Small aircraft nosedives into field

Eight persons, including six employees of the local CBS affiliate KOSA-TV, were killed instantly about 2 a.m. Saturday when this Beechcraft King Air B-100 crashed into a field east of Midland Regional Airport. The television crew was returning from filming two local high school football playoffs in north central Texas. The chartered plane was attempting a landing when it suddenly shot skyward and then nosedived into the field, erupting into a ball of flames. Also killed were the pilot and a man who assisted the KOSA crew in "spotting" at football games.

Reason why a twin-engine business aircraft coming in for a landing at Midland Regional Airport early Saturday morning suddenly swooped up in the air and then nosedived into a fiery crash killing the eight passengers aboard, including six members of KOSA-TV, still remained a mystery that night.

The crash is believed to be the worst in Midland history in terms of a death count. Courthouse records show that on Oct. 24, 1956, six adults and an infant girl were killed in the mid-air collision of a light plane and an Air Force jet fighter. That accident occurred at 3:30 p.m. over the 3800 block of Apache in west Midland and sent debris and bodies crashing into homes.

The Beechcraft King Air B-100 chartered from Texas Western Aviation by KOSA-TV to carry six employees, a part-time helper and heavy camera equipment to cover two high school football playoffs in North Central Texas was bringing its passengers home in the inky skies about 2 a.m. Approaching the main north-south runway at the airport, the plane dipped down, suddenly shot back up in the sky, veered to the east and then headed straight for the ground, according to unofficial reports. The plane exploded into a fireball.

KILLED WERE the six KOSA crew members who took with them 51½ years of experience at that television station:

— Gary Hopper, 32, 4603 Erie in Midland; assistant news director, 6 p.m. anchor and member of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, employed nine years.

— Jeff Shull, 25, of Odessa, sports director, 1½ years.

— Bruce Dyer, 26, of 2826 Auburn, Midland, production assistant, 3½ years.

— Edward Monette, 26, of Odessa, assistant chief engineer, five years.

— Brent Roach, 24, of Odessa, production assistant, five years.

— Bobby Stephens, 47, of Odessa, head engineer, 27 years.

Also killed were Jay Alvin Price, 37, of rural Midland and an employee of El Paso Products, and pilot Keith Elkin, 29, of 4703 Elma, Midland. Price, Hopper's brother-in-law, was acting as a "spotter" at football games for KOSA, a CBS affiliate.

They were pronounced dead at the scene by Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. An autopsy was ordered on the pilot.

REPRESENTATIVES from the Federal Aviation Administration in Lubbock and the National Transportation Safety Board in Fort Worth began questioning witnesses and pilots who had landed earlier from the Fort Worth game. Later in the day, they began sifting through wreckage debris at the site.

Reportedly, only two persons saw the plane go down in the field about 1,000 feet east of the north-south runway and 3,000 feet south of the end of the runway's northern tip.

Several theories as to what caused the crash were floating among the media and law enforcement officers. But Jay Stuckie, operations supervisor at Midland Regional Airport, said they were only rumors.

Arafat, rebels reach pull-out pact

TRIPOLI, Lebanon (AP) — Yasser Arafat and the rebel PLO factions trying to oust him agreed Saturday to halt their bloody fighting around Tripoli and leave this northern Lebanese port city in the coming weeks.

Syria, whose forces backed the PLO rebels, claimed its troops had fired on U.S. F-14 jets flying reconnaissance missions over eastern Lebanon.

There was no confirmation of the claim from Pentagon spokesmen in Washington.

In Tripoli, Arafat, the embattled chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, told reporters he had accepted an agreement mediated by Syria and Saudi Arabia that gives former Lebanese Prime Minister Rashid Karami a free hand to negotiate the details of a Palestinian pullout.

Under the plan, all Palestinian forces will leave the area within two weeks after Karami has worked out details of their departure.

But the agreement sets no timetable for Karami's negotiations and there was no indication when any of the Palestinian troops — an estimated 2,000 on each side — would start to leave or where they would go.

Arafat said he had telephoned Karami in Damascus, Syria, and urged him to dispatch an Arab military commission to the city as soon as possible to police the cease-fire.

In Damascus, spokesmen for the two major rebel factions also endorsed the agreement and said they would support Karami in his efforts to end the fighting.

The International Red Cross said that, to the best of its knowledge, 442 people died and 2,146 were wounded in three weeks of warfare.

The two rebel groups initially balked at the plan because it provided for removal of their own troops from Tripoli and two nearby refugee camps, Baddawi and Nahr el-Bared, which they captured from Arafat.

"Although the departure of the Palestinian fighters from Tripoli was not our demand, we declare that we are fully committed to the cease-fire and to whatever decision Rashid Karami will take regarding the situation inside Tripoli," said a statement issued in Damascus by rebels within Arafat's Fatah faction.

In a separate statement, Talal Naji, secretary-general of the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, also declared his group's "full commitment" to Karami's mission.

But during an interview Friday in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, rebel leader Col. Saeed Mousa, also known as Abu Mousa, said the insurgents would only allow Arafat to leave Tripoli without his fighters.

Despite the cease-fire, both sides traded sniper fire in the neighborhoods north of Arafat's headquarters and along the coastal highway between the center of the city and the Palestinian camps.

Arafat refused to say whether his fighters would leave Lebanon. But he said he would go to Algeria eventually to meet Palestinian fighters freed last Thursday from Israeli detention camps.

Storms cross North Texas

By The Associated Press

A line of showers and thunderstorms moved across North and Central Texas Saturday, spawning high winds, heavy rains and a tornado watch for much of eastern Texas, the National Weather Service said.

The tornado watch expired at midnight. Gale warnings were in effect along the coast.

The weather service said tornadoes, large hail and damaging thunderstorm winds were possible in the wide watch area.

Snow flurries were reported in Amarillo, where winds were out of the north at 28 mph, gusting to 37 mph. In Corpus Christi, the wind was out of the south at an average of 31 mph with gusts up to 50 mph.

"No one knows why it happened. It definitely will take an investigation to determine what happened," he said. That investigation has been turned over to the FAA and NTSB, and spokesmen late Saturday indicated that an answer might not be found for six months.

Stuckie said the federal agencies examine not only the plane, but the environment. "They look at the surrounding area, markings on the surrounding ground, position of the pilot."

An autopsy on the pilot is standard procedure, he said. And the engine will be scrutinized for any possible malfunction.

ELKIN'S PLANE apparently was the last of a group returning to Midland from the football games. It had picked up Hopper and two KOSA crewmen in Wichita Falls where Permian High School beat Wichita Falls Rider High 28-0; and then Shull and his staff in Fort Worth where Midland Lee whipped Trimble Tech 23-6. The wins meant Lee and Permian would be squaring off this weekend. Friday's games were to be broadcast Saturday.

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, who was at the crash site, said several pilots returning to Midland had conversed with Elkin on the radio. Elkin was the last to land, he said, and others weren't aware there had been a crash. "Everything had seemed routine," he said.

Some speculation centered on possible high gusts of wind. But the temperature at 2 a.m. was 55 degrees and wind was blowing from the south at 17 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The plane went down on Scharbauer Ranch land adjacent to the airport, and a call went in to the fire department at 1:59 a.m. But William Ray Tindall, a driver based at the Terminal fire station, said he was awakened by a man and woman running into the station.

"It was just a ball of fire when we came out of the station," Tindall said, standing in the night breeze and looking at the blackened rubble and twisted pieces of metal with only the tailpiece identifiable. Three crash trucks had headed east across the runways and ran through a wire fence to get to the plane. Using about 20 gallons of foam to smother the fuel and then about 2,000 gallons of water, the fire was out in about 10 minutes, he said.

"There's not been any crashes like this" in his four years at the station, said Tindall. "This is the worst one I've seen."

The plane fell cleanly between two wire fences stretched about 100 feet apart and in the midst of brush and mesquite.

"THE TAIL OF that plane wasn't six inches from that fence; the fence wasn't touched," said Bill Thomas of Thomas Funeral Home. "There were no skid marks; it hit nose first and burned. There was just a crater where it hit."

The eight bodies were found strapped inside the plane; six were burned, four beyond recognition, and two had been barely touched by the flames. KOSA reporter Conrad Coleman, who had arrived to shoot film of what he thought was a standard plane crash, was asked to identify each body as it was brought out of the wreckage and placed into a hearse.

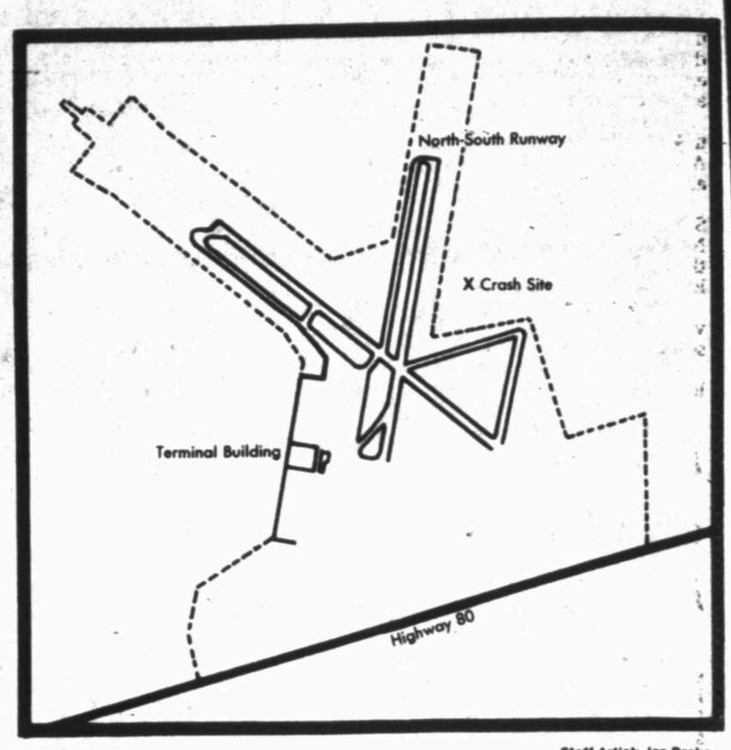

The bodies of Hopper, Price and Dyer were taken to Ellis Funeral Home in Midland, Elkins and Shull to Thomas Funeral Home in Midland, Monette to Easterling-Wilson and Stephens and Roach to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home, both in Odessa.

Identification number of the Beechcraft was listed as 1910 L. Owner is Richard Gaddy of Midland, according to a spokesman at Texas Western Aviation.

A man who has been a pilot for 40 years and a friend of Elkin's declined trying to guess what had happened. The Beechcraft, said W.R. Page of Odessa, is the best in the line of turbo-prop planes. A survey by a consumer services group shows the 100 and 200 series of King Airs "were by far the safest turbo-prop planes in the air." The plane that crashed was estimated to cost about $1 million.

The airport had been closed immediately after the crash to allow law enforcement officers — Midland Police, sheriff's deputies and Department of Public Safety troopers — to go cross the runways in their vehicles. But after the last hearse had left and the fire trucks had pulled away, the police and media slowly dispersed while the first fingers of dawn began pushing through the inky black skies.

Also contributing to this account were reporters Richard Orr, Rhonda Rigenhagen and Bob Brundage.

Hooded gunmen take pure gold

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Six hooded gunmen stole more than 3 tons of pure gold worth $37.5 million from a warehouse near Heathrow Airport Saturday after threatening to burn the security guards alive, police said. It was richest robbery haul in British history and one of the biggest of all time.

Insurers Robert Bishop and Co. offered a reward of $3 million for information leading to recovery of the loot, which also included a small quantity of diamonds worth $150,000.

Commander Frank Cater, head of Scotland Yard's Flying Squad, said the gold bullion at the high-security Brinks-Mat Ltd. warehouse was in 6,800 bars awaiting shipment to the Far East. The firm, a subsidiary of the U.S. Brink's company, transports valuables.

Police said six members of the security staff were in the Brinks-Mat warehouse at about 6:40 a.m. (1:40 a.m. EST) when the gunmen broke in, somehow averting detection by 24-hour surveillance cameras mounted outside the building.

The gunmen — wearing ski-mask hoods and armed with handguns — handcuffed the guards and then poured gasoline over them, police said.

"They threatened to ignite it (the gasoline), but they did not do so," an official Scotland Yard statement said. It continued:

"No shots were fired. It's thought they must have had two vehicles to get away."

About two hours after the robbers fled, one of the workers managed to free himself and sounded an alarm that brought ambulances, police cruisers and fire engines rushing to the scene.

Late Saturday night mystery still surrounded the holdup at Brinks-Mat depot No. 7, a long red-brick and corrugated-metal building at the end of a row of warehouses in Hounslow industrial park, one mile from Heathrow and about 15 miles west of London.

Police refused to say who owned the gold, why so much of it was stored in one place, how the gunmen managed to get past surveillance cameras outside the warehouse and how they carted away 3 tons of bullion.

Said Yard spokesman Martin Habgood: "These are some of the questions we're just not prepared to answer. We're not saying who the gold belonged to, why it was there or where it was going."

Asked why the owner's identity was not disclosed, Habgood said, "Maybe it's because they don't know it's been stolen."

The crime bore similarities to Britain's previous biggest robbery — April 4 at Security Express in London, where a 14-man gang wearing monkey masks made off with 7 million pounds ($10.5 million) in bank notes. During that robbery the gunmen squirted gasoline on a guard and threatened to burn him unless he opened a vault.

All 14 men remain at large, and police say none of the missing bank notes has ever been traced.

"It might be that there is a link or it might be that it is a copycat," said a Scotland Yard spokesman who did not want to be identified.

A Yard spokeswoman said the gold bars weighed between 1.1 and 3.3 pounds, not between 2.2 and 4.4 pounds each as earlier announced.

"We know that the figures don't tally but we can't get them exactly," she said. "We are now saying the gold was in excess of three tons and valued at 25 million pounds."

Cater said the total haul could be contained in a box measuring about 6 feet by 3 feet by 2 feet.

Because each bar was marked and identifiable, he said, the gold would probably be melted down.

Another snowstorm aimed at Plains

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

The second "dangerous" snowstorm in a week lurched toward the Plains on Saturday, with blowing snow that closed highways, after throwing as much as a foot of snow on the central Rockies overnight and icing roads from Arizona to South Dakota.

The storm that blew ashore from the Pacific on Thanksgiving and another that preceded it by a week were blamed for at least 38 deaths.

A blizzard warning was in effect for northwestern Kansas, with winter storm warnings over eastern Colorado and its mountains, southeastern Wyoming, parts of Oklahoma, the Texas Panhandle and northeastern New Mexico. The storm's eastward movement prompted winter storm watches for parts of South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Wind gusting to 50 mph in Colorado Springs and temperatures only in the teens and 20s created a wind chill factor of around 20 degrees below zero. Havre, Mont., had a low of just 5 degrees and the mercury fell to 6 degrees above zero at Williston, N.D.

"This is a dangerous storm," said Gary Franson, a National Weather Service forecaster in Denver. "Anybody caught inadequately dressed or unprepared could die."

In southeastern Wyoming, blowing snow forced closure of Interstate 80 from Rawlins to Laramie and I-25 from Cheyenne to Casper. Chains were required elsewhere and the Highway Patrol advised against any unnecessary travel anywhere in the state.

Many truckers on I-80, the major east-west route across Wyoming, were sitting tight at Laramie, socked in for the second time in a week, said a truck-stop employee.

"We've had a few taking chances, but quite a few are deciding to stay," said Sophie Soto. "They're sitting on a situation they can't control."

The storm didn't stop everything in Wyoming. In spite of a 10-degree temperature, 20 mph north wind, 5 inches of snow on the ground and snow falling at the rate of about an inch an hour, some 30 runners competed in a 5-kilometer race in Cheyenne to raise money for the Wyoming Junior Olympic Travel Fund.

"It was miserable. I didn't enjoy it at all," said the winner, Rick Bishop, 25, of Laramie, who finished in a little more than 17 minutes. He wore a wool shirt, running shorts over long underwear and a ski mask. "It's not a good time, but considering the conditions, I'm not dissatisfied."

Also among the finishers was a 7-year-old girl.

Up to a foot of snow fell on Colorado's mountains during the night and on Saturday, with snow falling over nearly all of the state, the mountains got up to 15 inches more.

The wind-driven snow caused near-blizzard conditions and closed two state highways on Colorado's eastern plains, from Limon to Colorado Springs and from Pumpkin Center to Colorado Springs. It also forced postponement of five state high school football championship playoffs.

"It's dumping outside. It's really coming down," Cathy DeWolfe of Aspen Skiing Co. said Friday. "This is the best snow in 10 years for an opening day."

Heavy snow fell Friday in eastern Utah's Wasatch Mountains, where 24 inches fell earlier in the week. Alta ski resort east of Salt Lake City received 40 inches from the storm.

"This has been a beautiful storm, providing a real good opening to the ski season," said Randy Montgomery, vice president at Snowbird ski resort.

The snowfall tapered off Saturday in Utah, allowing the Highway Patrol to reopen Interstate 70 between Green River and Salina in the central part of the state.

Southwest pipeline gets preliminary approval

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The president of a firm that plans an oil pipeline across the Southwest says "we feel we've topped the hill" with preliminary approval from federal and California land officials.

Roger L. Williams Jr., who heads All American Pipeline Co. here, said Friday the next step is completion of environmental impact statements for the proposed route of the 1,200-mile, $700 million line that's to run from California to Texas across both Arizona and New Mexico.

Arizona, Texas and New Mexico have yet to act of the company's request for permission to cross.

Williams said the environmental impact statement should take less than a year to prepare since the major part of the route will follow "existing corridors where this work already has been done, with the data available for use."

He said the company has scheduled a Dec. 12 pre-bidding conference with prospective contractors and pipe suppliers for construction expected to begin in July or August.

The 30-inch line is to begin south of Bakersfield, Calif., to carry crude oil from offshore California to McCamey, Texas, then hook up with a distribution system supplying refineries in the Midwest and along the Gulf Coast.

In Arizona, entering near Blythe, Calif., the line will run 25 miles southwest of Phoenix near Mobile where Provident Oil Co. is planning an oil refinery that would be able to handle the type of oil the pipeline will carry.

Bus searched in response to bomb threat

By The Associated Press

A fully loaded Greyhound bus was stopped, evacuated and searched in California by an Air Force explosives team Saturday after a caller told the Highway Patrol there was a bomb on board, officials said.

The incident was a reminder, on an otherwise quiet Saturday, of the violence that has marked the Amalgamated Transit Union's 3-week-old strike against Greyhound over demands for a wage cut.

The California bus, on a run from San Francisco to Sacramento, was stopped near Dixon and was still being searched four hours later, said Carolyn Smith, a communications operator for the Highway Patrol.

An explosives team from Travis Air Force Base brought in bomb-sniffing dogs, and the dogs indicated there was "something present," but no bomb was located immediately, Ms. Smith said.

The 43 passengers were loaded onto another coach and continued their trip, Greyhound reported.

The company has reported several bomb threats since the strike began.

"We've had a sprinkling of these," said Greyhound spokeswoman Dorothy Lorant. "All of them have been false, thank God."

Tony Martinez, San Francisco shop steward for the driver's union, said he doubts any of his members is responsible. "I don't think any driver would go that far," he said.

On Friday a bus leaving the terminal in Philadelphia was attacked by four unidentified men with a crowbar, leaving the windows smashed and the driver injured.

Pickets marching in front of the depot denied their union was responsible.

Striking workers, meanwhile, continued to cast ballots on a proposed contract. Union officials are scheduled to announce Monday results of the voting on a new three-year offer, which reportedly contains a 7.8 percent wage cut.

In Providence, R.I., a striking driver was injured Friday night as about 50 pickets tried to block a Greyhound bus that was approaching the depot. Roger Bernier, 59, of Seekonk, Mass., was taken to Rhode Island Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Union members claim a policeman threw Bernier to the ground, causing him to hit his head on the pavement. Police say it was uncertain how Bernier was injured.

Greyhound's 12,700 drivers and other workers who belong to the Amalgamated Transit Union struck Nov. 2 over a proposed contract calling for at least 9.5 percent cuts in wages and benefits.

In Los Angeles, a union leader urged striking Greyhound workers Saturday to maintain peaceful picket lines.

"If the public sees no pickets, they'll think the strike is over — it's not," said C.S. Robinson, president of Amalgamated Transit Union Local 1222 in Los Angeles. But he added, "Let's be peaceful ... "

Sandinistas order Cubans out of country

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government has ordered 1,000 Cuban military advisers to leave the country, along with several Salvadoran guerrilla leaders, "so the United States has no pretext to invade," government sources said.

The sources said late Friday that 1,000 Cubans, mostly military instructors, will leave Nicaragua in the next week. A group of 1,200 Cubans, mostly teachers and technicians, already has left Nicaragua, they said.

The sources also said that at least seven high-ranking Salvadoran guerrilla leaders and their families have left Nicaragua in the last week. They said that many more of the 2,000 guerrilla-linked Salvadorans residing here would leave soon at Nicaragua's request.

The reports were confirmed by several government, private and Cuban sources, and all requested anonymity for security reasons.

The moves were the latest in a series of efforts by the leftist Sandinistas to ease internal dissent and improve the country's image abroad.

The presence of Cuban advisers here has irritated both internal critics and the Reagan administration, which claims the advisers prove Nicaragua is a Soviet client state. The administration also has claimed Nicaragua is a supply and command center for the Salvadoran guerrillas.

One government source said the foreigners were being asked to leave "so the United States does not have another pretext to invade Nicaragua and El Salvador."

The United States has been providing arms and training to anti-Sandinista guerrilla forces, estimated to number 10,000, based in Honduras and Costa Rica. Nicaragua claims an invasion of the country is imminent.

The departures also were linked to a Central America peace treaty presented by the four nations of the Contadora Group — Colombia, Venezuela, Panama and Mexico — which calls for the removal of all foreign military advisers from the region.

The Contadora countries are hoping to have the treaty signed at a meeting with five Central American foreign ministers, scheduled for mid-December in Panama. Nicaragua hopes to have a good bargaining position there, having already sent home many Cubans, the source said.

U.S. officials say there were 5,000 Cuban advisers in Nicaragua before reports the Cubans were being asked to leave. Cuban President Fidel Castro recently said 200 are military men, but U.S. officials believe the number is much higher.

Celts looked to sky for mistletoe

The ancient Celts' priests, the Druids, believed mistletoe fell from the sky, possibly generated by lightning. They cut it with a golden sickle, drank water in which it had been steeped, and thought it a "heal-all."

Drought dims lights in Europe

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A drought in much of Eastern and Central Europe has cut supplies of electricity and drinking water, dried out farmland and reduced river shipping to a trickle.

"The whole Danube River Basin is witnessing an accentuated shortage of water...unmatched since the start of this century," the state-run Romania Libera newspaper reported in Bucharest Friday.

The mayor of Belgrade pleaded with city residents to conserve water, urging that they skip daily baths and showers and to publicly chastise people who waste energy.

Mayor Bogdan Bogdanovic's rare television appearance last week was part of official efforts to make residents of the drought-stricken countries start taking the water shortage seriously.

SPRING was a little drier than usual, residents of the area say, but the real dry spell began in fall. After the normally dry summer was over, the autumn rains did not come.

Yugoslavia has its longest drought in 60 years. Many households have no electricity for as long as 12 hours a day as officials shut down hydroelectric plants selectively to save water.

Officials in Belgrade say they are considering making the rotating blackouts 16-hours long since water levels in the basins at the power plants are still low. Yugoslavia cannot afford to import enough fossil fuel for power plants.

IN Romania, which has fuel problems like Yugoslavia's, lakes and reservoirs are at their shallowest levels in 30 years. Power cuts are made daily. Authorities announced that late-night television programming was being reduced starting last week, and the government is reportedly considering temporarily closing schools in January to save energy.

Czechoslovakia's state-run CTK news agency reported serious water shortages in several areas.

"The worst is in South Moravia, where water has to be carried to 60 communities," Marta Dudova of the Czechoslovak hydrological institute said. Reservoir levels in South Moravia were reported to be 60 percent below normal.

LOW river levels have crippled shipping on the Danube and several other Central European rivers, causing considerable financial losses.

Czechoslovak officials suspended Danube freighter and barge traffic on Nov. 2. Shipping on the Labe, the Czechoslovak part of Elbe river, was stopped Sept. 5.

Hungarian vessels, which are designed for lower river levels than other barges, were virtually alone in most of the Danube's Hungarian waters, said Istvan Buzas, a spokesman for MAHART, the state-run shipping line. The low water levels, however, forced the barges to carry only half a load, he said.

"Profits are lower than usual, but the main thing is to keep going," Buzas said.

In Austria, the state-run Danube Steam Ship Company on Friday began limited inland shipping, after a two-week suspension.

Are U.S., U.S.S.R. entering new stage of arms race?

LONDON (AP) — Dramatic developments during the last two weeks appear to mark the start of a new stage in the nuclear arms race between East and West.

Many Western governments and weapons-control specialists had predicted the Soviet Union would make concessions at arms talks in Geneva when the first of NATO's 572 new U.S.-made nuclear missiles arrived in Europe.

But after the missiles began to arrive in Britain, on Nov. 14, the Soviets quit the negotiations on medium-range missiles in Europe and said they'll match the growing NATO nuclear arsenal in Western Europe by stationing more missiles in the Communist East bloc and sea-based rockets that could strike the United States.

"We don't know at this point what to expect," said Richard Perle, assistant U.S. defense secretary, after Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov threatened to strengthen the Soviets' nuclear firepower.

"We have all started on a new spiral of madness," said Richard S. Ovinnikov, a Soviet ambassador to the United Nations. Nevertheless, the diplomat said on Friday at a news conference, "We are not going to be the first to use nuclear weapons."

NATO member governments, while vowing to go ahead with their five-year program of missile deployment, quickly appealed to the Soviets to resume negotiations.

Some government officials and arms experts suggested the Soviets might return to the talks on medium-range missiles but not before the 1984 U.S. presidential elections. Others said the Soviets would return only if the West agreed to combine medium-range missile talks with the negotiations on strategic weapons.

A critical point in the arms race came on Nov. 14, when British Defense Minister Michael Heseltine told a hushed House of Commons "I have to inform the House that earlier today the first cruise missiles were delivered by air" to Greenham Common air base in Britain.

In all, 464 cruise missiles and 108 Pershing-2 rockets will be placed in five Western European nations.

NATO says the missiles, each carrying one bomb, will counter Soviet SS-20 triple-headed missiles, which Western intelligence sources say now number 360.

A separate set of arms talks, dealing with long-range, or strategic, nuclear weapons, is still under way in Geneva and there has been no indication those talks will break off.

On Nov. 24, Soviet news media issued a statement from Andropov. The president declared that the Soviet Union would resume deployment of SS-20 missiles in Eastern Europe.

U.S. veteran buried in East Germany

TORGAU, East Germany (AP) — In a gesture of American friendship toward the Soviet Union, an American veteran was buried Saturday as he had wished — in an East German town where he and other U.S. soldiers met their advancing Soviet allies 28 years ago and cut Nazi Germany in two.

Among his mourners was a contingent of Soviet troops from a nearby barracks and American officers from a U.S. military mission in Potsdam, East Germany.

Shortly before Joe Polowsky, a 66-year-old Chicago taxi driver, died of cancer last month, he wrote a letter telling relatives he wanted to be buried at Torgau, East Germany.

"Joe Polowsky being buried at Torgau on the Elbe River cannot but have a comforting, creative, positive effect upon events," he wrote in his letter.

Polowsky was one of the American soldiers who met the Soviet army at Torgau, on the banks of the Elbe, on April 25, 1945. The joining of the Western and Russian armies sealed the fate of Adolf Hitler's Third Reich.

Twelve days later, Hitler was dead and the Germans surrendered.

Polowsky was buried about a mile from where the troops had met. Two American and two Soviet soldiers who were part of the troop linkup in Torgau wheeled the cart bearing Polowsky's coffin, draped with an American flag, to the grave.

The only relative to attend the burial was Polowsky's son, Ted, 23.

Col. Roland Lajoie from the U.S. mission at Potsdam handed Ted Polowsky the flag that had covered his father's coffin.

The Soviet and American officers saluted, and Polowsky's son wept.

U.S. officers from the military mission in Potsdam, East Germany and soldiers from a Soviet barracks in Torgau attended the ceremony. About 200 East Germans from the area came to the burial.

Two U.S. Marines stationed in West Berlin followed the pallbearers.

After a riverside ceremony after the burial, Ted Polowsky quoted Christ's admonishment to "love one another, as God has loved you."

"I pray that both nations will not pick up swords anymore, but learn to live in peace with each other and with all nations of the world," the young man said.

In the letter describing his funeral wishes, Joe Polowsky said his burial at Torgau would symbolize "one of the few remaining ties" between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Romania urges Soviets, NATO to resume meeting on missiles

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The leaders of Communist Romania have urged the Soviet Union to call off plans to increase its nuclear force in Europe and has repeated calls for NATO and the Soviets to rid Europe of medium-range missiles, newspapers reported today.

The strongly worded statement, carried in local newspapers, was issued by the Communist Party's governing Politburo and the State Council after a meeting late Friday.

It urged NATO to give up its plans to deploy 572 medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe and called on the Soviet Union to rejoin talks with the United States on reducing such weapons.

Romania, which frequently takes an independent foreign policy line, is the only Soviet bloc country to have issued such appeals to the Soviet Union and is the only Warsaw Pact nation to urge the Soviets to reconsider the missile buildup.

The Soviet Union left the Geneva talks on medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe and announced the planned missile buildup this week in response to the start of delivery of NATO's new missiles.

"All the measures in the last few days push Europe and the whole world to the verge of disaster, of nuclear abyss," said the Romanian statement, carried by the official AGERPRES news agency.

President Nicolae Ceausescu in the past has called for elimination of the medium-range missiles from Europe, but the statement for the first time suggested formulas for a compromise.

One called on NATO to stop deployment of the new U.S. missiles while the Soviet Union would withdraw, dismantle and store all the missiles in the European part of its territory, pending an agreement in U.S.-Soviet talks.

At the same time, the United States would remove an unspecified number of nuclear sea-based and airborne weapons pointing at Europe.

The second formula asks NATO to give up its new deployment. In return, the Soviet Union would reduce its medium-range warheads in Europe to a number equal to that now possessed by France and Britain.

Grenada courting investors

MIAMI (AP) — Grenada, snubbed as left-wing before the U.S.-led invasion last month, now will get first-class treatment at the annual Conference on the Caribbean trade meeting.

The tiny spice island plans to send a high-level delgation to the conference, which opens here Tuesday, in hopes of attracting U.S. investment dollars, a conference spokeswoman said.

"Grenada has an urgent need to get a new image that will help them get tourism and trade," said Olga Conner, press liaison for the conference organizers.

AFTER the invasion that ended turbulent Marxist rule on the island, Grenada got an official invitation to the conference and $2,000 from the Caribbean Association for Industry and Commerce "to assist them with their exhibit and to secure travel expenses for a high-level delegation," said Ms. Conner.

Other Caribbean nations also are getting some money, she added. "I don't know how much they're getting, but I believe it's more or less the same amount."

The Chicago-based Associated Consultants International marketing firm has lined up potential U.S. investors to participate in the conference, and Ms. Conner said about 20 investment companies have already established contacts with Grenadian businessmen.

GRENADA, along with Nicaragua, was originally snubbed because of its leftist government but it was hastily courted after the invasion. Nicaragua still expects to send only a small delegation to the conference.

The four-day meeting is expected to draw 2,000 business people and government representatives. In addition to the usual workshops, an investment exposition is planned.

President Reagan turned down an invitation to appear at the closing session of the conference. Organizers said either Secretary of State George Shultz or Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam is expected to speak.

U.S. won't comment on defector's status

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal officials kept mum Saturday on the whereabouts of a Chinese diplomatic courier whose request for asylum triggered a two-hour standoff on an airport runway over possession of diplomatic documents.

The State Department refused to comment on the defector's status or his whereabouts Saturday. The FBI referred calls to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, but Duke Austin, INS spokesman, was out for the day, his wife said.

Larry Speakes, deputy White House press secretary, said, "We will review it (the asylum request), and INS will make a decision."

A spokesman at the Federal Metropolitan Correctional Center here said "I don't have anything on that" when asked to confirm a Chicago Sun-Times report that the courier, identified as Gogiang Yang by an O'Hare airport policeman, had been kept there overnight.

In Tokyo, Hu Yaobang, general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party, quipped, "Such a thing is possible, but you know, there are so many people in China, if just one of them leaves..."

Two Chinese couriers were aboard Pan Am Flight 72, en route from San Francisco to New York, to carry documents in diplomatic pouches to China's delegation at the United Nations. After the two couriers started arguing loudly over possession of the pouches, pilot Gerald Dion decided to make an unscheduled landing at O'Hare International Airport on Friday afternoon, airport police said.

The second courier did not want to defect.

After more than an hour of negotiations in the presence of State Department officials, the defecting diplomat was taken off the 747 jet and whisked into seclusion. The other courier kept the documents, an INS spokesman said, and the plane flew on to its scheduled destination in New York.

China may 'reconsider' Reagan trip

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee's resolution on Taiwan might force Chinese leaders to "reconsider" plans for President Reagan to tour China and for Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang to visit the United States, a Chinese Communist Party chief said today.

Hu Yaobang, secretary general of the party, told a news conference in Tokyo that whether the trips take place next year depends on the Reagan administration's response to China's protest over the resolution by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

On Nov. 15, the committee approved a resolution that the political status of Taiwan be settled "peacefully, free of coercion and in a manner acceptable to the people on Taiwan." The full Senate has not acted on the resolution.

China regards Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government since 1949, as a breakaway province and is pledged to reunite the island with the mainland.

The Senate committee's position is "unacceptable" and "not in the interest of all China," Hu said.

He said China considered the resolution interference in China's internal affairs and filed a formal protest.

"If we are not satisfied with their answer, we will have to reconsider" the exchange of visits, Hu said.

U.S. arms negotiator to discuss missile talks with Italian leader

ROME (AP) — U.S. arms negotiator Paul Nitze is to meet Monday with Premier Bettino Craxi to discuss ways of reopening the now suspended medium-range missile talks, the premier's office announced Saturday.

Nitze will outline to Craxi the phase in the negotiations that preceded the Soviet pullout last Wednesday, and the two will discuss prospects for resuming the talks, the announcement said.

The Soviets pulled out of the talks after the North Atlantic Treaty Organization began installing 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe.

Italy is among five West European nations accepting the missiles. It is to deploy 112 cruise missiles in Sicily.

Mexican Air Force fighter crashes

CHIHUAHUA, Mexico (AP) — A Mexican Air Force F5 fighter crashed into the desert, killing the pilot, shortly after a military show, military sources said Saturday.

The fighter plane, one of 12 F5s bought from the United States in 1982, crashed in the desert 20 miles south of Chihuahua Friday afternoon because of mechanical failure, a spokesman at the Fifth Military Zone in Chihuahua said. The pilot, identifed as Ernesto Manuel Aburto, died in the crash, he said.

President Miguel de la Madrid and Defense Minister Gen. Juan Arevalo Gardoqui watched a 1½-hour military display by some 5,600 Mexican troops earlier in the day at the Emiliano Zapata Military Camp in Chihuahua, 904 miles north of Mexico City.

Guerrillas accused of killing 11

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — Guerrillas fighting to free the territory of South-West Africa, or Namibia, from South African rule were responsible for the deaths of 11 black civilians in two days, the military said Saturday.

A statement by the South-West Africa Territory Force headquarters said 10 civilians were killed and six seriously injured Friday when a truck hit two land mines planted by guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization. The statement said the incident occurred east of Ruacana near the Angolan border.

In addition, SWAPO guerrillas bayoneted a civilian to death in northern Namibia on Thursday, the statement said without providing details.

The guerrilla movement has fought a 17-year bush war from bases in Angola to drive South Africa from Namibia and win independence for the territory. Five Western nations are trying to negotiate an independence plan, but the talks are deadlocked.

Laotian refugees seek happiness together in Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Forty-one Laotian refugees, forced to leave West Virginia by a landlord who didn't like their lifestyle, unpacked Saturday in their new homes, "scared about tomorrow" but happy to be together.

The new arrivals — men, women and children aged 7 months to over 60 — were greeted by a contingent of church volunteers ready to turn over keys to five apartments and a rented house.

Nai Sing Sae Phan, 23, rinsed pots and wiped countertops readying the kitchen of the apartment where she said meals will be cooked for her husband, her mother-in-law and her husband's two sisters.

"It is very important to us to stay together; if we need help then we have each other," Mrs. Phan said. "We are together here and I am happy, but I don't know yet what I will do. I am scared about tomorrow."

Mrs. Phan and other members of the Iu Mien tribe began the 13-hour trip from Dawson, W.Va., Friday. They are joining a community of some 300 Laotian refugees already living in Montgomery, including some 140 other Iu Mien tribe members.

nation

The newly arrived Laotians were thrown off a Greenbrier County, W.Va., farm by a San Francisco man who originally had offered them a 99-year lease on the 873-acre tract. Jerry Thompson said he offered the Laotians the lease after seeing them farming under freeways in California.

They reached West Virginia in March, but in October Thompson ordered them to vacate the property by Nov. 30.

Thompson said they did not set up the kind of farm he envisioned, complained that they were raising chickens, cutting down trees and taking advantage of other Greenbrier County residents.

Although they did not receive any government subsidy in West Virginia, Thompson accused the refugees of being "professional welfare recipients."

Thompson's complaints were disputed by West Virginia volunteers who helped the group.

"He just didn't understand what we were doing. We were clearing trees where we wanted to build houses," said Seing Sang Sae Chao, 26.

Sae Chao said after leaving their Laotian homeland in 1975, the group was confined at a refugee camp in Thailand and then lived in San Francisco before going to West Virginia.

Pat Hall, director of the Montgomery New Life School, which coordinated living arrangements for the 41 refugees, said the group's arrival "went about as smoothly as possible."

Dream makers grant children's last wishes

WEBSTER, Mass. (AP) — In a cramped office in this Massachuchetts mill town, some unlikely dream makers are granting last wishes to children who may never grow up.

Since its creation in May, A Wish Come True Inc. has financed vacations and gifts for eight terminally or chronically ill youngsters.

"It's a privilege to work with these children because they've taught us so much," said president and founder Mary Girardin. "It's kind of like you have your own little angels here on Earth, and if you reach out and touch them, you've touched a tiny piece of God."

So far, the organization has sent four children to Disney World in Florida and one to New Hampshire's White Mountains. Seven-year-old Billy Kopsaftis of Grafton, who suffers from a rare bone disease known as Hurler's syndrome, was the guest of President Reagan in Washington for a day last month.

When Jamie Melanson, a 3-year-old afflicted with malignant brain tumors, asked for a merry-go-round for her back yard in Dayville, Conn., Mrs. Girardin phoned a company in Missouri. A week later, the $3,800 carousel arrived on a truck.

Volunteers are now trying to arrange free tickets for Jackie Manzi, a 17-year-old leukemia victim from Webster, to see popular singer Neil Diamond.

Non-profit and run by volunteers, the organization has scraped together dollars and change from bake sales, flea markets, raffles and public pleas.

"Call us beggars. That's us," said Helen Defilippo, who is in charge of fundraising.

It's a shoestring operation that runs on hand-me-down furniture and borrowed time. Keeping administrative expenses below 5 percent is a point of pride.

Shoplifting increases 10 percent from last year, according to study

CHICAGO (AP) — Shoplifting nationwide has increased 10 percent over last year, according to a study by the Arthur Young consulting firm, and the president of a retailers' group says the recession is one reason for the increase.

"This year's economic upturn could have a positive effect in somewhat lowering the pilferage rate," said Richard Hersh, president of the National Mass Retailing Institute.

The shoplifting study, conducted for the retailers' institute, said retailers are spending 8 percent more to prevent shoplifting than they were last year.

"The rise in shoplifting partly may be attributed to the last year's recession," Hersh said.

The study also said the average shoplifter is an adult between 18 and 35, and that shoplifters are just as likely to be men as women. Minors were the second largest shoplifting group.

Explosion at fireworks factory kills two, injures 23

BELLPORT, N.Y. (AP) — A series of explosions at the fireworks company that made President Reagan's inaugural display leveled a warehouse and damaged up to 100 homes Saturday, killing two people and injuring 23 others, authorities said.

Fireworks went off in the air when the Grucci Fireworks Co. warehouse blew up. Power was temporarily knocked out to 7,000 suburban Long Island customers and fireworks debris was scattered up to eight miles away.

"They were red, blue, green and white. This was the biggest show ever," said Jim Lyons, 18, an employee of Walker Automotive a mile south of the site. "It's just incredible. I've never been terrified in my life until now."

The explosion destroyed 12 buildings on the company premises, a former Army post, and authorities estimated that between 75 and 100 houses were damaged.

"It looks like a battlefield," said Brookhaven Town Supervisor Henrietta Acampara. "There's a big crater right in the middle. Everything is flattened. Houses have no windows. It's a horror." Bellport is part of the town of Brookhaven.

One member of the Grucci family was killed in the blast, and the injured included the 78-year-old founder of the company and three other family members. All of the injured were later released from the hospital.

The warehouse of the company, owned by fifth-generation fireworks makers, blew up at 11:10 a.m., officials said. Several small fires were sparked but firefighters extinguished them.

Observers said they heard at least three blasts.

A two-block area was evacuated because of fireworks lying in the streets, and the Red Cross said at least 30 families would be given shelter overnight at recreation centers and a high school.

Police went door-to-door in a one-half square mile area around the factory Saturday evening, advising people not to spend the night there because of explosives, Caples said. He said police would patrol the explosion area throughout the night to prevent looting.

The area was being searched for hundreds of fireworks believed scattered in the blast, some as far as eight miles away.

If one were to explode, "it would be enough to blow your hands off or knock your eyes out," said Lt. Thomas Compitello of Suffolk County Emergency Services.

Civil rights commission ends Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, which has pricked the public conscience for 26 years, will go out of existence on Tuesday. There may be a successor, but it will not be the same.

In its heyday the commission was one of the most controversial, and ultimately influential, forces on the national scene. It confronted state and local authorities in the South and focused national attention on the emerging struggle of blacks for equal rights as Americans.

Often it forced reluctant politicians to act despite resistance and political risks. Most of its major recommendations eventually became law, from voting rights to equal rights in schools, public accommodations and the work place.

More recently the commission had declined in public visibility as many of the remaining issues were more economic and less confrontational.

Now, President Reagan's efforts to replace some members of the commission have revived a little of the old fire. But the reorganized commission expected to emerge from the current feud will be bigger, possibly more politicized and probably less likely to focus as sharply on specific problems and solutions.

Rather than accede to Reagan's claim of control over the commission, Congress declined to enact the routine reauthorization that comes up periodically and was due in September.

Just before it adjourned for the year, Congress moved to break the impasse by creating a new commission under joint congressional-presidential control and with members protected against political firings. That bill is still on Reagan's desk.

MEANWHILE, THE clock is ticking for the old commission, which technically expired in September. A 60-day winding down period runs out on Tuesday and the old commission goes completely out of existence then, no matter what happens.

Friends of the commission, on the one hand, believe the principle of a federal civil rights watchdog will have been saved if Reagan signs the bill. But the informal assumptions that have made the commission an independent spirit free from political interference have been replaced by legal provisions that could invite uncomfortable oversight from Congress and the White House.

Reagan is in a dilemma. If he fails to sign the bill, he could make a martyr of the commission on the eve of a presidential election year.

But the White House also sees serious legal problems in signing it as things stand. The administration agreed to the compromise that shaped the new statute, but is worried about a lawsuit filed to block Reagan's firing of three members of the outgoing commission. The Justice Department is appealing a ruling in U.S. District Court that the firings were illegal because Congress intended the agency to be independent.

If Reagan fails to challenge a ruling that he could not fire members of the old commission, the administration fears, it might create a legal precedent against removal of others the administration considers the subordinates of a president — any president.

SIMPLY SIGNING the bill could moot the court case as far as this commission is concerned, but it could leave a dangerous shadow over presidential prerogative since the opinion of U.S. District Judge Norma H. Johnson would be left on the books. The administration would rather see it overturned, but there may not be time.

The White House has indicated Reagan will not sign any bills except emergency measures before returning on Sunday from his Thanksgiving holiday in California.

Since its creation, the commission has been made up of six members appointed by the president and confirmed by the Senate. It originally was given a two-year life. Few doubted it would be renewed regularly, but, after a few controversies in the early years, it always was.

The idea for a federal agency to watch over the state of civil rights in America dates at least to a 1947 committee appointed by President Truman. That group suggested two federal civil rights agencies, one in the executive branch and a joint committee of Congress.

It took another decade to get action from Congress, but on Sept. 9, 1957, President Eisenhower signed the first civil rights act since the Reconstruction measures that followed the Civil War. Passed after a record-setting filibuster, it included provisions for the Civil Rights Commission, an advisory body that had subpoena powers for investigations but no enforcement authority.

Sponsors of the bill dropped the idea of a joint congressional committee. But the commission they created was not entirely a child of the executive branch; it was required to file its reports with both the president and Congress. The law was silent on removal of the members.

THE LAW permitted no more than three members from either political party. Most of the time it has been evenly divided, although there have been occasional independents. But more important, most of the appointees have been nonpolitical — scholars, college presidents, civic leaders, retired office holders and others attuned to issues but not directly connected with government or party activities.

The status of the commissioners had never been clear. When Eisenhower left office, members offered pro-forma resignations just as cabinet officers did, and the members offered similar resignations when President Johnson succeeded Kennedy in 1963. But no one was replaced and the custom died.

Professor to stand trial in lover's death

BOSTON (AP) — Using fragments from deep within the human brain, prosecutors say they will prove a prominent anatomy professor hammered his young lover to death after she threatened to cut off their affair.

No body has been found. But investigators say they followed a grisly trail from a blood-smeared hammer in a roadside trash bin through strip joints of Boston's Combat Zone to the suburban home of professor William Douglas.

There, in the pocket of a jacket belonging to Douglas, prosecutors say they found a chunk of brain tissue.

"We will prove without a doubt that William Douglas killed Robin Benedict," said John Kivlan, Norfolk County assistant district attorney, at Douglas' arraignment Oct. 31 on a charge of first-degree murder.

But how to prove murder without the body of the victim?

"There is precedent," said William Delahunt, Norfolk County district attorney. "It's not unheard of."

F. Lee Bailey, a prominent trial lawyer who is not involved in the Douglas case, said there are risks in prosecuting without a body, a death certificate or witnesses. He said he knew of only a few such convictions.

"I'd be looking at the circumstantial evidence," Bailey said. "It's not conclusive, but then again it's not to be ignored. There are plenty of hammers out there, but not many of them have brain matter on them."

Kivlan said he will present tests by police and the FBI of brain cells found in Douglas' coat and blood found on clothing and Ms. Benedict's car to prove she is dead, and that Douglas is her killer.

"This so-called white matter is from the deeper part of the brain," said Kivlan. He said he believes the victim was beaten with the 2½-pound hammer found in the trash bin and that she could not have survived.

Douglas has pleaded innocent.

"This is ridiculous," said his attorney, Daniel J. O'Connell. "There are going to be a number of novel questions about this case."

O'Connell said Friday he will file motions to have the trial moved from Dedham Superior Court.

"I don't think he can be tried fairly anywhere in the state," he said. "I've never seen the media try and convict someone like they have in this case."

O'Connell said prosecutors haven't proved Ms. Benedict is dead, but added he hasn't decided whether to argue she is still alive.

According to court affidavits, the lives of the artist and the professor converged about 18 months ago.

By January 1982, police say Miss Benedict, a promising art student, had left the Jehovah's Witnesses and, using the alias Nadine Porter, began working as a prostitute.

In March 1982, Miss Benedict met Douglas in a Combat Zone bar.

"His contacts with Robin Benedict became an obsession," said Kivlan. "When he had exhausted his personal funds and his family's funds, he began to steal from his employer."

Douglas resigned his post at Tufts University in June after the university began investigating his use of research funds. On Oct. 12, he pleaded innocent to charges of larceny and filing false documents. Prosecutors say he misappropriated more than $50,000 in university funds.

Six astronauts sleep, eat in shifts to prepare for Monday launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Six astronauts ate and slept at topsy-turvy hours as the countdown began Saturday for the longest space shuttle flight yet — a nine-day international science mission set for liftoff Monday.

At midmorning, all six sat down together for a meal. Three ate breakfast, three had dinner.

After the meal, the three-man Red Team went to bed for eight hours. The Blue Team studied flight plans and attended flight briefings until their after-midnight bedtime.

The six, including the first foreigner named to a U.S. flight, have followed the unusual timetable for several days to prepare for the mission. Each team will work a 12-hour shift, concentrating on science and technology projects in a European-built science station mounted in the cargo bay of Columbia, which is returning to space for the first time in a year.

The countdown began at 4 a.m. EST, aiming for a launch at 11 a.m. Monday. The early hours of the count went so well that at midday the launch crew was finishing many chores about 30 minutes ahead of schedule, test conductor Bob Webster reported.

SBC head clarifies definition of creed

By The Associated Press

The president of the Southern Baptist Convention has clarified a statement he made this month on Baptists' need for a "creed."

"No matter what they say, Baptists have got a creed — everybody's got a creed," the Rev. Jimmy Draper of Euless, Texas, said at a news conference in Virginia this month. He added that the denomination should have some "guidelines" to help members decide whether they are "true Southern Baptists."

But on Tuesday, Draper, who is serving his second term as president of the 13.9 million-member denomination, said in a telephone interview from Virginia that he thinks the media made it sound as if he wanted Southern Baptists to have a written creed, which the historically "noncreedal" group has never had.

"I had said the word 'creed' comes from (the Latin word) 'credo,' which means 'I believe,' and we all do believe something," he said.

INVESTMENTS GOALS

There are several kinds of real estate investments. Which is best for you? Generally speaking, the wisest first investment would be the purchase of a home. It's better to own the property you occupy than to own something else and pay rent for yourself.

After that, each investment should be analyzed in four specific areas depending on your goals: (1) Rate of Return; (2) Degree of Risk; (3) Liquidity; and (4) Management Task. The rate of return is what we all look for and that includes the combination of cash flow, appreciation in value, tax shelter, and the leverage effect of borrowed money.

For example, if you don't want the hassle of management, and don't need cash flow or tax shelter - rapidly appreciating vacant land may best suit your needs. If tax shelter and cash flow are important, a residential investment may be the best way to go.

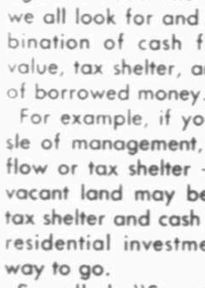

So-called, "Sweat equity" is another popular route for the small investor. This involves buying property in a good location but somewhat run-down and fixing it up yourself.

NAACP chairwoman charges civil rights group with sexism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Margaret Bush Wilson, chairwoman of the NAACP board, said Saturday the civil rights organization's efforts to combat social injustice would be crippled if the NAACP is "unable to rise above sexism in its own ranks."

Mrs. Wilson told reporters that although she hopes to win an re-election bid for one of eight at-large seats on the board, it is "unlikely" she will attempt to mount a direct leadership challenge to NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks.

The NAACP board voted to take away most of Mrs. Wilson's powers as chairwoman in July, after she lost a power struggle with Hooks. Her duties were given to the board's vice chairman until a successor is chosen early next year.

She asserted that the NAACP board's July action "offers very little hope to women who are aspiring to become members of major decision-making bodies."

Man arrested after vehicle incident

DENVER (AP) — A customer relations employee of an airline was arrested after allegedly running over a man repeatedly with a vehicle and striking another pedestrian with it, police said.

Harold Eugene Stiver, 41, of Aurora was arrested Friday for investigation of attempted first-degree murder and first-degree assault, police said. Police said he ran down William Henry, 39, and struck John Robinson, 40. Stiver, an employee of Western Airlines, posted bond late Friday and was released from jail.

Henry, who suffered multiple injuries including a broken leg, was in critical condition at University Hospital. Robinson sustained minor injuries and was treated at St. Joseph Hospital and later released.

Stiver said he had no knowledge of the incident, police said.

Gasoline fumes force evacuation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fumes from 10,000 gallons of gasoline that had been dumped in a Van Nuys sewer forced 30 people to leave their homes Saturday while crews flushed the system with chemical foam.

"They felt with all the fumes if anybody walked around with a lit cigarette, the whole block would've gone up," said Los Angeles police officer Jim Correll. He said a tanker truck was seen dumping gasoline into the sewer Friday evening.

Nine families were evacuated shortly after midnight, but were allowed to return after the gasoline was cleaned up Saturday morning.

Inmate thinks his faith being tested

Lenell Geter

TENNESSEE COLONY (AP) — He is a college-educated engineer who works as a draftsman, teaches prison inmates how to write, conducts Bible study classes and organizes chess tournaments.

He also is serving a life sentence for armed robbery.

Lenell Geter, a 26-year-old former engineer at E-Systems Inc. in Greenville, claims he is the victim of mistaken identity, police harassment and racism. His case has drawn the attention of national television news shows and the FBI, which is investigating whether his civil rights have been violated.

Behind a steel and glass partition, Geter still smiles.

"Now that I'm here, I'm trying to look at this in the most positive aspect," he said. "I believe this is a test for me. I can say that my faith in the Lord is being tried. But I believe I will be exonerated and be a stronger person for it."

Geter was heavily recruited by engineering firms after graduation from South Carolina State University. He turned down higher-paying jobs in Boston, Detroit and South Carolina to come to Greenville, which has a small-town atmosphere he liked.

"I wanted to live in a small town and raise a family," he said. "I worked all my life preparing for a family and this career. I maintained my integrity and my character and I avoided being in circles that might get me in trouble."

state

Geter got in trouble because he liked to stop by a city park after work for relaxation. A 68-year-old lady thought he was suspicious and called police, who photographed the young engineer and his five black collegues from E-Systems and sent their pictures to Dallas-area police departments labeled as robbery suspects.

Five clerks at a fried chicken restaurant 50 miles from Greenville identified Geter, and he was convicted on Oct. 18, 1982. Nine white co-workers testified that Geter was at work the afternoon of the robbery.

His roommate, Anthony Williams, was charged with a $31 7-Eleven robbery but was acquitted earlier this month.

"That was a blessing," said Geter, a soft-spoken and articulate man who still wears a sophisticated digital watch in prison.

"I feel they would have railroaded Anthony as well had it not been for the good Lord and the concern of the public."

Holiday shoppers pack Texas stores

By The Associated Press

Holiday shoppers packed stores around Texas as the annual Christmas rush began this weekend with one retail analyst saying consumer confidence is at its highest level in 10 years.

Experts said economic improvements, which follow a long dry spell largely brought on by a bust in the oil industry, have filled parking lots with cars and stores with jostling crowds in the state's major cities.

"There's a lot of consumer demand built up that's not been satisfied recently," said Charles Glovsky, a retail analyst for the Eppler, Guerin & Turner brokerage in Dallas. "This will be less of a necessities Christmas and more of a luxury Christmas."

He noted that studies show consumer confidence at its highest level in 10 years.

Federal Reserve Bank figures show that Houston-area department store sales are down 1 percent for the year, but have been stronger in recent weeks.

Brian Galuardi, regional economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, was slightly more cautious, but said, "Our expectations are for the best Christmas in three to four years."

He said 1983 could "turn out to be very, very profitable" for merchants because many cut their operating costs during the recession and are in an excellent position to take advantage of the sales increases.

Those cost-cutting measures could even cause shortages in merchandise, said Tom Langenfeld, a representative for Dayton-Hudson department stores, which own Mervyn's and Target stores.

Langenfeld said some merchants were so worried about their sales prospects that their inventories will not be up to holiday shopping sprees.

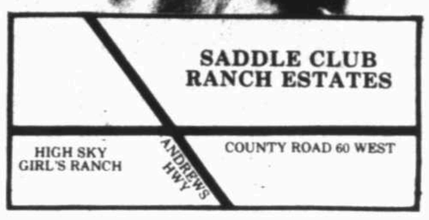

Few retail executives were complaining.

"We have been absolutely packed," said Bob Gorman, manager of Barton Creek Square in west Austin. He estimated 60,000 people shopped in the large regional mall Friday.

Locks at $12 million Travis County jail don't work

AP Laserphoto

Travis County Sheriff Doyne Bailey pauses in front of Travis County's new $12 million jail he says can't be used because the locks don't work.

AUSTIN (AP) — Travis County officials spent $12 million building a jail, but so far they have not been able to use the five-story building because its highly sophisticated locks don't work.

Travis County commissioners are suing the builders, and have voted to borrow $5 million to replace the locks and correct other flaws.

Scheduled to open two years ago, the new jail is a year away from being ready.

Sheriff Doyne Bailey, left with an existing jail that is overcrowded, feels betrayed.

"One of its big selling features was that it had a magnetic locking device," said a frustrated Bailey. "It was sold as being a highly sophisticated, very elaborate scheme of magnetic and electronic fields and crap like that.

"What it amounts to is you can take any three little magnets you can get your hands on and open any door that is equipped with that magnetic lock and key," Bailey lamented.

Federal inspectors said aluminum foil from cigarette packages and magnets from transistor radios could spring the locks.

Bailey's deputies also discovered that prisoners could reach through a food chute and unlock a system aimed at allowing prisoners to lock themselves in their cells for protection against other inmates.

Bailey was not comforted by the notion that many counties have problems with new jails.

"We've done it better than anybody else I've ever heard of," he said sarcastically.

County commissioners filed a lawsuit to try to prove that the architects and contractors on the job violated the state's Deceptive Trade Practices Act by claiming to know how to build a jail.

"I think we can prove it's a piece of junk," said Travis County Judge Mike Renfro.

A Jackson, Miss., firm hired by the county to look at the jail concluded the locking system would be a maintenance "nightmare" if not replaced.

The jail, according to the lawsuit, is "entirely unusable... since the detention system is inoperable."

Integrated Detention Systems Inc., of Dallas installed the system but the company was not sued since it filed for bankruptcy in June.

"Who's really the bad guy in this deal?" said Bailey. "It squarely, in my mind, is IDS who represented itself as being a jail company. They ain't no jail company."

IDS' technologically advanced lockings have drawn mixed reviews in Texas. In April, U.S. Bureau of Prisons officials showed Travis County how the locks could be opened by prisoners.

Gregg County officials in Longview were satisfied with IDS' work on their jail. Others weren't.

The Texas Department of Corrections has given up on its IDS system and will spend about $60,000 to replace it, said spokesman Rick Hartley.

"They just did not work," said Hartley. "We had doors that would pop open at various times. They'd just pop open. That seemed to be the major concern. We had solitary (confinement cell) doors that would pop open."

Glenn Renfro, Collin County supervisor of building maintenance in McKinney, near Dallas, tried to warn Travis County not to get involved with IDS, who was hired for the job by a Cleveland, Ohio, contractor.

"Don't do it," was Renfro's advice. He said he averages seven to 10 malfunctioning doors per week with the IDS system in the Collin County jail.

"You can open the locks with an ice cream stick and a little round magnet like you put on the refrigerator," Renfro said.

Edwin Tipps, IDS president and general manager, acknowledges problems with the Collin County job.

"Collin County was the first project we ever did. Sure, we were just trying to get our act together. I imagine the first story the Associated Press ever wrote sounded like Greek, too," he told an AP reporter.

But Tipps said there's nothing wrong with the locks in the Travis County jail — at least nothing that can't be fixed. He said there's an independent consultant who has determined the system "is exactly as specified and that it will work as it was intended to work."

"The person we did the work for, Ampat-Midwest of Cleveland, has offered to correct certain things that need correcting. They have offered to do that and the county will not allow them to," said Tipps.

Tipps said his company was investigated by a grand jury and cleared of any wrongdoing. "There is no criminal intent in that situation and they know it."

Bailey and other county officials don't want IDS to come back.

"I don't know what their intention is. I know what my intention is, and that is to keep them out of my jail," said the sheriff. "I don't want nobody from IDS in Dallas, Texas, in my jail.

"Once we put a halt to the whole thing, the IDS company goes into bankruptcy. They can't even be sued," said Bailey, whose anger was renewed when he received a September flyer from IDS.

The ad included a cover letter signed by Tipps.

VENETIAN BLINDS by Charles Pierce

Window treatment for light control and privacy, the venetian blind, in the opinion of many designers and decorators is still the best. Long gone, however, are the days of the noisy blind with the wide slats. The modern version usually has skinny, one-inch slats, comes in dozens of colors and has a clean lucite wand that tilts the slats for total privacy and opens them for complete light. The blind pulls up easily and stacks in a slim, horizontal pile at the top of the window. Here, it is out of the way for easy cleaning of the underlying window or viewing the outdoors. A cleaner, more functional window treatment does not exist.

Many different types of window coverings can be found at FASHION FLOORS 3300 W. Wall, 694-5036. We handle the mini blinds, as well as woven woods. In addition we can assist you in decorating with wall coverings, Formica counter tops, ceramic tile, resilient floors and carpeting.

WT Shootout II at Lubbock Saturday

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Lee Rebels and the Odessa Permian Panthers will square off in a Class 5A quarterfinal football classic at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Lubbock's Jones Stadium on the campus of Texas Tech University.

That in a nutshell is the information that all West Texas has been waiting to hear. Some are calling this matchup the greatest athletic event in West Texas history. Some are saying that between 30,000 and 40,000 fans will see this high school playoff game.

Both statements may be stretching things a bit, but there is no doubt that this will be a classic confrontation between two long-time rivals. Never in the history of the two schools have the teams met twice in one season. Never has two District 4-5A representatives faced each other in the playoffs.

This one will surely capture the imgination of West Texas. So much, in fact, that Jones Stadium was selected as the site instead of Odessa's 19,500-seat Ratliff Stadium or Midland's 12,500-seat Memorial Stadium.

"IT WAS certianly a concern to all of us where we would play this game. A lot of people are going to think that we made this move for the extra money by playing in a larger stadium. But I think this is one game that all of the West Texas fans deserve to see if they want," said Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh after the site had been determined Saturday.

"Odessa invited us to play at Ratliff Stadium, but that isn't really fair to Lee. Lee has played there twice this year already. I don't think Odessa wanted to take a chance on flipping for a home-and-home situation because then they would have to win two coin flips — one for the home-and-home and then one for Ratliff Stadium.

"We (Midland) held out for a neutral site because we felt we could not hold anything near what we expect to turnout for this game. Of course, weather will play a big part on the final crowd we get, but I don't think the Odessa stadium or ours will hold the people who will want to see this one," said Bartosh.

"When Lee played Permian at Ratliff earlier this season, there was almost a sellout then. I think there has to be much more interest now than there was then. We even think that people in Amarillo and Lubbock will be interested in seeing this one. I don't think a possible crowd of 30,000 or more is unrealistic if the weather is good."

THE SALE of tickets will begin Tuesday in both Odessa and Midland. Pre-game tickets will be cheaper if purchased at the Jones Stadium gate. Adult tickets will go for $5 each and student tickets will be $3 if purchased prior to the game. All tickets at the Jones Stadium gate will be $6, including students.

Bartosh said the Memorial Stadium ticket office will open at 8 a.m. Tuesday and will sell until 5 p.m., including the noon hour. Tickets will also be on sale at the same times Wednesday and Thursday and from 8 a.m. until noon on Friday. Student tickets may be purchased at school or at the Memorial Stadium ticket office.

Lee head football coach Spike Dykes is on a roll in the coin flipping department. He called heads on a flip by Permian head coach John Wilkins to win the home team honors. All that means is that Lee fans will sit on the west side of Jones Stadium and will wear the maroon jersies. Permian fans will sit on the east side and the Panthers will have to wear their white jersies instead of their favored all black uniforms.

IRONICALLY, this was the same situation both teams had in the bi-district round of the playoffs when Lee defeated Amarillo High by a 30-3 margin and Permian defeated Hereford by a 48-14 margin in a Jones Stadium doubleheader three weeks ago.

In the only meeting of the year between these two teams, Lee won a stunning 20-7 victory over Permian. However, Permian came back to win the 4-5A title and Lee placed second. The Panthers will carry a 12-1 record into the quarterfinal battle while Lee is 11-2. No other Lee team has ever won 11 games in one season.

Lee won entrance into the quarterfinals (final eight) with a 26-3 win over Fort Worth Trimble Tech Friday night at Amon Carter Stadium in Fort Worth. Permian won a 28-0 decision over Wichita Falls Rider in Wichita Falls Friday.

Arkansas nips Raiders, 16-13

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY

LUBBOCK — When Texas Tech's Red Raiders and the Arkansas Razorbacks met here in the season football finale for each team, there was very little at stake.

The Raiders were assured of a losing season, regardless of the outcome. For Arkansas the only justification for playing was a chance for a winning season.

Despite the shortcomings, Tech and the Razorbacks played an interesting and hard-fought game. Arkansas got its only touchdown with 5:52 left when Carl Miller dove over from the one. That score and Arkansas' stopping of three Tech desperation passes, gave the Hogs a come-from-behind 16-13 Southwest Conference win.

Tech, 3-7-1, never trailed until Arkansas' late score and through most of three quarters the Raiders appeared to be headed for victory. But for 19 Texas Tech seniors the end was typical. Tech's football Class of 1983 finished with a four-year mark of only 13 wins, 29 losses and two ties.

"We gave ourselves a chance to win the game, but we just didn't do it," said Tech senior quarterback Jim Hart. "It's too bad we couldn't go out winners. It's frustrating to lead the whole game and end up losing."

Midland wins tournament

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

With 5:35 remaining in the third quarter, Midland High's Willis Ratliff fought underneath for only his second field goal of the Tall City Invitational championship game. But, it was the two-pointer that gave the Bulldogs their first lead of the game, 43-42.

Chris Rooker, the tournament's Most Valuable Player, followed with a layup to increase the margin to three and the rest of the game was a dog fight to the wire as MHS held on in the final minute for a 72-67 victory over Lubbock Coronado Saturday night at Chaparral Center.

The Bulldogs, overcoming a 39-33 halftime deficit, ran and pressured their way to a 57-56 third quarter lead. Coronado picked up leads of 58-57, 60-59 and 61-59 in the final frame before Kenneth Johnson hit a shot from inside to tie the game at 61 followed by two Eric Brunson free throws with 5:15 to play that put MHS in front for good.

The Bulldogs held a slim 68-67 margin with 2:00 to go but used a second close-in shot and two free throws with 19 seconds left by Johnson to gain the final margin and tournament title.

Midland High moved into the championship game with a narrow 65-64 victory over defending champion El Paso Bel Air in an afternoon game while Coronado made the finals by defeating Midland Lee 64-48.

In both Midland High games, Rooker was the leading Bulldog scorer with 17 against the Highlanders and 23 against the Mustangs. Of those 23 points in the final game, eight came in the second quarter on eight free throw attempts which helped keep Coronado from building up a bigger lead.

Sophomore Darrell Davis, with 15 points against Coronado and Johnson with 10 led the team in scoring in the title game while Todd Duncan scored 13 and Steve Price 10 for the Mustangs.

In other tournament action Saturday, Midland Lee came away with the third place trophy by handing the Bel Air Highlanders a 61-50 defeat. Amarillo, a 66-33 winner over Lamesa in the morning, won the consolation title with a 89-37 thrashing of Levelland, a 62-46 morning winner over Big Spring. Lamesa finished in seventh place by beating Big Spring 95-65.

McIvor ignites UT offense

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Quarterback Rick McIvor, a red shirt, third-string senior, hadn't played enough to qualify for a letter until Saturday.

He deserved a letter jacket plus the game ball after he came off the bench to trigger the listless No. 2-ranked Texas Longhorns, throwing four touchdown passes in a rousing 45-13 come-from-behind Southwest Conference victory over the arch-rival Texas Aggies.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Longhorns notched their first undisputed SWC title since 1977 as they marched to an 11-0 record and a meeting with the Georgia Bulldogs.

McIvor had only completed three passes all season on 12 attempts. In his last appearance two weeks ago, he was yanked after being intercepted for a touchdown against Texas Christian.

HE THREW touchdown strikes of 12, 13, 33 and 60 yards against the Aggies to tie the Texas school record and connected on 8 of 12 tosses for 170 yards.

"I hurt my back and I wasn't sure if I would be ready if needed." McIvor said. "The last four weeks I've been working hard. I had no doubt I could do the job."

McIvor said not playing "hadn't bothered me at all, so long as we've been winning. That may be hard for a lot of people to understand, but that's exactly how I feel."

Texas Coach Fred Akers said, "When we got 13 points down we knew we had to throw and Rick's our best passer. We felt it would make sense to put him in."

It made sense to the Aggies, trying to defend against his rifle arm.

"We had the Longhorns on the run for awhile," said A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill. "McIvor did a great job. He can throw the ball.

"Early in the game we we put a lot of pressure on (Rob) Moerschell and made him scramble. We didn't put as much pressure on McIvor."

THE AGGIES dropped into a third-place tie with Baylor in the final SWC standings, posting a 5-5-1 season and a 4-3-1 league mark.

The psyched-up Aggies, playing for the first time in all-Maroon uniforms and before a record overflow crowd of 76,751 fans, jumped to a 13-0 lead on Roger Vick's 24-yard touchdown run and Alan Smith field goals of 37 and 46 yards.

McIvor replaced Rob Moerschell once the Longhorns got the 35 mph wind and struck for touchdown passes of 12 yards to Bill Boy Bryant and 13 yards to Brent Duhon in a 96-second span just before the intermission.

Texas quickly padded its 14-13 halftime lead with 31 points in the third period, including scoring passes of 33 and 60 yards from McIvor to Kelvin Epps.

McIvor completed 8 of 12 passes for 170 yards and tied the school record for scoring passes held by Clyde Littlefield and Randy McEachern.

The 31-point third period explosion also included a 41-yard touchdown pass on a reverse from Bryant to Duhon, John Walker's 1-yard touchdown plunge, and Jeff Ward's 31-yard field goal.

The landslide of points was triggered at the start of the second half when Chris Duliban blocked Kyle Stuard's punt and William Harris recovered at the Aggie 1-yard line. Walker scored on the next play.

THE TEXAS kicking game paid a dividend of sorts to position the 'Horns for the first touchdown of the game. Moerschell picked up a low center snap on an apparent field goal attempt and passed 10 yards to Terry Orr at the A&M 12. McIvor threw the first of his touchdown passes on the next play to Bryant.

The Texas defense, tops in the nation, shut down the Aggie offense in the second half, sacking freshman quarterback Kevin Murray four times.

Mavericks beat Warriors

DALLAS (AP) — Guard Brad Davis scored 5 quick points to ignite a 13-2 Dallas third quarter spurt as the Mavericks beat Golden State for their ninth straight at home Saturday.

Golden State came no closer than 4 points after that as Dallas sealed the win by hitting 11 of their final 12 shots.

Golden State, 8-8, got 25 points from Purvis Shorts, 24 from Eric Floyd and 23 from Joe Barry Carroll in the last stop of a five-game, eight-day roadtrip.

Dallas won its fifth straight and now has taken seven of its last nine games to go a franchise-record six games over .500. Mark Aguirre led the team with 26 points and Rolando Blackman contributed 17.

Huskers overtake OU

Rozier paces 28-21 victory

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Top-ranked Nebraska, led by record-breaking Mike Rozier's 205 yards rushing, stormed from behind with two touchdowns in the final 5½ minutes of the third period and completed a 12-0 regular season Saturday by defeating arch-rival Oklahoma 28-21.

A 62-yard gallop by Rozier, who became the second runner in NCAA history to rush for 2,000 yards in one season, set up Turner Gill's one-yard quarterback sneak that tied the score 21-21 with 5:29 left in the third period.

Fullback Mark Schellen scored the winning touchdown on a 17-yard burst around right end with 35 seconds left in the quarter, capping an eight-play, 41-yard drive following Jeff Smith's 11-yard punt return.

Schellen also scored Nebraska's first touchdown on a seven-yard run that capped the Cornhuskers' first possession, while Rozier, who carried 32 times and set an NCAA record with 929 yards in his last four games, tied the score 14-14 with a three-yard run 46 seconds before halftime.

RUSHING—Nebraska, Rozier 32-205, Gill 11-55, Rathman 5-48, Schellen 8-40. Oklahoma, Tillman 16-134, E.Johnson 23-84. PASSING—Nebraska, Gill 7-16-1-56. Oklahoma, Bradley 6-13-0-187. RECEIVING—Nebraska, Fryar 4-27, Simmons 2-23. Oklahoma, Rhymes 3-127, Shepard 3-60.

Oklahoma reached the Nebraska 2-yard line in the final minute after a 72-yard drive. But an illegal procedure penalty set the Sooners back to the 7, defensive end Bill Weber nailed quarterback Danny Bradley for a three-yard loss and two passes fell incomplete in the end zone. The last one was batted away from split end Buster Rhymes by cornerback Neil Harris.

THE VICTORY, which extended the nation's longest winning streak to 22 games, sends Nebraska into the Orange Bowl against fifth-ranked Miami as Big Eight champions for the third straight year. The Cornhuskers' 21-game Big Eight winning streak marks the first time a team has posted three straight unbeaten-untied seasons in conference play since Oklahoma's six straight from 1953-58.

The Sooners, who declined all bowl bids, are 7-4 and wind up their season next week at Hawaii. They finished in a second-place Big Eight tie with Missouri at 5-2.

Spencer Tillman, one of Oklahoma's two outstanding redshirt freshman running backs, scored on runs of 39 and 18 yards. His second touchdown gave Oklahoma a short-lived 21-14 lead at 6:22 of the third period and came two plays after Bradley scrambled for 16 yards on fourth-and-1 for a first down at the 18.

ON ITS first possession, Nebraska drove 67 yards on 13 plays for a 7-0 lead. Schellen, the forgotten man in Nebraska's troika of backfield superstars, scored on a seven-yard burst up the middle at 8:07 and the sellout crowd of 75,008, which braved heavy rain plus a touch of snow, seemed to anticipate a blowout by the Cornhuskers, who had outscored their first 11 opponents by an average of 54-15.

The drive included a fourth-down, eight-yard shovel pass on a fake field goal from Gill, the holder, to blocker Tim Brungardt that gave the Huskers a first down at the 7.

But Oklahoma, a two-touchdown underdog for the first time in memory, battled on more than even terms for the rest of the first half, even though Tim Lashar missed field goal attempts of 37 and 47 yards.

It remained 7-0 until a three-touchdown explosion in the final 4:05 of the second period produced a 14-14 halftime standoff.

After Gill threw an incomplete pass on fourth-and-eight from the Oklahoma 31, the Sooners roared 69 yards in five plays and tied the score on Spencer Tillman's nifty 39-yard run with 4:05 left in the half.

ON NEBRASKA'S next possession, Oklahoma linebacker Thomas Benson intercepted a pass by Gill at the Sooners' 35, although a penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct set them back to the 27.

But on the first play, Rhymes split cornerback Dave Burke and free safety Bret Clark at the Nebraska 35 and hauled in a 73-yard touchdown pass from Bradley for a 14-7 Oklahoma lead.

That came less than two minutes after Oklahoma's first touchdown. But Nebraska was equal to the occasion and stormed back to tie the score with a five-play, 73-yard drive after Rozier's 25-yard kickoff return.

A pass from Gill to split end Ricky Simmons gained 15 yards and Gill then scrambled for 40 to the Oklahoma 18.

Theismann class of league

WASHINGTON (AP) — At an age when most players consider retirement, after a decade-long career marked more by criticism than praise, Joe Theismann is being hailed as the top quarterback in the National Football League.

The triggerman of the highest-scoring offense in the NFL, the 34-year-old Theismann has blossomed under Coach Joe Gibbs and is taking aim at a second straight Super Bowl championship with the Washington Redskins.

"He is the class of the league, the best I have seen this year," insists Dick Vermeil, the former Philadelphia Eagles' coach turned television commentator. "His accuracy is unbelievable."

"I would say he is the best in the league right now," said former Redskins' quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, who, along with Sammy Baugh are the only Washington players to have thrown for more yards in a career than Theismann.

Second among NFL quarterbacks with a 98.0 rating, Theismann trails Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski by only three-tenths of a point in the league's complicated ranking system.

A Pro Bowl starter last season, Theismann has not thrown an interception in his last 79 attempts. Earlier this season, he had a streak of 161 passes without an interception. He has thrown 360 times with only five interceptions all season. Only two quarterbacks in the history of the league can boast a lower interception percentage — Buffalo's Joe Ferguson in 1976 (one interception in 151 attempts) and Green Bay's Bart Starr in 1966 (three in 251).

With four weeks remaining in the regular season, Theismann's 20 touchdown passes are a personal best.

"I can't say if I'm the league's most valuable player. The offensive system, the line, our running game and the receivers are all great. Everybody contributes," Theismann said.

Gibbs, who designed an offense that has averaged better than 34 points per game this season, disagrees.

"We have many wonderful players but Joe is the difference," Gibbs said. "Without him, none of this could happen."

The possessor of a four-year, $315,000 per year contract, Theismann sought to renegotiate his contract before the season. Redskins' owner Jack Kent Cooke put his star quarterback on hold and has left him there.

"I imagine we will get together sometime in the future. We are both busy men," Theismann said.

This season, whether he is running away from opposing linemen (he has carried 26 times for 148 yards, a 5.7 yard average) or running a two-minute drill, Theismann has been at his best with the game on the line.

In four games in which the outcome was undecided with two minutes remaining, Theismann has completed 19 of 27 passes (he threw five away to stop the clock) for 250 yards and two touchdowns.

His most memorable performance, however, came in a heart-breaking 48-47 loss to Green Bay in a Monday night game.

Trailing by one point and with no timeouts remaining, Theismann marched the Redskins 55 yards in six plays, but came up short when Mark Moseley missed a field goal.

"That was the finest performance I have ever seen by a quarterback. He was perfect," said former Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach, the acknowledged master of the two-minute drill.

Theismann joined the Redskins in 1974, having spent three seasons in the Canadian Football League following his graduation from Notre Dame. Washington fans already were torn between two veteran quarterbacks, Jurgensen and Billy Kilmer.

"He was a brash, cocky kid who felt he should play ahead of two overweight veterans," Jurgensen remembered.

"I came in here and bucked both of them," Theismann said. "To this day people in Washington don't want to accept me.

Southwest Texas bows, 24-16

SAN MARCOS (AP) — Quarterback James Woody threw three touchdown passes as Central State of Ohio upset Southwest Texas State 24-16 in the quarterfinal round of the NCAA Division II football playoffs Saturday.

The Marauders will now meet the North Alabama-Virginia Union winner in next Saturday's semifinals.

Southwest Texas, winner of the last two NCAA II championships, was ranked second in the nation, while undefeated CSU, 33-0, was seventh.

Woody threw a 43-yard scoring pass to tight end George Scott with 1:31 left to assure the victory. SWT, which finished 9-2 on the season, had pulled to within one at 17-16 when Marauder punter Clarence Joseph had to fall on a bad center snap in his own end zone for a safety.

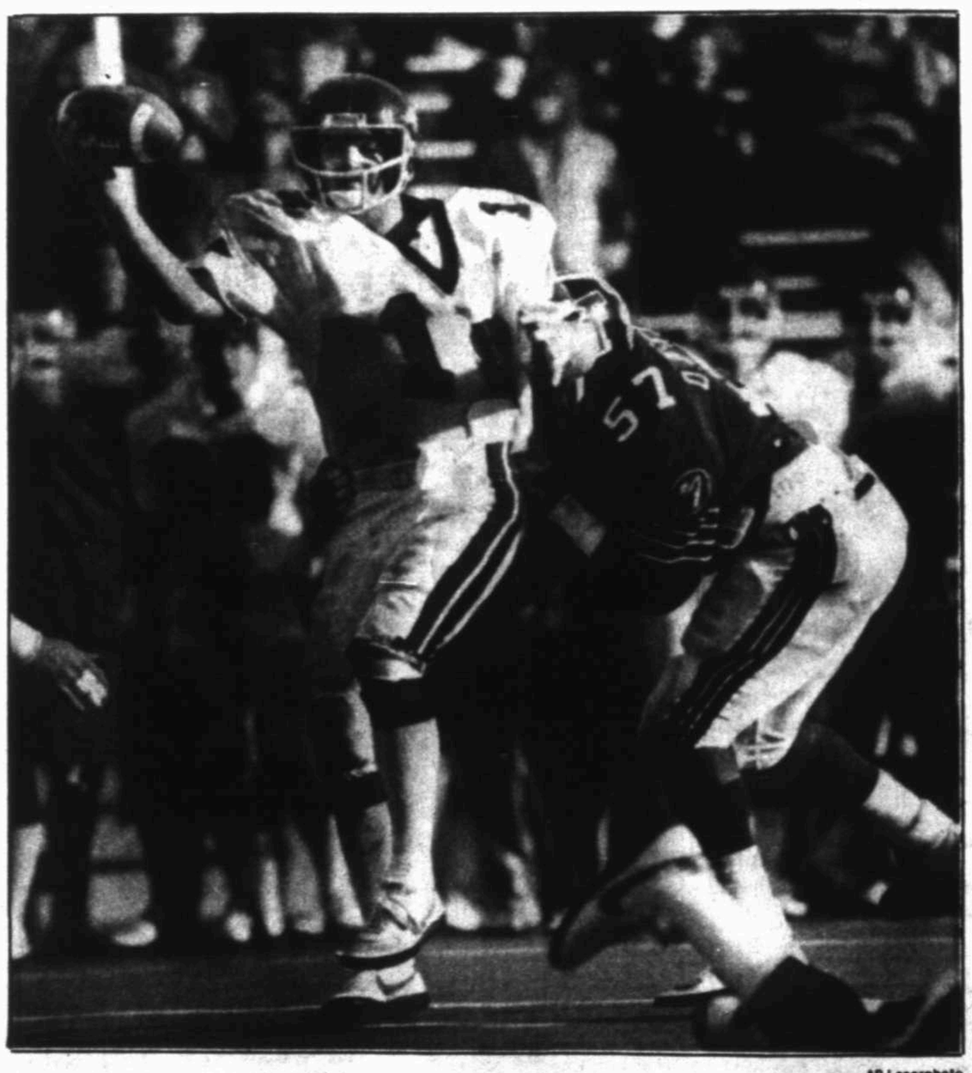

Joseph kicked all the Marauder extra points and booted a 42-yard field goal with 2:04 left in the first half to give CSU a 10-7 halftime lead.

SWT scored first when cornerback David Glaso intercepted a Woody pass on the fifth play of the game and raced 65 yards for a touchdown.

Woody's 37-yard touchdown pass to Darrell Smith tied the game with 3:47 left in the first quarter. Woody came into the game as the nation's TD pass leader with 30.

SWT, which saw a 16-game home winning streak come to an end, took the lead, 14-10, on Ron Gaskin's 1-yard run with 1:34 left in the third quarter. But Woody came back with a 16-yard pass to Darrell Grymes to put the Marauders back on top 17-14.

Woody completed six of 16 passes for 130 yards. CSU had 237 yards total offense, compared to SWT's 206.

UN first to score 600 points

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Nebraska not only finished its regular season with a 12-0 record, but became the first team in college football history to score 600 points in one year.

Saturday's 28-21 victory over Oklahoma gave the No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers 624 points, surpassing the 560 scored by Brigham Young in a 12-game 1980 schedule. However, Nebraska's average of 51.7 points per game fell short of Army's 1945 major-college record of 56.0, set in a nine-game season.

With 66 rushing touchdowns, a 5.5 average, Nebraska erased the major-college mark of 5.1 shared by three teams. And the Cornhuskers' 7.0 touchdowns per game by rushing and passing bettered Oklahoma's 1964 standard of 6.4. However, their total average of 7.42 touchdowns per game — including five on returns — missed Army's 1944 record of 8.22.

Senior tailback Mike Rozier, who carried 32 times for 205 yards against Oklahoma, became the top rusher in Big Eight history with 4,780 yards. In a three-year career, he surpassed the mark of 4,582 set by Oklahoma State's Terry Miller from 1974-77.

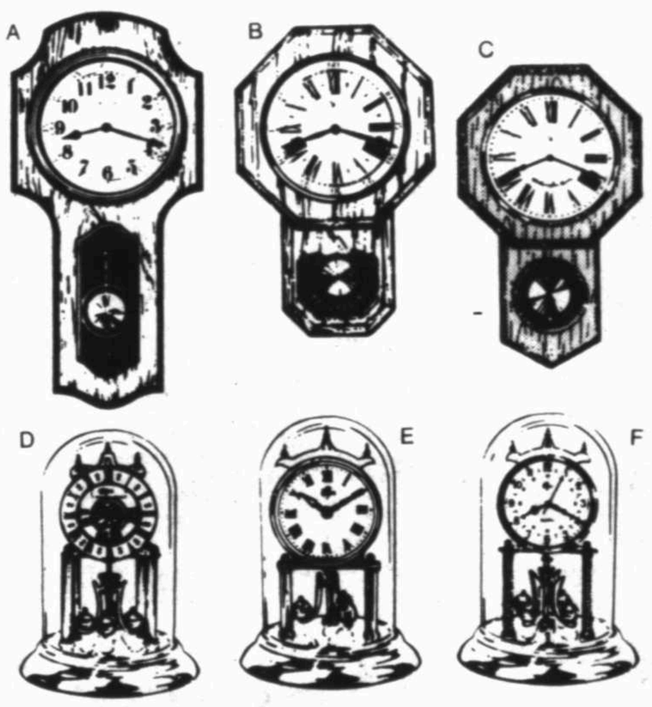

Rozier also finished the season with a one-year Big Eight record of 2,148 yards. In the history of college football, only Marcus Allen of Southern California with 2,342 in 1981 had more rushing yards in a season.

But by gaining 929 yards in his last four games, Rozier erased Allen's mark of 926 over the same period in 1981.

Rozier averaged 7.16 yards on 668 career rushes, breaking the records of 7.09 for a minimum of 500 carries set by Oklahoma's Billy Sims from 1975-79, as well as the 6.13 for a minimum of 650 rushes by Ohio State's Archie Griffin from 1972-75.

Rozier's three-yard scoring run in the second period enabled him to tie the NCAA record of 29 touchdowns in a season by Penn State's Lydell Mitchell in 1971. He also set a record of 29 rushing touchdowns in a season and his 174 points extended his own Big Eight scoring mark set this year.

Highland Park upset; Cleburne downs Monahans

By Associated Press

Halfback Larry LeBeau dashed 8 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown that helped Houston Klein smash the previously unbeaten Highland Park Scots in a 21-14 upset in a high school regional playoff game Saturday.

The Bearkats relied on LeBeau and halfback Kyle Atkinson for a speedy offense as they won the right to a quarterfinals playoff berth.

In other Class 5A action Saturday, Cleburne stopped Monahans 10-0 and Aldine advanced on penetrations 5-2 over Houston Madison after tying 13-13.

Klein had to overcome a 7-0 deficit early in the first quarter after Brad Schard's opening kickoff return was fumbled into the hands of the Scots' Forrest Baldwin at the Bearkat 18, and Baldwin ambled in for the TD. Scot punter David Sweeney's kick was good.

But on Highland Park's fourth offensive play of the game, quarterback John Stollenwerck was intercepted by Gary Hays, who ran the ball back 29 yards for the score. Hays' extra point was good to make it 7-7 with 9:19 left in the first period.

In the second quarter, Highland Park drove eight plays in 47 yards before Stollenwerck kept for a 1-yard touchdown run. Sweeney's kick was good for a 14-7 lead with 4:12 left in the half.

Klein tied the score in the third quarter by driving 67 yards in 12 plays to set up Atkinson's 1-yard run up the middle for the TD. Hays' made good on the kick with 4:21 remaining in the period.

The Bearkats claimed their last score after Sweeney fumbled the snap on a fourth-quarter punt and was dropped for a loss at the HP 37. LeBeau scored eight plays later and Hays' kick was good with 1:42 left in the game.

Highland Park's attempts to recover died with 4 seconds left at the Klein 11. On third and 10, Stollenwerck completed a pass to Lee Blaylock at the Klein 6.

In 5A play Friday, Converse Judson fullback Chris Pryor scored three touchdowns and rushed for 221 yards in 31 carries to lead the Rockets to a 25-6 victory over Alice.

The Rockets, now 12-1, will face off in a quarterfinals rematch against arch-rival San Antonio Churchill next weekend for the second straight year in District 27-5A. The Chargers overpowered the Edinburg Bobcats 33-21 in another regional playoff faceoff.

Midland Lee blasted Fort Worth Trimble Tech 23-6 while Odessa Permian blanked Wichita Falls Rider 28-0 Friday night.

Alice, at 10-2-1, ended its season for the third time in four years at the hands of a San Antonio team at Memorial Stadium in Austin.

Allen Dear returned to guide the Rockets' scoring, beginning with Judson's second series late in the first quarter. Quarterback Cap Watters was injured during the Rockets' first series.

Watters was taken to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, where the nursing supervisor said he had undetermined chest injuries and was held overnight to undergo tests.

Judson began scoring in the second quarter with a seven-play, 69-yard drive. Pryor made a 16-yard gain to the Coyote 24 off a screen, then slanted over the right side, getting daylight from linemen Steve Bazany and Kevin Hall on that side and another key block from tight end Clarence Westendorff on the outside linebacker.

Pryor faked out the last defender at the 10 for a 24-yard TD romp with 4:45 left in the half. John Tomasai kicked the extra point, then booted a 35-yard field goal from the center of the field with 1:27 left to make it 10-0.

It was Tomasai's sixth field goal of the year and fourth in three playoff games. He missed a 43-yarder on the last play of the half following an interception.

In the third quarter, Pryor ran the final yard of a 31-yard drive following a short punt and Tomasai made it 17-0.

The Coyotes retaliated after an interception by Servando Perez. Quarterback Mark Everett connected with wingback Rey Guerra on a 29-yard scoring play to put Alice on the board 17-6 with 2:56 left in the third. The conversion failed on a fumbled snap.

Pryor's last score came on a 2-yard drive with 2:03 remaining. Holder Kenny Smith passed to Pryor for a 2-point conversion.

Pryor went over the 2,000-yard mark for the year with 2,137 yards. He has scored 26 touchdowns.

Churchill led from the onset against Edinburg, as quarterback Mark Comalander found running back Chris Dimler wide open. Dimler coasted 10 yards to score and the extra point made it 7-0.

The Chargers extended their lead with 3:40 left in the half on an 8-yard run by running back David Baker. The run capped a 51-yard drive in six plays, highlighted by 15- and 23-yard passes from Comalander to split end Hugh Patterson.

Spinks added his second PAT to put Churchill ahead 14-0 at halftime.

The Bobcats, tallying the only score of the third period, drove 93 yards in six plays, highlighted by a 73-yard pass from quarterback John Paul Cantu to split end Steve Alaniz.

John David Stites ran one yard to score four plays later and added the extra point to narrow the Churchill lead to 14-7 with 3:22 remaining in the third period.

The Chargers responded with a 72-yard drive that began in the third period and ended in the final quarter as Comalander hit Mike Robbins on a 25-yard scoring strike. The extra point widened the gap to 21-7 with 11:51 left in the game.

Comalander teamed up with Robbins again for a 35-yard scoring strike. The play capped a 41-yard drive in three plays with 9:23 remaining. The extra point failed.

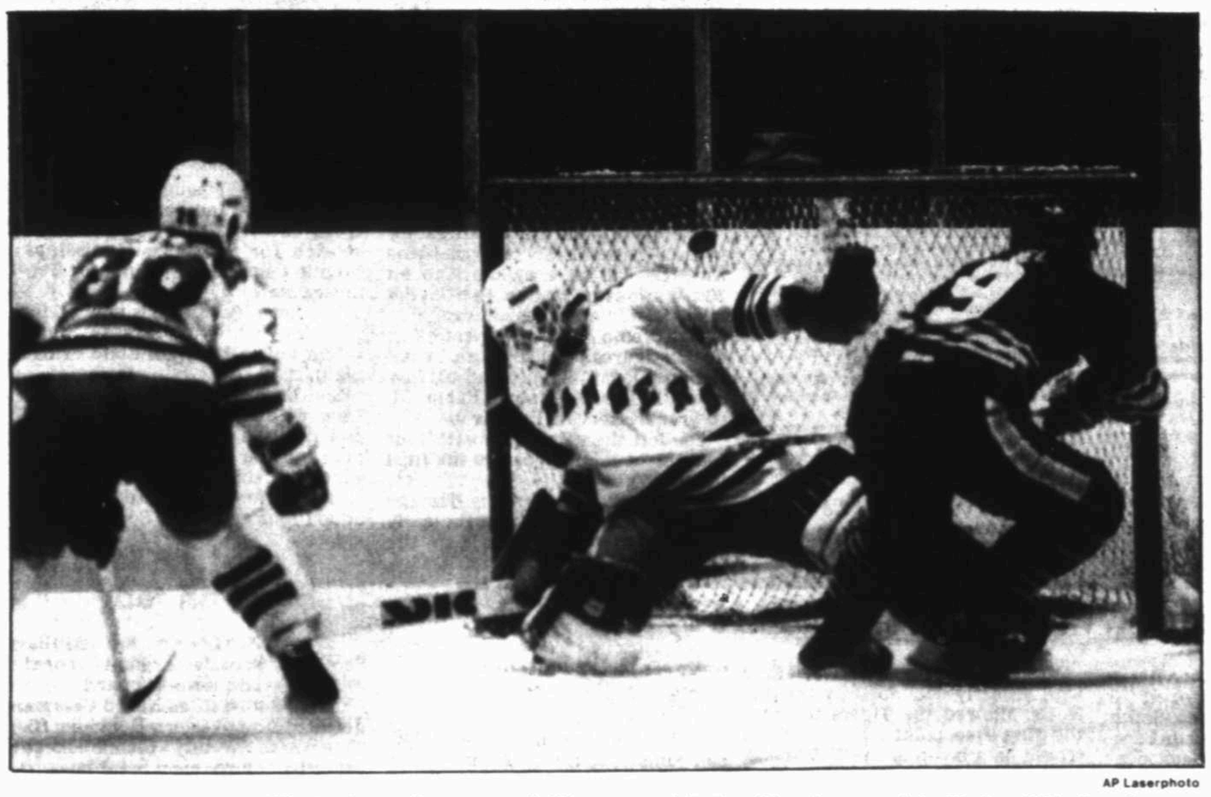

A pair of passes from Cantu to Alaniz added two quick touchdowns for the Bobcats in the final quarter.

A 75-yard, nine-play drive by the Chargers culminated with Eric Ragle scoring from 5 yards out to make it 33-13 with 2:04 left.

Edinburg then covered 71 yards in four plays to narrow the margin at 33-21 with 18 seconds left, with Cantu hitting Alaniz on a 60-yard strike.

Walter Jones broke loose for 30 yards and Midland Lee's last touchdown.

In Class 2A, Groveton rallied from a 6-point deficit in the first quarter to edge Alto 14-12.

Teche, just 5, thinks boxer is a knockout

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Kindergarten student Teche Ledet thinks boxer Kenny "Bang Bang" Bogner is a knockout.

"I like him, and I love him and I think he is cute," the 5-year-old says, clasping an autographed picture of the No. 4 lightweight contender to her chest.

And the feelings are mutual.

"I think of you often and I love you," Bogner says in a letter to his youngest fan. "And now she's on cloud nine," says Teche's mother, Linda.

Bogner, a 23-year-old New Jersey native, has fallen for the pint-sized dynamo and dedicated his Nov. 3 match in Atlantic City to her. He even mailed her a $900 check to fly her to New Jersey so she could be ringside. Her mother accompanied her on the trip.

"It's the first time I've ever done anything like this," Bogner says. "She's a little girl and well, she's in love with me and it's so crazy. It's so unusual for a little girl to take such an interest."

But what does a tough guy like Bogner see in his spunky fan?

"I don't get to have contact with the fans and it's heartwarming to be able to now. People think boxers are tough guys and that we're mean, but we're people, too. We have insides," he says.

The affection between the softhearted man of steel and his young admirer began 19 months ago when Teche saw Bogner get injured in a televised boxing match.

"Teche saw Kenny bleed a lot and started to cry because he was hurt," Mrs. Ledet says. "She went and sat in the hallway and cried and said, 'It just isn't fair.'"

Afterward, Teche prodded her mother into sending Bogner two Band-Aids and a letter telling him to take better care of himself.

She wrote to Bogner, "I want you to be careful and not cut your pretty face because I love you."

"We sent the Band-Aids to World Boxing in New York City and they forwarded it to Kenny," Mrs. Ledet said. "We had no idea he would get them."

The gesture was more than Bogner could resist. "I called her to tell her I wouldn't get hurt," he said. And they've kept in contact ever since.

Teche has a collection of autographed pictures which are prominently displayed in the Ledet home. She also has accumulated newspaper and magazine clippings mentioning her idol and has bumper stickers, a hat and T-shirt that bear his name.

Kentucky wins big

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Second-ranked Kentucky led by Jim Master and Melvin Turpin, routed sixth-ranked Louisville 65-44 Saturday night in the first regular-season meeting between the two schools since 1922.

Kentucky hounded Louisville's guards and clogged up the middle as the Cardinals had only one player in double figures, freshman Mark McSwain, who scored 10 points, his last goal coming with seven seconds remaining.

Master, who finished with 19, scored seven straight points early in the game to bring Kentucky from a 12-9 deficit to a 35-20 halftime lead. At one point during that period, the Wildcats outscored Louisville 26-4.

Turpin scored 16 points and helped dominate the boards over the smaller Cardinals and sophomore Kenny Walker added 13.

The capacity crowd of 24,012 at Rupp Arena on the Kentucky campus loved almost every minute of the game. Louisville was allotted only 100 tickets in this first of a four-year contract between the two schools.

Sam Bowie, a 7-foot-1 senior, made his first appearance for the Wildcats since the 1981 season because of a stress shinbone fracture of his left leg. He scored only seven points, but was a key factor with his rebounding, passing and three blocked shots.

Michigan State wins Cutlass

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Junior guard Sam Vincent pumped in 19 points as No. 12 Michigan State captured its second straight Spartan Cutlass Classic with an 81-52 victory over Western Michigan.

Sophomore guard Scott Skiles added 15 points for the Spartans, sophomore forward Patrick Ford added 12, while freshman guard Darryl Johnson and Tower each had 10.

The Spartans now are 2-0, while Western Michigan slipped to 1-1.

Iowa wins cage opener

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Michael Payne scored 17 points and Brad Lohaus had 16 as No. 7 Iowa won its opener Saturday, defeating Illinois Wesleyan 86-60.

In addition to Payne and Lohaus, Greg Stokes and Steve Carfino were in double figures for the Hawkeyes with 12 and 10 points, respectively.

Blaise Bugajski paced Illinois Wesleyan with 22 points.

Union, Augustana survive late rallies

By The Associated Press

Union College of New York and Augustana of Illinois each survived late rallies by their opponents Saturday to gain the finals of the NCAA's Division III college football playoffs.

Behind the passing of quarterback Dan Stewart and three field goals from Greg Sticka, Union held off a strong Salisbury State comeback bid late in the fourth quarter to preserve a 23-21 victory in their Division III semifinal game.

Stewart passed for 168 yards, including a 42-yard scoring strike to Rich Kellaher in the second quarter to give Union a 14-0 lead. Cruising along with a 23-7 lead in the fourth quarter, Union almost saw the game slip from its grasp as a dramatic comeback try by Salisbury, 10-1-1, fell just short.

The victory sent Union, 10-1, into the Amos Alonzo Stagg Bowl at Kings Island, Ohio, next Saturday against Augustana, 11-0, which stopped Wisconsin-La Crosse 21-15 as George Velasquez gained 171 yards on 18 carries, including a 51-yard touchdown run.

Down 21-0, La Crosse, 9-3-1, scored twice in the fourth quarter on passes by Bob Krepfle to close the gap. But an onside kick failed and Augustana ran out the clock.

In the Division II quarter-finals, freshman running back Chad Stark rushed for 164 yards and quarterback Jeff Bentrim rambled for two touchdowns as North Dakota State downed Towson State 24-17.

The Bisons, 10-1, advanced to Saturday's semifinals against California-Davis, which defeated Butler University 25-6 as Scott Barry passed for 260 yards and two touchdowns, and Shawn Rogers ran for two touchdowns.Cal-Davis, top-ranked nationally in the division, improved its record to 11-0.

James Knowles booted three field goals, one of them a 47-yard kick that lifted North Alabama to a 16-14 victory over Virginia Union in another quarterfinal. Knowles' decisive kick came with Virginia Union leading 14-13 midway through the fourth quarter.

Bulldogs capture Tall City title

FOR THE Lee Rebels it was a slow start against Bel Air in the battle for third place. Lee held an 8-5 lead at the end of the first quarter and was up by only one at the half, 23-22. The Rebels started pulling away in the third quarter, outscoring the Highlanders 17-13, and put the game on ice in the fourth.

Anthony Dickens and Alvin Henry led the Rebel attack with 13 points each while Derek Westbrook aded another 12. Eleazar Juarez, the only Highlander in double figures, led Bel Air with 10 points while four teammates followed with high single digit scoring.

The Rebels and Highlanders were tied eight times in the first three quarters — six times alone in the second. Midway through the third, Henry hit a 12-foot jumper followed by buckets by Alton Davis and Raymond Morney for a 34-28 lead. The Highlanders would pull no closer than three points the rest of the way.

Westbrook and Henry were both selected to the All-Tournament team along with Johnson of Midland. Coronado placed Robert Brashear and Jeff Lanage on the list while Amarillo had Tim Gilbreath and Kelly Calvin; Lamesa placed Chris Mason; Levelland Craig Belfield and Bel Air Russell Williams.

Levelland was awarded the tournament's Sportsmanship trophy.

With the split, the Rebels' record is now 3-1 on the year while Midland High is 4-0. The two teams return to play Tuesday night with Lee playing Lakeview in San Angelo and Midland High traveling to Plainview.

Memphis St 101, N Texas St. 79

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Fifth-ranked Memphis State, led by junior Keith Lee's 21 points, raced to an early first-half lead and never trailed Saturday as they defeated North Texas State 101-79 in the final game of the Mid-South Classic.

In an earlier game, Southern Mississippi dropped Tennessee State 65-61 in overtime.

Memphis State is now 2-0 for the year. North Texas is 0-2 after losing Friday to Southern Mississippi.

The victory was the 199th career win for Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk. He will have a chance to hit 200 Wednesday when the Tigers take on Middle Tennessee State.

Five Memphis State players hit in double-figures against North Texas. Phillip "Doom" Haynes had 16, Derrick Phillips 15, Bobby Parks 14, reserve Baskerville Holmes 10.

Haynes did most of his damage early, scoring 10 points in the early minutes of the first half as the Tigers opened up a 19-point lead.

Memphis State widened its margin by outscoring North Texas 15-10 at the beginning of the second half. With less than seven minutes remaining, the Tigers had a 28-point advantage.

In Saturday's first game, James Williams and Curtis Green combined for 37 points to lead Southern Mississippi.

Tar Heels whip Missouri, 64-57

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Senior Matt Doherty scored 15 points and freshman Kenny Smith added 14 as top-ranked North Carolina struggled to a 64-57 season-opening college basketball victory over Missouri Saturday night.

Doherty was six of eight from the floor, shooting over a Missouri defense that gave him the perimeter shot. Smith, the fifth freshman to begin the season as a starter for Coach Dean Smith, hit six of 10 from the floor and dished out five assists.

The victory gave coach Smith his 497th career victory.

Missouri's pesky defense, along with an early cold spell by the Tar Heels, allowed the Tigers to score the first five points. Sam Perkins scored on a layup at the 17:04 mark to break the North Carolina drought.

Trailing 9-4 after a Blake Wortham dunk, North Carolina then ran off 10 straight points, ending on Michael Jordan's breakaway slam dunk at the 13:13 mark. The Tar Heels never trailed again.

Missouri stayed close throughout the first half and trailed 33-27 at halftime. A six-point run at the start of the second half brought the Tigers to within 40-39 with 10:55 left to play.

A Perkins free throw and a Jordan jumper at the 10:08 mark gave North Carolina a 43-39 edge. Twice more, Missouri pulled to within two points, but a 10-2 run in which Smith and Jordan scored four points each put the Tigers away for good.

Jordan added 13 points and Perkins had 12 for the Tar Heels. Wortham, Malcolm Thomas and Prince Bridges scored 11 points each for Missouri.

Arizona stuns Sun Devils

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Max Zendejas kicked a 45-yard field goal on the game's final play Saturday to overshadow his record-setting older brother and give Arizona a stunning 17-15 victory over archrival Arizona State in the season finale for both football teams.

Todd Hons had fired a 21-yard fourth-quarter touchdown pass to Mike Crawford and junior Luis Zendejas had kicked three field goals for a 15-14 Sun Devil lead with 13:18 remaining in the regionally televised game.

The Wildcats calmly engineered a nine-play drive from their own 37-yard line with 4:44 left down to the Arizona State 28 and called time out to set the field goal with three seconds to go.

The sophomore Zendejas' kick sailed through the uprights as time expired and Wildcat fans poured onto the field in a wild celebration.

Arizona, improving its edge to 31-26 in a bitter series dating back to 1899, closed out its season with a record of 7-3-1 overall and 4-3-1 in the Pacific-10 Conference.

Arizona State wound up 6-4-1 oevrall and 3-3-1 in league play before a crowd of 70,033 at 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium.

Crawford, a sophomore tailback, made a leaping catch of Hons' roll-out pass at the back of the end zone with 13:18 remaining to erase a 14-9 Sun Devil deficit.

Hons tried to run in a two-point conversion, but was stopped at the 1-yard line by Wildcat nose guard Joe Drake — leaving Arizona State clinging to its precarious one-point lead.

Luis Zendejas, already the most prolific field goal kicker in NCAA Division I history with 65 in his three-year career, broke the NCAA mark for most points kicking in a career with 295 and in one season with 112.

He entered the game five points shy of Tony Franklin's four-year NCAA mark of 291 set at Texas A&M from 1975-78 and seven points short of Paul Woodside's season record of 110 set in 1982 at West Virginia.

The 5-foot-8 Zendejas finishes the 1983 schedule with 28 field goals — breaking the Pac-10 record of 25 set last season by Washington's Chuck Nelson and tying Woodside's year-old NCAA record of 28.

He also tied Woodside's NCAA record of most field goals made per game in one season (2.55).

Arizona led 14-6 at halftime after withstanding Zendejas' field goals from 33 yards out 3:01 into the second quarter and a 23-yarder 52 seconds before intermission.

Jones gains 248 yards for Vols

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee tailback Johnnie Jones ran for 248 yards to become the Volunteers' all-time single-season rushing leader as he keyed the Vols to a 34-24 victory over Vanderbilt.

The Vols finished 8-3, while the Commodores fell to 2-9.

Jones, who has rushed for 1,116 yards this season, ran 41 yards for a second-quarter touchdown and 70 yards to score just 17 seconds into the fourth quarter, allowing the Vols to regain an early-game lead.

Tennessee quarterback Alan Cockrell hit end Tim McGee with a 78-yard touchdown pass to put Tennessee on the scoreboard 3:26 into the game. Junior placekicker Fuad Reveiz kicked the extra point.

Reveiz kicked field goals of 25-and 36-yards to give the Vols a 20-10 advantage at the end of the first half.

The Vols fell behind at the end of the third quarter, but came back with Jones' run. Split end Clyde Duncan scored on an 85-yard touchdown pass from Cockrell with 9:00 left in the game. Reveiz again kicked the extra point.

Vandy quarterback Kurt Page threw for a total of 329 yards, including a 9-yard touchdown pass to split end Phil Roach, to set a new SEC record for passing offense with 3,178 yards.

Page, a junior from Nashville, Tenn., ran 14 yards for another touchdown. Fullback Louie Stevenson ran 1 yard for a touchdown, giving the Commodores a shot-lived 24-20 lead over the Vols late in third quarter.

Grambling rides Jupiter

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dwayne Jupiter's 85-yard punt return for a third-quarter touchdown ignited Grambling to a 24-10 victory over Southern University on Saturday for the 1983 Southwestern Athletic Conference football championship.

The Bayou Classic victory also etched Coach Eddie Robinson's name more indelibly in the record books. His 313th career win tied legendary Glenn "Pop" Warner for third on the list of most successful college coaches.

Black presidential candidate Jesse Jackson was among the 58,199 Louisiana Superdome spectators who saw Grambling finish its season at 8-1-2 overall and 6-0-1 in the SWAC.

It was Robinson's first win in three Bayou Classic tries against Coach Otis Washington, whose Southern University team finished at 7-4 and 5-2.

Arkansas wins over Raiders

Tech played well but not well enough. Especially impressive was the performance of I-Back Robert Lewis, who had career highs in carries and yardage. Lewis had 40 carries for 167 yards and highlighted the game's first score.

The Raiders took Arkansas' opening kick and marched 80 yards in 13 plays before Lewis scored on a tackle-breaking run from 24 yards out. Lewis set the tone for Tech's offensive attack, netting 60 of the drive's yardage on nine carries.

Meanwhile, the Raider defense was halting every Arkansas thrust. The Hogs were held to only 13 yards and a single first down in the opening quarter. Tech had 161 total yards in the first 15 minutes.

The Raiders cranked up another long drive that resulted in kicker Ricky Gann's 32-yard field goal early in the second quarter. After an Arkansas punt, Tech freshmen Timmy Smith of Hobbs, N.M., went around right end for a 41-yard gallop to the Arkansas 30. The drive stalled at the 15 and Gann came on to make it 10-0 Tech.

Arkansas got on the scoreboard with 58 seconds left in the half when quarterback Brad Taylor passed the Hogs close enough for a 36-yard field goal by Greg Horne. The half ended with the score knotted 10-3.

In the second half, Arkansas' defense tightened up on Lewis, holding him to only 58 yards on 16 tries. Both teams missed short field goals, Gann from 26 and Horne from 32. Horne finally connected from 35 yards out with 24 seconds left in the quarter and the score was 10-6.

On the first play of the final quarter, Hart was intercepted by Arkansas cornerback Greg Lasker at the 20. Arkansas couldn't move, but Horne added another 35-yard field goal.

Things started to heat up on a cold, drizzly day after that. Tech answered Horne's field goal by driving 46 yards for a Gann field goal from 45 yards out.

Arkansas took the kick and put together its best drive, going 77 yards in 16 plays before Miller's plunge. Miller keyed the drive with four completions for 34 yards and added 28 more on seven rushes.

Arkansas' mastery of Tech is unrivaled by any Raider opponent. Tech has beaten Arkansas only four times in 27 tries, and only once in 13 games played in Lubbock.

"It was a well played football game," said Arkansas coach Lou Holtz. "I think the turning point and the difference in the game was Lasker's interception."

"The touchdown drive might have been our best of the season, considering the circumstances," said Taylor. "We had to make the drive and every player realized it. Phillip Boren is the only senior on our offensive line. He came into the huddle and said, 'I'm not going out a loser. We're going to score.'"

Arkansas, which started only five seniors, is not going to a bowl for the first time in Holtz' seven years at the helm of the Hogs. For Tech, which will lose 11 senior starters, a new era may be in the future.

JIM MURRAY
No flying for John, thank you

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

It was a perfect day for flying. The kind of day Lindbergh would have prayed for, the Wright Brothers dreamed of and every aviator from the Red Baron to Chuck Yeager would have rejoiced in.

But John Madden didn't have the Right Stuff. The flight was only from Minneapolis to San Francisco, not the moon, and the conditions couldn't have been better. Not a cloud in the sky, visibility infinity and the stewardesses were passing out drinks, the stereo was going and the card games were breaking out – and John Madden was sitting there in Row 5, unbuckling his seat belt and panting and fighting down panic.

It came at him in waves - suffocating, nauseating hysteria. He wanted to scream, He wanted to get out. But, at 30,000 feet, that first step was a witch.

"I had flown for over 20 years. Now I wasn't what you would grade out as a great flyer. I wasn't even an average flyer. I was a below-average flyer. But I had never broken out in a cold sweat before."

JOHN MADDEN went to his doctor. But fear of flying is not a diagnosable disease. It's not a virus, it's an emotion. The doctor treated it as an inner-ear disorder. An affair of the sinus, not the psyche.

Then, four years ago this week, John Madden got on a plane in Tampa and, when the stewardess locked the cabin door, he knew it wasn't his sinuses. It was not in his ear, it was in his mind. The worst place to have it.

He toughed it out but, when the plane stopped at Houston en route to the Coast, Madden got off, picked up his luggage and told the cab driver to take him to the train station.

"I have never been on a plane since," he says. "There are two things I will never do again: coach football or ride airplanes."

John Madden became the world's foremost surface transportation traveler. He's been on more trains than Casey Jones and more buses than a minor-league manager. He has seen more of the country at ground level than Lewis and Clark.

WHAT JOHN Madden had was a disease of the inner brain, claustrophobia, a fear of confinement in closed places. John considers Kitty Hawk a national disaster like Fort Sumter or the Johnstown Flood. He goes everywhere by train or, where he can't, by Dolly Parton's bus, rented for him by the network. He would have been right at home in Diamond Jim Brady's day.

Diamond John Madden may be a below-average flyer but he is, by common consent, one of the best and most beloved of the TV color commentators. He worked the CBS microphones for the Dallas-St. Louis game on Thanksgiving Day and the Giants-Raiders in L.A. this Sunday.

Madden was one of the great TV coaches, too, roaming the sidelines like a great moving laundry bag with arms, a rumpled old party who always looked out on the field as though his house were burning out there. Madden suffered flameout as an aviator and burnout as a coach at about the same time. In a way, claustrophobia was the cause there, too.

"There are two kinds of coaches," he explains. "There is Type A, the kind who doesn't worry about things he has no control over. He's the Tom Landry-Bud Grant type. His quarterback is sick? Tom Landry says to himself, 'Well, maybe he'll be all right by Sunday but, if he isn't, my other quarterback needs the work.' Bud Grant, he goes duck hunting.

"Then, there's Type B. That's me. And Dick Vermeil. And Vince Lombardi, surprising as it sounds. We're the type to say, 'My quarterback's hurt? Why? Why me, God? Can't you fix it? How can I coach without a quarterback?' Our type only lasts 10 years. Lombardi only lasted 10 years. Look it up.

"Burnout? I don't know. I got an ulcer."

UNCONFINED by blackboard drills, two-a-day practices, press conferences and playbooks, Madden shook off seat-belt travel, too. Diamond John became the most restless citizen of our times, an American Bedouin, crisscrossing the countryside like a grazing herd. He maintains an apartment in New York, a house in California, but his home is more apt to be a compartment on the 629 out of Chicago on Track 2 bound for L.A. or shuffling off to Buffalo.

"I really love not living anywhere," he says. "Some people say to me, 'You're not really anywhere!' and I say 'That's right where I want to be!'

"I couldn't stand being home every night and on weekends. I have the world's biggest home. America is my home. I look out my window and I see Wyoming, and Nebraska and the sycamores of Indiana and the Hudson River. That's my front yard."

He has gone from Super Bowl coach to America's Man in Motion, our own landlocked beachcomber. Every railroad station in the U.S. is his home. He's either in a press box or on the Atcheson, Topeka and the Santa Fe. It's a sure cure for claustrophobia.

Hoosier's stunned

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ron Harper, the Mid-American Conference freshman of the year last season, scored 16 of his 26 points in the second half as Miami of Ohio upset No. 19 Indiana 63-57 Saturday.

Indiana, which was 20-0 against teams from Ohio here in Assembly Hall, and 16-2 in the overall series with Miami, only made only 15 of 28 attempts from the free-throw line. The Hoosiers missed six of 10 free throws in the second half.

Indiana closed to within four twice in the final minutes, but each time Miami withstood the rally.

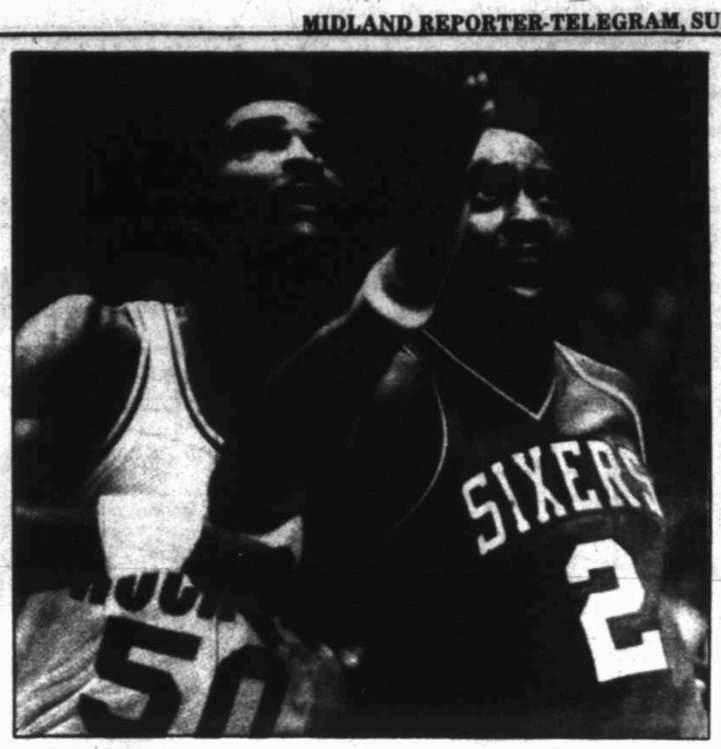

Freshman Marty Simmons led Indiana with 15 points, nine rebounds and seven assists.

Miami hit 13 of 20 field goals in the second half for 65 percent and shot 52 percent for the game.

Cougars maul Kansas

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Young scored 16 of his 25 points in the second half as third ranked Houston defeated Kansas, 91-76, in basketball Saturday.

The Cougars, 1-1, led 37-29 at the half and scored four unanswered baskets without a miss to start the second period after struggling most of the opening half.

Akeen Olajuwon went to the sidelines with 17:05 to go in the game with four personal fouls. He returned later and finished with 19 points. Carl Henry led the Jayhawks with 21 points and Kelly Knight added 18, including 10 in the second half.

Kansas, returning all five starters from last season's 13-16 team, held an 18-17 led with seven minutes to play in the half on goal tending call against Olajuwon.

The Jayhawks, 0-1, got the early lead on the outside shooting of guard Carl Henry who had 12 points at the half but Kansas then went cold trying to shoot over Houston's 2-3 zone defense.

The visitors shot only 32 percent from the field in the first half.

Lachemann rips Seattle owner

SEATTLE (AP) — Rene Lachemann, former Seattle manager and new skipper of Milwaukee, blasted the owner of the Mariners for failing to "spend money" on players.

George Argyros fired Lachemann on June 25 and replaced him with Del Crandall. On Oct. 7, Argyros fired Dan O'Brien, the club's president and GM manager for five seasons.

The Mariners had a 60-102 record in 1983, worst in the majors, and Argyros has been under fire locally.

Lachemann said Argyros was "very unfair" to O'Brien when O'Brien attempted to make trades.

"I know for a fact Dan tried to make deals and always got tied up with how much money a player was making," Lachemann said. "We just couldn't compete for players because George didn't want to spend money."

"You can't continue to lose players like this and expect to compete," Lachemann said. "We would have had better years with these guys, happy in Seattle.

Lastinger rallies Dogs over Wreck

ATLANTA (AP) — John Lastinger scored on a six-yard keep and threw a four-yard scoring pass to Kevin Harris as seventh-ranked Georgia, 9-1-1, overcame seven-point deficits to trim Georgia Tech 27-24 Saturday.

Kevin Butler kicked a 36-yard field goal early in the final quarter to give the Cotton Bowl-bound Bulldogs a 10-point lead before 3-8 Tech struck for another touchdown behind its two offensive stars of the day — a 30-yard pass from John Dewberry to Robert Lavette.

Tech had one last shot in the waning minutes, reaching the Georgia 36 before Tony Flack intercepted a Dewberry pass to allow Georgia to run out the clock.

On the Road Again
with Allen and Jackie Cason

Although purchasing a recreational vehicle is like buying a home-away-from-home, financing it is generally more along the lines of automobile financing, not real estate. There are several sources for financing: credit unions, borrowing against a certificate of deposit, or installment financing now available at both banks and savings and loans. Down payments on R.V. such as travel trailers range from 10% to 15% depending upon the size and price of the unit you wish to purchase. Bank financing on a travel trailer ranges from 12 to 60 months, with 12 to 48 months on foldout camp trailers. Terms differ on used units. You can shop yours financing just like you did your R.V. Remember when you do finance the R.V. you have chosen the lein holder will require comprehensive and collision insurance on the R.V. This can be purchased through your auto insurance agency, or at most R.V. dealerships. In the state of Texas you can buy up to 3 years insurance at a time and this can be added to your retail installment contract in most cases.

Billy Sims Trailer Town has bank rate financing available with approved credit. We also sell R.V. insurance on travel trailers when used as an R.V. and not a residence. We are open Mon-Fri 9 to 6 and on Saturdays 9 to 5 for your shopping convenience.

HINT: Don't wait until you retire to buy an R.V.! Have the unit paid for so that when the income decreases at retirement you do not have a payment on the R.V.

Toronto to 'run-and-shoot' against CFL's best defense

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — It will be Toronto's "run-and-shoot" offense against the best defense when the Argonauts meet the B.C. Lions today in the 71st Grey Cup — the CFL's Super Bowl.

And, in the first-ever Grey Cup played indoors at the domed B.C. Place Stadium, it will be the first time since 1976 that the Edmonton Eskimos will be sitting in the stands watching.

The game will be televised on ESPN at 5 p.m.

Former Tennessee quarterback Condredge Holloway will direct the explosive Toronto attack. His main targets will be wide receivers Terry Greer of Alabama State, Emanuel Tolbert of Southern Methodist and Geiff Townsend of Boston College, along with running backs Cedric Minter of Boise State and Jan Carinci of Maryland.

But the Lions' defense is no push-over, having set a CFL record this season with 42 pass interceptions while posting the second-best regular-season record in the league, 11-5, in capturing the Western Division. Toronto had a club record 12-4 mark to finish first in the East.

Grey Cup

Don Matthews, in his first season as head coach of the B.C. Lions, claims the Grey Cup game will "take care of itself" since Toronto won both regular-season encounters between the two clubs. But Matthews noted that both B.C. and the Argos had to come from behind to win their divisional finals and a berth in the Grey Cup.

Holloway, who won the Schenley Award as the CFL's MVP last year, has had to fight off injuries this season. But that hasn't stopped the Argos, who can go to the bench for former Texas Tech star Joe Barnes, who may be the best-paid reliever in the CFL.

"The best play I made all day was to get injured," Holloway said earlier this season when he jammed his thumb, then watched Barnes come in and rally Toronto to a come-from-behind victory.

Holloway was the top-ranked quarterback in the Eastern Division this season, completing 210 of 372 passes for 18 touchdowns and only throwing five interceptions. Barnes was 149 of 271 for 11 TDs, while being picked off eight times.

And in Greer, Holloway and Barnes have one of the finest receivers in pro football. The 26-year-old Alabama State graduate set pro records this season with 113 receptions for 2,003 yards. That broke the CFL mark for catches of 104 set earlier this year by Edmonton's Brian Kelly and the old league record of 1,914 yards set by Hal Patterson of the Montreal Alouettes in 1956.

The National Football League records are held by Charlie Hennigan of the Houston Oilers, who caught 101 passes in 1964 and had 1,746 yards in 1961.

B.C. cornerback Kerry Parker is looking forward to a rematch with Greer. It's not that he doesn't respect the Toronto speedster, it's just that he believes many of Greer's receptions come after Holloway has eluded the pass rush.

"The key to defending against Greer is first to contain the scrambling of Holloway, because Holloway buys extra time with his running."

Who's that man and what's he doing in our alley?

It could be Thomas Wolf from Energas' Midland office.

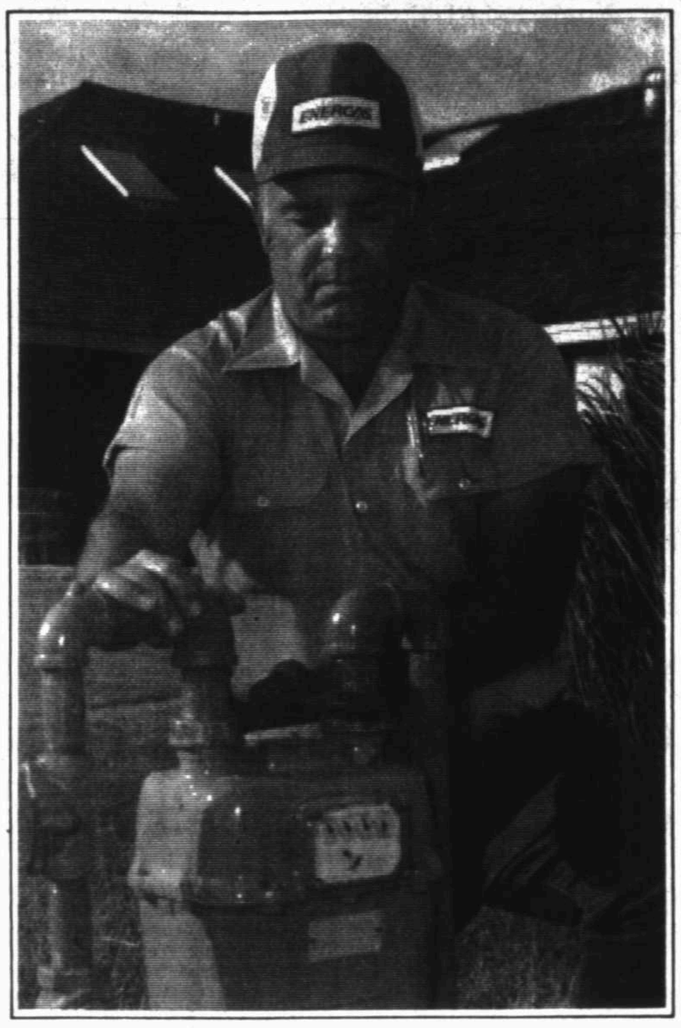

You are apt to find him in a lot of places. His job is to check out gas equipment and lines to assure you of a dependable, safe supply of natural gas. Like in your alley. Besides carefully reading your meter, he checks for leaks and for any needed repairs or replacement.

So, when you see an Energas man in your alley . . . or in the heart of town, you can be sure he is there for a good reason.

Energas people can do and want to.

Whatever happened to last year's Christmas present?

It's worn out
...broke
...didn't fit

...gave away
...what gift?

The Diamontrigue jewelry you bought is still being worn, still highly appreciated, still giving pleasure, still in fashion, and still loved and treasured!

It is our relentless pursuit of quality that sets us apart. This means the top 7% only is set in carefully and individually selected 14K gold mountings for Diamontrigue. To qualify as a Diamontrigue gem, this all important sreening is required. There is a difference in the best and the very best, a difference that is discernible to the discriminating client.

At Diamontrigue, the fact that a mounting is 14K gold is not enough. There are mountings in 14K gold that are worlds apart in quality, weight and finish. All mounting selected for Diamontrigue must be immaculately finished, in either a timeless classic design, or a new and exciting innovation, and have a good weight for its size. We don't just tell you about the newest in jewelry at Diamontrigue. We have it!

Vice President Bill Lawler, of Big Wheel Leasing, can offer you numerous advantages with a custom tailored lease package. For more information on how Big Wheel Lease can help you, call him today at 689-0738.

Leasing offers you numerous advantages

Just what is leasing? Leasing can offer many advantages to almost everyone, though most don't realize it. Many people simply don't understand what leasing is. You don't have to own a business to be able to lease things. Estimates are that over half of the automoblies driven in some states, California and Illinois for example, are not owned, but leased. Leasing normally requires no down payment, usually just the first month plus tax, title and license. Payments on a lease are often even lower than you would pay if you were buying. Even most people who say they own their homes are in reality borrowing money from the bank on a lease concept. When you pay a monthly rental on your telephone, it is simply being leased from the telephone company.

But sometimes it is hard to fully comprehend, or believe, that leasing is so simple for the ordinary citizen. We're here to help you understand leasing and all of the many advantages it has in store for you. We are Big Wheel Leasing, Inc., a full service leasing firm dedicated to serving West Texans. We are definitely not limited to simply automobile leasing, we can lease you anything from a typewriter to an oil rig or a lear jet. We can lease heavy equipment, phone systems, computers, airplanes, farming equipment, automobiles... the list goes on and on. Leasing rates on automobiles start at only $127/ month!

But just what are some of the advantages of leasing? First, leasing does not tie up your line of credit at the bank. It does not restrict your cash flow, requires less cash outlay as there is usually no down payment, and business leases may be 100% tax deductible. Payments are usually less than if you were buying. We would like to send you a free brochure if you can't make it in to visit with us. Just call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. We will give you the straight facts on leasing.

If you are interested in leasing a full-size car, now is the time to do it. Most of the full-size cars will be down-sized the first of 1984. This could be your last chance for a larger car. Also, since the 1984 models have recently come out, rates are lower. Before you buy, check with us and see what leasing can offer you. We can custom-fit a leasing package to your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing today, or give us a call.

If you need heavy equipment, a phone system, a computer, or almost anything, check with Big Wheel Leasing before you buy. We can lease you any type auto, from Chevettes, Corvettes, Cadillacs, Mercedes, Rolls Royce, BMW, etc. We offer good terms, and we can work with you to tailor a package to fit your needs. Come by Big Wheel Leasing, Imc. today at 1017 N. Midkiff, Suite A, across from Town & Country Shopping Center. For a free brochure or more information, call us at 689-0738 or 1-800-592-4773. See the advantages leasing has to offer you.

You can be a satisfied customer at ARC

One of the most traumatic things ever experienced by most of us at some time or another during our lives is an automobile accident. No matter who you are, more than likely you will somehow be involved in an auto accident at least once in your life. If you have not yet had that unfortunate occasion, there are a few things you will need to keep in mind for when the circumstance arises. Those who have been through this dreadful experience know what some of these things are. One of the most important things is the process of repair afterwards. What do you do? After the emotional exertion of the actual wreck, you are not going to feel like taking your car from place to place for insurance estimates until you find one to suit you. So, before you take your auto anywhere else for repairs, call ARC Truck & Auto Body in Midland.

ARC Truck & Auto Body is a complete repair service devoted to giving you the very best in body repair and related crafts. ARC is the largest independent body shop in town. One of the reasons for their popularity is that your car receives special attention during the repair process to assure you of only the best work available anywhere. All of the craftsmen at ARC are highly skilled and well-qualified, with years of experience to stand on. They pride themselves on their reputation for only the highest quality work possible. Every detail, from straightening the frame to fitting decorative moulding must meet the highest standards.

No matter what type work you leave your car for at ARC, you can breathe easier knowing that every car is given the care and attention as if it were owner Allen Frasier's own. Body work is not the only work done at Allen's shop. Even painting is given something extra. Here again, highly skilled craftsmen take the painstaking steps necessary to insure you that your car will come out looking at least as good a sit did when it left the factory. Customizing work pinstriping, and lettering is given the same particular attention, and always comes out looking good. The paint room at ARC is even big enough to accomodate a diesel.

If you have not had an accident, but need your car towed because of other problems, you can still turn to ARC. They also operate a 24-hour wrecker service. This is yet another advantage to you, because if you have an accident, you can let them tow your car and begin repairs immediately! No more shopping for estimated and paying two or three wrecker fees. Of course, insurance work is always welcome, and you can get a free estimate if you care to compare.

All who have ever used the services of ARC Truck & Auto Body are familiar with the satisfaction quality and concern can bring. A satisfied customer means the world to a business owner, and Allen Frasier will work hard to keep you satisfied. If you have never tried ARC, try them just once. An introduction to the page

The Business/Industry Notes are published by the Midland Reporter-Telegram as a service to the businesses of the Permian Basin and beyond.

Three pages are devoted each week to the Business/Industry Notes (B&I pages): a double page spread on Sunday and one page on Tuesday.

The advertisements seen on these pages are directly related to the stories and photographs. Through a six month contract (26 weeks), businesses are given constant exposure to the literate public.

The stories and photos compliment the advertisements, giving the reader an in-depth view of the business. The reader is exposed to specific details and pertinent information not otherwise found on a small advertisement.

Midland houses between 3,500 and 4,000 businesses, reports the Midland Chamber of Commerce. With this amount of competition, constant exposure each week, for 26 consecutive weeks, can only promote interest to help a perspective business.

The businesses of the Permian Basin are as fascinating as they are numerous. Currently, teh B/I notes are graced with businesses such as an executive charter service, lingerie shops, numerous restaurants, auto and truck shops, camera shops and a behavioral hypnotist.

Any and all businesses are encouraged to join the Midland Reporter-Telegram's Business and Industry Notes, regardless of the nature of the business. All businesses, corporate or independent, are invited to consider this opportunity.

For further information contact the advertising department of the Reporter-Telegram at (915) 682-5311. The staff would be happy to quote prices and discuss potential story material. Call 682-5311 and let the Business/Industry Notes work for you.

Author left works out of will

William Shakespeare, who died in 1616, made no mention in his will of his literary works, an omission that lent fuel to the controversy over whether he really wrote all those dramas and poems. He signed the will "William Shakespeare."

Performance of Bach's work successful

A Review

Besides supporting a large family (siring 20 children) and fulfilling his duties as a musician and a composer, Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750), wrote hundreds of compositions, including nearly 300 religious and non-religious choral works. His Mass in B minor, performed last weekend by the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale, is an outstanding example of the former.

To understand this work it is necessary to have some knowledge of the composer's intent and the attitudes of the time in which he lived.

Today Bach is considered the greatest genius of baroque music, carrying such musical techniques as counterpoint and fugue to their greatest heights. During his lifetime his compositions were generally ignored because his work was considered too complex and elaborate. (Less than a dozen were published when he was living.) Instead, he was appreciated for his talents as an organist.

In short, he was writing for an audience that did not yet exist. In his work, Bach takes a theme, allows it to build on itself in an orderly manner, and carries it to the nth degree. (See "Godel, Escher, Bach: An Eternal Golden Braid" by computer scientist Douglas Hofstadter, who mathematically compares the similarities of Bach's music, Escher's lithography and Godel's mathematical theorem.)

Also of primary importance in understanding Bach is realizing that, as a devout Lutheran, his deep religious feeling dominated his works.

Everything man does and believes is of religious origin was a belief shared by Bach and the other baroque composers. For them, baroque music and art helped protect people against the advance of doubt bred by the Renaissance ideas of scientific, rational inquiry. On the manuscripts of even his nonreligious works, Bach often wrote I.N.J. for the Latin words meaning "In the Name of Jesus."

Mass in B minor was completed two years before his death. In it, Bach employs his musical genius to glorify the beauty and power of the ordinary of the Roman mass.

Last Sunday, the chorale and a chamber orchestra from the Midland-Odessa Symphony, directed by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, endeavored to bring this work to life for the sizeable crowd gathered in the sanctuary of First United Methodist Church.

The endeavor was, for the most part, successful. However, as Engebretson said after the performance, "This is a work you can easily spend a semester studying." When presented in its entirety, it takes more than two hours.

To prevent the soloists from having to project over the orchestra, it was necessary for them to come down off the stands, maneuver through the musicians and stand beside Engebretson. This took time, placed them where they could not be seen easily and slowed the pace of a work which is long to begin with.

They weren't seated in front of the orchestra because they weren't guest artists, they were chorale members. Although all had excellent voices, most did not have the vocal power to project throughout the sanctuary.

Sitting upstairs after intermission it was apparent that the soloists' voices carried better, the sound was much crisper, and it was possible to see and hear the production unfold.

Aside from the two problems already mentioned, the presentation was exceptionally well executed and demonstrated how much the chorale has matured over the past few years under Engebretson's direction.

The chorale sounded together, sharp and under control, except on a few occasions, such as midpoint in "Gloria," when individual vocal lines became indistinct.

Soloists were Debra Patchell, Bonnie Hanssen, John Fleming, Bert Bostick, Jane Clancy Debenport, Lisa Harwell and David Morrow.

As for the chamber orchestra, a few wrong notes did not spoil the overall precision with which the musicians played. From the vantage point of the balcony, at one point in "Confiteor" the movements of the 30 musicians were executed in such harmony they appeared to be moving as one.

UTPB sponsors madrigal dinner

ODESSA — The Christmas season during a time when lords and ladies dressed and dined in elegance and took a great deal of enjoyment from musical entertainment will be depicted in a madrigal dinner involving The University of Texas of the Permian Basin students and faculty and area musicians Dec. 2-3.

The University of Texas Singers under direction of Dr. Stanley Engebretson, assistant professor of music, and Permian Consort, under direction of Dr. Craig Lister, assistant professor of music, will provide the entertainment.

Engebretson said the madrigal dinner is an attempt to take the audience back in time to a carefree Christmas season during the Renaissance.

The program will be presented at 7:30 p.m. each day. A gourmet meal will be served.

"The program will consist of a variety of literature including Renaissance and Baroque music as well as contemporary Christmas carols," he said.

"We are depicting a period which is probably one of the most carefree times in history. Madrigals, which are simply part songs used for evening entertainment, originated during this period. Naturally, the songs covered a broad range of topics, but ideas about love and celebration are evident," Engebretson added.

Chamber music played on early instruments will accompany the feast, which will begin with the traditional toast of wassail, followed by carols, madrigals and dance.

The menu will consist of Wassail, green salad, cornish game hen with fruit stuffing, rice pilaf, glazed carrots, flaming plum pudding with hard sauce and coffee and wine.

Tickets are $15 each or $25 per couple. Reservations must be made at the UTPB Student Life Office by Nov. 30.

Victims 'believed in what they were doing'

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A night that began in celebration over the playoff victories of two local football teams ended in grief for the staff of KOSA-TV here.

A few stunned, disbelieving employees mechanically answered phones and performed routine duties in the early-morning hours Saturday. By sheer repetition of the story to co-workers, media and family, realization finally began to break through the numbness.

Six of their crew were dead.

"It's a cruddy business to lose your life over," a tearful Cathy Griffin, former KOSA reporter, said. "But everybody on that plane believed in what they were doing."

Eight people died in the 2 a.m. crash: Assistant News Director and anchorman Gary Hopper, Sports Director Jeff Shull, engineers and production personnel Ed Monette, Bruce Dyer, Bobby Stephens and Brent Roach, Hopper's brother-in-law Jay Alvin Price and pilot Keith Elkin.

"I thought we were just working another plane crash," said Conrad Coleman, KOSA's Midland reporter, who didn't realize until he reached the scene his co-workers were involved.

But he seemed calm as he talked to other reporters, giving them details in a subdued but professional tone, providing names and information about his co-workers.

He admitted, however, that it was difficult to separate his personal feelings from professional duties. "I'm doing the job Gary trained me to do. It's hard. Right now I'm a newsman. I have got a job to do, and when it's all over we'll probably all sit down and cry."

His face became a little grimmer each time he was recalled to the scene to identify another body. At one point, he passed the reporters kept at a distance but didn't stop to talk. A few tears trickled down his face and he walked into the darkened pasture.

"Some of them I didn't even recognize," because they were badly burned on impact, Coleman said. "I recognized Gary by his boots. It didn't hit me until I saw his boots."

By dawn, after a long and sleepless night, he returned to the newsroom and broke down in tears, consoled by a sobbing Ms. Griffin.

"What really bothers me is when I got in, the first thing I wanted to do was look at my video — how good was the video I got," he said.

"My reaction was I felt calm, but I started shaking," said Brent Boynton, 10 p.m. producer and anchor. "I've been trying to keep myself from reviewing all the questions I'll have to answer. Everything from how I feel about the people I worked with, from 'I could have been there' to 'dammit, it's not fair.' "

He answered the telephone and watched the news wire, tearing off and sorting stories as they came off the teletype. The instinctive motions seemed to keep him functioning calmly.

"We lost some key people, but fortunately we have enough staff to put the news on," he said.

Dazed, yes, but not cold and unfeeling. Some in the emotion-charged newsroom found it difficult to carry on as normal, while others seemed to do it out of self-preservation. They cried, stared off into space, made the necessary unpleasant calls, tried to console each other. Cigarettes and coffee were in great demand.

They spoke in choked hushed tones, interspersed with the sounds of teletypes, police scanners and the constant ringing of telephones.

"It just seems like a dream," Ms. Griffin commented, a thought echoed by many during the night. "All those people were very talented and had a bright future ahead of them."

She sat at Hopper's desk, littered with media awards and commendations for his work with various charities and community organizations. "We fought like cats and dogs, but Gary was a helluva newsman and he made me a good reporter."

Family members were tracked down and notified. A sister in California. Parents vacationing in Mexico. And always they strived to find the most painless way to break the news. There was none.

"If there was some way I could say it isn't true I'd say it," News Director John McCall murmured into the phone."

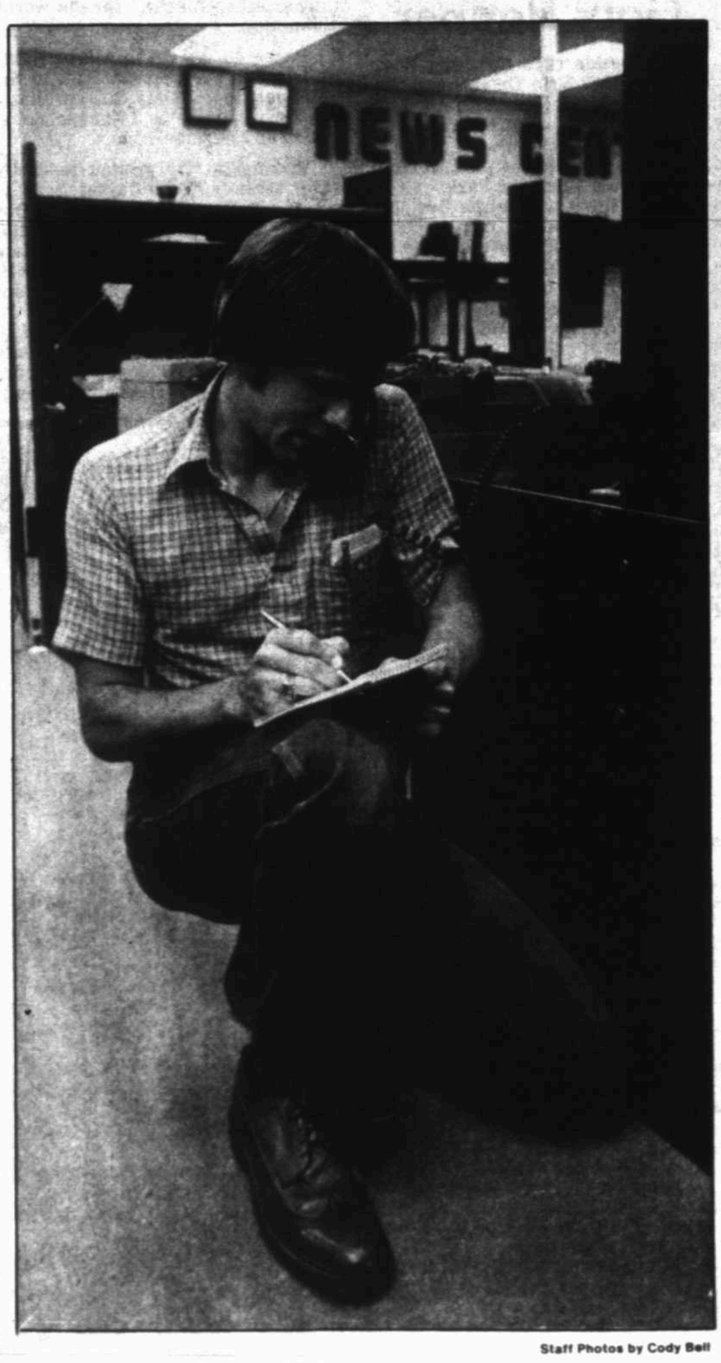

As dawn neared a few thought to call relatives and reassure them they were all right. Even though nerves were frazzled and eyes bloodshot they continued to be polite and cooperative to dozens of reporters on the phone.

"They're all good friends," McCall said. "I have worked with one for seven years. I don't think we can separate our emotions from news. I think there'll be a lot of us in the story we do tonight."

The minutes ticked by and the phone calls increased.

As the sun rose, a small plane took off from Midland Regional Airport. Life goes on.

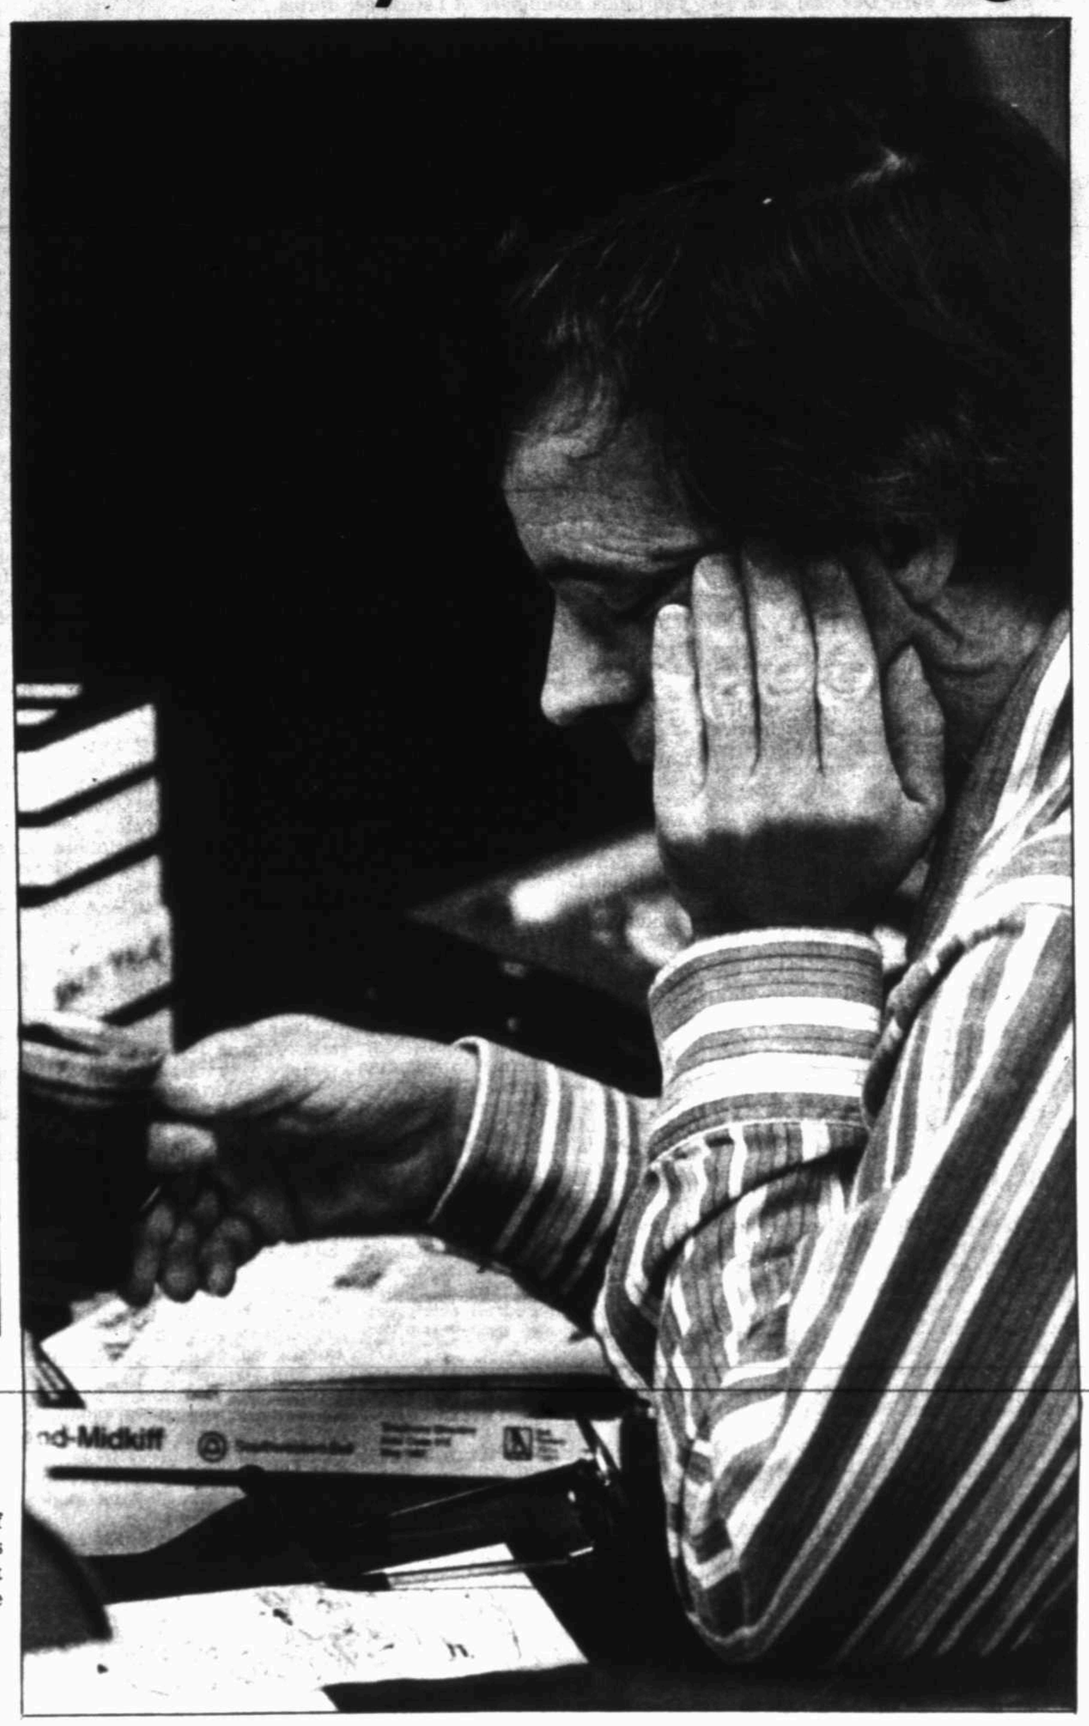

But in the homes of Hopper, Price, Stephens and Monette, young children were waking from a snug warm sleep to be told Daddy wouldn't be coming home from work.

Breaking the news

News Director John McCall, right, after being told the bodies of six KOSA crewmen have been identified, pulls off his glasses, rubs his temple and contemplates how to break the news to next of kin. Brent Boynton, above, 10 p.m. anchor, tries to submerge grief and carry on with the business of gathering news.

Co-workers, friends react to loss of newsmen, pilot

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"I have three personal ideals. One, to do the day's work well.... The second ideal has been to act the Golden Rule.... And the third has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride, and to be ready when the day of sorrow and grief came to meet it with the courage befitting a man."
— Sir William Osler

They did their day's work well, experienced success and affection of friends, and met the day of sorrow within a 24-hour period that ended at 2 a.m. Saturday.

Six employees of KOSA-TV, a pilot and a man who enjoyed helping the television crew covered two winning football games, joked with other media friends at the events and then died in a fiery crash of their plane as it attempted to land at Midland Regional Airport.

It wasn't just the staff at KOSA-TV experiencing grief Saturday over the loss of their six people — Gary Hopper, Jeff Shull, Bruce Dyer, Edward Monette, Brent Roach and Bobby Stephens — and the others, pilot Keith Elkin and Jay Alvin Price. But also missing the dead are other people who worked on a daily basis with them and even those who just had a chance to bump into the television crew or the pilot or Price, an employee for El Paso Products who occasionally "spotted" the game for KOSA.

Gary Hopper perhaps was the better known of the eight: His face and personality were projected every day at 6 p.m. into the homes of Permian Basin residents. He had been with KOSA-TV since April 1974 and had worked his way up to assistant news director and anchor.

In a September story on news anchors published in the Reporter-Telegram, Hopper had commented of his position, "It's a job, maybe a little more glamourous. But I didn't get into this business to be a star. I'm a newsman, a journalist."

And that's how other media saw him.

"Gary Hopper is their news image," commented Rick Wells of KTPX-TV, Channel 9, waiting for bits of news at the site of the crash in the pre-dawn hours Saturday. "It's very disruptive for a news department, for their news image (to lose six employees). Gary is the guy that people tune in to watch. There'll be a lot of people touched by this."

Mike Barker of KMID-TV, Channel 2, had been friends with Hopper "from way back. Competition (between television stations) is secondary. It's a friendship; it's a tragedy."

Hopper, too, was a member of the Midland Independent School District board of trustees, winning the seat in April 1981. Board President Bill Jackson called Hopper "a young man who cared so much about life. He cared about his community where he was reared, educated and worked." Jackson's voice was choked with emotion and he paused before continuing. "We'll miss Gary. He certainly was a dedicated school board member and a fine person."

Trustee Joyce Sherrod said it would be tough on the board, "losing a close friend that you have worked with for several years. It's just devastating, and I don't even want to think about what we'll do now."

Trustee Joe Golding added: "I don't know what to say. Gary was good people."

Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith knew Hopper from the working arena. "I lost a good friend in Gary. He was a man who did his job well, was professional, and I will miss him."

Keith Elkin had been a pilot in Midland five years and had a reputation for being competent. He was piloting the Beechcraft King Air B-100 chartered from Texas Western Aviation by KOSA-TV. Bill Jiles, chief pilot and general manager for Texas Western, arrived in March. He and Elkin became good friends immediately.

Mrs. Bill Jiles told the Reporter-Telegram, "He (Elkin) was the closest friend my husband ever had. He was dear and precious and sweet. He will be missed by everyone who knew him. It's hard to lose someone you love. He was a top rate pilot; they didn't come any better."

W.R. Page of Odessa was a professional pilot for 40 years before easing off this past year. He, too, became acquainted with Elkin. "He was a bright young man who applied himself diligently."

Elkin had received some of the highest credentials for his work as a pilot and in the field of airplane maintenance, including an Airline Transport rating, the highest certificate obtainable, a rating of Aircraft and Power Plant mechanic, and Inspection Authority. The last meant Elkin could "sign off" when he did maintenance work, which Page called a "very high rating."

Elkin flew Page's plane the past two years, and the senior pilot said he was comfortable to sit back and let the younger man do the flying.

"I have nothing but the best of things to say about Keith," Page said. "I've lost a very dear friend."

The atmosphere was festive in Fort Worth Friday night, recalled Assistant Sports Editor Terry Williamson of the Reporter-Telegram. Williamson had arrived early to cover the play-off game between Midland Lee and Fort Worth Trimble Tech and he ran into Shull and the KOSA crew setting up their cameras for the game.

"The last thing I remember Jeff saying is 'I hope you have a nice drive back to Midland. I'm flying.' "

Also contributing to this story were reporters Richard Orr, Rhonda Rigenhagen and Bob Brundage.

Fund formed for Hopper's daughters

A trust fund for the children of Gary Hopper is being established at First City National Bank in Midland. Contributions should be directed to President Bill Franklin.

Hopper's daughters, 6-year-old Mandy and 8-year-old Amy, attend Henderson Elementary School.

Hopper died early Saturday in a plane crash at Midland Regional Airport.

Area law enforcement officers sift through the wreckage of a Beechcraft King Air B-100 in the pre-dawn hours Saturday, looking for bodies of the pilot and seven passengers. The plane nose-dived into a field east of the main north-south runway and burst into flames. It was carrying six KOSA-TV employees, who had shot footage of the Odessa Permian and Midland Lee high school football games Friday night.

Bonham home of 'impish' Irish philospher

By JOHN RAINEY

BONHAM (AP) — Some days you will see him, walking briskly down Sam Rayburn Drive, small, never fragile, just erect as a man might be if he had a board down the back of his shirt.

He claims that without his beard his face would resemble a chopping block. Who's to tell?

What was once red hair on face and head now is all white.

Himself, he will tell you he is as much Irish as one can be. He also will say that the beard keeps him from being called a "bald-faced liar."

There's a bit of the devil in him. The Irish all have it, and the lucky ones manage to hold onto it.

His pipe will go out once in a while, but he stays behind a desk most of the time. He does not drive a car; knows how, but he hasn't in years. He claims walking everywhere is his exercise.

He'll mess with your mind, that's what he'll do. He'll do it and only afterward will you realize that this man with the sharp eyes, and a bit of a brogue, has done it to you.

Makes you think. That's what he'll do.

"Mac's a genius," proclaims his boss, H.G. Dulaney, director of the Sam Rayburn Library.

That's where you'll find MacPhelan Reese.

Some call him the staff writer, or the philosopher. Whatever. He's still an imp.

He could easily pass for 50, less if some undertaker got a hold of him. He's 77.

He's a Bonham native, one who left and returned, left and returned again. He always had a good reason for leaving, a better one for returning.

He never was graduated from a high school, but he is a companion of the Greek poets, the muses of all ages, past and present. He has been an actor, a singer, oilfield worker, salesman, artist, legitimate theater performer, vaudevillian performer, and a prizefighter, too.

He defies labels. They won't stick on him. He writes for his own pleasure, and there's no greater audience, nor harsher critic.

His handwriting appears to be left over from an earlier time, the days when cotton was king in the South, and all the gentry read Sir Walter Scott's chauvinistic novels, written for food, not food for thought.

"Imagination rules the world," he quotes Napoleon. His imagination makes the Sam Rayburn Library a place people like to visit.

As Dulaney tells it, "People will come in and hear Mac talk and tell all the tales he knows so well. Then, later, they'll come back just to listen to the man."

He's at work on his latest book. "The Last Turnstile."

He's quick to pay tribute to those who have affected his life. He says Mrs. Ray Peeler Sr. was the finest teacher a man could ever have.

He has her to thank, and his mother, a brilliant singer. She told him: "Son, repect the respectable, admire the admirable, adore the adorable, but deplore the deplorable. Tell the truth."

He says she was one of the wisest women, and gave him that wonderful advice.

The master who left him a place to play out his last role, with joy, Sam Rayburn, often was quoted as saying, "To get along, go along."

Here is what Reese wrote to illuminate the meanings of those words:

"From crest to trough some fight the waves,
Instead of riding with them,
But growing wise, they synchronize
Their strokes to ocean's rhythm.
"The unwise face disaster when they try to fight a majority-sanctioned opinion. No deceit is needed to go along with this ancient Greek truism: 'Treat a friend as if he might become an enemy; treat an enemy as if he might become a friend.'

"While watching marching soldiers only a doting mother would say: 'They're all out of step but Jim.' Only a dolt defies the will of a majority whose conclusions are reached through applied common sense. After making sure the majority is right, a statesman endorses, enunciates, legislates, and enforces the common sense of that majority. Such was Sam Rayburn's advice to potential statesmen, and those that practiced that advice never had to eat their words — or their candidate cards mixed with crow."

Theater instructor is killed

DALLAS (AP) — A guest instructor at the Dallas Theater Center was found shot to death in a wooded area behind the theater, police said.

A theater employee found the partially clad body of Billy Jack Jones, 50, about 1:45 p.m. Friday. The body was found about 100 feet from the classrooms where he taught diction.

Police said they had no suspects in the slaying, but believed robbery may have been a motive since Jones' wallet was missing.

Odessan coils own Cobra

Man makes tracks with customized car

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Words like custom, unique and authentic are overused in today's promotion-conscious society.

No sooner has a new fad been brought before the consumer's eye than everyone concerned with "keeping up with the Joneses" has at least one.

The automobile industry merchandises each new sports-car creation as the ultimate in motor conveyance, but before the year is out the styling has become as easily recognizable as the next.

An outlet for individual expression in cars is being developed in Odessa, where a local businessman is constructing the first Pacific Coast Cobra in the Petroplex.

Auto aficionados need no introduction to the Shelby Cobra, billed as the fastest production car ever built "when cars used to be cars." No longer available in this age of emission controls and the 55-mph speed limit, car connoisseurs may have an outlet with the introduction of Ultimate Motorcars to Midland-Odessa.

Odessan Bill Dye is building a "stretched-out version" of the Cobra from a kit available from the California distributor. Dye has combined the luxury features offered by Pacific Coast Cobra with a few truly custom innovations of his own in hopes of producing a unique vehicle.

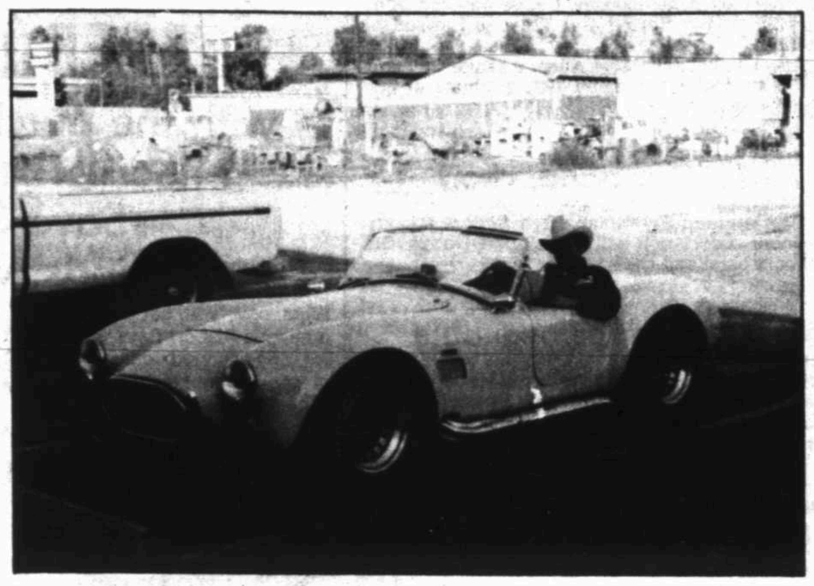

"The guy that buys this car is not buying a Camaro," said Dye of his car's "classic simplicity." At his peak, Dye projects construction of four similar models annually, each designed according to the desire of the buyer.

The kits — which include all necessary parts but the wheels, tires, motor and transmission — are available for $20,000 and the completed versions for about $45,000.

An accountant by trade, Dye explained he learned to turn a wrench from "local hotrodders" whom he still consults with in the design and construction of the car. Although few "shade-tree mechanics" would be able to complete the kit, Dye called it "a back-to-basics car."

"All we're using is 20-year-old technology and new parts," he said. "You can still have a performance car and meet EPA regulations."

While many new sports cars rely on digital read-outs and intricate computer systems for performance, the Cobra is basically the same car that it was in its heyday, with some up-to-date adjustments.

Odessan Bill Dye has created a West Texas version of the Pacific Coast Cobra, a performance car built from a kit with custom features added by Dye.

Dye estimated 200 hours of work will go into completing the premier Petroplex model. "It's a hand-built car and it's going to take some time," he said.

Drivers should be able to get 12-15 miles per gallon from the creations, along with a peak speed capability of nearly 150 mph. A completed version imported from California that Dye drove for promotional purposes won first prize in the "special interest" class at the Odessa spring car show.

Because it is still basically the same car that ruled the roads before emission controls and high-tech designs became commonplace, basic maintenance and tune-ups can be handled by the owner.

Dye's modifications have made the vehicle even simpler to repair, one change making the oil filter easily accessible.

Dye's "Texas version" comes complete with a low-drag air conditioning system that can also be removed more easily than conventional systems. Rather than attempting repairs under the hood, the entire system can be removed in a module.

"I can sell them a car they can work on under the shade tree there in the backyard and still have all the luxuries of a high-performance car," he said.

Because of its basic design and use of standard parts, Dye suggested the car — which runs on regular gas and features an automatic three-speed transmission — could be used for everyday driving.

For the racing enthusiast, the car has high-performance possibilities. But the everyday driver can also cruise along in the in-city gear, confident of their safety in a car designed along race-car safety guidelines.

"This will take a lot more punishment and sustain a lot less damage than most production cars," said Dye. The chasis is similar to a NASCAR racer and the fiberglas body is thicker than steel on most cars built on today's production lines.

Other features not common in today's production sports cars include a large trunk and 24-gallon gas tank. Dye suggested that mechanics would feel more comfortable with his creation.

"The new technology is a sign of the times," he said, "Mechanics enjoy something that is back to basics, something they understand."

What does a clean filter have to do with saving money?

There are lots of ways to save money. One is to check the filter in your heating and cooling unit once a month.

The filter is there to collect dust and lint. But when it's dirty, your unit has to work longer and harder to heat and cool your home. And that leads to higher electric bills.

If your filter is permanent, clean it; if it's disposable, replace it. A clean filter can help you save money all year long.

And those other ways to save? You'll find them in "The Unhandy Person's Guide" from Texas Electric. If you need one, call us—or ask for one on the comments portion of your bill.

I would like to know who owns or is responsible for the parking lot between Illinois Street and Texas Street on Andrews Highway where the Walgreen's store and the TG&Y store are located, and whether the owner has any intention of repairing the large chuckholes in this parking area? The holes are extremely large at the north and east entrances. I am also interested in knowing if the owner expects customers to continue using this lot in its present condition and if he will be responsible for any damage to vehicles caused by falling into these holes? — S.W.

ANSWER: The parking lot in the Village Circle is maintained by the different property owners, with Felix Welmaker named as the person in charge of the area. When Answer Line called this week, a spokesman for the Village Circle reported that the large chuckholes you mention have been filled with caliche and, following the holidays, the holes will be paved with asphalt. This should make entering the parking area easier and safer.

What is a "general agent" in life insurance? — M.F.

ANSWER: In the life insurance business, a general agent is an independent businessman who has a franchise from a life insurance company to sell its policies through his own sales organization, usually within a specific geographical territory, according to The American Council of Life Insurance.

The general agent hires and pays the agency's individual agents and is usually responsible for the expenses of the agency, although some companies pay an expense allowance.

I would like to know the chemicals I need to prepare a solution to soak logs made from newspapers so they will produce several different colors when burned. I made some last year, but cannot remember the materials I used. Can you help me? — Mrs. M.R. Lester

ANSWER: Sharon Goodyear with the Midland County Extension Office located the following "recipe" for the solution in which you can soak newspaper logs to produce colors when the logs are burned.

You will need four pounds of copper sulfate and three pounds of rock salt which you mix together in one gallon of water. Place rolled newspaper logs in the solution and allow to become well soaked. After soaking, allow the logs to dry for several days before burning.

Ms. Goodyear also offers the following "recipe" to be used to make wood logs burn with different glows. Red, green, blue, orange or purple can be produced, depending on the materials used. Calcium chloride produces orange; copper chloride and potassium chloride produce blue; strontium nitrate produces red; lithium chloride produces carmine, and copper sulfate produces emerald green.

These items may be obtained from chemical suppliers and drug stores in Midland. You will need a plastic pail and mesh sack (such as an onion sack). Use one pound of the chemical dissolved in one gallon of water. Place very dry pine cones or wood chips in the solution and soak for 10 minutes. Remove and allow to dry overnight for best results.

Already prepared commercial products to produce colors in the fireplace may be obtained by writing to Spencer's Gifts, Suite 101, 1050 Black House Pike, Pleasantville, N.J. 08232.

City, county unite on draw issue

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland and Odessa will continue their clash over Monahans Draw in Austin this week when the city and county of Midland unite forces in tendering their case against the discharge of Odessa waste water into Monahans Draw.

Midland claims the effluent is contaminating underground water.

Odessa disagrees and says it is cleaning up the water.

The draw flows eastwardly into Midland County and south of the city and connects with Johnson Draw, which eventually flows into the Colorado River.

The river is a primary water source for the E.V. Spence Reservoir, which serves Midland and Odessa via the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The draw comes within the city of Midland's extra-territorial jurisdiction. Midland says contaminated water in the draw poses health hazards and threatens the public health.

Midland County contends that the effluent, which is produced by Odessa's two sewage treatment plants, is polluting the underground water zones along the draw, provides a breeding culture for mosquitoes, is causing the lowering of property values, and that occasional flooding of the draw washes out county roads and wastes farm land.

"If you look at it from the perspective of buying a place along the draw and drilling for good, clean, fresh water," Midland County Commissioner Win Brown has said, "forget it."

The hearing — the third in the series — will be before Kaylene Ray, hearing examiner for the Texas Water Commission. It is to get under way at 1 p.m. Monday in the Stephen F. Austin Building.

Evidence submitted in the three-part hearing will be forwarded to the three-member Texas Water Commission, which will decide whether or not to renew Odessa's permits to discharge the treated waste water into the draw.

"We'll be putting on evidence on how, when and where we collected the water samples (along the draw)," said Ted Kerr, a Midland attorney who represents Midland County in the Monahans Draw dispute. Among those testifying on behalf of the Midland effort will be Midland father-son hydrologists, Ed and Joe Reed. David Reagan, first assistant city attorney, has been representing the city of Midland in the controversy. Earnest Casstevens, an Austin attorney, and Joel Roberts, Odessa city attorney, presented Odessa's case for the discharge.

In prior testimony — in July in Odessa and in September in Austin — Odessa argued that the effluent is of better quality than the underground water along the draw and that the water is naturally purified as it moves downstream. Testimony then indicated that the water is fit for agricultural irrigation and for livestock uses.

Odessa is asking the TWC to hike its maximum sewage effluent discharge from 18.06 million gallons per day (mgd) to 22.5 mgd.

Midland has suggested that Odessa, like Midland, use its effluent for irrigation and not discharge into a draw to get rid of the waste.

Under order of the TWC, Midland is building a 35-inch pipeline to the Spraberry area southeast of Midland. There, holding ponds will be built to contain the water, which will be used in irrigating crops in Midland and Glasscock counties.

"If the commission renews the (Odessa) permits, ol' Win Brown is going to be most unhappy," said Brown, who has planned to attend the hearing this week.

In contesting Odessa's quest for renewed permits, Midland County has spent about $124,000 in hydrological studies and legal fees. Odessa says that Midland's legal crossfire has cost that city about $100,000.

Unequaled tragedy

There is no "better time" for tragedy. Unexpected death brings with it heart-rending sadness for loved ones, friends and associates whenever it comes. But when it comes during the holiday season, surrounded by beginnings of the joyous yuletide, tragedy is even more tragic.

So it is with the deaths of eight persons who perished in a plane crash at Midland Regional Airport during the dark hours of Saturday morning. Of the eight, six were staff members of television station KOSA, a seventh was assisting in their coverage of Midland and Odessa football games the evening before and the eighth was piloting the craft.

It was a tragedy without equal in Midland-Odessa aviation history.

The tremendous loss of human life and talent being experienced by KOSA is exceeded only by the sadness felt by the families of Gary Hopper, Jeff Shull, Bruce Dyer, Edward Monette, Brent Roach, Bobby Stephens, Jay Alvin Price and Keith Elkin.

All lived in Midland or Odessa and many, many lives will be touched by their deaths. It is doubtful the Thanksgiving-Christmas holiday season ever will be quite the same for those loved ones.

To the families, friends and working associates of all the victims, our hearfelt and sincerest sympathy.

Nuclear poker

Negotiating arms reductions with the Soviet Union is so much fun. It's a lot like playing basketball: Mastering the dribble gets you started, but that isn't all there is to the game.

Earlier this week the Soviets walked out of talks in Geneva aimed at limiting intermediate range nuclear forces. Then, on Thanksgiving, Soviet President Yuri Andropov announced plans to enlarge Russia's nuclear arsenal at home, in Eastern Europe and at sea, in reply to deployment of more U.S. missiles in Western Europe. The negotiating process has suddenly ground to a halt.

While it might appear to casual observers that the United States and Soviet Union are edging ever closer to the brink of another Cold War, in all probability it's nothing more than arms negotiations-Soviet style. Not long ago a Soviet dissident noted that if you want to come out ahead in negotiations with the Kremlin leaders, go to the table with more than you need in bargaining chips and be prepared to give up something.

No doubt President Reagan's arms buildup rhetoric was stimulated in part by honest concern that America had become too lackadaisical about its military preparedness. But most probably he also was wanting to accumulate some additional bargaining chips. While some of those chips probably are justified, some undoubtedly are why President Andropov feels put upon.

The retaliatory steps outlined by President Andropov obviously are unacceptable to the United States, just as the Euro-missiles are to the Soviets. But the increase in tensions actually should work to the advantage of arms negotiators. As President Reagan noted it's doubtful the Soviets will stay away from the bargaining table for long because a nuclear confrontation between the two superpowers would be to the benefit of neither country.

The real game is not basketball but high stakes bluff poker. And right now both sides are bluffing.

Fearing the public

Common to the diverse readings of Sunday night's exercise in national nuclear consciousness-raising is a certain assumption that the American people will draw the wrong lessons from the film. The administration's response to "The Day After" indicates a fear that the public will be the readier to find fault with Ronald Reagan's nuclear policies, or even to start disarming unilaterally. Others, hoping to use the film to mobilize public resistance to those policies, worry that it will induce despair.

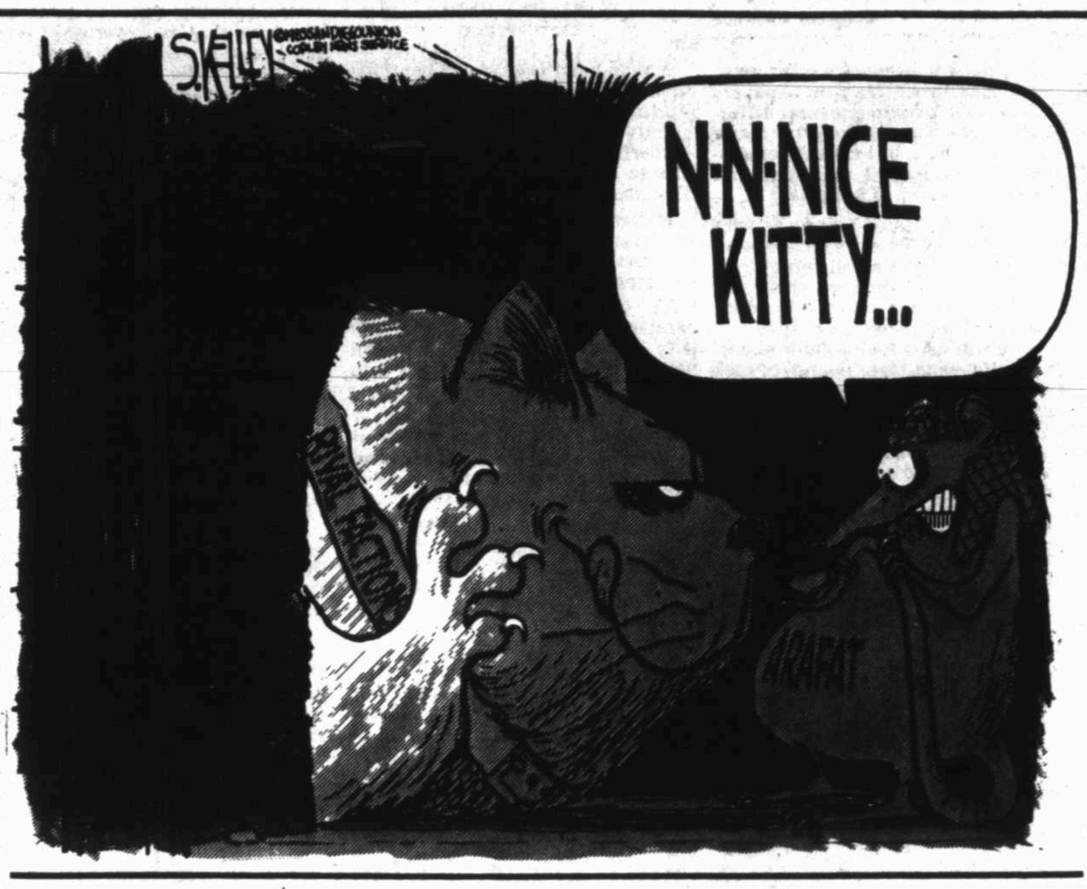

Anxiety that "the people" will stampede in the wrong direction as a result of this or that event in the world is chronic in Washington. It is customarily expressed by persons who set themselves a bit apart from "the people." It is customarily wrong. Just in the last few months, some people feared that Moscow's downing of the Korean plane would stimulate a mindless craving for revenge. Others thought the apparent success of the Grenada invasion would stoke an immediate demand for riskier attacks elsewhere. Still others thought the disaster in Beirut might provoke a retreat to Fortress America. None of these premonitions has yet come to pass.

The likely impact of "The Day After," we suspect, will be deep but not dramatic. The film was a flawed but realistic projection of one nuclear scenario. We would call it a useful and necessary projection. Officials feel its effects will only complicate their work. They solicit sympathy for having to carry the heavy burdens of policy-making in an open society. But they should be studying the public's concerns more closely. The Reagan administration has conspicuously failed to convince a large part of the people that it respects its anxieties about nuclear war. It has let a gulf grow between its definition of geopolitical necessity and the visceral feelings of millions of citizens. In that gulf lies the appeal of "The Day After."

It is not simply that some of Mr. Reagan's policies are controversial. He has brought controversy to policies that were previously acceptable. He was not the first, for example, to try to strengthen deterrence by making some preparations to fight a nuclear war. Nor did he originate the idea of putting new missiles into Europe. But in his hands such matters have whipped up political storms. The explanation does not lie in some failure of public understanding or will. It lies in Mr. Reagan's failure to realize the overall cumulative effect of his acts and words.

It is essential for citizens in a democracy to understand in full the nature of the awesome weapons deployed for their defense, and it is no less essential for their elected leaders to respect the sensibilities of those in whose name they hold such humbling power.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Jackson may lack ethnic support

By Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jesse Jackson, bless his heart, has succeeded singlehandedly in lifting the Democratic presidential race out of the terminal doldrums that threatened to bore us all to death.

Jack Anderson

He doesn't stand a chance of winning the nomination, of course. But he hopes his "rainbow coalition" of minorities, women and the poor will catch the party's attention — like the two by four that is the traditional way of getting a mule to move.

Jackson's credibility as a political power broker will depend on how successful he is in wooing two of the most effective ethnic segments among Democratic Party activists: Jews and Hispanics. If he can capture their loyalty and translate it into delegates, he'll be someone to reckon with at the San Francisco convention.

There's a serious obstacle blocking Jackson's appeal for the hearts and minds of Jewish voters. He has been linked, perhaps unfairly, with Libya's ferociously anti-Israel dictator, Muammar Khadafy. Unless Jackson can refute the Khadafy connection, he'll make no inroads with Jewish voters.

When ex-President Jimmy Carter's brother, Billy, was forced to register as a Libyan agent at the time of "Billygate," there was strong sentiment in the Justice Department for requiring Jackson to register too. Jackson steadfastly denied having acted as a Libyan go-between. He did acknowledge having written to the Libyan embassy on behalf of a black-owned oil company in Tuskegee, Ala. And he admitted that Libyan diplomat Ali Houderi had made a $10,000 contribution to Operation PUSH, Jackson's Chicago-based, anti-poverty organization, in 1979.

Despite the disclosures about his Libyan ties, Jackson was never ordered to register as a foreign agent. But the suspicion lingers that he was closer to Israel's enemy, Khadafy, than Jewish voters would like. You can expect the four-year-old Libyan connection to be subjected to renewed press scrutiny as Jackson's campaign progresses.

The Hispanic problem for Jackson is different. Reaction to his candidacy among Hispanic leaders has been mixed. Basically, his announcement just came too late, after many Hispanic leaders had already signed up with other Democratic candidates for the nomination.

In an interview with my reporter Lucas Rivera, Jackson insisted that a black-Hispanic alliance will turn out to be a crucial voting bloc in 1984. He noted that both minority groups can trace their emerging political clout to the 1965 Voting Rights Act and have been developing strength ever since. Now, he feels, they're ready to demand recognition within the party.

"Blacks and Hispanics need to negotiate a convenant with the Democratic Party," he said. "A state like Texas, with 25 percent of the population Hispanic, and blacks in Mississippi, with 40 percent, should never support an all-white slate in the Democratic Party."

My reporter contacted Hispanic leaders who agreed generally that Jackson's candidacy was a good thing, if only because it will make a Hispanic candidacy easier in 1988 or later.

Jackson is seen by the Hispanic leaders as "a very capable individual" with good credibility at the grassroots level. But some observed mildly that Jackson cannot "presume a rainbow coalition until he produces a Hispanic agenda."

One highly regarded Hispanic, Mayor Henry Cisneros of San Antonio, Texas, is already committed to former Vice President Walter Mondale. Another, Gov. Toney Anaya of New Mexico, said Jackson will be greeted warmly in the Hispanic community but suggested that he may have announced too late. Anaya voiced concern that Jackson's candidacy might divide the party and endanger what should be its principal goal: beating Ronald Reagan.

William Velasquez, a savvy, articulate old-line Democrat in San Antonio, predicted this order of support by Hispanics in the Southwest: Walter Mondale, John Glenn and Alan Cranston. In California, he said it would read: Cranston, Mondale and Glenn.

But Velasquez said: "Jackson's approach is not to win the nomination but to attract blacks. He is sort of hitting the party over the head."

Most enthusiastic about Jackson's run was another Texan, Tony Bonilla, chairman of the National Hispanic Leadership Conference. "I think Jackson will change the course of history in our country," he said. "His candidacy could lead to a Hispanic running in 1988."

As for Cubans in Florida, Luis Lauredo of the Democratic National Committee said: "I really don't think he (Jackson) will appeal to the Cuban-American community. Most Cubans are supporting Glenn."

GEORGE F. WILL

Senator only wants law enforced

WASHINGTON — What wonderful squash courts they would make, those State Department offices currently occupied by people who consider Sen. Bill Armstrong (R-Colo.) tiresome because he wants a law enforced.

George F. Will

You might think that even in Washington there would be unanimity about enforcing the portion of the Tariff Act of 1930 that prohibits the importation into the United States of "all goods, wares, articles and merchandise mined, produced or manufactured wholly or in part in any fohas beeuntry by convict labor or/and forced labor." The law has been enforced only once against the Soviet Union (between 1951 and 1961, banning canned crab meat), and you might think everyone would want to enforce it against the foremost user of forced labor. Silly you.

Two months ago, Reader's Digest published an article, based on an interview with Armstrong, concerning, among other things, the forced labor law. Before William van Raab, commissioner of customs, read the article, he, like almost everyone else, did not know the law existed. Van Raab saw his duty to enforce it and drafted appropriate regulations.

In the Dark Ages, prior to the Reagan administration, all van Raab would have had to do was publish the regulations in the Federal Register. But the Federal Register has become a symbol of over-elaborated government, and of regulations issued without concern for their costs. Shrinking the Federal Register has become, not without good reason, an obsession to the Reagan administration, somewhat as the capture of Jerusalem was to earlier crusaders. So now an agency wanting to issue new regulations must convince a review group.

Van Raab's regulations were sent to an assistant secretary of the treasury who sent them higher. Result? Trouble, right here in River City, with a capital "T" and that rhymes with "B" and that stands for bureaucracy.

Representatives of State, Commerce and Treasury departments were not amused. One extremely grand personage at State is said to have "exploded" in exasperation. The hot potato was pitched into the distinguished lap of the SIG.

The Senior Interagency Group contains representatives of State, Commerce, Treasury, CIA and the Office of the Trade Representative. Treasury and Commerce are infested by persons who think that the purpose of government is to get out of the way of commerce. The diplomats — the speed demons who, after the Korean Airline massacre, took just four hours to decide that there was nothing the United States could do — expressed their usual angst about causing friction — frictionlessness being their idea of appropriate relations with almost anyone.

Later, a deputy assistant secretary of state, speaking about the forced-labor law, piously told a House subcommittee that, "Economic warfare is not the policy of this administration." And he waxed fastidiously about the difficulty of gathering "specific evidence" that forced labor was used in the production of a "particular article." Other State officials reportedly worry that enforcing the law against the Soviet Union might require enforcing it against other users of forced labor, such as China and Eastern Bloc countries. Now, there is a worry for you.

Last year this country imported $227.6 million of Soviet products in 13 categories, eight of which coincide with the CIA's list of industries and products in which forced labor is used "extensively." Banning such products would have an unnoticeable effect on the U.S. economy: In 1982, the value of all Soviet imports was less than one-tenth of one percent of the value of all imports. But it would deprive the Soviet regime of foreign exchange vital to its purchases of Western technology for its military machine. The fear that the Soviets might retaliate if the U.S. government enforced U.S. law is a peculiar fear, considering how favorable to the Soviet Union are most U.S.-Soviet trade agreements.

Anyway, SIG asked the CIA for "further study." The game evidently is to try to kill enforcement by stalling. A Treasury official reportedly said that "only a few nuts like Armstrong" want enforcement. Oops.

It took Armstrong just two days to get 44 other nuts, all of them senators, to sign a letter to the secretary of the Treasury, asking that the law be enforced. Also, the Senate passed a resolution in the same vein. During the House debate on the Treasury-Postal appropriations bill, it was made clear that the House was not formally demanding enforcement because the House considers it zany to beg the Executive Branch to execute the laws.

What is zanier is allowing potential squash courts to be occupied by people who think they are competent to negotiate verifiable arms-control agreements, but who think that enforcing the Tariff Act is a task too risky and complicated to contemplate.

George Will writes for the Washington Post Co.

'ART BUCHWALD

Have a subliminal Christmas!

According to newspaper reports, subliminal messages are now being inserted into music played in retail stores to get people to buy things. Several companies are producing tapes for clients which have secret messages in them to attack the shopper's brain and unconsciously motivate him to buy a product he hadn't planned to purchase.

Art Buchwald

I was very skeptical about this information until I went to a shopping mall last Saturday. The music being piped into the mall was Christmas carols, intended to get the people in a holiday mood.

I stopped to buy a chocolate chip cookie, when suddenly something possessed me. While the loudspeaker blared out "We Wish you a Merry Christmas," I blurted out the word "Underwear." Everyone in the line looked at me. I grabbed the man behind me by the lapels and said, "I've got to have underwear."

He pushed my hands away, "So what are you standing in the chocolate chip cookie line for? Go to a men's shop."

I dashed down the mall and stopped a uniformed security guard. "Underwear!" I screamed at him. "Give me underwear." He wasn't sure whether to arrest me or give me directions. Finally he pointed me to a large menswear store at the end of the mall.

Two salesmen were standing at the door smiling. One said to the other, "Here comes another one." Then he said, before I could speak, "Third counter to the left, but you have to take a number and wait your turn."

The underwear counter was jammed with people, all screaming and shouting. I said to a man next to me, "Maybe there won't be any left by the time my number is called. What am I going to do if I can't buy any underwear?"

"Do you need some that badly?" he asked.

"I didn't think so, but suddenly I got this craving for underwear while I was waiting to buy a chocolate chip cookie."

"I came into the mall to buy pizza and the same thing happened to me."

My number was called and I bought 50 jockey shorts and 50 undershirts. That's all they would sell me.

I walked out of the store and stopped to look at an artist doing charcoal sketches of children. While I was watching, someone was singing "Jingle Bells" over the speaker.

The word "Wok" lit up in my brain. My eyes became desperate and I started searching for a wok store. I rushed up to a lady at the information booth, but before I could blurt it out she said, "Woks can be found in the basement of the department store at the end of the building."

"How did you know I wanted a wok?"

"Everyone wants a wok when they play 'Jingle Bells.'"

"You mean you have a secret message in 'Jingle Bells'?"

"Of course. Today it's woks, tomorrow it's wax for your floor."

"I don't need a wok," I said.

"Then put your hands over your ears, and you won't get a message."

"What comes after 'Jingle Bells'?"

She looked at her schedule. "'White Christmas' and home computers."

"I don't need a home computer either."

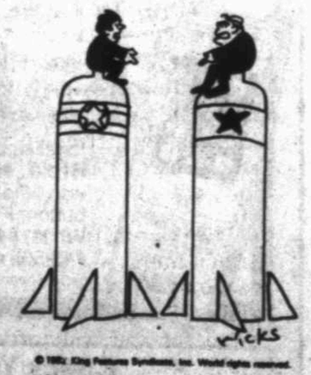

"You don't think you do until Bing Crosby sings it."

"Do I have time to buy a chocolate chip cookie?"

"It depends. After 'White Christmas' they're playing 'Silent Night' and there's going to be an awful crush for hand-knotted Chinese rugs at the end of the mall."

NEW YORK — What a difference a year can make! As Thanksgiving Day of 1982 approached, the nation's economy was slumped in an 18-month recession and preachers of gloom and doom said it was going to continue indefinitely. Today that same economy is alive and kicking and some of our more realistic economists predict it will be even livelier in the months, and years, to come.

This is something we all should be truly thankful for in this season of Thanksgiving. What this says to me is that the people of this country are not of faint heart, but have confidence in their capacity to bounce back from adversity and have faith in the future.

Many facts and figures give us cause for optimism and thankfulness. Among them is the drop in unemployment, which at one time in the past year went above 10 percent. Now it is below that figure. Experts tell us it may go as low as 8.5 percent by this time in 1984. That is pretty good for an area of the economy that always is the last to respond when business picks up.

Housing starts have had their ups and downs from month to month, but the total picture is bright. Last August the house-building business was better than at any time in the past four years. The figure is expected to hit 1.7 million units in 1984. Automobiles may not be selling like hot cakes, but the resurgence in Detroit has exceeded the wildest expectations of most observers.

EDITOR'S REPORT

The sale of goods and services has been on the upswing in the past 12 months. The Commerce Department's latest report announced that factory orders for durable goods went up 3 percent in October. And because of all this upgrade activity, Christmas 1983 is expected to be the merriest in years both for retailers and their customers.

So it has been quite a year on the domestic front, which makes this long Thanksgiving weekend something special. We have had our ups and downs on various foreign fronts, but throughout it all the United States has stood out as a beacon of peace, of peace through strength and good will.

President Reagan did a good job of pointing this out during his recent trip to Japan and Korea. I think it was his most successful diplomatic mission since taking office, and he had a right to be pleased.

The nation owes him thanks for adjusting so well to so many foreign policy crises, the successful Grenada rescue mission being one of them. It hit the headlines so suddenly it took some time for a lot of people to figure out what had taken place. A few columnists and commentators equated it with the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan, an absurd comparison.

What was gratifying was to see so many people applaud the action once they became correctly and fully informed. Most of our allies have come to realize Grenada was an act of a peaceful nation protecting its flanks. An early critic, Speaker Tip O'Neill, said the action was "justified" once he got the facts from a congresskonal investigation team. Another critic, Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, had the courage to change his mind and say flatly he was wrong, for which I admire him.

The year has not been all happiness, to be sure, in view of the number of people who have been getting killed in so many places. My heart goes out to the families of the Marines killed in Lebanon, but we can be thankful this nation, and its allies, are doing all they can to prevent another such tragedy.

This report went to press earlier than usual this week because of the long weekend, so please forgive me if I have skipped any important news that happened in the last few days.

The most important message I can leave with you is that all of us Americans should pause during this season of Thanksgiving to count our blessings, to give thanks for our economic recovery, the many freedoms we too often take for granted, for the many friends we have, and strive to deserve, throughout the world

Despite our troubles we have much for which to be thankful.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Good news

To the Editor:
What with all the problems concerning our banks, streets, criminal system and so forth, I feel the need to make Midland aware there is still good news in this town.

My husband and I attended the Midland High Homecoming Oct. 14 and I had a wonderfully refreshing experience. The "official" where we were sitting was a young man; I presumed it to be his first year teaching. Well, I am in a wheelchair and this young man was so helpful about not letting anyone walk in front of or in back of my chair. It was a delight concerning things that older teachers have permitted or overlooked at previous games.

We talked to this young man after the game and all we know is he is new to Midland, married just 7 weeks and a teacher in shop at Lee Freshman.

I do not know his name but if this letter is printed maybe he will remember and allow me to say a very sincere "thank you" to him for making a possibly inconvient evening very pleasurable. To this man, again, thank you!

Sporting error

To the Editor:
In reference to the article, Rockets vs. Rebs: Tradition at "The Dump," which appeared in the Nov. 18th edition, Terry Williamson stated that "The Dump" has never hosted a local team in the playoffs.

The above statement is totally incorrect and humiliating to the former administrators, teachers, students and football players who worked for and attended Carver Junior and Senior High School.

Since Williamson took it upon himself to write such an erroneous and humiliating article, it seems that Williamson should be man enough to rectify the article instead of letting Ted Battles cover-up for him.

To set the record straight: On a chilly Saturday afternoon during mid-December 1961, Midland Carver Hornets engaged in a playoff game at Midland Memorial Stadium under the auspices of Prairie View Interscholastic League and sanctioned by the UIL. Results: Midland Carver Hornets prevailed by a score of 42 to 16 and captured Class AA State Football Championship.

A violation

To the Editor:
Regarding Lana Cunningham's article of Nov. 15, about nonsmokers inheriting the earth, obviously she has not walked down the streets of Midland during a real West Texas dust storm. I wore contacts for 15 years and I've had more sand in my eyes than ashes.

What really upset me was her sentence "I think the fine for heavy smoking should be the same as for rape." I wonder if any of the rape victims of the world would trade that violation for some smoke in their lungs, nose or eyes. What an offensive statement.

Watch out Gary Ott, Lana may get you yet.

Poor attitude

To the Editor:
Assuming Mrs. Alvarez is only referring to a lack of sensitivity on the part of Midlanders to the handicapped, I am dismayed with her poor attitude toward the people of this community.

Many of us have handicapped family members and belong to organizations that support both us and them as we live our lives day to day. While some citizens do "stare" at and "snub" the handicapped, this is a characteristic not unique to Midland.

In the four years my family and I have lived in Midland, it is obvious to me that this is a good town with good caring people. Granted, not all of them write letters to the editor, but many are "involved" with the handicapped by loving them daily!

It is unfortunate that Mrs. Alvarez has categorized all of Midland as "callous, cold and insensitive." This is an unjust accusation and an insult to many fine, sensitive and "involved" people.

True union

To the Editor:
I am writing this letter to voice my opinion on our nation's attitude on trade unions.

The idea of unions goes back to the very constitution we live by in this country! Then we get an anti-union administration, standing behind Reaganomics. These few government people, if they succeed, will take away the only lobbying voice of common people in this great nation.

The trade unions, I'll admit, have as many corruptible people as any other walk of life. If the people of our country would work together we could decrease the level of corruption, which would be a far better option than abolishment of the trade unions. This would mean slave wages, poor work hours and conditions for the American public, which is something I believe the people of this nation could or would not accept.

I'll close for now on these notes: "We the people in order to form a more perfect union."

Weather or not

To the Editor:
It is a common occurence that we get poor weather forecasting service. A case in point — Thanksgiving Eve it was supposed to get down to the mid 20's whereas it dropped only to 38.

To complicate matters our local media vary widely on any given day in thier weather reports depending on interpretation of the U.S. Weather Bureau information.

Not long ago, President Reagan suggested that we might do away with the U.S. Weather Service and allow the private sector to perform this. Gulf coast industry has for many years relied on private weather service for hurricane and other adverse information. I can't help but think we'd be better off nationwide if President Reagan's recommendation was affirmed and save a whole lot of taxpayer's money and have much better weather information service in the process.

Readers' views on: 'The Day After'

Suckered in

To the Editor:
Well, the day after "The Day After," I have to confess my own prejudicial error. Usually I manage to avoid being "suckered by devious promotional hullabalu; but this time, I joined some 75 million Americans in wasting a couple of hours out of my Sunday evening watching just another (yawn) pseudo-shocker.

Yes, I was one of those irate millions who sat braced for one of the most blatant and "explosive" propaganda devices of the century. I had already emotionally indicted America's top-rated network for insidious, "un-American", "better-red-than-dead" propaganda games. But, to my intertangled exasperation and relief (ho-hum) ABC is just playing the same old "TV ratings" game. And some 75 million of us went for it, "hook, line, and sinker."

All the pre-show "controversy" was really pretty sharp showmanship. I even went so far as to start my own personal "blacklist" of "subversive" sponsors. But, of course, the sponsors all saw a preview of the film; and those who recognized it as a "mass-appeal" gimmick, just got in on the "gravey." (And that is "free enterprise" at work!)

As to the "worth" of the film: well, it was roughly on a level with "Jaws" and "Amityville." (Please note: I do not compare it to such works as "Towering Inferno" and "Titanic" because they both offered the viewer high quality individual performances — which this TV "dud" sorely lacked.)

The most conspicious "loser" was the script itself. It was probably intended as a profound "dramatic statement"; to that end it was a complete and dismal failure. The "scenario" was thin and "unestablished" to the point of buffoonery.

Henry Kissinger (during the discussion period) summed it all up very well with, "The film says: Nuclear war is unacceptable to the human race and we've all known that for 30 years."

If ABC was really thinking "public service" (rather than "rating" gimmick) they should have shown 15 minutes of their "afterblast" footage, to make a "statement," instead of two hours of well-worn visual and verbal cliches; then devoted the rest of the time to question and discussion. There might have been some real benefit.

"WE COULDN'T WATCH 'THE DAY AFTER'... TV WAS ON THE FRITZ... DID YOU WATCH IT?"

Right reaction

To the Editor:
Anyone watching Nov. 20th's showing of "The Day After" could have had one of two reactions. Obviously the producing media and the sponsoring businesses' intent was the reaction of mass hysteria. It was meant to scare the pants off every man, woman and child who watched. Mass fear of a nuclear holocaust — knee jerk reaction to nuclear annihilation without lines to call in case of uncontrollable fear — all a hype meant to brainwash all watchers to the potential horrors of a nuclear build up.

I prefer to react in a positive way. Yes, nuclear attack is incomprehensible, although prophetic, but this telecast could serve as a warning of what could happen should the U.S. not step up their nuclear arsenal to surpass that of any aggressive enemy. I prefer to positively recognize the need of a "high frontier" method of deterrence to nuclear attack. President Reagan touched upon this mehtod in his telecast last March. Now is the time to pursue that safe method of nuclear deterrence. At the same time, we must at least stay abreast with any aggressor with a nuclear arsenal of our own.

I hope each viewer of "The Day After" chose to view it as a warning to prepare ourselves and to use the high forntier as a clean defense against attack rather than stampede into a defeatist attitude of laying down our arms and resigning ourselves to a nuclear holocaust — unprepared and defenseless.

Clear as water

To the Editor:
I feel I have to respond to the recent attention focused on the threat of nuclear war. This is an apolitical opinion, expressed from one human being to fellow human beings. I ask you to stop and be thankful the next time you pour a simple glass of clear clean water. The next time you look at the sun and it is through a clean atmosphere, and it warms your arms: be thankful.

We have a responsibility. We can no longer blame and/or rely on the big unknown "they" when it comes to the future of the world. We are "they." We are too well informed and intelligent a people not to take our share of responsibility for our future. We have a responsibility to each other, our children, and to God who carefully created our world, to preserve it, in its present beauty. We each individually have the responsibility to work every day for world peace in our own way, be it small or big. No effort is too small. As in the act of pouring a glass of water, which is no big deal, done many times a day, yet making the difference in life or death, so is our effort for world peace. Let's go America! With God's help let's save and keep our world. I ask you to think about it the next time you drink a glass of water

I'd rather die

After watching the television movie "The Day After," I still say I would rather die in a nuclear war than live under the oppression of the Soviet Union (which is what is going to happen if the United States is not able to defend herself).

BILL MODISETT

Prevention true nuclear question

Bill Modisett

In years gone by, at another newspaper, other newspeople and I played a game that went something like this: "If THE bomb was dropped and you weren't killed, where would you go to be safe?"

We all had our plans. John claimed that anywhere in the Big Bend would be safe from radioactive fallout because of the pattern of prevailing winds. Rickey said he'd head for Carlsbad Caverns, certain that life in a cave couldn't be all bad. Tom felt you could survive where you were provided enough uncontaminated food and water were present.

To be completely honest, I didn't know. I wasn't particularly confident that survival would be at all possible wherever you were when doomsday arrived. In fact, I wasn't particularly certain that survival would be jeopardized. After seeing "The Day After" last Sunday, with 75 million or so friends, I'm still not so sure survival after a nuclear exchange is the real question.

The matter of surviving in the rubble of a world like that depicted on ABC's movie would pre-determine your actions. If you're anything like me, you would go where you had to go and do what you had to do in order to survive. Most people do not comprehend the depth of man's survival instinct because in our soft world that specific instinct is rarely called to the surface.

But it's there; it exists. If it came to a question of killing or being killed, I would kill without hesitation. A lot of other people would too. Survival, you see, is a personal matter, whether a person is confronted with death by drowning or from being lost in a wilderness setting and facing the possibility of starvation or from being the sole survivor of a plane crash on a snow-covered mountaintop.

The people who survive a nuclear exchange of the magnitude of the one on the movie will be the individuals who face facts, realize that the rules of game have suddenly changed and do what they must to stay alive.

The "real" nuclear question is not how do we survive an exchange but how do we prevent that exchange from occurring. And that's the trick. The world now is locked into the reality that nuclear technology is not going to go away. Man has gained the power to destroy himself and all that remains is the question, "Will he?"

Nuclear war can occur at one of a number of levels, all of them below the level of ultimate destruction shown on "The Day After." None of the levels is desirable, of course. But my point is this: If nuclear war does occur, chances are it will be very survivable.

I'm not a fatalist. I like to consider myself a realist, and on this subject I believe a nuclear exchange will occur at some point in the future. It won't be too similar to that depicted in "The Day After," an over-hyped movie of doom.

What will happen, I believe, is that some Third World potentate with more title than brains will make the mistake of launching a relatively small nuclear strike on the United States. He'll be greeted with more retaliation than he bargained for and suddenly find that his homeland has become nothing more than a smoking indention in the ground.

Then, if man is truly intelligent, he'll sit around for years and ponder the destruction he has wrought. He might even devise a better way to solve his differences.

At least we had better pray it happens that way. Even Carlsbad Caverns might not be safe.

Bill Modisett is editor of the Reporter-Telegram's editorial pages.

Armed forces choice

As United States commitments continue to grow around the world, the point is being reached where the number of troops in the services are having increasing difficulty meeting the growing list of commitments.

The 2.1 million-strong U.S. armed forces are spread so thin that only 298,000 are based in the United States. The rest are scattered far and wide around the globe, with the biggest number in one overseas theater being the more than 300,000 troops in five divisions of the 2nd Army in Europe.

Especially exposed to a possible Soviet attack are 243,000 American soldiers in West Germany. Also under constant threat of attack are 38,900 U.S. troops in South Korea.

Defense experts are bothered because of the increasing number of commitments in such far-flung places.

The time may not be far off when this country will have to make a hard choice between increasing the number of troops or cutting back on global commitments.

With the holiday season approaching, livestock producers need to be aware of the hazards of marketing animals during this time of the year. Here are a few "tips" for marketing stock during the next few weeks:

—Remember, many local livestock auction markets close over the holidays. It pays to make a phone call before loading up any animals destined for market.

—Most market news reports are also discontinued or skipped certain days during the holiday period. Price information may be hard to find.

—Many ranchers, because of some holiday vacation time, will be spending extra time with their stock. Watch for some possible heavy movements of livestock to markets at times during the next few weeks.

—Christmas and New Year's Day are on Sunday this year and the official holiday is Monday. This normally is a heavy slaughter day — so the supply impact of two Monday holidays this year may be quite substantial.

—Kosher traditions also affect cattle demand. This is especially true when non-slaughtering, Kosher holidays fall close to Christmas holidays. Such conditions can easily cause several days of extremely low slaughter and, thus, drastically affect the demand for cattle.

—Price levels are also influenced by the holidays. In general, if prices for cattle are moving upward going into the holidays, a period of stability usually occurs until the new year arrives. If, however, prices are moving downward, further market weakness during the holidays is a certainty. Fortunately, this year prices should show some strength for the holiday period.

—The demand for red meat is greatly influenced by holidays. Not too many consumers are eagerly anticipating a steak dinner on Thanksgiving or Christmas Eve.

—Use caution in your marketing decisions, is probably the best advice for livestock producers during the holiday season.

Fate of dairy legislation pends Reagan's return to capital

AP Farm Writer

AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON — President Reagan probably will not decide the fate of hotly contested dairy legislation passed by Congress until later this week, according to aides.

The Reagans flew to their California ranch for Thanksgiving and plan to return to Washington on Sunday night. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said it was unlikely the president would sign any of the bills Congress sent him until he returns.

Under the legislation, dairy producers for the first time would be paid federal cash subsidies for cutting milk production by as much as 30 percent over a 15-month period.

The measure also would reduce the government's milk price support rate from the current $13.10 per 100 pounds to $12.50. It would help finance the subsidy program by an assessment of 50 cents per 100 pounds of milk sold.

Currently, dairy farmers do not get cash payments. The market price of milk, however, is supported by federal purchases of surplus butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk, a program that has led to huge stockpiles of dairy products and a record cost to taxpayers of $2.6 billion in the fiscal year that ended on Sept. 30.

Budget director David Stockman and others close to Reagan are reported to be favoring a veto of the bill. The administration had wanted a simple cut in milk price supports as a way of discouraging farmers from producing surplus milk.

The bill, however, includes provisions that freeze tobacco price support levels for two years and provide at reduced prices government-owned grain to drought-stricken farmers and ranchers.

Although dairy interests lobbied long and hard for passage, the bill was fought equally hard by various livestock and consumer groups. The National Cattlemen's Association, for example, fear that as dairy farmers cut production their extra cows will glut the market with cheap meat.

But the legislation also has some powerful allies, including Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., the Senate majority leader, and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and a staunch supporter of his state's tobacco interests.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, who was in Rome this week for the windup of a Food and Agriculture Organization conference, has not announced a recommendation on the dairy bill.

Block's press aide, John Ochs, said on Wednesday that Reagan had until Dec. 3 to sign the bill. If he doesn't, with Congress in adjournment, the measure would be vetoed automatically.

Cotton stockpiles may grow in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts say that U.S. cotton stockpiles could be up two years from now because of a larger crop in 1984 and some dampening of use by textile mills.

This year's harvest is estimated at 6 million bales, down sharply because of drought and the government's payment-in-kind acreage curbs. The cotton carryover on Aug. 1 was 7.9 million bales, making a total supply for 1983-84 of 15.5 million bales.

Cotton use or "disappearance" this season is expected to be about 11.6 million bales, up from 10.7 million bales in 1982-83. That would leave an inventory or old-crop carryover next Aug. 1 of about 4 million bales.

"Disappearance may not continue to rise in 1984-85," says the department's Economic Research Service in a new outlook report. "A sustained large cotton textile trade deficit and competition with manmade fibers could limit further gains in mill use. Increasing foreign cotton production could pressure U.S. exports below this season's level."

What everyone in business should know about changes in telephone service.

As Southwestern Bell Telephone separates from the Bell System, changes are occurring in the ways we do business with you. And it's important that you understand them. Here's a quick look at some of those changes.

TELEPHONE EQUIPMENT

When the Bell System breaks up, the equipment you now lease from Southwestern Bell Telephone will become the property of AT&T. If you want to continue leasing that equipment, you won't notice a big change. You'll simply lease from AT&T. And if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone to inquire about this equipment between now and the end of the year, we'll refer you to AT&T.

Of course, you'll still have the option of purchasing new equipment from a variety of suppliers. In fact, Southwestern Bell Corporation will form a subsidiary which, beginning in January, will market telecommunications equipment and services.

REPAIR SERVICE

After divestiture, AT&T will be responsible for maintenance of your present equipment.

They also will repair single line telephones purchased from Southwestern Bell Telephone before January 1. However, if your purchased set is out of warranty, you'll be charged for its repair. For repair of equipment purchased from companies other than Bell, contact the original manufacturer or retailer.

Southwestern Bell Telephone will continue to repair your telephone line at no charge. However, if you call Southwestern Bell Telephone for repairs and the problem is found to be in the equipment and not the line, there will be a charge if our technicians make a repair visit. And you may still need to contact your equipment supplier to have the problem corrected.

LONG DISTANCE

On January 1, Southwestern Bell Telephone will provide regional long distance service within your surrounding area. But long distance calls outside this area will be handled by the long distance company of your choice.

BILLING

In most cases, you'll still receive one bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone for services previously provided by the Bell System. But each company's charges will be shown separately on your monthly bill. For example, regional long distance calls placed within your surrounding area and handled by Southwestern Bell Telephone will be shown on one page, while long distance provided by other companies will be shown on another*. Special telephone numbers will be on the bill in case you have questions.

YELLOW PAGES

Yellow Pages advertising will soon be handled by Southwestern Bell Publications. Your business will continue to be listed by us in the White Pages. After January 1, a representative of Southwestern Bell Publications will contact you regarding your listings and advertising in the Yellow Pages.

LOCAL SERVICE

Southwestern Bell Telephone will still be your company for local service, so please continue to call us first when you want to establish service. We'll also still be your company for local services like Touch-Tone®, Custom Calling Services, local data networks, ESSX-30 and Centrex.

Southwestern Bell Telephone also will continue to offer the mobile phone service we offer today. In addition, Southwestern Bell Mobile Systems will offer new cellular mobile phone service.

If you have specific questions about your business telephone service or equipment, please continue to call your business office.

*If you have long distance or other services from companies other than AT&T or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you will receive a separate bill from them.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Noise a factor in hypertension?

Dear Dr. Solomon: I worked in a small machine shop for a number of years and I was quite upset when it went out of business. Fortunately, a few months ago I was lucky enough to get a job in a large plant, but the noise level almost goes through the roof and that bothers me a great deal. When I went for my annual physical examination last week, I was told that my blood pressure had gone up. Can noise cause a person's blood pressure to rise? — Hugh, Cincinnati, Ohio

Dear Hugh: Exposure to noise can cause a rise in blood pressure; however, other factors, such as the loss of a job after several years, may also be responsible in your case.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had a hamstring pull for about a month before I went to an orthopedist, and he referred me to a clinic for ultrasound treatment and certain exercises. I had heard of ultrasound for diagnosis, but using it for treatment was a new wrinkle for me. How does ultrasound work when used for treatment? — Cal, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Cal: Ultrasound uses acoustic (sound) vibrations to increase deep tissue temperatures. According to Dr. Joesl A. DeLisa, of the Veterans Administratin Medical Center in Seattle, Wash., ultrasound can be beneficial for chronic conditions but should not be used for acute inflammatory conditions or for those resulting from trauma.

The best results from ultrasound come when it is used inconjunction with a therapeutic exercise program.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father was getting drug treatment for cancer, and then the doctor added radiation treatment. My father is all wiped out after these treatments, and I would like to know if both kinds are really necessary. Sometimes they seem to do more harm than good. — Dan, Atlanta

Dear Dan: There are some kinds of cancer for which a combination of radiotherapy and chemotherapy is superior to either form of treatment alone. It is true that a combination of therapies may cause more adverse side effects than would either form of treatment alone; however, the question is whether the benefits of the combined treatment outweigh the disadvantages.

You should feel free to discuss your concerns with your father's physician, but bear in mind that intensive treatment may be necessary in some patients even though it may result in adverse side effects.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Please allow me to add some comments to your recent reply to the question regarding athletic activities for physically handicapped children.

Our son was born with no right leg and absence of his left femur. However, he has been swimming since a very early age (he is now 17), being taught at the school he attended. His swimming endurance and capabilities are far above his male counterparts, those who are physically normal. He has been playing wheelchair basketball for the past several years and has traveled as far as Toronto, Canada, to participate in basketball. Track and field competition is commonplace for him and he's received many trophies for some.

Given the opportunity and encouragement, physical handicaps can be overcome. — Mrs. M.M.D., Philadelphia, Pa.

POSITIVE THINKING

You can make it if you have hope

A man stopped me on the street.

"You don't know me," he said, "but I have been reading your column. You write about how great life can be for those who live by certain techniques. What you say sounds good, and it may be true of some people. But there is no possibility of life being anything like that for me."

"How come?" I asked. "You're a human being like everyone else. Why don't these things apply to you? Something must be wrong either with you or me or with both of us if the simple principles of effective living won't work with you."

"Listen," he exclaimed with a note of pathos in his voice, "please tell me how life can be any better for me, in the face of all the troubles and failures I have."

I asked him what these could be that were so unique they couldn't be overcome. And he told me about them for fifteen minutes or more of impassioned negativism. Actually I never heard anything like his eager acceptance of failure. Finally, he sadly concluded, "Well, that's it. I haven't anything left but hope."

That's wonderful," I told him excitedly. "That's great! Congratulations!"

"What are you congratulating me about?" he asked in surprise.

"I'm congratulating you on the fact that you have hope, that you're down to hope. You've finally cleared everything else away and you're down to that dynamic, vital, tremendous force called HOPE. But do you really know how to hope? If you do and can make hope work for you, you can go on to some real success in life."

Then I tried out on him a line of thought recommended by Bernard Hakldane, a friend, who has had considerable success in personal counseling. He once pointed out that we should learn from our successes rather than from our failures. Of course, we can always learn something from failure if we keep our wits about us and really think. But the important thing to learn from success is this: Once you have achieved a satisfactory result, stop and ask yourself, "Now how did I do this so well? Exactly what steps did I take to get this good result?" From failure we learn what not to do; from success we learn what we should do. One is negative, the other positive.

So I asked this man if he had ever had any success at all. "Sure," he answered, "years ago, I was quite successful." And he began to tell me about his past achievements. When he got on this subject and he warmed up to it he showed evidence of marked enthusiasm. As he spoke, I broke in with comments such as: "That was wonderful the way you did that! Why don't you do something like that now?" I tried to make him see that he had ample sources of know-how. At least I gave him some hope, and that in itself is creative. In fact, hope is vitally important.

Jamie Fiske's birthday 'celebration'

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — Liver transplant patient Jamie Fiske celebrated her second birthday at home Saturday at a joyous party her father said belonged to all who helped give her a second chance at life.

"It's a real celebration. It's a celebration of all the hopes and dreams we've had for her," Charles Fiske said in a telephone interview, speaking loudly to be heard above the din of partygoers.

"If you were here now, I think you would have difficulty picking her out of this whole crowd of kids," he said.

About 60 close friends of the Fiskes gathered at their southeastern Massachusetts home.

"COMPROMISE HAS NEVER BEEN MY STYLE..."

"...So when I moved to Midland, Oakridge Apartments was the only logical choice. As far as I'm concerned, there's not a better community around. Oakridge is brand-new. It's in an ideal location. It's very well-managed. Plus, it has the extras other communities don't. I love the indoor spa and sauna, and the community clubhouse and pool. And the custom kitchens with built-in microwaves, woodburning fireplaces and great storage are features I simply don't want to be without. The quality, of course, is uncompromising. Like me!"

1- and 2- bedroom and 2-bedroom studio apartment homes are available now. Take Loop 250 to N. Holiday Hill Road and look for the giant American flag.

"The quality of the apartment is much better than any others I've seen in Midland."

Mary and Perry Nelson talk about The Clusters:

"The extras included seem like a real bonus. We're former homeowners, so it takes a really nice apartment complex to satisfy us."

"I have a lot more kitchen appliances than I ever did in my own home. Dishwasher, trash compactor, garbage disposal, side-by-side refrigerator, built-in microwave, washer and dryer."

But that's not all. You also get French doors to patios/balconies, mini-blinds, ceiling fans and your choice of wall coverings.

Plus unmatched amenities such as luxurious clubhouse, two pools with Jacuzzis, lighted tennis courts, 4-station jogging trail, aerobics classes and exercise room.

Come and visit and you'll see why the Nelsons' say, "There have been many days we've come home and said, 'They've really done it again, they've gone first class.'"

The Clusters. Midland's finest adult community. Special pricing now available.

HOW TO GET A DECADE OF PROTECTION BUILT INTO YOUR NEW HOME.

HOW

When you see the Home Owners Warranty symbol on a new home, it means you're getting the best protection of all. You're protected against workmanship and material defects the first year. Defective wiring, ductwork and piping in the second.

And your home is protected against major structural defects that vitally affect the use of your new home for the full 10 years.* Your builder can give you all the details, including the reasonable exclusions.

And the HOW 10-year protection program is included in the cost of the home.

So look for the HOW sign when you shop for a home.

And get the kind of built-in protection that makes a home feel comfortable for a long, long time.

Home Owners Warranty Corporation
Warranty and insurance coverage applies only if the builder properly enrolls the home and is in good standing with HOW at the time of settlement.

WILL YOUR BUILDER GIVE YOU A 10 YEAR WRITTEN WARRANTY? THESE BUILDERS WILL. CALL ONE TODAY.

How Safe are They When You're Gone?

You're gone. They're home alone. A problem? Who would be there to help? At a planned community like Buckingham Place secured estates this wouldn't be a problem.

A six foot six inch solid cedar and brick fence offers privacy and prohibits trespassing. The security gate and guardhouse limits unauthorized access to the estates, while ample lighting in the common areas provides safety and peace of mind.

An unsecured community is like an unlocked door... A mistake.

'Symphony of Fashion'

Oscar comes to town

By Lisa Gerlock

Before he was a designer, "I was a baby in my mother's arms," Oscar de la Renta said in a his heavy Spanish accent but with a serious resonance.

"I wanted to be a painter. I studied at an art school in the Dominican Republic."

Perhaps it is his experience with color that paved the way for him to become one of the few designers implementing bold colors for spring 1984.

He's "very much looking forward to" his second visit to Midland, he told the Midland Reporter-Telegram in a telephone interview from his Manhattan office. De la Renta, in conjunction with Julian Gold, is featured in "Symphony of Fashion," a benefit for the Midland Symphony Guild Dec. 7. He's bringing his complete spring and cruise collection — colors and all for the event, which also marks ClayDesta's first social occasion.

New York has been reporting that de la Renta is one of the few designers to use bright and bold colors for spring.

Though de la Renta is known for his use of color, he said, "I haven't used it for the last couple of seasons. I didn't know I would be the only one (designer) using color — I had no way of knowing. But I love color."

His hemlines are also reportedly higher than other name designers — most of them just above the knee. "I like them above the knee. It's so natural for a female and a narrow silhouette." And, though he said the shorter hemline lends itself to the spring season, he doesn't see hemlines shorter than just above the knee. "Some of the styles are still longer lengths," he said. "With so many different points of view, length is not an issue."

Navy and white are a popular combination for what de la Renta calls a "young looking" nautical style.

Ruffles, "inspired by," he said, his new perfume titled Ruffles, are another popular release for spring.

One of the more publicized designs in his spring collection is a tropical evening suit with a three-dimensional stuffed sequined parrot head peeking over one shoulder of the jacket. Tagged "less successful of his collection," and "the silliest," by the Dallas Morning News, de la Renta said it was designed "in fun. It's a conversation piece. You can take the jacket off and have a very nice evening gown."

In Madrid, he studied art at the Academia de San Fernando. He began his painting career creating fashion illustrations. He soon joined the staff of AISA, a Cristobal Balenciaga couture house in Madrid. De la Renta became an assistant for Antonio Castillo, of Lanvin-Castillo in Paris, in 1961. Two years later, he joined the Elizabeth Arden couture and ready-to-wear collection in New York. In 1965, he became a partner of American Designer Jane Derby. After her death, the company became what is today known as Oscar de la Renta, Ltd.

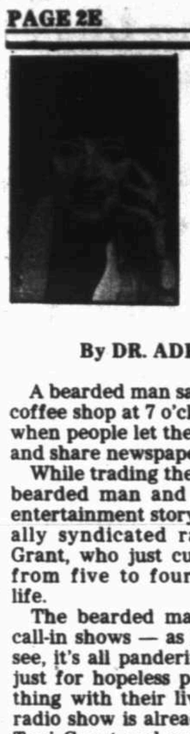

He made a name for himself when he was awarded the "Winnie" of the Coty American Fashion Critics' for his Russian and gypsy fashion themes in the late '60s. Other influential trends launched during that period were his Belle Epoque fashions and his innovative use of transparent fabrics.

He has been awarded for being one of his country's most distinguished citizens by President of the Dominican Republic, with the order of Juan Pablo Duarte, grado Cabellero and the order of Cristobal Colon, grado de Gran Commandante.

Today, more than 80 product lines tote the de la Renta label, everything from high fashion women's wear, men's clothing, luxury blouses, household linens, home sewing patterns, scarves, belts, furs, sunglasses, shoes, loungewear and successful fragrances, sold in prestigious department and specialty stores in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Japan.

De la Renta makes no reservation about announcing what "type" of woman he has in mind when he creates a design. "Any woman who can afford them," he said succinctly.

Though he is 51 years old, and sees no relevance of his age to his profession, he admits he appears much younger in his photographs. "I look 22 because I have a very good plastic surgeon," de la Renta laughed.

AT WORK

Pride in choice of career necessary

By DR. ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

A bearded man sat next to me at a Beverly Hills coffee shop at 7 o'clock Saturday morning, a time when people let their hair down, yawn, sip coffee and share newspapers.

While trading the Sports and Style sections, the bearded man and I talked about a front-page entertainment story — the burnout of the nationally syndicated radio psychologist, Dr. Toni Grant, who just cut her arduous schedule back from five to four days for a more balanced life.

The bearded man didn't think too highly of call-in shows — as I soon discovered. "Don't you see, it's all pandering!" he said. "All that stuff is just for hopeless people who will never do anything with their lives. Anyone who calls in to a radio show is already a victim, helpless, doomed. Toni Grant and every woman therapist like her should get out of the business. After all, divorced women shouldn't pick careers helping others when they don't know what life is all about anyway.

"And I should know," he continued. "I'm a psychiatrist. A woman wastes her time proving she's equal to men, when we all know that what she's best suited for is having children. She should stay home and do what she was meant to do."

Here I was, relaxing, letting down my guard, at home after having traveled to five states during the past two weeks. Nobody I'd encountered in St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia, Boston or Pittsburgh had said out loud such bigoted opinions about the human race as if they were facts. I was shocked to hear it from this Beverly Hills psychiatrist, whose very education should have made him wiser.

Imagine a psychiatrist believing that people are hopeless! Further, imagine believing that the airing of problems, personal or work related, is pandering, promoting soap opera material with only a pretense of helping.

I wondered how we could let this psychiatrist practice on people. It would be a better world if our beliefs were compatible with our careers. No, there's nobody around to perform the litmus test on us, but we could do it ourselves, if we wanted to.

Wouldn't it be terrific if we could each sit safely someplace and examine our own opinions and trace where they came from, determine whether they make sense now, and project whether we should even be in the field we are in?

Imagine a nutritionist who is fat.
Imagine a car dealer who bikes to work.
Imagine a politician who refuses to negotiate.
Imagine a teacher who hates children.
Imagine yourself doing what you do if you have contempt for yourself or others around you.

The only way out is to stop and change. Over the next few weeks we'll see how to reevaluate our lives and our careers.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Plumeria 'hot plant' for container garden

By ELVIN McDONALD

One of the hottest plants growing these days in container gardens is the plumeria, which you might also know as frangipani. In Hawaii its fragrant flowers are used in making leis.

At the center of this interest is the Plumeria Society of America, Inc., headquartered in Houston. If you live in driving distance, join ($10 yearly, $15 for couples), and attend the meetings and workshops. Elsewhere, associate membership ($7.50) is available beginning in March each year. The secretary is Daphne Sealey, 12422 Boheme, Houston, Texas 77024.

A major source for the best in plumerias is Richard Eggenberger. If you'd like his price list, send a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope to The Plumeria People, Box 720291, Houston, Texas 77272.

Unless one is familiar with the plumeria's habits the first crisis encountered is when all the leaves drop off. With the exception of 'Singapore,' these plants are in the habit of going nude through the winter months.

Richard recently sent me some culture notes for growing plumerias in pots. These apply in particular to P. obtusa, which is naturally drawf and therefore suited to pot culture. Its flowers are borne in large masses against a background of dark green leaves. Bloom season is from April to October, when in his words, "they are living bouquets of color fragrance."

Plumerias are multiplied from tip cuttings of mature wood, rooted in coarse sand. Water cuttings once a week. When rooted, transplant to 6-inch pots with a mix of half sand and half well-rotted leaf manure. This promotes rapid root growth.

When the roots fill the pot, transfer to a 12-inch container. Use two parts well-rotted cow manure, one part leaf manure, one part garden soil and a handful of bone meal. Fill the pot bottom with large crocks, then add an inch of small shards; quick drainage of excess water is essential.

Plumerias need full sun in order to flower. Keep pots on the dry side. Richard advises watering about every third day in the active season. During the time of flowering, apply one tablespoon of 17-17-17 every two weeks. Without adequate nutrient levels the blossoms become smaller and plants lose vigor.

Repot plumerias every other year using completely new soil. Trim roots as needed, especially the smaller ones which will grow back quickly in the fresh medium.

In the alternate year top-dress plumeria by removing as much soil as possible without damaging the root system. Sprinkle a handful of bone meal around the exposed roots and then cover with a mix of three parts well-rooted cow manure and one part sandy red earth.

From November to January is the plumeria's resting time.

Researchers win medical awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Five researchers, including two whose study of viral diseases led to creation of the hepatitis B vaccine and may shed light on what causes AIDS, won Albert Lasker Medical Research and Public Service Awards.

Recipients named recently, who also win $15,000 prizes, were:

—Drs. Saul Krugman of the New York University School of Medicine and Maurice R. Hilleman of Merck, Sharp & Dohme Research Laboratories in West Point, Pa; the public service award. Alice Fordyce of the Lasker Foundation said their work on how hepatitis B is spread "has also shed light on the mode of transmission of AIDS, and may lead to knowledge of its possible cause."

—Drs. Eric Kandel of Columbia University's medical school and Vernon B. Mountcastle Jr. of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine; the basic research award.

—Dr. F. Mason Sones Jr., a Cleveland Clinic cardiologist; the clinical research award.

Smoking, heart disease link not well-known

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Many smokers don't know that cigarettes are a major cause of heart disease, even though the link has been reported extensively, an editor of a new U.S. surgeon general's report says.

"We think we have a story here that is not being received by many adult smokers," Dr. John Holbrook said of the 1983 Surgeon General's Report on Smoking and Cardiovascular Disease which was released recently.

The report labeled cigarette smoking the major preventable cause of heart disease.

Holbrook noted that many smokers associate their habit only with lung cancer.

The Salt Lake City internist said the federal government should require rotating labels — warning of other risks as well as heart disease — on cigarette packages.

Without alternating labels, smokers may become complacent about the widely known risk while remaining oblivious to other hazards, said Holbrook.

An estimated 125,000 people will die from smoking-caused heart disease this year, he said. Twenty million Americans now living will die prematurely from heart disease caused by smoking, he said.

"The evidence is compelling and irrefutable," he said.

"I'm a very vigorous supporter of educational efforts," Holbrook said, adding that a poll shows between 40 percent and 45 percent of American adults said they did not know smoking caused heart disease.

Reports such as the surgeon general's encounter "cynicism in the taxpayer," partly because of the federal government's support of tobacco industry, Holbrook said.

He urged the government to monitor adding of flavorings to low-tar cigarettes. No one has tried to determine whether such substances are harmful, he said, adding, "I think that's outrageous."

Home from their respective universities for the Thanksgiving holidays, 15 Midland girls were presetned by the Minuet Club at its annual debutante ball Saturday evening in Midland Country Club. In addition to the presentation, the debs and their families have had a busy weekend with a series of festive parties keeping them on the go.

A "Welcome Home" cocktail buffet honoring Claudia Saxe was given Wednesday evening by Betsy (Mrs. Ed) Dwyer and Carolyn and Bob Winkler in the Dwyer home. On Friday, all the debs were honored at a luncheon given by Jeanie (Mrs. Coley) Cowden and daughter, Amy, at The Energy Club, and also at a waltz dinner party at the Petroleum Club hostessed by the Minuet Club board.

Following their Saturday morning rehearsal, the debs and their fathers were honored at a brunch at the club given by Norma Jean and Bud Boles, Carol and Peter Crain, Kaye and Bill Franklin, Bonnie and Orman Hubbard, Nancy Hull, Betty and Bill Gilmore, Betty and Don Ewan, Nancy and Paul Rea, Nancy and Ed Watts, Diana and Ed Weyman, Ann and Ronnie Williams and Karen and Roy Williamson.

A buffet dinner was given at the club by the Minuet Club board for the debs, their parents and escorts prior to the presentation. Following the dance, a breakfast was given in Angela Essman's honor by Linda and Tom Brandt and Lisa Rambo in the home of Flo and Max Curry.

When the girls return for Christmas vacation, the party whirl will continue and will be climaxed by a Ruidoso ski trip.

FORMER MIDLAND SCHOOL TEACHER, Mrs. Helena Grant, was honored recently on her 90th birthday with a lovely party in the home of Lydia (Mrs. J. P.) Wilkinson. Co-hostesses were Janet (Mrs. Corby) Considine and Jean (Mrs. Aubrey) Reid. The honoree's favorite color of pink was featured in the table decor.

Coming in for the special occasion were her cousins, Ruth and Jamie Crowley of Monticello, Utah, and a long-time friend, Joe Burleson of Brownfield. Remarking that she "had to bring an apple to my favorite teacher," Lois (Mrs. Ken) Carpenter, one of Mrs. Grant's ex-students, presented her a fruit basket filled with shiny red apples.

Mrs. Grant was born in Mills County, Texas, on Nov. 21, 1893. She began her teaching career in 1925 in Odessa, where she became the bride of George Grant. They moved to Midland in 1937, and Mrs. Grant taught first and second grades until her retirement in 1960. She currently serves on the Midland County Historical Commission.

A PARTY HONORING newlyweds Linda and Mike Steindorf was held recently in the home of Chris and Fred Newman. Now at home in Midland, the Steindorfs were marrried Aug. 18 in Dallas. The bride is the daughter of Ruby and J. S. "Sentell" Caffrey.

Co-hostesses for the party were Marilyn (Mrs. Dennis) Crowley and Dawn (Mrs. Don) Matthews. The guests included many longtime Midland friends, among them Cissy (Mrs. Hutchinson) Steele, Betty and Jack Hawkins, Patsy and Arthur Yeager, Georgia Goss Harston, Susan Harston Huff, Alice and Bill Collyns, Leah and Leslie Weatherall, Beverly and Ed Moses and Mary and C. E. Long.

DR. VIOLA COLEMAN was honored recently at a party in appreciation for her 32 years of medical service to the community. She moved to Midland in August 1951 and established a family practice here.

The party, organized and attended by a host of friends, was held at the Kerr Center. Among her many gifts was a trip to Disney World.

Dr. Coleman and her husband, Raymond, a retired schoolteacher, have two children, Conrad Coleman of Midland, a television news reporter, and Reginald Coleman, who is with the Parks and Recreation Department in Nashville, Tenn.

SQUEALS OF DELIGHT, gales of laughter and choruses of "Remember whens?" reverberated throughout the hotel as Pi Beta Phi sorority sisters and I assembled recently at out alma mater - Kansas State University - for a 25-year reunion. Approximately 50 "girls" and their spouses came in from all parts of the country, including both coasts, with a concentration from the heartlands. Among the Texans present were former Midlanders Connie and Jerry Metz of Houston.

Dinners, brunches, cocktail parties and a homecoming game and dance were all part of the busy weekend agenda, but the true highlight was the late night party Saturday, where visiting reached a fever pitch as the time began running out on this once-in-a-lifetime event, and no one wanted to see it end. Memories came flooding back as the alumnae perused old scrapbooks, filled with clippings of college and sorority activities, pictures and other memorabilia.

Reminiscing led us down many diverse paths. There were vivid recollections of the hours spent playing bridge - the collegiate "sport" of the fifties; the cigarette smoke that came pouring out of the one room in the sorority house designated the Smoker, the bothersome pledge duties, the unbendable closing hours, the hair colors that were so different back then and those bitterly cold Kansas winters.

As the weekend wound down and the group began breaking up, some tears were shed and promises made to stay in touch and not to wait another 25 years to meet again.

Huntington's disease genetic pattern found

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers believe they have identified a genetic pattern linked to Huntington's disease that would make it possible for the first time to diagnose the disorder early and tell parents whether they could pass it on to their children.

Until now people who might have the always fatal illness have not been able to find out whether it is silently ticking inside them until symptoms appear, usually between the ages of 35 and 45.

Their offspring have a 50 percent chance of having the disease, and they have had to face agonizing decisions over whether to have children themselves and possibly pass the disease along.

The discovery, reported in the Nov. 17 issue of Nature magazine, should allow doctors to identify victims by analyzing the genetic material in, for example, a small sample of blood.

Those found to be free of the disease can then have children with complete assurance that their children will not have it.

The finding also could lead to detection of the disease in the fetus, allowing parents with Huntington's disease the option of aborting a fetus carrying the genetic defect.

The disease, whose victims have included the late folk singer Woody Guthrie, is marked by progressive loss of mental faculties and increasingly irregular movements.

At least 25,000 Americans have the disease and another 50,000 are "at risk," meaning the ailment may appear with age, according to the National Huntington's Disease Association.

The new research, done by a group led by James Gusella, a biologist at the Massachusetts General Hospital, was first described at the annual meeting of the American Society of Human Genetics.

Gusella's collaborators included Nancy Wexler of the Hereditary Disease Foundation in Los Angeles, Michael Conneally of the University of Indiana and Susan Naylor of the Roswell Park Memorial Institute of Buffalo, N.Y.

Ray White, a biologist at the University of Utah who heard Gusella's presentation at the genetics society meeting last week, said, "It's an extremely important finding, and likely to be extremely useful in this disease."

The researchers studied the genetics of families in Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela, site of what is probably the largest concentration of Huntington's disease victims in the world. All of the victims — some 2,600 since the 19th century — can be traced to a single ancestor with the genetic defect.

Patterns of relationships explored in couple's book

Hearst Feature Service

Psychologist Bonnie Maslin tells a story about a patient of hers who had an affair with a married man. After years of urging, the man finally left his wife. The day that he showed her the divorce papers, she hopped on a cruise ship and left the country. She never saw him again.

Maslin says the woman had a strong, unconscious need to share a man with another woman. When the man was free to marry, the woman ended the relationship. The woman had been through one affair after another, all with married men.

Women who persist in choosing Mr. Wrong are the focus of "Loving Men for All the Right Reasons," a new paperback that Maslin co-authored with her husband, Dr. Yehuda Nir. The book tells the stories of 12 women with failure patterns, among them:

— Vicki, who always gets involved with men who abuse her emotionally and physically. For the 20th time, she asks, "Why do I always end up with the S.O.B.'s of the world?"

— Vivian, who is drawn to men who fail. She thinks she can remake them. When she can't, she feels angry.

— Linda, who is good-looking and popular, but still at home at 30. She keeps picking men who are weak-willed, unambitious.

Maslin finds that faulty love-styles often can be traced to the woman's relationship with her father or other close relatives. The author says some women are programmed for failure.

"Some women may think that they want to marry, but that wish is in conflict with needs that date from childhood. They may have a need to share a man, just as they shared their father's affections," she reports.

Maslin says only by reconciling the recognized wish (for example, to get married) with the unrecognized need (to share a man with someone else) can relationships be normalized.

"The point of a book like this is not to provide answers," Maslin explains. "It's not a detective story that has 'the butler did it' on the last page. It's filled with questions. The idea is to make people uncomfortable. To get them to say, 'Hey, wait a minute. That sound like me. There's something wrong with what I'm doing.'"

Maslin says the impetus for writing the book came when she and her psychiatrist husband were watching Francois Truffaut's movie "Adele H.," based on the story of Victor Hugo's daughter, who spurned a suitor. When he married someone else, she became obsessed with trying to win him back.

"My husband said he knew someone just like that. It was then that we recognized that people have different lovestyles and that it's possible to diagram those love-styles."

"Women are more willing to look at themselves," Maslin says. "Three times as many women as men go into psychotherapy. But that doesn't mean that men have fewer problems," says Maslin.

Maslin admits that her collaboration with her husband and other career activities adds up to about "30 hours a day."

"We've been married for 10 years — we have four children (two are my stepchildren) ranging from 23 years to 7 months old. I loved my husband when I married him, but now I love him more," she says. The workload would be impossible without "a support system that includes a woman who helps with my children and a mother who never says 'no' when I need her."

The couple divides time between New York City and East Hampton. As Maslin discusses her family, there's a strong wave of deja vu. Why is her story so familiar?

Has Maslin read "August," the best-selling novel about a psychologist and her patient? Indeed she has. "Judy Rossner (the author) is one of my closest friends," she says.

Could Maslin have been a prototype?

She smiles. There are "some similarities."

Mexican foods studied

Hearst Feature Service

Tacos, burritos and enchiladas: come on down. You're the next contestants in the federal government's Nutritional Value Show.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is asking burning questions about the nutritional value of Mexican fast food, and will spend nearly $100,000 to find out. Acknowledging the growing popularity of Mexican food throughout the nation, the department has granted the University of Arizona $92,862 to study tacos, burritos, enchiladas and more than 600 other food items connected with Mexican cuisine to overcome the shortage of information the department has on this subject.

The study will run two years, said Charles Weber, professor of nutrition and director of the project. The University of Arizona was chosen because it is located in a heavily-populated Hispanic area — Tucson — and has a large selection of Mexican food available for study.

The first results are expected in six months to one year, Weber said.

Disco queen raises family

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Songstress Donna Summer currently has a special airing on Home Box Office, the pay-TV service, and she still is unpacking from a tour of Europe, but she's not watching herself on TV or looking at press clippings in foreign languages.

The singer, who made disco an international phenomenon and then moved on to more success when disco died, is raising her three children and tending her garden.

"I have maternal feelings toward my children, my husband and my garden," she said. "I read my Bible every morning. My kids are growing daily. That's what concerns me. I got the wild stuff out of my system a long time ago."

Her husband is performer-composer Bruce Sudano, and the children are Mimi, from her first marriage, and Brooklyn and Amandagrace with Bruce.

She has three homes — in Los Angeles, Lake Tahoe and New York. But even her L.A. home is far from the Hollywood scene, in an area traditionally populated by oil barons and bank executives.

"Who has time to run around?" she asked rhetorically. "I have the kids to take care of, and a husband. By the time all that is done in a day, with my work, I'm just too tired."

Donna was born in Boston, one of six girls and a boy. Because there were so many girls, she said she never wanted to be the mother of a boy. She could not have related to him.

Although raised in a city and in a middle-class environment, Donna was never a city girl, she insists.

"My mother always said I should be on a farm," she remarked. "I even studied agriculture in high school. I had my own garden.

"People think a bug is something awful. I always respected nature. I always said, 'Hey, it's a bug. It has a right to be here.'"

Which is not to say Donna wears overalls and has a piece of straw in her mouth when she's home. On the contrary, she has found a balance of a sedate home life and a desire for the finer things.

Airline called 'decadent'

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It isn't easy to bowl over such well-traveled and worldly celebrities as Larry Hagman and his wife Maj or Carol Burnett, but they were won over by Regent Air's maiden flight to Dallas.

Carol described it as "deliciously decadent" and Larry Hagman found himself unexpectedly speechless. Alexis Smith called it the "Occident Express," and her husband Craig Stevens agreed that what has passed for first class is now dated, considering what Regent Air is doing.

U.S. Air Force retired four-star general Mike Rogers is in charge. At the moment there are three 727 planes that owners Cliff and Stuart Periman have bought from Braniff and refurbished to the tune of $10 million.

The cocktail lounge brings to mind the luxurious Maxim's in Paris with its Art Decoesque brass and plexiglass panels. It's stocked with the finest of French champagnes (from Louis Roederer's Cristal to Taittinger's blanc to blanc), California wines as well as sturdier connoisseur-brand libations.

There are staterooms for four, although two people in one stateroom can sleep cozily — and the loo is as glamorous as a boudoir (all it lacks is a bidet).

"Dallas's" Linda Gray, "Octopussy's" Maud Adams and her best friend, plastic surgeon Steven Zax, were also aboard Regent Air's first flight to Texas — although, for the moment, Regent Air is flying between Los Angeles and New York, and vice versa, with forthcoming scheduling that will include Honolulu and Texas.

Along with the fine wines, there's caviar, Scottish smoked salmon, baby lobsters, cold filet of beef before luncheon or dinner is served. Limousines take one to the plane and to one's destination upon arrival. There are a hairstylist, manicurist, secretary and masseuse aboard, along with telephones and computerized Dow Jones averages for busy executives.

The price is high, but Regent Air offers the ultimate in commercial luxury travel, in a Superstar Class all its own.

Carol Burnett, Larry Hagman, Linda Gray, Maude Adams, Alexis Smith and Craig Stevens were flying to Dallas for the Damon Runyon-Walter Winchell Cancer Research Benefit at the Mansion Hotel, with the evening honoring fashion designer Bob Mackie.

Mackie, Hollywood's king of glitz, was introduced by Carol Burnett who said that his brilliant costumes have inspired many of her characterizations.

DEAR ABBY

Man wants to be buried with dogs

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: The more I see of people, the more I love my dogs. I would like to be buried with them, but I can't find a cemetery where people and their pets can be buried together. Is there one? I am 83 and not crazy. — DOG LOVER IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR DOG LOVER: To my knowledge, the only cemetery in the world where humans and their pets are buried side by side is Bonheur Memorial Park, located just outside Baltimore.

The owner, William A. Green, said there are currently about 8,000 pets and 100 humans buried there, with reservations in the hundreds for more.

Bonheur is the final resting place for dogs, cats, hamsters, rabbits, birds and monkeys. An elephant named Mary Ann who lived at the Baltimore Zoo for over 40 years is also buried there. Plans are being made to bury six racehorses — a difficult feat because after a horse dies, it's impossible to fold its legs.

Bonheur offers 24-hour pick-up service in a custom-built pet hearse from home or animal hospital. The pet is brought to Bonheur where it is bathed and groomed to give it a lovely "sleeping" appearance. The pet is then placed in a satin- or velvet-lined casket and placed in the "slumber" room for viewing. For those who want a religious service, a priest, minister or rabbi may be engaged.

For an extra fee, candles will be lighted at the grave of the loved one on the anniversary of his or her birth or death, and on Easter and Christmas. If your pet was Jewish, Hanukkah and Passover are remembered as well.

It costs about $350 to bury an average-sized cat and about $450 for a large German shepherd. A complete interment of a human is about $950. (Human bodies must be prepared at a "regular" funeral home.)

Bonheur was founded in 1935 as a pet cemetery, and in 1979 special permission was granted by the court to bury humans as well.

Some may think that being buried with a pet — or even giving it a "funeral" — is a foolish waste of money. But to many, a pet is a much-loved member of the family and it seems reasonable to me to give it a dignified and compassionate burial.

For more information about this unique cemetery, write to: Bonheur Memorial Park, 7239 Washington Blvd., Baltimore, Md. 21227.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old girl, and I just finished reading your booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know."

As I read through it, I thought it was just an OK book, but when I started reading the chapter on drugs, I thought it was really great!

I have never taken any drugs. I have never even had a desire to try them, but after I read your booklet, it made me absolutely sure that I will never try drugs as long as I live. I never realized how serious just trying drugs out could be.

I hope other kids will read your booklet and learn what I did. Thanks, Abby. I am passing it around to my friends. — NO DRUGS FOR ME IN MAINE

DEAR NO DRUGS: Thanks for writing. Your letter made my day. For those who want the booklet, "What Every Teen-ager Ought to Know," send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

White Burgundy impresses taster

Copley News Service

By acclamation, Chardonnay is the world's greatest white wine, offering opulent flavors when made from grapes grown in California's northern counties and France's Burgundy district.

Yet as popular as California's Chardonnays are in the United States, it is clear that one taste of a great French White Burgundy, such as a Le Montrachet or a Meursault, is enough to turn the head of even the most dedicated Californophile.

One taste of fine White Burgundy (made from chardonnay grapes though the name Chardonnay is rarely used on French wine labels) is usually enough to show that the style is, if nothing else, suited to fine food, and that the subtle complexity is nearly impossible to put into words.

Unfortunately, high demand and tiny production have kept prices for the best White Burgundy high. Two years ago, Le Montrachets were selling routinely between $30 and $50 a bottle; Meursault sold for $25-$40, and up, and even mediocre White Burgundy such as Pouilly-Fuiss was touching $20.

Prices have dropped, yet the upper echelon of White Burgundy remains out of the range of most people.

Le Montrachet, in particular, commands such attention in Europe — mainly England and Germany — that it remains untouchable to most who watch their profit-loss sheets. (Even "cheap" Le Montrachet sells for $25 these days, but I have tasted $25 Montrachets and by and large they're not worth it.)

Yet Meursault (pronounced myrrh-soh) hasn't got the lofty image of Le Montrachet and a recent tasting of 10 Meursaults that are still available proved enlightening, because a few of the best are quite reasonably priced, considering that many California Chardonnays now are selling in the $15 to $18 range.

Without question the best wine I tried recentl had the following unwieldy name: 1979 Clos du Chateau, Comte de Moucheron, Bourgogne Chardonnay, Domaine du Chateau de Meursault. This wine has a remarkable freshness and richness, and superb acidity, and sells for $13 a bottle.

It was made by the well-regarded firm of Patriarche Pere et Fils from young vines planted in 1974 and 1975 in a garden in front of the handsome chateau in Beaune, France. Patriarche bought the property from the Comte de Moucheron in 1973, and Patriarche owner Andre Boisseaux has fashioned this wine in a lighter style than Patriarche's regular Meursaults.

I have not yet tasted the 1980 version of this wine (which is the same price), but according to the importer, Bernard Horstman, it is lighter and less complex, though should improve with another year in the bottle.

I was also impressed by the delicate, age-worthy 1982 Meursault from Rene Monnier ($22), and by the 1981 Meursault Premier Cru from Louis Latour ($21) — the latter exhibiting a fat, yeasty, rich and flavorful taste and a soft finish.

Best values in Meursault were two 1981s — Louis Latour (not the Premier Cru designation, $16), which had a lemon-vanilla aroma and a clean, subtle taste; and Jaffelin ($16), with a clove-nutmeg spice character, and a buttery finish. Both are superb wines and good values.

In a random selection of White Burgundies chosen from wines currently available, I was less intrigued by the following Meursaults, which had flaws:

— 1979 B & G ($14): Steely aroma was offset by a slight cheeseyness.

— 1979 Mommesin ($16): Shellac/paint thinner undertone detracted from good body.

— 1979 Bouchard Pere et Fils ($15): Slight sulfur and "poached egg" aroma detracted from a wine with alluring fruit.

— 1979 Domaine Morey, Clos des Grands Charrons ($15): Ponderous, woody aroma dominated.

— 1980 Joseph Drouhin ($22): Musty, cheesey aroma was bothersome.

The showing of the four above-mentioned 1979s was disappointing since the 1979 vintage was considered very good for White Burgundies.

If seeking White Burgundies on the shelf, I suggest waiting until the 1982s begin making their appearance soon. The growing season was temperate, without frost, hail or rain, and the crop was large, which may have the effect of lower prices.

Advice can help keep credit cards safely protected

NEW YORK (AP) — Credit card frauds have cost the nation's banks $200 million for the year just ending, according to a banking expert.

These losses have become a bigger threat than armed robbery and embezzlement combined, said Leonard De Baker, of the American Bankers Association. To help cut these losses, the ABA has organized a nationwide educational drive that includes the following suggestions:

— Report a lost or stolen card to the issuing bank immediately. The longer you delay, the more time a thief has to run up charges.

— Make a list of credit cards, their numbers and the issuing banks and keep it in a safe place.

— Make sure salesclerks fill in credit card slips correctly.

— Keep card receipts which carry your account number in a safe place.

Study: Exercise helps heart

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Studies on monkeys suggest that people might reduce the clogging of their arteries, thus lessening the risk of stroke or heart disease, by lowering their heartbeats through exercise, researchers say.

Dr. Seymour Glagov told a meeting of the American Heart Association on Wednesday the study found that monkeys on high-fat diets developed less clogging of the arteries if their heartbeats were slow.

Winter good time for gardener

By HENRY MITCHELL
By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A thing to hold on to as darkest winter approaches is that we have our most beautiful skies of the year in winter.

Such is the force of propaganda ("darkest winter") that many people do not notice winter here is brilliant, with skies azure and sun blazing.

In other words, winter is not all that bad, and most of us may survive until spring — a season of quite troubled skies, of ferocious storms, of chilling winds and sudden, terrible heats.

Spring commonly brings the worst weather of the year, and winter some of the best, so I hope gardeners will comfort themselves with the thought and not grumble more than they always do.

Among the chores worth doing, I now believe, is whacking back the roses if they have made long, whippy shoots of some feet. Cut them back to 4 feet, say, and leave the final pruning until late March.

Otherwise, they whip around in the wind and in a great storm may tear the bark of the main stem.

I never hear the fruit of the wild rose, the sweetbrier, praised much, and yet it is handsome enough to justify planting this rose merely for its scarlet red fruits.

In our climate, I confess I never get any smell from the leaves (the main attraction of the plant, since they cast their perfume, theoretically, upon the air throughout the spring), and the flowers, like quarters or half-dollars of blue-rose silk tissue, are not showy.

The evergreen Russian olive, Eleagnus pungens, and its variety, "Fruitland," are reliable for flowering with intense sweetness in November. The flowers are not showy, about half an inch long, like little trumpets made of parchment, but blessed with a lovely smell that carries on the air.

This broadleaf evergreen sends out almost naked shoots as long as 10 feet, and if these are tied in (against the trunk of an old oak, say), the plant soon turns itself into a climber or at least a leaner, and will clothe an old trunk with 15 or 20 feet of sober green all through the winter.

In early spring there are fruits like small, brownish, dotted olives, and birds for some reason are fond of them, though the fruit is mostly hard seed and only the thin skin is edible.

I have gnawed on them myself and feel sorry for birds. But mockingbirds, I see, are mad about them, and this same bird loves to build in an old eleagnus bush.

A plant that used to be fairly common and is now rare in gardens is the Italian arrow, which dies down in the hot weather, but in October revives and sends sharp cones of leaves through the hard earth. These expand to an arrowhead shape and last all winter in considerable beauty.

They are only a foot high, but the deep green is marbled with lighter green, darker green and gray. You grow them wherever you would grow a (related) jack-in-the-pulpit.

I keep waiting for someone to say a good word for the sort of petunias you get when they have seeded about for several years. For gardens we now have great Folies Bergeres-type bouncing beauties among petunias, and I have nothing to say against them, except that I do not ever think of growing them myself.

But after a year or two of seeding themselves about, they wind up with single flowers, intensely perfumed, in a beautiful range of colors from off-white through lavender to muddled rose.

Such petunias try to keep blooming (and sometimes succeed) until January. They also are willing to climb, or at least to scramble, and readily reach the top of a 4-foot chain-link fence, as if they were a flowering vine.

There must be many gardeners who love these wild-type petunias as much as I do. The only way to get them, that I know of, is to steal a few seed pods in November from the plants you admire along alleys.

Does everyone know the toadflax, that humble annual that resembles a miniature yellow and white snapdragon? I once saw an entire bank of it, and it was beautiful.

I sent off for seeds from one of the great research gardens of England and got half a dozen toadflaxes from various parts of the world, but none of these rarities was as beautiful as the yellow toadflax of waste gullies.

There must be many gardeners who have this plant, or have it outside the garden along the alley or near the garbage cans. I hope they will spread seeds around.

Like the common blue chicory, which is everywhere in waste places in Washington, the yellow toadflax is more beautiful than, say, the dwarf marigold, and I have always wondered why it is not grown in gardens. Common, I suppose, and that is against it.

There are some chrysanthemums that only begin to show color about Nov. 10. One that I have is single, like a thin, starry, yellow daisy. Its foliage does not seem to have woes, and while it flops about the ground, it looks fresh and lovely toward Thanksgiving.

Author studies basket weaving

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Some time back, David Burckhalter bought a basket while on a trip to a Seri village in northern Mexico.

Since he speaks a little Spanish and no Seri, he was forced to negotiate with the seller by etching numbers in the sand with his foot.

After a couple of minutes, the bargaining session ended, and the Tucsonan walked away with the basket — and with the seed for a book that he is now writing.

The story is emerging slowly — like the tedious process of binding together torote plants to make a basket.

When it is published, the book will tell in color pictures and text about the craft of the impoverished, largely unassimilated Indian tribe.

"When" may be a year or two, or more, for a variety of reasons.

Burckhalter, 39, who has visited the Seris near Kino Bay, Sonora, regularly for the past decade, works as a commercial photographer and buyer of Seri arts to support his writing.

And there is no pressing deadline for such a text, he concedes.

His last book, "The Seris," which was published by the University of Arizona Press, was years in the writing and more than two years from completion to publication.

The tribe has been making baskets as far back as anyone can remember, unlike the wood carvings for which they are known. The tribe started carving those in the early 1960s, he said.

"Their legends talk about spirits within the torote plant," he said, "and within the large, so-called fiesta (in Spanish) or sappin (in Seri) there's a belief that when they press the fiber, they hear squeaking, and interpret it as the spirit wailing. That spirit has to be appeased, so they throw food to one side, or put corn or some other food inside of it. There are also certain taboos associated with the basket as well."

Book on dealing with parents' visits

Hearst Feature Service

You've just received the good news — your parents have decided to visit you for Thanksgiving or the Christmas holidays. And you've panicked.

You feel dizzy or shaky, you want to faint and you've got this overwhelming impulse to walk out of the house and keep going — somewhere, anywhere.

Your discomfort isn't just because you know from past experience that your mother will criticize everything from the color of your hair to the way your children behave. And your desire to flee isn't just the realization that "here we go again" with your father's dissection of your competency as a money manager, or that he makes you feel incompetent because he won't eat much of what you cook since your mother does it the only way he likes it.

The anxiety comes from all those things, as well as from everything else that's gone before — especially other visits that were heavy with tension, rife with quarrel and about as much fun as having your teeth drilled without Novocain.

You probably feel like you're the only one who's had miserable holidays because of disagreements with parents. Not so, says Dr. Harold H. Bloomfield, a psychiatrist who — in conjunction with Leonard Felder, Ph.D. — has written a book called "Making Peace with Your Parents." It details not only how you can have an enjoyable holiday, but also how to better your relationship with your parents in numerous other situations as well.

Bloomfield, who is on tour promoting his practical, jargon-free book, zeroes in on the particularly stressful holiday period because people already are making plans.

"And they're getting stressed even now just thinking about it, but they needn't be if they begin preparing now for a successful visit, whether at their own home or at the parents."

He believes the first step is to recognize that making peace with parents is going to make life in general a whole lot easier for the adult child.

"Even if the parent doesn't make peace with you, you can give up the struggle on your side if you don't react by buzzing out at what he or she says. Then you've made a start, and eventually the parent will begin to change, too."

He cautions, however, that making peace is a process that doesn't happen overnight. "In the end, when you make peace with them you make peace with yourself, you learn it's OK when they disapprove of what you do or say."

"Next, take a good look at the purpose of the holidays themselves. Thanksgiving, for example, is a time to give thanks for what you have, to acknowledge the contributions you've made to each others' lives — the positive ones."

Then begin practicing ways to alleviate stress in yourself, so you won't become severely depressed during the holidays or, worse yet, a suicide statistic.

One way to alleviate stress is to describe to yourself, perhaps on paper, what you would like the visit to be like and contrast it with what it actually is. Bloomfield says such wishes could include "more love, more understanding, more satisfaction with the way you deal with each other. Now you know some of the problems you have to work with."

Now comes the sticky part for some people — accepting parents as they are, "because they aren't going to change. Your parents had parents, too, and were raised to be the exact parents they are."

Sometimes at this point it helps to get out photos of your parents with their family so you can look at the way they related there, Bloomfield says. "Photographs are useful to start the process of getting your feelings known. Say to the picture in your own mind, 'Out of the love that I know deep down I have for you and out of the love that I know underneath it all you have for me, there are some things I need to clean up with you,'" he writes in his book.

"Before the visit, jot down five or six general statements that press your button, and actually picture her or him saying them to you. Then find alternate ways to react to the statements, by relaxing and shrugging them off or maybe with humor.

Expert: Curiosity vital to humans

Hearst Feature Service

"The Three Little Kittens Who Lost Their Mittens" doesn't quite rank with "Antigone" as one of the world's great tragedies, but experts curious about the emotional lives of children say it usually manages to raise the fear-and-trembling level in the typical 2-year-old a notch or two.

Helen Beiser, president of the American Academy of Child Psychiatry, told the tale to a little niece while she was a young researcher many years go. The tot broke down and cried. Then Beiser did it again, with a similar result.

"My research interests were greater than my caretaking ability," she recalled, acknowledging that the strength of her own curiosity momentarily overcame her concerns about the child.

Medical and behavioral scientists are like that, Beiser said. The compassion they ultimately bring to their profession is secondary to their sheer curiosity — which, she contended, is a universal animal drive as fundamental as sex or hunger but ill-appreciated and ill-understood by lamentably — and paradoxically — incurious researchers.

"Everybody talks about curiosity, but nobody takes it as a special subject," Beiser complained. "It may be more basic than love or aggression, different and probably more primitive. Animals would not survive without it because it's important for getting food — there's a sort of generalized nosing around; they have to find their mother's milk.

"Humans will survive without it, because their parents will feed them. But they won't thrive. Depressed kids don't have it; they're silent and sad. And the phobic child thinks it's too dangerous."

Properly channeled, curiosity becomes a source of pleasure and creativity, said Beiser, a member of Chicago's Institute for Psychoanalysis and a professor emeritus in psychiatry at the University of Illinois.

Freud thought of curiosity as a sexual impulse. His daughter, Anna, believed it extended to infantile interest in bodily wastes. Western culture has represented it variously as dangerous ("Curiosity killed the cat"); a sign of sinful disobedience (Adam and Eve); a prelude to trouble (Pandora's box); and a passport to disquieting though often mind-expanding experiences ("Alice in Wonderland").

Beiser said her colleagues ought to view curiosity in yet another way — as an attitude of "alert interest" that can turn out to be loving or hostile.

"Unregulated curiosity can be dangerous," she said. "When a child comes barreling into my office and tears everything apart, I don't say, 'That's marvelous — he's so curious!' He's actually an uninhibited, impulsive kid who's going to cause society a whole lot of trouble. What I consider normal behavior is the child who comes in and looks around, but before he touches anything asks me if it's all right."

Beiser said that curiosity has a critical role in human development, and noted that there have been reports of mental retardation in babies whose mothers thwarted their curiosity by entirely ignoring them.

In the toddler, curiosity may lead to destructiveness, but parents who take the trouble early to curb out-of-line behavior while encouraging "neutral inquisitiveness" receive dividends later, Beiser said.

Their preschool child is more likely to recognize others' rights to privacy and perhaps is more prepared to move on to expressions of curiosity in trips to zoos, museums and libraries. Once school begins, curiosity takes a giant step forward; children begin to use scientific methods.

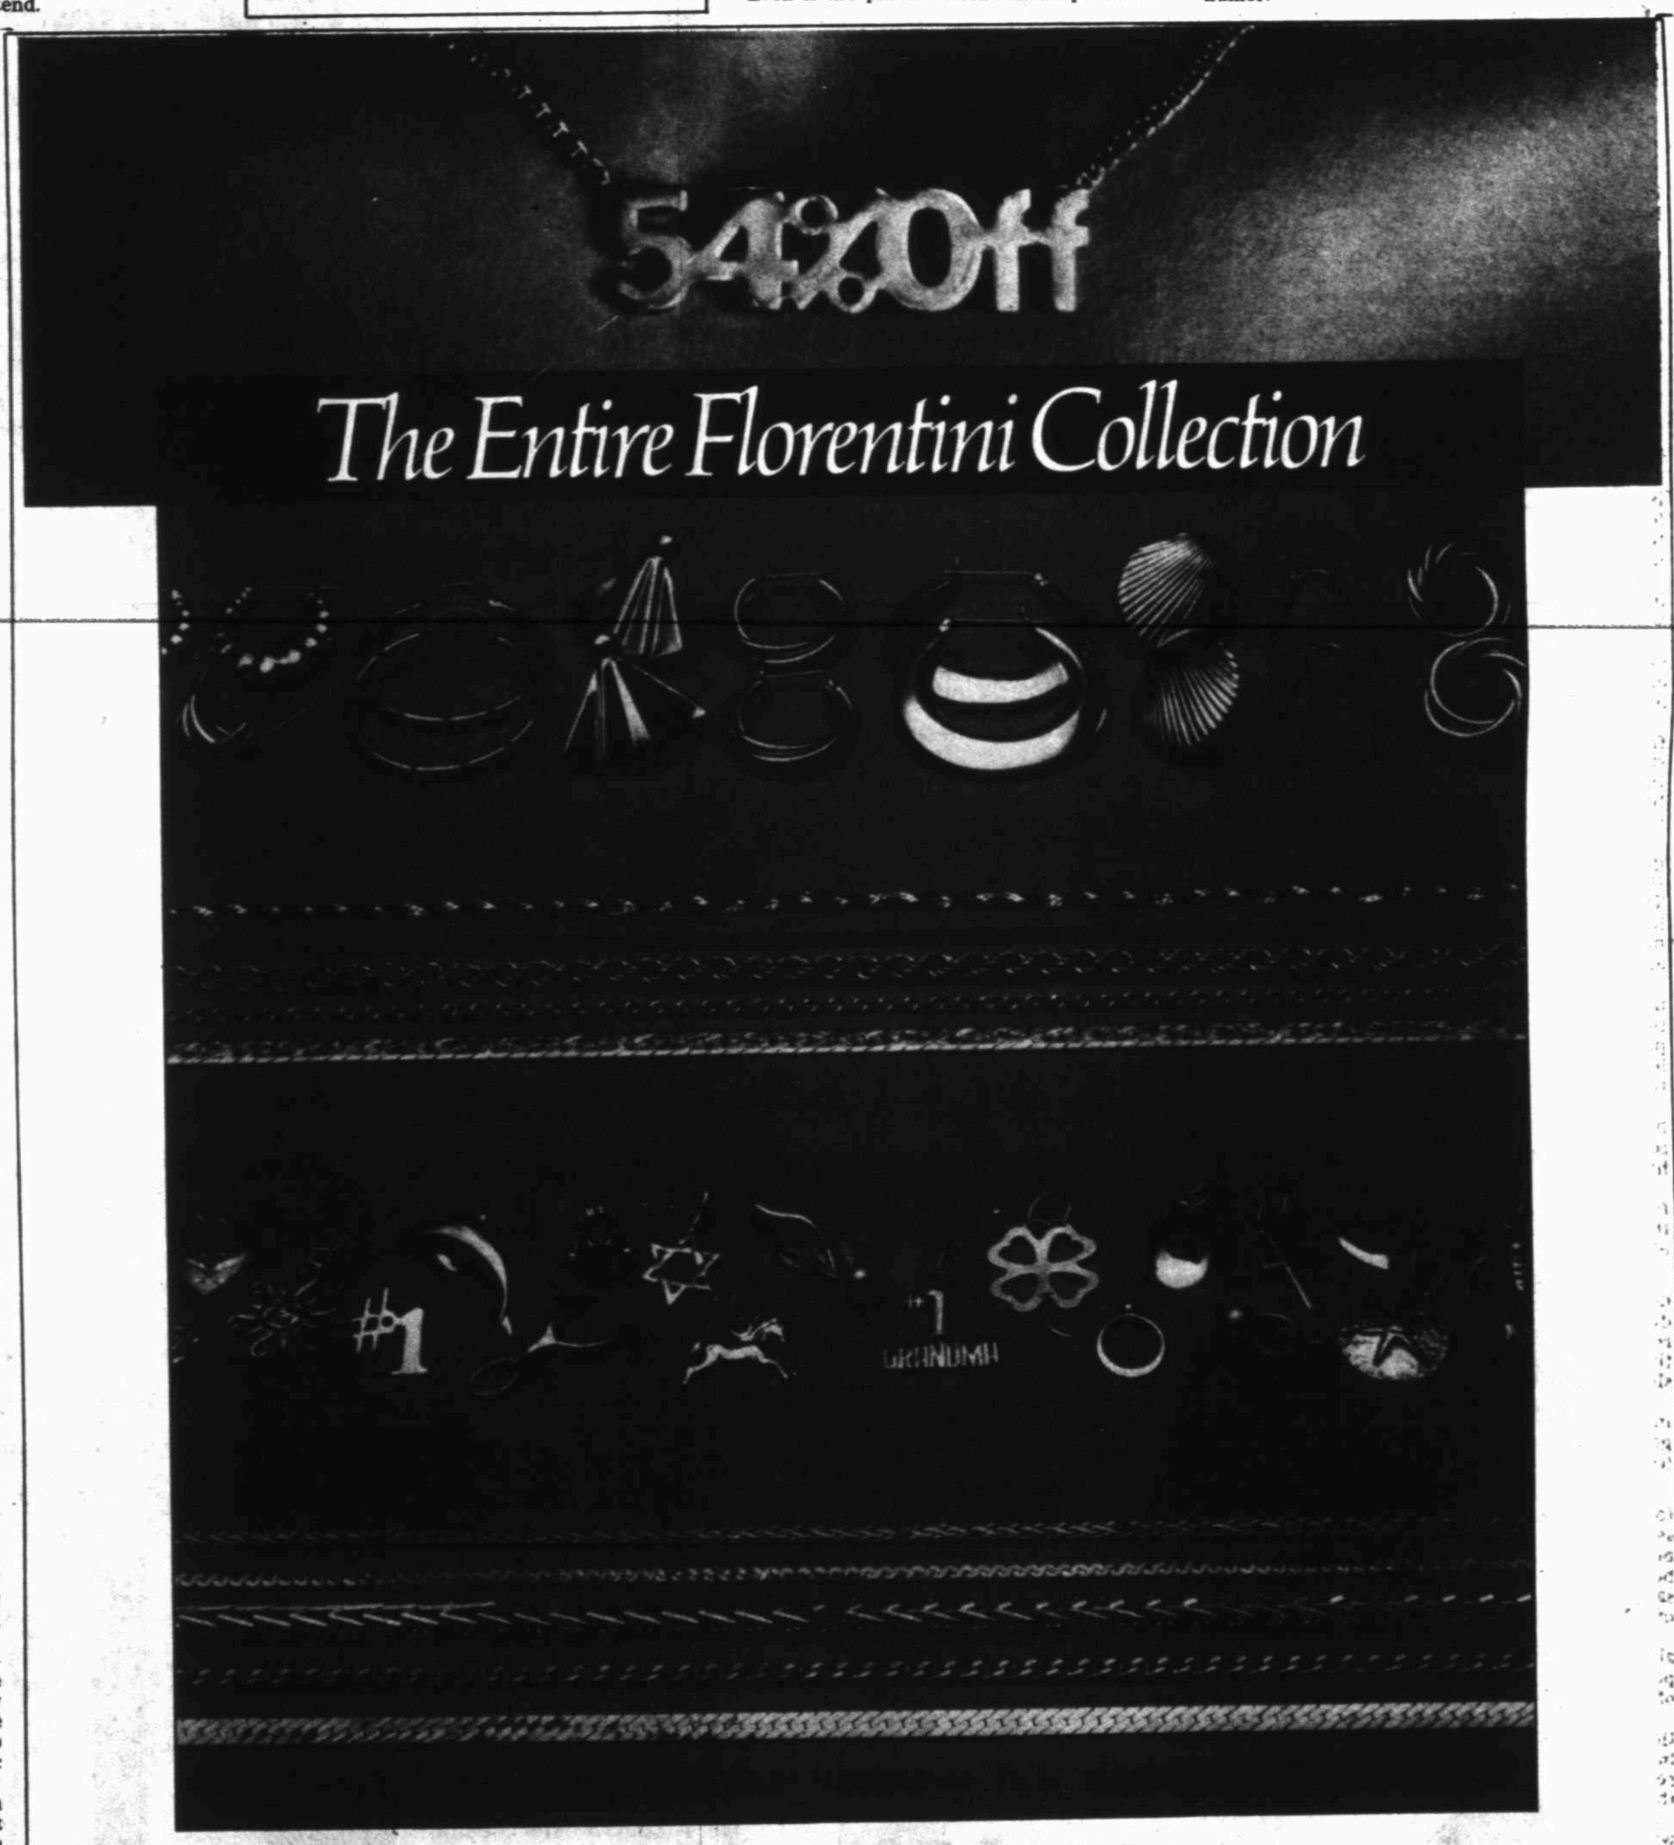

Citing a story told by Swiss psychologiost Jean Piaget, Beiser described a child who, throughout early childhood, received gifts in her shoe from the "Christmas Fairy" during the month of December. In the spring of her eighth year, she placed her shoe on the window, explaining to her mother: "I was testing for fairies, and there aren't any."

In later stages of life, Beiser said, curiosity expresses itself through efforts to broaden one's vocational horizons and to learn about one's own inner life. For some people, however, it takes an anti-social form. Voyeurs, rapists and ordinary gossips undoubtedly are curious, but they also have overstepped the bounds of reasonable, healthy curiosity.

Beiser cautioned collegues and parents to make certain they have appropriate levels of curiosity about children for whom they care.

Some child psychiatrists intentionally do not communicate with their young patients' parents after therapy begins, she said. "They might be missing some important information," Beiser said. "For example, one child psychiatrist told me that he was trying to figure out why a little boy looked so depressed, and only learned two months later that the child's father had died suddenly."

On the other hand, she said, there are parents who are "too eager to satisfy children's curiosity." Beiser expressed doubt about the value of parental nudity before children and the practice of allowing kids to observe their parents making love.

Vasectomy poses no risk, study says

Hearst Feature Service

There's reassuring news for the 10 million American men who've had vasectomies: A new study of 20,000 men shows that vasectomies pose no significant health risk and that men who have had vasectomies actually live longer than those who have not.

The study, sponsored by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, found that men with vasectomies had less incidence of heart disease and a lower death rate than those matched with them for the study — a finding that baffles even the researchers.

"We're not sure why it came out that way," admitted Dr. Gerald Bernstein, a professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Southern California and a principal investigator of the study. "We were only trying to find out if vasectomies were harmful, not if they were beneficial."

Regardless, the study should come as a relief to the one in 10 American males who have had vasectomies, especially after earlier animal studies and clinical reports linked the surgery with heart disease, arthritis, impotence, gout and other disorders, according to Dr. Frank Massey, a University of California-Los Angeles biostatistician who analyzed the data.

In disclosing the results of their six-year study, called "The Health Status of American Men," researchers concluded: "We did not find any evidence to support the suggestion of adverse consequences from vasectomies."

Massey predicted the study would erase some fears about the possible health dangers of vasectomies. About 500,000 American men undergo the surgery every year.

"I think it should be reassuring to men who have had vasectomies," Massey said. "It will take a lot of reassuring; there's a scare story every week about the subject."

The latest scare came after a UCLA researcher reported a disproportionately high incidence of impotence in men over 50 who had vasectomies. The new study, however, found no correlation between impotence and vasectomies, although researchers noted their subject population was considerably younger.

Federal health officials called the study the "most comprehensive assessment ever conducted of the possible health consequences of vasectomy."

The results were based on a study of 10,000 men who had vasectomies in four cities — Los Angeles; Eureka, Calif.; Minneapolis and Rochester, Minn. — and a control group matched for age, race, income, marital status and neighborhood.

Most of the men with vasectomies had undergone the surgery eight to 10 years before the study began in 1976 and were between 30 and 49 years of age. The project looked at a wide range of illnesses, specifically 54 diseases linked to vasectomies in previous research.

The only condition found in significantly higher numbers among men who had vasectomies was epididymitis, an inflammation near the surgery area. The condition usually occurs soon after the operation.

The researchers were particularly concerned about possible immune system disorders, as well as atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries around the heart, often leading to heart attacks.

Several years ago, studies showed that one-half to two-thirds of vasectomized men develop antibodies to sperm, leading to fears that such a disruption of the immune system could lead to serious illnesses such as cancer.

"Perhaps if you're in a bad condition, you don't have a vasectomy," he offered as one explanation.

Handicapped learn street fighting

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — They come in wheelchairs, on crutches or canes, and they learn as best they can various moves and techniques that may enable them to defend themselves in the streets or within their own homes, should the occasion arise.

"The disabled, like everybody else, are susceptible to the rigors of daily life — they, too, fall victim to muggers and other criminals," says Duncan Wyeth, Consumer Activities Director for United Cerebral Palsy. "And because they're disabled, they are too often easy prey."

Once a week, usually on Saturday afternoon, approximately a dozen group members meet at the United Cerebral Palsy Association of Philadelphia and Vicinity, properly attired in their gi (prounced "ghee"), the belted pajama-like garment that is the universal uniform of karate, for a 2½-hour workout in self-defense.

This is a relatively new program, established by Norm Constantine, 25, a black belt in karate, former recreation therapist at UCP and regional administrator of Martial Arts for the Handicapped. Constantine was the victim of a hit-and-run accident and remains in a semi-comatose state, but in his absence, volunteers trained by Constantine keep the program running.

What Constantine has been teaching is karate with modifications. A move normally made by someone in an erect position is adapted to the sitting position when necessary. If a person has limited use of a leg, an extra movement with the arm is used. The teaching is modified to fit the individual.

"In some ways, the handicapped have an advantage," Wyeth says. "With crutches, your reach is probably increased by three or four feet, and because you use crutches every day, your crutches become part of your body. So does a wheelchair.

"If a mugger grabs your crutch, use him for support and hit him with the other crutch," Wyeth advises.

"But don't overlook the obvious — scream for help — your voice is one of the best defenses you have," adds Wyeth.

Text by Diane Booth

Sample: A
Name: Juanita Goolsby
Age: over 55
Occupation: Homemaker, "professional volunteer"

Analysis:

"This lady shows us a personality which functions around seemingly boundless energy, especially when she can direct it toward accomplishing things or events, then step back and enjoy her personal pride in all that gets done...

"Mentally, she functions with an analytical exploratory mind and can give attention to details which make up a concept while learning more about all its parts . . . this personality will be just as willing to behave this way for others, for society in general even more than for itself. You will probably find her incessantly involved in community and social functions. This is because of her strong sense of generosity with such things as her time and ability, a very strong need for change and variety in her life and an equally strong subconscious desire for responsibility for affecting change.

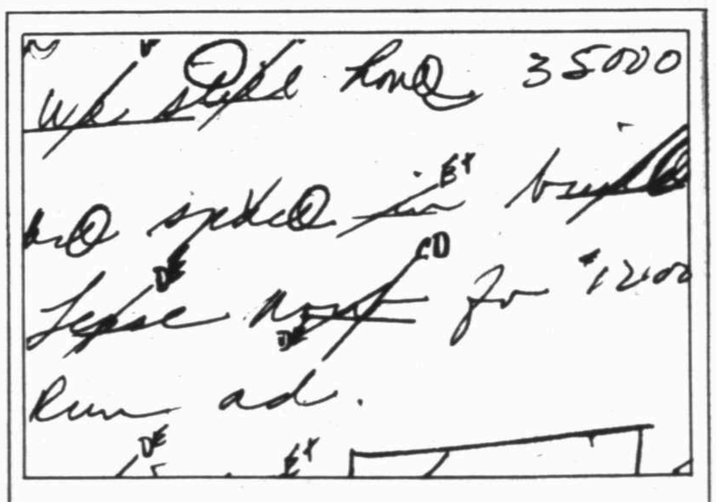

Sample: B
Name: Ed Clements
Age: 28
Occupation: News, sports reporter

Analysis:

"This is the personality of a man who is an intuitive thinker — one who can think and talk on his feet — or as he moves through the subject at hand. He is a free and open talker, but will be purely objective in his expressions, without any personal need to take sides. He has an analytical mind with investigative tendencies; one that will insist on putting all the pieces together, no matter how they fit.

"He tends to accept life and its conditions pretty much as they are, with no plan to change things, but rather to understand them. In his case, he'll also be able to describe such conditions, again, without involving his personal feelings.

"Personally, an easy going nature is prevalent and generous feeling as giving of his time will be observable behavior.

Sample: C
Name: I. David Porras
Age: 43
Occupation: Real estate developer

Analysis:

"This is a mind and personality which tends to process and function in the realm of essentials. A purely analytical mind, it can surely comprehend all the small parts of life's concepts . . . It is a mind which processes information very quickly, an independent and positive thinker, driven by a strong sense of personal initiative . . .

"The mental processes established respond to an active, idea-generating imagination, which usually deals with one subject at a time until the essential components of that subject are ready to be acted upon. This is a rather unique personality condition because the goal structure of this person reflects distant, almost visionary goals...

"The strongest individual trait conditions which pervades the personality is persistence."

EDITOR'S NOTE: The name "Jan" used in the following story is a fictitious name, used to protect the identity of the following realistic case.

Her parents and teachers thought Jan was a slow learner. The Midland teenager was learning and comprehending what she was taught but she was unable to express the information her brain stored, resulting in poor grades and withdrawal.

The girl's family asked Ed Armstrong, a Midland psychographologist, for his assistance. As a psychographologist, he studies the mind and its mechanics through graphic expression. This helps him determine character and aptitude, for example.

Although Jan managed to graduate from high school she needed help to get into college.

Armstrong studied her handwriting. Her letters leaned to the left and had a sharp angularity signaling withdrawal. But the letter structure mirrored sharp comprehension abilities and the rounded structure of small letters showed a subconscious that wanted to be extroverted.

He described Jan as a "total introvert" when she began bi-weekly sessions with him the summer of 1982. Armstrong said the 19-year-old now "shines" in speech and drama. "They couldn't get her to talk to her sister before."

Armstrong taught the young woman how to concentrate to "unlock" the learning process.

"I could see her ideas flow," he said with pride. He took handwriting samples once a week. Each time she showed progress. In less than a year, Jan is earning Bs in college.

Armstrong began studying graphology seven years ago. He has a bachelor of arts degree in management and plans to study for his master's degree in behavioral science at the University of Texas Permian Basin.

Armstrong would like to team his talents as a psychographologist with his 14 years combined managerial experience working for NASA and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, to help industry and business fit the right people to the right jobs.

Ed Armstrong

"I'm trying to prove there just might be something to this in the workplace," he said.

"Psychographology is going to be the most accurate and most effective new science in our ongoing effort to understand human behavior and to ultimately predict human behavior potential," Armstrong said.

He said he and other psychographologists are trying to prove the only source of conscious behavior is from all of life's learned experiences.

Psychographologists believe all of life's experiences are stored in some order somewhere other than the conscious in the human brain.

"Handwriting is simply a reflection directed by that other than the conscious mind — it's brainwriting."

Armstrong has joined forces with a Midland personnel agency and uses this "diagnostic tool" to aid in job placement.

"Personnel managers are looking for better techniques to get on top of the people problem," he said.

Armstrong would like to do handwriting analysis for businesses and industry, starting with a firm's low producers and trouble makers. "We can turn them around and make better employees of them."

The mind needs care and maintenance, he said, because "It is just like the finest precision tool.

"We can never let the mind be out of tune," he said. "We can analyze people and find out what their subconscious potential is and adjust behavior to avoid stress."

Although the best time to determine if a person is right for the job is before he fills out a job application, Armstrong said, "Businesses need this kind of help. Employee turnover is a tremendous expense."

The psychographologist proposes a thorough study of every employee at each level of a company to determine how to best place personnel.

"To put them in their proper places depends on what their personality bears," Armstrong said.

Once someone is hired, the process does not end, he said. After an employee is in a position for awhile, Armstrong assesses his status to determine if he is suitable for the job and vice versa.

For example, if a lathe operator candidate does not exhibit analytical abilities, he said, he should not be trained for the job. "Training dollars would probably be wasted on that person."

Accurate handwriting analysis should be done with original spontaneous writing in ink on unlined paper, Armstrong said. A memorandum is a good sample.

The person does not have to be present to have his handwriting analyzed. "I'm not into counseling," he said.

Armstrong places a special plastic template over writing and marks letters with a red pen. He looks for slant, pressure, depth, and structure of letters as well as line-spacing.

Unlined paper best reveals a person's characteristics, he said. "Life doesn't follow lines," he said. "You won't tell me how moody you are on lined paper."

The letters are studied separately and as a whole picture to determine traits such as loyalty, willpower, enthusiasm or lack of self-esteem or absence of objectivity.

Handwriting varies somewhat from day to day and through the years as a person grows and experiences new things, he said. While children are taught to write a certain way in school, their true personalities show through their penmanship.

Psychographology dates back to the time of ancient philosophers, Armstrong said. Hundreds of thousands of stroke structures are analyzed to prove the existence of a behavioral condition. "Not even biology uses that many samples," he said.

Handwriting analysis as a diagnostic tool has endless possibilities, Armstrong said. Criminologists in Europe have used the technique for about 70 years.

Armstrong favors studying the handwriting of attorneys, judges, jurors and particularly criminals.

"We can tell a jail or prison who should be retained and who should be released to society and how they'll act when they get there," he said. Time is the only judge of most criminals, he said.

Armstrong suggested John Hinckley, convicted of attempting to assassinate President Reagan, would never have been freed if psychographologists studied his handwriting. "He should have been subjected to handwriting analysts instead of other professionals."

Armstrong also recommends analyzing the handwriting of high school seniors before graduation, to determine their progress in achieving goals and discover overlooked aptitudes. For example, he said, a student with a strong analytical mind probably should not major in English.

"We can tell them what kind of mind they're going to take to the world."

Agency uses graphology for placement services

One Midland personnel agency is utilizing the talents of a psychographolist to help place clients in jobs suitable for them.

Success Personnel, owned and operated by Flo Dean and Jean Wadsworth, offers clients the option of having their handwriting analyzed by Ed Armstrong, a psychographologist.

The two businesswomen met Armstrong as a potential client earlier this year. They took his job application and he analyzed their handwriting.

After consulting with Armstrong the two women decided they wanted to utilize Armstrong's abilities. "We decided to join our professions," Mrs. Wadsworth said.

Armstrong now shares the agency's office.

Applicants receive the standard personnel services and may have their handwriting analyzed to be used as a counseling tool.

"A lot of people come in and don't know what they want to do," she said. "It's a lot faster using Ed's handwriting analysis.

For example, an attorney looking for a secretary describes what skills and qualities he desires. Handwriting analysis can be used to locate the kind of person sought for the position, Mrs. Wadsworth said.

"We both are pretty good judges of character but this just reinforces what we think."

"Midland is definitely ready for this," said Flo Dean. "They want high quality and this is what they get."

The agency polled several large Midland companies to get their reactions to the use of handwriting analysis. Mrs. Dean said the response has been positive.

Members of the Permian Basin Personnel Association and state and national associations of personnel consultants, Mrs. Dean and Mrs. Wadsworth established their business in April.

Mrs. Dean worked as an administrator in banking for 25 years and also has a degree in interior decorating. Mrs. Wadsworth taught elementary school for 10 years, has a real estate license, worked as an oil company secretary and has also studied handwriting analysis and children's artwork.

Elderly avoid mass transit

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Fear, filth and rude bus drivers are among the reasons why senior citizens don't use big-city transit systems as often as they might, according to a new study.

"Elderly people don't use public transportation in the numbers we would expect them to," said Arthur Patterson, associate professor of administration of justice at Penn State University.

"We wanted to identify the barriers, whether physical or psychological, to the use of public transit by older people," he said.

Reseachers from Penn State asked 400 residents of senior citizen centers around Philadelphia their feelings about public transportation, Patterson said Monday.

Philadelphia was picked, among other reasons, because it is "fairly representative" of urban transportation systems, Patterson said.

More than half of the survey respondents said they were afraid of crime while walking to or from the bus stop, waiting for the bus or riding.

Almost two-thirds wanted more police on the buses, and nearly 73 percent wanted more police protection at bus stops.

Sixty-eight percent of the respondents complained that bus windows were so dirty they couldn't see out of them. They said that was significant because it meant they could miss their stop, or not know whether it was safe to exit or board the bus.

Almost half the respondents said the drivers are not patient enough when elderly people are boarding.

Fans 'spoke' romantic language

Ladies' fan movements spoke a silent language of romance in the 18th century, conveying as many as 50 established entreaties and endearments. Covering the left ear with an open fan urged, "Do not betray our secret." Twirling the fan in the left hand signaled, "We are being watched."

A British magazine of July 1711 said, "Women are armed with fans as men with swords, and sometimes do more executions with them." keeps its shape, attaches well to metal and is durable.

Family fiddles together

MERIDIAN, Idaho (AP) — If you were to ask Janet and Lee Ruwe how to keep harmony in a family with six teen-agers, they'd probably tell you to string 'em up — equip them with fiddles, that is.

Not only do all the Ruwes, except Janet, play the fiddle, but their musical togetherness has earned them the title of America's 1983 "Amateur Music Family of the Year."

"We have harmony in our lives through the harmony in our music," Mrs. Ruwe told the American Music Conference (AMC), a nonprofit association which presents the annual award to a family most representative of the 50 million amateur musicians.

"We have no age or generation gap between any of us," she added, "because we have this common bond. The willingness of each member to help and encourage the others has strengthened our family ties."

Those ties have held fast in situations that in many families could have ended in sibling jealousy and rivalry. When Kendra, 15, won the junior national championship title at the Old Time Fiddlers' Festival in 1980, her older sisters, Kiley, 19, and Donelle, 17, were there accompanying her on guitar and piano, respectively.

Mrs. Ruwe wondered aloud how many little brothers would volunteer to help their older sisters prepare for the talent competition in a beauty pageant. But that's just what Trenton, 14, Chadley, 12, and Ruston, 11, did when Kiley was practicing the banjo for the Miss Boise pageant, in which she was second runner-up.

Whether it was love of family or love of music that made them do it is a matter for debate, however, because each of the children has a list of music awards as long as your arm — that is if you happen to be Paul Bunyan.

"It began with piano lessons and branched out from there," said Mrs. Ruwe.

Included with your pattern should be a chart indicating several possible layouts. When the layout chart shows a complete pattern piece, half of which is shaded, it means that the pattern is cut on a fold in that space. When a pattern piece is completely shaded, it means that the piece is to be used a second time. A pattern piece that is shown extending beyond a folded edge, is to be cut in that space after all the other pieces have been cut. It is then that the remainder of the cloth is opened for further cutting. Place all pattern pieces close enough together so that they dovetail.

Battery age has arrived

By ERMA BOMBECK

I took my daughter aside recently and said, "Forget what I said about marrying a doctor. Go for a man who manufactures batteries and those rosebud lips will never touch plastic for as long as you live."

It's true. During the Christmas season alone, a man could retire at the age of 28 and never work another day in his life.

To say that we have moved from the Stone Age to the Battery Age is the greatest understatement of all times. I'm not just talking a single battery that I put in a talking robot for my youngest that went dead when I accidentally dropped a hammer on it; I'm talking four, six and eight batteries that run everything from electronic games to your toothbrush.

We're looking at electronic Christmas cards, new to the market this year ($35 for a box of six) that will require a battery one-sixteenth of an inch thick. We're looking at home computers that do your budget, balance your checkbook, record albums, recipes and inventory your household items . . . batteries not included.

We're looking at electronic games (already in the homes of two million families) and toys in record numbers that need from one to eight batteries to operate.

The camera that Daddy points at you around the tree needs batteries. So does the little car that your pre-schooler rides over your foot. Dolls that do aerobics do it the easy way . . . on batteries. Even games that aren't hooked up to the TV set need batteries to light up and beep.

Don't think for a minute that batteries are interchangeable like light bulbs. You can't steal from one to make the other one go. I have purchased products where the batteries for them are available only directly from Iron Curtain countries during the months with R in them. (No personal checks, please!)

No, it's definitely a battery market this year. No one wants anything anymore that just sits there and does nothing. If it's worth buying, it's worth lighting up, belching, moving, printing out, beeping, doing a backflip, playing music, or ticking.

Coins

Spanish

What might be considered U.S. Colonial coinage was issued between 1903 and 1945 for the Philippine Islands after its liberation from Spanish rule.

Denominations were ½, 1, 5, 10, 20 and 50 centavos and 1 peso. The reverse bore an eagle, a shield, the date and "United States of America." The obverse, carried a design, denomination in Spanish and the name "Filipinas."

Infertile couples: Hope for babies

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — For more than a year, Debra, a slender, dark-haired woman in her early 30s, has been showing up at county Harbor-University of California at Los Angeles Medical Center with the regularity of her menstrual cycle.

So has Barbara, who takes time off from work to go to Building D3, an old barracks at the facility that houses the ovum transfer experiment.

Although they go to the same place at roughly the same times, they will never meet or know the other's name. Yet both are crucial to the success of the program which holds the promise of children for more than 1.7 million women with fertility problems.

Debra, who has a son and a daughter, goes to donate her eggs. Barbara, who is infertile, would like to have one of them or an egg from another donor so she can carry and bear a child. To her, Debra's donation could be the ultimate gift.

Debra volunteered for the ovum transfer project almost 16 months ago after reading a newspaper advertisement about it. She is now one of 12 donors, all of whom are cherished by researchers because donors are in short supply.

"It was something I seriously thought about," she said. "I have friends who are infertile and I know it's real frustrating for them. But I think if I didn't have my children, I would not want to participate."

Disease may lead to heart attack

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Sickle cell anemia, an inherited blood disorder that generally strikes blacks, may lead to heart attacks even without other risk factors, researchers say.

Dr. L. Julian Haywood, head of the cardiac care unit at the the University of Southern California Medical Center, said Wednesday that 14 of 72 sickle cell anemia victims whose records were studied either died of heart attacks or had evidence of heart muscle damage.

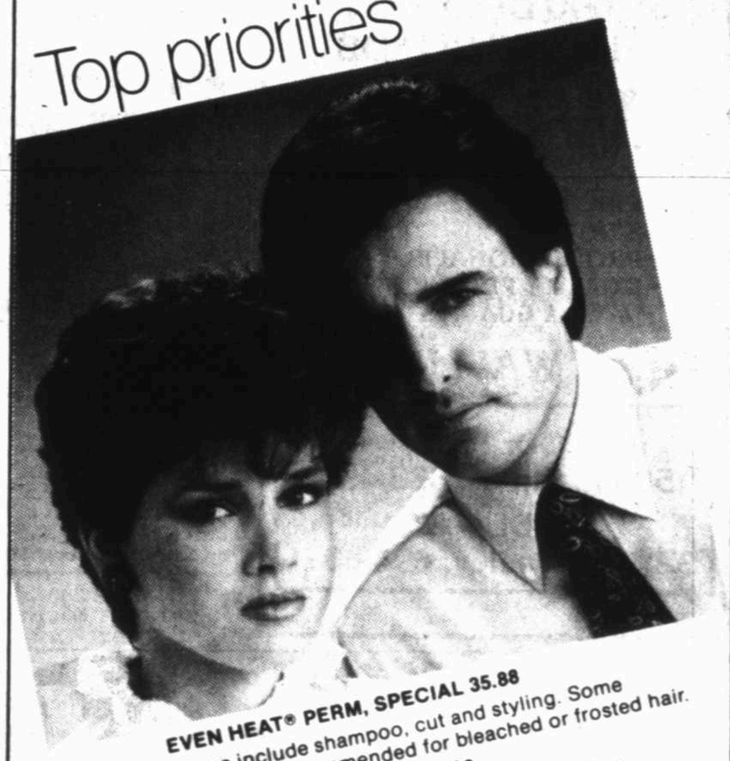

But none showed significant signs of the most common risk factor in heart attacks — atherosclerosis, or narrowing of blood vessels, in the arteries that supply blood to the heart, Haywood told the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

Sickle cell anemia is marked by an abnormal form of hemoglobin in red blood cells, distorting the shape of the cells into half-moons.

Haywood said the odd shape may cause sickle cells to become tangled in the coronary arteries, thus blocking the blood flow, or that they could release a substance that causes blood vessels to narrow.

Haywood suggested doctors should give electrocardiograms to sickle cell patients, even those too young normally to be considered at risk of heart attack.

Following the luncheon Mrs. T. L. Bond introduced the speaker, Mrs. Ed Kennedy, geologist, a member ofthe Wildlife Association, born in the Texas Panhandle. She presented a program "Edible Native Plants." The program was illustrated with colored slides of plants which grow in the Midland area. Mrs. Kennedy named and described the many uses of each plant known to the Indians.

The 1984 Southern Zone District I Texas Garden Clubs Inc. will meet in Odessa.

MIDLAND GARDEN CLUB

The Midland Garden club's pilgrimage was to Cap Rock Grower's greenhouse in Lubbock recently. Seen among the 23,000 poinsettias were some colored combinations — 2 red plants and 2 white planted in the same pot. Also seen were many varieties of Jews in hanging baskets, ivies and trailing geraniums.

The plants were watered by a drip process using water pipes to each potted poinsettia.

Lunch was served at the Lubbock Woman's Club. President Mrs. Tienert was hostess. She gave the Midland club a tour of the clubhouse. Attending were: President Mrs. Jack Griffin, Pilgrimage Chairman Mrs. Paul Smyres, Program Chairman Mrs. J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. C. E. Bissell, Mrs. Bill Coleman, Mrs. H. L. Munson and Mrs. C. R. Jones.

Spring style trends: Hems above knees

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK – Come spring, you can bare your knees or cover them up. Your choice may depend on how much money you spend, but either way, you'll be perfectly in style.

The clothes headed for designer salons – by the likes of Bill Blass, Geoffrey Beene and Oscar De La Renta – break from the pack and crop their look above the kneecap. The better-sportswear designers such as Calvin Klein and Anne Klein, showing some influence from the Japanese look, take their hems down to mid-calf and longer.

As Beene sees it, raising hemlines continues his facination with legs. "Women today are shaplier than ever, regardless of age," he reasoned. "Why shouldn't they proudly display it?"

Why not indeed? Beene's unusual mix of fabrics in understated earth tones and black and white gives his clothes a rich look – which is appropriate, since the outfits run $1000 and more. Among his offerings are oversized trench-style jackets paired with short slim skirts, re-embroidered lame lace chemises and bold polka dot dusters (full-cut lightweight jackets that reach mid-thigh) and matching blouses.

Aside from his preoccupation with legs, Beene reveals other parts of the anatomy – shoulders, tummy and back – through transparent panels of organdy stitched to linen, satin and gaberdine.

Alfred Fiandaca, who counts Joan Kennedy among his regular customers, went a step further than Beene with the transparent organdy tops revealing the model's breasts. The Boston-based designer pointed out that a camisole could be worn underneath.

Like Beene, Fiandaca has hiked hemlines for spring. His tailored linen suits in pastel solids and stripes (lilac, brown and white) are hip-contoured, while his silk dresses are free-floating. Fiandaca's newest silhouette is a flap-paneled, black and white printed silk dress.

Bill Blass' spring line-up had his devotees in a dither over some dramatic new shapes. Blass has come up with a variation on the cowl neck: the cowl lap – drapey fabric which hangs apron-style down the front of the dresses. He showed them in brightly-colored jacquard prints and sensuous charmeuse.

As usual, Blass' colors are the boldest in town. A daytime suit, for example, combines a bright green trench-style jacket with a fuschia, above-the-knee straight skirt. Eveningwear has been toned down somewhat, offering fewer beads and sequins. Nevertheless, prices remain out of most consumers' reach, with evening dresses going for as much as $6,000.

The O in Oscar de la Renta has always stood for opulent; his next season's line is no exception. Everything he showed, from suits to ballgowns, was lavish. His tailored Mondrian print jacket (pink, green and yellow) is made for ladies' luncheons at spots where fashion gets as much attention as the food, if not more.

De la Renta's skirts, which show plenty of knee, are slim, as his customers demand a more precise fit than is possible with the newer loose look. In the evening category, where he has always made a mark, his drapey jersey gowns and sequined separates were standouts, though he got carried away with a group of red, fuschia and black, overly rumpled taffeta dresses. And as if his bucket-sized sleeves weren't signature enough, he accessorized some of the gowns with five-inch dangle earings that spell O-S-C-A-R.

In contrast, $300 Calvin Klein linen dresses seem like bargains. Klein's collection has the most sweeping changes for next year. Gone are the short tight-fitting skirts, replaced by longer, looser styles that graze the calf.

CNS Photo

The exact function of this marble rotunda, known as the Tholos, still remains a mystery. It was built in the 4th century B.C. in Delphi, home of the famous oracle.

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

The jaded traveler, accustomed to high prices and hostile treatment in the cities of the world, will fall in love with Greece, a country of myriad attractions, not the least of which is the population.

Whether it's because they know a good thing when they see it, and they are seeing an army of tourists these days spending money in their homeland, or whether it's because they are naturally hospitable, the Greeks welcome visitors with helpful good humor.

This attitude, combined with the low hotel rates, good, inexpensive food, soul-satisfying scenery and multitudinous reminders of ancient wonders, makes Greece a rare treat for vacationers.

Whether you want to stand on the Acropolis and gape at the Parthenon, marvel at the drainage system installed in the Knossos Palace 4,000 years ago or swim in Homer's wine-dark sea, you can do it on a limited budget in the country which was a seedbed for Western culture.

Frequently, "freedom of the press" means free meals and lodging or, at least, cut rates for communicators, but the establishments mentioned in this story gave nothing away.

They're mentioned not as a payoff, but to indicate what's available at what price at the height of the tourist season.

Hotel rates in Greece do vary with the season and the ones quoted below were in effect in August when prices were highest.

An astounding buy is a room at the Amalia Hotel at Delphi, home of the famous oracle and site of the execution of Aesop.

Designated "first-class superior," the Amalia has all the amenities associated with a fine hotel, plus a sensational view. A single room in August was approximately $29 a day with breakfast and dinner; while a double room with twin beds was approximately $44.

The only problem with the Amalia at Delphi is its inaccessability by way of public transportation. Though Delphi is scenic, historic and famous, it can be reached only by private car or travel agency tour bus. But, if one gets there, one could hardly do better than to stay a day or so.

On Crete, an island embroidered with medieval and ancient ruins, including the remnants of Knossos, home of the Minotaur, the Astoria Hotel is another bargain.

Not so fancy as the Amalia, it is, nevertheless, clean and comfortable with a swimming pool on the roof. Rates are even cheaper than those in Delphi. A single room with three meals a day is less than $30, and a double room with full board can be had for around $45.

Two nice hotels (though not first class) in Athens are the Astor and the Olympic Palace, both located within easy walking distance of various attractions, including the Parthenon.

The Astor has the nicer dining room, since it's situated on the roof and offers a splendid view of the Acropolis.

Each is air-conditioned. However, bathrooms in each are cramped.

A single room at the Astor in August cost $27 a day with breakfast; a double, $38. Prices at the Olympic Palace are comparable.

A well-known guidebook warns that while Greek food is tasty, the visitor should avoid ground-meat dishes unless he knows the restaurant well.

There are plenty of restaurants in Athens, though, which offer wholesome mousska, stuffed grape leaves and other national delicacies which, in less hygienic establishments, could be disastrous.

A safe source of food is Diros, almost directly below the TWA office near Constitution Square.

The place styles itself a "luxury" restaurant. Nevertheless, a meal with meat and more than one course can be had for less than $5.

Sponges brought Greeks to Florida

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. — Although the reason the Greeks came to Tarpon Springs — sponge diving — is little more than a memory today, descendants of those early settlers are still busy making money in the town, mostly by trading on their rich heritage.

Today, visitors to Tarpon Springs can watch a belly dancer at the Spartan Nightclub and drink ouzo at Zorba's. They can buy a trinket at shops named Athens and Acropolis, Parthenon and Poseidon. They can dine on moussaka at Mama Costa's and have baklava at Pappa's. All this they can do along a couple of ramshackle blocks fronting the old sponge docks.

There are Greeks everywhere in the Tarpon Springs area, nearly 20,000 of them. The city's phone book has a listing for one Spiros Papastefanou, followed by phone numbers for Anastassios Papazoglou and Anthony Papavasiliou; 18 Pappases are listed. This sleepy little village just north of Tampa and St. Petersburg has enough Greek names to populate a goodly section of Athens.

It was around the turn of the century that the Greeks settled here. The sponge-diving business in America, which had been centered in Key West, had moved to Tarpon Springs when richer beds of sponges were found off this little village on the Anclote River.

John Corcoris, the father of Tarpon Spring's sponge industry, brought two of his brothers to the town from Greece, along with divers from 13 islands of the Aegean Sea. Soon, Tarpon Springs had a multi-million dollar industry.

At first, the Greeks went out in boats and raked the sponges from the ocean's bottom. Later, copper-helmeted diving suits of rubber and canvas allowed the harvesting of sponges in much deeper water. The poorly made suits often became the shrouds for the Greek divers.

At the height of the sponge-diving industry in the late 1930s, there were more than 200 boats in the sponge fleet, and more than 1,000 Greeks diving for the "golden fleece," as the highly prized Rock Island wool sponges were called.

Margaret Avila of San Diego and companion take the precarious-looking trip along a cliff down to the leper colony on the Kalaupapa Peninsula of the Hawaiian island of Molokai.

Molokai Trail escapes beaten path

By LOLA SHERMAN
Copley News Service

KALAUPAPA, Molokai, Hawaii — "Wouldn't you rather be riding a mule on Molokai?" ask the bumper stickers and T-shirts.

Those who make the spectacular ride receive a free bumper sticker and certificate, complete with the name of the mule they rode. Usually, they can't resist buying a shirt or two, either, to advertise the fact they got a bit off the well-worn Hawaiian tourist track.

Rare Adventures Ltd. operates the mule train to Kalaupapa, famed leper colony on the island of Molokai, and the company is aptly named.

THE RIDE AND the tour of the colony truly are a rare adventure.

And at least part of that adventure — the chance to visit with some of the colony residents — won't last forever.

Kalaupapa has been declared a national park. When the remaining patients leave or die, the National Park Service will take over.

There may be more picnic tables and tourist services, but they can't possibly offer the same insight that a visit with the residents provides.

One of those resident guides, Henry Nalaielua, welcomes the tourists because, he says, leprosy "has been misunderstood from biblical times to today."

"WE NEED TO have people like you come," Nalaielua says, so that more persons will understand the dreaded disease.

When the first lepers were literally dumped at Kalaupapa in 1866, there was only one access to the then-inhospitable peninsula — by sea.

Now, there are two others — but nothing so convenient as a leisurely Sunday drive by auto.

Visitors may come by small plane to a landing strip built in 1950 or by mule back along the lone trail carved along the steep cliffs in 1897.

ACCESS TO MOLOKAI itself is by cheaper ($20) twin-engine Cessnas operated from Honolulu by Reeves Air or Molokai Air or by more-expensive ($45) and larger Dehaviland Dash 7 craft operated by Hawaiian Air.

Hawaiian Air also offers a tour for $135 which includes airfare, ground transportation between the airport and the mule stables, the mule ride-tour and lunch.

The tour of the colony has operated since 1957 — a little more than 10 years after modern medicine learned to control leprosy, also called Hansen's disease after the Norwegian physician who isolated it.

THE PENINSULA IS breathtakingly beautiful, and the patients are no longer confined to it.

Tagboy, who visits her son in Honolulu, said children were never allowed to stay with their parents, and women were encouraged to undergo sterilization, but she did not want to do so.

Her husband operates the bar. A sister-in-law raised the son.

"We say thank you, this is where your tax money really works," Tagboy told the tourists.

The visit to the colony takes about three hours of the 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. tour.

IT TAKE ABOUT 1½ hours each way for the surefooted mules to make it down the three-mile trail with its 26 switchbacks and back up again. The cost of the mule ride, plus lunch, is $50 per person.

Riders must be physically fit, weighing less than 225 pounds and "not too advanced in years." They also, by state law, cannot enter Kalaupapa settlement if they are under 16 years of age.

In-flight medical treatment questioned

The Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

You're flying at 35,000 feet, enroute to a Caribbean vacation, and suddenly your seat companion keels over, clutching at his heart. What happens next?

In many cases, that depends on the airline and on whether a willing doctor can be found among the passengers. Some airlines would radio the nearest airport and have an ambulance meet the plane. Others would provide supplies for a doctor to treat the patient until the plane lands. Still others have crew members trained to respond in case no doctor is aboard.

Consumer advocates say the situation raises serious questions for travelers with potential medical problems. Even medical supplies aboard aircraft are a mixed bag, with some airlines providing extensive emergency kits while others offer little more than FAA-required first-aid kits with bandages and splints.

And the classic call for a doctor may well be met by stony silence. One physician says many are hesitant to respond to emergency calls aboard certain airlines because of inadequate medical supplies, putting them in a helpless, lawsuit-prone position.

The issue surfaced in 1981 when two doctors, along with two Ralph Nader groups, petitioned the Federal Aviation Administration to mandate more medical supplies on planes. The FAA denied the petition, saying it didn't have the authority, but a U.S. court ruled last summer that the FAA did indeed have the authority. The FAA will now consider "whether or not regulatory action should be taken," an FAA spokesman said.

Cornish F. Hitchcock, a spokesman for Public Citizen Health Research Group, one of the two Nader groups, said that the two doctors who filed the original petition feel that "doctors need something more than Band-aids" to treat emergencies on planes. "Many doctors naively assume that there is minimal equipment" to deal with emergency situations, Hitchcock said.

But not every doctor agrees that more medical supplies are a good thing. The American Medical Association leadership opposes a requirement for supplies on planes beyond the standard first-aid kit, contending it would increase the possibility of abuse by non-medical personnel. Many airlines echo this view.

And even if a physician steps forward, says medical columnist Karl Neumann, a New York pediatrician, having the equipment is no guarantee that he or she can use it properly. Although he supports the idea of an expanded medical kit, he says: "Medicine is so specialized that most doctors wouldn't know how to use it any more than a Boy Scout. If you're a psychiatrist or a GP, you've never used this emergency equipment."

But Aviation Consumer Action Program, the second Nader group in the original petition, wants the equipment aboard nonetheless. ACAP favors requiring emergency kits of the type used by most foreign airlines. Those kits generally contain drugs as well as more equipment than their domestic counterparts.

The problem of emergency treatment aboard aircraft has spawned other suggestions as well. Dr. Neumann favors a proposal he has seen mentioned elsewhere: providing paramedics on each flight.

"Paramedics are the people who could handle emergency situations better than most physicians," he said, because that's their training. He cites the case of a passenger who is hyperventilating. "Only an expert," he said, "can tell the difference between that (when oxygen could hurt the situation) and a heart attack (when oxygen is needed). Many doctors could not."

At the moment, the FAA requires only that all U.S.-licensed airlines carry first-aid kits designed to treat people injured as a result of flight (turbulence or crash landing). The regulations do not address other medical problems — heart attacks, strokes, diabetic shock, etc.

There is no requirement that crews be trained in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation, though most airlines require CPR training. Nor is there a requirement that extra oxygen be made available to individuals, though most airlines carry extra oxygen tanks beyond the required oxygen masks above the seat.

An AMA spokeswoman threw up one more caution flag. An expanded medical kit, she said, might lead to "people trying to get drugs under false pretenses." Another AMA official said Air France had 70 percent of the Valium stolen from its medical kits. But an Air France spokeswoman said she knew of no such case, adding that Air France still carries an elaborate kit, including Valium (for use by doctors only) and other drugs.

The director of ACAP, Matthew Finucane, said he doubted equipping planes with medical kits would lead to drug thefts. "In any case," he said, "stealing insulin seems like small harm compared to someone dying of diabetic coma because the drug wasn't available."

ACAP is asking for a kit including a stethoscope, blood-pressure cuff and drugs to treat emergencies like heart attacks, heart abnormalities, allergic reactions, severe blood loss and diabetes attacks. (Such kits are commercially available for about $240-$640.) ACAP says the kits should be locked away with the captain holding the key, the policy at most foreign airlines.

Passport points raise questions

By 'GENE BURKE

Q: We're going on our first trip to Europe, and we are pretty green about things. We have our passports but understand we might need visas. What is a visa?

A: Some countries require a traveler to have permission to enter their country, and this permission is called a visa, which is stamped in the traveler's passport.

Visas should be obtained from foreign consular representatives of the countries to be visited before proceeding abroad. Most of them are located in principal cities in the United States. Their addresses may be obtained by consulting the Congressional Directory, which is available in most libraries or city telephone directories.

Most European countries do not require U.S. citizens to have a visa to visit their countries. I am sending you a visa information pamphlet which will inform you about countries that do or do not require visas.

Q: My daughter tried to take my passport photograph out of my passport and I think I caught it just in time. However, I am concerned because the photograph has been lifted off the page a bit and it does look tampered with. Will I have trouble abroad if I use this passport?

A: Any tampering with a passport photograph can make the passport invalid for use. If you do use it, you may encounter delays at borders. It is impossible to render judgment without seeing the passport. If you are concerned, you may wish to file for a new passport or send it to our agency so that we may examine it and advise you.

Q: My son is 18 years of age. If I send a formal letter to you asking that you not issue a passport to him, will you comply with my request?

A: Passport regulations define a minor as an unmarried person under 18 years of age. For that reason, parental objections do not provide a basis for denying a passport to a person 18 years or over.

SW Bell spokesman says AT&T shareholders should begin focusing on future

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

More than 200 Midland shareholders of AT&T stock turned out for a recent meeting sponsored by Southwestern Bell at The Midland Hilton to hear what the future holds for their stock after divestiture.

The meeting also provided AT&T owners the opportunity to meet company officials and to ask questions.

The giant communications firm was ordered by the Justice Department to divest; or break up, its 22 local Bell telephone companies by Jan. 1, 1984. At that time, these 22 companies will be grouped into seven regional firms, independent from AT&T and from each other. Ownership of the new companies will pass to AT&T shareholders.

Shareholders will keep their AT&T stock. For every 10 shares of AT&T, they will receive one share in each of the seven new companies.

THOSE NEW COMPANIES are: Pacific Telesis, US West, Southwestern Bell Corp., Ameritech, NYNEX, Bell Atlantic and Bell South. Southwestern Bell, serving Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, was one of only two Bell companies large enough to be spun off as a stand-alone region.

Southwestern Bell spokesman E.L. "Boots" Gaubatz, general manager-network distribution services, told shareholders they were witnessing the end of the Bell system "but not the end of the world."

"Our purpose is not to reflect on the past but to focus on the future. As we enter a new age — the information age — we will be known as Southwestern Bell Corp. We do this with very mixed emotions. On one hand, we're extremely excited about the future. On the other hand, we are saddened as we methodically break up that old Bell System gang of ours to meet the demands of divestiture."

As a result of trading last week on the New York Stock Exchange of shares in AT&T and its seven new companies, most shareholders were interested in the different stock prices, dividend returns and reinvestment plans.

GAUBATZ SAID THAT while stock prices of the seven regional companies are different, the dividends, or the percentage returned on money invested, is very close. Tuesday, he said, they ranged from 9.21 percent to 8.63 percent. Southwestern Bell's dividend was 9.09 percent.

Saying the new AT&T would become more "IBMish" or growth oriented, Gaubatz speculated the company would probably only pay out about 50 percent of its earnings in dividends. The new companies, he said, will pay a higher dividends because they are considered to be a more risky investment.

Calling the divestiture date of Jan. 1, 1984, "D-Day minus 39," Gaubatz said he felt uncomfortably pushed by the declining number of days left for the company to complete its task.

"The divestiture clock is running. We have 1½ months left to finalize the task of taking apart the world's largest business and piecing it back together into eight separate enterprises. Understandably, many of our customers and most of our shareholders would prefer for the Bell System to remain intact."

Gaubatz said the wisdom of divestiture will probably be debated for years.

DESPITE THE CHANGES, he said, AT&T's prospects for the future look good.

"The company is about to be freed from regulations that have kept it out of lucrative markets like computer technology. We at Southwestern Bell will continue to be regulated in providing your local telephone service but that doesn't mean we will let the promise of the information age pass us by."

Southwestern Bell recently formed a new holding company which will concentrate on overall financial management, strategic direction and exploring new lines of business. Its primary responsibility to shareholders, Gaubatz said, will be to increase their wealth.

Gaubatz said Southwestern Bell will grow because the average annual population growth through the end of this decade, in its five-state region, is expected to be two-thirds higher than the nation as a whole. However, he cautioned, growth alone is not an automatic ticket to success.

"Growth provides new opportunities but it must be managed well. We must have pricing structures in place that allow us to benefit from the increased use of our facilities."

Gaubatz said the company has recently completed an "aggressive modernization program" and as a result "our major investments are behind us and our network is now in place to earn."

ON THE AVERAGE, he said, customers use their phone lines only 5 percent of the time. Finding ways to fill the remaining 95 percent and profit from the increased usage, Gaubatz said, is the challenge facing the company.

"We realize an increasing amount of revenues must come from new business. We must find new ways to bring in cash in the short term and to position ourselves for the long term."

Through directory services, marketing of complex equipment to large customers, billing services for other companies and mobile phone service, Gaubatz said, the company will generate these new revenues.

Bell breakup bothers businesses

Local business managers and owners are already experiencing changes resulting from the breakup of the Bell System, scheduled to occur Jan. 1, 1984.

"The first local evidence of the effects of divestiture on customers is that business telephone customers now have a new AT&T number to call for Bell telephone service and equipment," Harold Pelzel, AT&T district manager, said.

"They now should call a toll-free number, 1-800-392-7100, which will be answered by a business service and sales center."

About 79 new business service and sales center will open nationwide this year, as AT&T prepares to assume national responsibility for all customer premises equipment formerly provided and serviced by the Bell operating companies, such as Southwestern Bell.

The new center, now technically a Southwestern Bell facility, will be staffed and operated after January by AT&T Infomation Systems.

In January, according to Pelzel, AT&T not only will sell, lease, and service existing business telephone equipment, but also will offer a broad range of state-of-the-art voice, data, software, and switching products and systems.

Nationally, the new business service and sales centers will serve more than seven million business accounts, large and small. On a daily basis, they will handle an estimated 80,000 order-related contacts and 20,000 billing-related contacts associated with customer premises equipment.

Pelzel said every effort is being made to transfer responsibility for customer service to the new business service and sales centers during the last quarter of 1983 with as little disruption to customers as possible.

Former budget director still looking for big money

By SOLVEIG TORVIK
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Like many people, Glenn Pascall, former Washington State budget director, is in Washington looking for money — $50 billion, to be exact.

The difference is, if he finds it, presumably we will all be richer for it.

At the behest of Washington Republican Sen. Slade Gorton, Pascall has taken on the mind-numbing task of trying to find a way to reduce the nation's $200 billion deficit by at least $50 billion.

"Sometimes I ask myself if I'm crazy," he confessed cheerfully in an interview yesterday.

To do the job, he has $175,000 from the Boeing Co., SafeCo, PNB Corp., the Weyerhaeuser Foundation, the Burlington Northern Foundation, the Norton Clapp family's Medina Foundation and the Cheney Foundation, named after the Tacoma forest products firm headed by Ben Cheney.

PASCALL, AS HEAD of the Washington State Research Council, found $35 billion in loose change in the federal budget that the Reagan Administration in 1981 incorporated into its budget cut proposals, and he said the administration has been "very accessible" during his present project as well.

When his study is finished next October, he will have to try to "sell it" to Congress and the White House, he said. He expects help on that score from Gorton, who is emerging as one of the budget experts on the Hill.

The work Pascall is doing now qualifies as a non-profit enterprise for tax purposes, which means he cannot supress information that might benefit or harm any interest group. If he does, the donors to his project lose their tax credit for the money they have given him, e said.

Boeing has excluded itself from the steering committee that oversees his work to avoid accusations that the study is biased and to stay free to lobby against any of his recommendations which the company may not like, he said.

The rest of the companies, who have representatives on the steering committee, are primarily interested in reducing the deficit because their economic health depends on low interest rates, he said.

BOEING'S CASE, HOWEVER, is somewhat different. While large deficits on one hand hurt Boeing's ability to sell commerical planes, "one reason for the large deficit is the strong increase in defense spending, some of which involves purchases from the Boeing Co.," Pascall said.

"The thing that really concerns me coming from the provinces to the center of government is that the focus is so terrifically short-term in trying to figure out what kind of a deal you can cut that will pass at this sitting of Congress," he said.

"When Reagan came in in 1981 with $50 billion in reductions, he got virtually everything he wanted, and one of the reasons was that the lobbyists defending spending programs were running around in so many directions at once and no one lobbyist could talk with any one member of Congress long enough to turn them around because the agenda was so huge," he said.

Importantly, there also was a perception that a broad segment of the population was sharing the pain, and this makes cutbacks easier to accept than if one group is being singled out, he said.

If that lesson of spreading the misery can be applied to the fundamental deficit problem, 'then you have a chance," he said.

THREE IDEAS ARE getting his serious attention. One is closing loopholes, which would produce $5 to $10 billion in revenues. Another is getting rid of the corporate income tax and substituting a value added tax (VAT), which is a tax added on to product at every step of its production. The third is instituting a national sales tax.

Pascall said that the arguments for getting rid of the corporate income tax is that it is economically "illogical" because companies are hiring armies of people to figure out how to avoid their tax liabilities instead of using that energy on improving their enterprises. In 1950, 30 percent of all federal income came from corporate taxes. In 1984 it will be 8 percent, said Pascall.

Dallas' 'golden triangle' area can even help Santa

DALLAS (AP) — If Santa Claus needs some help this Christmas filling the stockings of affluent Texans, this is the place he should shop.

In a radius of about three-quarters of a mile, Santa — like thousands of shoppers — would find 12 major department stores all clustered in what retailers call Dallas' "golden triangle."

Bloomingdale's recently moved in, joining Neiman-Marcus, Marshall Field's, Saks Fifth Avenue, Lord & Taylor and others in a Texas-sized shootout for upper-income customers.

"I made the comment the other day to someone ... that it is the most competitive (retailing) area I know of," said Robert Sakowitz, whose Houston-based Sakowitz chain opened its own shopping center — Sakowitz Village — across the street from Neiman-Marcus, Lord & Taylor, Montgomery Ward, J.C. Penney and Joske's stores in Prestonwood Town Center.

"It's very competitive, it's in better merchandising and it has become a major magnet (for customers) with all these stores," Sakowitz said. "You don't exactly want to go into a location where the people aren't."

Valley View Mall, first on the scene in 1973 when the "golden triangle" was farmland, was renovated this year and reopened with 60 new stores including Bloomingdale's largest store outside of New York. Federated Department Stores, which owns Bloomingdale's, already had a Dallas-based Sanger Harris department store at the mall competing with Sears Roebuck and Dillards department stores.

Sanger Harris considers its Valley View store, tops in sales for the chain, to be its flagship and Sears' store is No. 1 in sales in Texas, officials said.

About 2,500 feet down the street, Marshall Field's and Saks Fifth Avenue anchor a year-old, three-story Galleria that includes smaller stores such as Gump's from San Francisco and F.A.O. Schwarz from New York. About 1½ miles to the north is Prestonwood and Sakowitz Village.

"We have been open about 12 months and all I can say is that our anchor stores are exceeding (sales) projections by between 9 and 11 percent and the majority of our other 142 interior tenants are doing about the same," said Galleria marketing director Barbara Womble.

"I think what's happened is that there is a complement here," said F. Scott Buzzell, general manager of Valley View. "North Dallas has greatly expanded, and we draw customers from up to 40 miles away."

Ms. Womble put it another way: "It's the old car dealership theory. Did you ever see a car dealership all alone? No. They are all together because the higher concentration draws traffic."

But Buzzell warns that the "golden corridor" has reached its point of saturation. "It's forced everyone to be very aggressive with their own stores ... to maintain market share," he said.

Spokeswoman Kelley Moncrieff said Bloomingdale's opening Oct. 10 was the best, in terms of sales, in Federated's history.

"We entered Dallas because of the healthy economy here and the fashion-conscious people," said Ms. Moncrieff, "and we're wildly ecstatic."

On the day Bloomingdale's opened, business at sister store Sanger Harris was booming, she said.

"I really don't think there is going to be a shakeout," she said. "We're all just helping each other."

But Sakowitz said Bloomingdale's move did effect other stores.

"Obviously everybody dances with the new girl in town," Sakowitz said. "It had an impact and so did the Galleria. There weren't new customers overnight but there were new stores. It makes for a disfiguration of sales figures in the first week of opening up but we think we're getting back to normal."

Competition goes beyond price tags and advertisements for some stores, particularily Texas rivals Neiman-Marcus and Sakowitz. President Richard Marcus would not comment, a spokeswoman said, because he did not like to be quoted in the same story with Sakowitz.

According to the North Dallas Chamber of Commerce, 80 percent of all homes in north Dallas are valued at more than $100,000, and the majority of annual incomes in that sector of the city exceed $30,000.

"I would imagine that 80 percent of the total retail sales in the city are in north Dallas, but there's no way I can prove that," said Gordon Rose, manager of the organization.

The northern half of Dallas has other shopping areas besides the "golden triangle," but none as concentrated or competitive.

Valley View's Buzzell said most of the up-scale stores "are homeruns" in the "golden triangle."

"The trade area itself is growing at twice the national average," he said. "The thing with Dallas is that ... it is comprised of a consumer who fits pretty much into the same customer profile. It's a trendy customer — middle-management types that like things new and different and are concerned with entertaining and socializing. Dress is very much a part of their lifestyle."

Buzzell also said stores in the north Dallas corridor are drawing wealthy customers from outside of Dallas, particularily oil families from Fort Worth and East Texas cities like Tyler.

On an average Saturday at the Galleria, 3 percent of the cars are from Oklahoma, Ms. Womble said.

Having 12 department stores rubbing elbows with each other "is something that baffles all the 'experts,'" said Mike Hyatt, general manager of sprawling, 1.2 million square-foot Prestonwood.

"I don't think anybody would have a problem agreeing that this is one of the most competitive retailing areas in the country," he said.

Hyatt said sales figures for September in the stores at his mall rose 16 percent over the same period of 1982.

"I think, of course, the economy is picking up. And I think it's because of the phenominal growth in north Dallas," he said. "But places like the Galleria and Bloomingdale's helps everybody."

Cars crowd the streets around Dallas' newest retail shopping area, the Galleria. Less than a mile away are Valley View Mall, Sakowitz Village and Prestonwood Town Center. This cluster of stores contains 12 major department stores and numerous speciality stores.

Confidence essential for women who are leaders

AUSTIN — Self confidence is the single most important personality trait a woman must have to be a successful leader in a profession, business or the community, a University of Texas study shows.

Lack of such confidence is the biggest roadblock to a woman leader's success, the study adds.

Self-confidence received the highest endorsement in a UT study that questioned women participating in seminars of Leadership Texas, a program begun in 1983 by the Texas Foundation for Women's Resources. The new program helps develop women leaders by exposing them at mid-career or above to important Texas issues and prominent leaders in the state.

The study was financed by a grant from the RGK Foundation of Austin.

Forty-one of 58 women in Leadership Texas answered the questionnaire. They ranged in age from 27 to 55. They responded to questions about themselves and their work styles and how they perceive successful women leaders in general. The small study, one of the first to look at women leaders from a female perspective, suggests some of the characteristics of women leaders in Texas.

Traits other than self-confidence that were deemed essential for women leaders were sense of humor, flexibility, being responsible, dedication and decisiveness.

Among traits that the respondents viewed as being negative forces in a woman's success were those by which women appear to be "conceited," "pompous," "power-hungry," "dominating," "manipulative," "cunning" and "excitable."

Cristina Banks, UT assistant professor of management who directed the study, says she was surprised to find that charisma, a trait often associated with male leaders was endorsed by only 54 per cent of the women.

Banks says what comes through in the study is how hard the women leaders work. Most work between 46 and 70 hours per week, with 12 percent reporting they work more than 70 hours.

To cope with those times when workloads increase, the women indicated "they would just work even harder and longer hours rather than lessen the burden by eliminating tasks or taking longer to get things done," the report says.

Banks summed up that determination by saying: "When the going gets tough, they get tougher."

All that devotion to work, however, takes some toll in the form of stress.

The study found that more than 63 per cent of the women experience either some or a lot of stress at home as a result of their work.

Those who worked more than 50 hours a week and were married felt moderate to high levels of stress, the report reveals. If those same women had children, stress seemed to increase.

"One of the most striking results from this study," the report notes, "is the observation that those women want the most out of life and work very hard to get it. They report career motivations that are internal, meaning that something inside of them is driving them to achieve great things; their motivations do not seem to be a function of external factors such a needing approval or seeking rewards."

Two career motivations receiving the highest endorsement from Leadership Texas women were "to achieve respect and status" and "because of dedication to an issue or a cause."

As for career aspirations, the respondents indicated they wanted to have equally a challenging successful career and a fulfilling personal life. They also wanted to make a significant impact on society and to have national visibility.

The study shows the women rely primarily for emotional and professional support on themselves, depending to a lesser extent on their spouses or "significant others."

In regard to the support needed by women leaders, Banks says "it seems that when a partner is present, he needs to be involved in the woman's career goals and aspirations."

"In addition, he is expected to share household burdens," she reports. "when young chilren are involved, the woman needs structured child care to share child-rearing demands."

Other findings of the UT study reveal that:

—Although personal appearance is considered important, no rigid rules about dress were expressed except that one look neat, natural, genuine and subtle. "The irony is that these women say to dress in a way that does not call attention to your dress," the report states.

—Upbringing (such as having had a supportive father and a working mother) is an important contributor to a woman's success.

—What women leaders have to do differently from men is to work harder, be more prepared, manage time more efficiently and be resilient to slights.

—Organizational savvy is viewed as important, including being able to identify powerful members of an organization, learning rules of the game and knowing how to use others' expertise and talents.

—Many women strongly disagreed with the statement: "Anything is acceptable an long as you make a profit."

—Having contacts in the community and learning from others in the field were judged more beneficial to a woman's career than reading journals, attending seminars or listening to lectures.

Prior to preparing the questionnaire submitted to Leadership Texas women, Banks interviewed 28 Texas women who already had achieved success either at national or state levels.

Many similarities emerged among the 28 interviewees and the Leadership Texas women, but there also were differences.

For example, unlike the interviewees, Leadership Texas women on the average underplayed the importance of actively building up their images to others, Banks notes. Also, those in Leadership Texas generally "downplayed the importance of 'working behind the scenes' to help them gain power and influence."

Banks upgrade disount brokers' image

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

When James Quandt worked for Smith Barney Harris Upham & Co., one of Wall Street's more staid brokerage houses, he tended to look down his nose at discount stock brokers. But in handling some investments for his in-laws in 1979, he realized that they could get faster results — and pay a lower commission — on their stock sales by going to a discount stock broker, and he advised them to take their business to one of his low-priced competitors.

Both Quandt and the discount-brokerage business have come a long way since then. He has left Wall Street and is now president of Security Pacific Brokers Inc., a discount brokerage subsidiary of Security Pacific National Bank. And in entering the discount-brokerage business, the nation's banks have brought with them an aura of rock-solid stability that appears to be luring some customers away from full-line brokerage houses.

In the last year, more than 800 banks and savings and loans have begun offering discount-brokerage services, allowing customers to buy and sell stocks at commissions that are less than half what a full-line brokerage house would charge. And in most cases, the customer has been able to get the proceeds of a sale deposited in his interest-earning bank account the day after the trade, compared to settlement periods of from three to seven days at the large Wall Street firms.

QUANDT ESTIMATES that because of the banks' presence in the business, discount brokers by year-end will be handling 20 percent of retail-stock trades, up from 12.6 percent at the end of 1982 and 16.2 percent at the end of June.

Despite such dramatic growth, the discount-brokerage business has not yet — and may never — become profitable for most of the banks and savings and loans offering the service to their customers. Financial institution executives are convinced that they have to offer it both to keep up with the competition and to get the most productive use out of their existing staffs and branch networks. Deregulation of interest rates has squeezed bank profits, and executives are faced with either cutting overhead by closing branches or finding new products, such as brokerage services, to sell through that existing distribution network.

But some experts think that adding one more product to an already-long list may be a mistake, and that the hidden cost of further complicating operations may more than offset any profits to be earned buying and selling stocks for customers.

"The historic mentality of banks is that they are distribution entities and the marginal cost of one more product is rather modest," said William W. Wyman, head of the banking practice at Booz, Allen & Hamilton Inc., a New York-based consulting firm. "That made sense when they didn't have a lot of products, but now they have so many that one more can be very costly."

BANKS HAVE TAKEN a number of avenues to Wall Street. Bankamerica Corp., parent company of Bank of America, paid $53 million in stock earlier this year for Charles Schwab & Co., the nation's largest discount broker. Security Pacific in early 1982 contracted to offer the services through Fidelity Brokerage Services Inc., a Boston-based discounter, but later formed its own brokerage company and has since purchased a seat on the New York Stock Exchange.

Most banks have simply contracted with existing discount brokerage houses, providing customers with the broker's toll-free telephone number they can call to make stock trades. The bank then gets between 15 percent and 20 percent of the commission on the trade.

A group of savings and loans has banded together to form their own discount-brokerage company, Investment Services of America, and the service is now being sold under contract to other S&Ls.

Although the 1933 Glass-Steagall Act barred banks from most areas of the brokerage business, they have traditionally been able to buy and sell stocks for customers through their trust departments. Regulators have ruled that banks could take that one step further and provide discount-brokerage services to all customers, although a recent court ruling against Security Pacific raises some question about whether the service can be offered across state lines. The ruling is being appealed.

Most legal experts believe that the law does bar banks from giving investment advice to customers, as full-service brokerage firms do, but some savings and loans are permitted to have registered brokers that can give advice to customers.

IRONICALLY, BOTH banks and brokerage houses have been trying to invade one another's turf because profits from their traditional lines of business have been dwindling. Bank profits from charging interest on loans have been squeezed as deregulation raised the price they pay for deposits. Consequently, bank income from fees, commissions, leasing and other activities has been growing more rapidly than interest income.

At the same time, commission income now accounts for less than one-third of the profits in the brokerage industry, with the balance coming from stock trading and underwriting and from lending money to traders to buy stock on margin.

Starting salaries up

The general upward trend in starting salaries of inexperienced college graduates continues, but more moderately than in the past, according to the annual survey recently completed by Dr. Steven Langer, Abbott, Langer & Associates, a Chicago-based consulting firm. Graduates with bachelor degrees in engineering had average starting salaries of $2,071 per month, up 2.8 percent from last year. The highest-paying employers for this group were chemical/pharmaceutical/plastics/rubber manufacturers ($2,206); the lowest-paying, construction, engineering firms ($1,887). The highest-paid engineering graduates specialized in chemical engineering ($2,173); the lowest-paid in agricultural engineering ($1,806).

Technical (non-engineering) B.A., B.S. graduates had average starting salaries of $1,875, up 4.5 percent from last year. The highest-paying industry for technical bachelor graduates was merchandizing ($2,263), their average being pushed up by pharmacy graduates. The lowest average starting salaries were reported by food/beverage/tobacco manufacturers ($1,400). The highest-paid curriculum (excluding pharmacy) was physics ($2,069); the lowest, biological sciences ($1,320).

The average for non-technical bachelor graduates increased most, up 5.4 percent (to $1,382) from last year. The highest-paying employer group was petroleum/natural gas ($1,728). Hospitality firms, merchandising organizations, and apparel, textile product manufacturers reported the lowest average starting salaries ($1,221, $1,224, and $1,268 respectively). The highest-paying curricula were accounting and industrial management $1,502 and $1,501 respectively); the lowest, education ($1,171).

Graduates with master's degrees in engineering had an average starting salary of $2,289 (down 0.1 percent); with technical master's degrees $2,135 (up 3.5 percent); and with non-technical master's $1,739 (down 0.6 percent).

"Oil and Gas Loans are the Safest Loans in America Today."

Given all the negative press about the energy industry, a lot of people are down on oil and gas lending.

But that's exactly the opposite of the way we feel at ClayDesta National Bank.

Our bank was started by oil people, is owned by oil people, and is dedicated to serving oil people.

So our philosophy isn't going to change simply because the economy changes.

Good oil and gas lending practices lead to good oil and gas loans. And good oil and gas loans are the safest loans in America today.

We know the oil and gas business. We like it. And more importantly, we know how to handle the special needs of independent operators.

ClayDesta National is one of just a handful of Texas banks who have full-time oil and gas lenders on staff, ready to work with you.

If you'd like to know more about the way we feel about oil and gas lending, give our senior lending officer Bob Elliott a call at 683-2265. You'll be surprised how much better you'll feel talking to bankers who are high on energy.

You've never seen a bank like ClayDesta.

Homebanking becoming as common as computer games

By NEAL KOCH
Hearst Feature Service

Twice a month, Kathryn Brown sits down at the Atari 400 computer in the bedroom of her Bronx, N.Y., apartment, hooks up her phone to the console and inserts a cartridge for what looks as if it might be Pac Man. Instead, she types in three passwords and begins to pay all her bills.

"It's terrific," says the 29-year-old word processor. "I don't have to worry about Sears with their little delinquent notes anymore."

Homebanking — a system long anticipated by both banks and consumers — is beginning to materialize as a reality.

FOR A FLAT FEE of $12 per month, Brown gets access to her account at Chemical Bank in New York. On the 14th of each month, she deposits her paycheck in person at her bank. She then heads home, sits down in her bedroom, flips on her Atari computer, loads in a cartridge of Pronto software and types in commands directing her bank to pay her electric utility bill, her MasterCard and Visa charges, and department store bills. The next day, the bank will automatically mail out checks for her.

The main value of such systems is that they eliminate most of the paperwork of bank record-keeping, the banks' biggest single labor cost, which is then passed on to consumers in the form of service charges. But many banks are unsure that consumers will prefer the system to checkbooks.

Chemical Bank tested it before putting it into operation, and ran into no great resistance. The Times Mirror Co. has conducted tests of a similar system in 350 households in California's Orange County and the Palos Verde area of Los Angeles County.

THE COSTS TO the home user, in addition to the monthly fee, are considerable, including the purchase of a home computer unit, such as the Atari, an Apple or IBM personal computer, a $75 modem hookup unit, a television screen and a telephone.

The costs to the bank that supplies such a service to retail customers would include payment of a one-time only licensing fee to Chemical Bank, developers of the Pronto system; an annual fee; and fees for each customer served based on the numbers of customers served, according to Charles Forbes, Chemical's vice president for electronic banking. He declines to specify exactly what such fees are, however. Chemical currently charges its customers in the New York area the flat $12 per month fee Brown pays.

Not everyone is so enthusiastic about homebanking. John Naisbitt, in his recent book "Megatrends," says that homebanking will never catch on in a big way because people feel worthy writing out their checks and will be unlikely to give up the custom.

GAVIN CLAYBAUGH, a Naisbitt associate, also anticipates discomfort with electronic banking, particularly among middle-aged and older people who grew up before the recent electronic revolution.

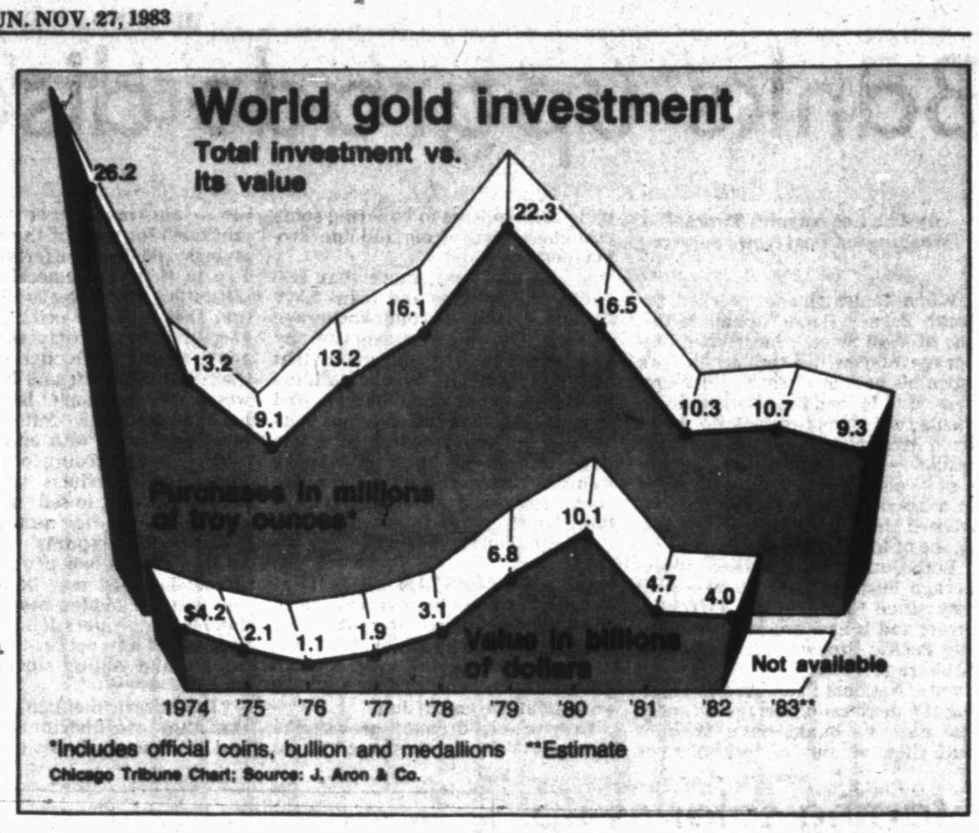

"My mother doesn't even trust automatic teller machines," he says. "Some people prefer to go in and deal with a teller. Homebanking is a little too high-tech for people."

In addition, the system is costly, says Harold Fink, a member of a Long Island, N.Y., computer club whose members have been discussing the features of homebanking among themselves lately.

WITH PAPER CHECKS, Fink points out, the writer usually has a few days before the check is cashed to continue collecting interest on the money. With electronic banking, the money is immediately removed from the customer's account even though the bank will probaby not have to pay up on the check issued for several days.

"It takes the float away from you and gives it to them," Fink says. "From that point, it would pay the banks to practically give it away," he adds.

Chemical's Forbes, however, says electronic banking may actually be cheaper for customers in the end. With banking deregulation continuing, banks may begin charging as much as 50 cents or one dollar per paper check in the near future, he says.

Retirement game's rules have changed dramatically

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Planning for retirement used to be a relatively simple task. Most people could count on Social Security, combined with personal savings and perhaps a company pension, to maintain a reasonable income level.

But now, with the latest changes in the Social Security and income tax laws, individuals nearing retirement need to prepare for the future far more carefully than ever before. The tax consequences of various alternatives have become extremely complex and a mistake can cost a family thousands of dollars in future income.

"Most people don't realize that they have some real choices to make when they reach retirement," says Daniel Van Bogaert, a tax expert at a major Los Angeles corporation who conducts retirement planning seminars in Southern California. "There are a lot of opportunities to take advantage of the tax breaks available. But there are also some real traps you can fall into if you're not wary."

The rules of the game for retirees have changed dramatically in the past few years.

Next year, to take just one crucial change, Social Security benefits will be indirectly taxable for the first time, although the change only affects relatively high-income retirees. For single persons with income totaling more than $25,000 and married persons bringing in more than $32,000, half of their Social Security benefit will be potentially taxable.

Although only about 10 percent of the approximately 17.3 million households with people over 65 initially will be affected, most observers expect more and more retired people to be included as inflation pushes them over the threshold and as Congress looks for additional sources of tax revenue to deal with the continued problems of the Social Security system.

All sources of income legally have to be included in determining income, including income from once-sacrosanct tax-emempt bonds. Tax-free bonds are generally a poor idea for most retired people, points out Ben Weberman, capital market columnist for Forbes magazine, and the new law makes them even worse for all but the highest-income individuals.

For instance, a couple receiving Social Security benefits, with a total income of $33,600, will find itself pushed over the $32,000 limit and subject to an additional tax liability. If their income includes, say, $5,000 in tax-exempt bond interest, the government will be grabbing a part of their "tax-free" yield, making municipal bonds even less attractive as an investment compared to corporate or government bonds.

One alternative, Weberman suggests, is to sell off a portfolio of tax-exempt bonds at retirement, probably establishing a capital loss that can be used to reduce current income taxes.

Most retirees are not in a high enough tax bracket to justify the lower yields on tax-exempt bonds and, what is worse, they face additional stiff expenses when they buy and sell them compared to investments in Treasury bonds or widely traded stocks and corporate bonds.

Another choice likely to face people nearing retirement or leaving a job is what to do with a "lump-sum" distribution from a company profit-sharing plan or certain pension programs. While many people may be tempted to simply roll over their payment into an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) to avoid paying any immediate tax, Van Bogaert says, it might be more advantageous to pay a one-time tax under the special 10-year forward averaging rules.

A person receiving a lump-sum distribution of $50,000, for instance, would owe $6,250 in federal income tax on the payment. After paying the tax, he would be free to invest the remaining $43,750, possibly arranging for future income from the money to come as capital gains, which are taxed at only 25 percent of the normal rate. Money in an IRA, on the other hand, will eventually be taxed at ordinary income rates as it is withdrawn, potentially creating a bigger tax liability down the road.

But for those with no immediate plans for the money, who expect to be in a lower-tax bracket later on, putting the payment in an IRA would allow it to accumulate interest tax free until they were 70 years old.

The choices become even more complex, Van Bogaert says, when you have to consider the consequences of state taxes as well.

For that reason, he suggests, it is crucial to start developing retirement options well before you reach the age of 65 and to become aware of the special tax treatments available from the federal government and from California and other states.

Individuals over 65 can take advantage of such tax-savings options as the capital gains exclusion of $125,000 on the sale of a home, which may often make it financially attractive for an individual to sell a home upon retirement, rent a smaller residence and put the profits from the sale into an investment that would offer steady income.

If you stay in your home, some states, including California, allow retirees to defer paying any property taxes until after death, when the remaining estate would pay them off.

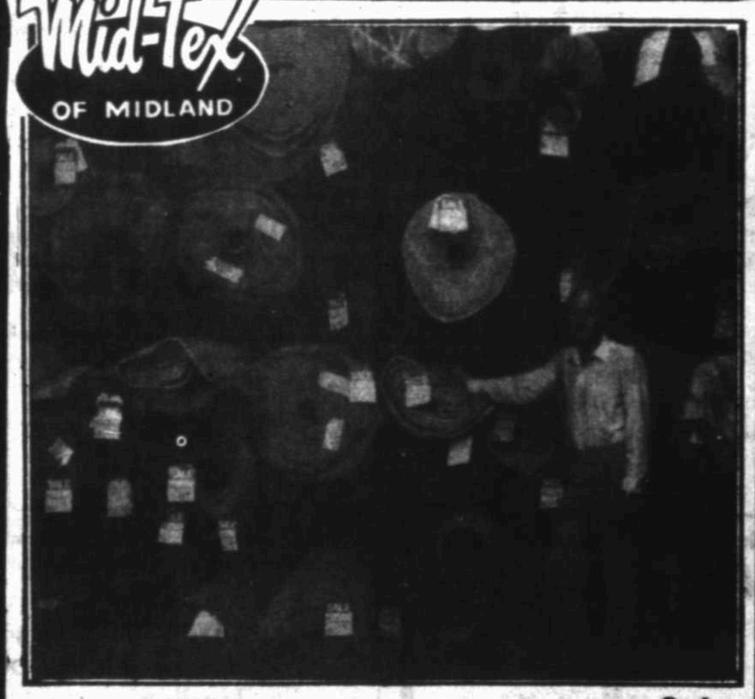

Other alternatives include setting up your own business, which would allow older individuals to continue to defer some income and lower current taxes by establishing a Keogh program or a profit-sharing plan.

'People's tax break' misunderstood

By The Los Angeles Times
Washsington Post News Service

They are called the people's tax break, the king of retirement-savings plans.

Indeed, since 1981, when their availability was vastly broadened, Individual Retirement Accounts have become one of the most popular and fastest growing methods to defer taxes and save for retirement. Recommended for nearly every working person, IRAs have attracted as many as 25 million Americans investing more than $80 billion, triple the amount invested in the instruments two years ago.

But even with their undeniable benefits, IRAs are still misunderstood by millions of potential investors. According to a survey by the Life Insurance Marketing & Research Association, a Farmington, Conn.-based trade group, 71 percent of those choosing not to open IRAs do not realize that there is no minimum dollar amount required to start an IRA.

Perhaps even more are not aware that they do not have to wait until age 59 1-2 to benefit from the accounts. Investors, in fact, can withdraw funds after as little as five or six years — incurring a penalty for early withdrawal — and still be better off than had they put their money in comparable investments without IRA tax benefits.

IN ADDITION, many investors do not realize that there are tax-deferral alternatives that in many cases are even better than IRAs. Here is a look at these major tax-deferral vehicles:

—INDIVIDUAL RETIREMMENTACCOUNTS. The advantages of an IRA for an investor in a high tax bracket are overwhelming. Investors can deduct up to $2,000 of income each year (up to $2,250 for a person with a non-working spouse) and place it in an IRA. Income and principal is tax deferred until withdrawn, when investor may be in a lower tax bracket.

Because IRA funds can come from before-tax income, the base on which an investor can accrue earnings is much larger than non-IRA investments. Thus, a worker in the 50 percent tax bracket wishing to save $2,000 of his income can put all of the $2,000 in an IRA. In most non-IRA investments, Uncle Sam would take $1,000 of that income, leaving the investor with only $1,000 to start an account. Similarly, a person in the 30 percent bracket will have only $1,400 of his $2,000 left to place in most non-IRA investments.

Because of those advantages, IRAs pay off as investments even if funds are withdrawn long before age 59 1-2, even with the 10 percent penalty imposed on withdrawals before that age that are not because of the investor's death or disability.

Investors, however, still should not look at IRAs simply as short-term investments, warns Donald P. Gould, a vice president for marketing and financial services with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards Inc. "The right attitude about an IRA is to leave it in as long as you can."

—KEOGH: Keogh plans are similar to IRAs in that they allow investors to sock away income tax-defered. Earnings also are tax-deferred. The main difference is that Keoghs are only for self-employed workers.

For self-employed workers who do not employ other workers, Keogh plans have two distinct advantages over IRAs. First, the maximum allowed contribution is much larger than for IRAs, equal to 15 percent or $15,000 of one's income, whichever is lowest. Next year, the limits will rise to 20 percent or $30,000.

Second, if Keogh funds are withdrawn all at once, they will be taxed less heavily than funds withdrawn from IRAs. Investors who have contributed for five or more years are entitled to use the 10-year averaging method for computing tax. The computation under that method is complicated, but in principle it assumes that the money is being withdrawn over 10 years. Thus, a $100,000 lumpsum withdrawal can be taxed at a rate based on a $10,000 withdrawal, which would result in a rate as low as 15 percent. A comparable IRA withdrawal would be taxed at a 50 percent rate. However, for self-employed persons who employ others, Keoghs are treated like corporate pension plans. Full-time employees must be included in the benefits, which generally will reduce the benefits for the self-employed owner.

—401(K) Salary-Reduction Plans. Created by Congress in 1978, the use of these plans began to take off in 1981 when the Internal Revenue Service ruled that the money invested in them could be before-taxes, just like funds in IRAs. Because of that, they soon may surpass IRAs as the fastest growing tax-deferral vehicle.

About 25 percent of Fortune 500 companies now offer them, and most of the rest will have them within a year or two, predicts Jeremy Gold, a consulting actuary for Buck Consultants, a New York-based employee-benefit consulting firm.

Companies that offer 401(k) plans offer to withhold a certain percentage of their workers' salaries tax-free. The amount ranges from 4 percent to as high as 16 percent. In some cases, the company matches all or part of the employees' contributions. The money can be invested in annuities, the company's stock or some other type of securities fund. Like IRAs, the earnings also are tax-defered.

But 401(k) plans have several distinct advantages over IRAs. First, workers are allowed a larger annual contribution, up to $30,000 or 25 percent of annual income, whichever is lower. Second, when withdrawn the funds are given favored tax treatment through the use of 10-year averaging. Third, employers' can match employees' contributions.

Fourth, there is no penalty for withdrawals if the employee meets the criteria for withdrawal. Fifth, an employee's eligibility for other company benefits, such as pensions, can still be based on his income before deferral, rather than the reduced amount he actually receives. Sixth, the employee can borrow from his 401(k) fund under certain conditions.

However, there are some disadvantages compared to IRAs. One must work for a company that has a 401(k) program. There is less flexibility to pull out the funds. Unless an employee is leaving the company, he cannot withdraw the 401(k) funds unless he can prove financial hardship, such as the need for a down payment on a primary residence or funds to finance childrens' college expenses.

Finally, there is less investment flexibility. An employee's choices are restricted to those investment funds offered by the company. "The chief advantage of an IRA is that you're in charge. Nobody's telling you what to do," Wesley Howard, editor of the IRA Reporter, a Cleveland-based trade newsletter, said.

However, Howard added, "as long as the options to invest are sufficient, 401(k) plans are hands down the better deal than IRAs."

Company Thrift Plans. Until the advent of the 401(k) plans, so-called company thrift plans were seen as the best alternative to IRAs. Like 401(k) plans, an employee contributes a certain percentage of his income and the company typically matches all or part of it. Funds are then invested in company stock or some other securities fund, and earnings are tax-deferred until withdrawal.

However, unlike 401(k) plans, contributions to a thrift plan are not tax deductible, but instead must come from after-tax income, thus reducing their attractiveness.

Still, thrift plans have advantages over IRAs. The company contributions often offset the disadvantages of not having a tax deduction. There is no penalty for withdrawal and companies frequently allow full withdrawal after as little as two years in a plan. Thrift plans also qualify for 10-year averaging if an employee has been in a plan for five years or more.

Some companies offer both thrift plans and 401(k) plans, or plans that combine the best features of both.

—FLEXIBLE BENEFITS ACCOUNTS. These accounts, sometimes called Section 125 plans after the tax code that created them, have become one of the fastest growing employee-benefit vehicles offered by companies.

Basically, they allow an employee to use before-tax funds to pay for health care and other benefits that he otherwise would have to use after-tax funds to pay for. For example, an employee can ask a company to give him $1,000 more in dental-care benefits and deduct that amount from his earnings, untaxed. If the worker were in the 50 percent tax bracket and did not enjoy such a feature, he would have only $500 to spend on dental care.

In that sense, they are not really a tax-deferral plan but rather a tax elimination plan. "The taxes (on the amount deducted) are gone forever," Gold of Buck Consultants says. The employee thus gets more benefits for his dollar, and the company at the same time can reduce its health-care costs.

Because of the attractiveness of such an arrangement to both employee and employer, Gold says that he expects hundreds of companies to offer such plans by the end of 1984, up from a handful at the beginning to 1983. However, some financial experts expect that Congress may roll back the plans, under pressure from the IRS, which is concerned about the drain on tax revenues.

—TAX-DEFERRED ANNUITIES. Annuities, generally offered by life-insurance companies, are retirement-oriented accounts in which investors pay premiums before retirement in exchange for guaranteed payments after a certain age. Annuities often are vehicles in which investors place their IRA accounts.

For annuities opened without IRA money, however, the premiums must come from after-tax income, thus putting annuities are at a distinct disadvantage against IRAs.

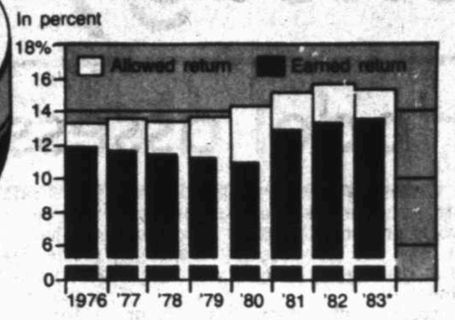

However, IRS-certified non-profit organizations — such as churches, schools or charitable groups — can place employees' pretax income into annuities, thus making them as good if not better than IRAs. Additionally, the amount invested can be much higher than $2,000 and there are no tax penalties for withdrawals before age 59 1-2.

The possible risk in annuities was highlighted recently by the case of Baldwin United Corp., which filed for bankruptcy and left more than 160,000 investors who had bought its annuities wondering if they would ever get their investment back.

However, brokers and others have become more careful about which insurance companies they buy annuities from, Bateman Eichler's Gould says. In addition, the vast majority of insurance companies are financially stable and unlikely to go belly up, Howard of the IRA Reporter added.

Hodel assesses Arab desires

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia is committed to keeping the world price of oil at $29 a barrel for at least the next three years, says U.S. Energy Secretary Donald Hodel.

Absent a disruption in supply or increased energy taxes, which some members of Congress are advocating to reduce the federal deficit, that should mean stable gasoline and heating oil prices for Americans.

Hodel said upon his return this week from a trip to four Middle East countries that Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani is determined to prevent world oil prices from rising, as some OPEC nations are demanding, or from falling in response to the current glut.

"There's clearly considerable concern in that part of the world about a short-term softening in price," Hodel said. "But Yamani, who may well be in a position to know, was emphatic that it will not happen."

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cut its price $5 a barrel eight months ago in an effort to revive sales that had declined to their lowest level in more than a decade.

That has helped reduce gasoline prices in the United States an average 3 cents per gallon in the past three months, despite a nickle per gallon boost in federal taxes and widespread increases in state and local taxes on the fuel.

World demand for oil, however, has yet to pick up significantly as economic recovery outside the United States lags. In response, producer nations not controlled by OPEC, such as the Soviet Union, reportedly have been allowing their prices to slip further in the past two weeks.

Meanwhile, Iran and Venezuela both indicated earlier this month they would prefer to see prices rise about $5 a barrel with a reduction in OPEC's current estimated production of 18 million barrels of oil a day.

All 13 oil ministers from the cartel nations are scheduled to meet in Geneva on Dec. 7 to map their 1984 strategy.

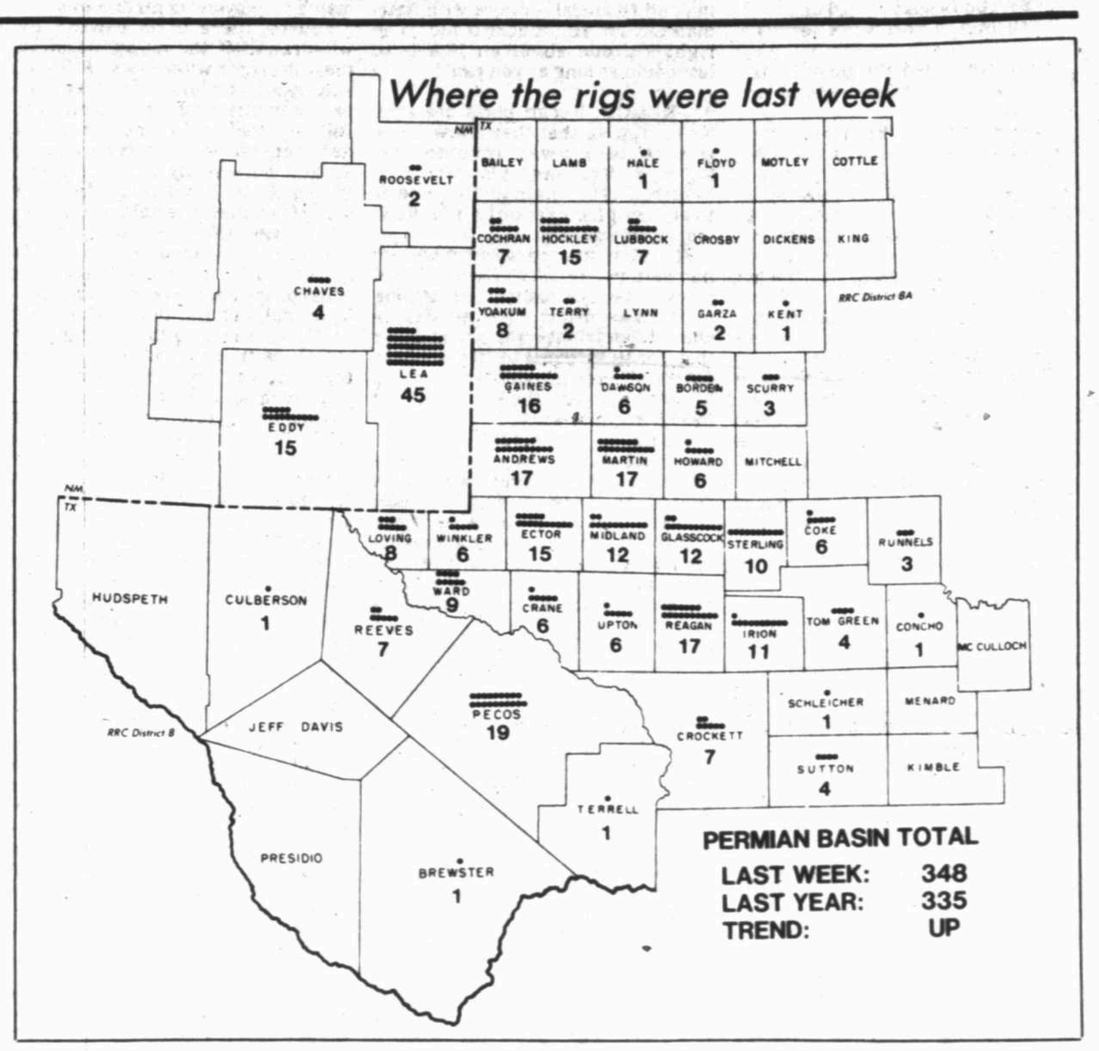

Hodel said Yamani made it clear that Saudi Arabia, as the "swing producer," would take whatever steps necessary to raise or reduce its current producton of 5.5 million barrels a day to keep the price at $29 for three years.

"That was more than his hope," Hodel said. "That was his projection. And of course — with 25 percent of the proven oil reserves in the world — they (Saudi Arabia) have been in a position to have considerable influence on that."

However, he acknowledged that some exporting countries want the price to rise with inflation in general, though officials admit the difficulty in measuring inflation on a worldwide basis.

"The argument there," he said, "is that if you wait three years until demand reaches a certain level, and then try to catch up in one year for three years of inflation, the jolt is too great and disruptive."

Hodel said an abrupt $5 price increase "would be the clincher" for many industrialized nations that are working to reduce their dependence on oil imports.

MDI acquries Troy Inc.

Ruston

Mineral Development Inc. has acquired the assets of Troy Exploration Inc., Dallas, for one million shares of MDI common stock and moved MDI's corporate headquarters to Dallas from Midland, where the operating staff continues to be based.

MDI also announced that Troy D. Phillips, president of Troy Exploration, has been named president and chief executive officer of MDI and has been elected to the board of directors. Richard D. Collins, MDI's former president, has been elected vice chairman of the board of directors. John A. Schlensker remains chairman of the board. R.B. Ruston Jr., formerly a vice president with Troy Exploration, was named vice president of MDI.

Phillips, formerly a partner in the Dallas law firm of Baker, Miller, Phillips & Murray, left private practive in May, 1982, to form Troy Exploration. The company currently operates more than 30 oil and gas wells in South and West Texas and manages several oil and gas limited partnerships.

At March 31, MDI's fiscal year-end, the company's proved reserves were estimated at 238,000 barrels of oil and 844 million cubic feet of natural gas, located primarily in East and West Texas. Oil and gas sales in fiscal 1983 were approximately $1 million. The company previously announced it intended to sell its polyethylene pipe manufacturing plant. The sale is now imminent, the company said.

Unusual move nets negative response

By The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

Superior Oil Co.'s unusual move late Wednesday to boost the ante in an attempt to fight any takeover attempts drew an initial negative response from investors Friday.

Superior's stock price fell $1.75 to close at $35.125 Friday on the New York Stock Exchange, as 1,127,400 shares changed hands. It was the fifth most active issue on the Big Board.

However, the long Thanksgiving weekend apparently delayed the actions expected to be taken by one or more major shareholders in response to the Houston-based company's declaration of a special dividend of convertible preferred stock to owners of its common stock.

Under its terms, Superior's dividend could greatly increase the cost for anyone who acquires as much as 35 percent of Superior's stock to buy the rest. It would do so by making the preferred redeemable for cash at the highest price paid in acquiring the first 35 percent.

The independent oil company swiftly came up with the plan after hiring New York investment banker Morgan Stanley & Co. to cope with last Monday's disclosure that former Chairman Howard Keck of Los Angeles was exploring possible sale of an 18.7 percent stock interest to potential buyers of Superior.

Keck's forces, who have hired Dillon Read & Co. of New York as their own investment bankers to pursue such a sale, could not be reached Friday for comment.

However, a spokesman here for Keck's sister, Willametta Keck Day of Santa Barbara, Calif., who owns another 3.5 percent of Superior's common stock, denounced the dividend as "totally designed to scare suitors away" by making the cost prohibitive.

The spokesman said, "My guess is that someone will take some type of action" as a counterattack next week, but did not say that Mrs. Day would do so. Her spokesman added that the Securities and Exchange Commission or the New York Stock Exchange "conceivably" could become involved.

A Superior spokesman said that he had talked to some securities analysts Friday and that he was "very pleased" with the early reaction on Wall Street to what the company insists is a "pro-shareholder" measure.

In response to a question, he said that he had not spoken to any of the institutions that have holdings in the company's shares.

Superior, which also had disclosed Wednesday the resignation of four of its eight outside directors, said Friday that the four left the board because "they had a conflict of interest" between the company and Keck family trusts. He said that they did not vote on the dividend plan.

The company spokesman said of the resigned directors that Marsh A. Cooper, B. R. Dorsey and Max R. Lents are directors of the W.M. Keck Foundation and that John E. Kolb is a partner in a law firm that is currently legal counsel to the trustee of certain Keck trusts.

Howard Keck, who himself resigned from the board a month earlier, has sole voting rights for most of the 18.7 percent holding in family trusts and charities. The W.M. Keck Foundation owns a small portion of the holding.

The Superior spokesman said that he did not know what day the four Keck-related outside directors resigned.

Ironically, the latest developments appear to give a new commonality of interest between How ard Keck and Mrs. Day, son and daughter of the company founder, who were antagonists in a major proxy battle last spring over a Superior stockholder resolution.

Mrs. Day, with decisive voting support by institutional investors, prevailed over the Keck-led management in passing a measure requiring that certain major offers for company stock be put before a special committee of outside directors.

Keck's decision to sell to prospective suitors, which he noted in an SEC filing would likely maximize the selling price, would give Mrs. Day the same potential benefit in selling to a suitor.

An Important Message from the GULF INVESTORS GROUP

WE BELIEVE GULF MANAGEMENT'S ROYALTY TRUST ANALYSIS IS WRONG

Dear Fellow Gulf Shareholder:

Gulf is circulating proxy materials dated November 16, 1983 addressed to institutional holders of Gulf stock. These materials purport to analyze the valuation of Gulf common stock after creation of a royalty trust with a 75% net profits interest in Gulf's U.S. oil and gas reserves. We are amazed at the low value placed on Gulf by its own management in these materials.

In our opinion, Gulf's materials reflect a gross undervaluation of Gulf. Gulf's materials assign an absurdly low value of only $5.10 per share for Gulf Oil common stock after creation of the trust. This value is wrong for the following reasons:

FIRST: Gulf Oil Corporation, after a 75% royalty trust, would have a book value estimated at $40 to $45 per share. Gulf's $5.10 per share market valuation would mean that the company's stock trades at only 11% to 13% of book value. *In today's market, major oil company stocks generally trade at 70% to 100% of book value.

SECOND: Gulf Oil Corporation, after a 75% royalty trust, would have cash flow in excess of $11.00 per currently outstanding share. Major oil company stocks trade at 2.5 to 3.5 times cash flow, *but Gulf management is suggesting that its own stock would trade at a meager 0.5 times cash flow.

THIRD: After a 75% royalty trust, Gulf's remaining operations would have a J. S. Herold valuation estimated at $62 per share (after adjusting Herold's most recent value of $114 per share to eliminate 75% of the value assigned to U. S. oil and gas reserves). Gulf's $5.10 per share valuation represents only about 8% of this adjusted Herold's valuation. *In reality, major oil company stocks trade at 35% to 50% of J. S. Herold valuation.

FOURTH: Gulf Oil Corporation, after a 75% royalty trust, would have over $30 billion of revenues, $16 billion of total assets and $1.9 billion of annual cash flow. Yet Gulf management would have you believe that the company would have a total market value of only $840 million.

FIFTH: Gulf Oil Corporation, after a 75% royalty trust, would continue to own 137 million shares of Gulf Canada Ltd. Based on the current price for Gulf Canada on the American Stock Exchange of about $14 per share, each share of Gulf Oil would have an underlying $11.62 in market value of Gulf Canada stock. This value alone amounts to more than two times the $5.10 valuation for the whole company contained in the Gulf materials.

SIXTH: Gulf Oil Corporation, after a 75% royalty trust, would in our opinion have sufficient cash flow to continue to pay annual cash dividends in the range of $2.00 to $3.00 per share. Therefore, on the basis of Gulf management's $5.10 per share valuation, the annual dividend yield on the stock would be an incredible 40% to 60%.

SEVENTH: Gulf uses a multiple of only 5.3 times cash flow in valuing the royalty trust units. This multiple is unsupportably low in comparison to the multiples of eight to ten times cash flow which apply in the real world to other royalty trusts. We believe this low multiple is particularly inappropriate in light of Gulf's annual development expenditures of $700 million, which should result in increased reserves and an extended productive life for the properties. We believe that a multiple of 8 to 10 times annual cash flow of $6.75 per unit is more appropriate.

EIGHTH: During the past five years, Gulf has spent $9.1 billion on operations other than U. S. oil and gas. This equals $55 per current share. *Does Gulf management really believe that those operations plus the retained 25% of U. S. oil and gas reserves would have a value of only $5.10 per share?

We believe the foregoing demonstrates that Gulf has grossly understated the value to shareholders of the royalty trust and the remaining company and shows a basic misunderstanding by Gulf and its advisors of the impact of a royalty trust on Gulf. We strongly believe there is substantial value in Gulf, and that the value can and should be realized for all Gulf shareholders. We urge you not to base your vote at the December 2 special meeting on Gulf management's royalty trust analysis which we believe to be erroneous.

Don't Be Confused About Taxes

Gulf Management has repeatedly claimed that a royalty trust is not good for individual shareholders.

Remember: The Gulf Investors Group consists of both corporations and individuals. These investors all believe the enhancement in the value of Gulf stock which could be achieved by a trust would substantially exceed the related tax liability for both individuals and corporations.

Remember: Other shareholders, both individuals and corporations, have overwhelmingly supported royalty trusts when given the opportunity. Holders of over 96% of Mesa's, Southland's and Sabine's shares voting on the creation of trusts supported their companies' royalty trust distributions.

Remember: Our goal is the same as yours. We are working to increase value for all shareholders.

Don't Give Up Your Rights

Gulf management's reincorporation proposal is a defensive move to eliminate important shareholder rights.

- All shareholders lose their right to cumulative voting in the election of directors.
- Gulf shareholders lose the right of a 10% holder to require Gulf to submit proposed charter amendments to a shareholder vote.
- Gulf shareholders lose the right of a 20% holder to call a special shareholders meeting.
- REMEMBER: You don't have to decide whether you are for or against a royalty trust at this time. The most important thing for you to decide is whether you want to preserve your right to have shareholder ideas such as a royalty trust come before you at some future time.

YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR VOTE

Even if you have already voted for the reincorporation proposal, you have every legal right to change your mind and vote AGAINST on a later dated BLUE proxy card. Since time is short, please mail your proxy today in the envelope that has been provided to you. If you are concerned that your vote may not be received in time for the December 2 meeting, please call our proxy solicitor for immediate assistance:

Welcome, Gulf!

ClayDesta Plaza is proud to welcome Gulf Oil Corporation.

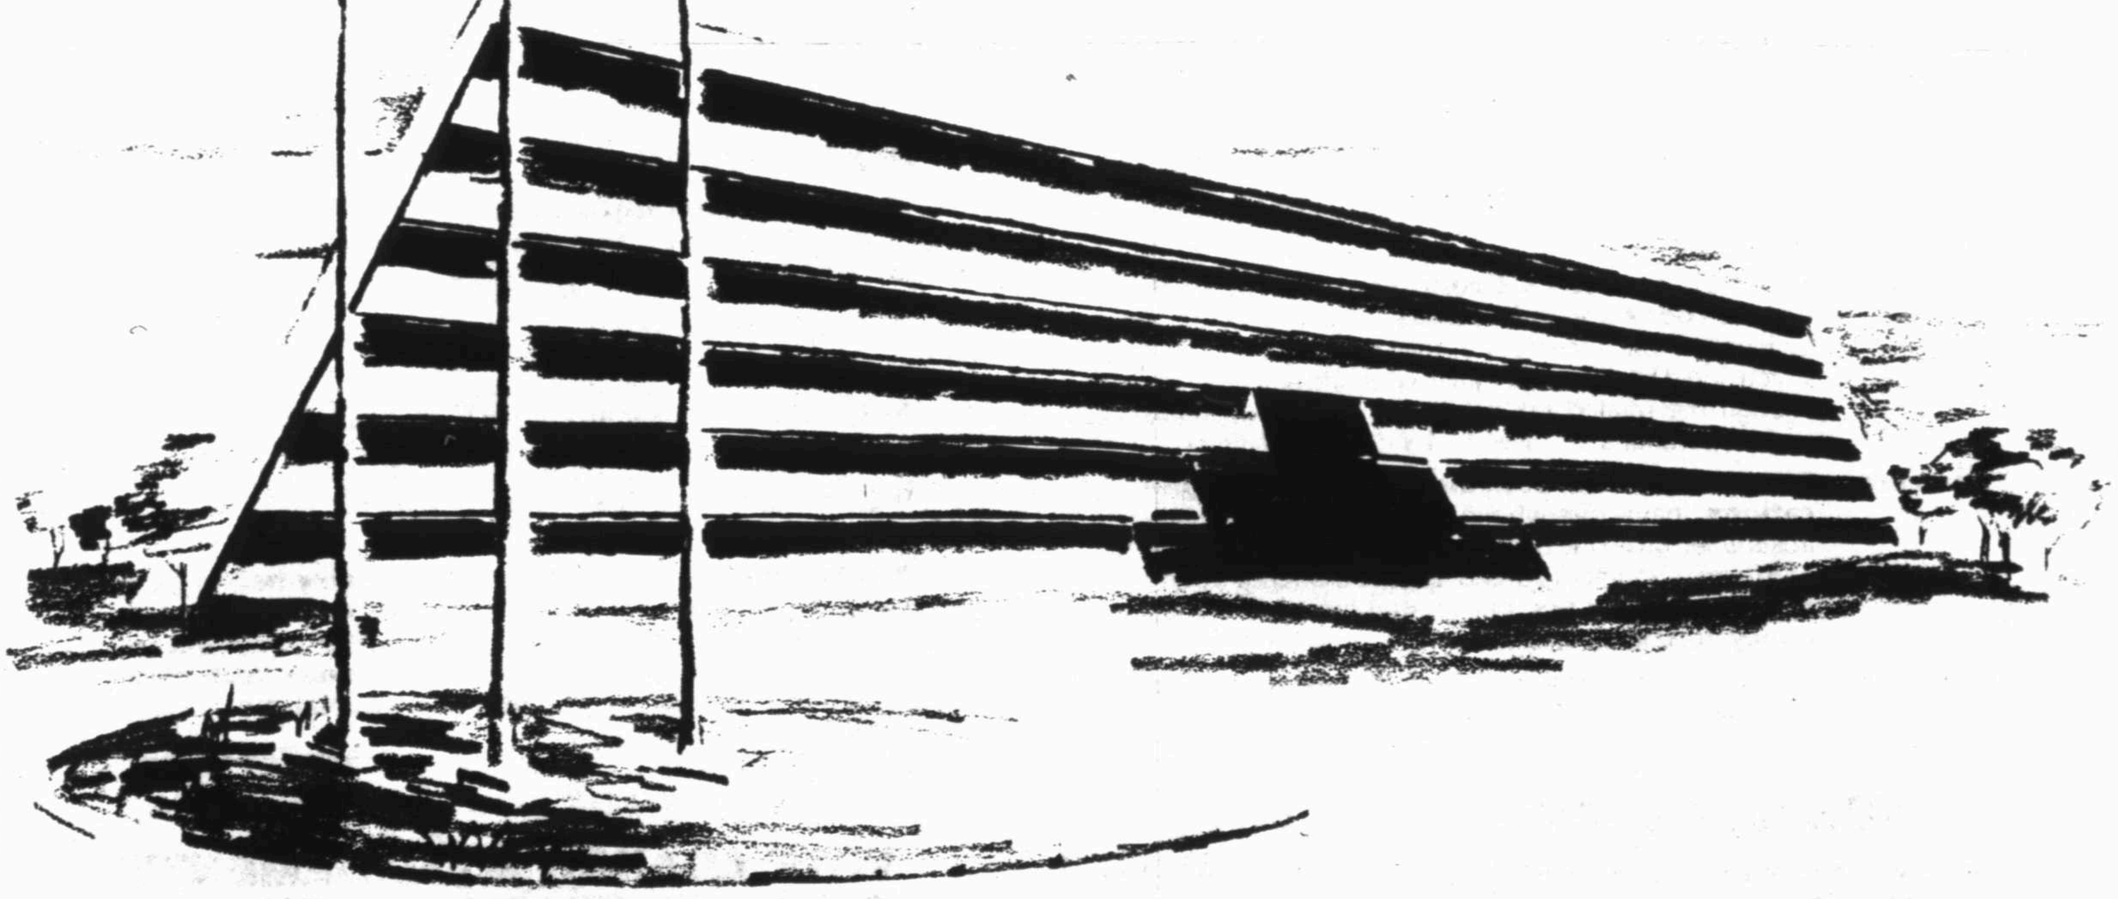

Gulf is the latest major company to move to ClayDesta Plaza. But Gulf is no newcomer to the Permian Basin or to the oil and gas industry.

In fact, they're the area's leading producer of natural gas, and the third leading producer of crude oil. And the completion of the distinctive Gulf Building caps a 57-year presence in Midland.

As you would expect from a successful industry leader, Gulf's building reflects innovation. A unique sloping front, skylights, and an atrium area do more than create a pleasant environment. Natural light makes it more productive and energy-efficient, too. The six story, 275,000 square foot building is home for Gulf's Western Division Oil Exploration and Production Company, with 450 employees.

Your business may not need quite the space that Gulf has. But you can still be part of the positive environment at ClayDesta Plaza. You can choose from space available in the ClayDesta National Bank Building or the ClayDesta Towers. Or we'll build to suit your needs.

Every day 30,000 barrels of Permian Basin crude are used to make gasoline for 7-Eleven store pumps. There are more than 7,000 7-Eleven stores nationwide.

Southland, CITGO buy to have positive effect on area

By JULIE FAUBEL
Business-Energy Writer

The Southland Corp.'s acquisition of CITGO Petroleum Corp. will have a positive effect on independent oil producers in the Permian Basin, said Sam J. Susser, president of CITGO and senior vice president of Southland. Susser was in Midland recently to discuss the acquisition with area independents.

On Aug. 31, The Southland Corp. of Dallas, the world's largest operator and franchiser of convenience stores, bought CITGO from Cities Service Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corp.

The $1 billion purchase price included a refinery, 32 refined products terminals and 16,000 miles of pipeline, in addition to 353 Quick Mart gasoline-convenience stores and 4,000 branded CITGO service stations.

CITGO BUYS ABOUT 75,000 barrels of crude oil per day with about 30,000 of those barrels flowing from independents in the Permian Basin.

"Before today, we were very dependent on Cities Service's own crude oil production and that is no longer part of this package," Susser said. "I think the independent producers will become much more important to us. We want to impress them with our ability to be competitive in what we pay for crude oil. We want to encourage them to sell their crude oil to us so that we have enough for our refinery.

"I think the independent has a place in the exploration business, and maybe even more so now than 20 years ago. A lot of the major oil companies seem to be going on elephant hunts — that really big find. Their costs are so high that if they don't gamble big and win big they lose. The independent can go out and get little leases and drill shallow wells, watch his expenses and not pay the tremendous amounts of overhead and do very nicely."

Susser related that when CITGO became available his company took a look at the package of assets to see what could be done with it.

"The refinery is a very large, complex and modern facility in Lake Charles, La. The pipelines and terminals allow us to buy the low cost crude, refine it, ship it into our own terminals and distribute it from there to our own stores.

"This will allow us to make an additional layer of profit that we were not making. What we did was integrate vertically backwards from the normal oil company growth of finding some oil, building a refinery, building some piplines and terminals, and then establishing retail outlets. We started with the retail outlet and worked our way backwards."

Sam J. Susser
President CITGO Petroleum

THROUGH ITS 7,312 7-Eleven convience stores, Southland is the largest independent retailer of gasoline in the U.S selling more than 100,000 barrels a day. With the acquisition of CITGO, it has outdistanced itself even more from the competition.

The CITGO refinery can supply 80 percent of the gasoline needed by its retail outlets. The rest, Susser said, will be bought from the spot market. Until September, CITGO was buying 100 percent of its refined crude from the spot market.

Ben Windham, manager of crude oil acquisitions for CITGO, added "...With Southland's acquisition of CITGO, we now have a demand to run the refinery at full blast. Before, we were somewhat curtailed by lack of volume for all our products. This now means that our demand for crude oil is greater. Naturally, that has an impact on the independent because that's who we look to first.

"We want people to know who CITGO is. We wanted these operators to know the same people will still be buying crude."

CITGO's high volume gasoline outlets will indirectly compete with 7-Eleven.

"It's a different business concept," said Susser. "7-Eleven is a high volume convenience store that sells gasoline as opposed to a Quick Mart — high volume gasoline selling."

WITH CITGO, Susser predicts Southland's total revenues will grow from $6.78 billion in 1982, to $12 billion by 1984. Self-service gasoline represented 25.3 percent of store sales in 1982. In addition, Southland supplies about 5 percent of all the jet fuel sold to major carriers in the U.S.

Susser was reluctant to speculate on the future of crude oil prices.

"All I have is absolute, sheer speculation. My speculation is that oil prices will slip a little. The conservation measures that we as a nation and even the world have taken have really worked and demand for crude oil is down significantly. Even though we are coming back into a period of economic boom, I think most of the conservation measures will mean the demand for oil will not increase as rapidly as the economic recovery. If crude oil goes down slightly, then product prices will go down slightly."

Susser credits Southland's responsive management system with staying competitive with gas prices.

"We have a policy of following the competition. On the street we are very competitive. We ask our store managers to watch the competition — we want to be competitive on price. We do not lead prices down and we do not lead prices up. We will match prices very quickly."

SUSSER SAID THE company had no immediate plans to enter the exploration business.

"I just spent $1 billion, I'm out of money. We're comfortable with our position as we are and that is not part of our game."

Susser hopes to strengthen his operation.

"My goals are to build, even stronger, what I consider to be the number one marketing company in the nation. I'm putting 7-Eleven in the retail industry at the same level as Sears, Roebuck and Co. I think that Sears is the only peer of 7-Eleven's because in their end of retailing they do as good with their 1,000 stores as we do with our 7,000. It's a different kind of business. We have to have awfully tight controls, we have to manage our business very professionally, yet always looking back at what our real purpose is — selling convenience.

"We're selling the fact that we're where you want us, when you want us, with whatever you want," Susser said. "That's one of the reasons gasoline has been so successful; it's the number one product line in the company."

PBPA holding members drive

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association is holding its first—ever, area wide membership drive beginning Nov. 28.

PBPA president Ken McPeters, of Bravo Energy, Hobbs, said the massive effort is being undertaken in connection with the Red Adair announcements now being played by the radio and television stations in the Permian Basin. McPeters reports the response to the announcements has been very good and is making the public more aware of the association than ever.

PBPA has set up phone banks for Midland—Odessa, San Angelo, Lubbock and Hobbs. It is also asking members in outlying towns to solicit prospects in their home town for membership. McPeters said the goal for this drive is a minimum of 250 new members. There are currently about 1,500 members in the association.

Fewer drillers increase salaries

DALLAS — Less than one-third of the major contract drilling firms surveyed by A.S. Hansen Inc. have given pay increases since February. More than one-half of the land drilling contractors anticipate no pay increases in 1984.

The lack of pay increases is a direct reflection of rig activity. Of the total rig count for those companies surveyed, one-half of the land rigs and one-third of the offshore rigs are currently inactive.

One favorable indicator for the one-half of the surveyed firms which anticipate giving an increase in 1984, the average increase is expected to be about 6 percent. The overall U.S. average for all industries is expected to be about 6-7 percent.

Thirty-five firms responded to the survey.

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace recently announced 60 refineries in Texas processed 142,885,084 barrels of crude oil and hydrocarbon blends during July. For the first seven months of 1983, Texas refineries processed 897,847,101 barrels of these materials.

The July volume compares with 133,569,068 barrels in June and 137,174,565 barrels in July 1982.

Western fracers crack Wolfcamp

Production on a new Pecos County well is flowing 600—800 barrels of oil per day and in excess of one million cubic feet of gas per day after a fracturing treatment by Western Petroleum Services' Kermit District. This treatment is one of the larger volume jobs pumped in this area.

On Nov. 15, Western began pumping 104,000 gallons of Maxi-0-74 frac fluid and 79,500 pounds of proppant. Proppant and gel were injected at 23 barrels per minute into the Wolfcamp formation. Average treating pressure was 6,800 pounds per square inch. Total depth was 11,752 feet.

Western pumped for almost two hours using nine Pacesetter 1,000 frac pumps (1,050 hydraulic horsepower each) and one 125 bpm blender.

Hydraulic fracturing is the process of pumping precisely controlled solutions of liquids and propping agents into a petroleum-bearing rock formation under extremely high pressures. These pressures literally "prop" open new and enlarged channels, thereby permitting oil and gas to flow more freely to the producing wellbore.

Western Petroleum Services is a division of The Western Company of North America.
