Colin Powell steps down amid honors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Colin Powell stepped down as the nation's top military officer Thursday amid pomp and pageantry, hailed by President Clinton simply as "first and foremost, a good soldier."

At a retirement ceremony, Powell saluted the troops, then bade an emotional and eloquent farewell.

"I loved every single day of it and it's hard to leave," the Joint Chiefs of Staff told a crowd of hundreds assembled on the reviewing field at Fort Myer in suburban Virginia.

"I have never wanted to be anything but a soldier and my dreams have been fulfilled for almost four decades."

Clinton awarded Powell the presidential Medal of Freedom as Powell was given a cascade of awards, 21-gun salute and military flyover. Former President Bush and his wife, Barbara, were among the honored guests.

"As a young soldier and a not-so-young soldier, he was always first and foremost a good soldier," Clinton said of Powell.

"His remarkable balance of prudence and courage ... and his unfailing sense of humor have been there through the difficult times of now two presidencies," Clinton continued. "He clearly had the warrior's spirit and the judgment to know when it should be applied in the nation's behalf."

Queen Elizabeth II approved an honorary knighthood for Powell.

The 56-year-old chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is retiring with sky-high popularity ratings at an age when many political careers are just taking off, prompting speculation that Powell may run for the presidency.

ATF raid report released; officials suspended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen today replaced the head of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and suspended five officials who directed the Feb. 28 raid on a Texas cult in which four agents died.

Bentsen said commanders had lost the element of surprise on David Koresh and those inside his Branch Davidian compound and should have aborted their raid.

Bentsen released a 220-page Treasury Department report on the raid that faulted the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for making plans for the operation that were "based on seriously flawed assumptions" about the Branch Davidian cult and its leader.

At a news conference at which he released the results of an investigation into the raid, Bentsen said that "numerous officials were less than truthful about the facts."

Bentsen said "ATF did not adequately explore the possibility of arresting David Koresh away from the compound" near Waco. Instead, ATF devised a high-risk strategy.

Yeltsin agrees to church-mediated negotiations

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin agreed Thursday to church-mediated talks with hard-line lawmakers in an effort to break the siege of parliament and end Russia's 10-day-old political crisis.

Yeltsin's announcement came after a meeting at the Kremlin with Patriarch Alexy II, head of the Russian Orthodox Church. The patriarch's offer to mediate the power struggle underscored the church's growing influence since the decline of Communism.

Closed-door talks

The president and patriarch agreed that closed-door talks will begin Friday at a Moscow monastery.

There was no immediate comment from the leaders of the 100 or so lawmakers who have holed up in the parliament building with a few hundred volunteer defenders since Yeltsin dissolved parliament on Sept. 21 and called new elections.

Machine gun

Earlier Thursday, Yeltsin's rebellious vice president, Alexander Rutskoi, toted a machine gun at a news conference and vowed no compromise as long as Yeltsin remains president.

Other hard-line lawmakers have said they were willing to negotiate if the church acted as mediator.

Thousands of riot troops continued to ring the building, known as the White House. Power, water and phones have been cut off to the building, and food supplies were running low.

Disbandment

Yeltsin said he disbanded the Soviet-era parliament to break 18 months of political deadlock in which the lawmakers slowed the president's free-market reforms and rolled back his powers.

On Wednesday, Yeltsin gave lawmakers until next Monday to surrender their weapons and leave the White House or face "serious consequences." Deputy Security Minister Sergei Stepashin told the Trud newspaper that militants in parliament had up to 800 firearms.

Reese AFB recalls ground beef

by COLLEEN MCENDREE LOGAN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Reese Air Force Base commissary officials issued a recall of fresh ground beef purchased Sept. 24 or 25.

The recall was announced after a glass fragment was found in a package of ground beef. The fragment was an inch and one-half long.

Any Reese commissary patron who purchased ground beef with a "sell by" date of Sept. 25 or 26 can return the beef to the commissary for a refund or a replacement.

"We believe this is an isolated incident," said Bill Tynan, Reese Air Force Base public affairs officer.

"We are recalling the fresh ground beef purely as a safety precaution."

Tynan also said base officials are working to determine the source of the glass.

Dr. Cheryl Tyler, Texas Tech's Student Health Center director, said, "A small fragment (of glass) could pass through the gastrointestinal system without any problem. But, a larger fragment could cause a tear in the wall of the stomach or intestine."

She said most people would notice the glass when in the mouth or when cooking. In this case, the result would be cuts in the mouth, Tyler said.

She said the symptoms for swallowing glass are abdominal pain, fever and nausea.

Tech students who are in the military or who have parents employed by the military are eligible to shop at the commissary.

Lila Andermatt, Reese Air Force Base Commissary officer, said the prices at the commissary are about 25 percent lower than prices found at most grocery stores.

Danny Tanaka, a Tech sophomore business management major, said he takes advantage of the lower prices at the commissary.

"I shop there about once a month," he said.

"But, I usually don't buy the meats — the quality doesn't look very good."

Park to be named after Texas Tech beautifier

by JENNIFER GOOCH
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The man responsible for beautifying the Texas Tech campus in the early 1940s will have a park dedicated in his name at 11 a.m. today on the southeast end of the Student Recreation Center complex.

Elo J. Urbanovsky Park is designed to be an open recreational area for activities, Vice President for Student Affairs Robert Ewalt said.

"The park is not completed yet, but it has a shelter for groups to have outdoor activities like cookouts," Ewalt said. "There are also volleyball pits and space for people to just walk and talk or throw a Frisbie around."

Dirt from construction at the Tech Law School will eventually provide a small amphitheater for the park, Ewalt said. Urbanovsky, a former Horn landscape architecture professor, came to Tech in 1949 to plan campus landscaping and building placement.

He also established what is now known as the Department of Landscape Architecture in the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

"Prof," as he was known by his students, was responsible for helping Tech become recognized as one of the most beautiful campuses in the world.

He improved the look of the campus by adding mowed stretches of lawn and brick pavement areas where student traffic was heaviest. He also added more trees, shrubs and flowers.

"It's good for the students to have room to walk," Urbanovsky said during a 1974 interview. "There is a relaxation in walking between classes. It gives them time to think."

Urbanovsky, who died in 1988, also worked to beautify state parkways and national parks.

"I don't know a better greeting card to a tourist than pleasant driving routes," he said in 1974.

Urbanovsky worked with former First Lady Linda Bird Johnson on her Highway Beautification Program in the 1960s.

Steve Kauffman, news manager for University News and Publications, said a telegram from Johnson will be read at today's dedication.

"She has sent a telegram congratulating the administration and his family on the dedication of the park," he said.

Tech President Robert Lawless will begin the ceremony with a welcome speech and an introduction of guest speakers.

J. Fred Bucy, a former chairman of the Board of Regents, will discuss Urbanovsky's architectural achievements.

Pat Taylor, a former Tech student and director of the landscape architecture program at the University of Texas-Arlington, will speak about working with Urbanovsky. Arthur Glick, a Tech landscape architect responsible for designing the park, will discuss future park plans.

Tech player suspended

Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes announced Thursday that senior wide receiver Donald Marshall is suspended indefinitely from the team for disciplinary reasons.

Marshall was charged with the unlawful carrying of a weapon Wednesday by the Lubbock Criminal District Attorney's office after being arrested on the same charge Sept. 19. Marshall could face up to one year in jail and a fine not to exceed $3,000 if he is found guilty.

A court date for Marshall has not been determined. Dykes said Marshall would not play Saturday against Texas A&M.

Board of Regents

Texas Tech's Board of Regents will meet at 9 a.m. today in the Board Suite of the administration building to discuss research, faculty recruiting and departmental reports.

Tech President Robert Lawless, Provost Don Haragan and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center Provost Bernhard Mittemeyer will address the regents.

The possibility of a pharmaceutical school at TTUHSC also will be discussed.

At 11 a.m. the regents will meet with Tech officials south of the Student Recreation Center to dedicate the Elo "Prof" Urbanovsky Park.

Tech giving new AD fair shake

LEN HAYWARD

Bob Bockrath has seen both sides of the athletic spectrum.

He started off as a graduate assistant coach for Bo Schembechler at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, went to being a high school football coach in Ohio, then to the University of Arizona and next to the athletic director's chair at the University of California at Berkeley.

Now he has taken on the job of athletic director at Texas Tech, which is just about half the size of Cal.

Why did he do it? Who is this guy?

Those are the questions on the minds of many people in the Lubbock area as well as many Tech alumni.

Why leave a program such as Cal that has great tradition and has large amounts of funding for Texas Tech? Is this man carrying in his past something we in the Tech community do not know about.

No, he is not.

He did the job at Cal to the best of his ability and made decisions that he thought were right. Some people did not agree with him, but that is going to happen with anybody.

Bockrath was at Cal for two years, with the biggest event during his tenure being the firing of former men's basketball coach Lou Campanelli. But in those two years he said he dismissed four people out of 180 who worked in the athletic department.

He has been in the position for four weeks and has not had time to do much more than attempt to meet and greet Tech's staff.

What else can you ask of someone who does not know much about Texas Tech.

He hasn't fired anybody yet after many people thought he was going to come in and make changes right from the get go.

"Frankly, I am rather impressed by the staff," Bockrath said. "I think there are some areas we are understaffed. I was never brought here to 'clean house.' I am not a hired gun brought to West Texas."

Bockrath brings a new spirit to the athletic department — one that was much needed.

He wants to foster relationships with the faculty and have a better relationship with the president. What novel ideas.

Student support also is high on his priority list. He realizes that students are the force that make arenas and stadiums tough environments for opposing teams.

Bockrath is the man for the job. Let's just give the man a chance to see what he can do. He cares about women's and men's athletics alike, and he knows what butters the bread.

He is going to make some decisions that people may not agree with, and he is going to get criticized, but he, more than anyone, should know what criticism is.

He came from the Bay Area. 'Nuff said.

Let's give this man a chance to do his job, and if he doesn't, then something should be done. But not until that time.

Health care campaign reminiscent of past plans

by Bob Herbert

In the mid-1960s Lyndon Johnson tried to hide the true cost of the Vietnam War from Congress and the American people. He was pushing his Great Society programs and felt that if Congress knew how expensive the war was becoming it would say, in effect, "Mr. President, you can't have both."

And the president knew that instead of financing the Great Society, Congress would choose to finance the war.

So Lyndon Johnson concealed the real numbers, declined to seek a tax increase to pay for the war, and set the nation on a moral and fiscal course from which we have yet to recover.

When Richard Nixon ran for President in 1968 he proved to be no more careful with the truth than Lyndon Johnson.

Nixon claimed to have a secret plan to end the war. He didn't. The plan was a fantasy, a figment of a cynical candidate's imagination that was dressed up as fact and sent out to seduce the electorate.

The war went on until 1975.

In 1980 Ronald Reagan told us the biggest whopper of them all.

The wonder is that anybody believed him. In his warm and agreeable way, he told us that he would increase military spending, reduce taxes and at the same time, miraculously, he would demolish the deficit and balance the budget.

Reagan was wildly popular. It was as if Santa Claus had been elected president.

Now Bill Clinton, a fast talker who has already made his share of promises he's been unable to keep, is making his pitch to Congress and the public on health care reform.

The smart money suggests that truth is about to take another shellacking.

With Ronald Reagan's communications director at his elbow, Clinton claims his plan will bring health care costs under control; will cover every legal resident of the U.S. (including 37 million people who currently have no insurance); will not require a major tax increase, and, incredibly, will generate an extra $91 billion to reduce the budget deficit.

The president insists this will all be accomplished without reducing the quality of medical care.

Enter Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the New York Democrat who will try to guide aspects of Clinton's plan through the Senate Finance Committee. On the NBC News program "Meet the Press," Moynihan said the administration's claim that it would reap $91 billion in deficit reduction from health care reform was a "fantasy."

And he said the administration would not get the $238 billion in savings from Medicare and Medicaid that it is planning on. "That's not going to happen," Moynihan said.

He suggested that candor would be the administration's best approach, asserting, "We must not pretend that this is going to be free."

Presidents apparently assume that Americans are incapable of digesting bitter truths. The truth about health care is that major reform cannot be achieved easily or cheaply. There will be pain and sacrifice or there won't be health care reform.

The president has an obligation to be clear about that.

There are many benefits to be realized from Clinton's plan. But it is a proposal that could affect up to one-seventh of the nation's economy. Anything that large has to have some down sides.

Under the plan a significant number of jobs will likely be lost. Many people with good health insurance will pay more and get less coverage. Some health care is likely to be rationed. And it is possible that health care reform could end up adding to the budget deficit.

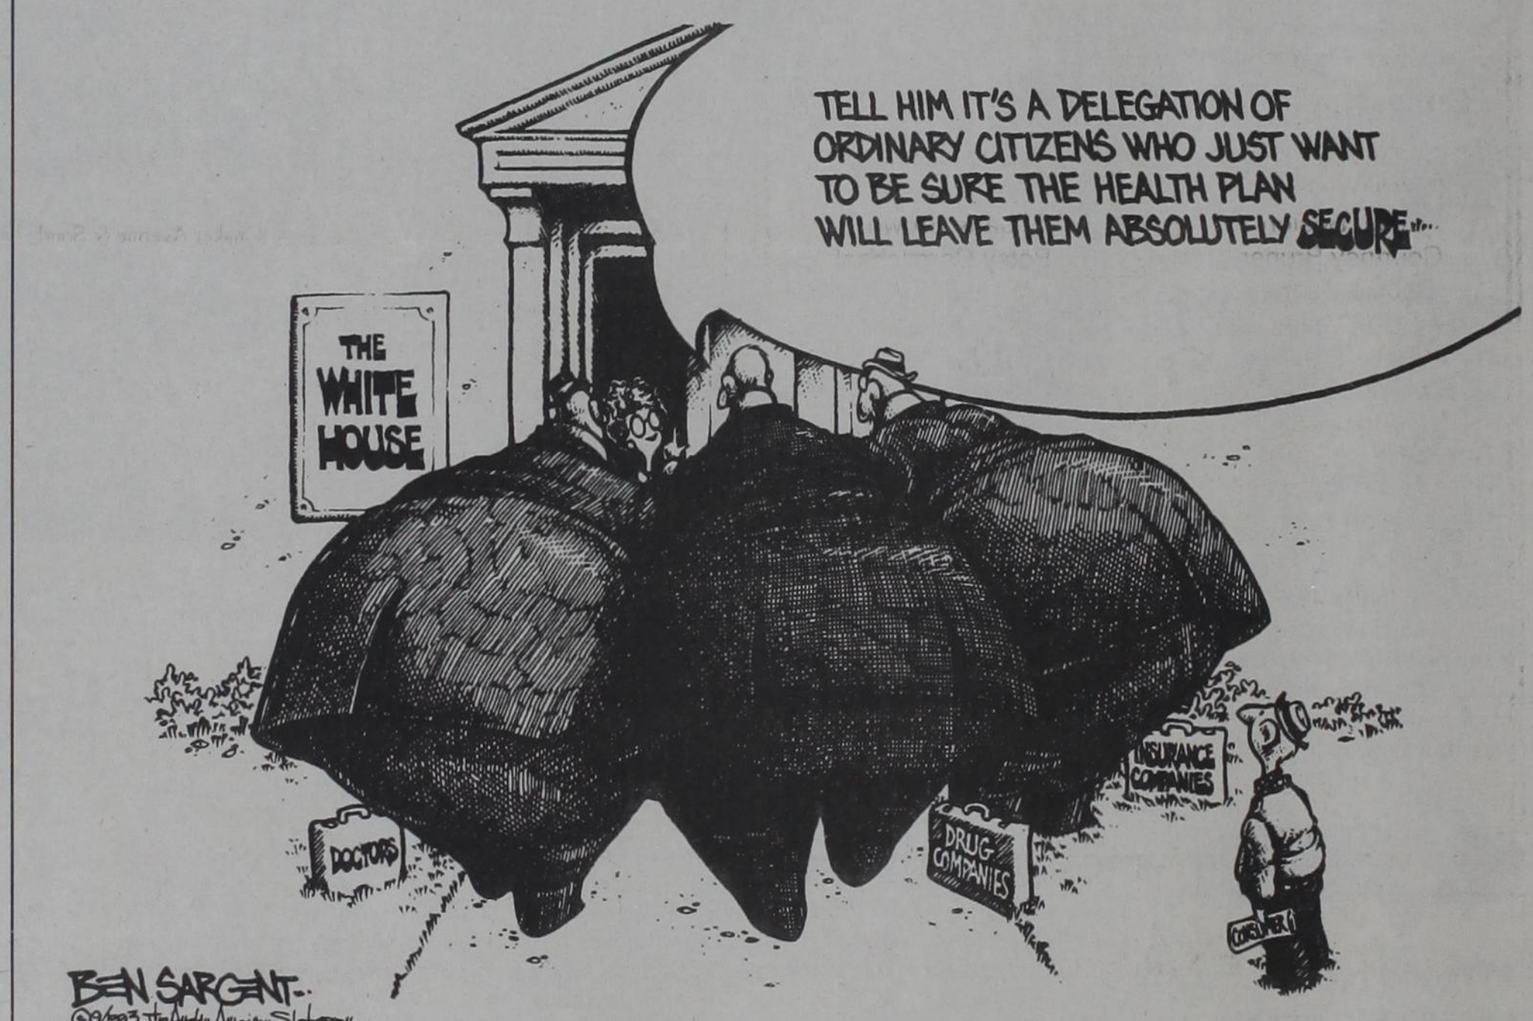

The president and Hillary Rodham Clinton are now focused on the huge task of selling the health care proposal. The president give his television address last week. Now, the Cabinet and other top officials will carry the sales campaign to all 50 states.

Usually in such a campaign the product's benefits are emphasized and its drawbacks or defects are given short shrift.

It's the way you sell soap, and cars, and iced tea. It's also the way Lyndon Johnson tried to sell his war and Ronald Reagan sold his economic plan.

It's not the way you want to sell health care reform. The nation deserves a serious and candid discussion of this enormous proposal. And it deserves to hear the truth about the president.

Biggest burgers in the Southwest lure crowds to Colorado cafe

JOE MURRAY

Everybody who knows about Betty's Place brags about Betty's burgers. I tried to eat one and couldn't finish it. But then, hardly anyone can.

What Betty calls a hamburger is what I'd call a hubcap burger.

The buns are six inches across, especially made for the little cafe called Betty's Place, and the meat hangs out an inch or more all around the edge of the bread.

It's been that way going on 17 years, ever since the day Betty got tired of some of the regular customers razzing her that the hamburgers weren't big enough.

Betty told them, "OK, you want a big hamburger, I'll make you a big hamburger."

You get the idea that Betty can hold her own when it comes to razzing. Consider the "welcome" signs greeting customers:

—"We do not serve vegetarian food."

—"Thank you for holding your breath while I smoke."

—"We don't serve children You have to bring your own."

My favorite is on the ceiling above the entrance, so that you have to look straight up to read, "What the hell are you looking up here for?"

Betty is Betty Jupe, which rhymes with Boop and explains the various Betty Boop memorabilia decorating Betty's Place.

Betty, indeed, wears what looks like a Betty Boop wig. I didn't ask her if it was a wig. I'd already made the mistake of asking her if she tells people her age.

"No!" is the quote I wrote down in my notebook.

Her motto is as straight-forward: "Nothing Fancy — Just Good Food."

I can't speak for the entire menu — Betty's personal favorites are country fried steak and her Mexican dishes — but the big Betty burger was delicious. At least, three-fourths of it was. That's as much I could hold.

The meat alone tops the butcher scales at 20 ounces — the equivalent of five quarter-pounders. Betty will tell you it's pure quality: 85 percent ground chuck and never frozen. "I hate frozen food," Betty said. I didn't argue.

But the biggest surprise of the big Betty burger is the price, just $5.10. I told her she must be losing money on them. She told me she wasn't in business to lose money on them. She told me she wasn't in business to lose money. I didn't argue.

"When I started out, they were $1.95," she said. "I made money on them then and I make money now."

The most money she made, on any single day, was the day after CBS featured her on the evening news.

"We went through 110 pounds of ground beef that day," she said. "We get seven burgers out of ten pounds of meat. I do all the cooking."

That was six years ago, but Betty sounded weary talking about it. For a fact, sometimes she thinks about retiring. "Maybe in a couple of years," Betty said. She and her husband Sam own the place, and two grown daughters help out.

What with the tourist business being seasonal in this little town on the edge of Colorado Springs, Betty's Place closes down for the month of March and half of April. It must be lean times for her regulars.

Like the fireman from Colorado Springs, who can eat two of the big burgers at a single sitting. Even Betty is impressed.

Then, too, there's the doctor from Dallas who visits during the tourist season. He orders his burgers two at a time, but Betty is not impressed.

"He doesn't eat the lettuce, tomatoes and onions, just the meat and the bread," Betty said. "He cheats."

Regent predicts Texas economy upswing

by SANDRA PULLEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas economy lagged behind the rest of the nation in the 1980s, but the 1990s should look better for the Lone Star State.

This was the message that Edward Whitacre Jr., a Texas Tech regent and chairman and CEO of Southwestern Bell Corporation, brought to guests at the Chief Executives' Roundtable at a 6:45 a.m. meeting Thursday in the McInturff Center.

The North American Free Trade Agreement, which is facing scrutiny in the House of Representatives, will expand markets for Texas businesses, he said.

Whitacre said he does not believe the agreement will cause American jobs to be shipped to Mexico.

This globalization of the economy will be aided by advances in the telecommunication's industry, he said.

These advances include convertability.

Whitacre

Convertibility will allow people to easily change information from one form to another, and connectivity, which will allow a better transition of information between electronic equipment.

Whitacre also said increased business regulation by the federal government works against businesses, especially when businesses have an increased tax burden.

He said that funding for President Clinton's new health plan remains sketchy.

"Regardless of how you feel about health care, it has to be financed somewhere," Whitacre said.

The roundtable is a program designed to bring together Lubbock's professional and business leaders and students from the College of Business Administration.

"This roundtable allowed me to get a better business perspective about what is going on in the community and the nation," graduate student Dana Poer said. "It is also good for networking."

Tech wins award in leadership efforts using propane

by LESLIE WEEKS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Railroad Commission recognized Texas Tech for its outstanding leadership in the propane industry during the 1993 Propane Superstars competition Sept. 23.

The Commission presents Propane Superstar awards each year to Texas businesses, local governments and other organizations that have found innovative ways to use propane as an environmentally beneficial fuel.

Transportation Services Manager Jim Ward said Tech began converting to propane in March 1992.

"The legislature passed a bill requiring all agencies to convert 30 percent of their vehicles to an alternative fuel," Ward said. "We chose propane because it was less expensive and the most economical."

Maintenance changes are extended several thousand miles by using propane, Ward said.

"You can go about 4,000 to 6,000 miles if you are using propane," he said. "You really extend your maintenance intervals."

Tech, which topped contenders in the State Agencies category, has 89 vehicles that have converted to propane.

"We average about four per month in conversions," Ward said.

IS AMERICA A CHRISTIAN NATION?

President John Quincy Adams one said, "The highest glory of the American Revolution was this: it connected, in on indissoluble bond, the principles of civil government with the principles of Christianity." In 1892 the United States Supreme Court declared that we were "a Christian nation." And in 1931 a Supreme Court Justice again affirmed that we are a "Christian people," Yet today we live in a time when secular historians are eradicating a much Christian influence as possible from history.

According to "The Connecticut Mutual Life Report on American Values in the 80s," the general public, by a clear majority, expressed commitment to Judeo-Christian values, while government leaders, by a clear majority, opposed these values.

The Bible says, "Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a disgrace to any people." It's time for us to elect leaders who will return our country to the Christian values that made it great.

City leaders, police officers ask citizens to help prevent crime in Lubbock

by JAYSON BALES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Lubbock Mayor David Langston issued a proclamation Thursday declaring October National Crime Prevention Month and asked Lubbock citizens "to increase their efforts in preventing crime."

Mayor Pro Tempore Randy Neugebauer read Langston's proclamation at a 10 a.m. press conference attended by city officials and members of the Lubbock Police Department.

Students from North Ridge Elementary School were at the press conference holding up signs promoting crime prevention.

The focus of National Crime Prevention Month this year is "sending kids into a safer world," Neugebauer said.

"It's going to take all of us getting involved," he said.

Lubbock District Attorney Travis Ware said Lubbock citizens must continue working to decrease crime in Lubbock.

"We've got to fight hard to report crime," Ware said. "The DA's office is going to continue that fight. Let's have an all-time record low on crime in Lubbock county."

Detective Floyd Price said National Crime Prevention Month is important because it could have a "domino effect" on future months in preventing crime.

Price said he wants a crime prevention attitude promoted every month.

Detective Porfiro DeLeon said arresting criminals and law enforcement efforts are not effective without crime prevention.

"If we can prevent crime, it creates an environment which is more pleasant to live in," DeLeon said.

Tech's University Police Department is organizing an informational safety program in the University Center during October.

Mock trials come to a close; Bosket, Stone victorious

by COLLEEN MCENDREE LOGAN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech School of Law conducted the final round of its intramural mock trial competition Thursday in the courtroom of the law school.

Tricia Pope and Susan Ysbrand opposed Kim Bosket and Fletcher Stone in a simulated trial. All four team members are second-year law students.

The two teams survived the preliminary rounds, eliminating 46 other teams.

Law students compete in mock trial competitions to gain litigation experience, said Randy Fickel, vice chairman of administration for the Board of Barristers.

James Martingano, vice chairman of Trial Advocacy, said, "Mock trials give students a realistic simulation of trying a real lawsuit."

Each team was given a packet with the problem to be addressed, and they developed cases using the depositions of four principal witnesses.

Both teams made opening statements, participated in direct- and cross-examinations and made closing statements.

The mock trial was sponsored by the El Paso law firm of Kemp, Smith, Duncan and Hammond and Tech's Board of Barristers.

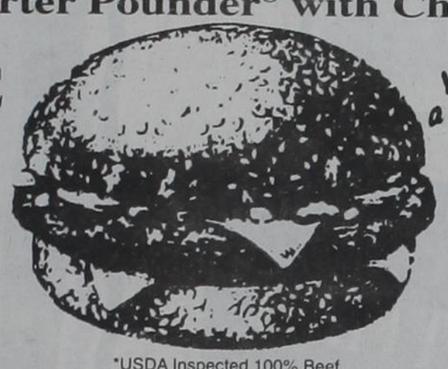

Charles Beckham, Raymond White and E.B. Burns of the Kemp, Smith, Duncan, and Hammond law firm judged the competition.

Judges reviewed how the case was handled, rather than whether or not the case was airtight, Fickel said.

SHOWDOWN IN THE SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE

TThe Texas Tech Red Raiders (1-3) return home for the first time in almost a month as they take on two-time defending Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M (2-1) in an early-season league showdown Saturday. A sellout crowd of 50,500-plus is expected at Jones Stadium for the 11:04 a.m. kickoff which will be televised regionally by ABC-TV (Steve Zabriskie and Ron Pitts). At this time, only grass area tickets are available for the game.

THE ADVENTURE CONTINUES

Texas Tech tangles with its second nationally ranked team of the season this weekend. The Aggies come to Lubbock rated No. 14 by USA Today/CNN and by AP this week. It doesn't get any easier next week, either, when North Carolina State (No. 23 by USA Today/CNN and No. 24 by AP this week) comes to town in the second of a three-game home stand. Nebraska was ninth (by AP) when Tech played them and Georgia and Baylor have been in the national rankings this season.

Haggard to highlight 13th annual Kalf Fry

by MICHELLE ELIZARDO
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The 13th annual Kappa Alpha—Phi Delta Theta Kalf Fry will feature country music veteran Merle Haggard tonight at the Municipal Coliseum to raise money for the Lubbock Muscular Dystrophy Association.

"We wanted to get a performer who hasn't been in Lubbock for a while, so we are real excited about Merle Haggard coming and helping out MDA," said Kyle Littrell, Kappa Alpha member and co-chairman of Kalf Fry.

This year's events will begin at 8:30 p.m. with opening band Tina Thompson and Heartland. Haggard is scheduled to take the stage at 11 p.m. Thompson will be back on stage after Haggard performs until the event closes.

Tickets are on sale in the University Center and at Dollar Western Wear. "We have sold more advance tickets this year than we have in the history of Kalf Fry," said Kappa Alpha President John Hamilton.

The proceeds are sizable amounts which go toward the purchase of equipment such as wheelchairs for patients, said Donna Veach, patient service coordinator for MDA.

"We are real excited to bring the community together, drawing the older crowd while still bringing in the college crowd," said J. Paul Manning, president of Phi Delta Theta. "And, it is for a good cause."

Manning said he was pleased to be hosting the event on A&M Weekend. "It's a great time for Tech to come and show its support for MDA and to show some school spirit," he said.

This year's events feature not only live entertainment, but dancing and various booths.

The Texas Tech University Police Department will set up a dunking booth with proceeds going to the United Way.

"The officers will be the ones getting dunked, so that booth should be popular," Littrell said.

Miller Light will sell beer at the coliseum, and River Smith's Catering will sell calf fries. Vendor booths will also sell hot dogs, popcorn and soft drinks, Littrell said.

The first annual Miss Kalf Fry 1993 will be voted on by those who buy tickets. People will be able to vote from a display of all contestants when tickets are bought, Littrell said.

Hamilton said organizers have been working on Kalf Fry for several days.

"We have put close to 4,000 man hours into this event, but it is worth it because there are people out there who need our help," he said.

'Artery' Program to begin Saturday

The Texas Tech art department will again offer the Saturday School "Artery" Program to children in grades 1-9 beginning Saturday. All students are welcome, talented and beginners alike.

Each year the Tech art department provides school children with the opportunity to expand their knowledge of art.

The program teaches children in all fields of art, including painting, drawing and sculpture.

The Tech art department will exhibit the students' work on Dec. 12.

The cost is $30 for all seven Saturdays of the program. The cost covers all art supplies that will be needed.

Registration will continue through Saturday. Those interested can contact Linda Kennedy at 765-5207 or register at 8 a.m. Saturday on the second floor of the Tech architecture building.

Burger, fries replaced by shrimp in Houston fast food market

HOUSTON (AP) — Bettie Doering loves fast food.

Her passion is so great, she eats fast food six or seven days a week. But she doesn't eat burgers, pizza, fried chicken or tacos. She dines on shrimp creole, broiled trout, chicken florentine and pasta salad.

If that doesn't sound like fast food to you, you haven't been keeping up with the latest trend in food service. A growing number of Houston companies are cooking dinners — emphasizing healthy eating and consumer convenience — for home delivery.

"I absolutely despise going to the grocery store," Doering said. "I like to go to restaurants from time to time.

" But what I really prefer is to eat a good meal at home without spending a lot of time cooking."

Doering gets her meals from Diet Gourmet, which caters a menu of three meals for $12.35 to $13.75 a day.

All meals are prepared with the help of a dietitian, who makes sure the meals are nutritionally balanced and are low on calories and cholesterol.

Diet Gourmet is Houston's seventh-fastest growing business, according to the University of Houston Small Business Development Center. It has annual revenues exceeding $1 million, an 872 percent increase since 1989.

Diet Gourmet is clearly the leader in its emerging niche, but similar concepts are starting to sprout up and attract new customers.

To be successful, Diet Gourmet and other similar businesses need to be healthier than traditional fast food, more convenient than cooking and cheaper than eating at restaurants, Owner Donna Leonard said.

That helps them cash in on four distinct trends—consumers wanting to eat healthy, save money, spend more time at home and save time in an increasingly hectic world.

"Eating healthy food is only starting to come of age," Leonard said. "Put that together with the fact that people have less time for shopping and cooking, and this is emerging as a real trend."

Leonard got the idea for her business while driving in her car, listening to a call-in radio show.

Former Tech lecturer Morton named director for Professional Development

by MEGAN CLARK
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Panhandle-South Plains Center for Professional Development recently named former Texas Tech lecturer Cathy Morton as its new director. Morton served as a lecturer in Tech's School of Mass Communications for six years.

"From my perspective, I think I was appointed because of my background in communications and my experiences in program development," Morton said. "I also know how to make a collaborative effort to reach a goal, which is important for this job."

Aspects of her position include traveling extensively and attending network meetings on the state and local level to learn more about educational technological advances, she said.

The center works with teacher education programs at Tech, West Texas A&M, Wayland Baptist University, Lubbock Christian University, and the Education Service Centers in Lubbock and Amarillo.

WE RESTRUCTURE THE PROGRAMS AND TRY TO MAKE THEM MORE RELEVANT TO WHAT'S HAPPENING IN EDUCATION RIGHT NOW.
Cathy Morton

Morton said the center provides instruction for students who are in college and are preparing to be teachers.

"We restructure the programs and try to make them more relevant to what's happening in education right now," she said. "We also try to integrate as much technology into the educational system as possible."

"We work with 66 local campuses in the Panhandle and South Plains area," Morton said. "We have a technology contact and a teacher education contact at each of those schools."

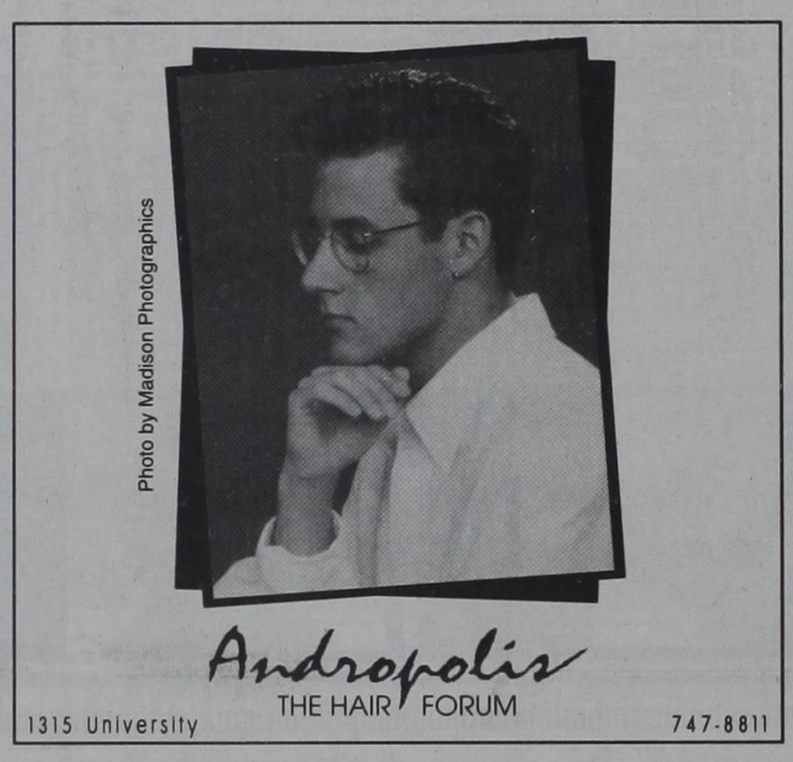

The center is funded primarily through a $2.6 million dollar grant from the Texas Education Agency.

The center is in the process of installing a computer network in the schools and education centers. The network will provide access to education software and to the TEA.

A video teleconferencing system also will be created to link the universities, the education service centers, an elementary school in Dumas and a junior high in Lubbock.

The Texas Department of Transportation and the City of Lubbock in association with HDR, Engineering, Inc., Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., and Hicks and Company, will host an Open House and conduct a Public Hearing on Thursday, OCTOBER 14, 1993, in the Banquet Hall of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center located at 1501 6th Street in Lubbock.

The Open House will begin at 5:00 P.M.

During the Open House, the public will have the opportunity to ask questions about the proposed East-West Freeway project, including the proposed relocation of the Seagraves, Whiteface and Lubbock Railroad, and make written comments on the project prior to the beginning of hearing.

The Public Hearing will begin at 7:00 P.M.

The purpose of the Public Hearing is to permit the public an opportunity to review and comment on the proposed construction of a multilane, multilevel, controlled-access freeway across much of the City of Lubbock at U.S. Highway 82 and the relocation of the Seagraves, Whiteface and Lubbock Railroad to western portions of the city of Lubbock and Lubbock County.

Morris, Thomas prepare for showdown in Jones Stadium

Star running backs concerned more with wins than statistics

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The hype is over. The showdown is set. All that is left is the cheering and the crying.

Saturday's Texas Tech (1-3, 0-1) and Texas A&M (2-1, 0-0) game figures to be the most exciting matchup in years, with "the battle of the running backs" taking place in soldout Jones Stadium.

The battle, which will be regionally televised by ABC (Channel 28/Cox Cable Channel 8), will begin at 11:08 a.m.

Tech's junior I-back Byron "Bam" Morris and Texas A&M's junior tailback Rodney Thomas are No. 4 and No. 5 in rushing in the nation, respectively, and are vying for the Southwest Conference rushing title. Morris has rushed for 553 yards thus far putting him with the most yards in the league, to Thomas' 428. Morris, who has played one more game than Thomas, is averaging 138.3 yards per game to Thomas' 138.0.

However, both running backs say the SWC rushing title is the last thing on their minds.

"I just want to have some fun and win ballgames," Morris said.

Thomas said, "If you worry about individual stats you have no business playing on a winning football team. I'm here to be part of the team effort for the SWC championship."

The combatants' style of play is similar in some ways, but different in others. Morris, at 6-2, 235 is known for his punishing straight up the field style, while Thomas is a bit faster and smaller at 5-11, 202.

"My style is ugly," Morris said. "I can run outside or up the middle. Mainly I like to run over folks. I'm more of a power runner than Rodney (Thomas).

Thomas said the keys for A&M are to establish the ground game early and set a balance between the running and passing game.

"I see this game as a real offensive dogfight," Thomas said. "It's always tough when you go play a team with that much talent at home when they consider you to be their biggest rival."

Morris has respect for Thomas, having played against him since his high school days at Cooper.

"He's a great back, I've played against him in high school and we both came from small 2A schools and we were both heavily recruited by a lot of people," Morris said.

Morris is coming off of a 174-yard rushing performance in a losing effort against Baylor, including his best touchdown run of his college career, a 44-yard score.

Morris

"That was pretty exciting," Morris recalled. "It was a 27-Go and the offensive line made some good blocks and I was able to break some tackles downfield and scored."

Morris hasn't had much luck rushing against the Aggies; the past two seasons A&M has held him to only 96 yards on 23 carries.

Morris said since dropping some weight last season, his moves and quickness have improved.

"I had that (the spin) last season, but I've been able to get some of my old high school moves back with the weight I'm at now," he said.

The Aggies are 2-1, having beaten LSU 24-0, losing to Oklahoma 44-14 and crushing Missouri 73-0. Thomas said the problems that led to the lopsided loss to Oklahoma have been rectified.

"Our offense just didn't click that day," Thomas said. "We got on a roll against Missouri and just couldn't be stopped."

Thomas said the Aggies still believe they have a chance at winning all the rest of their games and contending for the national title.

"Yeah, we're anxious for another shot at the Cotton Bowl so we can show the national media that we can win the big ballgames," Thomas said. "That loss last year to Notre Dame really hurt."

Morris said, "We can't play catchup with the Aggies like we did against Nebraska and Georgia. We've got to win. Our backs are to the wall."

Baylor has chance to take control of SWC

LEN HAYWARD

The Southwest Conference season is in full swing and guess who has the jump on everyone else?

Baylor and Southern Methodist.

The Ponies are a much improved team, but Baylor is in the drivers' seat and the Bears have a chance to be 2-0 in the league race after this weekend.

The big game is Tech against Texas A&M, but keep an eye on the Rice-Texas game because Longhorns coach John Mackovic is on the hot seat.

Southern Methodist (1-2) at Missouri (1-2)

Missouri is due for a win, but the Mustangs are on a roll after last week's win against Texas Christian in the SWC opener.

But, look for Missouri to finally break out of its shell and show it can play.

The Ponies have to get on the board first to have a chance, because they have had to come from behind in each of their first three games.

The Tigers are a high potent team hungry for a win.

Baylor has taken the lead in the conference race, and this game provides the Bears with a chance to have everybody in the conference chasing them. Scoring in the first half is a problem, but scoring at the end of the game is not.

The Cougars have new defensive coordinator, but that won't make much difference unless the Cougars can dominate the game on offense.

Baylor's defense has to play its best to give the offense a chance to work.

Oklahoma State by 13 1/2

The Horned Frogs have to regroup quickly because the Cowboys may finally be back on track.

OSU is a team that lost to Arizona State by two points, and the Cowboys are ready to get back on the winning track.

Look for the Cowboys to pick up win No. 3.

Rice (3-1, 0-0) at Texas (0-2-1, 0-0)
7 p.m. CDT
Memorial Stadium (77,809/artificial turf)
Austin
Texas by 3 1/2

The kitchen is getting hot for Mackovic. He has had trouble beating Rice the last few years, and Saturday will be no different.

The Owls are fired up and ready to go, but Texas may just pull a game out of its hat like the Longhorns nearly did against Syracuse.

This will be the best game nobody sees, but be ready because an upset is not totally out of the question for the Owls.

They learned a lot playing at Ohio State and have come back from that no worse for wear.

Texas is either going to respond by beating up on Rice, or have trouble trying to get over the loss to the No. 18 Louisville Cardinals.

Len Hayward is the sports editor for The University Daily.

Texas Tech wide receiver Lloyd Hill attempts to get control of the ball in the Red Raiders' 28-26 loss to Baylor last week in Waco. Tech will take on the Texas A&M Aggies at 11:08 a.m. Saturday at Jones Stadium. The game will be televised regionally by ABC.

Improved health key for Tech on road

by TARA HEARLIHY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Illnesses could be a problem for the Texas Tech women's volleyball team as it begins a five-match road trip tonight against Oklahoma at 7:30.

"We had eight players at practice on (Tuesday)," said coach Mike Jones. "Everyone seems to be sick."

Jones said he had a head cold adding to the four starters who are ill. Junior setter Ginger Carter said she is on antibiotics because of strep throat. Senior outside hitter Chris Fehrle-Zelaya was checked on Thursday along with sophomore outside hitter Diane Owens.

Freshman defensive specialist Courtney Thames, who has started two matches, had mono this summer and may have a relapse, Jones said.

"It has been hard because everyone is sick and tired," said senior middle blocker Erica Ruegg. "It is hard to catch up."

Tech played the Sooners on the season opener on Sept. 1 and won in five games.

In the match, Fehrle-Zelaya had 27 kills, tying her career average.

The Raiders travel to Norman, Okla., after breaking a three-match losing streak Wednesday against Rice in four games and raising their record to 8-4 overall and 1-1 in the Southwest Conference. Oklahoma has a 5-7 overall record.

"We really need this series to get our confidence up," Ruegg said. "We need to start winning and now is the best time."

Eye on the ball

SHARON M. STEINMAN: THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Texas Tech defensive specialist Courtney Thames serves a ball during the Red Raiders' 3-1 win over Rice Wednesday in the Student Recreation Center.

Ruegg led the Raiders with 11 kills and a .360 hitting percentage against Rice. She is seventh in the nation in the career blocks category and is only two kills away from becoming the eighth Red Raider to have 800 kills.

Oklahoma is led by Gretchen Anderson with 175 kills this season and a .313 hitting average. Anderson had 17 kills against the Raiders. Following Anderson is Gloria Holcomb with 151 kills this season. She had 16 kills in the match against the Raiders.

After Oklahoma, Tech travels to Denton for a match at the University of North Texas at 4 p.m. on Saturday.

"I cannot worry about North Texas until we are ready to play them," coach Jones said. "We have to take it one match at a time and only focus on one team."

The Lady Eagles have a 4-12 record and are led by senior outside hitter Dee Dee Carlock.

Carlock owns a UNT career kill record of 717, but broke a finger on her hitting hand in a match against Mississippi and is questionable for the rest of the season.

Men netters try to improve at Colorado tourney

by JAMES DAVID
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech men's tennis team will take the road again this weekend to compete at the Colorado Invitational in Boulder, Colo.

Tech head coach Tim Siegel said he is looking forward to some good competition this week, as the field in Colorado is the strongest the Raiders will likely face this year.

"Notre Dame, New Mexico and Colorado are among the best teams in the country," Siegel said.

The tournament will consist of a four-flighted format, meaning that the top four players on each team will play their respective opposites.

At this point in the season, Siegel said he is looking for that ungradable ingredient—desire.

"What I'm trying to find are players with heart and desire," Siegel said.

"We have a lot of individual talent on the team, but I want players that will work hard in practice and do whatever it takes to win," he said.

Siegel said the team played well last weekend at Texas A&M, but needs to keep improving each week.

"These fall tournaments are really tuneups for the spring Southwest Conference season," he said.

"With the exception of the Rolex Invitational at Fort Worth on Oct. 22-25, none of these fall tournaments count toward the standings."

The traveling squad this week consists of Juan Gutierrez, Klint Graf, Rogelio Guerrero, Erick Guzman, Tal Roma, Gerard Orriols, Jason White and Robert Barry.

The Texas Tech woman's tennis team is off this weekend, as they prepare for the Tech Quadrangular on Oct. 8-9.

Other sports happenings around Southwest Conference

DALLAS (AP) — The weekly round-up of Southwest Conference sports outside the football and men's basketball realms.

BAYLOR — Coach Gene Shields is gearing up the Bears' men's golf team to host the 1994 SWC Championships with a tough fall schedule. Senior Kory Bowman of Nevada, Mo., paced the Bears last season with a 72.3 shots per round quota while finishing second in the Crown Colony (Texas) Invitational. Rockwall's Jason Hill is a splendid senior who must be replaced.

HOUSTON — Winning its 350th team crown in school history, the UH men's golf crew captured the Kiawah Island (S.C.) Intercollegiate last weekend against a solid intersectional field.

Junior Anders Hansen of Runebakken, Denmark, paced the Cougars' effort with a 5-under-par 211 on the par-72 layout while senior Chris Borgen of Eagan, Minn., has had a good autumn.

RICE — There is a one-month countdown proceeding for the Owls' swimming teams to make preparations for the SWC Relays, hosted by the University of Houston.

Junior Erika Bowlin of Arlington is an experienced freestyler while senior Carla Kneipp of Warren, N.J., has a chance to gain high placement in the sprint freestyle events for coach Kris Wingenroth's units.

SMU — Hosting one of the nation's most prestigious fall tournaments, the SMU men's team under new coach Hank Haney has 18 of the nation's Top 25 squads on hand Friday through Sunday for the SMU Invitational at Stonebridge Ranch, the 1994 NCAA Championships site, in McKinney.

Senior Christian Chernock of Orange, Conn., carries the Mustangs' hopes.

TEXAS — Longhorns' 1993 College Baseball Player of the Year (Dick Howser Award, Collegiate Baseball magazine and Baseball America surveys) Brooks Kieschnick of Corpus Christi joins Texas A&M's Jeff Granger of Orangefield as two of the nine finalists for the United States Baseball Federation's Amateur Player of the Year Golden Spikes Award. The winner will be named at an Oct. 27 banquet at New York's Marriott Marquis Hotel.

TEXAS A&M — Now one win away from equalling the 1992 full-season victory total, Texas A&M's 14-3 volleyball team continues to surge.

The Lady Aggies are 2-1 in SWC activity to stay one-half game behind first-place Texas in team standings.

Lady Aggie Sheila Morgan of Houston leads the SWC in hitting percentage at .343 and in kills with 320 for a 5.42 average.

TCU — The baseball Horned Frogs have fall workouts underway in anticipation of a Feb. 5 opener at Texas-Arlington to begin the 1994 pathway.

Coach Lane Brown looks to a youthful but exuberant lineup which includes senior pitcher Reid Ryan (6-4) of Alvin, first baseman Adam Robson (.383, fourth in SWC) of Tempe, Ariz., and Laredo's Beto Garza-Gongora.

TEXAS TECH — Coach Liz Parke brings her Lady Red Raiders' cross-country team into the 1993 SWC Championships' fray with some additional numbers in the distance category.

Soph Kimberly Young of Garland joins Dallas' Vicki Laursen and Luisa Tam of Ruidoso, N.M., as young hopefuls for Tech, which finished sixth at the 1992 SWC meet in Clear Lake.

Veteran quarterback helps Saints' 4-0 start

(AP) — All the geniuses who are supposed to know what's happening around the NFL wrote off the New Orleans Saints.

No quarterback (Wade Wilson?), no Pat Swilling, no chance to catch the San Francisco 49ers in the NFC West.

A quarter of the way through, the Saints are the only 4-0 team in the league; the 49ers are 2-2 after losing 16-13 in New Orleans last Sunday, just the third time in the last dozen games they've lost to the team that's been their most consistent pursuer for the last half-dozen years.

"Let's not jump to too many conclusions," says Wilson, who has less athletic ability but more stability than Hebert. "We've only played a quarter of the season."

Still, the big difference in this year's Saints may be Wilson.

It's unlikely they would have beaten the 49ers without him.

"He gives you a certain confidence at quarterback," Mora says. "You ask him to do something and he executes it."

What he was asked to do last weekend was beat San Francisco, something Hebert should have done twice last year.

When Hebert didn't, San Francisco won the NFC West at 14-2; New Orleans was second at 12-4.

Friday at 12 noon for Thursday's notice

Moment's Notice is a service of the Student Association for student and university organizations. Publication of announcements is subject to the judgement of the Student Association staff and availability of space. Anyone who wants to place an announcement should come to the SA office on the second floor of the University Center and fill out a separate form for each Tuesday and Thursday the notice is to appear. ALL QUESTIONS SHOULD BE DIRECTED TO THE STUDENT ASSOCIATION OFFICE AT 742-3631. The deadlines are as follows: Wednesday at noon to be printed on Tuesday and Friday at noon to be printed on Thursday.

Cowboys' Williams looking forward to challenge against White

IRVING (AP) — Erik Williams is on his way to becoming the next dominant lineman in the NFL. This doesn't come from the Dallas Cowboys public relations department. It comes from Reggie White.

Williams, a second-year tackle out of Central (Ohio) State, takes on All-Pro White again Sunday when the Green Bay Packers come to Texas Stadium in a clash of 1-2 teams off to a stumbling start.

White, picked up as a free agent by the Packers, said Williams "impressed me. I think Williams and Willie Roaf of New Orleans are the two best young offensive linemen in the league."

Williams has a nasty streak that White admires.

"I really like to grind a guy up," said Williams. "I like to play the game aggressively. That's how I feel it should be played."

Williams grew up on the Philadelphia streets and alleys and White was his idol.

"He was such a great competitor that I really admired him," Williams said.

White returns the compliment.

"I may have underestimated him last year," White said. "He was very patient and took advantage of some of my mistakes. I can remember a long run by Emmitt Smith where I made the wrong move and Williams blocked me.

"He's tough and comes off the ball well. Oh yeah, I'd say he's nasty."

White said: "I played decent against him but not as good as I could have."

White and his defensive teammates face a challenge this week because Smith, returns as a full-time starter after landing a $13.6 million for four seasons.

"If Emmitt breaks loose they win so we've got to stop him," White said. "We have some things we're going to do but I can't tell secrets."

Cross country teams ready for meet

The Texas Tech cross country teams hit the trail again this weekend in the Kachina Classic Saturday at Las Cruces, N.M.

The men finished fifth in last week's meet at Southern Methodist, while the women finished sixth overall.

Mandy Malouf, lead finisher for the women in last week's meet, suffered a calf injury during Thursday's workout and will sit out the meet. Jill Williams ran for the first time this season after a heel injury and is expected to be back in the lineup next week, according to women's cross country coach Kirk Elias.

Elias said that the altitude at Las Cruces will pose a challenge for his young squad.

The men will run a 7,600-meter course with Gabe Ruiz, Ralph Ayaad, Bill Bush, Joe Perez, Ben Friedman, Dan Koontz and Alfred Hinojosa to race for the Raiders.

Freshman Quent Bearden is out this week due to asthma and is on a tentative week-to-week basis.

The women will run the 5,000-meter course with Gunilla Andersson, Tandra Brillhart, Luisa Tam, Julie Harrell, Vicki Laursen and Tian Younger.

The men and women will host the Texas Tech Invitational Oct. 9 at Mae Simmons Park.

Starting times for the collegiate division have yet to be determined.
