Rig count: Midland County holds steady at 21 rigs

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

The number of rigs operating in Midland County this week was unchanged at 21, according to weekly rotary rig count data released Friday by Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

The Permian Basin as a whole added five rigs for a total of 92 in the nation's most-active basin.

All gains came in District 8, which had 92 rigs. Ector County saw activity for the first time in eight weeks when one rig went online this week.

All other areas with active rigs in the Permian were unchanged. There was one rig in District 7B, while here were 21 in District 7C, 10 in District 8A and 15 in New Mexico.

Lynn County also saw renewed activity after one rig went online. Terry County ceased activity.

Counties with double-digit rig counts were Midland, Reeves (19), Loving (10) and Upton (10).

At this time last year, there were 237 rigs in the Permian.

Texas and New Mexico

Texas saw a gain of three rigs statewide for a total of 188.

The Eagle Ford idled three rigs, leaving 34 in the South Texas basin. The Haynesville (12), Barnett (six) and Granite Wash (four) were unchanged.

Texas had one rig offshore, unchanged from last week.

New Mexico was unchanged at 16 rigs. Its lone non-Permian rig was in the northern part of the state.

A year ago this week Texas had 379 rigs and New Mexico had 44.

United States

Of the nation's 415 rigs, 328 were searching for oil, 86 sought natural gas and one was listed as miscellaneous. Oil rigs fell four, while natural gas lost one. The count for miscellaneous rigs was unchanged. As a whole, the nation idled five rigs.

By location, there were 388 rigs on land, down three; three in inland waters, down one; and 24 offshore, down one. The lone idled offshore rig was in the Gulf of Mexico, which ended the week at 23.

Mustangs' history, advancements push them as top cars

By Trevor Hawes
thawes@mrt.com

Whether through its immortalization in Wilson Pickett's 1966 rendition of "Mustang Sally" or by its engine rumble heard on Main Streets across the nation, the Ford Mustang is an icon, and its status has expanded worldwide.

Ford recently revealed that the Ford Mustang was the No. 1-selling sports coupe in the world last year, with 110,000 sold worldwide, according to IHS Automotive registration data.

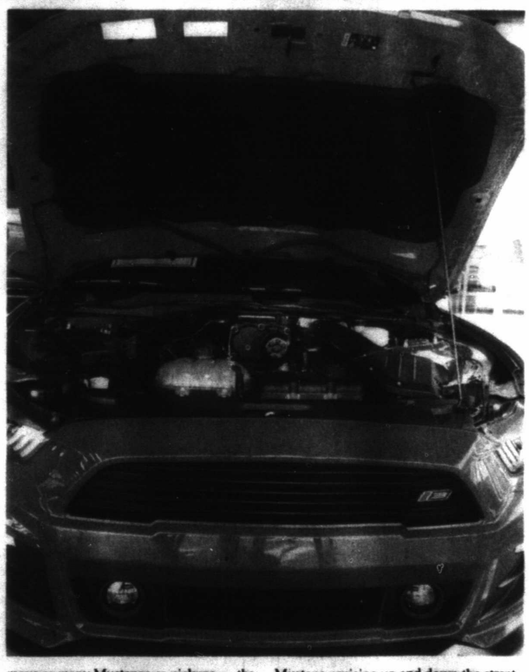

Those high sales especially ring true at home.

"Not only is it the No. 1 sports coupe in the world, but out here in West Texas, it's normally in the top 10 of all vehicles," Sewell Family of Cos. Vice President and Assistant General Manager Mike Merrill told the Reporter-Telegram last week.

Merrill said that at Sewell Ford in Odessa, the Mustang is the dealership's top-selling car, outpacing sales of Fiestas, Focuses and Fusions. The same is true in the Tall City.

"We sell quite a bit more Mustangs than Focuses and Fusions," Rogers Ford General Manager Beau Moore said last week. "I'd say double."

While the regional Ford dealers don't move as many Mustangs as pickups — the F-150 is the top seller — there are many reasons why West Texans opt for speed on the street over, and sometimes in addition to, towing trailers and toddlers.

"A lot of people love the Mustang because it's an American staple," Moore said. "People remember in the 1960s the Mustang cruising up and down the street. I think one thing about the Mustang is a lot of people can relate to it regardless of their age. From the Shelby all the way to the fastback, everybody has a memory about that vehicle in their life."

Children tied outside had hundreds of scars, injuries

By David Warren
Associated Press

DALLAS — Two young children found chained and leashed outside a San Antonio home had suffered hundreds of scars and injuries from months, perhaps years, of abuse, a sheriff's official said Friday.

Doctors who treated the children after they were found April 29 determined they had old injuries indicating a long period of abuse. One of them also was suffering from hypothermia and had a broken arm resulting from the way she was tied to a garage door using a dog leash, Bexar County sheriff's spokesman James Keith said.

Authorities initially said the children were 2 and 3 years old, but Keith says they may be a year older.

"Unfortunately, child abuse is a major problem here, and in this case we're just glad we were able to find these children before any further harm could occur to them," Keith said, explaining that deputies went to the home after a neighbor called about a child who could be heard crying for hours.

The girl's brother was found tethered to the ground by a dog chain that was clamped to his ankle. Several piles of human feces were found nearby, and the boy was wet, indicating he was left in the rain.

"There was obvious evidence that a switch had been used on the children," Keith said, referring to a slim tree branch.

Keith said the two children, along with six others found alone inside the home, are in state custody. The six other children showed no apparent signs of physical abuse, but investigators are determining whether they may have suffered mental anguish, Keith said. Those children range from 10 months to 10 years old.

The mother of the two children found outside, 30-year-old Cheryl Reed, is charged with two counts of injury to a child with bodily injury and was being held Friday at the Bexar County jail. She was arrested Thursday at a San Antonio motel.

Keith said investigators are still trying to learn the relationship between Reed and two others who have been charged in the matter: Deandre Dorch, 36, accused of injury to a child by omission, and Porucha Phillips, 34, facing counts that include injury to a child by omission.

Phillips is the mother of the six children found in the home and Dorch is the father to some. Phillips, who is pregnant, is being held at the Bexar County jail, and authorities were searching Friday for Dorch.

Reed at some point left to travel to California where she needed to address a child-protective matter in that state, Keith said, and had promised to pay Phillips and Dorch, either for rent or to look after her two children. The couple became angry when Reed failed to pay, and Dorch may have threatened her, according to Keith.

It appears the trio moved with their children to San Antonio from California in November, he said.

Investigators do not know who tied up the two children found in the back yard, but Keith said they had been under the couple's care since February.

It wasn't clear if Reed had an attorney who could address the allegations against her, but an attorney for Phillips told the San Antonio Express-News that he had spoken only briefly with her.

"She's just trying to figure out what happened, just like I am and the police," Alan Futrell told the paper. "It's too early to say anything."

Girl's slaying spreads grief beyond Navajo Nation

By Susan Montoya Bryan and Felicia Fonseca
Associated Press

FARMINGTON, N.M. — She was a budding musician and talented artist, a girl whose death at the hands of a man who lured her into his van spread grief far beyond her home on the Navajo Nation.

More than 3,000 people turned out Friday for Ashlynne Mike's funeral in Farmington, New Mexico, weeping as images of the 11-year-old girl were displayed overhead and the sounds of her xylophone rang out in the auditorium. A headstone created for her grave read "our little angel in heaven."

The crowd far outnumbered the community of Lower Fruitland, where Ashlynne was raised with her father and siblings. Entire families, hugging each other and their children, sat before her small white coffin. Many wore yellow T-shirts. Navajo Nation Council Speaker LoRenzo Bates said yellow represents hope, strength and resilience, and it was one of her favorite colors.

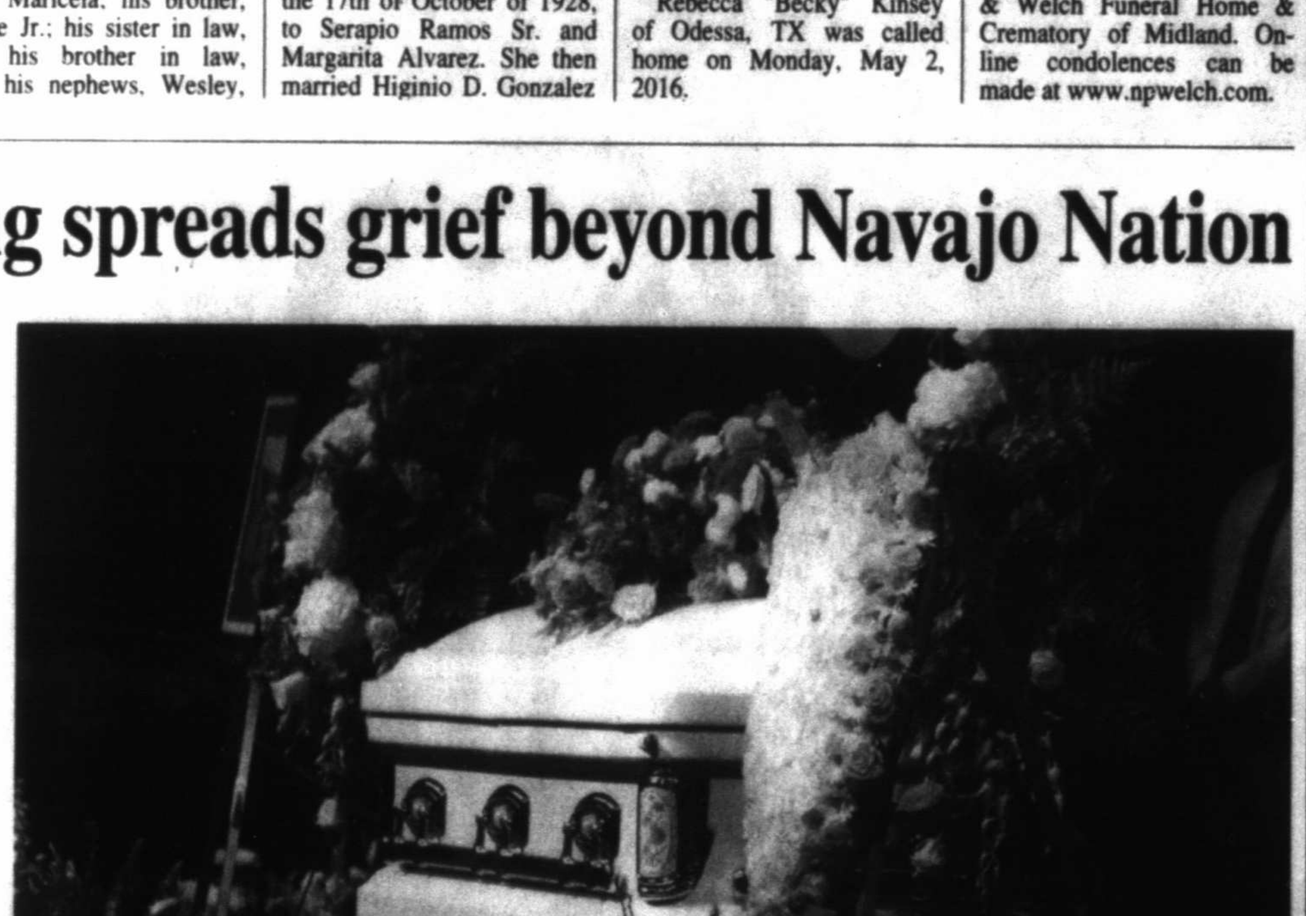

New Mexico Gov. Susana Martinez called on the mourners to carry on the kindness Ashlynne showed the world.

"I cannot imagine the pain Ashlynne's loved ones feel right now," the governor said. "But even as we mourn her, we should celebrate her life and remember what a beautiful little girl she was, inside and out."

More than 200 miles away in Albuquerque, Tom Begaye Jr. waived his right to a preliminary and detention hearing, and a judge ordered him to remain in custody on charges of kidnapping and murder. Public defender James Loonam was assigned to represent him, and did not immediately respond to requests for comment.

An FBI agent's affidavit says Begaye, a 27-year-old Navajo who lived down a stretch of highway from the children's home, persuaded Ashlynne and her 9-year-old brother, who had been playing near their bus stop after school, to climb into his van. The boy told police that the man took them deep into the desert, and then walked off with his sister to an even more remote spot, before returning alone.

Begaye told investigators he assaulted the girl and struck her twice in the head with a crowbar, and that she was still moving when he left her, according to the affidavit.

Associated Press

The casket of 11-year-old Ashlynne Mike sits in the center of the stage, surrounded by bouquets of flowers, at Farmington Civic Center in Farminton, N.M., during her memorial service Friday. Hundreds of mourners turned out for the service.

"It's hard to know what emotions will be there. I'm sure it will be very pure and raw emotions, but I think the one thing a lot of the kids will understand is that sometimes life is not always easy, it's not always happy, it's not always fair by our standards. But people pull together and can overcome it."

Tom Riggenbach, organizer of the Shiprock Marathon

The slaying has raised tough questions for both residents and law enforcement on the country's largest American Indian reservation, which stretches for 27,000 square miles into New Mexico, Utah and Arizona. Eight hours passed between the family's initial missing-persons report and an Amber Alert that went out at 2:27 a.m. Tuesday, urging people around the region to be on the lookout.

Her body wasn't found until later that morning, south of the Shiprock Pinnacle, just inside the border of the Navajo Nation in the northwest corner of New Mexico.

One of Ashlynne's brothers, Ryan Begay, told the audience at her funeral that he drove around the monolith for hours in the darkness, looking for his sister. He said he asked for an alert at 10:30 p.m., and grew more upset with each passing hour.

"I really wish that this alert went out a lot sooner," he said, prompting strenuous applause.

Ashlynne's younger brother told police that he tried to find his sister after the man left him at another spot in the desert. Then he ran for help and was spotted by a couple driving along the highway, Ella and Benny Yazzie, who took him to police. The boy was so distraught that he couldn't describe what happened with enough detail to focus the search, they said.

But Navajo families extend far beyond bloodlines, through traditional clan systems that foster kinship among tribal members, and the law enforcement delays didn't prevent about a hundred community members from searching for Ashlynne, driving across the open desert long into the night.

On Friday, his father embraced the boy as the governor praised his bravery, and said Ashlynne would have been proud.

Rick Nez, president of the Navajo Nation's local San Juan Chapter, urged people to express their love to each other.

"Don't ever forget to go to bed and rise in the morning and say, 'I love you my precious child,'" Nez said.

Later Friday, 92 of Ashlynne's classmates Ojo Amarillo Elementary School were being given the honor of leading hundreds of other children in a mile-long race. Then, 500 yellow balloons will be released in her memory.

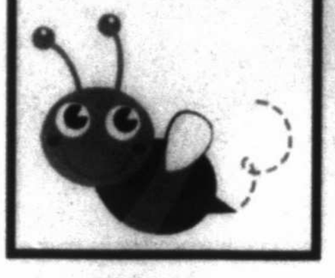

Race organizers also planned to go ahead with today's Shiprock Marathon. The course, along Navajo Route 13, runs about three miles from where Ashlynne's body was found. A Christian prayer team and a traditional practitioner will bless the course from start to finish beforehand, "to bring some peace and healing to the place and to the runners who will be out there," race director Tom Riggenbach said.

"It's hard to know what emotions will be there," Riggenbach said. "I'm sure it will be very pure and raw emotions, but I think the one thing a lot of the kids will understand is that sometimes life is not always easy, it's not always happy, it's not always fair by our standards. But people pull together and can overcome it."

Rick Perry ditches glasses for portrait, defends Trump

By Paul J. Weber
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Ditching his now-famous black glasses Friday for his official Texas portrait, former Gov. Rick Perry is back looking like his old self but sounding far different when it comes to former presidential rival Donald Trump.

After the painting was unveiled at the state Capitol, Perry defended his enthusiastic change of heart this week about the presumptive GOP nominee. He had once called the billionaire businessman a "cancer to conservatism" but now says he'd be willing to work in a Trump administration, even as vice president.

Trump has made no such public overtures to the longtime governor, who acknowledged he hasn't spoken to Trump in months. Perry was among the first 2016 contenders to drop out of the crowded Republican field, but his short-lived campaign attacked Trump harder than most in the early stages of the race.

"If Donald Trump says, 'Perry, let's talk about you helping in this role,' I'm open to it," Perry said Friday.

Trump, who once said that Perry only began wearing glasses so "people will think he's smart," tweeted "Thank you Rick!" after Perry's endorsement.

Perry didn't start wearing the thick-framed glasses until after his first failed run for the White House in 2012, when his campaign unraveled after famously stumbling in a debate and forgetting the name of a federal agency he would eliminate. But he spent most of his record 14 years as Texas governor without glasses.

Although he wore them to the ceremony Friday, the unadorned look is how Perry will be forever pictured in the Texas Capitol, where his portrait was hung next to former governors Republican George W. Bush and Democrat Ann Richards. Perry offered no explanation as to why he posed without glasses, but the choice seemed to delight one of his biggest political donors, billionaire Red McCombs.

"I bet a guy $500,000 that the picture wouldn't have glasses," McCombs told a gallery of current and former Texas lawmakers during the ceremony.

Perry shrugged off his previous criticism of Trump as the usual election-year rhetoric. Defending Trump's qualifications, Perry cited the billionaire's claims that he will surround himself with an experienced team if elected.

"I suggest that is a clear indication that he understands what he knows, understands what he doesn't know and is willing to bring people in and listen to," Perry said. "And I think that's the most important trait that he will have to exhibit. I mean, that has yet to be seen, but I feel comfortable that he will indeed do that."

Judge issues gag order in case of slain pregnant teen

A West Texas judge has issued a gag order in the case of a pregnant, mentally disabled teen found slain with her uterus removed.

District Judge John McClendon III signed the order Wednesday in Lubbock, blocking public release of any information related to investigation. The order applies to anyone involved in the case, including law enforcement, attorneys and the medical examiner's office.

The remains of an 18-year-old were found in February in her family's partially burned home in Idalou. An arrest warrant says the victim told a school worker that her stepfather impregnated her.

Her mother was jailed on allegations she knew her husband was abusing her daughter and didn't act. The victim's stepfather is charged with sexually abusing the victim's 15-year-old sister.

Authorities say more charges are expected.

AUSTIN

Task force to recommend how police should ID gender

The Austin City Council has endorsed creating a task force to help police better identify a person's gender.

The resolution approved Thursday comes after a transgender woman found slain on Jan. 22 was initially misidentified by Austin police as a man. The city in February acknowledged concerns on how transgender individuals are identified when involved as a victim, witness or suspect.

Police Chief Art Acevedo says cadet training now includes cultural issues facing transgender and gender-nonconforming individuals. The task force, to include transgender people, will look at expanded gender-related training for law enforcement.

HOUSTON

School fooled by 7-year-old's fake note

A 7-year-old Houston girl managed to get out of an after-school program with a fake excuse note that she wrote herself, in large print with misspellings.

The girl's father, Charlie Dahu, told KTRK-TV that his daughter was wrong to write the note, but that it's obvious it was written by a child.

The note says, "I want Rosabella to go too dus 131 today."

With the note, Rosabella was able to take a bus home, rather than participating in an after-school program. But the girl couldn't get into her house. She spent part of the afternoon outside, until asking a neighbor to let her use the bathroom.

The neighbor kept Rosabella until her father was located.

George W. Bush ranch trees part of Chris Kyle memorial

Associated Press

ODESSA — Four trees from ex-President George W. Bush's ranch will be part of a West Texas memorial to slain Navy Seal and "American Sniper" author Chris Kyle.

The Odessa American reported crews worked Thursday to replant the live oaks in Odessa, where Kyle was born.

The trees, costing more than $3,000 apiece, were purchased from Bush's ranch near Crawford.

Architect Kelly Cook says the trees are symbols of patriotism.

Organizers of the project expect the Chris Kyle Memorial Plaza to open in July. The site will also feature a bronze statue of Kyle.

Kyle and friend Chad Littlefield were shot and killed in 2013 at a Texas shooting range. A former Marine, someone the victims were trying to help, was convicted of the slayings and sentenced to life in prison.

Today's highlight:

On May 7, 1945, Germany signed an unconditional surrender at Allied headquarters in Rheims, France, ending its role in World War II.

In 1946, Sony Corp. had its beginnings as the Tokyo Telecommunications Engineering Corp. was founded in the Japanese capital by Akio Morita and Masaru Ibuka.

In 1954, the 55-day Battle of Dien Bien Phu in Vietnam ended with Vietnamese insurgents overrunning French forces.

Today's birthdays: Former Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., is 84. Rhythm-and-blues singer Thelma Houston is 73. Actress Robin Strasser is 71.

MUSTANGS

From 1A

Merrill offered similar sentiments.

"It's for people looking for that fun, sporty, freedom-type lifestyle," he said. "It's quick on acceleration; it's just a sexy car. It doesn't matter if you're young, middle-aged or older, everybody likes the Mustang. It's an iconic brand. It's always been a good seller for us, especially in the past few years."

Moore and Merrill also attributed the Mustang's success to the number of models available. There's the standard 3.7-liter 300 horsepower V6 and the classic 5.0-liter 435 horsepower V8, but Ford has also introduced a new option recently, and it's had people scratching their heads.

"People are kind of apprehensive about the four-cylinder," Moore said.

The inline four-cylinder engine is new to the sixth generation of Mustangs. It's a 2.3-liter engine with a Ford EcoBoost turbocharger. While some car enthusiasts might consider putting such a small engine in the icon sacrilegious, Moore said buyers should look at history.

"Think about 10 years ago how much horsepower a Mustang had," he said. "Right now, you can get a 2.3-liter EcoBoost that's going to give you 310 horsepower. That's coming out of a four-cylinder, lighter engine, lighter car than what we had 10 years ago. ... In 2008, a Mustang GT 5.0-liter could put out 300 horsepower and 320 pound-feet of torque."

But does Rogers carry any of the small-engine Mustangs?

"We actually have several on the lot, and we've had a great response," Moore said. "If you can get somebody to drive them, they love them."

Merrill said it's the same situation at Sewell. He also said that he felt Ford's foray into small engines for its classic brand was a bold but necessary move.

"I think it was a big risk, but the EcoBoost brand has done well in the trucks, and it has been well-received by the public," he said. "It gives people a lot of what they're looking for, which is good fuel economy. And Ford, like every other carmaker, has CAFE requirements."

CAFE stands for Corporate Average Fuel Economy, and it's a federal requirement for automakers to meet increasingly stricter average fuel mileage across their fleets. Every high gas-mileage vehicle made means low gas-mileage vehicles must be produced to offset and meet the average.

When it comes to high-fuel-consumption V8s, some might think they're a dying breed. Merrill thinks differently.

"I don't think (CAFE standards) will be a threat at all because (Ford will) just limit the mix," he said. "And the V8 gets good fuel economy, too; it's just that when you step on it, it won't. But I don't foresee it as a problem at all. They will continue building what's selling. They will just sell cars to help offset it."

Mustangs have been in full production since 1964, and Moore and Merrill have their favorites.

For Merrill: "I'm more of a classic guy, so I would say a 1964. I really like that body style."

Moore prefers the late third-generation Fox platform models, known in car circles as "Fox body Mustangs."

Specifically for Moore, he likes "the Vanilla Ice car" from the early '90s. Rapper Vanilla Ice mentioned the Mustang in his 1990 megahit "Ice Ice Baby": "Rollin' in my 5.0 with the ragtop down so my hair can blow." Vanilla Ice, whose real name is Rob Van Winkle, also penned an ode to his convertible in the 1991 single "Rollin' in my 5.0," describing it as "not a Benz or a Jag; it's a 5.0 with a rag."

But whether it's a hardtop or a "rag," the Mustang has been a fixture in American culture since its debut and was featured in an early music video for Martha and the Vandellas' 1966 hit "Nowhere to Run," where the group rushes throughout a Ford plant as assembly line workers construct the pony cars. (The video is available on YouTube.)

Mustangs aren't the only fast cars in Ford's lineup. The automaker also sells EcoBoost versions of its Fiesta and Focus hatchbacks, which are badged with an "ST" trim line.

Ford also has released in limited numbers the all-wheel-drive Focus RS, which has a 2.3-liter EcoBoost engine at 350 horsepower. Both Moore and Merrill said their dealerships have been allotted one RS. Sewell has sold its rally-inspired hatchback, and Rogers has its pre-ordered RS on the way.

Coming up for Ford is the limited-run GT supercar; however, neither Rogers nor Sewell might get any on the lot. Ford requires potential buyers to fill out an online application, and the lucky few that Ford selects will have their cars sent to the dealership of their choice. Interest has been high for the $400,000 vehicle.

"I have fielded hundreds of calls over the past year and a half since Ford first announced they were going to offer the GT," Merrill said.

Merrill, who has been selling cars for 28 years, said he remembers the previous run of GTs a decade ago, which stickered for more than $150,000.

"Most dealers were selling GTs for well over sticker; they were selling them for $200,000 to $250,000," he said. "At Sewell, we made a decision that we weren't going to do that. So, we sold ours at sticker."

Instead, Sewell asked customers to be smart with their GTs and not flip them because Sewell wants first right of refusal should they sell their car.

One reason Ford has the application process for this run of GTs is because it wants the $400,000 supercar to be on the road, not in the garage.

"Why build an awesome car and shove it in a garage?" Moore said. "This car needs to be out on the street."

Moore said he knows six people who have put in their applications.

"It's been a motley crew that has come through for this car and have inquired about it and that are stone-cold buyers on it," he said. "If I had six GTs, I'd sell them at the end of the day."

As for whether Moore will try to get one for himself, he laughed and said, "You'd first have to convince my wife that I could fit my two little boys in the back" — a tall order, considering the GT is a two-seater.

There certainly will be stories told by the few who snag a GT, but the appeal of the Mustang is that everybody has a story.

"You can see the old-timers come in here and say, 'Wow, I can't believe what this car is today. I remember in 1960-something,' and then they tell you this story," he said. "And you can see the young kids coming in here with the 2015 design and say, 'Wow, I love this European design.' It can relate to everybody, and I think that's what makes it so popular. It's been a consistent vehicle that Ford has been producing for 50 years."

Teacher turns students' desks into letters of inspiration

Associated Press

WOODBURY, N.J. — For a classroom of elementary school students looking for inspiration before a big test this week, the writing wasn't on the wall. It was on their desks.

A Woodbury teacher wrote inspirational messages directly on her students' desks Monday before they started four days of high-pressure, high-stakes Common Core-aligned tests this week, followed by three more days next week.

Chandni Langford's fifth-graders walked into class Monday at Evergreen Avenue Elementary School to find messages from her. "Learning is your superpower!" she wrote to one student. "There is no elevator to success, you must take the stairs!" she told another.

"A lot of my kids were nervous that if they don't pass this test with good scores they won't go to the next grade. They feel a lot of anxiety about that," Langford said. "I thought this would be a cute thing for them to walk in to."

Photos of the desks on the district's Facebook page have been shared more than 10,000 times and have been met with comments celebrating the teacher's attempts to encourage her students.

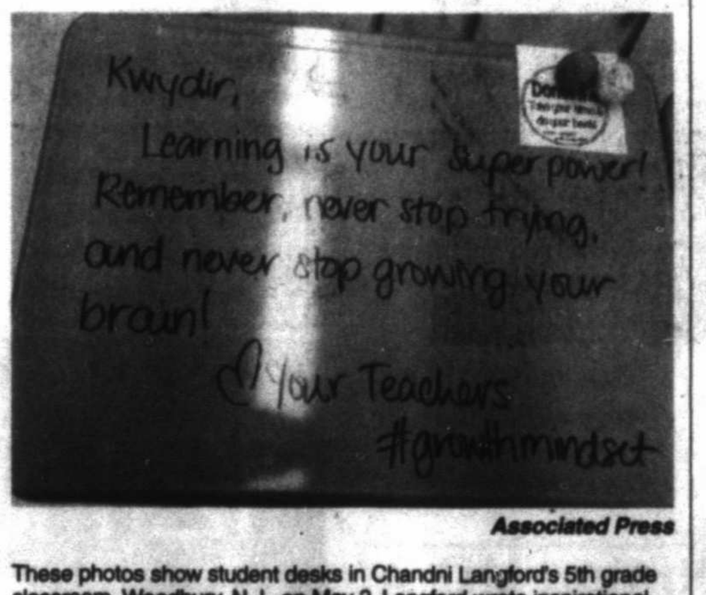

Julissa Gomez said she was a bit nervous about the start of testing, but the message from her teacher helped.

"When I read the message, my fear went away," Julissa said. "I knew I could actually do it."

Another student said the message motivated her to do her best.

"I felt like I could do anything now," Emily Corrigan said. "Everyone kept on smiling. I think it was really cool that she did everything for us."

Langford said she got the idea on Pinterest from another teacher. She said the messages connect with the "growth mindset" learning strategy that she has used in her classroom of 19 students since January.

Fire damages Home Smart store

From staff reports

The fire marshal's office is investigating the cause of a fire that damaged the exterior of the Home Smart store on North Big Spring Street Friday night, according to city spokeswoman Sara Bustilloz.

A small fire started behind the store and "worked its way to the actual business, but firefighters were able to keep damage to the exterior," she said via text message.

The fire was believed to have started at a fence or Dumpster, she said.

Eight units from the Midland Fire Department responded to the fire that occurred some time before 8 p.m.

Odessa man gets probation in girlfriend's fatal shooting

Associated Press

ODESSA — An Odessa man must serve 10 years of probation for the 2014 fatal shooting of his girlfriend as he examined a gun while at his parents' home.

Eric Holguin was convicted Thursday of manslaughter. Holguin was acquitted of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon in the death of 23-year-old Kimberly Root.

The defense said the March 2014 fatal shooting was an accident. Prosecutors say Holguin, who testified that he did not own a gun, was negligent in his handling of two weapons.

The 26-year-old Holguin said he pulled the trigger of one handgun and nothing happened. He testified he did the same with a second pistol — which fired, striking Root.

Holguin said he assumed the second weapon wasn't loaded because the first one was not.

Police: Federal officer in custody after 3 fatal shootings

By Ben Nuckols
Associated Press

SILVER SPRING, Md. — A federal security officer suspected in three fatal shootings outside a high school, a mall and a supermarket in the Washington, D.C., area was arrested Friday, police said. Three people were also wounded in the shootings.

Eulalio Tordil, an employee of the Federal Protective Service, which provides security at federal properties, was taken into custody without incident near the supermarket, the scene of the last shooting, authorities said. The brief manhunt and seemingly indiscriminate shootings rekindled fears of the D.C. sniper in 2002, which paralyzed the nation's capital and its suburbs.

Plainclothes officers trailed Tordil for an hour, watching him walk from store to store at a shopping center as they waited for the right time to arrest him. He had earlier threatened to "commit suicide by cop" and authorities wanted to make sure the public was safe when he was arrested.

"Knowing his behavior today, knowing of statements he made in the past, we did not want to endanger anyone and have a shootout when we took him into custody and that's why he was taken into custody the way he was," Montgomery County Police Chief Thomas Manger said.

Tordil was put on administrative duties in March after a protective order was issued against him when his wife said he had threatened to harm her if she left him, The Washington Post reported. Tordil subjected their children to "intense-military-like discipline," like pushups and detention in a dark closet, according to the order.

Authorities said Tordil followed his 44-year-old wife Gladys to their children's high school Thursday. As she waited in an SUV in the parking lot of High Point High, Tordil confronted her and shot her. He also shot and wounded a man who tried to intervene.

The shooting occurred more than an hour after school and no students were harmed.

On Friday morning, about 15 miles from the school, police responded to a shooting at the Westfield Montgomery Mall in Bethesda. One person was initially shot and two others may have been shot coming to that person's aid, said Montgomery County Police Assistant Chief Darryl McSwain. A man died and another one was in critical condition. A woman had injuries that were not life-threatening.

About a half an hour later, while police were still on the scene at the mall, they got call of a shooting at a Giant Food store in Aspen Hill, about 5 miles away. A woman who was sitting in her car was shot and killed, authorities said.

Tordil was spotted by officers and when he returned to his car, officers surrounded him.

"They had a bunch of guns pointed at him and he was coming out of the car with his hands up," said Dominique Lee, who was walking out of the flower shop where she works when Tordil was arrested.

"He just got out of his car. He gave up," said Jason Palmer, a private investigator who lives nearby and had started to search for the gunman himself. "They pinned him in."

A weapon was found in Tordil's car, but authorities have not described it.

The protective service said when he was put on administrative duty in March, his weapon, badge and credentials were taken.

The grocery store in Aspen Hill is a few hundred feet from a Michaels craft store that was first target by D.C. sniper John Allen Muhammad. Muhammad's shot into the store did not hit anyone, but he killed a man about a mile away less than an hour later, kicking off a three-week killing spree that left 10 dead.

Tordil ate at the same Boston Market as Muhammad and Lee Boyd Malvo, who was also convicted in the sniper attacks.

"They ate in the same restaurant where we were having the surveillance here today, which was an irony that was not lost on me," said Montgomery County State's Attorney John McCarthy. "I think it's a coincidence."

GOP states benefiting from shift to wind and solar energy

By Michael Biesecker
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If there's a War on Coal, it's increasingly clear which side is winning.

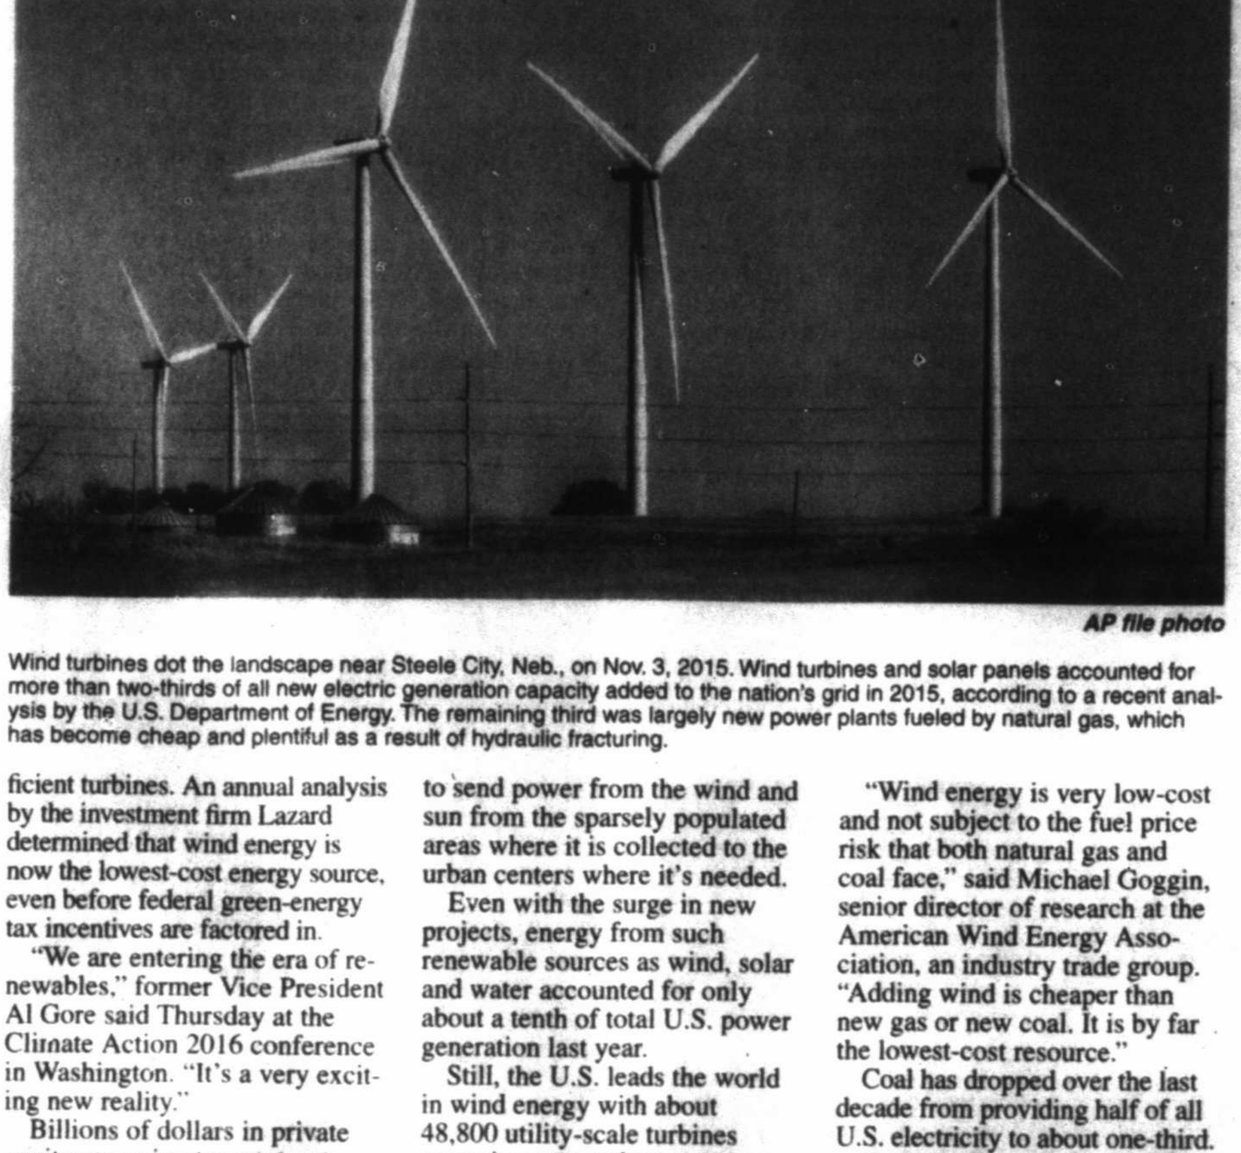

Wind turbines and solar panels accounted for more than two-thirds of all new electric generation capacity added to the nation's grid in 2015, according to a recent analysis by the U.S. Department of Energy. The remaining third was largely new power plants fueled by natural gas, which has become cheap and plentiful as a result of hydraulic fracturing.

It was the second straight year U.S. investment in renewable energy projects has outpaced that of fossil fuels. Robust growth is once again predicted for this year.

And while Republican lawmakers in Washington have fought to protect coal-fired power plants, opposing President Barack Obama's efforts to curtail climate-warming carbon emissions, data show their home states are often the ones benefiting most from the nation's accelerating shift to renewable energy.

Leading the way in new wind projects are GOP strongholds Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, home to some of the leading critics of climate science and renewable energy incentives in Congress. Republican-dominated North Carolina trails only California in new solar farms, thanks largely to pro-renewables polices enacted years ago under a Democratic legislature.

The most dramatic change has been seen in the plummeting cost of emissions-free wind energy, which has declined by two-thirds in the last six years thanks to the availability of cheaper, more efficient turbines. An annual analysis by the investment firm Lazard determined that wind energy is now the lowest-cost energy source, even before federal green-energy tax incentives are factored in.

Wind turbines dot the landscape near Steele City, Neb., on Nov. 3, 2015. Wind turbines and solar panels accounted for more than two-thirds of all new electric generation capacity added to the nation's grid in 2015, according to a recent analysis by the U.S. Department of Energy. The remaining third was largely new power plants fueled by natural gas, which has become cheap and plentiful as a result of hydraulic fracturing.

"We are entering the era of renewables," former Vice President Al Gore said Thursday at the Climate Action 2016 conference in Washington. "It's a very exciting new reality."

Billions of dollars in private equity are going to construct massive new renewables projects, especially in the Sun Belt and Great Plains. Thousands of miles of new high-voltage transmission lines are also under construction to send power from the wind and sun from the sparsely populated areas where it is collected to the urban centers where it's needed.

Even with the surge in new projects, energy from such renewable sources as wind, solar and water accounted for only about a tenth of total U.S. power generation last year.

Still, the U.S. leads the world in wind energy with about 48,800 utility-scale turbines operating across the country, generating enough electricity to power about 20 million homes. By 2030, the Energy Department estimates wind will provide a fifth of the nation's electricity.

"Wind energy is very low-cost and not subject to the fuel price risk that both natural gas and coal face," said Michael Goggin, senior director of research at the American Wind Energy Association, an industry trade group. "Adding wind is cheaper than new gas or new coal. It is by far the lowest-cost resource."

Coal has dropped over the last decade from providing half of all U.S. electricity to about one-third.

Peabody Energy, the world's largest coal company, last month joined a growing list of major mining firms forced to seek bankruptcy protection. Wall Street appears to also be writing coal's financial obituary. JPMorgan Chase recently announced it will no longer finance new coal mines or coal-fired power plants, following similar announcements from other big banks.

While new clean-air regulations and tax incentives for renewables are having a negative impact on coal, the plummeting cost of cleaner-burning natural gas made possible by fracturing is largely driving the closure of many old coal-fired power plants. Exports of coal to foreign customers such as China also are down.

"We didn't see the decline coming this fast and this deep," said Luke Popovich, spokesman for the National Mining Association, an industry trade group.

Meanwhile, the long-promised potential of Clean Coal technology has yet to be realized. A model power plant in Mississippi designed to capture the carbon dioxide generated from burning coal has encountered repeated delays and multibillion-dollar cost overruns.

Closures mean America's coal mines now employ about only about 56,700 people, down from a peak of more than 10 times that. By contrast, the fast-growing solar industry now employs more than 210,000 workers. Wind energy accounts for another 77,000 by federal estimates.

Political giving by the big coal companies and their executives has declined, but the industry still spends heavily to protect its interests in Washington. Pro-coal interests spent at least $11 million to influence the 2014 Congressional midterm elections, according to the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics. More than 95 percent of that went to support Republican candidates.

NGS posts $2.5 million gain in 1Q

From staff reports

Two companies with major presences in the Permian Basin released their results for the first quarter on Friday. The following are highlights in their reports:

NGS

Natural Gas Services Group marked a $2.5 million gain in net income, according to first-quarter results filed with the SEC on Friday.

Earnings per diluted share was 20 cents, down 9 cents since the end of 2015.

The company reported $43.1 million in cash and cash equivalents.

NGS has $417,000 in long-term debt.

Revenue fell 13 percent over the quarter to $21.6 million. The company attributed the loss to lower rental revenue because of depressed commodity prices. Rentals make up 76 percent of NGS' business operations.

Equipment sales, which make up 23 percent of operations, rose nearly 26 percent and contributed $4.9 million in revenue. Revenues from service and maintenance rose 14.2 percent to $258,000.

NGS, which is headquartered in Midland, provides small- to medium-horsepower wellhead compression equipment to the natural gas industry. It manufactures, fabricates, rents, sells and maintains natural gas compressors and flare systems for oil and gas production and plant facilities, according to the company's public description.

Long-term debt stood at $546.8 million. Parsley reported that its borrowing base of $575 million was affirmed after credit redetermination.

Parsley spudded 20 and completed 15 gross operated horizontal wells.

Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump speaks during a rally Friday in Omaha, Neb.

More big-name Republicans abandon Trump; he just shrugs

By Erica Werner and Steve Peoples
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Big-name GOP leaders piled on Friday against Donald Trump in an extraordinary show of Republican-vs.-Republican discontent over his winning the party's presidential nomination. Trump just shrugged it off, declaring they didn't really matter when compared to all the voters who turned out to vote for him in this year's primary elections.

Trump grudgingly agreed to meet next week with Paul Ryan, the Republican House speaker whose statement a day earlier — he said he was not ready to embrace Trump's nomination — set off the intraparty fireworks. Trump said he had "no idea" if they would patch things up and it wasn't all that important anyway.

"The thing that matters most are the millions of people that have come out to vote for me and give me a landslide victory in almost every state," Trump said moments after Ryan, the nation's highest-ranking Republican officeholder, announced their planned meeting.

Later in the day, two of Trump's vanquished GOP rivals, former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush and South Carolina Sen. Lindsey Graham, said they would not vote for him in November. That was a startling rejection by party leaders.

Trump said of Ryan's stance: "I figured, routinely, he would be behind me. The other day, he pulled a big surprise."

He said he was not surprised about Bush's stance and was tersely dismissive of Graham.

Of Bush, he said, "I will not say he's low-energy," reprising a jibe he used frequently during the primary campaign. He mocked Graham's poor primary showing, saying, "Like the voters who rejected him, so will I!"

Ryan said his meeting with Trump would occur next Thursday and that Trump also would meet with other House GOP leaders. Discussions will center on "the kind of Republican principles and ideas that can win the support of the American people this November," Ryan said.

The unlikely back-and-forth came a day after Ryan injected new uncertainty into the turbulent presidential contest by refusing, for now, to endorse Trump. Aides said that, far from seeking to helm an anti-Trump movement, Ryan hopes to exert a positive influence for the general election campaign after a nominating contest that has alienated women, minorities and other voter groups.

Yet Trump's reaction Friday made it unclear what impact Ryan could have.

"With millions of people coming into the party, obviously I'm saying the right thing," Trump said on Fox News Channel. "I mean, he talks about unity, but what is this?"

Democrats are generally steering clear of the Republican infighting, letting the party's leaders tear at each other.

However, President Barack Obama did say when questioned about it at the White House: "This is not entertainment. This is not a reality show," and candidates need to show they have the qualities to lead the world's strongest nation.

As the reality of the GOP divisions sank in Friday, some Republicans were not shy about expressing their displeasure with Ryan. The telegenic Wisconsin Republican served as his party's vice presidential nominee in 2012, was drafted to the high-profile role of House speaker last fall and is seen as having designs on the 2020 presidential nomination himself.

"Yesterday's statement emboldens others to be equally publicly difficult. And that runs the risk of creating a Goldwater kind of moment where the party really does split," former House Speaker Newt Gingrich told The Associated Press, referring to the 1964 Republican presidential nominee whose candidacy divided the GOP and was followed by a big Democratic victory.

"I don't necessarily know that that's his role, to be a sticking point for the Republican nominee," said Rep. Duncan Hunter of California, one of a growing number of Trump supporters in the House. Added Rep. Lou Barletta of Pennsylvania: "The voters of our party have spoken loud and clear, and it's their voice that matters."

Trump has criticized Ryan in the past and renewed his attacks Friday by arguing that Ryan and presidential candidate Mitt Romney, "lost a race that should have been won" in 2012. Trump and Ryan also have disagreements on policy, from immigration to Social Security to trade.

In his latest surprising breach of orthodoxy on Friday, Trump questioned whether the U.S. government would make good on its commitment to fully honor Treasury notes, suggesting he might try to get a better deal.

It all comes at a moment when Trump needs to be reaching out to the women, minorities and others who will be crucial for him to triumph in November over Hillary Clinton, the likely Democratic nominee. Trump made what he appeared to believe was an overture in that direction Thursday by tweeting a photo of himself eating a taco bowl in celebration of Cinco de Mayo and declaring his love for Hispanics.

The gesture landed with a thud, and many Latino leaders reacted negatively, although Trump insisted Friday that "People loved it."

Ryan himself said in his initial comments on CNN that he hopes to be able to come around to supporting Trump. He's just not there yet.

"You have to unify all wings of the Republican Party in a conservative movement," he said. "And we've got a ways to go from here to there."

Obama on Trump: This is not a reality show

By Kathleen Hennessey
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In his first remarks about Donald Trump's status as the GOP's presumptive nominee, President Barack Obama on Friday urged the media to undertake tougher scrutiny of presidential candidates.

"We are in serious times and this is a really serious job," Obama said at the White House. "This is not entertainment; this is not a reality show."

Obama suggested that Trump's rise was enabled by a press that focuses on the frivolous.

"What I'm concerned about is the degree to which reporting and information starts emphasizing the spectacle and the circus," Obama said, simultaneously acknowledging the GOP nominee is a spectacle and placing partial blame on the media for creating him.

"That's not something we can afford. And the American people, they've got good judgment; they've got good instincts, as long as they get good information."

With his brief comments, tagged on the end of remarks about the economy, Obama inched closer to engagement in a race he has tried to keep at a safe distance. The president tipped his hand at his likely line of attack on the likely GOP nominee, a former reality TV star, and he delicately weighed in on a prolonged contest in his own party.

The White House has said Obama will be a regular presence on the campaign trail for the Democratic nominee once his party coalesces around a single candidate. Asked about the Democratic fight, Obama wasn't ready to directly urge Sen. Bernie Sanders to get out of the race, but he suggested the writing was on the wall.

"Let's let the process play itself out," Obama said, when asked whether it was time for Sanders to call it quits. Then he added: "I think everybody knows what that math is."

Sanders' rival, Hillary Clinton, has a lead of more than 300 pledged delegates and has received about 3 million more votes than Sanders during the primaries. Including superdelegates, Clinton is more than 90 percent of the way to clinching the nomination.

Still, the White House has been loath to appear to be meddling in the race, wary that it could anger Sanders' devoted followers and undermine Obama's ability to act as a uniting force.

In an interview with Pittsburgh TV station KDKA on Friday, Vice President Joe Biden warned that it would be a mistake not to take Trump seriously, pointing to the possibility that Trump could start to make himself seem more presidential.

Biden said Trump might manage "to bring significant people around him on domestic and foreign policy and to do the policy pieces where people think that this guy could actually be president."

Sanders wants supporters represented at party convention

By Ken Thomas
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Democratic presidential candidate Bernie Sanders on Friday threatened a floor fight over rules and platform planks at the party's summer convention on Friday, warning the Democratic National Committee not to stack the convention's standing committees with supporters of Hillary Clinton.

The prospect of a procedural wrench thrown into the party's flagship event is likely to cause headaches for Democratic leaders trying to forge a united front against Donald Trump, the likely Republican nominee.

Sanders has amassed some 9 million votes during the nation's primaries and caucuses, and has said even if he fails at getting the final nomination, he wants to shape the party's agenda on issues like wealth disparity, financial reform and the role of big money in politics. He says the standing committees that consider the party's platform and rules should reflect the number of votes he's received in the 2016 primaries and caucuses.

"I will not allow them to be silenced at the Democratic National Convention," Sanders wrote of his supporters in a letter to Democratic National Committee Chairwoman Debbie Wasserman Schultz.

The platform committee considers the party's stance on a wide range of policy issues while the rules committee sets the guidelines governing the convention. Sanders' letter came after the candidate spoke with the chairwoman by phone earlier this week.

"If the process is set up to produce an unfair, one-sided result, we are prepared to mobilize our delegates to force as many votes as necessary to amend the platform and rules on the floor of the convention," Sanders wrote.

Luis Miranda, a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee, said "because the party's platform is a statement of our values, the DNC is committed to an open, inclusive and representative process. Both of our campaigns will be represented on the drafting committee, and just as we did in 2008 and 2012, the public will have opportunities to participate."

Clinton holds a sizable lead of more than 300 pledged delegates and has received about 3 million more votes than Sanders during the primaries. Including superdelegates — the elected party leaders and officials who can choose the candidate of their choice — Clinton is more than 90 percent of the way to clinching the nomination.

In the letter, Sanders notes that Connecticut Gov. Dannel Malloy will be in charge of the convention's platform committee and former Massachusetts Rep. Barney Frank will run the rules committee. He calls both "aggressive attack surrogates on the campaign trail" for Clinton.

Sanders said he submitted the names of more than 40 people to serve on three standing committees and only three of his recommendations were selected by Wasserman Schultz. He said none of his supporters were assigned to the rules committee.

SpaceX lands rocket at sea 2nd time after satellite launch

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — For the second month in a row, the aerospace upstart SpaceX landed a rocket on an ocean platform early Friday, this time following the successful launch of a Japanese communications satellite.

A live webcast showed the first-stage booster touching down vertically in the pre-dawn darkness atop a barge in the Atlantic, just off the Florida coast. The same thing occurred April 8 during a space station supply run for NASA. That was the first successful landing at sea for SpaceX, which expects to start reusing its unmanned Falcon rockets as early as this summer to save money and lower costs.

Because of the high altitude needed for this mission, SpaceX did not expect a successful landing. But it was wrong. As the launch commentator happily declared, "The Falcon has landed."

SpaceX founder and chief executive Elon Musk was even more exuberant. "Woohoo!!" he exclaimed in bold letters via Twitter.

"May need to increase size of rocket storage hangar," he added in a tweet.

Musk said this was a three-engine burn for the booster's return, "so triple deceleration from the last flight." Before liftoff from Cape Canaveral, Florida, he put the chances of a successful touchdown at "maybe even" because the rocket was coming in faster and hotter than last time.

Musk contends rocket reusability is key to shaving launch costs and making space more accessible.

SpaceX is the only company to recover a rocket following an orbital launch. It achieved its first booster landing — on solid ground at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station — in December. A landing at sea proved more elusive and required several tries.

Blue Origin, led by another wealthy high-tech entrepreneur, Jeff Bezos of Amazon.com, has landed and even reflown its booster rockets, but those did not put anything into orbit.

Following last month's landing, Musk said he plans to fly that booster again, possibly as soon as June. The first recovered booster, from December, will grace the entrance of SpaceX headquarters in Hawthorne, California.

Already in the delivery business for NASA, SpaceX hopes to start transporting U.S. astronauts to the International Space Station by the end of next year in the company's next-generation Dragon capsules. But its ultimate goal is Mars.

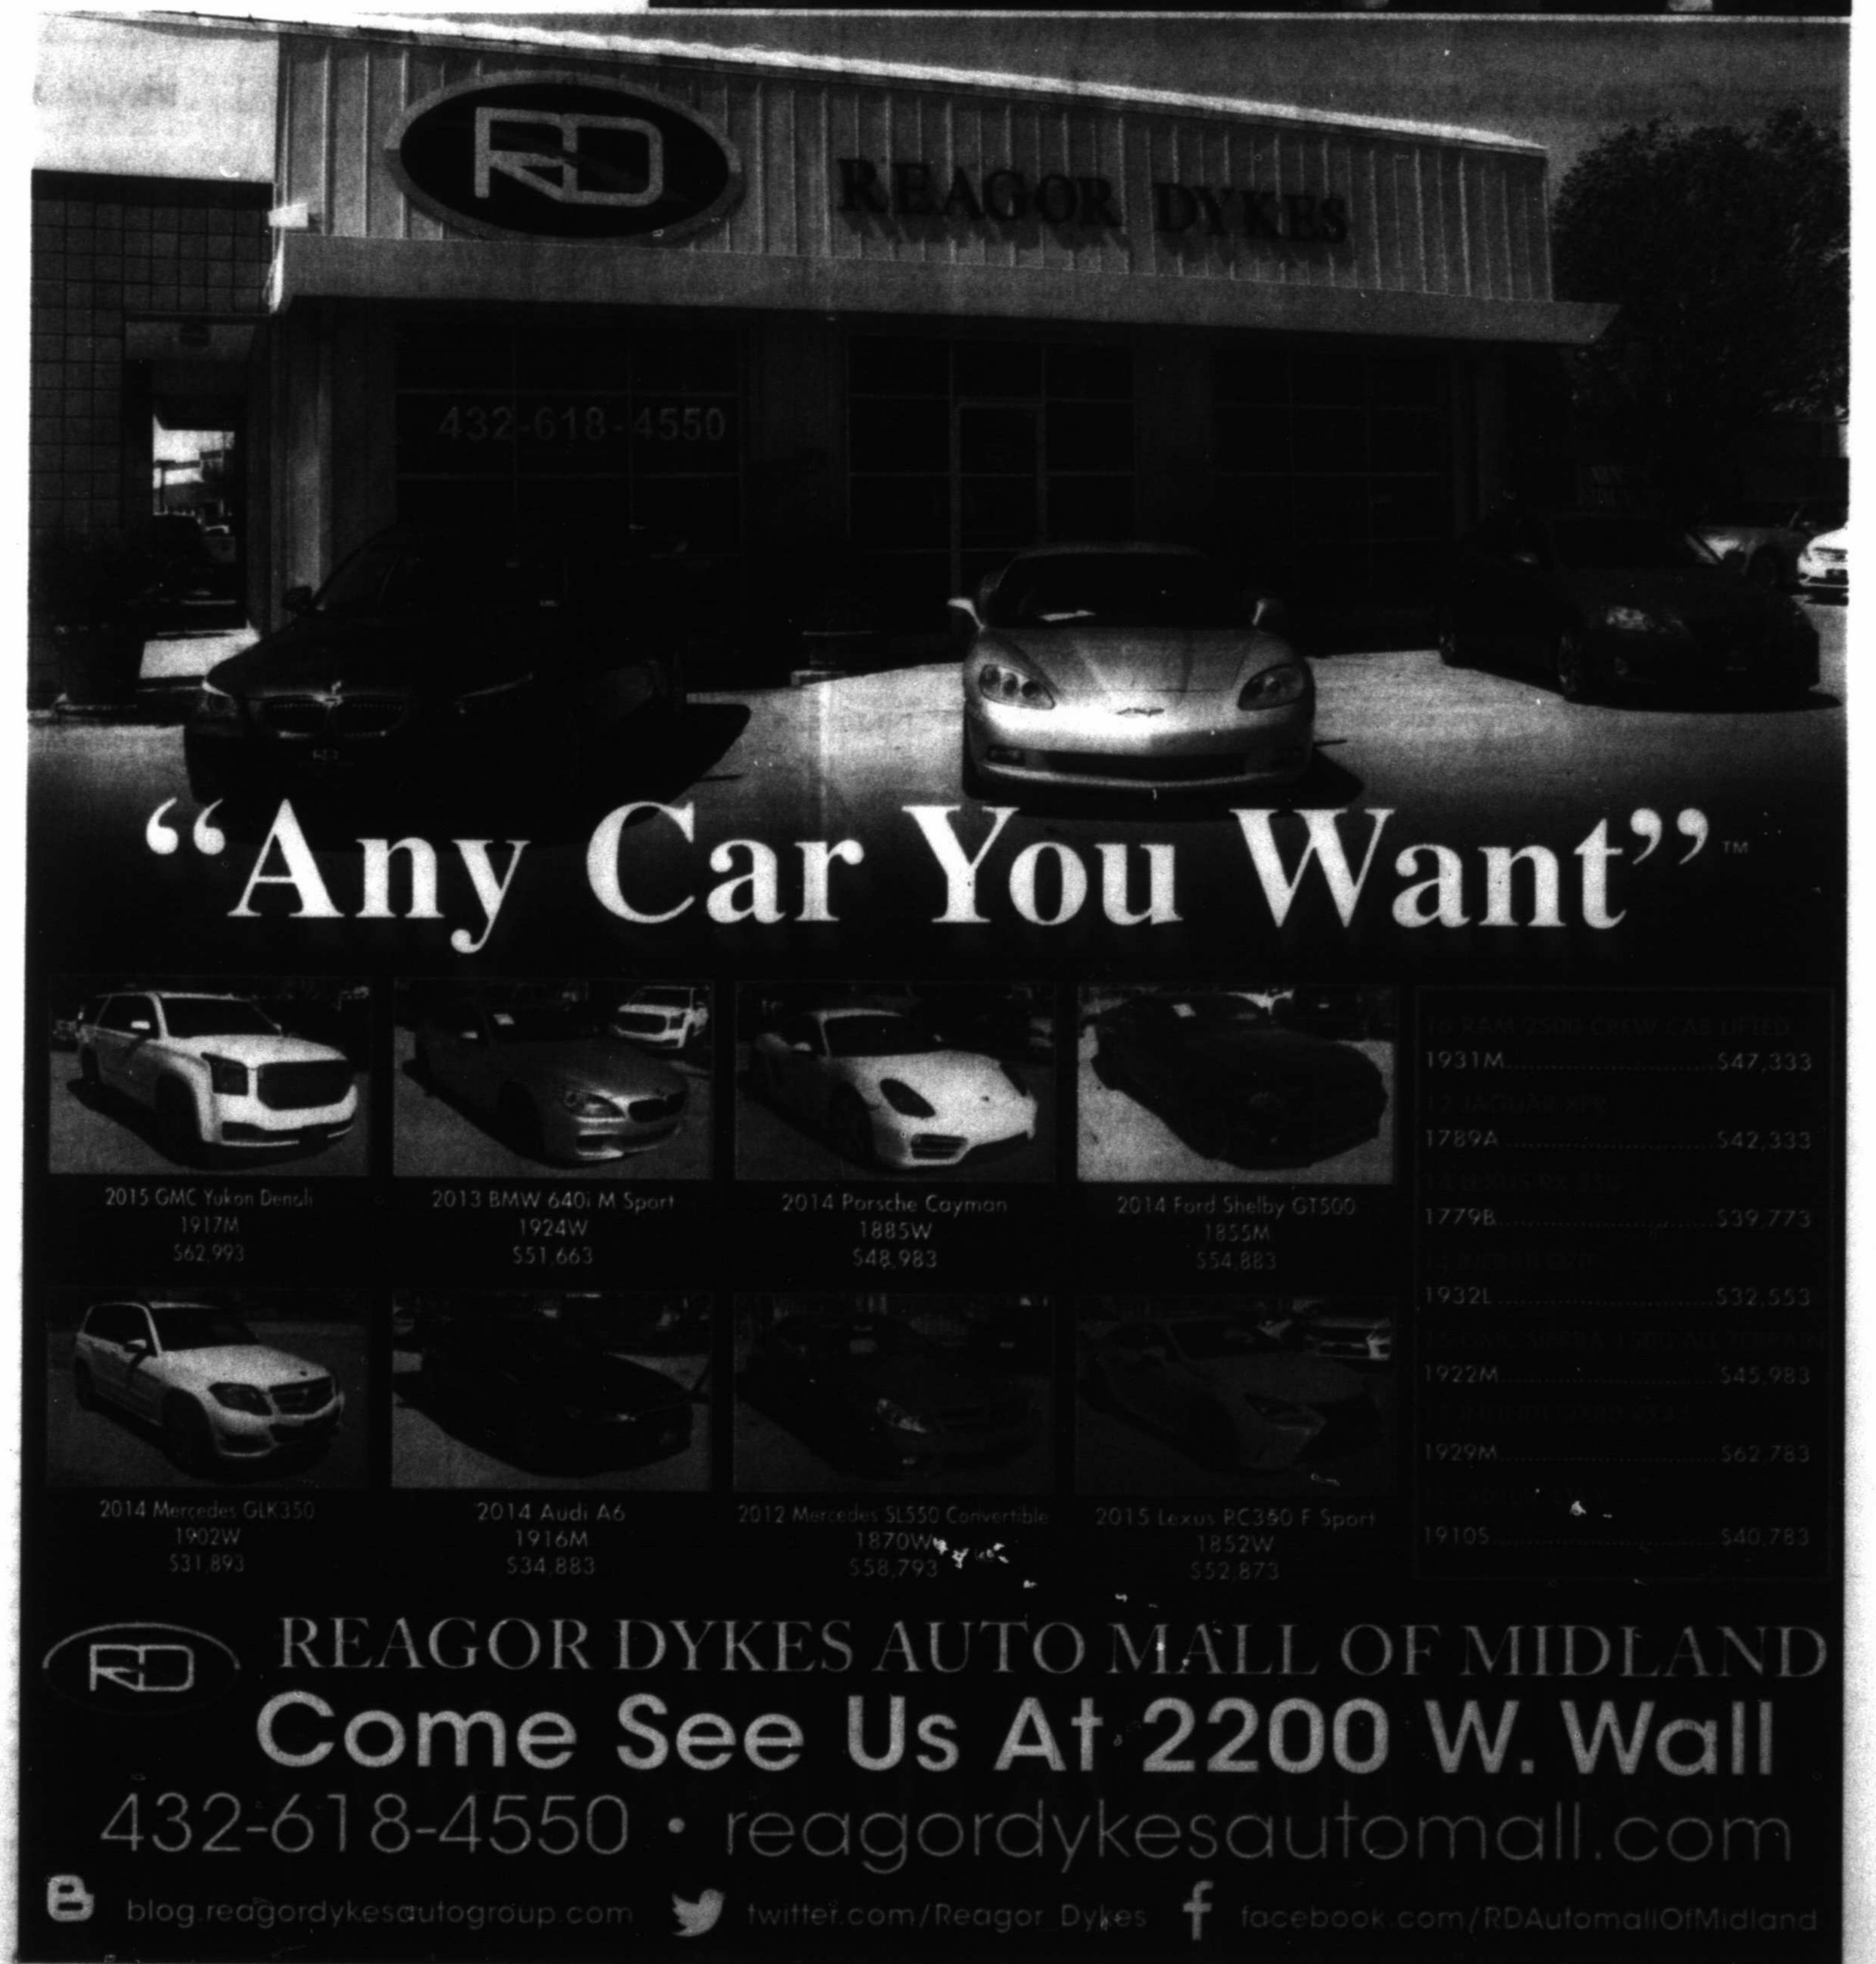

In a groundbreaking announcement last week, Musk said his company will attempt to send a Red Dragon to Mars in 2018 — and actually land on the red planet. His ambition is to establish a city on Mars.

He also runs Tesla Motors, the electric car company.

Lee gets playoff win vs. Martin

Coleman

SWEETWATER — Friday was the Lee baseball team's first playoff game in four years.

But after the first few pitches were thrown, Lee had the look of a seasoned and battled-tested club entirely unafraid of the postseason stage.

The Rebels blasted their way to a five-inning 11-1 win against Arlington Martin in the first game of a best-of-three Class 6A bi-district series at Sportsman's Park.

Texas A&M-bound backstop Hunter Coleman went 2-for-3 with a grand slam and six RBI to spearhead an explosive Lee offense that scored 10 of its runs over the second and third innings.

On the mound, senior right-hander Evan Mata notched his first high school playoff victory in style. In a complete game effort, he allowed the one run on eight hits while striking out nine for the Rebels (21-6).

Game 2 of the series is scheduled for 1 p.m. today at Sportsman's Park. If necessary, Game 3 will follow 30 minutes after Game 2.

Mata, who entered the playoffs with a 0.63 earned run average over 55 2/3 innings, got into his first playoff jam in the top of the second. Trailing, 1-0, the War-

ABILENE — The Midland High baseball team struck first in its best-of-three Class 6A bi-district playoff series, rolling to a 17-5 run-rule victory over Arlington High in six innings, Friday at Blackburn Field.

The Bulldogs (22-10) and the Colts (12-15) play Game 2 at noon today at Abilene Christian University's Crutcher Scott Field. If needed, Game 3 will follow at 3:30 p.m. today at Blackburn Field.

MHS rode its heavy hitting in Game 1, collecting 16 hits, four doubles and four triples.

Bulldogs junior Chris Sims spearheaded the offensive barrage by going 4-for-4 with two triples, a double, three RBI and three runs scored.

MHS' No. 2 batter Luke Edmondson had a memorable performance as well, batting 2-for-4 with a double, a triple, four RBI and three runs. Jaxon Hallmark, the Bulldogs' third hitter, went 2-for-3 with a double, three RBI and a run.

The offensive outpour began in the third inning when MHS scored six runs.

"We just started obliterating the baseball," Bulldogs head coach Barry Russell said of the third stanza.

Chaps claim WJCAC title in win over Clarendon

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

The Midland College baseball team was determined to get the Western Junior College Athletic Conference title out of the way on Friday afternoon.

The Chaparrals' celebration was delayed for a little while after an 11-10 loss to Clarendon College in the first game of a doubleheader at Christensen Stadium.

But then in the second game, the Chaps used a little thunder and capped off a perfect day at the plate by Nolan Rattai to run-rule the Bulldogs 17-7 in five innings to capture the outright WJCAC title.

It is the first conference title for MC since 2014 and only the third in the 16-year history of the program.

"It's a big deal. It's a neat deal," said MC coach David Coleman about winning the league crown. "It's to be celebrated at a later time. We've still got other things we need to accomplish, but it's something that when we're done, we're going to look back on it and enjoy it."

Added Rattai: "It means a lot. It's an honor to win this, but also we have to go into the regional tournament and have to play the best there. We can't take a step back. We have to keep moving forward."

Hill Alexander, one of the top power hitters in the NJCAA, helped the Chaps (36-17, 26-8) get jump-started in the second game after falling behind 2-0 in the first inning.

The freshman outfielder from Arlington led off the game with a solo home run to left field. Then later in the nine-run inning, Alexander connected for a two-run home run that went way beyond the left field fence for his 25th of the year.

"The first inning of the second game was pretty good," Alexander said. "I just got my pitch twice in the same inning and didn't miss it. It just capped off a very explosive inning for us."

Gathers trades high tops for cleats, takes shot with Cowboys

By Schulyer Dixon

Gathers

IRVING — One of the first times Rico Gathers put on pads after the former Baylor basketball player decided to pursue a career in the NFL, he was asked to dunk in them.

The forward-turned-tight end won't get that request from the Dallas Cowboys. They want to see him get in a stance, block somebody, run precise routes and catch passes.

You know, things Gathers hadn't really done in nearly a decade before choosing football over a shot at the NBA, and taking the practice field for the first time Friday at the Cowboys' rookie minicamp.

"Right now it's just all foreign," tight ends coach Mike Pope said. "There's too many guys out there. Usually there's 10 where he's been. There's 22 out here. So those extra guys confuse him a little bit."

Dallas used its final pick of the draft in the sixth round on Gathers, who must have been generously listed at 6-foot-8 during his Baylor days because he's at 6-6 and 273 pounds on the Dallas roster.

Gathers said he chose to pursue the NFL mostly on his own, calling it "the first grown-man decision I've ever made in my life." And that came about nine years after he made the "business decision" to focus on basketball when he was 13, in eighth grade.

The NFL choice was something of a business decision as well. He and his wife figured it was more prudent financially, with a young son, than chasing an NBA dream. And it wasn't because Gathers didn't think he could make it in the NBA.

"It was just a thing of what do I really want to do for the next 10 to 15 years of my life, being an athlete," the 22-year-old said. "Because I know that window is so short. You only get one real opportunity at it."

Gathers' NFL pursuits started a little earlier than he had hoped when Baylor

ALPINE — The Midland High softball team squeaked past El Paso Eastwood, 2-1 in game 1 of its best-of-three area round playoff series on Friday at Sul Ross State University.

Tied 1-1, the Lady Bulldogs (24-8-1) took the lead in the bottom of the sixth inning when Natalie Gamboa drove home Aryn Flores with a sacrifice fly.

"We were able to hit the ball at the end of the game to get the go-ahead run in," MHS head coach Shawnda Vines said. "We need to do a better job (Saturday) adjusting at the plate."

Eastwood pitcher Triana Kennedy held the Lady Bulldogs to only four hits and two walks.

MCS holds off Dallas Christian to take Game 1

By Oscar LeRoy
oleroy@mrt.com

A six-run third inning appeared to give Midland Christian a comfortable lead against Dallas Christian in the team's first game of a best-of-three TAPPS 4A area playoff series at Christensen Stadium.

The Chargers, however, proved to be a pesky team and never could be put away until a couple of late insurance runs gave the Mustangs all the cushion they needed in a 9-5 win.

MCS (26-10-1) will look for the series win at 11 a.m. today at Odessa's American Legion Field. If necessary, Game 3 will be 30 minutes following the conclusion of the second game.

MCS coach Mike Mungia said there's always concern when a team crawls back within striking distance.

"We stress having that killer instinct," Mungia said. "We had them down 7-0 and had a bad inning, made a couple of mistakes and just couldn't get that next big inning to put them away. I knew (the Chargers) would (score) eventually. They're a good hitting team. They compete well."

The Mustangs' big third inning came in part thanks to Dallas Christian's miscues as MCS had only three hits but also took advantage of a key error, a walk and two hit batters.

Meanwhile, MCS starting pitcher Grant Little was solid on the mound as he had 10 strikeouts through five innings. Unfortunately for the Mustangs, Little's pitch count got a little high as five walks contributed to his night being cut short on the mound. Three of those walks helped the Chargers (10-9) score two runs in the

Texas A&M sheds some swagger and tries to change its trajectory

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — The five-star quarterbacks are gone, replaced at Texas A&M by a graduate transfer looking for a second chance. The hotshot young coordinator is out. A seasoned veteran assistant is now running Texas A&M's offense.

On the recruiting trail, yet another five-star passer has bailed on the Aggies, and the reaction one A&M assistant had to the news this week only made matters worse for Kevin Sumlin's program.

The Aggies have lost some of the swagger that came when Johnny Football took the Southeastern Conference by storm, Sumlin became a $5 million per year head coach and Texas A&M looked as if it could be a perennial threat to Alabama.

Maybe that's good for a program and coach in need of a trajectory change after three straight seasons of not being able to break .500 in conference. Expectations will be modest for the Aggies in 2016 and that more than anything else might be what's needed in College Station.

"Whatever that perception is, what is it compared to?" Sumlin said. "Because 36 (victories) in four years is the most anybody's won here in 20 years. From a sheer numbers standpoint, the things that you quantify where your program's headed, by the numbers, there's no questions this program's in better shape than when I took over.

"Is it where we want it to be? No. But is it better based on the fact that we're winning right at 70 percent of our games and from 2000 to 2012 it was 50 percent?"

Wins and losses seemed to be the least of Sumlin's problems last December.

In the span of a couple weeks two former elite quarterback recruits — Kyle Allen and Kyler Murray — decided to transfer. Add in Kenny Hill, who left after the 2014 season, and it made three one-time starting quarterbacks to transfer out of A&M in less than a year.

"We're not in the business of trying to run people out of here," Sumlin said.

The Aggies had to play third-string quarterback Jake Hubenak in a loss to Louisville in the Music City Bowl. A few days later, offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach Jake Spavital was fired. Spavital was 27 when Sumlin hired him in 2013.

It seemed as if a tempest was sweeping through Texas A&M football.

On a warm, overcast April day in College Station, between meetings and spring practice, Sumlin said the winter upheaval was not nearly as sudden as it looked from the outside.

High-powered offenses have followed Sumlin as he climbed the career ladder from Oklahoma co-offensive coordinator to Houston head coach to Texas A&M.

In 2012, Sumlin's first season, the Aggies were second in the nation in yards per play with Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel at quarterback. The next season Texas A&M ranked fourth in yards per play.

The season after Manziel left, A&M was 27th in yards per play and last season the Aggies ranked 69th.

Sumlin turned to an old friend to help turn things around, hiring UCLA offensive coordinator Noel Mazzone. The 59-year-old Mazzone and Sumlin worked together at Minnesota in the 1990s. Sumlin also brought offensive line coach Jim Turner back for a second stint at A&M.

Sumlin used the word "experience" eight times when explaining why he chose Mazzone and Turner.

Sumlin wants a more efficient and consistent running game. And he needs Oklahoma transfer Trevor Knight to fill the void at quarterback.

Knight looked like a potential star when he led the Sooners to a Sugar Bowl victory against Alabama in 2014. But he never sustained success, throwing 17 interceptions in 490 career passes.

Knight showed Sumlin and Mazzone enough in the spring to be named the starting quarterback over Hubenak.

"Trevor, who has been a very mature guy, came in and really diffused any notion about we're in a so-called quarterback crisis," Mazzone said.

The quarterback drama never seems to end at Texas A&M. The latest social media storm came earlier this week when highly touted recruit Tate Martell from Las Vegas announced he was backing away from a verbal commitment to the Aggies. What followed was a series of tweets from A&M receivers coach Aaron Moorehead about a lack of loyalty and accountability that didn't mention Martell, but still led to an apology the next day from the assistant.

Sumlin still even finds himself answering for his handling of Manziel as the quarterback deals with legal and personal problems as a pro.

The 2016 Aggies will likely be pegged to finish near the bottom of the SEC West, just like they were in 2012 when they went 11-2 and beat Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

"So we just come out with a little chip on our shoulder knowing that most people think we're going to be underdogs against most of the people," said defensive end and potential first overall NFL draft pick Myles Garrett.

Garrett anchors what could be the Aggies' best defense in several years. Sophomore receiver Christian Kirk is one of the nation's most dynamic playmakers, but there are plenty of question marks on offense.

A 36-16 record doesn't bring much job security in the SEC and some Aggies fans are wondering if the school was too quick after the 2013 season to hand Sumlin a six-year contract that pays him $5 million annually.

Sumlin dismisses the idea this is pivotal season for him and the Aggies.

"He who listens to the fans," he said with a smile, "soon sits with them."

Canelo tries to put Triple G talk aside in fight with Khan

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Canelo Alvarez is fighting Amir Khan, though the chatter this week has mostly been about Gennady Golovkin.

But if Alvarez has learned one thing while becoming Mexico's favorite fighter, it's that boxing is one sport where the opponent in front of you can be far more dangerous than any you might face in the future.

"You get used to it with experience," Alvarez said.

A showdown with the fearsome Triple G awaits, though possibly not as soon as Golovkin wants. Alvarez seems content to fight on his own terms, and the indication this week is that he's in no hurry to meet Golovkin, despite a mandate from the WBC to fight him next.

Alvarez doesn't even consider himself a middleweight like Golovkin, though he holds a 160-pound title that will be at stake against Khan. The two will meet Saturday night at the new T-Mobile Arena at a catch weight of 155 pounds in an intriguing matchup of power versus speed.

And while the red-headed Alvarez is a 5-1 favorite, he's not taking anything for granted.

"He has speed and elusiveness, he moves very well," Alvarez said through an interpreter. "But let's not forget about the courage he shows every time he's been down he's gotten up. We respect that."

Khan's chin could come into play against Alvarez, who is more of a pressure fighter than a one-punch knockout artist. He's been stopped twice by smaller fighters, and Alvarez has more power than any of his previous opponents.

But the British fighter who has fought sporadically in recent years while unsuccessfully chasing fights against Floyd Mayweather Jr. and Manny Pacquiao believes he can find a way to win without having to run all night long.

GATHERS

was upset by Yale in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. Because he missed the on-campus workout available to all NFL teams, he met with teams individually.

Hopeful of getting drafted, Gathers said he was "worn out" through the process of waiting before the Cowboys called last Saturday. Now he's wearing No. 80 — not really a basketball number, unless you consider Hall of Famer Dennis Rodman and the football-like numbers he wore late in his career.

And Gathers can relate, since he was one of the Big 12's best rebounders and finished fourth on the school's all-time rebounding list.

Now it's about how those skills can relate. And if Gathers beats the odds and makes the team, he can see himself "boxing out" linebackers for touchdown passes in goal-line situations.

"I think really and truly the red zone is where I'm going to make my money right now," he said. "Everything else is going to take time, dedication, work, a lot of time away from the facilities, whether it's dialing in to the playbook or basically calling coach and asking questions."

Tight end has been the natural spot for college basketball players pursuing pro football.

Antonio Gates, a three-time All-Pro for San Diego, has 10,644 yards receiving and 104 touchdowns after playing only basketball at Kent State and joining the Chargers as an undrafted free agent in 2003.

Jimmy Graham had 46 touchdowns in four seasons with New Orleans after playing four years of basketball followed by one season of football with the Miami Hurricanes. Now with Seattle, Graham was a third-round pick in 2010.

"He was still really raw when you go back and look at his college tape," Pope said of Graham. "You wouldn't say that you can bet this guy is an automatic winning hand. He got better as he got to New Orleans and he got to do these things over and over and over again."

And Gathers is just starting that process.

"He knew how to get into a stance, he knows how to release, some of those things we were doing today, he didn't seem like a fish out of water by any means," coach Jason Garrett said. "But there's so many different technical things that he has to learn that he simply hasn't done, and we understand that he's a project."

A project with a built-in advantage: sharing a locker room with Jason Witten. The 13-year veteran and Tony Gonzalez — another with a basketball background — are the only tight ends in NFL history with at least 1,000 catches and 10,000 yards.

And Witten is always one to share his knowledge.

"Witten's the 13th disciple," Pope said. "He helps everybody."

Maybe Gathers can reciprocate with some of his basketball wisdom.

Leading 6-4, Midland High left Arlington High in the dust after erupting for seven runs in the fifth inning, and four runs in the sixth. Nine different MHS batters collected at least one hit in the win.

Despite the offensive fireworks late in the game, Russell did not like how his team hit early in the game when it was held scoreless in the first two frames.

"It was kind of a mixed bag," Russell said. "We didn't start out very strong, we weren't hitting through the first two rounds of the lineup."

MHS also committed four errors.

"Our defense was not very good," Russell said. "We hadn't made four errors in a long time."

Bulldogs senior Brady Bolger notched the win after allowing three earned runs, seven hits and three walks over six innings, while striking out three.

Bolger also helped himself at the plate with a pair of hits and two RBI.

Ethan Barker scored two runs and stole a base for MHS and teammate Sam Bertelson went 2-for-3 with a triple, two RBI and two runs.

Chaps

Connor Gesell joined Alexander's first inning homer party with a grand slam over the left field wall.

The Chaps added a six-run second for a 15-4 lead as Tony Beam hit his second homer of the day and Rattai drove in two with a single to right.

Rattai went 4-for-4 in the second game to cap off a day in which he was a perfect 9-for-9 at the plate.

"We had a lot of hitters who had a big day but (Rattai) was so consistent for us and gave the middle-of-the-order guys opportunities to drive in runs," Coleman said. "That's what a two-hole hitter needs to do. I thought he was exceptional. He used the middle of the field, went the other way, got a big triple, had a big day."

Added Rattai, a freshman second baseman from Medicine Hat, Alberta: "Just like with all the other guys, we're just all locked in, we're fighting for that championship and we're just trying to step up for that regional tournament."

The game was run-ruled when Gesell led off the fifth with a solo home run to left. Gesell finished the game 3-for-4 with two home runs, five RBI and three runs scored.

Braden Hayward was also 3-for-3 with a double and two runs scored in the victory.

While the Chaps left no doubt in the second game, they had to fight from behind from the get go in the first game as Clarendon (34-19, 22-12) jumped out to a 3-0 lead and had as much as an 11-4 lead in the fourth inning, before MC clawed back.

"When you get yourself behind the eight-ball, it makes it tough," Coleman said. "But I thought our hitters were really good. I thought (reliever) Jason Conway was really good and gave us a chance to win. And when you have a chance to win after being down as much as we were, that's a testament to your club."

Yahir Gurrola tried his best to give the Chaps a chance to win the game by hitting two home runs and driving in five runs. Gesell added three hits in the loss.

The Chaps look to close out the regular season with plenty of momentum when they host the Bulldogs in another doubleheader, beginning at noon today.

Lee

riors (20-11) loaded the bases with two outs.

But Mata fanned Martin's No. 9 hitter Lucas Short to end the threat and preserve the lead. The senior then rolled through his next two innings, striking out five of the eight batters he faced.

Mata said escaping the early trouble helped to settle his playoff nerves a bit. Afterward, he enjoyed the offensive show he and his teammates put on at the plate.

"Coming out of that jam, I just tried to minimize (damage) to get us out of that inning," said Mata, who improved to 9-0 on the year. "I had those two strikeouts to get out of the inning and when your bats heat up, it's always good to pitch behind a good offense."

The Rebels bats caught fire in the bottom half of the frame. The first three Lee batters reached base - thanks to two costly Martin errors - and then Garrett Chalker cashed in with a two-RBI single to left field that gave the Rebels a 3-0 lead.

Patience and confidence was the key for a Lee offense making its post-season debut. The Rebels selectively waited for their pitches and overworked Martin left-handed starter Nick Skeffington, who threw 43 pitches in the second.

"We couldn't have had a better start," said Chalker, who finished 2-for-4, three RBI and a pair of runs scored. "We were confident as always. But once we got the bats going, the confidence just picked up from there."

"Coming out of that jam, I just tried to minimize (damage) to get us out of that inning. I had those two strikeouts to get out of the inning and when your bats heat up, it's always good to pitch behind a good offense."

Evan Mata, Lee pitcher

Two batters later, Hunter Coleman extended the lead to 5-0 with a double to left. After a John Wuthrich walk, Mata aided his own cause with an RBI double down the third base line to make it 6-0.

And in the bottom of the third, Coleman put the game out of reach.

With the bases loaded, he blasted a 3-0 fastball over the left center wall for a grand slam off of Warriors' reliever Maddox Miller. With one swing of the bat, Lee's lead ballooned to 11-0.

"We just kept the offense going," Coleman said. "We hit through the lineup in the first three innings. We were getting (good) at-bats, we stayed hot and didn't have a lull in between at-bats. I think that helped for sure."

Lee fourth-year head coach Brian Roper, who picked up his first playoff victory with the Rebels, said it's a comforting feeling to get the all-important first win of the series out of the way.

He added that he knows it will be extremely tough to close out a team as talented as the Warriors — last season's Class 6A state finalists — on Saturday.

"It's nice to get the first one under the belt with some guys with some nerves," Roper said. "It's nice. But I'm more concerned about (Saturday) being the most important day of the season."

The Rebels sent 28 men to the plate in four innings in Friday's victory. Five of Lee's hits went for extra bases, while all eight of Martin's hits were singles.

Ty Coleman and Adam Becker each went 1-for-2 with a walk and a run for Lee.

fifth to cut it to 7-2.

"I always feel good when he's on the mound," said Mungia about Little "Sometimes he's better in 0-0 or 1-0 game than a 7-0 game. It's easy to lose focus when you have a big lead. He's mortal when he loses focus."

After MCS scored a run in the bottom of the fifth to extend the lead to 8-2, DCS answered with three runs — two of which coming off a Carter Grandberry triple — in the sixth inning to cut it to 8-5.

But the Mustangs got a little more breathing room in the bottom of the sixth with an RBI double by Anderson Needham.

Needham, who was 3-for-4 with two doubles, said he wasn't too worried when the Chargers made a comeback.

"Early in the game we were hitting the ball pretty well and getting guys out," Needham said. "Hitting is the strength of our team. If we keep hitting, we'll be fine."

Texas A&M sheds some swagger and tries to change its trajectory

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION — The five-star quarterbacks are gone, replaced at Texas A&M by a graduate transfer looking for a second chance. The hotshot young coordinator is out. A seasoned veteran assistant is now running Texas A&M's offense.

On the recruiting trail, yet another five-star passer has bailed on the Aggies, and the reaction one A&M assistant had to the news this week only made matters worse for Kevin Sumlin's program.

The Aggies have lost some of the swagger that came when Johnny Football took the Southeastern Conference by storm, Sumlin became a $5 million per year head coach and Texas A&M looked as if it could be a perennial threat to Alabama.

Maybe that's good for a program and coach in need of a trajectory change after three straight seasons of not being able to break .500 in conference. Expectations will be modest for the Aggies in 2016 and that more than anything else might be what's needed in College Station.

"Whatever that perception is, what is it compared to?" Sumlin said. "Because 36 (victories) in four years is the most anybody's won here in 20 years. From a sheer numbers standpoint, the things that you quantify where your program's headed, by the numbers, there's no questions this program's in better shape than when I took over.

"Is it where we want it to be? No. But is it better based on the fact that we're winning right at 70 percent of our games and from 2000 to 2012 it was 50 percent?"

Wins and losses seemed to be the least of Sumlin's problems last December.

In the span of a couple weeks two former elite quarterback recruits — Kyle Allen and Kyler Murray — decided to transfer. Add in Kenny Hill, who left after the 2014 season, and it made three one-time starting quarterbacks to transfer out of A&M in less than a year.

"We're not in the business of trying to run people out of here," Sumlin said.

The Aggies had to play third-string quarterback Jake Hubenak in a loss to Louisville in the Music City Bowl. A few days later, offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach Jake Spavital was fired. Spavital was 27 when Sumlin hired him in 2013.

It seemed as if a tempest was sweeping through Texas A&M football.

On a warm, overcast April day in College Station, between meetings and spring practice, Sumlin said the winter upheaval was not nearly as sudden as it looked from the outside.

High-powered offenses have followed Sumlin as he climbed the career ladder from Oklahoma co-offensive coordinator to Houston head coach to Texas A&M.

In 2012, Sumlin's first season, the Aggies were second in the nation in yards per play with Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel at quarterback. The next season Texas A&M ranked fourth in yards per play.

The season after Manziel left, A&M was 27th in yards per play and last season the Aggies ranked 69th.

Sumlin turned to an old friend to help turn things around, hiring UCLA offensive coordinator Noel Mazzone. The 59-year-old Mazzone and Sumlin worked together at Minnesota in the 1990s. Sumlin also brought offensive line coach Jim Turner back for a second stint at A&M.

Sumlin used the word "experience" eight times when explaining why he chose Mazzone and Turner.

Sumlin wants a more efficient and consistent running game. And he needs Oklahoma transfer Trevor Knight to fill the void at quarterback.

Knight looked like a potential star when he led the Sooners to a Sugar Bowl victory against Alabama in 2014. But he never sustained success, throwing 17 interceptions in 490 career passes.

Knight showed Sumlin and Mazzone enough in the spring to be named the starting quarterback over Hubenak.

"Trevor, who has been a very mature guy, came in and really diffused any notion about we're in a so-called quarterback crisis," Mazzone said.

The quarterback drama never seems to end at Texas A&M. The latest social media storm came earlier this week when highly touted recruit Tate Martell from Las Vegas announced he was backing away from a verbal commitment to the Aggies. What followed was a series of tweets from A&M receivers coach Aaron Moorehead about a lack of loyalty and accountability that didn't mention Martell, but still led to an apology the next day from the assistant.

Sumlin still even finds himself answering for his handling of Manziel as the quarterback deals with legal and personal problems as a pro.

The 2016 Aggies will likely be pegged to finish near the bottom of the SEC West, just like they were in 2012 when they went 11-2 and beat Alabama in Tuscaloosa.

"So we just come out with a little chip on our shoulder knowing that most people think we're going to be underdogs against most of the people," said defensive end and potential first overall NFL draft pick Myles Garrett.

Garrett anchors what could be the Aggies' best defense in several years. Sophomore receiver Christian Kirk is one of the nation's most dynamic playmakers, but there are plenty of question marks on offense.

A 36-16 record doesn't bring much job security in the SEC and some Aggies fans are wondering if the school was too quick after the 2013 season to hand Sumlin a six-year contract that pays him $5 million annually.

Sumlin dismisses the idea this is pivotal season for him and the Aggies.

"He who listens to the fans," he said with a smile, "soon sits with them."

Canelo tries to put Triple G talk aside in fight with Khan

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Canelo Alvarez is fighting Amir Khan, though the chatter this week has mostly been about Gennady Golovkin.

But if Alvarez has learned one thing while becoming Mexico's favorite fighter, it's that boxing is one sport where the opponent in front of you can be far more dangerous than any you might face in the future.

"You get used to it with experience," Alvarez said.

A showdown with the fearsome Triple G awaits, though possibly not as soon as Golovkin wants. Alvarez seems content to fight on his own terms, and the indication this week is that he's in no hurry to meet Golovkin, despite a mandate from the WBC to fight him next.

Alvarez doesn't even consider himself a middleweight like Golovkin, though he holds a 160-pound title that will be at stake against Khan. The two will meet Saturday night at the new T-Mobile Arena at a catch weight of 155 pounds in an intriguing matchup of power versus speed.

And while the red-headed Alvarez is a 5-1 favorite, he's not taking anything for granted.

"He has speed and elusiveness, he moves very well," Alvarez said through an interpreter. "But let's not forget about the courage he shows every time he's been down he's gotten up. We respect that."

Khan's chin could come into play against Alvarez, who is more of a pressure fighter than a one-punch knockout artist. He's been stopped twice by smaller fighters, and Alvarez has more power than any of his previous opponents.

But the British fighter who has fought sporadically in recent years while unsuccessfully chasing fights against Floyd Mayweather Jr. and Manny Pacquiao believes he can find a way to win without having to run all night long.

GATHERS

was upset by Yale in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. Because he missed the on-campus workout available to all NFL teams, he met with teams individually.

Hopeful of getting drafted, Gathers said he was "worn out" through the process of waiting before the Cowboys called last Saturday. Now he's wearing No. 80 — not really a basketball number, unless you consider Hall of Famer Dennis Rodman and the football-like numbers he wore late in his career.

And Gathers can relate, since he was one of the Big 12's best rebounders and finished fourth on the school's all-time rebounding list.

Now it's about how those skills can relate. And if Gathers beats the odds and makes the team, he can see himself "boxing out" linebackers for touchdown passes in goal-line situations.

"I think really and truly the red zone is where I'm going to make my money right now," he said. "Everything else is going to take time, dedication, work, a lot of time away from the facilities, whether it's dialing in to the playbook or basically calling coach and asking questions."

Tight end has been the natural spot for college basketball players pursuing pro football.

Antonio Gates, a three-time All-Pro for San Diego, has 10,644 yards receiving and 104 touchdowns after playing only basketball at Kent State and joining the Chargers as an undrafted free agent in 2003.

Jimmy Graham had 46 touchdowns in four seasons with New Orleans after playing four years of basketball followed by one season of football with the Miami Hurricanes. Now with Seattle, Graham was a third-round pick in 2010.

"He was still really raw when you go back and look at his college tape," Pope said of Graham. "You wouldn't say that you can bet this guy is an automatic winning hand. He got better as he got to New Orleans and he got to do these things over and over and over again."

And Gathers is just starting that process.

"He knew how to get into a stance, he knows how to release, some of those things we were doing today, he didn't seem like a fish out of water by any means," coach Jason Garrett said. "But there's so many different technical things that he has to learn that he simply hasn't done, and we understand that he's a project."

A project with a built-in advantage: sharing a locker room with Jason Witten. The 13-year veteran and Tony Gonzalez — another with a basketball background — are the only tight ends in NFL history with at least 1,000 catches and 10,000 yards.

And Witten is always one to share his knowledge.

"Witten's the 13th disciple," Pope said. "He helps everybody."

Maybe Gathers can reciprocate with some of his basketball wisdom.

In 6 1/3 innings, MHS starting pitcher Deandra Allen was victorious after limiting the Lady Troopers to one run, four hits and three walks, while striking out seven. Allen's lone run allowed was a solo home run given up to Eastwood's Alyssa Martinez.

Ryan retired the final two batters to earn a save.

Abbi Sanchez, Taylor Conner and Allen stole bases for Midland High.

Lee

riors (20-11) loaded the bases with two outs.

But Mata fanned Martin's No. 9 hitter Lucas Short to end the threat and preserve the lead. The senior then rolled through his next two innings, striking out five of the eight batters he faced.

Mata said escaping the early trouble helped to settle his playoff nerves a bit. Afterward, he enjoyed the offensive show he and his teammates put on at the plate.

"Coming out of that jam, I just tried to minimize (damage) to get us out of that inning," said Mata, who improved to 9-0 on the year. "I had those two strikeouts to get out of the inning and when your bats heat up, it's always good to pitch behind a good offense."

The Rebels bats caught fire in the bottom half of the frame. The first three Lee batters reached base - thanks to two costly Martin errors - and then Garrett Chalker cashed in with a two-RBI single to left field that gave the Rebels a 3-0 lead.

Patience and confidence was the key for a Lee offense making its post-season debut. The Rebels selectively waited for their pitches and overworked Martin left-handed starter Nick Skeffington, who threw 43 pitches in the second.

"We couldn't have had a better start," said Chalker, who finished 2-for-4, three RBI and a pair of runs scored. "We were confident as always. But once we got the bats going, the confidence just picked up from there."

"Coming out of that jam, I just tried to minimize (damage) to get us out of that inning. I had those two strikeouts to get out of the inning and when your bats heat up, it's always good to pitch behind a good offense."

Evan Mata, Lee pitcher

Two batters later, Hunter Coleman extended the lead to 5-0 with a double to left. After a John Wuthrich walk, Mata added his own cause with an RBI double down the third base line to make it 6-0.

And in the bottom of the third, Coleman put the game out of reach.

With the bases loaded, he blasted a 3-0 fastball over the left center wall for a grand slam off of Warriors' reliever Maddox Miller. With one swing of the bat, Lee's lead ballooned to 11-0.

"We just kept the offense going," Coleman said. "We hit through the lineup in the first three innings. We were getting (good) at-bats, we stayed hot and didn't have a lull in between at-bats. I think that helped for sure."

Lee fourth-year head coach Brian Roper, who picked up his first playoff victory with the Rebels, said it's a comforting feeling to get the all-important first win of the series out of the way.

He added that he knows it will be extremely tough to close out a team as talented as the Warriors — last season's Class 6A state finalists — on Saturday.

"It's nice to get the first one under the belt with some guys with some nerves," Roper said. "It's nice. But I'm more concerned about (Saturday) being the most important day of the season."

The Rebels sent 28 men to the plate in four innings in Friday's victory. Five of Lee's hits went for extra bases, while all eight of Martin's hits were singles.

Ty Coleman and Adam Becker each went 1-for-2 with a walk and a run for Lee.

Leading 6-4, Midland High left Arlington High in the dust after erupting for seven runs in the fifth inning, and four runs in the sixth. Nine different MHS batters collected at least one hit in the win.

Despite the offensive fireworks late in the game, Russell did not like how his team hit early in the game when it was held scoreless in the first two frames.

"It was kind of a mixed bag," Russell said. "We didn't start out very strong, we weren't hitting through the first two rounds of the lineup."

MHS also committed four errors.

"Our defense was not very good," Russell said. "We hadn't made four errors in a long time."

Bulldogs senior Brady Bolger notched the win after allowing three earned runs, seven hits and three walks over six innings, while striking out three.

Bolger also helped himself at the plate with a pair of hits and two RBI.

Ethan Barker scored two runs and stole a base for MHS and teammate Sam Bertelson went 2-for-3 with a triple, two RBI and two runs.

Midland College's Nolan Rattai (18) slides into home to score against Clarendon College's Reibi Alberto (26) on Friday at Christensen Stadium.

Chaps

Connor Gesell joined Alexander's first inning homer party with a grand slam over the left field wall.

The Chaps added a six-run second for a 15-4 lead as Tony Beam hit his second homer of the day and Rattai drove in two with a single to right.

Rattai went 4-for-4 in the second game to cap off a day in which he was a perfect 9-for-9 at the plate.

"We had a lot of hitters who had a big day but (Rattai) was so consistent for us and gave the middle-of-the-order guys opportunities to drive in runs," Coleman said. "That's what a two-hole hitter needs to do. I thought he was exceptional. He used the middle of the field, went the other way, got a big triple, had a big day."

Added Rattai, a freshman second baseman from Medicine Hat, Alberta: "Just like with all the other guys, we're just all locked in, we're fighting for that championship and we're just trying to step up for that regional tournament."

The game was run-ruled when Gesell led off the fifth with a solo home run to left. Gesell finished the game 3-for-4 with two home runs, five RBI and three runs scored.

Braden Hayward was also 3-for-3 with a double and two runs scored in the victory.

While the Chaps left no doubt in the second game, they had to fight from behind from the get go in the first game as Clarendon (34-19, 22-12) jumped out to a 3-0 lead and had as much as an 11-4 lead in the fourth inning, before MC clawed back.

"When you get yourself behind the eight-ball, it makes it tough," Coleman said. "But I thought our hitters were really good. I thought (reliever) Jason Conway was really good and gave us a chance to win. And when you have a chance to win after being down as much as we were, that's a testament to your club."

Yahir Gurrola tried his best to give the Chaps a chance to win the game by hitting two home runs and driving in five runs. Gesell added three hits in the loss.

The Chaps look to close out the regular season with plenty of momentum when they host the Bulldogs in another doubleheader, beginning at noon today.

fifth to cut it to 7-2.

"I always feel good when he's on the mound," said Mungia about Little. "Sometimes he's better in 0-0 or 1-0 game than a 7-0 game. It's easy to lose focus when you have a big lead. He's mortal when he loses focus."

After MCS scored a run in the bottom of the fifth to extend the lead to 8-2, DCS answered with three runs — two of which coming off a Carter Grandberry triple — in the sixth inning to cut it to 8-5.

But the Mustangs got a little more breathing room in the bottom of the sixth with an RBI double by Anderson Needham.

Needham, who was 3-for-4 with two doubles, said he wasn't too worried when the Chargers made a comeback.

"Early in the game we were hitting the ball pretty well and getting guys out," Needham said. "Hitting is the strength of our team. If we keep hitting, we'll be fine."

RANGERS 5 TIGERS 1

DETROIT — Cole Hamels held Detroit to one hit in seven scoreless innings, and Texas became the first team this season to beat Jordan Zimmermann.

Hamels (4-0) allowed a bloop single to right by Ian Kinsler — the first batter he faced — and that was Detroit's only hit until Kinsler doubled to lead off the bottom of the ninth. The Tigers managed a couple walks off Hamels, but he struck out nine and won his 11th straight decision. He hasn't lost since Aug. 7.

Zimmermann (5-1) allowed two runs in the second — after giving up only two earned runs all season prior to that. He also allowed a solo homer to Rougned Odor in the fifth, and by the end of the night, his ERA had doubled from 0.55 to 1.10.

ASTROS 6 MARINERS 3

HOUSTON — For Seattle manager Scott Servais it's easy to see why Robinson Cano is so successful with runners in scoring position.

"He uses the whole field," Servais said. "He's not trying to hit homers. He's not trying to kill the ball. He's just using his hands."

He did that again on Thursday night, driving in four runs including a tiebreaking three-run double in the ninth inning to lift the Mariners to their fourth straight win, 6-3 over the Houston Astros.

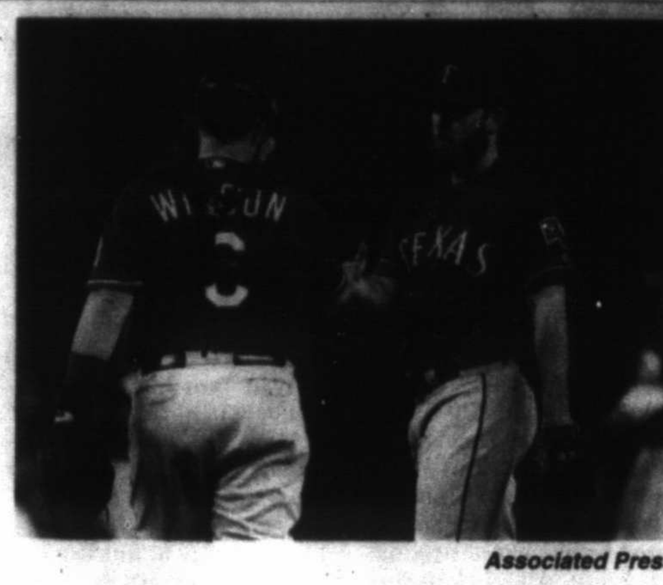

The bases were loaded with one out in the ninth when Cano cleared them with his double off Luke Gregerson (0-1) that sailed just out of reach of center fielder Carlos Gomez.

"I've been looking for my pitch," Cano said. "I'm not trying to do too much. Even if you can get one run at a time, sometimes as a hitter if you're trying to get two or three, that's when (bad) things happen. I'm just trying to work the middle of the field."

INDIANS 7 ROYALS 1

CLEVELAND — Jose Ramirez got three hits and drove in a career-high five runs to help Cleveland beat reeling Kansas City for its their fourth straight victory.

The World Series champion Royals have lost eight of 10.

Associated Press

Texas Rangers catcher Bobby Wilson (6) and relief pitcher Sam Dyson celebrate their 5-1 win against the Detroit Tigers in a game Friday in Detroit.

Ramirez delivered a bases-loaded double in the third and a two-run double in the fifth. He singled in the second, walked in the eighth and raised his batting average to .324.

Danny Salazar (3-2) held the Royals to four hits and struck out nine in 7 2/3 innings.

Yordano Ventura (2-2) allowed five runs and threw 97 pitches in four innings. The right-hander walked five, increasing his AL-leading total to 25.

YANKEES 3 RED SOX 2

NEW YORK — David Ortiz went wild and got ejected after being called out on strikes with the bases loaded in the ninth inning, then Yankees closer Andrew Miller fanned Hanley Ramirez to preserve New York's 3-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Friday night.

Aaron Hicks hit a tiebreaking home run off Rick Porcello (5-1) leading off the seventh inning.

The game turned tense and testy in the ninth. The Red Sox loaded the bases with three singles off Miller, bringing up Ortiz, who had homered earlier.

Ortiz took a 3-1 breaking ball that catcher Brian McCann awkwardly gloved, and plate umpire Ron Kulpa called it a strike. Big Papi argued and manager John Farrell quickly came from the dugout to protect his slugger and got tossed.

Ortiz then took a called third strike, went to the dugout and slammed down his equipment. He got ejected, too, and stormed back to the plate as teammates rushed to restrain him.

Miller fanned Ramirez to finish off a four-out save, his sixth save this season.

Kirby Yates (1-0) wound up with the win.

National League

REDS 5 BREWERS 1

CINCINNATI — Brandon Phillips homered for the third straight game and Cincinnati's bullpen finally ended its historic streak of giving up runs, closing out a victory over Milwaukee.

Cincinnati's relievers had allowed at least one run in a major league-record 23 consecutive games. They put together four scoreless innings to end a streak that started on April 11.

The Reds have won three in a row for the first time since sweeping the season-opening series against Philadelphia.

Tim Adleman (1-0) got his first major league victory in his second career start, holding the Brewers to Alex Presley's solo homer in five innings.

CUBS 8 NATIONALS 6

CHICAGO — Ben Zobrist homered twice, Anthony Rizzo added a towering solo shot and Chicago beat Washington for its fifth straight victory.

Zobrist has homered in three straight games. He drove in four runs for the second consecutive day against the Nationals.

Tommy La Stella also homered to help the Cubs win for the ninth time in 10 games, and improve to 22-6, the best record in the majors.

John Lackey (4-1) struck out 11, one shy of his career high, in seven innings. Hector Rondon pitched a scoreless ninth for his fifth save in as many chances.

Max Scherzer (3-2) was tagged for seven runs and seven hits in five innings. Anthony Rendon and Wilson Ramos homered for Washington.

MARLINS 6 PHILLIES 4

MIAMI — Giancarlo Stanton hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the eighth inning and Miami beat Philadelphia for its 11th victory in 12 games.

Stanton's 10th home run of the season was a deep shot to left-center field off Hector Neris (0-1).

Kyle Barraclough (2-0) earned the win by pitching a scoreless inning in relief and David Phelps came on for the ninth for his second save.

The Marlins won seven in a row before losing 14-5 at Milwaukee on May 1 and have won the first four games of their nine-game homestand to improve to 16-12.

Maikel Franco homered and drove in two runs, and Peter Bourjos drove in a pair for Philadelphia.

Miami's Christian Yelich opened the scoring with a two-run upper-deck homer to right-center field in the first inning.

Interleague

BLUE JAYS 5 DODGERS 2

TORONTO — Kevin Pillar hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the eighth inning, Jose Bautista also connected and Toronto beat Los Angeles.

Gavin Floyd (1-2) worked one inning for the win and Drew Storen survived a shaky ninth to earn his second save as the Blue Jays recorded their season-best fourth straight win.

Edwin Encarnacion doubled off Joe Blanton (2-2) with one out in the eighth and was replaced by pinch-runner Ezequiel Carrera. The Dodgers intentionally walked Justin Smoak to face Pillar, who lined a 1-2 pitch into the bullpen in left.

Tim Lincecum sharp in showcase for big league scouts

Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Tim Lincecum strode to the mound inside a nearly empty Scottsdale Stadium, the only sounds coming from the birds and the cars on the streets outside.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner picked up a ball, started his motion and let it fly as radar guns rose behind the plate. A series of camera clicks followed, then a pop of the glove.

The radar guns went down, pencils furiously scribbled and Lincecum started all over again.

"It's different, a lot like high school, trying to show your stuff off again," Lincecum said.

A free agent on the mend from hip surgery, Lincecum threw 41 pitches Friday for about three dozen scouts representing nearly every major league club at the spring training home of the only team he's ever played for, the San Francisco Giants.

The 31-year-old right-hander mixed up his pitches and hit most of his spots during his showcase, consistently reaching 88 mph to 91 mph on the scouts' radar guns. He felt good after and now hopes to catch on with a big league team soon.

One of baseball's best pitchers in his prime, Lincecum won the NL Cy Young Award in 2008 and 2009 and made four All-Star Game appearances. He helped the Giants win three World Series titles in five years and had a pair of no-hitters against San Diego in an 11-month span between the 2013 and 2014 seasons.

Lincecum earned his nickname "The Freak" by defying the stereotype of what a big-league pitcher is supposed to be, generating massive amounts of torque with his 5-foot-11, 170-pound frame.

Needing a long stride to generate the leverage, Lincecum started having trouble with his hips due to the pounding, seeing his velocity dip and his ERA rise as he was forced to throw mostly with his arm.

The right-hander went 7-4 with a 4.13 ERA in 15 starts last season and did not pitch after June 27 due to degenerative issues with his hips.

Frye leads another 3-point barrage, Cavs beat Hawks

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Channing Frye scored a career playoff-high 27 points and the Cleveland Cavaliers kept up their 3-point barrage Friday night, pulling away in the closing minutes for a 121-108 victory over the Atlanta Hawks and a commanding 3-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Two nights after setting an NBA record with 25 baskets beyond the arc, the Cavaliers were nearly as good in a 21-of-39 performance from long range that moved them within one victory of their second playoff sweep over the Hawks in two years.

Atlanta turned in a much more respectable showing after getting blown out in Game 2. But in the end, it was the same result for a team that has lost 10 straight to the Cavaliers going back to last year's conference final.

The Hawks led by as many as 11 but were dominated in the closing minutes.

Game 4 is Sunday in Atlanta.

Garrison's OT goal lifts Lightning to win over Islanders

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jason Garrison scored 1:34 into overtime to give the Tampa Bay Lightning a 2-1 victory over the New York Islanders on Friday night and a 3-1 series lead.

Garrison took a pass from Andrej Sustr and fired a slap shot from the right faceoff circle past goalie Thomas Greiss to give the Lightning their second straight overtime win and move them one win away from reaching the conference finals for the second straight year.

Nikita Kucherov scored his NHL-leading eighth of the playoffs for Tampa Bay, and Ben Bishop made 27 saves.

Kucherov, who tied the score with 38.4 seconds left in regulation in Game 3 on Tuesday night, evened this one at 7:49 of the third.

Kyle Okposo scored early in the first period for the Islanders.

Game 5 of this best-of-seven series is Sunday in Tampa, Florida.

There was a delay at the start of the third period to repair boards damaged by the Zamboni during the second intermission. When play resumed, 31 minutes had elapsed since the end of the second period.

Loupe leads Wells Fargo; Mickelson, Fowler in hunt

By Steve Reed
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Phil Mickelson said this week it is "imminent" that he'll win the Wells Fargo Championship sooner or later.

The 46-year-old is in contention once again at one of his favorite tournaments, although he will need to outplay former champions Rory McIlroy and Rickie Fowler to make good on that prediction this week.

Andrew Loupe topped the leaderboard Friday at 8 under after a 71, an up-and-down round with four birdies and three bogeys. Roberto Castro was a stroke back after a 66, the best round of the day. He eagled No. 18, one of the toughest closing holes on the PGA Tour.

Chesson Hadley and Mark Hubbard were two shots back. Hadley had a 67, and Hubbard shot 68.

But big names were looming.

Fowler shot a 68, and Mickelson had a 70 to reach 5 under. McIlroy, the defending champion and only two-time winner of the event, bogeyed the final two holes for a 69 to drop six strokes back.

Associated Press

Andrew Loupe hits from a sand trap on the 14th hole during the second round of the Wells Fargo Championship golf tournament at Quail Hollow Club in Charlotte, N.C., on Friday.

Mickelson has tied for fifth or better six times in 12 starts at Quail Hollow, but has never won.

While Mickelson said it's "still a little early" to start thinking about winning. He was striking the ball well the past week in practice, but can't put his finger on why he's missing so many fairways with his driver.

"My touch around the greens, my short game is as good as it's been in a long time and I think it will save me if I happen to not strike it well," Mickelson said. "If I do strike it well, I think there's a really low round in there."

He's winless since the 2013 British Open.

Fowler had five birdies and one bogey before saving par with a 13-foot putt on 18.

Playing partner McIlroy's round didn't end as well.

McIlroy got rolling when he chipped in for eagle from just off the green on the par-5 seventh hole. He followed that with three birdies in the next four holes to get to 4 under for the tournament and looked as if he was going to start a big run. But three bogeys on the back nine stunted his momentum.

"Rory and I definitely enjoy the times we get to play together," Fowler said. "It was fun to kind of get each other going a bit and kind of feed off each other. It would have been nice to get a few more for the both of us."

Judge's order reopens questions about what Paterno knew when

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A new legal document that claims a boy told Joe Paterno in 1976 that Jerry Sandusky had molested him has dropped like a bombshell and reignited debate about what the Penn State coach knew about his longtime assistant decades before his arrest.

Details of the testimony remain hidden inside a sealed deposition in Penn State's court fight with the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association Insurance Company.

Paterno family members immediately dismissed the accusation, and even an attorney for victims of Sandusky cautioned that he did not know of irrefutable evidence supporting the claim.

Paterno, who died in 2012, had said that an assistant's report in 2001 of Sandusky attacking a boy in the shower was the first he knew of such allegations against Sandusky.

Details of the 1976 accusation were not included in the court document — a judge's ruling in Penn State's dispute with its insurer — and a lawyer for the company declined to comment.

Sandusky is serving a lengthy prison sentence for his conviction in the sexual abuse of 10 children. The university has also paid out more than $90 million to settle 32 civil claims involving Sandusky. How far back in time all the acts occurred has not been made public.

Penn State's insurer claims there is evidence of several early acts of molestation by Sandusky, and not just the one by a boy who allegedly went to Paterno with his report in the 1970s, according to the ruling by Philadelphia Judge Gary Glazer.

The judge wrote in a footnote that the events are described "in a number of the victims' depositions."

The insurer's evidence includes a claim that one assistant coach saw "inappropriate contact" between Sandusky and a child at the university in 1987 and a second assistant "reportedly witnessed sexual contact" between Sandusky and a child a year later, the judge said. Also in 1988, the insurer claims a child's report of his molestation by Sandusky was referred to Penn State's athletic director.

The judge wrote there was no evidence that reports of the incidents went "further up the chain of command at PSU."

In his ruling, the judge found that Penn State had to assume the costs of settlements stemming from claims over most of the 1990s because its insurance policies did not cover abuse or molestation.

When Sandusky abused children at his home or at events held by the children's charity he started, "he was still a PSU assistant coach and professor, and clothed in the glory associated with those titles, particularly in the eyes of impressionable children," Glazer wrote.

Michael Boni, a lawyer who represented some of the people with legal claims of abuse involving Sandusky, urged caution in weighing the new Paterno allegation.

"The headlines of these stories is Paterno knew of Sandusky's molestation in the '70s, '76 or '77. I'm unaware of direct, irrefutable evidence that that's the case," Boni said. "Believe me, I'm the last person to defend the guy, but I am the first person to believe in our justice system. And I think you need more than anecdotal evidence or speculative evidence."

The coach's son Scott Paterno called the new claim "bunk," tweeting Friday that "it would be great if everyone waited to see the substance of the allegation before they assume it's true. Because it's not."

The family issued a written statement asking for a full public review of the facts and saying that "fighting shadows and rumors on issues that are this significant is a disservice to everyone who cares about the truth."

John Daly shoots 2-under 70 in PGA Tour Champions debut

Associated Press

THE WOODLANDS — John Daly shot a 2-under 70 on Friday in his PGA Tour Champions debut, leaving him four strokes behind leader Mike Goodes in the Insperity Invitational.

Daly had four birdies and two bogeys at The Woodlands Country Club, playing alongside friend Fuzzy Zoeller and Peter Jacobsen. The two-time major champion turned 50 on April 28.

"It was like starting all over," Daly said. "The nerves were good, but it's cool coming out here and having positive nerves, and I just fed off Fuzzy and Jake. You know, I couldn't have asked to play with two better people. For my first round on the Champions Tour, we just had a blast."

Daly was in a nine-man tie for 12th. He hit 13 of 14 fairways, 16 of 18 greens in regulation and topped the field with a driving average of 317.5 yards on the two measuring holes.

"I was surprised how good I hit the ball," Daly said. "I mean, I hit a lot of fairways, and that 1-iron was a blessing today for me. Even when I didn't hit it good, it was going in the fairway, and I gave myself a lot of chances, a lot of chances to hit greens and a lot of opportunities."

Daly parred the first six holes, bogeyed the par-4 seventh and rebounded with birdies on the par-3 eighth and par-4 ninth. He added birdies on the par-4 11th and par-5 13th, had a bogey on the par-3 14th and closed with four pars.

"I just couldn't get the putter to make anything," Daly said. "But I rolled it good, and for me that's what mattered today, is just hitting the ball solid and getting it around, and I didn't shoot myself out of the tournament."

The 59-year-old Goodes bogeyed the par-4 18th for a 66. He made four straight birdies on Nos. 13-16.

Canada's Stephen Ames had a 67, and area resident Jeff Maggert and Duffy Waldorf shot 68.

"Struggling a little bit with my golf swing right now, but I've put a lot of work on my putting the last couple weeks when I haven't been playing," Ames said. "I haven't put a lot of work into my golf swing so it's showing now for me. Made some nice putts and a lot of birdies."

Defending champion Ian Woosnam opened with a 73.

Djokovic criticizes Tomic for giving up on match point

Associated Press

MADRID — Novak Djokovic has criticized Bernard Tomic for giving up on match point in a loss at the Madrid Open this week, saying the young Australian player is lacking commitment to the sport.

Tomic turned his racket around when facing three match points against Fabio Fognini in a first-round match on Tuesday. With the handle facing forward, he only watched as the ball bounced for an ace.

Tomic later reportedly told an Australian newspaper he didn't care because at 23 he was already worth $10 million.

The top-ranked Djokovic said he hopes Tomic, who lost 6-2, 6-4, realizes that what he did at match point was not right.

"The sooner the better for him, because he is still relatively young and he can definitely be a better player and better ranked than he is now," Djokovic said after reaching the quarterfinals in Madrid. "Everybody knows that. He knows that. But he doesn't seem to really get things the right way off the court."

Djokovic said he has known the 22nd-ranked Tomic for "quite a long time," and hopes "for his sake that he's going to do better."

"Over the last couple of years I got to know him better and he's a good guy, he's a good person. But he's just failing to be committed to this sport as it is required."

According to the Australian newspaper Gold Coast Bulletin, Tomic said: "I don't care about that match point — would you care if you were 23 and worth over $10 million?"

Djokovic said he didn't hear Tomic's remarks but said it would not be a wise thing to say.

"Just many things that he says are not well thought from his side. He gets emotional very quickly and things get out of context. Unfortunately it fires back right at him," Djokovic said. "He's starting to feel too much probably pressure outside as well, that he has to deliver."

Tomic, who earlier this year reached his highest ranking at 17th, was a finalist in Acapulco in February, losing to Dominic Thiem in three sets. Since then, he's failed to advance past the third round in four straight tournaments.

"It's a learning curve for him and for any young player. I've felt it on my own skin many times where I've done things that were not right at that time, and said some things that I was regretting," Djokovic said. "After that, you learn. You get wiser. You mature through those times. Nobody is perfect. We are all part of this life where it's just a big lesson and school for all of us."

Unpredictable Talladega gives way to predictable Kansas

By Dave Skretta
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — The controversy that surrounded the crash-filled race at Talladega last weekend made its way to Kansas Speedway, where what exactly should be done about restrictor-plate racing remained the topic du jour.

Perhaps that's because Kansas tends to be a bit more predictable.

Sure, the 1 1/2-mile oval has been repaved in recent years. The newer low-downforce package will be making its debut there this weekend. Tire construction and compound always plays a role on Saturday night.

But it's still Kansas, and that means Jimmie Johnson and Kevin Harvick will be fast, Joey Logano and Matt Kenseth will be in contention, and Kyle Busch will probably have a car good enough to win before some sort of bad luck reaches up and grabs the No. 18 over the course of 400 miles.

Also predictable? Carl Edwards would give just about anything to reach victory lane.

The native of Columbia, Missouri, considers Kansas Speedway his home track, yet Edwards has never won here in a Sprint Cup race. His best result was second in 2008, despite finishing every race he's started, and he's led laps on 11 occasions with six top-five results.

"This would be as big as the Daytona 500 or the Brickyard 400 for me, and we have a team to do it," said Edwards, who has already won this season at Bristol and Richmond. "I feel like I have a lot of support here."

He vividly remembers the Truck Series race in 2004, when he held off Bobby Hamilton to win.

"That truck win here was so spectacular," Edwards said, breaking into a wide grin. "That's the only time I've ever heard the crowd roaring before I shut off the engine."

Those happy memories turn far more somber when Edwards reflects on last weekend's wild race at Talladega, where a series of accidents involved 35 cars in some fashion. Several caught air, Chris Buescher was sent cartwheeling down a straightaway and Danica Patrick had one of the hardest hits of her career.

While some drivers, including race winner Brad Keselowski, have chosen to embrace the unpredictable carnage that comes with superspeedways, other drivers have questioned the safety of such spectacles.

AJ Allmendinger was involved in one of the pileups and felt sore for days afterward, even though he still managed to finish 14th and picked up some ground in the points standings.

"You know the risks when you get into a race car," Allmendinger said. "We saw a lot of big hits last week and fortunately all the drivers were out and OK. It's not a lot of fun when you have to go through it."

The cookie-cutter nature of Kansas Speedway gives drivers a bit of a reprieve this weekend.

The repave that made it harder to pass a few years ago has been given time to weather, and that's created a racing surface with multiple grooves. And the new rules package designed to encourage passing has been used to great success elsewhere, giving teams an idea of what to expect this weekend.

"The rules package to me has been a home run," Jamie McMurray said. "The difference on the track, when you get behind guys you still struggle, but it's nothing like last year. You're able to work someone over."

Triple Crown winner thriving at Ashford Stud

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

VERSAILLES, Ky. — American Pharoah is led out of his stone palace of a barn, head up, eyes alert, a little heavier these days but still pretty well sculpted. In a few minutes, the champion will be walked over to the breeding shed, a mere 50 yards away. By now, the Triple Crown winner has the routine down pat.

No more early morning workouts under the watchful eyes of trainer Bob Baffert. No Victor Espinoza asking the big bay for every ounce of energy over 11 grueling races in 17 months. No more huge media crowds around him, or cameras clicking away at his every move. No more parades at Churchill Downs or Santa Anita Park.

Welcome to paradise, also known as Coolmore Ashford Stud, a magnificent 2,000 acre empire in the heart of Bluegrass country. This is home to racing's first Triple Crown winner in 37 years, a luxurious resort for the first horse to win the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes since Affirmed in 1978, and just the 12th in history.

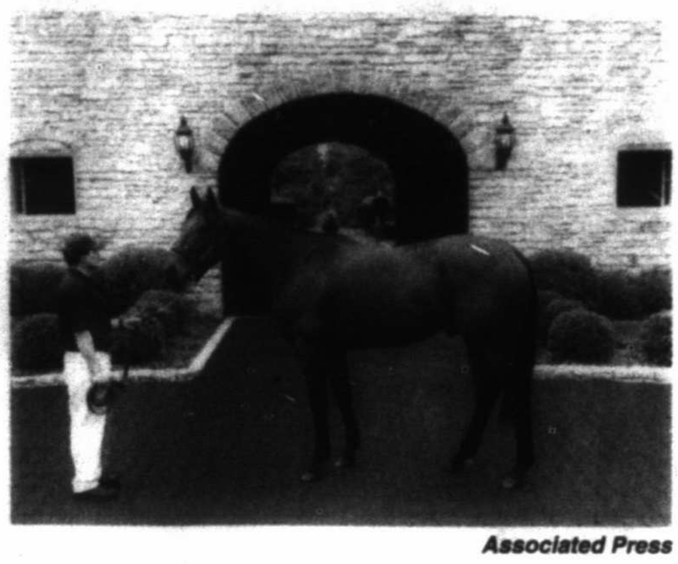

The latest edition of the Derby is Saturday, about 70 miles away at Churchill Downs. Nyquist is the early 3-1 favorite in a full field of 20, carrying an unbeaten record into the race in which the winner becomes the only horse with a chance to duplicate Pharoah's feat.

Nyquist trainer Doug O'Neill is well aware that more fans are paying attention.

"They now have heard a lot about horse racing in the last year, year and a half and that's a credit to Pharoah," he said, "and hopefully Nyquist can carry the torch farther."

At Ashford, mares are carrying the torch for American Pharoah. Two days after winning the Breeders' Cup Classic in his final race at nearby Keeneland on Nov. 1, he arrived at his new home to much fanfare. When the breeding season started in mid-February, Pharoah was ready, willing and able. Since then, he's covered about 100 mares, and could double that amount by the end of the season in June. He commands a stud fee of $200,000.

Nyquist not the buzziest of favorites for Kentucky Derby

By Beth Harris
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Go ahead and pity Kentucky Derby favorite Nyquist. He has the unenviable task of following in the hoof prints of Triple Crown champion American Pharoah, and so far isn't getting the respect expected for the only undefeated horse in the race.

Nyquist heads into the Run for the Roses on Saturday at Churchill Downs as the early 3-1 favorite in a full field of 20 horses. Deservedly so, based on a resume that includes being a champion at age two, victories at four different tracks in the East and West, and an ability to overcome all sorts of obstacles in his races.

Still, Nyquist isn't the buzziest of horses. Heck, even his owner J. Paul Reddam said that as a fan he'd bet against his horse. Handicappers and racing fans haven't been talking up the bay colt nam s for Detroit Red Wings player Gustav Nyquist (Reddam is a fan) either.

Nyquist has won his seven races, including four prestigious Grade 1s, by a combined 15 lengths — an average of just over two lengths. He rarely does more than he needs to and nothing dazzling. He tends to drift out in the stretch, which could indicate the distance he's run is about as far as he wants to go. He doesn't even have any markings — no blaze on his head, no white stockings on his feet.

His sire, Uncle Mo, was a juvenile champion and the 2011 Derby favorite scratched the day before the race with an illness. Nyquist is one of his three offspring in the race, but nobody knows if Uncle Mo's first crop of foals can run the classic distance of 1 1/4 miles because there is no proven pedigree.

Yet Nyquist has a supporter in Bob Baffert, the Hall of Fame trainer who guided American Pharoah.

"He does it workmanlike, but he does it fast. When you're fast and you stay out of trouble in a 20-horse field, that's a big edge," Baffert said. "He's got the heart, and a horse with heart will go further than they're supposed to go."

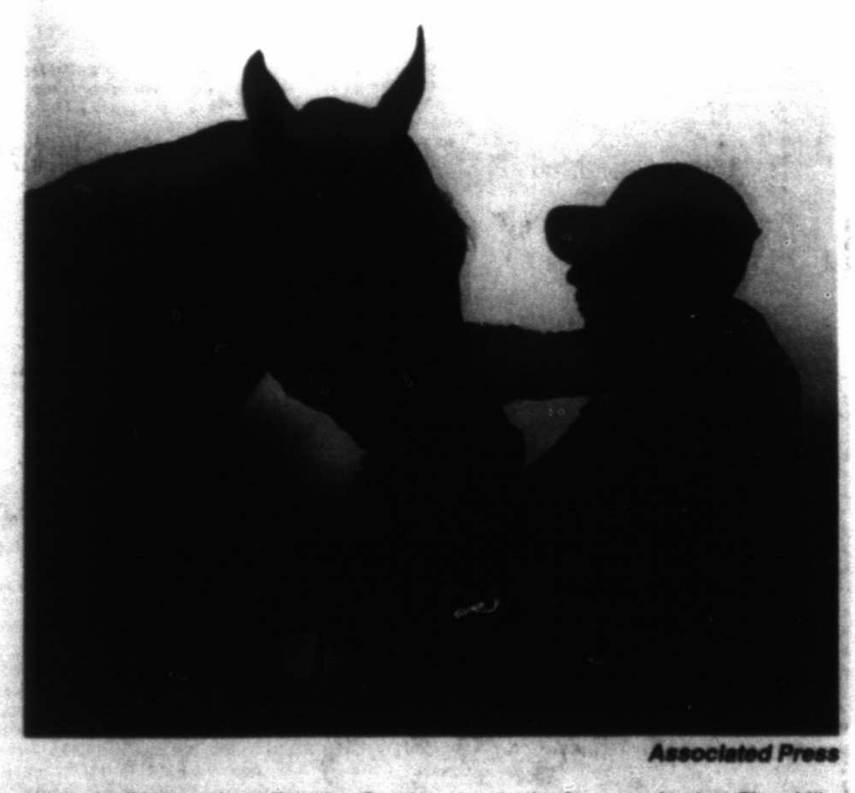

In a year of can-you-top-a-Triple-Crown winner, Nyquist has already done so financially. He's earned a record $3,322,600, including a $1 million bonus for winning the Florida Derby in his last race.

None of the doubt deters Doug O'Neill, who trains Nyquist.

"I'm optimistic we're going to win," he said. "He's definitely shown us that he's going to run a big race."

O'Neill reached the Derby winner's circle in 2012 with I'll Have Another, who went on to win the Preakness Stakes. The colt was scratched the day

PHAROAH

From 1C

One thing hasn't changed.

"He's still as sweet and cuddly as he's always been," owner Ahmed Zayat said after a recent visit with American Pharoah. "He has taken to his new role like he did to the racetrack."

Here's a look at what's up with American Pharoah:

BABY BOOM

Breeding sessions are scheduled in the morning, afternoon and evening. There are 14 stallions at Ashford — 13 active, plus Thunder Gulch — and American Pharoah has shown he's a quick learner.

"He's a pro in the breeding shed," stallion manager Richard Barry said. "Everything has gone smoothly."

His first date was Untouched Talent, a broodmare who produced Bodemeister, a Zayat-owned horse who finished second in the 2012 Derby. She is expected to deliver Pharoah's first foal sometime in January.

Zayat has seen the breeding process.

"He's a champ, so nice. The girls love him," Zayat said. "He's as fertile as you can get at this point. Up to now, we've bred nine and they are all in foal, all pregnant. He's enjoying life. His condition is unreal and his coat shines."

If American Pharoah covers 175 mares in his first season — at $200,000 each — he would bring in $35 million for Coolmore, which bought breeding rights from Zayat last year. In his racing career, Pharoah earned $8.6 million.

DAILY ROUTINE

When he first arrived at Ashford, American Pharoah was given a camp buddy, 1995 Derby winner Thunder Gulch. The thinking was an older, more experienced stallion would show the new kid the ropes of retirement. A little over five months later, "he's just one of the boys now," said Barry, "and has settled in to the same routine as all the other stallions.

"Thunder Gulch was an important part of that process and helped American Pharoah to settle but now that he has got the hang of everything Thunder Gulch's work is done," he added.

Currently, American Pharoah shares the same barn as Munnings, Giant's Causeway, Competitive Edge and Verrazano. It's the closest barn to the breeding shed.

As for his daily routine, it's not complicated. Breeding in the morning, out in the paddock afterward, then lunch. Back to the breeding shed, to the paddock, dinner, and then they are bedded down for the night. However, if a horse is "particularly busy," Barry said, there's an evening breeding session.

"Horses are creatures of habit and like a routine," Barry explained.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW

Zayat has been back and forth to Churchill Downs in the past week, but won't be at the Derby. He says he'll be home in New Jersey with his family. He was in Louisville to celebrate the opening of the American Pharoah exhibit at the Kentucky Derby Museum.

Baffert is in the thick of the Derby again with Mor Spirit. The four-time Derby winner is far from the center of attention, but he's been signing autographs all week on the backstretch. He and his wife, Jill, and their son Bode visited Pharoah this week, and also showed up at the Derby museum.

"It's always great to go there and get your Derby fix," he said. "This horse has such a following. There's a lot of things people are going to see that they didn't even know about."

Mor Spirit ran second in the Santa Anita Derby, and is 12-1 on the morning line.

Espinoza, meanwhile, picked up the ride aboard Whitmore for the Derby. He had not ridden in many Derby prep races, but was a last-minute replacement for Irad Ortiz, Jr., who will be riding My Man Sam. He, too, visited American Pharoah this week.

DERBY

From 1C

before the Belmont Stakes because of a career-ending tendon injury, dashing the sport's hope of a Triple Crown winner.

"It took a few minutes of being depressed and feeling sorry for yourself, but it quickly jumped into how amazing it was to win the Derby and the Preakness," he recalled.

O'Neill was dogged by controversy throughout the Triple Crown series that year for past medication violations. He served a suspension after the Belmont as punishment for one of his other horses testing positive for a higher than allowed limit of a drug. In 2014, O'Neill was forced to sit out the Breeders' Cup world championships under that event's "convicted trainer rule."

He is eager to put the past at rest when asked about his rough ride four years ago, saying, "I'm not going to go there."

O'Neill credits Nyquist for creating a positive vibe around the Southern California-based trainer's barn.

"Having a horse like Nyquist has given us an opportunity to really show everyone how we're here to serve the horses and see the love and care given to the horses," he said. "He's been a gift in many ways."

Besides O'Neill and Reddam, jockey Mario Gutierrez is along for the ride again, all having learned valuable lessons four years ago.

"We found out that time that we had success doing what we'd been doing all along," O'Neill said. "It worked, so we're just doing that again — same patterns, same style. We just want to stay on course. That's what's going to work. We know that now."

Baffert is back to saddle 12-1 shot Mor Spirit in pursuit of his fifth Derby victory and second in a row. He won in 1997 and '98 with Silver Charm and Real Quiet.

"Having a horse like Nyquist has given us an opportunity to really show everyone how we're here to serve the horses and see the love and care given to the horses. He's been a gift in many ways."

Doug O'Neill, Nyquist's trainer

"I just hope I have a horse to root for turning for home," he said.

Steve Asmussen, Chad Brown and Todd Pletcher are taking aim with two horses each. Asmussen has Creator and Gun Runner, both co-third choices at 10-1; Brown has My Man Sam and Shagaf, a pair of 20-1 shots; and Pletcher has Destin and Outwork, both listed at 15-1.

Exaggerator is the early 8-1 second choice, trained by Keith Desormeaux and ridden by his younger brother Kent.

Trainer Dale Romans, who is 0-for-6 in his hometown race, saddles 12-1 shot Brody's Cause, saying the stakes-winning colt has done everything he needs to make it to the winner's circle.

Clearly so has Nyquist.

"Hopefully this year we'll have an American Pharoah-type of journey," O'Neill said.

Rude question pops up when girls' moms get together

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I need help developing a response to a very rude question. My daughter recently turned 13. It seems that every time we go to a gathering and the moms get together talking, someone will ask me if my daughter has gotten her period yet.

It isn't even a question from people I'm close with or who really know my daughter. She would be mortified if she knew that people fixated on it. What is a good way to reply that it is none of their business without seeming rude? — OFFENDED IN N.Y.C.

DEAR OFFENDED: My goodness, what a question. And from someone who is only an acquaintance. If the person is someone I don't know well, I would reply, "That's a personal, private matter between my daughter and me." Or, if I was feeling mischievous, I might smile and say, "She hasn't had one for the last four months and it's beginning to worry me." (Just kidding.)

DEAR ABBY: I am curious about your opinion on setting people up on dates. I am considering introducing one of my best friends, "Sierra," to my uncle "Wade." Do you think it's a good idea to set a friend up with a family member? I'm worried if it doesn't work out that my friendship with her won't be the same. Your advice is greatly appreciated. — CUPID IN PEORIA

DEAR CUPID: I don't think there are any hard and fast rules about this. If you think Sierra and Wade have enough in common that they would enjoy meeting each other, go ahead and introduce them. If it works out — fine. If it doesn't, it shouldn't have a negative impact on your relationship with her. Personal chemistry is hard to predict, and if they are both mature individuals, neither should blame you if there isn't a "spark" between them.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old piano student. My piano teacher is a wonderful person and I enjoy taking lessons from her, but there is one problem: She is always late.

Usually, it's 15 to 20 minutes, but other times I might be kept waiting for an hour or more. She also switches my lesson because of her busy schedule, which means I have to forgo many activities at the last minute. I have never missed anything important, but still, I am annoyed when I have to miss something I was looking forward to for a piano lesson.

I'm not sure what to do. How should I tell her to start coming on time? I really don't want to find another teacher, but this is very annoying. — FRUSTRATED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I don't blame you for being annoyed. Before your next lesson, talk with the woman and tell her how you feel about her inability to stay on schedule. She isn't your "friend"; she is paid for these sessions. An occasional 15-minute wait is understandable; making someone wait an hour or more is inconsiderate and disrespectful. If she can't do better than this, you might be happier if you found another teacher, and she might be happier because she'll be less overscheduled.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 7, 2016:

This year your creativity transforms your vision of life and the world. As the way you look at things changes, the things you look at seem to change, too. You will revitalize your life and find that you have become more content. If you are single, you will meet someone — most likely in the next six months — who forces you to grow past self-imposed limitations and who exposes you to a different culture. Be open to some exploration. If you are attached, the two of you learn to get past certain points of conflict by letting go of a need to be right. Plan on taking a very special vacation together this year. GEMINI helps you to lighten up.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★ You will be far more willing to communicate and share ideas than you have been in a while. You really do listen and internalize what you are hearing. However, once you get an idea in your mind, you will fight for it and not let go. Be careful. Tonight: Talk the night away.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You are likely to move away from a place of complacency in order to explore financial options, some of which might be new to you. You won't want to make a decision, despite the pressure you'll receive from others. Know when to say "no." Tonight: Go for the moment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★ You feel much better than you have in a while. However, there is an issue that pulls at you, as you have yet to find a resolution to it. You also might have decided to keep this matter to yourself. Start sharing; you might find the solution in a conversation. Tonight: Beam in what you want.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★ You have a strong agenda and focus; however, at the moment, you might need to take a break. Being so focused on the results of a project is helpful in getting you there, but at what cost? Avoid problems by taking several days off. Tonight: The less said, the better.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You gravitate toward others, especially when you see a group of friends together. A loved one could be suppressing some angry feelings, and suddenly might explode. Trust that this person will regret it later. Tonight: Let go and celebrate the moment as well as the weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ We all have periods when tension seems to permeate nearly everything we do. When we reach our wits' end, we lose it. If you can take a break, just for today, do it. Try some yoga or choose a pleasurable activity; you will feel better. Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ You probably will need to step carefully around someone who obviously is angry or in a strange mood. This person might not even be aware of how out of sorts he or she is. Should you say anything, you could become the object of his or her disdain. Tonight: Hang out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★ One-on-one relating takes you down a new path, though you suddenly might feel angry and not know why. Communication will flourish, as long as you respond to the other party's inquiry differently. Decide to be more involved with his or her response. Tonight: Out late.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You might be coming across a lot differently from how you think you are. You have an unusually strong desire to have people fall in line and do things your way. You come from a very creative space, but not everyone understands that mindset. Tonight: Defer to others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ Your ability to change a situation depends on your ability to look at it from a different perspective. You also might be more challenging than you realize, as you seem to have been suppressing your feelings of late. Tonight: Only what you want to do.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Allow your innate creativity to come through. Stay in touch with your feelings when dealing with a parent. You might note that a friend seems to be unusually assertive. In fact, you might even think he or she is pushy. Listen to what this person is trying to say. Tonight: Out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Tension builds to a new level because of a domestic matter. Disagreements can become agreements if you look for the issue that lies below the surface. Give up your position and look at the bottom line. A smile easily could emerge once you find an answer. Tonight: Add some fun.
