Local merchants ready for shorter shopping season

Holiday shoppers begin rush to stores

By SHERRI MARTIN
Staff Writer

Only 24 shopping days until Christmas.

And that means holiday shoppers are taking the retail stores by storm in search of the perfect Christmas presents.

Many of the local retailers have been preparing for this holiday season for several months.

Since August, Caryn's Hallmark Shop has had their Christmas collectibles and gifts on display, Bridal Consultant Lynn Gowens said.

Holiday merchandise started arriving at Anthony's Department Store in late October, Store Manager Betty Hosier said.

Since the Holiday Open House in early November, Inkahoots has had Christmas decorations and gifts on display, Clerk Jan Chesher said.

Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, is traditionally the busiest shopping day of the year. And so it was in Hereford.

Because so many people go out of town for Thanksgiving, Gowens said, "We were surprised. We were pretty busy. It's beginning to pick up quite a bit."

Also, out-of-town shoppers visiting their relatives could be seen in Hereford retail stores.

"We were pretty steady. We've been really busy for two weeks," Hosier said.

"It's been real busy this (Friday) morning," Chesher said.

At Caryn's Hallmark Store, regular employees are used to help with shoppers' needs and wrap gift selections.

Many retailers, like Anthony's Department Store and Inkahoots, hire temporary employees to help with the holiday rush.

"We usually put on a few extra people," Hosier said.

"From Thanksgiving on, they (Inkahoots) have more employees," Chesher said.

Many of the local retailers seem to think that people are shopping early this year.

"I would say people are really getting serious about it now," Gowens said.

A few weeks before Thanksgiving, people seemed to be shopping for themselves, Hosier said.

"I think after Thanksgiving, a lot of it is they're coming in to get for Christmas," she said.

Many people don't come in with a particular gift in mind, Chesher said.

"I think most people come in, to start off, they will browse. Then, they make their decision," she said.

In the rush of all the holiday shopping, retailers expect good sales.

"I think we're going to have a really good year. I don't have any reason to think not," Hosier said.

For shoppers, the Better Business Bureau has developed principles that make shopping sense.

According to the bureau, holiday shoppers should:

-- Buy from reliable businessmen. Shoppers should choose carefully the people with whom they do business, particularly when they are making one large or several small repeated purchases. Deal with a merchant who stands behind his product or service.

-- Compare values. Shoppers should compare values in not only price, but in quality and design. When buying appliances, look at the availability and quality of service also. Don't be a one store shopper! Very often the same merchandise is packaged under different names and sold by different stores at different prices.

-- Buy on the basis of intended use. Before making a purchase, consider what the use which is to be made of the item. Buy a higher quality item when the item is to be used frequently over a long period of time. Buy a lower quality item when something is to be used infrequently or will be rapidly outgrown.

-- Be careful about bargains. Shoppers should never expect something for nothing. Stores have periodic sales or specials in which consumers can get very good buys. However, no merchants can exist by making a habit of giving goods and services away.

-- Grasp the buying opportunity. Shoppers should become "sales watchers." They should know their needs in advance and watch for buying opportunities. It is possible for shoppers to save a substantial amount of money by making a habit of using sales to their advantage.

-- Not buy on impulse. Impulse buying can wreck a budget very fast. Shoppers should shop with a plan in mind. Before buying, shoppers should ask two questions: Do I need it? Can I afford it?

-- Be an informed shopper. Shoppers should become informed about prices, quality, labels, store reputations, brands, advertising. The more informed a shopper is, the more likely the shopper is able to make the best buying decisions.

-- Take credit seriously. Shoppers should take their credit contracts seriously. Shoppers should know what the contract says before they sign their name to it. When buying on credit, shoppers should know how much money they are paying for finance charges. Objectively evaluate as to whether or not having the item now is worth the extra money.

'Tis the season to shop

The holiday shopping season has begun. Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, is traditionally considered the busiest shopping day of the year. While shopping for gifts at Inkahoots, Ian Margrave, 11, was distracted by this snow village.

Republicans renew call for hearings following Justice decision

WASHINGTON (AP) - Republicans renewed calls for congressional hearings after the Justice Department's third rejection of an independent counsel's investigation into foreign-linked fund-raising by the Democratic Party.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who had made the request, called Friday's decision "further proof" of the need for hearings.

In the House, Rules Committee Chairman Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said the decision left the Republican-controlled Congress "no alternative but to pursue hearings that will get to the bottom of these very serious allegations."

The Justice Department turned down the Oct. 29 request from McCain and four Republican chairmen of House investigative committees. Mark Richard, deputy assistant attorney general for the criminal division, wrote he found no "specific, credible evidence at this time that any individual covered by the provisions of the Independent Counsel Act has committed any federal crime."

The rejection does not preclude a future decision that a counsel is needed. Meanwhile, a Justice Department task force is conducting a wide-ranging review of political fund-raising in the 1996 election.

White House spokesman Mike McCurry, responding to the decision, said officials would continue to "answer questions related to financial contributions forthrightly, as the president has directed."

In a letter to McCain, Richard noted the task force was exploring "the range of allegations and issues that have been raised. ... I give you my assurance that the allegations referenced in your letter and the points you raise will be carefully reviewed and considered."

McCain had asked the Justice Department to look into: a $250,000 contribution the Democrats returned to a Korean corporation; a Democratic fund-raiser at a Buddhist temple in California; and the activities of Democratic fund-raiser John Huang, a central figure in the controversy over foreign-linked contributions.

McCain also asked whether the Clinton administration had given Indonesia's Lippo Group banking and real estate conglomerate any special treatment in return for campaign contributions.

"It is my strong belief that the facts before us meet the test when other independent counsel have been called for in the past," McCain said in a statement.

McCain had made one earlier request for the appointment of an independent counsel, and the nonpartisan watchdog group Common Cause had made another.

The Justice Department said there were eight allegations, including one involving President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore. But the agency said it found no grounds for a prosecutor to look into their actions.

"The general assertions that the president and the vice president were involved in the solicitation and receipt of donations that may have violated campaign financing laws, and that contributions were made by individuals who had a meeting with the president and who were benefited by government trade decisions, falls far short of the sort of specific facts and reasonable inferences. ..." that a criminal violation had occurred, Richard wrote.

For the department to recommend appointment of an independent counsel, it must find a "specific credible allegation of criminal wrongdoing against a covered official."

The hush of winter

A park bench provides lone sentinel over a field of snow-covered trees and fairways early Saturday morning at Pitman Municipal Golf Course. The winter blanket marked Hereford's first heavy snowfall this year, and weather forecasts called for the storm system to drop three to five inches by Saturday evening.

"Christmas in the Park" set for Monday, Dec. 2

Santa Claus will be a special guest at the first "Christmas in the Park" sponsored by the City of Hereford at 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 2 in Mother's Park.

The park is located at the north end of Main Street at the intersection of Main, Avenue B and Park Avenue.

The streets immediately surrounding the park will be closed to traffic with the exception of Park Avenue.

Seating will be available for the public.

The Bell Choir from First Baptist Church will play beginning at 6:45 p.m. and Roger Eades, Mayor Pro-Tem, will welcome the spectators at 7 p.m.

Dr. Tom Fuller, minister of First United Methodist Church, will give the invocation.

Entertainment will be provided by the Hereford High School Choir and Hereford's 6th Grade Honor Choir. Both choirs are directed by Margaret Williams.

To highlight the event, Santa will have the honor of turning on the lights on the 45-foot red cedar Christmas tree. He will have candy canes for all the children present.

The Pilot Club of Hereford will prepare and serve coffee and hot chocolate in the Hereford Garden Center, directly across the street from Mother's Park. A donation has been received from the John Pitman Golf Course Association to provide the refreshments.

Co-chairs for the event are Carey Black, city commissioner and Terri Johnson, city secretary.

Local Roundup

City commission meeting set

The City of Hereford has scheduled a special meeting of the city commission at 12 p.m. on Monday in the commission chamber at city hall. Commissioners will consider an award of bid for the sale of three used patrol cars. The meeting is open to the public.

Bluebonnet holds open house

Bluebonnet Intermediate School will hold an open house at 6 p.m. on Monday. Parents and students will be able to visit with the teachers in their classrooms. Earlene Huff, principal at Lakeview Elementary School in Canyon, will present a short program on the alternative school calendar. Students will sing and refreshments will be served. The public is encouraged to attend.

Winter weather arrives

Hereford recorded a high of 58 degrees on Friday and a low of 30 degrees Saturday morning. Three inches of precipitation also was recorded by KPAN Radio. A winter storm warning was in effect for Saturday. The forecast for Saturday night called for partly cloudy skies with a low in the 20s. Sunday will be partly cloudy and cold with a high in the 30s. Weather forecasters expect partly cloudy skies with a slight chance of rain on Monday. High will be in the 50s.

ROBY, Texas (AP) - Winning a $50 million Texas Lottery jackpot couldn't have come at a better time for 43 people in this tiny West Texas farming community devastated by dry summers and wet autumns in recent years.

Their good luck hasn't been officially confirmed, but it was quite a Thanksgiving in the town of 600.

"It's all kind of weird right now," said Christi Anderson, whose aunt organized a Lotto pool that apparently has struck it rich. "We're still in shock ... but it's going to be a great Christmas."

Peggy Dickson, Anderson's aunt and a bookkeeper at the Terry Cotton Gin, was first to find out about the win Wednesday night. She spent the night before Thanksgiving calling everyone who had pitched into the pool.

"They just couldn't believe it. Some of them kept calling me back to verify," she said. "I've thought about winning the lottery and the main thing I looked forward to about winning was I always wanted to call everyone."

(AP) - Texas shoppers showed up for the first day of a shortened Christmas shopping season Friday, armed with their wallets and ready to spend.

Lynn Muehlenthal and her mother, Carolynn Lucas, braved cold and rainy weather and hit Prestonwood Mall in Dallas early Friday to beat the crowds.

By about 8:30 a.m., the women had gone to two or three stores, spent about $100 and were planning their shopping strategy for the rest of the day.

A new Associated Press poll shows most Americans say they will spend as much or more on gifts this Christmas season than in recent years. Fifty-five percent of those polled said spending will stay about the same in 1996 and 14 percent say they will spend more.

At Prestonwood, it seemed that more holiday shoppers were showing up, said Scott Creel, marketing director for the mall. He also said spending seemed to be on the increase.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Two Mexican lawmen who chased drug suspects across the border were charged Friday with aggravated kidnapping and unlawful carrying of weapons, authorities said.

The Ciudad Juarez police officers remained in the El Paso County Jail in lieu of bail of $50,750 each, said Sheriff's Lt. Clint Porter.

The officers were arrested early Thursday by U.S. Customs agents who witnessed a chase, punctuated by gunfire, across the Fabens International Bridge.

Juarez Police Officer-in-Charge Fernando Villasania said the Mexican officers were attempting to issue a federal arrest warrant for drug trafficking. He gave no other details or explanation for the border crossing.

"This is very unusual," said Sheriff's Capt. Larry Wilkins. "This was an armed incursion on U.S. soil. I don't know of anything like this happening since the days of Pancho Villa."

BENBROOK, Texas (AP) - City officials have contracted to destroy the area's coyotes after more than 50 cats are believed to have been killed by the wild predators.

City council members and residents worry that the coyotes might bite humans or attack small dogs, said Steve Wheeler, spokesman for the Ridglea Country Club Estates Homeowners Association.

"We are collectively concerned about the fact that we have had more than 50 cat losses and a lot of cat carcasses left on the golf course," Wheeler said. "People are concerned with coyotes becoming a little less timid and more comfortable with coming in close to where people are."

The association estimates that 12 coyotes roam the area just southwest of Fort Worth.

Benbrook has contracted with the U.S. Agriculture Department to hunt down the coyotes. The trapping and shooting of the animals is expected to begin early next year.

WASHINGTON (AP) - As members of Congress move into the twilight of their House careers, some of them tend to slack off on at least one of their duties: Voting.

Six of the eight House incumbents from Texas who were not on the November ballot had substantial drops in voting participation, according to an Associated Press review of the 455 recorded votes taken in the House this year.

The worst record was compiled by Lufkin Democrat Charlie Wilson, who failed to show up on the House floor for 134 votes - just shy of 30 percent of all recorded votes.

Teen 'vampire cult' accused of murder

By LESLIE ZGANJAR

Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) -

Heather Wendorf wore purple hair and a dog chain around her neck, and told friends she was a former demon who had talked with spirits during human blood-drinking rituals.

When her parents were found slain and Ms. Wendorf disappeared, authorities feared she had been kidnapped by the killers. Then they began to suspect her.

Ms. Wendorf, an ex-boyfriend and three other teen-agers believed to be in a "vampire cult" in Kentucky were in jail Friday after being tracked to Louisiana with the help of one teen's mother.

All are wanted in the slayings of Richard Wendorf, 49, and his wife, Naoma Ruth Wendorf, 53, who were bludgeoned to death Monday night in their Eustis, Fla., home about 20 miles northwest of Orlando.

"They just look like screwed-up kids. There's no shortage of those," said Baton Rouge Police Cpl. Don Kelly. He said all five have what appear to be self-inflicted cuts on their arms.

The Kentucky youths are believed to be in the "The Vampire Clan," a group of about 30 that surfaced about two months ago during an investigation into a break-in at an animal shelter. Two puppies were mutilated and their body parts taken. One of two youths charged is a suspect in the Florida case.

"They had stomped one of them to death and one of them, they pulled the legs off," said Sheriff Stan Scott of Calloway County, Ky., about 180 miles southwest of Louisville.

In Baton Rouge, Kelly said the teens were being questioned by Florida authorities and that extradition proceedings would begin next week. Police searched for a murder weapon along the Mississippi levee Friday night but did not find anything, he said.

Arrested on murder warrants Thursday were Ms. Wendorf, her ex-boyfriend Roderick Ferrell, 16, and Dana Cooper, 19, both of Murray, Ky., and Scott Anderson, 16, of Mayfield, Ky. Ms. Wendorf, 15, is a granddaughter of James Wendorf, a retired lawyer for the Billy Graham organization.

Charity Keese, 16, also from Murray, was charged with being an accessory to murder after the fact.

Few details were available about all of the teens, but Ferrell and Ms. Wendorf stood out in their rural communities, authorities and schoolmates told The Orlando Sentinel.

Ferrell sported shoulder-length black hair, wore a black trench coat, carried a wooden stick and boasted of immortality as a vampire. Ms. Wendorf often wore black fishnet stockings, besides the colored hair and dog chain.

The two attended high school together in Florida before Ferrell dropped out last year and moved back to Kentucky, according to news reports.

"She was a real nice girl, but deep down you could tell she had some heavy problems," said Joe Barrett, 15, a friend of Ms. Wendorf's in Eustis.

State department resents Combest query

DALLAS (AP) - A State Department official says U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, is trying to hound him from Washington on behalf of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Richard A. Nuccio told The Dallas Morning News for its Saturday editions that he blames the Lubbock Republican, who chairs the House intelligence committee, for the CIA's revoking his access to government secrets. Nuccio contends the goal is to punish him for blowing the whistle last year on a CIA cover-up.

Combest said Nuccio, whom the CIA has accused of improperly divulging the name of one of its agents in Guatemala, is grasping for "justification for a mistake" that threatens to end his government career.

"There's not an effort to make an example out of anyone," Combest said. "I am very concerned about leaks of classified information. That, I think, is unforgivable."

As the CIA sees it, Nuccio violated a cardinal rule by his public exposure of a Guatemalan colonel, Julio Roberto Alpirez, as a paid agent of the CIA.

Nuccio said a search of secret government files disclosed that Alpirez oversaw the 1992 interrogation and debriefing of captured Guatemalan guerrilla leader Efraim Bamaca Velasquez, who was married to Austin lawyer Jennifer Harbury. The rebel leader was killed while in captivity.

The files contradicted CIA claims that it knew nothing about the fate of the guerrilla.

Nuccio said he was unable to tell Ms. Harbury the truth because the files were classified. He later learned that Alpirez also was involved in the coverup of the 1990 slaying of Michael Devine, an American innkeeper in rural Guatemala.

On Nov. 17, Nuccio told "60 Minutes" that he tried unsuccessfully to persuade his colleagues at the State Department and the National Security Council to act on what he had learned but was told to do nothing that would antagonize the CIA.

"This was going to come out sooner or later," Nuccio said.

Among Ms. Harbury's friends was U.S. Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., a House intelligence committee member recently elected to the U.S. Senate.

He decided to tell what he knew to Torricelli, who went public with the story in March 1995, accusing the CIA of covering up both murders. He did not identify Nuccio as his source.

Subsequently, CIA Director John Deutch fired two senior CIA officials and disciplined six others.

The Justice Department decided not to prosecute Nuccio under a law barring identification of foreign agents. But the CIA stripped him of a special top security clearance.

Runoff could put GOP majority in state Senate

Duncan's victory would mean first Republican control since Reconstruction

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer
LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - The party of Abe Lincoln is poised to take another step toward recovering from the Civil War, just in time for the 21st century.

A smattering of voters from one of the Texas' most conservative regions could install the first Republican majority in an Austin legislative chamber since Reconstruction.

Nominally, a runoff victory Dec. 10 by Republican state Rep. Robert Duncan over Democratic ex-Lubbock mayor David Langston in their special election battle for John Montford's Texas Senate seat would be one for the record books.

Practically, no one knows quite what to make of it.

"I'm not sure an observer is going to be able to tell much of a difference," said state Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, the chamber's highest ranking Republican who this fall was named chair of the powerful Finance Committee by Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock. "I don't know how you can be any more successful with the governor's agenda than we were the last time. I think it's going to be very much a session like last time."

The "last time" refers to the 1995 assembly that featured the dulcet tones of Bullock, Republican Gov. George W. Bush and Democratic House Speaker Pete Laney, who orchestrated the session in three-part harmony.

The Nov. 5 general election left the state Senate essentially with a 15-14 GOP advantage and two open seats. A Duncan victory would ensure a Republican majority.

If Langston wins, the focus shifts to Democrat Jim Turner's East Texas district. Turner is leaving for the U.S. House, and the parties could engage in a winner-take-all scrape there to determine the 31st and final seat.

Like Turner, Montford parlayed his powerful tenure into something bigger and better: Texas Tech's lucrative chancellorship.

The lieutenant governor's traditionally powerful role as president of the Senate comes from the chamber's own rules, not the constitution.

"The Republican majority could have a really determinative impact on the operation of the Senate," Democratic Party spokeswoman Anne Marie Kilday conceded.

Democrats still would hold a majority had Turner and Montford not departed in the middle of their four-year terms. Now, each has left his party exposed to the GOP in regions where Republicans have winning track records.

Four top Senate Republicans, including Ratliff, met with Bullock following the election to discuss committee chairmanships. The rendezvous upset Bullock, though both sides since have tried to put a congenial face on it.

"I think we either did a bad job of conveying what we were trying to say or he misunderstood what we were trying to say," Ratliff said. "It's certainly water under the bridge. I don't perceive anything lasting coming of it."

Duncan, a two-term Lubbock legislator who has concentrated on tort reform and higher education funding, finished slightly ahead of Langston in the general election.

"The reason why a Republican majority makes a difference rests in our ability to make state government leaner and more responsible to Texas and Texans," he said.

Duncan and Langston, both attorneys, are battling to represent Lubbock, Big Spring, about half of Odessa, a third of San Angelo, a smidge of El Paso and scores of West Texas communities in between.

Langston, who once worked for former Democratic U.S. Rep. George Mahon in Washington, urges voters to remember the party he credits with the existence of Texas Tech, its companion medical school and Reese Air Force Base.

"I'm concerned about representing the people of West Texas," he said. "I'm not seeking to represent the Democratic Party, the Austin lobby, special interests or anyone else."

Langston points to Duncan's representation of insurance companies before the Texas Workers' Compensation Commission while serving on the House Insurance Committee as an unethical conflict of interest.

Duncan, who had raised more than $250,000 compared to Langston's $50,000 according to the most recent reports, has received large sums from out of district, something Langston has criticized.

Duncan's camp rebuts that he's worked for a streamlined insurance system and has voted for bills the industry has opposed. Duncan submits that his foe hasn't received any out-of-district support because no one is willing to bet on him.

Texas Tech political science professor Irwin Morris, who specializes in legislative issues, believes Bullock's iron-fist Senate control indeed is jeopardized.

"It's quite possible that if the balance of power does shift to Republicans, then you may have a situation where the Lieutenant Governor is not provided with the traditional powers usually accorded to him," Morris said. "You could see a significant decrease in his institutional power."

Despite the threat, Ms. Kilday agrees with Ratliff that Bullock will remain key to the legislative process this winter, regardless of party makeup.

CAPITOL COMMENT

U.S. SENATOR

KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON

Who Should Set Standards on the Internet?

One of the hottest debates in our country today centers on how — or if — the federal government should be involved in regulating what appears on the Internet. Supporters of such involvement argue that the telephone system as well as radio and television programming come under a certain degree of regulatory scrutiny, and so should the Internet.

In my questionnaire which many of your local newspapers published recently, I asked Texans, "Should the federal government establish and enforce content standards for electronic information providers such as the Internet?"

When the results of this questionnaire were tallied, 54 percent of you indicated you believe there is a role for the federal government to play in this area. Many responded with comments such as, "There should be limits you can't go beyond," "Pornography on the Internet is just as bad as pornography on prime time television — I say zero tolerance," and "Obscene phone calls are against the law. People have a right to expect their government to prosecute those who use the 'web' for the same purpose." Another wrote, "We need all the help we can get!"

One thoughtful reader responded, "This depends on whose standards the government will enforce — and the cost to taxpayers of enforcing standards."

Several of you wrote to say that, "I think enforcement of these kinds of community standards should be on the state and local level." One reader who views such Internet contents as beyond the pale responded, "The federal government should always be involved when crime crosses state lines."

But many of you think the government has enough on its plate already without adding a requirement to police the Internet. One reader wrote "What about the First Amendment? I think this falls under the category of free speech." Others said, "We do not want the federal government to be an integral part of our lives, telling us what to read, or watch on TV or view on the Internet," "You can't regulate everything," and "The government has enough authority to function within the current framework."

Several of you expressed notions of parental responsibility, such as, "It's past time parents did their job, not Uncle Sam," and "I feel that when parents buy a computer, they should invest in parent-policing software as well. This software allows parents to monitor where their child can enter into the Internet."

Along those same lines, the writer said, "I consider the Internet much like the U.S. Mail, where my mail is private and should not be screened. In addition, how would we monitor such a monster? The cost to do so such a thing would create a whole, new bureaucratic branch in the U.S. government. This has to be done at the household level."

Earlier this year, Congress enacted and the president signed into law new telecommunications legislation which attempts to set certain content standards for the Internet. Already the legislation has engendered a number of protests — as well as lawsuits. The Internet is booming, and this dilemma isn't going to be solved with one law, or one court decision. I pledge to keep you informed on all future developments in the debate.

And once again, I'd like to thank the thousands of Texans who took the time to respond to my questionnaire. We'll be doing it again next year.

Some Children Only Get One Wish. Please Make It Come True.

HELP bring a little happiness to a child who may be overlooked for Christmas this year.

Most of us have been fortunate enough to grow up knowing there would be something special, big or small, waiting for us under the tree Christmas morning.

Yet for many children in our midst, the true wonderment of Christmas is lost. Christmas, for all practical purposes, could be just another day.

Once again, Hereford State Bank is very happy to provide an opportunity for you to bring a smile to a young face through our Foster Children's Christmas Tree which is sponsored by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Each ornament on the Christmas tree in our lobby features a foster child and their special wishes this year. Choose one, or as many as you want, and place a gift in that child's name under the tree by Dec. 20th.

Wishes grow on trees at Hereford State Bank. Help them come true.

Cockleburrs and Devil's Claws

By Georgia Tyler

My kingdom for an old-fashioned variety store. You know the kind I mean -- a five and ten establishment that really sells some items for as little as a nickel or dime.

These stores of the past were marked by counter after counter of inexpensive jewelry, hair bows and barrettes, socks, underwear, souvenirs, notions, combs and brushes, odds and ends and all kinds of other treasures.

The dime stores I remember had a unique smell, too. I wouldn't know how to describe it. It probably was a combination of odors from snack bar and bodies. It was especially noticeable in the wintertime.

My hometown didn't have a variety store for many years. We shopped for most clothing and household needs in a town 45 miles away. The joy of my life in the summertime was when on a shopping trip my mother said, "I need to go to Woolworth's," or maybe it was S.H. Kress.

These stores were airconditioned! After a day of shopping for a pair of shoes for me (we made every shoe store and department store in town to find my shoes) or fabrics for my mother's sewing projects, there was real happiness in stepping into the dime store where the environment was nearly frigid.

My sister and I prowled the premises, enthralled by all the shiny things that we saw but couldn't touch. We were warned by my mother not to pick up anything, until ready to pay for it. She never said why, just "do as I say." In later life, I came to the conclusion that, since dime stores were meccas for shoplifting, she didn't want us to have even a taint of taking something.

Often, though, we each had a few coins to spend. The family treasury usually could spare some change for us to pick out a treat. My sister was very deliberate about selecting, I, on the other hand, made a choice quickly and, just as quickly, regretted it.

My sister went to each counter where little knick-knacks were stacked. Or, where small toys were displayed. My mother finally would express her exasperation with, "Come on, Patsy. Make up your mind."

One of my favorite dime store items was the whirlygig. It usually was flimsy and flew apart when I in judiciously stuck it out the car window while we were driving.

Another toy that I took home on a regular basis was a wooden paddle with a small rubber ball attached to the center by a long rubber band.

Although I have never been blessed with extraordinary reflexes or coordination, I became quite proficient with the paddle. In a moment of sheer orneriness, I could aim the ball at my sister and pop it against her leg, back, arm or bottom. Never, though toward her face. I learned the hard way to avoid that direction.

Many of the playthings we carried home from the variety store have surfaced in the large discount houses of today. But, it's not the same.

First, there was a feeling of airiness and space in the oldtime five and ten. There were few tall racks loaded with merchandise and blocking the view. I remember walking into Woolworth's and seeing the back wall from the front door.

Then, there were clerks at nearly every counter. You didn't have to go to a post and ring for help. They were already there to assist in your purchase.

And, the long lunch counter was delight for two girls from the country who rarely ate anywhere but home.

There were cake stands with luscious-looking concoctions just waiting to be eaten. Sandwiches were served with chips. A treat we rarely experienced.

Now, it may sound like we were deprived children, but in reality we were very fortunate. We always had good meals and warm clothes. And, we enjoyed the lesser things in life that today's kids neither understand nor care about.

The five and ten-cent store had a major fault, though, that in later years I recognized for what it was -- segregation. I often asked my mother why there were two water fountains in the store, one labeled for "colored."

Despite all the good memories of variety stores, that one flaw continues to gnaw on my conscience.

Editorials from around the State

Here are excerpts from editorials in newspapers in the United States and abroad:

The Advocate, Baton Rouge, La., on Bosnia change: It's very difficult not to take a cynical view of President Clinton's weekend reversal of stated plans to bring U.S. troops home from Bosnia by next month.

That's because the new target date, June 1998, was announced less than two weeks after Clinton's re-election. ...

Clinton has been lucky so far; the American mission in Bosnia has not blown up in his face. Now he's gambling that his luck will hold for another 18 months.

Three decades ago, former President Lyndon Johnson presided over an American mission in South Vietnam. Back then, Clinton was among the many young Americans who protested the war that was Johnson's undoing. Time was not on Johnson's side; his luck did not hold.

Johnson failed at least partly because, over time, the American people learned they could not believe what Johnson and his administration said about that war.

Clinton surely must remember that.

Nov. 21

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer, on Albert Belle: Albert Belle was the most feared power hitter in Cleveland Indians history and probably the team's best hitter since Tris Speaker.

Belle was the best player on the teams that returned Cleveland to its rightful state - the nation's best baseball town. And he was the central reason the 1995 Indians returned to the World Series after a 41-year absence.

But because he also was the most troubled and trouble-making player in the club's history, the Indians today are far better off without him than they were with him.

This is not a position we arrived at merely because Belle is now a member of the Chicago White Sox. As far back as April, we suggested the Indians get rid of Belle.

Cleveland's problem is now Chicago's.

Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail, on aviation safety: The National Transportation Safety Board does an awesome job. The information it has been able to develop so far about ValuJet Flight 592 and TWA Flight 800 is staggering.

Furthermore, the NTSB has guts. In the case of the ValuJet crash, the investigation led the NTSB to question the effectiveness of another government agency, the Federal Aviation Administration.

The NTSB determined that failure to install $1 safety caps on oxygen canisters shipped most likely caused the May 11 ValuJet crash. ...

So the NTSB looked into the FAA's supervision of such hazardous cargo. It turns out that only 352 of the FAA's 600-person hazardous materials staff actually perform inspections. And the people who actually perform inspections spend only 3.2 percent of their time on that task.

... The FAA is now scrambling to beef up its hazardous materials inspection program. It isn't nearly as effective as it needs to be.

Painful as that assessment may be, it pales in comparison to losing a plane full of people.

Nov. 22

Clovis (N.M.) News Journal, on CIA spy case: The directors of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation wanted the word to get out. Close cooperation between the two agencies led to the arrest of a high-ranking CIA officer, who was charged with spying for Russia.

Their eagerness is understandable. Only a few weeks ago, the two agencies were tripping over each other. In an episode worthy of the Keystone Kops, the FBI arrested a retired Russian spy after he arrived in the United States on business, then later released him when the CIA intervened.

The relatively quick apprehension of Harold Nicholson, a 16-year CIA veteran ... deserves some praise. Unlike the six years it took to close in on Aldrich Ames, the biggest traitor in CIA history, the CIA and FBI needed only a year to nab Nicholson.

Clearly, the two agencies learned valuable lessons from the Ames case. The Nicholson arrest is a victory, but it also raises many questions. Why would a former CIA station chief and a trusted instructor become a traitor less than eight weeks after the conviction of Ames? ... did he feel adrift in an agency with no clear mission and sinking morale?

More to the point, what do these latest ... flaps say about U.S.-Russian relations? Is Russia an ally or an enemy? ...

Nov. 22

Press-Republican of Plattsburgh, N.Y., on state government: It's maddening, sometimes, to try to extract anything useful out of economic statistics. ... But one telling piece of information emerged from Tuesday's unemployment figures announced out of Albany: Government employment was at its lowest level since 1985.

For that, the Pataki administration is to be congratulated. Contrary to what some will argue, government's job is not to be an employer at taxpayer expense, but to give the taxpayers the services they need at the best price available.

A padded payroll flies in the face of the best interests of the people paying the bills. If a service can be delivered more cheaply, government's job is to see that it is done.

... No one wants to put anybody out on the street. But taxpayers must never be assessed to keep anyone on the payroll who isn't needed. ... Efficiency, not girth, should be government's goal.

Nov. 25

Fayetteville (N.C.) Observer-Times, on Army and sexual abuse: In light of the fact that more recruits are coming forth with complaints ranging from inappropriate touching to forcible rape, it might seem odd to give the Army another pat on the back. Yes, the Army should have known more (and done more) years ago. The Army admits this. ...

Sexual abuse in the military is a profoundly serious matter. ... But a distraction has been a renewed debate over whether female recruits should be segregated from males. Army Secretary Togo West tossed a verbal grenade on that nonsense. "Our Army fights as it trains," he said. ...

West understands that the problem is not about gender. It is about conduct, about the Army's standards, and about the Army's accountability.

Soldiers proved to have committed crimes of any kind ... and who have misused the authority entrusted to them don't belong. That's it, pure and simple. Criminal behavior and lack of discipline would cause problems for the Army in some form or another, regardless of whether women trained alongside these soldiers or apart from them. So, no, don't segregate the women. They're soldiers, too. Segregate offenders by booting them out.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Recently, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service held a meeting to hear from the public about a plan to decrease or modify public activities at the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge.

This caused me to reflect on my previous involvement concerning this once great Panhandle natural resource, as well as my present thoughts.

I was the attorney who in 1978 represented the concerned group of citizens who vainly (but valiantly) fought to prevent the drainage of the lake after a freakish May, 1978 rain storm had refilled the lake. Being relatively young at that time, enthusiastic and perhaps somewhat naive, it was not obvious to me in 1978 that the refuge was at that time already mortally wounded.

The refuge was once the winter resting spot for approximately one million puddle ducks (primarily mallards and pintails), 60,000 or more Canada geese, hundreds of bald and golden eagles, and many other water birds, migratory birds and indigenous birds. The lake was once a focal point of the massive continental central flyway of North American migratory birds. Thus, the lake was once a great national and local treasure, which had value to this area in both economic and spiritual ways.

The following analysis or circumstances pertaining to the refuge are now obvious to me:

(1.) This area previously lacked the will to require business interests to accommodate the refuge while they were developing and nurturing their businesses.

(2.) Feedlots were constructed directly on the watershed, resulting firstly in the pollution of the lake, and secondly in the reduction of a significant amount of the precious water for the lake.

(3.) Innumerable obstructions to vital water run off to the refuge throughout the watershed were allowed to be constructed which would ultimately contribute heavily to the demise of the lake.

(4.) The water table was lowered to accommodate farming operations which ultimately killed the natural springs which previously had provided significant inflow to the lake.

(5.) There was a lack of publicity, concern, or emphasis by leaders of this community as to the deleterious effects of the foregoing to this lake, so that the average individual probably was not made aware. If the average individual had been made aware in the early stages, there may have been enough of an outcry so that perhaps preventive measures could have been taken before it was too late.

Finally, it was all over. It was too late. Irreparable damage had occurred and habits had been established. As usual, the individual had not been provided with the right information, or the individual was unable to understand the true cause of the circumstances and the futility of his opposition or efforts after the fact.

The end result is that the Texas Panhandle, and perhaps the entire North American continent, have lost a great natural resource.

Long before Buffalo Lake was created, the Texas Panhandle through its naturally occurring playa lakes had been a vital resting spot for many of the migratory birds of the central flyway. Of course, playa lakes have been for some time largely eliminated because of modern farming and ranching practices. Buffalo Lake thus was a needed and valuable substitute or replacement for those changed conditions.

I will always be sad when the subject of Buffalo Lake is brought up, as I believe that this area could have retained this valuable local asset, if it only had exhibited a stronger vision and will.

But like many things in life, there are no second chances. Buffalo Lake is essentially gone, with only the hope of a remnant of its past. The Texas Panhandle has suffered a great loss.

Very truly yours,
Ronald E. Walker Jr.

Habanero pepper makes jalapeno seem mild

By TOM GUARISCO
The Advocate

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) - Jalapeno. Quick, what's the first word that pops in your head? Hot? Spicy? Peppery?

Wrong.

The correct answer is wimpy.

Those green sliced rings that put the oomph in ballpark nachos are among the weak in the pepper world.

In fact, the king of peppers, the habanero, is 60 times more powerful than the jalapeno. That's right, 60 times.

To grasp this, think back to the last time you bit into a jalapeno pepper.

Remember how it burned? Now multiply that times 60.

Now drink a glass of water.

Actually, a glass of tomato juice or milk would be better.

Although America has developed an insatiable taste for spicy foods, in reality most people don't want too much heat.

Terry McDonner, executive chef at Juban's restaurant in Baton Rouge, said most peppers are too hot for Americans.

"If it burns the palate, it ruins the taste buds for that evening," McDonner said. "When people come out to dine, they want to be able to taste the shrimp, the pork, the veal."

McDonner said he mostly uses cayenne peppers in his cooking. Cayenne is a moderately hot pepper, 20 times hotter than jalapeno but only a third as strong as the sizzling habanero.

"As a chef you have to be very careful," McDonner said.

East Texas man makes pool sticks

By ROY BRAGG

San Antonio Express-News

LEAKEY, Texas - It's a safe bet you'll never find a Leonard Bludworth pool cue wrapped around the scalp of a drunken biker or buried in the gut of a rowdy oil-field worker.

Bludworth, a no-nonsense, plain-talking East Texan, makes hand-carved, made-to-order sticks that usually fetch up to $10,000. His cheapest goes for $700.

"I take pride in what I do," he said. "I won't let a (bad cue) go out the door." He didn't really say (bad cue) by the way, but you get the idea. "But when you come here to see me, you'd better bring your checkbook."

And now Bludworth, who moved his shop from Houston to the Frio Canyon two years ago, is entering the stratosphere of his craft.

Bludworth, 56, is fashioning a $100,000 pool cue for an anonymous Dallas millionaire. When it's finished, that cue will be the most-expensive stick ever made, according to a billiards magazine.

The design will include white gold inlays on the cue's upper end, as well as encrusted ruby, diamonds and emeralds all along the stick. Bludworth has purchased the jewelry, but is keeping it in an out-of-town bank until the last stages of the work.

And if the Dallas guy ever wants to grab his high-dollar cue and head over to the local beer joint to shoot some stick, he'll be able to do that, too.

"It's playable," Bludworth said. "All my cues are playable. But he won't play with it, because it might hurt its value."

Bludworth got into the billiards supply business, quite literally, by accident. He was working in the early '60s on the docks when he injured his back. To put food on the table, he played pool for money in Houston area clubs.

That led to a spot in professional tournaments and increased income.

He wasn't making extra money winning games, though. Turns out Bludworth, who did his own stick-maintenance work, was making better money repairing the cues of his competitors.

Eventually, he dropped out of competition and took up pool-cue repair on the professional circuit. Soon, he opened a shop in Houston to repair cues. He also invented a pool ball-cleaning machine, sort of a round egg carton outfitted with a motorized brush. The balls go in the holes and the brush rotates them and polishes them.

"That's been my bread and butter all these years," Bludworth said.

He started making cues at the insistence of a friend seven years ago. He sold the repair shop to his son and now focuses on making custom cues.

"If I can hump it, I can make 70 to 80 a year," he said. "I don't want to. I don't need to."

The cues are made with exotic South American and Pacific Rim woods, soaked in a special chemical solution and given eight coats of finish, Bludworth said.

Bludworth's pool-cue business spawned a cottage industry.

He doesn't normally use habanero peppers.

But a growing number of Americans do. They are buying up sizzling hot sauces with kooky names like Endorphin Rush, Jamaica Hell Fire Doc's Special, and Iguana Habanero Pretty Damn Hot Sauce.

In 1991, hot sauces surpassed ketchup in total value of sales for the first time, and the gap has been widening ever since.

To the average consumer, though, hot sauce and hot peppers fall into two categories: edible or too hot to eat.

Science, meanwhile, has been fine tuning its ways of measuring pepper heat since the early 1800s. Now, the measurements are decidedly high tech.

The original method was developed in 1912 by Wilbur L. Scoville, a pharmacologist for Parke Davis. He wanted to measure capsaicin, the fiery compound that gives peppers their heat.

Scoville was actually developing the muscle salve Heet and he needed a way to measure pepper heat.

He developed the soberly named Scoville Organoleptic Test, which was far less scientific than its name implies. It was purely subjective.

The test called for five panelists to sample a mixture of ground chilies, sugar, alcohol and water. The tasters gave it a number value based on how much they had to dilute the chili before they could taste no heat. Three testers had to agree for the rating to be recorded.

Modern pepper producers wanted a more objective measurement. In 1980, they got it.

The first objective measurement and rating system was developed by James Woodbury at Cal-Compac foods. The procedure is called high-pressure liquid chromatography.

And like its name, it is high-tech. The method uses computers and high-tech equipment to measure not only capsaicin, but all the capsaicin compounds, the related compounds which also produce heat in peppers.

The process was then fine-tuned by The Perkin-Elmer Corp. of Norwalk, Conn. Scientists there developed Turbo LC Plus, a computerized high-performance liquid chromatography test.

Capsaicin compounds are removed from pepper extract and bombarded with light. The more light they absorb, the hotter the peppers.

The hottest pepper is the habanero, which measures up to 300,000

Scoville units. Jalapeno peppers top out at 5,000 Scoville units.

Pure capsaicin is a sizzling 15 million Scoville units. One drop diluted in 100,000 drops of water will blister the average human tongue.

So what should you do if you bite off more heat than you can chew? Your impulse may be to chug cold water. Not a good idea.

Capsaicin is an oil, which means it does not mix or dilute well in water. In fact, water worsens the discomfort by spreading the pain to other parts of your mouth and throat.

Some better remedies include drinking tomato juice or milk, or eating a lemon or lime. Since capsaicin is alkaline, the acid in tomato juice, lemons or limes may counteract it.

Hard-core chili heads have their own remedy: They eat another pepper.

(Mat 22:39 KJV) And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. This is a favorite verse used by people that don't want anyone to tell them they are a sinner. Before a person can go to the second commandment he must comply with the first one. (Mat 22:37 KJV) Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. If you love God you will be concerned whether your neighbor is going to Heaven or Hell.

Waters of Oklahoma lake uncover cemetery

Kaw Indians thought ancestors' remains had been removed

By JEAN PAGEL
Associated Press Writer
KAW CITY, Okla. (AP) - Murky waters of Kaw Lake, washing in wavy rhythms against the shoreline, uncovered some secrets buried in the red clay.

Lake-bank erosion has exhumed human bones, casket fragments and tombstone pieces left behind at old cemeteries moved when the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers built the dam in the early 1970s.

Some concrete strips still form the borders of family plots at the Washunga Cemetery, the one-time graveyard for 669 Kaw Indians. Objects shaped like vaults are still under ground in some places.

No one knows what remains - or why. Were there honest mistakes, sloppiness, deliberate negligence?

A North Carolina company was hired to relocate 11 cemeteries to make way for the lake. Now the Corps and the Kaw Nation are trying to mitigate the erosion and care for the abandoned objects that surface.

"People say, 'Don't you get the creeps or weirded out?'" said Timothy Kennedy, hired by the tribe to investigate the 20-acre Washunga site.

"I feel like if you're out here with an honest heart and you're doing a good thing, you don't have to worry about the spirits getting mad at you," Kennedy said. "Peace."

Kaw Lake is located on the Arkansas River about 100 miles northwest of Tulsa. Construction, authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1962, was completed in 1976.

The lake now boasts some of the Oklahoma's best crappie fishing, campgrounds, and boat ramps off 168 miles of shoreline.

But its construction caused the displacement of residents on the flood plain. Washunga and 10 other cemeteries had to be moved, too.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers hired Big Wheel Inc. of North Carolina to relocate the graves to nearby Ponca City.

A Stillwater municipal official said the city's drinking water comes from other parts of the lake.

The Kaw Nation stepped in at the Washunga site in August thanks to the 1990 Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act, which gives American Indians increased authority for what happens to human remains and sacred objects found on federal lands.

The tribe has cleared away the overgrown brush and willow trees. Kennedy, paid through a federal grant, is devising a grid system and plans to search for graves with radar.

Bees and earthworms and crickets thrive at the remote site, partly covered by lake water. Dry leaves rustled in the wind on a recent autumn afternoon.

Kennedy pointed to a concrete-lined plot he had jabbed with a metal rod.

"There are definite indications there is something or someone there," he said.

While the Kaw Nation has taken the lead at Washunga, the corps went into the Oak Grove cemetery recently with sandbags and vegetation geared to abate the erosion. Jobson said the Oak Grove recovery has cost about $8,000.

Parts of human skeletons out in the open were sent to Tulsa for storage and attempts at identification.

"We did not go probing and looking for things we couldn't see, and I know some folks in the community were unhappy with that," Jobson said.

Carolyn Godberson of Ponca City said her great-grandfather in 1895 donated five acres for the Oak Grove cemetery, now called Coon Creek Cove. She said she learned of the erosion when a boater spotted an exposed casket about 10 years ago.

But the matter received little attention or priority until the Kaw Nation got involved, she said.

Area residents fault the corps for acting too little too late. They wonder, Mrs. Godberson said, what will prevent further erosion.

Jobson said the grave exposures renewed hard feelings and old wounds for some people. But the corps wants to resolve the problem, he said.

"I hope that this helps the community heal on this issue. This is something that won't go away for awhile."

"I don't want to make this into a sinister story," said Robert Jobson, an archaeologist for the corps' Tulsa district, "but either burials were missed for whatever reason, or people looked but didn't see anything or ... people were incompetent. Somebody didn't do their job."

Jobson said he doesn't know what became of Big Wheel Inc.

People familiar with the project are suspicious that contract company might have removed only the easily accessible parts of the caskets - leaving behind, for instance, what collapsed or broke off in the dirt.

"What they didn't tell you is they only reburied the skull," Jobson said. "That case is probably as hurtful and as gruesome as not reburying them at all."

Jim Pepper Henry, director of historic preservation for the Kaw Nation, said his relatives were among the 669 people buried at Washunga and the 495 buried at Oak Grove Cemetery. Washunga and Oak Grove were the biggest of the 11 cemeteries involved in relocation.

Pepper Henry said some people back in the 1970s watched to make sure Big Wheel moved their particular loved ones.

"Just the fact that people (bones) have washed out, and there is evidence that other places have not even been disturbed, I think anyone would have their doubts, unless they saw it happen," he said.

Pepper Henry said he sent the Oklahoma Department of Health some photos of objects that erosion has chiseled out. One photo showed blue rayon socks covering foot bones protruding from a cliff at Oak Grove.

Pepper Henry said he was concerned because the city of Stillwater obtains its drinking water from the lake. Records list diphtheria and tuberculosis as cause of death for some people buried in the cemeteries, he said.

Roger C. Pirrong, a deputy commissioner at the Health Department, said officials are testing the water. He does not believe any reason for alarm exists.

"After all this time it wouldn't have any bearing," Pirrong said. "It wouldn't have when the graves were moved, either."

Arizona workers take first step in building binocular telescope

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Beneath the University of Arizona's football stadium, a massive, spinning furnace is being tested, empty except for a giant mold inside.

The furnace is being heated nightly for the next few weeks to 1,180 degrees Celsius - more than 2,150 degrees Fahrenheit. Next month, when cooled, it will be opened and the mold checked to make certain there are no cracks.

Workers will load it with nearly 20 tons of glass, and sometime in January it will be fired up for real.

The 40,000 pounds of glass will be cooked to make the first of twin 8.4-meter mirrors about 3 1/2 inches thick for the Large Binocular Telescope.

"It's the routine pre-fire act that we go through before every casting," says Roger Angel, head of the Steward Observatory Mirror Laboratory.

"Right now we're heating the mold empty ... before we commit $700,000 of glass," adds John Hill, director of the $60 million telescope project and Steward's mirror-casting director.

The single-piece slabs of glass will be the key ingredients in the Large Binocular Telescope. Each will be polished to form a mirror more than 27 feet in diameter. Together, they will provide the telescope with viewing power to make it one of the world's most powerful optical instruments.

The project on 10,700-foot Mount Graham near Safford, 125 miles northeast of Tucson, finally is on track to completion after a decade-long court fight with an environmental coalition. Opponents said they feared building the telescope would lead to extinction of an endangered subspecies of red squirrel found nowhere else.

Angel came up with the idea about 15 years ago to revolutionize mirror-making by creating huge, relatively inexpensive, single-piece mirrors that are lightweight yet rigid.

The key was to melt borosilicate glass in a spinning furnace to create a glass blank with hollow backing and a steep focal ratio. In other words, part of the structure of the mirror is built the same way as a bee's honeycomb - partly hollow but still strong and lightweight. The focal ratio is considered critical because it holds expenses down by reducing the height of the building needed to house the telescope.

No one has cast as large a blank of glass conventionally, Hill said. One of comparable thickness and focal ratio would weigh five times more - 100 tons.

When the furnace is turned on for real, he said, it will be kept at its maximum temperature for about 11 hours.

"That's the time for the glass to melt and fill the mold," Angel said. The furnace then will spin for three days to let the glass solidify, followed by up to four months of slow cooling so that it tempers and hardens without becoming brittle. That process is called annealing.

"It may be as slow as 5 degrees a day," said Angel, who received a five-year, $330,000 grant last spring from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation in recognition of his creativity.

Two periods in the mirror production will be critical. The first is when the temperature is cranked all the way up, he said.

"The period of maximum danger, I would guess, is while the glass is liquid, because it exerts strong buoyant forces on the mold," Angel said.

"It's trying to lift up, and there are significant forces trying to tear the mold apart. We think we've made it strong enough. That's the acid test."

The other will be at temperatures of about 500 degrees Celsius to about 450 degrees, during the annealing, Angel said.

The mirror lab has produced glass blanks 3.5 meters in diameter and two of 6.5 meters, and each time the size has increased, new things have been learned, Angel said.

Angel hopes there won't be too many new lessons this time.

"We try to fix everything we can anticipate," he said. "So the new lesson will be things we didn't anticipate."

After the glass is cast, it will take about two years to polish the first mirror by computer - once smaller ones already in queue are finished.

The cost for each big mirror, when cast and polished, will be about $12 million, Hill said.

"This probably won't go to the mountain until the fall of 2000 or something like that," Hill said.

Cornelius is MVP of 1-4A volleyball

Herd puts 3 others on first team

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Class 4A state champion Hereford volleyball team landed four players on the first team of the All-District 1-4A teams, including Most Valuable Player Danielle Cornelius.

Cornelius, who also was MVP last year, was joined on the first team by teammates Cassie Abney, Kari Barrett and Julie Rampley. All are seniors except Rampley, who is a junior.

Hereford coach Brenda Reeh was named Coach of the Year. In addition, Herd junior Katie Betzen was named to the second team, and juniors Meredith Tabor and Kendra Wright received honorable mention.

District co-champion Dumas put two girls - seniors Mindy Ratliff and Tiffany Wilson - on the first team.

Julie Williams of Dumas was named the Newcomer of the Year, and two more Demonettes made the second team: seniors Rachel Artho and Kilee McSpadden.

Rounding out the first team were Canyon senior Courtney Sims and Randall junior Courtney Gilmore.

After Betzen, McSpadden and Artho, the second team consists of: Keisha Cornelius, Randall, sophomore; Catherine Chism, Caprock, senior; Nicole Meason, Pampa, senior; Valeree Valdez, Canyon, senior; and Shayla Weatherly, Canyon, junior.

Coach Reeh spoke about each of Hereford's honorees individually:

Cooper knocks off Herd girls

Cooper knocked Hereford out of the running in the Frenship Turkey Classic. Cooper downed the Herd, 55-51, Friday at Wolfforth.

Hereford held one-point leads at the end of each of the first three quarters: 18-17 after one, 27-26 at halftime and 38-37 after the third quarter. But Cooper outscored the Herd 18-13 over the final eight minutes to win the games.

Katie Betzen and Misti Davis each scored 13 points for Hereford, and Julie Rampley added nine points.

Hereford (2-2) was to play Lubbock High Saturday for fifth place.

The Hereford boys' team was to play Friday in the Odessa Thanksgiving Hoopfest, but no results were available.

All-District Lady Whitefaces

The state champion Hereford volleyball team had a total of eight members honored when the All-District 1-4A lists came out this week. They are: (left to right) Kendra Wright, honorable mention; Julie Rampley, first team; Danielle Cornelius, Most Valuable Player; Brenda Reeh, Coach of the Year; Kari Barrett, first team; Cassie Abney, first team; and Katie Betzen, second team. Meredith Tabor, seated on the floor with the state championship trophy, also received honorable mention.

'Horns rout Aggies

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Longhorns might have saved the reputation of the Big 12 South.

By trouncing rival Texas A&M 51-15 on Friday, Texas (7-4, 6-2) claimed the southern division outright, avoiding a complicated tiebreaker situation with a loss that would have sent Texas Tech (7-4, 5-3) to the Big 12 title game in St. Louis next week.

Texas, which opened 3-4 while making a habit of losing fourth quarter leads, heads into next week's championship with momentum.

The Longhorns are on a four-game win streak capped by their best game of the season.

"It was a long, hard year and to not have given up and be rewarded like this is a great feeling," said senior offensive guard Dan Neil.

James Brown threw four touchdown passes, two to Mike Adams, as the Longhorns made it two straight over the Aggies (6-6, 4-4), who were eliminated from bowl contention and suffered their first non-winning season since going 5-5-1 in 1983.

It was the most lopsided victory

(See LONGHORNS, Page 8A)

'Huskers edge Colorado

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Freshman DeAngelo Evans rushed for 123 yards and a touchdown as No. 4 Nebraska beat No. 5 Colorado 17-12 Friday to win the Big 12 North title and a place in the inaugural conference championship.

Nebraska (10-1, 8-0), which won its 36th consecutive home game, lost four fumbles and was penalized 11 times for 70 yards. Colorado (9-2, 7-1) gave up two interceptions, including one that was returned for a touchdown, and was penalized nine times for 50 yards.

Ahman Green reached 2,000 career yards rushing for Nebraska, which plays Texas for the conference title Dec. 7 at St. Louis. The Longhorns won the South by beating Texas A&M 51-15 Friday.

Nebraska's pass rush stifled Colorado quarterback Koy Detmer, who completed just 11 of 39 passes for 226 yards and no touchdowns. The Buffaloes' scoring came on four field goals by Jeremy Aldrich.

Colorado, which has lost five straight to Nebraska, failed to capitalize on good field position in the fourth quarter. The Buffs advanced to Nebraska's 9, but managed only a field goal.

Friona surprises top-ranked Vernon, 14-13

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

Inserting a 246-pound defensive lineman into the backfield worked twice for Vernon, Class 3A's top-ranked team, in a regional semifinal playoff game against Friona.

Which left Lions head coach Bill Blythe wondering if his team might still be alive in the Texas high school playoffs if he had gotten the ball to Sidnei Gaines one more time on Friday afternoon.

Gaines lined up in the backfield twice and scored both times, on lumbering runs of seven and eight yards, bringing Vernon to within 14-13 with 3:50 left in the third quarter.

But Blythe disdained a tie and went for a two-point conversion try. Gaines was sent up the middle as a decoy, but the defense didn't bite. Friona (12-1) snuffed an outside pitch for a loss and held on for a 14-13 victory.

Elsewhere in Texas high school playoff action Friday:

--in Class 5A, Aldine beat Houston Madison 29-22, Converse Judson ousted Eagle Pass 21-6, Abilene Cooper beat Irving Nimitz 38-18, Tyler John Tyler raced past Temple 54-24 and Austin Westlake shut out Victoria 41-0.

--in 4A, Highland Park defeated Cleburne 34-27, Pampa beat Azle 25-21 and Calallen thumped Marble Falls 42-20.

--in 3A, Coldspring beat Center 14-7, Tatum beat Van 27-8, Cameron beat Columbus 14-3 and Aledo beat Amarillo River Road 6-0.

--in 2A, Refugio blanked East Bernard 28-0, Iraan defeated Spearman 26-3, Groveton beat Grand Saline 17-10, Ganado beat Freer 21-3, Stamford defeated Lockney 17-7, Holliday nipped Italy 17-14 and Arp routed Rosebud-Lott 62-20.

--in 1A, Tenaha defeated Granger 19-13 and Wheeler stunned Munday 41-19.

--and in six-man football, No. 1-ranked Whitharral rolled by Southland 44-32, Chillicothe beat Grandfalls-Royalty 30-28, Gordon beat Zephyr 60-14 and Milford beat Blackwell 49-26.

Friona coach James Morton said he was "real surprised" when Vernon decided to go for two points instead of kicking the extra point for a 14-14 tie.

"It was a matter of guessing right. I think they believed we'd go for the fake to the big guy (Gaines), send all our guys at him. But our guys stayed at home and made what proved to be the winning (defensive) play," Morton said.

Blythe said he and his staff considered going for a tie at that point.

"But, if you come down to a tie game, you put the ball on the 25-yard line and you have just as much chance to win as we had with that conversion attempt," Blythe said.

"We felt like since we had gone to Sidnei twice for touchdowns that we would fake it on the conversion. Maybe we should have gone to Sidnei ... he's such a big, strong, talented player."

Friona's Chieftains scored first, capitalizing on a partially blocked punt by Vernon's Mark Graf that traveled just 14 yards in the first quarter. The Chieftains went 43 yards in seven plays, capped by Kyle Grimsley's 17-yard touchdown pass to wingback David Shelby.

But the ensuing extra point attempt failed, also because of a low snap from center, and Friona held a 6-0 lead just 4 1/2 minutes into the game.

The missed extra point loomed large after Gaines' first run, in which he barreled over two Friona players and dragged two more with him into the end zone. Vernon kicked its extra point for a 7-6 lead.

But Friona's Andy Kendrick scored on a 61-yard touchdown run on the first play of the second half. A two-point conversion pass gave the Chieftains a 14-7 lead in a game played in Snyder on a muddy field that more closely resembled a rodeo ring.

"The big thing for us in the second half was getting the two-point conversion," Morton said. "We told the kids not to be intimidated by Vernon's ranking and they listened. I have to admit the field conditions were just perfect to give us a chance at the upset."

The victory was Friona's 12th straight after an opening-week loss.

Kendrick led Friona with a game-high 96 yards rushing on 13 carries and also threw the game-winning two-point conversion.

Brenton Gabbert led Vernon in rushing with 13 carries for 82 yards, but came up short on the two-point conversion attempt that went awry.

Stockton, Malone lead Jazz in blowout

By CHRIS SHERIDAN
AP Basketball Writer

Three things you can count on in the NBA: The players will be tall, the ball will be round and the Utah Jazz LONGHORNS by either team in the 103-game series since Texas beat A&M 53-16 in 1982.

"It's been a real frustrating year for everyone connected with A&M football," said Aggies coach R.C. Slocum, whose team has lost two straight to Texas for the first time since 1982-83. "But I think you have to make it into a positive. We have some rebuilding to do. We've got to work at recruiting and refocus all aspects of the program."

If the Longhorns win the Big 12 title game next week, they would likely go to either the Orange or Fiesta bowl. A loss would likely send them to the Alamo or Aloha bowl.

Except for missing the postseason in 1994 due to NCAA probation, the Aggies had played in a bowl game every year since 1985.

Texas, which rolled up 594 yards, took control early in the third quarter after stopping a fake punt by A&M at the Aggies' 39 and scoring eight plays later on a 2-yard TD pass from Brown to Derrick Scott for a 24-9 lead.

"That was a big play because that would have given them some momentum and maybe an opportunity to strike," Texas coach John Mackovic said. "From there, we began rolling."

Adams then caught TD passes of 14 and 36 yards, putting Texas up 37-9 with 2:42 left in the third quarter. Adams, who finished with six receptions for 153 yards, set a school record for career TD catches with 16, passing Lovell Pinkney who had 15 from 1992-94.

Brown was 18-of-30 for 336 yards. His longest TD pass was a 53-yarder to Wane McGarity in the second quarter.

will have a strong season. It's no different this year.

The Jazz ran their winning streak to nine games Friday night with a 111-94 victory over the Los Angeles Clippers. The formula, of course, was much the same as it has been for years: John Stockton and Karl Malone led the way.

Stockton had a season-high 28 points on 12-of-13 shooting and Malone had 19 points despite sitting out the fourth quarter.

"Stockton walked right into a couple of 3s. He is a very good player. I think he and Malone will probably make it in this league if they stay around long enough," Clippers coach Bill Fitch joked after his team lost its fifth straight.

In other games, Chicago routed Dallas 116-97, Philadelphia defeated Orlando 100-91, Houston drubbed Boston 120-94, Seattle beat Phoenix 105-92, Portland trounced Golden State 119-93, Minnesota edged Denver 108-103, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Detroit 84-76, Atlanta crushed Washington 110-81 and Indiana beat Vancouver 104-94.

ALL-DISTRICT volleyball at Oklahoma: "She was the most dominating player in the district. She was last season and she is this season as well. She scored points for us before we got on the court because of her reputation - and her reputation was well-deserved."

--Barrett, the setter: "She stepped into the position of being the only setter as opposed to being one of two (she shared setting duties last year) - which is a difficult challenge. She accepted the responsibility that goes with that. Her position is one that doesn't gather a lot of attention, but it may be the most important position on the court."

--Abney, an outside hitter: "She's got an unbelievable jump, and she learned to hit the ball real hard during the off-season. Even though we centered the offense through the middles, Cassie's tale 's made us much more threatening as a team. Teams couldn't play us without worrying about her."

--Rampley, the other middle-blocker: "She's as competitive an individual as I've ever coached. She's by far the best second rotation middle blocker of any team we've played this year...She was an emotional sparkplug for us - she was capable of getting us fired up emotionally when we needed it."

--Betzen, an outside hitter: "She showed probably more improvement through the year than any of the kids. She doesn't swing at the ball hard often, but she does place the ball well with her attack. She really was a strong hitter for us when teams keyed on Danielle because she played next to Danielle."

Texas boasts variety of mascots

By JAIME ARON
AP Sports Writer

From Aggies to Zebras, the list of mascots used by Texas high school football teams offers a little bit of something for everyone.

There are enough different breeds of animals to fill the state's biggest zoo, several historical and literary references and a load of stuff that's just too wacky to classify.

Overall, there are 189 different nicknames used by the 974 teams sanctioned by the University Interscholastic League to play in Classes 1A through 5A this season.

Of those, 103 mascots were used only once, which means 86 were shared by the remaining 871 schools.

Bulldogs is the most popular choice, with 75 schools picking the snarling canine to embody its image. Eagles came in second at 68, followed by Tigers (55), Panthers (47) and Wildcats (45).

Panthers moved past Wildcats this year with the opening of Colleyville Heritage and Fossil Keller Ridge, both of which decided to be known as the Panthers.

"That's how we do things in the school business. Somebody does something innovative and we all copy it," joked Louis Henry, the community relations director for the Grapevine school district, which includes Heritage.

A third newcomer this year is Rowlett, which is part of the Garland school district. Officials there also bypassed being creative and instead picked Eagles.

Actually, the choice was made by a group of fifth-graders.

"The English teacher at one of the elementary schools asked her kids to select a mascot and write us a letter recommending it," said Mike Boyd, the vice-president of the school board and chairman of the facilities committee.

"We thought it was a worthwhile project and we didn't have a name in mind yet anyway. Besides, a lot of those kids will go to Rowlett High so they'll feel like they had a part in deciding the nickname."

According to local legend in Itasca, a student from the late 1920s helped them come up with one of the state's most unusual nicknames: Wampus Cats.

Nancy Bowman, a lifelong Itasca who runs the school's special services, explains that the team was having trouble finding a nickname until the perfect one erupted from a post-game lockerroom celebration. "Wow, we were really Wampus Cats tonight!" shouted Trav Burks, the story goes.

Immediately, every one knew a nickname had been born.

Amazingly, a school in Louisiana and another in Arkansas has the same nickname.

While the Arkansas school's mascot depicts an animal with six legs, the Itasca logo comes in all shapes and sizes.

"I think that's the neat thing: it can be whatever you imagine it to be," Bowman said. "Every year, the yearbook has all sorts of pictures, some comical, some real fierce-looking."

One alumnus made a wood carving of a cat head that sits in front of the school. An even bigger image is painted on the fieldhouse.

But the biggest of all is yet to come.

A local tool & die shop - which made national news recently with its half-size replica of a British Airways Concorde jet that will soon be suspended above New York's Times Square - is making a 10-foot Wampus Cat that likely will provide a defining image.

Still, that probably won't end the local game of "Wampus Cat hunting."

"Every once in a while, some old coots will say they caught a Wampus Cat. Everyone will get in their cars and go out there to see it, then they'll say, 'Aw, it went away,'" Bowman said, laughing. "Boy Scouts will go out camping and we'll tell them 'Don't let the Wampus Cat get you.'"

"It's just a great thing to talk about."

The imaginary mascot has made Itasca recognizable to people who don't even know the town of 1,600 is 45 miles south of Fort Worth. ESPN has done a story on it, as has The New York Times. A Dallas radio station has called it the "quintessential" Texas high school football nickname.

An equally bizarre fictional name is Voks, used by San Antonio Lanier.

Assistant principal Sarah Croft said that name harks back to the school's roots as a vocational program. It was San Antonio's only such program until the early 1970s.

Nowadays, Lanier is known for its magnet program in international banking and business. Yet the nickname - and logo - remains.

"It's a mechanical moving gear," Croft said. "Our emblem is round like a donut, but on the outside it has a little cog-looking thing."

There are hundreds of more stories, at least one for each nickname.

But another way of enjoying the state's mascots is by delving into the idiosyncrasies within the overall list.

For example, there are 17 Yellowjackets and five Yellow Jackets, six Lobos and two Lobeos, plus one Wildkats to go with all those Wildcats.

Surprisingly, there's not much of a story behind that intentional misspelling.

"I attended grade school here, graduated high school here and have been working here for 36 years and all I can say is that's just the way it's always been spelled," said Ruth Castleschouldt, the assistant superintendent for human resources for the Willis Wildkats.

"No one has ever asked that question. I don't even know how I'd research it because I'm the oldest one up here."

Castleschouldt said her best guess is that someone was trying to emulate nearby Sam Houston State University, which goes by Bearkats.

Four schools use that nickname, while 11 others go by the more-accurate Bearcats.

One school goes by Bumblebees, another by Bumble Bees. There are four Broncos and one Bronchos; seven Brahmas and one Brahams; two Buckaroos and two Bucks.

Eleven schools go by Cowboys, but only one is the Vaqueros (the Spanish equivalent). There are 24 Pirates and three Buccaneers.

Who'd have thought two schools would pick Stingarees? Or Sandies?

Three schools are Jackrabbits, while only one is the Rabbits. The three Roughriders are one more than the two Roughnecks. The 17 Longhorns easily outpoint the two Shorthorns.

There are Golden Bears, Golden Cranes, Golden Eagles, Golden Panthers and Golden Tornadoes.

School colors also are easy to decide for the Maroons, Silver Foxes and Purple Warriors. Likewise for the Blue Devils, Blue Raiders, Bluecats and Bluejays; or the Red Ants, Red Devils, Red Raiders and Redskins.

The most natural nicknames are taken from within the city name, such as the Deer Park Deer, Eagle Pass Eagles, Elkhart Elks, Farmersville Farmers, Hawkins Hawks, Muleshoe Mules and the aforementioned Crane Golden Cranes.

Playing off the name of the city or school also led to some of the more creative mascots.

Some - like the Buffalo Bison - are obvious; others - like the Troy Trojans - show varying degrees of thought.

Pick your own favorite from among the Cameron Yoe Yoemen, Mesquite Skeeters, Shamrock Irish, Tom Bean Tomcats, Van Vandals, Wolfe City Wolves, Winters Blizzards and Frost Polar Bears.

As promised, here's a historical reference: of the three teams nicknamed Roughriders, only one school is named after Theodore Roosevelt (San Antonio Roosevelt).

And, for literary aficionados, please note that the town of Hamlin goes by the Pied Pipers in tribute to the Robert Browning poem about the mythical strolling minstrel from the German town of Hamelin.

Another source for nicknames is geography.

Somerville's location near Yegua Creek led to the name Yeguas. Being alongside the Gulf of Mexico made Tarpons a natural for Port Isabel. Ditto for the Port Lavaca Calhoun Sandcrabs.

It's pretty easy to read into the names behind some West Texas schools: the Roscoe Plowboys, the Lubbock Monterey Plainsmen and the Sundown Roughnecks (a nod to the oilfield workers in the area).

Stretching farther into the Panhandle, the Texas-Oklahoma border town of Booker adopted Kiowas out of its proximity to Indian territory.

Keeping with the Indian theme, there are two Apaches, one Cherokees, two Chiefs and one Chieftains, two Redskins and, inevitably, 26 Indians.

Back South, nicknames tip off their proximity to the Mexico border. There are four Matadors, a Conquistadors, the Toros and the previously mentioned Vaqueros.

Not surprisingly, the most-copied nickname associated with a professional team is Cowboys (11). The Rangers are next at eight, followed by the Mavericks and Rockets at five, and the Oilers at two.

Sorry, no Astros or Stars. There are, however, the Pittsburgh Pirates.

But the school in Detroit decided not to crib from one of its northern namesakes' pro teams, going instead with Eagles. They were one of many schools eschewing a gimmie tie-in for more traditional names.

A few other perpetrators include Bovina, Happy, Harmony, Holland, Paradise and Venus.

Another segment of Texas schools have mascots that don't seem very intimidating - the Fort Worth Poly Parrots being one example.

Other teams not striking fear with their nicknames would be the Angoras, Goats, Kangaroos (there are three of those), Mules (two of those) and the Zebras.

While the Hutto Hippos don't seem too frightening, think again.

"I've come to find out they're vicious animals that kill natives all the time," said coach Jim Walker. "The word hippo comes from the African word meaning 'water horse.'"

"They take their hippos pretty seriously around here."

Homeless Mexican girls receive help from Reynosa nun

By MARISA TAYLOR
The Monitor (McAllen)
REYNOSA, Mexico - Sister Natividad speaks softly and carries a big stick.

Once angered by the kidnapping of a 10-year-old girl, the mother superior of a local convent here grabbed a stick and marched to the notorious red light district known as "Boys Town."

Confronted by burly men who guard the neighborhood, Sister Natividad - who barely reaches 5 feet tall - threatened to strike anyone blocking her path.

Grudgingly allowed to pass, the nun began looking in the dozens of strip joints lining the neighborhood's streets. Sister Natividad finally found the young girl in a cramped room, bound and gagged.

"I thought I had walked into hell," the 56-year-old nun says. "Everyone looked like little devils. It was horrible."

Fearing the wrath of a nun, Sister Natividad says the kidnappers quickly freed the girl destined for sale into prostitution.

The mother superior, head of a convent known as Casa Amparo, where homeless girls are sheltered, often finds herself in situations most people might find baffling.

"Sometimes, I don't know what to do," she says. "But I have to do something because otherwise the girls would end up on the street or become prostitutes."

Sister Natividad, who shed her last name when she became a nun more than four decades ago, cares for about 20 homeless girls in a quiet convent on the outskirts of this city, which sits on the border south of McAllen, Texas.

The girls, ranging in age from four months to 18, come from city slums and impoverished rural towns.

Some are runaways who fled incest or abuse. Others, deserted by one or both parents, fend for themselves on the streets. Often, their fathers are drug addicts and their mothers are prostitutes.

"I never had a real home until I came here," says Gabi Roa, a 16-year-old from Veracruz. "This place is like a paradise for me."

To the nuns, the refuge represents almost two decades of struggle.

More than 17 years ago, they arrived to a dusty patch of land with no money. Drumming up donations, the nuns supervised construction of dormitories, a large kitchen complete with bread ovens and a school house.

The nuns also scraped together funds for a driveway, cobblestone paths and a vegetable garden. Recently, a wealthy family donated an unadorned chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

The result is a serene sanctuary in the heart of a rough-and-tumble working class neighborhood.

Eleven nuns carefully watch over the girls, alternately playing the role of mother, teacher and counselor.

"Look children, you have to study hard to get somewhere," Sister Natividad advises the girls. "Don't think about your mother. Don't think about your father. You don't have to end up like them."

Despite their best efforts, the nuns know some girls will return to the city streets.

"You are here of your own free will," Sister Natividad tells the girls. "Nobody is forcing you to stay."

Since the shelter's inception, hundreds of Mexican girls have chosen the security of the convent's walls.

Sister Natividad recounts the story of a 13-year-old girl who arrived to the shelter impregnated by her own father. At the time, doctors predicted the girl would die unless she underwent an abortion.

The nuns found themselves in a serious religious quandary. Catholicism forbids abortion, yet they could not allow the girl to die.

With the help of U.S. volunteer workers, Sister Natividad tracked down a Michigan doctor who was willing to perform a risky operation that saved both mother and child.

The story ran on television shows on both sides of the Rio Grande. The girl, mesmerized by the publicity, chose to leave the convent before her 18th birthday. Soon, the girl put her child up for adoption and returned to the city streets.

"She was so smart," Sister Natividad says sadly.

But the nun resumes her determined manner as she straightens her white and black habit.

"Sometimes you have to be hardhearted," she says with a sigh. "You can't cry over one girl when you have 30 more at your door."

The nuns also remain pragmatic about each girl's future.

Many of the girls, arriving to the shelter with an elementary school education, are years behind their peers in schooling.

"We don't fool ourselves," Sister Natividad says. "If these girls stay off the streets and learn to read and write, they're lucky. Most of them will live simple lives."

The mother superior encourages the girls to seek normal lives. The girls, who wear red plaid uniforms in the shelter, are prohibited from joining the convent.

"We don't want our children to be scared of the outside world," she says. "We tell them when they grow up, they can have normal lives."

The girls agree that the convent walls sometimes seem a little too safe.

"Outside, I feel like someone will make fun of me," 16-year-old Roa says, quietly looking down at her hands. "Sometimes, I'm afraid to leave."

Many of the girls, however, flourish under the nuns' care. For these girls, the shelter represents the first taste of a stable life.

"I feel calm and safe here," Cynthia Rodriguez Sosa, a 16-year-old Tampico native, says. "I have more confidence."

Roa, who last saw her parents eight years ago, says she became attached to the nuns only after a few months at the shelter.

"They are like mothers to me," she says. "I love them."

The nuns, who receive no government funding, depend almost entirely on charitable donations from Rio Grande Valley residents and U.S. retirees who travel to the border area from the Midwest every winter.

The volunteers, charmed by the outspoken mother superior and her noble cause, often work long hours to help out. One 70-year-old man set aside several days to construct a table for the convent's kitchen. A McAllen microbiologist parked her BMW along a Valley road and sold sweet bread baked by the nuns.

"Some days are difficult," Sister Natividad says. "But help always miraculously arrives."

Circle of Friends stages annual membership Christmas party

Painting on display

This painting by Carl J. Smith is on display at FirstBank Southwest. The artist and Sagebrush Gallery have donated the painting to the Circle of Friends as a fund-raiser for the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center. Tickets are $25. They are available from members of the Circle of Friends, Hereford State Bank or FirstBank Southwest. Pictured are Rita Bell and John Sherrod.

The Hereford area Circle of Friends of the Don and Sybil Harrington Cancer Center in Amarillo will stage its annual membership party with a Christmas open house from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 7 in the home of Wendel and Merle Clark, 139 N. Texas.

Membership is open to the public. Cost is $15 for a single membership, $25 for a couple, or $100 for corporate membership. Money raised is used to provide financial assistance to cancer patients and their families.

For those wishing to join this unique organization and receive an invitation to the party, you may contact one of the hosts for the event. They include Wendel and Merle Clark, Cliff and Jody Skiles, Nadir and Sylvia Khuri, Craig and Mysedia Smith, Bob and Nancy Josseland, Roberta Caviness, Bruce and Melissa Clarke, Johnny and DeeAnn Trotter, Jeremy and Kit Grant, Dan and Misty Bornemeier, John and Karen Sherrod, Frank and Diana Griffin, John and Sandy Josseland, Charmayne Klett, Steve and Kim Lawliss, and Stanley and Genieva Schaeffer.

The highlight of this year's party will be the drawing for a Carl J. Smith painting donated by Sagebrush Gallery and the artist, a cancer survivor. Tickets for the painting are $25 and are available from any host, the Hereford State Bank or FirstBank Southwest.

The Circle of Friends is a non-profit organization founded to support the philosophy and goals of the cancer center.

Becky's Camp Site

Thanksgiving is over and suddenly our thoughts turn to Christmas.

Could it really be this close? Where did the time go? What happened to all our good intentions to start Christmas shopping early this year?

It's officially time to put up the Christmas tree and get out the rest of the decorations that we packed away so carefully -- could it really be 11 months ago?

The rule at our house has always been "One holiday at a time." That means no Christmas decorations until

Holiday dinner is at Post Home

The American Legion and Auxiliary Christmas Holiday Dinner will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 3 in the Legion Post Home.

Members are urged to bring a covered dish - vegetable, salad or dessert.

Gifts to Amarillo Veterans Hospital Gift Shop will be collected.

A Christmas gift exchange by members is also planned. Entertainment will be a Christmas program.

after Thanksgiving. But immediately after.

So on Friday out come the boxes of ornaments, figurines, garland, wreaths, etc.

The first decision is where to put the tree. (There's no time spent shopping for one, since allergies dictate that only an artificial tree can be used.)

When the tree is in place, then decisions have to be made about where to put everything that has been moved to make room for the tree.

Decisions on what ornaments to include on the tree sometimes lead to heated discussions. Over the years, we have accumulated too many ornaments for the small tree we have now.

So, we must decide if we'll use an assortment or try for a theme this year.

Some things are unchanging, though. The Nativity is always placed on top of the corner shelf and the Santa figurine goes on the television.

Finally, all the boxes are empty and all the decorating is done. But something is missing.

The tree looks bare without packages.

Now the shopping has to be done. Never mind the good intentions to start early this year.

Well, maybe next year.

Parenting class is offered

Camp Fire boys and girls is offering a parenting class, "Parents and Providers as Partners - The Parenting Program of the 90s," from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Dec. 7 in the Camp Fire building, 903 14th Street in Hereford.

Through 100 percent financing from the Children's Trust Fund, the Panhandle Plains Council of Camp Fire is offering this unique class.

Parents and child care providers can learn to provide more consistent care between home and child care, understand different stages of child development, provide new techniques in positive discipline, build positive self-esteem in children, reduce stress in children and adults, communicate more effectively.

Class, child care, lunch and door prizes will be provided at no cost to participants.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I know from having read your column for many years that you are very proud of Chicago. Will you please explain how the police department in your beautiful city got away with the following:

Patricia Mullen's unclothed dead body was found in her home by one of her children. The child phoned 911. The police responded and removed the children from the scene. When Mullen's niece requested that the body be transported to the coroner's office, one of the officers reportedly said she was "too fat" to take to the coroner.

The police then dragged the still-unclothed body by the ankles from the bathroom and left it outside for four hours while they played Nintendo and helped themselves to the food in Mullen's refrigerator. One of the policemen offered some food to the neighborhood children, saying, "Hey, want something to eat? The fat lady is dead."

Witnesses said one of the officers kicked the body and made jokes about the way the fat jiggled. As if that weren't bad enough, 17 funeral homes refused to take the 500-pound body. They said they "weren't equipped to handle it." Blake Lamb Funeral Home mercifully volunteered.

Why has there not been a huge public outcry about this outrage? Maybe because she was a heavy woman, they figured it was OK to treat her with such disrespect.

Please, Ann Landers, look into this bizarre incident and find out why such despicable behavior by "Chicago's finest" was permitted. I don't get it. -- Catherine in Salinas, Calif.

Dear Catherine: We talked to a spokesman for the Chicago Police Department and were informed that a thorough investigation was conducted of the circumstances surrounding the removal of Mullen's body. The results of any such investigation, however, are not made public unless the officers involved are dismissed or receive more than a 30-day suspension. Evidently, neither of those particular disciplinary actions took place.

It is generally the duty of the Department of Health to remove a dead body from the premises. Often, however, the police will respond to the call as a favor to the medical examiner's office. In this case, the police behaved in what seems to be a shamefully unprofessional manner. If I hear any more about it, I'll let you know.

Dear Ann Landers: The other night, a few friends and I were playing poker and decided to play a five-card game where the worst hand wins, instead of the best.

We decided the worst possible poker hand is ace, two, three, four and six. When we showed our cards, "Ben" had ace, two, four, seven and eight. "Dave" had two, three, five, six and eight.

I said Ben was the winner since the ace hand had the lowest total, but my friends disagreed. They said if you eliminate the eights, the next highest card was Ben's seven, so Dave would be the winner since his next-highest card was only a six.

To me, this is like saying a check for $22 is higher than a check for $24. It makes no sense. Which do you think was the lower hand? -- Pembroke Pines, Fla.

Dear P.P.F.: I'm not much of a card player, so I checked around with a few pals, and this is what they said:

In regular poker, if no player has even a pair, the hand with the highest card wins. You can look at this two ways: Eliminate the eights, and Dave is the winner because the next-highest card is Ben's seven. Or, Ben is the winner since he had the lowest card combination, ace, two. Under no circumstances had my pals heard of adding up the cards.

Have trouble sleeping at night and don't want to get involved in a novel? "A Collection of My Favorite Gems of the Day" is the perfect bed-stand mate. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Collection, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562 (in Canada, $6.25).

Extension News

By BEVERLY HARDER
County Extension Agent/FCS
Many people who go on spending binges may suffer from hidden pain of low self-worth.

Experts on credit, cash and co-dependency observe that spending binges can be caused by trust in "things" that people can hold on to, which they believe will never let them down. They have developed mistrust in people. People have a choice, but inanimate objects and possessions do not have a choice and stay with them until they choose to give them away.

What does money mean to you? Think back to your childhood and recall habits concerning money with which you grew up. Did you experience hoarding, collecting, saving, making gifts, buying gifts? What did possessions represent in your family?

Write them down and compare them to your attitudes and behaviors regarding money today. You may discover sources of both satisfactions and dissatisfactions you are experiencing with money today.

Air Force Senior Airman Ricky D. Rieves has been selected to be a member of the Armed Forces Inaugural Committee in support of the 53rd Presidential Inauguration on Jan. 20, 1997.

The temporary joint task force consists of 819 men and women from the Army, Air Force, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard. They coordinate support for the swearing-in ceremony, and plan and coordinate communications for parade control and other ceremonial events during the 10-day inaugural period.

The Armed Forces have been a part of U.S. President inaugural ceremonies since George Washington climbed the steps of Federal Hall in New York City to take the first oath of office on April 20, 1789. He was escorted by members of the Continental Army.

Rieves is the son of Don and Alice Rieves of Hereford.

His wife, Dora, is the daughter of Quintine and Maria Marquez, also of Hereford.

The senior airman is a 1989 graduate of Hereford High School.

If you're just recovering from last year's Christmas spending and starting on this year's gift buying, ask yourself why you buy gifts you cannot afford. Studies of compulsive spenders observe that spending more for gifts than you can afford may be for one or more of the following reasons:

- *So the person will like you more.
- *To feel accepted.
- *Buying what you like rather than taking time to shop for what you can afford.
- *Feeling it is expected.
- *Not wanting to look cheap.
- *You don't shop often, so you over spend when you do shop.

*You like to see the satisfaction of the "receiver."

*Guilt -- feeling the need to treat everyone the same or to keep up a pattern of spending set in more affluent times.

When you understand why you spend as you do, you can begin to seek the results you want by other means.

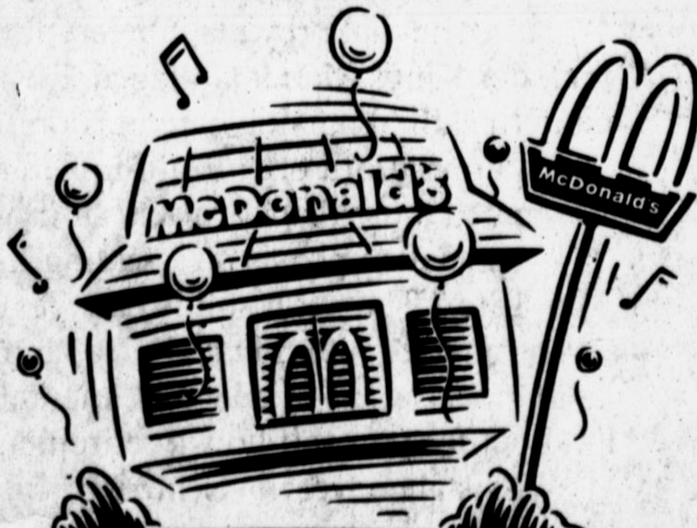

Send a personal message with an affordable gift that may take more time to find, but gives both the sender and the receiver a feeling that the gift affirms your relationship as one that does not have to be bought.

Brushing your hair one hundred strokes is no longer recommended. It only pulls hair out at the roots.

Thank You

The family of Hilda Straffuss wish to thank everyone for all the kindness shown her over the past years. We wish to especially thank Msgr. Blum, Dr. Howard Johnson, the Staff at Hereford Regional Medical Center, the loving staff at Westgate Nursing Home, and the faithful Ministers of the Eucharist. We dedicate this poem to you:

Blessed are they who understand, My faltering step and palsied hand.
Blessed are they who know my ears today, Must strain to catch the things they say.
Blessed are they who seem to know, That my eyes are dim and my wits are slow.
Blessed are they who looked away, When coffee spilled at our table today.
Blessed are they whom with cheery smile, Stop to chat for a little while.
Blessed are they who never say, "You've told that story twice today."
Blessed are they who know the ways, To bring back memories of yesterdays.
Blessed are they who make it known, That I'm loved, respected, and not alone.
Blessed are they who know I'm at a loss, To find the strength to carry my Cross.
Blessed are they who ease the days, Of my journey "Home" in loving ways.

May God Bless each of you,
Carl & Joan Straffuss and family

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Sunday, Dec. 1, the 336th day of 1996. There are 30 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:
On Dec. 1, 1955, Rosa Parks, a black seamstress, defied the law by refusing to give up her seat to a white man aboard a Montgomery, Ala., city bus. Mrs. Parks was arrested, sparking a yearlong boycott of the buses by blacks.

On this date:
In 1824, the presidential election was turned over to the House of Representatives when a deadlock developed between John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson, William H. Crawford and Henry Clay. (Adams ended up the winner.)

In 1913, the first drive-in automobile service station opened in Pittsburgh.

In 1942, nationwide gasoline rationing went into effect in the United States.

In 1956, the Leonard Bernstein musical "Candide," based on Voltaire, opened on Broadway.

In 1959, representatives of 12 countries, including the United States, signed a treaty in Washington setting aside Antarctica as a scientific preserve, free from military activity.

In 1965, an airlift of refugees from Cuba to the United States began in which thousands of Cubans were allowed to leave their homeland.

In 1969, the U.S. government held its first draft lottery since World War II.

In 1973, David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister, died in Tel Aviv at age 87.

In 1990, British and French workers digging the Channel Tunnel, or Chunnel, between their countries finally met after knocking out a passage in a service tunnel.

Ten years ago: President Ronald Reagan said he would welcome the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate the Iran-Contra affair, if such a move were recommended by the Justice Department.

Five years ago: Ukrainians voted overwhelmingly for independence from the Soviet Union. Kidnappers in Lebanon pledged to release American hostage Joseph Cicippio within 48 hours. The space shuttle Atlantis safely returned from a shortened military mission.

One year ago: Tens of thousands of people in Dublin, Ireland, warmly welcomed President Clinton to his ancestral homeland. The NATO alliance chose Spanish Foreign Minister Javier Solana to be its new secretary general.

Today's Birthdays: Former CIA director Stansfield Turner is 73. Actor David Doyle is 71. Singer Billy Paul is 62. Actor-comedian-director Woody Allen is 61. Singer Lou Rawls is 61. Golfer Lee Trevino is 57. Singer Dianne Lennon (The Lennon Sisters) is 57. Comedian-actor Richard Pryor is 56. Rock musician John Densmore (The Doors) is 52. Actress-singer Bette Midler is 51. Singer Gilbert O'Sullivan is 50. Actor Treat Williams is 45. Actress Charlene Tilton is 38. Actress-model Carol Alt is 36.

Thought for Today: "No man knows his true character until he has run out of gas, purchased something on the installment plan and raised an adolescent." — Marcelene Cox, American writer.

Brumley wins VFW contest

The Ladies Auxiliary to Roy Wederbrook Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #4818 met recently in regular session with Betty Boggs, senior vice president, presiding.

The Voice of Democracy contest has been completed. The local winner is Amber Brumley from Community Christian School. Her winning tape was sent to District 13, where she placed third.

The Auxiliary auction sale will be Friday night, Dec. 13. The door prize is a king size quilt. Auxiliary members are selling $1 tickets on the quilt.

The next meeting will be at 7 p.m. Monday. There will be a supper at 6:30 p.m.

Green and Yellow Team students have been using the scientific method to study the properties of Oobleck, an unknown substance. This project involves research, record keeping and reporting from each student.

GT students are finishing horror stories and creatures to complete their unit on Frankenstein. Monsters created by the students are on display in the library. The Monster Academy Awards will be held Dec. 3 in the library during GT class periods. Parents, check for class time is you wish to be in attendance for this awards ceremony.

Mr. Farr recently showed slides of Williamsburg, colonial capital of Virginia, for enrichment during Pink Team's study of the English colonies.

A BLT meeting is scheduled for Dec. 4 at 7:30 a.m. Parents are welcome to attend the meeting.

HJH will host a Scholastic Book Fair from Dec. 9-13. This reading event will offer students, teachers and parents an opportunity to view and purchase books for young readers. More information will be reported about this event next week.

Progress reports for those students making a grade of 74 or below will be mailed to parents this week. Parents, please take this opportunity to work with your child to improve their grades.

Students will complete "Trails West" essays for the DAR competition this week. We feel that we have almost traveled the Oregon, Santa Fe, Western, Cumberland and several other trails and have become acquainted with some of the pioneers during this research. This has been a rewarding experience for those who chose to research and write. We feel that they may have a deeper respect for those who "blazed the trails" to allow us to enjoy life today.

Conservation essays are also nearing completion. These will be corrected and typed this week and we plan to have several ready for competition. Junior Historians will be getting Christmas cards ready to take to the Veterans Hospital. If any of you wish to donate cards for this project, please let us know or bring them by the HJH office.

Women's Division accepting Woman of Year nominations

The Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce is accepting nominations for Woman of the Year.

The Woman of the Year award recognizes an individual who has actively contributed to the community on behalf of the Women's Division and the Chamber of Commerce during the past year.

Persons submitting a nominee need not be a member of the Women's Division. Nominations should be in writing, giving qualifications and reasons why the person named should be considered. The letter does not have to be signed.

Nominations for Woman of the Year will be open until Dec. 20. They may be mailed to the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 192, Hereford, or they will be accepted at the office, 701 N. Main St.

Hereford Chamber Singers schedule holiday concert

The Hereford Chamber Singers will present a free holiday concert Sunday afternoon, Dec. 8, at the Fellowship of Believers, 245 N. Kingwood. The performance begins at 4 p.m., following the annual Tour of Homes scheduled that afternoon.

Everyone is invited to come enjoy the holiday music and the refreshments which will be served after the concert.

Several well-known Christmas songs, including "I'll Be Home For Christmas," as well as lighter numbers such as "Rockin' Around the Christmas Tree" and "Throw the Yule Log on, Uncle John" by P.D.Q. Bach will be featured. The sacred Christmas musical, "Celebrate the Child Who is Light," created and arranged by Tom Fettke, will also be presented. Directing the performance will be Esther York. Accompanist is Linda Gilbert.

Hereford Chamber Singers is a community choir made up of members from all walks of life who get together once a week to sing because they love music. The choir will be performing at several other holiday events in addition to this free public concert. Anyone who is interested in becoming a part of the group may contact Joan Bookout, president, at 364-0076.

Christmas lighting contest

The home of Leona Sowell was one of the winners in last year's Christmas lighting contest. The contest is being sponsored again this year by Women's Division of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce. Entry forms are available from the Chamber office. Deadline for entries is 5 p.m. Dec. 16.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: There was a hint from a woman who raises beagles and how she keeps the pups cool in summer with frozen jugs of water.

I was wondering if you could forward my name and address and phone number and ask her to please contact me.

My husband and I have a 2-year-old male beagle, AKC registered and papered, that we want to start breeding and studing out. I would like to gather some information on how to go about starting this.

I thought she could give us some good advice. — S. Heywood, Medford, Ore.

Thanks for your letter. This column receives quite a few letters like yours and others asking for addresses of readers.

I'm sorry, but I don't pass along names and addresses to anyone.

Your veterinarian should be able to help you find a breeder in your area. Also, the American Kennel Club said that since your dog is AKC registered, you can call them for the phone number of the National Beagle Club, and they can inform you of a breeder in your area.

Hope this helps! — Heloise

POTTED PLANTS

Dear Heloise: Sometimes when I water my potted plants I use too much water and the tray inside the pot begins to overflow.

I simply use an old turkey baster to remove the excess water and, in a jiffy, my problem is solved! — Barbara Luria, Potomac, Md.

HAMMER NAILS

Dear Heloise: I have arthritic hands and sometimes am unable to hold things.

I wanted to hammer a small nail and, no matter how hard I tried, I couldn't hold it in place for the first whack.

Then my brain woke up. Needle-nose pliers to the rescue! It worked like a charm and I hammered away. — Mercedes McDaniel, River Ridge, La.

CHARM BRACELET

Dear Heloise: The charms from my old charm bracelet have new life.

Now, I wear them on wires or hoops in my ears! Everyone loves my eclectic earrings and it's fun to tell each charm's story. — Ann Louise Vold, Rochester, Minn.

HAPPY 50th JERRY TISDALE!

Love Ya!

Many Thanks!

The Hereford Senior Citizens want to express our appreciation to the wonderful people of Hereford for your participation in this year's Festival of Trees. Your continued involvement and support in this project makes it possible for our organization to assist older residents in maintaining an active and productive life. We are very thankful for the community in which we live.

We would like to extend appreciation to the many volunteers who provided their time and efforts throughout the Festival this year.

Lifestyles Policies

The Hereford Brand welcomes news articles of interest from local readers, clubs and organizations. Because this is a daily newspaper, we must have guidelines on timely submission of news items.

*General news items for the Lifestyles section must be submitted by 1 p.m. the day before publication and by 9 a.m. Friday for the Sunday edition. Club reports should be submitted the day following the meeting, and no later than three days. Late contributions are subject to considerable editing.

*Listings for club meetings and special events in the "Calendar of Events" should be submitted by Wednesday of each week.

*Photos of new club officers, donation presentations, etc., can be made by appointment at The Brand office Monday through Friday after 2 p.m. We do not take photos for engagements, weddings, anniversaries or showers; however, loaner cameras are available and should be reserved 24 hours in advance. The Brand has forms available, upon request, for preparing engagement announcements, wedding stories, anniversary celebrations and bridal showers. These are usually too lengthy to take over the phone.

*Engagements should be announced at least a month before the wedding, if both an engagement and wedding photo are desired. Photos should be in black and white; some color photos may be approved if contrast is suitable for reproduction. Wedding and anniversary writeups should be submitted at least five days before publication.

*The Brand will take on-location photos for special events. Call at least two days before the event to see if arrangements can be made.

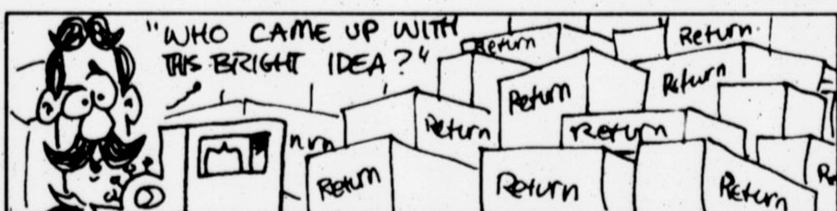

*Notices of birthday celebrations will be written for Hereford residents 80 years of age and up. The Brand advertising department will quote prices and prepare all other birthday greetings or announcements, including Quinceaneras.

*Notices of new arrivals born in Hereford Regional Medical Center, information on local babies born elsewhere, or with grandparents in Hereford, should be reported to The Brand within two weeks. Brief items of interest about college students, or former residents, are welcome concerning degrees, academic honors, career promotions, etc. Please submit as soon as possible to ensure timeliness.

To submit an article or obtain more information, call Becky Camp at 364-2030 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. After 5 p.m., information may be placed in the night drop at our front door.

Happiness is essentially a state of going somewhere, wholeheartedly, one-directionally, without regret or reservation.

Lubbock woman devoted to her chicken soup

By MARK BABINECK
Associated Press Writer

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) -- Carole Curlee dishes out love by the ladle. Her southwest Lubbock home is a shrine to the culinary arts, featuring memorabilia and scores of files jammed with recipes she's collected over the years.

But this 60-year-old grandmother of six holds one recipe dearest of all.

"I really think this could be the answer for a lot of organizations," she says of her Mulligatawny Chicken Soup, a formula she's refined, modified and -- most of all -- expanded over the last 32 years to produce 60 gallons at a time.

Mrs. Curlee learned the soup from her mother-in-law in 1964. In fact, it's impossible to visit the Curlee household without either hearing about or tasting the concoction.

"Her only problem is she's not enthusiastic enough," husband Robert jokes.

Mrs. Curlee's cookbook, "A Casually Catered Affair," is in its 11th printing locally and recently was selling more briskly than offerings from Bill Gates and Carl Sagan at a major area bookstore. But she's determined to spread the news about her soup for free.

Whenever she learns of a group that feeds people, from here to Hong Kong, she writes them offering the recipe. Some have written back with thanks and compliments on the soup.

"I'm incorrigible when it comes to that chicken soup," she said. "I just think that it can help so many people for so little, that's really the wonderful thing about it."

At $5 to $6 per gallon, or about 50 cents a serving, the soup is perfect for soup kitchens and other organizations that feed en masse, she said.

"The soup keeps up to four or five days in the refrigerator, it freezes well, it's economical and excellent," Mrs. Curlee said.

Mrs. Curlee's participation in area causes and the Presbyterian church have made the soup something of a local legend, as her scores of letters from grateful people can attest.

"Mrs. C." one begins. "You have saved my live today. Thank you for the soup and all your kindness. Toni."

The executive director of the regional food bank, Carolyn Lanier, said Mrs. Curlee's volunteerism and her recipe have been important to feeding Lubbock's needy.

"Our mission is to feed those less fortunate that are not able to feed themselves, but also to teach self-sufficiency," Ms. Lanier said. "We often give out those supplies (to make the soup). It's nourishing and good for you to eat."

The following recipe for Carole Curlee's Mulligatawny Chicken Soup makes one gallon and, she estimates, costs about $5 or $6. She's dedicated to spreading it to as many charities and soup kitchens as possible:

For broth:
4 pounds chicken
3 quarts water
1 whole onion
2 stalks celery, twisted
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
1 bay leaf
For soup:
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
2/3 cup rice, uncooked
1 cup onion, finely chopped
1 cup carrots, diced or scraped
3/4 cup celery, chopped
1 teaspoon curry powder (rounded)

To Your Good Health

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am 79, and live in Florida. My daughter in Chicago sends me your column. I'm writing you about the item on pseudogout and colchicine, the medicine for it. I don't like medicines, and always check on possible side effects. I cannot find colchicine on the store shelves. Clerks never heard of it. What did you say about the medicine, side effects, dose, etc.? — L.W.

ANSWER: Colchicine is a generic drug name. You won't find it on store counters; it must be prescribed. Pseudogout mimics regular gout. There's the sudden swelling and joint pain, usually of the knee. In regular gout, the big toe is usually the site of first pain.

The main area where the two differ is in the substance of the crystals. In regular gout, urate crystals form. In pseudogout, the crystals are calcium.

Much pseudogout inflammation responds to the simple anti-inflammatory drugs, such as aspirin or indomethacin.

Severe, recurring cases can demand drainage of the joint or injection of cortisone into the inflamed area.

The earlier reference regarded a gentleman who had severe recurring pseudogout episodes. Colchicine is a drug op. on in such cases.

Doctors usually prescribe colchicine daily in low doses and with caution. Diarrhea can be an unpleasant side effect. You would have to see if your doctor sees wisdom in having you take colchicine. In truth, the drug does not help prevent pseudogout attacks in every user, as it usually does in ordinary gout.

Dr. Donohue regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but he will incorporate them in his column whenever possible. Readers may write him at P.O. Box 5539, Riverton, NJ 08077-5539.

YOUR EYES

Keep A Spare On Hand

Remember when suits came with two pairs of pants? If anything happened to one, the owner had a spare pair ready. Eyeglass wearer should be as well equipped.

There's nothing quite so frustrating as arriving on vacation far from home and discovering that your glasses—or your sunglasses—are broken. It's almost as bad or worse than arriving at your office to find you've left your reading glasses home. Fact is, almost anyone who really needs glasses—anyone who can't see at least 20/60 at distance or who can't see print clearly close up—really needs an extra pair for emergencies. Folks who really depend on corrective lenses should have extra pairs stashed away in the car, in a desk drawer, a factory locker or in a suitcase when traveling. Contact-lens wearers need any extra pair of eyeglasses, too.

Economy tip: the extra pair can be installed in an inexpensive, non-stylish frame, but the prescription should be up-to-date.

Wyche hosts FCE Council

Wyche Family and Community Education Club was hostess when the Deaf Smith County FCE Council met recently in the Heritage Room of the county library.

Seven FCE clubs were represented with four having 100 percent attendance.

Maudette Smith, chairman, called the meeting to order. Mary Lou Aven led the FCE prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag. Kay Behrends read the poem "Twas the Night before Christmas-Texas Style."

Welcomed visitors were Alta Mae Higgins, Vada Batterman and Behrends.

During the business meeting, standing committees gave their reports.

The Christmas party is planned for Dec. 9. Each club is to bring a covered dish and dessert. New officers for the coming year will be installed at the party, according to Tonie Vaughn, chairman of the nominating committee.

Jo Lee, TAFCE, reported on the spring planning meeting held Nov. 21 which she attended, along with Maudette Smith, Mariellen Homfeld and Beverly Harder.

The House of the Week

Affordable, Comfortable Living

THIS HOME'S BRICK EXTERIOR, steep hip roof and corner quoins give it a pastoral look.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

With its open design and compact 1,513 square feet of living space, Plan G-23, by HomeStyles Designers Network, combines comfortable living with affordability.

The elegant exterior of this home is matched by the spaces within.

Inside, the foyer opens to the centrally located living room, which features a 15-ft. cathedral ceiling, a fireplace and access to a rear terrace.

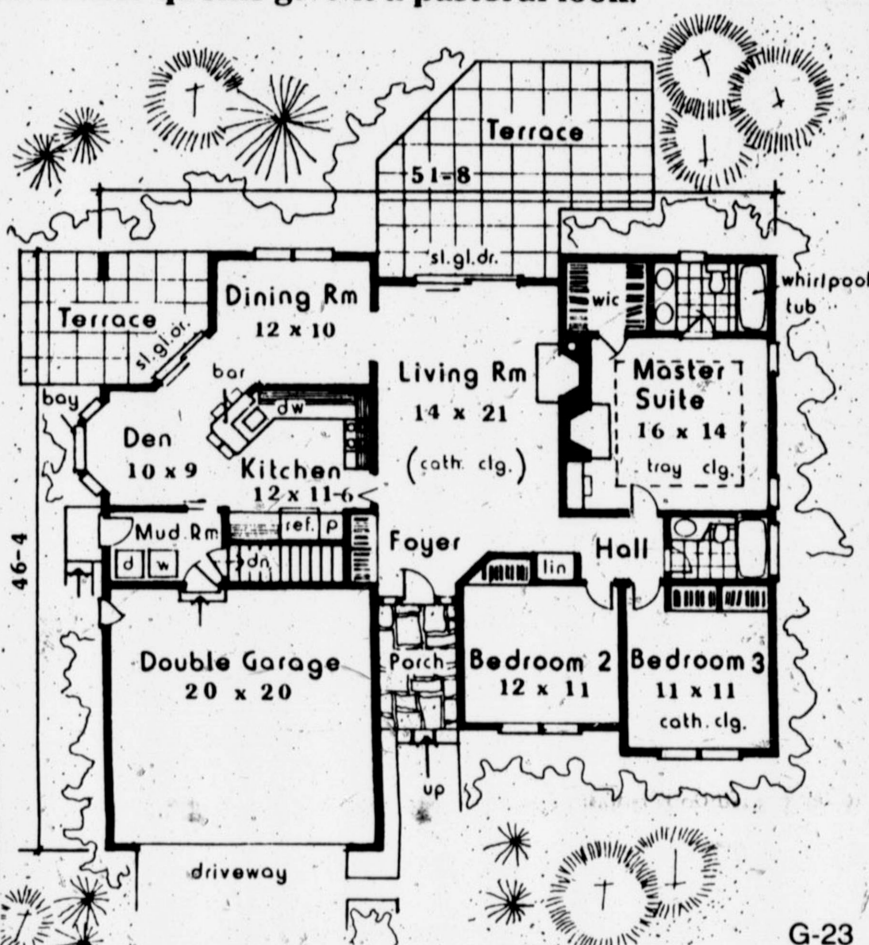

The unusual kitchen design includes an angled snack bar between the bayed den and the dining room. Sliding glass doors open to a second terrace.

The master suite is a dream come true, with its romantic fireplace, built-in desk and 9-ft. tray ceiling. The private bath includes a whirlpool tub and a dual-sink vanity. Another full bath serves the remaining two bedrooms, one of which features a 10 1/2-ft. cathedral ceiling and an arched window.

G-23 STATISTICS

Design G-23 has a foyer, living room, dining room, den, kitchen, three bedrooms, two full baths and a mudroom, totaling 1,513 square feet of living space. The plan is available with 2x4 or 2x6 exterior wall framing and a standard basement, crawlspace or slab foundation. A two-car garage provides 400 square feet of space.

THE FOYER flows directly into the living room, which features a 15-ft. cathedral ceiling, a fireplace and sliding glass doors that open to a backyard terrace. To the left, the kitchen, dining room and den merge to create a nice open area. There is a snack bar between the kitchen and the den. Across the home, a fireplace warms the master suite. Other highlights include a built-in desk, a walk-in closet and a private bath. Two more bedrooms and a full bath complete the floor plan.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Cold Weather? High Heating Costs? Insulate!

(NAPS)—Here are two pieces of news you may want to insulate yourself (and your home) against.

First, the U. S. Department of Energy reports there will be fuel shortages this winter. This usually means higher heating costs. Second, the 1997 Farmer's Almanac is predicting an extremely cold latter half of the winter throughout the country with above normal amounts of snow.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

You'll Never Be Sorry...

Few people live their lives without regrets. In fact, I've never met anyone who said, "I would not change anything about my life." Most of us have mistakes in our past that we would correct if given the opportunity.

Unfortunately, we seldom have a second chance. Therefore, the best plan for a successful future is to eliminate mistakes before we make them. In this column, I'd like to provide several "you'll never be sorry" thought starters. In everyday living

You'll never be sorry for thinking before acting, listening before judging and considering your words carefully before speaking.

You'll never regret standing up for what you believe, swallowing an angry retort and giving to those in need.

You'll never be sorry for ignoring gossip, doing what is right even when no one is watching you and reading the Bible.

You'll never have to apologize for telling the truth, forgiving someone who has wronged you and telling your spouse of your love.

You'll never regret turning the other cheek, avoiding an argument, being courteous and showing kindness to the afflicted.

You'll never feel remorse because you set a goal and worked toward it, completed a difficult project and sought peace instead of going to be angry.

You'll never rue the day you admitted you were wrong, apologized and mended a broken relationship and patted someone on the back for their success or achievement.

You'll never be sorry for not lighting your first cigarette, not taking your first drink, not doing drugs and not committing your first crime.

You'll never regret turning off the TV and turning to a good book, thinking more and speaking less and harboring only positive thoughts.

You'll never be sorry you kept your promises, developed your public speaking skills and saved for your retirement. In your business

You'll never be sorry for satisfying customers, learning to read and understand your financial statements and remembering your customer's names.

You'll never regret giving your customers good value, being honest in every transaction and eliminating waste.

You'll never suffer guilt pangs because you planned before you executed, made improvements every day and praised fellow workers for tasks well done.

You'll never be sorry for building relationships with your suppliers, keeping your banker informed, listening to your customers and taking time to write a few thank you notes.

You'll never feel remorse because you gave a good customer the benefit of the doubt, set up a customer database and learned a valuable lesson from a competitor.

You'll never be sorry for listing the advantages and benefits you offer your customers that no one else can match, building a winning team and taking extra time in hiring and training employees.

You'll never regret making every job fun, developing an enthusiastic attitude, greeting every customer and making a good first impression.

You'll never be sorry for following up after the sale, asking for customer suggestions and taking time to do the job right the first time.

You'll never regret learning about the latest technology, turning your inventory at a rate higher than your industry's average and spending a little extra for really classy business cards.

You'll never feel bad because you helped another small-business owner through a crisis, made sacrifices that your competitors aren't willing to make and helped a customer achieve something important.

Between the Covers

By REBECCA WALLS

Happy Thanksgiving weekend. I hope this note finds you all well, satisfied, and refreshed. Nothing seems to revive the spirit better than a good home cooked meal (or McDonalds) and a visit with family and friends.

I could hardly wait until everyone arrived, especially my children. I remember what it was like going home after a few months at school. But this was the first time as a parent, after having an empty nest, to have both my children back home. This year I had to be concerned with the weather, the traveling conditions each child might encounter, and the distances they would travel. Then I began to reflect.

Remember bringing each of those new babies home? Remember sitting and watching them sleep, stretch and yawn? Remember each growing stage? This season I had the opportunity to watch my children again. They are 22 and 19 now and long past the infant stage, but I am still amazed at the individuals they have become. They are their own person, with different personalities, goals, and preferences, and still a source of great joy. Do you think our parents feel the same way?

I urge each of you, before the holiday season is over, to take the time to enjoy your children, and let your parents enjoy you.

We are closed this week so there are no new books to tell you about. However, I can tell you that the day has arrived and the great library move is underway. No, we are not moving to a new location. We are just moving, 70,000 volumes out of the way so that new carpet can be laid.

As you saw in last week's paper, the forklift trial was successful, so we will only have to box the books that are so big the forklift can not reach around them. The device and the help of the precincts personnel will save us a lot of time, elbow grease and hopefully some county money.

Because of the weight of the lift and the book stacks they carry, the glue used to install the carpet will have to set approximately 12 hours before they can be moved back into position. Once the "stacks" are back in place we will need some time to shelve all the books that had to be packed away for one reason or another.

The book drop will continue to be open during the time we are closed.

So returning books that come due during this time will be possible. However, if you decide to keep the books until the library reopens, you will not be fined.

Amnesty week is scheduled for the week following the completion of the great move. Amnesty means there will be no fines taken for overdue materials, even if they were due last year. Lost or damaged materials are not included in this offer. Lost or damaged materials will have to be paid for, so that we can afford to replace those items.

Someone asked me if I was going to enjoy that week off, while they moved the library. Don't I wish! No way! Do you really think I should leave a crew with a fork lift unsupervised in the library? I may not be able to drive the lift or even move some of the other furniture, but there is still a lot of work to be done.

A temporary office will be set up in the story room and the staff and I will continue to process the incoming mail, book returns, report writing and other daily activities. By continuing to work through the move, we hope to have everything caught up and ready to reopen in record time.

A lot of very heavy furniture and shelving will have to be moved during this week. Please keep your fingers crossed, and pray that no one gets hurt.

I would give you a date that we hope to reopen, but I'm afraid I just don't know for sure how long the move will take. We should know more after Monday, Dec. 2, but you know the saying about the best laid plans. Things may not work just the way you think they will.

Please continue to watch Cablevision, the Hereford Brand and listen to KPAN for further updates.

CHICKEN SOUP measure)

1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 cup cornstarch
1/2 cup milk
1 cup light cream
1 tablespoon parsley flakes
6 cubes chicken bouillon (to taste)
10 cups chicken broth (made above)

To cook chicken:
Place chicken, water, white pepper, bay leaf, whole onions and celery stalks in a large kettle. Cover and simmer for 1 1/2 hours, or until the chicken is tender. Check in one hour. Be sure and bone while still fairly warm for ease in removing meat.

The easiest way to make this is to cook the chicken the day before. Cool slightly, and take the meat off the bones. Save broth in the refrigerator and refrigerate the meat, covered, separately.

Next day:
Remove the fat from the broth. Melt butter in large kettle and saute the garlic and rice until rice is straw-colored. Add the onion, carrots, celery and saute for a few minutes. Do not allow rice to become too brown. Bring 10 cups of chicken broth to a boil and add to vegetables. Season with bouillon cubes, curry powder, remaining pepper. Simmer until rice is cooked, nearly 20 minutes. Add chicken, cut into bite-sized pieces.

Blend cornstarch with the milk and add to the soup; cook and stir until thickened. Just before serving, add the cream.

Note:
If the water has boiled down and you need some water to equal the necessary broth, simply add 1-1/2 bouillon cubes for each cup needed.

Names in the news

LAS VEGAS (AP) - The famous white lions and tigers of Siegfried and Roy have some plush new digs.

The German-born illusionists on Wednesday opened the Secret Garden of Siegfried and Roy, a $15 million habitat showcasing their white tigers and lions.

The 2-acre jungle setting at the Mirage Hotel features more than 40 rare and endangered animals that have been raised by Siegfried Fischbacher and Roy Horn.

"Illusionists make things disappear," Roy Horn said. "We feel it is our obligation to make nature's rarest animals reappear."

Their work with the rare animals dates to the early 1980s, when they began a campaign to save nearly extinct white tigers.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Cash value in nuisance crop

Although farmers try to get rid of it, and some ranchers use it as feed for cattle during dry spells, Texas landowners may want to see the potential of prickly pear cactus as a cash crop. The fruit and cactus pads, which are becoming popular food items throughout the Southwest, currently are imported from Mexico.

Cactus pads, called nopalitos, eaten with eggs, sautéed or in salads.

NCGA launches web site to serve growers

ST. LOUIS, MO -- Need to know the number of acres U.S. farmers planted to corn? How about listening to crop conditions from corn growers around the country? Want to know the difference between wet milling and dry milling? Detailed information about the nation's top agricultural crop is now available on the Internet.

The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) recently launched a corn-specific web site to serve the growing number of people seeking information from the Internet. The site can be reached on the Internet at <http://www.ncga.com> 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"We want to use the Internet to provide valuable information about corn and our organization to members, the media, the entire agricultural industry and the general public," said Wallie Hardie, president of the NCGA. "The Internet provides a very efficient method for reaching large groups of people. Our site is easy to use and provides useful information to a wide variety of people all over the globe."

The corn grower's web site consists of 11 different categories including such things as: "The World of Corn Online," an on-line version of the organization's popular booklet packed with corn statistics and facts; the "Corn FAQtory," a compilation of "Frequently Asked Questions" about corn; and a U.S. map which automatically sends visitors to information about the organization's affiliated state associations, corn boards and promotion councils.

Its "New of the Day" section, updated every other day, features a "News for Corn Growers" section, the latest NCGA news releases and a real time audio report that can be accessed with the click of a computer mouse.

A "Members Only" section can only be accessed by NCGA members who acquired a user name password published in the organization's quarterly direct-to-member newsletter, National Corn Grower. The "Members Only" section allows all NCGA members easy access to the bi-weekly Corn Commentary newsletter, as well as legislative alerts from the NCGA office in Washington, D.C.

"We want members and other visitors to come back and view the information often," Hadie said. "Everyone can have access to corn information almost as quickly as it is generated."

Computer users or soon-to-be-users can contact the NCGA at (314) 275-9915 for additional information. On-line users can send questions via e-mail to cominfo@ncga.com and technical questions can be addressed to webmaster@ncga.com.

Women in Agriculture program set for 1997

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service will offer the opportunity for a new group of Texas farm and ranch women to begin the Women in Agriculture: Business Management Program in early 1997.

This program includes a series of three two-day seminars (units) to be taken in successive years. Each unit is divided into four half-day modules. The list of the topics to be covered in each unit are listed below:

UNIT I

TOPICS: Family Business Management, Forms of Business Organization and Income Tax Management, Personnel Management and Financial Management.

UNIT II

TOPICS: Estate Planning and Business Transfer Issues, Commodity Marketing, Strategic Planning, Goal setting.

UNIT III

TOPICS: Agricultural Policy, Value Added Marketing, Agricultural Law and Developing a Management Information System.

Although no formal class sessions are scheduled for the evenings, there will be two optional panels available each evening for those who wish to participate. These are designed for the participants to share experiences, insights and concerns in an unstructured discussion format.

Women taking part in the program can expect to learn practical management and marketing skills, gain confidence in participating in new roles on the farm or ranch and network with other women with similar interests and experience.

According to the program director, Dr. Danny Klinefelter, the need to develop the management skill of farm and ranch women is critical for several reasons:

-- There is a tremendous need to strengthen the management team on farms and ranches, particularly in light of the added risks that will be created by the changes in the government farm program.

-- Too few wives are adequately prepared to take over the business affairs if something should unexpectedly happen to their husband.

-- Texas has 10 percent of all women in the U.S. who run their own farm or ranch operation.

-- The census of agriculture indicates that over the last 20 years, women managers have been the only group actually increasing in numbers in agriculture.

-- Because Texas is a community property state and because women tend to live longer than men, a major portion of the privately held farm and ranch land in the state is owned by women absentee landlords.

The cost of the program is $175 per unit which covers all seminar materials, breaks and lunches for the first and second day but not housing.

The next program will be offered in Lubbock on Feb. 19-21. The programs will begin at noon on the first day and end at noon on the third day.

For more information, contact Danny Klinefelter or Tami Tesaro at (409) 845-7171 or call Beverly Harder at the Deaf Smith County Extension Office at 364-3573.

FSA office accepting applications for farm loans for drought losses

Applications for emergency farm loans for damages and losses caused by drought are being accepted at the Farm Service Agency (FSA) office located in Hereford, Rodney L. Baker said today.

Deaf Smith County is one of eight in Texas recently named by Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman eligible for loans to cover part of actual production losses resulting from the drought.

Baker said farmers may be eligible for loans up to 80 percent of their actual losses or the operating loan needed to continue in the business, whichever is less. For farmers unable to obtain credit from private commercial lenders, the interest rate is 3.75 percent.

"As a general rule, a farmer must have suffered at least a 30 percent loss of production to be eligible for an FSA emergency loan," Baker said.

Farmers participating in the Federal Crop Insurance program will have to figure in the proceeds from those programs in determining their loss.

"Applications for loans under this emergency designation will be accepted until June 24, 1997, but farmers should apply as soon as possible. Delays in applying could create backlogs in processing and possibly over into the new farming season," Baker said.

FSA is a credit agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is authorized to provide disaster emergency loans to recognized farmers who work at and rely on farming for a substantial part of their living. Eligibility is extended to individual farmers who are U.S. citizens and to farming partnerships, corporations or cooperatives in which U.S. citizens hold a majority interest.

The FSA office in Hereford is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Conservation officials want provision in EQIP under 1996 legislation

Because agricultural producers for various reasons are unable to commit to long-term contracts, conservation district officials want the National Association of Conservation Districts and the United States Department of Agriculture to urge Congress to create a provision in the Environmental Quality Incentive Program (EQIP) under the 1996 Farm Bill to allow for an annual program where single cost-shared items can be administered.

The 1996 Farm Bill establishes EQIP to combine the functions of several existing USDA conservation cost-share programs: the Agricultural Conservation Program; The Great Plains Conservation Program; the Colorado River Basin Salinity Control Program; and the Water Quality Incentive Program.

"EQIP provides technical and financial assistance to producers to implement conservation measures and plans, with 50 percent of the funds being targeted to livestock water quality practices," Memo Benavides, President of the Association of Texas Soil and Water Conservation Districts.

"Under the new EQIP program, provisions are only for long-term contracts of five to 10 years. Many producers have completed land improvement projects on their own and my only require assistance for a single cost-shared item."

Conservation district officials want to require that any single cost-shared item to be completed would have to be part of an overall conservation plan to insure that all resources are addressed.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the word, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

Full time clerical position - Applicant must be able to type and run 10 key by touch, computer skills a plus send resume to: Office Manager, P. O. Box 790, Hereford, Tx. 79045. 33383

Charming cast delivers an unexpected holiday delight

Stockard Channing (center) stars with Chelsea Russo, Stephen Collins and Noah Fleiss (from left) in an unexpected family. The warmhearted USA Network original movie, which premieres Wednesday, focuses on a career woman who is suddenly responsible for two young children.

©TVData Features Syndicate

A cast of charming actors and a sensitive but unsentimental teleplay add up to a welcome holiday surprise in an unexpected family, a USA Network original movie premiering Wednesday, Dec. 4.

Former Oscar™ nominee Stockard Channing (Six Degrees of Separation) stars with Stephen Collins (7th Heaven) and Christine Ebersole (Ink) in this comedy-drama about a driven New York career woman who finds herself unwillingly thrust into the role of surrogate mother.

As the story opens, Barbara Whitney (Channing) is rushing to get ready for a blind date when she gets an unexpected visit from her younger sister, Ruth (Ebersole). Although the two clearly do not get along well, Ruth asks Barbara to look after her children, Matt and Megan, for a few hours.

Barbara refuses, but as she leaves her apartment building she finds Matt (Noah Fleiss) and Megan (Chelsea Russo) sitting in Ruth's car with a note reading, "Back by 10, Love, Ruth."

The next day, Ruth calls Barbara to announce that she is flying to London. Barbara, along with the children and Sam (Collins), her widowed best friend, rushes to the airport to confront Ruth, who babbles that she is a terrible mother and the kids would be better off with Barbara. Ruth boards the plane without looking back.

As days turn into weeks, then weeks into months, Barbara's grudging acceptance of the children slowly turns into affection, nurtured by Sam's open enthusiasm for this "unexpected family."

Then, more than a year after she vanished, Ruth reappears to announce that she is taking back the children.

Screenwriter/producer Lee Rose (A Mother's Prayer) is on well-trodden ground here, with a basic premise that's familiar to anyone who has seen Kramer vs. Kramer or even Debbie Reynolds in My Six Loves. From the moment the handsome and conveniently available Sam murmurs to Barbara how sorry he is that he and his late wife never had children, we don't need a road map to see where this movie is going.

But Rose has a terrific ear for casual dialogue and, as performed by this winning cast under Larry Elikann's loose-limbed direction, big moments sneak up and catch us unaware.

In one scene, Matt asks Barbara why she gave up painting to take a museum job. She shrugs, gives a wry smile, and says, "Because there's this little voice inside your head that says, 'Hey! You're no good!'"

"Oh, yeah," Matt says matter-of-factly, "the same one my mom hears."

Of course, Rose is after bigger game here: she has bone to pick with judges who reflexively award custody to a child's natural mother without adequately considering what's truly in that child's best interest.

Thankfully, however, Rose is intelligent enough to get her message across with subtlety and finesse. Apart from the saintly Sam (Collins is splendid, though), all of the characters are complex and credible. Both Russo and Fleiss are marvelously unaffected young actors. And even when Ruth pulls a heinous maneuver in the custody hearing, we can tell that it's a move made out of sheer desperation, not calculated evil.

an unexpected family may be unconventional holiday fare, but that makes it no less welcome — and only a Grinch would say no to spending a couple of hours with Channing and company.

Talking About The Weather...

When the weather is being discussed on television, listen closely and you'll hear the weather forecaster use many of these words.
ATMOSPHERE The collection of gases—including oxygen and carbon dioxide—that surround the earth.
HAIL A collection of water droplets that combine and freeze, eventually becoming heavy enough to fall to the ground.
HURRICANE A circulating storm with winds in excess of 73 miles per hour.
JET STREAM A zone of winds, concentrated in the upper atmosphere, that blow across North America from west to east. These winds act to "steer" weather systems.

METEOROLOGIST A person who studies weather.
OVERCAST Used when 95% or more of the sky is covered by clouds.
PRECIPITATION Another word for all the forms of water—rain, snow, hail and sleet—that fall from the clouds.
PRESSURE The weight of the air from the ground to the top of the atmosphere.
RADAR An electronic instrument that displays the location of water droplets. Weather forecasters use radar to determine where rain will fall.
RAIN Water droplets that fall from clouds.
THUNDERSTORM Any storm that contains thunder and lightning.
TORNADO Circulating winds of more than 200 miles per hour that form a dark funnel reaching from cloud to ground.
WIND Air in motion relative to the earth's surface.
WIND DIRECTION The compass direction from which the wind is blowing.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ December 1-7 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A family member may need a fiscal favor. Your generosity will go a long way. An unexpected turn of events could force you to cancel weekend plans. On Friday, you may have to undo something you did on Thursday. Procrastination may be the key. Keep a positive outlook.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Keep emotions in check at work, or you could soil your professional image. Think twice before being totally honest with a loved one. A little white lie isn't so bad if it spares someone's feelings. A difficult choice comes later in the week. Libra plays a significant role.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

Something you've wondered about for some time will become crystal clear. You'll realize that some things are more subtle than others. Plans for an upcoming trip need your attention. Try not to leave everything until the last minute. A strange coincidence on Friday proves meaningful.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

In a rut lately, Cancer? Don't be afraid to explore new social options. When's the last time you acted like a tourist in your own town? Try something new. If you're looking for a new job, this could be a lucky time. Travel plans look promising. Unexpected cash comes your way.

LEO - July 23/August 23

Has love led you into a difficult bind? If so, there's only one way out — honesty. Look deep inside yourself to figure out what it is you really want — not just now, but in the future. You may be surprised. Virgo plays a role. A last-minute invitation sets the tone for the weekend.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

A situation that seemed horrible a few months back is actually bearable now. You'll realize that time heals all wounds. If resentment is tearing a friendship apart, it may be time to talk things out. Keep flexible weekend plans. Something unusual happens later in the week.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

You can put a stop to a bad situation by simply speaking up. You can't expect loved ones to read your mind. They need to know how you feel. A trial situation will work out better than you had anticipated. Now's the time to implement positive change. Go the extra mile when working on an important project.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

A loved one who's down in the dumps needs some encouragement from you. Be kind and diplomatic with your words — especially if you're trying to cheer up an Aries. A change at work could be just the beginning of a new stage. You may want to reassess your career goals.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

A family member who had disappointed you in the past will do something to redeem himself/herself. You'll be pleasantly surprised. A busier-than-usual social schedule gives the week some extra flavor. Make fitness a priority — especially if you have been tipping the scales.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

At work, don't assume you'll get the help and support you need. You must speak up if you want to be heard. Happiness comes with a high price tag in love this week. You'll find that nothing good comes easily. Long-awaited news will finally come with a surprising outcome.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

Get extra rest early in the week, or you could find yourself tapped out later when you need your energy. A work associate may try to drag you down with negativity. Don't let it happen. Keep your usual positive attitude. An upcoming change gives you a lot to think about.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

A family member shows you a side you never knew existed. You'll wonder what else there is that you don't know about. A love relationship may need some nurturing. Loving words and a tender touch go a long way. Meditation lifts stress from the daily grind.

25 Days of Christmas has something for everyone

Christmas is a time for enjoying family traditions — whether that means singing carols, decking the halls or gathering around the TV to watch holiday programming.

This year, The Family Channel is making it easy to find your favorite seasonal shows with 25 Days of Christmas, a holiday viewing extravaganza that airs between four and 12 hours of Christmas programming every day beginning Sunday, Dec. 1, and continuing through Wednesday, Dec. 25.

"Christmas is for family," says Gus Lucas, senior vice president of programming for Family. "Families of all kinds can curl up in front of the fire and turn on The Family Channel, knowing they will find the magic of the season."

Headlining 25 Days of Christmas are original movies, musical events and animated specials.

Christmas Every Day, a comedy starring Erik Von Detten, premieres Sunday. Von Detten (Toy Story) plays 13-year-old Billy Jackson, a humbug who wakes up to find that it's going to be Christmas every day of the year until he learns to appreciate the true meaning of the holiday. The movie also stars Robert Hays (Airplane) and Bess Armstrong (My So-Called Life).

Music lovers will want to tune in to Kenny Rogers: The Gift, airing Wednesday, Dec. 4. The country singer teams up with guest star Wynonna to perform songs from his new Christmas album.

And animation fans won't want to miss Aliens First Christmas, airing Sunday. The sci-fi comedy details the adjustment of a family relocated to a planet that doesn't observe the holiday.

There's bound to be something for everyone during the more than 170 hours of seasonal programming, which includes adaptations of such favorites as Yes, Virginia, There Is a Santa Claus, airing Thursday, Dec. 5.

With more than 126 shows from which to choose, 25 Days of Christmas is a good place to turn to celebrate the Christmas spirit.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels
©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Where have we seen Andy Lauer, who plays added Charlie on Caroline in the City, before? --C.K. and A.P., Sylvania, Ohio.

A: Lauer, an alumnus of the comedy troupe the Groundlings, received an Emmy nomination in 1989 for playing a tough but tender gang member on 21 Jump Street. Prior to Caroline, his series roles included insecure Charlie Moran in Going to Extremes and goofy motorcycle cop Wayne Kas-murski in Grand. Feature film credits include The Doors, Born on the Fourth of July and Screamers.

Q: What has Peter Wingfield been in besides Highlander: The Series? Where can I write to him? --L.L. in Indiana.

A: Before playing Methos in Highlander, the Welsh actor (born in Cardiff) compiled an impressive list of TV credits in Great Britain. He made his debut in the critically acclaimed drama Antonia and Jane, then appeared in The Men's Room, Into the Fire, Without Walls and Nice Day at the Office. His feature film credits include Trust Me.

Write to Wingfield or any of his cast-mates c/o Highlander: The Series, Ryshe Entertainment, 3400 Riverside Drive, Suite 600, Burbank, Calif. 91505.

Q: Who provides the voice of Duckman on the USA Network? It sounds like Jason Alexander from Seinfeld. --John Mitchell, Middletown, N.Y.

A: That's because it is Alexander.

Q: I recently watched a Lois & Clark episode about Jimmy Olsen turning into an old man. I am just sure that the actor who played the older Jimmy is the same person who used to play the Jimmy role in the old George Reeves TV series. Am I right? --Stephen Weld, Claremont, N.H.

Andy Lauer

A: You sure are, Stephen. Jack Larson, who played Jimmy on The Adventures of Superman more than 40 years ago, jumped at the chance to make this witty cameo.

Q: Please help me remember the name of an old Troy Donahue movie in which he married into a wealthy tobacco family. He fell in love with Connie Stevens. --Gloria Scholbe, Little Suamico, Wis.

A: That was Parrish, a 1961 drama also starring Claudette Colbert, Karl Malden and Diane McBain.

Q: What happened to JAG? --Sharon H., Linden, Mich.

A: It will be back as a midseason replacement -- on CBS, not NBC.

Q: Please settle an argument: Is Leeza Gibbons the daughter of Regis Philbin? --Karla Moschella, Altoona, Pa.

A: Boy, just when I think I've heard 'em all. No, she isn't.

SOAP WORLD

Mommies taking over daytime

By Candace Havens

Babies, babies everywhere! Colleen Dion (ex-Brett, Another World) gave birth to a baby boy, Lawrence George Scotti, on Oct. 8. Larry Scotti, the father of the child, is an operations manager at NBC and has been with Colleen for three years. The couple met and fell in love while Colleen was working on AW. They plan to wed in the near future. Tracey E. Bregman (Lauren, The Bold and the Beautiful) and her husband, Ron Recht, welcomed their second child, Landon Reed, on Oct. 18. Landon weighed 8 pounds, 12 ounces. Several readers missed the news about Rena Sofer (ex-Lois, General Hospital). Sofer and her husband, Wallace Kurth (Ned, GH), brought Rosabel Rosalind Kurth into the world on Sept. 17.

Dear Candace: I had to write to express my deep disappointment in The Young and the Restless.

I can't believe Nikki (Melody Thomas Scott) married that doctor! And the idea of Victor (Eric Braeden) going back with Hope (Signy Coleman) is ridiculous. I have been a loyal fan, but I won't be anymore.

After all these years, I thought Victor and Nikki would finally tie the knot again. My friends and I are so angry with this latest turn of events that we are now fans of ABC's All My Children. -Mary C., Fort Wayne, Ind.

Dear Reader: Fans of Nikki and Victor are in an uproar all over the world. Everyone, except the Y&R writers, thought Nikki and Victor would finally be together.

Scott and Braeden, who play the characters, would be more than happy to be matched again. They both miss working with each other.

Dear Candace: Tell me who writes for Days of Our Lives. They must have very sick minds. -A friend in Maryland.

Dear Reader: For now, James Reilly is the head writer. His contract is supposedly up in 1997.

TRIVIA

At least 58 cinematic versions of the Cinderella story have been made since 1898. It is the world's most frequently filmed tale.

In Goldfinger (1964), the number of seconds remaining when James Bond shut down the atomic bomb at Fort Knox was ... 007.

Andre Braugher (Homicide: Life on the Street) got his start in TV detective work in the 1989 revival of Kojak for the ABC Mystery Movie.

James Arness and Amanda Blake appeared together pre-Gunslinger in the 1950 drama Stars in My Crown, with Joel McCrea.

Macaws crave clay in their diet. The clay is believed to neutralize toxins from certain seeds that are part of their diet.

Though the teddy bear was named as a tribute to Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th president didn't like the nickname.

THE ROADS OF TEXAS

Now newly revised and better than ever!

Shearer Publishing is pleased to announce its new edition of THE ROADS OF TEXAS. We have added dozens of country roads, lanes, cowtrails, and put new names or numbers on hundreds of others, names like Good Luck Road (Guadalupe County), Seven Sisters Drive (Kendall County), and Lone Star Alley (Menard County). Altogether, the new edition identifies more than 25,000 state and county highways and byways, and the bright new cover features current scenic photographs from around the state. THE ROADS OF TEXAS is different from any other road atlas, with more detail, more historical travel information, more heart. It has proven especially popular with the curious traveler inclined toward a little adventure, who doesn't mind getting to Aunt Martha's house just a bit late.
