

Tyler man, 63, captures armed robbery suspect

Age no barrier—even the fugitive 'got the message'

TYLER, Texas (AP) — A 63-year-old Tyler man has demonstrated that age is no barrier when it comes to rounding up outlaws.

T.J. Mayo, who lives alone with his invalid wife, was credited with Wednesday's capture of an armed robbery suspect who had eluded state and local police officers, even after wrecking a car.

Mayo, toting a .22-caliber rifle, roused the fugitive from his hiding place under Mayo's house while dozens of officers were searching for the man several blocks away.

Pointing the rifle at the man, Mayo called to his wife to contact police and minutes later, a manhunt that began 30 miles away in Kilgore had come to an end.

Arrested and charged with the armed robbery of George's Jewelry in Kilgore was Alvin Ray Menefee, 25, of Tyler. He was arraigned by Kilgore Justice of the Peace Nick Dennis, who set bond at $50,000, and was jailed.

Kilgore police chief Johnny Bradley said 88 assorted unmounted diamonds ranging in size from five points to a full carat were recovered from a crawl space beneath Mayo's home shortly after Menefee was captured. He also lauded Mayo's efforts.

"What Mr. Mayo did — taking that old rifle and going out looking for the suspect — took courage. Most people would have stayed inside and not gotten involved. Mr. Mayo did one swell piece of work and Tyler can be proud of him."

Mayo said he had no idea "what the fuss was about" until he saw a Texas Highway Patrol car near his house and asked the officer inside what was happening.

"He told me they were looking for a robbery suspect just up the street ... and he was believed (to be) in the area," Mayo said.

Mayo said he went in the house, sat down and thought about where a man might hide near his home, then went out to see if he was right.

"I got this rifle and cleaned it, then I loaded it and went outside. I walked around the side of the house and stooped down to look underneath. Sure enough, there he was," Mayo said.

Mayo said he ran to the front of his house "to get behind the fellow" and "fired the rifle once into the ground to make sure it would work." Mayo then dropped to the ground and shoved the rifle tip beneath the house.

"I told him not to move and ordered him to back out from underneath the house slowly. He said he couldn't because he was hurt — shot and dying, he said. I told him if he didn't do what I said he'd be shot worse than he'd ever been."

"He got the message," Mayo said. "If he had tried something, I would have shot him because I was determined to give him over to the law," Mayo said.

Reagan seeks further cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just one week after proposing the deepest budget cuts in U.S. history, President Reagan is looking for an additional $3 billion to $6 billion in savings after discovering that government spending is rising faster than he thought.

"I just don't know where they're going to find more (savings)," an administration spokesman said Wednesday after Reagan ordered his economic aides to do better than the $41.4 billion in 1982 budget cuts he proposed in a Feb. 18 address to Congress.

"Is it going to be hard to find them?" declared the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

But Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said today he was confident the additional savings could be found. "There is a good deal of low-priority spending in many departments" even after the cuts Reagan has proposed, Weidenbaum told reporters.

Further cuts might be necessary later if the revised spending estimate also proves to be too low because of inflation, he said. The administration's response to news of higher spending estimates, he said, was "to redouble our budget-restraint effort."

At the same briefing, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan blamed the Carter administration for underestimating spending levels for fiscal 1982. He said Carter budget officials "had, if you'll pardon my expression, too rosy a scenario" for government spending next year.

Reagan called for the additional cuts after learning from his budget director, David A. Stockman, that new estimates of projected spending for 1982 were running $3 billion to $6 billion higher than the Office of Management and Budget had expected when it completed last week's package of program cutbacks.

Reagan "expressed concern, but not surprise" when informed of the miscalculation, said the president's chief domestic affairs adviser, Martin Anderson.

A spokesman for Stockman blamed the faulty spending estimate on the projected cost of such social programs as Medicare, which provide automatically higher benefits as the inflation rate goes up. The budget office was relying on figures prepared nearly three months ago by the Carter administration, said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified.

He said it "has become a regrettably routine occurrence" for program costs to run higher than earlier estimates.

Outcome of heated debate may 'cool' draw difficulties

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Separate thoughts of the Midland City Council and Midland County Commissioners finally flowed together this morning as the group agreed on a temporary solution to the water problems of county residents next to Midland Draw.

The agreement came this morning during a joint meeting of the two government bodies in City Hall Council Chambers. It also came after two hours of heated discussion with one city resident charging the city with covering up information and various officials angrily objecting to their integrity being sullied.

At issue in the beginning was a proposed study to be paid for jointly by the city and county. The city had agreed to pursue the study during its Tuesday meeting, but the county had failed to take action Monday. The council set up the meeting to settle the matter and let Ed Reed and Associates, Inc. begin work, if approved by both bodies. Reed and Associates is a local hydrology firm established more than 25 years ago.

THE SOLUTION approved by both bodies depends upon issuance of a temporary permit from the Texas Water Resources Department to dig a ditch from County Road 1130 eastward about two miles.

The city would take its sewage through a secondary treatment process, described by Mayor G. Thane Akins as energy intensive and very costly. This cleaned-up water, as County Commissioner Charlie Welch calls it, would be pumped from the sewage treatment plant southeast of Midland to the ditch at County Road 1130.

This plan suggested by Welch was first introduced to the city back in 1969 by the engineering firm of Black and Veatch, said Fred Baker, director of public works for the city.

Because water would be "dumped" into Midland Draw, it required public hearings and a permit from the Water Resources Department. Residents along the draw opposed the move, and the permit was denied. Thus evolved the current process used by the city of treating sewage in a primary process, pumping it to holding ponds and pumping it onto a farmer's nearby alfalfa fields.

During the summer this primary effluent also is used on golf courses around the city.

Under the proposal by the city and county, the county would take Black and Veatch's 1969 drawings for locating the ditch and use county equipment to do the work while the city handles the secondary process and pumping it to the ditch.

WELCH MUST telephone the state department Friday and determine if this process can be under taken.

Councilman Tom Sloan sat in the hot spot most of the meeting, handing out the largest number of heated remarks.

Council debate centers on airpark competition

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Competition vs. monopoly was the underlying theme of a debate Tuesday before the Midland City Council on the proposition for a second fixed base operator at Midland Air Park. The council leaned in favor of competition.

Al McGuire already had received a favorable recommendation from the Airport Board, an advisory commission to the City Council. He was ready to proceed with plans to construct two enclosed T-hangers and a self-service gas pump at Air Park. All he needed was a thumbs-up from the council.

But the managers of Basin Flying Service showed up with their attorney, Russell Neisig, to oppose the plan.

McGuire decided to get his feet in the business after receiving a letter from Basin Flying Service that rental for storing his aircraft in one of the firm's hangers was being hiked.

"I got a letter in October saying it would cost me $250 for a hangar I could build and rent," he said, then charged that Basin is trying to "recoup some costs not directly associated with building hangars. Basin owns everything out there (Air Park) except the tail ends (of the runways)."

HIS ESTIMATED COST for renting the two hangars hovers around $180 a month "while Basin says theirs is $250," according to McGuire.

Mayor G. Thane Akins interjected that what the City Council had been hoping for were open hangars in which space could be rented for less than $100 a month.

McGuire replied that he tried that route, but estimates on the open hangars have been too high. The only feasible idea for open hangars would involve constructing them of drill pipe and tubing that has been painted. "These aren't as attractive as the other hangars. But to some people, they may be beautiful for $50 a month," he acknowledged.

Councilman Carroll Thomas questioned the need for McGuire's 20 hangar spaces over the 60 that are being put up by Basin Flying Service. Ed Vogler, chairman of the Airport Board, answered, "We're short of hangar space now. By all projections, air traffic out there is increasing."

Afterward, Vogler explained Air Park has hangars for about 100 planes. Outside, another 35 planes are parked.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city, pointed out the loca-

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

If put into law, the proposed Reagan administration federal budget cuts could adversely affect programs directed by the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, executive director Ernest Crawford told members of the Downtown Lions Club at a Wednesday luncheon.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act Manpower Program, "the largest program we are involved in," would suffer a 20 percent funding cut in the 17-county area serviced by the PBRPC, Crawford told the group. Of the $4.5 million CETA funds received by the commission, $900,000 is directed toward public services, an area in which the Reagan administration has proposed elimination of jobs.

Additionally, noted the Odessa resident, another PBRPC program, the Health Systems Agency, would be phased out entirely by 1983, although exact details have not been released.

"But that one will have a hard time getting through Congress," Crawford opined.

The Health Systems Agency surveys health facilities in the local region to aid in eliminating duplication of services. "One of our concerns is to (ensure) that necessity is shown," he said. "If we didn't have necessity (indicated), there would be private hospitals coming into our area," which he feels would lessen the overall degree of health service.

"There has to be some sort of rein in these types of facilities," he said.

Crawford, who has served as executive director of the PBRPC since 1971 also noted that the proposed budget cuts would adversely affect the HUD 701 Program, although "this is no big program for us."

He indicated that additional information regarding budget cuts and their effect on PBRPC-directed programs would be forthcoming in a few days.

In his 20-minute address, Crawford outlined the various responsibilities and aims of the commission. "Our main function is to assist cities and counties in orderly growth," he explained.

Serving some 350,000 persons in the local region, the PBRPC is a voluntary association operated by cities, counties and local districts. It is involved with such operations as water and sewer work, recreation plans, mass transportation, housing funding, treatment of alcoholism and prevention of drug abuse.

"We are charged by the state and federal government with reviewing all federal applications, to make sure there is no duplication of services," Crawford said.

Many of these reviews, he ex-

FREE, AFTER 18 YEARS OF BONDAGE!

One Sabbath as Jesus was teaching in a synagogue, He saw a seriously handicapped woman who had been bent double for 18 years and was unable to straighten herself.

Calling her over to Him Jesus said, "Woman, you are healed of your sickness!" He touched her, and instantly she could stand straight. How she praised and thanked God!

But the local Jewish leader in charge of the synagogue was very angry about it because Jesus had healed her on the Sabbath day. "There are six days of the week to work," he shouted to the crowd. "Those are the days to come for healing, not on the Sabbath!"

But the Lord replied, "You hypocrite! You work on the Sabbath! Don't you untie your cattle from their stalls on the Sabbath and lead them out for water? And is it wrong for Me, just because it is the Sabbath day, to free this woman from Satan's 18 years of bondage?"

This shamed His enemies. And all the people rejoiced at the wonderful things He did.

Now He began teaching them again about the Kingdom of God: "What is the Kingdom like?" He asked. "How can I illustrate it? It is like a tiny mustard seed planted in a garden; soon it grows into a tall bush, and the birds live among its branches. It is like yeast kneaded into dough, which works unseen until it is risen high and light."

He went from city to city and village to village, teaching as He went, always pressing onward toward Jerusalem.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Drug use in America has increased significantly

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have had three children in college at various times during the past 10 years, and one thing they all agree on is the ready availability of marijuana and other drugs on campus. In fact, according to the one child who is still in school, drugs are more plentiful than they were when she started three years ago. Is this epidemic confined to a few colleges, or has the use of drugs increased in other areas of our society as well? — Mrs. D.L.

Dear Mrs. L.: I don't know if "epidemic" is the right word, but the use of marijuana and other drugs has increased significantly over the past several years. According to the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), more than 68 percent of young adults have tried marijuana (20 percent more than in 1972), and 28 percent have used cocaine (three times as many as in 1972). Even among adolescents 12 to 17 years of age, the proportion who have tried marijuana increased from 14 percent in 1972 to 31 percent in 1979. As is the case with cigarette smoking, men use marijuana more than women, although women are catching up in this respect.

Young adults tend to abuse drugs more than any other age group. For example, their use of a variety of medications (such as stimulants, sedatives, tranquilizers, and analgesics) for non-medical purposes is three and four times higher than that of any other age group surveyed.

Unfortunately, the actual extent of drug abuse is probably even higher than indicated by the HHS reports, since many groups among whom drug abuse traditionally is high were not included in the survey. These include transients, soldiers stationed on military bases, prisoners, and college students living on campus. As your daughter indicates, the figures would probably be even more disturbing if college students had been interviewed as part of the HHS study.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother is 86 years of age. Recently, I noticed that she had some fever. Although she did not feel bad, I decided to call a doctor. In brief, the entire situation was handled in a fashion that seemed very routine to me. My question is: Is it necessary to call a doctor simply because an elderly person has fever? I know I would not have asked my pediatrician to see my child under similar circumstances. — Mary

Dear Mary: An elderly person with fever whose cause is unknown should be seen by a doctor. According to Dr.

Ian M. Smith, of the University of Iowa School of Medicine, elderly patients with fever who are not treated have significantly higher mortality rates than those who are. In fact, an elderly person who does not receive treatment is six times more likely to die than one who is treated. Moreover, totally bedridden individuals are more likely to die from disorders that produce fever than persons who are ambulatory or confined to a bed and chair.

You were correct in not taking chances and calling a physician to investigate the source of your mother's fever. "Better safe than sorry" is still a good motto.

Court takes case

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court has agreed to decide whether shareholders of a defunct company are liable for an accident in an elevator the company installed before selling out to another firm.

Lawyers say the ruling could have nationwide importance. The Supreme Court set a March 18 hearing on an appeal by several major shareholders of the Hunter-Hayes Elevator Co., which sold out to Dover Elevator Co. in 1963.

GM recall

DETROIT (AP) — In the second-largest automotive recall in U.S. history, General Motors Corp. is asking owners of 6.4 million cars and light trucks to take them to dealerships for replacement of two bolts that could fail and send the vehicles out of control.

The vehicles, from the 1978 model year through early 1981-model production, are the Chevrolet El Camino and GMC Caballero light trucks and all intermediate-sized cars from those years: Chevrolet Malibu and Monte Carlo; Pontiac LeMans and Grand Prix; Buick Century and Regal and all versions of the Oldsmobile Cutlass, including the Cutlass Supreme.

GM said Monday that two bolts used to attach the rear suspension lower control arms to the frame could rust, break, fall out of the structure and let the control arm drop free, resulting in loss of control without warning.

The automaker said it had received reports of 27 accidents, starting last August, that caused 22 injuries. GM Spokesman Phil Workman said no one was killed and none of the injuries was serious.

About 200,000 letters to owners will be mailed each day starting March 9 — a process that will take 32 working days to complete. Shipments of bolts to dealers began a week ago.

GM waged the only larger recall campaign. That was in 1971 to fix faulty engine mounts on 6.7 million cars.

A dangerous situation

The current situation at the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Andrews Highway in northwest Midland is a dangerous one and we say that without attempting to make any connection between that situation and the recent auto accident in which Bob Dillon, a member of this newspaper's sports staff, was killed.

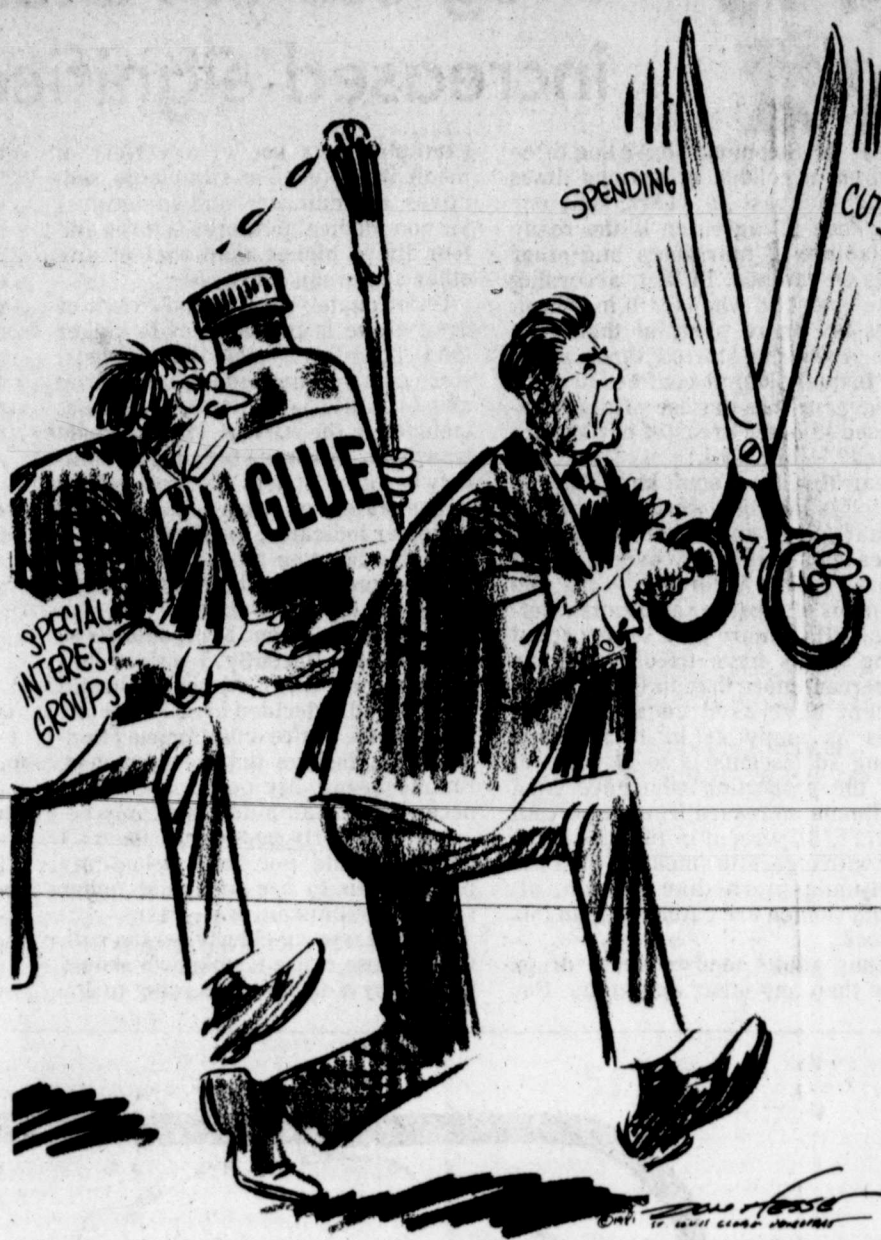

It is possible, of course, that an oncoming vehicle on recently-opened one-way Holiday Hill Road could have played a role in the tragedy, but that is not to imply this was the case. Without witnesses it probably never will be known if a second car was involved or not.

But we believe the chances are good that such an accident could occur because sufficient warning signs are not posted on Andrews

Highway at the approach to the intersection. Drivers on Andrews Highway, moving west but planning to turn south on Holiday Hill Road do not have sufficient notice that they should turn at the second, not the first, road. The signs that are present are small. Not sufficient advance warning is given.

Many drivers, we are told, this writer included, have made the mistake of turning south on the lane which carries only north-bound traffic.

Perhaps the one-way arrangement was opened to traffic before the appropriate signs could be placed. In the meantime, this is one area in Midland that resembles an accident just waiting to happen. We recommend that its correction be given priority status.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Soviet Congress may hint of future changes

WASHINGTON — The key to world peace and stability is held by the tough, shrewd old men in the Kremlin. And this is the week they should signal whether they want confrontation or détente with Ronald Reagan in the White House.

They may also indicate whether they have given any ground to the younger men who ultimately will take over the Kremlin. Before the week is over, there should be still other clues to Soviet actions in the years to come.

These signals should come out of the 26th Soviet Communist Party Congress — the first since 1976 — which is now in somber session in the Great Hall of the Kremlin.

To the untrained eye, the proceedings will seem trite and tedious. But to the sharp, analytical eye, the dreary routine will offer valuable insights into the Byzantine world of Kremlin politics. Seemingly insignificant developments can portend important changes in Soviet policy.

Secret reports from the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research have been reviewed by my associate Dale Van Atta. These show what our intelligence people might glean from the assembled party congress.

"In theory, a congress is the party's supreme ruling body," a CIA primer explains. "In fact, it is a ceremonial gathering that rubber-stamps policies previously discussed and agreed upon by the leadership. Nevertheless, a congress... provides a semblance of democratic legitimacy and an opportunity to review party activities and to proclaim policies for the future."

Handal wrote in 1978 that "in general terms in Latin America it can be said that the fascist offensive (by which he meant the rise of military governments) lost its impetus.... And the existence of the Carter current (of opinion), even with all its contradictions, is an element that objectively tends to produce favorable conditions."

Curiously, although El Salvador is just a few miles across the Gulf of Fonseca from Nicaragua and the Marxist-led struggle against Gen. Anastasio Somoza was raging at that time, Handal made no comment on the neighboring country. Somoza gave up the fight against the Sandinistas in July 1979.

On Oct. 15, 1979, Gen. Romero was overthrown by Salvador's "young militarymen," a coup that was organized by the United States, most Salvadorans agree.

There have been other reports on El Salvador issued by the Soviet Academy of Sciences, too. Most recent was Handal's announcement that the opposition was ready to start its general offensive against the junta headed by the Christian Democrat leader, Jose Napoleon Duarte.

An earlier article, printed in mid-1980, was an interview with three

Jack Anderson

In other words, even though it's a stacked deck, the Communist Party Congress can give at least a hint of the cards the Russians will be playing for the next few years. For example, another CIA report notes: "The 20th Congress in 1956 launched Nikita Khrushchev's de-Stalinization campaign; its impact is still being felt throughout the communist movement."

It took a while for news of Khrushchev's astonishing denunciation of Stalin to reach Western intelligence. But when it did, it gave our policymakers the message that the Stalin era was definitely over.

No such fireworks can be expected in the current congress — the fourth presided over by General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev. His party congresses have been noted for being businesslike and "relatively drab," according to the CIA.

Much attention will center on Brezhnev himself this time, as it did in 1976; our analysts will be gauging the praise he gets this time around.

In 1976, State Department analysts noted that while his praise from other speakers had been "lavish," nevertheless "his encomiums fell short of those accorded Khrushchev (not to mention Stalin) in his prime."

Salvadoran revolutionaries. One of them, Alberto Ramos, as if anticipating the current U.S. effort to prove the Soviet Union and its satellites have been arming the guerrillas, told America Latina's correspondent that the Salvadoran revolutionary movement had been able "to self-finance itself in all its activities up to now."

Ramos also was quoted as saying that the armed guerrilla organizations in El Salvador date from the 1970-75 period but that violence did not really escalate until after the Romero government was overthrown in 1979.

What really counted, according to Romero, was "the acceptance of the Communist Party of El Salvador to enter into the armed struggle."

At least, that is what the Soviet Academy of Sciences has reported.

"What you doing, Paw?"
"I'm getting out my old Marine Corps boots."
"What for, Paw?"
"The United States may have to go fight El Salvador."

"El Salvador. What's that?"
"It's a country in Central America, and the Soviets and Cubans have been supplying their guerrillas with arms, so they can overthrow the military junta."

"You mean to say, Paw, the United States is seriously thinking of getting us into a war over El Salvador?"

"It ain't El Salvador, Maw. The Reagan Administration has been looking for a place to show the Soviets that we mean business. El Salvador just happened to be in the right place at the right time."

"That's what they said about Viet Nam, Paw."

"This is different, Maw. This is in our hemisphere. We can't let the Communies just ship in arms and equipment to guerrillas who don't like their government."

"What's the guerrillas' beef in El Salvador got to do with the junta?"

"No one is quite sure, Maw. I think it has something to do with them wanting land reform. It seems the powerful families in El Salvador are against it and the military is killing the peasants, and the government is trying to find a solution in between."

"And we're going to go to war to solve that one?"

"We ain't going to go to war yet, but I'm getting out my boots just in case, because Secretary of State Haig is taking a hard line against anyone who accepts arms from the Communies."

"I ain't against stopping the Communies, Paw, but I wish it was something more important than El Salvador."

"Haig's got no choice. They found Captured Enemy Documents on the bodies of the guerrillas."

"I ain't heard anyone use 'Captured Enemy Documents' since Viet Nam. You got any idea how Haig hopes to stop the Communies from giving the guerrillas arms?"

"Wal, I don't want it handled about, but I saw on television that Haig was thinking about blockading Cuba if they kept it up."

"That's big stuff, Paw. We could get us in a war with Russia at the same time."

"You got to call their bluff sooner or later. That's why I'm getting my boots ready. If it really gets big, we ain't got enough boys in the service to handle it. They're going to need us old-timers to pitch in and fight."

"But you were in World War II. Won't they ask the younger boys to go first?"

"Ain't going to get no young kids to go into the service to fight for El Salvador. It's only old timers like myself who understand if you don't stop them in El Salvador, you'll be fighting them on the beaches of Santa Monica."

"I thought Reagan said he wasn't going to get us into no wars."

"This ain't a real war. It's just a test of our credibility, Maw. Nobody's going to ever believe us if we don't have a showdown soon."

"The whole thing smells more and more like Viet Nam, Paw."

"That's not for you to say, Maw. El Salvador has a lot going for it when it comes to seeing who blinks first. It's small, has plenty of jungles and if we win the hearts and minds of the people there, we can scare the hell out of Nicaragua."

"Nicaragua! What have they got to do with this?"

"That's how the guerrillas are getting their arms. Believe me, Maw, if this thing keeps up, we're going to be up to our necks in old mudda."

"When do you think they'll call you, Paw?"

"As soon as all the young kids in the country realize what's going on and take off for Canada."

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Soviets encouraging Marxist revolutionaries in El Salvador

The United States may find it impossible to convince some of its allies in Latin America and Europe that the Soviet Union and its satellites armed the guerrillas in El Salvador.

But it would be relatively simple to show them that Moscow, Havana and Managua have been encouraging Salvadoran Marxists to take up arms against their government.

The Soviet record, written in Moscow in both Spanish and Russian, makes it obvious that the USSR has been counseling El Salvador's minuscule Communist Party and attempting to popularize the image of Shafik Jorge Handal, secretary-general of the party central committee in that little Central American republic, for years now.

Handal's views on the situation in El Salvador and Central America have been published with certain frequency by the Latin American Institute of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

In the light of more recent history, Handal's estimate of the situation in El Salvador in 1978 makes interesting reading.

He wrote then that "we much emphasize the importance of tightening relations more and more between the anti-imperialist movement of the (Central American) region and the progressive, democratic forces of the United States, because we understand that there is where one of the Achilles' heels of imperialism is."

He approved generally of the Carter government policy toward El Salvador, not because he necessarily trusted Washington's motives, but because it was contributing to the destabilization of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero, then president.

According to Handal, "One of the obstacles to Romero's plan to install ('an open fascist dictatorship') was the policy of the Carter government."

For example, Handal noted, the U.S. Congress had carried out "two frankly hostile investigations of the government of El Salvador." First it invited Jose Antonio Morales Erlich, the Christian Democrat who was the opposition vice presidential candidate in the 1972 elections, to testify. Then, "refusing to listen to the Romero government's delegation, Congress granted a public audience to the ex-U.S. ambassador in El Salvador, Ignacio Lozano, who unmasked the electoral fraud in depth, all the policy of repression of the oligarchy of El Salvador, of the rightist chiefs of the army, and of Romero himself," Handal said in an article published in the Soviet academy's magazine, America Latina.

Pope John Paul II baptizes Japanese converts to Catholicism in a snowstorm today during an open air mass in Nagasaki. The pontiff and thousands of Japanese faithfully braved the cold weather in what was the Pope's last major religious service in Japan. He will leave tonight, stopping in Alaska before going on to Rome. (AP Laser-photo)

'Hidden christians' blessed

NAGASAKI, Japan (AP) — Pope John Paul II, visiting the "Asian Calvary" where hundreds of Japanese Catholics were executed for their beliefs, paid homage today to the martyrs and the thousands of others who kept the Christian faith alive in Japan.

Winding up his 12-day Asian tour and preparing to fly home with a brief stop in Alaska, John Paul honored the tenacity of Japan's early Christians in a visit to a Nagasaki hilltop memorial for 26 martyrs who were crucified on that spot in 1597 and hundreds of others executed there a century later.

"Christians died in Nagasaki, but the church in Nagasaki did not die. She had to go underground, and the Christian message was passed from parents to children until the church came back into the open," he said. "Rooted in this martyr's hill the church in Nagasaki would grow and bloom, to become an example of faith and fidelity for Christians everywhere."

An estimated 280,000 Christians, most of them in the Nagasaki area, were persecuted, many of them tortured and killed, when the Tokugawa Shogunate closed the country to the outside world and banned Christianity.

SPEAKING earlier to 50,000 people who braved snow and gusting winds to attend a Mass at Nagasaki stadium, the pontiff also expressed his love for the "hidden Christians," the descendants of Catholics whose religion became so distorted during the centuries of secret worship that it is no longer recognized as Catholic by the Vatican.

"Here the faithful of 100 years ago, whose forefathers of the previous two centuries had secretly kept the faith of the martyrs, preserved through the power conferred by the Gospel," the pope said. "And they knew about a man a long way away called the pope. Today he comes to render homage to tell their descendants personally that he loves them in the heart of Christ Jesus."

ABOUT 7,000 to 9,000 "hidden Christians" live in and around this cradle of Japanese Catholicism, along with several hundred to several thousand who still refuse to identify themselves.

All were invited to see the pope but most of them refused since they claim they are "the real Christians" and want nothing to do with the Roman pontiff.

John Paul's statement was seen by Vatican observers as a gesture to bring them back into the church.

The pope baptized 76 adult converts during the Mass, including a 26-year-old "Hidden Christian" construction worker.

Police said 576 persons, many of whom had lined up before dawn in 27 degree cold to attend the Mass, were treated for exposure or injuries from falling on slippery sidewalks. Nine were hospitalized.

The pope also visited the Oura Chapel beside Nagasaki Harbor. Built by the French in 1864, it was one of the first Christian structures erected after the ban on Christianity was lifted. It was here that the first friar of the chapel discovered several "Hidden Christians" in 1865.

THE NEXT stop in the pope's grueling schedule was the Friary of Conventual Franciscans, a convent established in 1930 by Polish priest Maximilian Kolbe, who once taught a young Karol Wojtyla — now John Paul II — in Poland.

Kolbe was declared "Blessed," one step short of sainthood, by Pope Paul VI in 1971 for volunteering to take the place of a condemned man at the Auschwitz concentration camp.

"Between the (Japanese) martyrs and Father Kolbe there is a certain link," the pope said.

"Here we are reminded of a modern martyr, Blessed Maximilian, who did not hesitate to witness for that love of neighbor which Christ held up as the distinctive mark of a Christian."

The most moving experience John Paul's final day in Asia was a tour of a home run by Catholic sisters for 100 aged victims of the U.S. atomic bombing of Nagasaki at the end of World War II.

Thousands camp outdoors, fearing another quake

By GILLIAN WHITTAKER
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Thousands of frightened Greeks spent a cold night out of doors as aftershocks shook the Athens area.

They huddled in blankets in the open or in cars Wednesday night as the death toll from two strong quakes rose to 13.

Athenians fled the city despite pleas by Premier George Rallis to return to their homes.

"Panic causes more harm than the earthquakes themselves," Rallis said.

The Athens Seismological Institute assured citizens that a further strong quake was "scientifically highly improbable."

It said that 652 tremors were registered from Tuesday to Wednesday afternoon, and that eight of them were between 4.5 and 6.3 on the Richter scale.

Two quakes registering 6.6 and 6.3 on the Richter scale rocked the country Tuesday night, causing the worst damage in the area around their epicenter, 42 miles west of Athens in the Gulf of Corinth.

The tremors destroyed five hotels in the area, a popular summer resort area, and collapsed more than 200 houses police said. Dozens were injured and five people were reported missing.

State service workers distributed tents for the temporary shelter of the homeless in the stricken areas, while government officials visited the devastated towns and villages around the gulf and set aid programs in motion.

The 2,500-year-old Acropolis overlooking Athens did not escape the effects of the shocks, the worst to hit the capital in recent years.

Both east and west faces of the Parthenon showed slight damage, especially two corner columns of the ancient temple, according to Greek television.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

An earthquake with a 4 reading can cause moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage and 7 is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated to have had an 8.3 reading.

Pope winds up Asian tour with short stop in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Pope John Paul II, winding up his 12-day Asian tour, was flying to Alaska today for a brief but busy stopover on his way back to Rome.

During the 3 1/2-hour refueling stop, the 60-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church was scheduled to ride through the city aboard a four-wheel-drive truck dubbed the "popemobile" and then celebrate a 90-minute, open-air Mass.

The pope was to hold a prayer service with Catholic and Protestant clergy and visit 125 handicapped Alaskans. Also on his agenda was a ride on a dog sled, entertainment by native singers and dancers and observation of a blanket toss.

But the schedule was open to changes. Archdiocese of Anchorage officials said they didn't know exactly what the pope would do during his stay. As Archbishop Francis T. Hurley, leader of the city's 16,000 Catholics, put it: "He's the boss. He can do anything he wants."

The Polish-born pontiff was not expected to address any of the weighty issues — disarmament, human rights and reiteration of traditional church doctrine — that formed the main themes of his Asian trip.

But at least two feminist groups planned protests over the church's stand on women's rights.

As John Paul concluded the Japanese leg of his trip, feverish preparations were under way here for his visit, his second stop on U.S. soil during the trip that took him to the Philippines and the U.S. possession of Guam as well as Japan. An estimated 450 reporters poured into this city of 173,000, the state's largest, for the first papal visit to Alaska.

Religious trinkets, $2 buttons, Vatican flags and ballpoint pens flooded the burgeoning pope paraphernalia market. There was also a $5 T-shirt proclaiming "I Saw The Pope In Anchorage-1981."

Airlines reported heavier-than-usual traffic from the lower 48 states, but most said their flights to Anchorage were not full.

One airline official said a full-fare ticket, without advance booking, was $410, and "that's a staggering amount for a one-day shot."

Refugees to get back pay

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Greenville furniture manufacturer has agreed to pay back wages to five Cuban refugees who claimed they worked 10 and 12 hours a day without pay last month, a company lawyer says.

And that agreement may lead to a negotiated settlement between the company and the U.S. Labor Department, officials said.

Stromberg's Patio Furniture, which manufactures lawn statuary, had sponsored six men from the Cuban refugee camp at Fort Chaffee, Ark. A seventh refugee employed by the company was sponsored by a friend of the company's owners.

Five of the refugees quit their jobs last month and fled to Dallas, where they told federal officials that the furniture company had not paid them for their labor. Labor Department investigators began looking into the allegations earlier this week.

The inquiry has now entered a "negotiating" stage, Labor Department spokesman Carl H. Bass Jr. said Wednesday. Company lawyer Fred Time said Stromberg's has agreed to pay the two refugees still employed at Stromberg's the federal minimum wage of $3.35 an hour. The company also will pay back wages to all the refugees, including the five who quit, Time added.

Antonio Taylor, 22, and Lorenzo Guerrero, 25, still working at Stromberg's, said at a news conference earlier this week that they had agreed to work for free during a six-month apprenticeship at the furniture factory. The Strombergs have claimed that officials at Fort Chaffee told them the refugees need not be paid during their first six months of employment.

Officials of World Relief Inc., the organization that helped place the refugees, denied any such arrangement had been made.

Time said the company is trying to contact the five refugees who quit so they can be paid. The men will not be offered their jobs back, he said.

Work at space center continues despite strike

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Temporary workers and supervisory personnel were handling space shuttle support services and other maintenance activities today as 1,000 strikers continued to stay away from their jobs.

Al Evenson, labor relations manager of Boeing Services International, the space center's primary maintenance company, said Wednesday that Boeing was experiencing "no problems."

Boeing has assured the National Aeronautics and Space Administration the strike will not affect its shuttle support operations or cause a delay in the reusable shuttle's maiden voyage, now set for early April.

Only 10 percent to 15 percent of Boeing's activity is directly related to the shuttle, Evenson said.

Members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers went out on strike a week ago, minutes after a successful test of the shuttle's main engines.

Company and union representatives met with a federal mediator Monday, but adjourned talks until sometime next week. The primary issue is the union's demand for annual cost-of-living increases in their salaries. Their average wage now is $10.50 an hour, the company says.

Bus system to shut down

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Some 30,000 daily riders will be left without public transportation after buses complete their runs here Saturday.

The board of the Birmingham-Jefferson Transit Authority, blaming rising costs and decreasing numbers of riders, voted 5-3 on Wednesday to shut down the system at the close of business Saturday.

The vote affirmed a Dec. 19 resolution calling for the Feb. 28 closing if additional funds were not found.

Board Chairman Ed Selfe said the system had a projected deficit of $800,000 for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The budget was $9.5 million, with $2 million to come from local government subsidies, $2 million from federal matching funds and $5.5 million from fare receipts.

There was no immediate word on how many employees would be affected.

The authority had cut some routes and raised fares to 80 cents — among the highest in the nation — last fall.

Members of the Jefferson County legislative delegation asked the authority to postpone the closing until after the current session of the Legislature ends in May.

Evenson said about 130 supervisors — "highly skilled, highly motivated and working 12-hour shifts" — are carrying on the essential duties usually performed by the workers.

"We have about 50 temporary employees on board right now and we'll continue to hire them as we go along," he said.

But the bulk of Boeing's work is in areas and buildings not related to the shuttle, he said. "We take care of all plumbing, electrical systems, air conditioning and general maintenance of buildings. This is not critical work." The strike is the latest in a long series of problems connected with the space shuttle, which will be the United States' first reusable spacecraft. The first mission originally was set for spring of 1979, but numerous technical problems forced delay after delay.

Once the shuttle is operational it is to become the workhorse of the nation's space program, carrying satellites, astronauts and scientists into space, then gliding back to Earth to a California landing strip on airplane-type wings.

Ohio teacher talks break down

RAVENNA, Ohio (AP) — Negotiations to end the nation's longest teachers' strike have broken down, but school officials plan to circumvent the union and mail new wage proposals directly to teachers.

The Ravenna school board said late Wednesday that it would mail a new wage and master contract proposal directly to individual teachers.

The Ravenna Education Association, bargaining agent for 160 striking members, said the board was trying to "crush the teachers in Ravenna."

"It's the destruction of the union that's important in the board's eyes," charged REA President Alan Balog.

A teachers' strike in Youngstown, meanwhile, gained support from other school employees despite a school board warning that pay and benefits will be cut off for city education employees this weekend if they don't report to work.

And a teachers' strike continued in Mariemont, while two other cities faced job actions by police or firefighters.

The standoff in Ravenna came after marathon talks Wednesday. Portage County Common Pleas Judges Joseph Kainrad and George Martin had shut between the two sides during the session trying to induce an agreement on wages, dismissal policy and the length of a possible master contract.

Negotiations had been called as both sides felt increasing pressure to solve the dispute over pay and other policies. Classes for Ravenna's 3,700 students have been conducted by nonstriking teachers and substitutes.

In Youngstown, teachers entered the fifth day of their walkout in the 17,000-student system, despite the threat of contempt-of-court proceedings. Ten strike leaders and a union negotiator were ordered into a Mahoning County court next week for a contempt hearing.

Some 200 of 480 unionized secretaries, janitors and maintenance workers honored picket lines Wednesday and demonstrated at the school board to protest the board's ultimatum.

Teachers are seeking a 6 percent hike on current starting salaries of $11,000 a year. But the board has said it can't afford increases since the city's schools have been hit hard by loss of taxes from closed industries and declining tax rolls.

In Mariemont, a school pay and policy deadlock approached its second month. And at least one of 50 teachers fired Jan. 30 for failing to report to work has sued to try to remove the school board from office for alleged civil rights violations.

Instructors walked off the job Jan. 25 in an effort to get a master contract, direct wage negotiations and grievance procedures. Classes for the system's 1,385 students are being conducted by nonstriking teachers and substitutes.

In other disputes: —School bus drivers in Cleveland returned to work Wednesday after a two-day walkout over road and terminal conditions. The school board said it would fix bus depot facilities.

—In Ashtabula, a police sickout to underscore a 20 percent pay raise demand by 32 policemen went into its second day.

—In Chillicothe, firefighters voted Wednesday night to continue a one-shift-a-day sickout to show dissatisfaction over contract talks.

The 45 firefighters have been staging the sick-out since Saturday.

Chillicothe police, without a contract since November, unanimously approved a job action Wednesday night. About 45 members of the Fraternal Order of Police there voted on a date for the action, whose details were not announced.

El Salvador test case may backfire

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decision to make El Salvador a test case of U.S. relations with the Soviet Union and its allies may turn out to be a perilous choice.

His approach is drawing criticism from Mexico, prominent scholars and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, leader of the Senate's liberal wing.

West Germany, a major Western ally, does not share the Reagan administration's view of the Salvadoran insurgents as Soviet and Cuban tools.

Government spokesman Kurt Becker said Wednesday that West Germany is willing to mediate the conflict and will seek contacts with democratic forces within the junta and among the rebels to get the warring factions into a political dialogue.

France would like to see the United States concentrate on encouraging basic social reforms in the troubled Central American country.

Robert White, the former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador, cautioned Wednesday in testimony before a congressional subcommittee that bolstering the ruling junta with a big American aid program could backfire into a right-wing coup.

According to White, the leftist movement is broken and declining. "The real threat to the stability of the government comes not from the left but from the extreme right," he said.

White House press secretary James S. Brady replied to reporters that if the Salvadoran government does not last, at least any change "will be from within and not from arms from without."

Still, Reagan's decision to confront the Soviets and the Cubans over El Salvador has raised questions about how much influence the United States can and should exert in Latin America.

Mexican officials are alarmed, fearing the Reagan policy could turn the Caribbean basin into a major East-West power struggle.

Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda says El Salvador should be left alone to solve its own problems lest "the bloodshed become greater and the conflict an international one."

Reagan is not without support at home, however.

At the White House on Wednesday, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said after a meeting with the president that "of course" the United States should have advisers in El Salvador, but not combat troops.

"For us to stand by idly and do nothing would be the height of folly. So in my judgment it's entirely appropriate that this country dispatch, not combat troops, but advisers in small numbers — 50, 100, 150 — to tell these people how to defend themselves against Cuba," Baker said.

"Clearly, the best interests of the United States are not served by failing to commit the lawful government of El Salvador to resist those who are commissioned by Cuba to try to overthrow it," he said.

Scholar Robert S. Leiken, a specialist on Latin America at the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, approves of the attempt to thwart the Soviet advance but adds: "But he may have been mistaken in choosing Central America and El Salvador, in particular, as the place to draw the line."

Of the four major countries in Latin America, Leiken said, three — Mexico, Venezuela and Brazil — oppose the U.S. position and the fourth, Argentina, has been vacillating.

Leiken said the turmoil in El Salvador and in other Central American countries reflects an evolution from control by an oligarchy. "It makes more sense to support the Afghan rebels than to enter into a crusade against the Third World, and I'm afraid the Reagan policy in El Salvador is perceived that way," he said.

Another scholar, Richard Millett, of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, was asked in a separate interview which countries liked Reagan's policy.

"The Mexicans don't, the Brazilians don't, the Venezuelans don't, the Peruvians don't. The Argentians and Chileans might, at least the military," he said.

"The democratic governments of Latin America do not favor a victory of the left, but they don't favor a program that tries to respond to social and economic problems only with military force."

Riordan Roett, of Johns Hopkins University, said he did not sense any strategy within the administration for dealing with the multiple and complicated issues represented by unrest in El Salvador.

"I detect an effort by the administration to define this as an East-West problem, which it is not," Roett told the Associated Press. "It is a regional issue, politically and strategically. There is no military solution to the problems of El Salvador."

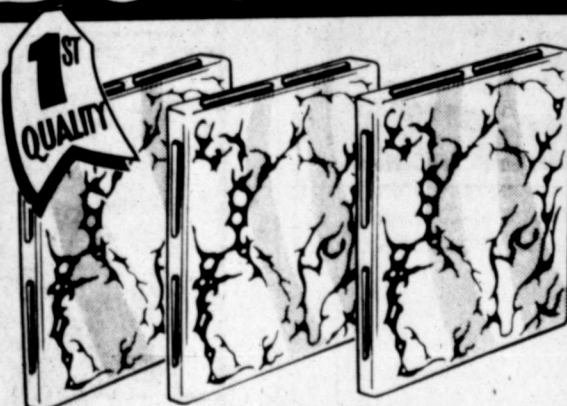

Sen. Kennedy said U.S. efforts should aim at halting the violence and repression which have cost more than 13,000 lives.

In a statement this week, Kennedy said that instead of contributing to the militarization of El Salvador, "we should take the lead in pressing for a political solution to the conflict. This remains essentially a political crisis."

Jennings testifies in Shanks' trial

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Willie Wayne Jennings, a 20-year-old Wichita Falls man who said he was hired on a promise of $7,000 and a broken-down sports car to help kill an Odessa man, testified in 142nd State District Court on Wednesday that it made no difference to him who killed the man.

"Just that if I didn't (help slay him), somebody else would," Jennings, an adverse witness to co-defendant Rex Shanks, 27, of Abilene, testified under cross-examination by defense attorney Michael McLeish of Odessa.

Jennings, like the defendant, is indicted for murder in the July 28 stabbing death of James David McPeters, 46, near the Warfield Truck Stop between Midland and Odessa. If convicted, both could be sentenced up to 99 years or life in prison. Jennings has freely admitted his part in the killing and was a principal state witness in the December trial of a third co-defendant, Patricia "Patty" McPeters, 27, widow of the slain man.

Another prime witness was Jennings' wife, Tammy Karlic Jennings, 22, who witnessed the stabbing but was granted immunity by the Midland County grand jury in exchange for her testimony.

MRS. MCPETERS was found guilty by a jury Dec. 18 in plotting the death of her husband and was sentenced to 50 years in prison and was fined $8,000. The verdict is being appealed by her defense attorney, Leonard Howell.

Mrs. McPeters, however, had testified that Shanks was the instigator of the deed and that she was coerced by fear and passively went along in disbelief with events leading up to the midnight stabbing.

McLeish, an aggressive attorney who is in striking contrast to the state's more tempered and soft-spoken prosecutors, David Joers and Jim Rex, asked Jennings if a deal had been made with him by the district attorney in exchange for his testimony against Shanks and Mrs. McPeters.

"I think there was a rumor of 50 years," Jennings said.

"I don't think I'll get the death sentence," he said. "I don't think I will."

Jennings testified that Mrs. McPeters initially offered him $5,000 to help Shanks and herself dispose of her husband, whom, she had testified, had abused and mistreated her and their 3½-year-old son, D.J.

Testimony also indicated that McPeters, a 17,000-a-year plant superintendent for Delta Solvents & Chemicals Co. in Odessa, had $39,000 in life insurance coverage and that he and Patty McPeters, had a common-law marriage as early as 1979. Both had been divorced.

Jennings testified that his friend Shanks and Mrs. Peters, whom he first met in his Wichita Falls apartment Saturday, July 26, had solicited his help "to get" McPeters, and that he and Shanks drank beer and whiskey heavily that weekend and that Sunday night when McPeters was fatally stabbed.

"I was supposed to help Rex and Patty (kill McPeters)," Jennings testified.

Initially, he said that they had planned to use his 20-gauge shotgun to slay McPeters but that they never purchased shells for the firearm, which was in the trunk of Mrs. McPeters' car, he said.

Jennings said he, Mrs. McPeters and Shanks talked of killing McPeters with the shotgun by ambushing him in his Odessa house or assaulting him in an Odessa residential area but figured that such action would be "too noisy" and would alarm neighbors.

"We decided not to do it (shoot McPeters) in the house with the shotgun," Jennings said, "because it would make too much noise, plus we didn't have any shells."

INSTEAD, he said, Shanks broke into the McPeters house, and let Mrs. McPeters, his traveling companion on the drunken binge, into her house and they in turn took from the house the intended murder tools—a butcher knife and two steak knives.

As it turned out, Mrs. McPeters' husband had changed the locks on the house after she had left him in mid-July and her old key to the door locks no longer would fit.

Jennings said he and Shanks drank more and more bottled beer that Sunday afternoon and night.

Jennings said he was "feeling good" with the effects of the alcohol.

"I wasn't staggering, falling down or frothing at that mouth," Jennings admitted. "Or passed out or dead," suggested McLeish.

Shanks, who was driving Mrs. McPeters' car, drove to the Warfield Truck Stop between Midland and Odessa. There, Jennings testified, Mrs. McPeters called her husband, told him that her car had broken down, and asked that he drive out to help her and their son, D.J.

Afterward, testimony indicated, Shanks drove the car to an Interstate 20 service road. There, Mrs. McPeters and her son stayed in the car, and Shanks and Jennings waited in a field to ambush the man when he came to the aid of his wife. Jennings' wife, who then was his fiancée, was out in the field, too, but took no part in the plot or in the stabbing, Jennings said.

Once McPeters arrived at the supposedly stalled car, Shanks, with the butcher knife in hand, ran up on McPeters and stabbed him in "the gut," Jennings said.

Jennings said he stayed back, had left his knife in the car, and only joined in the ensuing McPeters-Shanks struggle when McPeters apparently was gaining the advantage over Shanks, who cried "He's cutting me!"

Jennings said he then kicked McPeters in the neck and face. "I could have hurt him pretty bad," he said.

"Is there any doubt in your mind that your conduct was critical to the death of Mr. McPeters?" Joers asked Jennings.

"I think it was," he replied.

Jennings' wife was to take the witness stand today in testifying against Shanks. In the trial's first two days, the state presented 10 witnesses, including law-enforcement investigators. McLeish made at least five motions for mistrials, but each motion was denied by Judge Pat Baskin.

DOE 'operative' sent to meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Energy Department official wanted to send an employee traveling incognito to a meeting of a low-income group. Was it a government spying scheme or just an attempt to listen without attracting attention and abuse.

Tina Hobson, DOE consumer affairs officer, says she was ordered to send a DOE employee as an "operative" dressed in blue jeans and a flannel shirt to a Denver meeting of the National People's Action Council.

Not so, says the official, Armand "Rock" Reiser. He says the whole thing was a big misunderstanding and he never used the word "operative."

But Ms. Hobson said both she and an aide heard Reiser use that term three different times and both came away from the Jan. 26 meeting in a state of shock.

"We just couldn't believe it. I am old enough to have lived through the McCarthy era and certainly the Watergate era and I thought nobody was interested in going back to those days," Ms. Hobson said. "You don't ask government bureaucrats to spy on citizens."

She said the decision was not reversed until she appealed to others connected with the Reagan administration.

Reiser admits suggesting a DOE employee go to the meeting and not identify himself, but he said that was because Ms. Hobson had complained that her staff members had been shouted at during earlier meetings with the group.

"I said that since the purpose of these meetings was to get feedback, perhaps it might be better to send people in and not identify them as DOE personnel," he said.

But Ms. Hobson said Reiser made it clear that an undercover DOE employee would be better able to find out what the group was really planning and thus keep Energy Secretary James Edwards from being "blind-sided" if he ever met with it.

He said his discussion of clothing was meant to ensure that the DOE employee did not appear at the meeting wearing "a three-piece suit or a mink coat. You've got to be sensitive to the groups you are going to visit."

Ms. Hobson said she appealed Reiser's decision to James Atkins, who had been a member of the Reagan energy transition team. Atkins contacted Ben Rusche, a South Carolina friend of Edwards.

Reiser, who served as an aide to Edwards when he was governor of South Carolina, says he reversed his decision to send an unidentified DOE employee to the meeting after a three-way phone conversation with Rusche and Ms. Hobson.

"She gave me a compelling argument she had not presented in our earlier meeting that it made sense to let this group know that the secretary was interested in hearing their views. With this information, I reversed the earlier decision," Reiser said.

Instead, Ms. Hobson was sent to the Feb. 14 meeting of the council, a Chicago-based coalition representing the elderly, minorities and low-income people in 36 states.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The fur may fly when Matilda, a cranky female koala, spots her competition, officials at the San Diego Zoo say.

For five years, Matilda has been the lone female in the only koala colony outside Australia. And most of the time, Matilda's mates — Kough Drop, Gum Drop and Waltzing — have been climbing the walls, their romantic advances usually rebuffed by bared claws and shrill snarls.

Zoo officials hope that will change early next month, when six other koala females arrive from Australia.

"It's going to be interesting. She's been the 'queen bee' around here for a long time," said koala keeper Jane Jacobson.

At age 6, Matilda still has several breeding years left and "we're hoping for another healthy youngster," said Ms. Jacobson.

But there hasn't been much hanky-panky since a romantic interlude between Waltzing and Matilda three years ago. That produced Koobor — an aborigine word meaning "koala boy." Koobor also gives his temperamental mom a wide berth.

"She prefers being alone," said Ms. Jacobson. "She tends to be high-strung, the nervous type. She tends to take the males as a threat."

For some time now, males have only been placed in her cubicle during her fertile cycle. But that's had unfortunate results. The males get swatted and scatched, they eat Matilda's food, she gets unnerved, stops eating and her weight drops drastically.

Several suitors got the message even more painfully when Matilda bit their furry ears.

Purchased from Australia's wildlife service, the six females and one male were scheduled to arrive Wednesday on Qantas Airlines, but a stewardess strike delayed the shipment for two weeks.

Penny Pachyderm II dead, zoo reveals

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Penny Pachyderm II has eaten her last peanut and suffered her last indignity.

The 12-year-old African elephant, who gained notoriety four years ago when she fell into a moat surrounding her pen and had to be floated out, has been put to sleep because of a broken leg that never healed properly, Abilene zoo officials say.

She weighed several tons when she slipped into the moat in 1977 and broke her right rear leg. After several attempts to hoist the animal from the moat, water was pumped into the canal and Penny came bobbing out of her predicament.

But zoo director Jack Joy said the broken leg never set properly and Penny — named for her predecessor at the zoo — was developing a "noticeable curvature of the spine and (the leg) probably affected her whole viscera."

"She wasn't in any pain," Joy said, but "she was becoming uncomfortable. She initially responded to treatment (for the leg injury), but she has deteriorated since November."

He said elephants are very aware of any change in routine —

"These animals really know when you're trying to put something over on them," he said — so Penny's handlers began changing her daily schedule so she would not be suspicious when she was brought out of her pen Monday for the lethal injection.

Special lessons in motherhood provided for pregnant gorilla

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

STONEHAM, Mass. (AP) — How do you teach a 220-pound gorilla about childrearing? "Very carefully," says Deborah Schildkraut, a behavioral psychologist and mother of two, who has been giving lessons to Gigi, a pregnant lowland gorilla.

Officials at the Stoneham Zoo felt the 8-year-old gorilla, who is five months pregnant, needed instruction because she was raised by people at the Cincinnati Zoo, as was Sam, Gigi's 11-year-old mate.

So they've provided talking dolls, videotapes and help from Ms. Schildkraut, director of behavioral research for the Boston zoos.

The lessons have been conducted through the bars of Gigi's "apartment" for the past seven weeks.

But Gigi's chances of raising her own child are very low. Ms. Schildkraut said 90 percent of gorillas who have their babies in captivity are unable to care for them.

"Gorillas learn about being mothers in the wild by watching other gorillas," she said. "Instinct is not enough. Motherhood needs more than just the biological portion. It needs learned emotions and experience."

Gigi's "maternal education program" began with a lesson in hand signals from Ms. Schildkraut. The gorilla has learned to pick up toys and other objects, including a two-pound fur-covered coffee can, on cue from the psychologist.

By offering Gigi praise and grapes, Ms. Schildkraut has taught the gorilla to cuddle the coffee can and hold it to a breast.

A talking doll dressed in a custom-made gorilla suit will be used to teach Gigi how to respond to a crying baby. The gorilla also will see video tapes of gorillas and human mothers caring for their offspring.

Ms. Schildkraut, 31, sees the experiment as an important step in saving animals faced with extinction.

Sotelo decides against purge

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's moderate new premier today decided against a sweeping purge of the military and rejected a call for a coalition government including Socialists and Communists to meet the threat of another coup.

The premier, Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, was sworn in at a ceremony in the royal residence attended by leaders of the 350 parliamentary deputies held hostage for 18 hours earlier this week in an abortive military coup.

In one of his first acts as premier, Calvo Sotelo decided against a purge of the largely right-wing army brass still left over from the 40-year Franco dictatorship who are believed to have plotted the coup.

He also rejected a Socialist call for an all-party coalition to meet the threat of further military interference with Spanish democracy. The generals might have regarded the inclusion of Socialists or Communists in the government as a direct provocation.

However, when the lower house of Parliament confirmed Calvo Sotelo by a large majority Wednesday, speaker Landerino Lavilla called for vigorous measures to punish the military men behind the coup three nights ago.

"We demand punishment for those responsible for the coup and we proclaim our faith and confidence in the democratic institutions," Lavilla declared as the deputies cheered King Juan Carlos for his angry refusal to join forces with officers of the army and the Civil Guard seeking a return to military dictatorship.

Only one general, the army commander of the Valencia district, was under arrest so far. But the deputy chief of staff of the armed forces, Maj. Gen. Alfonso Armada Comin, was dismissed, and an authoritative source close to the king said other senior generals also were implicated.

Armada Comin, 61, was probably the military man closest to the 43-year-old king, having supervised his military training as a youth and been his chief military aide. But the source said when he and other senior generals urged Juan Carlos to support the conspiracy, he told them: "Your coup will succeed over my dead body."

The source said the generals called on the king at his palace about 5 p.m. Monday and argued with him for hours. Contending that regionalism, Basque terrorism and political squabbling were threatening to tear the nation apart, they tried to persuade him to accompany them to the Cortes, or Parliament, and dissolve it in favor of a military council headed by Armada Comin or Maj. Gen. Jaime Milans del Bosch, the commander of the Valencia military region.

As the generals and the king argued, Lt. Col. Antonio Tejero Molina and 200 other men of the Civil Guard invaded the Cortes and took the members of the lower house hostage. Milans del Bosch proclaimed a state of emergency in Valencia and ordered his troops to impose a curfew and occupy strategic positions. Instead of throwing in with the rebels, the king donned a military uniform and all his medals and in a post-midnight telecast ordered the army to put down the attempted coup. The 11 other area military commanders stayed with him, the Valencia commander hurriedly retreated and canceled his orders, and Tejero Molina surrendered after 18 hours.

When the Cortes was invaded Monday night, it was preparing for its second vote on the nomination of Calvo Sotelo to succeed Premier Adolfo Suarez, who resigned three weeks ago.

Duke University lab has own ocean depths, mountaintops

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — At Duke University's F.G. Hall Laboratories, it's just a short walk from the deepest ocean to the highest mountaintop.

In one corner is the chamber in which three divers recently broke the world record for simulated underwater depth by working under conditions equal to 2,250 feet beneath the sea. The divers spent their 34th day "under water" Wednesday.

In another of eight interconnected chambers, birds fly in a wind tunnel at simulated elevations of more than 18,000 feet. The other chambers host rats, dogs and goats under a variety of pressures, temperatures and gas mixtures.

In addition, the university's medical center treats patients suffering from embolisms, gas gangrene and bone ailments. It also serves as a regional facility for treating divers with decompression sickness, commonly known as the "bends."

"There's not a lot (else) going on now because of our efforts on the dive," Dr. David Harris said as he directed a tour of the diving facilities. Harris was involved in a previous diving record in his native England.

But even as he spoke, three patients were being treated for high-pressure oxygen treatments in one chamber and birds were being trained to fly in another.

Dr. Peter Bennett, head of the labs, said the results of the latest "Atlantis" dive, third in a series, have been worth the bothers of constant publicity and interruptions in lab routine. He said he is already seeing ways in which those results can be applied in areas far beyond the ocean bottom.

New knowledge could, for instance, help doctors understand anesthetics, said Bennett, himself a professor of anesthesiology. "We don't really know how anesthetics work," he said. "We just give the patient a drug, and out he goes."

Other data from the dives could lead to a possible new treatment for multiple sclerosis, help for victims of exposure and hypothermia and for people whose blood fails to clot normally, and development of the oceans as an energy resource, he added.

Eye bank works again

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Someone in San Angelo has restored sight today because of the Lions Club Eye Bank.

When the news that a pair of eyes was available for transplant was broadcast, action moved quickly, according to Margie McCain, secretary of the District 2-A1 Lions Eye Bank here.

It happened Tuesday, she said.

"George Parker, a local ham operator who listens on the eye emergency network, had heard that an eye was available for transplant in El Paso," she explained. "He contacted me and I, in turn, called El Paso. A Southwest Airlines plane left at 9:45 p.m., landed in Midland at 10:30 p.m. and my husband and I picked up the container and immediately drove to Sterling City."

She and her husband, Lion member C. E. McCain, were met there by H.B. Brancel of San Angelo, a past district governor of Lions who is also active in the Eye Bank.

"He took the eyes on to San Angelo where Dr. John Savage, ophthalmologist, scheduled surgery for 8:30 a.m. Wednesday."

"Cases like this must be handled quickly," said Mrs. McCain.

She gave credit to all of the persons involved who volunteered their time so that someone could have restored sight.

"So many people helped," she said. "Even Southwest Airlines did not charge us for the freight involved in transporting the eyes—they said that they were glad to be a part of this."

Mrs. McCain says that the object of the Eye Bank is the conservation and restoration of human sight, prevention of blindness and eye research. Established in 1972 as a district project, the Eye Bank is supported solely by Lions clubs, donations and memorials. District 2-A1 is composed of 25 counties from Midland on the west to Buchanan Dam on the south and Brownwood on the east.

"To the thousands of blind people in the United States, the ability to see again is being made possible by generous people who donate their eyes after death," said Mrs. McCain. "Besides the donor, many other people are involved—doctors, nurses, ophthalmologists, ham radio operators (in this area they are Parker and David Baker), the Department of Public Safety, and Lions Club members, all of whom donate their services."

The ophthalmologist performing a corneal transplant will charge his usual fee, she explained, but the eye tissue is provided to him free of charge. She also said that the Emergency Eye Bank network meets daily at 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. If tissue is available anywhere in the United States, this information is given to the local office and arrangements made for shipment to the proper destination. The eyes are packed in ice and shipped in special containers, usually by air freight. "Captain Wade of the local Dept. of Public Safety is most cooperative in helping with delivery in our particular area," said Mrs. McCain.

The local office, located at 2203 W. Illinois in space provided by Midland Memorial Hospital, is open from 9 a.m. through noon Monday through Thursday. Its telephone number is 685-1550. Two 24-hour emergency numbers are available at 697-1633 and 684-6544.

In 1979, three enucleations and one transplant were handled and, in 1980, one enucleation and two transplants.

Maureen Reagan tracks her father's footsteps

By MARK SAUER
Copley News Service

Maureen Reagan may try next year to join her father in Washington, but it won't be for just a weekend at the White House.

The president's eldest daughter, an outspoken feminist, businesswoman, veteran campaigner and former actress, is mulling backstage urgings that she seek the Republican nomination for the seat held by Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif.

"When I was an actress I never considered running for office. But I've always been active and I've helped a lot of people get elected over the past 15 or 20 years. Now it has gotten to the point where some of them are saying, 'Maybe it's your turn,'" he said.

The twice-divorced Reagan, 40, testified to her ardent support of the Equal Rights Amendment while acknowledging her father's opposing stand.

"Elizabeth Stanton (a 19th century suffragist) is my role model. We are soul mates. When she was a girl, her father, a member of Congress from New York and a lawyer, invited her to work at his firm researching cases involving women. She discovered a law which said that when a man died, his estate would be left to the eldest son, with no mention of the wife."

"She told her father she thought that was wrong and he said when she was older she could go to Albany and try to change things. Later, when she became quite outspoken about women's rights, her father disowned her."

"I've learned that a little friendly disagreement with my father is the better way," she said in an interview.

Reagan, whose mother is actress Jane Wyman, the president's first wife, reluctantly criticized the 74-year-old Hayakawa.

After twice insisting she wasn't going to say "anything bad about Sam, he's a nice man," Reagan admitted, "No, I'm not satisfied with the job he's doing. There is a new generation of political people in California with new goals and ideals. We need to be considered."

Reagan said she has not yet attempted to organize a staff or raise money for a campaign.

But she will decide whether to run "before the end of the year." Hayakawa's Senate seat is the only elective position she is interested in, she said.

Asked why she would consider challenging a Republican incumbent, Reagan said, "I'm not the first to think about it, others have already broken the ground." Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. also has said he is seriously considering a run at Hayakawa's seat.

Aside from the ERA issue, Reagan sounds very much like her father's daughter.

"I see no adverse effect from my father's election on the women's rights movement. The politics of the 1980s will have to be taking the best from the left and right and forging a new middle philosophy. We must continue to make progress as individuals, regardless of who is in the White House."

For now, Reagan is a Los Angeles radio talk show hostess and a businesswoman. More than two years ago she joined a company that recruits U.S. firms for international trade. Aside from stumping on her father's behalf, she said most of her speeches these days are to trade associations. But that doesn't mean she won't turn her considerable oratorical talent to the political arena if the climate becomes right.

"I've been making political speeches for 20 years and whether I become a candidate or not, I don't anticipate stopping now."

Q. Our concrete driveway is beginning to get pitted from slush containing salt melting on it. Is there any way to prevent this damage? — Arthur L., Chicago.

A. A mixture of one part boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine, warmed for about 20 minutes in a pail of boiling water (be careful of fire hazard and do not heat the mixture over open flame) and applied with a mop or brush to the concrete surface will give an almost colorless protective film to the driveway. Two coats should be applied, allowing eight hours between applications for thorough drying of the first coat. This treatment should be applied when the temperature is above 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

Shrove Tuesday falls on March 3

This year, Shrove Tuesday falls on March 3. In early centuries, the three days preceding Lent were known as Shrove-tide, when people confessed and received penance. To be absolved of one's sins is to be "shriven" so the day before Ash Wednesday became known as Shrove Tuesday.

Years ago, rich foods, such as butter and eggs, were forbidden during the Lenten feast. As a result, whatever was left of these ingredients the day before Lent was used to make pancakes. And pancakes became the traditional food for Shrove Tuesday.

The story is told that on Shrove Tuesday some 500 years ago, a housewife in Olney, England, became so involved with her baking that she forgot the time until she heard the church bell calling all to be shriven of their sins. In her haste, she forgot to remove her apron, and she ran to the church, skillet and pancake in hand. In years to follow, other women did the same, and it became a contest to see who could reach the church steps first. The famous Olney pancake race had begun, and it has continued to this day.

Another, more recent Shrove Tuesday tradition is International Pancake Day, a three-day festival held in Liberal, Kansas, the "Pancake Hub of the Universe." A major event in the festival is a pancake breakfast, where thousands of guests from across the country consume more than 15,000 pancakes with syrup.

But the real highlight of the festival is the international competition. In 1950, a member of the Liberal Jaycees read about the Olney race, and decided to hold a pancake race in Liberal in friendly competition with the women in Olney. The idea took hold, and it is now an annual event.

Contestants in the Liberal race must wear a dress covered with an apron. They run over a 415-yard S-shaped course, and must flip their pancake twice while running: once at the start of the race and once near the end. The woman who completes the race fastest with her pancake still in her skillet is the winner. A transatlantic phone call establishes the international winner of the Liberal-Olney competition each year.

Times change, of course. But the traditional of eating pancakes on Shrove Tuesday has remained. This year, however, with increased emphasis on physical fitness and weight-watching, a new Shrove Tuesday tradition may emerge.

Appeals Court upholds award against Eli Lilly & Co. concerning DES

By RUTH LANDA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A state appeals court has upheld a $500,000 award against Eli Lilly & Co., a concern that manufactured DES, the synthetic estrogen drug linked to cancer in some women whose mothers took it during pregnancy.

The decision could pave the way for hundreds of such lawsuits nationwide, according to a lawyer for the plaintiff.

But the pharmaceutical company vowed to appeal the verdict.

The Appellate Division of State Supreme Court on Tuesday unanimously affirmed a Bronx jury's decision to award Joyce Bichler, 27, of San Francisco, damages totaling $500,000 in her suit against the company, brought to court as a representative of the drug industry.

During a five-week trial in 1979, it never was proven the Indianapolis-based concern made the pills Ms. Bichler's mother took during pregnancy. Ms. Bichler contended the pills caused her to suffer cancer at age 18 and require a radical hysterectomy to remove her cancerous reproductive organs.

The 1979 lower-court verdict found that all producers of DES — or diethylstilbestrol, a synthetic hormone once used to prevent miscarriages — share responsibility for adequate drug testing.

The drug was given to pregnant women in the 1940s and 1950s. Ms. Bichler's mother took the drug for a period of three weeks in 1953. In 1971, a link between the drug and cancer was found. It also was determined that DES was ineffective in preventing miscarriages.

The four-judge appeals panel wrote in a 20-page decision: "The specific problems presented by the widespread use of generic drugs, which render identification almost impossible to the user... cannot be permitted... to allow some manufacturers to escape their liability altogether by means of this shroud of anonymity."

According to trial testimony, no concern ever had tested the drug on pregnant animals.

"It was well-known, before Food and Drug Administration approval was sought, that substances given a pregnant woman could pass through the placenta into the fetus. It also was well-known that there were available tests on mice which, if conducted would have demonstrated within six months the danger of cancer developing in the fetus after it had reached its maturity," the judges wrote.

Ms. Bichler, a social worker, reacted with "elation" to the panel's finding, said her lawyer Alfred S. Julien.

"There are literally hundreds, perhaps a thousand, of these cases pending," he said, noting that he is handling 50 DES-related cases.

Lilly spokeswoman Jean Palmer said Tuesday the company was "shocked" by the ruling and planned to ask the New York Court of Appeals, the state's highest court, to overturn the verdict.

"We continue to maintain that our product did not cause the damages alleged," Ms. Palmer said. "The public interest is not well served by expecting a manufacturer to see farther in advance than the current use of medical science — or by holding a manufacturer liable in a case where its product is not involved," she said.

"The inevitable result of such an unrealistic expectation will be to prolong the development of needed new drugs and to delay their availability and increase their cost to patients."

Hearty peasant foods such as Chicken Paprikash and Green Rice are ideal for weeknights or chic company meals. The firm, plump grains of fast-cooking rice team with chopped spinach to make an inviting base for chicken with a luscious sour cream-onion sauce.

Chicken, fish good budget stretchers

Creative American cooks enjoy experimenting with the foods of other lands. In their "culinary travels" they often begin with the flavors of faraway places, adapting special dishes to fit food budgets and busy lifestyles.

Chicken and frozen fish are great budget stretchers that can bring a world of foreign flavors to the dinner table. Combined with satisfying rice, the results can be hearty, family-pleasing meals that take less than an hour to prepare.

Time-conscious cooks will want to choose a rice that cooks unwatched, freeing up time to toss a salad or prepare a vegetable to round out the meal. When the package of rice says "parboiled," it's an assurance of perfect results every time.

Many traditional ethnic peasant foods have become quite chic and fashionably "in" because of the rich, hearty flavors and dollar-stretching satisfaction they provide. Hungarian-

Food ideas

Use green peppers raw as much as possible. They supply vitamin C (ascorbic acid), which is highly soluble in water.

You can make a good and speedy sauce for meat loaf by cooking onion and green pepper in a little butter or margarine and adding drained, canned tomatoes. Season with salt and pepper and a pinch of ground allspice.

Grated parmesan cheese makes an excellent addition to mashed potatoes. If the mashed potatoes are to be heated in the oven, you can sprinkle some of the cheese over the top and dot with butter.

inspired Chicken Paprikash with Green Rice is one such dish. It is elegant and delectable, and you'll want to keep it in mind next time company is coming. Chicken is seasoned liberally with paprika, topped with a delectable onion-sour cream sauce, and served over spinach-flecked rice. Those who think paprika is just for garnishing will quickly change their minds after just one taste!

If scallops are a favorite but they don't fit into your food budget plans, look for a substitute: frozen cod, thawed just enough to cut into cubes, makes a great affordable alternative. In Cod and Rice Saint Jacques, a variation of a French favorite dish, green onion-flecked rice provides the base for cod in a memorable pimiento and mushroom sauce.

Year of disabled observed

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 1981 designated as the International Year of Disabled Persons, organizations and individuals all over the country will be participating in the United Nations-proclaimed observance.

More than 1,400 communities, the governors of all 50 states and 280 national organizations are working with the U.S. Council for IYDP, according to Alan A. Reich, council president.

Each of the communities, which have joined the council as Community Partners, is developing a program to meet the needs of local disabled persons. "In every case, the aim of the community is to provide opportunities for disabled citizens to participate more fully in community life — to work, be educated, shop, go to church, visit parks and theaters, just like everyone else," Reich said.

"Disabilities are not necessarily handicaps, and this is nowhere more true than in America, where attitudes have begun to change," he added.

Reich pointed out that there are 35 million Americans with physical or mental disabilities and that, together with their family members, more than 80 million Americans are directly affected by disability.

"Obviously, creating an environment in which disabled persons are able to better help themselves is in the national interest," he said.

In proclaiming 1981 the IYDP, the U.N. chose as the theme, "Full participation of disabled persons in the life of their societies." The U.S. Council, formed in 1979 to promote the observance in this country, is chaired by David T. Kearns, president of Xerox Corp.

THE BUTCHER

Oriental cooking good, economical

By MERLE ELLIS

Oriental cooking — Chinese, Japanese, Korean and Vietnamese — is beginning to find its place in day-to-day cooking in many American kitchens — and rightly so! Oriental cooking offers a marvelous means of feeding a family economically, particularly when it comes to meat.

Most recipes for Oriental meat dishes call for relatively little meat compared to Western meat dishes. A pound of beef, thinly sliced and cooked in a Chinese stir-fry dish with vegetables and, perhaps, a bit of tofu can satisfy twice as many hungry people as that same pound of beef served broiled — even with baked potatoes.

Many markets around the country are taking advantage of the interest in Oriental cooking by providing various cuts of meat and poultry pre-cut specifically for Oriental dishes. They also are taking advantage of you.

One of the supermarket chains in my part of the country has a section in each of its markets set aside for "Meat for Oriental Dishes." In that section, you can find all manner of beef, pork and chicken cut into thin slices or cubes, ready for any quick cooking Oriental recipe. What you need to be aware of is that you probably will pay a lot more than you need to for any cut of meat that the butcher has sliced or diced for you.

In the market in my neighborhood, the "Meat for Oriental Dishes" section had "Pork for Sweet & Sour" — selling for $1.69 per pound. What that was, in fact, was pork spare ribs cut into chopstick-manageable pieces. The same cut of pork could be had in another part of the meat case for $1.49 a pound, and there were other cuts of pork every bit as good for Sweet & Sour that were selling for even less.

"Chopped Steak for Oriental Dishes" (little cubes of lean beef) was available for $3.49 a pound. "Teriyaki Steak" (the same basic cut as "Chopped Steak," only sliced into thin strips rather than cut into cubes) was going for a bit more — $3.98. "Boneless Chicken for Oriental Dishes" was $1.98. Every cut selling in the "Meat for Oriental Dishes" section could be bought for considerably less in some other part of the same meat case, if you knew what to look for and were willing to do a little slicing or dicing on your own.

By all means DO include Oriental dishes in your meal planning. Doing so will help you eat better for less. But don't buy meat for Oriental dishes in that part of the meat case so designated.

Here are a few basic cuts that are perfect for Oriental dishes and will cost less than those the butcher cuts for you.

Many, if not most, Oriental recipes that call for beef specify flank steak. But that has become so expensive that even butchers don't cut it for Oriental dishes. The best cut calling for thin strips or cubes of beef is top round. Top round is the most tender muscle of the beef round, and works wonderfully diced or sliced for quick stir-fry cooking. In the same market where "Chopped Steak" and "Teriyaki Steak" were selling for $3.49 and $3.98 per pound respectively, top round was $2.66 a pound. That's a saving of 83 cents or $1.32 a pound, depending on how you cut it. Cutting a piece of top round into small cubes obviously is not so difficult that you should pay 83 cents to have it done for you. Slicing one into "Teriyaki Steak" is not much more difficult. Simply slice it thinly across the grain just as you would carve a London broil.

The best cut of pork to look for when you are cooking Oriental is some part of the Boston shoulder butt. You will find it in the meat case cut into either "pork steaks" or "Boston shoulder roast." There is a small amount of bone (often none at all) in these cuts, and it is a simple matter to cut them into cubes or slices for Oriental cooking.

When it comes to chicken for Oriental dishes, the same rule applies as when buying chicken for any chicken dish: If you're concerned with saving money, always buy whole chickens and cut them up yourself. You would be money ahead to buy a 3-pound fryer at 59 cents a pound, whack or whittle off a pound of boneless meat for your Oriental dish and toss the rest in a pot for soup, rather than pay $1.98 for a pound of "Boneless Chicken for Oriental Dishes."

Chestnuts not limited to roasting

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

For years, my contact with chestnuts was pretty much limited to those sold roasted by vendors on street corners.

Then I looked into the many wonderful ways cooks have devised for using the juicy nut. It can be a key ingredient for desserts, confections, sauces and stuffings. There is even a chestnut flour used to make soup, biscuits or fritters.

In times gone by, the tree on which the chestnut grows was a landscaping favorite in this country. People used to knock the branches with poles after the first frost to obtain the shiny brown nuts.

American cooks use the chestnut for turkey stuffing at Thanksgiving or Christmas, and at dinner parties chestnuts are served with a glass of wine. Braised, they combine well with red cabbage, brussels sprouts, mushrooms, onions and carrots.

Americans regard the chestnut mainly as a holiday food or autumn treat, but in many lands it is a staple. In southern Europe it has been cultivated for centuries and eaten much as we eat wheat or corn. Peasants in Italy, Greece and Spain still go to work with a pocketful of chestnuts to sustain them during a hard day in the fields.

One favorite French sweet is creme de marrons, a purée of chestnuts sweetened with vanilla syrup, blended with whipped cream and used as a filling for layer cake. Another is this recipe for Marron Coupe.

1 can (7 ounces) marrons glaces
4 ounces brandy
1 quart vanilla ice cream
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
Marinate marrons in brandy for 40 minutes. Drain and chop marrons coarsely, reserving brandy syrup. Line sherbet dishes with part of chopped marrons. Place portion of ice cream on top and top that with remaining marrons. Pour brandy syrup on each portion and top with whipped cream. Chill. Serves 8-10.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

An idea that's sew handy

DEAR HELOISE:

There are so many practical ways of doing things in my household, that I often don't realize that other people may not know about them.

One handy thing is to pin a strip of wool or a stretch band around the neck of the sewing machine head to hold pins and needles. So handy when close to the work area.

My mother always did it, and it was the first thing I did when I got my new machine years ago. — Sonia Labrucherie

My mother always did it that way too! They taught us well and we love them for it. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise: Many senior citizens complain of loneliness.

There's a sweet lady in my neighborhood who not only invites young children into her home but teaches them worthwhile projects.

At present, my 9-year-old daughter and a neighborhood boy go to her house at a specific time for a knitting lesson. Not only have they learned to knit but they are also learning to crochet.

They really love it, though the elderly neighbor was afraid they would think of her as just an "old woman."

Well, here's what my daughter thinks of her — she considers her as her best friend, and you know how children her age feel about their best friend. — Mrs. H.W.

Think about it, senior citizens, male and female! There's a child out there who could really benefit from your expertise, be it in cooking, handwork, a craft, or just a few good stories to tell. Children need your companionship as badly as you need theirs. Extend yourself a little, and see what joys you reap! — Heloise

YARN HOLDER

Dear Heloise: To me this was, and is, a life saver. When I was about to start some needlepoint, there were so many colors of yarn that I became discouraged.

Just as I was about to give up, ZING! I thought of something.

A sock hanger! I put the straight edge on the back of a piece of cardboard and taped it down. I attached a separate hanger for each color of yarn.

The result was the neatest group of yarn ever. I had been saving the sock hangers for small doll clothes, but found this a much better use, as the yarn hangs neatly on the hooks. — Betty M. Berlin-geri

That's nifty! And you might go one step further and make a standup back, like a picture frame, and your yarn will hang tangle-free. — Heloise

MEASURING SOFTENER

Dear Heloise: I like to use liquid fabric softener, and the brand I use has the cap as a measuring device, which is very convenient.

However, as careful as I would try to be when pouring out the softener, when I'd replace the cap, some always managed to drip down the side of the bottle.

Well, I finally wised up and saved the measuring cap from an empty bottle. Now the fabric softener is measured in the spare cap, and then the cap, softener and all, goes into the final rinse.

The cap is large enough to sort out easily before putting the load into the dryer. Sometimes I forget, but the clang in the dryer soon lets me know my forgetfulness. — Dallas Reader

BABY'S BLANKET

Dear Heloise: You know those pretty satin blankets that are so difficult to keep on baby?

Just add two very small strips of self-gripping tape fasteners (wrap the blanket around the baby to decide where you want them).

When you wrap the baby in the blanket, the blanket stays on and no more fighting with a slippery blanket. — Ramona Carnicle Learned a good tip while bringing up baby? Send it to Heloise care of this newspaper. Sorry she can't answer your letter personally but, sure as those dimpled darlings are the dearest, she'll print the best hints received in her column.

Banana Avocado Dessert and Banana Blueberry Compote are no-bake treats that will please your family as well as conserve precious energy.

Save time and energy with great tasting no-bake banana desserts

Nowadays, the energy crisis is on everyone's mind. As a result, more and more cooks are seeking ways to save energy in the kitchen. One tried and true solution is to serve dishes that require no cooking and a minimum of preparation.

Desserts are always a popular item on family menus, and one way to please your family as well as conserve fuel is to feature easy desserts. Versatile, rich and mellow bananas lend their talents to a pair of no-bake treats that prove to be a time and energy-saving bonus for the cook, as well as deliciously satisfying.

This convenient fruit is ready to use by simply zipping off the skin. And the naturally-occurring sugars make bananas a particularly good ingredient for desserts, since their sweet flavor can replace some of the sugar called for in many recipes.

What's more, bananas make dessert-time a highly nourishing occasion. With their wide variety of important vitamins and minerals, plus energy-giving carbohydrates, bananas are a bountiful supply of nutrition. And these banana recipes take no fuel to prepare since they are both no-bake confections.

Bananas and avocados make an exotic, tempting combination in Banana Avocado Dessert with a minimum of effort. Cream cheese accented with zesty lime juice, coffee and cinnamon is blended with sliced bananas. This marvelous banana melange is then served over creamy avocado slices and sprinkled with toasted coconut. The result is a colorful, appetizing and nutritious dessert that will impress guests and family — and most importantly conserve energy in the kitchen.

Bananas also star in a super-fast dessert called Banana Blueberry Compote. Orange juice and coconut rum liqueur lend special flair to a dish that's full of contrasts in texture and taste. Best of all, it ranks as a gourmet effort and takes just minutes to make — with no cooking required!

BANANA AVOCADO DESSERT

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened at room temperature
 1/2 cup milk
 2 tbsp. lime juice
 1 tbsp. honey
 1 tsp. instant coffee powder
 1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon
 4 bananas, sliced, about 4 cups
 1 avocado, peeled and sliced
 2 tbsp. toasted coconut

In medium bowl beat together cream cheese, milk, lime juice, honey, coffee and cinnamon. Add bananas, mix to coat well. Cover. Chill. Just before serving, arrange avocado slices on platter, spoon banana mixture over avocado. Sprinkle with toasted coconut. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

BANANA BLUEBERRY COMPOTE

1 cup (8 ounces) vanilla flavor yogurt
 1/2 cup orange juice
 1/2 cup coconut rum liqueur
 3 cups sliced, ripe bananas (about 3 bananas)
 1 cup blueberries or sliced peaches
 Walnut halves

In small bowl blend together yogurt, orange juice and liqueur. Layer banana slices, blueberries and yogurt sauce in dessert glasses. Garnish with walnut halves. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Soup kitchen provides food for the unemployed

By MARIAN FOX
 Associated Press Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The scene is straight from a Depression-era film: down-and-out men and women lined up at a church for soup and day-old bread.

Six mornings a week at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Mary Wrigley supervises the soup line and she says it's growing longer.

"The economy has a lot to do with it," Mrs. Wrigley said in an interview. "Most of the men are laborers who find work in warehouses, lifting and storing and building. Some can't read and write. We've helped them fill out forms and things."

Mrs. Wrigley, who voluntarily took over the soup line from the Rev. Ronan Foley in 1977 when he moved to another church, says she usually finds about 50 persons — mostly men — lined up behind St. Mary's when she arrives at 7:30 a.m.

"We serve eight to nine gallons of soup a day, making it from whatever we have on hand. I'm usually finished by 11 a.m.," she said.

Since a story about the soup kitchen appeared in the city's morning newspaper, The Commercial Appeal, Mrs. Wrigley hasn't had to worry much about what to put in the soup.

"My shelves are stacked. Plus we've had fresh fruit, candies, cakes," she said. "A doctor brought a case of canned soup and when we run low on homemade, we just open some cans. It's been fantastic."

Since the newspaper story, Mrs. Wrigley estimates about $1,500 worth of food has been donated to St. Mary's and $1,600 in cash. "This will keep us going for quite a while."

Relieve stress the weird way

By ERMA BOMBECK

Some people have the weirdest ideas for relieving stress. The newest one is called a flotation tank. For $25, you climb into a wooden box with eight inches of 93-degree water to which 800 pounds of salt has been added and for the next hour float in complete darkness and get in touch with your feelings.

Doesn't that sound like fun? Sorta like being sucked up in your sweeper bag to get your mind off your split ends.

Frankly, the flotation tank sounds like just another way to get the phone to ring.

It's nothing new. Back in the '40s every slick magazine on the newsstand was pushing for the mid-afternoon hot tub soak. It was to be the housewife's answer to boredom, depression, neurosis, unfulfillment, lower back pains, a short pay week and unrequited love.

It always showed the woman immersing herself into three feet of suds, leaning back with her eyes closed and a sensuous smile on her lips . . . lost in space.

It never worked for me. Even with my eyes closed, I smelled the mildew on the shower curtain and realized if I cut off any more on the bottom, I'd end up with only the rings.

I'd pretend my legs were only as big as what surfaced on the water and became very depressed when the rest floated to the top.

And I would strain to hear the muted voices outside the bathroom door. "I'm telling." "What kind of animal is it?" "You got that all over Mom's fur collar." "You're bleeding all over that bedspread." "A lot of people live without a car."

Sometimes, a note would come under the door and as I struggled to beach myself, shivering from the cold, yet consumed with curiosity, I would open it to read, "Can we split a Pepsi?"

The worst part of the hot bubble bath was the dreaming. How do you get spaghetti stains out of a plastic tablecloth? What does it mean when the lawn around the septic tank turns to quicksand? If a kid toes in and you don't do anything about it, will she still be invited to the prom?

After awhile, I stopped trying to relax by artificial means. I made up my mind a hot bath couldn't solve all my problems. I just stopped sweating the small stuff.

Some say I'm too practical. I oversimplify things. Like when my friend said her dog was getting too fat and she paid 57 cents a can for dietary dog food, I said, "Why don't you just feed him less?"

She looked at me like I should have known the answer, but I honestly didn't.

I don't have stress, but I think I'm a carrier.

Bureaucracy of three working smoothly

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (AP) — It may be the world's smallest international bureaucracy — three people. More unusual still, the founders want to keep it that way.

Four years ago the West German, Belgian and Dutch provinces surrounding this international crossroads decided that informal, direct cooperation made more sense than commissions involving their national capitals — Bonn, Brussels and The Hague. The provinces each sent one full-time employee to work together to hash out problems of transportation, pollution and other crossborder issues.

"One of the major advantages is that we have a direct communications link between local governments in other countries, and the chance to come to a common point of view and then to find solutions, which is the very shortest route," said Joseph Wouters, one of the three members of the Euro-Region Commission.

"If we had to go through embassies or foreign ministries, we'd have to wait years. That's the way it used to work."

This experiment in informal Pan-Europeanism will be on display March 23-24 for a larger attempt at European cooperation. The 10 heads of government in the European Community will gather in the Maastricht town hall for this year's first Common Market summit under the Dutch presidency.

"We've developed a little piece of Europe here on our own," said the queen's governor of Dutch Limburg Province, J. Kremers. He boasted that the region is nearly borderless after 2,000 years of common tradition, saying these provinces often share more in common with their foreign neighbors than with their own capitals.

Dutch Limburg is a sort of peninsula, at one point just five miles wide, dangling down from the southeast Netherlands and bordered by West Germany to the east and Belgium to the west and south. It has always been isolated from the rest of the Netherlands.

You can see Belgian francs and German marks as well as Dutch guilders at the Saturday market here, and many people can at least get by in all three languages. The Maastricht patois of Dutch is heavily spiced with German and French words — and often difficult for "foreigners from Holland." Even the terrain of rolling hills contrasts sharply with the characteristic flat, canal-lined countryside of the rest of the Netherlands.

The region was a northern border of Roman rule 2,000 years ago, and the first Dutch poet, Henric van der Veldeke, wrote a poem in the 12th century called "All Roads Meet Here." The area has been ruled by Roman, French, German, Austrian and Spanish governors and kings.

The Euro-Region officials from the four provinces, Dutch Limburg, Belgian Limburg and Liege and Germany's North-Rhine Westphalia, point to several concrete achievements. They have devised a common program for protection of small lakes and have developed a regional helicopter rescue service, based in Aachen, West Germany. With a budget of 160,000 guilders ($80,000) shared equally by the four provinces, they fund cultural and sports exchange programs as well.

Wouters said there are at least two other major regional cooperation efforts in Western Europe: one in the Basel, Switzerland, area involving France and Germany, and one in the German Boden Lakes region including Switzerland and Austria.

That doesn't count the 25 very local cross-border associations, six of which are in this Limburg region. The Euro-Region Commission here plans to approach the summit conference to ask for ratification of a European Parliament plan to grant more authority to the cross-border organizations.

Jean Daniel Murph, sister of former Speaker of the House Price Daniel Jr. and executrix of his estate, leaves the courtroom Wednesday following a hearing in which a State Court Judge denied a change of venue to move the child custody case of Vickie Daniel, who is charged in the Jan. 19 murder of Daniel.

Dallas policeman dies

DALLAS (AP) — A 20-year-old Dallas man is being held in lieu of $250,000 bond in the murder of a city police officer who was shot when he confronted a nude man early Monday near White Rock Lake.

Officer John McCarthy died shortly before noon Wednesday at Dallas Presbyterian Hospital, two days after he was shot in the head as he confronted a nude man and ordered him to leave a park area near the lake, a police spokesman said.

Stephen Ray Nethery was charged with attempted capital murder following the incident. After McCarthy died the charge was amended to capital murder, the spokesman said.

Nethery is being held in the Dallas County jail under $200,000 bond on the murder charge and a $50,000 bond from an armed robbery charge filed against him last August. He also faces a probation violation charge stemming from a prior burglary conviction.

McCarthy was shot early Monday after he and his partner encountered a nude man and a partially-nude woman in a car off a road near White Rock Lake.

The officers told the couple to leave the scene or be arrested for indecent exposure.

The assailant stepped from the car, said, "Officers, I'm sorry," and fired several shots at McCarthy, who staggered 125 feet before collapsing, police said. McCarthy was struck in the head by a single bullet that broke into fragments upon impact. He underwent surgery at Presbyterian Hospital early Monday morning and had remained in critical condition until he died.

Daniel denied venue change

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for Vickie Daniel say a change of venue is not essential in her efforts to retain custody of two young children, but they still plan to ask the state Supreme Court to order the child custody hearing moved out of the hometown of slain former Texas House speaker Price Daniel Jr.

Mrs. Daniel, 33, charged with murder in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her estranged husband, lost a bid in state district court Wednesday to have the hearing moved to the East Texas city of Tyler.

Judge W.G. "Dub" Wood refused to move the hearing, but he did postpone the proceeding until Friday morning.

Mrs. Daniel sat in her attorney's office two blocks away from the courtroom Wednesday rather than attend the three-hour hearing.

Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said he would contest the judge's denial and ask the state Supreme Court in Austin today to either stop the proceedings or transfer the hearing to Tyler immediately.

However, Haynes said he didn't consider the change of venue a must.

"I think we will probably be able to put 12 people in the box," said Haynes.

Alleged madam due back in court

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Lawyers for Theresa Brown, alleged madam of a local brothel who reportedly kept a list of some 3,000 customers hidden under her bed, were headed for court today in an effort to have her conviction on a prostitution charge overturned.

Lawyer Pat Maloney said he was prepared to present arguments for his motion to throw out a conviction rendered earlier this month against Ms. Brown by District Judge James Barlow.

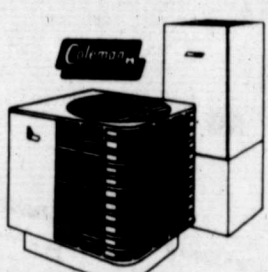

Ms. Brown had pleaded no contest Feb. 3 to a charge of aggravated promotion of prostitution. Barlow then found her guilty and sentenced her to three years in prison, but left open the possibility of probation.

Since then, however, Ms. Brown fired her first lawyer, claiming he pressured her into the plea-bargain arrangement, and hired Maloney to try to withdraw the plea and get the conviction set aside.

Should Barlow reject the motion for a new trial, he would then determine whether Ms. Brown was eligible for probation.

She was arrested last Oct. 2 along with two other women when vice squad officers raided her house and reported finding a "trick list" containing the names of 3,000 men.

Clements facing opposition

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Opponents of Gov. Bill Clements' free summer school program for failing students say it is a "$10 million blank check" and a "liberal oddity."

The measure sponsored by Rep. Bill Blanton, R-Dallas, would provide state funds for pilot programs in 26 school districts. The programs would last four years and would operate under a Texas Education Agency plan.

The bill won preliminary approval Wednesday on a 103-36 vote and was expected to come to a final House vote today, which would send it to the Senate.

House members tabled, 68-66, an amendment by Rep. Paul Colbert, D-Houston, to guarantee that summer school would not replace remedial programs during the regular school year and that students would not be required to attend.

After his amendment was tabled, Colbert said the bill should be defeated as "a $10 million blank check for this biennium" to the Texas Education Agency and the school districts.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, said the Legislature already is on its way toward spending more money than Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated will be available in 1982-83.

"You don't have the money to pay for this program," he said, calling it a "liberal oddity."

"If you Republicans want to come down here and pass a tax bill to pay for your big spending proposals, that's your responsibility," he said.

Rep. Milton Fox, R-Houston, told Hollowell that Comptroller Bob Bullock probably would issue a new estimate showing additional funds would be available.

Few bad apples spoil lobbyists' barrel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)

Lobbyists have something of an image problem in Texas, but their defenders say they are an essential part of the democratic process and provide vital information for legislators.

"I don't think lobbyists are as slimy as they're made out to be," said a former House member. "I really was never offered an outright bribe except once, and that was from a guy in my district who thought that's how the big boys did it."

Lobbyists and some legislators say there is no monolithic "lobby," but numerous lobbies, each providing a voice for a part of society.

"We're salesmen, really, that's all we are," said Gene Fondren, one of most experienced and effective lobbyists in Austin. "We represent a segment of the public interest. No public institution can operate in a vacuum, and we represent one segment."

Fondren says he realizes his profession isn't held in high regard.

"That's unfortunate, but it's like everything else: a few bad apples can spoil the whole barrel," he said. "There are bad apples in every profession. We're no exception."

Hard-working professional persuaders "perform valuable services for their clients," and most of them are "honorable men and women," said Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth.

Lobbyists represent businesses, labor unions and professions. They also speak for special interest groups ranging from consumers to prisoners, sport fishermen, anti-abortionists, homosexuals, marijuana smokers, and wildflower enthusiasts.

They research issues and draft legislation, and many legislators say they couldn't do their jobs without the information they get from lobbyists.

"It makes it easier for you to communicate, not because you're buddy-buddy with the guy, but because you understand the person," said real estate lobbyist Gerhard Schulle.

Confession bill argued

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)

Oral confessions should be admitted as evidence only if they are the tape-recorded words of the defendants, not the recollections of an officer who listened to the statement, an Austin lawyer said while arguing the matter on the Senate floor.

But attorney Roy Minton's opinion was challenged, in heated debate Monday before the Senate Jurisprudence Committee, by the West Texas senator who sponsors a bill to permit oral confessions and several law enforcement agents arguing such confessions would be a welcome weapon in their war on crime.

Texas is the only state that bars oral confessions, and Gov. Bill Clements has made the legislation part of his recommended anti-crime program.

Committee Chairman Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, said he has asked for attorney general's opinions on the oral confession bill as well as a Clements measure that would allow judges to tell jurors about parole laws.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, sponsored the oral confessions bill, which would require law enforcement personnel to write a confession down and swear to it before a judge within 48 hours of hearing it.

Several police chiefs and sheriffs told the Senate Committee on Jurisprudence the bill is needed. Dallas County Sheriff Don Byrd said police would "treat it with tender care and won't violate it."

San Antonio singer-songwriter named best new artist

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Singer-songwriter Christopher Cross, whose pop-rock music won four of the most important Grammy Awards his first time out, says sweeping the top awards was "definitely a dream come true."

Cross' debut album, "Christopher Cross," was named best album of the year Wednesday night at Radio City Music Hall. And the big hit from the album, "Sailing," was named record of the year and song of the year—and since Cross wrote the song as well as sang it, both awards went to him.

In addition, Cross was named best new artist.

As he made his third of four trips to the stage, to accept the award for best album, the chubby 29-year-old who leads a six-man pop-rock band also called Christopher Cross, said, "I should say this is getting old but I can't. It's wonderful."

In the 23 years the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has been bestowing its gramophone-shaped statuettes, such artists as Frank Sinatra and Stevie Wonder have won more Grammys in one year. But it's unprecedented for an artist to sweep the three top Grammys in his debut year.

Last May, in an interview with the Associated Press, Cross said he knew he was too plump to be a sex symbol and he'd have to make his way on his music.

Kenny Loggins won the Grammy for best pop male vocal performance, the one category in which Cross was nominated but didn't win. Loggins raised his Grammy when he accepted it for "This Is It" from his album

"Alive," and said, "This one's for my Dad."

Later he said, "The song was written for my father. He was going into surgery, a life and death situation. He seemed to have made the choice he wasn't going to make it. The song said that you've got the choice how it goes." Did his father pull through? Loggins laughed and said, "He sure did."

Bette Midler won the Grammy for the best pop female vocal performance, for "The Rose," title song of the movie in which she played a rock singer fighting addiction. Barbra Streisand and Barry Gibb were awarded the Grammy for the best pop vocal performance by a duo or group, for "Guilty."

In country music, the winners were George Jones, Willie Nelson, Anne Murray, and Emmylou Harris and Roy Orbison.

Jones, who was heralded by Charley Pride as "the Hank Williams of today," got a standing ovation from the audience in the 6,000-seat hall after winning the Grammy for best country male vocal performance for his tearjerker, "He Stopped Loving Her Today."

In the best country song category, Willie Nelson, who lost out to Jones on performance, took the Grammy for "On the Road Again."

Nelson later spoke indirectly about the drinking problem that had greatly crippled his career: "We don't want to go into all of that. Everybody has ups and downs. I've had downs, until the past year and a half."

"It was realizing you do have friends and people care. Once you do that, you have a chance to come back. People help you on that right track back and the rest of it is up to you."

Canadian Anne Murray won the Grammy for the best country female vocal performance with her single "Could I Have This Dance?" She said afterward: "I really was surprised. I thought Barbara Mandrell would win."

In 1974 Miss Murray won a country vocal performance Grammy and in 1978 a pop vocal performance Grammy. "There seems to be some confusion as to whether I'm a country or pop singer," she said. "It doesn't really matter as long as people listen and enjoy."

Wynette to be portrayed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sissy Spacek was widely acclaimed earlier this year for her portrayal of country music superstar Loretta Lynn in the autobiographical movie, "Coal Miner's Daughter."

Actress Annette O'Toole is hoping for the same reception when she plays another popular country singer, Tammy Wynette, in the CBS television movie, "Stand by Your Man," to be broadcast the evening of March 31, 9-11 p.m. EST.

George Jones, center, holds the Grammy Award presented to him Wednesday evening as Conway Twitty, left, and Charley Pride stand next to him. Jones was honored as best male country performer for his single "He Stopped Lovin' Her Today." (AP Laserphoto)

Billy Joel holds his Grammy Award honoring him as the best male rock performer for his album "Glass Houses." (AP Laserphoto)

'Charlie's Angels' leaving

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "How did Tony Thomopoulos cancel 'Charlie's Angels'?" the joke begins.

"I don't know. How?"

"He put on a bikini and hollered, 'Freeze, Turkey!'"

No, no, insists ABC, that's not the way it happened. Programming chief Thomopoulos didn't really cancel "Charlie's Angels" at all. He just put the show on "teletext hiatus."

Hmm. Some exotic condition caused by sunspots? No, it's explained, "teletext hiatus" means that "Charlie's Angels" will leave the ABC prime time lineup, but it may reappear for a while —

Program presented

The Chopin Junior Music Club presented a program of American music at the home of Ashley Burns this month.

Selections played included "Piano Time," "The Miller," "Yankee Doodle," "America," "Ten Little Indians," "The Entertainer" and "New Orleans Blues."

There were a total of 18 selections played.

say, this spring, when ABC will want to "burn off" those episodes already made but not aired.

Anyway, one of modern TV's true marvels is about to expire, which brings forth some questions that might have been nagging occasional viewers of the show that patented jiggle.

You might have wondered, as I have, just how the heard-but-not-seen Charlie (admirably voiced by John Forsythe) came by his wealth. He certainly didn't pay for his yacht-board caviar-and-champagne soirees with the fees collected from the capers he sent the Angels on. I mean, how much can you collect for breaking up a massage-parlor protection racket?

I suppose that was just part of the mystique, an element that never bothered dedicated fans of the show. Which brings us to the next question: Why did so many women watch "Charlie's Angels?"

The essence of the series, as far as I could determine, was the display of the feminine form in various aspects of motion — the Angels were indefatigable in the matter of bikini-clad chases.

While that never bothered me, I was surprised to discover that it apparently didn't bother many women, either.

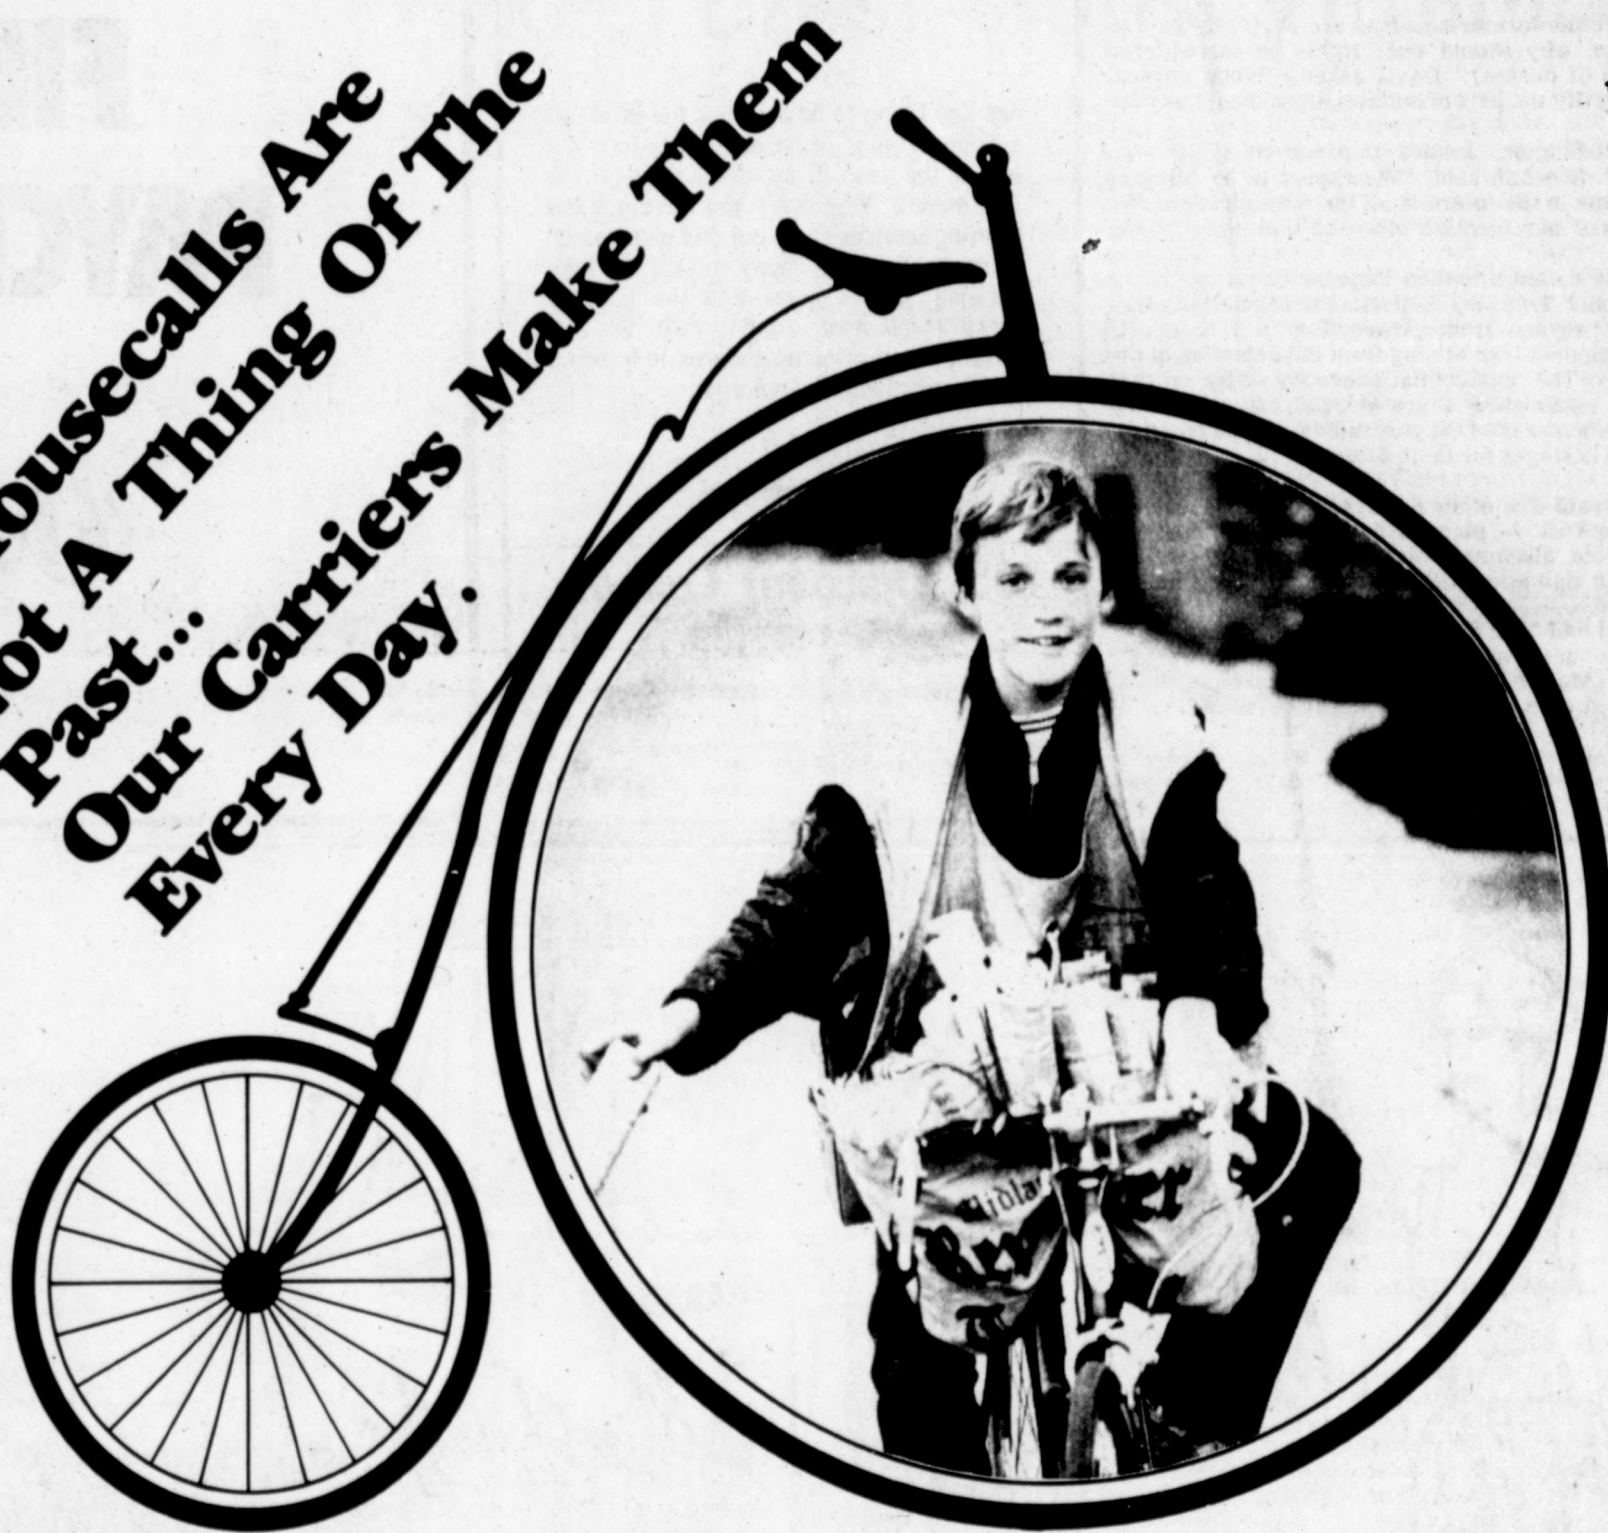

Indeed, a friend of mine — a woman of unyielding feminist principles — once told me she didn't mind the fact that "Charlie's Angels" was her 10-year-old daughter's favorite show. She thought women were positively portrayed.

Huh?

"You'll have to admit, it's the only place on television where the women always get the upper hand."

Hmm. I hadn't noticed.

More hostages likely to join suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As many as five more former hostages from the U.S. embassy in Tehran are expected to join Marine Staff Sgt. John D. McKeel Jr. in seeking $5 million damages from the government of Iran, a lawyer says.

Attorney James Davis also left open the possibility that if the action against Iran fails, the former hostages may sue the United States for damages.

The federal court suit filed Wednesday seeks to freeze about $91 million in Iranian assets in California and maintains that former President Jimmy Carter exceeded his power in granting Iran immunity from legal action.

"While the former hostages are obviously glad to be home, why should their rights be surrendered because of duress?" Davis asked. "When governments ratify the acts of outlaws, they should pay for it."

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Mark T. Sheehan said, "We expect to be filing at some time in the future in all the hostage cases. We will make our position clear at that time to the court."

But he called attention to presidential executive orders and Treasury Department regulations that prohibit anyone from prosecuting in U.S. courts claims against Iran arising from the detention of the hostages. The presidential executive order on that subject established a presidential commission to decide whether the U.S. government should compensate the hostages for their detention.

Davis said five other hostages — all servicemen from the West — planned to join the suit, but he declined to disclose their names. Davis said $5 million in damages will be sought for each plaintiff.

McKeel had been a guard at the U.S. embassy for only nine days when it was seized. During his captivity, McKeel was beaten and "lost a tooth when he refused to give anything except his name, rank and serial number," Davis said.

The Marine also suffered kidney damage and was kept in solitary confinement for 42 days, his lawyer said.

Iranian commander questioned

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The former commander of Iran's air force is under interrogation in Tehran on suspicion of laying the groundwork for the U.S. attempt to rescue the American hostages, the official Pars news agency reported.

It said the former commander, identified only as Gen. Baqeri, is suspected of arranging the removal of anti-aircraft batteries in Tehran, Balbosar, Shiraz and Mashad April 23, one day before the attempt.

"His pretext for this act was that he wanted to send the artillery to Kurdistan, but of course, they were never sent," the head of Iran's Military Islamic Revolutionary Court, Hojatoleslam Mohammed Reyshahri, said.

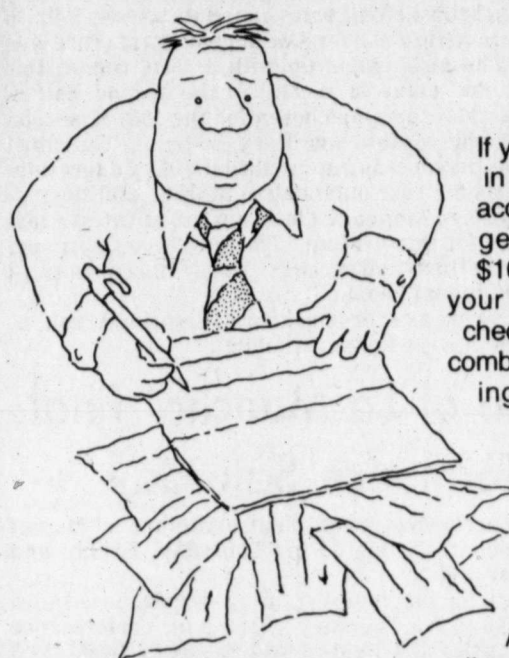

The U.S. effort failed, and eight U.S. servicemen died in the attempt. The hostages were finally freed

Jan. 20 after 444 days in captivity.

Reyshahri also said that Adm. Mahmoud Alavi, former commander of Iran's navy, was acquitted of charges he spied for the United States but was sentenced to eight years in prison for collaboration with U.S. military advisers, cooperating with "opposition elements" and possession of narcotics.

Meanwhile, the Arabic Gulf News Agency reported that Palestinian guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat and eight Moslem leaders will arrive in Tehran Saturday for two days of talks aimed at ending the five-month-old war between Iran and Iraq.

Iran has said repeatedly it will not consider a cease-fire until Iraq withdraws its invasion forces and drops its demand for sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab estuary, Iraq's only waterway to the Persian Gulf.

MHS-Lee battle is always serious

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

There is really not much riding on today's 8 p.m. Chaparral Center clash between the Midland High Bulldogs and the Midland Lee Rebels as the two teams close out regular season play, but it is a battle between the cross town rivals and that angle is never taken lightly by either team.

Of course, the 30-3 Bulldogs are headed to the bi-district playoffs regardless of how the contest turns out tonight. The Pack wrapped up the district title Tuesday with a 93-66 haymaker to the chin of Abilene Cooper. But the 'Dogs don't want their momentum stopped heading into the playoffs.

The Bulldogs are riding a 16-game winning streak since losing to Altus, Okla., in the Hobbs tournament back in December, and it's not likely that they would like that winning streak to end at the hands of the school from across town.

Lee, on the other hand, would like nothing better than to knock off the No. 9 ranked team in the state. It would be a saving grace to what thus far is a 14-19 season. The Rebels would like to keep from losing that 20th contest and they remember the drubbing they got at the hands of MHS in the first half.

Midland High's Herbert Johnson, in tongue and cheek fashion, said he would like to score 44 points against Lee to set a school scoring record. Of course, that was just off the cuff talk after a recent victory, but it does show how the players like to face each other in this matchup.

A Lee upset would surely spurn hopes for the Rebels for next season since they return four of five starters. It would be a good way for the Rebels to take off the tennis shoes for the summer.

Lee has played some super basketball in the second half. They own victories over Odessa High and Big Spring and they had a big upset over Odessa Permian. The Rebels also dropped a two-point decision to Abilene High last Tuesday and they lost by a mere point to San Angelo. They have been in every game.

But MHS now must be thinking of the playoffs. However, they still don't know who their bi-district opponent will be. Tuesday it looked as if Denton was the shoe-in opponent, but the Broncos dropped a 51-48 decision to Denton Tuesday night to throw the District 6-5A race into shambles.

Denton can still win the title Friday when they face the 10-22 Lewisville Farmers in Lewisville. Should Denton, now 19-12 on the year, stumble against powerless Lewisville Friday, they would have to meet Denton in a district playoff game, probably Saturday at a neutral site. All 6-5A observers still think Denton will be the Bulldogs' opponent in the bi-district round of the playoffs. Denton's loss to Denton Tuesday ended an eight-game winning streak by the Broncos.

Tonight's game, which was originally scheduled for Friday night, had to be switched to tonight to keep from conflicting with the Region I girls 5A playoff tournament at Chaparral Center. In that tournament, Friday night's action will feature Lubbock Monterey against El Paso Irving at 6 p.m. and Lewisville against Lubbock Dunbar at 8 p.m. The two winners will meet Saturday at 8 p.m. for the championship and the winner there will advance to the state tournament in Austin.

Shed no tears for OSU

By BOB BAUM
Associated Press Writer

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — There are five seniors on the No. 1-ranked Oregon State basketball team, but shed no tears for next year's Beavers.

"Sure we have some backbone left," veteran Coach Ralph Miller said as he talked about next season's prospects. "And it would be hard to believe we would not come up with a good recruiting year."

Steve Johnson, Ray Blume, Mark Radford, Jeff Stout and Bill McShane are seniors. But four others who play regularly — Lester Conner, William Brew, Charlie Sittion and Rob Holbrook — will return.

Obviously, the biggest need for next year's Oregon State squad will be in the middle. Johnson is averaging nearly 21 points per game and is the only genuine center on the Beavers' roster.

So assistant coaches Jim Anderson and Lanny Van Eman are scouring the countryside for a center.

"We feel we need at least two centers, maybe three," said Anderson.

One thing hasn't changed, Miller said. UCLA still is getting the top centers out of the Los Angeles area.

"The two best in Los Angeles are still committed to UCLA," Miller said. "We talked to both of them but we couldn't even get them to visit the campus."

It would take three or four more years of national prominence for the Beavers to compete with the Bruins for so-called "blue chip" prep centers in the Los Angeles area.

Outside of center, the Beavers have quite a bit of experience elsewhere. Conner, a junior, and Brew, a sophomore, are the quickest players on one of the country's quickest teams. They could form a blazing backcourt next season.

Inside, the 6-8 Sittion is a starter and is considered one of the best freshmen in the country. Holbrook, a 6-8 junior, is an outstanding shooter with two years of experience.

There is also 6-7 sophomore Jamie Stangel, who is sitting out this season as a red-shirt, and a handful of players who have spent most of the time on the bench while their more experienced colleagues rolled up a 23-0 season record.

"We've got a lot of hidden talent that nobody has seen," Anderson said.

Portland St. to eliminate basketball

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Basketball and five other sports will be eliminated at Portland State University, Athletic Director Roy Love said on Wednesday.

Also eliminated will be men's and women's gymnastics, men's and women's swimming and women's fencing.

Love said the cuts will save about $270,000. No money will be diverted to other sports.

He cited the lack of an adequate basketball facility, problems of scheduling, costs of out-of-state recruitment and the fact that the basketball program involves only 15 players.

The action leaves the school with six sports in each of the men's and women's athletic departments.

The men will have football, wrestling, baseball, golf and cross country. The women will have volleyball, basketball, softball, tennis and cross country.

The university also will compete in track, but only in running events.

PSU, an independent, will drop from National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I to Division II in all men's sports except baseball.

Love said the university could not continue to maintain two major sports, and he said football has shown a better potential than basketball to produce revenue.

The women's sports will drop to Division II in the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women with the exception of volleyball and basketball.

The women's basketball team will join a new conference consisting of Boise State, Idaho, Idaho State, Montana, Montana State, Eastern Washington and Weber State.

The university also will seek Division II conference affiliation in football with Puget Sound, Eastern Washington, Santa Clara, Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo and Cal State-Northridge.

Elimination of basketball means that Coach Glen Kinney, who is in his third year as head coach, will be looking for a job. His contract will end June 15.

The action came the day after the basketball team beat U.S. International of San Diego 91-80 in overtime to bring its record to 7-19. The Vikings have one game remaining, Saturday at Seattle Pacific.

Portland State began its basketball program in 1955 when it became a four-year college. The school has won 349 games and has lost 344.

Wake Forest stuns Virginia

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Frank Johnson wanted something special to remember for his last home game.

He got it. "You never want to lose your last ballgame at home," said the Wake Forest basketball star after helping the 12th-ranked Demon Deacons upset third-ranked Virginia 73-66 in overtime Wednesday night. "It was just a tremendous team effort."

THE HOME folks at Winston-Salem, N.C. watched the senior guard key the victory with six points in the overtime period and score 22 points overall for the Demon Deacons. His efforts helped Wake Forest battle back from a 14-point deficit late in the first half.

"This is a great basketball team, and it's about time we got the credit we deserve," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy.

For a while, though, the Demon Deacons didn't live up to Tacy's superlatives.

"We played the worst half, I guess, of any we've played all year," said Tacy, talking about a 34-20 deficit that Wake Forest trimmed to 34-24 at intermission. "You just aren't going to beat anyone shooting 28 percent."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland was hopeful that his team would keep its perfect Atlantic Coast Conference record intact. The Cavaliers had lost to Notre Dame Sunday after 28 straight victories dating back to last season.

"We played a very fine first half," said Holland. "The first ten minutes of the second half we obviously didn't play very well. We let them get back into the game, let them get started and then they played very well down the stretch."

Another highly-ranked team was upset Wednesday night when No. 10 Tennessee went down to Georgia 76-75 in overtime.

ELSEWHERE, second-ranked Louisiana State stopped Mississippi 74-67; ninth-ranked Kentucky turned back Mississippi State 78-74; No. 11 North Carolina routed Georgia Tech 76-51; 17th-ranked Maryland beat North Carolina State 76-72 and No. 20 Louisville whipped St. Louis University 97-85.

Four of Johnson's points came in the last 15 seconds of overtime. Johnson gave the Deacons a 65-63 lead with 1:37 left in the extra period by sinking two free throws. The free throws came after Cavalier center Ralph Sampson fouled out.

After Jeff Lamp tied the game on a jumper, Wake Forest center Jim Johnstone sank two more free throws to give Wake Forest the lead for good at 67-65. Lamp led all scorers with 26 points, while Sampson scored 14 for the Cavaliers.

Terry Fair's dunk shot at the buzzer gave Georgia a dramatic overtime decision over Tennessee. Fair's shot came after Eric Marbury had failed on a one-and-one free throw opportunity with seven seconds remaining for Tennessee.

Regarding his winning basket, Fair said, "I was wide open and looked for him (Dominique Wilkins) to throw it inside. I knew I had time left to put it in."

Wilkins wound up with 24 points, while Fair finished with 18.

Ethan Martin scored 21 points and Rudy Macklin sparked a late breakaway as LSU beat Mississippi and extended its nation-leading winning streak to 26 games.

Win for fun

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — It's a frustrating experience for anyone as victory-oriented as Ben Crenshaw.

"Winning is what it's all about here," Crenshaw said before teeing off today in the first round of the $300,000 Bay Hill Golf Classic.

But, said the engaging guy who ranks near the top of the heap on the PGA Tour, winning is becoming more and more difficult. The frustration lies in his habit of coming close, then having victory elude him.

"It's so hard to win a tournament now it's positively unbelievable," Crenshaw said. "We're getting more good players all the time. The courses are better and the players are better. I can see the difference just since I've been out."

Crenshaw, 29, now is in his ninth year on the pro circuit. He came out with gaudy amateur credentials, including three national collegiate titles, and won in his first start as a full-fledged member of the Tour.

But he went into a slump after that, didn't win for two full seasons then began his slow, steady climb. He's now won a total of eight American titles and is considered by his peers as one of the game's premier performers.

His record this season supports that assessment. He's done everything but win. He lost in a playoff at the Bing Crosby, was third in Hawaii and has been seventh in two other events.

MC ends season tonight

...Unless, just unless, it's shredded pride. The Westerners, as you know, have never lost to Midland in Snyder and that's a tradition WTC would like to keep alive. And that's just the thing that has Midland College Coach Jerry Stone worried.

WITH THE WJCC title safely stowed away, Stone fears his Chaparrals' attention may be focused on the vital Region V tournament at Brownwood next week, the first step on the road to the nationals at Hutchinson, Kan. "They could slip up on us and I'd hate to see the season spoiled that way."

Of course, the way the Chaps have been playing lately, MC should win in a waltz. WTC has about as much chance against MC as Notre Dame had against Virginia. The Chaps have reeled off 10 in a row and only a 57-55 win over Frank Phillips last week was even close. Midland has a 26-2 record and is 15-2 in WJCC.

WTC has twice been victimized by MC this season, but Midland has managed only three victories over the Westerners since it began playing in Juco circles in 1975-76.

IN THE March 5-7 regional at Brownwood, the top three teams from the Northern and Western conferences automatically qualify for berths while the fourth and fifth place teams in each league play off for the final two spots.

The winner will play the winner of the South and East Texas playoffs for the right to advance to the 32-team nationals. Cook is the power in the Northern Conference and Tyler is favored to meet the Region V winner.

"It feels mighty good to get the conference title sewed up before the last game and takes some of the pressure off the team for a change," Stone said. "We got ranked No. 1 in the nation from the first poll, started believing it and lost two two-point games at home last month. After those losses, we started putting everything back into perspective and concentrated on fundamentals."

CHAPTYSQUES—A crowd of 2,750 showed up for Monday's home finale against Odessa...Derrick Wilson, back from his father's funeral in Chicago, will be ready to see action tonight while 6-5 Ernie Tate, who missed last week's action with a bruised eye, showed no ill effects with a 13-point performance in the 96-80 win over OC...Six-six Charles Johnson, who sat about part of Monday's game with an injury, also is expected to be ready tonight...

Date set for strike

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball players voted Wednesday to strike May 29 if their dispute over compensation for re-entry free agent can not be resolved.

Representatives of the 26 major league clubs met for more than three hours with Players Association Director Marvin Miller in setting the date for baseball's second regular season strike since 1972.

The player representatives, comprised of the Association's executive board, approved and adopted a report by Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies and Sal Bando of the Milwaukee Brewers who have been serving on a study committee negotiating with representatives of club owners.

"Major league baseball players ought to have the same rights as other Americans, who, after an employment contract expires, are free to seek work elsewhere on the best terms they can negotiate without any new employer being required to pay compensation to the former employer," the report said. "The manpower compensation scheme put forward by the owners would violate that basic right."

The owners implemented the controversial compensation proposal last week. The major issue would provide unprotected roster players as compensation for premium or "ranking" free agents signing with a new team.

Miller said earlier: "It's a very radical proposal, it's no question how radical it is."

"The whole thrust is to inhibit free agency for many and end free agency for still more."

The executive board, which had until March 1 to set a strike date under terms of an agreement which averted a strike but left the compensation proposal open last May 23, said in a statement:

"In accordance with the provision of the Basic Agreement, the Major League Baseball Players Association hereby renounces that agreement with respect to the players selection right proposal unilaterally imposed by the club owners."

"In the event that a satisfactory resolution of this matter is not reached prior thereto, the players association shall strike beginning with all games scheduled to start on Friday, May 29, 1981."

The statement had been prepared prior to the start of the meeting. Only the day and the date was left open to be filled in.

Team doctors are watched closely

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Some athletes use drugs, but the National Football League and the National Basketball Association are trying to make sure their team doctors are not the suppliers.

The NFL has imposed strict rules to police the use of drugs handed out by their medical staffs. These rules are included in every player's playbook. The NBA has similar regulations.

"We understand the stresses of the job, but rules are rules," said Charlie Jackson, assistant director of security for the NFL. "Football players are human beings. They have the same strengths, same weaknesses, same desires, same sins. The only thing different is they work in a fish bowl."

In the NFL, teams must submit records to the league of all drugs prescribed. Dr. James Nicholas, physician for the New York Jets, says every time he writes a prescription, the drug must come from the team's inventory. "One copy of the drug purchase form goes to the state, one to the patient and one is kept for our records," he said.

JACKSON makes unannounced spot checks of the drug inventories to make sure each team's books are in order. The inventories are also monitored by Dr. Walter F. Riker, head of pharmacology at the Cornell University Medical Center. Riker compares dosage levels from previous years and reports back to the league.

The NBA's watchdog is Dr. Torrey Brown of Johns Hopkins University. "We check the doctors' logs against the total number of drugs left in the trainer's stock," said Brown. "I look for any drug that is abusive. The league is as rigid and honest about our records as any hospital or pharmacy."

Jack Joyce, the NBA's director of security, said the league is trying to prevent another scandal like the one that occurred involving the San Diego Chargers. In 1973, Dr. Arnold Mandell, a psychological consultant to the Chargers, was found to be overdispensing amphetamines.

THE CHARGERS' ownership, then-Coach Harland Svare and eight players were fined a total of $40,000 by the NFL. Mandell, who said he "made a contribution to the awareness of the amphetamine problem through professional football," was placed on five years' medical probation by California's Medical Quality Assurance Board.

Now both leagues closely monitor their doctors. "Each team is graded," said Jackson of the NFL. "We haven't had the need for any specific disciplinary action since the program was instituted."

But athletes don't have to rely on the team medicine chest if they want to use drugs.

"We can't control any athlete when he leaves the arena, but we're not about to bury our heads in the sand," said the NBA's Joyce. "In any large city, he can go around the block and pick up any drug he wants. Our problem is having evidence. We can't punish a player without proof, otherwise we're opening ourselves up to a lawsuit."

Jackson says the NFL has called the police to report suspected sources of illegal drugs obtained by players. "We're not an investigatory agency, but our integrity is at stake," he said.

Track season opens Friday

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

With the 1981 thinclads ready to unravel their dusty cleats Friday and Saturday at Fort Stockton's Comanche Relays in the first true test of the spring season, both Midland High and Midland Lee runners enter the season with some question marks that need answers.

Midland High coach Johnny Williams feels his Bulldogs will be "competitive" this season and is looking for a big year from several of his team members. On the other hand, Sam Volpe, the Lee head man, is not optimistic at this point, thinking, "I just hope we don't finish last." But Volpe is usually in this frame of mind at this time of year and the Rebels usually produce their share of awards.

HOWEVER, at first glance, it would appear that the Williams' Bulldogs will be improved over a year ago, despite the loss of state champion weightman David Simmons and James Lary, who was also a threat in the discus and shot put. Williams may also be missing regional high hurdle qualifier Jerry Zachery, who injured a leg in football and is not ready to compete in the hurdles. "We may get Jerry back before district, but he is not ready to race now," Williams said.

But the Bulldogs do have some talent to build around with Billy Taylor in the sprints, Bruce Fisher and Elston Montgomery in the hurdles, Robert Crawford in the 400 meters, Alan Chick, Jim Kemper and Jay Motta in the pole vault, an improved mile relay team and an exciting sophomore, James Beverley, in the 800 meters.

Taylor was a premier sprinter a year ago, placing third in the District 5-5A 100 meters. He has yet to run a sprint this year, however, he has been running hard and is expected to shine this year.

Montgomery already has a 40.6 in the 300 hurdles and Crawford owns a 51.9 in the quarter. Beverley is expected to improve and already owns a 2:02 in the 800. Montgomery, Bruce Philpy, Beverley and Crawford already have a 3:28 in the 1600 relay and the sprint relay should be good by district when the basketball players get out. Fisher was sixth last year in the high hurdles at district and could be a big boon to the hurdle corps this year. Williams also expects Chick, Kemper and Motta to improve greatly as the season goes along. "If we show something in the pole vault and sprint relay this year, we could be very competitive," Williams assessed.

LEE also has some outstanding talent returning, but the loss of versatile Phil Carleton and 800 ace Keevin Harper hurts the most, especially in the relays.

However, Robert Schooler returns to the 1600 meters as the defending district champion, and since the UIL has added the 3200 meter run, Schooler should be one of the state's best. He was second in the state cross country meet this fall. He could be one of the premier distance men in the state.

David Piccolo, the reigning 300 hurdles district champion, also returns and he is a sub-40 second runner in that event. Piccolo has been slowed by an injury and may not be in top form for a while.

Sprinters Darrin and Arthur Williams give Lee some speed to work with on the relays and they could team with sophomore Clarence Smith and Troy Barber for a sound sprint relay team. Weightman Keith Brown, a senior who was expected to be good in both the discus and shot put, pulled a hamstring muscle and will be lost from four to eight weeks.

The Williams brothers could give some punch in the sprints, but Lee will need some unknowns, like last year, to come through. Piccolo and Schooler are examples of unknowns to come through with district titles as juniors.

Lee and MHS will go against a an almost solid 5-5A field this weekend. Only Abilene Cooper is not entered in the meet and there are no teams from foreign loops to compete in Division III. The meet should give the teams a measure to go by for the weeks to come.

THE DIVISION I field will be made up of Stanton, Irion County, Ozona, Van Horn, Marfa, Presidio, Rankin, O'Donnell and Sanderson. Division II will feature Fort Stockton, Crane, Snyder, Monahans, Pecos, Lake View, Denver City, Alpine, Seminole, Fabens, Kermit and Brownfield.

The meet begins at 2:30 p.m. Friday with some field event finals and running prelims will start at 3:30 p.m. Field event finals will resume at 9 a.m. Saturday and running finals will start at 12:30 p.m. with the 3200 meter run.

MHS girls set sights on region swim crown

By MIKE CRUVER

A Midland High girls swimming team that is short on numbers but high in quality is one of the early favorites to capture the title at the Region I swimming meet being held on the campus of Texas Tech in Lubbock Friday and Saturday.

The top six swimmers from each district advanced to the regional meet and the top two finishers in each event at the regionals will qualify for the state championship meet to be held next week in Austin.

The girls of MHS are coming off the District 5-5A championship swim meet in which they won seven of 11 events in rolling up 87 points to easily outdistance the field.

LORI THOMPSON and Gretchen Koch paced the Bulldogs. Thompson won two events, winning the 200 freestyle in record district time of 1:58.08. That time beat the record on the region record books and stamps her as a strong contender in the event. Thompson also won the 100 freestyle with a 56.16.

Koch pocketed two first places in the district meet. She splashed to a new district record time of 25.35 in the 50 freestyle. Koch is swimming very close to the region record of 25.06 in this event. Koch added a win in the 100 backstroke in a time of 1:02.23. Andrea Freeman turned in a 5:24.05 in the 500 freestyle to capture first. Freeman's district record time is just two seconds off the region mark.

The Bulldogs are threats to win the region with their 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams. The 200 medley team set a new district record of 2:01.10 and the 400 freestyle teams splashed to a new district mark of 3:59.37. Freeman also qualified for the region with a second in the 200 freestyle.

Other Bulldogs that qualified for the regional are: Suzi Simpson, 500 and 100 freestyle; Julie Spough, 50 freestyle; and Janie Dowdle, 100 butterfly.

MIDLAND COACH Jesse Marsh said, "We will have to swim well to win the region. If everything falls into place we have a good chance."

David Whylaw's Lee girls didn't qualify as strong as the cross-town rival Bulldogs did. Emily Murrah was the only Rebel to grab a qualify with a first place win. She won the 100 breaststroke in a time of 1:16.15. Murrah also qualified for the regional meet in the 200 intermediate medley.

Other Bulldogs going to the regional meet are: Doreen McGookey in the 200 IM and the 500 freestyle; Sandi Colson, 100 and 50 freestyle; Lisa Breen, 100 backstroke; Sandra Malone in diving and the 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams.

Lee, who edged Odessa Permian 87-84 for the District 5-5A title, qualified 12 boys and the 200 medley and 400 freestyle relay teams but are not expected to really challenge for the regional crown.

The Rebels are headed by Cleve Carrens who was a two-event winner at the district meet. He won the 100 butterfly in 55.89 and the 100 backstroke in 58.78. Bruce Quenzer also qualified as a first-place winner as he captured the 200 IM with a clocking of 2:10.07.

Also qualifying for Lee were Ronnie Black in diving and the 50 freestyle; Mark Quenzer, 200 IM and 100 breaststroke; Jon Franke 50 and 100 freestyle; Andy Williams 100 backstroke, 400 freestyle and 100 freestyle; Les Hill, 100 freestyle; Mike Alvarado, 500 freestyle; Keith Huddleston, 100 breaststroke and Ricky Maley, diving.

Midland High's boys were shut out of the throne room at the district meet. Billy Worley turned in the best qualifying effort with seconds in the 500 and 200 freestyle. Others making the trip to Lubbock for the Purple Pack are Jack Preston, diving; Devin Williamson, 200 and 500 freestyle; James Chupp, 100 fly and 100 backstroke; Sean Roden 200 IM; Kendall Skinner, 100 backstroke; Todd Crawford, 100 breaststroke; Ronnie Wood, diving; Scott Weaver, diving; and two relay teams.

Mel Purcell also advanced Wednesday.

In other matches, Roscoe Tanner, the No. 5 seed, beat Tony Giammalva 6-2, 5-7, 7-5; 14th-seeded Mel Purcell beat Roger Vasselin of France 6-4, 6-2, and Terry Moor beat Ricardo Acuna of Chile 6-4, 6-2.

Also, fourth-seeded Brian Teacher defeated Peter Rennett 6-4, 3-6, 6-1; and Gene Mayer, the No. 2 seed, won 6-2, 6-3 over Marty Riessen; seventh-seeded Eliot Teltscher defeated Ferdi Taygan 6-4, 6-3; No. 12-seed Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia defeated Hank Pfister 6-3, 6-1; 15th-seeded Peter Fleming edged Jim Delaney 1-6, 6-4, 6-2, and Fritz Buehning beat Bruce Manson 6-4, 6-4.

Good news for Texas fishermen

Bill Province, regional director of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department headquarters in San Angelo, has some good news for fishermen.

Lake Spence has been a notably poor producer of black bass for some time now. Some local fishermen have attributed the poor fishing for the black bass to the increased population of striped bass. No so says Province. Province said that studies of striper stomach contents show that only one in a hundred will have been feeding on black bass. The striper's preferred food fish is the shad—80 percent shad says Province. Spence has been and will continue to be a good striper fishery Province forecasts.

THE GOOD news is that Province predicts that Spence will become a much better fishery for black bass over the next two to three years. This will result from the great increase of inundated growth resulting from the runoff from heavy rains over the past few months. The higher water levels have submerged shoreline vegetation that will convert to bass feed.

Province suggested that anglers try lakes O.C. Fisher and Ft. Phantom Hill for crappie. He said these lakes near San Angelo and Abilene, respectively, have been producing good stringers of fish.

The two nationwide organizations which use a standard system of measuring big game trophies are the Boone and Crockett Club and the Pope and Young Club. The Boone and Young Club is the record keeping body concerned only with animals killed by means of bow and arrow. The P & Y Club uses the Boone and Crockett Club's copyrighted scoring system.

The Boone and Crockett Club includes in its records animals meeting minimum entry scores and considers qualifying animals whether "picked up," archery killed or killed with firearms. "Picked up" trophies are heads or horns of animals found in the field which apparently died of natural causes.

The Boone and Crockett Club recognizes 29 North American game animals in its record keeping system. They include bears (black, grizzly, Alaska Brown and polar), jaguar, cougar, Atlantic and Pacific walrus, American and Roosevelt's elk, deer (mule, Columbia blacktail, whitetail and Coues), Canada, Alaska-Yukon, and Wyoming moose, Mountain, woodland, barren ground and Quebec-Labrador caribou, pronghorn, bison, Rocky Mountain goat, muskox, bighorn, desert, Dall's and Stone's sheep.

THE BOONE and Crockett Club has long been synonymous with not only trophy big game but with conservation. As part of its conservation program its sponsors research projects for graduate-level study. The club publishes six editions of their record book, North American Big Game, from 1932 to 1971. The seventh edition, published in 1977, was the only one jointly published by the Boone and Crockett Club and the National Rifle Association. The eighth edition, to be available May 1, 1981, will be the first Boone and Crockett Club will publish since severing their administrative ties with NRA.

Islanders, Flyers ambushed

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Those Eastern tinhorns, the New York Islanders and Philadelphia Flyers, spent Wednesday night in the wilds of western Canada, being ambushed by a pair of sharpshooting teams from the province of Alberta.

The defending National Hockey League champion Islanders were bushwacked by a six-goal third period — the goals came in the last 8:15 of the game — in Calgary, falling 11-4 to the Flames. And the Flyers established a 2-0 lead over Edmonton before allowing the Oilers to score five goals in the last period for a 6-2 win, their very first triumph over the Flyers.

The Islanders were without their three top players — Mike Bossy, Bryan Trottier and Denis Potvin — but Coach Al Arbour wasn't using that for an excuse.

"Our good players are supposed to pick up the slack," said Arbour after Calgary's Guy Chouinard set a team record with six assists and Kent Nilsson scored three goals and two assists. "I'm disappointed in some of our players. You can't fault the kids. You're expecting to get some help but the other guys are not helping out."

Islanders goalie Glenn Resch surrendered all 11 goals, four on power plays as the Flames won their fourth straight game.

"We're not kidding ourselves," said Calgary Coach Al MacNeil. "They're missing some key players. But they banged five goals past us in the third period the last time. So I don't regret tonight."

"I think we are getting more character in our game. We have started to learn how to win."

If the final 8:15 is a fair indication, the Flames are in high gear.

After killing a penalty to Bob MacMillan, Plett began the spree with his 31st goal, deflecting a Pekka Rautakallio shot past Resch. Then Chouinard set up three straight goals, two by MacMillan, and Jim Peplinski and Ken Houston closed out the massacre.

Elsewhere, it was Toronto 9, Colorado 5; Quebec 5, Boston 3; the Rangers 6, Buffalo 3; Pittsburgh 4, Winnipeg 3; St. Louis 3, Detroit 2; Hartford 3, Minnesota 2, and Washington 2, Chicago 2.

Oilers 6, Flyers 2

League scoring leader Wayne Gretzky had two goals and two assists in a wide-open game that featured 85 shots on goal, including 48 for Edmonton. The Oilers fired 21 shots at Philly goalie Pete Peeters in the third period, when Blair MacDonald, Kevin Lowe, Gretzky, Glenn Anderson and Lee Fogelin connected.

"Ed Mio made a lot of the difference," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather, noting that the Edmonton goaltender foiled Flyers' shooters to keep the Oilers close through two periods.

Maple Leafs 9, Rockies 5

Terry Martin and Ron Sedlbauer — who has five goals in three games as a Leaf — scored twice, while Darryl Sittler and Wilf Paiement each had a goal and three assists for Toronto. The Rockies are winless in eight games.

"Martin, Sittler and Salming did a real job tonight," said Toronto Coach Mike Nykoluk. "They controlled the game."

Nordiques 5, Bruins 3

Quebec continued a surge that began with the acquisition of goaltender Daniel Bouchard from Calgary Jan. 30. Bouchard registered his 11th victory in 12 games as a Nordique and Marc Tardif scored twice as Quebec won its fifth straight game.

"We're winning games because we're working hard," said Robbie Ftorek, whose third-period slapshot provided the winning goal. "We're not that fancy but we get the job done."

"We all pull together on this team and we always talk to one another. No one is too proud to listen to another player's advice."

Rangers 6, Sabres 3

New York goalie Steve Baker made several spectacular saves to thwart a Buffalo comeback in the second period, then Anders Hedberg poked in a puck from in front of Sabres netminder Bob Sauve to turn the game back in New York's favor.

Dean Talafoos scored the Rangers' 14th shorthanded goal of the season, tying a team record, in the first period. It was the 10th shorthanded score in 11 games for New York. Talafoos' goal came when Sauve cleared the puck right to him by the Sabres' net and the Ranger put it over Sauve's shoulder.

"You can't lose a tougher one than this," said Winnipeg associate coach Mike Smith after Pittsburgh defenseman Mario Faubert fired a shot past Jets goalie Michel Dion from the right faceoff circle with 1:05 left to extend Winnipeg's winless streak to five games.

"I don't think Dion saw it," said Faubert. "That's the kind of game it was. We'd get three or four chances and get nothing out of it and then we'd get a play that looks like nothing and it goes in."

Blues 3, Red Wings 2

St. Louis extended its lead in the overall points race to five points over the Islanders but it wasn't easy. Blues goalie Mike Liut had to contend with 33 Wings' shots — and one dead rat.

"I lost my concentration when some idiot threw a dead rat on the ice," said Liut. "First I thought it was an old sock. It was skinned. I really flipped."

"The guy must have held it for 48 minutes. He must be nuts."

Mike Zuke, Larry Patey and Blair Chapman scored the St. Louis.

Whalers 3, North Stars 2

Hartford spotted Minnesota a 2-0 first-period lead, then stormed back to beat the Stars for the first time in eight tries. Blaine Stoughton's 30th goal was the game-winner.

"We played great hockey for three periods," said Whalers Coach Larry Pleau, who is 2-0 since taking over for the fired Don Blackburn Sunday. "We came to work and we accomplished something. Everybody gave 100 percent. Capitals 2.

Capitals 2, Black Hawks 2

Washington now is winless in nine games and Chicago hasn't won in five. Caps goalie Mike Palmateer stopped 43 Chicago shots.

"We let the Hawks fire from the point all night," said Palmateer. "If I could see the puck, I could stop it."

Judge's decision could hurt women

By HARRY ATKINS
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Women's athletics programs everywhere could suffer drastically now that a federal judge in Detroit has limited the scope of Title IX, the federal law that forbids sex discrimination in athletic programs, observers say.

U.S. District Court Judge Charles W. Joiner ruled Monday that colleges and public schools do not have to provide equal athletic programs for men and women as long as the schools don't spend federal funds on those specific sports.

"The court finds ... that the reach of Title IX extends only to those education programs or activities which receive direct federal financial assistance," Joiner said.

"I THINK the ramifications will be disastrous," said Chuck Guerrier, director of the Womens Law Fund in Cleveland and author of a recent book on Title IX.

"A lot of school boards will read this decision and say, 'Great! Now we don't have to offer anything in women's athletics if we don't want to.' It gives them a legal justification to refuse to be responsive to the needs of women," Guerrier said.

"The argument is one that has been put forward for a number of years. The switch is, they've found a judge that bought it," he added. "I find it discouraging. Granted, it's only the decision of one court and one judge, but that's a start."

The judge's decision stemmed from a 1980 lawsuit against Ann Arbor Public Schools by Arthur Othen, who demanded that a women's golf team be started at Ann Arbor Pioneer High School. Joiner said the intent of Congress when it enacted Title IX of the 1972 Education Act has been misinterpreted by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Ann Arbor Schools Superintendent Harry Howard said the Joiner decision will not affect women's sports programs in general or the planned women's golf team "unless we get into a general cutback in all programs."

DON CANHAM, athletic director at the University of Michigan, called the decision a landmark.

"I don't have any trouble at all saying, 'I want my women's tennis team to have the same resources as the men's team,'" Canham said. "But I can't afford to put the same money into women's sports that I have to put into football."

UCLA center back on team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA basketball Coach Larry Brown, saying he over-reacted when he suspended Kenny Fields, reinstated the freshman center to the team Wednesday.

Fields was dropped from the squad on Feb. 16 because of what Brown described basically as an attitude problem.

"I have principles that cannot be violated," Brown said in a prepared statement. "I feel I was justified in suspending Kenny. The thing that I'm most upset about is that because I think so much of this team, and the importance of a team, I over-reacted."

"Because of my own hurt, I gave Kenny no alternatives."

Brown made the decision to allow Fields back on the team after speaking with Father James of the player's former high school, Verbum Dei, and Rev. Donn Moomaw, a former UCLA football star.

Plunkett wants to stay in Oakland

By BRET LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — While Al Davis casts his eyes south toward Los Angeles, Jim Plunkett dreams of another season as the quarterback of the Oakland — yes, Oakland — Raiders.

Davis, the boss of the National Football League franchise, is trying, in legal action, to force the NFL to permit him to move his franchise to LA. Plunkett would just as soon stay up north.

"I'd like to play in Oakland," he said Wednesday at a news conference during which he was officially honored by Sport magazine as the Most Valuable Player of the Super Bowl.

"I like the Bay Area, I was born and raised there, and that's one of the reasons I left New England. Obviously not to play with Oakland (he was a hanger-on with the San Francisco 49ers before being picked up by the Raiders), but that's the way it turned out and I'd like to continue playing there," said the 1970 Heisman Trophy winner from Stanford.

That's pretty much the sentiment of most of the other Raiders, he said. "Some of them are involved in the community, they've lived there a long time and they'd like to stay there as well."

To play in LA, with the high visibility of a media center, the chance for outside income, commercial endeaors and the movie possibilities would be tempting, he said, "but the people of Oakland have supported the Raiders for a long time... and I think a lot of the players feel they owe something to them."

As for himself, "You can have the movies. I'll stick to the football field." But he was in LA recently, seeking an agent to deal with the prospect of a made-for-TV movie ("We're just in the talking stage," he said of his meetings with three production companies), a potential biography and the possibility of commercials.

The 33-year-old Plunkett became an extraordinary comeback player last season when, with the Raiders fundering, he replaced injured Dan Pastorini as a starter in the sixth game and guided Oakland into the playoffs, past Houston, Cleveland and San Diego in those playoffs, then past Philadelphia 27-10 in the NFL title game in New Orleans on Jan. 25.

And Plunkett is looking forward to the Raiders' next training camp. "It's certainly a crowded situation, to say the least," he said of the likelihood of having to fight off Pastorini and Marc Wilson for the starting quarterback job.

"It's certainly not as dim as the last couple of years. I think I've got at least somewhat of a foothold as far as being the starter. At least this time they have to beat me out — although you can never tell what's on Al Davis' mind."

McRae wants to play with substantial major league experience.

Although McRae said he'd like to play 30 or 40 games in the outfield this season, the Royals aren't likely to be interested. McRae suffered a rotator cuff injury two years ago and underwent surgery, and the team doesn't want to chance another injury.

"We understand Hal's interest," said General Manager Joe Burke. "But we would still try and get another outfielder. It would also be a mistake to say anybody but Amos (Otis) is going."

The Royals have been looking for a reserve outfielder since the winter baseball meetings in New Orleans last December, preferably someone to play left field. We don't want Amos to think we're planning to use somebody else out there.

"There is still a chance Hal can help us, but you have to worry about his shoulder and possible injury."

In January, the team signed free agent Cesar Geronimo, a 10-year veteran and former Cincinnati Reds outfielder. Burke said he wants to complete a deal for another outfielder before the rest of the team reports to camp this week-end.

Battle lines drawn in baseball fight

AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball players insist they don't want a strike, but they're ready to challenge the club owners' reported $70 million war chest and walk out six weeks into the 1981 season.

The players, their freedom to auction their services to the highest bidder restricted when the owners implemented their compensation plan for re-entry free agents last week, came out swinging.

The Player Association's Executive Board, comprised of representatives of each major league club, voted during a three-hour closed meeting Wednesday to strike May 29 if the controversial free agency issue cannot be resolved.

Guided by Executive Director Marvin Miller, who led the major leagues' only other regular season strike at the start of the 1972 campaign, the players reacted as expected.

The owners' plan requires that teams signing "ranking free agents" surrender unprotected roster players as compensation to the teams losing the free agents. A ranking free agent is described by the owners as one who is selected by at least eight teams in the re-entry draft and meets performance criteria based on appearances.

"The battle lines are more or less drawn," said the association's American League representative, Doug DeCinces of the Baltimore Orioles. "Hopefully we will have some legitimate negotiations. Today was a procedural step to keep our options open."

"We're trying to avoid a strike, but we have no other alternative. We do not want to strike, but we're being forced to."

"I think everybody in the end is going to be hurt by this," said Philadelphia catcher Bob Boone, the association's National League representative.

"The main issue in this is freedom, freedom granted by the U.S. Constitution, freedom to select employment rights," Boone said. "You don't give up your freedom to take a step backward. The players don't want to strike, but it's something we're being forced into."

Firestone CC sold

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has sold its 36-hole Firestone Country Club to a subsidiary of the Dallas-based Club Corporation of America, company officials said Wednesday.

No purchase price was disclosed for the 500-acre club, but Firestone officials said they informed two dozen prospective buyers that the lot was appraised for $5 million last September.

Located on Akron's southern edge, the club will continue to be called the Firestone Country Club and will still host the World Series of Golf.

Firestone said last September that it planned to close and sell the north course of the club. No buyer was found, but several inquiries for purchase of the full lot were made, company spokesman Bob Troyer said.

The sale includes all land, the clubhouse, maintenance buildings and all equipment at the club facility. It is expected to be finalized in two weeks.

CCA has been in private club management since 1957 and operates 95 clubs in 25 states, including 35 country clubs. Among its clubs are the Inverrary Country Club in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; the Renaissance Club in Chicago; the Metropolitan Club in Chicago; New York City's Arrium Club; and Houston's University Club.

Firestone's championship south course covers 300 acres and has been

"We're willing not to play baseball, that's how strongly we feel about it."

With agreement on other issues reached last May, the players and owners agreed then to try to negotiate the clubs' compensation demands, averting a threatened strike.

However, neither side budged and the owners, through chief negotiator Ray Grebey, implemented their proposal as the agreement last May gave them the right to do. The Players Association had until March 1 to set a strike date or accept the owners' compensation plan.

"The players are not and have not been looking for trouble," Miller said. "Until last Thursday the players had no right to call a strike. They had no demands, no proposals, no right to take any action."

"Only when the owners made the decision to put into effect their demands, which would gut the free agency system, could the players act. Only then did they have the right to defend themselves with strike action. In fact it was the only defense."

Miller said the players "still are ready, willing and able to negotiate a settlement and we intend to try just that."

However, he said, "No settlement or rejection of any final offer will be made without a poll of the players."

Miller added that no further meetings are scheduled with the owners. He said that, because of his schedule to visit with individual clubs during spring training, another meeting might not be able to take place until April.

However, he added, "We're not going to stand on protocol. Somebody will be in touch."

Grebey issued a statement in New York in which he said the players' decision was "regrettable," and he added: "Any attempt to shift responsibility for their actions to the 26 major league clubs is without foundation and entirely inexcusable."

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, in Washington to present a season pass to President Reagan, said he did not feel the compensation matter was a strike issue.

"I am so supportive of the compensation proposal put into place, I'd be hard pressed to think there is anything I should do to change it," Kuhn said.

JACA, Spain (AP) — The Soviet Union captured three gold medals, winning the men's and women's cross country races and men's jumping event in the World University Winter Games here Wednesday.

The Soviets took the first three places in the men's 15-kilometer cross country race. Alexander Kozel won the race in 45 minutes, 23.51 seconds, followed by Yuri Bulakov in 45:25.81 and Mikhail Devyatjov in 45:49.46.

vladi Bolairintzev won the jumping event with 248.5 points, with jumps of 84.4 and 82.50. Meterskeljo Korhonen of Finland took second place with 248 points and jumps of 81 and 80.50, and Yuji Kawamura of Japan, was third with 247.7 and jumps of 81.50 and 81.

Van Horn: town of broken dreams

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

VAN HORN, Texas (AP) — Some residents say if this town's dreams had come true, motorists crossing West Texas on Interstate 10 would find a giant agricultural-industrial metropolis rising from the arid Trans-Pecos prairies here.

Instead of a dusty town that looks like little more than a good place to stop for a chicken-fried steak, they would see wine vineyards, feedlots, factories, and one of the busiest airports in the world with huge jetliners taking off and landing as fast as air controllers could clear the skyways.

A few residents here still believe they live in what will someday become one of the world's great cities — New York, Paris, Rome, Tokyo — and Van Horn.

"This is all going to be in the garden one day," says M.J. Mitchell, a retired Ford dealer, past president of the Van Horn Chamber of Commerce, and one of the town's foremost dreamers. "This is going to be Imperial Valley No. 2."

Other citizens share Mitchell's hopes, but confess they do not share his optimism. After all, he is the man who tried to get operators of the Concorde supersonic jetliner to land in Van Horn instead of Washington or New York. Mitchell is still bitter that the Concorde snubbed Van Horn.

"We're centrally located on the North American continent, and we were going to give them 1,000 acres rent-free for 50 years for a hangar and a terminal," Mitchell said. He said he wrote the Concorde people three letters in all, and they still turned him down flat.

Other dreams were not as farfetched. Van Horn sits near the world's largest non-asbestos talc deposit, and since it was discovered in 1949, 12 mines have been established to dig up the soft, flaky grey rocks that are crushed, baked and turned into talcum powder, ceramic tile, plastics and other items.

Why ship the talc out of West Texas to be made into those things, Van Horn asked itself. Why not set up facilities to process it and manufacture it right here?

So Mitchell and others laid out a 370-acre industrial park and publicized plans for a talc-processing factory, a ceramic tile manufacturing plant, a gasohol refinery, an alfalfa-cubing operation and other industrial enterprises in the near future.

"All this used to be nothing but weeds," Mitchell said, sweeping his arm over the area set aside for the new businesses, a large pasture near the airport. The problem is — most of it still is weeds, he conceded, except for a cotton gin and a few fireplugs.

So what went wrong? It certainly wasn't for lack of water. Van Horn sits on an underground water supply so vast that the city allows unlimited use for irrigation, supplies its 3,400 citizens and those of Sierra Blanca, 30 miles to the west, with drinking water "and we have enough left over to drown El Paso," 120 miles to the west, Mitchell said. "Someday we'll sell El Paso our water."

Banker Mike Hensley says there were several reasons the industrial park remains just a pasture. Some of the out-of-towners who proposed new industry for Van Horn "were not substantial people — we had men come in here with financial statements that were pathetic."

But mainly, Hensley said, if Van Horn is to become great, people are going to have to be patient.

"I think the corporation farmers are going to come in here. And I can foresee us having a plastics industry. We could have a tile-manufacturing plant. We could grow wine grapes here commercially — the University of Texas has been planting experimentally for the past five years, and they have grown some very good wine grapes."

"I'm just not sure how soon all this is going to take place," said Hensley, vice president of the Van Horn State Bank and the newly elected president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"Maybe in the next 20 to 25 years."

But that is not soon enough for Mitchell.

"I want to see plants here. I want to see that alfalfa cubing plant right down there before the year is out. There're going to be stretch DCs someday flying food off our airport, not because it'll be cheaper, but because they can't wait over there in New York for a truck," he said.

"I'm 70 years old and I have high hopes of seeing jets flying cotton from this valley — vegetables, beef — all grown right here. I have high hopes of seeing that before I leave here. Somebody has to believe in it."

Knight's execution still on schedule

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Supreme Court has refused to block the scheduled March 3 execution of convicted killer Thomas Otis Knight, but defense lawyers are still confident of getting a stay.

"I think we'll get a stay eventually," said Fletcher Baldwin of Gainesville, a University of Florida law professor who is part of Knight's defense team. "But I don't know where it will be."

Hours before the state court ruled late Tuesday, defense lawyers filed a federal court appeal in Miami asking for Knight's death sentence to be set aside.

The lawyers raised the same basic issue that was before the Florida court: alleged ineffective assistance of court-appointed counsel during Knight's 1976 appeal of his conviction in the slaying of a well-to-do suburban Miami couple after holding them hostage for a $50,000 ransom.

The lawyers said they would formally seek a stay of execution today.

U.S., Russians begin 'Star Wars'

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Special News Service

Redondo Beach, Calif. — In a virtual "Star Wars" scenario the United States and the Soviet Union have begun maneuvering for control of outer space, and scientists here are urgently developing a satellite tracking system perhaps beyond an astronomer's dreams.

The system, when completed within about two years, will have the capability of discovering new stars, of surveying 6,000,000 known stars per hour and of photographing the heavens with unprecedented accuracy and permanence.

But the mission of the system is military, and is concerned with the increasing necessity of maintaining surveillance over "deep space," the void 3,000 miles from earth and beyond.

"The Russians are putting about 100 satellites per year into orbit, compared with some 20 per year for the U.S.," a spokesman for TRW, a vast satellite-manufacturing company here, pointed out. "At present there are 410 American, 532 Russian and about 100 other satellites in orbit around the globe. We expect the Russian percentage to increase in the years ahead."

About 1,500 satellites will be orbiting in deep space within a few years, a TRW official noted, "and there will be a need to detect and identify them regularly."

As a result scientists here have developed the telescope-based "GEODESS," or Ground-Based Electro-Optical Deep Space Surveillance System, for the U.S. Air Force.

"GEODESS," experts here say, "is capable of finding and identifying extremely faint objects in the night sky — at search rates that are 100 times faster than present systems."

It was noted, too, that GEODESS will be able to detect and track an object the size of a football from a distance of 20,000 miles.

"As the potential military uses of space become more sophisticated and deadly, the need for surveillance becomes even more urgent," TRW experts noted recently. "In dealing with this problem the U.S. Air Force realized that to upgrade our ground radars — would require extraordinary investment and that such systems could not be operational for years."

"What was needed was some way to get this job done in a short time and at a relatively low cost."

As envisioned, GEODESS will deploy 15 telescopes on five sites: White Sands, N.M. — where installation is scheduled for early 1981 — Taegu, South Korea; Maui, Hawaii; and at presently unspecified locations in the East Atlantic and Indian Oceans.

Each site will feature a direct communications link with NORAD, or Northern Air Defense Command, the U.S.-Canadian defense complex headquartered at Cheyenne, Wyoming.

"When the system is operational," the experts said, "the Air Defense Command will issue each day a list of objects to be observed during the night's operations. Tasks such as precision position measurements, space object identification and new launches will be included."

One astronomical side effect of GEODESS, it was noted, is the system's capability of automatically storing and filing information about the stars.

"Ten years of data from all 15 GEODESS telescopes could be recorded on less than 1,000 discs," the experts said, "which in turn could be stored in a single four-drawer filing cabinet."

Lance's son ruled valid candidate

ROME, Ga. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Harold Murphy has ruled that a son of former federal Budget Director Bert Lance is a valid candidate for the board of directors of the bank Lance once headed.

Murphy's Tuesday ruling came on a suit filed by David Lance, 26, after his name was dropped from the list of board nominees prepared by the management of the Calhoun First National Bank.

The younger Lance was appointed in September to fill a vacancy on the board, and according to his suit, was led to believe by management that he would be nominated for election to a full term at the annual meeting of the bank's stockholders March 9.

But when the list of management nominees was released Feb. 9, David Lance's name was not included and he proceeded to nominate himself to a full term on the board.

Management refused to accept the nomination, however, citing an amended bylaw of the institution that says no nominations for the board of directors can be submitted to management during the 30 days prior to the annual meeting.

Murphy said David Lance was a valid nominee because he had complied with federal banking regulations that say any stockholder can nominate himself for director until seven days before the annual meeting.

Murphy ordered the bank's management to place David Lance's name on the list of board nominees and to notify bank's shareholders of his nomination.

Bert Lance headed the Calhoun First National Bank from 1963 to 1974 and is still, along with members of his family, the bank's largest stockholder.

He was budget director under former President Carter until he resigned in 1977 during a federal investigation of his banking practices. He was indicted on 22 counts of bank fraud in 1979, but was acquitted by a jury on 19 of the counts and the others were dropped.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Two very funny entertainers share this birthday with you: Jackie Gleason and Tony Randall. The way to turn business and financial developments to your favor this coming year is to rid yourself of outdated ideas and methods. Now more than ever, it is essential that you keep your options open and seek honest criticism from those whose judgment you trust. Beware of individuals who are quick to flatter you. An ego trip could prove disastrous. Unusual romantic opportunities arise, adding new joy and fulfillment to your life. Family responsibilities weigh heavily at times, yet you never shirk your duty to those who love, trust you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An active social life could give a needed lift to your career prospects. Try to be prompt in fulfilling domestic responsibilities. Pinching pennies now will pay off handsomely at a later date.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is not a good day to make legal or financial concessions. Practical considerations could cause you to change your mind later on. Romance may undergo a change. Be patient.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep a tight rein on spending and work to restore peace, harmony within the family circle. You are passing through a period of change that will lead to a more satisfying life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can accomplish more if able to work away from the public eye. Do what you can to get on top of insurance matters, financial transactions. Postpone signing contracts, agreements.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Distant affairs require very careful handling now. Seek advice from professionals. Romance has its ups and downs. End of a relationship could bring you new peace of mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel can boost profits today. It is now possible to obtain extra financial advantages. Do not let friends underestimate your abilities. Get together with family members this evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Forget social activities and concentrate on work. Self-improvement projects, study could be the key to greater financial success. Loved one shares good news. Do not gamble or speculate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Mate or partner's good fortune will ultimately benefit you also. You find a change in lifestyle quite exciting. Watch your spending, however, or you could jeopardize credit rating.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Others will welcome your ideas, suggestions today. Speak up! Carry out business plans made earlier in the week. You could meet a new romantic prospect if you circulate more.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Ideas abound! Be on the alert for unusual and offbeat proposals. Your reputation for honesty, efficiency will attract new business. Hold fast to your principles. Keep standards high.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pieces of puzzle fall into place when you receive inside information. Show more initiative if you want to have greater control over your destiny. Repay past favors at earliest opportunity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your good fortune continues. Stay quietly on the sidelines while coming to grips with business matter. An invitation or message will provide some very happy moments today.

Somerset Maugham claimed that the bridge table mirrored life—man's true nature was revealed over the green baize. West's sin on this hand was avarice, and he paid the price.

The auction was straightforward. With an opening bid facing an opening bid, North leaped to four spades as soon as the 4-4 fit was discovered. West took a look at his 100 honors and could barely wait for his turn to double.

West led his top club, and declarer captured the king with the ace. One look at the combined assets in his hand and dummy was enough to convince declarer that West had to have at least four trumps for his double—there was little missing in the way of high cards. With nothing to guide him, declarer's normal line of play would have been to lead trumps twice toward his hand from dummy, and that would have led inevitably to defeat. But West's double warned declarer off that line. South took full advantage of the information he had received in the auction. The only chance to salvage the contract was to force West to lead trumps at some point. To accomplish that, West had to be stripped of all his cards in the side suits. That would require a certain amount of luck—both defenders would have to follow suit while declarer cashed his winners. Since any chance is better than none at all, declarer set about taking his top tricks. After cashing three heart tricks, three diamonds and the queen of clubs, declarer ruffed his low club in dummy. That was his ninth trick, and now declarer and West were both down to nothing but four trumps and the contract was assured. Declarer led a trump from dummy and covered East's seven with the eight. West was forced to win, and he could only present declarer with the king of trumps for the game-going trick.

Politicians may miss out on big bucks if new bill is passed

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Politicians might miss out on some big bucks if a bill restricting cash donations is passed, but a former Brilab defendant assures legislators it's no real loss.

"Usually when someone wants to give you a sizeable contribution in cash, and he doesn't want to give you a check, there's a reason for it. And it's money you don't need," Randall "Buck" Wood told the House Elections Committee late Tuesday night. Wood testified in favor of two bills restricting cash donations, one with a limit of $50, the other $100. The measures were referred to a subcommittee.

Wood, House Speaker Bill Clayton and Austin attorney Donald Ray, were indicted June 12 on charges of extortion, bribery, racketeering, and fraud in connection with a scheme to get Clayton to influence the award of an insurance contract.

After a lengthy trial in Houston, the trio was acquitted.

Referring to his legal troubles, Wood told the sometimes skeptical committee the bills would be good for politicians as well as the public.

"This bill is protection for you," he said. "I've had some recent experience with cash contributions, and if we'd had this limit the situation wouldn't have developed."

Wood, a former lobbyist for Common Cause, a campaign reform group, said the measures "increase the public's feeling that these are traceable transactions, in case something comes up."

"These bills clear up one point: When is a contribution 'accepted'? When the bills are laid on your desk? When you put them in a credenza — I mean no disrespect to the Speaker," said Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, whose proposal sets the limit at $50.

Clayton accepted $5,000 in cash from L.G. Moore, a Harris County labor leader, while an FBI informant secretly recorded the deal.

Clayton later said he believed the money was a campaign contribution and had intended to return it.

"The speaker supports either of these bills and feels they would get rid of the problems that came up in his last situation," said Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, sponsor the bill limiting cash donations to $100.

Several members of the committee objected to the bills, saying they would complicate campaign record-keeping but do nothing to curb election law violations.

"I'm really disturbed by this," said Rep. Frank Gaston, R-Dallas. "It's like a lock on the door, it only keeps out the honest people. If someone wants to get around it, they will."

"It's the crooks we're trying to get at, and there's no way to enforce this," he said.

Ms. Danburg said she felt voters had little confidence in politicians, and the bills answered a "call for accountability."

"I think the public can see we're not doing them any real good (with these bills)," said Rep. Jim Horn, R-Denton.

Bandit adds new twist to list of strange armed robberies

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Texas has had the "friendly rapist," the "jogging bandit," the "traveling rapist" and the "over the hill gang."

Now clothing stores across the Lone Star state are being robbed by a man dubbed the "pants bandit."

He got his nickname because he forces everyone in the store to go to the back of the establishment where he robs employees, customers and the cash registers and then forces the employees and customers to undress to their underwear. He then takes the clothing with him and drops it near the door.

The "pants bandit" has been blamed for more than 50 robberies of clothing stores in Houston, and the Dallas-Fort Worth area, according to police reports.

The man, described as in his late teens or early 20s, wears sunglasses, occasionally wears a wig or a fake moustache and picks clothing stores with only women employees for his robberies.

No one has been harmed during most of the robberies, officers say, but a 16-year-old girl was raped during a Houston robbery about two months ago and he raped a 14-year-old girl during his latest robbery at Waco last Saturday.

Representatives from numerous police agencies met in this Dallas suburb Tuesday to compare notes on the "Pants Bandit."

Attending the meeting were officers representing police departments from Dallas, Fort Worth, Arlington, Grand Prairie, Waco, Richardson, Garland, Addison, Farmers Branch, Duncanville, Irving and North Richland Hills. Also attending were Texas Rangers and Dallas County deputies.

Sergeant Harold Rice of the Dallas Police robbery detail says the man always picks clothing stores where only women work and uses a chrome automatic pistol.

"He makes them strip down to their panties and bra and then carries their clothes to the front door where he drops them," Rice said.

"Since the people don't have any clothes on, not many of them have gone out to see how he gets away," Rice said. He said that he has been seen driving a small, blue foreign car. But on two occasions when witnesses were able to obtain a license number it turned out he license had been stolen from another automobile.

The man only gets between $250 to $300 in each robbery, but Rice says he is very active.

"When he hits, he hits three or four places. He may scatter them from one end of the county to the other. The last time he hit us (the Dallas area), he got Irving at 3:30 p.m., Addison at 6:30 p.m. and Dallas at 8:30 p.m.," Rice added.

Police at Addison came close to catching him last Thursday, Rice said.

Officers said he had struck clothing stores in nearby Garland and Richardson that afternoon and Addison police staked out his most likely target.

Democrats take South Texas senate seat

By SUSAN STOLER Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — In the end, it was a battle of the political heavyweights in a South Texas state senate race and the Democrats walked off the winners.

"We needed to bring in our big guns," Democrat Hector Uribe, a Brownsville state representative, said this week in assessing his victory over Republican Ricardo Hinojosa of McAllen. "As it turned out, their big guns were shooting blanks."

Both sides enlisted outside support with the Republicans sending out letters from President Reagan and the Democrats shuttling in Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and a host of state legislators to campaign.

On election night, it was never close.

Uribe, a 35-year-old lawyer and two-term House member, pulled ahead early and accepted Hinojosa's concession an hour after polls closed.

Unofficial complete returns showed Uribe with 35,542 votes to Hinojosa's 22,453.

Brooks, Cameron, Hidalgo and Jim Wells counties are in the district.

Uribe will fill the two years remaining in term left vacant when Raul Longoria resigned in January to become a state district judge. The seat has been unoccupied since the current legislative session began.

Despite the traditional Democratic control of the Lower Rio Grande Valley, Republicans claimed a good chance to win because special elections sometimes yield strange results. They pointed to John Tower's special election win to become the state's first Republican U.S. senator since Reconstruction.

"They turned out the Democratic vote," Hinojosa said in assessing his defeat. "We're at the point where the Democrats are taking us seriously in South Texas. We need to try to educate the voters about the importance of voting for a candidate and not the party."

The 31-year-old Harvard-trained lawyer said he will resume his private practice and continue as Hidalgo County GOP chairman.

"I'll be back trying to build the party in South Texas. Obviously we have a way to go," he said.

The Republicans had raised funds statewide for the contest. Hinojosa hired an Austin advertising firm and ran broadcast spots with Vice President George Bush's endorsement in a heavy media blitz.

Uribe said he saw in the results a resentment of Gov. Bill Clements' early attempts to help Hinojosa.

Clements endorsed Hinojosa over another Republican in a Feb. 10 election. Hinojosa led the seven-man field with 9,073 votes to Uribe's 7,052. Uribe barely made the runoff by 20 votes over Mission businessman Joe Summers, the other Republican.

After a lengthy recount, Clements scheduled the runoff a week after the official canvass. The timing allowed only a day of absentee voting in one county. Democrats said a Saturday election would have allowed more working people to participate.

"The people resented the manipulation of the election and the partisan campaign practices," Uribe said.

The new senator said he would go to Austin this week but did not know when he would officially assume his duties.

Jury selected to decide who gets $500,000 cache

WACO, Texas (AP) — A federal court jury must decide if two young Alice men, the State of Texas or the Internal Revenue Service will profit from almost $500,000 reportedly found buried on a South Texas farm four years ago.

Percy Garcia, 20, and James Dean Bridges, 19, claim they found $481,816 buried on a farm near Alice and therefore they should be allowed to keep it.

The State of Texas claims the money as abandoned property, McLennan County contends it should get the cash if it is lost or stolen property and the IRS argues it is entitled to $300,000 in taxes.

A six-member jury was selected Tuesday and is scheduled to begin trying to sort out the conflicting claims Friday.

The money has been collected $155,939 in interest since it was confiscated in January of 1977, bringing the total up for grabs to $637,765.

Garcia and Bridges were stopped in Waco for a traffic violation.

Workmen rush to contain leaking vapors from a overturned truck carrying liquid natural gas early Wednesday. The accident forced the evacuation of several Barnegat, N.J., homes, but the evacuees were returning to their homes Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Aviation interests oppose cutting funds to airports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A move by leaders of the Senate aviation subcommittee to deprive the nation's busiest commercial airports of construction money from a special federal fund has drawn opposition from major aviation interests.

Spokesmen for groups representing the nation's major airlines and airports went before the panel Tuesday and Wednesday to criticize that provision in a bill to reauthorize the spending of money from the Airport and Airway Development Program.

The program, begun in 1970, uses receipts from the 5 percent federal tax on airline tickets to finance such projects as construction of airport terminals and runways, installation of navigational aids and operation of some Federal Aviation Administration activities.

The program's trust fund has accumulated some $3.7 billion, but no grants have been made since the law that authorized spending expired last Sept. 30 without a replacement.

The bill would authorize spending $825 million this year and $600 million in the 1982 fiscal year for airport improvements.

While all who testified at subcommittee hearings agreed on the need to renew the program, most argued against a provision in the re-authorization bill that would bar the nation's 69 biggest airports from receiving benefits.

Hugh Kelleher of Helena, Mont., president of the American Association of Airport Executives, said travelers at those airports would be deprived of benefits for which they have already paid.

The sponsors of the Senate bill, subcommittee chairwoman Nancy L. Kassebaum, R-Kan., and ranking Democratic member Howard Cannon of Nevada appeared most dismayed to have lost support for partial "defederalization" from the Air Transport Association.

Paul R. Ignatius, president of the airline trade group, said his organization reversed its earlier backing because of "changed circumstances" in the past year, including serious financial reverses the industry has suffered because of soaring fuel costs and a reduction in passenger growth.

Ignatius said the air carriers also were concerned about an amendment by Mrs. Kassebaum that would permit operators of the big airports to collect a "head tax" from departing passengers to help make up some of the loss of federal aid.

He said the development program has worked well for a decade and should not be replaced by a complicated arrangement that raises numerous potential problems.

The Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, representing private aviators, was virtually alone in supporting defederalization, saying the large airports already have sufficient revenue sources to pay for improvements.

Spokesmen for airline pilots and the airport equipment industry said money spent from the fund should be used primarily for safety-related projects.

Miporn defendant convicted

MIAMI (AP) — A jury of six men and six women who viewed four sex films in the second of 16 scheduled pornography trials rejected defense arguments that the government was trying to be a self-appointed censor and convicted a California man of shipping obscene movies across state lines.

The conviction of Walter "Frenchy" Bagnell, 55, was the first stemming from the federal government's 2½-year Miporn — standing for Miami pornography — investigation. A total of 44 persons were charged in the investigation.

Bagnell, of Los Angeles, was convicted Wednesday on two counts each of shipping obscene films across state lines and of using a common carrier — a jetliner — for interstate transportation of obscene material for sale or profit.

U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman did not set a date for sentencing. Bagnell, who remained free on a $25,000 surety bond, could face up to 20 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

Defense lawyer Roger Diamond told the court he would appeal.

Four films were shown in open court during the trial. The jurors decided they all fell below local standards of decency established in late 1977, the time at which the events detailed in the criminal charges occurred.

Bagnell was the producer of two of the films, which featured homosexual acts. The jurors also decided the other two movies, which featured heterosexual scenes, met the legal test for obscenity.

Group fights arts budget cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan congressional group, launched at a wine and cheese party, is mobilizing to fight President Reagan's proposed cuts in federal funds for the arts.

Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., was elected chairman of the 130-member Congressional Arts Caucus on Wednesday a few hours after denouncing the budget cuts as "disgraceful" in testimony before a House subcommittee.

The organizational meeting of the caucus was held in the House Agriculture Committee room, which is more accustomed to debates over beef imports and price supports for sugar than discussions of ballet troupes and symphony orchestras.

Spectators drank California wine and nibbled on cheese and crackers as the caucus voted to publish a monthly newsletter that will keep tabs on arts legislation. Richmond said the main purpose of the organization is to exchange information.

The caucus includes 21

Republicans, and one of them, Rep. James Jeffords of Vermont, was elected vice chairman.

In his testimony before the subcommittee on postsecondary education, Richmond said Reagan's proposal to cut the budget for the National Endowment for the Arts by 50 percent would reduce federal spending on the arts to 35 cents per capita.

"It is disgraceful that a country so rich in its natural resources should treat its artists and art resources so shabbily," he testified.

Reagan has asked Congress to slash the endowment's budget by $85 million from the $173 million requested by former President Carter.

Unlike most cuts proposed by the administration, this would reduce spending instead of just slowing its growth, since the endowment's current budget is $152 million.

The endowment was created in 1966 in the Democratic administration of President Lyndon B. Johnson with an annual budget of $7.5 million. It experienced its most dramatic growth under Republican President Richard M. Nixon.

Reagan administration budget director David Stockman argues that grants by the endowment promote "the notion that the federal government should be the financial patron of first resort."

The administration maintains that reducing the grants will spur private support of the arts.

Witnesses at Tuesday's hearing said federal grants provide only a small fraction of the support of arts institutions but generate matching money from local and private sources.

Peter Culman, managing director of Center Stage in Baltimore, speaking for the American Arts Alliance, said endowment grants average 7 percent of an arts institution's budget.

"Federal funding may be small, but it is seed money which is used to attract private and corporate donations often many times in excess of the required match," he told the panel.

For instance, he said, $84 million distributed by the endowment in the last three years under a program requiring a 3-to-1 match has actually attracted $500 million, which is 6-to-1.

Mandatory pension plans recommended

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission, saying the nation has become too dependent on pay-as-you-go retirement programs, is calling for mandatory pension plans for all workers in private industry and sweeping changes in Social Security.

"Future pension promises will be broken" unless the nation overhauls the basic policies that determine how the elderly live after their retire, the commission said today in a report to Congress.

The commission's centerpiece recommendation is for Congress to pass a law creating "a national minimum funded pension system which would be required of all employers."

At the same time, the panel is urging Congress to raise the Social Security retirement age from 65 to 68.

This would be done gradually, starting in 1990, so the normal retirement age by 2002 would be 68. Early retirement would be shifted from 62 to 65 over the same period. Once the increase started in 1990, the retirement age would go up three months a year.

The change would affect all workers now 53 or younger.

The report from the President's Commission on Pension Policy culminates a two-year study and gives President Reagan and Congress a blueprint for changes the commissioners said would spur businesses and individuals to save more for retirement and extend pension coverage to the more than 49 million workers who now lack private protection.

The commission chairman, C. Peter McCollough, chairman of Xerox Corp., was unveiling the proposals today at a hearing before the House Select Committee on Aging.

The report recommends phasing in a tax on Social Security benefits, but allowing workers to take a tax deduction for the amount they pay in Social Security taxes.

The "Minimum Universal Pension System" would be financed by a new 3 percent payroll tax paid only by employers. All employees over age 25 would start building pension credits after one year of at least part-time work. They could transfer the credits from job to job.

The 3 percent tax would be a minimum. Workers and employers would be offered tax breaks to encourage them to contribute more to the pension plans.

Pension funds would be invested in the private sector, but the Social Security Administration would set up a "portability clearinghouse" to keep track of benefit records and, if a company did not want to sponsor its own pension plan, to pool contributions for investment.

To make the 3 percent payroll tax palatable to businesses, the commission urged that employers be given a tax credit of 46 percent of their contributions.

The commission said large firms already get an equivalent tax break on private pension contributions, but small firms — where most employees without pensions work — may get a tax break as small as 17 percent.

It recommended that the 6.65 percent Social Security tax, which is due to increase to 6.7 percent Jan. 1, 1982, be boosted instead to 7.05 percent.

That would cost workers and employers an additional $9.9 billion in 1982. But the commission said individuals would save $25.6 billion in income taxes if the Social Security tax were made deductible. Social Security taxes are not now deductible.

"The commission believes that a serious crisis exists today in our retirement income programs. Unless deliberate action is taken in the next several years, future pension promises will be broken," it said in a 130-page report.

Rescue workers load the body of one of two paper company executives into a rescue squad after they were killed and two other executives of Diamond International Corp. were wounded

Fired employee kills executives

LOCKLAND, Ohio (AP) — Police today were searching for a paper company worker who shot at a group of executives moments after he had been fired at a disciplinary hearing, killing two and wounding two others.

Lawrence McNair, 41, of Forest Park, has been charged with two counts each of aggravated murder and aggravated attempted murder in the shooting Wednesday of four Diamond International Corp. executives, said Police Chief Gene Robinson.

McNair, a steam engineer who had worked for four years in the firm's power plant, had been suspended over an unspecified incident Tuesday, Robinson said.

On Wednesday morning, he appeared at a grievance hearing called by Local 1009 of the United Paper Workers Union with officials of the cardboard and paper carton-making plant.

The executives announced at the end of the meeting that McNair was fired. Union local president Howard Moore and shop steward Charlie Ross said the firing would be appealed.

As McNair rose to leave, a gun was pulled from a zippered case and four to six shots were fired, hitting all four company officials, Robinson said.

The two union officials dived under the table when the shooting began and escaped injury.

"After the shooting, he walked out the gate on foot, went between two buildings and into a parking lot," Robinson said.

Killed were John Pruitt, 49, of St. Bernard, and Raymond Leach, 49, of Ross Moyn. Ralph Francis, 60, of Hamilton, was listed in critical condition at Cincinnati General Hospital with gunshot wounds in the neck. William Geers, 45, Florence, Ky., was in fair condition.

Neither the company nor the union would discuss the incident nor the events that led up to the grievance hearing.

Diamond International, with corporate headquarters in New York, is one of the nation's largest makers of paper and wood products, with subsidiaries ranging from playing cards to book matches.

Robert Brady of Kennedy Heights, McNair's brother-in-law, said McNair was "a super guy ... the type of person people will easily push over."

"They must have pushed him to a point the man just mentally snapped. He just bought a brand new house and two new cars. He's under. He's under. He's out," said Brady.

Airliner almost hit World Trade Center

NEW YORK (AP) — An Argentine Airlines jet that strayed too low over Manhattan during a foggy, night-time descent last week was on a collision course with the TV tower atop the World Trade Center before it was ordered to climb.

An air traffic controller ordered, "Argentine 342, climb — climb immediately," and the airliner carrying 58 people turned, avoiding an almost certain collision.

The 707 jetliner had been descending in heavy fog last Friday night when at 1,500 feet, an automatic alarm buzzed at the tracking center in Hempstead, Long Island, according to Irving Moss, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman. The lowest altitude permitted over Manhattan is 3,000 feet.

At the same time, a controller saw on his radar screen that the jet was flying too low, the FAA said. A tape recording of the incident revealed the following exchange:

"Argentine 342, what's your altitude?" asked the air traffic controller, whose name was not released.

"Fifteen-hundred feet," the pilot replied.

"Turn right!" the controller instructed. "Immediate right turn!" and then, "Climb — climb immediately!"

The plane was three to four miles south of the trade center, less than 1½ minutes away. The FAA said the controller probably did not notice immediately when the jet strayed below 3,000 feet because he was responsible for seven other planes at the time.

"It looked like he was heading right toward the north tower, or the west corner of it," said Dick Markovits, chief of the FAA's northeast air traffic operations. "No doubt about it. Especially since he was on his way down to 1,400 feet."

The twin north and south towers of the Trade Center are each 110 stories and 1,350 feet high. The north tower has a steel television mast on top that rises to more than 1,700 feet.

The plane, carrying 49 passengers and nine crew members from Guayaquil, Ecuador, was descending to Kennedy International Airport at 10:05 p.m. when the exchange occurred.

A re-entry project, it was cleaned out to 4,944 feet. Four and one-half-inch casing is cemented at that point.

The hole originally was drilled by Fletcher Oil & Gas Drilling Co. as the No. 1 Annie Smith. It was abandoned in April 1960 at 6,154 feet.

Location is 467 feet from north and west lines of section 142, block 1, H&TC survey. The original application showed the location to be 660 feet from north and west lines of section 142.

IRION WELL

MGF Oil Corp. of Midland No. 3 Winterbotham "B" is a new well in the Dove Creek (Canyon C) field of Irion County, 8 1/2 miles southwest of Knickerbocker.

It completed for a 24-hour flowing potential of 35 barrels of 42-gravity oil, no water, with a gas-oil ratio of 6,429-1.

The flow was gauged through a choke of unreported size and was from perforations at 6,422-6,400 feet.

The pay was acidized with 2,000 gallons and fractured with 32,000 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 26d, block 21, H&TC survey.

REEVES PRODUCER

ARCO Oil & Gas Co., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 1 Wahlenmaier-State as a well in the Worham, East (Cherry Canyon) field of Reeves County, 17 miles east of Pecos.

It finalized for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 96,000 cubic feet of gas per day, with a gas-liquid ratio of 32-1. Gravity of the fluid is 41.2 degrees.

Completion was through perforations from 6,386 to 6,492 feet after 1,500 gallons of acid and 18,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

CULBERSON WELLS

Orla Petco, Inc., of Midland announced potential test on a well in the Ford, West (4100) field of Culberson County, 10 1/2 miles northwest of Orla.

It finalized for a daily flowing potential of 102 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 10 barrels of water, with a gas-oil ratio of 580-1.

Completion was through an 8/64-inch choke and perforations from 3,574 to 3,586 feet.

Total depths 4,157 feet, 4 1/2-inch pipe is cemented at 4,156 feet and plugged back depth is 4,115 feet.

Wellsite is 1,468 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of section 28, block 58, T-1, T&P survey.

Conoco, Inc., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 9-22 Ramsey as a well in the Ford, West (4100) field of Culberson County, 12 miles northwest of Orla.

The operator reported a daily flowing potential of 126 barrels of 37-gravity oil and 42 barrels of water, through a choke of unreported size. The gas-oil ratio is 349-1.

Hole was drilled to 4,100 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing was set one foot off bottom and ole is plugged back to 4,027 feet.

The completion was through perforations from 3,546 to 3,568 feet after 400 gallons of acid and 11,200 gallons of fracture fluid.

COTTLE WILDCAT

Jack F. Grimm of Abilene staked a 6,300-foot wildcat in Cottle County, 3 miles northeast of Delwin.

It is No. 1 Borden, 2,260 feet from south and 1,462 feet from west lines of Isaac M. Lyons survey, abstract 164. Ground elevation is 1,922 feet.

HOWARD DRILLSITE

McCann Corp. of Big Spring No. 1 Wolf is to be drilled as a 9,000-foot test in the Coahoma, North (Fusselman) field of Howard County, 3 1/2 miles northeast of Coahoma.

Operator spotted the location is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 19, block 30, T-1-N, T&P survey.

Gas pricing gains ground in international market

TULSA—Pricing natural gas in parity with crude oil has moved up several notches in importance on the international energy market, Oil & Gas Journal reports in its Feb. 23 issue.

Negotiating teams from the U.S. and France spent long periods last year arguing with Sonatrach, the Algerian state oil company, over the principal of pricing natural gas on a par with crude.

And round seven of the U.S.-Algerian talks, conducted last week in an effort to break an impasse in negotiations on the price of Algerian liquefied natural gas (LNG) shipped to the U.S., were unsuccessful. No other talks have been scheduled.

Parity pricing is one of those political catch phrases that has entered the oil industry vocabulary during the last couple years with no clear definition of the term, the Journal says. Like many well-tuned expressions, it is open to many interpretations.

At stake in separate negotiations that have involved Gaz de France, El Paso Natural Gas Co., the U.S. government, and Sonatrach, is whether Algeria's definition of parity pricing has any validity in the current world energy market. Crude oil supplies are plentiful—but not cheap.

Algeria takes the view that its LNG sales should have parity on a heat-content basis with its Saharan blend of crude at the point of export. When negotiations on that issue began last year, this would have put the fee on board (fob) price of Algerian LNG at $6.11 a million British thermal units (Btu).

A Btu is the amount of heat required to raise the temperature of one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit.

Because LNG shipping costs out-strip those for crude and because regasification is more expensive than storing and handling crude, another $1.70 has to be added to the city gate price for U.S. LNG imports and an additional $1. for deliveries to France. That would have put the landed price of Algerian gas far above that for oil or gas from other sources in the marketplace, a luxury neither country can afford, the Journal says.

It is clear to all importers, the weekly business magazine says, that if Algeria wins parity pricing on an fob basis, all other gas exporters who also are members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will press for the same thing.

Pennzoil reports strike

HOUSTON—Pennzoil Co. has announced a natural gas and condensate discovery in Cattaraugus County, N.Y., approximately six miles north of Bradford, Pa., and seven miles west of a previous Pennzoil-gas condensate find in the area.

The well, designated Flatstone fee No. 1, was spudded on December 17, 1980, and drilled to a total depth of 4,060 feet, with a shut-in pressure of 2,000 psi. Calculated absolute open flow is 21 million cubic feet of gas per day. The well, located on a Pennzoil fee acreage, is presently shut-in pending negotiation of a gas sales contract.

The well is the second Onondaga discovery by Pennzoil in Cattaraugus County. Pennzoil's 100 percent owned Quinlan E-2 well, located seven miles east of the Flatstone Fee No. 1, was completed in Jan. 1978, and produced at a rate of 4.0 million cubic feet of gas and 186 barrels of condensate per day.

Flatstone Fee No. 1, upon finalizing a sales agreement, is expected to produce at about the same rate.

Mexico's production shows big climb

DALLAS (AP) — Mexican oil production has dramatically increased over the past five years, making Mexico's national oil company the 15th largest oil company in the world, according to a spokesman for Petroleos Mexicanos.

Ignacio DeLeon, deputy director of Petroleos Mexicanos (PEMEX), the Mexican oil monopoly, noted the dramatic increase during an interview Wednesday on KNBN-TV, Dallas.

DeLeon said Mexican oil production by the end of 1981 will be 2.75 million barrels per day, compared to only about 900,000 barrels per day in 1976. He said production now is about 2.4 million barrels per day, but said new facilities under construction will enable them to increase production by the end of the year.

The increased production has resulted in PEMEX becoming the 15th largest oil company in the world, DeLeon said.

Mexico is now producing about one million barrels per day from offshore wells. He said PEMEX had no offshore wells in production in 1976.

Of the current production, DeLeon said, about 1.5 million barrels is being exported per day. About 50 percent of the current production or about 750,000 barrels per day is being exported to the United States, DeLeon said.

Mexico has placed limits on the amount of oil that can be exported to any one country. He said the export quotas are needed so that much of the production can be used domestically and to protect the country's interests.

"We don't want to have to depend on any one country" as a customer for oil, he said.

186 more oil, gas projects announced for Basin counties

Permian Basin oil and gas operators filed 186 applications with oil and gas governing bodies requesting permission to drill 186 oil and gas projects in the Permian Basin of West Texas and southeast New Mexico. Thirty-seven of the new projects are scheduled in wildcat areas, with the other 149 staked in proven field areas.

District 7-C of the Railroad Commission of Texas, headquartered in San Angelo, reported 66 of the new projects, including 15 wildcats.

Water problems studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-state coalition studying water problems in the nation's High Plains wants Congress to expand water conservation research and approve conservation incentives for farmers.

"The suggested changes and new priorities may represent significant opportunities for improved water use by irrigated agriculture throughout the nation, not just for the High Plains Region," the High Plains Study Council said Wednesday.

The council, covering Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas, will not make formal recommendations on the water problem for another year.

But Kansas Gov. John Carlin, outgoing chairman, said it would be "inappropriate for us not to recommend increased use of the technology that has already been proven ... and taking every advantage to improve our productivity."

The council made its interim recommendations as it released a report on what could happen in the High Plains states if nothing is done to stop the rapid depletion of its major water source.

Contrary to earlier speculation, the report said crop production would rise significantly over the next 40 years even with usable groundwater supplies depleted in the southern areas of the region. But the increases will not keep pace with the rate over the last 30 years.

Some 180 counties in the six states get 90 percent of their water from the Ogallala Aquifer, the most extensive water-bearing rock formation in the nation. Much of it goes to raise 40 percent of the country's fed cattle, a quarter of its cotton and large shares of its wheat and corn.

The report said in the next 40 years regional production of corn will jump 100 percent, cotton 90 percent, grain sorghum 70 percent and wheat 50 percent without any effort to solve water problems.

The cost, however, will come in terms of reduced economic growth and employment in some areas as declining water supplies force shifts in the types of crops and the way they're grown, it said.

Methods still being developed to offset the dropping water levels could make the crop increases even greater and reduce the negative side effects, according to Frank Feely, who worked on the report.

The groundwater reserves vary substantially within the region, the report said, Nebraska with centuries of reserves for irrigation while groundwater will be effectively depleted in 10 years in West Texas and southeastern New Mexico and in 20 years in west central Kansas.

Without changes, it said, the next 40 years will see currently-irrigated fields in Texas, Kansas and New Mexico shifted to dryland farming while irrigation will significantly increase in Nebraska.

Fishermen block redfish bill

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Persistent commercial fishermen, who say they are fighting for their financial lives, have temporarily blocked a bill that would ban them from taking redfish and speckled trout from coastal waters.

Restaurant owners who depend on the fishermen to put redfish and trout on their customers' plates joined in the protest Wednesday before the Senate Natural Resources Committee.

The redfish ban attracted several hundred commercial fishermen and their families to the Capitol for the second week in a row.

"I beg you in God's name, please don't pass this bill," said Valerie Mancuso of Galveston, a 52-year-old mother of five who described herself as "a commercial fishlady, or person, or whatever."

She said she had spent her 34th wedding anniversary in the Senate balcony Feb. 18 and had returned Wednesday to resume the protest.

W.J. Praker, a Galveston fisherman, said 90 percent of commercial fishermen do not have a high school education, and he pleaded:

"Don't take our jobs away. That's all we know."

Committee chairman Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, defused a tense situation by quickly accepting a motion to send the bill to a subcommittee.

The delay spared committee members from having to vote under the watchful eyes of the fishermen, who sat in the Senate chamber and the balcony.

Santiesteban noted that 132 persons had signed up to testify against Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris' bill, and 107 had indicated they opposed it but would not testify.

Santiesteban allowed opposing witnesses four hours of testimony, 1½ hours longer than he had promised, and took care in explaining to the crowd that committee members "are not taking the facts of your situation idly. We will agonize."

Harris, R-Dallas, reiterated he was sponsoring the bill at the insistence of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department. The department presented statistics showing a 60 percent decline in the redfish population and a 56 percent decline in trout over the past five years.

"Their figures I'm willing to accept," said Harris.

Tom Gilliland, co-owner of San Miguel's restaurant in Austin, said 25 percent of his total food sales in January — or $18,000 — came from redfish and trout. "We've tried to find substitutes, but the customers know the difference. There just are no substitutes for them."

"This bill is written so the entire industry will be wiped out," said Pat Pace, owner of Pace Fish Co., Inc., at Brownsville. "This bill is written to promote an industry of leisure and to rid this state of Texas of a group hard-working, 'never-say-die', independent fin-fishermen."

Pace said the bill is flexible enough that the Parks and Wildlife Department could put all fish off-limits to commercial fishermen.

PUC says Bell must delay test

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission has ruled the Texas Daily Newspaper Association is entitled to its "day in court" to fight a home information system that Southwestern Bell wants to test here.

The three-member commission unanimously decided Wednesday that TDNA should get a hearing and ordered Bell not to start or prepare for the test, scheduled to begin in June, until after the hearing.

However, Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence persuaded PUC to delay its order for one week. Lawrence said the company might go to court to prevent the hearing.

American Telephone and Telegraph Co., through Southwestern Bell, wants to conduct a 14-month test of its Electronic Information System. Some 740 Austin businesses and residences would be outfitted with computer screens equipped to display telephone listings, advertising and other information. The test would be free to customers.

The phone company says it plans a test of equipment — exempt from PUC authority — but the newspaper publishers claim it is Bell's entry into the burgeoning computerized home information field. TDNA filed a complaint when it learned a PUC examiner, without holding a hearing, routinely approved the test in 1979.

Commissioner Garrett Morris said Wednesday the publishers probably are right about the intent of the test.

"I doubt seriously this experiment is designed to test equipment," Morris said. "This seems to be a market-testing device. We'll have to judge the impact it will have on other people who provide like or similar services."

Commissioners George Cowden, Moak Rollins and Morris all said TDNA is entitled to a hearing of its complaint against Bell.

Cowden told TDNA lawyer Earnest Casstevens, "It is an error on our part in a case of this uniqueness and significance to ... deny you a hearing. You are entitled to at least having your day in court."

The commission did not set a hearing date. TDNA, representing newspapers which might one day get into the home information field, was joined Wednesday by a lawyer for Datapoint, a computer equipment maker.

Allen King, PUC general counsel, argued in favor of Bell. He said the test is not "some insidious plot" by the phone company.

"It's called competition. It's called capitalism," he said.

King agreed with Bell that the company does not need PUC permission for the test. He said Bell asked PUC for permission only as a protection against anti-trust suits.

Lawrence said the company came to PUC because, "We keep you advised of what we are doing." However, he argued Bell could pursue the test without PUC's OK.

"Even a regulated public utility has the right to fritter its money away. You have the right to see that the public doesn't pay for that frittering," Lawrence told the commission.

He said none of the costs of the test would be passed on to customers.

Florida man wants to search Titanic wreck

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Jewels estimated to be worth $17 million are said to be locked in the safe of the ill-fated luxury liner Titanic and two men who would very much like to recover them say they will race to the scene of the 69-year-old wreck this summer.

Jack Grimm of Abilene, Texas, financed a scientific expedition in the North Atlantic to search for the Titanic last year and believes his group saw the ship on its sonar screen.

He plans to head another mission this summer and return with photographs and the jewels which went down, along with 1,490 people, when the luxury liner struck an iceberg April 12, 1912.

But this time, Grimm will have some competition. A Coral Gable man, Fred Koehler, said he wants to beat Grimm to the scene and recover the jewels himself.

"I'm going to beat out Jack Grimm," said Koehler, who sold his electronics shop to finance his planned expedition. "His equipment is obsolete. I'm going to get to the Titanic first, and I'm going to bring back the diamonds."

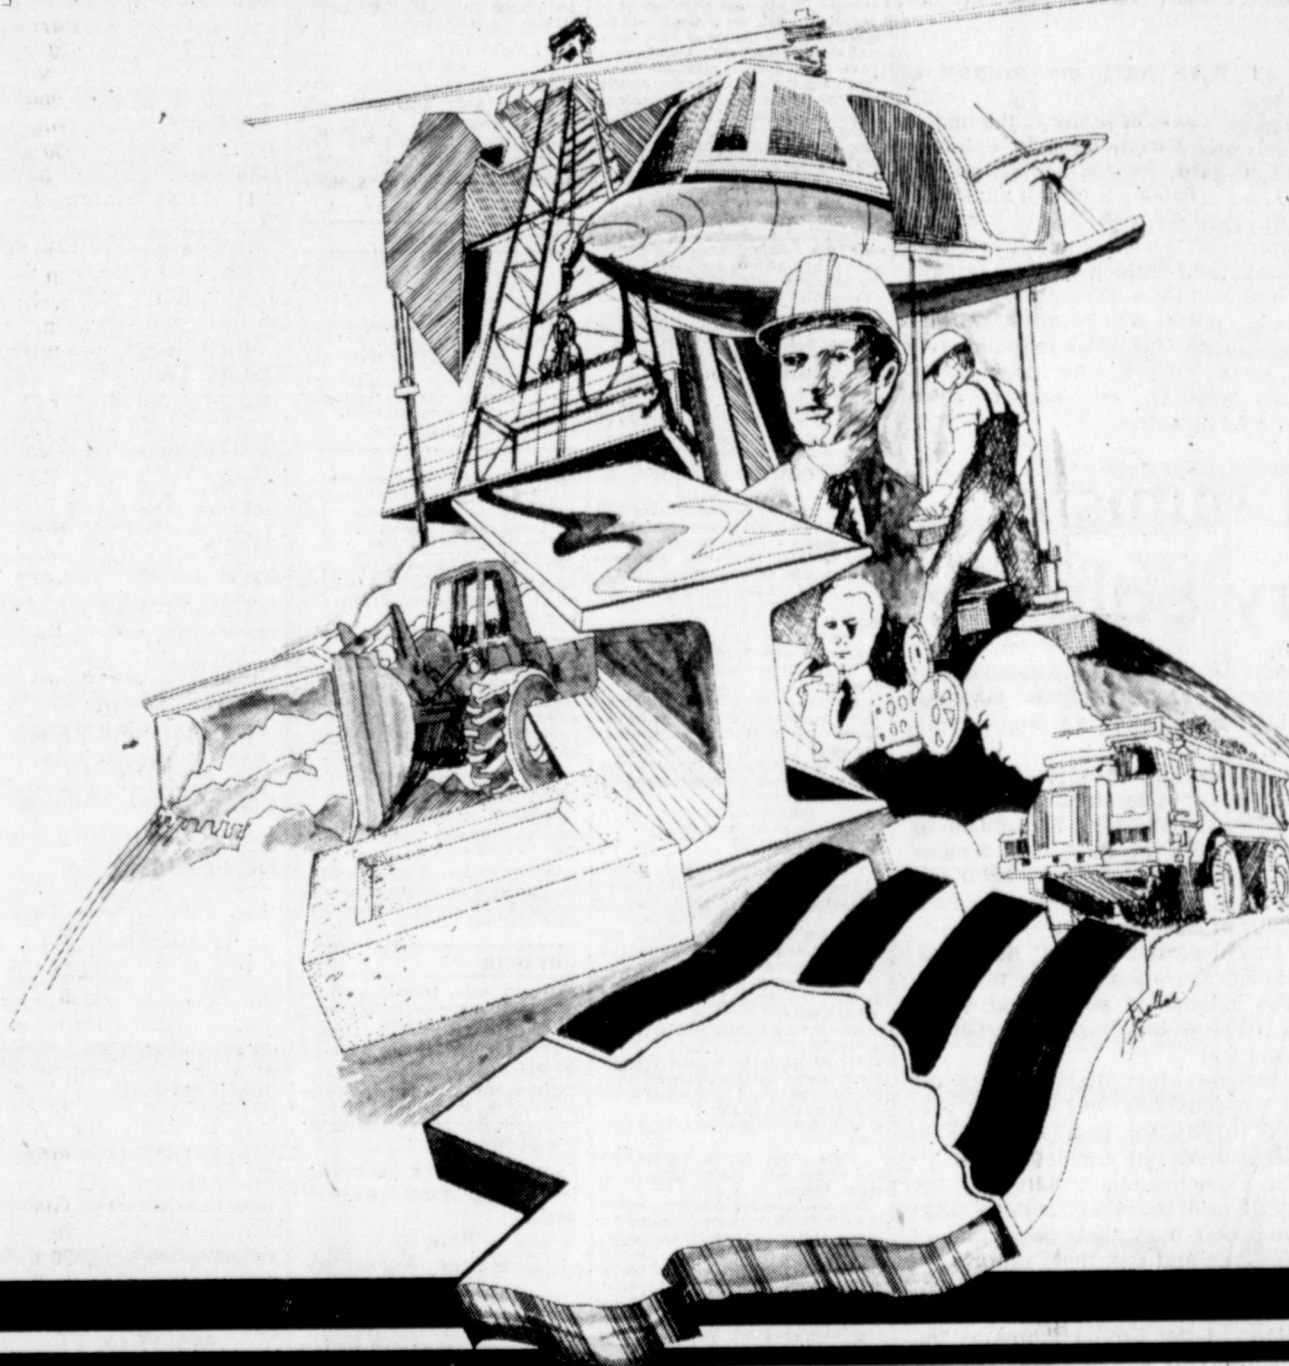

"I'm glad he's going to give it a shot," Grimm said. "That'll make it all the more fun, won't it?"

Grimm, whose expedition set out from Fort Lauderdale last year but will be based in Boston this year, told The Miami News he isn't too worried about finishing second.

"I think the chances of anybody doing that are very slim. But let him try. It's in international waters. It's anybody's ocean. I don't envision a sea battle over it," Grimm said.

Koehler is building an "underwater helicopter" — a two-man submarine he's been working on for two years. The craft has a mechanical arm in its nose like the probes used to take rock samples on the moon, and he claims it can take two men to a depth of 16,000 feet.

BIG IDEAS

Our free enterprise system is built on the big ideas of those who imagine better ways of doing things, and who take the initiative to make them happen.

The willingness to risk time, effort, and money in expectation of possible reward is also a vital ingredient. Big ideas only thrive when followed by mental effort, muscle, manpower, tools, machines, bricks and mortar, and nerve. At Commercial Bank we help provide several of the important ingredients.

You supply the mental effort and nerve. Ask about backing your big ideas.

Undercover agent tells of his work with mobsters

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bobby Delaney hauled frozen frogs for some of America's toughest and greediest mobsters. He drank and gambled with them, made weekly payoffs to them, pressed $100 bills into their hands as "a way of showing proper respect."

Through it all, he told a congressional panel today, he had to beware lest his true identity be discovered: New Jersey State Police detective Robert J. Delaney.

Testifying before the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, Delaney described 2½ years of fear, frustration and ultimate success as an undercover agent in the state's Project Alpha probe of organized crime on the Port Newark waterfront from 1974-1977.

He was to testify from behind an opaque screen to conceal his appearance from spectators because he is once again working undercover.

With federal financing and FBI cooperation, New Jersey State Police established the Alamo Transportation Co. as a front for undercover investigators attempting to penetrate organized crime. That phase of the operation lasted from December 1976 to September 1977.

Delaney's colleague, Lt. John J. Liddy, said Project Alpha yielded state and federal charges against 34 persons and most have been convicted.

"I presented myself as a rich, young, unmarried man who was interested in becoming involved with the trucking industry," Delaney, 29, said in a written statement. Patrick Kelly greeted his entrance to the underworld.

Kelly was a go-getter, successful in legitimate business but fascinated by organized crime, according to Delaney. And he has agreed to work as an undercover informant rather than face prosecution for shady deals.

With Delaney posing as Alamo's owner and Kelly as its terminal manager, the firm soon attracted attention from three mobster groups: the Giacomo "Jackie" DiNorscio faction, affiliated with the Philadelphia family then headed by Angelo Bruno; the Tino Flumara faction, a branch of New York's Genovese family; and another Genovese branch controlled by John DiGillo and Anthony and Neil Pacilio in Bayonne and sections of Jersey City.

Business boomed. Clients came "because they were told to," Delaney said. There was a price.

"We were paying off DiGillo, as well as Flumara and DiNorscio, in a total weekly tribute of about 25 percent of our profits or about $2,500 a week," Delaney said.

Alamo's business included contracts to haul frozen frogs and other seafood for Frigid Express, a firm controlled by Genovese family underboss Pasquale "Patty Mack" Macciarole, the detective said.

Macciarole extorted $15 a load for the Frigid business, adding $14,000 a year to the payoff toll, Delaney said.

Since then, he noted, "Patty Mack was shot to death and stuffed in the trunk of a car. The crime is unsolved."

Despite the drain of payoffs, Alamo "realized over $200,000 in accounts receivable" from its operations and the money supplemented the government funds financing the probe, Lt. Liddy testified.

DELANEY TOLD OF continuing mob pressure for expensive payoffs in addition to the regular payoffs.

DiNorscio sent a muscle man to force Alamo to pick up the $1,500 tab for a Disneyworld vacation for DiNorscio's wife, two children and his mother, the detective said.

DiNorscio "was greedy and always tried to intimidate people," Delaney remarked. "He had his wife apply for public assistance which she subsequently received. She didn't deserve welfare because sufficient money was coming in from Jackie's criminal interests. It was typical of DiNorscio, though. He wanted to collect on everything."

To satisfy mob demands, Delaney said he bought $400 worth of tickets to an International Longshoremen's dinner dance, paid $320 to rent a luxury car for Neil Pacilio during his week-long prison furlough, rented a car for DiNorscio's girlfriend, paid for a soil test on Flumara's lawn and sent Alamo truck drivers to Flumara's home on weekends to do yard work and build a backyard barbecue.

"Alamo went along with Tino's demands because the company had no choice," Delaney said. "I have great empathy for legitimate businessmen who are caught up in the kind of situation that confronted Alamo."

"I felt the fear of threats and I felt the hopelessness that comes with the realization that one is subservient to the whims of organized criminals. But I was a law enforcement officer who could end my undercover role should I find myself in personal danger."

"IT WAS NOT my money at stake."

Yet 2½ years of living in the underworld was "tremendously exhausting," he said.

"I had to drink with them, dine with them, gamble with them. I had to adopt their style of dress, their way of talking, their outlook on life," he said. "I had also to be ever mindful that I was a police officer on a difficult assignment. One drink too many, one careless remark, one indiscretion, and I could be revealed. The result could be disastrous."
