Tragedy may lead to caution

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Soviet Russia's barbaric destruction of the Korean passenger plane is gradually bringing to light some startling information which makes President Reagan's call for new international air safety measures more imperative than ever.

If the terrible tragedy leads to greater caution on all sides concerning aircraft flying near sensitive foreign air space, the 269 persons, including 61 Americans, who were brutally murdered may not have died completely in vain.

Their sacrifice might lead to measures which could help avert the danger of nuclear war between the superpowers if another such incident occurred. One of India's leading newspapers, the conservative Hindustan Times, described the shooting down of KAL Flight 007 as "tantamount to a cause for war."

Gradual disclosures of violations of American as well as Soviet air space, lack of adequate control of Korean commerical aircraft flying close to highly sensitive Soviet military areas, and the reported practice of American and Soviet military aircraft of violating, intentionally or not, one another's air space, clearly indicates a dangerous situation that necessitates more effective precautionary measures.

About 70 times each year, according to an Air Force spokesman, Soviet Tupolev reconnaissance plans violate American air space, veering inside the Air Force's Aerospace Defense Identification Zone (ADIZ), a buffer area 60 to 200 miles wide that surrounds the country.

"We call it fence-checking," the Air Force spokesman said. "They probably just want to see what will happen next."

What usually happens is that U.S. or Canadian fighters intercept the Soviet plane, usually within minutes. As soon as challenged, the Soviet pilot turns back into international air space.

The Federal Aviation Administration reported that about 20 times a year a Soviet commerical passenger jet on the Moscow-Havana run flies into U.S. air space near Florida. While commericial planes can easily be equipped with cameras and electronic espionage equipment, the FAA assumes the incursions are inadvertent and they are usually handled with a radio message telling the Soviet pilot to get back on his regular course.

In 1981, during the air traffic controllers strike, the Soviet airline Aeroflot, which then had a Moscow-Washington service, filed a flight plan calling for its planes to leave their usual course over the Atlantic and pass over a section of New England that included the Trident submarine base in New London, Conn., and an Air Force base in New Hampshire.

Reagan may take further measures against Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is considering further steps against the Soviet Union in response to the attack on a Korean airliner, administration officials say.

"I think you're going to see the screw continue to turn," Les Janka, a deputy White House press secretary, said Wednesday.

The son of Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., one of the 269 people believed killed in the incident, said after a White House meeting he was told by Reagan's national security adviser that "progressive action" would be taken against the Soviets.

Reagan has announced limited sanctions on cultural exchanges and transportation agreements.

Janka said the degree to which the administration attempts to step up pressure on the Soviets will depend on Soviet responses to U.S. demands for an apology, restitution for the victims' families, and assurances that such an attack will not occur again.

"We're willing to play some more cards to see if we can achieve those objectives," he said.

Bob Sims, a spokesman for the National Security Council, said the focus of the president was to "seek an allied consensus, rather than frighten people off by getting too far out in front."

Tryggvi McDonald, 22, son of the congressman, and Terry Dolan, head of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, met with William Clark, Reagan's assistant for national security affairs, and with Craig Fuller, another assistant to the president. The visitors wore buttons reading "Remember Flight 007."

Dolan said Clark reported that the president would take "progressive action," and raised the possibility of a cutoff of high-technology sales to the Soviet Union.

Before visiting the White House, McDonald told a rally at Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the executive mansion: "My father is gone and nothing can bring him back."

Then, wiping tears from his eyes, he added, "If by dying he has ended Western appeasement of the Soviet Union, then he did not die in vain."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "the international community" wanted "a full accounting" from the Soviets.

The Soviet Union acknowledged in a televised statement Tuesday evening that one of its fighter pilots shot down the Korean Boeing 747. But it denied that the pilot knew he was firing at a passenger jet.

The plane was attacked early last Thursday morning as it emerged from restricted Soviet airspace near Sakhalin Island in the Sea of Japan.

"The admission...was coupled with a flat Soviet statement saying they will take the same action in the future in similar circumstances — in other words, that they will shoot down the next off-course, unarmed aircraft that transgresses the territory prescribed by Soviet law," Speakes said. "The case is in no way closed by the Soviet admission."

Town shocked by reports of children's sex-for-hire ring

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (AP) — A children's sex-for-hire ring in this New England town was made up of kids who feel they "aren't wanted," one 12-year-old said, as adults reacted with shock to reports that youngsters aged 8 to 13 sold sexual favors.

"We've been hearing a lot of talk about kids giving their bodies away," said 12-year-old Jeffrey Cleveland.

"I think a lot of them are kids whose mothers say 'go away' — like that — and they feel like they aren't wanted," he said Wednesday.

He said he wasn't surprised to learn that police had broken a ring including 10 youngsters, ages 8 to 13, who had allegedly organized a sex-selling ring for adults last winter.

"I've seen some kids do it. They just go up to people," Jeffrey said matter-of-factly.

Adults in this town of 12,000 didn't take the matter so calmly.

"I was horrified," said resident Douglas Grube. "I wish I knew what was going on because I have two kids in that age group. You immediately begin wondering what your kids have been up to and who they're hanging around with."

Lt. Richard Guthrie, head juvenile officer for the Brattleboro Police Department, said there were no adults in charge of the ring, which involved mostly girls. The activity began last winter and ended last month, he said.

"There's no male pimp...I think it is structured within the peer group," he said.

John Burchard, commissioner of the state Social and Rehabilitative Services department, said the ring began when "an adult approached a child and lured the child into the situation for monetary benefits." Children then began "luring" other children, he said.

Police announced the ring was broken up as the result of an intensive, month-long investigation. "At least a couple" of adults were being investigated for possible prosecution in connection with the ring, Guthrie said. He said they probably will be charged with sexual assault or lewd and lascivious conduct.

Police refused to disclose any information on the children, the details of the sexual activities, how much was charged or where the encounters took place. Guthrie would only say the youngsters were not "running a house."

At a popular downtown video arcade, Instant Replay, a group of young teen-agers smoking cigarettes giggled and nudged each other. "You're a prostitute," teased one. "No, you are," the other answered. "We're all wondering who they are," one girl explained.

"Older kids know sex is for love, but the little kids don't necessarily know that," said Marcy Knapp, 16. "Some kids might do it for attention because a lot of kids don't feel wanted. It's gonna affect them later on, though."

The report about the sex ring was "the talk of the town," said Gladys Crossman, a clerk at the Dutch Bake Shop. "People have been saying the whole thing is sickening," she added.

Police suspected the ring was operating for almost a year, but a full-scale investigation was not launched until some solid tips were received last month, Guthrie said.

He said parents of all of the children have been notified. They will all be looked on as "victims" and will be dealt with by state social workers, said Guthrie.

Regional school superintendent James Cusick said all of the youngsters involved attended the district's three elementary schools, which serve four neighboring rural towns as well as Brattleboro.

"I'm discouraged and disappointed," said Cusick. "You don't think of these things happening in Vermont."

Marines forgo showers, hot food

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Marines manning the front lines around Beirut Airport are digging deeper, sleeping in bunkers and forgoing such comforts as showers and hot food. The war in Lebanon has spilled into their compound.

"To be honest with you, it's really been shaky," said Cpl. Gerald Shanley, 22, of Kent, Ohio, a mortar forward observer attached to "Charlie Company."

"They're coming in from out of nowhere and like I said, you don't know when it's going to happen," he said.

Since Saturday, when Moslem Shiite militiamen attacked a joint U.S.-Lebanese outpost, the Marines have come under fire every day from the Aley and Chouf mountains which rise a few miles from their forward positions.

Four Marines of the 1,200-man contingent have been killed by shellfire during the fighting.

Marines say some of the rounds were clearly aimed at them, while others were probably strays, fired either by Phalangist or Druse militiamen or the Christian-dominated Lebanese army, all battling for control of the hills.

"They were fired from the east, from the north, from near and far," said Warrant Officer Charles Rowe of San Francisco.

Since the fighting erupted last weekend, Marines from the three rifle companies manning the perimeter have been sleeping in their underground bunkers in case of attacks at night.

A few nights ago, one rocket slammed into the tent which was home to Lt. Richard Hasey of Arlington, Va.

"I saw this little blur," said Hasey as he fingered the gray metallic remains of the rocket. "I came running over. Somebody was stamping out this little fire. It was my laundry."

With the new fighting, the Marine compound looks like a set of World War I trenches and earthen bunkers.

Marine engineers have been building a new network of trenches and ditches linking bunkers so the troops can move without exposing themselves to fire.

Throughout the day, when the gunners from the hills are taking a break or looking for other targets, troops fill green sandbags to shore up bunkers and observation posts.

If shelling is heavy, the troops stay in their bunkers, eating cold field rations when it is too dangerous to go to the mess tent. Hot showers are an occasional luxury.

Drilling company files for bankruptcy

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

SAN ANGELO — Arroyo Drilling Company, a San Angelo partnership, filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy Wednesday afternoon for reorganization and protection from creditors, in Texas' Northern District U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Fort Worth.

The company has sustained losses for successive quarters of operation, a spokesman said, and recently shut down operations. It was unable to restructure its $6.6 million indebtedness to the First National Bank of Midland.

Over a dozen other banks were involved in the credit. Management said FNB couldn't accept Arroyo's plan of a "liquidity trust" to pay off the note, on behalf of all the small banks participating in the loan.

The trust proposed to pay off this $6.6 million debt, said Arroyo Drilling partner Mike Barrett, would include cash, oil and gas revenues, future revenues, and an overriding interest in several properties for a fixed period. Barrett hopes the bankruptcy court will tell FNB and the other banks involved in the note to accept the plan, and he says the creditors might receive all that is due them — in time.

"We found ourselves losing money on a monthly basis, and we were unable to repay FNB when they asked us," he said. "The rigs aren't worth $6.6 million now."

The properties, since Arroyo is strictly a contract drilling company, will come from four partners' personal oil and gas interests. Besides Barrett, those partners include Jack Albert, J.B. Fraley, and Ted Swiderski.

Shultz wants explanation of attack

By The Associated Press

French pilots today joined a rapidly spreading boycott of Moscow-bound flights to protest the downing of a South Korean jetliner, and U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz says he will press his Soviet counterpart for a frank explanation of the attack.

The French national pilot's union said flyers for Air France will boycott all Paris-Moscow flights for 60 days beginning next Tuesday. Air France has seven flights a week to Moscow.

While the Soviets reportedly stepped their search for the plane's wreckage today, protests against the attack continued.

Hundreds of angry Korean Canadians chanted "Soviet murderers" outside the barricaded Soviet Embassy in Ottawa, pelting it with eggs and trying to storm it Wednesday. In New York, nearly 1,000 protesters clashed with riot-helmeted police near a Soviet diplomatic mission.

Shultz, scheduled to meet today in Spain with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, said U.S.-Soviet relations could worsen unless the Soviets provided a more candid account of the attack.

BUT GROMYKO on Wednesday maintained the South Korean Boeing 747 "tried to escape" Soviet air space and ignored orders to land.

He called Soviet borders "sacred," and reiterated Moscow's contention that the airliner was on a spy mission for the United States — a claim denied by U.S. and South Korean officials.

Shultz and Gromyko are attending the 35-nation Madrid Conference on European Security and Cooperation.

Shultz has said the shooting down of the plane will be the main topic of today's meeting, and said of Gromyko's statements: "Falsehoods have been continuous, and juggling of the facts is too mild a word for the way in which the Soviet Union has responded to this Korean plane shootdown."

The Korean Air Lines jumbo jet was shot down by a heat-seeking missile last Thursday near the Soviet island of Sakhalin, north of Japan. All 269 people aboard are presumed dead.

A Japanese Maritime Safety Agency patrol boat today reported sighting 55 Soviet vessels in Soviet waters off Sakhalin, including a Soviet intelligence ship that tossed two cables from its stern into the sea, agency officials said.

IT WAS UNCLEAR whether the intelligence ship, the 720-ton Okean, had discovered the crash site or material from the missile-downed aircraft, said officials at the northern Japanese port of Hokkaido.

They said 43 Soviet fishing boats were spotted drifting near the Okean about 18 miles northwest of Moneron, a small Soviet island off Sakhalin. Another 11 Soviet guardships and fishing vessels were situated about a mile closer to Moneron, the officials said.

Japanese, U.S. and South Korean vessels barred from entering Soviet waters are pressing their search in international waters, but so far have found no trace of the plane.

In addition to France, airline pilots in Britain, Canada, Denmark and Sweden have announced they will join a 60-day boycott of flights to Moscow, called for by the International Federation of Airline Pilots.

Spokesmen for pilots' groups in West Germany, the Netherlands, Norway, Italy, Belgium and Luxembourg indicated they probably would join the boycott. In Switzerland, pilots of the national airline Swissair are seeking government permission for a boycott. And Australian pilots have refused to fly Soviet diplomats within Australia for 60 days. Qantas, Australia's international carrier, does not fly to Moscow.

Flights by the Soviet airline Aeroflot have been suspended for 60 days in Canada, and NATO countries are considering similar sanctions. The United States has barred Aeroflot landings since 1981, when martial law was imposed in Poland.

BRITISH FOREIGN Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe told reporters in Madrid that NATO countries were considering "restricting flights to the Soviet Union, or restricting flights by the Soviet airline, or both, for a stated period of time."

The International Air Transport Association, which represents most international carriers, today issued a statement from Geneva, Switzerland, calling for an objective inquiry by the International Civil Aviation Organization, which meets Sept. 15 in Montreal, Canada.

In Tokyo, U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield urged Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe to impose "concrete measures" against the Soviet Union.

Foreign Ministry officials said Manfield, during a 20-minute meeting with Abe, stressed the importance of coordinated and quick action.

Japan's top Cabinet ministers, headed by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, decided at an emergency meeting Wednesday that Japan would continue to apply "maximum pressure" on Moscow to provide a true accounting of the air tragedy, but stopped short of announcing sanctions.

The Foreign Ministry also reacted strongly to Soviet charges of "criminal carelessness" by Japan for not warning the airliner that it had entered Soviet space.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR to Japan Vladimir Pavlov was called into the ministry Wednesday night and told Japanese officials were unaware of the plane's location until after it was shot down. Japanese envoys gave the same explanation during a U.N. Security Council meeting Wednesday, when the accusation was made by Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky.

Also in Tokyo, about 40 relatives of Japanese victims visited the prime minister's official residence and asked for a quick probe into the incident and government efforts to recover the bodies and belongings of their family members, officials at the residence said.

In Seoul, the South Korean National Assembly met in special session today and declared that the Soviet Union had "appalled all mankind" by the attack.

Tragedy may lead to greater caution in flying

The plan was approved, but when it was realized what the Soviets were up to, the State Department suspended the airline's Moscow-Washington flights for a week.

Col. Gen. Semyon Romanov, chief of the Soviet air defense command and the man who may have ordered the attack on KAL 007, charged that American military planes have violated Soviet airspace in the Kamchatka area nine times this year.

Reports have been circulating in Washington this week that U.S. military planes deliberately fly close to, if not within, Soviet air space to test the defense reaction. A Pentagon spokesman denied knowledge of such activity, and said it certainly is not authorized. However, the Washington Post quoted Air Force sources as saying it was "standard practice" for American military planes to "tickle" Soviet radar into action. This is said to be done by flying close enough to Soviet frontier defense bases to cause the Soviets to activate radar, including weapons-control radar, and in some instances, to send up their fighter planes.

Air Force sources added, according to the Post, that American RC-135 reconnaissance planes are dispatched frequently from Alaska along the Soviet Union's Kamchatka Penninsula to learn of any change in the alert status of Soviet air squadrons. They also monitor Soviet missile tests, since Kamchatka is the impact base on which long-range missiles land after being test-fired.

It was an RC-135 which President Reagan said was "in the vicinity" of the ill-fated KAL 007 shortly before it strayed into Soviet air space. A White House statement said the RC-135 had "crossed the path" of the KAL 007, but that it was back at its base by the time the Korean plane was shot down.

Moscow reports have indicated the Soviet pilot may have mistaken the KAL 007 for the RC-135, although that would have been no justification for shooting it down. American officials say if the Soviets did not know the difference, they should have known it.

The question has also been raised about the wisdom of the FAA in approving a route for Korean commercial planes that, even when they remained on course, took them within 17 miles of one of the Soviet's most secret and strategic bases. The FAA controls the northern part of the route from Anchorage to Tokyo and South Korea. All other airlines fly routes which are many miles further away from Kamchatka. Korea wanted the Kamchatka route because it is more direct from Anchorage to Soeul, and thus more economical. The FAA has suspended that route, and it is not likely to be restored unless an agreement is reached with the Soviets on more effective safety measures.

Those measures should include the constant monitoring of and communication with all commerical planes when they are flying off the Kamchatka coast so that if their navigational computers malfunction, as they have on rare occasions, they, as well as the Soviets, can be quickly notified.

Further steps may be taken

Speakes said other nations are asking the Soviets for "an unequivocal apology for Soviet actions, restitution for the victims' families, full cooperation with international efforts to investigate this tragedy and recover its victims, and assurances that the Soviet Union will take specific steps to ensure that the massacre...not occur again."

Speakes also said the government had no recordings of instructions sent by Soviet ground commanders to the pilots who intercepted Flight 007.

But he said the government has "evidence that is as plain as the nose on your face" that the Soviets should have known their pilots were tracking a passenger jet and not a U.S. spy plane.

"There does exist further evidence that makes it practically irrefutable," he said. Administration officials have refused to make any such evidence public.

"It could have been a mistake, but it stretches the imagination," Speakes said of the Soviet pilots.

Changes demanded in Aquino commission

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Critics demanded changes in a presidential commission investigating the slaying of opposition leader Benigno Aquino and a Hong Kong magazine today said the alleged assassin spoke to his girlfriend of "a heavy mission."

About 60 students picketed the home of Supreme Court Chief Justice Enrique Fernando this morning, demanding he resign as commission chairman in favor of "others who have the people's trust."

President Ferdinand E. Marcos created the commission to investigate the Aug. 21 airport assassination of Aquino, his chief political rival who had just returned to Manila from three years of voluntary exile in the United States.

Police immediately gunned down a man, later identified as Rolando Galwan, who they said was a notorious "gun-for-hire" who had killed Aquino.

Hong Kong-based Asiaweek today quoted an unidentified source who spoke to Galwan's girlfriend, Ana "Baby" Oliva. The report said she asked Galwan, a night or two before Aquino was killed, why he was depressed and he answered: "This is a heavy mission. It's beyond you."

Ms. Oliva said the conversation took place at a motel near Manila's airport, the English-language magazine reported. It quoted Ms. Oliva as telling the source that five "mysterious armed men" visited Galman at the motel for three successive nights before the day of the assassination.

Ms. Oliva and a sister, Catherine, apparently were picked up by military men on Sept. 4 from a supper club in Manila where they worked, and have not been seen since, the magazine said.

Aquino's family and many government opponents fear the commission, composed of men considered to be Marcos loyalists, will uphold Marcos' contention that his government had no hand in the assassination. Marcos had described the assassination as the work of a professional killer or of communist subversives.

Today, the government's television station broadcast a two-day-old film clip in which Marcos defended the commission as "the best thing that could be done."

Addressing businessmen at the presidential palace Tuesday, Marcos said the commission will "exert all efforts in order to attain the truth."

"There is no alternative that is more just, fair and certainly effective," Marcos said.

Aquino was shot while in custody of soldiers taking him from the China Airlines plane that had flown him to Manila under an assumed name from Taipei.

The inquiry commission heard testimony Wednesday from a National Bureau of Investigation physician who conducted an autopsy on Aquino's body. The panel was to listen later today to another doctor who examined the body of the reputed assassin, who the government claims was gunned down by soldiers after he shot Aquino.

Fernando opened the commission's first hearing Wednesday by brushing aside challenges to the panel's impartiality while two petitions asking for Fernando's disqualification were pending.

In observation posts, Marines standing in shoulder-deep holes peer through binoculars at the smoking hills to the east. Behind them, only a few hundred yards away, the Mediterranean laps the sand. To the northeast, the graceful curve of the coast reveals Beirut's chalk white buildings on the horizon.

Shelling is not the only danger the Marines face. Snipers in nearby villages pepper Marine positions with small arms fire.

The dirt road from the headquarters compound to two of the rifle company outposts skirts the village of Hay El-Sellum, which remains in the hands of Moslem Shiites.

Gunmen have built two earthen bunkers not more than 20 yards from the Marine road. Reporters riding a jeep back from the outposts could see three gunmen on one mound.

Marines say most of the fire lately has been coming from batteries about 15 miles away, out of sight and hearing.

"The other night we saw them come right over that ridgeline," said Shanley, pointing to a wooded hill to the east.

"You could see the flash, and the rocket would come right down on you. All you could do was get down," he said. "If you see the flash, you got about 10 seconds before impact."

The Druse, whose sect is an offshoot of Islam, have been fighting both the Christian Phalange forces and the Lebanese army since Israel pulled back from the Aley and Chouf mountains on Sunday.

The Israelis invaded Lebanon in June 1982 in an effort to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization. They decided to redeploy south because they suffered a growing number of casualties from guerrillas while occupying the mountains.

San Angelo drilling company files bankruptcy

Arroyo's three oil drilling rigs, bought with their $6.6 million in credit, are stacked idly in its yard. The firm could not compete in contract drilling, Barrett said, because companies with no debt are lowering prices and making profit — and solvency — unreachable for the debt-financed Arroyo.

"The margins just aren't there," with overhead, maintenance, and other costs added to a large bank debt, said Barrett.

There have been "no problems talking to the bank," he said. "We are confident of reaching a solution through the court. (FNB) has been our bank for several years; we are sensitive to their current problems, and they are to ours."

Barrett said the magnitude of Arroyo's debt, the large number of participating banks, and the current bad economy for contract drilling, may have affected FNB's decision not to accept the liquidity trust when it was first offered.

"They feel more comfortable dealing with our company, and with others in our position, through the courts," Barrett said. "A disposition (in U.S. Bankruptcy Court) is a 'cram-down.' The court says to the creditors, 'This is what you get.' "

Abortion ban expected to pass in Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The powerful Roman Catholic Church, which wants an existing abortion ban enshrined in the constitution, is expected to get its way today when the government announces results of a bitter nationwide referendum.

Commentators predicted a 2-1 majority in favor of putting a 122-year-old legal ban on abortion in the constitution, ensuring that the operation remains illegal. The result is expected later today.

Authorities said the turnout Wednesday among Ireland's 2.3 million voters may have been as low as 50 percent because many stayed away from polling stations to protest what they considered an unnecessary and divisive referendum.

The issue has deeply divided the country, throwing families, politicians, lawyers, doctors and others into emotional debates. Newspapers have dubbed it a "moral civil war."

Priests and Catholic nuns, some from secluded orders who rarely venture into the outside world, were among the first at polling stations.

Roman Catholics, whose church says abortion amounts to murder, comprise 97 percent of the population. The church hierarchy said people should vote their conscience.

But most of the country's 5,000 Catholic priests urged parishoners to vote for writing the existing legal ban into the constitution.

They argued that this would guarantee a permanent abortion ban because a constitutional amendment cannot be reversed.

Other anti-abortionists argued that a "no" vote would encourage a movement to legalize abortion.

Charles Haughey, leader of the opposition Fianna Fail Party, backed the proposed constitutional change. But Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald, and the churches have opposed it.

Inmates to leave tents for cells

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Most Texas prison inmates living in Army tents will be moved back into cells by the end of the month, a prison spokesman said.

The tents were erected two years ago to ease overcrowding at state prisons. For the past month, inmates have been moved out of the tents as cell space became available, TDC spokesman Jay Byrd said Wednesday.

He said the availability of additional cells and other housing means the TDC will be able to phase out the tents by the end of September, with the exception of eight a the Diagnostic Unit.

He said the tents would remain at the Diagnostic Unit because "construction has just started there and inmates are temporary and usually moved out the next day."

The tents were erected in July 1981 in response to an order from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice for sweeping reforms in the state prison system.

About 300 tents were set up at most of the TDC's 26 units. As many as 3,000 inmates were housed in the tents at one time, Byrd said.

Oil, gas drilling increases

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil and gas drilling activity in Texas and across the country increased in the week ending Monday for the eighth consecutive time, industry figures show.

Nationally, 2,210 rigs were operating, up 25 from the previous week. Although the total still is below the 2,526 working at the same time last year, it has increased 194 since mid-July, according to the Hughes Tool Co. weekly rig count.

Texas, which with 805 rigs working was up 21 from the previous tally, registered the largest weekly gain and the highest state total.

Oklahoma, with 261 operating rigs, and California with 116 both added six from the previous week.

The number of operational rigs in Louisiana was down eight to 253, and Kansas was down two at 119.

The offshore drilling picture also continues to improve slightly, according Offshore Intelex, the offshore petroleum industry news wire.

The worldwide mobile rig utilization is 74.1 percent, up 0.2 percent from a week ago, with 530 of 716 rigs working.

In the Gulf of Mexico, the utilization rate was up 1.6 percent to 59.4 percent for the week, as four more rigs went to work. Currently, 126 of 212 Gulf rigs are operating.

Dogs to be taken from schools

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin school officials say drug-sniffing dogs will no longer be used in city schools.

J.M. Richards, director of secondary school management, said Wednesday that the cost of the dogs at Crockett High School in South Austin was left out of the 1982-83 program.

The controversial program, which began in two schools in the 1981-82 school year, is being dropped becaause of the costs and a lack of effectiveness, officials said.

The use of dogs at Martin Junior High in East Austin was eliminated at the start of the current year because they had not found any drugs the previous year.

Richards, co-chairman of the Prevention and Remediation in Drug Education committee, said the group decided there were more effective ways to use money allotted for drug education. Each campus is being given $250 to spend on supplies for consultants and workshops.

Officials said the drug dog program in the two schools cost the district $20,000 the first year.

Senator selected to panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has selected Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, as chairman of the Select Committee on the Judiciary, a panel that also includes appointees of Gov. Mark White and Speaker Gib Lewis.

Other senators named to the committee on Wednesday by Hobby were Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, Kent Caperton, D-Bryan; Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville; and Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall.

The committee will study judicial selection, compensation and related topics.

Women offer bribe to employee

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Two Harris County women were videotaped while offering an $800 bribe to an employee of the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners in an attempt to buy two licenses as licensed vocational nurses, authorities said Wednesday.

Opening of Bell rate case delayed

AUSTIN (AP) — Wrestling with Southwestern Bell's complicated rate case is about as exact a process as "trying to nail Jell-O to the wall," says an assistant attorney general fighting the $1.7 billion request.

But Geoffery Gay's argument in favor of throwing the case out was rejected Wednesday by Public Utility Commission Examiner Jacqueline Holmes. However, she did agree to postpone the hearing by 13 days.

Opening day is now set for Oct. 24. If granted, the rate hike would triple monthly residential bills for basic telephone service.

Gay said the Bell request is "vague" and "incomplete." Bell lawyer Jon Dee Lawrence acknowledged that all the numbers aren't in, but he said they will be by Sept. 26.

"I say it's time to go ahead and get started," Lawrence said.

The rate request is complicated by the court-ordered American Telephone and Telegraph Co. divestiture, which is effective Jan. 1. Gay said AT&T and Bell are trying to get all parties in the case to "march to the beat of the doomsday drum."

"It's appropriate for the commission to slow this case down," he argued.

Ms. Holmes, saying she was not "listening to Bell's doomsday drums," said there was sufficient information on file to begin the revenue deficiency portion of the hearing on Oct. 24. The rate design portion will begin on Dec. 5.

Revenue deficiency is the amount of money a utility company says it needs. Rate design is the process of determining which customers should cover the increase.

Gay complained that Bell's request is partially based on "future test year" data. State law requires rate requests to be based on historic data.

"It's a speculative case," he said. "It's like trying to nail Jell-O to the wall."

But Lawrence said the major changes in the telephone industry make it necessary to use projected data.

"It would be totally inappropriate to ignore the changes that are happening in this industry," he said. "We don't want to look backward because that's not the way the world is going to be."

Consumers Union, Texas ACORN and the League of United Latin-American Citizens had asked for a 60-day delay in the hearing.

Man found hanged in cell

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who had been in jail only a few hours was found hanged to death in a Bellaire Police Department jail, authorities said.

David A. Peters, 25, was found Wednesday morning hanging from a cell bar with a strip of torn blanket wrapped around his neck.

Peters had been arrested earlier Wednesday when police responded to a disturbance call at a Bellaire nightclub.

Population to increase by millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas' population will grow by more than 6.5 million between 1980 and 2000, propelling the state from the third to the second most populous in the nation, according the U.S. Census Bureau projections.

The bureau projections, released this week, show that more than half the increase will be the result of people moving in from outside Texas.

"It doesn't surprise me, and I don't think it's going to surprise anybody here," said Bonnie Young, coordinator of the data management program in the Texas governor's office, referring to the projections.

Ms. Young, who developed population projections for the Texas 2000 Commission, said the anticipated high migration from outside the state continues a trend that began in the 1970s.

"The 1970s was a drastic change for Texas in its pattern of growth," Ms. Young said in a telephone interview from Austin. "Up to that time, over 90 percent of our growth had been just due to natural increase of the population — (the rate of) births over deaths.

"And in the 70s, over 50 percent of our growth was due to immigration," she said.

The Census Bureau projected that Texas' population would jump from 14.2 million in 1980 to 17.4 million in 1990 and then to 20.7 million in 2000.

Of the 6.5 million population increase during the two decades, a little over 3.5 million will represent net migration from outside the state, the bureau projected.

California, which will experience a projected population increase of nearly 7 million, is expected to remain the nation's most populous state, with more than 30.6 million people by the year 2000, the Census Bureau said.

Texas is projected to take over second place from New York, which will drop to fourth, the bureau said. Florida, with an increase of more than 7 million, will move from seventh most populous to third, it said.

The bureau's projected increase for Texas is slightly less than the projection developed by the staff of the Texas 2000 Commission, appointed in 1981 by then Gov. William Clements to study the growth potential and problems of Texas through the remainder of the century.

Little progress reported in ending school strikes

By DANA FIELDS
Associated Press Writer

School boards bargained with striking teachers in New Jersey and Washington today and St. Louis officials threatened firings, as little progress was reported toward ending strikes by 11,000 teachers in seven states that have disrupted classes for 222,000 students.

Most of the 37 districts nationwide were struck over salaries or unsettled contracts, but class sizes, instructional time, and seniority rules were also key elements of some disputes.

Walkouts were staged in 21 districts in Michigan, five in Washington, four in Rhode Island, two each in Illinois, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and one in Missouri.

The largest district affected was St. Louis, where 2,700 teachers and 1,100 support workers were off the job. Schools remained open as more than 700 teachers crossed picket lines Wednesday, but the city's new voluntary desegregation plan was set back.

St. Louis Schools Superintendent Jerome B. Jones gave the striking teachers an ultimatum Wednesday: report by Monday or be fired.

U.S. District Judge Stephen N. Limbaugh meanwhile said he was "inclined" to issue a temporary restraining order today that would order teachers back to school.

But a union spokesman who would not give his name said, "We're well aware that the board would go to court and threaten to fire us. That won't intimidate us."

The strike began Wednesday on the first day of a busing program intended to bring about 550 suburban students to inner city magnet schools for special instruction.

Local 420 of the American Federation of Teachers, which represents both teachers and support workers, voted Tuesday by a 2-1 margin to strike over wages and class size. Teachers have demanded a 17.5 percent pay increase and the rehiring of laid-off teachers to cut class sizes. The board offered 8.5 percent.

Japan couldn't warn plane

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Japan says its air traffic controllers were unable to warn a South Korean jetliner that it had strayed into Soviet air space and charges that Moscow is trying escape blame for shooting down the plane.

Ambassador Muzuo Kuroda, speaking at a Security Council meeting Wednesday, said Japan's radar coverage was limited to the air space over and around Japanese territory so it was impossible to warn the jetliner it had strayed off course before Soviet warplanes shot it down.

'Black boxes' hold secrets

NEW YORK (AP) — Two "black boxes" which may reveal what happened before a Korean jumbo jet was shot down by the Soviets are most likely still in good shape — wherever they are in the Sea of Japan, says a U.S. aviation technical expert.

But the Soviet Union has refused to allow Japan or the United States to conduct searches in its territorial water for the wreckage. And reports from Japan on Wednesday indicated the Soviets had nearly doubled the number of vessels operating in the area.

Cuban flight rights suspended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Air Cubana's flight privileges over the United States were suspended for two weeks last March after two flights by the Cuban national airline strayed too close to an Air Force base, the State Department says.

The two Cuban airliners strayed off course and passed too close to Griffis Air Force Base near Albany, N.Y., Susan Clyde, a State Department spokeswoman said Wednesday.

Chile's military leaders anticipate violence

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military government braced for more political violence in today's "Day of National Protest," a day after police killed four men and a woman suspected in the assassination of Santiago's governor.

The suspects were killed Wednesday night in two shootouts in Santiago, and police said evidence indicated the five were leftist terrorists.

A bomb shattered windows in the main government building in the port of Valparaiso, 70 miles to the west, on Wednesday night and police seized a cache of dynamite and weapons in a raid in La Serena, 280 miles north, where nine people were arrested, the official news agency ORBE reported.

Opposition parties have called for a day of peaceful demonstrations each of the last five months to protest a failing economy and the military rule of President Augusto Pinochet. In last month's protests, 39 people were killed.

Interior Minister Sergio Onofre Jarpa told reporters Wednesday he would use "all the police necessary" to keep order today.

He also urged citizens to organize for self-defense and said they had a right to shoot back at armed leftists. As a precaution, a public school holiday was declared beginning at noon Wednesday.

Riot police arrested 123 participants in scattered demonstrations Tuesday night and Wednesday in Santiago, including marches from two university campuses.

Secret police agents of the National Information Center said they killed two armed men and a woman during a 10-minute battle at a house in the upper-class neighborhood of Las Condes.

The police used two helicopters, and the one-story house's roof was blown off, witnesses said. Reporters later were shown a sub-machinegun and other evidence that it was a shelter for leftist guerrillas.

Engine malfunction, electrical problems bring down three jetliners

By The Associated Press

A jetliner bound for Minneapolis made an emergency landing at New York's LaGuardia Airport five minutes after takeoff when two of its three engines malfunctioned, and two other jets landed at Omaha, Neb., with electrical problems, officials said.

Northwest Airlines Flight 207, carrying a crew of six and 81 passengers, including sportscaster Howard Cosell, landed safely around noon Wednesday after dumping its fuel over the Bronx, according to Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Robert Fulton.

At Eppley Airfield in Omaha, a Trans World Airlines plane carrying 75 people and a Frontier Airlines jet with 25 aboard made emergency landings less than two hours apart Wednesday.

No injuries were reported in any of the landings.

Fulton said the Northwest flight's dumped fuel posed no danger because it dissipated in the atmosphere.

Cosell was en route to Minneapolis for ABC's Thursday night telecast of a National Football League game between the Minnesota Vikings and the San Fransicso 49ers, a spokesman for ABC Sports said.

The pilot of the Boeing 727 reported compressor problems with two of the aircraft's three engines soon after he lifted off from the LaGuardia runway, Fulton said.

He said the pilot could not bring the engines up to full power because of the compressor problems. Power in the center engine mounted at the tail of the aircraft remained normal, he said.

Northwest Airlines released a statement saying the engines "were operating at all times."

"The cockpit crew noticed an instrument fluctuation...the power was reduced on those engines and the engines were stablized," the statement said.

Northwest said mechanics were checking the airplane to determine whether the problem was in the engines or the instruments.

Smoke from a malfunctioning fluourescent light fixture was reported aboard the TWA Boeing 727, causing little concern among passengers and crew as the plane landed as scheduled at 10:29 a.m. CDT in Omaha.

"There was no panic, no real concern," said TWA passenger Kai Nybe of Kokomo, Ind. The flight originated in Cleveland.

Ryder Piekos, TWA manager at Eppley, said the smoke was traced to an electrical resistor in a cabin light fixture.

"A small amount of smoke was in the cabin when we approached the plane on the ground, but it cleared up," said Omaha Fire Capt. Virgil Jarzynka.

The Frontier Airlines Boeing 737 was en route from Des Moines, Iowa, to Denver when an electrical problem was detected, said Frontier spokesman Robert Shulman.

Cancer-stricken tortoise makes slow journey back to health

NEW YORK (AP) — Jalopy, the cancer-stricken tortoise whose keepers strapped a skateboard to his underside to help him get around, has received "tons of get-well cards" for his gala return from treatment today.

A ticker-tape motorcade, complete with a brass band, was planned to welcome the 80-year-old Galapagos tortoise back to the Staten Island Zoo.

Jalopy, who received the skateboard after being handicapped by a malignant tumor in his left front legpit, was sent more than two months ago to the University of Arizona in Tucson for treatment. He tolerated treatment well and was flown home Wednesday night.

Reagan wearing hearing aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, whose hearing loss has grown more apparent in recent months, is wearing a hearing aid in his right ear now, and at least one close associate thinks that's just fine.

"Now I can whisper sweet nothings in his ear, and he'll hear me," Nancy Reagan was quoted as saying.

Her spokeswoman, Sheila Tate, relayed the first lady's reaction Wednesday after reporters and photographers spotted the little wireless device in Reagan's ear.

The president was fitted for the hearing aid during a visit to a specialist when he was in California on vacation last month but apparently had not worn it in public until Wednesday, when he dropped by the East Room to announce a new program to combat adult illiteracy.

The 72-year-old president has acknowledged previously that he has increasing difficulty hearing with his right ear and attributed it to the firing of a handgun too near his ear on a movie set nearly 50 years ago.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes professed to know very little about the device, but said Reagan had worn it in private meetings with his advisers last weekend when he returned from California to deal with the Soviets' downing of a Korean Air Lines passenger jet.

Researchers find drinking up on TV, smoking down

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers who sampled three decades of television shows ranging from "Leave it to Beaver" to "Dallas" conclude that drinking is up during prime time but smoking is down.

Their review of "The Twilight Zone," "Perry Mason," "Alice," "M*A*S*H" — 280½ hours of situation comedies and dramas in all — found a 10-fold drop in TV smoking since 1950. But during the same period, on-the-air drinking has risen dramatically.

The research, published in part in today's New England Journal of Medicine, was conducted by Drs. Warren Breed and James R. De Foe of the Institute for Scientific Analysis in Berkeley, Calif.

"We believe that television producers accepted the idea that smoking is dangerous to your health," Breed said in an interview. "We think they have shown good responsibility to the public in terms of health."

The depiction of drinking, however, was excessive, Breed said. TV often fails to show the consequences of overindulgence and rarely portrays people turning down a drink, he said.

"I would say that television does not handle drinking as responsibly as it could," he said.

The use of booze on TV was unchanged until recent years. Throughout the 1950s, '60s and '70s, actors on the hour-long shows committed an average of four "drinking acts" per hour. But in the early 1980s, this doubled to eight per hour.

Breed attributed the increased drinking to the advent of shows like "Love Boat," in which drinking plays a part in the plot.

"A pleasure cruise ship where people weren't drinking would be ridiculous," he said.

The researchers counted all the liquid consumed, not just alcohol, and "people on television drink more alcohol than soft drinks, coffee or water," Breed said. "Drinking on television does not reflect reality."

Cigarette smoking was highest on the hour-long drama shows during the 1950s and early 1960s, when actors puffed an average of 4.4 cigarettes every hour. By 1982, this had dropped to just under a third of a cigarette per hour.

Legal advice, services may soon be obtained via telephone

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Subscribers to a new service can dial a lawyer on a toll-free number, get advice on drafting wills or contracts, and charge the flat monthly fee to a credit card, sponsors say.

"On-Line Legal Services" is aimed neither at the rich who have lawyers nor the poor who qualify for government legal aid, but at the neglected middle class, said John McNabb, vice president of Membership Assistance Corp., which is marketing the service launched by CIGNA Corp., the nation's second largest insurance company.

For $8.75 a month, charged to Visa or MasterCard accounts, residents of California, Pennsylvania, New York and Washington can subscribe to the service beginning this month, the company announced Wednesday.

The service will be extended to most other states by 1984 and should attract customers earning between $20,000 and $40,000 a year, McNabb said.

"The wealthy already have an attorney on a retainer and the poor have government services," he said. "But the middle class does not have any and that's what we're trying to get."

For the flat fee, subscribers can call a toll-free number and talk to an attorney "every day if they have a problem," McNabb said.

For that one charge, the customer can ask the attorney to write a letter to the installer of a defective appliance, draw up a will or contact a governmental agency, McNabb said.

If the problem requires a court filing, the customer may visit the office of a local attorney participating in the service for a first-time consultation fee of $15. Any subsequent work will be provided at a 25 percent discount, he said.

The company estimates that the average American encounters four or five situations a year in which advice from an attorney would be helpful.

However, McNabb said many people are deterred from seeking legal advice because of costs.

"We are doing what we feel is preventive law," he said.

The service will be run by Century General Legal Service Group of Santa Barbara, Calif., which has contracted with private attorneys in the states where the service is offered to take the calls, McNabb said.

"You will not get a paralegal or a law secretary on the line," McNabb said. "There will be an attorney on the phone."

Century General already runs similar programs for unions and other employee associations, but the service has not previously been available to the general public, nor has it been possible to charge the expense to credit cards, McNabb said.

"We're taking it out of the fraternal type organization and offering it to the general public," McNabb said, noting an initial mailing about the service went to 200,000 people.

Change of power

Trying to imagine Israel without the leadership of Menachem Begin is similar to the dilemma not long past of attempting to imagine Egypt guided by the hand of someone other than the late Anwar Sadat: Both men became synonomous with their countries.

That task was thrust to the forefront recently, though, when Begin announced his decision to step down as Israel's prime minister.

After a lifetime of fighting for Israel in one way or another, Begin will be long remembered — by his foes and his friends. Begin fought for Israel with the passion only a Jew can embrace, from the creation of the Jewish state in 1949 until the present, with every ounce of his strength.

That's not to say the world always agreed with his policies. Some of those policies — such as establishments of Israeli settlements — appeared virtually designed for irritation. Even the United States could not condone some of Israel's actions in recent times, while supporting Israel unwaveringly. Begin got much of the blame for last year's Beirut massacre of Christian refugees. And he has borne the contempt of all those who saw him as overzealous in vanquishing foes.

Despite that fact, Begin should not be stripped of the accolades he deserves in seeking both safe borders for Israel and the elusive Middle East peace. He fought for his nation fiercely and unquestionably will continue to do so because for so many years his people could call no land home. Now he has decided, at the age of 70, that his usefulness as Israel's prime minister is over.

But hatred in the Middle East has not ended and the warring factions war on. Begin leaves that behind him now, as much as anyone committed to a cause can suppress that purpose.

Israel's future leader and future course is yet to be determined. The United States should hope for a moderate leader and a peacemaker because just as past changes of power in Israel attest, the more things change in the Middle East, they remain amazingly the same.

Man on the move

A gentleman by the name of Brian Mulroney won a seat in the Canadian parliament the other day in an election in a northeastern Nova Scotia district. This was not exactly headline news in either Canada or the United States, but one of these days we may hear a lot more about this new parliamentarian.

Brian Mulroney would like to be the next prime minister of the Dominion of Canada.

He started to move up the ladder three months ago, when he replaced Joe Clark as the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party. He comes from a constituency where he is extremely popular, and which has voted Conservative for 26 years.

Nationwide polls in Canada show that the Liberal Party headed by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has been slipping recently. The latest count shows the Liberals have only 27 percent support of Canadians, compared to 55 percent for the Conservatives. Figures like these surely encourage Mr. Mulroney and his supporters and create grave concern for Mr. Trudeau and his supporters.

The next Canadian election is expected to be held next year. Whatever the outcome, we in the United States can look forward to continuing good relations with our neighbor to the north. One constant factor in those relations is that Canadians for decades have had prime ministers who have served their country and their hemisphere with distinction.

Bargain to strike

Secretary of State George Shultz proposed a bargain with Japan the other day — and the right kind of a bargain. It's time for Japan to open its markets wider, particularly for agricultural products and in government procurement.

In anticipation of greater access for American products, as Shultz put it, the Reagan administration will continue to oppose the protectionist legislation now before Congress.

Japan's barriers to imports are more important as politics than as economics. The difficulties in exporting certain categories of goods to Japan have become an issue almost to the point of obsession with several American industries.

But the potential volumes of sales there are not large enough, by any reasonable estimate, to make any great difference in the balance of trade or to the Japanese economy as a whole.

These barriers are mostly traditions inherited from a time when Japan was less rich and a good deal less self-confident.

Probably the least defensible of the agricultural policies is the one that keeps imports of meat down to a trickle and holds prices in Japan outrageously high. Among other things, it's an unjustifiable burden on Japanese consumers.

Japanese government procurement policy attracts attention because the issue here is chiefly high-technology equipment for the national telecommunications system.

In the past, Japan kept most of this field closed to foreigners to keep its own manufacturers from being suffocated by the overwhelmingly strong American companies. But the Japanese industry is no longer an infant.

The Reagan administration and, for that matter, Congress have done pretty well on balance in the endless struggle to keep the American market open to all comers. The administration has made compromises, but some were hardly avoidable, and most have been temporary.

Congress has done a lot of shouting and ritual sword-waving, but most members are well aware of the damage that protectionist legislation inflicts. Unfortunately, it is very possible that moods can change over the coming year as American trade deficits get worse, unemployment stays high and elections get closer.

That is the prospect that concerns Shultz as well as a good many other people in Washington. And that is why Shultz proposed his bargain to the Japanese.

He is aware that, under Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Japan is enjoying stronger and more decisive government than it has had for many years. One of the attributes of a competent government is that it does not allow third-rate issues like beef and electronic switching gear to become intractable, inflammatory and disruptive.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

NATO deficiency illustrates need

WASHINGTON — There is more to the great missile controversy, now under discussion in Geneva, than the press has reported.

Jack Anderson

The decision to deploy Pershing II and cruise missiles in western Europe not only shook up the Kremlin (which launched a massive propaganda campaign against it), but alarmed many Europeans who see the deployment as a dangerous escalation in the terrifying game of showdown.

Why did NATO decide it had to modernize its nuclear forces despite the high risk of political backlash? The explanations are found in classified documents, which my associate Dale Van Atta has reviewed.

A top-secret State Department report, for example, describes the deficiencies of the NATO forces now in place. Of the 72 Pershing 1A missile launchers in Germany, the report complains:

"The Pershing missile system has been in the inventory for a long time and is becoming increasingly difficult to maintain. The system is manpower-intensive as presently configured. The accuracy and yields of available warheads make them unsuitable for some limited attacks. The missile range is insufficient to place targets in the Soviet Union at risk."

NATO wants to deploy 572 Pershing II and cruise missiles in western Europe to offset what is perceived to be a Soviet advantage. Of urgent concern to the West are approximately 250 SS-20 mobile missiles that the Soviets have trained on Europe; each of these awesome missiles can fire three warheads.

The United States also has more than 600 bombers in Europe. But they face more than 900 Soviet Badgers, Blinders and Backfires. Cautions the top-secret report:

"While dual-capable aircraft are a valuable and versatile element of NATO's forces, all the land-based aircraft, except the F-111, lack the range to threaten credibly strategic targets in the Soviet Union."

The report describes the submarine-launched Poseidon and Polaris missiles assigned to NATO as "the most survivable systems available to NATO." But the report warns that they "are generally regarded as 'strategic' systems whose use prior to General Nuclear Response might convey an overly escalatory signal to the Soviet Union."

There are also problems with "yields and accuracy" which make the submarine missiles "unsuitable for many of the desired (Soviet) targets." In other words, NATO has a choice between inadequate weapons that would be an ineffective deterrent and apocalyptic weapons that could turn a "limited nuclear war" in Europe into a global holocaust.

That's the reason the military brass decided to deploy 464 ground-launched cruise missiles and another 108 mobile Pershing II missiles in five European countries this year.

Footnote: A worried Yuri Andropov suddenly offered to scrap enough Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe, including SS-20s, to bring the total down to the number of British and French missiles — if the United States will change its plan to deploy the Pershing II and cruise missiles.

HOT ARGUMENT: Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker's management of the nation's money supply has sparked many a heated discussion — but few hotter than this:

Once he got into a tiff with Murray Weidenbaum, President Reagan's then chief economic adviser. It happened on the last of many trips that Weidenbaum made across town to soothe relations between the White House and the Fed.

Between puffs on a fat cigar, a testy Volcker flicked ashes into a trash container while he complained that the administration was doing nothing about deficits but was blaming him for high interest rates. Suddenly Volcker was engulfed in a cloud of smoke considerably larger than his cigar had produced. Weidenbaum leaped to his feet, knocked over the blazing trash container and stamped out the flames.

Oblivious to it all, Volcker rumbled on.

• • •

BURFORD SEQUEL: Although Anne Burford, the former head of the Environmental Protection Agency, is out of office, the family name won't disappear from the headlines.

Burford's husband, Robert, is director of the Bureau of Land Management in the Department of Interior.

Robert Burford was among 92 Bureau of Land Management employees identified in a 1982 General Accounting Office study as having stock and land holdings which appear to be in conflict with their government jobs.

Although the permits have been placed in a trust, and the trust arrangement was approved by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee when Burford took office, the House Interior and Government Operations committees want to know more about Burford's finances.

• • •

FEWER LOANS: Last year, Congress appropriated $25 million for small business loans to Vietnam veterans and another $3 million to inform veterans that the money was there. But the Reagan administration doesn't want to spend that much money on Vietnam veterans, so the Small Business Administration has allowed only $3.5 million in loans to date.

GEORGE F. WILL

Jackson: Constancy in a storm

WASHINGTON — A silly person once said that only silly persons have heroes. But only exceptionally small people will not acknowledge the exceptionally large persons among us. Heroes make vivid the values by which we try to live. I say, with many others: Henry Jackson was my hero.

George F. Will

He was an insoluble problem for the image-tinkers and a splendid puzzle for the label-makers who infest contemporary politics. Because he was uninterested in the cosmetics of politics, dull persons considered him dull. Discerning persons considered his kind of character as exciting as it is rare. Persons who, under the pressure of fashion, are as flexible as fly rods found Jackson incomprehensible. They came to the absurd conclusion that he had departed from the liberal tradition.

He was a pioneer of environmentalism. He was the preeminent champion of civil rights. He fought for the full domestic agenda and authored legislation that put teeth into U.S. pronouncements on behalf of Jews and others persecuted by the Soviet regime. And if Jackson's proposals for substantial force reductions had been adopted, we might have had arms limitation agreements that actually limit arms.

Jackson was one of those persons — Felix Frankfurter was another — whose constancy was mistaken for change. He never wavered from his party's traditional belief that there is no incompatibility between government with a caring face at home and government with a stern face toward adversaries.

From Wilson confronting Lenin and FDR confronting Hitler, through Truman confronting Stalin, Kennedy confronting Castro and Johnson confronting Ho Chi Minh, the Democratic Party has been the foremost opponent of this century's foremost evil — totalitarianism. Jackson was an anchor against weariness, wishful thinking and apostasy in the world's oldest party.

He nurtured in this Republic something without which no republic can long endure: a sense that problems are tractable. To be in his presence was to experience the wholesome infection of a reviving spirit. This was especially remarkable because he, more than any contemporary, looked unblinkingly at, and spoke uncomfortingly about, the terrors of our time. He taught less clear-sighted, less brave persons how to combine realism and serenity.

He missed the ultimate prize of our politics, perhaps because he lacked the crackling temperament that marks persons who burn on the surface with a hard, gem-like flame. If his political metabolism seemed uncommonly calm, that is because he had the patience of a mature politician — a gift for planning, thirst for detail, and a sense of ripeness in issues. He had a flame, but he had depth in which he kept it.

In committees and on the Senate floor, he was a cannon loaded to the muzzle with knowledge born of diligence. His unrivaled effectiveness was a rebuke to the less industrious and a refutation of the theory that fancy footwork is necessary and sufficient.

A legislature is a face-to-face society, where character and moral force tell. What Jackson did in committees and on the floor was awesome. But it was only a small fraction of the work he did during four decades of 18-hour days, working with one member after another, one member at a time, building coalitions of common sense.

His legendary energy flowed as much from his spirit as from his physiology. His biography is an essay on the sources of American vitality. He was the son of immigrants, and of the American West. His parents crossed not only an ocean but a continent, seeking an open future in our most open region.

For longer than I have been alive, Congress has been embellished by his presence. And for longer than I live, public life shall be enriched by the radiating force of his character.

If you wonder who real leaders are, find out who has real followers — persons who follow a leader onto a path of life, who adopt careers where they navigate by stars he taught them to see. The social geology of this city is layer upon layer of persons pulled into public life by the example of lives worth emulating. In numerous public offices, and in law and journalism, there is a thick layer of Henry Jackson's men and women.

There are those, and they are legion, who call themselves "Jackson Democrats." I can say with absolute authority that there is such a thing as a "Jackson Republican."

Henry Jackson mastered the delicate balance of democracy, the art of being a servant to a vast public without being servile to any part of it. He was the finest public servant I have known.

ART BUCHWALD

Answerline to campaign financing

Dear Sir,
I am a lobbyist. I would like to contribute money to the political campaigns of several of the members of the House Subcommittee on Acid Snow. Should I give them money before a particular antipollution bill is up for a vote, or after? — Rich But Perplexed

Dear Rich But Perplexed,

Art Buchwald

The best time to donate to an incumbent's political campaign is when there is no legislation pending. In that way the politician can accept the money from a special interest group with a clear conscience, and then support your cause at a later date when you really need him (her?).

Dear Sir,
I represent a small political action committee interested in keeping out Honduran-made tent poles. We can't afford to finance every candidate running for office this year. How do we make an impact with our limited funds? — Poor But Proud

Dear PBP,
Every PAC organization faces a similar problem. Your best bet is to finance the campaigns of the chairpersons of crucial committees involved with tent poles, leaving enough money aside to donate to the present administration's committee to re-elect the president. Be sure and specify to the treasurer of the political party that the money is being given, not to keep communist tent poles out of Honduras, but Honduran tent poles out of the United States.

Dear Friend,
I am running for the presidential nomination and am having a terrible time collecting money at this stage of the game. Do you have any suggestions? — The Best Man

Dear Best Man,
Have you ever thought of giving a $1,000-a-plate dinner to honor your wife's mother? Or holding a $10,000-a-person cocktail party at the Playboy Mansion to explain where you stand on pine tar? Or sponsoring a punk rock concert at the Los Angeles Coliseum for kids who want to grow up in better world? If you can't raise a lousy $25 million for a primary campaign, how are you going to find the hundreds of billions of dollars the country will need in the next four years to balance the budget?

Dear Sir,
I would like to give money to a candidate, but I want to make sure he knows I gave it. When is the best time to make a political contribution? — Good Citizen

Dear G.C.,
Timing is everything when it comes to giving to a candidate. The consensus seems to be that "late money talks more loudly than early money." That is to say, in a close race when the person running for office gets more desperate for money, it is a lot more important to a candidate than it was at the beginning of his/her campaign. Therefore, if you hold out until the last week and then suddenly hand your man a check, he will remember you a lot more fondly than if you stuffed a thousand dollars in his pocket months ago when his campaign was in the doldrums.

Dear Mr. B.,
I used to give a lot of money to a certain political party and I was invited to many social functions, including the White House. This year I had some severe business setbacks and have been unable to donate anything. I seem to have been dropped from all parties that I used to be invited to. Is there any correlation between a person's social life in Washington and how much he gives to the political party of his choice? — Tapped Out

Dear Tapped Out,
I don't know where you got this idea. Politicians never allow money to play a part in friendship. You were probably dropped from everyone's list this year because people found you boring.

U.S. Navy forces join Marines in Beirut action

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The U.S. Navy went into action in Lebanon for the first time today, teaming up with Marine artillery to pound Druse gunners who shelled Beirut airport again in violation of a cease-fire pledge.

"We hit the target that we aimed at," Warrant Officer Charles Rowe said after the Marines joined the frigate Bowen in blasting militia positions southeast of the airport that fired on the Marine compound.

Rowe said the Navy and Marines retaliated at 12:45 p.m. — 6:45 a.m. EDT — as the airport was under renewed shelling.

He said the Bowen fired four rounds of high explosives from its five-inch guns and the Marines fired six rounds from their 155mm battery.

On Wednesday, U.S. and French jet fighters streaked over Lebanon for the first time in a warning to Druse gunners who killed two French peacekeeping troops and wounded a Marine.

The hills southeast of the airport are controlled by leftist Druse militiamen trying to stop the Lebanese army from moving into the Aley and Chouf Mountains from a highway intersection on the airport's southeastern edge.

At least three shells slammed into the airport runway about 200 yards from two American generals visiting the 1,200-man Marine contingent today. One shell blew up the airport's fuel station, state radio reported.

The radio also said Lebanese army positions at the Khalde highway intersection and neighboring hills just a mile southeast of the Marine zone came under heavy shelling.

Lt. Gen. John H. Miller, commander of the Fleet Marine Force Atlantic, based at Norfolk, Va., and Maj. Gen. Alfred M. Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division at Camp Lejeune, N.C., began their inspection visit a few hours before the shelling forced them and the Marines to flee for foxholes and bunkers.

The shelling came on the fifth day of a civil war between Druse and Christian militias in nearby mountains, which police say has left 353 dead and 875 wounded since an Israeli pullback from the area on Sunday.

Today's barrage hit the airport only hours after Druse militiamen pledged to stop shooting at multinational peacekeeping forces.

Weinberger observes large U.S. exercise in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger toured Honduras today, where his hectic schedule included observing the largest U.S. military exercises undertaken in the troubled region.

The Hondurans provided a 21-gun salute and full military honors Wednesday to greet Weinberger, who officials say is the first U.S. defense secretary to visit the country.

His agenda also included meeting with President Roberto Suazo Cordova and attending graduation ceremonies for the first group of Salvadorans to complete training under Army Special Forces advisers at a center established by the United States this summer in Puerto Castillo on the Caribbean coast.

In neighboring Nicaragua, meanwhile, rebels claimed in a radio broadcast that they killed 76 Sandinista soldiers over the past week in fighting in the central province of Matagalpa. They gave no figures on rebel casualties, and the report, monitored in Tegucigalpa, could not be independently confirmed.

Nicaraguan military sources said fighting continued Wednesday in Matagalpa, as well as in Jinotega in the north and Zelaya in the northeast.

About 3,000 American troops are in Honduras for the joint military exercises that began Aug. 5.

Weinberger arrived from El Salvador, where military commanders in San Vicente province briefed him on their Vietnam War-style "pacification" strategy of driving out guerrillas and resettling the land with loyal peasants.

Search for plane continues

TOKYO (AP) — At least 55 Soviet vessels were sighted today in waters where the South Korean airliner shot down by a Soviet jet fighter was believed to have crashed, officials of the Japanese Maritime Safety Agency said.

Among the Soviet vessels was an intelligence ship that threw two cables from its stern into the sea, but it was unclear if the exact crash site or any plane wreckage had been discovered, the agency officials.

New Miss Poland chosen

Lidia Wasiak

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A slender blue-eyed blond medical student who outshone 342 other Polish beauties says she feels "great" to be the first East bloc representative to the Miss World pageant in more than 15 years.

Lidia Wasiak, 21, smiled into the cameras at Warsaw's packed Palace of Culture late Wednesday as 11 male judges chose her to be the new Miss Poland. She was crowned by Mariasela Alvarez Lebron of the Dominican Republic, the current Miss World.

It was the first national beauty pageant held in Poland in more than two decades, replete with bikini-clad women and male escorts in swank tuxedoes. The winner competes in the Miss World pageant to be held Nov. 17-18 in London.

Soldiers escape East Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — Two East German soldiers fled to the West over the Berlin Wall in an escape they planned for a year, a West Berlin police spokesman said today.

The men, on duty with the East German border patrol, crossed the southern section of the 100-mile wall Wednesday night, reaching the American sector unharmed, the police spokesman said.

Both were in full uniform and carried automatic weapons when they entered an inn to announce their escape, the spokesman said.

The innkeeper called local newspapers with the story and then advised police. The men said they had planned their defection for a year.

Bases in Greece to stay open

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — U.S. bases will operate in Greece for another five years under a defense assistance pact to be signed today by American and Greek officials, a government spokesman said.

The accord was initialed in July after eight months of negotiations, spokesman Dimitria Maroudas said Wednesday.

Maroudas said the agreement would be signed this afternoon by Deputy Foreign Minister Yannis Kapsis, and U.S. Charge d'Affaires Alan D. Berlind on behalf of Ambassador Monteagle Stearns, who is abroad.

Cuba may support uprising

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials say Cuba is stepping up efforts to promote a guerrilla uprising against the pro-American government of Honduras.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, believe the alleged Cuban activities reflect its concern over Honduras' increasingly close ties with the United States and that country's strategic position along the borders of El Salvador, Guatemala and Nicaragua.

Bulldogs face old nemesis in Andrews

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ANDREWS — The Midland High Stock Exchange has taken a sharp turn upward this week following Friday's 30-7 victory over what was supposed to be a defensive-minded Lubbock Monterey squad. Now with Andrews on the horizon here at 8 p.m. this Friday, MHS' chief stock broker Pat Culpepper wants another dividend for Bulldog fans.

"I think we beat a good football team last week and I think the season will bear that out. We never dreamed we would dominate the game like we did, but it has given our kids a lot of confidence," said Culpepper.

"However, I think our kids are taking a realistic approach to the Andrews game. Our experiences with the Mustangs haven't been all that good in the past since we've lost to them in two of three meetings. Our kids understand that and they want to prove they are a good team."

AS CULPEPPER promised, the Bulldogs have gone to the airways in grand fashion. Quarterback James Welborn took the 4-5A passing lead with 197 yards on a 14 of 24 night, three of which went for touchdowns.

Welborn's chief target is Allan Foret, who also leads the league in receptions with 101 yards and two touchdowns. Expect bombs away again.

"When you get the ball to Foret, a lot of things can happen," says Culpepper. "No one in West Texas can race with him to the goal except Lee's Walter Jones, and Walter doesn't play defense. We will continue to throw the ball."

But Andrews seems ready to face the new found strength of the Bulldogs, coming off of a 44-0 win over Seminole in their season opener last weekend behind veteran quarterback Bill Morrison.

Morrison scored two touchdowns, including an 85-yard punt return, as the Mustangs rolled out 382 yards rushing. Powerful 200-pound fullback Mike Harmon also scored twice.

"We scrimmage Lee every year before the season starts and have Midland High on our regular season schedule. I think that does more to get our kids ready for district than anything we can do," said Andrews coach David Visentine. "I know the two years we beat MHS it made our football team. If our kids see they can play with the 5A schools, it does a lot for their confidence."

MHS DEFEATED Andrews for the first time last year, but lost two in a row to the Mustangs in 1980 and 1981. It has been a tough game for both schools for the most part.

"It's been a tight game over the last three years and I hope it's tight again. That will mean we are in the thick of the battle," Visentine said. "The main problem we had last week was penalties (125 yards). We can't hope to stay with Midland High if we do that again."

Coach Culpepper thinks his Bulldogs will again have to throw the ball successfully to win. Even though the MHS running backs looked good against Monterey, it was the passing that opened things up.

"Confidence comes at doing well at the things you can do. And we threw the ball well against Monterey. Defensively, we settled down. We did very little stunting and I thought that was a solid effort there," Culpepper said.

Fullback Jeff Pulley led the MHS rushing attack in the season opener with 56 yards on eight carries. Willie Swindell gained 49 yards on eight carries. Randall Collins did the heavy work inside with 30 yards on 20 carries.

MHS ENTERS the game in good physical shape. Lineman Jimmy Essman, an honorable mention All-District choice last year, is still nursing a foot injury and Culpepper plans on keeping him out of the lineup one more week.

"Jimmy still has a bruise, but we are in good shape there since John David Munn never likes to come out of the game and can go both ways with no problem and Jeff Daily did a good job in the offensive line last week."

A win by Midland High will give the Bulldogs a lot of respect since their first four games this year are against teams that made the playoffs last year.

"It's a tough way to open the season. All four of our first opponents were in the playoffs last year and we had some visions of being off to an 0-4 start," Culpepper said. "I think everyone feels more comfortable with our chances now. We just need to keep producing and I like the way our team has responded to workouts this week. I think there is some pride out there."

Midland High's Allan Foret ...a catcher who is uncatchable

Family acts keys to Area grid outcomes

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Last week's hit program was "Family Affair". It is anyone's guess what this week has in store.

Brother acts in Crane, Stanton, and a pair of cousins in McCamey all lead their respective teams to opening-week wins.

Crane's Jim and Joe Vasquez combined for 182 of Crane's offensive yards in helping the Golden Cranes beat Reagan County, 12-7.

In Tahoka, Stanton running backs Robby and Rocky Barnes combined with quarterback and end Darren and Derrick Sorley to lead the Buffs to victory. Robby and Derrick did the end zone duty.

And quarterback Ray Zarate teamed with cousin Nandy Zarate in the defensive backfield to shut down highly-regarded Iraan, 32-12. McCamey's upset sent shockwaves through district 8-AA, where only lowly Miles is unlikely to contend in the six-team race.

In that district, there is Stanton, McCamey, Reagan County (last year's regional finalist), Eldorado (46-0 winners last week over Rankin), and district favorite Wall, 33-8 winners against Sonora.

And a district 8-AA match is on tap Friday in the Reporter-Telegram's area game of the week, when Stanton hosts Coahoma.

The Buffs went 7-3 last year and advanced one round before losing in the playoffs. Dale Ruth is in his first year at Stanton and the Buffs ground out a tough win last week.

The Buff wishbone offense was relentless against Tahoka, and although the totals were not high, the Buffs hung tough.

Stanton took advantage of four turnovers in sealing the win.

The Buffaloes have another stern test in a week when they visit Crane.

Other area games this weekend.

Brownfield at Lamesa: Clyde Noonkester's team is improved and played tough in a 20-6 loss at Levelland. Home field could help. Lamesa may win its second game in the past three years.

Wink at Greenwood: No. 1 Wink looked bad last week in a 12-7 squeaker over Van Horn. This week the Wildcats take to the road, an unkind host to Greenwood last week. The Rangers are overachievers and proved they could score under pressure at Jal. If Wink has a second bad game, the Rangers could pull one of the year's big upsets.

Midland High at Andrews: Both teams are flying high from big opening wins. Although the Bulldogs are rated a class higher than Andrews, this is a good Mustang squad under first-year head coach David Visentine. Whoever wins it will get long looks from district foes.

Reagan County at Sanderson: RC tries to bounce back this week after a narrow 12-7 loss to Crane. The Owls should give a better showing since sophomore quarterback Bobby Gunnels will have another week to shake out the cobwebs. Gunnels had a bad night against Crane (2-15-2), but was the driving force behind the Owl drive into the state tourney last year.

Crane at Marfa: A big game for both teams. Marfa is rated in the state's top ten and somehow won a game they should have lost last week at Alpine. The Shorthorns had not won there in 22 years and in addition Marfa had minus 81 yards rushing and only 40 yards offense. Still, they won 19-3. Crane had a big win last week but needs to keep up the job on the road.

Sterling City at Rankin: The Red Devils have nowhere to go but up after being completely destroyed by Eldorado 46-0. Rankin must forget the fiasco of last week and beat a team that is itself looking for the first score of 1983 having lost to Grandfalls 12-0.

Midland High JV at McCamey: What was scheduled probably as an off date for McCamey becomes even more important in light of the Badgers' stunning blowout of Iraan. The Bulldog JV's had best strap down tight, as the town of McCamey is liable to be very boisterous and vocal when the Badgers play their first home game of the year.

LaJet comes of age

It started out as a benefit tournament for the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. It attracted pros between tournaments with nothing better to do.

Word got around about the royal treatment accorded the pros, and those billiard greens, at the LaJet Classic at Abilene's Fairway Oaks and more and more pros began showing up.

Now it is in its third year as an official stop on the Players PGA Tour.

Louis Wicker, in Midland recently to promote the Sept. 22-25 event, pointed out that the prize money is $350,000. The Byron Nelson, Colonial and Houston pay $300,000.

"We draw more of the top money winners than either the Nelson or Houston," Wicker adds in emphasizing the growing stature of the LaJet.

IT'S PROVING a hit with the fans, too. "We attract the big portion of our gallaries from West Texas, but they are coming from all over the state and they are growing each year," says Wicker.

This year's tournament offers a couple of unique features.

1. Earlier this summer, the LaJet Amateur was conducted with the winner qualifying for the LaJet Classic, now sponsored by Coors, a fact that brought amateur golfers to Abilene from all over the country. After all, how many times does a young amateur get the opportunity to tee off in the same foursome with one of the top 15 money winners on the Tour.

2. The LaJet also will be the site of the Texas State Putting Championship finals. State golfers had the opportunity to qualify and compete with Ben Crenshaw, Tom Kite and two other Tour pros from Texas plus two club pros from each section of the two PGA sections in Texas.

Club finals were held last weekend and seven regional finals are scheduled Saturday. From this group will come 21 amateurs to challenge the pros.

FAIRWAY OAKS seems appropriate for such putting championships. The greens are superb. When Dave Pelz realized he was going to have to move his Golf Research company out of Maryland, he was thinking of Chicago, not far from Ohio, where he was raised, and Indiana, where he went to college.

Some of the pros suggested he visit Abilene. He came, he saw and he was conquered by the greens.

Now, he does his research, manufactures his putting aides and counsels some of the top names on the men's and women's tours with their putting woes from Abilene. "One of the nice things about it, you can play golf in Abilene all year and that's important for my business."

It was his idea to conduct a State Putting tournament. "Who knows, the best putter in Texas may not be one of the pros."

To sweeten the pot, $10,000 in prize money (for the pros) and merchandise (for the amateurs) will be at stake in the regionals and finals.

BOB DICKSON, former touring pro and now director of the Texas State Putting Championship, says it is essentially a pilot program this year for a proposed World Putting Championship in 1984. "We felt Texas was an ideal state to test the concept because it is a strong golf area."

Starting at the club championships and on, the contestants putt "Draw Back", a system developed by Pelz in which a player who misses the cup draws the ball one putter length (three feet) farther away from the hole before his next putt. He continues in this manner until he sinks the putt.

"It's a popular way for touring pros to improve their putting," says Pelz. "After all, they wouldn't get much benefit from practicing missed six inch putts."

In the finals, it gets tougher. It will be a double Draw Back.

BUT OF COURSE, the big attraction will be the touring pros, a field this year that will include Crenshaw, Kite, Hal Sutton, Fuzzy Zoeller, Gil Morgan, J.C.Snead, Steve Melnyk and Forest Felzer.

Staging a Tour tournament is not the same as conducting an invitational clambake.

"The PGA comes in several months before and tells you what must be done to make the course suitable for the tournament," relates Wicker. "This year we had to eliminate two sand traps."

"Then, you lose your course for the 10 days prior to and during the tournament. Tour officials take charge completely. They dictate that the greens must be manicured so that the ball rolls at a certain speed. They don't just tell you they want the roughs long or short, they want them cut a certain way so the grass doesn't flop over, but stands up."

And, of course, they are in charge of pin placements, which sometimes can cause trouble, continues Wicker. "A couple of years ago, they placed the pin toward th front of the 16th green, a par three fronted by a small pond. It turned out to be too close. Pros were hitting perfect shots to the pin with a little backspin to make them hold, only they were backspinning into the pond.

"That's one day I was glad we didn't have the responsibility for the pin placements. There were some very unhappy pros that day."

Holmes 'risks' WBC title

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — A young fighter from New Jersey will be in a boxing ring on Saturday to take on World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, who has never lost a fight and has knocked out 30 of his 43 opponents.

Scott Frank, 25, of Oakland, has been in self-seclusion for the better part of this week, refusing to talk about his upcoming 12-round battle against the 33-year-old champion from Easton, Pa.

Frank, who acts as his own manager, declined interviews with the media, usually a tradition in the days leading to such a major bout.

Murad Muhammad, the promoter for Saturday's bout, said Holmes must concentrate on beating Frank. Holmes can't dismiss the fight as an easy warmup to November's match against Marvis Frazier, the 22-year-old son of former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier.

"If you talk to the professionals, everyone gives it to Larry to take this fight. But should Larry come in taking this kid lightly, he could be upset," said Muhammad.

Holmes, 43-0, could make history if he overcomes the unbeaten Frank. "I know of no other champion that consecutively won 16 straight as a heavyweight," Muhammad said.

He added that Frank's one chance to beat Holmes will come this weekend.

"When a guy gets an opportunity, gets a chance to make a dream come true, they find something we never thought they had and that's what I think you're going to see in Scott Frank. He knows this is a golden opportunity, and, with the right punch, he can become the heavyweight champion of world," said Muhammad.

Frank, whose record includes 20 wins with 14 knockouts and a draw, will earn about $350,000 — "more than he's ever made in his whole career, said Muhammad — while Holmes will be paid "well over $1.5 million."

Frank is ranked No. 10 by the WBC and No. 7 by the World Boxing Association.

Chris, Jimmy notch wins

By DAVE GOLDBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — For Chris Evert Lloyd, seeking her seventh U.S. Open tennis title, and Jimmy Connors, seeking his fifth, the obstacles now are similar — avoid upsets by lesser-regarded semifinal opponents.

The third-seeded Connors muddled through a first set with eight straight service breaks, then waltzed by 14th-seeded Eliot Teltscher 7-6, 6-2, 6-2 Wednesday to clinch his semifinal berth. Evert, second-seeded behind Martina Navratilova, followed that with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over eighth-seeded Hana Mandlikova.

The men's semifinals were to be completed today with fifth-seeded Mats Wilander meeting second-seeded Ivan Lendl and No. 4 Yannick Noah taking on No. 9 Jimmy Arias.

Connors, meanwhile, must wait until Saturday, when he meets 16th-seeded Bill Scanlon, conqueror of John McEnroe last Monday. Scanlon topped his friend and practice partner, Mark Dickson 3-6, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 in a 4-hour, 14-minute marathon Wednesday night.

LLOYD NOW takes on Great Britain's Jo Durie, the 14th women's seed, whose path through her half of the draw was eased considerably when fourth-seeded Tracy Austin dropped out because of back injury. Durie, the first British player to get this far since Virginia Wade in 1975, moved into the semis Wednesday with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Ivanna Madruga-Osses of Argentina.

Connors and Lloyd — both of of whom won here last year — wanted to talk only about their semifinal matches, rather than looking ahead to possible final matchups with Lendl and top-seeded Martina Navratilova, respectively.

Connors had some problems against Teltscher in a first set in which neither player could hold serve. But after Connors won the tiebreaker 7-0, he seemed to get a second wind and breezed the rest of the way.

Afterward, Connors good-naturedly dodged numerous questions about how easy his path to the finals has become since Scanlon ousted McEnroe, the top seed.

"That's not my fault," he said. "Before the tournament you wrote about how tough a draw I had. I can't worry about that — I just play whoever gets in my way."

And he added: "Scanlon must be playing pretty well or he wouldn't be here."

SCANLON, MEANWHILE, had all kinds of trouble against Dickson, with whom he practices regularly.

He dropped the first and third sets, then took the lead in the fifth only to lose it serving for the match at 5-4. But he managed to pull himself together and ended up winning the tiebreaker 7-4.

Predictably, he said that after beating the top-seeded McEnroe, he had a hard time getting mentally ready to face Dickson, who entered the tournament ranked 96th in the world.

"It was very tough to get up for this match after beating John, but I get almost as much satisfaction from this," said Scanlon, a 26-year-old from Dallas who now as beaten both Wimbledon finalists, McEnroe and Chris Lewis of New Zealand in this tournament.

And Scanlon added: "You may not believe this but for the last 24 hours I just sat in my room and didn't talk to anybody. Everybody I ever met called me in the past two days. People I hadn't seen in eight years called and said 'nice match against John.'"

AS FOR THE women, Lloyd said Wednesday's match against Mandlikova was her best of four in the tournament and added: "If I play the way I played today, I should be in good shape."

Tonight's Game

San Francisco at Minnesota, 7:30 p.m.

49ers, Vikes come out throwing

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers and Minnesota Vikings are two teams that still believe in throwing the football — a lot.

"I still believe you win with the forward pass," said 49ers Head Coach Joe Walsh, whose has overseen the most efficient passers in the National Football League over the past three seasons and who will lead the 49ers against the Minnesota Vikings tonight in the Metrodome.

"We still thrive on that. But we're still going for yardage in chunks. When you run the ball so often, you run the risk of trying to win the game by a field goal. Then you have the possibility that an official can throw a flag and lose it for you."

The Vikings also are a passing team and wide receiver Terry LeCount is becoming an integral part of that offense this season. He began his NFL career with the 49ers.

"I started as a rookie in the first three games of the year (1978). Then I broke my wrist against the (Houston) Oilers and I was out the rest of the year," LeCount said.

His career as a starter ended also — until this season. In 1979, the 49ers put him on waivers and the Vikings grabbed him.

"Some ballplayers get waived and feel like they can't play. But I felt I could play in the NFL," LeCount said. "The only thing that upset me was going to Minnesota and playing in cold weather after being in Florida and San Francisco."

The Vikings made use of LeCount's many talents and he warmed up in the role of a backup and special teams player.

"Being a spot receiver really helped me a lot," he said. "We've thrown the ball a lot the last couple of years. When I came in they were throwing to me in key situations and now that I'm starting I feel like that everytime. I've had to adjust myself to it."

His opportunity to start came through the retirement of Ahmad Rashad last season. He had to fight with Sam McCullum for the starting spot in training camp, but when McCullum broke a thumb the matter was settled.

He has a talent for making the spectacular catch. He occasionally runs out of the backfield on a reverse and, since he was a high school quarterback, he knows how to pass. All those talents might be called upon against the 49ers.

"It would be good to throw a pass against San Francisco," LeCount said. "But only for a touchdown. But I'd just like to play well and make the big play."

Big plays are not unusual in 49ers-Vikings games.

"No more than 10 points has separated the Vikings and 49ers since I became coach here, and I'd guess we'll have the same kind of game Thursday night," Vikings Coach Bud Grant said. "They're as formidable as they ever were."

The Vikings have won the last two meetings, and quarterback Tommy Kramer has been largely responsible. As a rookie in 1977, he threw three fourth-quarter touchdown passes to give Minnesota a 28-27 victory. He threw four in 1979 for a 28-22 victory.

Walsh knows "that you can't let him loose."

The 49ers opened the season last Saturday with a 22-17 loss to Philadelphia. Minnesota beat Cleveland Sunday 27-21.

Injuries hamper Minnesota only at tight end. Joe Senser in on injured reserve and Bob Bruer still favors a sprained ankle. The top backup, Steve Jordan, is questionable with a severely sprained ankle.

For San Francisco, quarterback Joe Montana is ready to start after suffering a concussion against Philadelphia.

"I still had a headache Sunday but it was gone yesterday. I feel fine now," Montana said. "I think the team will be ready. We lost the opener at home, and we don't want to be 0-2. We need to win bad."

The game will be nationally televised by ABC-TV at 7:30 p.m.

SPORTS WITH A LIVING ROOM VIEW

Tube football season is here

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

College and pro football have started their seasons in the past few weeks with the following major developments:

1. Nebraska and Penn State played a game in New Jersey by arrangemen with an outfit known as Katz Sports, which appeared from nowhere a couple of years ago and is now bestowing millions of dollars on colleges to have their kids cavort on the tube. Nebraska won 44-6, leaving Penn State's Joe Paterno to ponder whether a television show was worth all that.

2. In San Diego last Sunday, the Chargers' Rolf Benirschke kicked off to the New York Jets while NBC was televising a commercial. The referee, Red Cashion, who had not yet signaled time in when Benirschke's first kick was made, immediately ordered a new kickoff, which the Jets' Kirk Springs promptly returned 61 yards to pave the way to a touchdown — leaving Chargers Coach Don Coryell wondering whether the network really runs the game.

3. On the Monday night game between the Washington Redskins and the Dallas Cowboys, ABC's Howard Cosell referred to Washington's Alvin Garrett as "that little monkey." First he denied it, then — confronted with the tape and charges that the remark was a racial slur — noted that he calls his grandson the same things and enumerated a long list of contributions to civil rights.

The whistle incident and the Cosell remark occupied discussion as much or more than the other details of the games they occurred in. And both games were worth discussion.

One of Cosell's major contributions to television sports journalism is his willingness to speak out on racial issues — as with Muhammad Ali in the '60s and on many occasions since. Last year, for example, his "Sportsbeat" show had a marvelous segment on Willie Stargell that included Stargell talking about the discrimination he faced on his first trip south to spring training in the late '50s.

It was simply a poor choice of words in the heat of battle. Many announcers say they are sometimes surprised at what comes out without even thinking.

One more football note.

NFL officials said before the season that they'd like to see the games completed in less than three hours. But the networks sure aren't going to speed up the games at the expense of revenue.

For example, a post-strike innovation of last year remains — the post-kickoff commercial.

So we now get a touchdown, an extra point, a commercial break, a kickoff, another commercial break. If it comes at the end of a quarter, as it did in last year's Washington-Dallas conference championship, it can make for 10 minutes or so of non-action.

CART extends rule to limit engines

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Championship Auto Racing Teams has extended another four years rules that limit all engines to a maximum of eight cylinders with all turbocharged engines competing with a maximum of 48 inches of manifold relief pressure.

The engine rule, which will run through 1987, also increase the likelihood that Formula One racing teams will compete in Indy car races. Sources close to Formula One teams say they were hesitant to compete in Indy car races because there was no long-term committment to one type of engine.

The move will eventually make the Indy-car series an all-turbocharged event, a CART official said Wednesday.

"We believe these rules will continue to allow for excellent competition seen this season," said J. Jirk Russell, director of operations for CART. "At the same time we have taken steps which will be beneficial in controlling the costs of competing in the PPG Indy Car World Series.

In recent years, CART has been pushing for use of non-aspirated engines, such as the "stock block" Chevrolet V-6, saying those engines helped keep the smaller teams in the sport.

In another rule change, CART announced the car's foot box area will be reinforced to protect drivers in case of accidents. Drivers John Paul Jr., Gordon Johncock and Johnny Rutherford all have been sidelined for extended periods this year because of leg and foot injuries

FTC amasses oil lottery scheme evidence

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the final installment of a three-part series of the oil and gas lottery program run by the Bureau of Land Management, AP Writer E. O'Neil Robinson describes efforts to rein in three "filing service companies" by the Federal Trade Commission, at present the only agency empowered to take any action against such companies.

By E. O'NEIL ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Federal Trade Commission lawyers have amassed a roomful of evidence against three Florida companies the agency has charged with using a "deceptive scheme" to sell thousands of chances in a federal oil and gas lease lottery.

The FTC accused the companies of falsely telling clients that geologists believed the lottery parcels were oil- or gas-rich, and of claiming they had exclusive offerings of parcels that, in fact, were open to any bidder.

The agency also charged that the three companies had falsely guaranteed clients that they would win leases in the Simultaneous Oil and Gas Lottery, run by the Bureau of Land Management.

"There is no way anyone can be guaranteed of winning a lease in a fairly conducted lottery," said a geologist for one of the companies who testified before the FTC.

According to the BLM, the chances for winning a chance to lease government property that has valuable oil or gas deposits are probably no better than 10 percent. Nevertheless, U.S. Oil and Gas Corp., Eagle Oil and Gas Corp. and The Stratford Company — as well as hundreds of other filing services — regularly promise success in the lottery and guarantee the value of the leases.

THE FTC complaint cites the three companies for "misrepresentations of material facts" and "failure to disclose facts that are material to the decision to purchase services" from the companies.

Stephen Gurwitz, an FTC lawyer, said that although the three companies had different names, they share the same officers and employ the same corporate structure, and the FTC "considers them one and the same."

He said negotiations now in progress with the companies might result in a "stipulated order," an agreement between he FTC and the companies without a trial. Gurwitz said the FTC had already reached agreements with three other companies, one of which has paid $125,000 in restitution to be divided among customers who bought its lottery chances.

"We want to require the companies to publish their success rates — how many winners they have out of the numbers they enter in the lottery," Gurwitz said. "In most cases that is going to be fairly small."

Irving Sand, whose brother Milt is a salesman for U.S. Oil & Gas, is named as a defendant by the FTC and identified as the "salesroom supervisor" for all three companies, refused to discuss the FTC action or complaints from consumers who said they had been told lies by the companies' salesmen.

WHEN APPROACHED by a reporter in his Coral Gables office, Sand refused to comment, then summoned Harold Cooperman, whom he introduced as the U.S. Oil and Gas company lawyer.

But Cooperman referred inquiries to J. Leonard Diamond, a Miami Beach lawyer. "He owns the company and he's our attorney," Cooperman said.

Diamond, who lives in a two-story house with a Rolls-Royce parked in the drive, confirmed that he represented the three companies under investigation. But he refused to respond when asked whether he owned the companies.

"The FTC has filed a complaint and because of the litigation I would be unable to make any comments on the situation," Diamond said.

Documents filed with the FTC suit in U.S. District Court in Miami include transcripts of taped telephone conversations between sales representatives for the three companies and potential investors. The tapes show that the salesmen and saleswomen read from prepared scripts that one former U.S. Oil and Gas salesman said were handed out by Irving Sand.

THAT EX-SALESMAN, James Russell Bennett of Miami, said he went to work for U.S. Oil and Gas in February 1982. Bennett said Sand had coached him on telephone sales pitches, including the offer of guarantees that the FTC said were false.

"Mr. Sand would listen to my telephone sales pitches and advise me what to say during the sale," Bennett said. "He would have me repeat such things as guaranteeing a lease, guaranteeing that the lease would be valuable and guaranteeing the sale of the lease."

After working at the Coral Gables office for three days, Bennett said he became uneasy.

"On the second or third night that I was making 'front' calls (initial contacts with potential investors), I spoke to Mr. Sand," Bennett said. "I told him I wasn't sure I would want my friends investing in this type of an operation."

According to Bennett, Sand replied that he should "put anybody in the program."

BENNETT QUIT his job in April 1982.

Another former U.S. Oil and Gas salesman, Air Force Capt. Alan Edward O'Donnell, stationed at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida, told the FTC that he was hired by Sand in January 1982 after answering a newspaper ad.

O'Donnell, at first restricted to "front" calls, later moved on to "drive" pitches, which he described as more serious attempts to get customers to send money for U.S. Gas and Oil programs.

"In the 'drive' pitch we would tell the prospect that we eliminated the risk and we would tell him over and over that he was going to get a lease," O'Donnell said.

"A portion of the 'drive' is written so that we could tell our prospects that we had just had a meeting with the geologist and that the parcels coming up in the next lottery were the best we had ever seen," O'Donnell continued. "We would add that we had the power to take these parcels away from everybody else in the company and reserve them for our special customers.

"The fact is that we never did meet with a geologist. At no time did I ever meet with a geologist. Also, I never did reserve any parcels for my customers."

ROBERT MICHAEL, the U.S. Oil and Gas geologist listed on brochures, confirmed that he had met only once with representatives of the three companies. He said most of his dealings with them were by telephone or mail.

In his FTC testimony, Michael, of Santa Barbara, Calif., said that after examining sales pitches from the companies, he concluded some of their claims were exaggerated.

"There is no way anyone can be guaranteed of winning a lease in a fairly conducted lottery," he said. "Further, in my opinion ... oil companies are not buying as many leases as they once did. The result is that leases are selling for less money and many are not selling at all."

Michael also discounted sales pitches that guaranteed filings on parcels with few competitors.

The more attractive parcels that are near active oil or gas wells generate a large number of entrants, while many that have little interest may draw only a few filings and "are worthless."

Copies of the companies' sales pitches show that prospective investors were told repeatedly that they were certain to win leases because they would be entered only on parcels with little competition.

BLM RECORDS TELL a different story. The agency printouts show that U.S. Oil and Gas, Eagle and Stratford regularly entered hundreds of clients on the same parcels.

On four parcels offered in the January 1983 lottery, U.S. Oil and Gas, Eagle and Stratford entered no fewer than 100 clients on each lot. More than 400 were entered on one of the parcels. Only one of the companies' hundreds of clients won an opportunity to buy a lease.

For the March 1983 drawing, the three companies entered 1,257 people on one of four other parcels. The fewest people entered on any of those parcels by the three companies was 685. Again, only one client won an opportunity to buy a lease from the BLM.

While the FTC negotiations with U.S. Oil and Gas, Eagle and Stratford continue, the companies remain active and in August were still dialing Americans to offer rich leases.

When a reporter visited the headquarters of U.S. Oil and Gas in Coral Gables, a number of sales people were busy on the telephones. All read from prepared scripts and one spoke excitedly into the phone, telling someone about "meeting with our geologist, who had great news."

Swiss say dollar being misread

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst European Correspondent

ZURICH — Predictions that the dollar's high international value will eventually drop along with interest rates are a "fundamental misreading" of what has made the U.S. currency so strong, according to top Swiss bankers.

The money men of Zurich, who usually get it right, are telling their customers the dollar's current strength will prove long-lasting. They say its strength reflects a perception about the American economy that Americans themselves often don't appreciate.

"A year or two ago, foreigners were putting their capital into the U.S. because they considered it the safest place, politically," according to Hans Rehmey of the Swiss Credit Bank, one of the fabled gnomes of Zurich. "But, capital is now moving there because it's the place where foreigners believe they can make the highest return on their money in the years ahead.

"Either way, the capital inflow keeps the dollar strong. Contrary to what has been so widely believed and written, fluctuations in interest rates have only marginal bearing in the long run."

There are, of course, almost as many theories concerning the factors which influence currency values and, especially, those determining the dollar's fortunes, as there are international monetary dealers. What is indisputable is that the dollar's rise, which has been going on for nearly three years, has proved more sustained than anyone foresaw. Neither record U.S. government deficits, a deteriorating trade balance or gradually declining domestic interest rates have had more than a momentary effect on its upward climb.

This has led to a search for other causes for its strength. In putting together the pieces of the puzzle, the Gnomes and some other European experts now lean to the longterm profits theory.

Briefly, this is the idea that the strength of a nation's currency is determined by the flow of capital in or out of it, but that this, in turn, stems from investors' faith in the longterm prospects of earning a profit there.

"Short-term investment, what is usually known as volatile investment, may be influenced by interest rate fluctuations or other day-to-day factors," Rehmey said. "But this type of dealing represents less and less of the funds moving in the international money markets at present. Direct investment in industry constitutes more than half of international capital movements nowadays. This is money which is intended to stay put for a while."

He explained that a "very large proportion" of it is going to America since investors are confident that future profits there will be higher than elsewhere.

"In these circumstances, the fact that American goods and services are in deficit has little consequence because investors are betting that will change," he said.

"They're betting that, in coming years, the American economy will be more competitive than others because of its lead in high technology. Advanced technology companies in the U.S. produce goods that have few competitors.

Council raises tax rate by one cent

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

In 20 minutes Wednesday morning, the Midland City Council agreed to spend $50 million over the next 12 months to operate city offices, use $600,000 in federal funds for other projects and raise the tax rate by one cent.

Public hearings were held on each item but no one appeared to question the actions and give support or opposition.

With a relatively short 30-item agenda, the council also deferred making a decision on purchasing a computer system for the Police Department and Municipal Court, allowed St. Ann's Catholic Church to hold its day carnival, listened to remarks about annexing a windowpane area and chose a plan for relocating utilities in an effluent disposal area.

Some minor changes were made in transferring money from one department to another in the city budget, but it still wound up at $50 million. A repair crew that had been assigned to the Public Works Department was moved to the Water Department, rather than have two crews.

An increase of $357,085 in insurance costs was approved, even though Councilman Steve Davidson questioned making the employees pay half of that. "It means less take-home pay for the employees," he said.

Tax rate of 44 cents per $100 valuation sailed by the council's eyes with little comment voiced. This is one penny higher than last year. The additional $250,000 from that one cent will be directed to street repairs.

The Revenue Sharing budget for $600,000 was adopted. It will allot $326,000 to police, municipal court and central data processing; $21,000 for an oil storage facility; $18,000 for diesel fuel storage facility; $50,000 for a fuel dispensing system; $125,000 for trafic signals; and $60,000 for contingencies.

Two bids were received on a computer system for the Police Department and Municipal Court. The Burroughs bid figured out $70,000 higher than that of NCR, but the staff had recommended the council accept the higher bid. One reason, they said, is the city already has Burroughs computers and this new system would interface easily with the old.

Lane Laning, account executive with NCR, said the $70,000 savings would only be the beginning. The NCR system would save $45,000 in maintenance and $85,000 in software costs over the next five years. That comes to more than $200,000 less than Burroughs. And NCR would be willing to give the city a 9¼ percent interest rate.

He argued the NCR system has "three times more growth factor" than Burroughs by using dual processors with a capability of six megabytes. Burroughs proposes only one processor with a two megabyte capability.

Taking the Burroughs side was Larry Brewer, who said the bid specifications had been written to cover any possibly growth. "You've already reached the moon in your specs. Analyzing this again is just opening a can of worms." He said the dual processors would need another air conditioner and that would mean more energy costs.

The council will study the two proposals at its Sept. 27 meeting.

St. Ann's Catholic Church was granted permission to go ahead with its family fair at the church and school. The request involved blocking off a street and here Councilman Tom Sloan suggested the council was being inconsistent.

He was referring to an earlier request by a radio station to close off some downtown streets after 5 p.m. for a special entertainment event. It was granted, but the people told not to sell beer to drink in the public streets.

Sloan noted beer would be sold at the church's family fair. "Would someone explain to me the difference between closing the street here and selling beer and closing off downtown and selling beer. Is that consistent? Can you close one street and allow a group to drink there and not another group?"

City Attorney Joe Nuessle agreed the council had caused a problem with its "pick and choose" actions. He is to prepare some guidelines for the council.

After several months of discussing how to move some oil wells and utility lines, the council signed agreements with two companies, Petro-Lewis and El Paso Natural Gas. The city is building a new effluent disposal site 15 miles southeast of Midland. The problem with utility lines and oil wells had to be resolved before the holding pond was dug.

In other action, the council gave permission to G.F. Whitlow to do seismic work in north Midland, approved remodeling changes at the Public Safety Building and adopted the 1982 Standard Building Code.

HRC may close doors

Human Relations Council (HRC) may be shutting its doors permanently at the end of this month.

Midland City Council was told Wednesday morning HRC Director Gloria Ellis had said the agency probably would close down Oct. 31. Funding to keep it operating could not be obtained from other governmental bodies or from private donations.

The City Council had been the only group to allot HRC any money for the next fiscal year, and that was about $25,000.

Ms. Ellis is on vacation this week and unvailable for comment. An employee in the office said Wednesday afternoon the board is discussing shutting down the agency and a decision would be made at the board meeting Oct. 10.

Ms. Ellis has been director of the agency since February.

Midland Housing Authority official resigns

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Secretary of the Midland Housing Authority, who also serves as executive director of Hillcrest Manor, announced his resignation effective Sept. 30 during a board meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Board Chairman Gene Abbott read a letter from Fred Kester, who has been with the Housing Authority since its inception. The organization operates Hillcrest Manor, a housing facility for low-income elderly and handicapped persons. The board also heard reports on two housing rehabilitation programs, revised an income policy and reviewed the status of a second housing project.

"You've done such a fantastic job," Abbott said to Kester. "You've been involved in it from the beginning. We've got a place we're proud of — Hillcrest Manor — and it's because of you."

The income range of residents at Hillcrest Manor was changed to reflect the actual situation. "We're over the limit on some ranges and below on some others," said Kester. "Most vacancies now would have to be filled with people from the $2,300 to $4,599 range, and that doesn't pay much rent."

Rent is based on a sliding scale depending on the tenant's income. The Department of Housing and Urban Development funded the construction of Hillcrest Manor and subsidizes the rent, but wants most of the tenants to come from the upper level of low income.

Money from the 1982-83 Community Development Block Grant for rehabilitating houses of low-income persons is almost exhausted, according to Susan Howell and Horace Berry. Ms. Howell is CD coordinator for the city and Berry works as rehabilitation inspector.

To date, 49 homes have been rehabilitated at a cost of $246,676.96. The city had allotted $250,000 of the federal money for the project. Berry said each home averaged $5,034.24 in repairs.

Under a Jobs Bill funding, eight homes have been completed at a cost of $3,622.25 each, or $36,978.02 total. Under this program, $214,000 is available to continue housing rehabilitation.

"You can help a lot for $5,000," said Ms. Howell.

She said another $150,000 has been designated for housing rehabilitation under the 1983-84 CDBG application. "The council's feeling is this is a very beneficial program. So far, we've done 143 houses on this program, and we still have a lot of houses that need work."

Abbott noted the Odessa program is using about $7,500 per house.

Ms. Howell pointed out that HUD does monitor the program. The only complaint is that papers are spread among three persons and HUD inspectors must go to each place.

"They're just trying to make it easy on themselves," Kester said.

An application for funding under Section 202/8 has been moved on to another HUD office in Dallas, said Ms. Howell. But she has yet to hear if the project has been approved. The application is to construct another facility for low-income elderly and handicapped persons on Pecos Street east of Hillcrest Manor.

Krueger: Reagan lacks international appeal

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

President Reagan took the appropriate action in asking countries to cut off landing rights for the Soviet airline Aeroflot, but he doesn't have the leadership to effectively convince the nations to carry through the request, according to Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Bob Krueger.

During a news conference here Wednesday, Krueger described the tragic incident where Soviet Union jetfighters shot down a Korean airliner as "a horrendous experience," charging the incident was done "maliciously."

Touring the West Texas area, Krueger is seeking support for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate. Other Democrats who have already announced their candidacies include state Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock. Former Gov. Dolph Briscoe is also considering challenging for the nomination.

"We need leaders who will appeal to the people of England, France and Germany," Krueger said. "I think Reagan took the appropriate action, but I'm disappointed with our allies.

"We need new leadership to appeal to the people, the same way Kennedy did.

"But I am happy this country did not cut off grain sales (to the Soviet Union)," he added.

Former U.S. congressman from 1975 to 1979 and former Ambassador at Large to Mexico during the Carter administration, Krueger is seeking the U.S. Senate seat he nearly wrestled from Sen. John Tower in 1978, when he fell short by less than three-tenths of 1 percent.

"I filed last February and this campaign does not hinge on who is running," he said, referring to Tower's recent decision not to seek another term. He added: "I'm looking to Texas to send a new person to the Senate.

U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm of College Station, who recently switched to the GOP, is considered the frontrunner for the Republican nomination. According to Krueger, he "would love to run against Phil Gramm.

"Gramm said he would help balance the budget, but in four years there has been as much debt as there was from (Presidents) Washington to Carter."

Krueger said he doesn't anticipate any problems raising campaign funds in West Texas and added that he has support from the oil industry.

"I'm convinced we'll be able to raise the funds we need (in this area)," Krueger said. "I know what it's like to run the first time and it's easier to come back. I have support across the state.

"We need an effective, sensitive spokesman," he added. "Someone who is sensitive to issues concerning women and minorities...a full range person."

Commenting on the massive immigration of undocument workers from Mexico, Krueger said: "I have testified before Congress that the largest problem has been immigration.

"The U.S. has received more immigrants than any other country — more than new children born each year. Since we can't put up fences, the only way to reduce this is to hold employers accountable without discriminating against the Mexican-American."

According to a news release distributed among the media Wednesday, during Krueger's term as Ambassador at Large to Mexico, "trade between the U.S. and Mexico doubled, and the countries signed agreements resolving lengthy disputes such as the return of stolen vehicles and prisoners, enviornmental cooperation and trade restrictions."

Krueger, who has openly criticized the present administration's handling of the drought in West Texas, stated in a news release:

"The administration ignored the drought until this election year, now their actions may well be too little too late. The callous attitude displayed toward the farmers and ranchers has only made matters worse."

FNB sues companies to recover $2.5 million

Midland's First National Bank recently filed suit in 142nd State District Court to recover $2.5 million in loans to two energy companies.

The bank is suing Dale Fisher of Big Lake and his Fisher Drilling Inc. for the $1,615,000.45 which Fisher is indebted to the bank, the petition says.

The bank made loans of $1.7 million and $150,000 to Fisher in 1981 and another loan of $22,311.44 in 1982, the bank claims. After Fisher failed to make installment payments on the loans, the bank notified Fisher that it was accelerating the unpaid balance.

In another suit, the bank is seeking $940,566.41 from a group which had "unconditionally guaranteed" payment of loans made to Urban Energy Co.

Urban filed for bankruptcy with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Oklahoma in June after the bank note was due in May, the petition says.

Defendants in the suit are Urban President Jay V. Fulfer, Urban Assistant Secretary-Treasurer Loretta A. Field and Lynn D. Jones, all of Midland, E.A. Conner Jr. of Dallas and Bob N. Williams of Carrollton.

The petition says the promissory notes were made in 1981 and 1982 and that the $809,986.93 in promissory notes were renewed in May 1982 and that interest, at 18 percent, on the principal has grown to $130,579.48.

Woman sues surgeons

A Midland woman who claims her bile duct was severed by a surgeon while he was performing a gall bladder operation on her in 1981 has filed a lawsuit against the surgeon, his assistant and the hospital where the operation took place.

The woman, Carolyn Stephens Kirk, about 36, of Midland and formerly of Odessa, lodged the malpractice suit in Midland's 238th State District Court against the surgeon, Dr. T.J. Melton Jr., the assisting surgeon, Dr. Richard G. Klempnauer, and Midland Memorial Hospital.

Ms. Kirk alleges that complications from the incident led to her developing "a heart condition" and that she has "suffered malfunction of her liver and pancreas."

She further alleges that the surgery was unnecessary, that "one or more surgeons" had advised against the surgery before Klempnauer helped retain Melton's services and that the hospital was negligent in its post-operative care of her.

The lawsuit's petition does not specify the amount of damages sought and does not indicate if Ms. Kirk wants a trial before a jury or the judge.

Her attorney in the litigation is William D. Patterson of the Midland law firm of Stewart, Hofer & Patterson.

Sunrises, sunsets ... a natural in West Texas

Life on the flat desert plains of West Texas does have its advantages.

Sunrises and sunsets. They're spectacular. There's nothing to obstruct the view of the blazing orange glow of the star. It's a natural wonder. But you don't have to stray to West Texas to view it. But to really appreciate the rising and setting sun, it's worth a trip west. Tell your non-West Texas kin and friends about this amazing discovery.

Rainy days. They're few. There's no monsoon season and hence no rain forest to cloud your day. You can hang out the wash about any day of the week and not worry about a sudden storm. Or if it comes, it'll just spray a midst and get your clothes ready for ironing. But who hangs out clothes anymore? Who irons these days?

Lamesa duststorms. It's an end-of-the-world phenomenon and an experience almost unequalled except to a gully-washing thunderstorm. It'll clog you nostrils and turn light to darkness. It's a frightening sight if you don't know what's going. Sometimes it is just as scary if you do know.

The monotonous cadence of the pump jack at work. Sometimes you think the Good Lord left the Permian Basin barren just so West Texans and the Northern Invaders could plant the pump jacks after they probed the earth's bowels in search of the belch of a blackgold gusher.

Mesquite. It's the only timber West Texas has to speak of, so don't malign this durable shrub, which, given enough water, grows into a tree. It survives during droughts when the crops and the livestock fail.

Midland. It's the Tall City of the Plains. Visionary T.S. Hogan built the Petroleum Building in 1929 and gave rise of the Tall City and to Midland as the Oil Capital of the Permian Basin Empire. Where else could you have had a 12-story building (later, a 24-story edifice) and call it a skyscraper? By comparison, the F.W. Woolworth Building in New York makes it appear to have been a prop in "Gulliver's Travels."

Odessa. Without Midland, Odessa would have nothing with which to compare itself. And in Midland's absence, the fair city to the west might mistakenly think itself to be a mecca.

Coyotes. African has the lion. India has the elephant, and the American Indians had the bison — the buffalo. Today, East Texas has the skunk, opossum, wolf and the chigger. The whole of Texas claims the armadillo. And West Texas has the coyote over and over again. The critter is the West Texas mascot. The coyote is a No. 1 survivor and is as hardy and cunning as the ingrained West Texas is independent and stubborn.

Miles and miles of miles. There's a lot out here. Drive around. And if you don't really appreciate Midland, drive west to Pecos and Van Horn. You'll come back...if you don't get caught up in enchanting Fort Davis and the lure of the Big Bend Country and the mountains and valleys of far Southwest Texas.

Football, sex and booze. The uninitiated "they" say there's nothing to do in Midland but play around. If that's the way they like it (or don't like it), that's the way it is for them. Play 'til your hedonistic heart grows weary.

After work. There's more than bars and churches to visit. There's culture, adventure and romance out there if you are inclined to ferret them out.

Before work. There's the silence of a country morning without the crowing, bellowing, mooing and braying.

If you're really bored from dusk 'til dawn and want some conversation, you might pick up the telephone, dial 1+411 for information and try to strike up a conversation. Click. You'll quickly find something else to do. See what the sun is up to.

Former sheriff said he 'tried to help' prisoners

HOUSTON (AP) — A former deputy sheriff said he once hit a prisoner with a blackjack in self defense, but denied he ever tortured anyone brought in for questioning about a crime.

"The only way I violated their rights was to try to help them," said former San Jacinto County sheriff's deputy Carl Lee. "I was trying to keep them straight."

Lee, former sheriff James C. "Humpy" Parker and former deputies Floyd Baker and John Glover are accused in federal court of violating the civil rights of prisoners who said they were shackled, beaten and water-tortured.

Lee testified Wednesday he hit James Hicks, 33, with a blackjack on the side of the face after he heard Hicks "severely cursing" Baker and after Hicks spit in Lee's face and kicked him in the groin.

"I hit him because he attacked me," Lee said of Hicks.

Hicks testified Tuesday he was shackled, beat and water tortured by Lee and Baker.

Lee, the first defendant to take the witness stand in the case, also testified he had never heard Parker or Glover threaten or abuse prisoners.

Lee, Parker, Glover and Baker are accused in a six-count indictment of depriving people of liberty without due process of law and with conspiring to violate civil rights.

The case is set to continue Friday after a recess today because of the Jewish holiday.

Also Wednesday, the attorney for a former jail inmate who testified that San Jacinto officers nearly drowned him in a torture session said the defendant never told him about the alleged abuse.

Conroe lawyer J. Ritchie Field, who represented Vernell Harkless in two burglary cases in 1977, said his client never mentioned water torture.

But a defense lawyer for Baker conceded such treatment "was used not only in San Jacinto County but in others in East Texas."

In a statement to jurors as defense attorneys began presenting witnesses, defense lawyer Ed Mallett said such treatment was reserved for serious criminals and used only to recover stolen property.

Field said he might not have allowed Harkless to enter guilty pleas to the two offenses if he had thought "some sort of coercion was involved."

Harkless testified Sept. 1 that lawmen handcuffed him to a chair, covered his face with a towel and doused his head with water until he "thought he was going to suffocate to death."

More than 4,000 craftsmen and workers were honored Wednesday for their work in completing the first dome reactor building at the mammoth South Texas Project two months ahead of schedule. The nuclear power plant, now estimated to cost $5.5 billion, is expected to be commercially operational by mid-1987. The plant is a joint project of Houston Lighting and Power, Central Power and Light, the cities of Austin and San Antonio, and the Lower Colorado River Authority.

Burglary attempts foiled

A Midland police officer happended upon a burglary in progress early today at Freddie's Instant Shopping, 1301 E. Front St. One suspect from Media, Okla., was arrested and two fled the scene.

Patrolman Larry Bledsoe was driving past the convenience store about 2 a.m. when he noticed two men near the entrance carrying cigarettes and beer. When the men saw the officer they went around the corner of the building. The officer pulled up and one suspect threw down the merchandise and fled, the other was apprehended. During the arrest another man began to walk out the rear entrance of the store, saw the officer and ran out through the front door. He also escaped.

Entrance was gained by breaking the glass of the front door. Taken were cigarettes, 48 cans of beer and other items valued at $350.

Another foiled burglary attempt occurred when a man tried to gain entry to a Midland residence and was chased off by the owner.

Darran Knight, 1500 S. Mineola St., reported he was sleeping in his home about 10 a.m. Wednesday when the door bell rang. He didn't answer the door and shortly afterward the man kicked in the front door and the bedroom door. The victim chased the man with a .22 rifle, and the man fled in a gray two-door Datsun or Honda.

Ceremony marks completion of dome

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — A nuclear project whose price tag has jumped more than five fold during a decade of nagging problems finally is "moving along on schedule, on budget and according to plan," an official said.

Dan Jordan, president of Housting Lighting & Power Co., praised the 5,700-member construction team of the South Texas Nuclear project at a ceremony Wednesday to mark the completion of construction of the Unit 1 reactor dome.

Exterior concrete work on the first reactor building was completed two months ahead of schedule, Jordan said.

About 3,500 workers in hard hats clapped, whistled and cheered as a 15-foot evergreen tree was perched atop the 250-foot-high reactor dome.

Jordan noted that critics of the project have said it never would be completed, or would not produce electricity at reasonable cost.

"We don't believe there's ever been a better team put together than this one," he told the construction force.

The nuclear project was expected to cost $1 billion when began 10 years but its price tag has now been put at $5.5 billion.

In addition to HL&P, which is the project manager and biggest shareholder, the project is owned by the city-owned San Antonio and Austin power systems and Central Power and Light Co. of Corpus Christi.

Catholic organization not connected with cook-off

St. Vincent de Paul is not into chili.

The Catholic organization, which renders aid to the needy, has not given permission for its name to be used in the sale of tickets to an Oct. 9 raffle and chili cook-off, said Don Hellinghausen, treasurer of the group which is associated with St. Ann's Catholic Church.

"There is something funny going on here," he said today. "We have nothing to do with it. They do not have our permission to use our name, either. We have no connection with this chili cookoff."

Hellinghausen said neither Catholic Church — St. Ann's or Our Lady of Guadalupe — in Midland had lent its name or support to the chili cookoff affair. He said St. Ann's pastor, the Rev. Clifford Blackburn, told a cookoff representative who apparently was soliciting support to the cookoff-raffle "nothing doing."

The cookoff is to be held on Oct. 9 in the Midland County Exhibit Building, Hellinghausen said.

A representative of the chili event could not be reached today for comment.

"We have nothing whatsoever to do about this raffle," said Rose Walsh, receptionist for St. Vincent de Paul at St. Ann's. "We were not contacted. We know absolutely nothing about it." The organization had not agreed to sell tickets to the raffle or to benefit from it, she said. The prize at the chile raffle is to be a 1984 Cadillac El Dorado, she said she understood.

She noted that the church will sponsor its own raffle at the annual St. Ann's Family Fair the first weekend in October. There, the prize will be a Ford Escort, she said.

Any sanctioning by St. Vincent de Paul would have to be approved by its board, she said.

The Catholic organization offers help related to housing, jobs and food to low-income families, Hellinghausen said.

MMH board to meet in special session

The Midland Memorial Hospital Board of Directors will meet in a special session at 11:30 a.m. Friday in the Medical Staff Conference Room.

Directors will review junior lien revenue bonds issued for financing of a parking lot, a new CT Scanner and renovation of space to accomodate it.

The MMH Board of Trustees will join them for lunch and a joint meeting with hospital auditors to discuss effects of the new Medicare system on MMH.

Trustees and directors also are expected to discuss Parkview Hospital's request for a certificate of need to construct a 100-bed general acute care hospital.

Parkview's hearing is scheduled at the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin Oct. 11. Any opposition to the request must be filed by 5 p.m. Sunday in Austin.

Residents selling town to Dallas developer

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas developer has succeeded in buying 90 percent of the town of Buckingham, which had seen its rural lifestyle surrounded by Dallas' urban sprawl in the past decade.

A majority of Buckingham's 60 land owners agreed Tuesday to sell to Dallas land developer Michael Block and his partner, WenClay International.

The town was less than a quarter of a section. It sits about a mile northeast of the sprawling Texas Instruments plant in north Dallas and is surrounded on one side by Dallas and on the other by Richardson.

Buckingham incorporated in the 1950s to avoid annexation. Its 1980 population was 159.

Residents had turned down two previous offers to buy their property since early 1982. The price of $6 that Block offered was twice what another developer proposed to pay a year ago. Block will pay $40 million for the 135 acres.

"Everyone who decided to sell has done quite well," Bob O'Donnell, a resident and former mayor, told the Dallas Times Herald. "People who bought two acres and a home 10 years ago for $55,000 will end up getting around $550,000 out of the deal."

The buyers will find themselves in the unusual position, as developers, of owning almost all of the incorporated town.

"There won't be that much in city government that will be a problem to them," O'Donnell said.

C.W. Kendall III, a real estate broker who worked almost a year on pulling the deal together, said no detailed development plans have been drawn up.

Driver stabbed by rider

A Midland man told police he was stabbed Wednesday by a man to whom he gave a ride.

Richard Mosley, 511 S. Stonewall, said he dropped off the rider and went grocery shopping. On his way home shortly before 10 p.m. the man again stopped Mosley at 500 Clay St. and asked him to return something he had left in the vehicle. Mosley said he didn't know what the rider was referring to. The man stabbed him in the left hand and fled on foot, according to reports.

Police are searching for the suspect.

Two Midland men were arrested for assault after allegedly attacking a Midland couple out for a walk.

Mid Leavell Tessier, 2501½ W. Francis Ave., told police he and his wife were walking near Garfield Street and Industrial Ave. about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday when two men got out of a car, jumped them and then fled in the automobile.

Tessier flagged down a police officer and pointed out the fleeing vehicle. The car was stopped, the suspects identified as the assailants and the two were arrested.

The victims suffered a bloody nose and some scratches in the incident.

Man arrested for rape

A 38-year-old Midland man has been arrested for aggravated rape of a 59-year-old Midland woman Wednesday.

The case is being turned over to the district attorney's office and charges are pending. The incident allegedly occurred in the victim's home about 11 a.m. No weapon was used, police said.

White to tour West Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White is going to West Texas next week, and he has invited U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block to go with him to take a look at the impact of the drought.

White said he would tour the area "hardest hit by the drought" on Tuesday.

"Statistics do not adequately convey the impact of the drought on livestock producers, farmers and the economies of the communities that depend on agriculture," White said. "I believe that viewing the situation will give you an understanding of the urgency of action to save the agricultural assets and the economic stability of the area."

Mattox to give recordings to jury

DALLAS (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox recorded conversations he had with a Houston law firm last June and will release them to a grand jury today to prove he didn't threaten the firm's bond business, his lawyer says.

Robert O. Smith of Austin, who is representing Mattox's special counsel, Arthur Mitchell, told the Dallas Times Herald Wednesday that Travis Couty District Attorney Ronnie Earle has agreed to give the tapes to the grand jury investigating the attorney general.

Thomas McDade, a member of the Houston law firm of Fulbright and Jaworski, alleged that Mattox threated to harm the firm's business in municipal bonds if he didn't stop trying to question Mattox's sister in connection with a lawsuit against the Mobil Oil Corp. McDade represents Mobil in a $1.67 billion lawsuit against the state.

McDade, who testified before the grand jury, has hinted that he recording the conversation with Mattox, but the attorney general has never said he also had some tapes.

Mattox declined to comment Wednesday on the recordings, but referred to them in a letter to Smith dated Wednesday that said they would clear him of McDade's allegations.

"The contents of these tapes will conclusively etablish the falsity of any testimony before the grand jury that I threatened to 'put the law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski out of the bond business," Mattox said in the letter.

Mitchell was scheduled to appear before the grand jury at 2 p.m. today to give the grand jury at least "one tape with one or more conversations on it," Smith said. Smith said he had not heard the tape.

McDade called Mattox's disclose of the tapes "wonderful," but refused to discuss whether he had also made recordings or whether he had given any to the grand jury.

McDade has said he wanted to question Janice Mattox to explore links between the attorney general and South Texas oilman Clinton Manges, who initiated the suit against Mobil.

Also Wednesday, Mattox's office acknowledged that it is looking at some past financial records of Earle's, but Earle said is not "the target of a probe."

Game programmed against Soviets

AUSTIN (AP) — Owners of a video game arcade, determined to get their "two bits in " over the downing of a Korean airliner, have given customers a chance to zap Soviet warships and destroy the dreaded "Communist mutant."

Thomas Teeter, a 21-year-old employee of University Arcade, says that his employers had him reprogram three arcade games after the Soviet Union destroyed the Korean Air Lines 747 last week, killing 269 people.

One game, "Robotron," urges players to save the human race from the "Communist mutant from outer space, Andropov," a reference to Soviet President Yuri Andropov.

Girl returns home to await transplant

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — One-year-old Ashley Bailey, whose need for a liver transplant brought a national plea by President Reagan seven weeks ago, can return to Texas to wait for the operation, doctors say.

Dr. John Najarian, chief of surgery at University of Minnesota Hospitals, said Wednesday that Ashley is "quite stable now" and can be transferred to a hospital in Abilene, Texas.

Guardian geese: All they're quacked up to be

LAT Photo

Tony Angellotti and his guard geese, Spike and Muffin, at home in Venice, Calif. At the suggestion of friends, he bought the geese as a noisy, but effective, security system after he was robbed and his home was burglarized.

By The Los Angeles Times—Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — The geese at the home of Tony Angellotti find their duties so exciting that it gives them people pimples.

If you wonder why a goose and a gander should be on the property of a home in the Venice area of Los Angeles rather than in a barnyard somewhere, you should realize what has happened to Tony Angellotti since he bought his home two years ago.

"For openers, six months after I had settled in, I was coming through the back door with groceries when I saw an intruder inside," Angellotti recalled. "When he saw me, he ran out the front door, but then I could see that he had stopped in the alley and was watching.

"When I started chasing, he jumped another fence and disappeared."

Last October, in that same alley behind his home, Angellotti was held up at gunpoint and relieved of his watch.

"The fear motive is a strong one," he observed. "I felt I would have to do something.

"I toyed with the idea of getting a guard dog, but my girlfriend lives in the Valley, I commute there a lot, and I figured a dog would get lonely. Dogs run away when they get lonely. Besides, the yard isn't large enough for one."

The 28-year-old homeowner took other steps. He made sure all his windows had bars. He put an automatic door opener on his garage, so he could whiz in and out. He installed timer-activated floodlights in the back. He put padlocks on all the gates. And deadbolt locks on all the outside doors.

"After a while I began to feel paranoid," he said. "But then, when I got home one Saturday night, I discovered that somebody had invited himself into my backyard and had removed a potted plant I had put out for sunning.

"If they would go to that trouble just for a plant, I got to thinking, what would they do if they ran into me while they were on the premises?"

It happens that Angellotti is vice president of ICPR, a public relations firm whose clients include Susan Howard of the television show "Dallas."

"She and her husband had grown up in Texas," Angellotti said. "When I was over at their place one night, and told them about my house problems, they said that lots of people in their state kept geese.

"I joked that it wasn't Christmas yet, but they were serious. They said geese are very territorial-minded and make good sentries."

Indeed, it is recorded that the ancient Egyptians, Romans and Greeks used the birds for that purpose. Because of their keen eyesight and hearing, they also have been used by a firm in Scotland to guard maturing casks of whiskey. And during the war in Vietnam, an American unit kept six geese in cages beneath a strategic bridge as an early warning system.

As far as the birds are concerned, it beats being in a roasting pan.

Angellotti came to the conclusion that it was a quacker-jack idea, and in May he journeyed to a grain store and, for $10.95 each, purchased 2-week-old goslings.

"They were just babies, so I took them home in a cardboard box and left them there in an office area I have in the front of the house," he said. "I put grain out for them, but they preferred the Los Angeles Times. They devoured every word of it."

As they matured, their taste additionally came to include the cardboard box. When the owner let them outside, he soon discovered a bonus: Their appetite for grass meant he wouldn't have to mow or edge the lawn anymore.

After three months, their weight at a mature 20 pounds each, their owner felt he had what he calls his killer guard geese. He permanently assigned the waddle patrol to his yard, and as a fringe benefit dug a hole and lined it with a plastic water-filled kiddie pool.

"They will follow me around as pets," he said. "But a neighbor lady has told me she has seen strangers peering into the backyard, only to flee at the sight of charging birds.

"The two stand on their tiptoes, lower their heads, and throw their wings up," said their proud owner. "This is accompanied by honking and screaming.

"I am told their beaks are strong enough to break a man's hand."

They will certainly break a burglar's heart.

"If nothing else, they are highly effective as a sound alarm," the goosekeeper said. "Together, they make more noise than a dog, and it is more startling and unusual."

The feathery pair, named Spike and Muffin, are popular with the security-conscious neighbors, the owner said. Residents in other neighborhoods of Venice reportedly also keep geese.

Researchers rate housework labor: $7 per hour

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Using a new method that calculates the lowest wage necessary to draw a housewife out of the home and into the job market, two Cornell University researchers have determined household labor to be worth about $7 an hour.

In their research, consumer economists Keith Bryant and Cathleen Zick did not use what is known as the "market alternative" method — which bases the value of household labor on what a woman would pay outside help to do it.

Instead, they used another approach, which they call the "opportunity cost" method.

"The particular measure we're using calculates the lowest wage it would take to get the unemployed housewife to start to look for a job," said Bryant. "If she can get $7 an hour (in the job market)," he said, "she's got to be worth at least that in the home."

Bryant pointed out that the $7-an-hour value does not apply to housewives with outside jobs. "For housewives already working, their housework is worth their salary on the job," he said.

The figure is based on data from an 11-state survey of 1,475 two-parent, two-child households conducted in 1977.

The study found housework for employed wives in two-child families to be worth between $5.11 and $5.84, and between $6.42 and $7.59 for unemployed wives. These compare with hourly figures of $4.32 to $5.41 and $4.36 to $5.06, respectively, using the market alternative method.

Psychics put hocus-pocus in past, gain respectability

By The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Deborah Charron was 13 years old when she had one of her earliest psychic experiences.

Walking through the San Diego Zoo, she recalled recently, she told her mother that one of the large cats was eating a zookeeper in a cage they had already passed. Her mother shushed her, fearing that people nearby would think she was crazy.

Minutes later, to everyone's horror, it was discovered that a zookeeper had indeed been fatally mauled by a black panther during the noon feeding.

Twenty years later, Charron is married and living in Westville, N.J., where she has a thriving business as a psychic, charging $25 for a half-hour reading.

As with an increasing number of practicing psychics, Charron's appointment book no longer is dominated, as it once was, by housewives seeking respite from endless loads of laundry, daytime soap operas and marital turmoil.

Today her clients include doctors, lawyers, business executives, politicians and police.

Fortune-telling cards, crystal balls and Ouiji boards have vanished, for the most part, along with neon renditions of human hands in the parlor windows of fortune-tellers. Modern psychics have office hours, business cards and their own lawyers. Some have growing reputations for accuracy and reliability.

Among these is Kathlyn Rhea of Cupertino, Calif. A few weeks ago, she received a call from the foster parents of a retarded 16-year-old boy who had wandered away from their home in Loyalton, a tiny town in the Sierra Valley of Northern California.

A week of searching by police, forest rangers, dog teams and helicopters had failed to find the youth. In two telephone conversations with officials, Rhea provided detailed directions to an isolated canyon. The boy was found at the spot she had pinponted. Her only error was a tragic one: she had predicted that the boy would be alive but he was dead.

"It was really an eery feeling," Sgt. Steve Peterson of the Sierra County Sheriff's Deptartment, who was in charge of the search. "I was real leery when they told me who was on the phone," Peterson, who had never talked to a psychic before, said. "I took it with a grain of salt."

Although he has not met Rhea and said that he has never believed in psychics, Peterson said the experience has left him more open-minded toward them. "If I have another case," he said, "I might call her after two days instead of 12."

To be sure, skeptics far outnumber believers. And while no one knows how many people claim clairvoyant powers, interest in psychics has grown markedly in recent years, accompanied by an increase in their business.

A spate of popular books has been written on the subject and in public libraries the books are often dog-eared. There have been psychic fairs in New Jersey. An entire community of psychics exists outside Orlando, Fla. In California, a "Psychic Yellow Pages" directory has been published, and there are a few colleges that offer academic programs in parapsychology, the study of unusual psychic phenomena.

In Virginia Beach, Va., the Association for Research and Enlightenment, a non-profit organization founded in 1931 to preserve the 14,256 documented readings of the legendary "sleeping" psychic Edgar Cayce, has become a major tourist attraction. The association has 40,000 members and a staff of 170.

Cayce, who died in 1945 at age 67, had an eighth-grade education. For 43 years, he had lain on a couch twice a day, gone into a self-induced trance and discussed everything from archaeology to complex medical problems.

At the turn of the century, when psychology was being recognized as a scientific discipline, academic interest in parasychology also was growing. But parasychology has not achieved the same stature as psychology and even today its scientific legitimacy remains cloaked in controversy.

"It certainly has not been broadly accepted," Dr. Richard Broughton, senior research associate at the Institute on Parapsychology in Durham, N.C., said. "There's definitely something there worth investigating but most people would say we understand very little about what it is."

The institute, now private, began as the world-famous Parapsychology Laboratory founded by J.y. Rhine. It was part of Duke University until Rhine's death in 1980. The lab did pioneering research into extrasensory perception — telepathy and clairvoyance — and into psychokinesis, the use of the mind to move matter.

"The main problem with research is that we haven't pinpointed the variables that make it come and go," Broughton said. "We cannot always get our research to repeat itself."

Robert G. Jahn, dean of the Princeton University School of Engineering and Applied Sciences, has embarked on a small, experimental parapsychology program at Princeton.

In an article published last year in a scientific journal, Jahn wrote that "no field of scholarly endeavor has proven more frustrating, nor has been more abused or misunderstood than the study of psychic phenomena.

"It has been incessantly prostituted by charlatans, lunatics and sensationalists, categorically rejected by most of the scientific establishment and widely misunderstood by the public at large." Only about 20 U.S. universities conduct research in the field, he wrote.

In the day-to-day world of the psychic community, disagreement persists about whether psychic abilities are inherent in everyone or are special gifts.

"I think it's an aptitude," Helen Palmer, a psychic in Oakland, Calif., said. "Everyone has it, but some people have dominant amounts."

Palmer, who was educated as a psychologist, teaches intuition training. She is booked a year in advance for her $75 readings, which usually last about 90 minutes.

"It's my lifetime to be a psychic," Charron, who believes in reincarnation, said. "I don't believe it's everybody's lifetime to use it."

Diane Nagorka, who has been teaching parapsychology and spiritual healing at the School of Spiritual Science in Washington, D.C., since 1970, compared those abilities to a muscle in the body that can be developed through training.

She said it is like playing the piano — some people learn better than others.

Dorothy Allison of Nutley, N.J., a psychic who works only with police — often in efforts to find missing children — disagreed about the nature of clairvoyance. "I don't believe everybody has it," she said. "If they did, why aren't they using it?"

Allison said that she went to California at the request of Randolph Hearst when his daughter Patty disappeared in February 1974. She also said that she was called to Atlanta by police in 1981 after 29 young blacks were killed there. On the advice of her attorney, she said, she can divulge no further information because of a pending development in the Atlanta case.

Although psychics like Allison have sometimes been used effectively, a spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police said that there was no scientific study that proved their worth.

"When your investigation comes to a brick wall, you have nothing to lose by trying a divining rod or a Ouiji board," spokesman Robert Angrisani said.

John Foley, a private psychologist in Philadelphia who also works with police, believes that people visit psychics for a variety of reasons.

"People are looking for answers to everything. When they can't find an answer in a logical fashion, they look for someone who will give them an answer," Foley said.

People from around world visit psychic

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — Some suffer from broken hearts — others from broken bones — but those who make the trek to Judith Hope Davis' secluded Central Vermont home have one thing in common.

They have decided to experience for themselves the reported psychic healing powers of a 35-year-old woman who was once branded a witch by her childhood peers.

Those who come to her expecting to see a wizened old woman mumbling incomprehensible words in a cloud of incense are in for a surprise. What they find is an attractive, shy woman with a down-to-earth manner and a friendly smile.

"Most people who come are a little cynical or frightened," she said during an interview at her Montpelier home. "But when they see me, most of them are pretty relieved. I don't look like the most threatening person."

While she might seem like a perfectly ordinary woman at first, that impression vanishes as soon as she begins telling the story of how she became involved in her work.

She tells matter-of-factly how she lived a previous life as Joan of Arc, and was murdered three times in her past lives before learning to die gracefully.

In an equally matter-of-fact manner, she describes how her energies are controlled by her "transcontrol," a man who died in a car accident and later joined her in her body.

Although such statements may seem far-fetched to most people, that doesn't seem to bother her or her regular visitors.

But she says that maintaining credibility isn't always easy, due to the number of people claiming to be psychics while actually relying on trickery.

"I've met other psychics and I was disillusioned," Ms. Davis said. "There are so many people who are charlatans, and that makes it an uphill battle for the rest of us."

As word of her psychic powers has spread, Ms. Davis has been inundated with requests for readings.Undaunted by the $80 an hour charge, people have come from as far as Japan, France and Switzerland for a session.

They have included doctors, teachers, salesmen and students, attracted by curiosity and the enthusiastic reports of her regular visitors.

Getting an appointment to see Ms. Davis isn't easy, since her schedule is booked up to six months in advance. But she recalls only too clearly a time when the powers that brought her international fame caused her to be shunned and feared by her peers.

"When I was a teen-ager, I had a reputation as a witch," she said. "It became very lonely, because people were afraid of me. When I was 15, I learned to keep quiet and I became very withdrawn. I used to pray every day to be normal."

By the time she was 18, she began studying the occult "to see what was happening to me," she said.

After much soul-searching and traveling around the world, she came to the conclusion that she was being guided by a higher energy, and that her "powers" were a gift, rather than a curse.

Ms. Davis helped found, and became an ordained minister in the Church of Eternal Life and Light in 1975. The small Central Vermont group, which recently moved its base into Montpelier, is largely centered around her work.

The church, which offers courses in disciplines ranging from judo to astrology, often meets at the home of Ms. Davis, her husband, Jim, and their three children.

Although she has given palm and astrology readings for years, Ms. Davis is best known for her psychic readings, which she says put people in touch with their "higher selves."

She begins the reading by sitting still in a rocking chair, reciting a prayer she says puts her into a trance.An abrupt transformation takes place, and she begins rocking very quickly, head bent and eyes closed.

Her speech tumbles out in quick, multisyllabic words as she tells the subject what she perceives to be areas of concern or matters they should be aware of. Once the closing prayer is read, she abruptly returns to her normal state.

Ms. Davis says she heals not only souls, but physical ailments as well.She has a long list of testimonials from people who claim she has cured tumors, ulcers and even broken bones.

Salt makes corn tough

By The Associated Press

September means harvest time for much of the nation, with sweet corn gracing the dinner table in millions of homes.

Boiling or steaming is probably the most popular method of cooking corn on the cob, and many recipes call for salted water.

Skip the salt, suggest home economists at the University of Maryland, it just makes the corn tough. If you want salt on the corn, add it at the table.

When cooking, the university economists say, add a tablespoon or two of sugar to the water to improve the flavor of day-old corn. Vigorously boiling water should cook the corn in five or six minutes.

To roast corn pull back the husk, brush on a little butter or margarine, close the husk again and twist or tie it. The corn can then be roasted around a fire for about 20 minutes, turning often. Or it can be cooked in a shallow pan in the oven for 20 minutes at 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

If you prefer you can husk the corn and wrap it in aluminum foil for roasting.

Microwave ovens will roast corn more quickly and preparation is about the same as roasting, but if you husk it, wrap it in plastic wrap for the microwave, not metal foil.

The time in a microwave depends on how many ears you cook at a time, and remember to turn them regularly.

DEAR ABBY

Niece feels defeated by write-in campaign

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that I, a 51-year-old successful businesswoman, am actually writing a "Dear Abby" letter, but here I am.

I have an 87-year-old widowed aunt living in an exclusive senior citizens residence. She is educated, well-traveled and "has all her marbles."

The problem: She loves to write letters, so every week I get a letter that runs anywhere from 10 to 15 pages! If I don't answer immediately, she writes and asks if I'm "all right," or if I am angry with her. Lately I've been writing postcards because I don't have time to write long letters.

Today I received a letter from my aunt telling me how "hurt" she is that I'm down to postcards. She also scolded me for not answering ALL her questions. (Abby, she asks dozens in every letter!)

I know she's my aunt, I know she's old, and I know she's alone. So why do I feel frustration, guilt and anger at this moment? And what should I do about it? — READY TO SCREAM

DEAR READY: You feel frustration, guilt and anger because you would like to say, "Auntie, dear, I'm sorry I don't have time to write long letters, but I think I'm doing well to write a postcard every week. What's more, when you complain, you make me feel guilty."

It would be healthier if you could tell her this. But if you can't, put it on a postcard — with my stamp of approval.

DEAR ABBY: My 3-year-old grandson loves to play with the bare feet of women and girls. He even tries to play with mine. The moment he sees a female's bare feet, he persists in fondling, stroking and hugging them. He puts his face between the feet if possible and carries on as though he is in ecstasy. He gets very excited and his face becomes flushed, which makes me wonder if he could be getting sexually excited by feet.

Do you suppose the boy has some kind of foot fetish? Should this be ignored, discouraged or what? — CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: It's possible that the boy has a foot fetish. If he has, there is no reason to be concerned unless he has other behavioral problems. For the moment, ignore his fondness for feet, but if he shows other signs of unusual behavior, your pediatrician can recommend the appropriate therapist.

DEAR ABBY: My husband hates for me to look at him. He says it makes him very uncomfortable, and he resents it. If I look at him at the dinner table, he will pick up his plate and go into the bedroom to finish eating in private. If I look at him in bed, he pulls the covers over his head. And if I look at him while he's driving the car (God forbid), he gets so upset he nearly drives off the road.

I keep telling him that his behavior is unusual, but he claims that I'm the the weird one. Frankly, if he looked at me, I would feel honored.

What do you think? — P. IN THE BRONX

DEAR P.: I think your husband is overreacting to an alarming degree. Be on the alert for other signs of strange behavior. And do not hesitate to inform his doctor. This could be a symptom of a physical disorder.

CONFIDENTIAL TO UPSET IN FORT DODGE, IOWA: People who make a practice of eavesdropping rarely hear anything good about themselves.

Metabolism may signal potential alcoholism

BOSTON (AP) — Discovery of a defect in alcoholics' metabolism may give doctors a way to spot people likely to have this condition and tip them off before they develop drinking problems, a scientist says.

Researchers at Harvard Medical School found that alcoholics do not break down alcohol in their bodies the same way other people do, thereby adding support to the idea that alcoholism results from a specific physical defect.

"We're saying that what happens may have a clearcut organic basis that makes you look at the whole disease differently," said Dr. David D. Rutstein. "There is a feeling of revulsion when you see a chronic alcoholic, but he may just be a very sick guy."

The researchers found that when alcoholics drink, they break down alcohol into a substance called 2,3-butanediol, but non-alcoholics do not.

Existance of this chemical could serve as a sign, or marker, that the person could develop into a chronic alcoholic.

"If you had a marker for a severe alcoholic," Rutstein said, "that would mean that at least you could tell him that he was at risk."

The research was conducted by Rutstein at Harvard with colleagues from the National Institue on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the Centers for Disease Control.

The research eventually may have a practical use in finding ways to treat alcoholism, he said.

"If we could get the metabolism worked out in man," Rutstein said, "maybe we could find a way of blocking it. There are ways of getting at the problem now that are within the realm of objective scientific observation."

Rutstein said he became interested in the possible inheritance of alcoholism after Scandinavian studies showed that the condition often runs in families.

Later, Dr. Richard L. Veech of the federal alcoholism institute found that rats turn alcohol into 2,3-butanediol when the usual process of alcohol metabolism is blocked.

To find out whether alcoholics also produce this substance, Rutstein assembled a comparison group of Harvard faculty members and threw a party for them. After giving extensive medical histories, the professors spent an evening drinking and giving blood samples.

Then the researchers took blood from severe alcoholics admitted to the South Middlesex Alcohol Services Center in Framingham, Mass. Both alcoholics and professors were excluded from the results if they had drunk anything but distilled spirits — vodka, gin, rum or whiskey.

They found that the blood of 15 of 19 alcoholics contained significant amounts of 2,3-butanediol, compared with that of only one of the 22 normal drinkers.

Home Box Office changes from tortoise into hare

By KATHRYN HARRIS
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — When the counting is over, the business success story of this decade may be neither Atari nor Apple Computer. The winner may be Home Box Office, tortoise-like at the start.

The 11-year-old subsidiary of Time Inc. took five years to turn a profit. With an estimated $105 million last year in operating profits, it is still neck-and-neck with Apple ($102 million) and has not begun to overtake Atari ($358 million).

But through adroit planning, bungling by its competitors and some luck, Home Box Office has achieved a position in its market that looks almost unassailable. Unlike Atari and Apple Computer, tormented by a swarm of competitors, Home Box Office defies all comers in the pay-cable programming business.

So dominant is HBO that critics contend that it could emerge as a virtual monopoly. Barry Diller, Paramount Pictures' chairman and chief executive, says such an outcome is "without question in the next 10 years" unless HBO is challenged by a government antitrust action, or by a group of major film studios capable of filling a pay-TV service with feature films and original programming.

THE DEGREE of success at Home Box Office would seem improbable, given its particular role as middleman in the movie industry. The company licenses motion pictures from Hollywood producers or studios to fill much of a 24-hour service sold to cable TV operators. In theory, it is vulnerable from at least two sides. Studios could gang up on HBO. So could cable TV operators.

But Home Box Office has charmed the operators by giving them 55 percent or more of subscribers' fees. To secure necessary programming, HBO has alternately charmed and dynamited its way into the very heart of Hollywood. It has laid claim to nearly one-third of the industry's films now in production — without the consent of five of the six major film distribution companies.

To Hollywood's horror, HBO now is usurping traditional studio power, amassed over nearly a century, in film financing and distribution.

And HBO has accomplished all that by luring few top executives and strategists from the film studios or the three major broadcasting companies. The company is managed by young lawyers and MBAs, initially lampooned by Hollywood for their conservative business suits and prep-school manners but now feared because of proven negotiating skills and HBO's 60 percent-or-higher share of the national pay-TV network market.

IN CONTRAST to the turnover at most studios, HBO's top three executives have worked together since 1978, and three of their predecessors have risen to top posts in Time Inc.'s management. In the Time tradition, they go on social and strategy retreats, and usually succeed in subordinating strong egos to team management.

"They are very smart, and they are out to totally dominate this business," a high-level executive at one movie production company said. "They've been doing a brilliant job of bringing it about...by picking us off." Over this movie executive's objections, his own company signed a long-term agreement to provide films to Home Box Office.

At some studios, executives accuse HBO of being so powerful that it has the upper hand when acquiring rights to films. They also charge that HBO has stockpiled films and shut off competitors through their business practices. Time and HBO executives defend their practices as perfectly legal, while arguing that studios do not have to sell them anything.

ENTERTAINMENT

THE MOVIE studios have made repeated efforts to buy or bully their way into the pay-TV business. By banding together, however, they have run into greater difficulties at the Department of Justice than has HBO. In 1980, for example, the department sued the four studios that formed a new pay-TV service called Premiere. The four studios, said that they would withhold their films from competitive services for nine months, lost on price-fixing and other antitrust grounds.

Now the department may be on the verge of challenging three studios' latest plan to acquire controlling interest in the two pay-TV services that constitute HBO's closest competition, Showtime and The Movie Channel. Under the plan, the studios would dominate a new company acquiring both services. After reviewing the merger proposal for the last five months, the agency's staff has recommended legal action against it, according to some published reports.

THE STUDIOS and some pay-TV competitors have complained in vain to the Justice Department about HBO's practices. The agency investigated HBO sporadically from 1977 until 1981, but closed the investigation without taking action. Nor is the agency expected to challenge a new $400-million movie company called Tri-Star Pictures, formed last November by Home Box Office, CBS and Columbia Pictures Industries. HBO participates in any film profits, and it also has secured a new source of movies for its service.

Paul Kagan, a cable TV consultant in Carmel, says that Home Box Office has carefully fostered new businesses, including the new studio, and can argue that they are pro-competitive. With the strategy of starting businesses instead of acquiring them, "they have been able to avoid the Justice Department trap."

The studios' frustration is well understood in the Time & Life building in mid-Manhattan. J. Richard Munro, Time's president and chief executive, says he'd "do just what they're trying to do, I suppose...I'd try to get a piece of the action."

Munro says, "There's no question they missed a great opportunity. But that shouldn't bother them. Everybody misses opportunities...We've missed a whole bunch ourselves. But...they were there on the ground floor. They were there on Day One. And they chose not to play."

ON DAY ONE, however, few could have envisioned the magnitude of HBO's success. In 1971, HBO was just an idea of Charles F. Dolan, the New York cable television pioneer who had founded a company called Sterling Communications, which was later acquired by Time. "It was to be a combination of motion pictures and sports, and to be (delivered) by microwave and offered as an optional channel by cable operators to their subscribers," recalls Dolan, who left in 1973 and founded Cablevision Systems Corp. in Long Island, N.Y.

Time, already an investor in Sterling, put up about $500,000 in two installments to start the pay-TV venture.

In 1972, Dolan hired a 32-year-old lawyer named Gerald M. Levin to draw up the business plan and secure rights to programming. Levin is the man who coined the Home Box Office name as a temporary title. The name stuck, and Levin stayed, becoming the individual most credited for the pay-TV service's success. He served as HBO's chief executive from 1973 until 1979.

LEVIN, NOW vice president of Time's video group (which also includes American Television & Communications Corp., the nation's largest cable-TV system operator in number of subscriptions), says four early business decisions were critical to HBO's success:

— Offering a steady flow of entertainment on a subscription basis, instead of charging customers for viewing individual events. The decision was a pragmatic one — technology had not advanced enough to economically implement "pay-per-view" — but it assured the service a fairly reliable stream of revenue.

— Programming would consist of more than just movies. "It's taken us awhile to fulfill that mandate, but it's now happening," Levin said. HBO is expected to spend more than $60 million this year on sports and original programming.

— Fostering a sentiment of "partnership" with cable-TV operators, who install necessary equipment in homes and collect subscription fees. Instead of leasing channels from the operators, it asked operators to affiliate with HBO. And it sweetened the arrangement by allowing operators to keep at least half of all subscriber fees, passing on what's left to HBO.

— BECOMING a national network, using microwave transmission in the early years. Time committed about $6.5 million in 1975 to secure the use of a satellite. HBO began its regular satellite service with a heavyweight boxing match, the Ali-Frazier "Thrilla from Manila." By contrast, Showtime did not begin its satellite distribution until 1978, and The Movie Channel waited until 1979.

HBO was goaded toward profitability by Nicholas J. Nicholas, a no-nonsense financial expert who had emerged from two years tackling problems at a Time-owned cable system.

Two comedies scheduled for MCT

James McLure's comedies "Lone Star/Laundry and Bourbon" open at Midland Theatre Centre Sept. 16. The production will run for eight performances closing Oct. 1.

This matched set of plays, to be presented in Theatre One, deals with some of the livelier inhabitants of Maynard, Texas, on a day not too long ago.

"Lone Star" finds brothers Roy and Ray behind Angel's Bar on a Friday night. Roy is enjoying "the usual" — Lone Star, Mars bars, popcorn, Slim Jims and beef jerky. When Ray joins him, they talk of the past, from Roy's 1959 pink Thunderbird convertible to Vietnam. Some startling revelations later in the evening mean both characters must make difficult adjustments. The two are joined by a man they both dislike, Cletis Fullernoy.

Roy is played by Michael Huslage. Although this is Huslage's first Midland Coummunity Theatre role, he and his wife, Nancy, have worked backstage in a number of productions including "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" and "Barefoot in the Park."

Ray is also played by a newcomer to MCT's stage, Daren Taylor. Taylor is active in drama at Midland High School, where he is a senior.

Cletis is played by Corby Considine, last seen in "Sly Fox."

"Laundry and Bourbon" takes place in Roy's backyard. His wife, Elizabeth, is worried about him. She is joined by her best friend, Hattie, who has come to escape her high-spirited children and to have a few glasses of bourbon. Both are joined by Hattie's nemesis, Amy Lee Fullernoy, Cletis' wife.

Elizabeth is played by Bonnie Chambers whose last performance at MCT was as Angel in "Whorehouse."

Hattie is played by Renee Yarborough, last seen as Anna Held in "Tintypes." Ms. Yarborough received an outstanding performance award for her role as Anna Held.

Amy Lee is played by Chrysti Scoville, who is making her MCT debut. Ms. Scoville has worked backstage on "Bullshot Crummond" and "Tribute."

This production is directed by Michael Spicer, MCT's educational director.

Performance dates are Sept. 16, 17, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30 and Oct. 1. For reservations, call MCT's box office, 682-4111.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, September 9, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Kristy McNichol, "Jimmy the Greek" Snyder, actor Cliff Robertson and New York Yankees centerfielder Jerry Mumphrey celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: French prelate and statesman Cardinal Richelieu, author Leo Tolstoy and G.O.P. presidential candidate Alf Landon. Make your own decisions in the coming year and your finances will show rapid improvement. Beware of colleagues who may be jealous of your success. You receive funds from a number of different sources. Be discreet. You need to learn how to handle stress better. Follow the example of someone you admire. Treat subordinates fairly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Too many good things are happening to dwell on past disappointments. Although a new job sounds attractive, there could be hidden strings attached. Check the situation out in person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A former employer beckons you to come back. A return will be good for your ego, but you could find you have outgrown the work. Talk things over with mate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance may be interfering with business. Rethink your priorities. Emotions are at a peak. Make up your mind about a loan. Changing schools causes a child some difficult problems.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be selective when making business and personal choices today. Romantic temptations are not worth the risk. Settle a dispute you are having with a family member. Disruptions are lucky.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Deal with mounting anxiety before you become its captive. A loan comes through. Use it to pay overdue bills. You are a good manager and now have the chance to prove it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The boss will not look kindly on messy records. Bring paperwork up to date so that you do not get caught short. Reviving an old romance will bring you a lot of trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Timing is important when planning a sales or advertising campaign. A mentor comes to your rescue. Let higher-ups know your intentions before changing the direction of a project.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to be taken for granted any longer. This is something you can and should change. Break out of your shell! Self-confidence will carry you to the top.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ask yourself if a relationship that has soured is really worth saving. The price you will have to pay might be too high. Someone tries to take advantage of your generosity. Be firm.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A phone call brings information you can turn into money. Slow down. Your getting over-tired now could affect an important undertaking. Think big when it comes to your future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Relinquish some of your control and a teenager will respond in a mature way. Students who need assistance find they can juggle their studies with part-time jobs. A jealous suitor appears.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): There may be hidden clauses in a contract. Have it checked by the experts before you sign. Tough decisions lie ahead. Prepare yourself to deal with them in an unemotional way.

'Sexual' comedy debuts

NEW YORK (AP) — With a perverse nod to sexual equality, NBC has a two-men-chasing-one-woman-around-an-apartment show to go with ABC's one-man-chasing-two-women-around-the-couch hit.

Real equality won't happen until the women, in any multiple, start pursuing the men, but let's not give the networks any ideas.

NBC's entry into the wink-wink-nudge-nudge brand of televised tease and titillation is "We Got It Made," which debuts tonight. The program stars Teri Copley as Mickey, the dumbest blonde in television since Suzanne Somers bounced around on ABC's brainless success, "Three's Company."

In order of importance, Mickey is buxom, giggly, naive, alone and unemployed in New York City, where she answers an ad for a live-in maid. "I enjoy helping people, and I want a home," she says breathlessly, batting her puppy-dog eyes, flashing a toothy grin to her prospective employers.

They happen to be two young bachelors, David (Matt McCoy) and Jay (Tom Villard). David is a preppy lawyer. Jay, the goofy one, calls him "the young Republican."

Their apartment is desperately in need of urban renewal, but — now here's the rub — how will their girlfriends react to this feather-brained bombshell? Says sophisticated Claudia (Stephanie Kramer), David's beloved: "If there's any laying on of hands, you're dogmeat."

Jay's earthier girlfriend, Beth (Bonnie Urseth), is more trusting, and quite a bit more stupid. At one point, he tries to keep her in the dark by putting a bag over her head. We're talking mature relationships here.

Each week, we can expect a major misunderstanding between the sexes. Tonight, Mickey, David and Jay get locked in the bathroom. Mickey is wrapped in a towel, which inspires Jay to philosophize about reincarnation. "I'd like to come back as Dolly Parton's bra." (Don't write us, write NBC.)

Then the plot thickens: The girlfriends arrive. Mickey hides on the ledge. She shimmies toward the patio. She loses her towel. OK? Enough?

"We Got It Made" is the brainchild (small brain, small child) of executive producer Fred Silverman, who brought the bathroom farce, "Three's Company," to ABC. After the success of that show, "Charlie's Angels" and others, Silverman left ABC to become president of NBC, where he discovered that real life was more than a series of double-entendres.

Now in the program-production business, Silverman doesn't have to worry as much about taste, decency and intelligent comedy as a network executive might.

Opening lead: Two of ◇.

Sometimes your partner makes a play which you know is, or can read to be, unusual. It behoves you then to see what message he is trying to convey.

The vulnerability kept West from showing his eight-card suit. When North could make an invitational spade raise at his second turn, South elected to bid game on the strength of his distribution and ace in partner's suit.

This hand is from the Spingold Team Championship at the recent Summer North American Championships in New Orleans. In one room West led the ten of diamonds, and East tried to cash two diamond tricks. Declarer ruffed, drew trumps and made the rest of the tricks.

At the other table West led the two of diamonds. It was obvious to East, Joe Silver of Montreal, that it was an unusual lead — if it was fourth best, that meant that declarer had concealed a five-card diamond suit during the auction, a position that few would dare venture. The message that partner usually tries to convey with a lead like that is that he can ruff some suit, and East didn't have to be a genius to know what suit to lead to trick two.

He returned the nine of clubs — a suit preference signal for hearts. West ruffed and returned a heart to East's ace to get another club ruff. So a contract that was made with two overtricks in the other room went down one here.

NBC has nine new television series this fall

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — NBC can claim a first at last in the never-ending battle of the networks. It will have more new series on the air this fall — a total of nine — than any other network.

This is hardly an accomplishment the people at Burbank can point to with its buttons busting. Nine new series mean at least nine series that died in the spring of 1983. More failures than CBS or ABC.

Win or lose, the new NBC shows (debut dates included) are profiled with impressions based on personal reaction to pilots this summer.

"We Got It Made." Sept. 8. Gloria Steinem, Germaine Greer and Bella Abzug will march on NBC after they get a look at this sexist sitcom about two dense New York bachelors and their incredibly stupid live-in maid. The producers promised to make the maid (played by Teri Copley) at least brighter than a 25-watt bulb after critics reacted negatively, but the teasers on NBC thus far do not indicate much illumination. Judy Holliday in "Born Yesterday" was an Einstein by comparison.

"Mr. Smith." Sept. 23. Once again an animal is going to steal the show. "Mr. Smith," played by an orangutan in the title role, is about a beast with an IQ of 254. He lives in Washington and advises the government on important matters, with Leonard Frey as his trusted aide. Mr. Smith looks great in a three-piece pinstripe suit and you'll have to smile just seeing him working at his desk. He's a lot smarter than the Teri Copley maid. (See above.)

"For Love and Honor." Sept. 23. This is a heavy-handed hour-long dramatic series about Army airborne troops in peacetime. It's a difficult and vast area to dramatize well, considering television's time, budget and screen-size limitations, but NBC will try. The pilot is embarrassing in places, especially when the troopers run around slapping one another on the backs and shouting, "Hi, airborne."

"Boone." Sept. 26. Earl Hamner, who created "The Waltons" and "Falcon Crest," also brought to life this hour-long drama about a young man in a Southern rural community who wants fame and fortune as a county-music singer. Tom Byrd, who sings somewhat like Ricky Nelson, overcomes this handicap and does a creditable acting job. The show is done with sensitivity and fine characterization. Could be a success.

"Manimal." Sept. 30. If you can buy this sophisticated James Bond-like gent (played by Simon MacCorkindale) who can turn himself into a panther or any other animal he chooses at the snap of a finger, you'll love this show. There are many special effects and makeup techniques as the hero professor cavorts about New York, but fantasy can carry a show only so far. And none of the creatures has the charm of Mr. Smith.

"The Rousters." Oct. 1. Chad Everett stars as — believe it or not — Wyatt Earp III, the gunfighter's great-grandson who works for a carnival. To be honest, although I fought the feeling I fell asleep during the pilot. But I remember one character saying, "This whole thing makes me want to puke." He is telling it like it is. It's billed as comedy-drama-adventure, but all three are in short supply.

"The Yellow Rose." Oct. 1. This Texas, shot on location, series was made to show Sam Elliott at his best. He's the taciturn hand on the Yellow Rose Ranch, which also is populated by David Soul, Cybill Shepherd, Susan Anspach, Edward Albert, Noah Berry and Ken Curtis. The show has a fine Texas look, one designed to recall earlier days of the West in today's world. It succeeds so well that when the sheriff shows up in a squad car it seems all wrong.

"Jennifer Slept Here." Oct. 21. Audiences likely will snooze, as well. Ann Jillian stars as a deceased movie vamp who haunts the mansion where she lived her life. The place is populated by a family from the East, including a teenager who doesn't know what to make of her sexy advances. The pilot was rife with comedy scenes of questionable taste. Hasn't a ghost of a chance.

"Bay City Blues." Oct. 25. This series, about the members of a minor league baseball team and its community, got off the ground too late to air its pilot. But the network is depending on the show as quality fare. Among the players are Michael Nouri and Bernie Casey, with Sheree North in a recurring role. Steven Bochco, who created "Hill Street Blues," is sticking with his favorite color in hopes of spawning another hit. Like a home run.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Children commonly have food allergies

Dear Dr. Solomon: My first child seems to have had every food allergy that was ever discovered. Is this unusual? I have three brothers and none of us ever had any food allergies. — Bernice, Casper, Wyo.

Dear Bernice: According to a study of several hundred healthy children conducted at Helsinki University Hospital in Finland, almost 20 percent of children one year of age have a food allergy. This figure increases until the child is about three years of age and then drops. The foods that were found to be implicated most often in allergic reactions were citrus fruits, tomatoes, eggs, strawberries and fish.

Dear Dr. Solomon: One of my neighbors told me that her daughter has rickets. I remember learning about rickets in my hygiene class when I was in junior high school a long time ago, but I thought that no one got it any more. Can my neighbor be mistaken? — Mrs. N.U., Toledo, Ohio

Dear Mrs. U.: Rickets is extremely rare but it does occur. Credit for its almost complete elimination must go in large measure to the discovery of vitamin D and to its addition to milk and infant formulas.

Rickets still occurs in rare instances in children with an inherited disorder that prevents them from properly using either calcium or vitamin D. In addition, according to Dr. Herbert M. Swick, of the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee, the children of strict vegetarians, especially children who get little or no sunshine, are at risk for the development of rickets. The disorder can be cured in babies but cannot be completely corrected in older children.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What are the chances that a person is not getting enough potassium in the diet? The only time I hear that a potassium supplement may be necessary is when a person is taking a water pill. I would also like to know if there is such a thing as too much potassium. — Ida, Detroit

Dear Ida: It is rare for a person to lack a sufficient amount of potassium in the diet, although this may occur if the person is malnourished. In addition, excessive losses of potassium may be found in patients who have undergone surgery or who have suffered serious burns or other injury. Vomiting and diarrhea over a prolonged period of time may also result in a potassium deficiency. In general, however, potassium is widely available in the foods we eat and deficiencies are uncommmon.

Blood levels of potassium may become excessive if the body loses its ability to excrete it. This condition calls for medical intervention since an excessive amount of potassium can lead to heart problems in some patients.

For Beatrice, Burlingon, Iowa: According to Dr. Diana Spillman, of the Florida State University in Tallahassee, children have more taste buds than do adults. This is one reason children tend to stuff their mouths full of food. The extra taste buds seem to disappear about the age of 5 years.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Movie being made in cave

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Skeletons imbedded in twisted stalagmites and a primitive band of ancient cave dwellers aren't usually part of the sights at the Cumberland Caverns.

But then, the 30-mile-long caverns in middle Tennessee aren't usually the setting for a motion picture.

The grinning skeleton and the underground civilization are part of the science-fantasy feature film, "Secrets of the Phantom Caverns."

It's no accident that the commercial caves were chosen as the site to shoot the joint British-American $5.5 million feature film, says co-producer Robert D. Bailey.

He and others scouted caves in Italy, Yugoslavia and the United States. The well-known Mammoth Cave in Kentucky and the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico lost out to the Cumberland caves and the Cathedral Caverns near Huntsville, Ala., he said.

"None of the other caves we looked at offered the vast rooms like the interior of an auditorium and the special formations of the Cathedral Caverns nor the little, intimate areas and twisting passageways of the Cumberland Caverns that we needed," Bailey said.

The Sandy Howard-Adams Apple production for Wishred Ltd. is the story of army communications specialists and anthropologists who discover the cave dwellers in some unexplored caverns in South America.

Keaton in spoof

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eight years ago an unknown actor named Michael Keaton read a script his new manager had co-written.

"'Blazing Saddles' was a big hit," said Harry Colomby, "and we hoped to come up with a 'Blazing Tommy Guns.' We thought it would be snapped right up. Finally, 20th Century-Fox bought it, but it ended up on the shelf."

Among those who had also seen the screenplay was an aspiring director named Amy Heckerling.

Then Keaton became hot with "Night Shift" and "Mr. Mom." Miss Heckerling was hot from "Fast Times at Ridgemont High."

The screenplay, "Johnny Dangerously," is now in production at Fox with Keaton in the lead and Miss Heckerling directing.

A GOOD USED CAR... MORE CAR FOR THE MONEY.

Year in and year out, cars depreciate in value. You've heard it. But it's not true! Cars only depreciate each year in price, not in value, because the next year's models have arrived.

There's a difference between price and value. Today's late model used cars, specially those that received good care, actually can give you as much value as a new one. When you can buy a good used car for thousands of dollars less than a new one, that's real value. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance... buying your used car.
