the official, speaking on grounds he not be identified.

The Hezbollah, or Party of God, is a militant group of fundamentalist Shiite Moslems with ties to Iran. While the official provided no additional information on Mugniyah, he was named in published reports last year as the reputed organizer of the 1983 bombings that killed 300 American and French servicemen in Lebanon. Mugniyah is said to be the head of the "action group" of the Hezbollah.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a group believed linked to Hezbollah, has claimed responsibility for a number of kidnappings in the past.

Speaking of Mugniyah's cell, the official said, "The general assessment is that...nobody in Iran can push a button and get a response from that group."

On the other hand, he noted the group is sympathetic to Iran, "so obviously there's a certain amount of influence" that Tehran could exert.

The kidnapping of two West Germans has been linked by officials in Bonn to the Jan. 13 arrest in Frankfurt of Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese Shiite whom the United States is trying to extradite for trial in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut.

In that incident, U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and 39 Americans were held hostage for 17 days.

The administration official said the United States is resolute in wanting Hamadi extradited and would oppose any attempt by Bonn to swap him for the two captive West Germans and one or more Americans held hostage.

Eight Americans are in the hands of kidnappers. One of them, Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson, has been held nearly two years.

"We are loathe to impede the travel of American citizens in any way," Redman said at the State Department, adding, however, that Americans cannot be considered safe in Lebanon.

Exceptions to the passport restrictions will be made for the immediate families of the eight American hostages. Journalists and others may also apply for special permission to go to Lebanon. Otherwise, U.S. passports will no longer be valid for travel in or through the country.

Redman said violators could face prison terms of up to five years and a $2,000 fine if convicted. But he acknowledged it was unlikely the U.S. citizens in Lebanon, most of whom are either dual citizens or married to Lebanese, would be prosecuted if they simply let their passports lapse.

Dr. M.T. Mehdi, president of the American Arab Relations Committee, criticized the action.

"The State Department's ban on travel to Lebanon is a violation of the First Amendment right of the citizens," said Mehdi, who is planning a trip to Lebanon to continue his efforts to free the hostages. The Americans who go to Lebanon represent "the best of America and should not be denied their right to contribute" just because of the wrong policies of the State Department, he said in New York.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, applauded the State Department action.

1787 Constitution Daybook

Associated Press

EDITOR'S NOTE — This day-by-day account of 1787, the year that the U.S. Constitution was written, blends the significant with the small, personal details that bring history to life. The authors spent three years in research and writing, drawing on letters and personal diaries as well as the better-known historical documents. The writers are David D.C. Dutcher, David A. Kimball, Robert K. Sutton and Anna Coxe Toogood, all of the Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia, where the Constitution was created 200 years ago.

Monday, Jan. 29, 1787

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

Today was cold (mean temperature 25), with variable winds and light snow.

Stable-keeper Jacob Hiltzheimer sent his workers to Mr. Twillses' place for a load of hay. On the way back they tipped the hay over, and Hiltzheimer had to hire a team and wagon from Baltis Clymer to go and get part of it.

Noah Webster, in town overseeing publication of his spelling book, took time to visit David Rittenhouse, state treasurer, astronomer and scientific instrument-maker.

CONFEDERATION TODAY

The hopes of the delegates who had been waiting in New York since Nov. 7 for a quorum to assemble must have risen today. Six states had at least two delegates present, and Nathaniel Mitchell (Del.) and William Blount (N.C.) expected colleagues to arrive any day.

Abigail Adams, wife of the minister to England, wrote from London to her friend Thomas Jefferson. She recommended "British oil" for his sprained wrist ("if it does no good it will not do any injury"), discussed Shays' Rebellion, and suggested that Jefferson purchase black lace for her with the money he owed her instead of paying her in cash.

DELEGATES TODAY

George Washington "Rid in the morning before breakfast to Muddy Hole Plantation in order to set the Ditcher (Daniel Overdonck) to work, but the ground was so hard froze and the weather setting in so stormy he could not proceed," so the general went back to Mount Vernon. The general's old army comrade, friend and confidant Henry Knox, wrote from New York to report on Shays' Rebellion in Massachusetts. Gen. Shephard was at Springfield on the 25th and expected the rebels to attack at any time.

LOOKING BACK

Paper Money

In 1787, "black lace" did not conjure up the image of Frederick's of Hollywood that it may in 1987. Even so, one blinks a little at the thought of Thomas Jefferson buying black lace in any form for Mrs. John Adams. However, the transaction had one great advantage — Jefferson didn't have to find a way to remit cash.

Getting cash with which to pay bills had been an American problem since the first settlement. As a developing country, America imported goods of far more value than the raw material exported, and hard money was sucked out of the country to help make up the difference.

Many of the colonies had responded to the need for cash by printing paper money. In fact, paper money in Pennsylvania had helped to build the State House. When kept to a reasonable amount and coupled with some method of gradually removing it from circulation, many, although not all, colonial issues had retained their face value relatively well.

But with the Revolution, both the nation and its 13 component states needed huge amounts of money, so they printed it. Because the paper money was supported only by the promise that when independence was won the paper would be redeemed at face value, the money depreciated. By 1787, continental currency was worthless, and the various state monies had lost much of their value. To make matters worse, Pennsylvanians might not accept New Jersey money on any terms, and vice versa. While debtors clamored for more, paper money had become a curse.

How will Reagan, Wright do 'in ring'?

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) — For six years, the partisan battles in Washington might be described in personal terms — Ronald Reagan in this corner for the GOP and Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr., in that corner for the Democrats.

But the view of Capitol Hill from the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue is quite a bit different now and not just because a blanket of snow and ice covers the nation's capital.

There have been a lot of changes in Congress — institutional, partisan and personal. The Democrats now control both houses of Congress for the first time in Reagan's presidency, a situation that the Republican incumbent must learn to handle.

And O'Neill, the Irish politician from Massachusetts, has retired as speaker of the House.

"There's a new face at this place of honor tonight," Reagan said as he opened his State of the Union message Tuesday night in the House chamber. "Please join me in warm congratulations to the speaker of the House, Jim Wright."

An analysis

The Republican president then turned and shook hands with Wright, the Texas Democrat who is now sitting in the speaker's chair.

Where Reagan had faced O'Neill across the political ring for the past six years, it's Wright he may be seeing across the mat for the remaining two years of the Reagan administration.

Wright is seeking to take on the role that O'Neill filled in the past few years — appearing as THE spokesman for the Democrats in Congress and often the one person speaking for the whole Democratic Party.

O'Neill stepped into the starring role in part because of circumstances. The Democratic Party was in a shambles after the 1980 election defeats. The Republicans had taken control of the Senate, pushing their leaders in that chamber to the forefront and the Democrats into the shadows. The jockeying for the 1984 nomination made it difficult for any presidential hopeful to be the spokesman for the party.

But O'Neill also had the role because he earned it. For example, he guided the strategies in the Social Security fights that helped give the Democrats a campaign issue they used to bludgeon GOP opponents in 1982.

Wright faces a different set of circumstances that may make it more difficult to take the starring role.

The Texas Democrat shares the Capitol Hill spotlight with Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, a situation that seems to be working comfortably in the first few days of the 100th Congress.

For example, Wright asked Byrd to join him in giving the Democratic response to Reagan's State of the Union address Tuesday night, even though in the traditional rotation it was the House's turn to handle the response. And both men have asked the Reagan White House to include the leadership of both houses of Congress in the briefings at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue on legislative matters, rather than splitting them up by chamber.

Byrd, who turns 70 this year, has been a much more energetic leader in the Senate for the past two years. But already there is talk he may not seek to keep the leadership job after a re-election campaign in 1988.

While Wright seeks to take over that spokesman's role that O'Neill enjoyed, he has a different approach.

O'Neill, for example, wasn't comfortable with the harsh spotlight of the television, with the frequent appearences on the morning news or the Sunday talk shows. Wright is far more willing to step in front of the camera, even if some have criticized his speaking style as "too hot" for the cool medium of television.

On many issues, Wright's stand may not be much different from O'Neill's.

Reagan quoted former President Dwight Eisenhower as he told Wright on Tuesday: "We have much to do together; I am sure we shall get it done."

Personality is often an unspoken influence on policy. And how Reagan and Wright get along may shape the tenor and course of the last two years of the Reagan administration.

Meese says Playboy not obscene, he's read it

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III, whose pornography commission was cited by a judge for efforts to discourage the sale of Playboy and Penthouse, says he has read both magazines and does not consider them obscene.

In remarks after a recent speech to law clerks of federal court judges, Meese acknowledged that he once had occasion to read Playboy and Penthouse.

The attorney general, whose statements at the private session were recounted by sources familiar with his remarks, also said that as a youth he read magazines that were then considered pornographic but by today's standards would seem quite tame.

The sources, who spoke about the Jan. 13 session on condition of anonymity, said Meese added that the Attorney General's Commission on Pornography was not trying to thwart the sale of Penthouse and Playboy, which he did not consider obscene.

Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland on Wednesday confirmed the substance of Meese's remarks, saying "What you got does describe his answers."

Meese's statements came seven months after U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn found that a letter the pornography commission sent to drugstore and convenience store chains was designed to "discourage disributors" from selling the magazines.

Penn found last July that the letter, soliciting responses to allegations the stores sold pornography, "does appear to contain an implied threat to the addressees."

Among the recipients was Southland Corp., which removed the magazines from its 7-Eleven stores.

The judge ordered the letter rescinded and directed the commission, which went out of business last July, not to list in its report the names of stores that sold Playboy, Penthouse and similar magazines. The letter had indicated their names might be listed, although officials say that was not intended.

Penthouse, Playboy and Playgirl magazines, in lawsuits pending before Penn, are seeking unspecified damages for the loss of 15,000 to 20,000 retail outlets.

The magazines contend the stores took the publications from their shelves after receiving the letter, dated Feb. 11, 1986.

David Ogden, an attorney for Playboy Enterprises Inc., said none of the stores that stopped selling Playboy, has resumed its distribution.

Ogden said no specific damage figures have been set by the plaintiffs because the publications continue to feel the effects of the ban, losing circulation and advertising revenue.

The Justice Department has filed a motion to dismiss the lawsuits, arguing the commission did not violate any clearly established laws by sending the letter.

Eastland said "the purpose of the pornography commission was not to stop or thwart the distribution of such magazines as Playboy."

The commission "focused on what we call the very hard-core pornography — obscenity as defined by First Amendment case law. That does not include such materials as Playboy," Eastland said.

INS trying to stem flow of escalating crime gangs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Immigration and Naturalization Service said it is trying to stem the flow of organized crime gangs whose members use fake documents or sneak across the border to gain entry to the United States

Levels of criminal activity, including drug trafficking, loan sharking, gambling, extortion and murder for hire, by groups ranging from the Japanese Yakuza to Jamaican crime networks "appear to be escalating dramatically," the INS concluded in a report.

It said up to 58 murders in the West Indian communities in Washington and Baltimore in the past five years are attributable to Jamaican crime groups involved in smuggling and marketing narcotics, selling weapons illegally and undertaking airline ticket theft and fraud.

Nigerian criminal elements in Baltimore are "driving American Express up the wall" with massive credit card fraud, Jack Shaw, assistant INS commissioner for investigations, said Wednesday.

"It is virtually impossible for any foreign criminal group to exist and carry out their trade without touching INS, and violating our laws and regulations," said the report, "The Newest Criminals: The Emergence of Non-Traditional Organized Crime Groups and INS' Role In Combatting Them."

USAir may merge with PSA

WASHINGTON (AP) — USAir received tentative approval to buy Pacific Southwest Airlines in a merger the Transportation Department said would not have a substantial effect on airline competition.

In its decision Wednesday, the Transportation Department noted that the two airlines operate for the most part in different regions of the country.

PSA serves six states — California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, New Mexico and Arizona — while USAir flies to 31 states in the Northeast and Midwest, with its operating hub at Pittsburgh.

USAir, whose headquarters are at Washington National Airport, is currently the nation's seventh largest domestic air carrier while San Diego-based PSA is the 12th largest. The combined airline would still rank seventh, with a 4.9 percent share of total U.S. revenue passenger miles.

USAir spokesman Dave Shipley said USAir was paying $17 a share or approximately $400 million to acquire PSA.

Ozone layer may be saved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industrialized nations may be ready in a year to accept a U.S. initiative to limit the production of chemicals that threaten to deplete the ozone layer in the atmosphere, a Reagan administration official said.

Richard Benedict, deputy assistant secretary of state for the environment, said there is growing international concern about chloroflourocarbons, which contribute to the global temperature warming trend and destroy upper-atmosphere ozone, a natural filter against the sun's cancer-causing rays.

Benedict was among the U.S. negotiators at a 25-nation conference in Geneva last month to discuss limits on the manufacture and use of chloroflourocarbons, or CFCs. The talks are slated to resume on Feb. 23.

"My guess is, they'll be ready to accept a (production) freeze in a year," Benedict told a Senate hearing Wednesday.

Space delays to hurt future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Setbacks in the U.S. space program will hamper commercial payloads launched into space for the foreseeable future, but the government can open its facilities to encourage private industry to launch satellites, a presidential adviser said.

"Our launch capacity just for government payloads is being tested to its limits," presidential science adviser William R. Graham told the House Science, Space and Technology Committee on Wednesday.

Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., asked whether the government could help private industry get into the space business by relaxing antitrust laws, subsidizing private companies or allowing them to use government facilities at no cost.

Nuclear ban fast ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former NASA scientist Charles Hyder believes interest has waned in this country for his 4-month-old fast for nuclear disarmament, and he will take his cause to Geneva, where arms control talks are being held.

Hyder, who supporters say has been on a water-only fast for 128 days, left Tuesday night for Geneva where he expects to meet with representatives of various peace organizations, said Dr. Ted Taylor, a former physicist who has worked against nuclear weapons.

Hyder believes that "interest here has topped out. He's trying to reach out to the people in Europe," Taylor said Wednesday at a news conference in Lafayette Park, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

Kids for Space collect $5,800

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — The 14-year-old founder of an organization to aid the U.S. space program says the group has collected more than $5,800 to help replace the space shuttle Challenger.

Tami Quinn, an eighth-grade student at South Middle School in Grants Pass, said her father was the first to contribute to her Kids for Space fund following the explosion of the Challenger on Jan. 28, 1986.

Letters and contributions came from "all over the United States, as far as Florida," Miss Quinn said.

Bob Quinn said his daughter wanted to raise a lot more money, "but she's very happy with what she accomplished."

Miss Quinn said she will present a check to U.S. Rep. Bob Smith, R-Ore., on Feb. 12 in Grants Pass. Smith will forward the money to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help the agency replace the $1.2 billion Challenger.

Reagan cites long economic expansion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, reporting on the state of the economy, today said the current recovery is on its way to becoming the longest peacetime expansion since World War II but warned of future threats to growth.

The president in his annual economic message sounded some favorite themes, contending his administration was engaged in a battle to curb government's desire to "overtax, overspend and overregulate."

While claiming successes in this effort, the president conceded there were major problems left to correct, singling out the government's burgeoning farm subsidy program, and the twin deficit demons which have plagued his administration, the huge federal budget deficit and the seemingly intractable trade deficit.

Reagan urged renewed efforts in Congress to attack these problems, but he repeated his opposition to reducing the deficit through tax increases and warned that erecting protectionist trade barriers would be the wrong way to reduce the trade imbalance

"Protectionism is anti-growth. It would make us less competitive not more," Reagan said. "It would hurt most Americans in the interest of helping a few."

The report made no changes in the administration's earlier economic forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, would expand 3.2 percent this year, up from 2.5 percent growth in 1986, the slowest rate since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Even this modest pickup in growth is contingent on a turnaround in the U.S. trade deficit, which has contributed to sluggish growth for the past two years.

Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said in a briefing on the new report, that the administration still expects the trade deficit to begin to improve in 1987. But he conceded, "I have not yet seen the string of numbers that have convinced me we are seeing that improvement."

The economic recovery, which began in December 1982, is already 50 months long. If it lasts nine more months, it will become the longest peacetime expansion since World War II. The 1961-70 recovery went longer without a recession, but it occurred during the Vietnam war.

"Our market-oriented policies are paying off," Reagan said. "By October, the current expansion will become the longest peacetime expansion of the postwar era."

The president cited the major tax overhaul and the miniscule 1.1 percent rise in consumer prices last year, the smallest inflation increase in 25 years, as major accomplishments of his administration.

He said he was encouraged with the drop in the unemployment rate in December, which fell to 6.7 percent, the lowest point of his presidency, although historically high for this period of a recovery.

"Since 1982, we have avoided the economic problems that have plagued our recent past — accelerating inflation, rising interest rates and severe recession," he said.

The "Economic Report of the President" expanded on many of the proposals the president has already put forward in his 1988 budget and in his State of the Union address.

It repeated a call for government efforts to make American businesses more competitive against foreign firms, a major initiative the administration is pushing this year in hopes of derailing protectionist trade legislation.

To boost U.S. competitiveness, the economic message said Congress needs to go even further in eliminating unnecessary government regulations on businesses. The president called for an end to price controls on natural gas, elimination of remaining regulations on the trucking industry and less-restrictive air pollution regulations, all initiatives he has raised without success in the past.

The president said the sharp decline in the value of the dollar over the past two years would help American firms compete in international markets, but he said it would be a flawed policy to rely solely on a weaker dollar to correct the huge trade deficit, which is estimated to have soared above $170 billion in 1986.

Four killed in 25-car pileup on Texas bridge

Associated Press

Four people were killed and four others seriously injured in a 25-car pileup on a fog-shrouded bridge in Southeast Texas, authorities said.

The pileup occurred Wednesday after a truck stalled on a two-mile stretch of bridge over the Trinity River on Interstate 10 about 15 miles northeast of Baytown, Chambers County sheriff's deputy Donna Racca said.

A pickup stopped to help the truck and was struck by another vehicle, he said. A chain reaction then started that eventually claimed 25 vehicles, officials said.

Heavy fog contributed to the pileup, authorities said.

Officials said one man suffered a broken shoulder when he jumped off the bridge and plunged 30 feet into the river to avoid being hit.

Winford Costalow, 66, of Baytown, was rescued after being in the water about 30 minutes and was reported in stable condition at Bayside Community Hospital.

Four members of a Vietnamese family, including a baby and 2½-year-old girl, perished in the accident.

Kathy Tran, 4½ months old, Jennifer Tran, 2½, Ban Nguyen, about 70, and Lee Nguyen, 23, were killed when their car was pinned between vehicles during the pileup, officials said.

The four were related and from Rockport, officials said.

Three other passengers in their car were injured. Kim Tran, 5, was in stable condition late Wednesday while her mother, Nghia Nguyen, 28, was in critical condition with head injuries. Her mother Tick Nguyen, 51, was in critical condition with head and chest injuries. All three were at Hermann Hospital in Houston.

The driver, Bih Hai Tran, 35, was not injured.

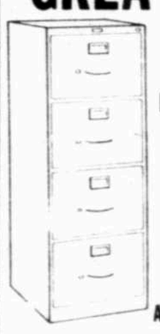

Two unidentified men were treated and released at the hospital.

Dense fog also was blamed for a wreck Wednesday morning east of San Antonio involving a VIA Metropolitan Transit bus and a tractor-trailer rig. The bus driver and four of his passengers were injured.

"The bus driver had problems seeing the (traffic) light," officer Al Diego said. "He hit his brakes and skidded into the intersection."

The driver and the injured passengers were treated and released.

West German envoy seeks release

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A government envoy has gone to Iran to appeal to authorities for help in winning the release of two West Germans held hostage in Beirut by a pro-Iranian Moslem group, sources said today.

Meanwhile, police in Saarland state searched for further clues to a possible Middle East terror ring operating from Germany. On Tuesday, they discovered a cache of explosives buried in a field.

The Bonn envoy, Reinhard Schlagintweit, took a personal message from Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to Iranian Foreign Minister Ali-Akbar Vellayati, well-informed West German sources told The Associated Press.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, refused to discuss the message other than to say it was an appeal for Tehran's assistance in freeing the two West German hostages, Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt.

One Bonn official, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said earlier that Genscher had written to the leaders of Iran and Syria asking for their help in freeing the two men. He would not say what their responses had been.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman, Hans Schumacher, confirmed Schlagintweit was in Tehran, but refused to say whether he was discussing the West German hostages with Iranian authorities.

Schumacher said the visit had been planned long in advance and was routine but refused to give other details. West Germany has diplomatic relations with Iran.

Schumacher said Genscher had contacted "governments and personalities" in the Middle East asking for assistance in the hostage crisis, but would not elaborate.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian parliament, said Wednesday that West Germany had asked Iran's assistance in freeing the hostages, but Tehran had not been able to provide the help.

Cordes and Schmidt were abducted in Beirut after Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese wanted in the United States for trial on air piracy and murder charges in the 1985 TWA hijacking in which a U.S. Navy diver died, was arrested at Frankfurt airport Jan. 13.

His brother, 28-year-old Ali Abbas Hamadi, a naturalized West German citizen, was arrested at the airport Monday.

West German officials have said they believe Cordes and Schmidt may have been abducted in hopes that a swap could be worked out to free Mohammed Ali Hamadi. Unconfirmed reports say the kidnappings were ordered by a third Hamadi brother who is security chief in Beirut for Hezbollah, a Shiite Moslem group.

Bonn authorities on Wednesday said they had received photographs of Cordes and Schmidt, their first indication the men were alive.

MEDAL

"...Second Lieutenant O'Brien leaped from his trench when the attack signal was given and, shouting for his men to follow, raced across an exposed saddle and up the enemy-held hill through a virtual hail of deadly small-arms, artillery and mortar fire...."

"Although shot through the arm and thrown to the ground...he bravely regained his feet, waved his men onward and continued to spearhead the assault, pausing only long enough to go to the aid of a wounded Marine."

"...Encountering the enemy at close range, he proceeded to hurl hand grenades into the bunkers and, utilizing his carbine to best advantage in hand-to-hand combat, succeeded in killing at least three of the enemy...."

The citation goes on to say that O'Brien was struck down later during three different grenade attacks, by refusing to be evacuated for medical treatment.

Gossell said it was hard for him to add more. "Heck, you've seen John Wayne movies."

"When we have people like this, we know we have a strong future," Gossell, commander of the Marine Corps Air Bases in El Toro, Calif., said of O'Brien.

Of the night in Korea, O'Brien proved to be the reluctant hero. He said, "That's been so long ago; we don't need to go into it.

"I feel strongly that I'm holding that award in trust for the men who were killed out there with me. I'm very proud of it," O'Brien said.

O'Brien was born in Fort Worth 60 years ago. He lived in Big Spring before the oil business brought him to Midland.

"I am a West Texan," he said.

The brigadier general said the Congressional Medal of Honor was given only to those who fought in combat conditions and engagements with the enemy.

"The best way to describe O'Brien is that he is a Marine, an American and a patriot," Gossell said.

And as Eisenhower had previously stated, "By his exceptionally daring and forceful leadership in the face of overwhelming odds, Second Lieutenant O'Brien served as a constant source of inspiration to all who observed him and was greatly instrumental in the recapture of a strategic position on the main line of resistance."

TORT

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, and Sen. Grant Jones, D-Temple, will carry most of the tort reform in the Senate with the blessing of that chamber's presiding officer, Democratic Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

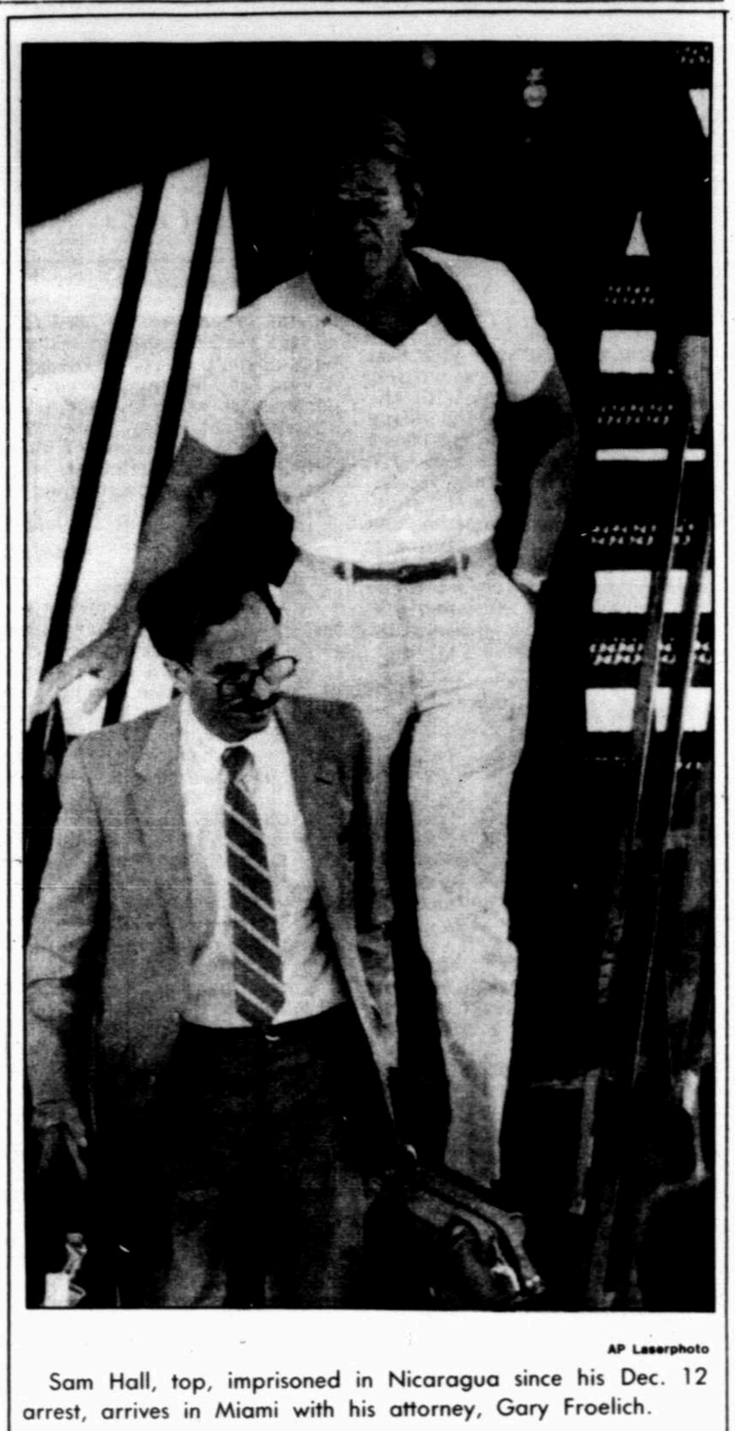

"Slagle has a right to his opinion," Farabee said, "but I hope he avoids putting the party in the middle of a hard fight. My immediate reaction was kind of negative, but I shrugged it off a being Slagle's opinion."

Slagle said the reference to the anti-tort reformers as "good guys" was "jocular" and did not imply that those supporting tort reforms were "bad guys."

Meanwhile, Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, and Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, released a report calling for insurance reform — not tort reform — to ease the high costs and unavailablity of liability insurance. Tort reformers say both insurance reform and tort changes are needed to keep liability premiums down, and they endorse a report released last week by Farabee, Jones and others.

"No person representing the insurance industry has given, or I predict will give, any assurances that changes in the civil justice system will bring about a reduction in insurance costs," Caperton said.

But Rep. Mike Toomey, the House tort reform leader, said Caperton is trying to take the focus off tort reform by proposing sweeping changes in insurance regulation and practices.

Sam Hall, top, imprisoned in Nicaragua since his Dec. 12 arrest, arrives in Miami with his attorney, Gary Froelich.

Hall says imprisonment will end commando role

MIAMI (AP) — Self-styled soldier of fortune Sam Nesley Hall says he has given up his anti-communist commando activities because his imprisonment by the leftist Nicaraguan government on spying charges has blown his cover.

Hall returned Wednesday to the United States after spending 49 days in a Nicaraguan jail. Sandinista officials said they released him because he was mentally unstable and a suicide risk.

Hall voluntarily checked into a Veterans Administration hospital here, said lawyer Gary Froelich, a hometown friend who accompanied him on the flight. "We are also concerned about the claims made by the Nicaraguan government.

"It is in the best interest of Sam to have an immediate, complete and thorough medical and psychological examination."

Hall, 49, was driven directly to the hospital with his two brothers, U.S. Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, and Michael Hall, a Cincinnati educator. He is expected to stay at the hospital for several days.

In Dayton, Ohio, Hall's mother, Ann, said she talked with her son by telephone for about five minutes shortly after his arrival in Miami.

"He sounded pretty good, and I've seen him on TV and he looks good," she said, adding he did not indicate when he might return to Dayton.

Mrs. Hall said she did not ask her son about the mental problems referred to by the Nicaraguans, "but I think he heard about it and he was very upset about it."

As Hall was leaving Nicaragua on Wednesday morning, he told reporters, "I just have one thing to say to the Nicaraguan people. "I'm sorry I tried to ambush them."

He told reporters aboard the plane to Miami that he was treated well by his captors, but said his "days of adventure are over."

"I'm finished. I'm done. I'm too well known now. My name is out there too far," Hall said in an interview published in today's Dayton Daily News and Journal Herald.

Hall said he "thirsted to speak English" during his captivity and described his underground cell as a cement bunker.

"You eat with your fingers. When you go to the bathroom, you have a hole in the corner. And there is a lot of bugs, cockroaches and spiders that were always crawling on you," he said.

Hall, a 1960 Olympic silver medalist in springboard diving and one-time Ohio state representative, said he intended to get a lot of rest.

"Even though I worked out a lot, I can tell that physically I am not 100 percent," he said. "So it's advised that I get some rest and some normalcy at a very slow pace."

He said he was speechless after hearing he was to be released, "but I didn't cry. I'll save that for (today) when I see my kids. I choked up mostly. I haven't cried for a long time."

Hall was arrested Dec. 12 in a restricted military area near the Nicaraguan capital. Authorities said they found maps and sketches of military targets, crudely drawn on hotel stationery, stuffed in his socks, and threatened to try him for espionage.

In interviews after his arrest, Hall said he was paid $12,500 for his mission and worked for a previously unknown group called the Phoenix Battalion. He also said his superiors were code-named Tinker, Evers and Chance, the last names of a famous Chicago Cubs double-play combination early in the century.

He once belonged to Civilian Military Assistance of Decatur, Ala., a private organization formed three years ago to help the Contra rebels. The organization's director, Thomas V. Posey, said his group had disassociated itself from Hall more than 1½ years ago.

The FBI and the U.S. State Department said Wednesday they have no interest in Hall, and don't want to question him.

MARCOS

"Probably so, because you cannot have three simultaneous attacks in three different places without any master plan," he said.

Marcos, who has lived in Hawaii since February, said Carl Taylor and Elwood J. MacGuire — both State Department representatives, visited him Wednesday and told him not to leave Hawaii.

The owner of a military clothing store in Honolulu said earlier Wednesday that Marcos' wife, Imelda, purchased $2,000 worth of jungle boots, camouflage outfits, belts and other items Monday for people of various sizes.

A Boeing 707 was parked at Honolulu airport, and radio reports in Manila said it was intended to carry Marcos to the Philippines. The Philippine consul general, Tomas Gomez, said he was tipped about the plane's presence and contacted the Philippine Embassy in Washington.

Vice President Salvador Laurel said that the U.S. State Department was closely monitoring Marcos' movements.

At the State Department in Washington, spokesman Pete Martinez today said the government had no immediate comment.

Marcos spokesman Jemmo Trinidad told KHVH radio in Honolulu that the State Department representatives told Marcos "they will stop him from going home. If it is necessary that that they will do it physically, they will do it."

"The position is Marcos is free to come and go," said White House spokesman Don Mathes said in Washington. "However, if he decides to go to the Philippines, he'd better have the approval of the Philippine government, that's the Aquino government."

The Philippine government last year canceled the passports of Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and other family members.

Rumors have circulated periodically that his return was imminent.

The government said today that the takeover of the broadcast studios of Channel 7 television and DZBB radio in Quezon City was part of a larger "act of rebellion" by forces loyal to Marcos.

U.S., EEC agreement resolves grain dispute

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. and European Community negotiators reached an agreement today to resolve a grain-sales dispute that had threatened to develop into a trade war, officials said.

Willy de Clercq, the European Community's chief negotiator, announced a four-year deal had been reached to provide compensation to the United States for about $400 million in lost U.S. grain sales to Spain.

The deal still required formal approval by the 12 European Community member countries.

Representatives of the member governments were to meet in Brussels later today to consider the accord, which was worked out during nearly continuous telephone consultations with U.S. officials in Washington over the past 24 hours.

A U.S. official in Brussels who was closely involved in the negotiations said the agreement "preserves our rights."

"It's a good, sound and balanced agreement," he said.

Negotiators had been working against a midnight deadline to head off threatened U.S. trade penalties that the European Community had vowed to answer with equivalent penalities against American good.

The dispute centered on a U.S. demand that it be compensated for the loss of U.S. grain sales to Spain since the Madrid government raised its import duties from about 20 percent to more than 100 percent last March. Spain was required to raise the tariffs as a condition of joining the European Community, also called the Common Market, in January 1986.

Sources close to the negotiations said the two sides agreed in principle that Spain would buy from non-Common Market exporters 2.3 million metric tons of corn and sorghum a year, of which the United States would get its historic share of about 65 percent.

The U.S. official said the final point of contention worked out today was how long the agreement would be in effect and whether the United States would be given long-term assurances on access to European Community grain markets.

The official said approximately one-third of the value of trade compensation due the United States as a result of the agreement would be in the form of lower European Community import duties on industrial products. The rest would be in assured access to Spain's grain market.

The Reagan administration had complained that American exporters were virtually shut out of the Spanish grain market after the increase in import duties last year.

Negotiators also agreed that the U.S. loss would be partially offset by a lowering of Common Market import duties on a selected number of industrial products. Details of this arrangement were not known.

The Reagan administration originally had insisted it get about 2.8 million metric tons a year of grain sales to Spain, and had resisted taking compensation in the form of lower duties on industrial products.

The Common Market as recently as last weekend had offered the Reagan administration no more than 1.1 million metric tons a year of grain sales to Spain. The Common Market offer was improved after the member countries' foreign ministers met Monday to consider ways of settling the dispute.

The Reagan administration announced Dec. 30 that if there were no settlement within one month it would slap 200 percent import duties on European white wines, brandy, gin, cheeses, olives, endives, carrots and canned ham. The Common Market said it would respond by restricting U.S. exports of corn gluten feed and rice.

The Common Market nations are: Belgium, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Denmark, Ireland, United Kingdom, Greece, Spain and Portugal.

Gorbachev's radical moves threaten party's old guard

An Analysis

By BRYAN BRUMLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev is running a political risk by proposing a regular turnover of senior Communist Party and government officials, changing a system which in recent decades has seen leaders grow old and often die in office.

"He's a brave man," said Marshall Goldman, associate director of the Russian Research Center at Harvard University.

Gorbachev's intensifying calls for reform might prompt a backlash which could force him from office, said Goldman.

Another scholar, Jerry Hough of Duke University, was more optimistic, comparing Gorbachev's reforms to the New Deal of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who introduced changes in the U.S. government that persist more than 40 years later.

At a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee in Moscow this week, Gorbachev said the Soviet system was beset with stagnation and failure. He proposed multiple-candidate elections for party secretaries from the factory level to the central committees of the nation's republics and also urged new ways to bring new blood into the party's top two organs, the Politburo and Secretariat. Gorbachev heads the Secretariat and holds a majority on the 11-member Politburo.

"The Politburo's opinion is that further democratization should also apply to the formation of the central leading parties of the party," that is, the Central Committee, Secretariat and Politburo, said Gorbachev.

Gorbachev stressed that he did not intend drastic changes in the Soviet system, in which senior leaders impose their will on the rank and file.

"Of course, the principle of the party rules, under which the decisions of the higher bodies are compulsory for all lower body committees, including those on personnel matters, should remain unshakable in the party," Gorbachev said.

The reference to "personnel matters" indicated that senior leaders would continue to nominate and to discipline junior party functionaries.

U.S. officials reacted cautiously to Gorbachev's remarks.

"What we are seeing is a vigorous, imaginative approach to Soviet problems, which does not make the general secretary either a liberal or a proponent of open democratic society," Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East.

Gorbachev's attempts to introduce limited democracy into the Communist system are reminiscent of steps taken by Nikita Khrushchev, who was deposed by an angry old guard in 1963 after seven years in office, said Goldman and Peter Reddaway, secretary of the Kennan Institute for Advanced Russian Studies in Washington.

"Gorbachev has been moving a little more slowly than Khrushchev," said Reddaway, but it is not clear that his chances of success are any greater.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Breshnev holdovers ousted

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party ousted two holdovers from the Brezhnev era from its highest ranks and cemented Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's control over the powerful secretariat.

But a final resolution adopted Wednesday at the close of the two-day plenum of more than 300 Central Committee members did not include in detail Gorbachev's call for multiple-candidate and secret-ballot elections in regional party committees.

It only spoke in general terms of "the need to broaden inner-party democracy," suggesting continued division over what would represent a significant change in party procedure.

In an unusual move, the government press agency Novosti offered foreign correspondents interviews today to explain the results of the plenum and a senior editor confirmed there had been debate over the party elections issue.

The Central Committee endorsed Gorbachev's call for accelerated economic change and more openness in Soviet society, saying, "There is nowhere we can retreat."

Islamic summit ends

KUWAIT (AP) — Leaders of the world's Moslem countries ended a four-day summit today with an appeal to Iran and Iraq to end their 6½-year-old war, withdraw to their pre-1980 borders and negotiate a peace settlement.

The summit of the 46-nation Organization of Islamic Conference also denounced the United States' "aggression" against Libya and demanded Washington pay compensation for the damage inflicted on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi by a U.S. air raid last April 15.

The conference reiterated support for the Palestinians in their quest for an independent homeland under Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, and called for collective Islamic action to liberate the Arab sector of Jerusalem seized by Israel in 1967.

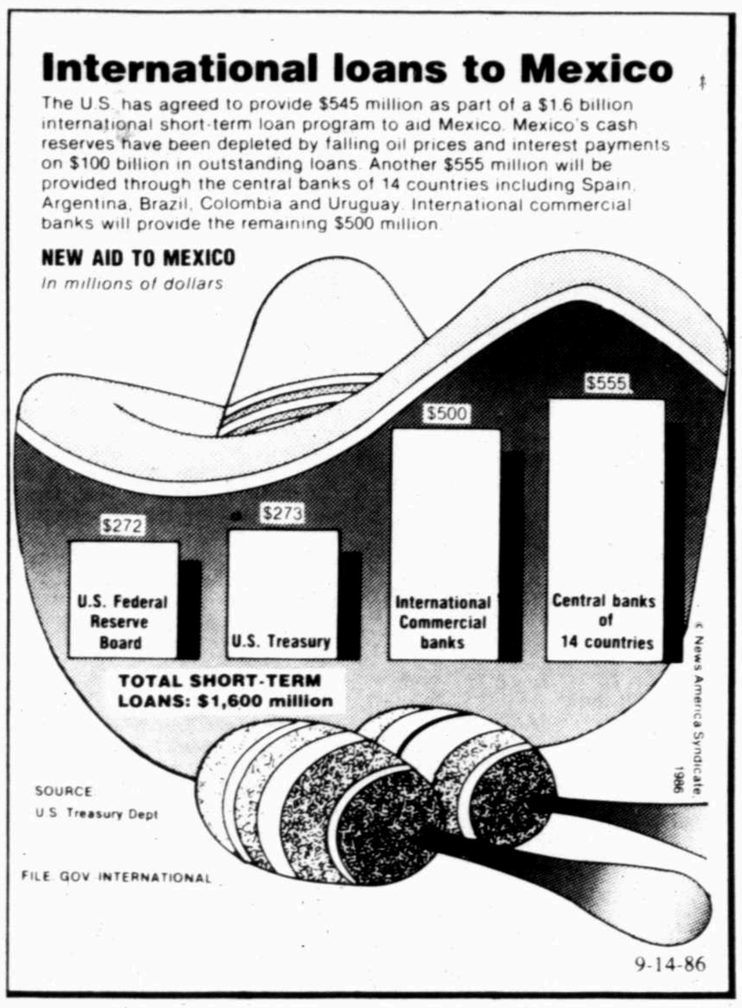

Iranian speaker interviewed

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran is prepared to work for the release of American hostages in Lebanon if Washington shows its good will, but defended the hostage-takers as having some justification.

Rafsanjani, who gave a rare news conference Wednesday with foreign reporters, said Iran's main concern is for the United States to release $507 million in Iranian assets frozen by President Carter after the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The United States and Iran have been negotiating over the assets at a special tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

"The Americans must release our assets and when they give the orders for their release, we are prepared to help them," Rafsanjani told a news conference.

Mexico asks for loan extention, bankers say

MEXICO CITY (AP) — In its struggle to win full backing of foreign banks for its new financial rescue plan, Mexico has asked for an extension of a $1.6 billion short-term loan due to expire this week, foreign bankers said.

The postponement request, sent last Friday to bankers, is a fresh sign of the difficulty Mexico has been having getting all its approximately 500 creditor banks to go along with the $7.7 billion loan package.

Meanwhile, the Bank of Boston, one of the major regional banks lending to Mexico that had been slow to accept the money package, said it has given its backing.

In Boston, bank spokesman Lloyd Wheeler said, "We did commit to be a participant in the package."

"We needed time to bring together all the elements that would meet the conditions not only of our bank, but of all the banks involved," he said. "Most of those conditions have been met."

A Western banker in Mexico City, who spoke on condition of anonymity, predicted Wednesday that the Boston bank's decision would encourage other creditors to join in the package.

By the start of this year, Mexico had won commitments from 94 percent of its creditor banks, including major American, European and Japanese banks, to loan it additional money.

But it has had a hard time persuading smaller banks to continue lending to the financially troubled nation.

Without the bankers' full backing, Mexico has so far not been able to tap the fresh commercial loans it so badly needs to revive its ailing economy.

Mexico has a foreign debt of about $100 billion, the second highest in the developing world after Brazil.

The sharp fall in oil prices last year sent the nation's economy into a tailspin and forced the government to negotiate a rescue package of about $14 billion with the international financial community.

In addition to the private bank loans, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, other international aid agencies and industrialized nations agreed to give Mexico $6 billion in credits, loans and other financial help.

As a stopgap measure, foreign creditors arranged a six-month "bridge" loan to keep Mexico from depleting its international reserves until more of the aid package was disbursed.

The bridge loan was scheduled to expire Friday but Mexico asked that it be extended until April 30, according to foreign bankers, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Fifty-three private banks provided about $500 million of the bridge loan, and about a third was put up by the U.S. government. The remainder was provided by Japan and central banks in Europe and Latin America.

A source at Citibank in New York City said Mexico's 13-member Bank Advisory Committee last Friday asked banks participating in the bridge loan to extend the due date.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the request was made on behalf of the government and that a favorable response was expected shortly.

In Mexico City, Treasury Department spokesmen were unfamiliar with the request.

National agenda

President Reagan was in typical rhetorical form during Tuesday's State of the Union address, as he attempted to redirect the attention of Congress and the American people away from the Iran-Contra arms scandal to the more pressing matters the nation faces. His concern is obvious and appropriate, and he summarized it lucidly when he warned members of Congress against becoming "so obsessed with failure" that they refuse to take risks for peace and freedom.

But for all Reagan's effort, the arms scandal is not likely to go away. The President is playing in a new ballpark in this session of Congress: The arms scandal has severely weakened his ability to rally congressional forces behind his initiatives, the Congress is solidly controlled by the Democratic Party and Reagan — with only two years remaining in his final term — is now recognized as a lame-duck president. The investigations now under way assure that the events surrounding the arms sale to Iran will be fully scrutinized in order to determine what all was attempted, who was involved, who knew what and when, and whether any laws were broken. In the end, the scandal will be fully unraveled in the interest of avoiding future mistakes. The episode has undeniably had an adverse impact on Reagan's potential effectiveness.

Reagan is correct, though, in urging Congress to not become so obsessed with the arms scandal as to avoid taking future actions in the interest of peace and freedom. America faces numerous challenges for the future, not the least being the threat to hemispheric peace posed by the fighting in Central America. But the "hot spots" of international conflict are not the only problems this nation will face in the years ahead and an administration crippled by a scandal is an administration impotent to lead the United States forward in boldness, particularly if the legislative branch is also immobilized. Keeping those matters in proper perspective, then, is the real task before the Congress.

Even under the best of conditions, that task would not be a simple one. The problems of the federal deficit, unemployment, trade and many others guarantee Congress a full agenda even without the debilitating scandal. Reagan is correct in asserting that the threat of partisanship is one that must be overcome if this Congress is to accomplish anything worthwhile.

Another topic which Reagan did not address is the critical situation facing the domestic oil industry. It's a situation that must be addressed and quickly. The industry is in desperate straits as the result of low oil prices and as long as the condition continues, it threatens not only the quest for energy independence but also the very long-term security of the nation.

In recent days, Gov. Bill Clements has talked of going to Washington to ask Reagan to impose an oil import fee to help the industry over the current woes. Although Reagan made no mention of any consideration of such in the State of the Union speech, it certainly should be one of his priority items for this year since oil is vital to the security of the nation.

One of a president's most difficult, thankless and important tasks is to focus national attention on the priority topics for concern. Reagan largely did that this week. Now the Congress should carry through by acting on those matters in a spirit of bipartisan national cooperation.

This nation must not be victimized by inaction or the fear of failure.

Another View:

No yellow ribbons

Understandably, American responses to hostage-taking in Lebanon are hardening. Civil authority in that shattered country has long since vanished. Every Westerner still in Beirut surely knows the risks. The State Department keeps urging Americans to clear out, as it did only days before the weekend abduction of four teachers at Beirut University College. By staying on, they and others put themselves and their country at hazard.

What does President Reagan owe these latest pawns in a seemingly endless end game? He can make plain Washington's concern for the safety of any American seized as hostage in a foreign conflict. But what needs to be equally clear is that there will be no secret missions, no offers of ransom, no pleas for release of terrorists jailed in Kuwait, no yellow ribbons to hail returning heroes — and please, above all, no more TOW missiles or other weapons for Iran.

The White House, chastened, seems finally to grasp the effects of its diplomatic blunders. "There is a limit to what our government can do in a chaotic situation such as that in Lebanon today," says President Reagan. And he now declares that the United States will make no concessions to terrorist groups, whatever their threats. As the pool of hostages grows in Beirut — more than 20 persons from nine countries are now captive — the only way to end this barbarous practice is to refuse to reward it.

That does not preclude contacts with hostage-takers nor a willingness to consider each new case on its own. But the first need is to restore consistency and credibility to something that had become a supply-side hostage policy, all but inviting fresh kidnappings.

The Americans who choose to stay in Lebanon have that right. Some are converts to Islam, some have Lebanese spouses, some have occupational ties and others are deeply attached to a troubled country. But whatever their reasons, they cannot expect or deserve the sympathy that spontaneously flows to innocent, unwitting and heroic hostages.

They are not passengers in a hijacked airline or Foreign Service officers in a captured embassy. It's not accident or duty that keeps them in Beirut, but their own decision.

What the United States owes them most is what it owes all other Americans: pursuing the policy most likely to protect potential hostages from being seized in the first place. What's needed is a steadfast, credible resistance to blackmail. After the blunders and bluster of recent months, that won't be easy to convey, but it will defeat more terrorists than any amount of rage, ransom or yellow ribbons.

NSC 'buried' arms scandal information

WASHINGTON — The intangible cost of the Iran/contra arms fiasco continues to grow.

Jack Anderson

In addition to causing political embarrassment for the Reagan administration and serious damage to American influence in the Arab world, it now turns out that U.S. intelligence experts were denied crucial information on Iran for more than a year because of the White House's insistence on keeping the Iranian arms deal secret.

Congressional sources told our associate Lucette Lagnado that "thousands of documents" relating to Iran were probably withheld from State Department and Pentagon analysts to protect the secret National Security Council arms-for-hostages operation.

The material that was bottled up was raw data gathered by the National Security Agency, the super-secret, military-run outfit that intercepts and decodes communications traffic all over the world. NSA intercepts are an absolutely vital source of information for U.S. intelligence analysts.

It is not yet clear who ordered the NSA to withhold its raw data from the State Department and possibly the Defense Intelligence Agency. Our congressional sources said it apparently was the National Security Council, but that the CIA may also have been involved. One source told us some CIA analysts may also have been cut out of the NSA's information network.

The lid was clamped on the NSA intercepts because experienced intelligence analysts would probably have grown suspicious at reports of strange planes landing in Iran. Their suspicions might have led to disclosure that the planes were carrying arms and White House negotiators.

Rather than risk premature disclosure, the NSC decided to deny the incriminating information to anyone who might be savvy enough to figure out what it meant.

"It is frightening," one congressional source said. "They simply shut down the intelligence information so that a number of agencies were prevented from seeing what they (NSA) had on Iran. The NSC essentially ordered the NSA not to disseminate their cables and reports."

As another congressional source pointed out, lack of information from the NSA's intercepts meant that foreign-policy recommendations were being made by the deprived agencies on the basis of inadequate intelligence. Among the intercepts withheld, presumably, were routine cables that tell of other arms shipments to Iran.

State Department sources say that intelligence analysts in Foggy Bottom are "furious" at the realization that vital information was kept from them for over a year. The realization dawned on them slowly over the months as they detected significant gaps in the cable-intercept material they were getting from the NSA.

A special internal task force under Michael Armacost, undersecretary of state for political affairs, is reportedly examining the NSA's Iran files in an effort to catch up on the material that was withheld for more than a year.

We have been unable to determine exactly how long it took State Department analysts to grow suspicious about the NSA's cutoff of raw data. Sources explained that intelligence analysts typically are inundated with raw material, so it would have been relatively easy for cable intercepts to be withheld without arousing immediate suspicion.

By the same token, however, it would have been extremely easy for the analysts to have figured out what was going on — the secret arms traffic to Iran — if they had been provided with all the cables the NSA was intercepting. It was this certainty that led the NSC to cut off the supply of raw data.

Footnote: The NSA intercepts are now being sent through special channels directly to Secretary of State George Shultz.

QUIET DIPLOMACY: American Jewish organizations can't agree on the best course of action to protect Jews living in Iran: publicity or quiet diplomacy. In one recent case, the silent treatment seemed to work. Manocher Kalimi Nikrouz, a Jewish member of the Iranian parliament, was arrested on trumped up sex-abuse charges and interrogated. American Jewish leaders decided not to make a public protest, and Nikrouz was eventually released and reinstated in parliament. So for the moment, the policy is to play down the precarious plight of Iranian Jews.

Pregnancy rulings show ERA isn't needed

WASHINGTON — Do you remember the Equal Rights Amendment? Neither did I until reminded of its forgettable nature by two recent Supreme Court decisions. Both concerned the rights of pregnant women. Both illustrated the problematic nature of legislative mandates of equal treatment of the sexes.

George F. Will

California's fair-employment statute requires employers to provide unpaid leave and reinstatement to employees who become pregnant. A receptionist who took leave and then sought reinstatement was told there was no opening. She complained to the state fair-employment office, but the employer said California's law is inconsistent with and preempted by Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as amended by the Pregnancy Disability Act (PDA) of 1978.

The 1964 act banned discrimination on the basis of sex, but in 1976 the Supreme Court held that discrimination on the basis of pregnancy was not sex discrimination under Title VII. So in 1978, Congress brought discrimination on the basis of pregnancy under Title VII.

The California employer argued that if it complied with California's statute, it would be vulnerable to charges of reverse discrimination brought by temporarily disabled males who do not receive the same entitlement as females disabled by pregnancy. A district court agreed, saying that California's law mandates preferential treatment for females; that Title VII neutrally bans special treatment (i.e., for both sexes), and that state law must yield to federal law.

But an appeals court reversed, arguing that Title VII does not demand that state laws "be blind to pregnancy's existence," and that Congress only intended to put a floor below which pregnancy disability benefits may not fall, not a ceiling above which they may not rise. Now the Supreme Court has upheld that appeals court and the woman.

In his opinion for the Court, Justice Marshall said California's law merely allows women as well as men to have families without losing their jobs. In dissent, Justice White, joined by Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justice Powell, argued that the PDA says clearly that pregnant employees "shall be treated the same for all employment-related purposes" as nonpregnant employees. That language "leaves no room for preferential treatment of pregnant workers." Contrary to the mandate of the PDA, California requires an employer to have a disability-leave benefit for pregnancy even if the employer has none for other disabilities. Congress' interest was not to put pregnancy in a class by itself for favorable treatment.

The three dissenters, generally considered conservatives, probably were faithful to the liberal intention of Congress in 1978, when "equal treatment" was more consciously praised than pondered. For the majority, the liberal Marshall was doing what conservatives often do, granting broad deference to the discretion of legislative branches in state governments.

Now, suppose the ERA ("Equality of rights shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex") had been ratified. It was designed to trigger an avalanche of litigation by making almost every social policy touching sexual status open to constitutional challenge. California's statute could then have been challenged by the employer as incompatible with the ERA as well as the PDA. And California's statute might have fallen, a law benefiting women felled by the ERA, supposedly a feminist scythe.

Eight days after deciding the California case, the Supreme Court ruled in the case of a Missouri woman who became pregnant and was granted, in accordance with her employer's policy, "leave without guarantee of reinstatement." When she sought reinstatement and was told there were no positions available, she filed for unemployment benefits.

She was refused because Missouri disqualifies anyone who leaves work "without good cause attributable to his work or to his employer." Missouri ruled that she "quit because of pregnancy," therefore voluntarily. A circuit court sided with the woman, saying Missouri's law was inconsistent with a federal law barring the use of pregnancy as an excuse for denying unemployment benefits to otherwise eligible women.

However, Missouri's Supreme Court ruled against the woman, saying that federal law only prevented state law from singling out pregnancy for unfavorable treatment. The U.S. Supreme Court has now agreed, without dissent. It has said that Missouri has an unusually narrow definition of what is meant by losing a job "for good cause" (i.e., a reason directly attributable to the work or the employer). However, pregnancy is not the only temporary disability that does not qualify a worker for benefits.

The Missouri woman did not claim that pregnant women were treated unlike other workers who became unemployed for reasons not causally connected to their work or their employer. Rather, she said the federal law mandated special treatment for pregnancy. Her argument was, of course, incompatible with the ERA's "letter and spirit."

Remember when supporters said the ERA was needed to "put women in the Constitution"? These two recent cases show that the careful adjustment of policy pertaining to the status of the sexes can and should continue without any such crude instrument.

ART BUCHWALD

Group disinforms in no one's best interest!

The new foreign policy of the United States is to feed disinformation to both countries engaged in a war so that neither one can win. It's called the "No-Win Good Neighbor Fairness Doctrine."

Art Buchwald

The need for such a policy came to light when the Iraqis and Iranians started shooting at each other six years ago and the U.S. decided it would be a disaster if one of them won.

A special working group called "Double Dealer" was set up in a safe house on North Poindexter Street to see it did not happen.

Luke Booney, recently retired from the CIA, the National Security Council, Southern Airways, Singlaub's Raiders and the Iranian-American Friendship Society, is in charge of Double Dealer. He said the program is one of the most complicated projects the U.S. has ever been involved with.

Booney told me, "It's one thing to see that one side defeats another in war. It's much more difficult to make sure both lose."

I said, "No one said being even-handed in war was a picnic."

"The only thing that keeps us going is that we hate the people running Iran — and we can't stomach those running Iraq."

"Recently you gave Iran arms to beat up on Iraq. Aren't you tilting towards the Ayatollah?"

"No, because at the same time we gave Iraq top secret satellite photos showing where the Iranian arms were. This is a perfect example of double dealing. It's called playing both sides against the Middle East. The Iranians got arms to kill Iraqis, the Iraqis received intelligence photos to destroy the Iranians, and we got money for the contras."

"What else does Double Dealer do to keep the war stalemated?"

"We provide misinformation to both sides. Recently Iraq was expecting an attack on its border by the Iranians. We misinformed the Iraqis where the Iranians were going to come. The Iraqis prepared their defense in one place and the Iranians attacked in another."

"How did you guarantee that the Iranians wouldn't gain the upper hand?"

"We sold them faulty arms so when they attacked their missiles would fail. Because of our reliable disinformation no one got anywhere. Excuse me, I have to send a telex to Teheran informing them that Baghdad is going to overrun Qof (Qom)."

"That's not true, is it?," I asked

"Of course not, but it might slow down the fighting in Basra. We don't want the Iranians to win in Basra because it will only encourage them to keep fighting. The Fairness Doctrine requires that both sides get so exhausted they ask us to be the peacemakers."

"Is this the first war the U.S. ever got involved with in which we didn't want anyone to win?"

"There have been others, but this is the first one which we've taken such an active role. The reason why is because we have both Iran and Iraq's best interests at heart."

"I read the other day that Iraq claims the disinformation you gave them produced a disastrous defeat for them at the Iraqi seaport of Fao. They're pretty darned mad about it."

"They have nothing to be upset about. Double Dealers are scrupulous about seeing everyone gets a fair shake."

"How can they be sure they're getting equal amounts of disinformation?"

Booney said, "They just have to trust us."

WEATHER SUMMARY

More pleasant weather likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midland-area residents can expect another pleasant day to begin a winter weekend. The forecast for Friday, as given by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, holds only fair skies and mild temperatures. The high is expected to by near 70 degrees.

The overnight low tonight is predicted to be near the 40-degree mark. Under fair skies winds will be light and variable in the early evening but should become southeasterly at five to 15 mph by midnight. On Friday, winds will continue out of the southeast, increasing to 10-15 mph.

Wednesday's high tied the record high of 79 set for that date in 1950. Today's low was 38 degrees above the record low of two degrees above zero set in 1948.

STATE

Patches of fog developed in south central Texas again today. Considerable high level cloudiness was moving across the state, while some low level clouds covered the eastern sections of North and South Texas.

A weak cold front was over the Panhandle, while the dry line was situated from near Wichita Falls southwesterly to near San Angelo.

A strong, complex low-pressure system over the upper midwest caused gusty winds across the state, the National Weather Service said. The western half of the state had generally west to southwest winds.

Elsewhere, southerly winds were common, with speeds generally at 10 to 20 mph. Gusts of more than 30 mph raked the Panhandle. The middle Rio Grande plains and the southern Big Bend region had light and variable winds.

Overnight temperatures were mainly in the 50s across West Texas, with a few readings in the 40s in the southwest mountains. The rest of the state had readings mainly in the high 50s to 60s. At 4 a.m., readings ranged from 45 at Marfa to 64 at Brownsville.

NATION

A storm that rattled the eastern Rockies with high winds brought snow and freezing rain to the Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley today, while tidal flooding threatened the northern California coast.

High-wind warnings covered the eastern mountains of Wyoming and Colorado, with gusts up to 100 mph possible. A gust of 89 mph was clocked at Boulder, Colo., this morning. High winds were also reported in Nebraska and the Dakotas.

More freezing rain was expected today in North Dakota, while higher elevations in South Dakota could get 6 inches of snow.

Arrest warrants out for hot check writers

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The number of hot checks written here have doubled in a year and arrest warrants being served on hot check writers, beginning today, have increased by 200, said Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

The county hot check office will begin to seek out 300 hot check writers today, who have ignored notices from their banks, merchants and the county.

"People aren't getting the message. This is the ultimate convincer," said Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

This week's roundup is the third in three years sponsored by Dettman. During each past roundup about 100 warrants were served, he said.

Since 1985 the number of hot checks has doubled, but so has collection rates, Dettman said.

In 1985 the county's hot check office received 4,918 checks from merchants worth $265,315. The office collected 2,389 checks worth $121,452.

Last year the office received 8,973 checks worth $407,708. The county attorney collected 4,737 of these checks worth $240,615.

The economy and increased efficiency have caused more hot checks to flow into the county office, Dettman said.

More merchants are sending checks to the county attorney's office, which handles all checks below $750, he said.

Checks written for more than $750 are felonies and are processed by the District Attorney's office.

The penalties for writing hot checks vary from up to a $1,000 fine and/or 180 days in jail for checks written between $20 to $200.

Fines up to $2,000 and/or up to a year in jail are leveled for checks written between $200 and $750.

"It's theft and I don't like thieves. A lot of people are ignoring their responsibilities," Dettman said.

"They view it just like any other bill, but it's not a debt. It's property that's been taken," he said.

Most of the people facing arrests this week have ignored up to three letters sent by the county attorney's office, banks and merchants, Dettman said.

But about 10 percent of the hot check writers are "hard core" professionals, he said.

One woman, who is facing arrest, has three separate closed bank accounts, from which she writes between 30 to 40 checks a day, Dettman said.

People who think they have an arrest warrant out for them, can turn themselves in and save the embarrassment of being arrested at work or in their home, Dettman said.

"People should know they have a warrant out for their arrest. They can hide for a little while, but it's going to catch up with them eventually," he said.

Geter will be reliving nightmare on TV

CBS will air movie about engineer's ordeal

DALLAS (AP) — Lenell Geter will watch dumbfounded as police officers surround him, and he'll live through the same agonizing trial and hear the prison doors clang shut again.

But when the ordeal begins anew Tuesday night, the aerospace engineer will be watching actor Dorian Harewood in the CBS television movie, "Guilty of Innocence: The Lenell Geter Story."

"Just remembering some of the painful events, remembering my arrest and how life-threatening and scary it was..." Geter's voice trails off.

Geter, a black engineer for E-Systems, was arrested Aug. 24, 1982, in connection with the robbery of a Taco Bell. He later was convicted of robbing a Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant the day before his arrest.

His co-workers and family, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a "60 Minutes" segment and other stories of his plight helped turn up discrepancies in the case, and he was exonerated after 16 months in prison.

Five eyewitnesses had identified him as the robber, but Geter's supporters argued he was arrested only because he was a black man in a small, white Texas town.

"I'll be emotionally up and down roller coaster-style," the 29-year-old Geter said of the movie in a recent telephone interview. "If I didn't have to live with the bad memories of a bad experience, I wouldn't have too much of a problem seeing it again."

> "Just remembering some of the painful events, remembering my arrest and how life-threatening and scary it was...I'll be emotionally up and down roller coaster-style. If I didn't have to live with the bad memories of a bad experience, I wouldn't have too much of a problem seeing it again."

Police said they had arrested another man in the case, and Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade dropped the charge against Geter on March 24, 1984, after the nationwide publicity.

No one else ever was brought to trial, said Geter attorney Ed Sigel, who is portrayed by Dabney Coleman in the Embassy Communications production.

Geter — who still lives in the city of Greenville, about 50 miles northeast of Dallas — has filed an $18 million civil suit against almost all the officials and institutions who had anything to do with what he called his "racially motivated incarceration."

Wade says of the case only that "the press proved him innocent whether he was innocent or not. I still in my own heart feel like he was guilty."

After his December 1983 release from prison, Geter went back to work at E-Systems.

"I'm able to express myself better as I get this stuff out of my system," he said. "You begin to unbottle yourself, and I especially want to talk about the case because there's much to learn about our legal system.

"I had always felt our judicial system would never treat anyone like this," he said. "The mechanism to unjustly incarcerate people is still intact, and I hope this movie gets that point across to people."

Although closely involved with the script-writing process, Geter came to the Dallas movie set only once, to watch himself get married. He and his wife, Marcia, tied the knot June 30, 1984, and now have a 10-month-old girl.

Geter has started the Geter Justice for All Foundation, which provides names of attorneys, civil rights agencies, Justice Department officials and others who can aid people facing criminal charges. It also offers spiritual literature.

Geter says his best prison experience was teaching Bible classes — and the worst was "everything else."

TUE's request approved to make customer refunds

From Staff Reports

The Public Utility Commission has approved TU Electric's request to reduce fuel charges and to refund about $55.6 million to its customers, according to a company press release.

Because of the drop in the cost of natural gas, which is used to generate about half the electricity used by TU Electric customers, the company had asked the PUC to decrease its composite charge for fuel from from 2.45 cents per kilowatt-hour to 2.19 cents.

The average residential customer will save about $30 per year because of the lower fuel charge, a 3.7 percent annual reduction in the average residential electric bill, the press release said. The lower charge will go into effect in February.

The reduction in rates caused by decreasing fuel costs is the second for TU Electric customers within a year. Residential customers' bills were lowered by about 5 percent annually in March 1986.

The refund approved represents further savings to customers from lower fuel costs, the release said. The refund will be made through a credit to February bills, with residential customers who use 1,000 kilowatt-hours receiving refunds averaging $8.

Odessa police holding armed robbery suspects

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Police today were holding two suspects and seeking a third in connection with several armed robberies that have occurred since Jan. 16.

A 21-year-old Odessa man was arrested without incident this morning on warrants issued by Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford charging him with the Jan. 20 robbery of Cowtown Boots, 1315 W. 22nd St. According to police spokesman Cpl. John McAhon, the suspect was still being questioned by officers late this morning.

Another 21-year-old robbery suspect, Kiari S. Jernigan, 917 W. Monahans St., briefly escaped from police Wednesday afternoon after being arrested when he returned to the scene of an earlier alleged crime.

Jernigan managed to escape from police about 3:30 p.m. Wednesday after being identified by a victim of the Jan. 24 robbery of Robinson's Furniture Store, 1537 E. 2nd St.

Municipal Judge J.E. Weatherly set bond for Jernigan at $75,000 on the robbery charge in connection with the Jan. 22 robbery of Merle Norman Cosmetics, 207 W. 6th St. and at $25,000 on a charge of escape.

According to McAhon, detectives had been questioning Jernigan on the second floor of the police administration building and were returning him to the booking-jail area of the building when he fled as officers were removing their firearms to place them in a lock box before entering the jail area.

ED TODD

Old-fashioned love still exists, not always evident

Todd

I've been "in love" ever since I first heard music — popular music.

It wasn't my idea. It was an enticing and seductive attack on my emotions. That became clear this very day when I again heard the song "Whatever Happened To Old-Fashioned Love?"

I don't know, and the songwriter probably doesn't know either. But I've concluded that old-fashioned love, if I have a clear notion of what the writer implies by that, is still extant. It's just not all that evident. It has much to do with integrity.

What I term the old romantic songs promised an earthly bliss on a heavenly plane, and they delivered if only for the duration of the sound of the music. Remember: "You Smile and the Angels Sing," "Shine on Harvest Moon," "Sentimental Journey," "Dolores," "Marie," "Yearning." They all made me feel so good; I was either ecstatic, sentimental, or "yearning just for you" — as the song goes — but having no object of my affection.

That, my friend, leads to loving frustration.

I was in love with love — popularized and often fantasized love. Amour. I wanted that good feeling forever.

Then along came painful songs about faded love, cheating and cold, cold hearts, jilted lovers and all that tommyrot certainly not aimed at souls like me. That was the other extreme, the painful extreme. I wanted the other extreme: Euphoria brought about by exciting and blissful true love which the old songwriters dreamed about and probably languished over.

Now, as a lad, I wasn't definite about love — not too sure what it was all about. But I knew that the upside had to be absolutely wonderful, similar to the effects of Handel's "Messiah." Popularized love, I was certain, was a lasting "rush." It was the excitement of a skydiver jumping from on high or a pilot flying into the heavens and joining the angels in dance.

Love was it. It was everything. What else was there? All else was just a mere platform, perhaps a stage, for the enactment of romantic love. Love was real — not just fantasy. It was and is as real as the unseen spirits that abound.

What glory love is! Could anything be more wondrous? Could anything else give that feeling of being whole?

Oh, yes. The poetic songs tell of love's enchanting journey. What more could there be? This was it.

Then, it happened. I "fell in love" again and again and again. It was an exciting trip to the far galaxies. But, as I found out, the sojourn home was not without pain, disappointment and disillusionment after love waned and fell apart.

So, I've thought, perhaps all along I was looking for love in all the wrong places. Must be.

Today, I'm "in love" without being "in love." The object of my affection is life — the joy of living — and not the entanglement of another love affair perhaps doomed to fade or destined to flourish; mine faded. I'm still hopelessly caught up in romance. But it's the romance of a God-given life that offers abundant living in the giving of unconditional love.

This "being in love" business is so wrought with expectations that disappointment is ever looming.

Today, agape love — if attainable — is my preferred love. It is idealized love. It is God's love. It is a love for the benevolent concern for the good of others. It is unselfish.

That is my aspiration.

Still, my heart sings with the angels over the joys of that old-fashioned love which romantic and poetic love songs are all about.

Activists charge immigration law being 'starved to death'

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Reagan administration is trying to "starve to death" the 1986 Simpson-Rodino immigration control law, two Washington immigration activists charged Wednesday.

In Austin for the first of five statewide conferences for employers and workers concerned and confused about the landmark legislation, the two men maintained that the Immigration and Naturalization Service has requested only one third to one half of the money that Congress had authorized to implement the new law. Other participants claimed the INS is forcing undocumented workers to finance the legalization portion of the law and that the agency is ignoring key provisions needed to protect Mexican-Americans from job discrimination.

Rick Swartz, president of the National Immigration Forum, said Congress authorized INS to spend $422 million a year on the new law, but the agency has requested only $138 million for this year and $194 million for next year. That money, he said, would pay only for stepped-up border enforcement and the seasonal agricultural workers program.

"The administration may be in the process of starving the bill to death," Swartz told reporters before the conference began. "Battles over appropriations are likely to become quite sharp in the near future."

Jose Trevino, executive director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, agreed with Swartz's assessment and said the INS is placing congressmen in a political predicament. In these times of tight budgets, Trevino said, "They don't want to be viewed as asking for increased appropriations."

INS spokesman Rick Kenney said Swartz and Trevino oversimplified the budget picture. Kenney said INS has requested a 78-percent budget increase between fiscal 1986 and fiscal 1988. In addition, Kenney said, INS is using some existing resources to implement the new law and is counting on almost $270 million over the next two years in fees paid by persons using INS services.

State Rep. Al Luna, D-Houston and chairman of the Mexican-American Legislative Caucus, complained that INS has recommended increasing the fees charged to undocumented workers who want to apply for legal status from the current $50-$100 to $150-$200. The agency has requested no money for that program.

"The INS proposes instead to pass off the costs of legalization to the undocumented workers," Luna said. In combination with lawyers' fees, he said, that "will limit legalization to only those eligible who can purchase legal status."

Kenney said the Simpson-Rodino bill provided for the higher fees. "It's the Congress who gave us the authority to do that," he said.

The legalization program, which begins May 5, allows all who have lived in this country continuously since 1972 to apply for permanent resident status. Those who have lived here since 1982 may apply for temporary resident status and may receive permanent status after 18 months if they know English and the history of the United States and have no felony convictions.

Jim Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union, said his group opposed Simpson-Rodino because of the penalties it imposes on employers who knowlingly hire illegal aliens or fail to verify the legal status of their workers. Those penalties, which apply only to violations since the bill took effect, begin June 1.

"I don't think there's any doubt that that's going to be used in the Southwest, in Texas, as a pretext for discrimination," Harrington said. He said the TCLU will take to the courts to "fight employers who fire Hispanics or who don't hire Hispanics and claim that it is a result of the immigration bill."

Luna said the INS has not yet released the anti-discrimination rules "essential to protecting the Mexican-American community...from discriminatory hiring practices."

Kenney said the Department of Justice, not INS, will handle discrimination problems. "We are not going to get involved in enforcing an area of the law with which we are not experts," he said.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower's office organized the five conferences to explain what the new law does and doesn't do.

"It is very confusing to farmworkers and unions," Hightower said. "It is very confusing to farmers and ranchers."

Missionaries charged with abuse

LOCKHART (AP) — A father-and-son missionary team has been jailed on charges of sexually abusing three Luling girls, authorities said.

Myron Erick Anderson, 62, and John Anderson, 26, both of Luling, were being held today in the Caldwell County jail. Myron Anderson was being held in lieu of $50,000 bond and his son on $75,000 bond, authorities said.

All three victims, ages 11, 13 and 14, claim they have been sexually abused by the two men for five years. They told authorities about the alleged sexual abuse after the independent missionaries went to Mexico in December.

The men were arrested when they arrived from Mexico, Caldwell County sheriff's deputy Kirk Bennett said.

The father was arrested on Jan. 22 at San Antonio International Airport and the son was arrested Saturday in McAllen by customs agents.

Myron Anderson has been a missionary for more than 25 years.

Midlander may be charged in burglary

From Staff Reports

A 19-year-old Midland man is expected to be charged today with burglary of a habitation after he and another man were seen by police Wednesday leaving a home that had just been burglarized.

According to reports, about 3:15 p.m. police received a report that a home in the 300 block of East Pecan was being burglarized. Police at the scene spotted the two men walking from the house to another that witnesses said was used to store stolen property.

After a brief chase, one suspect was caught two blocks away, while the other eluded police.

Police checked the house, and found a back door had been forced open, the home had been ransacked, and two television sets and two stereo systems were missing. The items were recovered.

The arrest was a joint effort of the patrol division and the city's two-week-old special task force, police said.

While one burglary was thwarted, police are investigating several others that occurred Wednesday, including one in the 3200 block of Mariana Avenue.

According to reports, a ladies' diamond solitaire ring valued at $2,500, a videocassette recorder valued at $400, a 35 millimeter camera valued at $125, a pair of binoculars valued at $75, and a micro cassette recorder valued at $60 were stolen from a residence. Reports said the burglary occurred between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Police Roundup

A set of stereo speakers valued at $700, a portable color television set valued at $600, and two 35 millimeter cameras valued at $450 were reported stolen from a residence in the 400 block of Nicklaus Street. Police said the burglary occurred between 11 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

In the 1900 block of East Pine, police said a burglary occurred at a residence between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. Among the items reported stolen were a color television set valued at $700, a pair of diamond stud earrings valued at $400, a diamond necklace valued at $375, and a gold wedding band valued at $200.

In other reports, police are investigating three other residential burglaries. A videocassette recorder valued at $300 was stolen from a residence in the 400 block of Sunset Street. The burglary occurred between 1 p.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A 19-inch television set valued at $40 was reported stolen from a residence in the 200 block of North Madison Street. Police said the burglary occurred between midnight and 12:10 a.m.

Police said a .22 caliber revolver valued at $32, a gold rope chain valued at $25, and other jewelry valued at $30 were reported stolen from a residence in the 1600 block of Hemlock Avenue.

SUSPECTS

Jernigan fled through a westside rear door of the building and ran east through the intersection of South Grant Avenue and 3rd Street toward the Ector County Courthouse with police officers in pursuit, McAhon said.

The 21-year-old robbery suspect was apprehended at the intersection of East 4th Street and North Texas Avenue, near the Bailie Griffith store and returned to the police administration building, McAhon said.

Jernigan was later served three arrest warrants issued by Peace Justice R.G. Hungerford charging him with the Jan. 16 robbery of Robinson's Furniture Store, the Jan. 20 robbery of Cowtown Boots, 1315 W. 22nd St., and the Jan. 24 robbery of Parkway East Motel, 3071 E. Highway 80.

McAhon said late this morning officers were still seeking at least one other suspect in connection with the string robberies.

According to McAhon, Jernigan entered the furniture store Wednesday afternoon and was recognized by a clerk who immediately called police.

Elderly workers decline

While close to 60 percent of all men over age 65 were still working in the early years of this century, this figure has fallen to only 15 percent today.

FUEL

The refund is the fourth for TU Electric since May 1986, with a total of about $320 million, including interest, having been returned to customers.

TU Electric Senior Vice President Tom Baker said the company will continue its program of aggressively pursuing lower-priced fuel supplies. Through that program, the company's average cost of gas declined from $3.74 per million BTU in 1984 to $2.77 in 1986.

TU Electric serves more than 2 million customers, or about one-third the population of Texas.

Meeting slated to organize local SCORE chapter

From Staff Reports

A meeting to organize a SCORE Chapter in Midland is scheduled for 10 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 3, at Midland College. The meeting will be held in the Faculty Lounge, Student Activities Building.

SCORE stands for Service Corps of Retired Executives, a national organization of former executives who provide their expertise to local businesses in such areas as management, accounting, advertising, physical operations, and expansion plans.

"We have received acceptances from more than 30 persons who are interested in establishing and working in a local SCORE Chapter," said Dr. Jerry Jones, chairman of business studies at Midland College.

Jones has been working on the SCORE Chapter organizing efforts with Doug Smith, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce's Small Business Council.

Jones also pointed out that SCORE accepts volunteers who haven't yet retired.

"SCORE members provide their years of knowledge and experience without charge, assisting mostly small business owners and managers in solving business problems," Jones said. "It's a way for local businesses to obtain expert help from people in the community who likely had years of experience in solving just such problems."

Open to both men and women, anyone who would like to attend the organizational meeting or learn more about SCORE is asked to call Jones at 685-4657.

Rebels welcome Jack Fryar, LHS' new principal

By DAVID WEIS
and SHANNON FOX

The Rebels would like to welcome our new principal, Jack Fryar. He comes to us from Lee Freshman, where he served as principal for four years.

In the past he served Midland High as assistant principal.

He has also taught Honors English classes at Lee and Midland. He served as chairman for the Lee English department for six years.

Mr. Fryar grew up in Big Spring and graduated from high school there. He later received his bachelor or masters degrees from Hardin-Simmons University. He also holds a Masters in Education from University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

His interests include reading, geneology, gourmet cooking and attending movies. He has also written family history books.

• • •

Both the basketball and swim teams are competing in their district races this week. This Friday the boys basketball team faces archrival, Midland High.

The next two weeks are crucial as the Rebels need victories to remain in the playoff hunt.

The Lady Rebs have returned to their winning ways and are currently tied for second place in the loop race.

• • •

Meanwhile, the swim team is preparing for an upcoming meet against Midland High and San Angelo. It will be held Feb. 3 at the City of Midland swimming facilities.

• • •

Even though basketball and swimming are in full swing, another Rebel team, the baseball team, is preparing for its beginning practices in the first week of February.

Joe Eldridge, Jason Logi and Danny Guerra, all returning senior lettermen with varsity experience, hope to lead the Rebels to the playoffs.

• • •

There are many fun things coming up on the Youth Center calendar. Here are some dates to remember:

— Friday, Jan. 30: All-School Dance following the Lee-Midland basketball game. Admission is $2 per person or $3 per couple. The dance is for all Lee and Midland Freshmen and High School students.

— Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 31-Feb. 1: Lee High School band is hosting a Rummage Sale from 10 a.m.-6 p.m. on Saturday and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday.

Be sure and put Feb. 6 on your calendar. The Shades, a vintage rock 'n roll group, will be playing that night after the Lee-Abilene game at the Youth Center. Admission will be $3 per person.

Youth suicide report expected

AUSTIN (AP) — A college administrator told state lawmakers Wednesday that a report on suicides among school-age youths will be ready before the Legislature adjourns.

"Suicide is a major killer of our youth, but school personnel are relatively unaware of the problem," said James Williamson, dean of the College of Education at East Texas State University in Commerce.

Williamson appeared before the Senate Education Committee to introduce several researchers from the Center for Policy Studies and Research in Elementary and Secondary Education.

He said the group this spring also would complete reports on teacher testing and paperwork. "Teachers do feel extremely burdened, and paperwork does contribute to burnout," he said.

Calvary unit whoops it up at Fort Concho for exercise

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — After nearly a century, the cavalry has returned to Fort Concho, war whoops and all.

It charged across the parade grounds as the Army's III Corps conducted the more up-to-date Exercise Roadrunner '87 over a 16-county area of West Texas.

The 1st Cavalry Division's horse platoon from Fort Hood was created in 1972 as a ceremonial unit. Its members' uniforms, weaponry and tactics are taken from the Army cavalry manual of the late 1800s, during the Indian campaigns.

The soldiers on horseback with their sabres flashing in the dusty blue sky last weekend brought glimpses of a more glorious past for Fort Concho, which was established in 1867 as a frontier post, but saw the 16th Infantry move out in 1889 when the frontier had moved farther west.

Wild war whoops broke the silence during the cavalry's shooting demonstration, as troopers aimed their Colt .45-caliber revolvers and rifles at balloons while jumping hurdles in formation.

"We don't do re-enactments. We all have regular Army jobs, but we carry out the tradition of the cavalry," said Trooper Darrell Lawson, a member of the elite, 28-man platoon.

"It's our job. We get paid for it, we live it," Lawson said. He extended his tour of duty with the cavalry unit for another year because he enjoys it so much.

Horses are dark-colored, with few markings, for camouflage.

"Sometimes firing our Colts puts out a cloud of smoke, and you temporarily lose sight of us. Then we come charging through the smoke," Lt. John Phelan said.

The whoops are reminders of the past, as are the highly polished sabers, used more often by European cavalry than American units. The sabres are tricky: drawing them can disrupt a man's balance enough to unseat him, as one rider did.

> "We don't do re-enactments. We all have regular Army jobs, but we carry out the tradition of the cavalry. It's our job. We get paid for it, we live it."
> — Trooper Darrell Lawson

"When you're at a full gallop, and you draw your saber, reach down and hit the ground with it — you watch and tell us if it's hard," Phelan said.

The spectators, many of them children, greeted the cavalry's maneuvers with whoops and screams of their own.

With faces hidden by cowboy hats and decked out in their best sheepskin vests and buckskin jackets, Junior Medina, 6, and Lee Ray, 5, wandered the grounds in search of the "calary."

After the performance, Spec. 4 Jim Wilson, the platoon's muleskinner, kept a watchful eye on a dog named Missy, the platoon's mascot.

Platoon folklore includes the tale of the time Missy wandered off and was picked up by a local pound somewhere in Arkansas. "She had to get rabies shots, too. They didn't like the ones she got in Texas," Wilson said.

As muleskinner, Wilson is in charge of the team's four mules, a wagon and Missy. "The reason I'm called a muleskinner is that sometimes you have to whip (the mules) and beat their hides off to make them go."

These mules, however, are fairly well-behaved, Wilson said of Jan and Jill, adding, "They do what you tell them, as long as you tell them."

Commands are simple: "gee" for a right turn, "haw" for a left turn, a smacking of the lips for a trot.

"Missy does the best part and barks. Then they go and do all kinds of stuff," Wilson said.

"Fighting on horseback is over," said Lawson. "But if the Army ever wanted to do it, they could."

STATE

Mattox thinks state can avoid daily fines against prison system

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he believes the state has a good chance of heading off the $800,000 in daily fines threatened by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice over failure to carry out court-ordered prison reforms.

Mattox said a three-judge panel of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has agreed to speed up hearing the state's case. He also voiced optimism that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's threatened fine won't be levied.

"We've very hopeful we will be able to avoid the penalties in this case," Mattox said Wednesday.

That early hearing should enable Texas to obtain either a ruling from the appeals court or a stay of the fines that U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice ordered to begin April 1, Mattox said.

"Hopefully this will give us some breathing room on the possible $24 million a month that Judge Justice's order says will kick in on April 1," Mattox said.

The Tyler judge found Texas in contempt Dec. 31 for failing to live up to terms of an agreement that settled the decade-long inmate lawsuit against the prison system.

Justice said that if the state fails to make numerous improvements — such as building more cells and hiring more guards and medical personnel — the daily fines would begin April 1.

Mattox said he is convinced Justice went too far, adding that he expects the appeals court to side with the state on some issues.

"We think he stepped beyond the bounds of reason in some portions of his order," Mattox said. "Just because the judge says it, doesn't make it necessarily reasonable. He is fallible, just like everyone else is."

Mattox said the state can and will make many of the court-ordered improvements.

But he said Justice has imposed unreasonable time limits on the state, since the budget is written in two-year cycles and the economic recession has drained its treasury.

"The state of Texas is not resisting trying to bring our prisons to a better level of care. But we need additional time to do this," Mattox said. "We are going to comply to the best of our abilities, given our economic circumstances."

In another prison-related development, House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said he and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are discussing ways to make emergency transfers of money from other state agencies into the prison system to help pay for reform work.

Lewis said one proposal would involve temporarily shifting some funds from the state's teacher retirement system.

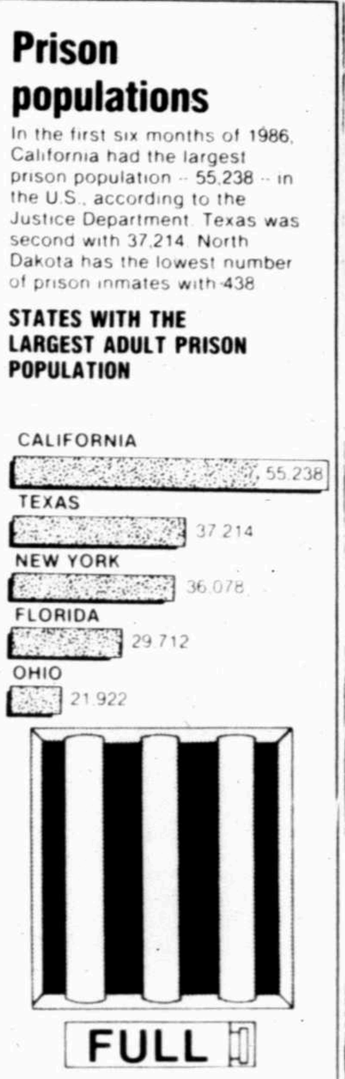

"Teacher retirement is one that is overfunded at this time because of the increase in the values of their stock portfolio," Hobby said.

But he added that "if there is a desire to take money out of the retirement fund, it would certainly also contain a rebate provision (to repay), probably in five years, something like that."

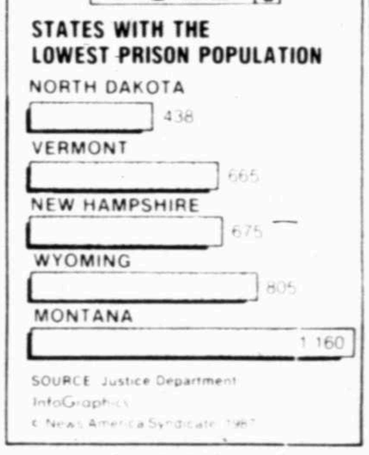

Prison populations

In the first six months of 1986, California had the largest prison population -- 55,238 -- in the U.S., according to the Justice Department. Texas was second with 37,214. North Dakota has the lowest number of prison inmates with 438.

Prisons might have to shut doors Friday

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Texas prisons might have to close Friday, like they did two weeks ago, to comply with a court-ordered capacity ceiling, a spokesman says.

The latest count shows the Texas Department of Corrections is 31 inmates short of hitting the capacity limit of 95 percent, spokesman Charles Brown said.

The count, taken Tuesday and released Wednesday, was at 94.92 percent with 38,340 inmates, Brown said.

Prisons may have to close Friday, after today's count is totaled because of not enough inmates leaving to make room for new arrivals, Brown said.

Officials are expecting more than 100 new inmates to arrive today, including those in the usual twice-a-week delivery from the state's major counties: Harris, Dallas, Tarrant and Bexar, spokesman David Nunnelee said.

Both spokesmen said they did not know how many inmates would be released today.

The 26-unit system closed its doors to new inmates Jan. 16 after the population exceeded the cap set by the Legislature in 1983 to avoid overcrowding. The Legislature acted after a federal judge ordered the state to reduce crowding.

Paroles helped reduce the number of prisoners, allowing officials to reopen as usual Jan. 19.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice, who ordered sweeping reforms in Texas prisons in 1981, has issued a contempt order against the corrections department. He said the agency failed to live up to 1980 agreements to improve inmates' living conditions and prison staffing and gave the TDC until March 31 to meet the standards or risk fines of up to $800,500 a day.

Gunman takes women hostage in church rectory

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A man wanting to talk to a priest took two women hostage at a church rectory, but surrendered three hours later after he talked to his wife, authorities said.

No one was hurt during the ordeal Wednesday night at Sacred Heart Catholic Church, said Police Chief William O. Gibson.

Police recovered a .22-caliber pistol the man used.

Two charges of aggravated kidnapping would be filed against the man, who appeared to be despondent over marital problems, Gibson said.

The incident began about 5 p.m. when the man went to the church to talk to the Rev. Emil Wesselsky, Gibson said.

"The priest didn't get to him on time. He produced a weapon and took two female employees of the church hostage in one of the rooms of the rectory," Gibson said.

"The priest saw the gentleman with the gun and called the police," Gibson said.

The gunman held church secretary Alicia Martinez and church volunteer Terri Flores in a back room of the rectory, which is located about 50 feet from the church.

Wesselsky, the church pastor, remained inside the rectory as police negotiators talked with the man, Gibson said.

The man allowed Ms. Flores to leave early in the ordeal and Ms. Martinez shortly before he surrendered at 8:30 p.m.

"I believe the opportunity to converse with his wife at the scene caused the man to change his mind and come around," Gibson said.

Mayor Henry Cisneros, who lives nearby and attends the church, went inside the rectory several times, but was not involved in the negotiations, Gibson said.

Archbishop Patrick Flores also went to the church to offer his help, but did not talk to the man, who lives in the area but was not a member of the church.

"We definitely want to help in any way that we can," Flores said. "Perhaps, he's got a problem."

Mattox challenges insurance rate increase

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says a 17.7 percent workers' compensation insurance rate increase is "unconscionable," but the chairman of the State Board of Insurance says it's a fair return for companies providing the coverage.

"I cannot sit idly by while the public and our businesses are being raked over the coals with the insurance companies making their merry way to the bank," Mattox said Wednesday in announcing a lawsuit challenging the increase.

The insurance board last month appproved the 17.7 percent hike in workers' compensation insurance rates paid by Texas businesses. Since state law also allows a 2.2 percent increase for inflation, the total hike is 19.9 percent, Mattox said.

"It is unconscionable that the insurance companies keep asking for more, more and more money when their own figures are showing 625 percent increases in profits over the last year," Mattox said.

But Lyndon Olson, insurance board chairman, said the board considered the needs of both insurance companies and the workers who reap the benefits of the coverage.

"We are comfortable with the fact that this is a very reasonable rate adjustment," Olson said. "It's not exessive and it's not confiscatory."

Olson said that while the insurance industry's profit had improved late in 1986, recent years have been very tough on those companies.

He also said that citizens covered by workers' compensation ultimately reap the benefits of the board's action to keep the insurance industry strong.

"The reason that you want an insurance company to be strong is not to further fatten the pockets of the insurance industry. But ask the worker who loses an arm or leg or eye how they feel when the insurance company that promised to be there in the future is not there," he said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Marijuana 'jungle' found

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Authorities said they found a jungle of marijuana growing inside a house they raided in northwest San Antonio.

Steven Allen Taylor, 29, was charged with possession of marijuana and placed in Bexar County Jail in lieu of $20,000 bond.

Capt. Jimmy Kopeck said the house had an elaborate system to grow hundreds of marijuana plants. "It was like a jungle inside," Kopeck said of the 40 pounds of marijuana said to be valued at $60,000.

The man had a sophisticated system of growing lights, timers and an irrigation system Kopeck said. A microwave and food processor also were used for drying, processing and packaging the harvested plants.

Michener has hip replaced

AUSTIN (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning author James Michener is recovering in a Florida hospital after a hip replacement operation.

Michener, who has been in Coral Gables, Fla., since December working on a book about the Caribbean, is resting comfortably after surgery there last week at Doctors' Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Carol Lassiter said Wednesday.

The operation was scheduled to correct a chronic hip problem and had been planned for several months, said William Livingston, vice president of graduate studies at the University of Texas, where Michener,79, is a professor emeritus.

"He was in pain for the first two or three days, but he is recovering very well and the operation was an unqualified success," Livingston said.

Horse owner loses suit

AUSTIN (AP) — The owner of a horse that died when its trailer came unhitched from a truck is not eligible for damages, the 3rd Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday.

After the March 1983 accident, owner Joe Andrews sued the men transporting the horse and a man who had arranged the transportation.

The horse, I'll Call Ya, was valued at $150,000 before the accident, a court document said.

A Hays County district judge ruled against Andrews, who appealed the decision. The Austin appeals court affirmed the lower court's decision because Ronny and Billy Allen were moving the horse as a favor to Andrews and not as a business deal and ruled they Allens were not negligent.

Suspect takes overdose

BEAUMONT (AP) — A woman charged with the murder of her family's former caretaker was hospitalized in Beaumont for a drug overdose, authorities said.

Police said Rosine McFaddin Wilson, 59, was in critical but stable condition after taking an overdose of unknown pills mixed with an alcoholic beverage sometime after 10:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Peso devaluation could make twin plants more attractive

By JENNIFER DIXON

McALLEN (AP) — The Mexican peso's impending devaluation to a historic exchange rate of 1,000-to-$1 won't shake up border businesses but could make the twin-plant industry even more attractive to U.S. investors, economists and businessmen say.

The exchange rate hovered near 980-to-$1 as the week began and businessmen say it could reach the 1,000-mark within a month.

The devaluation makes U.S. goods more expensive for Mexican shoppers. But it also makes some Mexican goods, excluding oil, cheaper on U.S. terms, said Bill Gruben, senior economist with the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas.

Gruben says the twin-plant or "maquiladora" system may benefit from the sliding peso if the Mexican government doesn't raise wages at the rate of inflation. Under the twin-plant system, Mexican workers assemble U.S. goods for lower wages on the Mexican side of the border.

In 1982, the Mexican government began letting the peso drop in value and officials said it would continue to devalue on a controlled market at a rate equal to inflation this year.

Mexican officials say the peso is being kept 30 percent undervalued to keep exports competitive as a major goal of attracting foreign exchange.

In a telephone interview Monday, Gruben said he questions whether Mexican goods can compete against exports from other cheap-labor countries such as China, Taiwan, Haiti and others. But he believes Mexico can be competitive with its labor pool.

"It may be that more maquiladoras would come down" to the border, Gruben said.

"The big wage increase in the first part of 1986 did not totally reflect the interest rate," Gruben said. This year's salary increases are expected sometime before mid-year.

"If labor costs do not go up as much as the exchange rate goes down, it means labor costs go down. If that phenomena persists, it should make maquiladoras more attractive."

The devaluation, he said, partly reflects the shock Mexico felt when oil prices plunged early last year and cut the country's oil income. The government, in turn, began looking for ways to bolster other exports.

The devaluation, however, has been occurring for the past 4½ years.

Before the first devaluation in 1982, the exchange rate was 26 to $1.

The peso started 1986 at 443-448 and by early this week money exchange houses in Brownsville were selling dollars for 970 and 976 pesos. Pesos were being sold at a rate of 955 or 956 for $1.

The Mexican Treasury Department announced earlier this year that the Mexican peso, as it devalues at the inflation rate, would slide to an expected level of 1,540 to the dollar in December.

Border businessmen say there's nothing magic in hitting the 1,000-to-$1 rate.

"It's just keeping up with inflation. It's inevitable and it will probably be 2,000 next year, with no impact at all," said Lan Jones, president of Jones & Jones, an exclusive department store that caters to wealthy customers on both sides of the Texas-Mexico border.

Reaching the 1,000-mark "shouldn't change anything," Jones said.

"I think it's a psychological mark with you reporters," he said.

"Any damage that's been done (from the ongoing devaluation) has been done," says Jim Bexley, chairman and chief executive officer of Texas Commerce Bank-McAllen.

Sales at Rio Grande Valley businesses have fallen with the peso's decline, as Mexican shoppers find their buying power eroded in the United States, but merchants say they've adapted.

City Furniture in McAllen used to have monthly cash sales of $60,000 to $70,000 from Mexican customers before the devaluation in 1982. Now, Mexican customers are spending about $1,000 a month, said owner Manny Hernandez.

"We're still doing a lot of business with Mexico, we just don't do what we used to do."

Bexley said he sees reaching the 1,000-peso exchange rate as a psychological mark for Mexico.

Hard times can't dim small town's silver screen

By TONY FLOYD

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — Someone forgot to tell Walter Bass he's not supposed to be in business anymore. Film distribution officials in Dallas shake their heads in disbelief every time they hear from Bass, co-owner of a movie theater still operating in a community of 3,000 or less.

But the 37-year-old Daingerfield resident readily admits keeping the doors open to the theater his grandfather built 50 years ago hasn't always been easy in a community that has led the state in unemployment for about four years.

After the last round of layoffs at Lone Star Steel left Daingerfield with an unemployment rate of about 60 percent, Bass and his sister-business partner Beverly Bass of Longview agreed it was time to regroup if the Morris Theatre was to make it through the year.

Bass figured the town's unemployed would be trimming their family budgets and entertainment would be one of the first luxuries to go. His answer was 99-cent ticket prices.

"Business has never been better in the time I've been associated with the picture show," Bass said, "and I first started working here in the concession stand when I was 10. I was raised in this picture show."

As the third generation to operate Morris Theatre, Bass can recall all the developments and circumstances that have threatened theater owners over the years. None of them, however, was taken as seriously as Morris County's unemployment crisis.

"There's not much you can do when people are all losing their jobs," he said. "But as long as I can remember, something or another was always gonna run movie theaters out of business."

TELEVISION in the early 1950s and VCRs in the 1980s were two developments that were supposed to drive theater owners into other lines of work, he said.

"When television first came out, my Dad thought it was just a passing fad," Bass said. "After they put the TV station in Shreveport and we realized it wasn't a fad, people still came to the show because they could spend a couple of hours sitting in an air-conditioned room. Not too many homes had air conditioning back then."

To make sure people didn't forget about that cool, controlled temperature inside the Morris Theatre, Bass says his father posted colorful banners featuring penguins and ice cubes on the marquee as a reminder throughout the 1950s.

By the 1980s, when the VCR craze swept the nation, Bass says he could detect an initial impact on ticket sales, but that trend lasted only a year or two.

"Nearly everybody I know that has bought a VCR will rent everything they can get their hands on for about two or three months," Bass observed. "But after that, the new wears off and they go back to the old things they always enjoyed.

"Nothing beats getting out of the house and seeing a movie on the big screen," he said.

It is that philosophy — and 99-cent seats — that Bass is counting on to carry him through the hard times in Daingerfield.

THE TOWN first began reeling from Lone Star Steel layoffs in 1982, but by 1984 employment had climbed to 3,500 and interest rates were down, so Bass borrowed $175,000 from a local bank to renovate the building and convert the balcony area to a second screen.

"People thought I was crazy when I did that," he smiled, "and maybe I was. But you can't stay in the picture show business these days with just one screen.

"We put in a Dolby Sensurround sound system, new seats, carpeting and the works so nobody would have to drive to Longview or Texarkana to see a picture in comfort."

Now the the renovated theater attracts movie-goers from outside the Daingerfield area. Bass attributes his success to the 99-cent tickets and to advertising in six area newspapers.

"Money has a lot to do with it," Bass said. "You're gonna spend $25 at a theater in Longview or Texarkana for a family of four. Here you can enjoy a picture with a family of four for maybe $8.50-$9. That means a lot."

State fish lobbied for

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bream should be Arkansas' state fish, says a legislator who touts the game fish as tasty and tough for its size.

Bream are not large, but they are fighters, according to a bill introduced Wednesday by state Sen. Stanley Russ. The bill says bream is the best-tasting fish to fry.

AT&T has just lowered the price of in-state Texas long distance 8 percent for residence and business customers.*

Now, for example, a five-minute direct-dial daytime call (Monday to Friday, 8 AM to 5 PM) from Amarillo to Brownsville, Houston to El Paso, Dallas to Austin, Dallas to San Antonio, Dallas to Houston or San Antonio to Amarillo costs only $1.86.

We've also lowered the price of in-state AT&T WATS 29 percent and lowered the price of in-state AT&T 800 Service approximately 20 percent.

But that's not the whole story. Since 1984, we've lowered prices 30 percent overall on direct-dial state-to-state AT&T long distance calls. Yet we're still giving you the clear long distance connections and full-service long distance operators you've come to expect from AT&T. Still giving you the best value in long distance by providing you with the most advanced and reliable long distance network in the world.

Warriors lose Washburn as NBA adds to drug list

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Golden State Warriors Coach George Karl says he's hopeful that rookie Chris Washburn is able to iron out his troubles — and that Washburn's decision to enter drug rehabiliation will eliminate one of the distractions that has slowed down his club.

The Warriors announced Wednesday that Washburn, a rookie from North Carolina State who had skipped practices or showed up late several times in the past few months, has voluntarily sought treatment under the NBA's drug program.

"I just hope it works out for him," Karl said. "I'd like to think about the positive, but there's a sadness for a young man who needs to get grips on who he is and what he is and what it is to give respect to his body and his potential."

"The Washburn thing has been a distraction, but that can't be the reason for the loss in this game," Karl added after Wednesday's 131-104 loss in Phoenix, the Warriors' fifth straight loss.

"I can't honestly say that it was something that could be ruled out in light of his behavior," said Warriors center Joe Barry Carroll. "It's unfortunate, and we all hope it's something he can overcome."

ANOTHER TEAMMATE, Purvis Short, said, "I just hope and pray he's able to get himself together. You never want to see it happen to a guy because you're right at the edge where you can lose everything."

The Warriors announced that Washburn is expected to remain for at least four weeks at the ASAP Center in Van Nuys, Calif., an NBA-sanctioned facility near Los Angeles. Team officials did not say what drugs are involved in Washburn's case.

Washburn, 21, was the third player chosen in last spring's draft.

The 6-foot-11 forward and center started the Warriors' first two games this season, but he quickly worked his way to the bench partly because of several missed practices.

"I can't deny there were suspicions," said Karl. "He missed two practices this week. Sunday, he said his car was in the shop. Tuesday, I didn't even bother to ask."

Washburn was placed on the injured list on Tuesday because of a kidney ailment, which was not connected to any drug problem, the Warriors said.

"His kidney problem is no smoke-screen," Karl said. 'He was in the hospital for kidney malfunctions. He does have a kidney problem."

Washburn has played in 27 games, averaging 10 minutes per contest and 3.5 points per game. Last season, his only full season at N.C. State, he averaged 17.6 points and 6.7 rebounds per game.

Washburn was the third pick in the NBA draft behind Brad Daugherty and the late Len Bias, who died of cocaine intoxication two days after the draft.

"Chris is a fine person and an exceptional athlete, and we look forward to his return to the Warriors," said Dan Finnane, the team president.

UNDER THE NBA drug program, players are not permanently disqualfied the first two times they voluntarily step forward for drug abuse treatment. However, a player who is tested positive for drugs without first volunteering for treatment will be banned for life, with the possibility of reinstatement after two years.

On Jan. 13, Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins of the Houston Rockets were permanently banned after testing positive for cocaine. Walter Davis of Phoenix, Quintin Dailey of the Los Angeles Clippers and John Lucas of Milwaukee previously have been treated for drug problems without being permanently suspended.

"If he can get this problem straightened out, we will re-evaluate and redefine his role with us and go forward," Karl said.

COM hosts three-day meet

From Staff Reports

The City of Midland Swim Team will host its sixth Winter Invitational, a three-day splash fest beginning at 6 p.m. Friday in the Mabee Memorial Swim Center on North A Street.

During the six-year history of the event, many winners here have gone on to win state championships, a group that also has produced some national records.

Competition also begins at 9 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Competing against the COM will be the best teams in West Texas, the Panhandle, El Paso and eastern New Mexico.

COM has placed third and second in the last two years, but Coach Brad Swendig's swimmers have their sights set on first place this trip.

The meet is limited to A and B swimmers and each swimmer must meet a qualifying time standard in each event to enter.

Midland favorites include Jane Marker Shawna Voorhees, Alan Reed, Michaela Hasek and Sam Perry in the 15-18 age group; Moss Fennell, Matt Seay, Matt Houston and Darsi Bickley, 13-14; Clayton Hoelscher, Matt Welch and Lindsay Bickley, 11-12 and Stacy Fennell, 10-under.

NFL's biggest battle isn't Super Bowl clash

By RICK WARNER
AP Sports Writer

The Super Bowl is over, but the NFL's biggest battle of the year is just beginning.

The National Football League is about to start serious negotiations on new television contracts that will have long-range implications for the sport and the three major networks.

The league's five-year, $2.1-billion deal with the networks expires after Sunday's Pro Bowl. A new agreement is expected to be reached by March 1, but not without a struggle.

The networks, who have lost an estimated $150 million on NFL telecasts over the past two years, want the league to reduce its television fees.

"We can't continue to lose millions of dollars a year on the NFL," said Neal Pilson, president of CBS Sports. "Television is a business, and businesses are not supposed to lose money."

BUT THE networks aren't the only ones pleading poverty. The NFL says it can't afford to cut its television fees because several teams are already losing money, and the number would increase if valuable TV revenue is lost.

"There's no question that the networks lost money on the NFL this season," said Cleveland Browns President Art Modell, who will negotiate for the league along with Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"We don't want the networks to lose money, but we don't want to lose money, either. I can't go back to the owners and ask them to take a cutback. We cannot go backward. We must go forward."

In terms of profit, the networks are the ones going backward. In the 1970s and early 1980s, as the NFL soared in popularity, they made millions on their pro football telecasts. But in the past two years, lower ratings and a soft advertising market have turned the profits into losses.

"It's really very simple," Pilson said. "The marketplace hasn't grown as as fast as our costs, and that's an unhealthy situation."

Despite the losses, none of the networks are ready to abandon the NFL. Pro football still outdraws most other sports telecasts, and the largely male audience remains attractive to many advertisers.

"The NFL is a hallmark franchise, and we'll do everything we can to retain it," said Dennis Swanson, president of ABC Sports. "We just can't continue to lose money on it."

If the major networks refuse to budge, the NFL could try to increase its revenue by awarding a package of games to a cable network or syndication company. The league already has discussed the option with Home Box Office, Turner Broadcasting System, ESPN, Fox Broadcasting Co. and the USA network.

"We would like to preserve the three-network relationship," Modell said. "But because of our revenue situation, we may have to consider an alternative."

NBC Sports President Arthur Watson said adding a fourth network would be a mistake.

"That's further dilution and oversaturation of the product," he said. "It may be good for the short term, but I doubt its effectiveness over the long term. The basis of the NFL is fan support. If you go to cable, a lot of people won't be able to see those games. And that could lead to a backlash."

STILL, FOX Broadcasting and others are openly courting the NFL. The fledgling network, owned by Australian media baron Rupert Murdoch, would gain needed exposure by acquiring some of the league's games.

"We want it right now," Fox Chairman Barry Diller said earlier this month. "We would take ABC's contract and sign it today."

The final year of ABC's contract included Monday Night Football and a total of five games on Thursday, Friday and Sunday nights. Those non-Monday night games are the focus of the fourth-network package.

Fox President Jamie Kellner said his affiliated stations could showcase NFL games better than ABC, which has limited flexibility in prime time. He said the telecasts could include pregame and postgame shows.

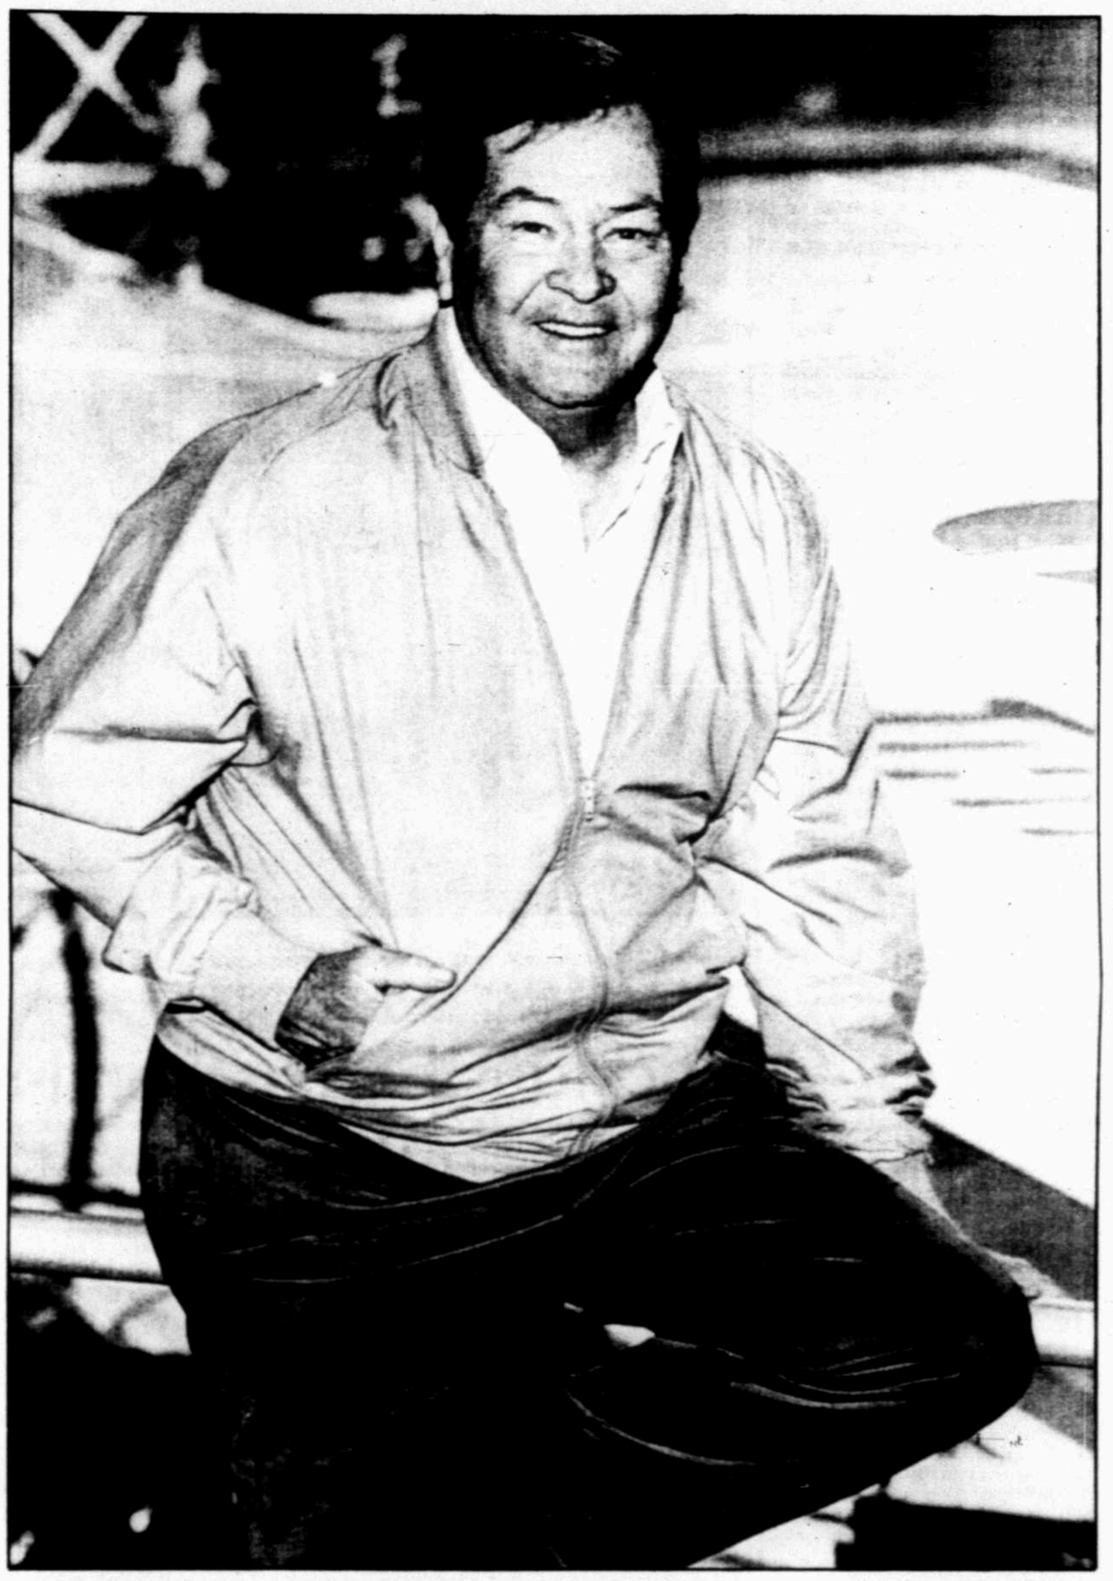

"We can give the NFL something ABC has never been able to give them — a whole night," Kellner said.

Pay cable systems such as HBO emphasize their lack of commercials.

"Without commercials, you have a shorter game," said Bob Greenway, vice president of sports programming at HBO. "That's important because many people feel the games are too long."

NFL owners and television executives have a major stake in the new contracts, but they aren't alone. NFL players are also anxiously awaiting the outcome, which could have a direct impact on their salaries.

"There are 1,600 players rooting for Rozelle on this one," said Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association. "We want him to conquer the world."

MC tip-toes to Clarendon

From Staff Reports

CLARENDON — The Midland College Chaparrals invade the Panhandle tonight more reluctantly than they did earlier in the week when they had the daylights scared out of them on a trip to Borger to play Frank Phillips College.

Nobody told them it was still hunting season.

MC beat FPC, the doormat of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, 85-78, and considered themselves fortunate. Now another trip to the Panhandle for Clarendon.

In recent games, South Plains College and Howard College threw frights into the Chaps, on their home court no less.

The WJCAC, once MC's private preserve, has turned downright hostile. MC hasn't had a soft touch in league play in almost two months.

However, despite the close calls, the Chaps are 20-1 for the season and 7-1 in conference, but trailing first place New Mexico Junior College.

Despite the harrowing experiences, MC moved up to fifth place in this week's national juco standings. San Jacinto, of course, remains No. 1 and NMJC is at No. 4.

Tonight's game (KCRS 7 p.m.) opens the second half of WJCAC play and Midland, on the basis of its easy win in the first game, should win tonight. Clarendon is 6-11 for the season and 2-5 in WJCAC.

Next week MC is home for two games, Monday against NMMI and Thursday against Odessa College.

Killer's Frogs keep on croaking

Baylor's Bears claw past Texas A&M by one

Associated Press

The 16th ranked Texas Christian Horned Frogs never had a basketball half-season in their 62-year Southwest Conference history like the unblemished one they just completed.

With a 64-38 whipping of Rice Wednesday night, TCU established these school records:

-13 straight victories, third best in the nation.
-An 8-0 start in the SWC race.
-21 consecutive home victories.
-A best start record of 17-3.

"We can't be overwhelmed because it isn't over yet," said TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth. "If we think we have it made now we don't have very big IQs."

IN OTHER Southwest Conference games, Arkansas beat Southern Methodist 76-63, Houston downed Texas 65-59, and Baylor edged Texas A&M 71-70.

Killingsworth didn't have any worries against the Owls.

TCU shot to a 30-9 halftime lead, setting a school record for fewest points allowed an opponent in a half.

"It's the easiest game we've had," Killingsworth said. "Usually we have to fight for our lives against those guys."

Rice shot only 28 per cent from the field for the game and 19 per cent in the first half.

Larry Richard and Carven Holcombe each scored 17 points for the winners.

TCU is now 17-3 overall while Rice dropped to 7-12 and 1-7.

Mike Cooper was high for the Owls with nine points.

Michael Williams hit a 16-foot jumper with nine seconds remaining to lift the Baylor Bears over Texas A&M.

SWC Basketball

The win was Baylor's first over the Aggies in their last 10 meetings and the first at College Station since 1971. The Bears are now 11-7 on the year and 6-2 in SWC play. A&M, with its third straight loss, fell to 12-7 overall and 4-4 in league play.

The loss snapped a 10-game home floor winning streak for A&M.

The Aggies were nursing a 67-64 lead with 51 seconds when Baylor's Robert McLemore fouled Darryl McDonald. Tempers flared and both benches erupted into a brief but heated fight.

Both McLemore and McDonald were ejected.

"I thought the tempo late got out of control, but it wasn't the ref's fault," Baylor coach Gene Iba said. "One of the guys swinging for them came out of the stands. This has been a long time coming and it's nice to win here. Those things are gonna happen in the heat of battle."

Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said, "I don't think McDonald should have been ejected. That wasn't right."

After the scuffle, he said, "we needed to be in the four corners but we had Darryl over on the bench. Keron missed the free throw but I didn't have anyone else."

Houston forward Rickie Winslow led a balanced Cougar attack with 14 points in Houston's win over Texas.

Houston, 12-6 overall and 5-3 in the conference, broke a two-game losing streak. Texas dropped to 9-12 and 2-6, losing six of its last seven games.

Rolando Ferreira added 13 points for Houston while teammates Greg Anderson and Tom Grant each had 12 points.

"We had to get some momentum going for our road games," Winslow said. "The TCU loss (62-56) took a lot out of us and it carried over to the Baylor loss (67-62)."

Nine of Texas' 13 turnovers came in the second half and that also helped Houston's cause.

"At the end it was shocking, a nightmare," Texas Coach Bob Weltlich said.

Texas shot better than in past games and compiled 18 assists, but they "overpassed, trying to force it inside," according to Winslow, who had three steals.

Two subpar games by season-leading scorer Anderson, including only four points against Baylor, rekindled his desire.

"I needed this bad," Anderson said. "I felt I hadn't contributed like I could being two- and three-teamed. It felt good to get back in the flow tonight."

Houston Coach Pat Foster knew the game was not textbook basketball.

"It was not a pretty sight but it was a win and we'll take it," he said.

Texas' Raynard Davis led all scorers with 18 points while Fairs had 17 points.

SIX ARKANSAS players scored in double figures as the Razorbacks made it two straight in the Southwest Conference with a win over Southern Methodist.

The Razorbacks had their most balanced scoring attack of the year. Mike Ratliff, Andrew Lang and Ron Huery each had 11 points, while Shawn Baker, Tim Scott and Keith Wilson had 10 each.

Arkansas, 13-8 overall, moved to 4-4 in the SWC. SMU dropped to 9-10 and 1-7.

The Razorbacks welcomed back Coach Nolan Richardson, whose daughter, Yvonne, was buried Tuesday after a two-year struggle with leukemia.

Don Maynard came to stay, landing in Hall of Fame

By IRA BERKOW
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The rookie from towns in southwest Texas like Denver City and Colorado City and El Paso — places where his father had worked as a "cotton-ginner" — showed up in 1958 in the training camp of the New York Giants. He was tall and skinny and wore unfashionably long sideburns and not-yet-fashionable cowboy boots. He had had a foot locker carted in and, as he recalls it, carried "a bag in my right hand and a bag in my left hand."

The equipment manager took notice of this vision. "Man," he said, "you got a lot of luggage."

"Well," the rookie replied, "I come to stay."

He didn't stay long. One season, and he was dropped. "I couldn't understand some of the guys they kept," he recalled. "I could run faster backwards than they could run frontwards."

Some 28 years after the Giants cut him loose, after 17 years as a wide receiver in professional football and after having established a handful of records for snaring passes, Don Maynard of Texas Western Tuesday night was named, along with six others, to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"I'm tickled," Maynard said Wednesday by telephone from El Paso, where he's a financial adviser with an insurance company. "It's a good group of guys in there."

Maynard was no overnight Hall of Famer — he has been eligible and been turned away for the last seven years — just as he was no overnight star in pro football.

He went from the Giants to the Canadian League in 1959, and then returned to New York to play for the Titans in 1960 — they became the Jets in 1963 — and stayed until 1972, when he was cut and wound up playing one more year, with the Cardinals.

When it was over, he was 36 years old and in the American football leagues had caught 633 passes for 11,834 yards and 88 touchdowns.

He had been the star receiver at the other end of many of Joe Namath's spiral passes, had won a Super Bowl ring in that terrific upset of the Colts, and the country boy had grown to love the big city. He appreciated the football life even more, since he would return home to Texas and work in the offseasons, first as a plumber and later as a high-school mathematics and industrial-arts teacher.

"Sometimes I'd be in a huddle in Shea Stadium," he recalled, "and I'd look up in the stands at 63,000 people screaming, and it was thrilling. I'd kinda think, 'What am I doin' here? I oughta be gettin' autographs in the huddle.'"

Maynard was known as a non-conformist in both playing style and personal style.

He ran pass patterns with the individuality of a guy whose favorite tune could have been "Don't Fence Me In." This in contrast to the tight routes of the Jets' other wide receiver, George Sauer.

"My job," Maynard once said, "is to get open — the quarterback's job is to get me the ball."

"Don took what the defensive back's feet would give him," recalled Jim Hudson, the former Jet cornerback who used to defend against Maynard in practice.

"Don was long-gaited, and he could fly," added Hudson. "He had this easy stride, and several gears, and it was hard to tell if he was going fast or slow. He'd sort of lull you to sleep. By the time you figured out which way he was going, he was gone."

The Giants had wanted Maynard to cut his sideburns, and he said no. They wanted him to shorten his stride, and he said no. He seemed to understand what was right for him, and perhaps the biggest catch of his career was due to that trait.

The Jets were playing the Raiders for the 1968 American Football League championship. Early in the game, Maynard saw that he could beat the Raiders' defender on his side, George Atkinson.

"I got a long one when you need it," Maynard told Namath.

There came a moment when Namath needed it.

The Jets, on their 42-yard line, were losing, 23-20, with time running out in the final quarter.

Maynard now raced down the sideline and Namath heaved the ball. "The wind took the ball one way, and then another and I reached around about 180 degrees and caught it," recalled Maynard. "My momentum took me to the 6-yard line. It was a 52-yard pass play. On the next play, Joe hit me in the end zone for the winning touchdown.

"From there we went to win the Super Bowl, too. But that catch to set up the touchdown against Oakland was about the best I ever made. One of the guys took a pencil to it, and figured how much 40 guys times the AFL championship and 40 guys times the Super Bowl made. He added up that that catch was worth about one million dollars to us."

Maynard was also known as a man who had a close grip on his money, and would do almost anything to acquire a buck.

There is a story told about the midnight dive into a pool that Maynard took fully clothed. The Jets had gone to Oakland and checked into a motel that had an outdoor swimming pool. Some players bet Maynard that he wouldn't jump off the high board fully clothed. He did, and collected $50.

"You going to fine him?" someone asked Weeb Ewbank, the coach, the next day, which was the day of the game.

"Hell no," the coach said. "If I fine anyone, it'll be the other guys — for dumbness. Maynard's so crazy he'd have done it for nothing."

Ewbank was asked recently if the story was true — did he say that, and did Maynard dive off a high board fully clothed at midnight for $50?

"It's a bunch of hooey," said Ewbank. "It was a low board. The pool didn't have a high board."

BASEBALL — The Houston Astros have initiated negotiations in pursuit of former Boston Red Sox catcher Rich Gedman, now a free agent. "We've called Gedman's representatives and informed them of our interest," Astros General Manager Dick Wagner said Tuesday. "We asked them to get back to us (concerning what it would take to sign Gedman)." Gedman, 27, hit .250 with 16 home runs and 65 runs batted in last season for the American League champion Red Sox. He has played for Boston since 1981. Earlier this month, Gedman rejected a three-year $2.65 million contract offer to remain with Boston. The Red Sox refused to consider Gedman's counter offer of a one-year contract worth $1.1 million...

"We don't want this regarded as threatening," said Jim Krivacs. "The thing is that we have absolutely no leverage at all. We're just looking for a fair deal. It's a tough situation." Presley, 25, is not eligible for salary arbitration because he has less than three years in the major leagues. Cary was 1-2 with the Tigers last year after spending most of the season at Evansville, Ind., the Tigers' Class AAA farm club in the American Association. His major league record is 1-3. Jack Nicklaus, left, and actor Clint Eastwood make way up Spyglass Hill during a practice round for the Pebble Beach Pro-Am. Nicklaus is in this tournament, but has cut back on the number of events he will play.

Nicklaus begins 'semi-retirement'

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus opened the first year of what he called "semi-retirement" with high hopes and lower expectations.

"I do not consider myself a serious, year-round Tour player any more," Nicklaus said before teeing off today in the first round of the $600,000 Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

"It's time for me to give up a week to week Tour schedule.

"My goal is to play 10 tournaments, 11 or 12 at the most," said Nicklaus, 47, who capped his unmatched career with a victory in the Masters last year.

That triumph was his 18th in the game's major professional tournaments — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA — and, he said, prompted him to "go into semi-retirement.

"I want to leave the game of golf on a high point. I can't expect to have a lot of high points in front of me," said Nicklaus, who has won almost everything worthwhile the game can offer.

"If I let myself get back into a busier schedule, 15 or 16 or 17 tournaments, it could be a deteriorating golf game that would run me off," he said.

Nicklaus announced late last season that he would play a very limited schedule this year, but gave a detailed account of his plans for the first time Wednesday.

He said he will play the four majors, this tournament, Doral, his own Memorial tournament, Westchester, possibly the Tournament Players Championship "and maybe one or two others.

"I'll see how I play this week, what I need to play," he said.

"I want to be competitive when we get to Augusta (for the Masters)," he said.

"There's still nothing in the world I like more than playing golf and winning. But there's nothing in the world I hate more than playing poorly."

Can he be competitive in the majors, he was asked, if he plays such a limited schedule?

"I don't expect to be competitive very much. My goal is to win every tournament I start. But I'm trying to be realistic about what's in front of me."

Bell offers new solution for baseball

TORONTO (AP) — George Bell has a message for the Toronto Blue Jays and all major league baseball.

Bell, who has two more years remaining before he becomes eligible for free agency, has a "wait and see" attitude on whether the free agent is a dying breed.

After several years of signing free agents to huge, long-term contracts, team owners have been reluctant during the last two years to get involved with high-salaried stars looking for even greater security.

"In the past everybody went crazy and the owners lost a lot of money," Bell said. "Now they've decided to save money."

The problem, Bell suggests, was one club would spend a lot of money signing three or four free agents, forcing the other clubs to keep pace.

The solution, Bell said, might be to limit the number of free agents an owner could sign to one or two a year. And if a team signed two in a season, it could only sign one the next season.

That being said, Bell went on to say he's far from being unhappy in Toronto.

He and right fielder Jesse Barfield will become millionaires in a couple of weeks — win or lose — in their arbitration hearings.

Barfield hit .289 with 108 runs batted in and is seeking $1,350,000 while the Jays have offered $1,125,000. Bell, who batted .309 with 31 homers and 108 RBI, is seeking $1,325,000 and the team has offered $1 million.

"We're making big bucks either way — if I lose, then shucks ... I won't cry," Barfield said.

"To tell you the truth, I don't care about the money," Bell said. "When the baseball season starts, then I think baseball — that's all."

Besides, said Bell, the numbers may look big on paper but taxes and expenses make them dwindle quickly. He and Barfield were paid $650,000 each last season by the Blue Jays.

"About $175,000," said Bell when asked how much he actually ended up with. "There were taxes, Canadian taxes, U.S. taxes, expenses, keeping an apartment, traveling, all that stuff.

"It's hard for us because we can't invest here. You do and you get taxed like a Canadian resident."

Bell has no regrets asking for the money he is seeking.

"You decide what you've got to be paid and if it's $2 million it's $2 million," he said.

Tar Heel 'point guard' earns title

Associated Press

Kenny Smith, North Carolina's point guard, gave the term a new meaning.

The senior from New York, who is known for his passing rather than his point production, scored a career-high 41 Wednesday night as the top-ranked Tar Heels won their 16th consecutive game, a 108-99 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over No. 14 Clemson.

It wasn't all easy going for North Carolina as the Tar Heels, 18-1 overall and 7-0 in the conference, had to rally from a 12-point halftime deficit for the road victory that gave them a 2½-game lead over Clemson and Duke in the ACC race.

Smith, whose previous scoring best was 23 points, didn't play in North Carolina's last game because of a sprained knee and he was doubtful for the Clemson game until an hour or so before tipoff.

"I walked out today and it was still hurting slightly," said Smith, who made 14 of 19 shots from the field, including six of nine 3-pointers. "I came out in pregame and shot around and it still didn't feel right.

"I was about to come in. But I said before I go in I'm going to make one hard cut just to see if it feels good. And I made that hard cut and it was fine."

The Tigers, 18-2 and 4-2, jumped to a 16-6 lead in the opening 5:30. The lead reached 13 twice in the first half before Clemson settled for a 50-38 halftime advantage as the Tar Heels committed an uncharacteristic 14 turnovers in the first 20 minutes.

After cutting the lead to seven early in the second half, the Tar Heels used a 14-4 run to to take a 63-60 lead on Smith's second consecutive 3-point field goal.

Clemson retook the lead and led 78-73 but North Carolina answered with a 22-5 run over the next six minutes to lead 95-83 with 2:49 to play.

Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis praised all of North Carolina's guards, not just Smith.

"They did a great job with the 3-point play in the second half," Ellis said. He simply described the backcourt as "very, very tough."

The Tar Heels hit six of eight 3-pointers in the second half and finished with nine of 15. Clemson was 11 of 21 from 3-point range.

Freshman center J.R. Reid added 22 points and 10 rebounds for North Carolina, while Jeff Lebo, Smith's backcourt partner, added 20 points.

Jerry Pryor led five Clemson players in double figures with 24 points.

College Basketball

No. 4 Indiana 69, No. 12 Illinois 66

Dean Garrett scored the go-ahead basket then came up with the blocked shot that gave Indiana undisputed possession of first place in the Big Ten.

The junior college transfer, who led the Hoosiers with 20 points, nine rebounds and six blocked shots, hit a jumper in the lane with 1:35 to play to break a 64-64 tie. He then blocked a shot by Illinois' Ken Norman, retrieved the ball and got it to Steve Alford who made two free throws with 30 seconds to play to seal the victory.

Indiana Coach Bob Knight praised Garrett, almost.

"Garrett has a long way to go," Knight said. "He was a key in the second half. He played very well the last 10 minutes and made some crucial plays on both ends."

The Hoosiers, 16-2 and 7-1, hold a half-game lead over Iowa and Purdue. Illinois, 14-5 and 5-3, was led by Norman and Lowell Hamilton with 16 points each.

No. 19 Florida 90, No. 9 Alabama 80, OT

Florida allowed Alabama to erase a 14-point lead in the second half, but the Gators used the long jumper in overtime for the victory that tied the teams atop the Southeastern Conference standings.

The Gators, 16-4 and 8-1, held a 56-42 lead early in the second half but the Crimson Tide, which had a 12-game winning streak snapped, chipped away with 3-pointers — three by Derrick McKey — and tied the game 74-74 with eight seconds left to force the overtime.

The extra period belonged to Florida as Joe Lawrence, who scored all 18 of his points on 3-pointers, nailed two in the opening 1:30 and the Gators made eight of 11 free throws to take the victory.

"I thought we had good pressure on them, but they jacked up a couple of shots just this side of Jupiter and they went in," Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said.

Andrew Moten led Florida with 25 points, while McKey led the Crimson Tide, 15-3 and 8-1, with 27 points and 10 rebounds.

Providence 82, No. 11 Georgetown 79

Ernie Lewis made three 3-pointers in the final 2:02, the last with two seconds to play as the Friars, 15-3 and 5-2, snapped an 11-game losing streak to Georgetown, which was led by Reggie Williams, who scored 33 points and grabbed 18 rebounds.

Perry McDonald gave Georgetown, 14-3 and 4-3, its last lead, 77-76, with a free throw with 1:25 left. Lewis' 3-pointer with 44 seconds left made it 79-77. Two free throws by Jonathan Edwards 14 seconds later tied the Big East game and set the stage for Lewis' winning bomb from deep in the right corner.

Three minutes into the second half, tempers flared briefly as Providence's Jacek Duda fouled Georgetown's Mark Tillmon on a breakaway. The coaches exhanged words about the play and both were slapped with tehcnicals.

"We foul a lot because were aggressive," Providence's Rick Pitino said of his team which was called for 30 fouls compared to the Hoyas' 22. "Maybe he (Thompson) was trying to psych up his team."

No. 17 Pittsburgh 95, Seton Hall 81

Pitt avoided a letdown after its victory at Syracuse earlier in the week despite off-nights from its two leading players.

The Panthers, 16-4 and 5-2, led by at least 12 points throughout the second half of the Big East game. Charles Smith, the Panthers' leading scorer at 18.2, was held to four in a foul-plagued performance, while Jerome Lane, the nation's leading rebounder who scored 27 against Syracuse, had just 11 points. Curtis Aiken and Rod Brookin picked up the scoring slack for Pitt with 21 and 17 points, respectively.

Louisiana State 75, No. 18 Auburn 73

Louisiana State blew a 17-point halftime lead but rallied for the Southeastern Conference victory.

Auburn, 11-5 and 4-4, managed a 57-56 lead with just under 12 minutes to play, but Louisiana State, 13-9 and 4-6, took the lead right back on a field goal by Anthony Wilson and was never headed.

PRO℠ TEXAS
A NEW OPTIONAL CALLING PLAN
FROM AT&T

On November 13, 1986 AT&T Communications of The Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T") filed with the Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas to introduce a new intrastate, optional calling plan, PRO Texas. A comparable interstate plan, known as PRO℠ America, is currently available to Texas customers.

PRO Texas gives Texas consumers an opportunity to save money on direct dialed in-state long distance calls. Customers who choose this new AT&T plan will receive a 10% discount on all AT&T intrastate direct dialed station calls by paying a monthly charge of $15.00.

The PRO Texas discount applies to calls placed during all rate periods and all days. The discount is in addition to the AT&T intrastate evening discount of 25% and the night/weekend discount of 40%. A one time charge of $6.00 will be billed to initiate the service. However, this charge will be waived during the first 90 days that the offering is available.

PRO Texas will be available to all Message Telephone Service customers in Texas. AT&T estimates that it will generate revenues in the first year of almost $8 million, which is .7% of AT&T's annual revenues for all Texas intrastate service.

The PUC has assigned Docket No. 7194 to this proposed service offering. The proposed effective date for PRO Texas is March 16, 1987. Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the PUC as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Stay in the background for now and you will eventually jump over a lot of people who are pressing too hard! You will not have to take a back seat for long. Follow your intuition about a money deal. Your educational plans will open doors for you in the near future. A new understanding with mate and children strengthens family ties. Allow greater give and take in your personal relationships.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: The longest-serving U.S. President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1933-45), historian-author Barbara Tuchman, comedian Dick Martin, actress-singer Tammy Grimes, actor Gene Hackman, New York Mets manager Dave Johnson, Broadway producer Hal Prince, actress-activist Vanessa Redgrave.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Joint investments hold rich promise now. Although a new job means a higher salary, your present position could hold greater potential. Show your heart of hearts how much you really care.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Routine tasks dominate your work day. Member of opposite sex spices things up after hours. Make certain where you stand before making any commitments in the financial department.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A great day for handling and investing money. Profits from a joint venture are higher than anticipated. Seek legal advice before signing contracts, agreements.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family problems prove easy to solve. Tensions fade. You are able to accomplish more at work. Catch up on routine tasks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take a chance on a newcomer. He or she could give you a new approach to an old problem. Stay within a budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your workload may be heavier now, but concentration comes easier. Trim expenses and hang on. Member of opposite sex has a terrific idea; investigate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New friends make things more lively, but old friends could prove more trustworthy. Romance plays a key role in today's decisions. Jointly-owned funds can be increased, thanks to inside information.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Postpone any travel that is not absolutely essential while you build a stronger base at work and home. Emotional outburst can hurt your reputation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Try to reduce your workload today. Delegate routine chores. A favor is granted by someone you greatly respect. Choose cash over credit now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have a unique opportunity to increase business profits. Put the telephone to work. Hard work and long hours count big with higher-ups. A personal relationship takes an interesting turn.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may have to decide between two people. Give careful thought to this choice. A promotion or raise is in the offing. A romantic encounter is the highlight of the evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You receive welcome financial news from afar. A personal relationship will be put to a real test. When the truth comes out, it will both answer old questions and create new ones.

Opening lead: Six of ♠

In duplicate, much of the strategy of defensive play centers around scoring 200 points. That is known as the "magic number" because it scores more than any partscore the defenders might have collected had they not elected to defend.

Overcalls on four-card suits are not usually recommended, but on this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships held in Atlanta, it was directly responsible for East-West reaching their holy grail. South became declarer at three clubs after he elected to reopen the bidding on subminimum values, and he paid the price.

West led his top spade and declarer, looking at seven spades in his combined holding after East had overcalled in that suit, thought the lead was a singleton. Therefore, he was afraid to duck a spade lest West would get two ruffs in the suit. After winning the ace, he tried the ace and another club from dummy (it would have been better to retain the ace), on which West echoed to show three trumps. East won and shifted to a low diamond, taken by his partner's ten.

A spade return allowed East to score both the jack and king, and West ruffed the fourth spade with the jack. When he exited with the king of diamonds, declarer was locked in dummy. The only way he could come to hand to take the heart finesse was with a trump, but that stranded him with a diamond loser. The defenders collected two spade tricks and a ruff, two diamonds and a trump for down two, and a top score on the board.

While evangelist pleads for millions, son moves into mansion, paper says

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The son of evangelist Oral Roberts has moved into a 7,091-square-foot residence that features a swimming pool, three-car garage and an oversized walk-in closet, according to published reports.

A city building permit shows the four-bedroom, five-bathroom house cost an estimated $214,000 to construct, not including the cost of the land, The Tulsa Tribune said in a copyright article. The house is located near the campus of Oral Roberts University.

Richard Roberts moved into the two-story, brick house as Oral Roberts pleaded with followers to send him $4.5 million by March to extend the elder Roberts' life.

The elder Roberts said on his "Expect A Miracle" television program Jan. 4 and Jan. 11 that God had ordered him to complete the fund raising for an $8 million medical missionary scholarship program by March, or God would take his life.

Oral Roberts Ministry officials said followers sent in $1.6 million in cash and pledges within two weeks after Roberts made the plea, which has drawn widespread criticism. He already had raised $3.5 million.

Bill Roberts, Oral Roberts' nephew who has directed construction projects in the past at Oral Roberts University, said Richard Roberts, his wife, Lindsay, and their young daughter moved into the house recently, the newspaper said in a story published in Wednesday's editions.

The university obtained a building permit for the house in January 1986 and city inspectors completed final inspection of the work in December.

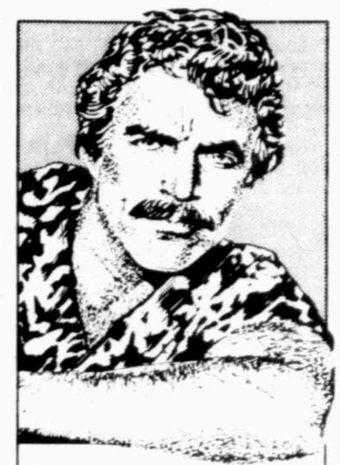

One house separates the new residence from Oral Roberts' house. There are eight residences behind a brick hall north of the university, where security guards patrol the entry to the compound.

The house features a $20,000 swimming pool, a 432-square-foot walk-in closet, a three-car garage, a 920-square-foot master bedroom suite, a 308-square-foot nursery and three fireplaces, according to building plans obtained by the Tribune.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Victoria Principal is job-hunting after deciding to leave her role as the glamorous Pam Ewing on the nighttime soap "Dallas."

Miss Principal is negotiating with other companies for television deals, including her own series, spokesman Alan Nierob said Wednesday.

Her contract with Lorimar-Telepictures ends after this season and Miss Principal will not renew it, he said. She has been with the show for nine years.

"My longtime association with Dallas was one of the most rewarding experiences in my life," Miss Principal said in a statement.

The actress was in Jefferson City, Mo., on Wednesday to persuade a state House committee to support legislation to help indigent elderly get arthritis medication. She is the national spokeswoman for the Arthritis Foundation.

After her testimony, the committee approved the bill and sent it to the full chamber.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal says the spirit of his story will be portrayed in a four-hour Home Box Office miniseries.

"The Simon Wiesenthal Story: Murderers Among Us," likely will be broadcast early next year, producer Robert Cooper said after a Wednesday news conference attended by Wiesenthal and HBO chairman Michael Fuchs at the Wiesenthal Center's Holocaust Museum.

"I have been approached many times by people who wanted to do a film or book on my life. Only now...am I confident that the spirit of my story will be properly represented," said Wiesenthal, a survivor of the Nazi death camps.

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, with a fresh commitment from two advertisers, says its miniseries "Amerika" is on track regardless of economic pressure and loss of Chrysler as a sponsor, reportedly at a cost of $5 million.

General Foods Corp. and Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. said Wednesday they were standing by plans to advertise on the 14½-hour program that depicts a Soviet takeover of the United States.

Chrysler Corp., the single largest sponsor of the week-long miniseries, scheduled for next month, said Tuesday it would pull its ads because it felt the program didn't mesh with its commercial theme "The Pride Is Back — Born in America."

The miniseries deals with life in the United States after a Soviet takeover accomplished with cooperation of an international peacekeeping force.

It has drawn criticism from the left and right, over whether international relations could be damaged, whether the peacekeeping troops too closely resemble United Nations' forces and whether the Soviets are portrayed too sympathetically.

ABC said it would look for other sponsors for the time Chrysler ordered but that it would hold Chrysler responsible to make up any difference if it gets less than Chrysler had agreed to pay.

ABC said it was "concerned that certain organizations for their own special interests have criticized 'Amerika' sight unseen and would threaten advertisers for supporting the program."

It said the miniseries would run on schedule next month "because we believe in the program, and it will air irrespective of economic pressure."

General Foods has bought 26 commercials, or about 13 percent of the available time on the program, for products such as Jello pudding, Maxwell House coffee and Raisin Bran cereal.

"Our decision to buy time was based on our belief that this was an appropriate dramatic theme, and our intention is to stay in," said spokesman Cliff Sessions from General Foods' headquarters in White Plains.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar edged up on European exchange markets in light trading early today. Gold prices were settling at $411 an ounce.

The dollar rose in Tokyo on Japanese reports that the U.S. Federal Reserve had bought $50 million on behalf of the Bank of Japan in the open market Wednesday to stabilize the dollar-yen rate.

But the dollar was knocked back in later European trading when West Germany's central bank, Bundesbank, remained on the sidelines, thus dampening speculation over coordinated central-bank intervention in support of the beleaguered currency.

By midmorning, the dollar was holding steady against most major currencies at levels slightly above those in Europe late Wednesday.

Traders said many market participants were reluctant to take up strong positions prior to Friday's publication of figures on the U.S. trade deficit in December.

Midmorning dollar rates in Europe compared with late Wednesday:

—1.7760 West German marks, up from 1.7750

—1.5005 Swiss francs, up from 1.4865

—5.9545 French francs, up from 5.9150

—2.0110 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0005

—1,271.75 Italian lire, up from 1,264.00

—1.3455 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3360

The British pound eased to $1.5410 from $1.5470.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price of $411 a troy ounce, up from $408.80 late Wednesday.

Gold traded at a bid of $411.00 in Zurich, unchanged from late Wednesday.

Hong Kong markets were closed for the Chinese Lunar New Year holiday.

Silver bullion was quoted in London at a bid of $5.61 an ounce, down from $5.64.

Another record high

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices surged in a late buying spree Wednesday and pushed the Dow Jones industrial average to its 15th record-high close of 1987, capping a see-saw session caused partly by computerized trading.

Wall Street's most widely followed indicator swung in a narrow range through most of the day but snapped out of that pattern in the last half hour and rose 12.94 points to a record 2,163.39. The Dow Jones industrial average has risen 267.44 points since the year began, an increase of 14.1 percent.

Broader market barometers also shattered records, supporting a widespread view on Wall Street that the new year rally remains strong. Analysts also credited the market's gains to higher corporate profits and the beneficial impact of the lower dollar on overseas sales by U.S. multinational companies.

Hughes postpones merger vote

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. stockholders Wednesday postponed a vote on a proposed merger agreement between the company and Baker International Corp. until next month because of opposition voiced by the Department of Justice.

The vote has been delayed until Feb. 25, said Hughes Tool Chairman and Chief Executive Officer W.A. Kistler Jr.

The Justice Department issued a statement Sunday opposing the planned merger between the two oilfield services companies unless Baker divested its oilfield drilling bit and electrical submersible pump businesses.

"It's not real clear as to what all the Justice Department wants," Kistler said. "We have to first determine the full scope."

Kistler said the department would approve the merger if the two items were divested in accordance with their guidelines.

"We're trying to determine what those guidelines are," he said.

Baker, based in Orange, Calif., is willing to divest "under certain circumstances," Kistler said.

"We recognize that the oil industry is in the midst of a severe depression," the Justice Department said in a statement. "However, we are convinced that Hughes and Baker are two of the strongest competitors in the adversely affected markets and their independence is essential to ensuring that those markets remain competitive."

Currently there are only four major producers of the tricone rock bits and four major producers of electronic submersible pumps.

"If this merger is allowed to proceed, there will be only three significant competitors in each market," said Charles F. Rule, acting assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's antitrust division.

Baker stockholders also agreed Wednesday to delay a vote on the proposed merger until Feb. 25, said Hughes spokesman Donald L. King said.

Hughes reported Wednesday that the company lost $475 million in 1986, or $4.50 per share. In 1985, the company reported net income in 1985 of $4.1 million dollars, or about 7 cents per share.

During the fourth quarter of 1986, Hughes reported a profit of $31.7 million or 57 cents per share. In the last quarter of 1985, the company posted earnings of $560,000 or about 1 cent per share.

Local entrepreneur starts oil and gas service firm

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

Max Goff

Amid rumors of the great flight of talent and wealth from the Tall City, one entrepreneur chose the first of the year as the ideal time to incorporate a new oil and gas service organization.

Gas Programs Management Inc. is an alternative lease equipment service firm founded by Max Goff. Goff, vice president and regional manager for the Western Co. of North America in Midland from 1979 until early 1985, returned to Midland last summer after all senior officers of the company resigned from the firm's Fort Worth headquarters.

Goff's approach to providing production equipment is strictly in tune with the capital-poor times operators are facing today. "If there are opportunities to increase production which are being overlooked, GPM will — at its own expense — do feasibility studies and if warranted install the needed equipment, with no capital outlay required by the well operator," Goff explains.

GPM's revenue comes after successful installation of the production equipment, the company shares in the proceeds from the increased lease output.

Goff says that one of the keys to early development of the business is to not restrict the directions of its growth. Among the possible production enhancement processes provided by GPM are stock tank vapor recovery; recompression of low volume gas to meet sales line requirements; gas pressure reduction in the well annulus to increase oil production; and, multi-well or multi-lease sharing of a single equipment installation — particularly in areas with simplified ownership of neighboring leases and wells.

"Recovering vapor gas is often overlooked by operators — or isn't economical for them — but the gas is very high in Btu content and strippable gas liquids. For wells under contracts with Btu adjustment clauses, recovering small volumes of these rich liquids can make good economic sense," Goff says.

GPM will run feasibility studies on virtually any proposal brought forth by a producer and the firm will install needed production equipment with no out-of-pocket expense to the operator, if the potential for increasing production looks promising enough at current prices, Goff says.

Continental cancels ticket giveaway

NEW YORK (AP) — Continental Airlines' plan for what it called "the largest airline ticket giveaway in history" to be held at Madison Square Garden has been scrubbed.

Continental was going to give away $100 million worth of tickets to celebrate becoming part of one of the largest airlines in the metropolitan area.

Madison Square Garden's 4,600-seat Felt Forum was to be the setting. The carrier said it would give free round-trip tickets to U.S. and overseas destinations to anyone who showed up at the Forum between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. on Feb. 1. They had expected 250,000 people.

The city, alarmed at the prospect of many people crowding onto a single block, went to court to halt the event. The city said police foresaw massive crowd and traffic control headaches, health and medical problems, unruliness and violence, theft, and problems for emergency vehicles.

On Wednesday, state Supreme Court Justice David Saxe ruled in agreement with the city.

"I do not wish to curb the instincts of generosity by Continental," he said after a brief hearing, "but I don't think the airline has adequately assessed the problems that might arise."

Douglas Birdsall, senior vice president of Texas Air, said the the event must have been "too big for the city."

"If there were any way, then we would have done it," said Birdsall, an officer of the holding company that controls Continental.

Birdsall called the ruling unfortunate. During the hearing he had testified that Continental was prepared to process tickets for 60,000 people an hour and this would prevent the crowds the police feared.

Meanwhile, the Garden canceled Continental's lease to use the Felt Forum.

"There is just not enough time before the Sunday event to locate a replacement site and make acceptable operations and security arrangements," Birdsall said.

He said the Meadowlands in New Jersey was the only other "truly suitable" site in the area and Continental had been in intensive talks with officials there, but to no avail.

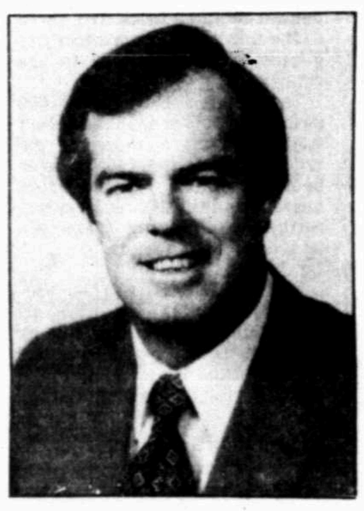

Birdsall said Shea and Yankee stadiums do not have enough heated indoor space to handle everything.

The executive said the event was to celebrate the official consolidation of Continental, People Express, New York Air and Texas Air.

Local bank elects committee head

Charles G. Grimes, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Texas American Bank, Midland, announces the election of Joseph I. O'Neill III as the new chairman of the executive committee for 1987. This position rotates annually among the senior board members.

Joseph I. O'Neill III is a managing partner of O'Neill Properties, Ltd., involved in oil and gas investments. He has been a member of the Texas American Bank, Midland, board of directors since January 1977. He is a strong personality in the Midland community, and his primary commitment for the year is as president of the United Way of Midland.

Midland chamber forms foundation

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

The Midland Chamber of Commerce Wednesday approved articles of incorporation and bylaws to form the Midland Chamber of Commerce Foundation. The Foundation, a nonprofit organization, is intended to enable the Chamber to take advantage of charitable contributions.

Chamber board member Curtis Neely says the Chamber will benefit from the new organization because money it might receive from individuals or groups might be used to buy the chamber offices, thereby saving the group a large portion of its budget. The Foundation would also be able to fund chamber activities through grants of contributed monies.

"It is not uncommon for chambers to have this type of organization to work with and we are sure it will work very well for us," says Neely.

He adds that members of the executive committee of the chamber will serve as trustees for the newly formed Foundation.

In other chamber business, Greg Holmes reported that a committee is working with state government officials in efforts to secure appointments of Midland and Odessa leaders to Texas boards and commissions.

"We are working to get more representation in Austin for Midland and West Texas. It is important that we have local representation on state committees so the interests of West Texas will be known," stated Holmes.

Anita Noles, president of the Midland Board of Realtors, reports home sales in Midland were up in December.

"In December, 98 homes were sold for a total value of $6.672 million, compared to 35 homes sold in December 1985 for a value of $2.619 million."

Noles says there were 1,491 residential properties listed for sale in December, up from the 1,279 offered for sale during the same month a year ago.

"The phones are ringing more and we see business picking up. We're looking forward to a good year for the Midland real estate market," Noles explains, noting that lower interest rates on FHA and VA loans and a small but steady number of companies transferring employees into Midland account for a portion of the increase.

Chamber executive vice president Joe Kloesel reported that the Superconducting Super Collider project is proceeding on schedule, adding that no final word on Presidential approval for the project has been reported.

"We are hoping, and have received some positive information, that this project is included in the President's scientific research budget."

Kloesel says a report in the Kiplinger newsletter states that the project is "imminent and site proposals will be taken in the summer of 1987, with a site selection scheduled for the spring of 1988."

HOUSTON (AP) — Shell Oil Co. posted earnings of $254 million for the fourth quarter of 1986, a 61 percent decline from net income of $652 million posted for the same period the previous year.

Shell, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Royal Dutch-Shell, also posted earnings of $883 million for the year, a 47 percent decline from net income of $1.65 billion reported in 1985.

Shell President John F. Bookout said oil and gas exploration and production earnings totaled $165 million, down from $316 million for the similar period last year.

Earnings for the year were $427 million, down from just over $1 billion the previous year, he said.

Money from operations totaled $962 million for the quarter and $3.53 billion for the year, compared with $1.19 billion and $3.93 billion in the same 1985 periods.

Revenues were $4.5 billion for the fourth quarter and $17.4 billion for the year, compared with $5.5 billion and $20.5 billion in 1985.

Western Company posts fourth quarter loss

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Western Company of North America Wednesday posted a net loss of $20.4 million, or 48 cents per share, on revenues of $35.2 million for the fourth quarter of 1986.

The loss compares with a fourth-quarter 1985 loss of $10.2 million, 27 cents per share, on revenues of $120.8 million.

The oil and gas well service company, which is headed by Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles, reported a loss for 1986 of $340.5 million, or $7.46 per share, on revenue of $197 million. The previous year the company posted a loss of $67.3 million, or $1.66 per share, on $500.2 million revenue.

Southwest Gas bid to control El Paso rejected

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The state Corporation Commission has rejected a plea by Southwest Gas Corp. to allow it to compete with a now-unregulated company for natural-gas sales to three of the state's largest utilities.

The commission Wednesday unanimously rejected the request to bring El Paso Natural Gas Co. of El Paso, Texas, under its control. Panel members said no such control was needed because El Paso has limited sales in the state and its customers' long-term contracts were written years ago.

ALLEN E. HOWLAND

Rather than fight or switch I think I'll just quit!

Howland

For as vile and disgusting a reputation as smoking has, it's amazing how few people notice when you give it up — even for a short time.

At "Q" (quitting time) plus 72 — 72 hours without cigarettes — none of the people who have lectured me longest and hardest on the evils of the "killer weed" have even noticed my recent change in smoking status, from former smokestack to reformed puffer.

Seventy-two hours probably doesn't sound like that big a deal to you, but it is the longest this body has gone without artificial nicotine stimulation in more than 10 years.

The only reason I mention any of this is not that anybody really cares, but because smokers' and non-smokers' rights and the conflicts between the two are gaining greater public attention and generating controversy in business management.

An increasing number of employers are restricting or eliminating smoking areas in the work place. Providing smoke-free common work areas is a priority for some employers, but as with virtually everything, there is always one or two in the crowd who insist on blowing a basically reasonable idea far beyond its logical limits.

One Texas employer has announced plans to dismiss workers who smoke anywhere, at any time, on the job or off. One impetus for such policies is coming from insurance carriers, who are telling their customers that one way to lower costs is to lower the statistical probability of health care claims by not allowing smokers on the payroll.

Such blanket, round-the clock, employment policies smack of the same kind of thinking which led to reinstatement of Texas' sodomy law. At the rate things are going, the 'bedroom police' may be able to catch a married couple in an unlawful act, then relaxing with a cigarette afterward and the couple will find themselves out of work and under arrest for things which are really nobody's business but their own.

As a note in closing, I need to ask one promise of help. It doesn't have anything to do with staying off the tobacco; but I do need your help in one area.

If you ever see or hear me sermonizing to get others to stop smoking, somebody (no, make that everybody) come up and just slap the stuffing out of me.

Other people's well-meaning, but inevitably sanctimonious, proselytizing for the sake of my health and welfare always turned in to more of an obstacle than a help. Stubborn fool that I am, the best way to get me to do something is to urge me to do the opposite.

Missionaries seeking to convert the great, unwashed masses of smokers to the way of righteous smokelessness fail to realize one key factor: the decision — conscious or subconscious — to continue smoking has little or nothing to do with rational thought or documentable facts. It is a personal, emotional attention that must be internally broken in order to have any chance of working.

Others' reasons, regardless of how sound the logic or how overwhelming the evidence, don't make a whit of difference to a smoker.

I hereby promise to never become one of those people I could never abide and would go out of my way to avoid. I'd appreciate your help in resisting that transformation.

Ex-colonel sees revolution in flying, thanks to microchips

By R.B. BRENNER
Copley News Service

Imagine a world where masses of citizens will be eager to climb alone into a vehicle that is nearly as light as a bicycle and soar through the sky with little fear of danger.

Microscopic computer chips will handle most of the navigation and the craft will be strong enough to withstand the force of a wall. The passenger's primary task will be to enjoy the ride.

Walter J. Boyne has imagined this world. He believes it will be our society starting around the year 2000.

"It is my personal belief that in about 15 years, we're going to see an absolute revolution in flying," said Boyne, a retired Air Force colonel who until August 1986 was executive director of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

Boyne, who has been enamored with flight since he was a boy in East St. Louis, Ill., predicted that advances in computer technology and aircraft design could make it possible for flying to become a recreational sport on the scale of sailing and skiing in popularity.

"I can see a situation where someone will design an airplane that will be very light, maybe 40 pounds," Boyne said. "It will be human- and solar-powered, have automatic stability built in through microchip autopilots, and will be built of materials that are so strong that, for the weight and speed the airplane will be flying, you'll be able to just about fly into a wall and bounce off."

Aware that this scenario sounded surprisingly radical coming from a career Air Force pilot and officer, Boyne paused and smiled. Then he added that he has no illusions that this type of flying would supplant 727s or other commercial airplanes.

"This isn't the sort of thing you want to use at LAX (Los Angeles International Airport)," he said. "But it could start a new generation of sport flying in a way that hasn't been done."

As evidence that his dream is right around the corner, Boyne pointed out that a group of students at Massachusetts Institute of Technology is building a plane with a 110-foot wingspan that will weigh only 68 pounds. The students intend for it to fly from Crete to Greece, he said.

During his career in the Air Force, Boyne commanded such massive, powerful aircraft as the B-47 Stratojet and the B-29 Superfortress. When he talks and writes about flying, however, he emphasizes that the emotional sensations of flight — the extremes of fear and joy — can be experienced in any type of plane.

"When man first started thinking about flight 3,000 or 4,000 years ago, he didn't think about 747s or B-1s," Boyne said. "He thought about flying like the birds. This type of airplane I've been talking about will get us back flying like the birds."

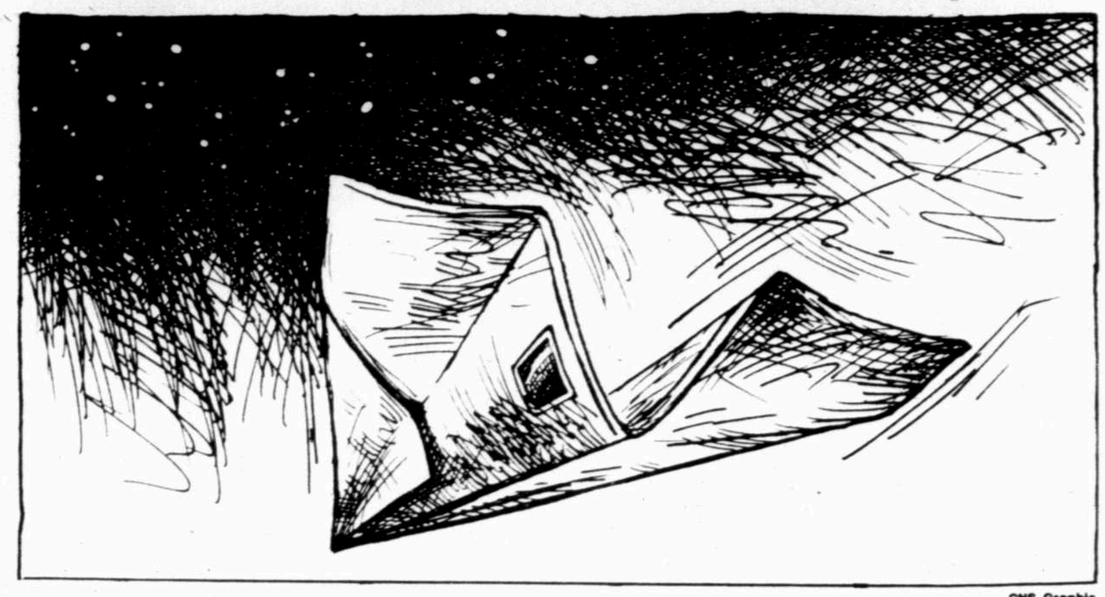

America's exploration of space took a tragic step backward last year on Jan. 28 when the space shuttle Challenger exploded shortly after taking off, killing all seven crew members. The tragedy was compounded by the fact that one of those killed, Christa McAuliffe, was a teacher and schoolchildren throughout the nation saw the tragedy on television.

Boyne said he believes most Americans, particularly children, will continue to be enthusiastic about flying and traveling in space despite the Challenger disaster.

But he said a lesson must be learned.

"It was a shame that everybody — the population, NASA and even the astronauts — all had come to accept a level of risk that was far higher than was acceptable," Boyne said. "The tragedy was inevitable."

He added: "If any tragedy like that can have a positive benefit, I hope it has been that people have taken a serious look at the real risks and realized that when you're flying a test vehicle in highly dangerous circumstances, you have to be more careful and much less complacent than was the case."

CNS Graphic

Boyne said he is confident that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will become a better-run organization than it was before the shuttle explosion.

"I didn't want to write a puff piece on the Air Force," Boyne said. "It's very positive about the Air Force, but the book also talks about the hardships on families. It points out that the wives and families are really the fabric that holds things together."

Boyne retired from the Air Force in 1974 after a military career of more than 20 years. He then joined the National Air and Space Museum as assistant curator. He was promoted to acting director of the museum before being named director about three years ago.

Microwave ovens require cleaning

By MARIAN FARR

Farr

Compared to cleaning a conventional oven, cleaning a microwave is easy — so easy that many people don't do it often enough. Infrequent cleaning can impair the efficiency of a microwave oven.

Microwaves are absorbed by food, whether that food is on the walls of the oven or in a dish, so a build-up of food particles on the oven surfaces can slow the cooking process. Food soils around the door or the frame may also interfere with the door seal or even prevent the oven from starting properly.

Ideally, the microwave should be cleaned after each use with a paper towel or sponge dipped in a mild detergent and warm water solution.

To remove foods that have cooked onto the oven surface, try boiling a cup of water in a bowl for several minutes. The steam will condense on the oven surfaces and make the food easier to wipe away.

Food soil build-up, cooking strong-flavored foods, repeated overcooking and smoke from overcooked potatoes, bacon or popcorn can cause odors in a microwave oven. After thoroughly cleaning the oven, remove odors by boiling a solution of ½ cup lemon juice and 1 cup water in a bowl for several minutes. Then let the solution stand in the oven five or six minutes.

Mail order gripes involve non-delivery

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

Schmidt

In a recent news release, Better Business Bureau/New York City reported handling over 4,000 mail order complaints during the first six months of 1986.

Over half of those complaints were about five companies: Abernathy and Closther, Pooles Fifth Avenue, Carter and Van Peel, Parfums de Paris and Favorite Fragrances.

The most frequent complaint (over 74 percent) involved non-delivery. These firms advertise on a national level. The local BBB has also received inquiries and complaints from Permian Basin consumers. Products offered include such diverse goods as jewelry, survival knives, perfume and dolls. All five companies have unsatisfactory reports from the Metropolitan New York Bureau and we have these reports on file.

When dealing with mail order firms, even if they are out of state, give your BBB a call and check them out. You may avoid adding your name to the mail order statistics of the few firms that are creating problems.

DEAR ABBY

Education as well as locks promote effective gun safety

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing that beautiful letter from the parents whose 15-year-old son, victim of a gun "accident," donated his organs so that others might live. It was a wonderful testimony for organ donation. But something has to be added.

When I was a boy, we always had guns in the house. They were kept locked up, but my father didn't stop there. At a very early age, he taught us, "There is no such thing as an unloaded gun!" We were not allowed to point toy guns at our playmates. Each of us was given a closely supervised chance to fire a real gun so we knew what it could do. He taught us that if we were at a friend's house, and that friend found a real gun and played with it, to get the hell out of there and tell an adult! Any explanations to the friend could be made later by telephone, at a safe distance.

As a result of his wise teaching, we grew up regarding guns with understanding and respect, instead of fear and fascination. I wish every parent would do the same. — GEORGE W., NORMAL, ILL.

DEAR GEORGE: Your point is well taken. But you and I part company when it comes to guns in the house. Guns in the house have killed more people (especially children) accidentally than on purpose.

DEAR ABBY: "Not Guilty in Elgin" wrote that she and her husband of six months had agreed that each would write thank-you notes to their own friends and relatives for their wedding gifts.

It seems that she wrote hers, but her husband failed to write his, and now she is receiving "hints" that she has failed to acknowledge some wedding gifts.

Abby, he will never write his, and she will always be blamed for not writing the thank-you notes to his family and friends, so I think she would be wise to go ahead and write the remaining notes herself. It would relieve her of the constant guilt feelings and reminders that something was left undone after the wedding.

I know it isn't fair, but she will feel better in the years to come for having done it. She should also be prepared for future failed agreements. This was probably not the first time her husband welched on a deal.— BOB IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR BOB: You're undoubtedly right. It isn't fair, but when it comes to acknowledging wedding presents, getting the job done is more important than who does it.

DEAR ABBY: My dear young son is very sad tonight, and his older sister says that she has often felt the same way. Why? Because a well-intentioned schoolteacher appointed other classmates to be team "captains," and to choose up their teams. They chose their classmates — one by one — until none remained.

Abby, only a child who has felt the pain and humiliation of having been chosen last can understand the feeling. My husband and I both experienced this as children, and now we are going through it again watching our own children. It would save many children many scars if teachers would find another way to divide the classroom into two teams to compete in spelling bees, gymnastics or whatever.

Abby, please pass this along. If just one teacher will discontinue that practice, it will be worthwhile. The joy of being chosen first — or early — does not last nearly as long as the pain those children feel when they are the last to be chosen. — HURTING IN OHIO

DEAR HURTING: I will gladly pass this important message along with the hope that it will be seen by teachers who will discontinue the cruel practice. This was done when I was a child. And recalling how deeply many children were hurt, I am appalled that this thoughtless, insensitive system still persists.

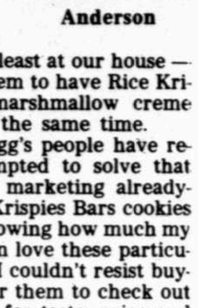

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Rice Krispie Bars go to dogs

By LINDA ANDERSON

Anderson

All kids seem to love those old favorite Rice Krispies cookies — you know, the easy ones made with Rice Krispies cereal and marshmallow creme.

Unfortunately — at least at our house — we never seem to have Rice Krispies and marshmallow creme on hand at the same time.

The Kellogg's people have recently attempted to solve that problem by marketing already-made Rice Krispies Bars cookies in a box. Knowing how much my own children love these particular cookies, I couldn't resist buying a box for them to check out the product for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

According to label information, the krispie bars are available in four flavors — chocolate chip, raisin, peanut butter and even Cocoa Krispies chocolate chip. We tested just regular chocolate chip — or "real chocolate chip," the label claims.

An 8-ounce box of Rice Krispie Bars, which contains eight bars, cost $1.89, or about 32 cents per cookie. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.) The cookies are a pretty good size, too — about 5 inches long, 1¼ inches wide and ½ inch or so tall. Each kid could have half a cookie and still have plenty.

Label advertising claims the cookies "provide 6 essential vitamins and minerals" and "are more than crispy, chewy and delicious." Claims of "no preservatives" and "no artificial flavors" also adorn the front of the box.

Each bar is supposed to contain 110 calories (like I said, the cookies are on the large side) as well as 10 percent of the vitamin A, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, iron, vitamin B6 and folic acid suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance. These sweet things also contain an awful lot of sugar in the formsof corn syrup, corn syrup solids, high fructose corn syrup, brown sugar, honey, chocolate chips and plain old sugar — all of which are listed as separate ingredients on the label.

The problems came during the taste-test. Unknown to us, the Kellogg's people have seen fit to include oatmeal in their cookies — not just Rice Krispies, like the cookies you make at home, but oatmeal!

This does not matter much to me, but my children can't stand oatmeal. (I like it.) And the oatmeal in the krispie cookies was enough to ruin the entire box of cookies — even though they had chocolate chips in them. The kids still love Rice Krispie cookies — the homemade kind, not the ones you buy in a box.

After the initial taste-test, I had a difficult time coaxing them to finish to box. The dogs seemed to like them, though ...

Despite VCR ownership, viewers still pay for cable

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Although more than half of cable television subscribers also own video cassette recorders, their viewing of cable programming remains about the same, according to a nationwide survey released Wednesday.

The survey of 1,000 households also revealed that a majority of subscribers think cable programming has not gotten better, but has also not gotten any worse, during the past year.

During a news conference, Susan Delzell, president of OnTRAQ, the cable-monitoring service that conducted the survey, said the computerized telephone survey was developed to aid cable operators in providing better service to customers.

"With the value of the individual subscriber approaching $2,000, it becomes increasingly more important to know what's on his or her mind," she said of the amount some cable companies are investing in service per subscriber.

"Now operators have a quantitative yardstick they can use to measure how well they are serving their customers."

The survey was conducted last month, asking subscribers about 20 different questions about their viewing habits.

The biggest complaint from customers was telephone service, with 44 percent of the respondents saying they had difficulty in reaching their cable companies by phone.

However, more than half of the respondents, 53 percent, rated cable service good-to-excellent, compared with other utility services such as gas and electric.

Subscribers seem to be divided about choosing and paying for additional channels rather than buying one basic service that includes more channels for a higher price. Nearly half, 48 percent, said they would rather pay for channels separately.

Nearly half of the households, 44 percent, also said their cable service was a good-to-excellent value for the price, while 30 percent it was a fair-to-poor value.

About half of the respondents, 51 percent, said it was a fair business practice for cable companies to "scramble" their signals to prevent piracy, while 41 percent said it was an unfair practice.

Fifty-eight percent of the households surveyed said they owned video-cassette recorders and of those respondents, 64 percent said their cable viewing habits remained about the same, 16 percent said it had increased and 19 percent said it had decreased.

More than half, 53 percent, indicated that cable programming had remained the same over the past year.

Remote control device powerful

By JANET ELDER
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It all started with the garage door. After a family outing, before pulling into the driveway, arguments broke out over who would get to open the garage using the family's latest toy: a remote-control device.

Now that struggle for power has moved into the television room, and siblings, spouses and roommates are battling for control of the controls.

Psychologists say that being the keeper of the device is no cheap thrill, that controlling remote-control devices gives people a real sense of power. "People are always looking for control and power — most of us feel very lacking," said Dr. Robert E. Gould, a professor of psychiatry at New York Medical College. "It's superficial, but if someone can't get it another way, having control over the environment can go a long way in making them feel secure."

The problem comes when more than one member of the family needs to feel secure. "This is a whole new area for family conflict," said Robert W. Kubey, a psychologist and assistant professor in the department communications department at Rutgers University.

As in most conflicts, there are winners and losers. "He who controls the remote control device controls the family," said Bradley Greenberg, a professor of telecommunications and communications at the University of Michigan. "Usually it is the father, and usually he will turn the controls over to his son rather than his daughter."

Some see possession of the controls as a barometer of power. "The answer to the question of who controls the device is a reasonable indicator for power in the marriage," Kubey said.

In the parents' absence, children will battle for control. "Fights among children for control of the device can even result in minor physical violence," Kubey said.

Although there hasn't been any physical violence in the DiMuzio household in Ridgefield, Conn., 25-year-old Louis DiMuzio is the king of the controls. They are automatically turned over to him by his mother and sister. "Its easier than fighting," said his mother, Patricia DiMuzio, an actress. "We go watch the black and white set. At least that way we don't have to suffer through his constant channel changing."

In fact, channel changing — "zapping," as communications experts call it — is what many of the fights are about. The latest devices allow the viewer to flip quickly through channels. "There is a basic insecurity about am I really watching the best thing that is available," Greenberg said.

Robert Noskiewicz and Robert Sendewicz, roommates in West Paterson, N.J., look lightly on their squabbles. They have solved the battle for power by each having a device. Sitting on separate couches, controls in hand and television dead center, the friends enjoy the struggle more than watching television.

Yesterday's high-tech today's techno trash

By PETER ROWE
Copley New Service

Remember "Pong"? Two-hundred-dollar pocket calculators? Razor-sharpening pyramids?

Yesterday's high tech is today's techno trash. Even the Rolls-Royce of gadgetry, the ticking, clicking knickknacks of the James Bond movies, do not age well. In "From Russia With Love" there is a briefcase with — gasp — secret compartments! In "You Only Live Twice," a one-man helicopter!

These are passing fancies. Our love affair with shiny contraptions has nothing to do with real needs and everything to do with status, with owning the latest toy before the clever becomes the clich.

Keven Kroner, manager of The Sharper Image in La Jolla, Calif., considered Mitsubishi's Luma Video Telephone, a $1,450 bauble that beams photographs over the phone line.

Not very practical. It doesn't work unless the person on the other end of the line has one, too. And the image cannot be transferred from screen to paper without the optional printer. That's another $995.

"The people that have the money to buy this," Kroner said, "either have a business to justify the cost or they are so rich they don't care."

Or, like secret agents, they're gonzo over gizmos.

If you are looking for techno finds of 1986, this is what you might encounter:

ONE FOR THE MONEY

The Horse Race Analyzer is a small affair that makes some large claims. The odds, the maker claims, are 22 percent that the computer's top pick for any race will win; 51 percent that the nag will win, place or show; and 90 percent that one of the computer's top three will finish in the money.

"We took it to Del Mar and it picked a long shot," said Kroner. "By golly, the horse won the race."

Information is punched in on each horse — post position, days since last race, distance, number of wins, etc. A 9-volt battery, not included, processes the data and spits out the analysis.

Does it work?

"We never get them returned," said Kroner, "and we have a really liberal return policy."

The Horse Race Analyzer. About $69.

HELLO - GLUB, GLUB

Phone always ring when you are in the tub? Just toss Ma Bell into the bath with you. The Float Phone is waterproof and can be dunked in hot tub or swimming pool without damage.

"You can dial under water," said Kroner, "but you would have to have the antenna above water."

But with the antenna up, you could even carry on a conversation while lying underwater!

Not that you'd want to.

"It wouldn't be real effective," said Kroner.

Webcor Float Phone. $149.

ONE FOR THE ROAD

The party's over and now comes the moment of truth: to drive or not to drive.

Take a deep breath and blow. With a portable alcohol tester, an inebriated reveler can figure the alcohol level in his or her blood before the Highway Patrol does.

About the same size and shape as a slim walkie-talkie, the alcohol tester comes with a protruding plastic tube. Blow in for four seconds and look for the light — green indicates a passing level, yellow is barely legal, red is trouble.

Bristoline Alcohol Tester. $59.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU

It's not quite as advanced as Dick Tracy's wristwatch video telephone, but the Luma Video Telephone is pretty sophisticated. Equipped with a camera, Luma is able to snap a shot of the caller — or a business document or whatever — and transmit it to another Luma. The screen is also used to display up to 100 telephone numbers, which can be automatically dialed. A speaker is also built into the console, so calls can be made hands-free.

Luma is made by Mitsubishi — in Silicon Valley.

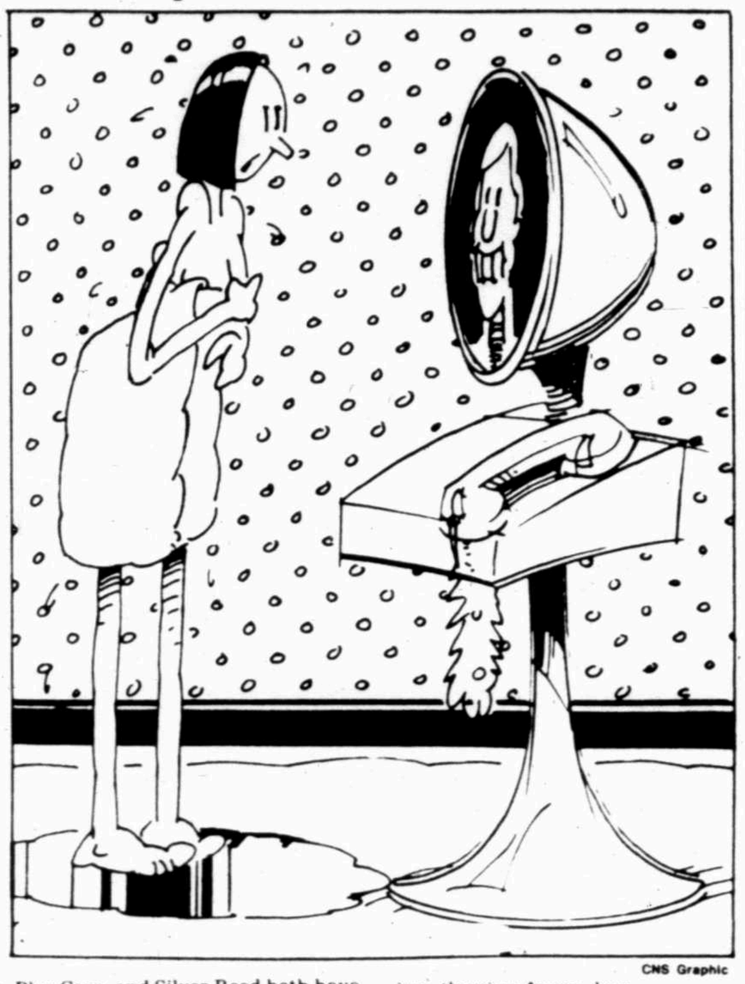

"In Europe," said Kroner, "they have the ability to make high-tech items, but they are very expensive and not very innovative. The most innovative products are made in the U.S. — and then the Japanese come along and show us how to make them efficiently."

Luma Video Telephone. Mitsubishi. $1,450. Video printer, $995. Four rolls of thermal paper, $45.

THAT'S A COPY

Industrial spies have long complained about those silly little cameras they use to shoot pictures of classified documents. Why not a pocket-size photocopier? A great idea, so of course it was copied. The Plus Corp. and Silver Reed both have portable cordless copiers. Both are simple to operate. Hold it in your hand, turn it on, slowly roll it over whatever you are copying and, presto, out comes the copy on slick white paper. Plus Corp.'s Copy-Jack makes copies in 2- and 4-inch swaths. Silver Reed's Porta Copy issues 3-inch-wide prints.

Copy-Jack, 2-inch-wide, $299.95. 4-inch, $439.95. Porta Copy, $349.95.

FLAME ON

Never know when you'll need to do a spot of welding. The Blazer butane torch only weighs eight ounces, but its flame heats up to 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit. The manufacturer recommends dozens of uses — jewelry making, toy repair, wire soldering, thawing frozen logs ...

Blazer. Blazer Products. $54.95.

HOT ENOUGH FOR YOU?

Until someone rigs the great outdoors with forced air heating, your best bet for 10 to 15 minutes of warmth in the snow or wind may be the Re-Heater. The folks at A-16's Wild Horizons tried to explain how it works, but it's beyond me. All I know is you drop this 3-by-6-inch pad into boiling water. Retrieve and store it. Hours later, when your hands or face feel like Juneau in January, pull it out and press the pad's button. Voila — up to 130 degrees of comfort. It's versatile. The box says, "Perfect for: Camping ... Skiing ... Menstrual Cramps."

Re-Heater. Re-Heater Inc. $8.40.

Trend toward more color pervades electronic field

New York Times News Service

LAS VEGAS — As homes have filled with audio and video equipment of all shapes and sizes, manufacturers are designing it to fit in more stylishly with its surroundings.

Throughout the huge winter Consumer Electronics Show here last week, attended by about 100,000 people, companies touted "designer" or "fashion" models of their machines and accelerated the trend of the past few years toward more colors.

A prime example was in video cassette recorders, which are nearly ubiquitous in American households.

Panasonic, for example, introduced a line of VCR's with rounded contours on the machine itself and on its remote control device. They will be available in dusty rose, in ivory and in black with gold or silver highlights. The PV-2700 series will be in stores in March, at a price yet to be announced.

THE trend encompasses most other audio and video products. Walkman-type personal stereos were shown in a rainbow of colors and designs. Sharp displayed a 13-inch television available in pink, yellow, green, beige, white and black. Panasonic is selling even hot-pink headphones.

The Electro Magnetic Corp. of Fort Smith, Ark., offered a way to make stereo speakers nearly invisible. It has developed wall-mounted speakers that measure about 2 by 3 feet but are only 3 inches thick. Speakers can be made to pass for a piece of art by covering them with a painted screen. The company offers a selection of modern and classic screen designs or will silk-screen a customer's own design.

There was plenty of nonesthetic innovation at the show, as well. Much of the gossip was about digital audio tape, the next generation of recording technology and one that most experts think is technically superior to the current rage, compact disks.

Commonly known as DAT, the new format is at the center of a major dispute in the industry. Many companies do not want to introduce DAT products while compact disk technology is just beginning to generate huge sales and profits. But others, fearful of letting competitors get the jump on them, are pressing ahead with plans to bring DAT recorders out.

KENWOOD, Onkyo, Luxman and Harmon Kardon all showed DAT machines and Sony showed its prototype technology.

Complicating DAT's introduction is an attempt by the recording industry to convince Congress to require that digital audio recorders contain a computer chip that would prevent them from recording from compact disks. The recording industry is afraid of losing millions of dollars in revenue from copying.

There was also lots of action on the camcorder front. Camcorders — the lightweight video cameras designed to take home movies that can be played back on a television — were one of the hottest-selling products of 1986, and promise to be even more popular this year.

But in camcorders, too, there is an industry dispute that is leading to confusion among many consumers. Sony and a few other companies are selling camcorders using an eight-millimeter tape. JVC, RCA, Panasonic and most other concerns are selling machines based on the VHS format familiar to most people who own VCR's. Eight-millimeter and VHS-based camcorder systems are not compatible.

Then there was the usual quota of silliness. Electronic scales with digital readouts are hot, and so is Garfield the Cat. So naturally, Tyco Industries brought out a Garfield electronic scale. Step on the cat and his eyes pop open — and then the scale gives you the bad news on a digital readout. There is a Miss Piggy version also.
