Agents nab another in blast

Investigators believe chemist may have links to McVeigh

■ Also, man wounded in bombing dies in hospital, raises death toll to 168.

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — A chemist who may have shared a mailing address with bombing suspect Timothy McVeigh was arrested Friday in Arizona on weapons charges after a brief struggle with federal agents.

Also Friday, a man wounded in the April 19 explosion died in a hospital, raising the death toll to 168.

U.S. marshals arrested Steven Garrett Colbern on a federal firearms charge in Oatman, Ariz., when a hotel owner recognized him from the hotel bar after agents showed his picture around town.

Justice Department spokesman Bert Brandenburg merely confirmed that Colbern was arrested in Oatman, but gave no other details.

A senior federal official in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Colbern may have links to McVeigh.

"We have found a letter from McVeigh addressed to "S.C." and Colbern is thought to have used McVeigh's mailbox address in Arizona," the official said Friday night.

"The arrest of Colbern is part of a search for an associate of McVeigh who might help us clear up the mystery of John Doe Number 2. We are not saying he is John Doe Number 2."

John Doe No. 2 is the elusive, square-jawed suspect in FBI sketches distributed shortly after the bombing.

Earlier, authorities said they were searching for a man who may have driven a brown pickup truck alongside McVeigh's car immediately after the bombing. However, a brown pickup linked to Colbern may not have been moved for some time, the official said.

Ted Tonioli, who owns the hotel in the town about 20 miles south of Kingman, Ariz. — where McVeigh lived recently — said Colbern had been in Oatman a month or two, apparently working at a gold mine.

Colbern pulled a .38-caliber gun on agents when they approached him on the street, said Tom Nixon, chief deputy in the marshal's office in Phoenix. Officers struggled with him and pushed him to the

OK by Senate puts concealed weapons bill 2 steps from law

■ Majority of House likely to join in approval Monday; Bush expected to keep promise, sign legislation.

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — The Senate approved landmark legislation Friday that would allow Texans to carry concealed handguns. It left the measure one vote away from final passage.

The Senate's 24-7 vote came only after parliamentary efforts to kill the bill were rebuffed.

Just two steps are necessary for the bill to become law, and both are considered likely. On Monday, a majority of the House is expected to join the Senate in approving the "right-to-carry" law; then Gov. George W. Bush is expected to fulfill his promise to sign it into law.

The Senate took about 90 minutes Friday to study and reject parliamentary attempts to sidetrack the legislation based on what some members said were flaws in committee procedures. Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock struck down the motions, which came from the Senate's most conservative and most liberal members.

The majority overpowered opposition led by Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, and Sen. Royce West, D-Dallas, who said the bill is a symptom of "man's inhumanity to man."

"I know that a filibuster at this time would mean nothing," West said. "I've lost this battle. But I pray to God that we won't lose lives as a result of passage."

Inflation shoots up; food prices at top

WASHINGTON (AP) — The biggest surge in food costs in five years pushed consumer prices up 0.4 percent in April, cramping family budgets and all but killing chances the Federal Reserve will soon cut interest rates.

The Labor Department report Friday showed prices climbing at their fastest clip since last August as the cost of food, gasoline and air fares all shot up during the month. Flooding in California was a big factor in the food increase.

Analysts suggested the inflation burst was only temporary.

"We feel the economy has slowed enough that inflation will not get out of hand," said Joel Prakken, an economist at Laurence H. Myer & Associates in St. Louis.

Financial markets, which have been bolstered partly out of a belief that a slowing economy would keep the Fed from raising interest rates further, took Friday's report in stride.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 19.37 to close at 4,430.56, setting a new record for a fifth straight day.

Treasury's benchmark 30-year bond, which normally reacts adversely to any whiff of inflation, was basically unchanged for the day, its yield hovering at 7 percent.

Analysts explained the benign market reaction by noting that other reports Friday

Rescue teams begin grim recovery of bodies in South African gold mine

ORKNEY, South Africa (NYT) — Their faces creased with anxiety, some weeping openly, scores of miners looked on Friday as rescue workers pulled the badly crushed remains of dozens of their colleagues from the bottom of a 1.5-mile-deep mine shaft where they died Wednesday night in one of this country's worst mine disasters.

Pressing close together near the cordoned-off entrance to their pit, the idled gold mine workers of Shaft 5 groaned each time recovery teams, their members dressed in yellow slickers and face masks, carried off the tightly blanketed remains of the crushed victims on aluminum stretchers.

More than 100 workers of the Vaal Reefs mine, 112 miles southwest of Johannesburg, were believed to have been killed when an electric train inexplicably plunged into Shaft 2.

By late Friday afternoon, 74 bodies had been recovered, leaving at least 30 people unaccounted for.

"My spirit was just starting to recover," said Mothabiza Tsomodi, 32, a barrel-chested supervisor from Lesotho, whose best friend, also a supervisor, is believed to have been killed in the accident.

"If I start talking about how I feel now, I'll soon be finished."

Officials said that most of the mine employees are migrant laborers from neighboring countries, including Mozambique, Swaziland, and Botswana, who live in sparely furnished hostels near the mine.

With the recovery of bodies still incomplete, no official list or definitive tally of victims has yet been made. Many workers said, however, that even once a list was established, notification of next of kin would be difficult with the victims' families dispersed throughout the region.

"The management has told us they are going to organize transportation for us back home to notify people," said Samuel Poopa, 55, aa miner from Lesotho. "They haven't asked us how we have managed and, frankly, it is very hard to explain."

Mine officials said that the falling train cut the cables that hoisted a double-decker elevator that was carrying crew workers to their jobs. The elevator car and the train plummeted to the pit's bottom.

Shaft 2, where the accident took place, was so badly damaged that rescue operations had to be conducted from Shaft 5.

Clinton remembers Jews killed in WWII with memorial visit to Babi Yar ravine

KIEV, Ukraine (AP) — At the edge of a forested ravine where Nazis slaughtered thousands of Jews, President Clinton stopped to remember the horrors of World War II and caution that "humanity is capable of the worst, just as it is capable of the best."

With his wife, Hillary, Clinton paid a somber visit Friday to the place known as Babi Yar, where more than 30,000 Kiev Jews were herded and machine-gunned by Nazis in just two days in September 1941.

From 1941 to 1943 during the German occupation of Ukraine, Babi Yar became a killing field. More than 150,000 people were massacred, most of them Ukrainian Jews, but also some Soviet POWs, Ukrainian nationalists and Gypsies.

"In the quiet of this place, the victims of Babi Yar cry out to us still," Clinton told a hushed audience. "Never forget, they tell us, that humanity is capable of the worst, just as it is capable of the best.

"Never forget that the forces of darkness cannot be defeated with silence or indifference. Never forget that we are all Jews and Gypsies and Slavs."

In a gesture of respect, Clinton placed a stone at the foot of a 10-foot-high menorah, one of two monuments at Babi Yar. He wore a blue yarmulke. Mrs. Clinton, her head covered with a print scarf, left a bouquet of long-stemmed white lilies.

The Clintons also paused with bowed heads at a black statue at the edge of the ravine, depicting a few figures, rising, twisted, as if in torment.

Clinton said later he was overwhelmed by the visit. "I wish every American could stand on the edge of the ravine and look down," he said.

Concluding a five-day trip marking the 50th anniversary of the defeat of Nazi Germany, the president also visited a park overlooking the Dnipro River to place a wreath at an eternal flame honoring Ukrainian war dead.

Along with the solemnity of the war remembrances, Clinton brought a message of hope to the 52 million people of this nation, struggling with lost jobs and lower wages inflicted by economic reforms in the conversion to capitalism.

Speaking in a city where a worker's average wage is $25 a month, Clinton told thousands of students at Schevechenko University, "Your efforts will not be in vain because the course is right even if the path is difficult. ... You and your children will reap the harvest of today's sacrifices."

Over the course of this year, 90 percent of small Ukrainian enterprises are expected to become privately owned and 8,000 of the largest firms will be privatized.

Clinton also offered security assurances to Ukraine, 3 1/2 years after its vote to declare independence helped speed the breakup of the Soviet Union.

"You should know this: As you build your future, the United States will stand with you," Clinton told the students, who cheered in response.

"For America," he said, "support for an independent Ukraine — secure in its own borders — is not only a matter of sympathy, it is a matter of our national interest as well," Clinton said.

"We look to the day when a democratic and prosperous Ukraine is America's full political and economic partner in a bulwark of stability in Europe."

Clinton's visit contrasted sharply with George Bush's visit in August 1991, when the Republican president counseled restraint upon Soviet republics demanding autonomy from Moscow.

Instead of the hisses that greeted Bush's speech, there were smiles and waves for Clinton in crowds of people lining the street on his motorcade route from the university to Babi Yar memorial.

Before boarding Air Force One to return to Washington, the Clintons stopped to tour St. Andrews Church, a site where the apostle Andrew is said to have preached in the first century. They also visited Pecherska Lavra monastery and catacombs. The Clintons toured the monastery's underground labyrinth of caves, carrying red candles to light the way.

Despite Republican criticism of the outcome of Clinton's summit in Moscow, White House press secretary Mike McCurry said the president was energized by the visit to Kiev. He said Clinton was confident that his talks with Boris Yeltsin had eliminated some of the obstacles blocking progress in U.S.-Russians relations.

Midland to see sunny skies

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and breezy with a high between 90 and 95 and southwest to west winds increasing to 15-25 mph and gusty by afternoon, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be mostly clear with a low in the mid-50s.

Mother's Day is expected to be mostly sunny with a high near 95.

After an overnight low of 60, Friday's high was 95 compared with the record high for that date of 99 set in 1963. The record low for today's date was 41 set in 1931.

STATE

Most Texans enjoyed hot, humid but sometimes breezy weather Friday.

Odds favor more of the same through the weekend, except Southeast Texas may face some thunderstorms through today.

Skies were cloudy over all of North Texas Friday with temperatures ranging from 70 to 84. Winds were 10 to 15 mph with gusts to 30 mph.

In the sunny areas of South Texas, afternoon temperatures were in the mid-80s to low 90s Friday. In cloudy areas, temperatures ranged from the mid-70s to the mid-80s. Winds were from the south at 5 to 10 mph, except 10 to 20 mph along the coast.

Skies were partly cloudy to mostly sunny over West Texas with afternoon temperatures ranging from 76 to 97 on Friday. Winds were mostly 20 to 30 mph, with some higher gusts reported. Guadalupe Pass reported gusts as high as 75 mph.

NATION

Thunderstorms battered the Gulf Coast and Plains on Friday, while snow fell in the mountains of the West.

President Clinton declared three south Mississippi counties disaster areas, making them eligible for federal dollars for the cleanup. Up to 3 inches an hour in the region triggered flash floods.

A possible small tornado touched down near Reddick, Fla., damaging small buildings and a vehicle, and golfball-sized hail fell at Bunkie.

Severe thunderstorms churned through central and eastern Nebraska and central Kansas.

Gusty winds blew from the Mojave Desert across the Southwest into west Texas, where gusts reached 82 mph at Guadalupe Pass.

Snow advisories and winter storm watches were posted for mountain areas from northern Utah and Colorado through western Wyoming and southwestern Montana. Snow also was reported at Elko, Nev., and Payson, Utah.

FOOD: Analysts believe inflation burst is only temporary continued to show the economy was slowing. A survey of auto sales in early May by CNW Marketing Research showed a sharp 9.9 percent decline while the Commerce Department reported that unsold business inventories rose 0.7 percent in March. The inventory report could mean further production cutbacks in what was already shaping up as a weak quarter.

Analysts said the economic evidence is mounting that the Federal Reserve has achieved its hoped-for soft landing in which it slows economic growth enough to keep inflation under control without tipping the country into a recession. During the 12 months ending in February, the central bank doubled a key-short term interest rate in seven separate tightening moves.

Bruce Steinberg, senior economist at Merrill Lynch, said that the worse-than-expected report on consumer prices, which followed Thursday's report of a disappointingly high 0.5 percent jump in wholesale prices, had to be viewed in context of the slowdown in the economy.

"We believe that inflation pressures will remain moderate," he said. "Everything the Fed wanted to happen is happening."

While some economists had been forecasting that the economy might be slowing so much that the central bank would soon begin lowering interest rates to guard against a recession, Steinberg said he did not see that occurring, especially now in light of the inflation reports.

"My feeling is that the Fed is on hold until 1996. Only if the economy suddenly got much weaker this summer would the central bank consider easing," he said.

The 0.4 percent advance in the CPI for April was double the 0.2 percent increase in March and was the biggest jump since a similar 0.4 percent rise last August.

For the year, consumer prices have been rising at an annual rate of 3.6 percent, a significant pickup from the 2.7 percent increase for all of 1994. However, many economists stressed that much of last month's price pressures, in the form of higher food and energy costs, reflected temporary factors that will be reversed in the months ahead.

The acceleration in the CPI last month was blamed on a 1.2 percent rise for food consumed at home. It was the biggest jump in food prices since February 1990, with 80 percent of the surge blamed on 7.5 percent rise in fruit and vegetable prices, reflecting in large part the California floods.

Lettuce prices rose a record 113.1 percent while tomato prices were up 15.6 percent.

There was also a sharp turnaround in energy prices, which rose 0.4 percent last month after falling 0.5 percent in March. The price of gasoline was up 0.6 percent, the biggest gain since November.

Excluding the volatile food and energy sectors, prices were still up 0.4 percent.

Airline fares continued to rise sharply, climbing 3.4 percent in April. For the year, airline tickets are up 10.6 percent.

New car prices were up 0.6 percent in April and auto financing charges were up an even higher 1.1 percent. Entertainment costs were up 0.3 percent, with half of that accounted for by price gains for newspapers and toys.

OK: Vote moves concealed weapons bill closer to law

(From 1A)

Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, the bill's author, said opposition is based on irrational emotions. He said the law is needed to help law-abiding citizens protect themselves.

"We're going to even the odds," said Patterson, who added that he thinks that concerns about unfettered gunslinging are baseless. "The doomsday scenarios have yet to occur" in the 40 other states that allow concealed handguns.

If approved by the House and signed by Bush, the bill will authorize the Texas Department of Public Safety to issue licenses, effective Jan. 1 and costing $140, for the carrying of concealed handguns in most locales. Guns will be prohibited in such places as government offices, amusement parks, hospitals, churches and bars and at sporting events. Those seeking permits will have to meet several eligibility requirements, including training and a criminal background check.

'Arguments on the freeway are not going to be settled by gestures or words. They're going to be settled by guns.'
— Sen. Mario Gallegos, who advocates 30 hours of training

The proposal calls for a minimum of 10 hours of training, which drew the ire of Sen. Mario Gallegos, D-Houston, who advocates 30 hours. The measure specifies that the training will have to cover the topic of "nonviolent dispute resolution," but Gallegos said that might not be sufficient.

"Arguments on the freeways are not going to be settled by gestures or words. They're going to be settled by guns," Gallegos said.

He also criticized the decision of a 10-member House-Senate negotiating committee to remove a requirement for a nonbinding referendum on the issue. But Patterson dismissed such a vote as "silly."

The author predicts that there will be numerous attempts Monday to scuttle the bill in the House, but he said the support there will be overwhelming, as it was when that chamber gave initial approval this month.

NAB: Investigators think chemist has links to McVeigh ground. A marshal was slightly hurt in the struggle when he hit his head on the sidewalk.

(From 1A)

Colbern, 35, was scheduled to be arraigned today before a federal magistrate in Phoenix, Nixon said.

McVeigh was pulled over in Perry, Okla., 75 minutes after the bombing for not having a license plate on his car and was jailed after he was found to be carrying a gun.

According to the federal official in Washington, a witness told investigators that a brown pickup that appeared to be traveling in tandem with McVeigh's car pulled over in front of McVeigh's vehicle, waited and then moved on.

"It might have been someone traveling with McVeigh or it might have been someone who was speeding, heard the siren and thought he was being pulled over until he saw there was another car stopped," the official said.

Authorities are checking to see if the pickup shows up in a videotape produced by a camera in the Oklahoma police car, the source said.

McVeigh and his Army buddy Terry Nichols have been charged with the bombing and could get the death penalty if convicted.

Lynda Willoughby, manager of The Mail Room, where McVeigh picked up his mail in Kingman, Ariz., said federal marshals have been by in recent days, asking her if a box there was ever in the names Steven Colbern, Bill Carson or Steven Garrett. She said no one had gotten mail under any of those names.

Willoughby said investigators showed her a photo of a dark-haired man with bushy eyebrows. She said she did not recognize the man. Earlier, Willoughby said a man who came in to pick up McVeigh's mail was a rough match for the man in the John Doe 2 sketches.

According to California records, Colbern has brown hair and is 6-foot-1 and 190 pounds.

Colbern had been arrested in Upland, Calif., in July after police found weapons during a traffic stop. He was freed on bail but failed to appear in court and was considered a fugitive, Upland police Sgt. Kevin Cushman said.

On Friday, a brown pickup sat outside a trailer home in Bullhead City, Ariz., owned by Colbern's father, Dr. Robert Colbern. Arizona motor vehicle records show that the truck was registered to a Steven G. Colbern, who listed a Los Angeles address.

Cobwebs hung from the truck, and neighbors said they have never seen it driven from the mobile home.

Colbern's father, a 60-year-old dentist in the Los Angeles suburb of Oxnard, said that federal agents had searched his house.

A woman living in a trailer park in Bullhead City, about 30 miles from Kingman, recalled a next-door neighbor named Steven who wore fatigues, liked to raise snakes and lizards, and left his trailer so dirty it smelled.

"He was a jerk. He's a lazy, no-good mama's boy," said Maybelle Hertig, 70. Hertig recalled that Steven, whose last name she did not know, had packages of ammunition delivered to her trailer and other neighbors'.

"He told us he was never home enough to have the mail delivered to him," she said. He recently made infrequent stops at the trailer, arriving with another young man in a Jeep, she said.

From June 1993 to November 1994, Colbern was a research associate at the Cedars-Sinai Research Institute in Los Angeles, said Marilyn Sharpe, senior vice president of human resources for Cedars-Sinai Health System. He resigned voluntarily, she said.

Also Friday, the latest victim of the bombing, John Youngblood, 52, died of smoke inhalation and had suffered multiple fractures, cuts and other injuries, said Dr. Tom Coniglioni, a spokesman at St. Anthony Hospital in Oklahoma City. At the time of the blast, he was on the fourth floor in the Department of Transportation office.

In Kansas, a law enforcement source told The Associated Press that investigators are looking into the possibility that Nichols visited the day-care center 15 or 20 minutes before the blast, asking questions.

The source said investigators might have witnesses or videotape to place Nichols there.

Of the 19 children who were killed in the blast, 15 were in the day-care center.

Prosecutors have suggested the federal building was bombed to avenge the cult disaster at Waco, exactly two years earlier. More than 80 people died in the disaster, including 19 children.

Health experts continue to fight Ebola virus

KIKWIT, Zaire (AP) — Fear of contagion laced the grief of relatives who kept their death watch Friday in a cemetery where authorities handed over victims in coffins sealed to stop the spread of a dreaded virus.

Two small boys in the crowd of about 50 people pulled T-shirts over their faces in a misguided attempt to protect themselves from the deadly Ebola virus that swept through Kikwit.

A sealed coffin arrived from the fenced-in hospital 100 yards away, and the boys, who were carrying palm fronds, were warned not to wash or touch the body as their African traditions demand.

Medical experts from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention arrived in Kikwit from Atlanta on Friday to begin work to contain the virulent disease. A group of journalists, who had received permission from the Zairian government, accompanied the doctors on their flight to the city of 600,000.

Kikwit, a sprawling hodgepodge of cement block houses set in lush green savannah, is the scene of the first major outbreak of the Ebola virus in 16 years.

Dozens of people have died there in recent weeks from the disease, which starts like malaria with headache and fever. Then the diarrhea and vomiting begin. Death comes within days in 80 percent of cases as blood pours from the victims' bodies, rivers of red slipping from their eyes, ears and noses.

There is no vaccine or cure.

About 20 people — infected patients and hospital staff exposed to the virus — were inside the 350-bed hospital where the epidemic began and which has been cleared out to keep the Ebola virus from spreading.

The hospital, painted a bright blue, has been under quarantine like the rest of Kikwit since early this week. But there are no guards or soldiers posted around it, and one microbiologist said he was terrified the virus would spread like wildfire because people were sneaking into the hospital to visit their dying loved ones, possibly carrying the virus with them when they leave.

Miss U.S.A. wins Miss Universe 1995 title, crown in first pageant held in Africa

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — Miss USA, a 21-year-old college student whose national costume honored the right of women to vote in her home country, was chosen Miss Universe 1995 early Saturday.

Chelsi Smith, of Deer Park, Texas, won over 81 other contestants in the first Miss Universe pageant held in Africa, which was broadcast to more than 600 million viewers worldwide.

Wearing a low-cut, scarlet ballroom gown, Miss Smith put her hands to her face and began crying when her victory was announced.. First runner-up was Miss India, 21-year-old Manpreet Brar of New Delhi, and Miss Canada, 20-year-old Lana Buchburger of Calgary, Alberta, was second runner-up.

Miss Smith chose a 75-year-old angle-length, silk-trimmed cotton lace dress as her national costume to commemorate the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, which gave women the right to vote, passed in 1920.

She is the sixth United States winner in the 44 years of the Miss Universe pageant and the first since Shawn Weatherly in 1980.

Miss Smith received cash and prizes worth $220,000, including ownership of an African elephant to be named after her.

The pageant was an elaborate two-hour program featuring African imagery that included a concrete elephant, giraffes and a waterfall on stage with flashy dance numbers.

Namibian officials hoped it would bring global recognition and tourism worth much more than the millions of dollars it cost the cash-strapped nation to host the event.

Sweden's Petra Hultgren was voted Miss Photogenic in preliminary judging Monday, while Maria Reyes of Spain won Best National Costume. Miss Nigeria, Toyin Enitan Raji, won Miss Congeniality.

Korean demilitarized zone gives visitors glimpse of opposing views

By John Leicester
Associated Press

PANMUNJOM, North Korea — Eyeball to eyeball, the North Korean and the American glared at each other through a window. One apparently powered by enmity, the other by chewing gum, the two officers clenched jaws almost in unison.

For foreign reporters, viewing the Demilitarized Zone from the North Korean side is like stepping through the looking glass.

The West's version of history is upended. Americans become aggressors, and the South Koreans their puppets. Here, North Korea is the threatened side. A few paces away, across the dividing line, is the threat.

The DMZ, which winds through rough, mountainous terrain, sprang up when the 1950-53 Korean War ended without a peace treaty. Today, the 155-mile-long, 2.5-mile-wide border is the world's most heavily fortified.

A road sign beside an electrified fence on the North Korean side says "Seoul, 70 kilometers," 43 miles. But the South Korean capital might as well be a million miles away.

Travel across the DMZ is forbidden, except for the occasional VIP. The only contact point between North and South is the eerie border village of Panmunjom, where green-uniformed North Korean soldiers trade baleful stares with South Korean and U.S. troops in camouflage fatigues.

For both Koreas, a visit to Panmunjom is an essential stop on the tourist itinerary. More than 100,000 come annually from the South Korean side. The number from the North is smaller, but figures are not available.

North Korean soldiers at a roadblock check papers and make drivers cover license plates with cardboard to deny the South any scrap of military intelligence.

"The situation is very acute here," said a stern North Korean officer who briefed visitors.

For both Koreas, a visit to Panmunjom is an essential stop on the tourist itinerary. More than 100,000 come annually from the South Korean side. The number from the North is smaller, but figures are not available.

Visitors to the South Korean side sign waivers absolving authorities from any responsibility for "injury or death as a direct result of enemy action." On the Northern side, there are no such formalities.

The North Korean commander at Panmunjom, a high-cheekboned officer who would only give his name as Chon, greeted visitors with a bone-crushing handshake and briskly led them into one of seven huts which straddle the dividing line.

Over the line, a South Korean soldier watched through binoculars, just as the North Koreans do when visitors come to the south side.

In the hut, microphone cables mark the border, and visitors can briefly stand in South Korea. The hut is used for meetings of the armistice commission which oversees the uneasy truce.

North Korean guides claim the armistice is practically useless these days because American troops violate its terms so frequently. U.S. officials say North Korea is trying to dismantle the armistice to force direct talks with Washington, thereby snubbing South Korea.

Tensions have risen recently because of the dispute over the North's nuclear program, which despite North Korean denials, is suspected of producing weapons.

Suddenly, a gum-chomping American officer in peaked cap and sunglasses peered into the hut through a window on the South Korean side. Too proud to look away, Chon glared back, his jaw tightened, until the American dipped out of the view of a visitor's camera lens.

How did Chon feel? His answer, rendered by a translator, was swift and sounded well-rehearsed:

"The feeling is as soon as possible he wants to reunite our country and achieve national reunification."

The tour took minutes, but the tension made it seem much longer.

Spending-cuts feud intensifies between Republicans, Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats accused Republicans of championing spending cuts that "don't match the values of the American people" as lawmakers warmed up Friday for next week's debate over sweeping GOP budget-balancing plans.

Republicans gave as good as they got, with House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., accusing Democrats of offering nothing but criticism and calling that "totally irresponsible adolescent behavior."

GOP Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa sported a pipe, magnifying glass and double-billed houndstooth cap a la Sherlock Holmes as he made a show of searching in vain for a Democratic alternative. "They do not have a plan," he said. "All we've seen from them is retreat when it comes to making tough decisions."

The Republicans, meanwhile, had two plans for eliminating federal deficits, one each approved Thursday by the House and Senate budget committees. With about $1 trillion in spending reductions, each promises to erase the red ink that has swamped federal ledger books for 26 years and to produce tiny but historic surpluses in 2002.

The full House and Senate planned to debate their measures next week, and the partisan attack lines used Friday were rehearsals for the political grappling that is likely to consume Washington for months.

Vice President Al Gore and a trio of Democratic congressional leaders belittled Republican plans to coax savings from Medicare, student loans and the earned income tax credit for the working poor, while simultaneously pressing tax cuts for the well-off.

"The values represented in these plans don't match the values of the American people," Gore declared.

"It is just wrong to turn the Medicare program into a piggy bank to pay for tax cuts," said Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who also chairs the Democratic National Committee.

Gore repeated the Clinton administration's offer to seek budget compromise if the GOP would abandon its quest for lowered levies for the rich and cuts in education and would agree to revamp Medicare only as part of more sweeping reforms in the country's entire health-care system.

Until such bargaining occurs, the leaders gave no indication that they would offer alternatives of their own. Some rank-and-file Democrats were expected to present plans on their own, including separate groups of conservatives and liberals in the House.

House Budget Committee Chairman John Kasich, R-Ohio, was hoping to attract Democratic support anyway and was courting conservatives. Conservative Rep. Mike Parker, D-Miss., was the only Democrat to support Kasich's package at the budget committee this week.

The Republican House and Senate plans rely heavily on coaxing savings from Medicare and Medicaid and from benefits for farmers, veterans, and students. Hundreds of programs would be eliminated, from the Commerce Department to aid to libraries, and hundreds of others would be slashed.

Lobbyists on both sides of the question were already launching broadsides.

Senior citizens' groups attacked plans to slow the growth of Medicare. The giant health-insurance program for the elderly and disabled is the biggest single component of the House and Senate deficit-reduction packages.

"These cuts are unprecedented in scope and clearly go beyond the boundaries of reason," said Martha A. McSteen, president of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare.

But the National Federation of Independent Business, the country's largest small business group, hailed the House plan for its spending reductions and tax cuts.

"This can set the stage for unprecedented new waves of American entrepreneurship and provide hundreds of thousands of jobs," said Jack Faris, the association's president.

While the two sides parried, House and Senate bargainers reached tentative agreement on reductions in this year's budget that would be much smaller — but nearly as contentious.

As part of a bill that would trim about $16 billion of already enacted money from scores of programs, negotiators agreed to erase $55 million from the budget of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting over the next two years instead of far deeper cuts the House had sought. They also agreed to cut a $1.3 billion program providing home-heating aid to the poor by just $319 million; the House had voted to eliminate it.

U.S. Coast Guard returns 11 Cubans to their homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleven more Cuban migrants were returned to their homeland Friday aboard a Coast Guard cutter. Some Cubans repatriated earlier in the week complained of "minor harassment" by authorities.

Nine of the new group were picked up by the cutter from a sinking boat Wednesday and two more were picked up Thursday.

They were returned to Cuba under the Clinton administration's new policy of repatriating migrants picked up at sea. Cuban officials have given the administration assurances that repatriated Cubans would not be mistreated on their return, but many in Cuba's exile community have vehemently protested the new policy.

Those who were returned Friday were informed by officials of the U.S. diplomatic mission in Havana of the opportunities for legal migration to the United States, State Department spokesman David Johnson said.

On Wednesday, two U.S. diplomats went to Camaguey province to meet with the 13 Cubans who had been picked up at sea and returned to Cuba a day earlier. They had full access to the returnees and expected to have met with all 13 by Friday.

Johnson said a few of the migrants complained to the officers of minor harassment since their return.

Kevorkian attends suicides; body found in van

The deaths were the most recent since the Michigan Supreme Court last year rejected the notion of a constitutional right to assisted suicide.

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Dr. Jack Kevorkian attended the suicide Friday of a terminally ill 27-year-old man, whose body was left in the doctor's battered van parked outside the sheriff's office.

"Today, Dr. Kevorkian was present when Nicholas John Loving, age 27, ended his life mercifully after suffering horribly" from the degenerative nerve disorder known as Lou Gehrig's disease, said Kevorkian's lawyer, Geoffrey Fieger.

It was the second suicide in five days that Kevorkian attended. The deaths were the most recent since the Michigan Supreme Court last year rejected the notion of a constitutional right to assisted suicide. Only weeks ago, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the case.

The death came on the same day Michigan's Court of Appeals upheld a judge's 1991 injunction barring Kevorkian from assisting in suicides.

A person at the Oakland County Medical Examiner's Office who refused to give a name said the cause of death was carbon monoxide poisoning. Most of Kevorkian's cases have involved carbon monoxide.

Fieger refused to say how or where Loving died, calling it irrelevant, but said the man was dead before the van was brought to the sheriff's office — a move he said was intended to avoid the "circus" atmosphere at previous suicides.

"I think it was the wish of everyone to make it easier for authorities," Fieger said.

Sheriff John Nichols said deputies were alerted to the van by the medical examiner's office nearby, which had gotten an anonymous call saying there was a body in a van outside.

Kevorkian was not in the area when the rusted, white 1968 Volkswagen van was found, sheriff's Lt. Don McLellan said.

Loving came to Michigan from Phoenix with his mother, Carol, who was present at his death, Fieger said. "His mother and Nicholas went through great difficulty to get to Michigan to see Dr. Kevorkian," the lawyer said.

The 66-year-old retired pathologist did not attend his lawyer's news conference.

On Monday, Kevorkian attended the suicide of the Rev. John E. Evans, a 78-year-old retired minister who suffered from a lung disease. That was at least the 22nd death the assisted-suicide proponent has attended since 1990.

Kevorkian already faces charges of murder and assisting a suicide in five other Michigan cases, four of them in Oakland County.

He has long said he does not feel bound by court rulings or laws against assisted suicide. He contends that suffering people have a fundamental right to decide to die.

The latest death is "a bizarre act," Oakland County Prosecutor Richard Thompson said, adding that he didn't yet have any evidence under which to pursue charges.

"It's important to keep in mind that all we have is a body in a van. Mere presence in a room where someone commits suicide is not a crime," Thompson said. "(Fieger's) words were very carefully chosen."

The sheriff said there was no sign of the equipment Kevorkian has typically used in deaths he attends: a carbon monoxide canister, tubing and mask.

Simpson defense offers arguments in attempt to blunt DNA expert's testimony

AP Laserphoto

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O.J. Simpson's defense struggled Friday to blunt the damaging testimony of the state's star DNA witness, launching a scattershot attack with claims of evidence planting, contamination and a mystery killer.

But the judge disallowed many of attorney Peter Neufeld's questions and the week ended with jurors being told to disregard a key defense assertion: that a telltale smear of blood on the steering wheel of Simpson's Bronco contains the DNA calling card of an unknown murderer.

Neufeld also tried to cast molecular biologist Robin Cotton as a scientific hired gun, her testimony bought by prosecutors for $1,200 a day.

But some legal analysts said Neufeld failed to soften the startling impact of Cotton's prosecution testimony — which calculated astronomically high odds that Simpson was the source of blood found at the murder scene, at his mansion and in his Bronco.

She told jurors that Simpson was the one person in more than 170 million who has the DNA found in a drop of blood near the bodies of his ex-wife and her friend and added figures suggesting that Nicole Brown Simpson was the only person on Earth with the same DNA type found in blood on a pair of Simpson's socks.

"It's a classic situation where the witness looks smarter than the lawyer," said Loyola University law professor Laurie Levenson. "The problem is when you get into side issues, you begin to look desperate."

Neufeld offered a variety of defenses Friday: that police contaminated blood samples before they were sent to Cotton's Cellmark Laboratories, that conspirators planted blood in Simpson's Bronco or, in the alternative, some other killer drove the Bronco.

The judge squelched Neufeld's hypothetical questions to Cotton about the origin of Bronco blood smears tested by her Maryland laboratory after the June 12 murders of Ms. Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Judge Lance Ito said such questions were outside Cotton's expertise — DNA testing.

"If somebody else ... touched Mr. Simpson's blood and touched Nicole Brown Simpson's blood and touched that steering wheel, would that be consistent with the stain you found on the wheel?" Neufeld asked.

Prosecutor George Clarke objected, and Ito ordered jurors to "disregard the implication of the question."

He also upheld objections to Neufeld's questions laying out Simpson's defense to scientific evidence that Simpson's and Ms. Simpson's blood were on the steering wheel.

"Assume that Mr. Simpson cut himself in his home and walked out to the Bronco to get something from his car and bled in his own Bronco," Neufeld said before he was stopped by an objection.

Ito also refused to allow Neufeld ask Cotton about laboratory procedures used by the Los Angeles Police Department, which collected blood evidence, packaged it and shipped it to her lab for analysis.

"She has no idea about the handling, packaging and collection of evidence," Ito said. "Let's move on."

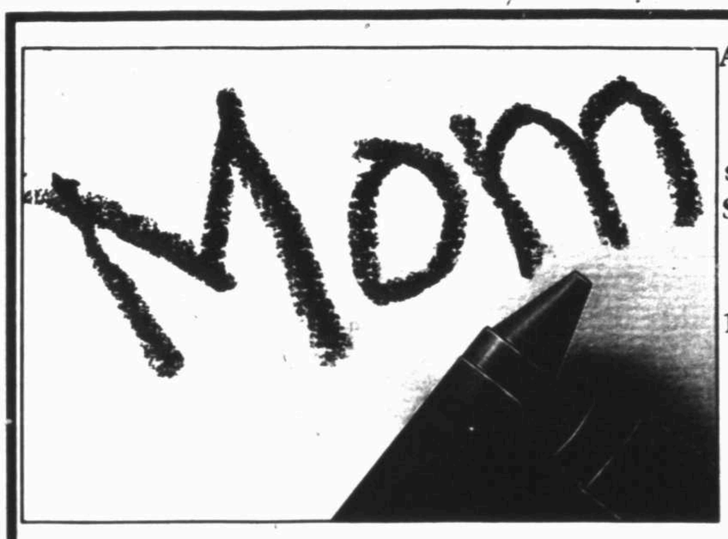

Ito also was annoyed with Neufeld's repeated focus on possible contamination of blood swatches that provided overwhelming evidence of Simpson's blood at the murder scene, at his mansion and in his Bronco.

"You've asked that question four times," Ito snapped.

Jurors sat expressionless during the half-day session. Most of them laughed nervously when a power surge caused the light to flicker, computers to blink and the air conditioning to fail.

Cotton, whose no-nonsense approach to delivering DNA results appeared to impress jurors earlier in the week, kept her cool as Neufeld attacked her laboratory as a price-gouging operation and sought to portray Cotton as hired gun.

Government targeted group, Stockman says

'These men, women and children were burned to death because they owned guns that the government did not wish them to have.'
— Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas

■ More state news/14A

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of Congress' staunchest opponents of gun control suggests in an article in "Guns and Ammo" that the government went after the Branch Davidians near Waco, Texas, to whip up support for a ban on assault-style firearms.

Administration officials swiftly denounced the stand taken by Rep. Steve Stockman, R-Texas, in the magazine's June issue.

The Friendswood freshman wrote that the government "executed" the more than 80 cult members who died during the April 19, 1993, fire that began after the FBI started a tear-gas operation following a lengthy standoff.

"These men, women and children were burned to death because they owned guns that the government did not wish them to have," he wrote in the magazine, which has a circulation of nearly 600,000.

"Waco was supposed to be a way for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and the Clinton administration to prove the need for a ban on so-called 'assault weapons,'" Stockman wrote.

Congress passed that ban as part of last year's crime law, and Stockman is trying to repeal the ban.

White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano called Stockman's allegation "outrageous and absurd."

"In the current climate, it might be best for people to refrain from inflammatory remarks that endanger the lives of law enforcement officers," said Justice Department spokesman Carl Stern.

Gun-control advocate Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said, "For somebody to believe that the Waco debacle was organized by the federal government to help pass gun laws is as loony a statement as I've ever heard a congressman make."

Richard Aborn, president of Handgun Control Inc. that supported the weapons ban, said Stockman's comments "fuel and legitimize the paranoia that exists in the country."

Stockman said in an interview Friday that he stood by the article he wrote last February.

"A few things could have been said a little better," he said, including a statement suggesting Attorney General Janet Reno should have faced premeditated murder charges for her role in the raid.

At the same time, he attacked his critics.

"What they are trying to do is portray me as the only one out there in the far right bouncing around in the wind," he said. "I'm not. I'm echoing a lot of sentiments — bipartisan sentiments — of the question of using force in which 83 people died."

Voicing concerns raised by others, Stockman said ATF could have arrested cult leader David Koresh outside the compound. The Branch Davidians also had a track record of voluntarily appearing before law enforcement authorities when summoned, he added.

The House crime subcommittee and Senate Judiciary Committee plan hearings to probe the government's conduct toward the Davidians.

ATF raided the Davidian compound Feb. 28, 1993, although the cultists were tipped off and waiting for them. Four agents and six Davidians were killed in the ensuing gun fight. The FBI took charge during the subsequent standoff that lasted until April 19, 1993.

Federal officials say the Davidians started the fire that consumed the complex, and the medical examiner found that a number of them died of gunshot wounds during the conflagration.

A Justice Department review cleared FBI and Justice officials of wrongdoing but a scathing report by the Treasury Department prompted the resignation of then-ATF Director Stephen Higgins and disciplinary action against several high-ranking ATF officials.

Stockman was embroiled in controversy last month over the Oklahoma City bombing. The morning of the blast, he received a cryptic fax with details about the bombing from a woman allied with Michigan militia activist Mark Koernke. A wrong time stamp on the fax initially prompted some erroneous media reports that the message had been sent before the bombing.

University of Dallas considers pre-marital sex ban in dorms

DALLAS (AP) — Expulsion could be the penalty for pre-marital sex at the University of Dallas, where administrators Friday defended the campus housing proposal against criticism by the Catholic school's students.

The chairwoman of a task force that made the recommendation said promiscuity and unwanted pregnancies were a problem at the private school.

"We have had a number of pregnant girls on campus," said Janet E. Smith, professor of philosophy and head of the Task Force on Student Life and Campus Ministry Programs.

"They are disruptive to their lives and educations," she said.

But some students said they would not have enrolled at the university if they had known about the proposal, which is part of a larger report dealing with all aspects of the nonacademic side of university life.

"It's not a morality of freedom or choice, it's a morality of fear," Afredo Guastella, vice president of UD's student government, said. "They're (trying to create) a Catholic student utopia."

The proposal is pending before university president Robert Sasseen, who was expected to forward it to the Faculty Senate and University Council for comment and possible revision, Ms. Smith said.

Sasseen ultimately will decide whether to implement the policies proposed by the panel of faculty, staff and students, she said.

Action on the unusual recommendation could come as early as summer.

"Studies show some 87 percent of college students are sexually active. It is lower here, but even if we cut the figure in half, that's a lot," said Ms. Smith.

"Abuses of alcohol, drugs and sex are detrimental to them (students) getting a good education here," she said. "We want to set up an atmosphere where the abuses are discouraged."

The Dallas Morning News, in its Friday editions, found no comparable sexual conduct policy in force at other public and private universities. But most have rules regulating visitation.

"We do think that the policy isn't distinctively Catholic," said Ms. Smith. "This is a moral position."

At Texas Christian University, resident assistants don't check each dormitory room during visitation hours, said Roger Fisher, TCU director of residential services.

The director of student life at the University of Texas at Dallas said the school tries to teach good citizenship. But Darrelene Rachavong said "what students do behind closed doors in those departments, we don't try to police that."

Fall trial date looks likely in Cisneros' lawsuit

■ Court hearing scheduled for Friday was called off; Medlar insists no personal vendetta lurks behind action.

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Consensus among attorneys mounted Friday for a late-autumn trial in the lawsuit U.S. Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros faces from his ex-mistress.

Linda Medlar, meanwhile, insisted that no personal vendetta lurks behind the $256,000 lawsuit she filed against Cisneros.

"It has nothing to do with a failed love affair," she said. "It has to do with a contract."

Cisneros denies a contract existed. He has said he was sending money to Ms. Medlar as recently as 1993 because he felt sorry for her.

Ms. Medlar met with reporters Friday — a day attorneys spent hashing out technicalities that could pave the way for trial this fall. A court hearing Friday was called off.

Medlar attorney Floyd Holder said he and Cisneros attorney Seagal Wheatley agreed to let the court retain custody of some tape recordings.

The Internal Revenue Service last month sent Ms. Medlar a summons to hand over the tapes she made. Holder says the tapes help prove Cisneros committed fraud and breach of contract.

But Wheatley has questioned the completeness and accuracy of the tapes.

Ms. Medlar accuses Cisneros of reneging on an agreement to pay her $4,000 a month for leaking word of their relationship while he was mayor of San Antonio. She contends he agreed to help make up for her humiliation when the adulterous affair became front-page news in 1988.

"It's not about an affair gone wrong," Ms. Medlar said. "It's about an affair gone public. ... I could have gone on with my life in a heartbeat had this not gone public."

That publicity wrecked her marriage, got her fired from jobs and made her the target of death threats, she said.

The former political fund-raiser used a soft, steady voice to chastise the media reports she thinks portray her as "a woman scorned." She said she has had no contact with Cisneros lately.

"I am determined," she said. "We will carry it to trial."

Man pleads innocent in wife's mutilation slaying

EL PASO (AP) — A man accused of killing his wife then scattering mutilated pieces of her body across the city pleaded innocent Friday, while his attorney laid the groundwork for mounting an insanity defense.

James Patrick Bradley, dressed in an orange county jail uniform, didn't speak or react as his wheelchair was rolled into Judge David Guaderrama's courtroom. He waived an arraignment, instead entering a written plea.

Bradley's attorney, Gary Hill, also requested that his client be allowed to meet in the county jail with Dallas psychiatrist James Grigson for an evaluation next week. District Attorney Jaime Esparza did not object.

Hill has filed paperwork indicating he may choose to pursue an insanity defense in Bradley's murder case, although the filings do not bind him to that course of action.

"It will all depend" on the psychiatric exam, Hill said outside the courtroom.

Bradley, 47, who is being held in the county jail in lieu of $1 million bond, was indicted last week on a single count of murder in the Feb. 15 shooting death of his wife, Suzy Hahn Bradley. No trial date has been set.

James Bradley was arrested Feb. 21 following a four-day manhunt by police following a trail of body parts that had been left scattered throughout the city and in southern New Mexico.

The crime, which captivated El Paso residents, was only solved after area television news shows aired photos of Suzy Bradley's severed head, its eyes wide open, resting on a cloth.

Several of the Bradleys' friends and family members called authorities to identify the woman after seeing the newscasts and James Bradley was arrested within 12 hours of the first TV broadcast.

In a signed confession made after his arrest, Bradley told police he shot his wife six times following a fight during which she hit him in the head with flashlight.

Bradley told police in the statement that he thought she was going for a gun when he opened fire with a .22-caliber rifle.

Bradley acknowledged in his confession that he then decapitated and dismembered Suzy Bradley with an ax.

Authorities have said that Bradley was not charged with mutilating the body because it would only be a misdemeanor offense.

Garlic vs. cancer

There's dramatic new evidence that a specific chemical in garlic can actually help shut down the growth of tumors grown from human colon-cancer cells.

In new tests, scientists at Pennsylvania State University first transplanted human colon-cancer cells in mice. Then they treated some of the mice with a corn-oil solution containing diallyl disulfide or DADS, a chemical found in processed garlic. Other mice got just plain corn oil.

Remarkably, the tumors in mice getting the garlic chemical shrank by 60 percent. The tumors in mice given just corn oil continued to grow steadily.

Previous Penn State research has shown that the garlic sulfur compound killed human colon-, lung- and skin-tumor cells grown in lab cultures. The new study is remarkable in that it shows garlic does the same thing in living animals, possibly by altering cell division.

Co-researcher John Milner, head of nutrition at Penn State, points out that people who eat garlic have a lower risk of colon cancer.

Stroke antidote

Men, the more fruits and vegetables you eat, the less likely you are to have a stroke when you get older.

For every extra three half-cup servings of fruits or vegetables, your chance of stroke drops about 22 percent, suggests a new study by Harvard investigator Meir W. Gillman, M.D., and colleagues. In the study of 832 men from the 20-year Framingham, Mass., Heart Study, fruit and vegetable consumption depressed stroke risk regardless of other factors, such as weight, fat intake, physical activity, blood pressure, cigarette smoking or consumption of alcohol. Vegetables appeared slightly more effective in preventing strokes of both types — those caused by blood clots or hemorrhages.

Nobody knows which chemicals in fruits and vegetables might suppress development of strokes. Some good candidates: potassium and folic acid. In other research, a potassium-rich fruit and vegetable diet was linked to a dramatic drop in stroke deaths. Folic acid, also rich in fruits and vegetables, curbs homocysteine, a protein in blood, linked to high risk of stroke.

Fiber for the colon

Here's a reminder that you can stave off one of our most troublesome modern diseases by reverting to a diet common among our ancient ancestors. The malady is diverticular disease, in which small sacs or protrusions called diverticula develop in the lower lining of the intestine. They can become quite inflamed, painful and may even require surgery. About half of all Americans over age 60 have some degree of diverticular disease, yet it was rare before this century and is still rare in developing countries where diets are high in fiber.

Now a recent Harvard study of nearly 50,000 men confirms that those who ate the most fiber were least likely to develop symptoms of diverticular disease. In particular, the most preventive fiber came from high intakes of fruits and vegetables. Eating lots of fat also boosted the risk of diverticular disease.

Men who ate a high-fat, low-fiber diet had twice the risk of symptoms of diverticular disease as men eating a low-fat, high-fiber diet. Further, if you eat lots of red meat, the hazard increases.

Timing is key

The Calcium Information Center says a glass of milk or a calcium supplement at bedtime may help support nighttime blood calcium at the level required for muscle and nerves, so bones won't be forced to give up calcium to keep levels up to par.

A biochemistry professor at Wisconsin's Beloit College says that a once-a-day dose of vitamin C may not be enough because the body eliminates even large doses of vitamin C in 12 hours and deficiencies crave in 10 hours. He says the way to keep levels continuously up is 250 to 500 mg every 12 hours. The recommended daily adult allowance is 60 mg.

Dentist wages war against bad breath

San Angelo dentist Dr. Don Shaw demonstrates the Dentacam on dental hygienist Terri Mann. Shaw uses the instrument to locate sources of bad breath in his Fresh Breath Clinic.

By Jenny Strasburg
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — Some may hear the painful news from a friend or a spouse, and they may never again leave home without an armory of chewing gum and breath mints.

Bad breath is a problem for millions of people, but it doesn't have to be that way for most, according to a San Angelo dentist.

Dr. Donald Shaw's dental practice has a new arm: The Fresh Breath Center. It's an additional service he has taken on which required learning to use a small piece of equipment called a Halimeter (pronounced hal-IHM-uh-ter), as well as looking at bad breath in a new way.

Shaw said the Halimeter (a brand name) is still new to dentistry; only about a dozen dental offices nationwide currently use the equipment, as far as he knows.

The purpose of the Halimeter and The Fresh Breath Center is to diagnose and treat the true — and often overlooked — causes of chronic, offensive breath.

For years, patients who've complained of bad breath have been told to brush better and floss more often, Shaw said. Others have been told by a doctor that a dentist can help, only to be referred by that dentist back to the doctor, getting help from neither.

Still others have been told bad breath is a part of their "body chemistry," said Shaw, and that they'll just have to live with it.

But there's good news for a lot of peo-

Experts say made-up maladies are usually cries for help

By Cathryn Creno
N.Y. Times News Service

PHOENIX — "I have terminal breast cancer."

It was a sudden, shocking announcement from a quiet, dependable secretary named Jenny.

Her mother, friends and co-workers rallied with support. They drove her to work, stayed late at the office to help with her job and raised money to offset medical bills.

The problem?

Jenny didn't really have cancer.

She fooled her friends and family by losing 20 pounds, shaving her hair off bit by bit, and by not wearing makeup.

But that doesn't mean Jenny wasn't sick.

Dr. Marc Feldman, an Alabama psychiatrist, diagnosed Jenny with "factitious disorder," a disease in which the patient fakes an illness to get sympathy, love and attention.

Factitious disorders are believed to be rare. Statistically, just 1 percent of people who see psychiatrists are given this diagnosis.

But forensic psychologist Stuart Litvak, who lives in Phoenix, says most health professionals — and many law-enforcement officers — encounter people with the disease at least once in their careers.

"The phenomenon may be much bigger than we think because it largely goes undetected," he said.

Women are believed to develop factitious disorders more often than men, said Beatrice Crofts Yorker, a Georgia psychiatric nurse and attorney who also will speak at the conference.

"It's a feminine manifestation (of the aftermath) of child abuse," she said.

"It may not have been physical abuse. It could have been neglect. In childhood, these people did not have enough attention."

Feldman said many patients also suffer from clinical depression.

Phoenix police Lt. Al Thiele, who oversees investigations of sex crimes and crimes against children, said nearly all police officers take a false report from someone with the disease at one time or another.

One woman told the police that an assailant ripped off her shirt and played tic-tac-toe on her chest with a knife, Thiele said.

"That's movie stuff," said Thiele, whose staff immediately was suspicious of the story.

"In real life, someone is not going to attack someone to play with them. In real life, assaults are more wicked than that."

It turned out the woman had taken a pin and scratched her own chest to get attention from the police.

The most dramatic cases of factitious disorder involve parents or health professionals who develop "Munchausen syndrome by proxy."

This form of the disease is named for Baron von Munchausen, an 18th-century adventurer who told tall tales about his expeditions. Patients who develop it injure children, animals or disabled people, then try to gain attention from police or doctors.

Last year, Mesa, Ariz., police investigated a young mother who is suspected of killing her son. She told police an intruder broke into her home, knocked her unconscious and murdered the boy.

Police learned that years before, social workers took another son away from the women when they learned she had tried to smother the child. The woman was diagnosed with Munchausen by proxy.

The case remains unsolved because police could not collect enough evidence to make an arrest.

Jenny's ruse eventually was discovered by the leaders of a breast-cancer support group, who got suspicious when they could not find her doctor.

Jenny's mother was mortified, her friends were mad, and her boss fired her. But the support group stuck by her and helped her get help.

In therapy, Jenny discovered that her unconscious motive for faking cancer was a wish that an ex-boyfriend would rush to her bedside. The boyfriend didn't return, and her lying got out of control.

Feldman said that, too often, doctors and other health-care workers shun patients like Jenny because they view them as deceitful and evil.

"Even though the patient does not have a physical illness, they do have a serious psychological illness," he said. "The last thing they need is further abandonment."

Feldman said patients often are confused, ashamed and need counseling to figure out why they have been acting so strangely.

He said many stop lying after counseling, having found the sympathetic ear they had been seeking all along.

Neck pain is problem for all ages

By Dr. Gerard P. Varlotta
Associated Press

A pain in the neck can be all too literal for many people.

It can afflict older people because of degenerative processes that affect the bones, muscles and discs of the neck (cervical spine) with age.

It can happen to younger people because of damage caused by sports injuries, accidents or simply carrying excessive loads repetitively.

A newer cause of neck problems is the computer. People who sit in front of a computer screen all day can unwittingly assume a posture that puts strain on the neck.

Avoidance of computer-caused neck pain starts with a well-designed workstation.

It should have a chair with adequate back support and armrests that support the arms and shoulders. And a computer and keyboard appropriately placed.

A few cases of neck pain are caused by a pinched nerve in the spinal canal that has branches to the arm and neck. It can cause neck pain without arm pain.

The best strategy for neck pain is prevention.

For example, older people should be careful when lifting heavy objects, such as a laundry basket and materials out of a car trunk.

Treatment for neck pain can start with medications such as anti-inflammatory drugs, muscle relaxants, painkillers and perhaps an antidepressant medication in low doses for its direct effect on the sensory nerves.

A physician may prescribe a set of exercises to strengthen and stretch the muscles of the neck and shoulders, such as the trapezius muscle, which helps to support the head.

Serious neck problems can be usually treated without surgery, but in some cases, surgery is required on a cervical disc or arthritic bone spurs that are compressing the nerves.

Such surgical decompression is common in older patients who have chronic arthritic neck problems and young patients with herniated discs.

Poor eyesight common in nursing homes

Associated Press

BOSTON — Poor eyesight is common in nursing homes, affecting one-third of patients, a study has found. And the leading cause is cataracts.

Many of the residents were legally blind.

The study, conducted by Johns Hopkins School of Public Health, is based on a survey of 499 residents of 30 nursing homes in the Baltimore area. It's published in a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"The magnitude of the problem of visual impairment in nursing home residents is extremely high," said Dr. James M. Tielsch, an epidemiologist who conducted the survey.

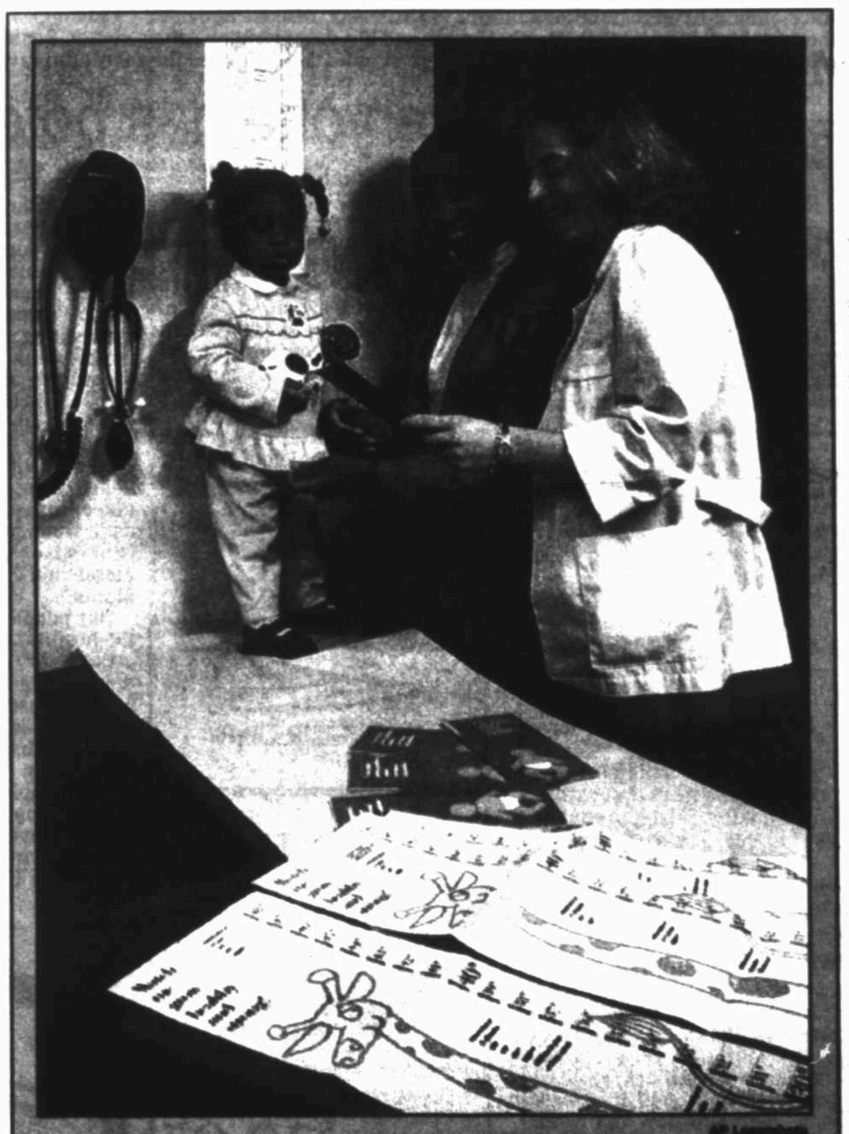

Cataracts accounted for 27 percent of the cases of vision impairment, the study determined. That means that many of the vision problems in nursing homes can be corrected, since cataracts can be treated surgically.

Among the findings:

- 17 percent of residents studied were legally blind, while an additional 19 percent had vision that was worse than 20-40.
- Blindness was 50 percent more common among blacks than whites.
- Besides cataracts, the most common causes of blindness were corneal opacity, macular degeneration and glaucoma.

Many of the elderly people with poor eyesight also had dementia, and Tielsch said this complicates decisions about whether they should undergo surgery.

He said doctors "want to do the best they can for individual patients, but undergoing surgery, for a person whose cognitive function prevents fully understanding what's going on, can be quite an upsetting experience. Generally it is pretty well accepted that people who are severely impaired would not benefit much."

DENTIST: Halitosis doesn't have to be life-long affliction

(From 1B)

ple, Shaw said: The problem is usually fixable.

The first step is to pinpoint, as best possible, the cause and severity of a patient's halitosis.

The most common sources can surprise people, especially people with clean, healthy mouths — people who've gotten nowhere with faithful brushing and flossing.

Lots of people think, "OK, it's going to be me and the Certs for life," Shaw said.

"The back of the tongue is often the main offender," he said. "It's like a thick shag carpet, and it's hard to get to."

The carpet is made of tiny, fingerlike tendrils. Trying to reach them trips the gag reflex.

FURTHERMORE, mouthwash, breath mints and gum can help temporarily, but usually they just mask the odor or kill only the most accessible bacteria, Shaw said — allowing the elusive bacteria, like the stuff sealed between the gums and plaque, to thrive.

To take the guesswork out of bad breath, Shaw attaches a small, flexible drinking straw to his Halimeter.

The straw is placed in three spots: at the front of the tongue, as close to the rear of the tongue as possible and (with a new straw) up the nostril a few centimeters.

During the process, the patient neither inhales nor exhales; the Halimeter provides its own slight suction.

Then Shaw has the patient breathe into a plastic bag; he then analyzes the expired air trapped inside the bag. But only in rare cases is the air in the bag the key to bad breath, Shaw said.

The Halimeter measures the occurrence, in parts per billion, of volatile sulfur compounds, Shaw said, working much like the "breathalizers" which measure blood-alcohol content.

Everybody's mouth contains volatile sulfur compounds. Some people simply have more.

They result naturally as bacteria called anaerobes break protein from food and sloughed tissue. The dying bacteria release the offensive-smelling gases which, if plentiful enough, present themselves as bad breath.

Most people with unobtrusive breath will show Halimeter readings below 100 parts per billion, Shaw said. "That's not noticeable, not offensive, for the most part."

A reading of 160 or 180 signals "pretty offensive" breath, he said, which can affect relationships both personal and professional.

Often, said Shaw, "It's a real emotional issue."

The Halimeter can be valuable, Shaw said, but it shouldn't stand alone.

A COMPLETE dental examination is required to explore other possible causes of halitosis such as tooth or gum disease. Furthermore, halitosis originating from the sinuses, lungs or stomach — places other than the mouth — can be signs of more serious medical problems.

But the majority of halitosis cases do originate in the mouth and are manageable through daily routine, Shaw said.

Increased attention to the problem has produced new products which effectively target breath-fouling bacteria.

There are gels, sprays, mouth rinses and toothpastes containing chlorine dioxide, the same chemical used to rid pools and public water supplies of bacteria, but with a lot less of it.

CHLORINE DIOXIDE does more than mask the odor, Shaw said, it neutralizes the source.

Shaw carries a brand called Oxyfresh. The products are more expensive than regular toothpastes and mouth rinses, he said, but they're highly concentrated and so they last longer, ounce per ounce.

A 5 1/2-ounce tube of Oxyfresh paste, for example, costs about $8, Shaw said, but it should last several months. A 16-ounce bottle of mouthwash costs about the same or there's a gallon jug available for $40.

The products require no prescription, and Shaw said anybody can buy them at his office — patients or not. He orders them from a distributor.

Another fresh-breath approach is to use a flexible plastic strip — like a tiny squeegee — to "scrape" bacteria from the carpet or villi at the back of the tongue. Shaw said the plastic strip is smaller than a toothbrush and so doesn't cause gagging.

Shaw learned of the Halimeter and other halitosis techniques from a San Antonio dentist who was among the first in the nation to hone in on bad breath.

At Shaw's office, a full Fresh Breath Center package costs about as much as a crown, he said — $400 to $500. But cases (and prices) can vary greatly, he added. Early indications are that insurance companies won't help with the costs for halitosis treatment at this time, said Shaw.

That package would include a dental examination; Halimeter readings; one container each of chlorine dioxide paste, gel and mouth rinse; and two follow-up visits, in most cases. The price also would a session with Shaw's Dentacam. That's a video system made for dentists and by which Shaw, using a small, handheld wand with a tiny camera, can project instant, clear pictures from inside the mouth onto a video screen for the patient to see.

The Dentacam is an "extra" in relation to the necessities but can help a patient to understand where plaque is forming or where other problems exist.

A Halimeter screening alone costs $35, Shaw said.

SHAW'S FRESH Breath Center has only been open a few weeks. Shaw said he also hopes to work with referring dentists on their patients' special problems.

Dr. William F. Bartosh, president of the San Angelo District Dental Society, said he's pleased to see somebody focusing on a problem that affects many people's lives.

"There has been nobody in this area who really has addressed this particular need," he said.

Causes of bad breath can be medical, dental or chemical

By Jenny Stresburg
Associated Press

SAN ANGELO — The key to fresh breath is understanding what causes bad breath.

Most articles on the subject say that 80 to 90 percent of cases of chronic, long-lasting halitosis originate in the mouth.

Experts also warn that most people with bad breath can't detect the odor themselves. The nose adapts to smells and tends to ignore odors it's used to.

They suggest that a person sniff his used dental floss, because an odor there may show up in breath. Or ask a spouse or a friend.

Other bad-breath origins:

■ Saliva helps kill the bacteria that cause bad breath; conversely a dry mouth helps breed those bacteria.

Alcohol, hunger, extensive talking, inhaling through the mouth during exercise — all these dry out the mouth and thereby sour breath. So can antihistamines, decongestants, antidepressants, tranquilizers and other medications that dry out the mouth.

Eating and drinking can help get saliva flowing again.

Some bacteria in the mouth are virtually unreachable and may warrant specialized treatment.

■ Some foods are sure-fire culprits: hot peppers, onions, garlic, spices and alcohol.

Some food odors can hang around in the breath for as long as three days, often because they're absorbed into the bloodstream and expired again through the lungs.

Sometimes the only thing to do is wait it out.

■ Gum and tooth disease may make any other attempt at fresh breath futile. A healthy mouth should be a first step, and a thorough dental examination is the ticket.

■ Sinus infections, intestinal infections, stomach ulcers and other medical conditions can cause bad breath.

Some possible signs of serious problems: breath odor that develops suddenly or grows noticeably worse over a short period of time, or which is accompanied by a fever or cough, or blood in the saliva.

Common sense should be part of journey to better health

By Jane E. Brody
N.Y. Times News Service

Many health-conscious Americans are understandably confused. Medical researchers cannot seem to make up their minds about what people should do to preserve their health for as long as possible.

After years of advice to reduce fat intake to 30 percent of daily calories and to limit cholesterol consumption to less than 300 milligrams a day, the public learns that a British scientist has concluded after reviewing the best available studies that such a diet has a minimal — if any — effect on the incidence of heart disease and coronary death rates.

After being told that any amount of exercise is bound to be beneficial, the public learns that a Harvard researcher has found that only vigorous exercise prolonged the lives of Harvard alumni.

After being told to eat more seafood to prevent heart disease, the public learns of a study of thousands of male doctors that found no such protection.

Whom are people to believe?

The time has come to start applying logic and good sense to these questions: to decide exactly what individuals hope to achieve and then adopt living habits commensurate with those goals.

By now, it should be obvious to all concerned that no one activity, food or attitude can guarantee untarnished golden years and that the surest path to a long and healthy life comes from a combination of factors that includes diet, exercise and stress management along with avoidance of health-robbing habits like smoking and excessive drinking.

To make a real dent in disease, disability and premature death, people need to accept the whole package, not just one small part.

SOME OF the best clues to longevity come from studies of long-lived populations that have, at least in the past, largely avoided the costly chronic and life-threatening diseases that afflict Americans in epidemic proportions.

Further clues come from an increased understanding of the biochemical machine that is the human body, a machine that has not changed in any substantive way in the 4 million years since it evolved.

Finally, while more research is clearly needed, especially on the factors that most influence longevity in women, there have been quite a few reliable studies from which sound guidance can be gleaned.

Homo sapiens evolved as gatherers and sometime hunters. As best as anthropologists and anatomists can determine, humans were designed to be primarily vegetarians with occasional feasts of meat and other animal foods.

The early human diet was necessarily very low in fat: rich in fruits and vegetables and sparing in low-fat animal protein from lean and sinewy wild animals, not cattle, hogs and chickens raised on corn and grain and confined to pens where they put on lots of fat. And early humans were an active bunch, working hard physically every day to obtain food and shelter.

Until this century, life expectancy rarely exceeded the reproductive years, with most people dying of infectious diseases. The advent of modern sanitation, immunizations and antibiotics brought most lethal infections under control and the industrial revolution eliminated the need for all that activity just to stay alive.

AS AMERICAN affluence increased, people not only lived longer but also higher on the hog. They ate more animal protein and more fat, they became increasingly sedentary, they got fatter and fatter and they took up cigarette smoking as a major means of stress control.

Japan has served as a living laboratory. Until recently the Japanese, who were largely free of heart disease and breast and lung cancer and who still live longer than Americans do, consumed a diet that closely resembled the early human diet and contained less than half the fat Americans now eat.

With rising affluence, the Japanese began eating more meat and fat and Japanese men took up smoking with a vengeance. As expected, the Japanese rate of heart disease began rising and lung and other smoking-related cancers are likely to follow.

In a carefully designed study, Dr. Dean Ornish of the Preventive Medicine Research Institute in Sausalito, Calif., proved the value of a diet very low in fat and rich in vegetable foods in patients already seriously afflicted with heart disease.

His plan, a rather strict vegetarian one that includes nonfat dairy products and egg whites but excludes all oils, calls for 10 percent of calories from fat and only 5 milligrams of cholesterol a day.

Along with a daily regime of moderate exercise and meditation and other techniques to reduce stress, the approach not only vastly improved participants' coronary risk factors, but it also significantly reversed arterial clogging and increased coronary blood flow.

The average, still healthy American is unlikely to need a diet as strict as Ornish's to remain healthy, but the message from his studies is clear: for most people who hope to live healthfully into the 80s, their diets need serious fat (and calorie) stripping.

WITHOUT QUESTION, cigarettes and other forms of tobacco must go, and if alcohol is consumed, it should be only in moderation — no more than one drink a day for women or two drinks for men.

And, last but hardly least, the human body needs regular physical activity. How vigorous must that activity be? That depends on the individual and what he or she hopes to achieve.

Experts agree that any kind and amount of exercise is better than none. Regular physical activity — even just walking or working around the house or garden for an hour a day for a person who was formerly sedentary — can help one reduce harmful blood fats, lower blood pressure, normalize blood sugar, relieve stress, shed extra pounds and preserve bone mass.

But the experts also agree that while some exercise is good, more is better. Up to what point, they have not yet determined. Although studies have shown that the people who exercise the longest and hardest are likely to remain alive and healthy the longest as well, they have also shown that moderate exercise has undeniable health and longevity benefits.

The new study of Harvard men did not examine longevity in moderate exercisers separately from that in men who did little or no exercise and for this reason may have failed to show a longevity increase from moderate exercise.

AS FOR A failure in the latest study to find a benefit from eating fish or taking fish oils, this does not mean that eating seafood often cannot help to lower the risk of developing heart disease or cancer or obesity.

There are several potential pitfalls in that study (including the possibility that most of the fish the men ate was low in the oils believed to be protective) that could account for its negative finding when several other studies have suggested otherwise.

The best lesson to learn from the new finding on fish is not to change one's living habits on the basis of one study. For a finding to become a fact, it must be replicated by independent scientists in different groups of people and it should have a demonstrable biological explanation.

Meanwhile, for a currently healthy person, moderation appears to be the wisest course.

Follow a diet low in fat (15 to 20 percent of calories from fat seems reasonable and likely to be beneficial) and rich in grains and other starches, fruits and vegetables, and get regular, preferably daily, exercise, alternating between two or three moderate to vigorous activities like brisk walking, cycling, swimming laps and strength training.

Everyone has potential to leave lasting legacy of tissue donation

By Lynn Bulmahn
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — Imagine if, on the day you died, you had the power to make a child walk again, to restore the sight of a blind person, to make a disfigured crash victim look normal, to bring comfort and healing to a patient who was severely burned.

You can.

All you have to do is sign a donor card — and make your family members aware that you want to be a tissue donor.

Yet few people know or understand the process, said Hoel Jones, coordinator of organ recovery services for South Texas Organ Bank.

"Not everyone who dies can be an organ donor, but everyone can be a tissue donor," said Jim Hayes, executive director of the South Texas Organ Bank.

Speaking at the South Texas Organ Bank's 1995 Symposium in Waco for health care professionals, Hayes said tissue donation can be a deceased person's last act of altruism.

He said vital organs, such as the heart, liver or lungs, can only be taken from patients declared brain dead when hooked to a ventilator. Otherwise, the organs won't be viable and can't be used in transplants.

But people who die away from the hospital, who have fatal heart attacks or who are pronounced dead in the emergency room are among those who can give tissue.

Jones said some 60 types of tissue from throughout the body can be used in transplantation. But only if people donate them.

Julie Spackman, manager of hospital development for the organ bank, said more than 40,000 people across the U.S. are waiting for a transplant of either a vital organ or tissue.

Just as organ transplants save lives, tissue transplants may enhance a person's life, said Jones, a Waco native who is now at South Texas Organ Bank's San Antonio location.

Some examples:

■ In children with cancerous tumors in the bones of their legs, a bridge from donated bone tissue can be used to replace the cancerous parts of the child's own bone. The result is the child will eventually regain the ability to walk.

■ The bones of the lower body, when transplanted, can be used in spinal reconstruction.

■ Donated bone tissue can be used in reconstructive surgery. If a person in a motor vehicle accident smashes his face through a windshield, his jaw bone can be rebuilt from the rib bone of a tissue donor.

■ Fire victims whose skin has been badly burned need skin grafts. They get them from tissue donors.

Jones said donating skin is not as terrible as it sounds. "A thin, sunburn-like peel" is all that is taken from the front and back of the body. At most, it appears as if the deceased had a slight sunburn.

■ Veins from a tissue donor can be used in bypass surgery for heart patients, who may not have veins suitable for such surgery, said Jones, who is also a registered nurse. Donor veins are also better because the patient does not have a wound in his leg, where his own vein would have been taken. This prevents pain and infection, and it's cheaper to do the surgery with donated tissue, Jones said.

■ Heart valves can also be transplanted, even if the deceased could not donate the entire heart. In many cases — especially if a recipient is small in size — artificial heart valves or valves from a pig's heart will not work, Jones said. This is a life-saving operation that may save a child.

"In one month, we lost three kids in San Antonio," Jones said. "It was a shame. The doctor told me all they needed was a donated heart valve."

Families must consent to tissue and organ donation, even if the deceased made a living will. The donation does not delay the funeral, cost the family extra money or disfigure the body.

Jones said some families elect not to tell others they've allowed their loved one to be a donor — and the appearance of the deceased does not give away the secret.

The only exception, Jones said, is the mandible, or jawbone, which cannot be perfectly restored artificially. In all other cases, he said, the body appears normal and an open casket service can be held.

Spackman emphasized that people who want to donate organs or tissue must inform their next-of-kin NOW. Not to do so means a relative could object — and block the donation from occurring.

Smoking during pregnancy, infant death rate linked

BOSTON (AP) — Two researchers have produced startling numbers to back up the long-held belief that smoking during pregnancy can prove fatal to unborn and young children. Mothers who smoke cause the deaths of about 5,600 babies and 115,000 miscarriages in the United States every year, according to Joseph DiFranza and Robert Lew, who reviewed nearly 100 studies conducted over a 40-year period. Their study, which appears in a recent Journal of Family Practice, also found that mothers' smoking contributes to 53,000 annual cases of low birth-weight babies and 22,600 cases of babies who require intensive care at birth.

While earlier studies have examined the risks associated with smoking during pregnancy, "no one had ever tried to calculate ... the numbers of children actually harmed," said DiFranza, an associate professor of family and community medicine at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

The doctors said they reached their numbers by using estimated percentages and actual numbers of how many women get pregnant each year and how many of them smoke.

The researchers said tobacco use by pregnant women results in 1,900 annual cases of sudden infant death syndrome, in which apparently healthy infants are found dead in their cribs. Another 3,700 children die annually by the age of 1 month from complications caused by tobacco smoke during the mother's pregnancy, they said.

Doctors say mothers, newborns are being sent home too quickly

By Sabin Russell
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Leading obstetricians charged Wednesday that profit-driven insurance firms are conducting an "uncontrolled experiment" on American mothers and their newborns by forcing them to leave hospitals just hours after delivery.

In what is shaping up as a major clash between health insurers and health professionals, doctors at the annual meeting of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology said there is no scientific basis for sending mother and child home so soon, and there are signs the practice is taking a toll.

Just this week, the University of California at San Francisco reported five recent cases of bilirubin encephalopathy — a severe form of jaundice that causes brain damage. The disease, almost unseen in American hospitals for over 20 years, is easily averted if signs are caught early.

A growing number of insurers and health maintenance organizations allow only a 24-hour stay for mothers and newborns unless there are complications, and some hospitals are discharging them as soon as six hours after delivery.

The insurers say that longer stays are too costly and that many women do not want institutionalized care for their newborns and want to get home as soon as possible. But the obstetricians, meeting in San Francisco, said the pressure to get mothers home early has gone too far.

"THE RECENT trends are not driven by consumer demand, but by financial considerations," said Philadelphia physician Michael Mennuti, chairman of the college's obstetrics policy committee. "The burden of proof for the safety of early discharge rests on those driving this change."

At a press conference at Moscone Convention Center, Mennuti called for a "timeout" on the part of HMOs and other purveyors of managed care "until we know what is best for American women and their families."

The trend toward shorter stays, he said, amounts to "a large, uncontrolled and uninformed experiment" by health insurers.

Dr. Carol Miller, a neonatalogist at UCSF Medical Center, said a newborn's first day of life is critical for both mother and child. The recovering mother needs time to learn how to nurse her baby, she said, and the baby must learn how to nurse.

"Very abrupt changes start with the cutting of the umbilical cord," said Miller. "A change in medical practice has occurred without proper investigation whether it is safe."

Studies now under way document an increase in the number of babies readmitted to hospitals for a variety of conditions after an early discharge, she said. "We've had several readmissions for dehydration caused by inappropriate feeding."

The trend toward shorter hospital stays has been long in coming. According to figures released last week by the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the average length of stay for women who give birth vaginally decreased 49 percent, from 3.9 days to 2.1 days, between 1970 and 1992.

'The recent trends are not driven by consumer demand, but by financial considerations. The burden of proof for the safey of early discharge rests on those driving this change.'
— Dr. Michael Mennuti, American College of Obstetrics,Gynecology

Kathryn Wilber, an attorney for the Group Health Association of America — a Washington D.C.-based trade organization — said HMO's adhere to guidelines laid out by the same organization that is criticizing them. The college's guidelines call for discharge within 48 hours, but permit discharge in less than 24 hours under a broad set of conditions.

"The decision to be discharged should be a joint decision (between doctor and patient)," said Wilber.

She acknowledged that some birth centers offering a home-like environment discharge their patients after six hours. "Women choose these centers with the understanding they will be discharged early," she said.

At a meeting this week in San Diego, Dr. Augusto Sola, director of neonatal services at UCSF, reported that between 1992 and 1994 five babies discharged from Northern California hospitals, including UCSF, with no signs of jaundice later developed bilirubin encephalopathy.

One baby had been certified as healthy and sent home eight hours after birth.

After delivering his report to the American Pediatric Society, Solo was surrounded by doctors from all over the country. "They were telling me, 'My goodness, we've seen this too. ... Something has changed here," he said.

JAUNDICE IS a yellowing of the skin caused by the inability of the newborn's liver to break down bilirubin, a byproduct of red blood cells. It is an extremely common condition in newborns and among the easiest to treat — high levels of light will break down the chemical until the liver can do it on its own.

But failure to treat jaundice — which normally appears within 24 to 36 hours of birth — can cause brain damage in an infant in less than a week.

Jaundice could be identified in a baby released early by a trained nurse visiting the home, a service provided by many HMOs.

"But many insurance companies do not cover the cost of home visits," said UCSF physician Miller, and the quality of home visit services varies widely among plans.

Mennuti added that the quality of home life varies dramatically among women who give birth in American hospitals. "Thirty percent of babies return to a single-parent home," he said. "We also have patients that deliver and then return with their babies to their homeless shelters."

Color may be key to 'inner balance'

By Pamela Percival
Associated Press

ABILENE — When you are faced with a decision of any magnitude, do you:

(a) Act on impulse, but at least get something done?

(b) Think about it analytically and try to dissect it?

(c) Act on the feelings and emotions evoked by it?

Your answer to the question above might indicate the "color" in which your life operates — the way you deal with your world through acting, feeling and thinking, says Trudi Spring, a licensed professional counselor in Abilene who has written a new book called "PsyCOLORgy: A Woman's Guide To Inner Balance."

SPRING SEPARATES women's personalities into various colors of the rainbow, with each color carrying specific traits and tendencies.

For example, if you answered "a," you might operate in the color red. "Red" women tend to be active, strong, independent "doers," who might act before they think or feel. A red woman is busy, setting goals and adopting projects and causes other women might find daunting. In addition, friends and family sometimes get the impression she is always a little angry and is so busy they might be in her way.

"If they encounter her at the supermarket, they might think she is rude and abrupt, but she really isn't; she's just in a big hurry because she has so much to accomplish," Spring writes.

If you answered "b" to the above question, you might operate in "yellow," and tend to be an analytical thinker, perhaps obsessing too much.

A "c" answer might indicate an "orange" woman, an empathetic feeler.

The book includes a color quiz made up of questions like the one above to help women identify their colors. Spring contends that once women know their colors and understand who they are, they can work for balance in their lives.

"My true goal (in writing this book) is just to help people see and understand themselves," Spring said. "If they do that, they might not need to go to therapy. When you understand your strengths and weaknesses, you can work for positive change.

"For example, I want the red woman to say to herself, 'I just act too quickly; I need to calm down and think more,' " Spring continued.

ALTHOUGH SOME people might not take seriously the importance of colors in their lives, Spring says the psychological and physical effects of colors on people have been well-documented scientifically. She also personally saw the power of color in her work as an interior designer in Houston, before she went back to school to study psychology.

For example, she was once asked to decorate a "holding room" at a residential mental health treatment center for kids. The room was used for highly disturbed children who might go so far as to scratch paint off the walls or kick holes in them. Spring painted the room a dusty pink because studies had shown that particular color "had enough blue in it to calm them and enough red so they wouldn't get depressed."

"What happened was, after being in that room 10 to 15 minutes, they'd curl up into a ball in the fetal position," Spring said. "It was amazing."

During graduate school while studying to become a psychotherapist, Spring tried another color decorating experiment.

"I talked them into painting one of the therapy rooms this dusty rose color and ran a study on how people reacted to it," Spring said. "What happened was trust of the therapist and a reasonable desire to return to therapy were increased. That color just makes you trust the environment. We don't feel any defenses when we see pink."

SPRING ADDS that criminal attorneys are often advised to wear pink shirts on the day they present their final arguments to the jury, to help gain the jury's trust.

Maybe that's why visitors to Spring's office will spot a dusty pink oriental rug under the coffee table and a floral print tablecloth interspersed with dusty pink.

Spring said she combined her own observations about color with other theories on the subject and began to find her own therapy clients did indeed fit into specific color categories. She adds that, in addition to the three "operational" colors of red, orange and yellow, people are balanced by three "relational" colors of green, blue and purple. Relational means engaging the world through people interactions — the outward manifestations of ourselves.

For example, a red operational woman should optimally be balanced by having a green relational side. Green is calming, nurturing and connected.

"Let's say you're angry and red, you need to balance it with green to effect change to a sense of abundance and that every thing will be OK," Spring said. "So, literally, when I see somebody who's angry, I send them to a greenhouse like Wolfe's or Colormaker. It calms them down. Green effects a calming sense, makes you very flexible and able to change. We're compromising and changing in green — easy to get along with and very loving."

SPRING SAYS she wrote her book for women because she bonds more easily to them. However, a book about men's colors is in the works, along with a text on how men and women can balance their relationships through colors.

Sometimes life's lessons learned by driving off 'the beaten path'

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Several years ago I had an experience that left a definite impression on me. It provided me with several lessons in life.

One morning my son Vance and I decided to go deer hunting on our farm, which we had recently acquired.

We set out, driving an old station wagon that we thought appropriate. Of the available transportation, it came closest to meeting our hunting and fishing needs at the time. As we approached the farm, we were surprised to see that several inches of snow had fallen during the night.

We turned onto what we thought was the road to the pasture, but because of the snow we were unable to see any old car tracks.

As we crept along, our confidence grew and we assumed we were on track. About that time I hit a low spot where water had been standing and we felt the tires sink rapidly into the mud.

I rocked the car back and forth from forward to reverse in an attempt to extricate us, but quickly realized I was making the situation worse. In a few brief minutes we knew the car was sitting on its axles and frame deep in mud.

We walked on to the deer blinds and about 11 a.m. met back at the wagon.

Deciding that we had neither the tools nor the experience to get the car unstuck and back on higher ground, we walked several miles to a farmhouse and sought assistance.

The resident graciously offered to help with his tractor. Using chains, he quickly pulled the car out of the mud and onto the road. He noted the inappropriate use of a vehicle of this type for off-road activities. I readily agreed.

Shortly after that I acquired a vehicle with four-wheel drive and suitable tires for off-road adventures.

I have often thought of the parallel between that experience and the problems related to me by individuals I have counseled.

While moving through life, they often have encountered difficulties or found themselves in unfamiliar territory. Being unable to resolve their problems, they eventually lost their psychological footing.

What at first seemed to be a small impediment became a deep rut. Eventually they bogged down all the way to their axles, causing them to become immobilized with doubts, fears, uncertainties and eventually hopelessness. They rocked back and forth attempting various methods of dealing with their difficulties. Often these attempts only compounded their problems and they were stuck.

In rocking back and forth, they attempted to deal with their stress in unhealthy ways:

- They used alcohol or drugs.
- They bounced from job to job earning a poor record that created the impression of instability and unreliability.
- They were unable to establish or maintain relationships with emotionally healthy others.
- They gradually eroded and destroyed their belief in their own ability to cope with life's adversities and problems.

They needed help getting out and staying out of deep ruts in life.

Friendly visit

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II observes a barn owl that landed close to her as she watched a flying display of birds of prey during a visit Friday to the Royal Windsor Horse Show, 20 miles west of London.

Frank Sinatra's artwork may soon hang around some people's necks

MIAMI — Corporate executives may soon be wearing ties designed by the Chairman of the Board.

Neckties based on Sinatra's artwork go on sale today.

Neckties based on Frank Sinatra's artwork are being offered by the people who brought you neckwear inspired by the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia and jazz great Miles Davis.

The $40 ties with abstract geometric forms go on sale today at Bloomingdale's. Some proceeds will go to the Barbara Sinatra Children's Fund for abused children.

After the success of the Garcia ties, introduced in 1992, Sinatra's manager approached Stonehenge Ltd. to offer Sinatra's paintings.

"I knew immediately I could transfer it to a good-looking necktie," said Stonehenge partner Natan Brach.

In 1990, a Sinatra abstract floral canvas sold for $17,000 at a celebrity art auction.

KEYSTONE, W.Va. — There was no show in Keystone when the star was a no-show.

A Paramount crew on Monday constructed sets for "Primal Fear," about a man with multiple personalities who murders an archbishop. But the star, Richard Gere, never made it from Los Angeles — he had the flu — so the crew dismantled everything and flew home.

The brief flurry was excitement enough in this town of 900 people.

"It has been a lot of people for this little town," said Mayor Billie Cherry. "It's been fun for most of us. And it has been very interesting to watch. I didn't realize it took that many people to make a movie."

Gere is expected back in July.

OMAHA, Neb. — Fred Grandy calls himself a "recovering congressman" who's gotten eight years of politics out of his system.

"I'm completely cured and rehabilitated from that," said Grandy, the former Republican congressman from Iowa and current president of Goodwill International. "I am totally committed to the Goodwill job."

Lee rides one-hitter to state

■ Midland Lee uses a one-hitter from Emily Hayes to shut down Fort Worth Haltom 4-0.

Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

STEPHENVILLE — Not with the bat nor with the rule book could Haltom take the region I final from Midland Lee. The Lady Rebels beat the Lady Buffaloes 4-0 in the Class 5A final Friday behind an Emily Hayes one-hitter to earn a spot in the state final four tournament.

Midland Lee (28-0) was led by its senior left-hander, who faced 23 Haltom batters and struck out 11. Hayes, 18-0, walked two, but turned it on late in the game to control the Lady Buffs. Hayes threw 93 pitches and 67 strikes during the game. She allowed only two runners to third base the entire night.

"Emily went to town," said Midland Lee coach Elise Kail. "She turned up the heat big time."

"They thought the game was going to be there's, we said it wasn't going to be that way," said Hayes. "The defense was there and I knew my team was ready for me to put the game away."

Lee overcame controversy to capture a state tournament berth in its first year of playing in the University Interscholastic League. In the bottom of the fourth inning and up 1-0 after Adrian Nobles scored on a bases loaded passed ball, the Lady Rebels had runners on second and third with two outs when Amee Pullen hit a ball up the middle off Haltom's Caryn Holbrook, 26-8, and into center field. The single and the two runs it drove in were nullified after Haltom coach Mike Fielder protested, saying that Chrystal Smith interfered with the ball while on second base.

The ruling cost Lee two runs, but more important than the runs, the momentum stayed in Lee's dugout the rest of the game.

In the fifth inning, Lee's Suzanna Reed hit a single and Christian Lance followed with a double down the left field line, scoring Reed and extending Lee's lead to 2-0.

Lance and Michelle Primeaux, who was pinch-running for Hayes, scored moments later when April Rice drilled a double to left-center to make it 4-0.

The runs in the fifth made up for Lee's inability to dri-

Steer leaper defends triple jump medal

■ Big Spring's Drexell Owusu wins Class 4A triple jump on final attempt.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Big Spring senior Drexell Owusu saved the best for last to repeat as the Class 4A triple jump champion at the UIL State Track and Field Meet Friday at Memorial Stadium.

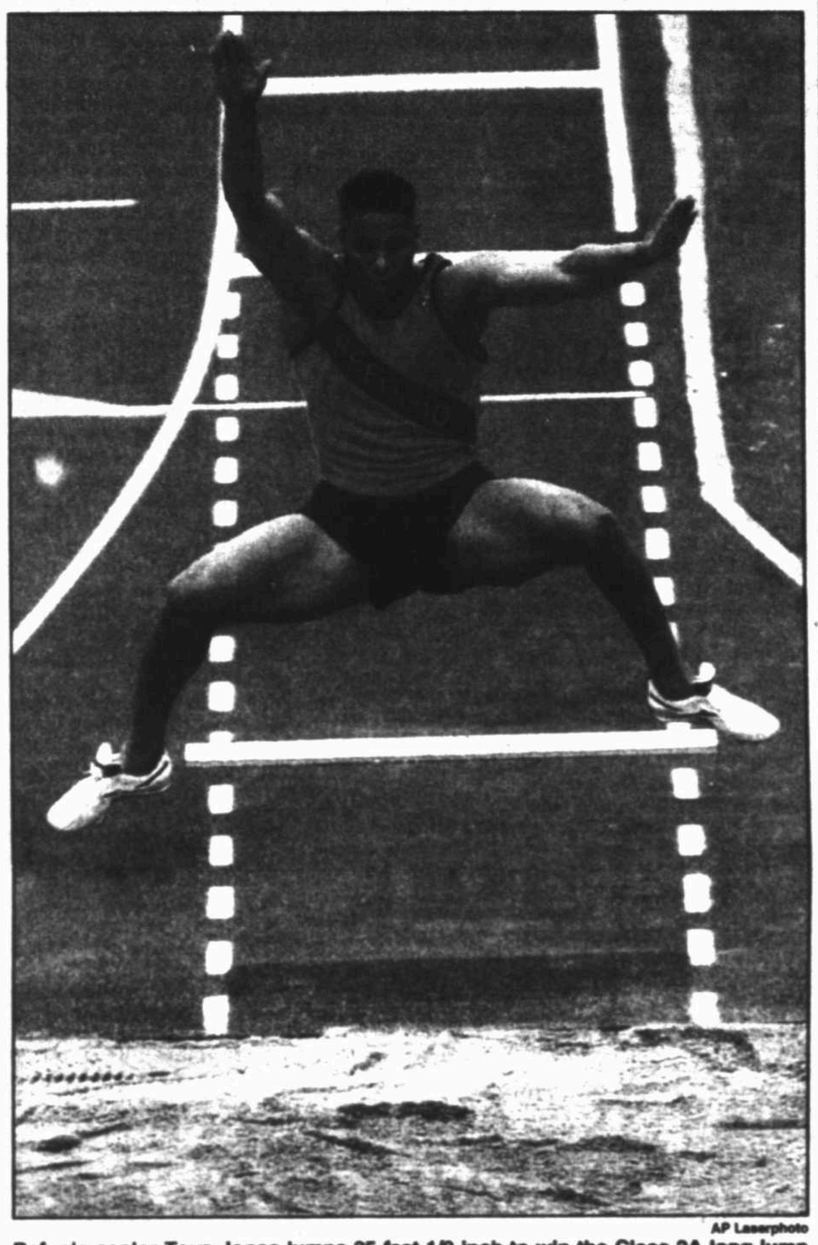

OK, maybe it wasn't his personal best but it was a great way to end his high school career. Owusu's leap of 49 feet, 8 1/2 inches was almost a foot shy of his Region I-4A record (50-7) set two weeks ago in San Angelo. But considering the thick cloud of intense, humid Austin air that hung over the competition and threatened rain for the first of two days of the meet, his mark was the best out of the eight competitors and it came at the last possible moment.

Owusu, who led the competition for four of the first five rounds of jumping, was bumped to second place when Brenham's Ed Ray, who had been nipping at Owusu's heels all day, finally uncorked a leap of 49-3 3/4 - a mere quarter-inch better than the Big Spring jumper's mark of 49-3 1/2.

But Owusu responded brilliantly, despite not knowing he had lost his initial lead and had just one final jump to regain the title and a second gold medal in the event.

"They (Big Spring coaches and specators) would not tell me what place I was in. I could tell on the performance board that it was 49-3 but I didn't know what the fraction was," said Owusu in explaining that the sign,

Mustangs reach title contest

BELTON — The Midland Christian baseball team took a while to get its motor going. But the end result was a berth in today's Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools 1A state championship.

The Mustangs used a 3-run bottom of the seventh inning to defeat Waco Parkview Christian 7-6 in a state semifinal played at Belton High. They face Shiner St. Paul in the 9 a.m. final today.

■ TAPPS 1A

The only way it could be better is if we win tomorrow, Midland Christian coach Gordon Awtry said. "I don't want to have to win it the same way, I just want to win it."

Midland Christian (17-8) was down 6-4 going into the last half of the final inning. The Mustangs then got the bases full with a combination hit, walk and error. Chris Patteson got a run-scoring hit to left field setting up Allan Awtry's single, driving in two runs to win the game.

"I told somebody in the dugout that if we got to Allan we'd win it," coach Awtry

CBS' Wright denies remarks on lesbianism

By Richard Sandomir
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — One day after remarks about lesbianism's negative impact on women's professional golf were attributed to him, the CBS broadcaster Ben Wright denied having made the comments and received swift support from the television network.

Wright was summoned to CBS's headquarters in Manhattan on Friday by David Kenin, the president of CBS Sports, and began meeting with Kenin and network lawyers at 5: 30 p.m. He did not work on the coverage of Friday's round of the McDonald's LPGA Championship at the DuPont Country Club in Wilmington, Del.

But after nearly two and a half hours of meetings, CBS was convinced that Wright had not made the inflammatory

Rebels play Hanks at home away from home

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

EL PASO— When the players of the Midland Lee baseball team found out they had lost the flip for the home site of the area round playoff game, the thought turned to a long bus ride to a rock-riddled field and a chance at a state tournament berth up in smoke.

But when the Rebels learned that they would travel to Hanks High School for a one-game playoff, it was music to their ears.

Hanks High School has become Midland Lee's home away from home over the past two seasons and today they hope Hanks will keep the welcome mat out with a 2 p.m. (CDT) game at Hanks High School.

Midland Lee has played at Hanks six times over the past two seasons after competing in the Hanks baseball tournament over the past two seasons. Six times — that is more times than the Rebels have played at Christensen Stadium, second only to Ernie Johnson Field in terms of appearances over the same period of time.

"This is my senior and it will be the seventh time that we have gone to El Paso," said senior right handed pitcher Lance Watters who will take his 1.77 earned run average to El Paso. "We played them earlier this year and we have been to their field, so we know what to expect."

Watters is referring to Lee's 3-1 win over Hanks in the tournament championship in February. Britt Harper picked up the win despite the Rebels collecting only four hits. Mike Phillips and Daniel Carrasco had RBI singles and a Hanks miscue resulted in the other run.

■ Class 5A Playoffs

The Knights, 15-12 on the year and the third place team out of District 2-5A, will have a new look since that early season meeting. Three new pitchers will likely take to the mound, including junior right-hander Tony Jasso. He saw action in all three Hanks games against El Paso Andress in the bi-district round last week. He went the distance in Game 3, allowing nine hits and three walks in an 8-2 victory.

Senior Steve Olivas started Game 2 and will likely be called upon if Jasso falters.

Offensively, Hanks used a balanced attack to beat Andress in Game 3. Troy Kramer led the Knights, going 3-for-4 with one

Magic prove Michael is mortal after all

By Mike Nadel
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan proved it and the Orlando Magic reaffirmed it: The threads don't make the man.

After a fast start Friday night, Jordan found neither comfort nor strength from wearing his familiar No. 23 jersey.

And the Magic, as always unfashionable in striped blue suits that look more like pajamas than basketball uniforms, happily took advantage of Jordan's troubles down the stretch to beat the Chicago Bulls 110-101 for a 2-1 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Orlando rallied from an early 10-point deficit, blew a 10-point third-quarter lead to fall behind by five with less than seven minutes to play and then came back again for the victory.

The young Magic — not Jordan and the rest of the championship-tested Bulls — excelled down the stretch, scoring the final nine points on free throws.

"We've matured a lot," said Nick Anderson, who scored 22 points for the Magic. "We showed a lot of poise. They came out blistering, but we stayed with it and we stayed in it. It's a good sign for us."

"The way they barraged us, making

■ Eastern Conference

easy baskets, and the way Jordan was going, it would have been easy to fold," Orlando assistant coach Richie Adubato said. "But we kept our composure."

It didn't matter what number Jordan was wearing — or that he finished with 40 points.

Jordan wore No. 23 while leading the Bulls to NBA titles in 1991, 1992 and 1993 but switched to 45 after coming out of retirement. After a terrible performance in Game 1 of this series — including two crucial turnovers in the closing seconds — Jordan flouted league rules, drew a $25,000 fine and went back to No. 23. He scored 38 points in Chicago's Game 2 victory.

Jordan was the top scorer Friday but still missed more shots (16) than he made (15). And he hurt the Bulls with mistakes down the stretch for the second time this series.

As usual, Jordan didn't talk to the media after the game. But the Bulls are getting plenty tired of what teammate Steve Kerr called "the stupid number thing."

"It has nothing to do with the outcome of the game or anything else," Kerr said. "Who cares about what number he wears? We don't just sit around and say, 'Oh, he's wearing that number tonight, so this is how we are going to play.'"

Orlando doesn't care about Jordan's number, either.

Records tumble, Jones takes more gold

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN — Joshua's Casi Florida took 1.6 seconds off the long-standing girls' Class 4A record in the 3,200 meters and Derrick Small of Dickinson took nearly as much off the boys' 4A mark in the 800 meters Friday at the state track meet.

Florida, a senior, was among three runners who broke from the pack after little more than a lap, then she cruised in second for a bit before widening her lead over each of the last two laps.

Her time of 10:41.60 erased the mark of 10:43.20 set in 1983 by Kim Whitaker of New Braunfels. Florida also whacked more than 16 seconds off her second-place time from last year.

Florida also is the defending champion in the 1,600 meters and was a favorite in that race, the last girls' event Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

Small torched the 800-meter field in 1 minute, 49.41 seconds, erasing by 1.59 seconds the mark of 1:51.00 set in 1983 and 1988. He came within .01 second of tying the overall University Interscholastic League meet record.

Small, who finished second last year in 1:53.00, was more than two and a half seconds faster than his nearest competitor. The Rice-bound senior had set a goal of breaking 1:50.

The 4A boys' 4-by-100-meter relay was the most exciting event of the evening as Dallas Lincoln charged from fourth to first on the last leg to win in 40.94, just .12 faster than Brenham.

The girls' 4-by-100 relay also was a thriller as Lamar Consolidated beat Dallas Lincoln by .09 to win in 46.74.

AP Laserphoto
Tanyana McCray of Corpus Christi Flower Bluff clears 6-foot, 10-inches to capture the Class 4A high jump competition on Friday.

The highlight of the morning events was the fourth straight Class 2A long jump title by Refugio's Toya Jones, fulfilling the goal he set for himself after winning the event as a freshman.

Jones, who is bound for Texas A&M this fall, won with a leap of 25 feet, one-quarter inch. All four of his legal jumps were better than the longest leap of second-place finisher Brian Koening of Skidmore-Tynan.

Still, Jones was slightly disappointed because he landed short of the 2A record he set last year (25-1). Jones also was eyeing the overall meet record of 25-4 1/2 and even the national mark of 26-4 3/4.

"I'm just coming on as a long-jumper," said Jones, a five-event performer who will play football and be a long-jumper for the Aggies. "Maybe I can do a lot better."

Jacob Davis of Orangefield also keeps doing a lot better. The junior won his third straight 3A pole vault title with a vault of 17 feet, half an inch, breaking his own class record by one-fourth inch.

It was the seventh straight time an Orangefield boy won the event.

The two-day meet finishes strong Saturday with the rest of the field events and the individual and team track titles in the other four classes.

Jones will be the person to keep an eye0 on today as he tries becoming the meet's top individual scorer for the third straight year. He scored a record 45 points as a sophomore and his 44 points last year is second best all-time.

Jones also will be seeking his fourth straight triple-jump title, his third straight crowns in the 100 meters and 200 meters, plus he's expected to lead Refugio to its third straight team title.

Other Friday highlights:

—Texarkana's Marsha French upset defending 4A girls' discus champion Janet Visosky of Corpus Christi Flour Bluff with a toss of 140-8.

French and Tabitha Johnigan of Kilgore finished 1-2 in the shot put for the second straight year, with French winning with a heave of 44-11 1/2. Visosky was third.

—Desi Hudson of Albany won the girls' 2A long jump on her last attempt, going three-quarter-inch longer than leader Kathryn Otwell of Deleon. Hudson, who finished fourth last year, jumped 18-3 3/4. She also won the triple jump by three-quarter-inch.

—Jon Colby Miller of Lazbuddie shattered the 1A record in the pole vault with a mark of 16-9. The previous record of 15-6 was set last year.

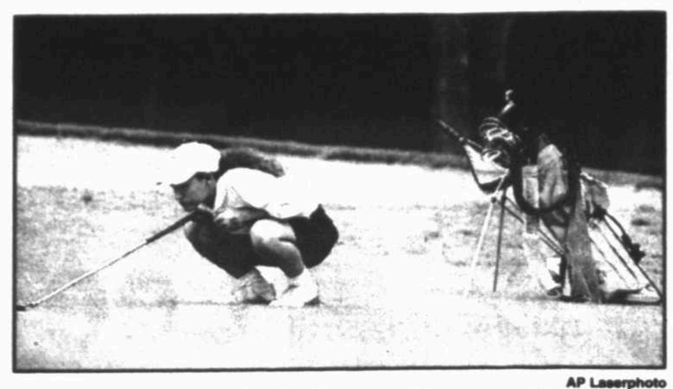

—Stacy Bowers of Waco La Vega and Nanceen Perry of Fairfield swapped spots from last year in the girls' 3A long jump, with Bowers winning this year and Perry finishing second.

—Roscoe's Kevin Buchanan triple-jumped 45-11 to win the boys' 1A event after finishing fifth last year. Finishing fourth was James Stewart of Anton, who won it last year with a record mark of 47-2 3/4.

—East Bernard's Crystal Kubena won the girls' 2A discus with a throw of 141-3. She won the event with a record toss of 145-8 in 1993 and was third last year.

—Matthew Brown of Idalou defended his 2A boys' discus title with a toss of 176-10.

—Sabinal's Willie Garcia defended his 1A boys' 3,200-meters crown by finishing in 9:47.71. Nobody else was under 10:08.

Elizabeth Cameron of Humble Kingwood lins up a putt on the second hole of her round Friday. Humble captured the Class 5A state championship. District 4-5A team San Angelo Central finished third.

Central's McMahon wins state

AUSTIN (AP) — Jessie Sosa won the Class 5A individual boys golf title and two teammates joined him in the top five, leading El Paso Hanks to a 24-stroke team victory Friday in the state championship.

In girls' action, Julie McMahon of San Angelo Central won a playoff to take the individual title and Humble Kingwood won the team title.

Sosa shot a 72 for a two-under 142, one-stroke better than teammate Ralph Gemoets. Hanks shot a 580 to easily defeat second-place Austin Westlake, last year's 4A champion.

Last year's champion, Plano, finished seventh, 53 strokes off the pace.

First-round leader Bryon Fields of Corpus Christi Carroll shot a 77 to fade to fourth, four strokes behind Sosa.

■ UIL Golf

McMahon, the top returning finisher from last year's tournament and the first-round leader this year, beat Jane Hilburn on the first playoff hole. She shot a 73 Friday, giving her a one-over 145.

Hilburn's second place finish was enough to give Humble Kingwood top honors. It shot 634 for a seven-stroke victory over Round Rock Westwood, which blew a five-stroke, first-round lead.

Last year's champion, San Angelo Central, finished third, 12 strokes behind.

OWUSU: Purser to compete in shot put today

1(From 1C)

which displays the performance of each jumper, showed only feet and full inches.

Maybe the uncertainty was inspirational for the Rice signee who sprinted down the runway on the final jump of his high school career and the final jump of the competition to bound back into the lead.

"It was a very good way to end (my career)," said Owusu. "But I wish I could have gone over 50 feet."

But the thick air was brutal on any record attempts. Owusu's career best was just 3/4 of an inch shy of the 4A state record and Sweetwater's Robert Reed had also gone 50-7 in tying Owusu at the regional meet. Neither got close to the mark. Reed ended up with the bronze medal after jumping 48-7 1/4.

Owusu's was the only state title for the Steers, who came into the meet with a possible 70 points after winning district and regional titles. The state title that at once seemed very possible slipped from their grasp, however, as Everman won the 1,600-meter relay, the pole vault and was second in the 200 meters for 38 points to claim the championship.

Brenham had 37 for second while Dallas Lincoln was third with 36. Dallas Roosevelt was fourth with 32 while Dallas South Oak Cliff and Big Spring scored 24 and 23 points respectively.

In the girls team race, Lamar compiled 56 points for the title edging out Dallas Lincoln with 54. Cedar Hill bad 45 for third.

The meet concludes today with running events for 1A and 2A beginning at noon and the 3A and 5A session beginning at 5:45 p.m. Also being contested today are the rest of the field events for 1A, 2A, 3A and 5A, of which some were completed on Friday. They begin at 8 a.m. with the 2A boys triple jump and conclude at 6 p.m. when Greenwood's Rusty Purser competes in the 3A boys shot put.

Owusu's triumph in the triple jump was somewhat of a consolation for him after he did not perform well in the long jump to finish seventh and did not score any points to help the team cause. His best jump of the day was 22-0 1/4 which was nowhere near his regional mark of 23-7.

"I was really bummed out," said Owusu. "We were at the motel (in between events) and everyone kept asking me 'Are you all right' because I just sat around and didn't say anything.

"But Coach just said, 'You're the state champion and you need to make him (Brenham's Ray) catch you.

That's what he did, only to dash Ray's dreams of a last-second win.

Owusu's father Josh, who was an Olympian for his native Kenya after earning all-American honors as a jumper at Angelo State, said he knew immediately that his son had reclaimed the lead.

"I could see when he took off because it was the first time he kept his chin up on the take off," said the elder Owusu. "We kept telling him that he needed to keep his chin up but he didn't do it until the end.

"He had to," Josh continued. "He was in trouble."

Josh said he was afraid his son's earlier performance in the long jump was going to interfere with the defense of his title. It was Drexell's first time at state in the long jump.

"He put so much pressure on himself to win the long jump and then come back and win the triple jump instead of taking one event at a time," said Josh.

Owusu's lack of point production in the long jump may have been a bit of foreshadowing of what was a dissappointing day for the Steers.

Senior Joe Franklin, who despite bettering his time by two seconds in the 800 meters, finished third in a time of 1 minutes, 52.87 seconds. He was overshadowed by Dickinson's Derrick Small, who led the race wire to wire to win in a 4A record 1:49.41 - just two-tenths of a second from the state record (1:49.20) which is shared by Jeremy Stallings of Stanton (1993) and Houston Memorial's Dave Morton (1967).

Despite an eighth-place finish by Steers senior Roger Eddington in the 110 hurdles, Big Spring was still in contention with 16 points which kept them in third behind Brenham (21) and Corpus Christi Flour Bluff (18).

But any remaining thread of a title hope was snipped when junior Randy Farr, who entered the meet with the best qualifying time of 47.62 in the 400, was in position for a medal but faded to fifth on the home straightaway.

Still, by coach Randy Britton's account, the Steers could tie for the state title by winning the 1,600 relay. But the team of Brian Burchett, Dustin Waters, Franklin and Farr finished fifth in a time of 3:21.85 - five seconds worse than their best of 3:16. Everman's winning time of 3:15.87 was catchable with a strong performance.

"We had a chance to be co-champs if we won the relay," said Britton. "Joe ran his best time in the 800 and Drexell defended his championship and you can't ask for much more than that. And Joe ran the best leg on the relay (49.9 as a last-minute alternate). But the rest of them, I don't speak too highly of.

"You always hope that when its the first time for these guys (to run at state) that they won't get so jittery," Britton continued. "But it's hard to come down here and stay calm and focused. We'll still have a chance to do this (win state in the future) but I have to say this leaves a very bitter taste in my mouth.

For the Big Spring girls, Kathy Smith was sixth in the long jump with a leap of 17-9. The Big Spring 1,600 relay ended up in sixth.

In one of a few 1A field events concluded Friday, Rankin's Dionicio Sifuentez was seventh with a jump of 43-5 3/4 in the triple jump.

said.

The comeback made up for shaky early-inning pitching by the Mustangs. Starter Cary Patteson gave up two runs in the second and four in the third inning. The junior right-hander walked nine and threw four wild pitches in 2 2/3 innings.

John Koss came in to save the day for Midland Christian, shutting out Waco Parkview (16-5) over 3 1/3 frames to move his record to 3-1.

"I have a tough team behind me," Koss said. "Once you get warmed up you get in that rhythm and everything works great."

The Mustangs grabbed an early lead with two runs in the first inning, but fell behind 6-2 when Waco Parkview scored its six runs off Patteson. The Mustangs then cut the lead to 6-4 with two runs in the fourth.

The championship game will be played at Mary Hardin Baylor in Belton.

Agassi tumbles off No. 1 perch; Martinez wins in Italy

The Associated Press

HAMBURG, Germany — Andre Agassi made obscene gestures, swore at spectators and got trounced by Sergi Bruguera. Pete Sampras stuck to good tennis and advanced at the German Open.

Agassi, who last month ended the 101-week reign of Sampras as the No. 1 player in the world, lost 6-3, 6-1 to the Spaniard and then got involved in an ugly exchange with a spectator.

Agassi was packing his bags and getting ready to leave the center court of the Rothenbaum club when a spectator commented loudly on the bad quality of the match. Agassi cursed the spectator and retorted, "Are you going to get a knife and (inaudible) me now," before swearing at the man again.

The incident was recorded by television cameras, but it's unclear from the tape what verb Agassi used.

Agassi was referring to the April 1993 stabbing of top-ranked Monica Seles by a fan on the same court.

Tournament officials said a security guard reported the incident involving Agassi and the spectator, but said they were not planning any action.

Agassi received a warning for making an obscene gesture in the last game of the match pitting two favorites for the French Open.

"I am disappointed. He played exceptionally well today and I just couldn't get a lead on him," said Agassi, who has won all Grand Slam events except the French. "I made some unusual errors. Maybe I had too much respect for his clay-court game, for his ability to cover the court and to run down balls."

Bruguera has slipped to No. 12 in the rankings after missing six weeks of the tour following knee surgery in February. But he has won the French Open twice in a row and is looking stronger with every match in his comeback.

While Agassi tumbled out, Sampras advanced with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Wayne Ferreira and played Andrei Medvedev in the semifinals of the $1.795 illion tournament. Bruguera met Goran Ivanisevic of Croatia today.

Ivanisevic beat Marc Rosset 6-1, 6-3, while Medvedev ousted Andrea Gaudenzi 6-3, 6-2.

Italian Open

ROME — Conchita Martinez needed a change.

The Spaniard hit a dry patch last year shortly after capturing the lone Grand Slam title of her career, going seven months without reaching the final of an event.

Since switching coaches in March, however, Martinez has been unstoppable, losing just one match and winning her last three tournaments.

"With my new coach, I'm changing a little bit," Martinez, 23, said Friday. "I'm getting more aggressive, going more to the net and finishing points earlier."

Martinez has her sights on making it four events in a row at the $800,000 Italian Open, where she cruised into the semifinals Friday by beating No. 6 seed Mary Joe Fernandez 6-4, 6-3.

The No. 3 seed and two-time Italian Open champion was the only player to secure a semifinal berth Friday, with the other three quarterfinals washed out by torrential rains.

ve runners in from scoring position for the rest of the night. Lee had opportunities but could not cash in, leaving seven runners on base for the night. In the first and second innings, they had runners on second and third and again in the fourth inning.

"We showed class by not letting (umpire rulings) get us down," said Lance. "When somebody tries to take something from you and you take it back, that shows class."

"That pumped the kids up. It made the difference in the game," said Kail.

The win will give Lee the No. 2 seed in the state playoffs. The Lady Rebels, along with Pasadena Dobie (30-0) are the only undefeated teams in the state. Lee will find out today who they will play in Austin.

Lakers hold off San Antonio, 92-85

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Nick Van Exel scored 25 points as the Los Angeles Lakers took advantage of a miserable start by San Antonio on Friday night for a 92-85 victory to cut the Spurs' playoff lead to 2-1.

Game 4 of the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinals is Sunday at the Forum.

The Spurs dug themselves a deep hole in the opening quarter with poor shooting — 5-for-20 — and even poorer rebounding. The Lakers, who shot 48 percent from the field in the period, outrebounded the Spurs 18-8 and led 28-11.

The closest the Spurs got was 64-58 in the third quarter, but the Lakers again pulled away and led comfortably, although San Antonio moved within seven points at the final buzzer on a long 3-pointer.

Schilling cools off red hot Astros 5-2

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — All the tickets were free but almost half the seats were empty at the Astrodome on Friday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Houston Astros 5-2.

More than 54,000 free tickets were scooped up in 6 1/2 hours on May 1, but only 30,828 people showed up to watch the Phillies improve to 8-2 on the road this season.

■ NL Roundup

Curt Schilling (3-0) cooled off high-scoring Houston, allowing seven hits to a team that averaged eight runs per game on its recent nine-game road trip. Schilling struck out eight and walked two in 7 2-3 innings, and Heathcliff Slocumb pitched a perfect ninth for his sixth save.

Darren Daulton had a two-run double for the Phillies, who hadn't won at the Astrodome since Aug. 20, 1993.

Cubs 8, Padres 3

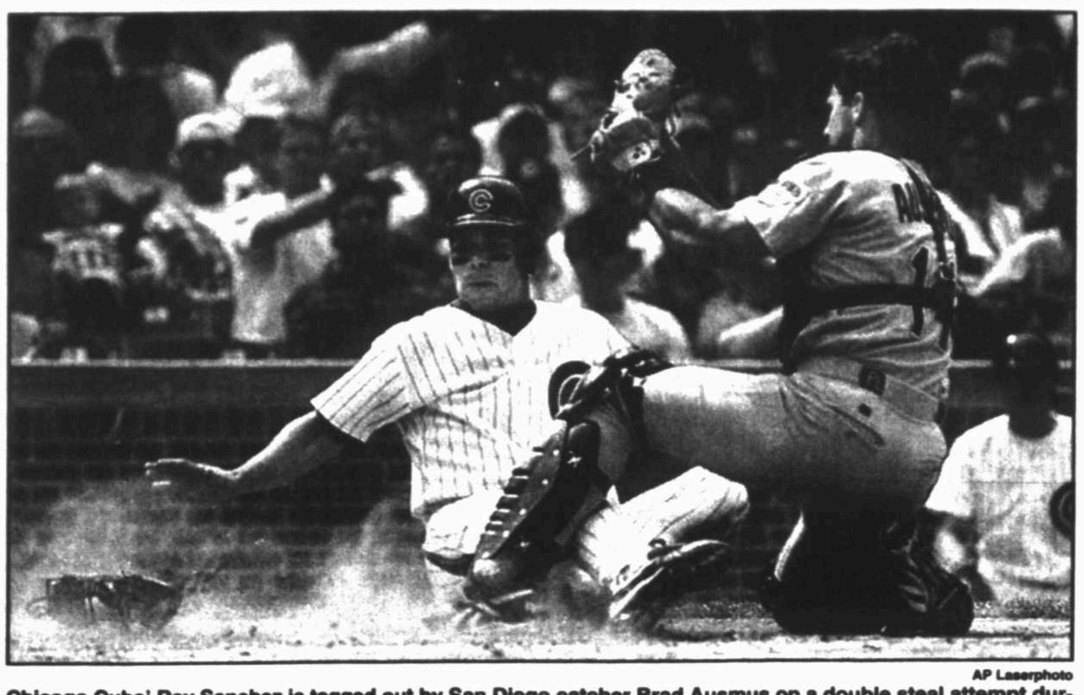

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa drove in three runs with a double and two singles as Chicago beat San Diego, sending the Padres to their ninth loss in 11 games.

With the Cubs trailing 2-1, Sosa sparked a four-run third by doubling in Rey Sanchez with the tying run and scoring on Shawon Dunston's sacrifice fly.

A two-out error by third baseman Ken Caminiti's allowed two more runs to score. After fielding Steve Buechele's bouncer, Caminiti's throw skipped past second baseman Bip Roberts into right field.

Jaime Navarro (3-0) shut down the Padres, the NL's top-hitting team with a .307 average coming in. He allowed two runs and seven hits in seven innings, limiting San Diego to one hit during his final four innings.

Andy Benes (0-3) was chased after four-plus innings and his ERA rose to 9.00. He was tagged for seven runs — five earned — and seven hits while walking five.

Rockies 10, Marlins 6

MIAMI — Vinny Castilla had two homers and six RBIs and Larry Walker homered for the fourth time in five games as Colorado beat Florida, keeping the Marlins winless at home.

The Rockies won their fourth straight game, while the Marlins dropped their sixth in a row and fell to 0-8 at Joe Robbie Stadium.

Bill Swift (1-0) scattered six hits over five innings and left with a 6-2 lead. Florida scored four runs in the sixth to make it 7-6, but Walker's solo homer gave the Rockies a two-run lead and Castilla added a two-run shot off Yorkis Perez in the ninth.

Bruce Ruffin pitched the final two innings and got his fourth save.

Reds 5, Braves 4, 11 innings

ATLANTA — Ron Gant, playing for the first time against his former team, led off the 11th inning with a homer to give Cincinnati its sixth victory in a row.

Gant, who was released by Atlanta before the 1994 season after he broke his leg in a motorbike accident, homered to left on a 1-1 pitch from Steve Bedrosian (0-2).

Jeff Brantley (1-0) blanked the Braves over the last two innings. Atlanta had runners on first and third in the 11th, but Jerome Walton made a nice running catch of Mike Kelly's liner to left-center to end the game.

Chipper Jones and Fred McGriff hit home runs on consecutive pitches in the fourth inning and Charlie O'Brien also homered for Atlanta.

Expos 9, Mets 6

NEW YORK — Jeff Fassero became the first four-game winner in the majors and the Montreal Expos had eight extra-base hits in a victory over New York.

Mike Lansing had a three-run homer and drove in four runs for Montreal, which scored five runs in the sixth inning to take the lead for good.

Fassero (4-0), the left-handed ace of the staff, allowed three runs and nine hits in six innings, striking out six and walking two.

Drillers score early to end Angels' four-game streak

Staff Report

TULSA — Jovino Carvajal misjudged a line drive off the bat of Tulsa's Frank Charles in the first inning scoring two runs and Tulsa went on to beat Midland 6-4 here Friday in a Texas League game. The loss ends Midland's four-game winning streak, but the Angels stay in second place in the Western Division.

Charles' hit went over the head of the Angel right fielder for a double, scoring Johnny Monell and Brian Thomas and giving the Drillers (12-20) a 3-0 lead. Chad Wylie got his fifth win against no losses in eight innings of work. Jeff Schmidt took the loss for Midland to fall to 0-2.

The Angels (17-18) fell behind 6-1 but cut the lead to three runs when Bo Ortiz followed J.D. Ramirez's two-out single in the seventh with a two-run home run. Midland made it 6-4 when Ortiz got his third RBI of the game with an eighth-inning single.

Midland will play a doubleheader today at Arkansas beginning at 4 p.m. John Snyder (2-2) will start the first game. The team is off Sunday before finishing a five-game set with Arkansas, which has the best record in the Texas League at 21-11.

The Angels Todd Greene hit a solo home run in the top of the sixth inning with two out. It was Greene's six home run in the last six games and 11th overall.

Tigers appear well-'groomed' in win over Rangers

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Buddy Groom finally earned his first big league victory, winning in his 77th appearance Friday night by pitching the Detroit Tigers over the Texas Rangers 6-1.

Groom (1-1) was 0-9 in 11 starts and 65 relief outings in the majors. The Dallas native shut out the Rangers on one hit in 5 2-3 innings.

Groom overcame three walks in the first inning. He walked only more batter after that, and struck out two.

John Doherty and Mike Henneman finished with 3 1-3 innings of four-hit relief. Texas scored in the eighth off Doherty on a grounder by Ivan Rodriguez.

Kirk Gibson went 2-for-4 and drove in two runs for the Tigers.

Brewers 14, Blue Jays 5

MILWAUKEE — Joe Oliver had four hits, and Milwaukee scored 10 runs in its last two at-bats to break away from Toronto.

Tied at 4, Kevin Seitzer's RBI single started a five-run seventh. Jeff Cirillo homered during a five-run eighth.

Oliver had two doubles and two singles, and Jose Valentin had a triple, double and single. Darryl Hamilton had a two-run double and a suicide squeeze for the Brewers, who had 18 hits.

Angels 3, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Spike Owen dropped a pinch-double over the third base bag with two outs in the ninth inning, giving California a victory over Kansas City.

Billy Brewer (0-1) walked both Gary DiSarcina, the ninth-place hitter, and Tony Phillips. Rusty Meacham then relieved Brewer and Owen, batting for Damion Easley, delivered his go-ahead hit.

Mike Butcher (4-0), the third of four Angels pitchers, got the last out in the eighth. Lee Smith worked the ninth for his league-leading sixth save.

Indians 3, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Dennis Martinez again defeated his former team, and Cleveland beat Baltimore for its fifth straight victory.

Martinez (3-0) scattered seven hits in 6 2-3 innings. He left after being hit on the right little finger by Brady Anderson's grounder. After the game, Martinez said he probably could have pitched longer.

Martinez, whose 222 wins are the most among active pitchers, is 3-0 in four lifetime starts against the Orioles. He began his career with Baltimore, going 108-93 over 10 seasons.

Jim Thome homered and doubled as Cleveland won for the ninth time in 11 games.

Twins 9, Athletics 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Rookie Scott Stahoviak had three hits, and Minnesota beat Oakland to end a four-game losing streak.

Marty Cordova hit a two-run double during a four-run third inning that finished Dave Stewart (2-2). Kevin Tapani (1-1) pitched 6 1-3 innings and allowed four runs and nine hits.

Yankees 12, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Sterling Hitchcock limited Boston to two singles in seven-plus innings, and Luis Polonia had four hits and scored four runs, leading New York past the Red Sox.

Hitchcock (1-2) struck out six and walked two. He gave up an infield single to Wes Chamberlain with two outs in the fifth inning, and left after Tim Naehring singled to start the eighth.

REBELS: Defense may be difference in game

(From 1C)

RBI. Jose Carmona (2-for-4), George Ceniceros (2-for-4) and Ralph Tellez (2-for-3) all recorded multiple hits in the win.

But the key could be the defense of Hanks.

"They had trouble fielding the ball against Andress," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez, who will look for his 99th career win at Lee in his fifth season. "They make mistakes on the field.

"They move the ball around a little, but it depends on the quality of pitching they see too. I don't think they have seen a pitcher the quality of Watters. If Watters is on I think they will struggle with him a little bit. Hopefully he will go in there on fire like he has been for most of the season."

Watters enters the game with a 6-2 record and a 1.77 earned run average. He threw 32 pitches, striking out six and allowing one hit in three innings of an 8-6 win over Andrews in a practice game on Monday.

Offensively, Lee appears ready to show that a four-hit effort in the first meeting between the two teams was a fluke. Lee banged out 11 hits against Andrews. Overall, the Rebels have seven players batting over .300.

Leading the hit barrage is junior pitcher-first baseman Mark Holly. Holly is slugging .433 over 16 games this season. Second baseman Kevin Jordan leads the team in RBIs (27) and runs scored (33). Catcher Mike Phillips (.409), third baseman Raymond Martinez (.351), Watters (.355) and shortstop Daniel Carrasco (.305) are also capable with the bat.

"Harper has been hitting the ball well. Kevin Jordan is making more contact than he has in the past and Raymond Martinez has been coming about," said Benavidez. "He hit the ball hard against Andrews on Monday. Eleven hits was as good sign on Monday."

"I think as long as we hit the ball, the way we have been hitting the ball, we will go a good ways," said Holly. "I think the pitching is going to be there. Lance has been pitching great. He has a lot of confidence right now."

The winner will go on to face either Lubbock Monterey (23-6) or El Paso Riverside (19-5) at a site and time to be determined.

In other Region I action, Abilene Cooper was beaten by the District 1-5A champion El Paso Coronado 5-3 Friday in a one game playoff.

New NASCAR rules irk Chevy drivers

By Mark Armijo
N.Y. Times News Service

Ford Thunderbird and Pontiac Grand Prix drivers got what they wanted. They got a NASCAR Winston Cup rule change designed to give the vehicles more aerodynamic downforce.

Ford and Pontiac drivers were given an opportunity to test the new rules package this week in a two-day open-test session at Charlotte (N.C.) Motor Speedway.

Ask them what they think of the modifications and they say NASCAR didn't go far enough.

Ask Chevrolet Monte Carlo driver Dale Earnhardt what he thinks and he will tell you to stick it in your ear.

"It seems sort of unfair or one-sided to penalize or take something away or change the rules now, because the Fords beat us so bad with the (Chevy) Lumina the last couple of years," Earnhardt said. "It sort of tells you, 'Why do you want to work so hard to come up with something if they're just going to take it away from you?'

"Again, that's just competition and it's healthy. NASCAR is concerned. If one team or manufacturer has such an advantage that it might turn it into a one-manufacturer sport, they don't want it."

Chevy, which replaced the Lumina model with the Monte Carlo, has won eight of 10 races.

Wind-tunnel tests, however have shown Chevy to have an advantage in downforce, which is another way of saying the cars have better cornering speeds.

■ Indy 500

So NASCAR, beginning with next Saturday's race at Charlotte Motor Speedway, is allowing the front-air dams on the Fords and Pontiacs to be lowered a quarter-inch to 3.75 inches and the rear spoilers will be 6 inches high.

The Monte Carlos, however, must have air dams that have 4 inches of ground clearance and rear spoilers that are 5 3/4 inches high.

"I'd say we slowed down about three-tenths of a second," Chevy driver Sterling Marlin said. "I suppose all the Ford (and Pontiac) teams will be happy now."

No, they're not.

Kyle Petty, who is in the midst of a 3,100-mile motorcycle journey to raise money for the NASCAR Winston Cup Racing Wives Auxiliary fund, chose to skip the test session.

"I've been at Charlotte twice a year for 15 years," said Petty, a Pontiac driver. "I'm not missing anything. That's like missing your monthly enema."

National Hot Rod Association top-fuel racer Cory McClenathan has climbed to within 14 points of rookie leader Larry Dixon. McClenathan has done so with a barrage of eye-bulging quarter-mile passes over the past two national events, events that he has won.

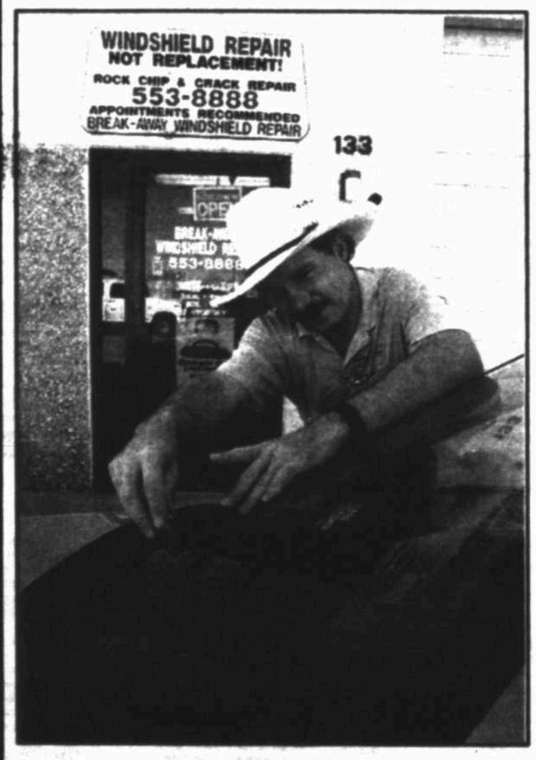

At the Mid-South Nationals last weekend, McClenathan recorded six straight 300-mph runs.

"A lot of it has to do with the fuel system, and a lot has to do with the new spark plugs Champion is making for us," McClenathan said. "We're making a lot of horsepower without smoking the tires. . . .

"Going 307 and 308 miles per hour gives you such a feeling that I can't even give anybody a sense of what it's like. Now, when you go 297 or 298, it's like, 'Wow, that's not too cool.'"

WRIGHT: Broadcaster ponders legal response to article

(From 1C)

comments and decided not to take any action against Wright, a 23-year veteran of the network's golf coverage. The network placed him back onto coverage of the LPGA tournament Saturtday and Sunday.

Wright allegedly told The News Journal, a Wilmington newspaper, on Thursday that the presence of lesbians on the LPGA Tour kept corporations from buying sponsorships. "When it comes to the corporate level," Wright reportedly said, lesbianism "is not going to fly."

He is also reported to have said: "Let's face some facts here. Lesbians in the sport hurt women's golf." Lesbianism on the tour, he allegedly said, "is not reticent. It's paraded. There's a defiance in them in the last decade."

And he reportedly suggested that "women are handicapped by having boobs" because "it's not easy for them to keep their left arm straight."

In a statement posted in a locker room at the country club, Wright wrote: "I am disgusted at the pack of lies and distortion that was attributed to me in the newspapers this morning."

He added: "It is regrettable that The News Journal's dishonest tactics have resulted in this terrible, scandalous incident. As a result, I currently am exploring my legal options."

Jerry Buckley, The News Journal's assistant managing editor, said the newspaper stood by the story by Valerie Helmbreck, a features writer. He said that the interview was not tape recorded.

In the comments attributed to Wright, CBS faced another instance of possibly disciplining one of its broadcasters for making disparaging comments.

In 1980, CBS Sports fired Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder for telling a TV reporter in Washington that African-Americans are better athletes than whites because of physical characteristics that date to slavery.

In 1990, Andy Rooney of "60 Minutes" was suspended without pay by CBS News for making offensive remarks about homosexuals and blacks.

Although some golfers at the LPGA event were stunned by Wright's alleged comments, Charles S. Mechem Jr., the LPGA commissioner, chose not to scorn Wright until it was determined whether he had made the remarks.

He discussed, in a roundabout way, the issue of lesbianism, saying, "This supposed 'label' that continues to be attached to the LPGA comes from these cultural viewpoints of women in general and particularly of women in sports."

He added, "If you are a successful woman and you're single, then there must be something wrong with you."

Regarding the suggestion that lesbianism hurts LPGA business, he said it "is totally at odds with the facts and our experience. In my four and one half years as commissioner, I have never had one letter nor one phone call from a sponsor, media representative or fan to suggest that this issue is a problem."

Laura Davies, the McDonald's tournament's defending champion, said: "I could say that what he said was bloody ludicrous but I didn't hear him say it. I can't believe someone with his stature in golf would say something like that."

Patty Sheehan said the issue of lesbianism "comes up from those who can't handle the issue and have to talk about it."

Donna Lopiano, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation, harshly criticized Wright's alleged comments. "Sexual preference and sexuality have nothing to do with a person's performance as an athlete or professional in any field," she said, adding: "Females with breasts of all sizes excel at golf, baseball and tennis. I doubt that Mr. Wright has any credential that makes him an expert on how breasts affect sports performance."

She labeled Wright "homophobic," then added: "Just because he is afraid of homosexuality or cannot identify with or support this sexual preference, does not mean he cannot respect their athletic performance."

Also harshly critical was Todd Crosset, the author of a coming book on the LPGA Tour, "Outsiders in the Clubhouse: The World of Women's Professional Golf."

Els scorches Cottonwood for 61, leads Nelson

The Associated Press

IRVING — U.S. Open champion Ernie Els, saying he was fortunate, birdied half the course in a 9-under-par 61 that gave him a share of the lead Friday at the Byron Nelson Classic.

The rangy South African did not make a bogey, was never in danger of making one and did not have a "5" on his card at the Cottonwood Valley course.

It went with an opening 69 at the TPC at Four Seasons for a 36-hole total of 130, 10-under par. He was tied with Robin Freeman who had a second-round 65, also at Cottonwood.

"I don't know what happened to me," Els said.

He came into this event complaining about a slump that has plagued him since his U.S. Open triumph at Oakmont, Pa. last year.

"I felt very comfortable. I could shape the shots the way I wanted," he said, and shrugged. "It was just one of those nice rounds.

"Sometimes you get the breaks, sometimes you don't. The breaks came my way today."

While his score has been bettered only 11 times in the history of the PGA Tour, Els did not harbor thoughts of a sub-60.

"Not really," he said. "I got about all out of it I could. (A score of) 59 was never in the picture. I birdied the last three for 61."

Freeman also played without a bogey at Cottonwood Valley. Both he and Els had their opening rounds at the TPC at Four Seasons under the format that has the pros playing one round on each course before the final two rounds at the TPC.

Both Kenny Perry and Doug Martin had a second-round 66 at the TPC, and were a single shot off the lead.

First round leader Glen Day shot 69 at the TPC and was tied at 132 with Steve Jones, who had a 64 at the TPC.

John Daly shot 65 at the TPC, and led a large group at 133. Payne Stewart was at 134 after a 66 at Cottonwood. Masters champion Ben Crenshaw and England's Nick Faldo were at 137.

The long-hitting Els largely overpowered Cottonwood. He was pin-high in 2 on both par-5's and only once had a club longer than an 8-iron to the par-4's. And he made some putts.

He played the front side in 3-under 31, capped a string of three consecutive birdies with a 25-footer on the 13th hole, then ran off three more in a row, ending with a 35-foot putt on the 18th.

"The hole looked like a bucket," he said. "I wish I could have played like this at the Masters. I got off to a good start and the momentum just kept me going."

■ Golf Roundup

LPGA Championship

WILMINGTON, Del. — Kelly Robbins beat the afternoon wind to shoot a morning round of 3-under-par 68 and retain her lead following the second round of the $1.2 million LPGA Championship.

Robbins' 36-hole total of 8-under 134 was one shot better than Patty Sheehan, who also had a second-round 68 at the 6,386-yard DuPont Country Club.

Barb Thomas, who, along with Joan Pitcock, shot the day's best round at 66, and defending champion Laura Davies were at 136, while Dottie Mochrie and Becky Iverson were another shot back.

Robbins, with-top 10 finishes in the last three tour stops, had four birdies and a bogey. It wasn't the seven-birdie performance she had in Thursday's first round, but she was still pleased to be in the thick of the tournament.

NFL Players Classic

CLIFTON, N.J. — Brian Kinchen shot a 1-over-par 73 to take a one-stroke lead over two-time defending champion Al Del Greco midway through the Cadillac-NFL Players Golf Classic.

Kinchen, a tight end for the Cleveland Browns, made a 10-foot par putt on 18 to preserve his lead.

"Overall it was a pretty routine day," said Kinchen who had one birdie and two bogeys over the 6,816-yard, rain-soaked Upper Montclair Country Club course. "I pushed myself with the tee shots because of the rain. But a wet course works to my advantage because of the lack of length."

Craig Hentrich of Green Bay, Carolina's Jack Trudeau, Dan Marino of Miami and Browning Nagle of Indianapolis were tied at 76, while Tampa Bay teammates Trent Dilfer and Peter Tom Willis were at 77 and Washington's Chip Lohmiller at 78.

Benson and Hedges Open

PLYMOUTH, England — Australian Peter O'Malley matched the course record with a 7-under-par 65 to open a five-shot lead after the second round of the Benson and Hedges Open.

Despite gusty conditions at the St. Mellion course, O'Malley had nine birdies as he reached the halfway mark at 133.

First-round leader Colin Montgomerie of Scotland was in second place at 138 after shooting a 71.

England's Mark James shot a 68 for 139.

Pontiac Sunfire Convertible pops its top in time for summer

BY BOB PLUNKETT

SPECIAL TO THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM

Designers at the Pontiac Division of General Motors devised just the thing to erase any image of those sub-zero temperatures which invariably accompany the annual February exposition of automobiles in frigid Chicago.

There, spinning on a spotlighted platform in the heart of Pontiac's display at the Chicago Auto Show, a racy red convertible looked so sleek and sassy with its crisp prow, sharply canted windshield and rear spoiler.

Then the incredible occurred: That car spoke to me. "Come on up," it begged. "Sit in my driver's seat."

Strapped in place, hands now locked on the wheel as this convertible and I turned together on the twirling dais, my mind drifted beyond the winter weather outside and into that eternal warm and soothing springtime which always comes with Convertible Fever.

Pop the top, feel the fresh air, let that sunshine in.

Pontiac's new Sunfire SE Convertible makes it easy.

A single latch, mounted front and center atop the windshield, unlocks Sunfire's new lid with an easy twist which also sends the steel-braced vinyl top hustling rearward, where it folds into a storage bay concealed between rear seatback and trunk.

Once Sunfire's top has been dropped, you may mount a 3-piece boot to cover the folded pleats and enhance the sleekness of its exterior silhouette. When not needed, the center section of this boot stows in the well behind the rear seat as side panels go to the trunk.

With top raised a vinyl exterior layer ensures waterproof coverage, while a headliner dresses the interior.

Also, you may dismiss any outmoded convertible notions of fuzzy plastic rear windows because Sunfire provides a large glass rear window for crystal-crisp visibility.

Pontiac's new convertible starts with sporty Sunfire Coupe, the new subcompact which emerged last fall as a modern replacement for the aged Sunbird series.

To create the convertible version, Genasys, an automotive outfitting company in Lansing, Mich., takes a Sunfire coupe underbody and reinforces the chassis with structural components like secondary rockers which improve chassis stiffness, special side frames to strengthen the A-piller, plus another cross member added to the frame immediately in front of the rear seat to stem the natural torquing tendency of a convertible body due to the ragtop's lack of a superstructure.

You'll never see these new structural components, however, because they're buried behind all the swoopy sheetmetal, but you'll certainly notice their effect when steering Sunfire through a twisty turn set.

It feels stable at highway speed, flat and predictable in curves, even aggressive.

The suspension, with progressive ride tuning linked to Sunfire Coupe's setup, includes higher spring rates, a front anti-roll bar, dual-path front struts and a quicker steering ratio for the power rack and pinion design.

Stopping comes quickly too, thanks to power-assistance from 4-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock action.

Then for juice, Pontiac offers two 4-cylinder choices.

Sunfire's base 2.2-liter engine with overhead valving produces 120 horsepower.

This plant, when mated to the standard automatic 3-speed transmission, scores up to 31 miles per gallon in fuel efficiency. Couple that to Sunfire's 15.2-gallon fuel tank and the cruising range extends to 475 miles.

An optional 2.3-liter engine teams dual overhead cams with four valves in each cylinder to boost output to 150 hp.

With this optional plant, you may select a sporty 5-speed manual shifter or a 4-speed automatic containing sophisticated electronic controls. The engine's redline hits 6500 rpm, so with the 5-speed you can punch it high through each gear to maximize thrust.

The more powerful engine is the one I tested in California with John Middlebrook, Pontiac's general manager, bravely riding in the passenger's bucket seat.

"This car really works," Middlebrook observed. "We've packed Sunfire's interior with highly usable comfort content, then took extra steps to add responsive mechanical systems. We think with Sunfire you can have it all — economy, comfort, fun."

The passenger compartment, with twin reclining buckets in front and space for up to three in back with surprising legroom for a convertible, contains an array of convenience items, plus functional hardware such as a driver's seat with firm interior support systems that hold your body securely in place around a hard turn.

Door and dash surfaces look so radically round and fluid in form, even down to details like the sculptured shape of a levered door handle and downward curving roll of a creased ledge which wraps across the panel's face from one door to the other.

A new dashboard holds instruments and controls like you'll find in an expensive sportster, and that glove box: It's big enough to carry a 12-pack of cola cans.

An optional sport interior package brings driver's seat lumbar adjustments, a leather-wrapped steering wheel and seatback storage pockets.

You could say that Sunfire in ragtop format resembles a Firebird, only in miniature, with muscular bodyside bulges at wheel wells, a sharp cut to the tapered nose, circular wrap in the stocky tail treatment and everywhere with one fluid curve oozing into the next.

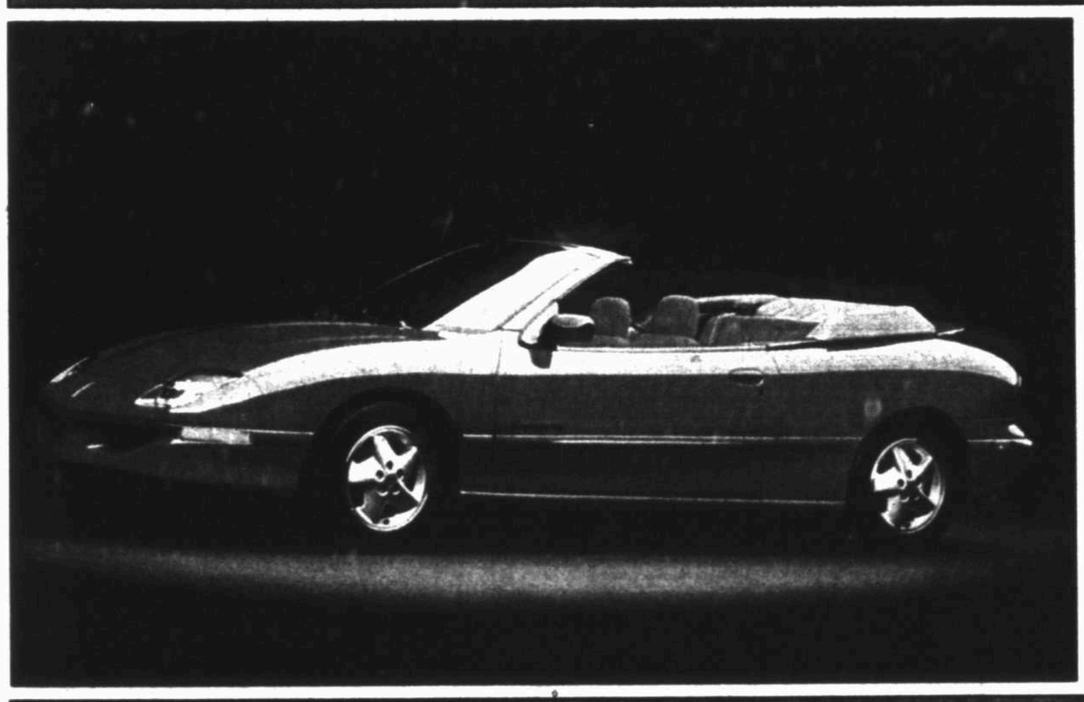

An assertive spoiler shows up on the back decklid, and Sunfire's 15-inch wheels roll on R-rated touring tires.

Then check out Sunfire's crazy color schemes — bright red or white or metallics in dark purple, light blue or brilliant blue. Interior hues will put extra spark aboard, either in neutral or graphite colors, or bold aqua and bright, bright red.

Safety elements range from dual airbags for front riders to the 4-wheel anti-lock brakes, body-mounted safety belts, knee bolsters and 5-mph front and rear bumpers, plus Pontiac's unique slotted frame rails which permit the vehicle to absorb more impact energy near the front of the body structure to buffer the passenger compartment.

Pricing for Pontiac's convertible begins at $17,250.

1995 Ford F-Series maintains its position

For 1995, the new Eddie Bauer model becomes the high-series entry in Ford's F-150 line of full-size light trucks.

The addition should help the F-Series maintain the position it has held as the best-selling vehicle — car or truck — in the United States for 12 years.

F-Series pickups are designed and engineered to satisfy both the needs and wants of traditional customers and the growing number of personal-use buyers.

That's why Ford makes the F-150 — which is the most popular series — in such an extensive range of body styles, wheelbases, powertrains and features. For starters, the F-150 comes in regular cab and SuperCab versions, either of which can be ordered in one of two distinctive body styles — Styleside or Flareside. And there .s a choice of two-wheel or four-wheel drive on wheelbases ranging from 117 to 155 inches.

The Eddie Bauer model designation is well-established on other Ford truck models, including Explorer and Bronco. In the F-150 line, it fills a new slot above the XLT.

The Eddie Bauer F-150 is exceptionally well-equipped — with air conditioning, speed control, tilt steering wheel, power door locks and windows, electronic AM/FM stereo radio and cassette tape player, remote-control outside mirrors, distinctive two-tone lower accent paint, forged aluminum wheels, cab steps, and "40/20/40" front bench seat.

F-150 engine choices include an efficient 4.9-liter in-line six-cylinder engine and powerful 5.0-liter and 5.8-liter V-8s. The 4.9-liter engine can be ordered to run on natural gas.

... the best-selling vehicle — car or truck — in the U.S. for 12 years!

To enhance Ford's diesel leadership, F-250 Heavy Duty pickups — over 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight (GVW) — all F-350 models and F-Super Duty chassis-cab models are available with a 7.3-liter DI (direct injection) "Power Stroke" V-8 Turbo Diesel. The new DI diesel is matched with Ford's state-of-the-art electronically controlled four-speed automatic transmission, whose shift points are precisely controlled by the computerized EEC-IV engine control system for smoother performance and greater fuel economy. This powertrain combination delivers 210 horsepower at 3000 rpm and 425 foot pounds of torque at 2000 rpm.

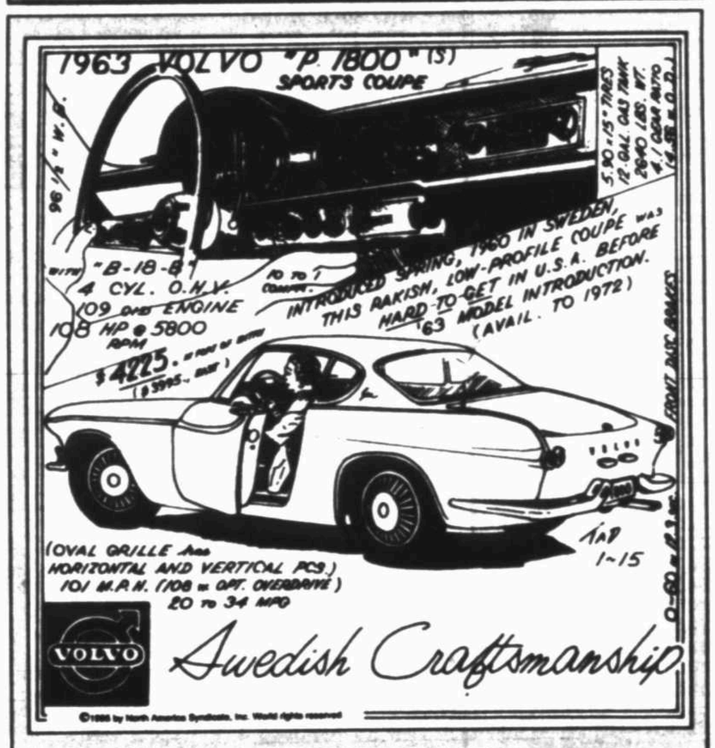

Exterior changes in F-Series models include a new Privacy Glass option and a new paint choice — Sapphire Blue Clearcoat Metallic. As many as 14 exterior colors are available, depending on the model, and there is a choice of four interior colors.

F-Series safety features include a driver's air bag supplemental restraint system (SRS) on vehicles under 8,500-pound GVW, side-door guard beams, and a brake/shift interlock that requires the brake pedal to be applied before the automatic transmission can be moved out of "park."

On the long list of options is a CFC-free air-conditioning system; a premium sound system with AM/FM stereo radio with compact disc player; and a remote keyless entry/ antitheft group.

A unique option on XLT and Eddie Bauer is a premium "40/20/40" front bench seat. The "40 percent" driver and outboard passenger positions have headrest restraints, fore and aft adjustment, and power lumbar support. The center "20 percent" seatback can be folded forward to serve as an armrest with cupholders and a storage area.

1963 VOLVO P-1800 (S)

A Swedish sports car for the 1960s! One could not find a car in the '60s with a much lower profile, literally, than that of this Volvo 1800. The top appeared to be "chopped," it looked so low—but that was the original design, giving the car a look of speed even when standing still.

According to the March 1960 British "Motor Sport" magazine, the Volvo P-1800 made its debut in Belgium, at the Brussels Auto Show The article stated that Volvo would put the new P-1800 into production in September, and that by January 1961 the company hoped to build 100 units per week . The writer of the article concluded that it was indeed a "car worth waiting for".

In April 1960, the P-1800 was unveiled in the United States at the International Automobile Show at the New York Coliseum. In September 1960, the P-1800 was advertised in America as a car that looked like it was worth $15,000, but would sell for "approximately $3,800" Many early P-1800s were shown with a stylized letter "V" mounted at grille center; this decoration was later eliminated, probably because it hinted that the car had a V-8 engine when in truth it had a four.

When Volvo introduced the P-1800 to the United States, the company was also building its time-tested "544" (which resembled a scaled-down Ford Tudor sedan from the 1940s), and the new-design -"122-S" (also known as the Volvo "Amazon") ... along with a line of Volvo-Penta Aquamatic marine engines.

Road & Track magazine (February 1962) reported that after a slow start, Volvo P-1800s were beginning to "arrive in numbers" in the USA.

Always noted for safety, the Volvo came with shoulder harnesses added to its lap seat belts in the P-1800, long before most other cars had them.

The Volvo 1800-ES joined the 1800 series in 1972, and quickly replaced the coupe. The ES was shaped like a little two-door station wagon, with a long top and a hatchback and considerably more inside space.
