"Amateur Night" To Mark Opening Of City Hall Auditorium Here

"Around and around it goes! Where it stops—nobody knows," Major Bowes might say on Oct. 8 when Coryell County amateurs will compete in the Lion's Club opening performance for the new City Hall Auditorium on that date.

Ten big dollars will roll into the pockets of some amateur that night, for the first prize and an audition, if possible, before the officials of a radio broadcasting station. Second prize is $5.00 and third $3.00.

A committee of Lions composed of C. H. Wallace, general chairman, Eiland Lovejoy and Horace Jackson are named by president Guy Powell to work out the details of the Amateur Night. Those who wish to enter—

VENTICE MENSCH IS BITTEN BY RATTLESNAKE

Ventice Mensch of Flat was bitten by a rattler Saturday while hunting in a pasture half mile from his home.

He was accompanied by Roy Alva Botkin, and while attempting to catch an armadillo Ventice was bitten above the wrist. The arm was quickly corded by his companion with a Nigger Shooter, which probably saved his life.

The poison serum was given the boy as soon as possible and at present he is improving nicely.

"YOUR PANTS WILL TAKE A BETTER PRESS WITH PAN-TEX" LUKE SAYS

Just installed in its stall, a new press, completing the line of four, down at Byrom & Walkers, is the latest in pants presses, a "Pan-Tex." Of course, whittlers and checker players do a better job of pressing pants—in some places—but this "Pan-Tex" does the job all over. It'll press dresses coats, or anything else, for that matter, but Luke says "The pants'll take a better press with Pan-Tex."

"IRON MAN" TO BE HERE SATURDAY, 4 P. M.

The "Iron Man" since coming to Gatesville has accepted several challenges and will display his skill here on the west side of the square in a free exhibition at 4 o'clock Saturday. Jack Kern, strong man, has arranged a series of contests for the kiddies and will award prizes to the winners in every contest. Children will be admitted free in each contest.

The "Iron Man" in a recent contest in St. Louis defeated a giant strong man from Coblenz, Germany, who weighed 232 lbs. and beat him by four tons, establishing an all-time record for moving weights with the human body. At this time Kern pulled 48,000 pounds 46 feet up a one per cent grade and as a result was compared in "Believe It or Not" with a red ant and a lowly sand flea. It was shown that the red ant was able to move 275 times his own weight and the common sand flea was able to move 300 times his own weight. But Kern, weighing only 156 pounds at that time, pulled the 48,000 pound weight, thereby nominating him as the world's strongest creature for his size. Last year at Austin, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. filmed his performance and used it in their hazardous occupations films, which attracted world-wide attention and was shown extensively. Crowds from 1500 to 75,000 people have witnessed this performance all over the United States, Mexico and Canada. Kern has been recognized publicly everywhere for his work with Boy Scouts and has had a proposition from President Cardenas of Mexico to tour that country again next year, and train the Mexican youth, which he plans to accept. He will appear here only the one time. The show will only last 45 minutes, so all must be there on time of they wish to see this performance. Further information about the show appears elsewhere in this paper.

NYA Gives Twenty-Eight Positions To Students In Coryell Co. Schools

COACH EWING RESIGNS TO TEACH AT HOME

With Gatesville schools opening September 14, the complete faculty has not yet been named, due to the resignation of Assistant Coach Maurice Ewing, early this week. Miss Mayme Sue Halbrook, former teacher in the local schools and who taught last year in the schools at Arp, this week accepted a position in the schools as teacher of music, English and Spanish in the high school.

Coach Ewing, a graduate of Baylor University, has been a member of the local faculty for the past few years and has been both coach and assistant coach. He has accepted a better position in his home town of Gonzales, where he can be with his mother, since his father died this summer.

Coach Ewing has made friends of everyone he has met during his stay in Gatesville, and these friends of his are keenly disappointed that it was necessary for him to make this change. However, we are certain the best wishes of this community go with him in his new position.

According to E. W. Brooks, no one has been employed to take the place of Coach Ewing. A meeting of the school board is to be held tonight, at which time applications will be considered for the vacancy.

MISS INA CORINE BROWN OF CHICAGO TO SPEAK HERE TUESDAY

The women of the Methodist church will meet at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon to hear an interesting program which includes as guest speaker Miss Ina Corinna Brown of the International House, Chicago.

Miss Brown's book "The Story of the American Negro" is just off the press and will be used as a mission study course for the Young People's Division and as supply reading for the Missionary Society's study course for this fall. Miss Brown has not only had wide experience in studying Negro life in this country, but has also traveled and extensively investigated conditions among Negroes in Africa and the West Indies.

She will tell of her experiences of being entertained by native chiefs in the heart of African jungles.

Everyone is invited to attend this meeting.

Word has been received by County Superintendent J. M. Witcher to the effect that 28 National Youth Administration positions, each paying $6.00 a month to various schools in this county. One position is available for colored schools.

The NYA committee for Coryell County, composed of Superintendent E. W. Brooks, Harry Mueller, P. T. Lemons and County Superintendent Witcher, has allotted these as follows: Turnersville, 1; Pearl 2; White Hall 1; The Grove 1; New Olive 1; Belcher 1; Levita 2; Flat 3; Ireland 1; Evant 4; Jonesboro 2; Oglesby 2; Copperas Cove 2; and Gatesville 4; three for the white school and one for the colored school here.

Principal or superintendent of each school must make a statement that the student so served cannot properly attend school without this aid. The student's father and mother does not necessarily have to be on relief.

Any schools that do not have students under this category and are allotted NYA aid are asked to report this to the committee, and proper transfer of this aid will be made.

LYTLE POWELL FEATURED ON LIONS WEDNESDAY PROGRAM

Lytte Powell, world renowned pianist, was the feature of the Lions Wednesday Luncheon, and spoke briefly on "Life in England," giving customs and habits regarding life and living conditions in England and compared them to America. The high lights of the program, however, were two piano selections given by Mr. Powell, which were from Chopin's studies, E Flat-Op. 10, No. 11, and G Flat-Op. 10, No. 5.

During the informal business session, it was voted to have an informal entertainment for the Board members and faculty of the local school in Raby Park on the evening of September 17, at 7 p. m. The regular weekly meeting of the Club for that week will be dispensed with.

WORLD COMMENT

By JOE BURNS

The threat of war in fear-stricken Europe and the subversion of the Chinese market to Japanese interests point to an economic union of the American Republics in self-defense against the political and economic theories of the Asiatic and European nations.

Europe's nationalistic dictatorships which have arisen since 1920 have subscribed wholeheartedly to the principles of economic and financial self-sufficiency and of economic isolation in time of peace as well as in time of war. Prohibitive tariffs have been raised by Germany and Italy and even by republican France against imports from other nations which compete with home products and in Fascist Italy the point has been reached when many foreign products, including automobiles and moving pictures are banned entirely.

With the exception of the British Isles, all the major nations of Europe aim at self-sufficiency in war time. Germany, isolated by the Allied fleets from all intercourse with the outside world for the four-year duration of the World War, is rapidly developing substitute products to take the place of imports of rubber, cotton, copper, etc. France, Italy, Germany and Russia have escaped the ban of the American neutrality act, prohibiting the exportation of arms and munitions to nations at war, by importing in recent months huge quantities of scrap iron, steel, oil, rubber, manganese, and other essentials to modern warfare which will be converted into arms, munitions, and planes in home factories.

Following the conquest of Manchuria in 1931 by the troops of the Mikado, American and British interests have been gradually forced out of the province and Japanese military and economic control is now airtight. The same process is being followed in North China, slowly being perverted to Japanese commercial control as the Nipponese troops stand guard over the interests of their capitalists.

As a result of the closing of the European markets and the entire seclusion from Manchuria, American merchants have been turning in increasing numbers to the Latin-American field as a alternative. There, in lesser degree than in the Orient, they have found the wily Nipponese, underselling American products by as much as fifty per cent.

An infiltration of immigrants has followed the Japanese merchants into all the Central and South American nations, causing yellow peril scares there similar to those in California. Sleepy Latins do not contemplate with complacency the energetic, thrifty fellow men taking over land and shops, where they soon become a power in the community through the wealth which they quickly and miraculously amass.

Fear of continued immigration of the Japanese, in spite of restrictions, and of an increase in the number of Japanese traders and merchants, and the threat of another European conflagration have drawn the Latin-American States closer to the "colossus of the north" than at any time since the beginning of dollar diplomacy in the 80's. The policy of non-intervention in the internal affairs of the nations to the south and the conclusion of reciprocal trade agreements with Canada and Cuba have brought about a better understanding between the nations of the Western Hemisphere and suggest that in the broadening and extension of such agreements will lie the solution to the domestic and economical ills of the United States and of the nations of Central and South America.

A boundary dispute between the United States on the one hand and Great Britain and Russia on the other and the proposed action of the Holy Alliance aiming at the reimposition of the Spanish yoke upon the South American colonies led President James Monroe in 1823 to issue the famous Monroe Doctrine proclaiming a hands-off policy by European nations in respect to the American Republics of South America. President Roosevelt, by repealing the Platt Amendment as to intervention with Cuba and by straightening out our relations with Panama and Nicaragua, and substituted a policy of friendship and cooperation for the Monroe Doctrine.

Actions of the Socialist government of Mexico and of the regime which succeeded the late dictator Gomez in Venezuela in expelling foreign oil and mining interests and in seeking to bring the control of natural resources under native interests suggest in increased nationalism on the part of the American Republics.

The need on the part of the Latin Republics for the machinery and finished products of the U. S. is apparent while the necessity for the raw products which furnish the principle articles of exportation by these nations in this country is known to all.

To keep America for Americans—whether they be Canadians or Columbians—the nations of this hemisphere must join in a league of friendship through which they will mutually and peacefully work out their political, economic and financial difficulties into which they have been projected by the selfish nationalism of the European dictatorships and by the threat of war which hangs like a black and menacing cloud over that continent.

FIERABENDWUNSCH

Von Rosl Wolf

Wenn der Abend traulich dunkelt
Und ein glattes Sternlein funktelt,
Ging ich manchmal gerne heim
Zu dem lieben Mutterlein.

Moecht' sie Herz an Herz be-grüßen
Und sodan zu ihren Füßen
Kauern mich in idren Schloß
Und dort ruhen—wunscheslos.

Ganz der Stunde hingegeben,
Fern vom grauen Alltagsleben,
Ab und zu ein liebes Wort
Flüstern wie an hell'gem Ort.

Nur von Liebe warm durchglutet,
Und von Dankbarkeit umflutet,
Küssen ihre mueden Haende,
Die mich segnen—ohne Ende.

DER URSPRUNG DER WEISSEN

Der englische Reisende Windwood Reade hoerte einst in Freetown in Sierra Leona auf der westafrikanischen Kueste einem schwarzen Geistlichen predigen. Er behandelte dabei in eigentümlicher Weise den Ursprung der Weissen wie folgt:

Meine Brueder, ihr seht einen Weissen, der ist schlecht, sehr schlecht. Ihr mueszt euch wundern, dass Gott erlaubte, dass solche Menschen in die Welt kamen, doch ich will euch sagen, wie das zuging. Vor langer, langer Zeit lebten Adam und Eva in einem schoenen Garten, da gab es suesse Bananen, suesse Kartoffeln und Polarwein. Sie hatten zwei Soehne, der eine heiss Kain, der andere Abel. Kain schlug seinen Bruder Abel tot. Kain aber ging fort und versteckte sich. Gott aber sagte: "Kain, du denkst wohl, ich sehe dich nicht, du Buschnigger? Komm nur heraus." Kain kam heraus und sprach: "Massa, hier bin ich, was willst du von mir?" Gott sagt: "Wo ist dein Bruder Abel?" Als er so fragte, wurde Kain ueber und ueber weisz. Seht Brueder, dieser Kain ist der weisse Mensch.

DEUTSCHE IM TEXANISCHEN FREIHEITSKAMPFE

Bein der hundertjaehrigen Befreiungsfeier des Staates Texas von Mexiko in diesem Jahr wird auch eines deutschen Helden, Robert Justus Kleebergs, gedacht werden. Nach dem ein County des Staates benannt ist. Kleeberg war ein Student der Universitaet Goettingen, wo er sein Examen als Doktor der Rechte bestanden hatte. Er war am 10 September 1803 in Herstelle, Westfalen, als der Sohn eines wohlhabenden Kaufmanns geboren. Nachdem er sich mit Amalie von Roeder vermaehlt hatte, nahm er Abschied von der Alten Welt, und sich mit mehreren Verwandten seiner Frau in der Neuen Welt ein heim zu gruenden. "Mein Wunsch war," schreibt er, "unter einer republikanischen Regierungsform zu leben."

Im Jahre 1835 kam er in Texas an, als die Revolution ausgebrochen war. Die Kleebergs hatten sich in Harrisburg niedergelassen und ein schoenes Heim gegruendet. Der Diktator Santa Anna zerschoerte es im April 1836. Da schloß sich Kleeberg mit mehreren Bruedern seiner Frau der texanischen Armee an und hat sich den folgenden Befreiungskampfen wacker geschlagen. Die brutale Niedermetzelung der texanischen Truppen durch die Mexikaner bei Goliad und im Alamo hatte seinen Entschluss, der "Lone Star Republic" seine Hilfe zu leisten, gefestigt. Am 21 April 1836 befand er sich mit seinen Kameraden Lewsky, Karner und Wertner in der kleinen von Sam Houston gefuehrten Armee, die dem mexikanischen Diktator Santa Anna auf der Ebene von San Jacinto gegenueberstand. Es war ein dunkle Stunde, die fuer Texas gekommen war. Niederlagen und grose Entbehrungen hatte Ausstand gebracht.

Jener Aprilmorgen muszte die Entscheidung bringen. Jeder Texaner war sich dessen bewusst, dass vom Feinde keine Gnade zu erwarten war. Kam eine Niederlage, so wuerde sich nur die Niedermetzelung von Goliad und Alamo wiederholen. Santa Anna hatte deutlich genug bewiesen, dass er die Erhebung in Texas mit Blut zu Ende bringen wollte. Mutig und entschlossen sah die kleine Schar der Freiheitskämpfer der Entscheidung entgegen. Sieg oder Tod—ein drittes gab es nicht! Mit dem Schlachtruf: "Gedenket des Alamo und Goliad!" stuerzten sie ueber die Ebene den Feinde entgegen. Der furchtbare, fanatische Vorstoß durchbrach die mexikanischen Linien.

Der Feind wankte, und im wilden Rueckzug ging er zu rueck. Dem erschuetternden Angriff der Texaner orte niemand widerstehen. Noch ehe das Echo des Musketenfeuers verhallt war, wurde der bisherige Beherrscher von Texas, Santa Anna als Fluechtling zwischen dem Schilfrohr eines nahen Gewaessers gesucht. Undwiderstehlich hatten diese Deutschamerikaner den Feind am jenem praechtigen Aprilmorgen ueber die Ebene von San Jacinto hinweggefegt. Sie hatten mutig dabei dem Tode ins Angesicht geblickt und den Tyrannen, Santa Anna, die Freiheit ihres Staates entwunden. Kleeberg und seine Waffengenossen hatten die frieie Republik von Texas erkampft. Kleeberg erlebte noch die stuermischen Anfangstage von Texas und sah seine neue Heimat waschen und gedeihen trotz des mexikanischen und des folgenden Buergerkrieges. sah dieses grose Beibiet als den 29. Staat in der Union eintreten. Er starb, reich an Jahren und Ehren, in Yorktown, Texas, am 23. Oktober 1888—ein Deutschamerikaner, dem sein Staat Texas bei der Jahrhundertfeier in Dallas vor der ganzen Welt Ehre darbringt.

HORNETS BEGIN GRIND

One of the largest football squads of recent years reported Monday afternoon to Coach Earl Worley in the high school gym. Thirty-nine men, including five letter men, were issued equipment. Such a turnout was far more than to be expected for the opening day. Several letter men and squad men from last year will not report until school starts, as their work is keeping them busy at home until the last minute.

Those reporting Monday afternoon were Neal Hinsley, Zack Fore, Joe Satterfield, Jackie Parish, Bunce Jones, W. T. Perryman, Jack Mayberry, Joe Ned Brown, James Weaver, Esteen Parten, Royce Davis, Lloyd Ivy, Danny McClellan, Sidney Gregory, Burl Davis, E. L. Taylor, George Donaldson, Edwin McDonald, C. H. Wallace, Douglas White, Joe Black, Bill Blanchard, Joe Baker, J. C. Byron, Poy Wicker, Bill Morgan, Ted Brazzil, Billie McBride, Clovis King, John Frank Post, Alan Baker, Lawrence Spencer, D. I. Pat Bone, Alvis Ingram, John Lester, Jack Jackson, and Sam Clemons.

A team composed of members from last year's squad brought a smile to Coach Worley's face when they snapped through a signal drill as if they had left off spring practice yesterday. Although not optimistic as yet about the teams possibilities, the Hornet mentor is not grumbling about their early showing. Several boys are showing up well in the backfield. Both Hinsley and Fore are giving promise of developing into nice kickers and Joe Baker is driving the team like a veteran from the quarterback slot.

Two boys from the rural district, Jones and Perryman, although new to the game are taking to it rapidly and emerged from Tuesday's scrimmage skinned up and grinning.

The line will possibly be Worley's greatest worry. Wallace at center and the Davis brothers at guards will see service, but the tackles and ends are open to anyone rough and tough enough. "Gooch" McDonald has the weight and experience if he adds some speed and forethought. Fow Wicker will probably hold down the other wing positions.

Watch Joe Ned Brown, the little boy with the big drive, this season. This small man is reminiscent of the great Johnny Bradford, in both his line plunging and blocking.

The '36 version of the Hornets will not be as small as commonly supposed. Although the team has no heavyweights, several of the boys are husky and compact in build. The greatest trouble will be inexperience in actual combat. Several games under their belt will help to remedy this and set the boys on the touchdown path.

With the resignation of Coach Maurie Ewing the Hornets lose a valuable line coach and aid to Worley. No information has been received as yet whether another coach will be available or not, but in all events Worley will have his hands full with an abundance of material and a rugged schedule.

PROS MEET COLLEGIATES

The outwest's first major football game of 1936, to be played in the Cotton Bowl of the Texas Centennial Exposition September 7, will show a cast of all-star characters equivalent to anyone's "who's who" in the great American game today.

Southwest fans have seen grid ghosts go galloping over their gridirons before, to be sure, but this battle in the Cotton Bowl on Labor Day at night between Chicago bears and a picked All-American eleven dominated by Southwestern stars, promises to be a case of collective gabbling.

There will be half a hundred or more of these grid stars on hand for this game, and a majority of them, whether members of one team or the other, are not strangers to all-American ranks. Check these names in your "whos who" in football: Truman Spain of S. M. U.; Bobby Wilson also of SMU; Westmuller of Southern California; Ike Poole and Jimmy Howell of Arkansas; Throgmorton of Vanderbilt; Lutz of Southern California; and "Iron Man" Wetzel of SMU.

The Bears boast of the greatest fullback, Bronko Nagurski, the most elusive half-back, Beattie Feathers, all-American from Tennessee; the greatest wingman in a decade, Bill Hewitt, all-American from the Big 10; and George Musso, 250 pound tackle.

The Bears are the most spectacular of national grid outfits and were runners-up in the 1935 national championship.

Tickets for this game may be secured by mail through the Centennial Exposition ticket department. General admission is $1.10 and reserved seats sell for $2.20.

Apparently awaiting the time when television gets around in earnest there are two unfinished floors in the Radio City studios of NBC.

GATESVILLE, TEXAS, FRIDAY, SEPT. 4, 1936

NUMBER 74

CORYELL'S QUOTA FOR FALL DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN IS $892.00

Austin, Sept. 3.—District and County organizations are now active in raising their quotas for the $250,000 campaign fund in behalf of Roosevelt and Garner, it was announced by Roy Miller, Director of Organization and Finance for the Democratic National campaign in Texas. Dinners, luncheons and other meetings have been planned all over the state, indicating the enthusiasm with which Democrats are launching the drive.

Already two counties, Duval and Bosque, have turned in their full quotas, $560 for the former and $988 for the latter. Archie Parr, former State Senator, who looked after the Duval collections, is one of the original Roosevelt men in Texas. Vice President Garner and Miller held a conference at Uvalde when the state-wide drive started and he approved the Texas plans, predicting Roosevelt will be elected with ease, but that Texas must and will do her part.

No county has been allocated less than $100. Harris is highest in the list, with $30,000 while Dallas is second with $25,000; Bexar third with $20,000 and Tarrant fourth with $15,000. The campaign committee based each county quota at 20 cents a vote cast in the July Democratic primary.

Even before the drive began many contributions were received at headquarters, all the way from $1 to the $10,000 given by Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, National Committeewoman from Texas.

An unusual development, and yet not surprising to Miller, Garner and Chairman Myron Blalock, has attracted attention. Republicans here and there over the state are bolting and organizing clubs for Roosevelt, the first having been formed in Dallas, these Republicans believing since they shared in the benefits of the Roosevelt Administration they owe home support as a matter of gratitude and loyalty. And to prove it one leading Republican sent in a check for $500 for the Roosevelt campaign.

Will Rogers' Humorous Story

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a young fellow that got a job in charge of a small power station in California. He was just out of engineering school, and he didn't want nothing to interfere with his career. So he asked the district superintendent what had caused the last guy at that station to lose his job.

"Why, a man was killed by the high tension line there," says the superintendent. "I reckon it really wasn't the fault of the guy in charge of the station, but he lost his job anyhow. Be sure you warn people away from them cables."

So the new guy in charge put up a sign that said:

Danger! These wires will instantly kill you if you touch one of them!

LABOR DAY

LABOR DAY

Monday is Labor Day, also First Monday! This Labor Day idea first started in 1882, and was begun as a day to agitate for the rights of Labor.

In the South it is hardly recognized, or at least is nothing more than another day, but in the North and East, and in crowded, densely populated countries of Europe, Labor Day has quite some significance.

In these sections, where there is a continual fight between tradesmen, unions, and other labor organizations, and factories, sweat shops, mines, etc., Labor Day is celebrated to the utmost. Some times there are even riots and fights, as is the usual case where employees are dealt with in masses by employers.

Now, Labor Day celebrates the victory of labor for shorter hours, higher pay, better working conditions, and the many other features that labor has had to struggle for in wrestling from the driving money-pinching employers.

As a result of these organizations, the most serious abuses have been removed. The day is shorter. Women and children have, to some extent, been protected, and in general labor has bettered itself by the origination of this idea, and of the unions!

These are some reasons for celebrating Labor Day!

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE for WOMEN (CIVIL)

Some people make the worst of the best.

A rich dead man is as poor as the rest of us.

One's value depends on how much he does that he doesn't have to do.

Some people get a big kick out of going where they don't belong.

Don't mistake your own shortcomings for government defects.

SYNOPSIS

Jeff Hawkins and Wahoo Jones, outlaws, join the Texas Rangers to procure inside information on pay-rolls and gold shipments to send to their bandit pal, Polka Dot McGee. Invited to dinner at the home of their commanding officer, Major Bailey, the men meet Amanda, the Major's beautiful daughter. A budding romance between Amanda and the tall and handsome Hawkins is interrupted by word that Indians all over Texas are going on the war-path.

CHAPTER V

AS the Major had expected, the Indian war which followed was bloody to the extreme. Resenting the continued encroachment of the white man into their hunting grounds, the redskins stopped at nothing to exterminate their enemies. In the melée the Rangers fought against terrific odds at all times, spent unbroken days and nights in the saddle and performed superhuman feats of daring.

But exhausted men cannot remain forever on the alert. The Indians realized this and stalked the whites like wolves. And finally they were rewarded. Worn out by a long day's riding, Major Bailey and "D" Company rode listlessly into a narrow canyon—and found themselves facing 200 Comanche braves drawn up in battle array.

"Rush them . . . it's our only chance!" The Major shook off his exhaustion as if by magic as he drew his gun. "We've got about five seconds!"

At his words the Rangers charged forward as one man. Unprepared for such a maneuver, the Indians nevertheless did not give way. Soon the twenty white men were surrounded by a mob of yelling, snarling, painted warriors who were prevented by their very numbers from exterminating their enemies.

Captain Stafford and six men broke through and ran for some sheltering boulders. But two of them were shot down before they reached this comparative safety.

Major Bailey protected the Captain's retreat, then, shouting to his men to follow, scrambled up a narrow ledge on the canyon side and managed to reach a large cave which he had discovered twenty feet above the trail. Only five of his original company of twenty men managed to escape the Indians and follow him into this retreat. Among them were Jeff and Wahoo, a Mexican named Rodriguez, Charley Buckner and a lean old fellow with handlebar mustaches known to his companions only as "Whiskers."

Disheveled, begrimed, sweating, their clothes torn to ribbons, many of them, including Wahoo, badly wounded by arrows, the little company lay prone at the edge of their retreat and pumped lead into the Indians who were climbing after them. The withering fire was too much for the warriors. They retreated pell-mell. Then two of their number chose another path up the cliff, plainly intent upon rolling huge stones down upon the two groups of beleaguered white men.

Sitting with his back against a rock, Wahoo groaned and grunted with pain as he tried to pull out an arrow which had imbedded itself deep in his shoulder.

"Wait a minute, you crazy darn fool," cried Jeff as he crawled over to him. "That thing's gone plumb through you an its got barbs onto it." A little roughly he pulled his friend around, caught the shaft of the arrow and snapped it in two. Then, as Wahoo yelped in agony, he pulled the missile cleanly out of the wound.

"Tell me if it hurts," he remarked in his best bedside manner.

"They've got all of Stafford's men," Whiskers reported at that moment as he peered out of the mouth of the cave. "They've . . ." He ducked back just in time to avoid a huge boulder as it shot over the edge of the canyon and crashed into the ravine with a noise like thunder. "Boys . . . save your last bullets for yourselves," said Major Bailey tensely. "A few more boulders like that will smash the overhanging ledge and we'll be trapped."

"I go up after them, compadre. Adios!" responded Rodriguez. Before anyone could stop him he clambered out of the shelter and started crawling up the sheer side of the canyon. Hardly had he ascended ten feet when another rock crashed down, pinning him beneath it.

"Un gran hombre," whispered the Major. "May he rest in peace."

"Every man stay where you are!" commanded the officer as the rest of the Rangers started to follow Rodriguez's heroic example.

"We'll be battered to pieces in no as he saw a number of the Rangers' horses tethered to rocks with no one guarding them. At the risk of life and limb he plunged downward once more, taking care to avoid the eyes of the Indians which were, of course, still watching the cave.

He made it undetected. Vaulting into a saddle, he tore loose the bridle reins. Half an hour's wild riding brought him to the end of Needle Canyon and out onto the open plain.

Back at the shelter the Rangers stirred uneasily as the rain of arrows and bullets ceased abruptly. Could it mean the Indians had been frightened by Jeff's escape? That seemed hardly possible. Or did it mean that the Indians had given up their direct attack and were crawling, unseen, among the boulders toward the mouth of the cave?

Hawkins starts up the cliff time," protested Whiskers, as he twisted savagely at his handlebars. "I'd like to get to them babies before I die."

"My orders are straight—we all stay here! Buckner! Come back, man. You're married and have children."

"Maybe I've lived too long," said Jeff suddenly. His eyes were aglow with pride at these men. For the first time in his life he felt the greatness of comradeship . . . of one man's friendship for another . . . a friendship that was willing to sacrifice life itself. Wahoo glanced at him with perfect understanding and crawled as near to the entrance of the cave as he possibly could. There he braced his wounded shoulder against a rock, then nodded slowly to his pal.

"Hawkins!" shouted Major Bailey as the former leaped out into the open.

"Go to it, baby," laughed Wahoo proudly. "I'll cover you."

The Indians saw Jeff climbing upward and opened fire with guns and arrows. Those on top of the cliff struggled frantically to roll more boulders down but were unable to do so because of Wahoo's steady fire.

Panting and sweating the Ranger finally reached the top. As the two Indians there lunged forward to grapple with him he jerked his revolver from its holster and fired again and again. The braves screamed, clawed at their breasts and tottered over the edge to their deaths.

Spurred on by desperation, Jeff glanced over the other side of the ledge and almost shouted with joy

"Save your ammunition" directed the Major. "Don't fire till you see them. And remember . . . every man save his last bullet for himself."

The other three men nodded grimly and waited. Soon they could see faint glints of feathered headdresses and red skins among the boulders. The Indians were spreading out fanwise and keeping under cover. There was no hope now. Death was stalking them and could not be avoided . . .

Then, when their enemies were almost upon them, a company of fifty Rangers from Company "B" charged into the top of the canyon. Completely unprepared for this sudden attack and unable to judge the number of horsemen, the Indians fled wildly down the canyon until they brought up facing another band of white horsemen. Jeff had done his work well.

Realizing that they were trapped in their turn the Indians concentrated their fire upon Jeff, who was in the forefront of the battle and was recognized by the redskins as the man who had climbed the cliff and brought reinforcements.

"He'll never come out of that mess alive," groaned Major Bailey as he watched the hand-to-hand struggle going on below him.

"He will unless I topple over from loss of blood," grunted Wahoo as he braced his wounded shoulder more firmly against its rock and continued to fire steadily and with precision into the mass of fanatical warriors who were striving to tear his friend to pieces on the floor of the gorge.

Lets Talk about Clothes

TEXAS STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (CIA)

Denton, Sept. 3—Every college girl considers some clothes of special importance. She wants to look her nicest at the first prom, and naturally what she will wear requires much thought and consideration.

This season evening clothes are gayest than usual. Designers predict that chiffon velvet and cere satin will be foremost in the evening parade, and they are shown in bright colors or somber tones with brilliant flowers or trimming.

If you are going to college you don't want your evening clothes to look too sophisticated. Some girls wear clothes that were meant for their mothers, and nothing ruins a youthful appearance more.

Your frocks should be low in the back, but don't go to the extreme. The lines should be simple, but not too severe and a feminine note should always be present.

Frocks for dinners and informal receptions are made of sheer crepes with huge marquise sleeves that are trimmed in braid. Rhinestone ornaments play an important part to these dresses. Then there are the other popular tones for dinners. This year girls at Texas State College for Women (CIA) declare them particularly nice when worn with black skirts.

When discussing evening frocks, we should certainly give some attention to the wraps. For winter fur coats are fast taking the place of other materials, but in early fall a light velvet coat is the very thing. It can be made floor length on the princess lines with a high Elizabeth collar. You'll be proud to wear it.
