Casey defends arms sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William Casey defended President Reagan's secret arms sales to Iran on Friday before disbelieving lawmakers, and a senior GOP senator said the president needs "to bring in some big leaguers to run things" at the White House.

House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas, after hearing Casey's report, said Iranians paid $12 million for the weapons they received, including 2,008 anti-tank weapons. Wright, the likely speaker of the House when Congress convenes in January, said "several other countries" besides the United States and Israel had been involved in shipping weapons to Iran, but he declined to identify them.

While those shipments were not necessarily directly related to the U.S. effort to improve relations with Iran and free American hostages held in Lebanon, said Wright, the shipments were made with "the condoning of the United States and the complicity of the United States in some instances."

He renewed his charge that Reagan broke the law by failing to inform Congress of the sales for several months — a charge that Casey denied. "Oh, no, no, no," Casey told reporters as he shuttled between closed-door sessions with the House and Senate intelligence committees.

The Senate Intelligence Committee sent Reagan a letter Friday saying it "cannot accept a logic" which holds that it is all right to have a "high-risk meeting" between U.S. and Iranian officials while rejecting "the comparatively minor risks inherent" in telling Congress.

Reagan was unavailable to reporters, ignoring questions shouted to him as he left the White House for a helicopter trip to his Camp David, Md., retreat.

While the administration struggled with the controversy that has engulfed the president for more than a week, a senior ayatollah in Iran boasted that disclosures of the arms sale was Tehran's "biggest victory in the world's political arena..." The reports have set off an "explosion" in Washington that the U.S. government was "now trying not to let the fire catch its skirt," said Ayatollah Abdulkarim Musavi Ardabili.

White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, in an interview published today, said the president has expressed dissatisfaction with reports of bitter recriminations among his senior advisers over dealings with Iran.

"He'd just as soon that everybody shut up," Regan told The Washington Post. Asked about his own tenure, Regan said, "I'm not sure I'll be here in January '89. How long can I hold out? A couple more of these things."

But pressure seemed to be rising in Congress for a change in personnel at the White House.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, asked on CBS-TV whether Poindexter should be removed, said, "He certainly has not served the president well...He may have to go. But I don't believe that a single scapegoat is going to solve the administration's problems."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., outgoing chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters at a Friday breakfast that the Reagan White House "...is not falling apart. But it needs to be strengthened. They need to bring in some big-leaguers to run things."

Lugar later said in an interview that Reagan's credibility had been damaged by the controversy, and "a good common-sense prescription for the president to end all this would be for the president to admit it was all a mistake."

Dallas not commemorating JFK's death

DALLAS (AP) — No ceremonies were planned today to mark the 23rd anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's assassination, but officials predicted the flow of visitors to his downtown memorial would continue.

"Traffic picks up a little bit this time of year, but generally it's heaviest in the summertime," Shirley Caldwell, chairwoman of the Dallas County Historical Commission, said Friday.

Kennedy was shot to death Nov. 22, 1963, as he rode through downtown Dallas in a motorcade. Lee Harvey Oswald was arrested as a suspect, but slain two days later by nightclub owner Jack Ruby.

Party said they planned no services today.

"We chose a few years ago to commemorate his birth on May 29 instead of his death to focus on his vibrancy and his life," said Sandy Kress, chairman of the county party. "We found the meaning and joy and memory of his life on the night of his birth much richer."

An estimated 150,000 people a year visit Dealey Plaza, the area where Kennedy was slain.

"I come down here every working day, five days a week," said Ms. Caldwell, whose office is nearby. "There are tour buses here constantly."

Visitors from 23 countries and 36 states signed a logbook that was in the plaza for 10 hours last May, she said.

The Warren Commission, appointed by President Lyndon B. Johnson to investigate the assassination, concluded Oswald acted alone and shot Kennedy from the sixth floor of the Texas Schoolbook Depository.

The county bought the depository in 1977 and converted it into an administration building. The sixth floor, which now is closed to the public, will be converted into an exhibit on the assassination.

The Kennedy family will remember the slain president privately this weekend, Melody Miller, a spokeswoman for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Friday.

The senator and Ethel Kennedy, widow of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, went to the gravesites of the two slain brothers Thursday and then participated in a ceremony for winners of the Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights Award, Ms. Miller said.

Ms. Miller said the senator planned to visit the graves at Arlington National Cemetery again Saturday and then go to Massachusetts to be with his mother, family matriarch Rose Kennedy.

Robert Kennedy was slain in 1968 in Los Angeles, where he was campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination. Thursday would have been his 61st birthday.

Inventor says Viralizer could be cure for common cold

Krauser

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — It looks like a hair dryer, but you point it up your nose, and despite pooh-poohs from some medical experts, its inventor claims it's the closest thing to a cure for the common cold.

The Viralizer follows zinc, medicine-soaked Kleenex, grandma's chicken soup and other cold treatment of yore.

Securities analyst Robert Krauser invented the Viralizer in 1982 and formed Viral Response Systems of Greenwich, Conn., to market it. Then, he said, he added a mist of decongestant or anti-bacterial spray to increase the Viralizer's odds at fighting colds.

Krauser said the hand-held device, which measures 2½ inches by 6 inches and costs $32.95, should be in stores early next year. Initial models will use wall outlets, but a model is in the works that could be plugged into a car cigarette lighter.

Cold viruses cannot survive temperatures of more than 115 to 120 degrees...By directing a stream of warm air into the nostrils, people can reduce the duration of a cold.

Cold viruses cannot survive temperatures of more than 115 to 120 degrees, Krauser said. By directing a stream of warm air into the nostrils, people can reduce the duration of a cold, he said.

But Dr. Robert Goldstein, chief of clinical immunology and immunopathology at the National Institutes for Health's allergy and infectious disease division, said that by the time cold symptoms appear, the virus that causes them has spread from the nose to other parts of the body.

"If it really worked, we could all go into the steam room tomorrow and cure the common cold," he said Thursday from his Bethesda, Md., office.

Krauser called Goldstein's criticism "absolutely not true," saying the cold virus only lives in the nose, and that his device stops germs there.

Krauser has received permission to market the device from the Food and Drug Administration, "not on the basis that it would do anything medicinally, only that it would provide heated, humidified air," said Carolyn Derrer, deputy director of the FDA's Division of Anesthesiology, Neurology and Radiology Devices.

Allan Aven, an Arlington Heights doctor acting as technical adviser to Krauser, is testing the device and estimates that 90 of 100 patients got relief.

Mayor Thomas to kick off tree lighting festival

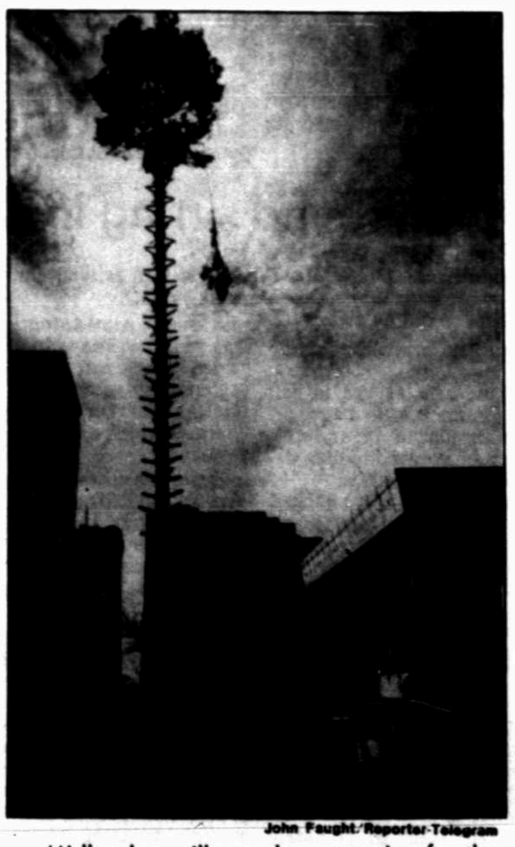

From Staff Reports

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas will kick off the 19th annual Christmas tree lighting festival Friday, Dec. 5, at 6 p.m. at the Centennial Plaza Park. The event is co-sponsored by the Parks and Recreation Department and the Midland Jaycees. Parks and Recreation Commission Chairman Karl Reagan will serve as master of ceremonies for the event.

The 55-foot tree contains approximately 200 Douglas Fir limbs ranging from five feet to 12 feet in length, gathered from Cloudcroft, N.M. Two-thousand colored lights decorate the tree.

The Jaycees will serve hot chocolate inside the Midland Center, and two large fire pits will provide warmth and a place for marshmallow roasting. Pevehouses present Tech gifts totaling more than $1 million

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech Regents Friday announced gifts totaling $1,080,000 from B.J. "Joe" and Beverly Pevehouse of Midland.

Mr. and Mrs. Pevehouse gave the university $1 million to establish the Adobe Chair in geosciences, a $75,000 addition to the Ray Butler Professorship in petroleum engineering, and $5,000 in long-term memberships in the Texas Tech President's Council.

Bee Zeeck, director of news and public information at Texas Tech, said the chair — the university's seventh — "allows us to hire a distinguished geoscientist as a faculty member and provide research funding for that professor.

"It also is a part of our $60 million enterprise campaign, which is the first major capital fund raising effort by the University. That campaign — begun a year ago — has now brought the university $43 million in private gifts," she said.

Pevehouse is a distinguished alumnus of Texas Tech and former chairman of the Boards of Regents of Texas Tech University and the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

He organized the Adobe Oil Co. in 1960, which later became the Adobe Oil and Gas Corp. He has served as president, director and chief stockholder of the organization.

Pevehouse is a former president and director of United Way of Midland, president of the Midland College Foundation, director of the Midland YMCA, former president of the Midland Petroleum Club and member of First United Methodist Church of Midland.

He is chairman of the Midland effort to obtain regional funds for Texas Tech.

The Pevehouses will be recognized today during half-time ceremonies of the Texas Tech-University of Houston football game.

Agents catch escapee with multiple personalities

MIAMI (AP) — William Milligan, a dangerous mental hospital escapee with up to 24 personalities, was in federal custody Friday after FBI agents nabbed him in a posh Key Biscayne bar as he talked with his attorney.

Milligan, 31, was found innocent by reason of insanity in 1978 of raping three women in the Ohio State University area in Columbus. He also had been charged with kidnapping and robbing the women.

"We considered him armed and dangerous, but there was no incident and no resistance in connection with the arrest" Thursday night, Miami FBI spokesman Paul Miller said Friday. "I think he was surprised we found him."

U.S. Magistrate Patricia Kyle on Friday ordered Milligan held without bond on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid confinement. She set a Dec. 1 hearing for his removal to Ohio, but federal Public Defender Kenneth Swartz said he was trying to work out a way to get Milligan back to Ohio as quickly as possible because he needs treatment.

Doctors had testified at his Ohio trial that Milligan suffered from a disorder which gave him as many as 10 personalities. In a 1981 book about Milligan, writer Daniel Keyes claimed Milligan had 24 distinct personalities, including those of women and children.

Milligan, ordered confined to the Central Ohio Psychiatric Hospital, walked away from it July 4.

FBI agents in Miami were tipped off by the Columbus FBI, which had been tracking Milligan around the country, said Miller.

He denied the escapee was traced through Ohio Public Defender Randall Dana, who was sitting with his client in the bar of the Key Biscayne Hotel when agents walked in.

"The defense attorney and the FBI were each just as surprised to see each other," said Miller. But he said Dana knew Milligan was an escapee and should have reported his whereabouts.

The fact that Dana was with Milligan has been brought to the attention of the FBI office in Columbus, which in turn will discuss it with the U.S. Attorney's Office there, said Miller.

Dana, who represented Milligan in numerous court appearances, said he was in Key Biscayne for a legal conference when Milligan called him.

"I had spoken to him on the phone and told him I would be in Miami if he needed me and I gave him the telephone number to the hotel," The Miami Herald quoted Dana as saying.

Dana said Milligan had called him since the escape, "but I had no idea where he was."

He said Milligan called his room 15 minutes after he checked in. They met and talked for only a few minutes before the FBI agents walked in, Dana said.

C. Dan Miller, the psychiatric hospital superintendent, said Milligan was not considered dangerous and lived in a ward that allowed residents to leave if they followed established procedures.

Milligan was committed to the Lima, Ohio, State Hospital for the criminally insane after being transferred in 1979 from a mental health center in Athens, Ohio. He later was moved to a home in rural Athens County and was due for a sanity hearing that could have freed him.

However, he was charged with vandalism in November 1984 for driving a vehicle from which a shot allegedly was fired at the property of a mental health center supervisor.

Milligan was placed in psychiatric custody in Columbus while awaiting trial. Charges were dismissed in 1985, but Milligan was ordered to stay in the hospital.

Three days after his escape, he released videotapes to Columbus news media, saying he left the hospital because he feared for his safety and was confused about contradictory statements by his doctors about his medication.

CASEY

Wright said a law permitting the president to withhold information from Congress about covert operations is "clear and unambiguous."

"I don't think there is any question that the law has been broken," he said after the two-hour meeting with Casey.

Wright said 1,000 of the 2,008 antitank TOW missiles shipped to Iran gathered last February in San Antonio in preparation for shipment. The remainder were sent separately, he said. "All were paid for by Iran — $12 million plus" placed in a Swiss bank. But he said he didn't know if the deposit was in a check, cash, or gold.

At least one Republican, Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois, defended Reagan against the allegation that he broke the law, but quickly added that it was "unwise" of the president to keep the policy a secret from Congress.

Reagan, in a televised news conference on Wednesday night in which he defended the sale, also denied violating any law.

The law involved is the National Security Act, which covers a wide range of national security measures, including requirements to inform Congress.

Democrats on the Senate Intelligence Committee listened to Casey's explanation, then criticized the operation in strong terms.

"I can't believe what I heard and I don't. It's hard to believe that such things could be planned and undertaken," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Said Byrd: "I find on the basis of what we heard that this whole operation...was incredibly clumsy and amateurish."

Lugar emerged as one of Reagan's sharpest critics.

"My guess is that no one down in the basement of the White House who was running this operation was worried about the P.R. (public relations) aspect of all of it or how it would be perceived in domestic politics in this country once it all got out," he said in an interview.

"That's one of the problems of keeping something like this so closely held," he said. "If some of the senior people, perhaps some people with more experience in politics, had been informed, they may have been able to more correctly assess the political impact of all this."

Police identify body of man found sitting in chair

From Staff Reports

Midland Police Department officials have identified the body of a man found dead Friday morning as Malcolm Joseph Sailsbury, age 36.

Sailsbury, 507 N. "A" St., was found dead sitting upright in a chair in his home. Reports said he was an unemployed plumber.

He was found by Dennis Clements, 801 W. Michigan, at approximately 11 a.m. Friday.

Three Hispanic males are in jail awaiting arraignment after being arrested for possession of an undetermined amount of cocaine, police department reports showed.

One of the men was also charged with felony possession of marijuana (more than four ounces) resulting from an earlier warrant and had $845.50 worth of city warrants against him as well, an MPD officer said.

A loaded semi-automatic 9mm Uzi was found in the vehicle along with scales (which can be used in weighing amounts of drugs). Reports were unclear whether the men would be charged with unlawful possession of a weapon.

Reports said the men were pulled over in the 2100 block of North Midland Drive at 1:30 p.m. by a police officer after he noticed their car had a chain steering wheel which is an illegal vehicle modification.

Bentsen forsees no major changes in federal tax law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, incoming chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said Friday he foresees no major changes in federal tax law next year.

He predicted Congress will neither raise taxes to cut the deficit, impose a special oil tax to reduce reliance on foreign supplies, nor make any significant change in the newly overhauled income tax.

Speaking from Washington to a nationwide television hookup arranged by the National Association of Home Builders, Bentsen said he has some concerns about the new tax code but sees little chance of change because of the big budget deficit.

The Finance Committee, which has Senate jurisdiction over taxes, will be concentrating next year on trade matters, Bentsen said, and "I don't think you are going to see major changes in tax law in 1987."

With U.S. dependence on foreign oil moving toward 50 percent, Congress should do something to increase domestic production, such as impose a special tax on imported oil, Bentsen said. He added, however, "I don't think it's going to pass. I don't think a serious attempt will be made unless the president changes his mind" about opposing it.

Similarly, President Reagan's opposition probably will doom any effort to raise taxes to reduce the budget deficit, Bentsen said. "You are not going to see a tax increased proposed by the House or Senate" because Reagan has "been quite adamant in opposition to it."

Rep. William Thomas, R-Calif., a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the new Congress, in which Democrats will control both houses, "has a far greater potential for a tax increase." He reasoned that Democrats will be more reluctant than ever to reduce social spending.

And with Democrats winning control of the Senate, Thomas added, Reagan "can't count on falling back on the Senate" to moderate House action.

Jeanne Ware, with her friend Lloyd Doss, shows off the wallet that she lost 20 years ago. It was found by Dallas County building operator J.R. Davis as he supervised renovation of a hotel which is to be a minimum security prison.

Woman gets wallet back after 20 years

DALLAS (AP) — After being encased in the wall of an old hotel for 20 years, a stolen wallet turned up during renovation work and has found its way back to the woman who lost it.

The old cash wasn't there, but for owner Jeanne Ware, a treasure of memories was returned to her Thursday.

The wallet was found by Dallas County building operator J.R. Davis as he supervised renovating the Cabana Hotel to become a minimum security prison. Mrs. Ware had worked as a cocktail waitress at the hotel two decades ago.

When Davis handed the dirty black wallet containing old credit cards, photographs and two paychecks to Mrs. Ware, she spontaneously planted a kiss on his cheek.

"I waited a long time for this," she said, holding up her prize. "This is a miracle."

Mrs. Ware, who now works at a Dallas florist shop, was 24 when she worked at the Cabana Hotel in January 1966 and the wallet was stolen. She had made the mistake of leaving her pocketbook unattended in the hotel's kitchen.

"I had $300 or $400 in there to make a down payment on a car the next day," she said.

She had searched for the wallet with no luck — until Thursday.

Davis, who found the billfold about a month ago inside the cinderblock walls of the kitchen, said he had been looking round the hotel for relics when he spotted it.

"It (the hotel) has got a lot of history to it," he said. "I found some silver coins, old pennies. I found some old newspapers from 1963. They were pretty interesting."

After finding the wallet, Davis began searching for Mrs. Ware. The wallet contained a Michigan driver's license with her picture, a Handy Charge credit card and paychecks from the Cabana and Adolphus hotels for $29.62 and $17.93.

"She was making 60 cents an hour," Davis said.

Half a ton of cocaine seized

MCALLEN (AP) — U.S. Border Patrol agents arrested a California man Friday and seized 1,107 pounds of cocaine, authorities said.

Jerry Hicks, a border patrol spokesman, said the cocaine is valued at $35.4 million and is one of the largest drug busts ever in the South Texas area.

Hicks said the man was stopped at a border patrol checkpoint near Sarita, about 100 miles northeast of McAllen. The man gave a post office box in Weimar, Calif., as his home address.

The man was driving a rented van full of furniture, Hicks said. A small caliber handgun also was seized, he said.

Hicks said the arrest came during a routine check.

"This was just plain Border Patrol ingenuity," Hicks said.

Man makes drug deal on phone with police chief

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — A 39-year-old man was arrested after making a drug deal with a police chief who answered the telephone at a home that was being searched for narcotics, authorities said.

Robert Weatherall of Sulphur Springs was in the Hopkins County Jail on Friday, charged with delivery of a controlled substance. Bond was set at $15,000.

Police Chief Donnie Lewis said he answered the telephone at the residence during a search for narcotics.

"I picked up the phone and the person at the other end identified himself and said he wanted to set up a drug deal," Lewis said. "I set it up to meet him in Pacific Park."

Lewis said he had already answered one phone call while police were in the house.

"When the second call came, I just decided to go ahead and talk drugs with this person," Lewis said. "So we set it up to meet across town."

Lewis said the caller offered to sell him methamphetamines.

"I told him when we arrested him, the next time you set up a narcotics buy, it's a good idea not to set it up with a police chief," Lewis said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Students, teachers catch food poisoning after turkey dinner

HOUSTON (AP) — About a third of the students in a Houston elementary school became ill after eating an early Thanksgiving feast in the school cafeteria, officials said.

None of the more than 300 students and 10 teachers at the Robert Frost Elementary School who suffered from the diarrhea, abdominal cramps or vomiting typical of food poisoning was known to have required hospitalization, officials said.

The probable villian was some tainted portions of turkey and dressing served at lunch Wednesday, Houston Independent School District spokesman Claude Cunningham said Thursday.

Thirty sick students and three teachers were sent home Thursday morning, but most of the students and faculty who became sick improved by Thursday afternoon, Superintendent Joan Raymond said.

City health officials spent Thursday afternoon taking samples from food and kitchen equipment for lab testing. Results were unavailable Friday.

Fugitive arrested after 12 years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A Mexican businessman has been arrested 12 years after he was convicted on federal drug charges while a fugitive.

Gabriel Cepeda-Leal, 48, was released from jail earlier this week after posting $75,000 of a $150,000 bond, authorities said.

A lawyer representing Cepeda-Leal said he may appeal the conviction because the man, who skipped bond just before his trial began in 1974, was absent when he was convicted.

The case against Cepeda-Leal, who was arrested in Dallas last month, began in August 1974 when he was indicted on a charge of conspiracy to distribute marijuana. Court records indicate he was involved with undercover drug agents for the sale of 5,000 to 7,000 pounds of marijuana.

He was convicted by a federal court jury and a sentencing date of Dec. 13, 1974, was set by U.S. District Judge Adrian Spears. Cepeda-Leal never appeared for his sentencing date and was not sentenced.

Coast Guard rescues three men

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard rescued three men Friday who were stranded on their boat for 17 hours after an oystering trip, officials said.

Boat owner Calvin Payne of San Leon and his two male passengers were cold, but healthy after they were spotted by a Coast Guard helicopter Friday morning just east of the Houston Ship Channel near Red Fish Island, Coast Guard spokesman Mark Kennedy said.

One passenger was identified as Sheldon Etu but the other's name was not known, Coast Guard officials said.

The battery in Payne's 33-foot-long boat apparently died Thursday afternoon after the trio began their trip in the Trinity Bay, Kennedy said. Payne called into a bait shop for help, but the shop's rescue boat couldn't find the men, Kennedy said.

After Payne's wife notified Coast Guard officials late Thursday her husband had not returned home they began searching with a boat and a helicopter, Kennedy said.

Senator's pre-trial hearing set

LONGVIEW (AP) — A pretrial hearing for state Sen. Richard Anderson on a charge of driving while intoxicated was set for Jan. 16 after Andersons's lawyer entered an innocent plea Friday.

Odis Hill and Glenn Perry of Longview are representing Anderson, who lives in Marshall. Hill said Anderson was not required to attend the docket call on Friday, but he would be at the hearing.

After the docket call, Hill said, "I can't discuss the merits of the case. But if you know Richard Anderson, or if you saw the videotape you would know that he was not intoxicated."

The tape of Anderson, who was elected to represent the 1st Senatorial District in a special election three weeks earlier, was taken at a Longview police station after his arrest Oct. 5. He was charged with driving while intoxicated and with resisting arrest. Hill also pleaded not guilty on the resisting arrest charge.

Citrus growers now worry about theft

McALLEN (AP) — The Rio Grande Valley citrus industry, on the verge of its best season since the devasating freeze of 1983, faces another kind of worry this year that growers grimly refer to as "finger blight."

More than a dozen cases of citrus theft already have been reported in Hidalgo County since the harvest began, and officials predict more because short supplies since the freeze have kept prices high.

But growers this year are fighting back against the problem that has led to losses in the millions of dollars in years past.

They are funding more road inspection stations, and the Texas Citrus Industry Fruit Theft Committee has hired Deputy Sheriff Dayna Hill to run the theft program this season in Hidalgo County, where much of the Valley's citrus is grown.

The Texas Citrus Mutual is urging growers to post no-trespassing signs around their boundaries to aid protection efforts if people are caught in their groves. For those caught with fruit, the fine for first offenders is $100.

"We want to make an example of folks taking advantage of growers" because of a prevalent attitude that citrus groves are public property, said Ray Prewett, executive vice president of the McAllen-based TCM.

"It might be a handful or a sackful of fruit and it's no big deal," he said. "But it all mounts up."

One Valley grower has installed sensors on his property and others are building fences to keep the thieves out.

But Hill said tracking thieves is difficult because little documentation is provided by victims.

"There are no suspects, so we can't follow them up," he said, adding that in such cases, his only course is to document the location and stake out the orchard on the chance the thieves return.

A more effective weapon, however, has been proof of ownership forms required under state law for commercial amounts of fruit moved in and out of the Valley.

The forms, introduced in 1982, can often provide Hill with telltale signs of stolen fruit and a way of verifying its origin.

Proof of ownership forms have enabled the industry to crack down on Valley fruit stands and flea markets, believed to be the biggest peddlars of the stolen citrus.

Veterans, scouts work for hostages

NEW YORK (AP) — Paralyzed veterans and Girl Scouts with "come home soon" cards joined a nationwide campaign Friday to bring one British and five American hostages home from Lebanon by Christmas.

Donning yellow "welcome home" ribbons, some of the more than 37,000 New York-area Girl Scouts gave dozens of cards of encouragement to the group No Greater Love. The group is to dispatch the cards and about 100,000 others to the Middle East next month.

"We wish to express a strong interest in the fate of the hostages," said Joseph Segarra, president of the 2,000-member Eastern Paralyzed Veterans Association. "We know what it is to suffer for our country."

Ken Reed, the nephew of hostage Frank Reed, said, "It's hard to convey the sadness you feel that an innocent person is held for absolutely no reason but that he is an American."

Reed, director of elementary education at the International College in Beirut, was kidnapped Sept. 9.

Elaine Collett, wife British hostage Alec Collett, a U.N. consultant, also addressed the veterans, scouts, and organizers of the No Greater Love program, saying "we must give support to families during this trying time."

Carmella LaSpada, chairman of No Greater Love, says the organization expects to collect hundreds of thousands of cards from approximately 3 million U.S. Girl Scouts and students nationwide and send a portion of them to the captives Dec. 8.

Man kills himself over childhood crime

NATION

WAYLAND, Mass. (AP) — A former town official who stirred headlines when it was learned that as a child he had killed a playmate has now committed suicide, and friends said Friday he had never forgiven himself for the crime.

The body of Albert Thompson, 32, the former executive director of the housing authority in this Boston suburb, was found Wednesday hanging by an electrical cord from a drain pipe in the basement of the Sweet Sis Cheesecake Co. in Newton, where he worked as an assistant to the manager. His death was ruled a suicide.

"We all knew he was suicidal," said Marion Powers, administrative assistant at the housing authority. "He had a lot of friends that care about him, but I don't think he knew it."

"He just couldn't forgive himself," said Patricia Nichols, who had been his assistant at the housing authority. "He couldn't accept it."

Housing Authority members knew Thompson's background when he was hired and supported him when his past became public. Differences with Thompson over how his job should be performed led to the board voting 4-1 not to renew his contract in May.

But Thompson told The Associated Press in June that his firing stemmed from pressure the board came under because of his past.

In 1967, Thompson had killed 6-year-old Mark Dupuis by stabbing him 26 times. Thompson, who was 12 at the time, said he lost control after a stray flip of the knife in a game of mumblety-peg hit the boy's chest and he would not stop crying.

Thompson went to reform school for the killing, then drifted for years before getting a job running a prison pre-release program in New Hampshire. He returned to his hometown 18 years after the murder and was hired in June 1985 as the housing authority's executive director.

Rumors about his past began to circulate and hate mail began to arrive, his car window was smashed and residents in the town of 12,000 people began to question why the housing board had ever hired him.

Although he initially denied knowledge of the boy's death, Thompson decided to tell his story last year to dispel the rumors.

"The publicity just made him more aware of what was going on inside him. I think if he could have forgiven himself, the publicity wouldn't have bothered him," said Ms. Nichols.

Newton police Lt. James O'Donnell said he did not know if a note was found.

Thompson's family declined to discuss him or the death. "Nobody wants to tell you anything," said a woman who identified herself as Mrs. LaRochelle and answered the telephone at the home of Thompson's mother, Shirley LaRouchelle.

Friends had often tried to persuade Thompson to seek counseling, but he never seemed to stay with it for more than a few sessions, said Ms. Powers.

Vietnam says it will repatriate remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vietnamese government has informed the United States it is prepared to repatriate the remains of three individuals believed to be missing American servicemen from the Vietnam War, the Pentagon said Friday.

Arrangements are now being made by the Defense Department to recover the remains in Hanoi on Nov. 26, the Pentagon added in a prepared statement.

"The U.S. government appreciates the initiative taken by Vietnam to expeditiously repatriate these remains and hopes it represents just one of many continued steps to resolve this longstanding humanitarian issue," the statement added.

The Pentagon said Vietnamese officials had informed U.S. representatives during talks late last month that it had located the three remains in the course of investigating 16 reports from rural areas of the country about the location of crash sites or other sites of combat action.

The Pentagon said it did not know in which areas of the country the remains had been located, but would immediately transfer the remains to the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Hawaii for possible identification.

Vietnam repatriated 21 sets of remains to the United States last April. Of those, five have so far been positively identified as missing servicemen.

The Pentagon currently lists 2,424 Americans as still missing in Southeast Asia as a result of the Vietnam War. Of that total, 1,784 are listed as missing in either North or South Vietnam. Another 552 are listed as missing in Laos, 82 in Cambodia and six in China.

Meanwhile, the State Department said some 200 Vietnamese Montagnard tribesmen, known for their resistance to the communist takeover of South Vietnam, will arrive in the United States Monday.

Department press officer Pete Martinez said it is the first large group of Montagnards to resettle in the United States. They are described as a staunchly independent people who come from the highland region of Vietnam.

Martinez noted the Montagnards are of special interest to many Americans because of their close association with U.S. forces and private American groups during the Vietnam war.

The group will arrive in Los Angeles on Monday and then fly to Greensboro, North Carolina, the following day.

Artist deftly clips and pastes to produce profile portraits

CLEVELAND (AP) — With a slender pair of scissors and an abundance of talent, silhouette artist Wallie Spatz transforms squares of black paper into family heirlooms.

She deftly snakes scissors across paper, and within minutes presents a completed profile portrait to murmurs of approval from an admiring audience.

The "Silhouette Lady," as she is often called, has practiced her craft for more years than she cares to reveal. For a few weeks at a time, she sets up shop at department stores to cut portraits of her eager customers.

Wedged into a corner of a store display, she works amid the noise and clutter, with a waiting line of patient parents and squirming children.

"I like the commotion," said Mrs. Spatz. "My temperament is not that of a true artist. I like people around me. I like the fun and the laughter."

Mrs. Spatz sits opposite her subject, one foot perched on a brass footstool. She grasps a folded piece of gummed black paper in one hand, and the scissors attached to a pink ribbon around her neck in the other.

She chats as she works, her eyes darting to her subject and back. Starting at the bustline, she cuts the facial profile, continues to the top of the head, then down the back and nape of the neck.

She'll add a collar, a ruffle or a ribbon in the hair to give the silhouette more interest, or cut a v-neckline to soften a heavy chinline.

"Otherwise, I'm brutally frank," said Mrs. Spatz. "If I try to flatter, it might make them happy but other people will say, 'She's no good.'"

Mrs. Spatz puts waiting youngsters at ease, joking with them and inviting them to crowd around her as she works. She sticks butterflies made from scraps of gummed paper on the tips of their fingers, and quiets restless youngsters with a box of cookies.

Children aged 9 to 11 are the most difficult to deal with because they are so self-conscious, Mrs. Spatz said. "They're trying to please me but they're so stiff they look like rigor mortis has set in," she said.

Mrs. Spatz discovered what she says is her natural talent for cutting silhouettes while growing up in Mason City, Iowa. After watching a silhouette artist at work in a movie scene, she went home and tried it herself.

Named for a French finance minister, silhouettes were referred to as the poor man's portrait during their heyday, favored by those who couldn't afford to have their portrait painted.

Mrs. Spatz says there are fewer than a dozen silhouette artists in the country, including her sister in California. Mrs. Spatz moved to Cleveland from Los Angeles, where she met her husband, Hugo, during World War II.

They moved to Port Charlotte, Fla., but she returns to Ohio periodically to do silhouettes.

Soft colors quieting to nation's toughest, Marion Penitentiary

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Soothing earth-tone walls and gleaming, razor-sharp barbed wire.

The two images mix easily in the view of Gary L. Henman, who last June became warden of the nation's toughest prison, the U.S. Penitentiary at Marion.

The 46-year-old Henman is in charge of a major, three-year renovation inside the maximum security prison. He says he wants to give the much-maligned prison a more humane look. The work began before he took over, but Henman plans to add a personal touch.

"I'm big on graphics and earth tones. It gives you a little sense of warmth," Henman said. "We want to make the place as bright and cheerful as it can be."

He mentioned research that shows certain "soft" colors have a quieting effect on behavior, and quiet behavior is something there is often a shortage of in the confining, confrontational world at Marion, where most inmates remain in their cells 23 hours a day.

"If it looks like a cage or looks like a hole, that's what it is," Henman said.

With that softer image in mind, Henman ordered decorative changes for the prison's interior.

Security, however, is never far from his mind. In addition to new paint, inmates will be getting new furniture — all of it made of concrete. Concrete bed frames, shelves, tables and desks.

Something seemingly so innocent as a chair leg or metal footlocker can be deadly inside Marion, Henman said.

"Metal and wood are prime targets for making weapons," Henman explained.

There are no earth tones in Henman's view of Marion's "mission," as it is commonly referred to by the federal Bureau of Prisons. That mission, according to Henman, is to separate the most violent, escape-prone inmates from the rest of the federal system so that other prisons are safer and more open.

"These inmates are the failures from throughout the Bureau of Prisons," he said. "When you get here, you're at a dead end. This is it."

Marion has been locked down since 1983, when several guards and inmates were killed in prison violence. With the exception of about 43 inmates in the prison's pre-release unit, life is defined by cell walls. The inmates in the pre-release unit and a few others in an intermediate unit are allowed to work at a small prison industry and to eat outside their cells.

The majority of inmates eat, sleep, write, read and even exercise in their cells. Educational programs are piped in on television. Mail and phone calls are monitored. Contact visits are prohibited. Inmates and visitors are separated by glass and must talk by phone.

Henman, who holds a doctorate in social work, says he won't engage in philosophical debates with Marion's sharpest critic, the Marion Prisoner Rights Project. He says he fully expects his attempt to make Marion more "cheerful" will meet with ridicule from that group.

Creativity flows from mouth, tongue

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — The delicate landscapes painstakingly painted by Richard Cogan display his creative touch and the legend, "Painted by mouth."

Cogan, who is paralyzed from the neck down, suffers from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

It was not until 1982, after the disease claimed the use of his hands, that Cogan took up the brush. When an occupational therapist suggested he try painting by mouth, Cogan said, "at first I thought it was a joke."

Cogan went on to craft about 75 works of art by manipulating the brush with his mouth and tongue.

"It is amazing what hidden abilities we have if we sit down and look for them," he said. "If this had never happened to me, I would never have known that I had the capability of painting this well."

The 47-year-old learned 15 years ago that he had the debilitating disease, which destroys the nerves that control muscles. The disease causes weakness, paralysis, and eventually death.

Cogan is confined to a wheelchair and breathes with the aid of a respirator. For nearly five years, he has lived in Hagerstown at the Western Maryland Center, which offers rehabilitation and cares for the chronically ill.

Although he had taught himself to write by mouth, "it surprised me that I was able to do this," said Cogan, who ran a home heating and air-conditioning business in Brandywine before being stricken. His wife and two children live in the Washington suburbs.

Each day, Cogan travels by wheelchair from his room to the center's occupational therapy room where he spends an hour at his craft. He designed and built a harness which helps him hold his head steady while maneuvering the paint brush between his lips.

Because of his limited range of motion, Cogan's paintings generally are about eight by 10 inches. He paints on a variety of surfaces, including canvas, wood and ceramic.

"It gave me something to want to live for," he said. "I have seen so many people just give up and say, 'The heck with it.' This has given me something to get up out of that bed and do."

Cogan gives his paintings away to relatives and friends.

In a hallway of the center, four of his pictures depicting rural scenes in each of the seasons hang in a single frame. A plaque in the left-hand corner reads, "Painted by mouth by Richard E. Cogan, ventilator patient, WMC, 1985."

Convicted killer agrees to talk to police about bodies

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — The lawyer for child killer Ian Brady said Friday his client agreed to talk to police searching for two children he and his lover are suspected of murdering more than 20 years ago and burying near other victims on the Yorkshire moors.

Drifting snow on the moors forced police Friday to suspend their hunt for the remains of the children. Police sought government permission to take Brady's one-time lover, Myra Hindley, from her prison cell to help locate the remains.

Brady, 48, was convicted in 1966 of killing three children whose bodies were found on the moors, while Miss Hindley, 43, was convicted in two of the murders. Both are serving life sentences, with Brady in a hospital for the criminally insane.

Police believe Brady and Miss Hindley, known as the moors murderers, killed Pauline Reade, who was 16 when she disappeared in 1963, and Keith Bennett, who disappeared the next year at age 12.

Miss Hindley said this week that she was distressed by a letter from Bennett's mother and used photographs and maps of the moor to point out to police possible gravesites for the two children. She hinted that Brady killed them alone.

Her disclosure prompted police to begin a search for the remains Thursday, using trained dogs. They used white tapes to mark out more than one square mile of Saddleworth Moor, 12 miles from Manchester. Police said the search would resume Monday.

WORLD

Officials at the Home Office, responsible for prisons, conferred Friday with Manchester detectives and later said no decision had been made on whether to take Miss Hindley to the site.

Brady's lawyer, Benedict Binberg, said his client has full access to radio, television and newspapers and has been highly conscious of the renewed publicity given the case.

After talking with Brady by telephone, Binberg told The Associated Press, "He said he would talk to police providing I am present."

Manchester police said a senior officer expects to interview Brady next week.

Binberg said of his client, "He was quite coherent and sounded quite cheerful. It does somewhat weigh (on him) the fact that there is so much media interest in this."

Brady was moved last November from a top security jail to the high-security Park Lane Hospital in Liverpool after doctors agreed with his lawyer that he had become suicidal and paranoid. Binberg said at the time that Brady's weight had dropped from 182 pounds to 112.

Brady, who has undergone psychiatric treatment at Park Lane, is now physically in "reasonably good health," said Binberg.

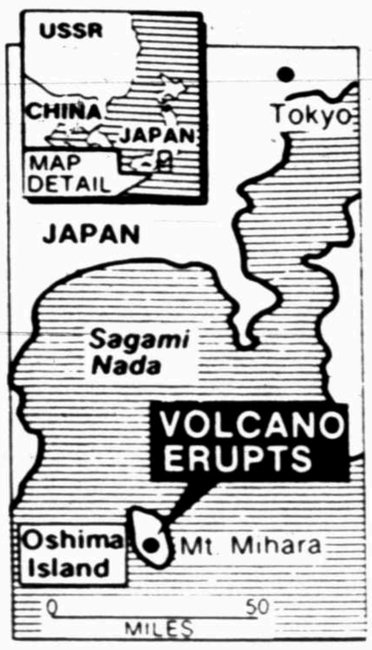

Brady reportedly loathes Miss Hindley for portraying him as the instigator of the murders. He has not seen her since she sat in the dock beside him during their trial, often chatting and smiling.

"I didn't discuss Myra Hindley with him, but he is fully aware of everything that appears in the media," said Binberg.

Police photographs of Miss Hindley at the time of her arrest once more have been blazoned across British newspapers this week, along with pictures of Brady. Miss Hindley, then a 23-year-old typist, is pictured staring from beneath a shock of blonde hair.

The couple rank among Britain's most hated killers. They tortured their victims and kept a tape-recording of the sobs, screams and pleas of one victim, 10-year-old Lesley Ann Downey.

Miss Hindley, who is held at Cookham Wood Prison in Rochester, east of London, has applied repeatedly for parole and been refused, most recently in 1985.

People flee island after volcano erupts

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of people fled a small island south of Tokyo on Friday after a volcano burst open, spewing rocks and flames and sending molten lava toward the island's largest town.

There were no reports of injuries directly related to the eruptions, but an elderly man died of a heart attack en route to a rescue vessel, police said.

The volcano, Mount Mihara, began rumbling last Saturday on Oshima island, where 11,000 people live. Shortly after 4 p.m. Friday, the volcano started spewing bright orange flames from several openings, including a 600-yard-long fissure on the side of the mountain. Giant plumes of black smoke shot two miles into the sky.

The eruptions were accompanied by hundreds of earthquakes, some of them major tremors.

"There was a sudden blast and then another and in a matter of about 15 minutes, there were three (erupting areas). I didn't know what was happening," said Tsugufumi Matsumoto, an Associated Press photographer who was about 500 yards from the mountain.

"The jolts from the eruption and the earthquakes were beyond words," an elderly resident told Japanese television. "It was like being on a boat all day," added an elderly woman, also a resident.

Molten lava flowed toward Motomachi, a town several miles west of Mount Mihara, said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity. About one-third of the island's residents live in Motomachi.

The official also said about 40 forest fires were reported.

Authorities ordered the evacuation of everyone on the 35-square-mile island, which is 70 miles south of Tokyo. In addition to the 11,000 residents, an undetermined number of tourists also were on Oshima.

Police said that about 8,000 people had left in rescue boats and that evacuations would continue through the night.

The Japanese navy, the Maritime Safety Agency and the Tokai steamship company dispatched more than two dozen vessels to evacuate residents.

"Those crowded onto the ships seemed stunned," said Matsumoto.

One evacuee, 74-year-old Iwazo Aoki, died of a heart attack while being taken by ambulance to a rescue vessel.

Police said about 120 riot police were sent to the island to help with the evacuations.

Japanese television interrupted regular programming for several hours to broadcast live footage of the eruption, showing bright orange flames spewing from a line along the mountain.

Close-up shots taken by a helicopter and an unmanned camera showed fountains of fire and explosive bursts of flames resembling fireworks shooting from several openings at once.

Volcanic rock was hurled about 600 feet into the air, and the Central Meteorological Agency reported black smoke reached more than two miles high.

The 2,349-feet-high mountain first began erupting on Saturday and blew fire and smoke throughout the week.

The earthquakes began about 2 p.m. Friday. The Central Meteorological Agency reported more than 60 tremors an hour by mid-afternoon, including some measuring 6 on the Richter scale.

Volcanic experts at the University of Tokyo said Oshima's last volcanic eruption of this magnitude occurred about 200 years ago, the Kyodo News Service reported.

Day should be sunny, warm

From Staff and Wire Reports

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said warmer temperatures would enhance the sunny day officials predicted is in store for Midland. The high today should be in the low 70s with gusty winds coming in from the west northwest at 10-20 mph.

NWS officials said tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 30s. Winds should be less gusty and from the north at 10-20 mph.

Sunday should be partly cloudy with a high near 50.

The record high for Friday's date was set in 1970 when it was 81. Friday's record low was a chilly 24 and was set in 1957.

STATE

Clear skies and pleasant temperatures covered most of the northern part of Texas Friday, but a low pressure trough along the coast brought cloudiness in South Texas.

A weak cool front moving from the north to the south will bring some rain into the state Saturday. Some showers and a few thundershowers will accompany the frontal system as it moves southward, the National Weather Service said.

Light rain will develop over portions of South Texas on Saturday.

A weak cool front along with an upper-level system will move south into the Hill Country by late Saturday.

NATION

As much as 10 inches of snow fell in northern Maine on Friday, but to the south and west the storm brought rain and snow showers, while a storm over the Pacific Northwest moved into the Rockies.

Parts of eastern Wyoming had snow showers and wind gusting to 42 mph. Gale warnings were posted for the Washington state coast.

The wintry weather in the Northeast was caused by a low-pressure system centered off Maine. The Caribou region reported 10 inches, and snow was still falling at midafternoon. The National Weather Service in Burlington, Vt., earlier reported snowfall from 2 inches in the southern valleys to 18 inches in northern mountains.

For today, scattered showers were forecast from the lower Gulf Coast across the lower Mississippi Valley into eastern Texas. Snow showers were expected in parts of Minnesota and North Dakota, with rain in parts of Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Idaho, Washington state and Oregon.

SMU president quits in midst of grid probe

DALLAS (AP) — SMU President L. Donald Shields is leaving immediately because of health problems a spokesman said were aggravated by allegations against the school's football program.

"Reaching this decision has been extremely difficult, but the advice of my physician has made, it imperative that I step down from the presidency, effective immediately," Shields, 50, said in a statement.

Shields, who became president in October 1980, suffers from diabetes, SMU spokesman Roddy Wolper said. Before coming to SMU, Shields was president of California State University at Fullerton.

UH interviews

HOUSTON — Philadelphia Eagles defensive coordinator Wade Phillips became the first of several candidates to be interviewed for the head football coaching position at the University of Houston. "He was very impressive — bright and articulate," Mike Johnson, interim AD and chairman of the search committee, said after meeting with the former Cougar linebacker. "I was very impressed."

Johnson said university officials will talk to six or seven more candidates before making a decision...

Series stars appeal

AMHERST, Mass. — Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson and Red Sox second baseman Marty Barrett asked University of Massachusetts students Friday to put behind them a racial brawl that followed the final game of the World Series. "In life there's some things you can't change," Wilson said at an assembly. "I was born ugly. I can't change that. ... You can't change the way society was formed hundreds of years ago, but you can influence the way you treat people."

Barrett, who is white, and Wilson, who is black, were invited to speak to a lunch attended by 175 leaders of white and black student organizations.

After the Mets defeated the Red Sox 8-5 to win the World Series, 1,000 students gathered outside the Southwest dormitories on the campus. An ensuing brawl between mostly white Red Sox fans and mostly black Mets fans sent more than a dozen students to the infirmary, police said.

Some of the 700 black students on the 26,000-student campus said any argument over the series was only a symptom of racism at the school. And some called the appearance by the ballplayers "window-dressing."...

SWC Football

LUBBOCK— While Texas Tech will be seeking its bowl trip since 1977 under first year coach David McWilliams, Bill Yeoman, whose Houston teams have majored in bowl trips during his 25 years at the helm, calls it a coaching career. All of which promises an interesting, if unpredictable, afternoon of football in Jones Stadium Saturday.

It was Yeoman's Cougars who deprived Texas Tech of an outright SWC championship in 1976. The 27-19 loss to Houston in the season's next to last game gave the Cougars a share of the SWC title and the bid to the Cotton Bowl.

Tech took a 9-1 record to the Bluebonnet Bowl and lost to Nebraska, 27-14. Tech's bowl aspirations this year are more modest, an Independence date Dec. 20, possibly against Mississippi or Mississippi State, but it would represent a major step forward in Tech's return to football respectability.

And it would be an achievement all the more noteworthy in view of Tech's discouraging start this season, one disaster sat beckoningly on the horizon after blowout losses to Miami, Baylor and Texas A&M.

The Raiders responded with four straight wins to insure a 6-5 season at worst, but really had visiions of 8-3 until that SMU loss last week.

Now it's a question of how Tech will respond to the temporary setback and what kind of a going away present the Cougars will give Yeoman. Will they mark the passing of an era with a passive performance or play like demons.

There's one other thing. Houston seems to have Tech's number. Last time the Raiders beat Houston was 22-21 and last time Houston played in Lubbock, it clinched a Cotton Bowl berth with a 24-17 win.

Elsewhere, Texas A&M bids for a share of the SWC title while Texas, Arkansas and Baylor will try to stay in the race as bowl officials prepare to issue invitations.

All four teams still have a chance to earn the host berth in the Cotton Bowl, and Texas Tech, completing its winningest season since 1978, is expected to be invited to the Independence Bowl.

Baylor is the likely host team in the Bluebonnet Bowl and the Razorbacks also could go bowling.

The Aggies host TCU after a week of bickering between A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill and TCU Coach Jim Wacker. The Horned Frogs also recall last year's 53-7 loss when the Aggies tried an onsides kick in the closing minutes.

Texas, 5-4 for the season and 4-2 in league games, plays at Baylor, 7-3 and 5-2; Arkansas, 8-2 and 5-2, plays at Southern Methodist, 6-4 and 5-2; and Houston, 1-8 and 0-6, is at Tech, 6-4 and 4-3.

Rice, 2-7 and 1-6, hosts Air Force, still in the Western Athletic Conference race, in the only non-conference game on the schedule.

Wacker, whose injury plagued team is struggling with a 3-7 record and 1-6 in SWC games, accused Sherrill of "popping off" about the Frogs' failures this season despite having good talent.

"It's kind of easy to pop off about the kind of talent other people have," Wacker said.

Sherrill said he has no feud with Wacker.

"You'll never hear me say one word about anybody," Sherrill said. "I don't have the time. If someone has a problem with us, that's their

Former UT track coach, Price, dies

AUSTIN (AP) — Former University of Texas track coach Cleburne Price died Friday night at Seton Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Price, 57, suffered a stroke on Tuesday and had been hospitalized in critical condition. He died at 8 p.m., said Audrey Pennington, spokeswoman for the hospital.

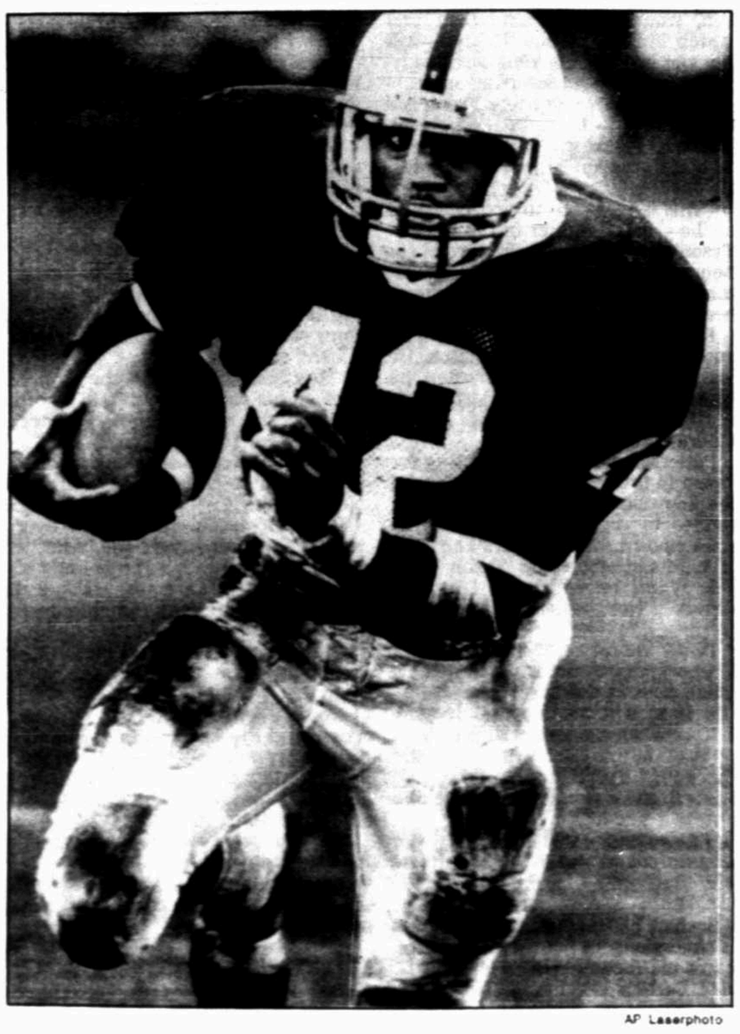

Price was named director of the Texas Relays last year after 15 years as head track coach. His teams won seven Southwest Conference outdoor championships and finished second the last three years.

Under Price, the Longhorns won the first two SWC indoor meets and the SWC cross country championship twice and finished in the top 10 in the NCAA outdoor meet four times.

Price, a Dallas native, competed for Southern Methodist and won the SWC long jump in 1949. He received his degree at Wheaton College in Illinois.

He coached at UT as a graduate assistant under Clyde Littlefield and was the chief assistant to Jack Patterson from 1963 through 1968.

He served as head track coach at Dallas Baptist College for two years before returning to Texas as head coach when Patterson returned to Baylor to become athletic director.

Bowls focus on Pitt-Penn State

College Football

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Games at State College, Pa., and Lincoln, Neb., on Saturday will determine whether the Miami Hurricanes, the nation's No. 1 college football team, can stay home for the holidays.

The Fiesta Bowl, which has lined up Miami and No. 2 Penn State in the biggest postseason coup since the Sugar Bowl sweet-talked Alabama and Notre Dame into their 1973 game, will be rooting for Penn State to beat Pitt.

The Orange Bowl, which has produced three of the last five national champions, will be pulling for Pitt to upset Penn State and for fifth-ranked Nebraska to beat No. 3 Oklahoma. If Pitt and Nebraska win, Miami will play the Cornhuskers on New Year's night in the Orange Bowl and the Fiesta will be left with once-beaten Penn State and dreams of what might have been.

Besides 10-0 Miami, 10-0 Penn State, 9-1 Oklahoma and 9-1 Nebraska, the only other team in position to make a pitch for No. 1 is fourth-ranked Arizona State, 9-0-1, which will represent the Pacific-10 Conference in the Rose Bowl. The Sun Devils end their regular season Saturday at No. 14 Arizona.

CONTRARY to NCAA regulations, most of the bowl invitations already have been issued. Saturday is merely RSVP day.

The visiting team in the Rose Bowl will be decided when sixth-ranked Michigan plays No. 7 Ohio State at Columbus for the Big Ten crown. The loser goes to the Cotton Bowl.

No. 8 LSU has clinched at least a tie for the SEC championship and can move closer to a Sugar Bowl berth by defeating Notre Dame tonight at Baton Rouge. No. 9 Alabama can tie LSU for the SEC title by defeating No. 15 Auburn next week (both teams are idle this weekend).

That would leave the decision up to the Sugar Bowl, which prefers Alabama but has said it would invite the highest ranked team in the AP poll to represent the SEC against the Oklahoma-Nebraska loser.

The rest of Saturday's schedule involving the AP's Top Twenty finds No. 10 Southern California at No. 18 UCLA, No. 11 Arkansas at Southern Methodist, No. 12 Washington at Washington State, Texas Christian at No. 13 Texas A&M, No. 16 Stanford at California, Texas at No. 17 Baylor, and South Carolina at No. 19 Clemson. Georgia, the No. 20 team, is not scheduled.

PITT not only is Penn State's oldest rival but is the last team to win a regular-season game from the Nittany Lions. That came in the 1984 finale, 31-11. Penn State has won all 21 regular-season games since.

Reagan faces Anson at Big Spring today

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

The Reagan County Owls have not yet made a habit of playing football late into November, but they're getting pretty close.

For the second straight season, Owl coach Ronnie Reeger leads Reagan County into the second round of the state Class 2A playoffs, Saturday at 2 p.m. against Anson at Big Spring's Memorial Stadium.

"Two years in the playoffs does not make us a traditional playoff team," Reeger says. "Wait til we get in five or six in a row, that's what we're aiming for, then we'll be a traditional playoff team."

RIGHT NOW, Reagan County's playoff tradition looks pretty formidable to the Anson Tigers, District 7-2A champions at 8-3. Anson made its first appearance in the playoffs since 1975 with a win over Bangs last week. Saturday's area contest is its first second round playoff battle since 1961.

"We haven't been down this road before, they have," said Tiger coach Charles Copeland, whose team does own a seven-game winning streak. "It's a different atmosphere, a more intense type situation. Hopefully we got our newness out last week, we played very tentatively in the first half but came out well in the second."

THE OWLS showed no signs of hesitancy in trouncing McCamey 34-7 Saturday. Fullback Junior Romero ran for three touchdowns and 106 yards, quarterback Scott Lipsey was six of 12 passing for 113 yards and the Owl defense cold-cocked the McCamey running game for 54 yards and just four first downs.

By both Reeger's and Copeland's admission, the Owls and Tigers run very similar offensive schemes, conservative, and hope for the defense to come through.

"Defense is the heart of our game," says Copeland, former defensive coordinator at Abilene Cooper. "We like to let our defense win ballgames and not let our offense lose it."

"They look a lot like we do with a ball control offense — but they can make the big play," Reeger said. "They throw like we have, numbers-wise, but they're effective when they do. They also run some reverses, which we don't, but it fits their personnel well."

Reeger likes to make the defense stop his fullback before anything else, and with Romero, a 200-pounder, running up the gut of defenses, it's no wonder. Ever since tailback James West has been slowed by injuries, Romero has played an even more important role in the Reagan County running game.

AGAINST MCCAMEY, it was "Stop Romero, if you can." The Badgers couldn't, and could never truly make a game of it.

"But it's not like we're without a passer," Reeger said. "Scott (Lipsey) has two season behind him now and he's no slouch. He's a quality player and the tougher the game, the better he's going to play. Our other kids are the same, we compete very well."

And because they do, and because Lipsey, Romero and the injured West, are all juniors, Reagan County just may make these late November playoff game into an annual affair.

Colts look to rookie Trudeau for 1st NFL victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Jack Trudeau's rookie season with the Indianapolis Colts has not been the learning experience he anticipated.

Instead of easing into pro football with a clipboard in his hand, Trudeau found himself being force-fed as the starter since veteran Gary Hogeboom suffered a season-ending injury in the second game of the season.

Trudeau survived the early test and will be the starter Sunday when the Colts try for their first victory of the season against the Houston Oilers, 2-9. Kickoff is at noon CST in The Astrodome.

"I thought I'd sit back and learn the offense, but I've had to learn much faster," Trudeau said. "When you think of coming in as a rookie, you don't think of going in right away. But now it's a plus for me. I still make mistakes but they are getting fewer and fewer."

The Colts battled the New York Jets last week before losing their 11th straight game and Trudeau threw 57 passes, completing 27 for a career high 359 yards.

Trudeau had to adjust quickly to a pressurized situation and Colts Coach Rod Dowhower admires the way he's held up to the strain.

"I'm very impressed with the way he approaches the game plans," Dowhower said. "So far, he hasn't given in and I've seen some players take the pressure.

Agreements revealed today

This is the day the bowls extend invitations to deserving teams.

Well, not really or necessarily deserving. Still it's the day they announce what agreements were made two weeks ago, with the standard provisional bailouts in the event of catastrophe.

With the Fiesta lining up Miami-Penn State, any revelations today will seem anticlimatic.

Perhaps it's only fitting that the the game will be played Jan. 2. Everything else seems to be the appetizer to the main course, just something to mark time until the turkey and stuffing are pulled from the oven.

Once the bowl selections are made and the games envisioned, maybe it won't seem important, but too many of the matchups for the big bowls are of the "will get the loser of....." stipulation.

The only way the Fiesta could be spoiled would be for Pitt (today) and/or East Carolina (next week) to pull off the possible.

The SWC...

Texas A&M minus 23 over TCU— After last week's loss to Arkansas must win big to recoup lost prestige...and they will.

Air Force minus 12 over Rice— Owls made spread against Baylor last week, but twice in a row is asking too much.

Houston plus 11 over Texas Tech— Who knows how Raiders may react after last week's loss to SMU, but it's a game Tech needs to insure Independence.

Texas plus 7 1/2 over Baylor— It should be closer than 7 1/2.

Arkansas minus 3 over SMU— Bowl invitation perhaps gives Arkansas a little more incentive. Of course, Mustangs seem to have fly-in-the-ointment incentive.

The Big Ones....

Penn minus 3 1/2 over Cornell— This is about as close as you are going to get to deciding a college, non-scholarship as opposed to quasi-pros, champion.

Arizona plus 3 1/2 over Arizona State- Sun Devils have a lock on Rose Bowl and for Wildcats this is the Rose Bowl.

Iowa minus 5 over Minnesota— I know it's foolish to pick against the team that beat Michigan, but this could qualify as an "upset" special.

Michigan minus 2 over Ohio State— Ohio State lost by 40 to Washington and Michigan lost to Minnesota. The winner of this qualifies for a beating in the Rose Bowl.

Nebraska plus 8 1/2 over Oklahoma— Eight and a half...I know Huskers lost to Colorado, but Nebraska can't be that bad and they are playing in the tundra.

California plus 20 over Stanford— This game never goes according to form and I think it's got something to do with the Stanford band.

Washington State plus 16 over Washington— Another one of those intra-state rivalries that defies form.

Notre Dame plus 5 over LSU— Bengals are playing at home, but Irish should play 'em closer than five.

USC plus four over UCLA— Trojans spring a surprise.

The pros....

Cowboys plus 3 over Redskins— No line offered...I guess they're expecting a Washington rout.

Vikings plus 3 over Bengals— Vikings can be explosive.

Broncos plus 2 1/2 over Giants— Somebody's got to stop Giants.

Eagles plus 6 over Seahawks— The lesser of two evils?

Kermit FG nips Friona at wire

From Staff Reports

BROWNFIELD — After missing an extra point kick in the third quarter, Kermit kicker Rudy Robledo was given a chance to atone with 33 seconds remaining in a 3A area playoff game here Friday night against Friona.

Robledo's kick traveled 20 yards to give the Yellowjackets a 15-13 victory and a berth in regionals against Iowa Park.

Friona jumped out to a quick lead and looked to be on the path to further glory.

Ron Montoya booted a 33-yard field goal in the first quarter for a 3-0 Friona lead and Sam Phillips followed with a four-yard run. Montoya's kick made it 10-0.

But, the Yellowjackes had a cause to play for and they came storming back. Billy Ray Thompson scored on a nine-yard run in the second quarter to cut the lead to 10-6 at halftime. Thompson added a go-ahead TD in the third quarter for a 12-10 score.

With 4:39 left to play in the game, Montoya kicked his second field goal of the game, a 28-yarder, to give Friona a 13-12 lead. It lasted until Robledo's pressure kick in the final minute to give Kermit a 9-3 record on the year.

The regional game with Iowa Park will be played Friday at 8 p.m. in Snyder.

Velasquez toes Crane

From Staff Reports

LEVELLAND— Crane's Golden Cranes, the team that started the season with a rash of defeats at the hands of strong 4A foes, made its defense and the kicking toe of Lonnie Velasquez pay off in a 6-0 Area 3A football victory here Friday night.

The win sends Crane into next week's playoff action Lampasas, probably next Saturday at a site to be determined.

Velasquez kicked his first field goal from 28 yards out with 5:22 left in the first period. His 37-yarder came as time ran out in the half.

Crane had two penetrations while Childress also had two penetrations, once being turned back at the four.

Statistically, Childress rolled up 16 first downs to nine for Crane, but total offensive yardage showed Crane with a 175-174 edge.

Horned Frogs stun Bayou Bengals, 83-74

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Larry Richard scored 17 points and sparked a 23-2 spurt in the first half to lead Texas Christian to an 83-74 victory over Louisiana State in the first round of the preseason NIT Friday night.

Texas Christian advances to a second-round game Monday night at Western Kentucky, which beat Notre Dame 80-63 Friday night.

LSU, returning just one starter from last year's Final Four team, took a deceptively easy 15-4 lead in the opening minutes but Richard scored eight points to lead the spurt that put Texas Christian ahead 27-17 midway through the first half.

LSU trailed 45-34 at intermission but managed to close within five three times before falling behind for good.

Carven Holcombe led Texas Christian with 20 points.

Tyson 3-1 pick to win heavy title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Mike Tyson, who likes to read about and watch films of oldtime fighters, will try and become the youngest heavyweight champion Saturday night.

The aggressive, exciting Tyson is a 3-1 favorite to beat Trevor Berbick and win the World Boxing Council title at the age of 20 years, 4 months, 22 days.

"This is a chance to prove myself as the greatest fighter in the world," Tyson said. "If I break the record for being the youngest champion ever, that's immortality. No one's going to break it."

Floyd Patterson has been the youngest heavyweight champion. He was 21 years, 11 months, when he won the vacant undisputed title with a fifth-round knockout of Archie Moore on Nov. 30, 1956.

Patterson has said he is rooting for Tyson to break his record, secure in the knowledge that he was the first fighter to regain the heavyweight championship. The careers and lives of both Patterson and Tyson were heavily influenced by Cus D'Amato, who died Nov. 4, 1985, at the age of 77.

Tyson will take a 27-0 record, with 25 knockouts, into the scheduled 12-round bout at the Las Vegas Hilton. The fight will be televised live by HBO and start about 5:30 p.m.

"Most definitely, I will go for the knockout," Tyson said.

But Berbick predicts he is the one who will get it.

"I'm looking to take him out by the seventh round," said the champion, who has a 31-4-1 record, with 23 knockouts.

Berbick has met unbeaten fighters in championship bouts twice before.

In a bid for the WBC title April 11, 1982, Berbick became the first fighter to go the distance with Larry Holmes in a championship bout. He lost a 15-round decision.

Last March 22, at Las Vegas, Berbick, a 6-1 underdog, won the title with a 12-round unanimous decision over Pinklon Thomas.

Berbick also was the first fighter to beat Greg Page and the last fighter to beat Muhammad Ali. He scored a 10-round decision over Ali on Dec. 11, 1981.

But Ali was the star of that show despite his eroded skills, just as Tyson is the star of Saturday night's show even though he still has boxing lessons to learn.

"He's just fighting maybe 30 percent of his capabilities," said Kevin Rooney, the former junior welterweight who trains Tyson.

"What's going to happen when he reaches his potential? What will people say then?"

It doesn't seem that Tyson ever will be a personality on the order of Ali, who transcended the bounds of boxing. But Tyson could become a major star in a sport that has seen many of its stars fade in the last couple of years.

Should Tyson beat Berbick, then beat the World Boxing Association champion (currently Tim Witherspoon) and the International Boxing Federation champion (Michael Spinks) and win the undisputed title, he would be one of the most valuable attractions in sports.

The youngster, who learned street fighting in Brooklyn's tough Brownsville section and who was in reform school at 13, stirs a crowd from the moment he appears.

He enters the ring wearing black trunks, but no robe and no socks. He stands with his arms as his sides waiting for the business at hand to begin, giving the impression he intends to get the job done quickly.

He appears nerveless. But, he said, "I always have butterflies." Then, he added, "But as far as being intimidated, no one intimidates me."

Tyson, who is listed at 5-foot-11 but appears to be closer to 5-9, is extremely quick. In many fights, he as been on an opponent almost before the sound of the opening bell has died.

Tyson has scored 15 first-round knockouts, and five of those were in a span of from 30 to 50 seconds. His 27 fights have totaled 76 rounds. His longest layoff since he turned pro was 76 days, and all of his fights have been packed within 18 months. That's how the oldtimers he admires fought.

But Tyson has been past six rounds only three times — he won 10-round decisions over James Tillis and Mitch Green, and scored a 10th-round knockout over Jose Ribalta — and a question about this fight is what will happen if a battle-tested veteran like Berbick forces him into the late rounds.

Berbick, who has exhibited excellent stamina in the past, dominated the second half of his fight against Thomas. The native of Jamaica, who lives in Miami, has fought 249 rounds and has gone between six and 10 rounds 15 times and between 11 and 15 rounds five times.

Buffs bully Cougars

By LANCE STEWART
Sports Correspondent

STANTON — The Stanton Buffaloes rolled over the Klondike Cougars with an impressive early-season victory, bullying their way to a 52-33 show.

This show was exactly that: An exhibition of the Buffalo's entire basketball program.

None of these guys are unfamiliar in Stanton, as the Buff basketball program showed a remarkable resemblance to the Buff football program. Veterans like quarterback Skip Hopkins, tight end Derek Sorely, and fullback James Vidal all put points on the board.

The game resembled that team of old in more than one way. There was the same mental approach: Take the ball and ram it down your opponent's throat.

The hapless Cougars were simply out-muscled, if not out-hussled, by their much larger rivals.

Given three inches and twenty pounds apiece, along with the drive to win the Buffs seem so blessed with, the Cougars might have had a chance at winning this one. As it was, they were lucky to stay on the court.

If nothing else, the Cougars came out of this game with a little character. Frustrated as they were, they never gave up up the effort. Throughout the entire game, they scrapped as well as anyone might expect them to.

STANON JUMPED to an early lead in the first quarter, 12-5.

The Buffs widened that lead in the ensuing minutes. But, the Cougars cut the margin to six only to see it slip to 31-21 at halftime.

During the second half, the Cougars only managed 12 points. Every player on the Kolondike side was exhausted, having only two non-starters, both of whom were substituted regularly.

For the Stanton girls it was also a victory, 53-42 over Klondike.

Klondike (33): Hill, 6; O'Brien, 5; Kirkland, 5; Cope, 5; Tidwell, 4; Simpson, 4; Arredondo, 2.
Stanton (52): Young, 9; Avory, 9; Smith, 8; Hopkins, 7; Sorely, 6; Vidal 4; Ortiz, 2.

problem, not mine."

Arkansas got back in the conference race last week with a 14-10 victory over A&M and could stay alive for a Cotton Bowl bid with a victory over the Mustangs, who a once again reeling from accusations by former players.

The Hogs' flexbone offense led by Derrick Thomas with 385 yards on 94 carries.

SMU's passing attack is led by junior quarterback Bobby Watters, who has completed 135 of 250 passes for 1,850 yards, the fifth highest season total in SMU history.

SMU, already on NCAA probation, has been on a roller coaster the past two weeks, losing to Notre Dame 61-29 and beating Texas Tech 13-7. There also are new accusations from a former player.

"We've still got one game to go this season and I guarantee that this team won't lay down," SMU Coach Bobby Collins said. "There is still a lot to play for and we'll be ready to play Arkansas."

Air Force remains in the post-season picture with a 5-1 Western Athletic Confrence record and Brigham Young left on the schedule. The Falcons beat the Owls 59-17 last season.

Baylor quarterback Cody Carlson closes out his career for the Bears while his Texas counterpart Bret Stafford has another season to add to his UT records. Stafford already has tied or set nine school records.

Bowl bargaining results in some strange matchups

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Since the AP poll began in 1936, the No. 1 team has played the No. 2 team 20 times — 14 regular-season games and six times in bowls.

If second-ranked Penn State loses to Pitt today and No. 3 Oklahoma beats Nebraska, the defending national champion Sooners undoubtedly will move up to No. 2.

Would that mean a 21st No. 1-vs.-No. 2 shootout in the Orange Bowl?

Not likely. Miami beat Oklahoma 27-14 last year and 28-16 earlier this season. The Hurricanes would have everything to lose in another rematch.

Rather than politic for another shot at Miami, Oklahoma's Barry Switzer agrees with Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson's decision not to play the Sooners again.

"The only thing is, if Jimmy had lost the September game he would be there," Switzer says. "I understand what Jimmy's doing. Jimmy doesn't have to prove anything with us. He's beaten us twice. He was the better team both times we played.

"He doesn't need to play us again. It's to his disadvantage. He's beaten us twice. How many times are you going to spin the wheel? You play Russian roulette, it's liable to land on that chamber."

WHEN IT comes to picking bowl teams, it's not necessarily whether you win or lose or even how you play the game, but how many fans you bring with you.

When Florida State went to the Orange Bowl a few years ago, the gag was that all FSU fans would bring to Miami was a 10-dollar bill and the Ten Commandments . . . and wouldn't break either one.

For those same reasons, the Sugar Bowl would rather have Alabama as its host team than LSU, which is only 80 miles or so up the road from New Orleans.

"The main purpose of our bowl game is to help the economy of Memphis," says Bud Dudley, executive director of the Liberty Bowl. "A week after the game nobody remembers the team's records."

Last year, the Liberty Bowl had 9-1-1 LSU and 8-3 Baylor and drew 38,000 spectators.

"When we get a team with a great record, we get a reluctant bride," Dudley says. "But a team that is happy to be in any bowl game is going to bring a lot of fans, and football people spend a lot of money."

When the bowl bids "officially" go out today, the Liberty Bowl will invite Minnesota to play the Kentucky-Tennessee winner. Dudley expects them all to bring large followings and Minnesota has guaranteed to purchase at least 12,000 tickets.

"As long as we have 50,000 seats and no sun and sand, we have to be different. We're going to try to fill up the hotels and restaurants in Memphis this year.'

THE FIESTA Bowl's coup in landing a Miami-Penn State shootout has been rapped in some quarters. Washington Coach Don James, a strong opponent of a playoff, isn't among the critics.

"Maybe there is something wrong with it, but I haven't seen any arguments to convince me that it is, so I really don't have any problem with it," James says.

"It seemed like the bowl people were offended the most. They (Miami and Penn State) are both independent and they have the right to go wherever they want. If they want to make a deal and somebody wants to pay extra bucks . . ."

WHY IS the Orange Bowl likely to wind up with the SWC runnerup to face the Oklahoma-Nebraska winner? Two reasons.

First, the Orange Bowl lost a shot at the Big Ten runnerup when Michigan and Ohio State refused to go along with an escape clause that would have allowed the Orange Bowl to pair Miami and Nebraska if things worked out.

When the Cotton Bowl landed the Michigan-Ohio State loser, the Orange Bowl turned to Auburn but Coach-AD Pat Dye had given his word — and his team — to the Citrus Bowl.

When the Orange Bowl finally contacted Dye, "I called the Citrus and asked, 'Do we have a deal?' They said we did and that Southern Cal had just called and they were coming to play Auburn. I said that was good enough for me."

The Sugar, Citrus and Sun Bowls had been working on a three-way deal involving LSU, Alabama and Auburn. Alabama, which reportedly didn't want to wind up in the Sun Bowl, will have to play in El Paso if the Sugar Bowl chooses LSU to represent the SEC.

THE TANGERINE Bowl started this business of corporate sponsors when it lined up the Florida Citrus Commission and became the Florida Citrus Bowl.

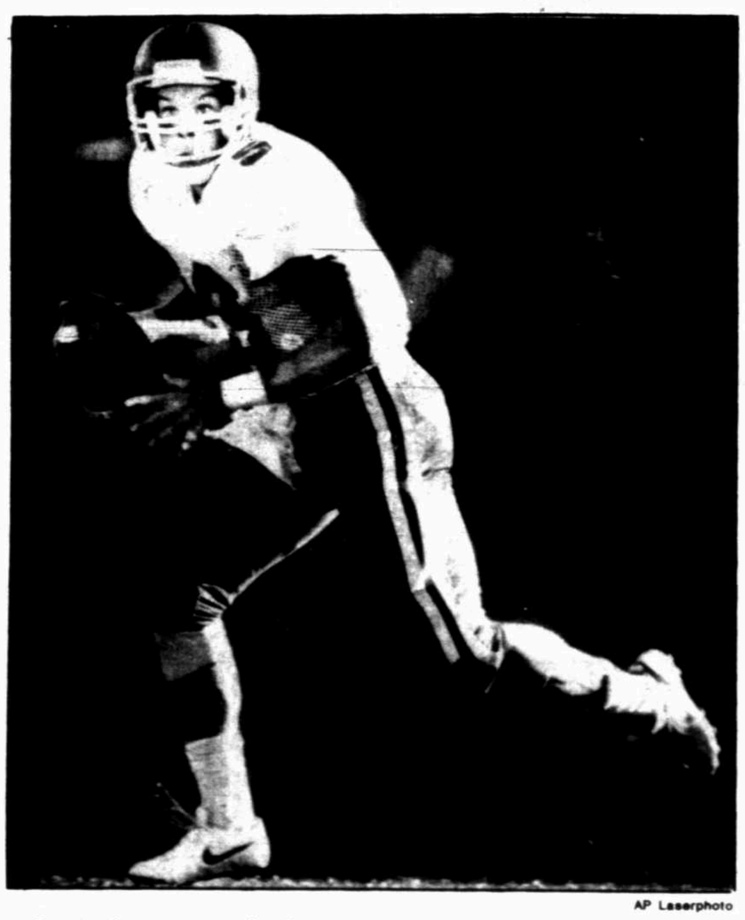

"That, I think, is going to be the salvation of the bowl business," says Executive Director Chuck Rohe. "Bowls are getting involved in corporate sponsorship, and even though TV dollars are coming down, total bowl payoffs are going up. The colleges are going to see that the bowls are going to be able to do better than they can do with television contracts and a playoff system."

IN CASE you missed it, CBS-TV conducted a telephone poll on a playoff during last week's games and 40,136 calls with 37,371 — or 93.1 percent — in favor of a playoff and 2,765 against it.

Sweeney targets Flutie's record

By JOE BIGHAM

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Fresno State quarterback Kevin Sweeney needs 173 yards Saturday in his final game as a collegian to break the major college career passing record held by Doug Flutie.

Sweeney went into second-place on the all-time NCAA Division I passing list last Saturday and now has 10,407 yards in his four seasons as a Bulldog. Flutie passed for 10,579 yards at Boston College from 1981-1984.

Early this season, Sweeney, son of Fresno State Coach Jim Sweeney, seemed a cinch to break the mark. He started the season with 8,260 yards and averaged almost 320 more in the first four games.

But too many hits left the 5-foot-11 quarterback with a sore right shoulder, his passing arm. His per game average slumped to 149 yards over the next six games.

Sweeney needs to increase that average in the season's final game Saturday at home against Utah State, 3-7, to break the record. However, his chances were hurt when he bruised the shoulder again in last week's 24-13 loss to Hawaii that left the Bulldogs at 8-2.

Sweeney didn't throw much in practice this week to let his arm rest but shrugs off thoughts that his sore shoulder will affect his chance of breaking Flutie's record.

"I played the rest of the game Saturday night with it, and I played all year with it," Sweeney said. "It's just part of the game."

Sweeney and his father said they have made winning the main goal until this game rather than the passing record. But, with the Bulldogs out of contention for a bowl bid, Sweeney is expected to go to the air as often as needed against the Aggies.

"We have not made (the record) a goal," Coach Sweeney said. "We have got to make it a positive goal to happen this week. It will be a goal of everyone on the team."

Utah State Coach Chuck Shelton is ambivalent about trying to stop Sweeney short, saying he wants to win but thinks the all-time passing mark would be good for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association to which both teams belong.

"Kevin has thrown a lot of yards against a lot of teams, so I'm not going to get tied up in trying to keep him from breaking the record," Shelton said.

However, his players may see things differently, Shelton added.

"I don't think our players want to be the team that gives up the record."

Is Cowboys' image cause for penalties?

By Clark Judge

Dallas executive Tex Schramm thinks the Dallas Cowboys, pro football's most heavily penalized team, may be victims of a "subconscious" plot to subvert America's Team.

"It just seems right now that officials are very conscious of the colors of our jersey," said Schramm. "Officials are human, and for a team that has been as visible and successful as the Cowboys, they might be reacting to us as people do all over our country.

"People either like us or they don't. There is no in-between. There's nothing to say they don't resent our image, resent our success. ... There may be a subconscious thing working here."

AROUND THE AFC — Think the Raiders are happy to have Jim Plunkett — or anyone but Marc Wilson — at quarterback?

Listen to Lester Hayes on Plunkett: "His forte in life is to be a leader. It's a Jim General Patton Plunkett-ism. He got us 17 points (against the Cowboys) and it was academic. So be it. Thank God. We're back. We love him. We love him. We love him."

Wonder what's wrong with Seattle? Try this stat: Over a threegame period, the Seahawks converted 6 of 40 third-down attempts.

Quarterback Bill Kenney on the lack of attention the Chiefs are getting: "We have to bribe sports reporters to write an article about us. It's so bad if you go 15 miles outside town, you'll find Denver Broncos fans."

Despite nose tackle Rubin Carter's contention the Broncos must win 10 games before they'll think of doing a video, a local Denver TV station has one out on quarterback John Elway. It's called "We Love Elway," sung to the tune of "I Love L.A.," and it features, among others, Colorado Gov. Dick Lamm.

AROUND THE NFC — It's a tossup which gives St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax more problems — defensive backs or editing. In Lomax's new book, "Third and Long," Dallas defensive back Everson Walls is called "Emerson Wells" and Indy coach Rod Dowhower, Lomax's passing guru, is referred to as "Paul Dowhower." Wow.

If you're a Cards fan, first, my sympathies. Second, don't set your heart on them trading Lomax. He makes too much money. He'll get $700,000 this year; $875,000 next year; and $950,000 in 1987 — and all of it is 100 percent guaranteed.

Since the NFL started keeping sacks in 1982, Dexter Manley of the Washington Redskins leads the league with 58½. "If I don't get picked to the Pro Bowl, I'm going to phone Pete Rozelle and ask him to explain why and I'm not goin' up there. He's going to come down here," he said.

Atlanta head coach Dan Henning wasn't overwhelmed with commissioner Pete Rozelle's visit to Atlanta for the game with the New York Jets. "He wants to see the Jets win and go to the Super Bowl so he can boost TV ratings," said Henning. Rozelle said he was there at the invitation of Falcons owner Rankin Smith.

BC scared silly by 10-0 Holy Cross

By HOWARD ULMAN

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — There's no way Holy Cross should beat Boston College on Saturday.

The Crusaders haven't done it in their last seven meetings. The Division I-AA team's players are smaller and their schedule is less demanding than Boston College's, a Division I-A squad headed for the Hall of Fame Bowl.

But little has gone as expected this football season for Holy Cross.

From the suicide of Coach Rick Carter on Feb. 2, to the outstanding play of Gordie Lockbaum at both running back and defensive back, to their 10-0 record, it has been a season of surprises for the Crusaders.

"If this team had won four games, I would have said that's what we expect," Athletic Director Ron Perry Sr. said.

But Holy Cross had its fourth victory by Oct. 4 and its six victories since then include triumphs at Army and William & Mary, which was 8-1 before last Saturday's 31-7 loss.

"Our plane was an hour and a half late coming back from William & Mary," defensive coordinator Kevin Coyle said. "At Hart (Recreation) Center, the student band and 100 students were still there cheering.

"It's the first time anything like that has happened and it was midnight by the time we got back."

Mark Duffner, 33, who had been defensive coordinator for the past five years and associate head coach for the past two years, succeeded Carter and has pulled the team together with his football knowledge and enthusiastic personality that invites communication with players.

"They've responded well," Duffner said. "But I've been very fortunate because I've been here for five years and knew our system. It was the system that Coach Carter had established and we've tried to

Penn State quarterback John Shaffer had, according to Coach Joe Paterno, "probably one of the best games he's ever had" in last Saturday's 24-19 victory over Notre Dame. Shaffer was 9-of-13 passing for 162 yards, including a 37-yarder for the go-ahead score, and had a one-yard run for the decisive touchdown.

Meanwhile, Pitt was starting its third quarterback in as many weeks in beating Rutgers 20-6. Joe Felitsky made his first collegiate start and passed for 259 yards and one touchddown.

Sal Genilla, who started a week earlier against Miami, was hospitalized with an asthma attack, and John Congemi, Pitt's No. 1 quarterback, suffered an injury the previous week.

BESIDES the Orange Bowl, Nebraska has a fan in Colorado Coach Bill McCartney, whose team upset the Cornhuskers 20-10 last month and lost to Oklahoma 28-0 a week ago.

"I like the Cornhuskers, I like the home field advantage and I like Nebraska's defensive line," McCartney said. "I'm also banking on Oklahoma turning the ball over (something the Sooners haven't done in their last two games). There is a law of averages, and with that Wishbone offense, they ought to turn it over once in a while.

"Nebraska has one thing we didn't have to defend Oklahoma better — that's the size and strength up front to keep them from getting that (Wishbone) going inside. Nebraska has a much better chance of getting some offense going than we did. Nebraska has the kind of speed you need to combat their speed."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer won't argue about that.

"I agree with (Coach) Tom Osborne's assessment before the season that Nebraska has more team quickness than in the past," Switzer said. "They have better team speed on defense. Their linemen have the ability to run, their secondary has the ability to run. Offensively, they still have great team speed."

ARIZONA STATE will be out to snap a four-game losing streak — by a total of 21 points — against Arizona.

"I think the state of Arizona can be real proud of these two teams," Arizona State Coach John Cooper said.

Arizona Coach Larry Smith said that "Arizona State earned the title. Our thought is that if you can't win the title, then try to beat the team that won it."

IT THINGS go according to form, the anticipated bowl lineup looks like this:

Fiesta — Miami-Penn State; Rose — Arizona State vs. Michigan-Ohio State winner; Orange — Oklahoma-Nebraska winner vs. Texas A&M or Arkansas; Cotton — SWC champion vs. Michigan-Ohio State loser; Sugar — LSU or Alabama vs. Oklahoma-Nebraska loser.

Citrus — Auburn-Southern Cal; Sun — Washington vs. LSU or Alabama; Aloha — Arizona vs. undecided; Gator — Clemson-Stanford; Bluebonnet — Baylor-Georgia Tech; Freedom — UCLA vs. Air Force or Brigham Young; Hall of Fame — Boston College-Georgia.

Holiday — WAC champion vs. Iowa; All-American — Florida State-Indiana; Peach — North Carolina State-Virginia Tech; Independence — Mississippi-Mississippi State winner vs. Texas Tech; Liberty — Kentucky-Tennessee winner vs. Minnesota; California — Miami, Ohio-San Jose State.

W-L backs Otto as all-time best

Man and boy, Otto Graham might have been the best ever to play the game at quarterback. It depends on your yardstick. If you go by quantity – yards gained, passes completed, number of touchdowns thrown – you go elsewhere. If you go by where his team finished, it's no contest.

Some years ago, the football player, Jim Brown, and the basketball player, Bill Russell, were playing golf and an onlooker asked Brown, "Jim, you're known to like golf and a wager. How do you keep yourself from getting hustled on the course by a ringer?"

Brown answered: "I watch the way he swings."

"Not me," interjected Russell. "I watch where the ball lands."

If you judge by where the ball lands, Otto Graham is your man.

Every single year he played, his team went to the championship game. That was 10 of them. They won seven.

IMAGINE a quarterback leading his team to 10 straight Super Bowls today and you have a measure of the kind of man Otto Graham was.

He never really got the credit. As a collegian at Northwestern, the school was agog over a schoolboy sensation named Bill DeCorrevont, a running back who used to pull in 100,000 fans for a high school game. Graham won games, DeCorrevont won headlines.

Graham went to the pros, the old All-America Conference Cleveland Browns. The team was named for the coach and the players were considered just movable numbers on his strings.

"He doesn't even call his own plays!" protested Otto Graham's detractors. That was considered the ultimate in demeaning in those days. It is so commonplace now, no one expects any quarterback to call his own signals. But no matter how successful Otto Graham's teams were, Coach Paul Brown got the credit.

It was Graham, though, who made the Browns go. "They should have named them the Cleveland Grahams," rival coach, Buck Shaw, once observed dryly. After making the title game 10 straight times in two leagues under Otto, the Browns made it only three times in the next 10 years and lost two of those.

Otto was too good to be true anyway. He had these storybook good looks, dark eyes, wavy hair, collar-ad profile – until the San Francisco 49ers tore a 12-stitch gash in his right cheek from his mouth to his ear. He was an accomplished musician – piano, violin, French horn, cornet – and he played professional basketball with the Rochester Royals, now the Sacramento Kings. He was Otto Merriwell.

BUT OF ALL the great personal victories Otto Graham achieved, the lifetime stats of 23,584 yards gained passing, the 174 touchdowns, the 1,464 completions, the great last-minute drives, Otto Graham's greatest triumph occurred where no fans cheered, no band played, no pompons waved, no one spiked the ball.

Otto Graham licked a lineup that made the Bobby Layne Detroit Lions look like a set of wimps. He picked apart a zone defense few people can penetrate – cancer. It's a pass rush that won't let you stay in the pocket, the ultimate blitz.

Graham handled this adversary as coolly as he did the 1950 Rams. It was the old quarterback's finest hour.

As usual, it was a question of attitude. As usual, it was a question of don't panic.

Never mind what old Automatic Otto did to the All-America Football Conference or what he did to the NFL when he came into it, amid dire prophecies that he would finally see what it meant to play real football, the world really had to admire the Otto Graham who riddled an opponent in a game where there was no one to call signals for him.

I don't suppose there's a more terrible word in the language than colostomy. It ranks right up there with glaucoma, carcinoma, leukemia, all the most dreaded collections of syllables in any book. Up to a few short years ago, no one said it right out loud.

Otto Graham did. He accepted it as just another third and long yardage. He had the arm for it, the play for it, the heart for it.

When you get a catastrophic illness, there are two ways you can handle it. You can go into a spiritual funk, you can rail against the fates, you can rage "Why me, God?" You can become a recluse, a misanthrope, an embittered, hate-filled person.

Or you can get a tennis racquet, a golf bag, a deck of cards and say "Whose deal?"

THAT'S WHAT Otto did. I remember being at a celebrity golf outing about nine years ago. Otto Graham was one of the athletes invited. In those days he was partnered with another American legend, Joe DiMaggio.

We all sat around waiting for Otto Graham to show up bundled in a wheelchair, pale, wasting away, swathed in quilts, speaking with difficulty, this bag on his side. We wondered if he could even try to gallery a few holes.

Graham showed up looking for a bet. He had his clubs, shoes, wallet, racquet and cards with him, and a middle-of-the-fairway swing. He said he felt sorry for people who had to leave a good conversation to go to the bathroom. He went right where he sat, without missing a deal or a putt, and no one was the wiser, bragged Otto. He figured the whole thing was a blessing in disguise. This way his handicap went up, he got more shots.

He didn't need them. Otto was just as automatic on the golf course as he was on the five-yard line.

One afternoon, DiMaggio showed up in some pique. He had missed his golf partner on the practice range and he had tracked him down and found him playing five sets of fierce tennis in another part of the hotel complex. "He's tiring himself out!" sputtered Joe.

Otto Graham was tiring his opponent out. As usual. He was wearing cancer down to a frazzle. Some people railed at it. Otto just grinned at it. It looked like a sucker for a post pattern to him. Graham never flinched at an opponent in his life and after nine years, the clock, as usual, is running out on the opponent, not Otto.

OTTO was one of four sports greats – the others were tennis' Rod Laver, horse trainer Charlie Whittingham and hockey's Bobby Hull – at the fourth annual Tribute to Athletes at Hollywood Park's Pavilion of the Stars Tuesday, Nov. 11. Otto's inclusion in this select group is, well, automatic.

And to those who will say, "Too bad he never played in a Super Bowl," the answer is: "Oh, but he played in a super bowl, all right. And pulled it out in the fourth quarter. As usual."

OU-Nebraska

Will defense or offense prevail?

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — What happens when the nation's two highest scoring teams also have the best defenses?

Tune in Saturday when third-ranked Oklahoma meets No. 5 Nebraska with the Big Eight championship and the host spot in the Orange Bowl on the line. The loser goes to the Sugar Bowl — Nebraska, if it's a tie.

Coaches insist that championships are won with defense, and no team has more defense than Oklahoma.

The Sooners lead the nation in scoring defense (5.6 points per game), total defense (a 163.4-yard average) and rushing defense (56.7), and are second to Tennessee in pass defense (101.6 to 106.7).

But statistics only tell part of the story.

"This defense isn't as talented as last year's simply because we don't have (end) Kevin Murphy," Coach Barry Switzer said. "But the numbers are better."

Oklahoma has posted five shutouts and held two other teams to a field goal; the last five opponents have totaled only one field goal. The Sooners have not allowed a rushing touchdown and the defense has not permitted any Big Eight opponent a touchdown; Kansas State scored on a blocked punt.

Miami scored 28 points in handing Oklahoma its only setback; the other nine opponents have combined for 28 points.

"Colorado (beaten 28-0 last week) knew the only way they were going to move the ball on us was to run counter plays and reverses, try to trick us," end Darrell Reed said. "They tried to make us play on our heels and finesse us.

"Nebraska lines up and comes right at you. They are just like us in that regard. They are a physical team."

"I think we can get another shutout," linebacker Brian Bosworth said. "Last week at Colorado, we didn't play well. We need to get back our aggressiveness, our smash-mouth attitude.

"Finishing first nationally in all four defensive categories is very important to us (no team ever has done it). And if we get a shutout, that would be three in a row. Last year, they took a shutout away from us (Nebraska tackle Chris Spachman ran 76 yards with a fumble in the final minute of Oklahoma's 27-7 victory), so we want one this year.

"If we go out and take care of business on the defensive side of the ball, then I don't see how they'll have an opportunity to score unless we fumble deep in our territory."

Nebraska also has a shutout-minded defender in end Broderick Thomas.

"I believe we can shut out Oklahoma," Thomas said. "There's been a lot of talk that they can score 24-25 points, or so. I'm not looking forward to that. I think three points, or zero.

Cowboys need win Sunday against Skins

By DAVID GINSBURG

Cowboys-Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — It doesn't matter what the stakes are. When the Dallas Cowboys play the Washington Redskins, the players become a bit more emotional, the fans scream louder and even the usually placid Tom Landry gets "keyed up."

The Dallas coach, whose hasn't missed one of the previous 53 games between the two rivals, admits his team is a "long shot" to repeat as NFC East champions this season. But he knows the Cowboys could enhance their slim title hopes with a victory over the Redskins Sunday at sold out RFK Stadium.

The Cowboys, 7-4, trail both Washington and the New York Giants by two games. They're as close to making the playoffs as they are to being eliminated, a situation that has not been overlooked in the nation's capital, where fans are paying scalpers up to $300 a ticket.

A victory would greatly improve Washington's chances of returning to the playoffs after a rare miss last year. But even if that were not the case, the Redskins would hardly need a pep talk to get motivated to play Dallas.

"It's the best rivalry in football," said Redskins defensive tackle Darryl Grant.

"I always enjoy playing the Cowboys," said linebacker Neal Olkewicz. "The intensity level for both teams jumps a couple of notches."

Washington fans have literally made RFK Stadium shake during some of the recent clashes between the teams.

"It's one of the few parks where the fans can influence the game," observed Landry. "It's an exciting place to play. Even I get keyed up when the crowd gets to that level."

Herschel Walker, who has participated in only one previous Washington-Dallas battle, could play a major role Sunday. The Cowboys' running back, who accounted for 200 yards in total offense in Dallas' 30-6 victory over Washington Oct. 12, said he expects to be in good health after being slowed by a sprained ankle the past two weeks.

"It (the ankle) is getting better every day," said Walker, the only player in the NFL to have over 500 yards in both rushing and receiving.

Thanks in part to Walker, Dallas ranks No. 3 in the NFL in points scored with 277.

carry on that system and improve on it as best we can."

Carter's presence was felt in another way.

"The great competitive qualities he had and transferred to this team, I think, are evident every week," Coyle said. "In many ways, we have dedicated our efforts to him."

Holy Cross was 4-6-1 last season after four straight winning years. The school decided last year to eliminate scholarships and playoff participation and join the new Colonial League. Then Carter died at age 42.

Now the Crusaders have the most victories of any of the 91 seasons the school has been playing football. The only other time they won all their games was in 1918, when they were 2-0.

"A lot of people are talking about it being amazing," Coyle said, "but I think we, as coaches and as a team, haven't really had enough time to look back at what we've done and I think that's been the key to our success."

There have been other keys. Lockbaum has scored 19 touchdowns and leads Holy Cross in rushing and receiving. Quarterback Jeff Wiley has completed 58.7 percent of his passes and thrown for 2,341 yards and 15 touchdowns. No opponent has scored more than 14 points.

"I don't think anybody felt we'd be 10-0 going into the Boston College game," Coyle said. "I don't think the season will be made or broken in this game."

Boston College, 7-3, is the best team Holy Cross has played this season.

The Eagles have won their last six games and have a balanced attack featuring Troy Stradford, who has run for 1,060 yards, and Shawn Halloran, who has completed 60.2 percent of his passes.

"Up front, they're as big and as strong as any team in the country on both sides of the ball," Coyle said. "We have to get them into downs where they have to throw the ball."

The Eagles are heavily favored and are expected to win.

The New York Giants are responsible for the changing face of the NFC East. They sidelined Redskins quarterback Joe Theismann, forcing Washington to start Schroeder; they injured Danny White, thrusting Steve Pelluer into the starting lineup; and they KO'd Philly QB Ron Jaworski. Now, Randall Cunningham calls the shots there.

The Pacific Ocean washes the dark sands of the Lost Coast area of Northern California, the longest primitive shoreline in the state and the object of a controversy over whether the region should be designated a wilderness.

Long and lost coast

HONEYDEW, Calif. — There is a beach 70 miles south of Eureka, a place not well known even to people who live nearby, that could be the most inspiring vantage for sea-watching on the entire Pacific coast.

At this point, midway on an uninhabited 23-mile stretch of shoreline, civilization is more than a day's walk away in any direction. The Pacific Coast Highway, which clings to the shoreline as snugly as plastic wrap along much of the rest of the coast, detours inland here in deference to the King Mountain Range.

Behind the sea watchers rise steep, tangled peaks as high as 4,087 feet. They have discouraged settlers over the years at the same time they have sheltered bobcat, black bear, elk, deer and spotted owl.

Looking west, the ocean appears unfettered. Gale winds, lashing rain and immense storm waves are not unusual here.

"You can get down on that beach, especially on a foggy, dreary day, and it's like being at the end of the world" said John Lloyd of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. "You can be as alone out there as you'd ever want to be. You just can't find a coastline like that anywhere."

By car about a 600-mile trip north from Los Angeles, it is the longest primitive stretch of shoreline in California. Without roads, it has been essentially lost to human traffic and has come to be known as the Lost Coast.

But to the chagrin of hikers, backpackers and environmentalists who wish to preserve the region, there IS a road — albeit a rough one — into the very heart of the wilderness. On some days, the beach's isolation is broken by the whine of motorcycles, jeeps and all-terrain vehicles that either sneak in along the beach or dodge a locked gate on the Smith-Etter Road and wind 16 miles down the dirt road to the beach. Although off-road vehicles are outlawed on all but three miles of the shore, enforcement is difficult in an area as remote as this.

The Smith-Etter Road has become the focus of a larger controversy over management of the region: Will the Lost Coast be designated wilderness, with logging and off-road vehicles use outlawed (although grazing would be allowed to continue)? Or will none or only a portion of the area be made wilderness, an option which environmentalists fear woudl allow off-road vehicle use to continue unchecked?

Because the King Range was designated a National Conservation Area in 1974, there can be no residential or commercial development of the mountains or shore. At issue, then, is the purity of the area. If the wilderness advocates have their way, the Lost Coast will always have the feeling of a place time and progress has bypassed.

Protection of the Lost Coast is the top priority for the Wilderness Society in the state of California, according to regional director Patty Schifferle who called the area "the crown jewel of Bureau of Land Management's proposed wilderness areas." Sierra Club representative Sally Kabisch added: "We're fighting very hard to keep the Lost Coast protected until such a time as we can get (declared) wilderness there."

In a report now in the draft stage, the Bureau of Land Management is recommending that 31,640 acres — out of a total 54,000 acres of public land in the King Range — be made wilderness. Other groups are filing their own recommendations, ranging from the Humboldt County Board of Supervisors' 14,000 acres to a number of environmental groups who would like to see the entire region designated wilderness.

Retired rancher Ken Roscoe, 80, lives adjacent to California's Lost Coast area and opposes its designation as a wilderness.

Lloyd said he is not expecting a final determination on the area's wilderness status from Congress for three to five years. Involved parties agree that at least some of the area stands an excellent chance to be deemed wilderness because of its unique properties. As Jim Eaton of the California Wilderness Coalition said: "We do not have a lot of wilderness coastline in California. There's nowhere else the public can see a stretch of wild beach like this."

In addition to their recommendation for 31,640 acres of wilderness, the Bureau of Land Management has filed a transportation plan that would open the Smith-Etter Road to within a one-quarter mile of the beach, where they plan to construct a primitive parking area. Five environmental groups, including the Sierra Club and the Wilderness Society, have filed their opposition to the plan with the Interior Board of Land Appeals. The California Coastal Commission has also found the transportation plan inconsistent with their management policies.

Local ranchers and other opponents of a Lost Coast wilderness regard the wilderness designation as a "lock-up," a single use of the land that precludes other uses, said Lloyd, manager of the Bureau of Land Management's Arcata Resource Area.

Bill Devall, a professor of sociology at Humboldt (Calif.) State University, has hiked the entire Lost Coast 10 or 15 times, sometimes taking along students. He believes the Lost Coast is most vaulable in its wild state. He would like to see the Smith-Etter Road closed to the public, and even eventually regraded and replanted so that all trace of it is erased.

Devall advocates making wilderness of the Chemise Mountain area at the southern end of the King Range (Chemise Mountain is included in the Bureau of Land Management's wilderness proposal), linking the King Range to another chunk of coastal wilderness, the Sinkyone Wilderness State Park in upper Mendocino County. This would create an unprecedented 40 miles of coastal wilderness.

Coming down strongly on the environmentalist side, Cecelia Gregori, 34, is typical of the younger people who have moved into the Lost Coast area from cities, bringing with them values that sometimes clash with the area's long-established ranching famlies. Along with her husband, Gilbert, and daughters Megan, 11, and Mariah, 8, Gregori lives a back-to-basics lifestyle in a 70-year-old farmhouse with a view of the King Range. She believes the Lost Coast should be undisturbed, a remnant of the grandeur once found all along the California coast.

By opening the Smith-Etter Road and allowing access to off-road vehicles, Gregori said, the Bureau of Land Management may degrade the area to such an extent that it will no longer be suitable for wilderness consideration.

Responding to Gregori's charge, John Lloyd said in an interview at his Arcata office that his job is to ensure that nothing is done that would impair the Lost Coast's fitness for wilderness status.

Lloyd, 43, said that opening the Smith-Etter Road to within a quarter-mile of the beach and building a parking area there would not impair the area's wilderness suitability because, "We would not be doing anything that couldn't easily be rehabilitated by one person with a hand shovel."

In 1985, due to problems with off-road vehicles and the protests of environmental groups, a locked gate was installed on the Smith-Etter Road at Telegraph Peak "a long four miles from the beach," according to Lloyd. The gate will remain there until the Bureau of Land Management's new transportation plan is approved.

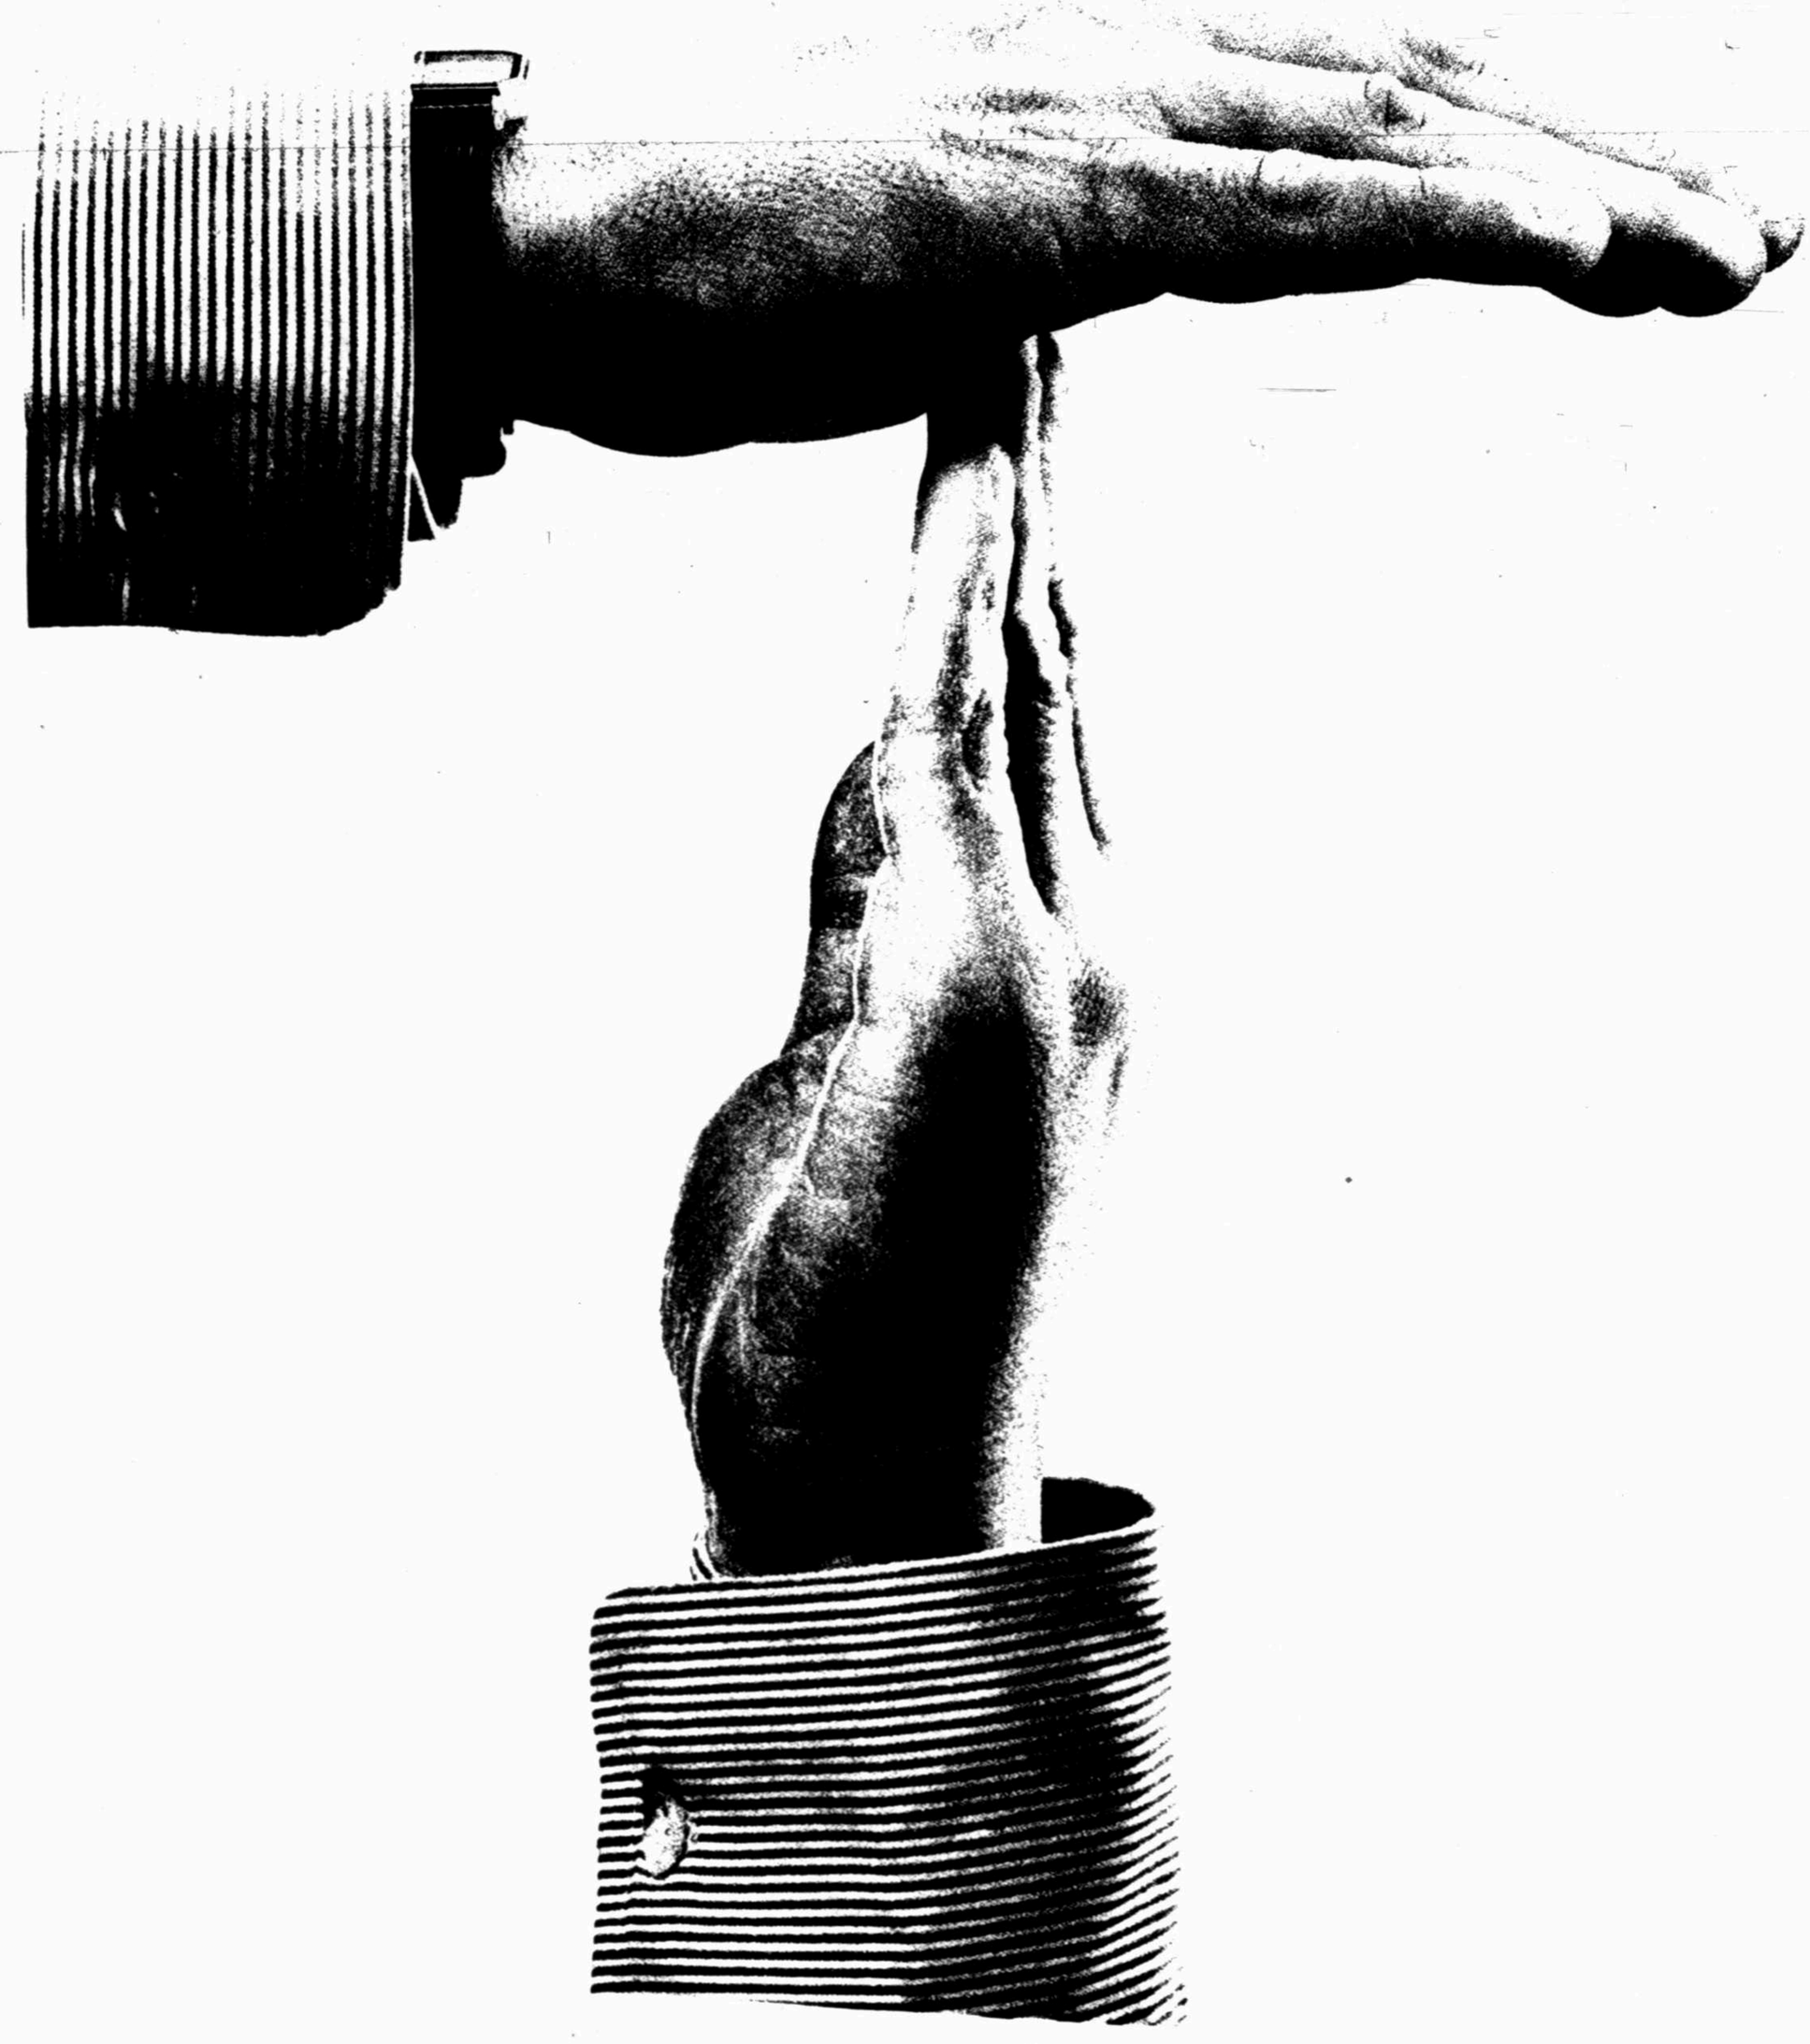

Lloyd said that no matter where they put the gate — whether it is a short drive from the beach, or at the entrance to the Smith-Etter Road, off-road vehicles will manage to infiltrate the area. That is because the Bureau of Land Management has only one ranger who is responsible for visitor enforcement in most of northwestern California, clearly an insufficient force to monitor vehicle violations in the Lost Coast.

Students, teachers 'START' day off with good book

ARLINGTON (AP) — Walking through the halls of Foster Elementary a few minutes before classes begin each morning is more like entering a library than a school.

Students, passing up the chance to chatter with friends, go straight to their classes and open up a favorite book.

Few teachers can be found talking to each other in the halls about the day's plans, either. Most are in their classrooms engrossed in one of the latest best-sellers.

Even the principal stops her work to pick up a book or a magazine.

It's all a part of "Operation START," a reading program begun this fall at Foster. "START" stands for "Students and Teachers Are Reading Together."

"The purpose is to promote the enjoyment of reading and to let students put into practice the reading skills they've learned in the classroom," said school librarian Jan Moore.

Sixth grade teacher Barbara Hardy had seen a similar program used at a school she taught at in Oklahoma, and suggested it to Principal Barbara Syptak.

"We've wanted to do this for some time, but with all the different class times, there was no way for everybody to read at the same time because everybody's schedule is different," Ms. Syptak said. "But since the kindergarten schedule was moved up to 8:15 a.m., we were able to begin it this year."

After the first bell rings at 8:15 a.m., students file into their classrooms and read until classes begin at 8:30 a.m., Ms. Syptak said.

The children are allowed to bring newspapers, books or magazines from home, or may check out books from the school library.

"We don't care if it's a newspaper or Teen Magazine, as long as it's appropriate for school. The purpose is to get kids reading," she said.

Kindergarten students, who are too young to read, are shown picture books, she said.

School officials hope that by observing adults reading, too, youngsters will see reading as a lifelong pleasure, not a dreaded chore that they only tackle when studying for a test.

The reading time also sets the mood for the school day, Ms. Moore said.

"It gets the day off to a calm start. The teachers really appreciate that," she said. "It really is remarkable how quiet the building is. I can tell by the noise level that there's some serious reading going on. You don't hear the rattling of tote trays or the talking."

Louisa Fletcher wrote a poem, "The Land of Beginning Again." It begins:

I wish that there were some wonderful place
Called the Land of Beginning Again,
Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches
And all of our poor selfish grief
Could be dropped like a shabby old coat at the door,
And never be put on again.

You can "Begin again" in Christ. Discover how with us.

Thanks-Living

The poet both haunts and helps at Thanksgiving time when he wrote:

"Don't let it be forgot, that once there was a spot, for one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot"

A place, a time, a person, it makes little difference.

Camelot has come to mean "the height of something special." And Thanksgiving is a time of recalling one's Camelots. It is the reality (or memory) of little children gathered around an open fire in the den finding expressed delight in identifying flickering flames as "rabbit ears" or "teddy bear's feet."

Camelot is turkey served full-bodied to family members, but it is more.

Camelot is gratitude for life, and the life-giver without whose daily presence there would be no Camelots. It is thankfulness that God is actively, creatively, and redemptively at work in our world and in us.

Thanksgiving is reviewing the Camelots along the path and expressing gratitude for each. It is h

Flame of old Russian Orthodox Christianity kept alive in city

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

JORDANVILLE, N.Y. — It's the first very cold morning of fall. The sun glints off the gold, onion-shaped domes that sprout from the farmland in tiny Jordanville, N.Y.

An old man with a long gray beard pulls his black hat down. His cassock flaps like a flag in a storm as he struggles against the wind.

On this morning, the walk from the gold-spired church to the dormitory 100 feet away is a struggle against a 20-degree wind chill and 50-mile-an-hour gusts.

Once inside, the old man smiles to a younger one who wears the same kind of black cassock and a long beard. They agree. It feels like autumn in northern Russia.

The cold wind that blows across the stubbled fields of cut corn stalks is not all that recalls Russia. Jordanville, 20 miles south of Utica in upstate New York, is one of the most Russian places outside the motherland.

This is where the flame of old Russian Orthodox Christianity is kept alive, a religious community in which the people, the food, the language, the music, even the cemeteries, are Russian.

Holy Trinity Monastery and Seminary is the largest Russian Orthodox seminary outside the Soviet Union. The theological center for the Russian Orthodox Church Abroad, it is a place dedicated to the faith of exiles.

About 100 seminarians and monks live and work here, serving a larger church of more than 60,000 people in about 100 communities worldwide. Begun with a $25 down payment made on a farm in 1930, Holy Trinity is supported today by an endowment built over the years and by donations from the faithful. Seminarians are usually sponsored by their parishes.

RELIGION

At the center is a cathedral with six golden domes. A smaller, Russian-style chapel sits on another hill, surrounded by the Russian crosses — three cross bars on each — of the sprawling cemetery.

There is an 800-acre farm, which produces most of the food consumed at Holy Trinity, and a seminary and facilities for the monastic community. The holiest relics of the church are preserved here, including what believers say is a piece of Christ's cross.

This is where priests and monks are trained to preserve and promote an ancient religion in the hope that one day it may return home. The government-approved church in the Soviet Union, they say, is not a real church.

The real church is in exile, says the Trinity church leaders, serving hundreds of small Russian communities around the world. Meanwhile, the monks and priests live on a spiritual island, suspended in time.

Orthodox Christians follow ancient rituals, customs and organization. They are led by patriarchs, and claim to be direct continuation of the church of Christ's apostles.

There are many orthodox churches in Eastern Europe, and several Russian Orthodox churches. The Russian Orthodox Church Abroad traces its roots to 1920, when the Russian patriarch Tikhon ordered bishops abroad to organize a separate church structure.

"The church will not change, it has never changed, you can see that here," explains Misha Rahr, a 23-year-old West German seminarian. "Here we serve God, not time."

Time is almost irrelevant here, especially for the monks, whose lives are measured more by the schedule of prayer and worship than by hours and minutes. The landscape, the simple dress of the bearded religious men, the Russian-style architecture, all recall another time and place.

Cars pass infrequently on the one-lane road that winds past the enclave, but on feast days the road is clogged by traditional processions, led by men bearing ornate crosses and banners.

At Jordanville, the day starts before sunrise, when a monk rings a bell outside each small room to awaken the community to prayer. The first waking act, for most, is the sign of the cross and a prayer in Russian, "Lord Jesus Christ, son of God, have mercy on me a sinner."

Dressing in silence, the monks make their way to the cathedral for the first services of the day. In the cathedral, each monk will methodically worship at the icons, paintings of saints and martyrs that fill the altar. They will return at day's end for evening prayer.

In between, they have time for solitary contemplations, teaching in the seminary and working on the farm or in the printing shop. Their work is devoted to the community; monks own nothing of their own.

Simple meals are eaten in a common room filled with religions murals. The silence is broken only by the spoons striking the white china bowls, and the voice of a monk who reads aloud stories about the lives of saints.

"You do leave the world behind when you come here, that's one of the purposes," says Brother Michael, a 27-year-old Californian training for a lifetime of prayer and service to the church. Like many young monks and seminarians, he is the son of Orthodox Russians who left the Soviet Union to seek religious freedom.

"One of the advantages of being apart from what goes on outside every day is that you see the world more clearly," Brother Michael continues. "You see where it's heading, and where it's heading is not very good."

The signs of the times, as marked by the church, point to a bleak future. Most of the church's theologians believe they are seeing the signs of Armageddon, the end of the world, as prophesied in the Bible.

In Jordanville, the community is most interested in a scholar's recent suggestion that the nuclear accident at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union confirms the prophecy. The orthodox scholars here seem to be waiting for the scenario described in the Bible, including the rise of an Antichrist and a war marking the final days.

"The word Chernobyl has a lot of prophetic meaning," says Father Vincent, who helps administer the Jordanville community. "One prophecy says, 'There will come a star down, and it's called Chernobyl.' It says it will spoil the water and people will die. It seems to describe what has actually happened."

Events like Chernobyl, and the struggle over the Russian Orthodox Church itself, are the evidence cited by the orthodox as they suggest the "end times" are approaching. Church literature concludes, "The Church discerns that preparations are being made for the coming of the Antichrist."

'Uneasy truce' reached between disciplines

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — Does reasoning or a change of heart bring faith?

The question underlay discussions between those emphasizing Christian evangelism and those stressing Christian education at a consultation here sponsored by the National Council of Churches.

Leaders said a "kind of uneasy truce" was reached between the disciplines.

The Rev. Garland Knott of Methodist College, Fayetteville, N.C., said in a background paper that evangelists generally have rejected the gradual education process as a "denial of urgency for change in the human condition."

On the other hand, he said, religious educators say reason "is just as much a gift of God" and should be used. He said educators tend to think evangelists reduce "faith to assent grounded purely in emotionalism."

The Rev. Arthur O. Van Eck, head of the NCC's unit on education for Christian life and mission, said participants arrived with questions but left "with trust and an openness to God's leading into the future."

Shroud of Turin to be tested for its origin

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Several University of Arizona scientists are among those chosen to test a tiny bit of the Shroud of Turin to determine whether it comes from the time of Jesus.

Many believe the cloth, bearing puzzling front and back negative images of a crucified man, was the one that wrapped Jesus' body after his crucifixion. But its age has not been established.

Two other U.S. institutions, the Brookhaven National Laboratory on Long Island, N.Y., and the University of Rochester, N.Y., also are among those in this country, England, France and Switzerland tapped for the project.

Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero of Turin, Italy, has announced tentative plans to allow about two square inches of the 14-foot cloth to be divided among seven labs in the world for carbon-14 dating for its age.

University of Arizona geochemist Paul Damon and atomic physicist Douglas Donahue say their lab was chosen because it is among the few capable of carbon dating tests on very small bits of material.

He was elected pastor emeritus of the Dallas church at the time of his retirement in 1984.

Church offers special class

A Special Needs Sunday School Class is being held at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave.

The non-denominational class is designed to minister to the needs of handicapped children in Midland. Parents and teachers of handicapped children are leading the class.

For more information call the church, 694-7701.

Mt. Carmel is at Pease

Mt. Carmel Baptist Church will be holding services Sunday at Pease Elementary, corner of Magnolia and N. Benton, instead of the old Park Center YMCA.

Sunday School begins at 9:30 a.m. and worship services are over at 1 p.m.

The church's pastor, the Rev. John Mitchell, has announced the new location effective until further notice.

Bazaar benefits programs

"Heavenly Holidays: A Christmas Bazaar," sponsored by St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, is being held today from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. in the church's parish hall, 2900 Princeton Ave.

The gifts are almost "heavenly" and the food and entertainment should rank almost as high, according to Sue Belford, a member of the church.

In addition to the display and sale of crafts by over 20 artisans, the bazaar will feature a silent auction, demonstrations, and the sale of baked goods, donated items and church cookbooks. Door prizes will be given.

The demonstration schedule is as follows: 10:30 a.m., Making Wreaths and Arrangement; 11:30 a.m., How to Correctly Decorate a Tree; 12:30 p.m., Festive Foods; 1:30 p.m., Ceramics Fun and Easy; 2:30 p.m., Gift Basket Basics and Wrapping Tips; and 3:30 p.m., Stenciling, A Personal Touch.

Admission is $1 per person. Children under 12 are admitted at no charge.

Proceeds will go to support the church's outreach programs, including Casa de Amigos, Dress A Live Doll, Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Meals on Wheels, campus ministries at Texas Tech and West Texas State University, St. Jude's Hospital, St. Francis Boys Home and the Hispanic Ministry of the Episcopal Church.

Sandi Patti stages concert

Sandi Patti & First Call will present a contemporary gospel concert 7:30 p.m. Dec. 9 at Chaparral Center.

The 30-year-old singer has garnered two Grammy Awards, 13 Gospel Music Dove Awards and her first Gold Record for "More Than Wonderful." Her current recording, "Morning Like This," is predicted to reach platinum within the year.

When ABC television used her recording of "The Star Spangled Banner" for the Liberty Weekend finale, the result was unpredictable and overwhelming. Americans across the country telephoned to discover the identity of "the torch singer."

First Call will be featured in the concert as back-up vocalists while Dick Tunney will assist with keyboards. Tunney traveled as music director for The Imperials prior to joining Miss Patti's tour.

The Midland area Chick-fil-A Restaurants are co-sponsoring this concert with Spring House Associates. The national restaurant chain will co-sponsor 10 other Sandi Patti concerts around the country this year.

Reserved seats are $8.50, $10.50 and $11.50. Tickets are available in Midland at Sonshine Corner and Lighthouse. For more information, call Sonshine Corner, 697-4481.

Bob Hope donates $1 million to expansion of hospital

Hope

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Bob Hope donated $1 million to help in a $50 million expansion project at the entertainment industry's Motion Picture Country Home and Hospital in Woodland Hills.

Ground-breaking for an 81-bed nursing facility was planned for Dec. 11 with Hope officiating as master of ceremonies, said Robert Blumofe, co-chairman of the fund-raising campaign for the hospital.

Hope's donation brings the amount raised so far to $23 million, Blumofe said Thursday.

When the expansion is complete, the complex will have 260 beds, a lodge with capacity increased from 70 to 357, and 184 cottage-type apartments, Blumofe said.

Eastwood

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Mayor Clint Eastwood has traded in his .44-caliber Magnum for a pen, opening fire on his political foes in the first of a series of occasional columns he intends to write for his town's weekly newspaper.

Eastwood's first column, published in the Pine Cone last week, was true to Hollywood form, with sharp criticism for his detractors and a staunch defense of several of his controversial decisions.

Councilman James Wright, for example, "has made no move whatsoever to be a team player in the time I've known him," the actor-mayor wrote.

Undaunted, Wright responded that the mayor's column shows "he doesn't know how to handle criticism."

"I think he's so eager to please that criticism stings him," said Pine Cone Managing Editor Mac McDonald of his newest columnist.

In his popular series of "Dirty Harry" movies, Eastwood plays a policeman who carries a .44 Magnum gun.

HURGADA, Egypt (AP) — Britain's Princess Diana, ending a royal tour with her husband Prince Charles, disembarked from the royal yacht Britannia on Friday and flew home from this Red Sea port.

The Prince and Princess of Wales had completed their nine-day Arab tour on Wednesday and left the Saudi port of Jidda aboard the Britannia. The yacht stopped briefly off Hurgada, 330 miles southeast of Cairo, for Diana to get off.

A 6-year-old Egyptian girl named Sharia Ibrahim presented a bouquet of orange and blue bird-of-paradise flowers to Diana during the three-minute welcoming ceremony.

Charles remained aboard the yacht and was to sail through the Suez Canal to the Mediterranean Sea and Cyprus, where he will visit a British military base.

PEKING (AP) — French designer Yves St. Laurent is helping the Chinese garment industry through its first hesitant steps into the international fashion market.

"The Chinese garment industry cannot truly enter world markets today without two necessary pillars: design and technology," said Pierre Berge, president of St. Laurent's company YSL, who is visiting Peking this week.

Berge will serve as chief management adviser while St. Laurent is chief design adviser to the Chinese. No payments will be made to or by YSL, Berge said.

Chinese models strutted through a fashion show Friday for visiting YSL executives and other enthusiastic viewers. To the tune of Michael Jackson's "Thriller," the models showed off summer shorts with simple blouses, stylishly modified Mao hats and lots of blue jeans.

Fashion was reviled as decadent during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, but textiles are now a crucial industry for China.

Haley

HENNING, Tenn. (AP) — The old house where author Alex Haley first heard the stories that trned into the best seller "Roots" has been opened as Tennessee's first museum focusing on black heritage.

"I feel blessed to be here," said Haley, who spoke at the formal opening Thursday along with Gov. Lamar Alexander.

"The blessing is in great part because of the many of you being here to share it with me," Haley told about 2,000 people standing in front of the wood-frame house that was once the home of his grandparents, Cynthia and Will Palmer.

Alexander told the crowd that Henning has become "a classroom for every American family to study their roots.'

The stories Haley heard from his grandparents and aunts in Henning inspired him to begin the search for his ancestral history in Africa and formed the foundation for his Pulitzer Prize-winning book, he said.

The old house, built in 1919, was renovated by the Tennessee Department of Conservation at a cost of $182,000. It is filled with 1930s-style furnishings and portraits of Haley's relatives.

Ford, grandson of the auto pioneer, is retired chairman of the Ford Motor Co., the post he held when he fired Iacocca as president in a celebrated corporate battle. Iacocca went on to lead Chrysler Corp. away from the brink of bankruptcy.

The Iaccocas bought the east side suburban home near the Fords in June but have decided to stay in the northern suburbs, at the home Iacocca shared for many years with his late wife, Mary, said Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven.

PET NET links lost animals with owners

By MICHAEL QUINTANILLA

DALLAS (AP) — While repairing a backyard fence recently, Rick Denzer turned his back on Stroker, his 85-pound Rottweiler dog. Stroker wandered off and became a pet-at-large in Denzer's Swiss Avenue neighborhood.

For the next six days, Denzer, 29, spent cold and rainy evenings after work — until midnight and later — searching for his best friend, driving up and down streets, walking through alleys, calling out the dog's name.

He visited all the area dog pounds. He called the city's Animal Control Department and prayed Stroker had not been picked up by the department's dead animal service. He hammered lost pet signs onto utility poles. He even considered contacting the police in case the canine had been kidnapped.

Then, Denzer called PET NET, a free lost-and-found computerized service operated by the Dallas Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Denzer and Stroker were happily reunited after someone found Stroker and brought the dog to the SPCA's headquarters.

The pet was matched with the description Denzer had given the service, the only county-wide pet finding network in the United States and one that is being copied across the country.

"I'm pretty ecstatic. I rushed to the SPCA when they called me about the match and sure enough it was Stroker. He was just as excited to see me as I was to see him. I never dreamed I could become so attached to one animal. There's a real bond between us."

Denzer and other happily reunited pet owners are convinced their pets would still be lost if PET NET had not come to the rescue.

Scott Harper, 16, was reunited recently with Maverick, a golden Labrador retriever who ran away when Harper's brother, David, 17, was cleaning the dog's cage. Scott said, "I didn't think we would find him. But I'm happy we did. It made me feel good."

Maverick was lost about six weeks before someone took the dog to the SPCA where a PET NET computer search matched the pet to his owner. Harper's stepmother, Kim, had called the SPCA to report the lost dog.

Since the PET NET operation began May 15, about 1,200 cases of lost pets have been entered into the system, and between 90 and 100 matches have been made, says Joy Ramsier, the SPCA's shelter operations manager.

"At present — and we're still very new at this — we have a 20 percent success rate with the matches we've made. Without this type of system we would average one to five percent," Ms. Ramsier says. "And we're getting the calls, anywhere from 25 to 30 calls a day since we began. People are so excited — they can't believe there's this type of service available," she says.

Nearly 5,000 animals have been brought to the SPCA and the two city-operated animal shelters in the same period. Most of the animals have found new homes through the SPCA's adoption program which has an 80 percent success rate.

A person can report a lost pet by calling 651-WAGS. A list of questions will be asked beginning with the date and the zip code where the pet was lost, species, breed, sex, color, basic size and name. Does the animal have drooping or cropped ears? A long, short or bushy tail? Is the pet's coat smooth or curly? The information stays in the PET NET computer for 60 days.

When a stray animal is brought to the center, the animal is tagged and a description is entered into PET NET. In a matter of seconds, the computer can search its records, matching lost pet calls with pets that have been found and are impounded at the SPCA or other shelters. Strays at the SPCA are held for five days and then put up for adoption for a nominal fee.

Ms. Ramsier presented a seminar on PET NET to the American Humane Association's annual conference held in Denver last month. SPCA managers from all over the country have sought information about the Dallas system, she said.

The idea for PET NET came two years ago from a private citizen and friend of the SPCA, Ms. Ramsier says. Later, the idea was researched and $150,000 was raised with a matching grant given to the project from The Meadows Foundation.

"Losing a pet is an awful experience. Some owners become very upset and start crying, some are frantic, some are angry that this has happened.

Sheriff's deputy likes 'intimate instrument'

By FRANCINE PARKER

WACO (AP) — As McLennan County sheriff's deputy, he plays the role of social worker, lawyer, marriage counselor and referee.

But in his leisure time, Johnny Montemayor enjoys the simple life — jogging, reading historical novels, listening to opera and playing the classical guitar.

"The classical guitar is such a personal, intimate instrument. It sort of hypnotizes people," Montemayor said.

A soft-spoken man, Montemayor speaks with eloquence about his guitar.

"I'm shy, and that's one reason why I love the guitar. I can become one with the guitar. You can feel the curvatures. You can smell the wood. Then your emotions take over, and you have a super feeling, a super experience," he says.

A native of Waco, Montemayor uses his quick smile, his quiet confidence and easygoing attitude on the streets and the stage.

Though he has never been in a shoot-out in his nine years in law enforcement, Montemayor says, "You just never know what's going to heppen. Tomorrow, I may be killed or kill somebody else."

Montemayor's guitar is a way to escape the stress of being a sheriff's deputy.

"It helps me to have a better outlook on life and my work," he says.

Montemayor, who has been playing the classical guitar for 16 years, first became interested in the instrument when he was 10.

His family belonged to a record club and owned a lot of classical records.

"I was listening to Andres Segovia. He was playing a Bach recital. I became fascinated, and that's when I decided that is what I wanted to do when I grew up," Montemayor says.

Years later, his sister Lydia, gave him his first classical guitar as a birthday present when he was a sophomore at Waco High School.

After listening to Waco police officers give a presentation at school, Montemayor chose law enforcement as his career.

"When I was in high school, Vietnam was starting to wind down. Shows like 'Adam 12' and 'Dragnet' were trying to recapture the respect that the police had lost," Montemayor says, and the series portrayed "cops as humans and not machines."

In 1974, the Waco Police Department accepted him into its cadet program. He graduated from the Waco Police Academy in 1976 and received a degree in law enforcement from McLennan Community College the same year.

Recalling his days as a rookie police officer, Montemayor says he has changed since then.

"As a rookie officer, the John Wayne syndrome set in," he says.

For example, after unsuccessfully trying to talk to people involved in a domestic disturbance, a rookie might want to immediately "throw them into jail," Montemayor says.

As a more experienced officer, Montemayor says he has overcome such tendencies.

"But just because I'm laid back, I don't roll over and play dead," he says. "You treat people the way you want to be treated — be firm, be courteous but take charge."

Montemayor quit his job at the police department in 1978, but returned to law enforcement in 1981 as a sheriff's deputy.

Never believing he could become a professional classical guitarist, Montemayor continued to play, but only as a hobby until 1981.

That's when he began studying classical guitar with Robert Allen, a former professional classical guitarist.

"Allen was such a big influence on me, as far as music," Montemayor says. After studying with Allen for two years, Montemayor decided to attend MCC, where he earned an associate degree in music performance.

Montemayor is attending MCC and Temple Junior College.

'Breakthrough' in search leads to bruised egos

PLAINVIEW (AP) — Despite the blood, sweat and politics of day-to-day police work, the profession does have its lighter moments.

Like the "breakthrough" a city officer achieved the time he was helping other officers execute a search warrant.

Crime Prevention Officer Gary Gould said he had gone into the attic of the residence and found some marijuana plants growing under a light system.

As he stepped out on a two-by-four for a closer look, the board slipped — sending Gould crashing through the sheet-rock ceiling and onto sheriff's Capt. Mansel Gilmer in the hallway below.

The only reported injury was a bruised ego.

Sometimes it's the bad guys who produce the laughter.

Detective Lt. Mike Carroll tells about the time a burglar was caught red-handed inside a local tire firm. He told police he had been walking down the street when two guys in a car stopped, beat him up and threw him through the store window.

Asked why he was carrying a tire when police arrived, the suspect said he had merely picked it up to use against his adversaries. It turned out to be his third burglary arrest.

Carroll also recalls a young burglary defendant who testified that the reason his footprints were found inside the building was because police had taken his shoes and used them to leave tracks on a dusty floor.

Shultz denies he asked Reagan to fire admiral

OTTAWA (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that he took part in two "full-scale discussions" last winter on the secret U.S. policy toward Iran, but continued to distance himself from involvement in the affair.

He also denied a report in Friday's Los Angeles Times that he asked President Reagan to fire Adm. John Poindexter, the White House national security adviser and one of the chief architects of the arms sale to Iran.

"That story is not true," Shultz told reporters aboard his airplane enroute from Washington to Canada where he held talks with External Affairs Minister Joe Clark.

Shultz was in the Canadian capital to discuss trade disputes and other bilateral issues, but the continuing controversy over the wisdom of Reagan's Iranian policies followed the secretary northward.

Shultz has expressed opposition to the plan to send military equipment to Iran and has said previously that he had only "fragmentary knowledge" of the operation. Giving a bit more detail Friday, he said, "There were discussions and I participated in two of them that were full-scale discussions."

Those meetings were on Dec. 6, 1985, and last Jan. 7, said his spokesman, Charles E. Redman. On Jan. 17, Reagan signed an order permitting the military equipment sales to Iran.

At another news conference, at the end of his meetings with Canadian officials, Shultz again refused to give any details of what was discussed at the meetings he attended.

Asked specifically whether he was present when a determination to send arms to Iran was made, Shultz declined to answer.

Clark, seated beside Shultz at the news conference, said the Iranian issue did not come up at the meetings.

Critics of the arms sale have said it will disturb allied nations, like Canada, that have joined in an arms embargo against Iran.

Questions about Shultz' involvement were raised Thursday when former national security adviser Robert McFarlane said the secretary of state "repeatedly" was informed about the operation.

Shultz would not respond directly to McFarlane's assertions, nor did he give any indication of what he said in the two meetings he said he attended.

Shultz did, however, suggest that lack of State Department knowledge of the affair had a mixed effect on the policy.

"If a great many people are involved, it's not possible to carry it out in a secure way," he said. On the other hand, he added, there were fewer people involved "to give you the talent in the government who know about the subject."

To underscore what he said was lack of State Department involvement, Shultz said he and his aides were taking no active part in the current, belated effort by the administration to inform Congress about the arms shipments.

Shultz would not get into whether he threatened to resign unless the arms sales were halted. "If there is to be any discussion of a subject like that, it will be between me and the president," he said.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Mexico peso drops sharply

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The peso dropped sharply against the dollar this week at bank exchange houses, falling six units on Thursday alone.

At the Mexico City airport banks were buying dollars for 853 pesos apiece, compared with 838 pesos a week earlier, and were selling dollars for 860 pesos each, compared to 843 pesos a week earlier.

A month ago the banks were buying dollars for 802 pesos and selling them for 807 pesos, while a year ago the banks were offering 494 pesos per dollar and selling the U.S. currency at 499 pesos each.

U.N. paid $100 million

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States on Friday gave the financially hard-pressed United Nations $100 million, less than half what Washington owes in dues but enough to enable the world body to cover costs to the end of the year.

The payment was made to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar by U.S. delegates Herbert Okun and Joseph Reed, assistants to Ambassador Vernon Walters.

As things now stand, the United Nations will end the year with $10 million in cash, enough for only one week's operations, said U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani.

Unpaid dues totaled $242.4 million on Jan. 1, 1986, he said, while the figure was $462.7 million in September, before the U.S. payment was made.

The U.S. Congress decided this year to pay just $100 million, rather than the $210 million it was assessed, citing waste and an atmosphere of hostility to the United States.

Army ends maneuvers

DUEBENDORF, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss army ended its largest peacetime maneuvers Friday with a two-hour parade of 12,000 soldiers and 2,500 tanks, personnel carriers and other vehicles.

The 17-day-long maneuvers in northeastern Switzerland involved about 40,000 soldiers and members of the Civil Defense Corps in a test of combat readiness and coordination between army and civilian authorities.

Reports in the Swiss press said a misunderstanding caused a brief protest by the Soviet military attache, Col. Yuri Denissov, who was among numerous foreign observers.

A Swiss officer briefed the observers in German on a "raschen attacke von Rot," or "rash attack by Red," referring to the Red team in the maneuvers, the reports said. Denissov thought the officer said, "Russian attack," and protested but later accepted that he had misunderstood, the reports said.

Neutral Switzerland has a reserve army of about 620,000 soldiers that could be mobilized within 48 hours, but efforts are being made to shorten this period.

Truck overturns, killing 30

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A truck overturned Friday in western India, killing 30 people and injuring 42 others, the United News of India reported. It said eight children were among the dead.

The truck was carrying agricultural laborers and their families to the coastal city of Goa when it overturned about 30 miles from the town of Belgaum northeast of Goa, the news agency said.

Lawmakers ask Reagan to back welfare legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressmen asked President Reagan on Friday to back legislation allowing New York City to spend federal welfare money on permanent housing for the homeless rather than on costly temporary shelters.

Reagan, at his news conference Wednesday night, expressed astonishment at a report that the city was spending $37,000 a year to house a family in a welfare hotel.

"I wonder why somebody doesn't build them a house for $37,000," the president said.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan and Rep. Charles E. Schumer, both New York Democrats, replied in a letter: "The question is good, Mr. President, but the answer is simple. Current law makes such a wise policy illegal."

Cities that receive money under a the federal emergency assistance program may only spend that money on temporary shelters. Moynihan and Schumer said they planned to reintroduce legislation when Congress convenes next year that would permit cities to spend the housing portion of their emergency assistance to construct or rehabilitate permanent housing for the homeless.

"We hope your expression of concern Wednesday night will be translated into concrete support by your administration for our bill," the two wrote.

White House spokesman Rusty Brashear said the president had not yet seen the letter. Asked if Reaga realized why the money could not be spent on permanent housing, Brashear said: "I think the president understands it very well. He is merely saying that it's just an odd way of having to do business."

The letter came one day after New York Mayor Edward I. Koch charged that it was "Reagan's policy that put the city into such dire straits."

"Why, then, doesn't local government build a house for the family cited by the president?" Koch asked. "Because, Mr. President, you've had too much success at stripping us of the resources that would permit us to do so."

Koch conceded that the city pays $16,315 to $36,500 a year to shelter the average homeless family in a hotel. That works out to an average of $60.45 a night, or $15.11 a person.

Democrats celebrate retaking Senate control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic Party leaders and presidential aspirants opened three days of meetings Friday able to celebrate their return to power in the Senate and relishing the prospect that President Reagan's popularity is being severely tested by the shipment of arms to Iran.

"It will take a lot of gloss off Reagan," said Bill Emerson, a California lawyer who soon will move to Colorado to manage Sen. Gary Hart's presidential campaign.

Hart, who gave up his Senate seat to concentrate on another bid for the presidency, was one of several potential candidates who planned to mingle with the 362 members of the Democratic National Committee — the largest group of delegates at the party's 1988 nominating convention.

Among the presidential aspirants planning to appear at today's meeting were the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona and Sen. Joseph Biden Jr. of Delaware.

For six years, the Democrats have suffered repeated batterings by Reagan. Twice he overwhelmed Democratic candidates in presidential elections, the first time carrying the Republicans to a majority in the Senate.

The annual meetings of the Democratic National Committee during that period were often gloomy affairs characterized by long debates about the party's image.

But on Nov. 4, despite heavy campaigning by the president, the Democrats regained control of the Senate. That election victory was soon followed by disclosures of secret arms shipments to Iran that seemed to contradict the president's policy of not dealing with governments that support terrorism.

Rep. Jim Wright, the Texas Democrat considered almost a sure bet to become speaker of the House in January, emerged from a closed-door briefing by CIA Director William Casey and said, "I don't think there is any question that the law has been broken."

At one of series of receptions held for DNC members from various regions of the country, Hart said, "Americans are overwhelmingly rejecting the shifting alibi for sending weapons to Iran in exchange for hostages."

Around the time of each of three weapons shipments to Iran, Moslem extremists released one of the Americans they were holding. However, Reagan has denied that the shipments were made in exchange for their release.

Speculating on the political impact of the Iran disclosures, Emerson said they could damage the president's standing with the people, but that the one who might suffer the most was Vice President George Bush, the front runner for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Hart called the recapture of Senate control "a tremendous victory by any definition. No one thought we'd get 55 seats."

Entering the 1986 elections, the Republicans controlled the Senate by a margin of 53 to 47. In January, when the 100th Congress convenes, the Democrats will have a 55-45 majority in the Senate.

Among the items on the agenda for the Democrats when the full DNC meets on Sunday is approval of the preliminary allocation of delegates to the 1988 convention.

This biggest of all Democratic conventions will have 4,157 delegate votes. Included in that total will be 641 party and elected officials who will be technically unpledged.

Doctor sentenced in fraud case

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A judge Friday ordered a psychiatrist to treat all his Medicaid patients free-of-charge for six months as part of his sentence for Medicaid fraud.

Westchester County Court Judge Nicholas Colabella also sentenced Martin Wayne, 51, of Briarcliff Manor, to five years probation, 104 hours of community service at the White Plains Veterans Outreach Program plus another 150 hours of community service to be determined.

According to Edward Kuriansky, the deputy attorney general for Medicaid Fraud Control, the theft occurred between Jan. 1, 1983 and Jan. 31, 1986, by falsely billing Medicaid for many more psychotherapy sessions than he had actually provided.

Customs Service puts freeze on hiring since drug testing overruled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service said Friday it is instituting a hiring freeze for 3,000 positions involving narcotics interdiction because a federal judge overturned the agency's employee drug-testing program.

Customs Commissioner William von Raab said in a statement filed in U.S. District Court in New Orleans that the hiring, part of the Reagan administration's and Congress' stepped-up war on drugs, "cannot go forward at this time without drug screening."

He said the agency wants to test incoming agents in sensitive positions for drug use to protect the integrity of the Customs Service's drug interdiction efforts.

Von Raab's decision came as the Justice Department announced it was appealing a Nov. 12 decision by U.S. District Judge Robert F. Collins declaring that the agency's drug testing program was unconstitutional.

Robert Tobias, president of the National Treasury Employees Union, which filed the lawsuit leading to the court ruling, said von Raab's decision to institute a hiring freeze was "outrageous."

Von Raab is "jeopardizing the nation by attempting to blackmail the court by requiring Customs employees to surrender their constitutional rights as ransom," said Tobias.

"Von Raab agrees that there is not now nor has there ever been a drug problem among Customs workers," said Tobias, whose union represents 120,000 federal employees, including thousands at the Customs Service.

Von Raab told the court said that for years, the Customs Service's "No. 1 priority has been to intercept illegal narcotics entering this country.

"It is clearly illogical to expect 'drug users' to conscientiously and effectively carry out Customs'" efforts against the importation of narcotics," he added. "Those who have used drugs will not carry out our... mission."

Collins said the program, launched Aug. 11, violated constitutional protections against unreasonable search and seizure.

The Justice Department is seeking a stay of the court order pending the appeal, but no stay has been issued. The appeal is being made to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

The Customs Service has been planning to fill 1,000 new positions recently created by Congress to increae drug enforcement efforts.

Tobias said von Raab "is going straight from breaking the laws of the Constitution to breaking the laws of Congress."

An additional 1,450 currently vacant positions require drug screening, said von Raab, and several hundred additional vacancies are expected in positions over the next few months due to normal attrition.

In his statement filed with the court, von Raab said all previously scheduled drug testing has been stopped. At the time Collins issued an injunction against the drug testing program, "we stopped recruitment action on over 90 candidates who were about to be scheduled for drug screening," von Raab added.

The Customs program is viewed in the Reagan administration as a test case for the concept of drug testing generally for federal employees.

Wyoming town's residents vote to keep gallows for tourists to see

DOUGLAS, Wyo. (AP) — Western justice, the sort delivered with a tight noose and a short drop, went on trial Friday as residents decided that a gallows built for Douglas' centennial should remain on display as a tourist attraction.

Built from rough-hewn logs as part of the central Wyoming city's celebration earlier this year, the gallows divided residents, so the local newspaper decided to conduct a referendum.

The tally completed Friday evening by the weekly Douglas Budget showed that 491 people favored leaving the structure in the middle of Douglas' business district, with 138 in favor of its removal.

"I'm tickled," said Peter Mike Curtin, a leader of the Wild Bunch, a group of Douglas businessmen who built the gallows. "We had a lot of good support..."

But Curtin's jubilation may be short-lived. Merwin Moore, Casper District engineer for the Wyoming Highway Department, said his department may seek a court order calling for the removal of the gallows, which is on a highway right-of-way.

Moore said the structure is too great a risk for the state because it is not covered by liability insurance. He said the sponsors would be asked to move the gallows, and if they did not, it would be up to Wyoming's attorney general to get a court order.

Proponents had argued that the structure would bring badly needed tourist dollars to Douglas, while opponents questioned the propriety of a gallows standing in the middle of the business district.

The city also was worried about insurance. "It will not remain up uncovered," vowed Mayor Dick George before the ballots were counted. "I will not leave that out there and have the town unprotected from a liability suit."

Teacher resigns in protest when coach kisses pig at fund-raiser

ORANGE PARK, Fla. (AP) — Thousands of students screamed their approval but a teacher resigned in protest Friday when a high school football coach took center stage at a fund-raiser and kissed a pink piglet square on the snout.

The teacher, an animal-rights activists, said the public kiss was too stressful for the pig.

The kiss from Orange Park High coach Sam Ward culminated a contest to help raise money to send 16 cheerleaders to Nashville, Tenn., next month for a national competition. Students paid a penny per vote to select a faculty member to kiss the pig. The voting raised about $500.

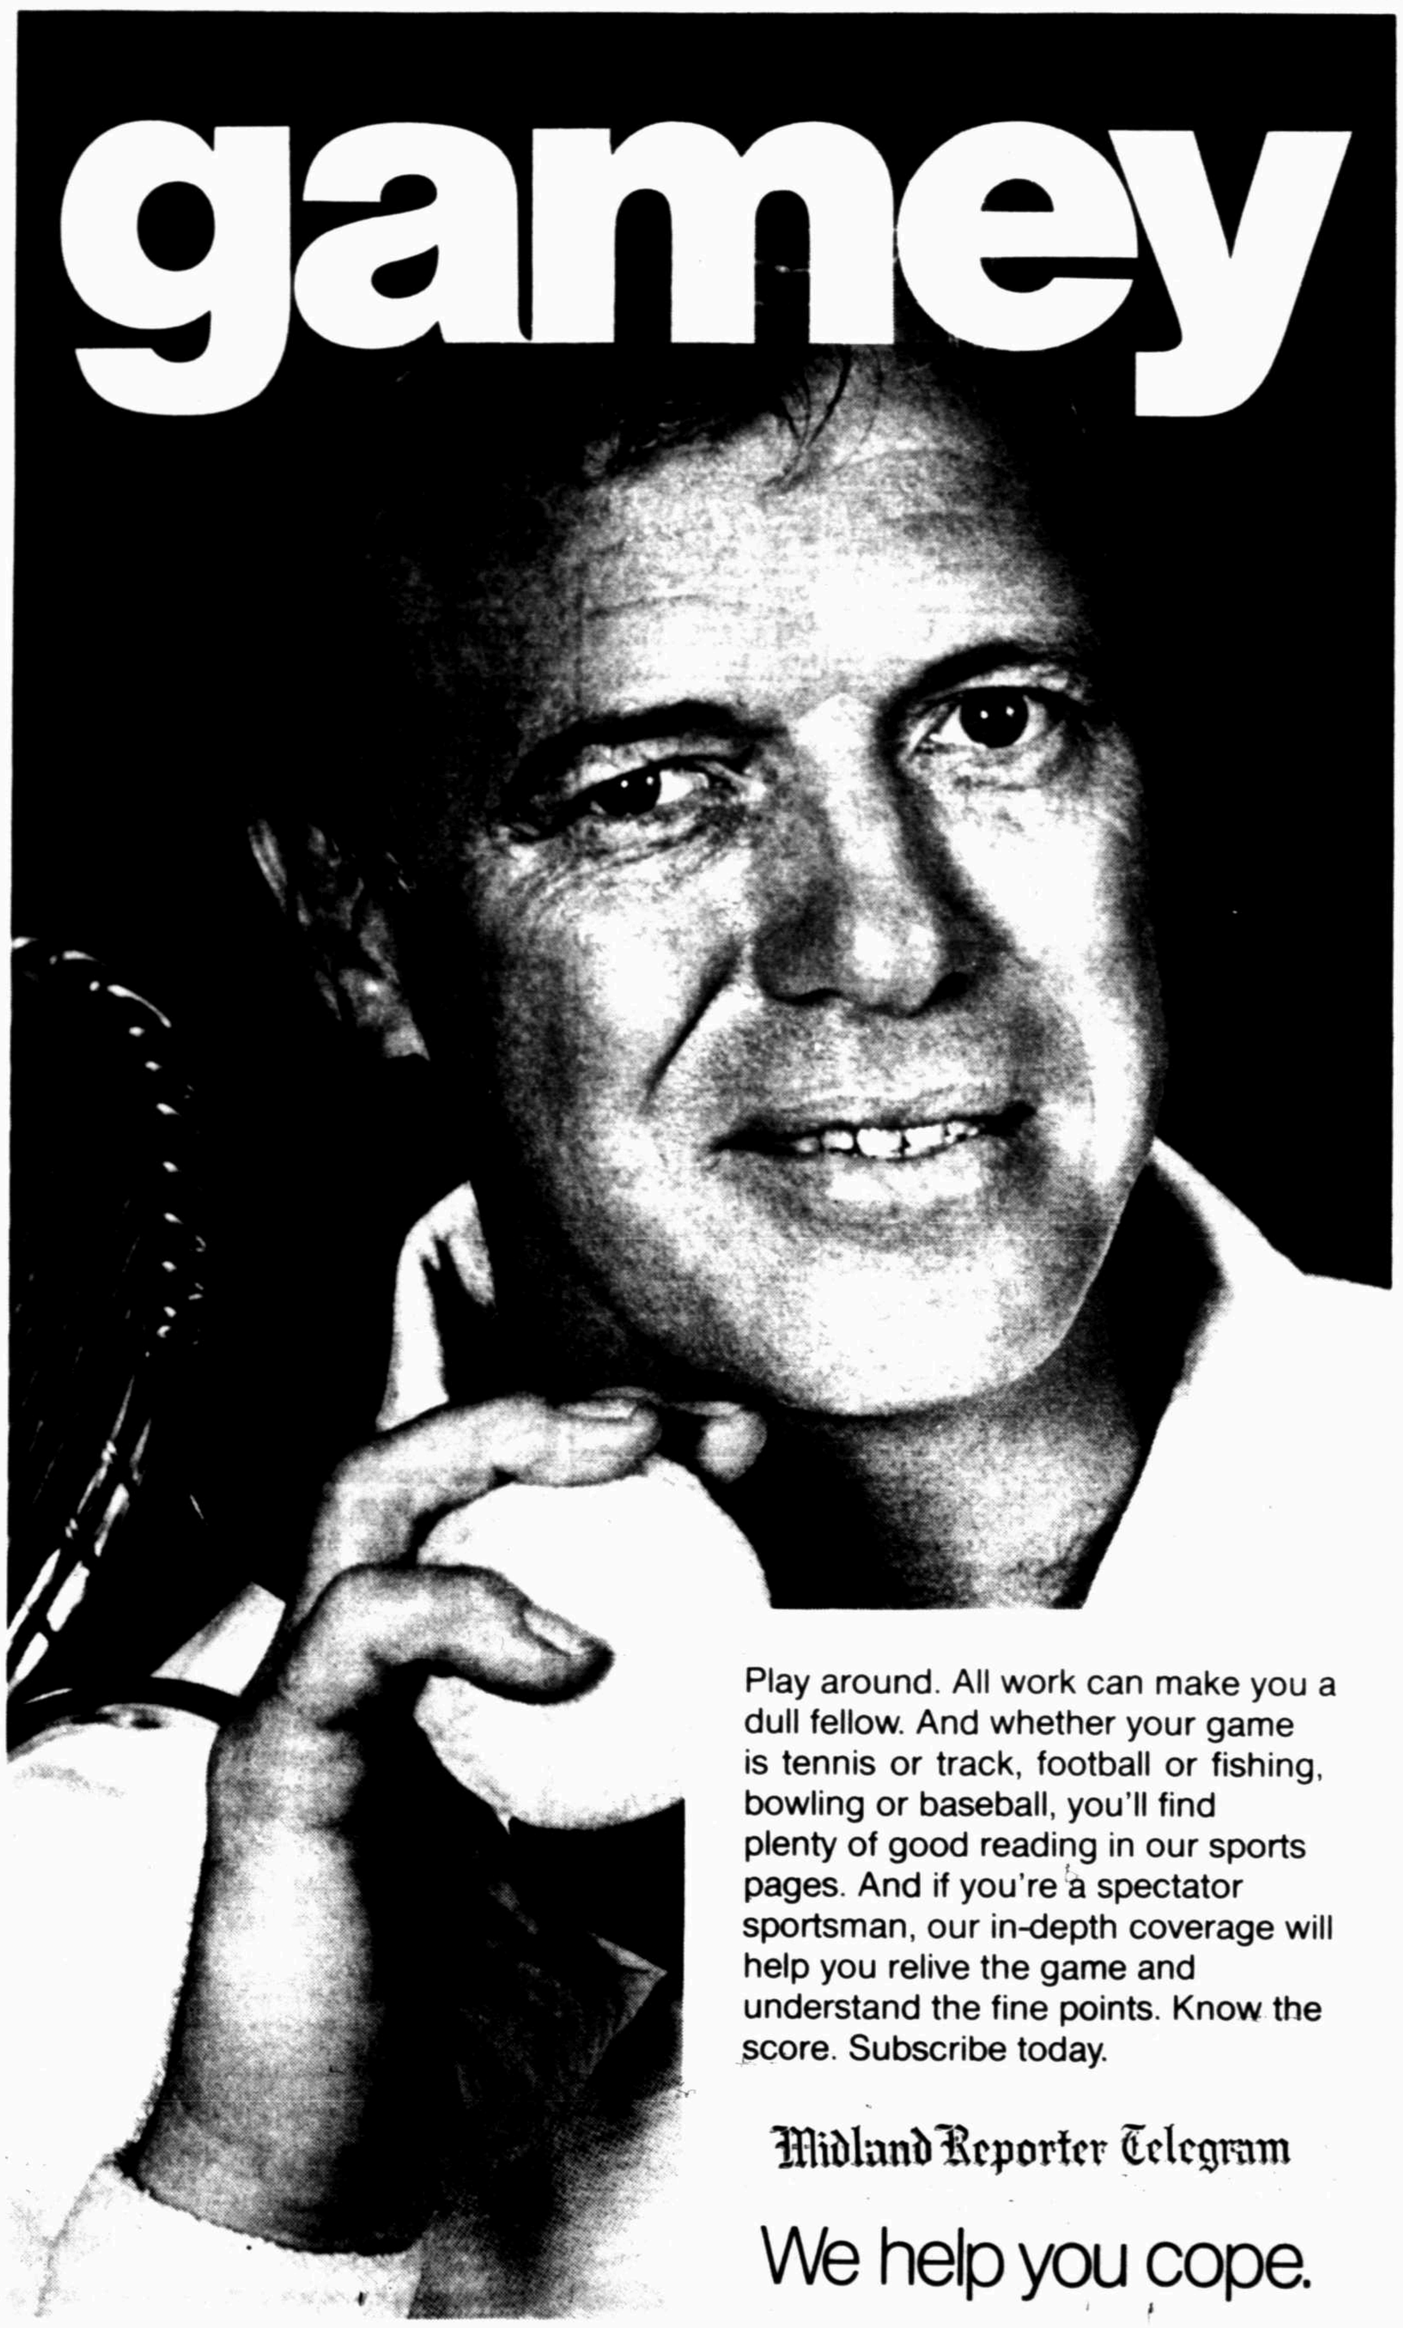

Latin teacher Cheryl Hendry quit, as she had vowed to do, following the football-field rally for 3,000 students. But Principal James Booth refused to accept the resignation and Ms. Hendry said she would stay for the rest of the school year.

Ms. Hendry said she thought the pig-kissing itself was well handled and calm, but said it still violated her beliefs.

"My original concern was that the excitement of so much noise and so much movement would alarm the animal. I wouldn't take a puppy or a kitten out in front of 3,000 screaming teen-agers."

After the contest was announced in late October, Ms. Hendry tried to persuade school officials to try other fund-raising methods and even offered to pay for the trip herself, saying she would otherwise quit.

"I didn't think this was a good image for the school to project to teach teen-agers to use animals for fund-raising when there were other alternatives," she said.
