Americans still held...

Hostage move story conflicts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite militia leader Nabih Berri announced today that all hostages have been removed from a hijacked TWA jet and taken to an undisclosed location in Beirut, but airport officials disputed that claim.

There were believed to be more than 30 Americans still held captive for a fourth day.

Berri said the action was taken for security reasons because of what he called a "possible Israeli landing" at Beirut airport.

But one airport official, a member of Berri's Amal militia, said he personally served lunch to hostages aboard the plane early this afternoon.

"I took 40 chicken lunches. They (hostages) washed their hands and began eating. They were all there," said the official, who asked not to be identified. He spoke shortly after Berri made his announcement.

Several other airport officials, who declined to be identified, said none of the hostages left the plane after the release Sunday night of American Robert Peel Sr., who was ill and taken by ambulance to a west Beirut hospital.

The hostages are those remaining from the 145 passengers and eight crew members, mostly Americans, aboard the TWA flight 847 that was hijacked by two Arabic-speaking men Friday morning en route from Athens to Rome.

If the hostages remaining on the plane have been transferred from the aircraft, it could be that there are now two separate groups of hostages being held in Beirut. Both TWA and the White House say as many as 12 passenger had been removed from the plane in Beirut.

The hijackers' main demand to release the hostages was that Israel free more than 700 Lebanese Shiite prisoners it holds.

Berri has been involved in the negotiations for the hostages' release and his Shiite Amal militia is the strongest armed force at Beirut airport.

In Washington, a State Department official said the United States has "no reason to doubt" Berri's statement.

Berri, who is also justice minister in the government, announced the hostage transfer at a Beirut news conference at his sandbagged house in mostly Moslem west Beirut. He spoke in both English and Arabic and would not disclose the secret hideout of the hostages except to indicate it was in west Beirut.

"I have personally ordered their evacuation ... because we were afraid of an operation or a battle in which all of them would have been killed," the Shiite leader said.

Suspect 'no-show' for trial

Prospective jurors appearing in 132nd District Court Monday morning were dismissed before noon and asked to return Wednesday.

Jury selection was to begin at 9 a.m. for the trial of Charles Leigh Berkley — charged with use of a stolen credit card.

As of 10:30 a.m., however, the defendant had not appeared in court, prompting District Judge Gene Dulaney to order his bond forfeited and to issue a warrant for his arrest.

Berkley then reportedly called the District Attorney's office shortly before 11 a.m. and told court officers that his car had broken down in Anson and he would shortly be on his way into Snyder.

Water supply 'normal'

In response to water conservation measures asked by city officials during the weekend, Snyder residents held back their water use to approximately 3 million gallons per day Saturday and Sunday, allowing diminished storage facilities to be replenished.

A normal use period for this time of year would exceed 4 million gallons, city officials note.

As of 10 a.m. Monday, some 10 million gallons of water had been run through the water treatment plant since Saturday shortly before dawn. Approximately 4 million gallons of this was directed toward the overhead and underground storage facilities here.

These supplies were lowered substantially after the city's main water supply from Lake J.B. Thomas was shut down for some 28 hours.

This was required as crews worked to connect a new 500 ft. section of 21-inch main line, work completed around midnight Friday.

At this point, it was estimated the city had only approximately 25 percent of its above ground tower storage remaining. The underground storage facilities had been depleted earlier Friday.

To allow the water treatment plant to "catchup," city officials asked that such "non essential" water uses as watering lawns, gardens and washing cars be curtailed through the weekend.

"We appreciate the cooperation we received from those people who held up their water use," said City Engineer Rick Conner Monday.

He said the water storage facilities here now appeared to be again "peaked out" and that a normal water-use schedule could be resumed.

Citizens help needed for 'skeeters

City staffers involved in mosquito control say local residents are the key to a successful control program.

Pete Rasco, who operates the city insect control rig, said the city will continue a full schedule of spraying known breeding places, but that the program's success depends on property owners.

Rasco, along with Evan Millhollon, said breeding places are normally in weeds, old cars, accumulated junk to include discarded cans and tires.

Rasco said anything that holds water will help increase the mosquito population. The workers said they also respond to in-

S&L protest hearing in Austin Tuesday

Testimony will be received in Austin Tuesday related to the application to open a branch office in Snyder submitted by First Western Savings and Loan of Colorado City.

The hearing was scheduled June 3 after protests to the application were voiced by three local financial institutions. Protesting the application were Snyder National Bank, Snyder Savings and Loan and West Texas State Bank.

With protests filed, officials with the Texas Savings and Loan Department in Austin scheduled Tuesday's hearing to allow comments from both sides.

The hearing is to begin at 9 a.m. The hearing officer is Luke Robinson.

Testimony is expected from representatives of First Western as well as the two local banks and the one savings and loan.

Based upon information presented at the session, the hearing officer will prepare a report to be submitted to Savings and Loan Commissioner Linton Bawman III. Bawman has final jurisdiction at the state level regarding the application.

First Western — which previously operated as Colorado City Savings and Loan — filed the application April 22.

The local address for the proposed branch is 4231 College.

Probated sentences follow guilty pleas

Three defendants were granted probated prison terms after entering guilty pleas in 132nd District Court Friday afternoon.

Gary Scott Mathews, 19, of Stamford was placed on felony probation for 10 years after he pleaded guilty to a single count of delivery of marijuana. The offense was alleged to have occurred Feb. 25.

Mathews was among 11 suspects originally arrested in March at the conclusion of a two-month undercover investigation of drug trafficking in Scurry County directed by the Scurry County sheriff's office.

A second charge against Mathews — alleging the same offense on a different date — was dismissed in light of his plea Friday.

Drawing a six-year probated term in exchange for a guilty plea was James Edward Moore. He entered a plea to a charge of theft in an amount greater than $750 and less than $20,000.

He was indicted on that charge by the September session of the Scurry County Grand Jury for using a worthless check to pay off a bank note at the West Texas State Bank.

Magazine article features local glider enthusiast

Titled "On The Wings of The Wind," its author — Stephen Harrigan — also has a Snyder connection. He is the son-in-law of Bill and Margie Line. Harrigan is a senior editor at Texas Monthly.

According to Shaw, the interview took place during the middle of August, 1984--a time when she was again planning to try for a new world's distance record for women.

To do that she would have to get from Snyder to Thedford, Neb., a distance of 640 miles.

Harrigan talked with Shaw several times on the telephone during a six-week period before he came to Snyder for the interview. Although not consecutive, it took up two days and part of a

In Brief

Shuttle off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Shuttle Discovery rocketed into orbit today with five American astronauts, a French test pilot and a Saudi Arabian prince for a mission that will include a "Star Wars" laser test and a hunt for a "black hole" in space.

The international flight, 18th for the shuttle, began spectacularly as the 100-ton space plane blasted off its launch pad at 7:33 a.m. EDT and darted skyward over the Atlantic Ocean, spewing a 700-foot tail of fire and a torrent of smoke from its rocket boosters.

Nine minutes after liftoff, the Mission Control Center in Houston reported Discovery was in an orbit more than 200 miles above the globe.

The crew, commanded by astronaut Dan Brandenstein, includes Saudi Prince Sultan Salman Al-Saud, a nephew of King Fahd, and Patrick Baudry, a French military pilot. The others are pilot John Creighton and mission specialists Shannon Lucid, John Fabian and Steve Nagel.

Pickup ok'd

Scurry County commissioners will accept bids for a ½ ton pickup and a pneumatic roller for Pct. 3 next July 8.

The action was part of the regular weekly meeting Monday of the court.

Commissioners also met with a representative of Action Telecommunications Co. of Abilene, Linda Hopkins. She advised the court of a new long distance service offered here by her company.

In addition, Jim Huffman, a representative of a telephone equipment company, received permission from the court to examine existing phone equipment at the courthouse and to offer bids to replace this system.

Tutu urges blacks to unite

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Bishop Desmond Tutu, speaking at the commemoration of a 1976 black uprising, urged blacks to halt their in-fighting and unite against white minority rule.

After the Sunday service in the black township of Soweto, police fired tear gas and rubber bullets to disperse black protesters. A similar clash occurred in New Brighton, a black township near Port Elizabeth.

Tutu, an Anglican biship, has been involved in thus far futile efforts to make peace between feuding black factions and focus the current wave of unrest against apartheid, the legal system of racial segregation.

Five million whites deny the vote to more than 22 million blacks in South Africa. More than 370 people, all but two blacks, have been killed in the latest wave of anti-apartheid rioting, which began in August.

Several speakers at Sunday's services condemned South Africa's commando raid into Botswana on Friday in which 12 people were killed. The government said the raid was on guerrilla targets.

Soweto activist Dr. Nthato Motlana called on Western governments to follow the lead of the United States and recall their ambassadors to South Africa in protest.

One police officer was slightly hurt by a rock and four police vehicles were damaged in a five-minute clash outside Regina Mundi Roman Catholic Church in the vast black township of Soweto, where nationwide riots began on June 16, 1976. Nearly 600 people were killed in the year-long violence that followed.

Most of the 5,000 to 6,000 mourners left the Soweto church peacefully after a memorial service. But about 1,000 blacks, mostly youths, began to march toward several armored vehicles.

Police ordered the crowd to disperse, then fired rubber bullets and tear gas canisters toward the marchers as some in the crowd threw rocks.

Police also tear-gassed rock-throwing black youths leaving a commemoration service in New Brighton, a black township near Port Elizabeth in the riot-torn eastern Cape Province, witnesses said. Witnesses and police said they knew of no injuries.

In Daveyton township east of Johannesburg, a crowd of blacks attacked the home of Mayor Tom Boya with rocks and gasoline bombs, and a guard posted outside shot dead one youth in the group, a police spokesman said.

In Cape Town, about 2,000 people attended services to pray for the downfall of the government. The services were peaceful, but police said a grenade was thrown at the home of a black community councilor near Cape Town. The councilor escaped harm, but police wounded and apprehended one of the alleged assailants, a 22-year-old black man, a spokesman said.

City Press, a Johannesburg Sunday paper for blacks, said its research showed only five of the 12 victims of the Botswana raid had links to the African National Congress, the main anti-apartheid guerrilla movement. The paper said none of the victims was involved in armed sabotage.

"Mere words cannot describe our people's anger, horror and disgust," City Press editor Percy Qoboza said in a front-page editorial.

Mandatory seat belt law is now signed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans need to "buckle up" to save lives and money, Gov. Mark White said Sunday in signing the new seat belt law.

"The bottom line for me is whether this legislation will promote the health and safety of the people of Texas and do so in a reasonable constitutional manner. And that is exactly what it does," White said.

The measure approved by the recent legislature provides a fine of $25 to $50 for not wearing seat belts while in the front seat of a moving car and most pickups.

The law is effective Sept. 1 but no fines will be levied until Dec. 1.

"There are strong arguments to be made on both sides," White said in a message released with the proclamation. "I am reluctant to sign any legislation that would infringe on individual freedom.

"That reluctance, however, dissipates when the legislation serves the greater purpose of the public safety of all Texans."

He said it was estimated the law would save 1,071 lives and forestall 28,800 injuries each year in the state.

White noted that more than 30 countries, including all of Western Europe, Australia and Canada, have seat belt laws. Texas is the 13th state to enact such legislation.

"With this law we protect from injury and fatality those who heretofore have chosen not to wear seat belts, and also we protect the public at large from the costs associated with automobile-related accidents," White said. "All the citizens of Texas pay when someone is killed or injured in an automobile accident."

Pickup trucks with a carrying capacity of 1,500 pounds or less are included in the law. Efforts were made in both the House and Senate to add a "Bubba" amendment to include all pickup trucks but the amendments were soundly defeated.

The larger pickups were exempted, legislators argued, because those are "working pickups" with the passengers in and out of them a lot.

The Legislature's interest in seat belts was sparked by a U.S. Department of Transportation decision to require air bags in all new vehicles in 1989 if states including two-thirds of the nation's population fail to enact mandatory seat belt laws.

Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas, claimed the bill was pushed in Texas "so the auto manufacturers don't have to put in air bags."

Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, said the only intent of his bill was to save lives. Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, was the Senate sponsor.

The measure approved by the Legislature does not meet the current federal requirements for mandatory seat belt laws, but Messer said the federal requirements could change.

Shuttle carries payload

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — When the space shuttle Discovery lifts off Monday, it will be carrying a payload of dreams come true for some El Paso public school students.

Snug in the shuttle's belly will be a package of experiments they conceived, designed and built.

"These children have all worked very hard for many years and now it's all coming true," said El Paso businessman Richard Azar. "We call 'em blue feathers, things you aspire to, dream about — and if you work hard, they'll eventually come by."

In 1977, Azar reserved three experiment cannisters on NASA's Get-Away Special, a program that allows civilians to fly shuttle experiments at reduced costs. Azar wanted to help stimulate scientific inquiry among young people in El Paso.

"It was just too great a deal to pass by," he said. "If you bought space on the shuttle today, it would be another four or five years before you could launch an experiment."

Drug allergies can be lethal

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I am allergic to penicillin and cannot take it by mouth — only intravenously. What medicines can I take in place of penicillin that will be safe and effective?

DEAR READER — If you were allergic to any drug — including penicillin — you would not be able to take it either orally or intravenously. Many people tend to confuse an allergy with side effects. Penicillin, for example, may produce diarrhea and vaginal infection, but these conditions are non-allergic consequences of taking the drug.

A drug allergy means you cannot tolerate the medicine in any form without risking an untoward reaction that may be life threatening.

For almost all medications, there is an alternative. In the case of penicillin, an antibiotic called erythromycin is a good substitute. Allergists have devised skin tests that, in most cases, can determine if a person is overly sensitive to a drug. You might consider having these tests performed to confirm or reject your assumption of penicillin allergy.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Years ago, three score and 10 years was considered a normal life span. Is it true that because of good doctors and modern medicines, individuals can (with proper rest, moderate exercise and a nutritious diet) expect to live to be 100 or more?

DEAR READER — Yes — if people take care of themselves, future medical advances probably will enable the elderly to live even longer.

However, the other side of the coin is important. Society hasn't yet caught up with this ability to live longer. As a culture, we do not really know what to do with the burgeoning legions of retired elderly. In addition, medical science is making painfully slow headway in understanding and treating diseases of the oldtimers.

Senility, a major cause of disability in the elderly, has become almost a public health problem. In this century, living longer is not equated with living better, so I am not surprised when older patients tell me they don't want to live to 100.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it safe for a diabetic to go to the beach in the summertime and stay out in the sun without fear of having an insulin reaction? (I take 45 units of NPH 100 insulin every morning at 8:30.)

DEAR READER — Sunbathing is not detrimental to diabetics. Insulin allows our bodies to use sugar for metabolism. Therefore, insulin-and-sugar imbalances reflect an inner equilibrium rather than an effect of sunshine. If you become more or less active in summer — or tend to vary your diet according to season — you will have to modify your insulin dose. If you are a real sun worshipper, ask your doctor for specific recommendations regarding your chosen summer activities.

Dear Abby

Chicken-and-Egg Query Hatches a Controversy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1985 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but you seem to have one. The answer you gave to "I Am Serious," who asked, "Which came first, the chicken or the egg?" was ridiculous!

Didn't you learn anything in school? I knew the answer to that 50 years ago while I was still in grade school.

The facts are: The chicken is a bird, and all birds evolved from the reptile family approximately 100 million years ago. Reptiles had been laying eggs for millions of years before that time, and the chicken evolved from the reptiles.

Of course, the egg you laid in your column when you cited the Bible as your source of information is another matter. Next time you want an answer to a scientific question, consult The Book of Knowledge. Darwin was right. The book you referred to has no answers, only questions.

C.G., McPHERSON, KAN.

DEAR C.G.: Read on for more letters on the chicken-and-the-egg subject:

DEAR ABBY: You cited Genesis 1:20 to support the theory that the chicken came before the egg. Wrong!

Abby, birds did not show up until about 150 million years ago. Eggs have been used as a form of reproduction for a much longer period—even counting the eggs with shells hard enough to survive out of water. The first eggs were laid by reptiles more than 100 million years before the first bird existed.

I'm reminded of the "news" last year, when the Vatican finally decided that Galileo was right about the Earth revolving around the sun. It seems hard to believe that once upon a time people actually thought that the faith would be weakened if anyone thought the Earth was not the center of the universe.

It may take another 300 years before we admit that the Earth is 4 billion years old—not 6,000 years.

A SECULAR HUMANIST
IN N.J.

DEAR ABBY: "I Am Serious" wanted an intelligent answer to which came first, the chicken or the egg. Of course the fundamentalists will not accept the facts, which are as follows:

The reptile evolved from the egg of a fish. The bird evolved from the egg of a reptile. And with man's help, the chicken evolved from the egg of a bird.

The correct answer is: The egg preceded the chicken by several hundred million years.

2 B EGGZACT

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Reliance on Scriptures as authority for facts is not always valid. Since all forms of life begin as a seed or an egg (even us), it's obvious that the egg had to be the predecessor of what evolved into the chicken.

D.B., LAHAINA, HAWAII

DEAR D.B.: I did. And most of it was fowl. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The theory of evolution is logical. Originally, all life came from the ocean. Millions of years later it made its way to the land, then some reptilian forms returned to the sea and became air-breathing mammals. Other reptiles evolved into birds and learned to fly. Most fish lay eggs. The dinosaurs, which were reptiles that lived millions of years ago, laid eggs. We even have fossil evidence (their bones and petrified eggs).

Abby, it's silly to say "the theory of evolution." Evolution is not a theory; it's a proven fact.

Death penalty push may end up in court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's desire to find a way to execute people who pass U.S. military secrets to foreign governments in peacetime will take him to Congress, and then perhaps into court.

Recently asked what should be done in the Walker spy case in which four men with ties to the Navy are accused of passing military secrets to the Soviet Union, Weinberger said they should receive the death penalty if convicted.

"When asked what I thought should be done if the people were guilty, I said I thought they should be shot, though I suppose hanging is the preferred method," Weinberger told reporters.

The four men — John A. Walker Jr., Michael Walker, Arthur Walker and Jerry A. Whitworth — will be prosecuted by the Justice Department under civilian law.

Federal law — in section 794 of Title 18 of the United States Code — authorizes capital punishment for "gathering or delivering defense information to aid (a) foreign government." But the statute is widely considered unconstitutional.

Supporters of the death penalty for espionage concede that the law, last amended in 1954, does not include the procedural safeguards mandated for capital punishment laws by the Supreme Court in 1974 and 1976.

For military personnel convicted of spying, experts say the Uniform Code of Military Justice and court martial regulations do not authorize the death penalty for peacetime espionage.

Weinberger will seek to have the military code amended to allow executions of military personnel in peacetime — and only Congress has such authority.

Congress already is being asked to change civilian law to authorize the death penalty for people convicted of selling classified secrets.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, last week introduced a bill to authorize nationally televised public hangings in cases in which such secrets are sold for money.

If efforts by Weinberger and Stevens are successful in changing the law, it could not be applied retroactively to the alleged Walker spy ring. And if the military or Justice Department ever attempt to enforce the proposed laws, court fights over the laws' constitutionality seem a certainty.

In a series of death penalty rulings, the Supreme Court to date has refused to allow executions for any crime other than the intentional taking of a human life.

Some have interpreted the rulings to mean that imposition of the death penalty for anything less than the taking of a human life is impermissibly cruel and unusual punishment.

Two choices: right and wrong

What at first glance looks like a choice of finesses can be seen, upon deeper consideration, as no choice at all. Why? Because taking a specific finesse, in this instance the ruffing finesse in diamonds, gives the declarer an extra chance at his contract even though the finesse loses. Furthermore, in the worst case, the proper line brings home the contract if either of two key cards is favorably located.

South won the heart ace. If he takes an immediate finesse in diamonds or clubs and it loses, the defenders would immediately take the setting heart trick. To avoid that negative result, declarer played the diamond ace and then the jack. When East followed low, South ditched his small heart. West won the diamond king and returned a heart. Declarer ruffed and played ace and king of spades. That drew the trumps, and now came the extra frosting on the cake. Before taking the club finesse, he could first see if the diamond ten would fall under the queen. When that did happen, he got rid of all his club losers on the queen, eight, and lowly four of diamonds.

Summer nails

Even in summer, fingernails can peel, split and break off, especially if you swim a lot in chlorinated pools or salty sea water.

To prevent problems, get white iodine cream at your drug store, and rub a small amount into nails and cuticles after every swim.

Tractor safety is a serious matter, for violation of some basic operating rules could mean injury or even death.

All farm workers should be instructed in tractor safety when they first begin work and at least annually thereafter.

These guidelines for tractor safety are most helpful:

—Securely fasten seatbelts if the tractor has a roll-over protective structure.

—Reduce speed when turning and crossing slopes and on rough, slippery or muddy surfaces.

—Stay off slopes too steep for safe operation

—Allow no extra riders.

—Operate the tractor smoothly -- no jerky turns, starts or stops.

—Hitch equipment only to the drawbar and hitch point recommended by the tractor manufacturer.

—When the tractor is stopped, set brakes securely and use the park lock if available.

With farm activity in full swing across Texas, now is a good time for farm workers to be instructed in basic tractor safety.

North 'survives' U.S. Open

North, who has spent a lifetime of hard times on the PGA Tour since winning the 1978 U.S. Open, was scuffling along Sunday, paired with T.C. Chen of Taiwan and hoping that something, anything, might happen.

On the par-four fifth hole, it did - and it was North's ticket to his first victory since Cherry Hills in Denver seven years ago.

North had a final-round 74 over the par-70 South Course at Oakland Hills Country Club. It gave him a four-round 279, the only sub-par score over what was supposed to be a Monster but what rain had turned into a pussycat for the first three days.

Chen had domesticated the course in astonishing fashion on the first day with a double-eagle, the first in the U.S. Open's 85 years, on No. 2. It gave him a lead he would hold for the first three rounds.

On Sunday, The Monster ate him alive in one equally electrifying instant.

Suddenly North, who had trailed by four strokes, was tied atop the leader board.

From then to the end, North, Chen, Canadian Dave Barr, South African Denis Watson and Payne Stewart vied for the lead.

"T.C. opened the door for a lot of us at that point," North said. "It was a freaky thing that happens. We've all done it too many times."

T.C. bogeyed the next three holes to lose seven strokes to par in just four holes. But, almost as remarkably, he recovered his cool and regained a share of the lead.

With four holes to go, though, mt belonged only to North and Barr - and when the Canadian bogeyed No. 17 with a poor second shot out of the left rough, North was alone in the lead.

"I can't complain. I just played bad, terrible golf," said Chen, who appeared outwardly unflappable whether things were going swimmingly or sinkingly.

BOZEMAN, Mont. – Western Texas College began its stint at the College National Finals Rodeo with bareback competition this morning.

Bliss Mayhan got Western off to a good start. He is winning the first-go of the bronc riding with a 72 and is tied for second place in the bareback with a 70.

Tony Hecksher scored a 62 in the bareback which is not expected to finish high in the first-go, but leaves him a chance to reach the finals if he can make a good ride on his second-go.

In some disappointing news, Snyder's Van Hale took a no-score when he bucked off in the saddle bronc riding.

The only other result from area cowboys was a 64 in the bareback by Tarleton's Chris Guay.

The week-long rodeo actually got underway at 6 a.m. (7 CDT) with 60 barrel racers.

Others for WTC in today's slack performance were to be Mayhan and Hale in the bulls, Gary Rowe, Glenn Jordan and Donnie Yorks in the steer wrestl-..ng, and Rowe and Yorks in the calf roping.

Eastern Europe ups shipments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eastern Europe, its granaries filled by bumper harvests the last three years, is stepping up shipments of food to the Soviet Union, a trend that probably will continue for some time, an Agriculture Department report says.

Meanwhile, Eastern Europe continues to shave its imports of U.S. commodities, probably cutting back to around $600 million in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1 from $741 million in 1983-84.

One reason for the cutbacks in U.S. commodities has been the recent large grain crops in Eastern Europe. The harvest was a record of 114 million metric tons last year, up 13 percent from 1983. And that was the third year in a row of harvests in excess of 100 million tons.

Eastern Europe includes Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Christian J. Foster of the department's Economic Research Service says "the remainder of the 1980s will likely see increasing East European agricultural exports" to the Soviet Union. That will put additional economic pressure on Moscow's allies, Foster said.

The analysis, included in one of the agency's regional reports, said the pressure on Eastern Europe stems from "the Soviet Union's inability to reach self-sufficiency and its desire to raise per capita food consumption" among its people.

"Another factor is that terms of trade between the two areas have changed dramatically in favor of the Soviet Union in recent years," the report said. "Eastern Europe's sales to the Soviet Union have had to be increased to help offset the large accumulated trade deficits, incurred in part because of the deterioration in terms of trade.

On the other hand, the benefits to the Eastern Europeans from selling commodities to the Soviet Union lie in "the ability to sell products otherwise unmarketable in the West," the report said. But sales to the Soviets also reduce hard currency earnings, tend to limit Eastern Europe's imports of needed goods and impair repayment of debts.

At the heart of the problem is the Soviet Union's inability to match agricultural production with long-range goals of food self-sufficiency. It is this gap which has led to huge imports of grain from the United States and other countries since the early 1970s.

"Meeting the long-range goal of food self-sufficiency is impeded by a growing population and increased disposable incomes, which are raising consumer demands and expectations for more and better quality food, such as meat, vegetables and fruit," the report said.

Weekend theft reports involve 2 vehicles here

Police are investigating two misdemeanor theft complaints and a single criminal mischief report filed over the weekend.

Patricia Dennis of 208 23rd St. called police at 10:43 p.m. Saturday to file the first theft report.

She told investigators that two vehicles parked at her residence had apparently been entered sometime earlier in the evening.

L.D. Harber of 600 N Ave. U filed the second theft complaint at 8:57 p.m. Sunday.

A bicycle is thought to have been stolen from outside that residence sometime earlier in the weekend.

Maria Botello of the 3-D Motel on 25th St. filed a criminal mischief report at 1:55 a.m. Monday.

She told police that someone had slashed two tires on her 1974 Pontiac while it was parked at the motel earlier in the day.

In other action, officers answered a call to a disturbance in the 2700 Block of Ave. Q 11:43 p.m. Sunday and arrested four local men.

All four were charged with public intoxication while three were additionally charged with misdemeanor assault.

Four other suspects were jailed for public intoxication over the weekend with one subject charged with being intoxicated on a premises licensed to sell alcohol.

WESTERN TEXAS College will be accepting bids to purchase a hydraulic lift until 10 a.m. on July 2, 1985. Further information concerning this bid may be obtained by contacting the Business Office at Western Texas College. Telephone 573-8511, ext. 306.

Governor vetoes 50 bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White, in stamping 'veto' on about 50 bills, has voided two gambling measures passed by the Legislature because he said they would be bad public policy.

One of the measures vetoed Sunday by the governor would allow the manufacture of slot machines and other gambling machines in Texas, provided they would be offered for sale outside the state.

White said such legislation, by Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas, "would be bad public policy in our state where the use of such machines is illegal."

A second measure, by Rep. Brad Messer, D-Belton, would have changed the legal definition of "bet" when it was an offer of merchandise worth more than $25 made by the operator of a "bona fide carnival contest."

"This bill is vague and would seriously hamper the efforts of law enforcement officials to prosecute those persons who run dishonest, weighted or other illegal gambling operations," said White.

White also vetoed a bill that would have increased the state's responsibility to help defend state employees involved in court fights concerning their jobs.

The measure, by Rep. Terral Smith, R-Austin, would have required the state to pay judgments unless a court found that the employee acted with malice.

"This would virtually indemnify nearly all acts or omissions of an employee, even those committed in bad faith, and would broaden the accepted criteria for determining the state's liability," White said.

The governor said he liked the general purpose of the bill but said "it needs to be more carefully restricted in coverage to provide financial assistance to only those state employees who have been wrongly or falsely accused of crimes in conjunction with their official duties."

Other bills vetoed by White would have:

— Permitted private club owners and various organizations to sell alcoholic beverages in public areas of dry counties. "There is no provision for a local option vote by the citizens affected by this measure to express their opposition or support for further acessibility of intoxicating liquor in their communities," White said.

— Provided an emergency appropriation to pay the National Guard Armory Board's utilities for June through August of this year. The Senate failed to take a record vote on the bill, making its effective date Aug. 26, which is too late. Although the governor vetoed the bill, he granted the Armory Board $156,000 from his emergency funds to pay utilities.

— Created the post of mental health administrator at a significant salary increase for a probate court in Harris County. The Harris County commissioners court asked for the veto, saying it was preferential treatment for one court.

— Expanded the jurisdiction of the Williamson County Court-at-Law. The bill was opposed as unnecessary by the Williamson County commissioners court, the county judge, and the county court-at-law judge who would be affected.

— Allowed a naturalized citizen to obtain a voter's registration application without providing the court of naturalization or its location. The governor said this information is necessary to insure validity of the application.

— A bill to allow proceeds from a campus tax at a junior college branch to be used to purchase real estate and finance construction. White said this measure, originally intended to apply only to Wharton Junior College, would create another form of taxation and interfere with the policy considerations of the Select Committee on Higher Education.

— A measure to allow the judge of a probate court to appoint a surrogate judge. White said this was an unconstitutional delegation of the powers of the judiciary to an individual.

— A bill that would require the Board of Pardons and Paroles to set a tentative parole release date for inmates shortly after arriving in the state prison system. White said the bill would establish a procedure which could be interpreted to require the board to release prisoners earlier than might be prudent.

White completes survey

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White has completed his survey of the 1985 Legislature's work, signing into law a no-new-tax $37.2 billion state budget, a mandatory seat belt law, and higher tuition for state colleges.

"By living within our means and addressing our most critical human needs in this budget, we have placed ourselves in an enviable position for the future," White said Sunday.

After reviewing more than 1,000 bills passed by the 140-day regular legislative session, White vetoed approximately 50 bills and let about 100 bills become law without his signature.

The vetoes included $9.8 million in the general appropriations bill because he said the items did not represent "good public spending policy."

He said he signed the seat belt law "reluctantly" after considering whether it would infringe on individual freedoms.

White said in his approval of the budget that "we have laid paths toward the more diverse and dynamic economy which we will need as we work to become less reliant on the oil and gas industry as the central element of our economy."

The 1986-87 budget includes $26.3 billion from general revenue, a 12.5 percent increase over the current general revenue appropriation.

Public school and highway financing increased as decreed by the 1984 special session.

The state prison system and mental health and mental retardation institutions also got extra money to comply with federal court orders. Needy children on welfare got a $4 a month raise and state employees were given a 3 percent a year pay hike, but lost two state holidays.

The appropriations bill leaves about $70 million to begin funding a package of indigent health care bills.

Sunday midnight was the deadline for White to act on bills and resolutions, or they would go into effect without his signature.

The governor's vetoes on specific items of the appropriations bill included grants from the Criminal Justice Division to the Department of Public Safety, Commission on Jail Standards, Department of Corrections, Prosecutors Council and Supreme Court.

The governor's office said Sunday that in the past the Criminal Justice Division, which is part of the governor's office, has received a lump sum to dispense to law enforcement and allied agencies. But this session, legislators specified how the money would be spent.

"The specific itemization of these funds will jeopardize several currently funded criminal justice projects, restrict the funding of new projects and severely limit Texas' ability to provide matching funds to receive federal funds available under the Federal Justice Assistance Act of 1984," he said in his veto message.

For example, one neighbor may be meticulous in keeping his weeds cut and items from around the home, but another neighbor may allow the weeds to grow—causing insect problems for both residents.

He also traveled to Hobbs, N.M. where he rode with Shaw in a two-seater glider.

Shaw said Harrigan first heard about soaring through a friend who mentioned her name as one of the best of the women involved in the sport.

"I am unbelievably pleased with the article," Shaw said. "He skillfully put together a lot of things into a beautiful story. I don't see myself in the same light, though, so it is hard for me to think that it's me in the article.

"He made me sound special even though I don't think of myself as special. I feel I'm privileged, but not special."

Since Harrigan was interested in the art of soaring, she said he timed his visit to coincide with the best soaring conditions.

Shaw said since the article has been published she has been approached by Lubbock television reporters interested in doing a piece on her.

"The article has opened doors for me," she said.

She and her husband Charles continue to soar almost daily during the summer, each taking turns on opposite days, since soaring skills must be constantly honed.

They also make frequent trips to Hobbs, N.M. for soaring adventures and recently returned from conducting a four-day soaring school there.

Jury still out on new Coke formula

By The Associated Press

Pretty well, industry watchers say, despite vocal and well-publicized complaints from consumers who are fiercely loyal to the old cola.

But sales are being spurred by curiosity, heavy promotions and price discounting and just how successful the change in formula truly is won't be known until all the hoopla dies down in several months, Coca-Cola Co. and the analysts say.

"The next three or four months certainly will be a heavy trial period. It will be a while before sales stabilize and we will be able to have definitive information on sales. We do expect to widen our share," Ron Coleman, a spokesman at Coca-Cola's headquarters in Atlanta, said Thursday.

The company said recently its shipments of Coke concentrate to bottlers was up 8 percent in May over a year earlier, and that represents nearly double the recent growth rate of Coke before the reformulation was announced in late April.

Joe Frazzano, an analyst with the investment firm of Oppenheimer & Co. in New York, said the volume increase indicates "considerable acceleration related to the new product."

Robert Wunderle, a spokesman for Supermarkets General Corp. of Woodbridge, N.J., said that in the first four weeks that new Coke was available at the company's 135 Pathmark stores, unit sales rose 28 percent over a year ago.

But Doug Reed, a spokesman for Southland Corp. in Dallas, which operates 7,300 7-Eleven stores, said late last week, "We haven't noticed a difference in the volume of soft-drink sales as a whole category in the last couple of months."

Coca-Cola said earlier this month that about half the people in the United States had tasted the new product and that 75 percent of them planned to buy it again.

Hugh Zurkuhlen, an analyst with the New York investment firm of Salomon Brothers Inc., said: "My guess is that it's not doing poorly. I don't think we're going to effectively know how it's doing until November — not in any meaningful way, anyway."

In 1984, U.S. consumers bought the equivalent of 1.05 billion 288-ounce cases of regular Coke and 700 million cases of regular Pepsi-Cola in all outlets, Zurkuhlen said.

Regular Coke represents 23 percent of all soft drink sales, while regular Pepsi accounts for about 18 percent.

Roger Enrico, president of Pepsi-Cola USA, the domestic unit of Purchase, N.Y.-based PepsiCo Inc., said earlier this month: "Our actual case volume was up 14 percent in May compared with the previous May. That's the largest one-month gain in the 87-year history of our company."

In the final analysis, however, the Coke reformulation will not have a great deal of impact, Zurkuhlen predicted.

"I think it's going to turn out to be a non-event," he said.

But changing the Coke formula has prompted 1,500 calls a day to Coca-Cola.

"The majority of them are negative," Coca-Cola's Coleman said. "Oh sure, we're concerned about it."

Child abuse cases

DALLAS (AP) — Nearly 600 child abuse cases in Rusk and Cherokee counties may have been mishandled or overlooked, state officials said.

"Obviously, the ball got dropped somewhere. It's mind-boggling when you start talking about 600 of anything," said Ron Black, the region's administrator for the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The department has sent an emergency task force to the two Northeast Texas counties to look into the situation, officials said.

The problems were discovered in February when two case analysts from region headquarters began to review files to prepare for a state inspection, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

"I don't know how it could have happened," said Jim Marquart, assistant commissioner of children's protective services. "It's a major concern of the state."

Although records from both counties show they have had 752 reports of child abuse since 1982, Black said preliminary findings indicate that as many as 600 cases were not investigated or were not properly documented.

Following annoucement of the state's investigation, Black said three of the six child abuse caseworkers and the supervisor responsible for investigating child abuse in the two counties have resigned.

Projected prices reduced in 1990s

HOUSTON (AP) — The most recent survey by the Society of Petroleum Evaluation Engineers reflects a much more bearish mood in the oil and gas industry.

The projected price of oil in the next decade has dropped by 35 percent while natural gas is expected to be 53 percent less costly than predicted only three years ago, according to the survey.

Current expectations are that 10 years from now a barrel of oil will cost $38.56 and natural gas will be priced at $4.26 per thousand cubic feet.

The society's 1982 survey showed that the petroleum industry anticipated that by 1992 oil would be $58.87 a barrel and natural gas would cost $8.98 per thousand cubic feet.

This year the group surveyed 126 oil and gas producers, bankers, financial advisers and consulting engineers to determine the outlook for the movement of petroleum prices over the next 10 years, said Dr. L.K. Nemeth, a society member and chairman of J.R. Butler and Co., a Houston-based oil and gas consulting company.

"We began the survey to try to get some consensus on pricing and the future direction of pricing," Nemeth said. "Reservoir engineers in particular were looking for some common ground at a time when the whole pricing scheme was completely out of whack."

He said the sampling is based strictly on the opinions of the industry professionals who respond. It is not intended to be a scientific study based on production rates or supply-demand formulas.

"The lower prices now expected will definitely affect the acquisitions companies are making," he said.
