Criminal charges possible in A&M death

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Three upperclassmen in Texas A&M University's Corps of Cadets may face criminal charges in connection with the death of a sophomore member who collapsed after he was rousted from his bed and forced to run and perform exercises, an official says.

Bruce Ward Goodrich, 20, an electrical engineering major from Webster, N.Y., died Thursday afternoon at St. Joseph Hospital in nearby Bryan, said university spokesman Jeff Alford. Preliminary autopsy results showed Goodrich died of heat stroke.

"There is no way to predict this kind of death," Dr. J.C. Lee, who performed the autopsy, told the Bryan-College Station Eagle. "It is invariably accidental. It could happen to anybody. In the majority of cases it comes on abruptly and there are no warning signs."

University police, along with the vice president for student affairs and the commandant of the corps were investigating the incident.

Bob Wiatt, director of university's security and traffic, said the case will be presented to a grand jury and three junior corps members may face felony charges.

In addition, officials said, the trio could face suspension or expulsion if they are found guilty of violating university policy.

According to school officials, Goodrich and his roommate were awakened about 2:30 a.m. Thursday and forced to run through campus and do push-ups and sit-ups.

Accounts given by other students to college authorities said Goodrich, who started classes Monday, collapsed during the "motivational exercises" designed to introduce new cadets to corps traditions but was told to get up and keep running.

His roommate, who suffered no ill effects, helped Goodrich back to the dormitory and helped him into the shower in an effort to revive him. Police were called when he failed to respond, and one officer administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation, authorities said.

Goodrich was taken to St. Joseph and placed on life-support systems in the hospital's intensive care unit. When Goodrich was admitted to the hospital, authorities said, his temperature was 104 and his heart had stopped.

"We are shocked by the passing of Mr. Goodrich and his family has our heartfelt sympathy. This was a most unfortunate accident — a tragedy — and I know that no one regrets it more than those involved. Their grief is, of course, shared by all of us," A&M President Frank E. Vandiver said in a prepared statement.

Although the exercises were conducted in early morning hours, the student's body may have had difficutly shedding heat because of high humidity. At 3 a.m., weather reports showed, the temperature in College Station was 77 degrees, with 79 percent humidity.

"That isn't very hot, but the body can lose its heart regulating ability at any time, especially when under stress," Lee told the Eagle.

About 2,000 of the school's 36,000 students belong to the corps, which is organized along military lines but is not connected with the ROTC program on campus. Most of its members, who wear uniforms, are male.

In Webster, N.Y., near Rochester, Robert Goodrich, 30, declined to discuss the circumstances surrounding his brother's death, saying the family had not yet been fully informed of the details. But he did talk about Bruce's interests and goals.

"He had said that he wanted to become service-oriented," Robert Goodrich said. "During the time he was interested in the ROTC programs, he talked about making the military a career."

One of brothers found guilty in Odessa shooting

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — After deliberating for 9½ hours, a jury of nine women and three men today found Joe Mendoza guilty on one count of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of 18-year-old Johnny Moreno last June 23.

But Mendoza, 27, was judged not guilty of the death of 19-year-old Ronald Don Lopez, and his 34-year-old brother David Mendoza was found innocent of both charges.

70th District Court Judge Gene Ater scheduled the penalty phase of Joe Mendoza's trial for early this afternoon. Voluntary manslaughter carries a penalty of 2-20 years and a fine up to $10,000.

District Attorney Mike Holmes had asked the jury to find both brothers guilty of murder, but the defendants' claim that they acted in self defense was apparently more convincing.

When the jury finally delivered its verdict at 2:05 a.m., neither defendant showed any emotion. Nor was there any noticeable reaction from their mother or any of the other 15 Mendoza family members and friends who had maintained a courtroom vigil since the jury began deliberations at 2:50 p.m.

"I think the jury did a very good job of reading the law and applying the law to the facts," said attorney Richard Abalos, who represented David Mendoza. "The state did not meet its burden of proof."

In his charge to the jurors, Ater instructed them to return a verdict of not guilty "if it reasonably appeared to the defendant that he was in danger of death or serious bodily injury."

In his closing argument, Abalos asked the jurors to place themselves in the Mendoza's position.

"Ask yourself — if your 18-year-old nephew was beaten up by Ronald Lopez, and a gun was put to his head and all your family was threatened, how would you feel?"

Abalos also called the credibility of several law-enforcement witnesses into question, emphasizing certain discrepancies between their testimony and the original reports they had made last June.

Attorney Cliff Hardwick, representing Joe Mendoza, told the jury it must find his client not guilty if there was a reasonable doubt about the events of June 23.

"There is ample testimony that threats were communicated to Joe and David Mendoza," he said. "And there is ample evidence that Ronald Don Lopez was certainly capable of carrying out his threats."

But Holmes defended the credibility of his witnesses, and ridiculed the defendants' testimony that they thought Lopez and Moreno were armed and attacking their house.

"If you want to believe that story, we might as well sell you the Brooklyn Bridge," he said.

Shultz isn't counting on September date for arms talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says the odds are against U.S.-Soviet arms control talks being held in Vienna next month, despite the expressed hope of both sides that talks be held.

"If you were a betting man, I wouldn't put a lot of money on it," Shultz said Thursday when asked if he thought the Vienna talks would be held. The date proposed was Sept. 18.

Shultz' comments, made in an interview with The Associated Press on Thursday, would appear to dash any chance that the two superpowers will hold new arms control negotiations prior to the November presidential election.

Shultz also said in the half-hour interview that it is well known that Soviet leader Konstantin Chernenko is suffering from health problems, but Washington doesn't know whether he is seriously ill.

"There have been many reports that are public knowledge of problems that he has had when he appeared in public on various occasions," Shultz said. "It's clear he does have some health problems. How serious they are, I don't know."

The 72-year-old Chernenko hasn't been seen in public since he met July 13 with United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, and a senior State Department official said earlier Thursday that "speculation is increasing" about his condition. Another official said Washington is in a state of "heightened watchfulness" on Chernenko's condition. These officials insisted on not being identified.

In the interview, Shultz said he hopes to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko at the United Nations in late September, although he hasn't heard o&ficially that Gromyko is coming. Other officials have said Gromyko probably will come and that a New York meeting with Shultz is likely.

Shultz said there hasn't been any discussion of whether President Reagan, who will address the annual meeting of the U.N. General Assembly, would also want to meet with Gromyko. The White House has encouraged speculation that such a meeting might be arranged.

Some see victory in Pacific pact

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SYDNEY, Australia — The decision by 14 South Pacific nations to work toward declaring the region a nuclear-free zone, but let individual governments rule on port calls by nuclear warships, is seen as a victory for moderates with close defense ties to Washington.

The members of the South Pacific Forum agreed at their annual summit this week to appoint a working committee to draw up a draft treaty to declare a nuclear-free region. The forum members would agree not to acquire, store or test atomic weapons and would also oppose the dumping of nuclear waste in the Pacific.

Under the plan, put forth by Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke, each nation would be free to provide military facilities to friendly countries — specifically, nuclear-powered warships of the U.S. Navy.

The stipulation means the zone would not hinder American military operations in the region, where Australia, New Zealand and the United States have operated the ANZUS defense pact since 1951.

A communique issued at the end of the summit said: "South Pacific countries retain their unqualified sovereign rights to decide for themselves ... their security arrangements, and such questions as the access to their ports and airfields by vessels and aircraft of other countries."

Hawke's proviso on U.S. warships blunted efforts by some forum nations to make the nuclear-free zone more restrictive, Australian officials indicated. The new Socialist government in New Zealand has already banned U.S. nuclear-fueled vessels from its ports, and Vanuatu suggested the ban should be applied throughout the region.

Papua New Guinea, another forum member, hailed New Zealand's action last month, suggesting it provided a lead for all the nations in the region.

A senior Australian official, speaking on condition he not be named, said the purpose of the treaty proposal was to produce a document that might make the region safer while still being practical.

Trying to ban warships of the superpowers would guarantee they would not agree to recognize the area as a nuclear-free zone, he said.

South Pacific nations, he said, are deeply worried about the international situation and the lack of progress in nuclear arms reduction talks. Their hope is to lessen the threat of nuclear warfare in the region while remaining tied to the United States through common interests, he said.

"The aim is to make it a realistic treaty."

Prime Minister David Lange of New Zealand urged the summit to move quickly and ask the United Nations to immediately declare the region a nuclear-free zone. But the proposal was dismissed when Hawke said the issue would have to carefully evaluated, and a majority agreed.

New Zealand is at loggerheads with the United States on the nuclear ship issue. Lange has said the ships make his country a target for atomic attack and warned he would also bar conventional U.S. warships if Washington does not drop its policy of refusing to say if a visiting ship has nuclear weapons.

The U.S. Navy dominates the South Pacific, but American and Australian officials have expressed concern about growing Soviet naval strength in the North Pacific, and have warned it will inevitably extend southwards.

Boy gets wish to visit sister

SHEFFIELD LAKE, Ohio — A long-awaited wish will be fulfilled when Mark Wymer and his family board a plane next Wednesday to vist San Antonio, Texas.

For Mark, it may be his last vacation, because he suffers from leukemia. The 11-year-old boy wants to see his married sister, Geri Hummel, 22, who moved to San Antonio two years ago.

The trip was made possible by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Northeast Ohio, an orgainization which grants the wishes of terminally ill children.

The foundation, which was started in 1983, has granted the wishes of seven youngsters whose families are burdened by medical bills and cannot afford to fulfill their child's last dream.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Warm weather is forecast for most of the nation Saturday, according to the National Weather Service, with cooler temperatures expected in the Northeast and along the California coast. Showers are expected from Minnesota to the upper Great Lakes.

Thunderstorms possible over holiday weekend

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders may experience thunderstorms over the Labor Day weekend but temperature highs will be in the 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters predict lows near 70 tonight with winds from the Southeast at less than 10 mph. A 20 percent chance of thunderstorms will continue through Saturday with highs in the mid-90s. Southerly winds will be five to 15 mph.

Thursday's high of 96 was warm compared to the record high of 105 set in 1964. The 1944 record low of 56 was 10 degrees below this morning's 66-degree low.

STATE

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported early today across sections of the Edwards Plateau and Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

The precipitation was triggered by unstable air and a weak upper level disturbance located over Southwest Texas, the National Weather Service said.

Some heavy thunderstorms were reported before dawn along the upper Texas coast from south of Galveston eastward to south of western Louisiana.

High pressure aloft kept skies clear over most of the rest of Texas.

Some heavy thunderstorms roared across East Texas Thursday afternoon, triggering a tornado that touched down about a mile north of Nacogdoches. There were no reports of damage. Golf ball size hail fell at the Gregg County Airport at Longview Thursday afternoon as the storms roared through.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s, ranging from the 60s across the High Plains and Trans Pecos region to the low 80s along the coast. Extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains to 82 at Galveston on the upper coast.

Other early morning readings around the state included 62 at Amarillo, 74 at Wichita Falls, 79 at Dallas, 72 at Texarkana, 75 at Waco, 76 at San Antonio, 75 at Corpus Christi and Brownsville, 70 at San Angelo, 65 at Lubbock, 67 at Midland and 72 at El Paso.

Forecats called for widely scattered thunderstorms of Southeast Texas, the Hill Country and sections of Southwest Texas today. It was to be fair to partly cloudy and hot over the rest of Texas. Highs were to be mostly in the 90s, ranging upward to near or slightly above 100 in North Central Texas.

The long range outlook called for clear to partly cloudy skies and warm to hot temperatures statewide for the Labor Day weekend.

Second satellite spins into place

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The crew of space shuttle Discovery successfully launched its second satellite today, working against the clock and the sun to sail a military communications payload out of the cargo bay like a spinning Frisbee.

The astronauts ejected the satellite with little time to spare. The temperature on one of its battery packs had climbed gradually overnight to about 86 degrees, just shy of the 90-degree "red line" limit that would have dictated a delay in the release until the pack could be cooled down.

The "red line" was raised just this morning from 84 to 90 degrees.

The two successful deployments, and a third one set for Saturday, could do much to help restore customer confidence in the shuttle as a dependable transportation system.

"Syncom's deployed," reported astronaut Steve Hawley as Leasat, the first satellite designed especially for the shuttle, rolled overboard today with a motion like that of a Frisbee, the popular flying disc toy. Syncom is a generic name for the Leasat series of satellites.

"Everything looks good," Mission Control replied.

A spring ejected the 15,200-pound satellite 184 miles above central Africa, imparting a slight rotation intended to keep it steady and prevent any one side from overheating in the sun.

A series of payload rocket firings over the next two days is to elevate Leasat to a stationary outpost 22,300 miles up, where it will serve as a switchboard for military communications among land bases and ships and planes on and above the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Hughes Communications Services, which owns the satellite, obtained permission from the Wham-O Corp. to call this the "Frisbee launch," using Wham-O's trademark name for its saucer-like toy. The Navy has contracted to lease the satellite and three others from Hughes for five years.

Mission Control detected this morning that the temperature on one of Leasat's battery packs had risen from the high 70s to 82 degrees and was creeping up at about a degree an hour. The normal "red line" temperature on the pack is 84 degrees, but Hughes officials decided today that they could safely elevate that limit to 90 degrees.

"If the temperature goes above 90 degrees, you are no-go for deploy," Mission Control alerted the astronauts. Discovery's position would then have been shifted so the satellite could be moved from the sun side to the shadow side of the vehicle to cool it down.

Leasat is one of three communications payloads that were carried in the cargo bay when Discovery lifted off flawlessly from Cape Canaveral on Thursday, after three postponements that delayed the debut of America's third and newest shuttle more than two months.

Eight hours into the mission, the six-member crew released into its own orbit a satellite attached to the same kind of rocket motor that sent two earlier satellites into useless orbits in February.

It was the first trial of the rocket since those failures, and this time it worked perfectly, propelling the Satellite Business Systems satellite toward a stationary orbit 22,300 miles high.

Mission Control sent the word to the shuttle, and Hawley responded: "That's real good news; we're up here celebrating." Hawley and Richard Mullane are responsible for the satellite launchings.

The launching technique is different from Leasat's in that the satellite is spun on a turntable and ejected straight up out of the bay instead of being rolled over the side. The third satellite, owned by AT&T, will use the turntable technique when it is launched Saturday.

Leasat is too large for the spin table, and at 14 feet in diameter it fits perfectly in the cargo bay, designed that way to use as little space as possible. NASA charges its satellite customers according to the amount of space they occupy.

Later today Judy Resnik, America's second space woman, was to run tests on an experimental solar power panel, and Charles Walker, the shuttle's first paying passenger, was to switch on a drug-making machine in which he'll produce an unidentified hormone which he says could benefit millions of people on Earth.

Walker, an engineer employed by McDonnell Douglas Corp., will separate the different cells of a protein in an electrical field to make the hormone. He said it is difficult and expensive to produce on earth and is of uncertain purity.

McDonnell Douglas paid NASA $80,000 for Walker's training. The company and its partner in the venture, Johnson & Johnson, hope to mass produce the hormone in space by 1987.

Commander Henry Hartsfield and pilot Michael Coats reported only a few minor technical problems as Discovery soared through its first day in space. They are to guide it back to a landing next Wednesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Drug test may lead to space plant

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — A new drug being manufactured in orbit aboard Discovery could lead by 1988 to robot pharmaceutical plants in space making a life-saving drug that could be used by thousands of people on Earth, partners in the venture say.

Engineer Charles Walker, aboard the shuttle as NASA's first paying passenger, is to operate a machine that uses the zero gravity of outer space to make a health-restoring drug that cannot be made on Earth.

Walker is an employee of McDonnell Douglas Inc., an aerospace company that has teamed with pharmaceutical giant Johnson & Johnson in an effort to create a drug factory in the sky.

Neither partner will name the drug being developed on the Discovery mission, but McDonnell Douglas project director David W. Richman said, "If it can be produced commercially, we will have a life-saving material that would have an impact on a large population of people."

The drug is actually a hormone that is naturally produced in the body in small quantities. The drug machine on Discovery will use a technique called electrophoresis to separate this hormone from a raw material that contains the hormone mixed with other natural compounds.

Electrophoresis uses an electrical current to separate materials from a liquid mix. By applying a precise amount of current to a flowing stream of molecules, the target hormone can be forced to separate itself from other elements in the mix that have different electrical charges.

This system will work, to some extent, on Earth. But gravity is strong enough to overcome the slight separation forces of the electrical process.

In outer space, where the effects of gravity are null, the electrical current causes the mix to separate into its constituent parts while flowing continuously past charged elements. Once the various materials are divided, the target hormone is collected.

The result is a drug of a purity impossible to achieve on Earth.

McDonnell Douglas and Johnson & Johnson have flown the electrophoresis machine experimentally on four earlier shuttle missions. Astronauts operated those machines.

The partners paid NASA $80,000 to give Walker the training he needed to become a shuttle passenger.

On Discovery's first flight, Walker will be operating a new, perfected model. His goal is to produce enough of the hormone for clinical testing on Earth.

James Rose of McDonnell Douglas said the material to be processed has already been partially purified in a laboratory. The material started as 1,500 liters of fluid produced by laboratory cell cultures. This batch, said Rose, was "put through the most advanced techniques for purification we have on the ground today."

The returned material will then be used by Johnson & Johnson for animal tests and, eventually, for clinical tests on human patients.

A fully automatic electrophoresis machine will be flown in the cargo bay of a space shuttle next year. This 5,000-pound machine will produce even more of the hormone.

Rose said that with the product from the two flights, Johnson & Johnson expects to be able to complete clinical testing by 1987 and "start a full-fledged commercial operation."

The first step of commercial production, he said, will involve an automatic machine operating in a shuttle cargo bay for six to 10 flights a year.

But even this will not meet the expected demand for the drug, said Rose.

"We're very anxious to move as rapidly as we can to operating this plant on a free flying spacecraft," said the McDonnell Douglas spokesman.

Rose said the plans call for a robot drug-making satellite that would be left in orbit by the shuttle. After operating for four months, the shuttle would dock with the satellite, remove the finished drug and insert material to be processed.

Such a robot pharmaceutical factory, said Rose, should be "on orbit somewhere around the first to mid-part of 1988."

SHULTZ

Shultz, who has said previously the Soviets apparently were unwilling to take yes for an answer, cast doubt on whether the Soviets were sincere about the Vienna talks, even though it was their idea.

"As far as we are concerned, we have responded affirmatively to their proposal and have not walked away from that," Shultz said in the interview, making clear he blames Moscow for the failure.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said earlier this week the United States was continuing preparations for the talks.

For its part, Moscow has accused the Reagan administration of seeking to include other arms control issues on the agenda, whereas the Kremlin wanted the talks limited exclusively to space weapons, such as anti-satellite weapons.

The Reagan administration has insisted there should not be pre-conditions and wanted to be able to at least raise the subject of strategic and intermediate-range nuclear weapons. The Soviets broke off talks on those subjects in Geneva last year.

Shultz defended the Reagan administration's negotiating approach toward Moscow. Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro, the Democratic presidential and vice presidential candidates, have criticized the administration for not negotiating an arms control agreement.

"Basically, the strategy that the president has had is a good strate'y and we will continue to be ready to have a constructive relationship with them," Shultz said of the Soviets.

But Shultz said he didn't know whether Moscow would seek better relations with the United States — and be more agreeable to arms control talks — if Reagan is elected to a second term.

"I don't know the answer to that," he said when asked. "They should want to have a constructive relationship with us, and they certainly should want to see the level of the most destructive arms reduced. And they say they do."

He discouraged the notion that a new American initiative is needed to get talks going. "The initiatives are all there ... The channels are there. The channels are open. The question is whether they will be used more and be used for a broader range of topics."

On other subjects, Shultz made the following points:

— The administration was surprised by the announcement two weeks ago that Morocco, a close U.S. friend, is joining a federation with Libya, which is on the U.S. list of terrorist nations. It was clear from Shultz's remarks that he was disappointed in Morocco for agreeing to the move.

— American involvement in Lebanon, which cost the lives of 263 American troops, was "not a mistake" because "there was a lot to be gained." But he said "it didn't work out the way we wanted."

TRIAL

According to testimony, Lopez, Moreno and 15-year-old Jesse Hernandez pulled up in front of the Mendoza house at 811 Autumn Ave. in south Odessa at 6:30 p.m. on June 23, apparently after exchanging insults with another Mendoza brother, Frank, when they passed his car.

In the minutes that followed, Lopez and Moreno were shot to death and Hernandez suffered stab wounds.

Defense witnesses claimed that Lopez was a violent man who was out to get the Mendozas because he suspected them of shooting at his house and wounding his mother in an earlier incident.

Prosecution witnesses emphasized that Joe and David Mendoza were angry about a beating Lopez had allegedly given their 18-year-old nephew Johnnie Mendoza on June 21, two nights before the shooting incident.

Joe Mendoza admitted killing Lopez and Moreno, but claimed self defense. David Mendoza admitted shooting at the Lopez car in self defense, but ballistics experts testified that none of the bullets fired from the gun he claimed to be using had struck either victim.

No other gun was recovered from the scene.

Judge Ater's gag order remains in effect until the penalty phase is completed, so the jurors, the prosecutors and Joe Mendoza's lawyers, Hardwick and Allen Stroder, were unable to comment on the verdicts.

But Abalos predicted that Joe Mendoza's attorneys would ask for probation today, on the grounds that he has no prior felony convictions. Abalos also dismissed the notion that this incident is only part of a continuing feud between two southside factions.

"Our clients were not involved in a feud," he said.

Seven of Montana's fires contained

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Nearly a week after timber and range fires erupted across Montana, scorching nearly 250,000 acres, firefighters corraled seven of the blazes and turned their sights today on the worst — a 145,000-acre inferno that has destroyed 30 homes.

The 5,000 firefighters got their first break Thursday when the winds slackened and rain began falling, prompting authorities to express their first note of optimism since the fires broke out last weekend.

"Overall, it sounds a lot better," said Paul May, spokesman for the Department of State Lands.

Seven large fires totaling nearly 190,000 acres remained out of control today. Five others were listed as contained, meaning they were circled by fire breaks and not likely to spread unless weather conditions worsened.

In south-central Montana, 500 firefighters were massed in the Bull Mountains south of Roundup for a full-scale assault on the state's most destructive fire, one covering 145,000 acres near Hawk Creek. It destroyed about 30 homes in a subdivision near Roundup on Monday.

Although crews have encircled the fire with 150 miles of fire lines, it still hasn't been listed as contained. May said that designation could come today.

He said slurry bombers dropped chemical retardant Thursday and managed to save a ranch that was in the path of the flames.

"It's not moving much," State Lands spokesman Don Kendall said Thursday night.

Badly needed rain fell over much of western Montana on Thursday night and was forecast to continue today and spread eastward before warmer temperatures returned on Saturday.

Austin television station won't be 'political football'

AUSTIN (AP) — KLRU-TV has washed its hands of a proposed debate between U.S. Senate candidates Phil Gramm and Lloyd Doggett until they can agree on a date for televising the debate.

"We feel like we've been used for a political football," said Tom Spencer, public affairs producer for the Austin station.

Spencer responded Thursday to a statement by Gramm's headquarters that a proposed Sept. 14 TV debate on KLRU had been cancelled because Doggett, the Democratic nominee, had "refused to negotiate with...his hometown station."

Actually, Spencer said, his original invitation was for Sept. 28, and Doggett accepted but Gramm, a Republican congresman, did not.

A copy of a letter from Spencer to Doggett was released by Doggett's headquarters showing that Spencer had, indeed, proposed Sept. 28.

A Doggett spokesman said acceptance of Sept. 28 was contingent upon Gramm debating Doggett on TV during the week of Oct. 22-31.

A spokesman for Gramm said the congressman had agreed to a Sept. 14 debate in Austin and Sept. 28 in College Station — not Austin.

Doggett campaign manager John Scanlan said Gramm's statement Thursday "is simply an effort to blow smoke to cover up his own fear of standing up before the voters of this state like a real Texan to defend his record."

T.D. "Doug" Benefield, chief test pilot for Rockwell International's B-1 program, died Wednesday when the prototype he was piloting crashed over the Mojave Desert. Benefield was photographed in the B-1 earlier this month by David Hartman during filming for ABC's "Good Morning America" at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Test pilot never stopped pushing himself to limit

JEFFERSON (AP) — Doug Benefield piloted all kinds of aircraft, and never stopped dreaming in his quest to find the edge of "human and technological endurance."

Benefield's quest ended when a B-1 bomber prototype, which he was co-piloting, crashed in the Mojave Desert. Benefield was killed and the pilot and flight engineer were hospitalized.

Benefield joined the elite test pilot program at Edwards AFB in the 1950s and had a career that included testing of the supersonic Concorde passenger plane. He also was featured in the April issue of Life magazine.

Life called the 55-year-old Benefield and four others "the best of the breed" whose heroics in the early days of the Edwards test program were part of Tom Wolfe's novel "The Right Stuff." He was one of the last active test pilots trained in the 1950s.

"The guys were getting killed like flies out there," Benefield recalled in the Life article. "It got so bad you didn't want to get close to anyone because tomorrow, he might be dead."

But the Air Force, which is continuing its investigation, seemed to play down the image of the "The Right Stuff," a book about the early days of flight testing.

"These (the crew) are not daredevils, they're not hot-rodders," said Edwards Air Force Base spokesman Col. Alan Sabsevita. "They're professional airmen. They don't do anything dumb...'The Right Stuff' is the image of the '50s. But these men are engineers."

As family members grieved in this small East Texas town, they remembered Benefield's accomplishments.

"Doug was a very strong person of high intelligence," said his sister-in-law, Suzanne Benefield. "He was one of the top test pilots in the entire world."

Benefield began flying the Pentagon's new B-1 bomber prototype in March 1983, pushing the aircraft to its limits.

"We're flying everyday because we're kids who've never stopped dreaming," Benefield said. "We're always looking at another frontier, whiskering up to the edge of human and technological endurance."

During the past 34 years, Benefield logged more than 6,000 hours flying time. He joined Rockwell's B-1 program in 1974.

Benefield, a retired Air Force colonel, was born in Rison, Ark., and graduated from Jefferson High School and Texas A&M University, where he studied aeronautical engineering passionately, Mrs. Benefield said.

HISD, groups settle lawsuit filed in 1956

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for a Mexican civil rights group and the city school board signed an out-of-court settlement of a 28-year-old desegregation lawsuit, but NAACP lawyers decided to wait until minor wording changes in the plan were made.

The changes were approved by attorneys for the Houston Independent School District, and the final draft was expected to be reviewed today by lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"This is something that we would be very pleased with, and the beginning to bring more equality into the district," said local NAACP President Frank Burns.

The agreement was reached among the three groups early Thursday, after almost four days of around-the-clock negotiations. But NAACP expressed last-minute reservations.

"We just had a couple of issues where we thought the language needed to be made more clear so that it fully reflected the agreement that had been reached," said NAACP attorney Patrice Johnson.

The revised agreement, which might not be signed until next week, does not need the approval of the Houston school board. School board attorney Kelly Frels said the board granted attorneys the power to make small changes that did not alter the substance of the document.

The settlement contains 24 provisions, including a proposal of a 60-40 ratio of minority group students to white students at magnet schools in an inner-city school district of 117,546 students.

It also suggested continuing desegregation in its present form but without federal court supervision and appointing a seven-member committee to monitor student achievement throughout the district.

After five years, attorneys would be able to drop the agreement, renew it indefinitely or extend it for two- or three-year periods, school attorneys said.

School board President Tina Reyes said the agreement will lock educational guarantees into place.

"People feel more comfortable with a written commitment," Ms. Reyes said.

Attorneys for the Mexican-American group said they were pleased with the settlement, which still requires the formal approval of the U.S. Justice Department and U.S. District Judge Robert O'Conor.

Insurers want more money for workers' compensation

AUSTIN (AP) — Insurers who write workers' compensation coverage in Texas want higher premiums because they say the economic downturn drove business costs out of sight.

The State Board of Insurance took the appeals under consideration.

The National Council on Compensation Insurance asked the three-member board Thursday for a 28.7 percent increase although the board's staff has recommended a 10.6 percent increase.

Spokesmen for 16 trade associations said they were not sure the fund paid by employers to finance payments to injured workers needed even the 10.6 percent.

All the recommendations include a mandatory 2 percent increase ordered by the 1983 Legislature after it raised maximum weekly payments to those injured on the job from $189 to $203.

"You need a total rate that will be adequate for the worsening experience in this type of insurance," said Anthony Grippa, vice president of the National Council of Compensation Insurers.

Grippa, speaking for Texas sellers of workers' compensation insurance, first asked for a 25.4 percent increase based on 1982-83, then switched to 28.7 percent to include the first six months of 1984.

Charles Porter and Gaylon Daniels, actuaries for the Insurance Board, recommended an increase of 8.6 percent for the statutory classes of the insurance plus the mandatory 2 percent hike.

The increase among the statutory classes would include 5.2 percent for manufacturing, 12.3 percent for contracting, 8.5 percent for oil and gas employment, and 8.8 percent for other types.

"In my opinion this would be adequate and reasonable according to past and prospective experience," said Porter.

For the first time, the proposed staff rates took into consideration insurance prospects, as well as past performance. Porter said his figures include a "trend factor" for the 29 months after Sept. 1, 1985.

Grippa said most of the difference between the staff recommendation and that of NCCI was the allowance for profits and contigencies. The staff recommendation would cut the present level by 8.2 percent while the NCCI wants its increased 3.2 percent.

Minister vows to stage sitdown to stop dumping

WILMER (AP) — A Baptist minister vows to stage a sitdown in the middle of a road that semi-tractors will use to transport lead-contaminated soil to a site near here.

"I've put up enough with people dumping on poor Wilmer and this time I won't stand for it," said the Rev. Byron Barnes, pastor of Wilmer Baptist Church.

He said he plans to stage a sitdown on East Pleasant Run Road in the next two weeks to protest the transportation of the soil from the Murmur Corp., in west Dallas to a dump site northeast of Wilmer.

Wilmer Mayor Billy Wicklife said the dumping site is in an area planned for future residential development.

Residents of Wilmer tried unsuccessfully to block the dumping near their town by presenting an 80-signature petition to the Dallas County Commissioner's Court earlier this month.

"When the 18-wheelers being rolling, I'll be lying in front of them — bail bond money in hand," Barnes told The Dallas Morning News. "This issue is that important to me, and I'll go to jail if I have to."

Although a 3-foot-thick clay protective lining is being installed at the dump site near Wilmer, residents of the town fear the soil will contaminate ground water.

'SWAT teams' to be set up to curb prison violence

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A trained negotiator and a sniper will be part of four SWAT-like teams set up to help curb violence within the nation's second largest prison system, where 267 inmates have been stabbed this year, 12 of them fatally.

Lane McCotter, deputy director of operations for the Texas Department of Corrections, said 60 potential members of the special teams, to be called Special Operation Reaction Teams (SORT) took physical training tests this week.

McCotter had several such teams at the U.S. disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he was commander of the barracks before joining the TDC.

The teams will work at six heavily-guarded units set up for inmates "so ornery you can't take a chance with them," prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said.

Guthrie said three units would be at Darrington, Ramsey II and Retrieve, all in Brazoria County and others would be located at Coffield in Anderson County, Eastham near Trinity in Houston County and Ferguson in Madison County.

Inmates in the maximum security areas generally were those who refuse to work, Guthrie said.

Portions of each of the units will house less difficult inmates, he said, to give prisoners incentive to improve their conditions within a particular unit and to have a work force at each unit.

McCotter said the SORT teams greatly reduced violence after inmates found out how good they were at their jobs.

Each five-man team will have at least one member trained as a sniper and one as a hostage situation negotiator, McCotter said.

The snipers will be armed with .30-06 rifles and will use either starlight scopes, which amplify available light, or laser scopes.

McCotter said the laser scope had a strong psychological effect on inmates because it projected a red dot at the point where the bullet would strike.

Guard suspended for giving knife to prison inmate

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Texas prison guard has been suspended for allegedly giving a pocketknife to a convict who is accused of taking a female guard hostage and raping her, a warden says.

Gustav Kirschstein, 56 and a three-year employee of the Texas Department of Corrections, was suspended last week, Arthur Valasquez, warden of the TDC's Ramsey II Unit near Rosharon, confirmed Thursday.

Prison spokesman Phil Guthrie declined comment on the case, saying only that guards who pass weapons to inmates are violating prison rules.

The matter is expected to be reviewed soon by a grand jury in Brazoria County in southeast Texas.

Richard "Ricky" Sisto, 35, a convicted rapist, is accused of taking a female guard hostage Aug. 3 and raping her while they were barricaded inside a pill dispensing room at the unit, located about 30 miles south of Houston.

Sisto released the guard and surrendered after talking with TDC Director Raymond Procunier. He was taken to the Walls Unit in downtown Huntsville, where he is being held in an isolation cell.

FAA probes copter incident

AUSTIN (AP) — Federal Aviation Administration officials are seeking to determine whether a pilot acted properly this week when he left a helicopter with the engine running moments before it was involved in an accident in a downtown parking lot.

The accident occurred on Monday, when the two-seat helicopter hopped across the Austin Chamber of Commerce parking lot and smashed into a parked car. No one was injured.

The pilot, Edward Jones, told officials he had gotten out of the machine with Cathy Connelly, a traffic reporter for an Austin radio station, after she finished her daily traffic report.

Jones said he left the enginer running and was looking over the aircraft when the engine accelerated and the helicopter lifted slightly and tilted.

RRC fines Hobbs man

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission said Thursday a man who lists a corporate address in Hobbs, N.M., has paid a $45,000 fine for injecting salt water into a well near the city of Sinton in South Texas without a permit.

The commission said Don H. Wilson declined a public hearing in the case and agreed to pay the fine.

According to the commission, an agent for Wilson filed an application with the regulatory agency Sept. 1, 1983, for a permit to dispose of salt water in a well about two miles west of Sinton in San Patricio County.

GOP fighting for labor victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's endorsement by the Teamsters union still leaves him far behind Walter Mondale in the contest for organized labor's official support, but the White House is vowing to fight for the votes of millions of blue-collar Americans whose leaders back the Democrats.

The 1.9 million-member Teamsters, the nation's largest union, delivered its endorsement Thursday night to Vice President George Bush, who flew to Columbus, Ohio, for a Teamsters gathering.

"We respect you and we're grateful to you. Thank you very, very much," Bush told union leaders as he stood on a stage with Teamsters chief Jackie Presser.

Earlier, at an airport news conference, Bush denied that the endorsement had anything to do with a federal investigation of Presser for possible involvement in a "ghost payroll" scheme in which people allegedly received money from a Teamsters local in Cleveland without performing any work.

Saying that Americans are considered innocent until proven guilty, Bush said, "There have been allegations (about Presser) but the endorsement has nothing to do with that."

Similarly, Bush denied the endorsement was linked with the Teamsters' demand for the ouster of Donald L. Dotson as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. "He'll (Dotson) be in there as far as I know and serves at the pleasure of the president," Bush said.

"And if you're trying to imply that there's some deal, there is no deal, there is no suggestion of a deal and no deal. Knock that down and get it straight because it's true."

As in 1980, the Teamsters are the only mainstay of the labor establishment backing Reagan.

Mondale already has the backing of the AFL-CIO, representing 13.7 million workers; the National Education Association, with 1.6 million members; and the 240,000-member United Mineworkers of America.

A dozen New York City locals of the AFL-CIO, claiming 100,000 workers, broke with the union leadership and backed Reagan.

In 1980, Reagan won 40 percent of the vote in union households. "I know it may gall (AFL-CIO President) Lane Kirkland but millions of union members voted for us. Many, many agreed with the Teamsters then, even though maybe some of their unions officially didn't, and they did pull that Reagan-Bush lever," Bush told the Columbus gathering.

"We are going to work day in and day out for more and more union members to support us all across this country," the vice president said.

Presser said the Teamsters would help Reagan through voter registration drives and other means.

"We're going to go out and do what has to be done," the labor chieftain said. "We have plenty of money."

In his speech to the Teamsters, Bush said the Reagan administration had worked to create "more jobs with lower inflation, lower interest rates and lower taxes."

He said that under Reagan, "America is safer today and our peace is more secure than at any time in years, and I don't care what Walter Mondale or Geraldine Ferraro have to say about that, frankly."

Bush said that, "When you go to the bargaining table, you don't give up your cost-of-living benefits and your paid vacations and your health care and say, let's negotiate ... Walter Mondale wants to give up the B-1 bomber, give up the MX missile, he's calling for a freeze that will lock in inferiority in Europe, put our allies in jeopardy.

"That's what I call negotiating from a position of weakness, frankly," Bush added.

Two brothers testify at parents' sex trial

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy testifying for the prosecution looked at his parents in the courtroom, greeted them with a "Hi!" and a big grin, then told the court he had had sex with both of them.

The boy and his sobbing 10-year-old brother were among the children put on the stand Thursday at the trial of Robert and Lois Bentz, who are charged with 48 counts of child sex abuse.

Other children who told authorities they were abused by adults were to testify when the trial resumed today.

The Bentzes, each facing 12 counts of criminal sexual conduct and 12 counts of intrafamilial sexual abuse, are the first to be prosecuted out of 24 adults charged with more than 400 counts of sexual abuse.

The defendants' 6-year-old son testified that Robert Bentz had sex with both of his sons, acts that occurred "for a long time," he said.

The youngster added that he loved both his parents and wanted to go home.

Asked by Scott County Attorney Kathleen Morris whether he wasn't afraid to go home, he answered, "He won't do that no more, right?"

The 10-year-old brother told the court that he, too, had been sexually abused by both parents, saying "One time, that's all it happened."

The acts occurred at the family home, he said, and no one else was present.

Under cross-examination by Earl Gray, Bentz' attorney, the older boy said he had denied the alleged abuse for the first seven months after he was put in a foster home. He said he only admitted it after he was told his younger brother claimed he was abused.

The 10-year-old began sobbing as Gray pressed him for details of the act with his father, and court had to be recessed briefly.

Telling the court he wanted to return home to live with his parents, he said he had been told that his testimony would help them obtain treatment.

"They said they'd help him and he might not stay there (in jail) as long. Kathleen (Morris) and other people said that," he said. "She just said if you tell the truth and not lie they have a better chance of getting help."

A 10-year-old girl wiped tears from her eyes as testified she was in court "because Bob and Lois hurt us."

The girl said she had engaged in sex with the Bentzes, and described incidents of sexual abuse involving other adults, including James Rud, the only adult witness scheduled to testify for the prosecution.

Rud, 27, a Jordan garbage collector, was the first person to be arrested in the investigation. He pleaded guilty to 10 counts of criminal sexual conduct in a plea-bargain agreement, and an additional 98 counts against him were dropped in exchange for his promise to testify against other adults.

After court recessed for the day on Thursday, Judge Martin Mansur ordered that children who had been housed in a motel prior to their testimony must be returned to their foster homes because it came out during testimony that the children had been allowed to talk with one another.

Vietnam War spurred men to more education

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a group, young men who matured during the Vietnam era were educational overachievers, spurred on by draft deferments and the GI Bill, new government statistics show.

The rates of college attendance for men born from 1947 through 1951 have exceeded those of young men born either before or since, the Census Bureau reported on Thursday.

The combined result of the GI Bill and college draft deferments was that "men eligible for the draft during the Vietnam Era received more education than they would have under normal circumstances," reported Rosalind R. Bruno of the Census Bureau.

The subsequent decline in attendance "may be a return to 'normal' levels" of college enrollment, she said in the study "Educational Attainment in the United States."

But, she added, this group of young men is the leading edge of the post World War II baby boom, a group that has recorded many changes from traditional behavior, and "theories abound on this generation."

The percentage of young men attending college climbed rapidly from 1966 through 1972 and then began declining, Ms. Bruno reported.

"College attendance to maintain a draft deferment most likely caused an increase in college enrollment rates among young men in the 1960s, and the elimination of the draft in the early 1970s probably had some negative impact on enrollment rates in succeeding years," said Ms. Bruno.

The college enrollment rate for civilian men aged 18 to 24 rose from 24 percent to 36 percent between 1960 and 1969 and then dropped to 27 percent in the mid-1970s, the bureau reported.

In addition to students seeking draft deferments, she said, "veterans with GI Bill benefits attended college in the mid-1970s, but as these benefits expired, attendance declined. ..."

Using figures for men aged 25 to 29 years old, she compared rates of college attendance to illustrate her study.

In 1966, 30.1 percent of men in that age group had completed at least one year of college. By 1971 some 37.9 percent had finished one year and in 1976 more than half, 50.1 percent, had at least one year of college behind them.

But by 1981, the share of men in that group with a year or more of college fell to 45.7 percent.

"The higher rate of college attendance by young men during the late 1960s and early 1970s led to the higher attainment levels achieved by ... men born from 1947 to 1951," Ms. Bruno reported.

"By age 25 to 29, a higher proportion of the 1947-51 (group) had attended and completed college than that of the preceding or succeeding" groups, she pointed out.

While the men born from 1952 on may eventually catch up, she said, there is presently no evidence they will match the preceding group.

"Therefore, evidence suggests that men in the 1947-51 (group) will maintain higher attainment levels than both younger and older men," she said.

In addition to being affected by Vietnam, this group represented the beginning of the baby boom. Their parents were more affluent than the parents of earlier classes of students, Ms. Bruno said, and "they were part of a group so much larger than that preceding them and were subject to increased competition, which may have resulted in higher aspirations."

A commonly offered explanation for the subsequent decline in college enrollment rates has been the decline in the economic attractiveness of a college degree caused by the glut of graduates.

But the decline in male enrollment has not been matched by that of females, who continue to increase their representation in college steadily.

NATION IN BRIEF

Transsexual disappointed at ruling

CHICAGO (AP) — A transsexual airline pilot was "very disappointed" at an appeals court ruling saying that Eastern Airlines is not required to rehire her after her sex-change operation.

Eastern had appealed the suit to the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which said that civil rights laws were not intended to protect transsexuals from discrimination.

The airline had no comment Thursday, said its spokesman Mark Wegel in Miami. Karen Frances Ulane, 43, of Darien, was unhappy with the decision, said her lawyer, Dean Dickie, who said he would seek a rehearing. Ms. Ulane was pilot Kenneth Ulane before her operation.

Judge denies minister's request

EMPORIA, Kan. (AP) — A judge denied a minister's request to be freed on bond pending appeal after sentencing him to 2½ to seven years in prison for trying to arrange the murder of his church secretary's husband.

The prosecution said that the Rev. Thomas P. Bird,, 34, had asked a man to help him kill Martin Anderson, the husband of Lorna Anderson, with whom Bird was romantically involved.

Anderson was shot to death Nov. 4. The killing is unsolved, but officials said it did not result from Bird's scheme.

Bird was sentenced Thursday by Lyon County Distict Judge Gary Rulon.

Teen receives new Olympic torch

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Weeping tears of joy and sadness, a 13-year-old boy who ran a kilometer of the Olympic torch relay on an artificial foot received a new torch to replace one that was stolen and "meant a lot" to him.

Jerry Ortega Jr. received the new torch from Mayor Tom Bradley at a City Hall ceremony Thursday. Jerry, who lost his foot in an auto accident nine years ago, had the torch yanked from his hands Wednesday while he was helping another handicapped boy.

Jerry would still like his original torch back. "It means a lot to me," he said.

Man dies after transplant operation

BOSTON (AP) — A man who 23 days ago underwent a 10-hour transplant operation to replace his twisted, congenitally deformed heart has died due to lung and kidney complications, although the new heart was "functioning well."

Michael Barrett, 20, of Milton, Vt., died Thursday, said Laura Duffy, a spokeswoman for Brigham and Women's Hospital.

The transplant was especially difficult because Barrett's own heart was twisted and on the right side of his chest. His liver also was not in the normal position.

Jury indicts attorney, relatives

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted an assistant U.S. attorney and a representative of creditors in a bankruptcy proceeding, but declined to bring charges against Chief U.S. District Judge Frank Battisti of Cleveland.

The panel in Toledo for 17 months probed allegations that the judge and his relatives improperly benefitted from his position. The investigation apparently began after U.S. District Judge Ann Aldrich reported hearing Battisti's nephew saying his uncle was giving lucrative cases to the nephew's firm.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Gorman was charged with conflict of interest and accepting an illegal gratuity Thursday. Merle Weber of Wadsworth, the creditors representative, was charged with offering an illegal gratuity.

Smith claims progress against drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith says the Reagan administration is making "substantial progress" in its drive against major drug-smuggling rings.

Smith met Thursday with President Reagan and the Cabinet Council to brief them about performance of the federal government's South Florida Task Force, as well as 12 other Organized Crime and Drug Enforcement Task Forces operating elsewhere around the country.

Afterward, he told reporters that success of the program was reflected in higher street prices for illicit drugs as well as greater numbers of drug-related arrests and convictions.

Average prices for Colombian-grown marijuana have jumped from about $250 to $350 a pound in January 1982 to $600 to $700 currently, while U.S. street prices of cocaine smuggled from Colombia also have increased substantially, Smith said.

Teachers' union endorsing Mondale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1.7-million member National Education Association endorsed Democrat Walter F. Mondale for president today, claiming President Reagan, if re-elected, would "undermine the public schools."

The teachers' union said the endorsement meant that "thousands of teachers will be mobilized to get behind the Mondale candidacy."

De Lorean sells car distribution center

BRIDGEWATER, N.J. (AP) — Former automaker John Z. De Lorean completed the sale Thursday of a De Lorean Motor Co. car distribution center here to two local businessman for $1.5 million, according to a published report.

De Lorean, 59, received only $50,000 for the property where his sports cars, built in Northern Ireland, were retrofitted for East Coast distribution, a trustee of the ailing Detroit company told the Home News, based in New Brunswick.

Trustee David W. Allard Jr. said he allowed De Lorean to sell the former Quality Assurance Center on condition that De Lorean place $675,000 of the sale's proceeds into an escrow account pending the resolution of two lawsuits he has filed against De Lorean on behalf of De Lorean Motor Co.

"De Lorean and I signed an agreement to place the $675,000 from the sale into an escrow account until a court of competent jurisdiction determines if the money belongs to him or me," Allard said in a telephone interview from his City National Bank office in Detroit.

De Lorean Motor Co. attorneys filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act in 1982, but the case was converted to a liquidation proceeding under Chapter 7 of that code last year.

Allard said he has filed two suits against De Lorean, one pending in U.S. District Court in New York City, another in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Detroit.

A Los Angeles jury acquitted De Lorean on Aug. 16 of charges he conspired to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine.

De Lorean, who maintains an estate in Bedminster, faces legal fees for the 18-month suit, as well as the bankruptcy case and other pending civil suits.

A hearing in Detroit U.S. Bankruptcy Court has been set for Sept. 11 on a motion to resume proceedings, which were suspended during De Lorean's cocaine trial.

Holiday safety

At 6 p.m. today the long Labor Day holiday begins and for a lot of Midlanders and other Texans it means the final opportunity to get away from home for the final time before buckling down for the rigors of school and work for the remainder of this year.

It's traditional for the Labor Day holiday to signal a number of standards:

— The beginning of football season.

— The opening of dove season and the start of big game hunting.

— The end of summertime fishing and boating enjoyment.

All those activities and more will put literally thousands of Texans on the state's highways this weekend to visit Grandma and Grandpa one more time before school starts and weekend excursions become few and far between. Unfortunately with the increase in vehicular traffic comes a corresponding jump in the number of accidents. It's as regular as clockwork; when a holiday approaches, the Department of Public Safety begins to issue warnings about impending death counts.

Those highway deaths and injuries are regrettable and in many cases completely avoidable. Last year over the Labor Day holiday in Texas 55 persons lost their lives and this year the DPS is predicting a decrease of only one fatality — down to 54, according to Lt. Jimmie Rhoads of the Midland office of the DPS.

Most of the deaths and injuries are avoidable because most all are the result of one or two mistakes — driving too fast or drinking alcoholic beverages or a combination of the two.

Consequently, the DPS's advice to motorists taking to the highways this evening or sometime this holiday period is simple: Take your time getting to your destination. Plan frequent rest stops so you don't overtire. Drive at or below the speed limit, but in no case be guilty of exceeding it. Don't drink alcoholic beverages immediately prior to embarking on your trip or while on the way. And, importantly, wear your seat belts.

Says Lt. Rhoads: "Wearing your seat belts won't keep you from having an accident, but it might keep you alive if you do."

That's sound advice. Follow it and have an enjoyable Labor Day holiday.

Soviet crops drop

Although the Soviet Union repeatedly has called for the defeat of President Reagan, circumstances appear to have forced it into a position where it can only support his re-election campaign.

Unusual weather patterns, together with the built-in problems of poor management and faulty, badly maintained farm machinery, all point to another poor grain harvest throughout Russia — the sixth in a row.

The official Soviet goal for this year was 240 million metric tons of wheat and corn but U.S. Agriculture Department experts believe the harvest will be only about 180 million tons — some 10 million tons short of last year's.

That means Russia again will have to turn to other grain-producing nations, notably the United States, in order to feed its population. During the recent crop year, Russia has purchased 14.3 million metric tons of American wheat and corn as well as close to half a million tons of soybeans.

Under a year-old grain agreement which stipulates minimum and maximum shipments, the Soviet Union is obliged to notify this country of any intentions to purchase in excess of the pact. Such a notice would obtain a ready response from President Reagan who has been quoted as saying: "If they want to buy more, we'll sell them more."

The Russians are expected to announce their intentions in October. If they request more grain, American farmers, beset by high interest rates, would certainly benefit. And this should provide a shot-in-the-arm for Mr. Reagan's campaign in the Farm Belt.

Another View:

Patriotism is back

Unless one is completely color-blind, it would be difficult not to notice that patriotism is back in style this year. Americans have become Yankee Doodle Dandies again. The Grand Old Flag and both reasonable and some exotic facsimilies (such as dyed skin) are proudly shown and worn everywhere. More bands are struck up with Sousa and "America the Beautiful" sounds more beautiful than ever. There is a big surge in flag sales. And companies that put a touch of the red, white and blue in ads and promotions have been enjoying sizable sales increases.

Much of the renewed sense of American pride has been rightly attributed to the recently concluded Los Angeles Summer Olympics, which began with an epic torch-running odyssey in which millions of Americans participated and ended with a record number of American medalists.

But there were pre-Olympics hints: A television miniseries about George Washington was a big hit — in contrast to one a few years back about that of the family of another Founding Father, John Adams.

The ongoing restoration of the Statue of Liberty, in which millions have helped with their contributions, serves as a reminder of our great fortune in being Americans.

Another factor, no doubt, is the 1984 presidential election. American politics with its many faults — from exhausting primaries to exorbitantly expensive campaigns to boring conventions — is certainly preferable to that of most any other nation. Despite their chasm of differences, Republican and Democratic convention delegates are competitive flag wavers.

Olympic success? The liberation of Grenada? The decline of OPEC? A strong dollar and resurgent economy? A popular president? Peace? A working democracy?

Whatever the reasons, we're glad to see that flag-waving and patriotism are back in fashion. The red, white and blue tinge to summer's end is a brighter way to view life than those gloomy New Year's assessments by the media of the arrival of George Orwell's 1984. Looks like everyone back then was writing about the wrong George.

JACK ANDERSON

This probe smells like coverup

WASHINGTON — A promised Justice Department investigation into charges of misconduct by members of its organized-crime strike force in Los Angeles is beginning to exude the rotten aroma of an official cover-up.

Jack Anderson

Alerted by the House Select Committee on Narcotics to allegations that a California strike force had delayed or quashed grand jury action against mob figures in California and Hawaii, the Justice Department promised Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., that its Office of Professional Responsibility would launch a thorough investigation.

That was last November. But sources told my associate John Dillon that in the 10 months since, Michael Shaheen, the official supposedly conducting the investigation, has not called one potential witness in the case.

The special prosecutor hired by Rangel's committee to look into the charges has not been contacted. Neither has the staff of the House committee.

Fishiest of all is Shaheen's refusal to accept or return repeated calls from the original accuser, Jerry Van, a self-described underworld muscle man now in prison for crimes not related to strike-force activities.

Van, whose information helped to break one of the biggest professional arson rings in the country, is in the witness protection program while serving his sentence.

When Shaheen failed to contact him — an obvious move in any serious investigation — Van, in frustration, tried several times to telephone the Justice Department official. Each time, he said, he was told that Shaheen was "in a meeting."

Though Van's whereabouts are not a secret to the Justice Department, Shaheen did not return his calls.

"Not one person has been interviewed," an exasperated House committee source said. "Not one thing has been done on this case. It's insulting. We're contemplating holding hearings."

Rangel has already dispatched a stern letter to the Justice Department, demanding to know what progress, if any, has been made in the "investigation."

Despite Shaheen's promise to Rangel almost a year ago, a Justice Department spokesman had this bewildering response to an inquiry about Van's charge of misconduct by federal prosecutors: "I can't say whether we're taking it seriously or not."

Shaheen did not return repeated calls for comment.

Footnote: The Justice Department's "circle the wagons" policy is nothing new.

When a federal grand jury in 1982 heard charges of personal misconduct against a U.S. attorney in Iowa, the department rushed another federal prosecutor from Indiana to derail the investigation. He was assisted by a special emissary from Attorney General William French Smith.

The prosecutor, Thomas Turner, persuaded the grand jury to drop the case, as I reported in this column. Now I've learned that Turner was given a $1,500 bonus and a citation that said:

"Mr. Turner, by the sheer force of his professionalism and good judgment was able to win the grand jury over and to achieve the objectives of his assignment."

Could there be a bonus and citation in the offing for Shaheen?

UPDATES: Not every Oregonian was thrilled when Sen. Mark O. Hatfield's wife, Antoinette, decided to donate the $55,000 she got from Greek arms merchant Basil Tsakos to a Shriners hospital.

Mrs. Hatfield donated the money after I disclosed the payments, which she says were for real estate services and which were made while the senator was helping Tsakos promote a trans-African pipeline.

Bill Robertson of Ashland, Ore., thinks the charitable donation is "tainted money," and called to tell me that he has opened a bank account in hopes of equaling the Hatfield donation so the Shriners can return Mrs. Hatfield's money. Robertson started the account with $5,000 of his own and hopes like-minded individuals will add their contributions.

"I think it is very improper for the senator to use this money to control public thinking about his actions," Robertson said.

— I reported recently on a Customs Service investigation of the Vietnamese government's coercion of refugees in this country. Vietnam was getting them to send their families U.S. dollars, which were then confiscated by the communist government. The investigation led to congressional hearings and the introduction of corrective legislation by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo.

EVANS & NOVAK

Kirkpatrick moving up or out?

WASHINGTON — Jeane Kirkpatrick intends irrevocably to deliver her post-election resignation as ambassador to the United Nations after the fall General Assembly session, setting up a battle royal inside the administration over whether she will move up in a Reagan second term — or out.

Rowland Evans

Michael K. Deaver, President Reagan's deputy chief of staff, and other White House aides want her out (perhaps to a prestigious exile as ambassador in Paris). But Reaganite Republicans regard her as the special protector of Ronald Reagan's ideological purity in international policy and, especially since her triumphant convention speech in Dallas, a possible vice-presidential candidate.

Robert Novak

Because the result of that battle will set the national security mold for Reagan's second term, conservative hard-liners have put Kirkpatrick's retention at the top of their second-term list, preferably as the first female secretary of state. Reagan's well-known distaste for easing out George Shultz or any Cabinet member is thoroughly appreciated by Kirkpatrick's admirers. Their fallback post is Robert McFarlane's national security job in the White House, a natural launching pad for the secretary's office if Shultz bows out as expected sometime in 1985.

When she has chosen to exercise it, Kirkpatrick's influence with the president can be profound — and that makes important enemies for her in high places. His intellectual affinity with her strong views on Israel, the Third World and especially the Soviet Union is resented both in the State Department and White House.

Such resentment has surfaced regularly over the past three years. Insiders confirmed to us that one senior White House aide politely warned her in person early last year that the president would make "peace" with the Soviets before he left office; in that case, Jeane Kirkpatrick would have to be out of the administration before it happened. Why? Because her views on the Soviet Union were too unfriendly to accept any U.S.-Soviet deal.

Intimates say that although Mrs. Kirkpatrick was stunned and deeply upset by that conversation, she chose to ignore rather than pursue it. But the warning came back to haunt her last October when William P. Clark was eased out as national security adviser and dispatched to the Interior Department in hopes Reagan would replace him with chief of staff James Baker III. Although Baker's bid was blocked by hard-liners in the administration (Clark, CIA Director William Casey and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger), they hit a brick wall in pushing for Kirkpatrick. Deaver and other critics vetoed her.

Since then, the administration's leading intellectual has expanded her political base among Reaganite conservatives without hardly trying and while remaining the Cabinet's only registered Democrat. Dramatic evidence of that base was the reception accorded her opening-night speech at the Dallas convention. Her performance generated confidence that, if she becomes a Republican after the election as key conservatives expect, she is equipped to be the 1988 vice-presidential nominee.

She thrilled hard-liners by attacking her own party for "hiding its head in the sand" about the Soviet reality and "always blaming America first" — the best-received speech at the convention other than Reagan's own. That was a valedictory for four years at the U.N., during which she has not masked frustration over the impotence of both the world organization and her own role as chief U.S. delegate.

But talks with delegates on the convention floor made clear that despite her self-image of impotence, the Republican Party's dominant conservative wing places a high value on keeping her in the administration.

That value is confirmed to them by her attitude toward the continuing effort by Shultz and Deaver to finally bestow a peacemaker's image on Ronald Reagan by setting up talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko during the U.N. General Assembly session before Election Day. Those talks are viewed by Shultz and some political aides as giving Reagan the long-sought image of peace Deaver wants to adorn him with. Most administration officials who are skeptical keep their doubts to themselves, fearful of intruding on this high-level stratagem.

But not Jeane Kirkpatrick. She is too blunt to be silent inside the administration about her concern that a pre-election Reagan-Gromyko talk, however well-intentioned, could end up embarrassing both the president and the U.S. Similarly, she does not hide her opinion that the State Department's well-advanced plan to cut a deal with Nicaragua's Marxist-Leninist dictatorship is scandalous.

It is just this quality that has galvanized those ideologically-committed Reaganites remaining in the administration to fight to keep her in at their side. Indeed, she has become the principal bearer of the torch picked up by Reagan in New Hamsphire eight years ago when he challenged an incumbent Republican's foreign policy.

Homosexual demands not valid

Homosexuals and lesbians who demand special legal status as a minority claim that their sexual preference for members of their own sex is merely an alternative life style.

Charley Reese

Question: Is the sexual preference of necrophiles for corpses, of pedophiles for children or sadists for violence also merely alternative life styles?

I think that is a fair question. In all four instances you have behavior defined by sexual reference. While monkeying around with corpses, molesting children and beating people up are illegal, it was not too long ago that homosexual acts were also illegal in many states. Until 1975, the American Psychiatric Association classified homosexuality as a mental disorder. The decision to drop that classification was as much political as it was scientific. There are still conflicting theories about homosexuality despite nearly a decade of a national campaign to legitimize it in people's minds.

That, of course, is the goal of the so-called gay rights movement: to win an official stamp of approval for their sexual behavior. They evolved a strategy which includes a clever intellectual slight of hand.

A person's race, gender and ethnic background are aquired with birth. Implicit in saying people shouldn't be discriminated against on the basis of factors over which they have no control is the premise that people should be judged on the basis of their behavior.

But forbidding discrimination against homosexuals reverses that premise, for what the government would then be saying is that you cannot judge a person on the basis of their behavior.

I do not think the government has the right to do tht. It has the right to legally sanction homosexual acts. In that instance, the government is merely saying to homosexuals that government will not penalize you for your sexual orientation. But for government to say to non-homosexuals, you must not, in effect, disapprove of what homosexuals do would be totally wrong.

Both Judaism and Christianity specifically and explicitly condemn homosexuality as immoral behavior. The government does not have to agree with that but it has no right to force people who do believe it to act against their religious convictions.

The sleeper in the pitch for government sanction is this: If the government says you cannot discriminate against homosexuals, it is saying that homosexuals are normal, healthy, moral individuals and it's that stamp of approval that homosexuals are seeking.

Despite what they say, they are denied no rights. There is nothing in the Constitution or Bill of Rights which says homosexuals are excluded from exercising the same political rights as heterosexuals.

I have never seen any evidence of widespread discrimination against homosexuals. The fact that there are many homosexuals successfully employed who are afraid to openly admit they are homosexuals is not proof of discrimination. If it's proof of anything, it's proof that they're ashamed of what they are doing.

As a matter of fact, homosexuals as a group are much better situated in society than either blacks or women. When the singer Anita Bryant publicly opposed attempts to pass gay rights ordinances in some cities, it was she who was blacklisted, ridiculed and deprived of a livelihood.

However, I am not willing to concede that people should not have the right to discriminate against homosexuals. I don't buy their claim to be otherwise normal, healthy human beings. There is widespread evidence that homosexuals are extraordinarily promiscuous and there are some scientists who think homsexuality presents a package of characteristics derived from the homosexuality. In other words, homosexuals and heterosexuals are not interchangeable people who have a minor difference of opinion as to their sexual preference. There may well be some jobs for which homosexuals would not be appropriate because of their homosexuality.

Before the government annoints homosexuality with the seal of approval, I would like to see more research. The nature of homosexuality is not something that can be determined by majority vote, politicking or social scientists conducting opinion polls.

Walter Mondale and the National Democratic Party have made a mistake by caving into the demand of militant homosexuals. Of course they caved into the militant demands of every other group so I suppose they do deserve a gold star for consistency.

I shall not be surprised if the ghost of Harry Truman appears and punches Mondale in the nose.

KAL compensation sought

Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — South Korea still wants compensation from the Soviet Union for the downing of a Korean Air Lines jet a year ago, but also will try to broaden non-political exchanges with Moscow, a Foreign Ministry official was quoted today as saying.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said "there will be no change in our demands for a Soviet apology and compensation," The Korea Herald newspaper said.

Seoul plans to press Moscow for acknowledgement of "legal responsibility rather than a political one," because the government has censured Moscow enough in the international arena for the plane downing, the official was quoted as saying.

The jumbo jet, Flight 007 from New York to Seoul, was shot down by missile-firing Soviet warplanes the night of last Sept. 1 near the Soviet island of Sakhalin. All 269 people on board were killed.

Investigations found the plane had strayed off course. The Soviet Union charged the plane was taking part in an espionage mission for the United States, an accusation which officials in Seoul and Washington denied.

Choking back tears is Tori Nakazawa, mother of KAL victim Takeshi Nakazawa.

Earlier demands for compensation from the Soviet Union have been rejected.

The Korea Herald quoted the official as saying South Korean is trying to arrange a meeting with the United States and other countries whose citizens were on the plane to jointly demand compensation from the Soviet Union. There was no independent confirmation of the report in the Seoul newspaper.

The official reportedly said the Seoul government would seek to promote non-political ties with Moscow despite the compensation issue. South Korea and the Soviet Union don't have diplomatic relations, but before the plane was shot down, the two countries had sports, scientific and cultural exchanges.

Such exchanges were broken off after the airliner was destroyed, but recently have been quietly resumed. Seoul is to be the site of the 1988 Olympic games, and authorities here want to avoid any boycott action by the Soviet Union or other Soviet Bloc countries.

A memorial service will be held Saturday and a monument south of Seoul dedicated to the victims of Flight 007, but no massive observances are planned to mark the first anniversary. The absence of any major memorials has been seen as an effort to move toward a better political climate with Moscow.

The memorial service is sponsored by the Korean Anti-Communist League.

Pravda item uses term 'shot down'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said today for the first time that the Korean Air Lines airplane destroyed by a Soviet missile a year ago was "shot down."

The phrase was used in a long article in the Communist Party daily Pravda that marked the anniversary of the jumbo jet's destruction after it flew into Soviet airspace.

"On the night of Sept. 1, 1983, that airliner intruded into Soviet air space over Kamchatka and (the Soviet island of) Sakhalin and was shot down after every means of forcing the intruder to land on the nearest airfield had been exhausted," Pravda commentator Vsevolod Ovchinnikov said.

Previous Soviet statements on the downing of Korean Air Lines flight 007 that killed all 269 people aboard said only that the plane was "stopped" or "terminated" by Soviet pilots.

Marshal Nikolai V. Ogarkov, the nation'sfirst deputy defense minister, told a news conference last Sept. 9 that the plane was destroyed by two air-to-air missiles, but he refrained from using the words "shot down."

"The interceptor aircraft was given the order to terminate the flight using air-to-air missiles," Ogarkov said.

Ovchinnikov's article added nothing new to previous Soviet claims that the plane was on a U.S. spy mission carefully calculated either to glean valuable military information about secret Soviet bases or, in the event of destruction of the craft, to be used to stir up an anti-Soviet campaign.

Plane fire kills 24, injures 72

DOUALA, Cameroon (AP) — The official Cameroon National Radio said early today that 24 people died when fire swept through a Cameroon Airlines Boeing 737 as it was preparing to take off from Douala.

The radio broadcast also said 72 people were injured in the fire Thursday, while the remaining 20 people aboard escaped unharmed.

The cause of the fire was not known. But on Thursday night, a group calling itself the Cameroon Liberation Front claimed responsibility for the fire in a broadcast from Gabon. Reporters in Yaounde quoted the broadcast as claiming the group did not intend to kill people, only to blow up the plane.

Earlier, unofficial sources estimated the death toll at 100. The government had said previously that the fire killed only two people, and refused to confirm or deny that an explosion had occurred before the fire.

The conflicting casualty reports could not be resolved immediately. The airline said no statement would be made until President Paul Biya received a report on the fire. A government statement also was expected later.

Charles Twining, the U.S. consul general in Douala, said there were seven Americans aboard the plane, and that five were injured, none critically.

He said some of the injured Americans received burns while others broke ankles in jumping from the plane. The Americans — two couples and three children, all residents of Cameroon — were not identified pending notification of their relatives.

The fire occurred as the jet was preparing to leave Douala, the west African country's biggest city, for Yaounde, 150 miles away.

Sources told The Associated Press that at least 37 people were being treated at a dozen hospitals and emergency clinics. One Western diplomat said he was told 72 people had been hospitalized.

The Western diplomat said he was told there was an explosion on the plane before the fire broke out.

Romanian government frees dissident Orthodox priest

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Romania, which has a repressive internal regime, has freed Father Gheorghe Calciu, the nation's leading political dissident and an Orthodox priest, who was imprisoned five years ago for forming a "Free Union" movement patterned on Poland's Solidarity free trade union.

The surprise move was confirmed by Romanian dissident Radu Capusan in Ohio who telephoned Calciu in Bucharest. It came as a response to repeated pleas by U.S. officials. Vice President George Bush mentioned the Calciu case to Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu last spring.

This reporter also brought up the case during an interview with Ceausescu in July, pointing out that it was the biggest blot on Romania's human rights record.

Ceausescu responded by denouncing Calciu as a "Fascist who was banished for his fascist activities" and accused him of having ties to the CIA. He said he would not release him from prison unless the 57-year-old priest confessed to being a traitor and formally requested a pardon.

In his conversation with Capusan Thursday, the priest said he did not confess nor ask for a pardon. "For the first time in five years, I have the opportunity to express my thanks and my prayers to the people of the United States of America who intervened on my behalf," Calciu told Capusan.

When asked whether he wanted to emigrate to the United States, the priest said "probably yes," but at that point the telephone line was cut. When Capusan got him back on the line, Calciu added: "Please don't forget me because you know anything can happen now."

Although he was released from prison, Father Calciu still remains under house arrest and apparently will be forbidden from resuming his church activities in Bucharest. Capusan said Calciu is by far the most popular priest in the country and could count on 10,000 or more followers to show up for his masses.

That is why he was a political threat, Capusan said. Under Calciu's leadership, the church in Romania, which has long been dormant and suppressed by the government, might have grown to something rivalling the role of the Catholic church in Poland.

Calciu formed a vigorous anti-government mass movement which he called the "Army of the Lord." Neither the religious army nor his Free Union movement were ever allowed to demonstrate publicly because Calciu was arrested just as he got his movement together.

WORLD in brief

Leadership agreement draws strong reaction

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A reported agreement between caretaker Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his chief rival, Shimon Peres, to take turns leading a bipartisan government set off a revolt today in the ranks of Peres' Labor Party.

Israeli media reported the accord calls for Peres to serve the first 25 months as prime minister and Shamir to take the top post for the next 25 months, breaking the deadlock that had resulted from the inconclusive July 23 elections.

Peres was designated by President Chaim Herzog to form the government after his Labor Party received 44 votes to 41 for Shamir's Likud bloc, leaving 13 smaller parties holding the balance of power with 35 seats. Herzog had urged the two major parties to form a national unity government.

Rocket fire exchanged

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christian and Druse gunners exchanged artillery and rocket fire in the hills overlooking Beirut today, and the capital was paralyzed by a general strike in the Moslem sector and a day of mourning in the Christian area.

Police said two foreign workers, an Indian and a Jordanian, were killed and two Lebanese army troops wounded before the mountain battles halted before dawn.

The two foreigners were factory workers in the Christian town of Kfarchima, whose Phalangist-dominated "Lebanese Forces" militia garrison was involved in the fighting against Druse irregulars in the neighboring village of Shweifat, the police report said.

Police said the army troops were injured in fighting around the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb, above Shweifat and Kfarchima.

Demonstration planned

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity supporters called for a "peaceful" demonstration on the fourth anniversary today of the outlawed labor federation. A government prosecutor warned against any "violations of the public order."

Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, who this week said the Communist regime would have to negotiate with Solidarity to avert renewed unrest in Poland, hoped to address workers at the Gdansk shipyard where the union was born on Aug. 31, 1980.

The five leaders of Solidarity's underground last week urged Poles to show their support for the federation by making today a "Solidarity holiday." They did not specifically call for street demonstrations.

But union backers in Wroclaw said Thursday that leaflets were being circulated calling for a "peaceful manifestation" in the center of the southern industrial city this afternoon.

Support for strike split

LONDON (AP) — Britain's longshoremen split today over whether to support coal miners in their 6-month-old strike, with workers at the two key ports refusing to join the walkout and dock employees at London's big Tilbury port staying off their jobs.

The show-of-hands votes against the strike by 300 workers at Dover, the nation's biggest passenger port, and by 1,100 workers at Felixstowe, the largest cargo container port, was a setback for the Transport and General Workers Union and the miners union.

Together, the two ports handle a third of Britain's sea trade.

Loan plan formulated

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Latin American and U.S. financial experts have agreed on a plan to seek relaxed lending policies by international development agencies.

The resolution on limited debt relief was agreed upon by the technical experts before a two-day regional conference that convened Thursday and is expected to be ratified by the conference today.

The Inter-American Economic and Social Council conference brings together finance ministers or deputy finance ministers from 23 nations. The conference is an annual gathering of the council, a part of the Organization of American States.

Latin nations represented at the conference owe most of their $350 billion debt to commercial banks in the United States. They also owe a small portion to the World Bank and Inter-American Development Bank, which are heavily funded and influenced by the U.S. government.

Cubs down to last pair

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

The Magic Number is Two as the Texas League season wends its way toward yesterday's statistics. Instead of the usual pennant countdown, for Midland it's two days until the end of the season and if the Cubs can put together two more victories, they can end a long, year, fraught with disappointment, on a four-game winning streak.

Home runs by Jeff Jones, Don Hyman and Gary Varsho backed up the combined four-hit pitching of lefthanders Scott Johnson and Jim Boudreau for a 4-2 win over the San Antonio Dodgers at Cubs Stadium Thursday night.

Boudreau picked up the win in relief, although Johnson was working on a two-hitter when he left the game with two out in the sixth. It was the second hit, a run-scoring double by Dan Cataline that drove Johnson from the mound. Two of Scott's seven walks were on base at the time and Todd Gauntlett's double down the left field line tied it at one.

BOUDREAU arrived to give Mariano Duncan one of those "don't-give-him-anything-to-hit" walks and then whiffed pitcher Dennis Powell with the bases loaded to end the threat. Manager Gary LaRoque had Gilberto Reyes on deck ready to pinch hit as Duncan was being walked, but let Powell bat.

When the Cubs scored two in the home sixth, LaRoque may have been second-guessing himself on his strategy. Dan Norman opened the inning with a double to left and when Varsho hit a fly to deep right, Norman tagged up and took third. When the relay was wild, he came home. Hyman then delivered his fifth homer over the left field fence.

Dan Cataline closed the gap to 3-2 with his 16th homer and third in three nights, which led one to wonder what Cataline might have done in Cubs Stadium if he had played here all year. Cataline once was Chicago Cub property, but, of course, if he hadn't been part of the trade that brought third baseman Ron Cey to Chicago, Midland's parent club might not be leading the National League East.

VARSHO SEALED it for Boudreau and the Cubs in the eighth with a wind-defying one-out solo homer to right.

The win gave Boudreau a 7-8 record and his first win since July 3, when San Antonio also was the victim. However, for relief pitchers long droughts between wins is one of the hazards of the trade.

Jones' 18th homer of the year came to lead off the second, clearing the fence at the scoreboard despite a gale that at the time was blowing in from center. It was also Jeff's third homer in three nights.

The Cubs have an unusually large number of castoffs from other organizations this year and Jones is one of them, having been released by the Cincinnati organization. "I think Jeff has proven to us he can hit," Manager George Enright appraises. "He's a hard worker and has a good attitude. I think he's a good addition to the organization."

Jones is second to Norman in homers and leads the club with 80 runs-batted-in. Johnson had a no-hitter going until Cataline beat out an infield hit, but the ssouthpaw's control kept in hot water in almost every inning. The worst was in the second when he walked the bases loaded with one out and then got dangerous Stud Pederson on a 1-2-3 double play rap to the box.

Johnson walked the first batter in the first, second, and sixth inning and the lead off batter in the fifth reache on an error, so he was working with men on base throughout his 5 2/3 innings.

Witherspoon seeks quick end in bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Tim Witherspoon, his World Boxing Council heavyweight crown on the line for the first time tonight against undefeated Pinklon Thomas, says he's hoping for an early ending to the fight.

"I'm looking for it to go no further than five rounds," Witherspoon said. "I want to let people know I am the true heavyweight champion."

The 26-year-old heavyweight, whose only loss was in a controversial split decision to Larry Holmes, enters the ring tonight billed as a heavyweight champion for the first time. It is one of three different heavyweight titles currently promoted, the others belonging to Holmes and World Boxing Association champion Gerrie Coetzee.

Witherspoon is a solid 2-1 favorite, according to the betting line on the Las Vegas Strip, but Thomas says he's not impressed.

"I don't see Tim as a great fighter," said Thomas. "I see him as a good fighter, but I know I can beat him. He says he'll knock me out, but I've never even been knocked down."

Witherspoon earlier in the week threatened to pull out of the fight unless he could be guaranteed more money, but said he put that behind him in final preparations for the fight.

Witherspoon weighed in Thursday at 217 pounds, one pound heavier than Thomas's 216, and proclaimed himself in great shape.

"I'm feeling real good, I've been running a lot and my weight is down," he said. Witherspoon weighed 220 when he won the title Holmes vacated last December in an elimination fight against Greg Page in March.

Perconte bunt turns into homer

Associated Press

The Seattle Mariners' public relations slogan this year is "Anything Can Happen."

They made good on their threat Thursday night.

Jack Perconte bunted trying to advance Spike Owen in the eighth inning of a scoreless tie. One fallen pitcher, two wild throws and two winded baserunners later, the bunt had turned into a two-run homer — sort of — and the Mariners had all the runs they needed for a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

It was textbook baseball, in the sense that such plays are supposed to take place in schoolyards.

"The way Morris was throwing, that's about the only way we were going to score," said Perconte, who was credited with a single. "I popped the bunt up, but I took enough off and Jack couldn't get to the ball."

"I just kept running. I figured they'd try for Spike."

Jack Morris had retired 11 straight Mariners before the recess bell rang.

American League

Owen walked on four pitches leading off the inning. Perconte, attempting to sacrifice Owen to second, popped the ball toward Morris, who fell trying to make the catch.

Morris then threw the ball into the bullpen down the right-field line.

Go, Spike, go! "I stopped at second, then I saw the ball get into the bullpen so I knew I had a real good chance to score," Owen said.

Right fielder Kirk Gibson retrieved it, and while attempting to get Owen at home, threw the ball wildly into the third-base dugout.

Perconte, credited with a single, never stopped running and was awarded home on Gibson's overthrow.

Morris, 17-9, threw a four-hitter in losing. Jim Beattie, 10-15, scattered six hits over eight innings to win. Ed Vande Berg and Edwin Nunez weathered an exciting ninth, and Nunez picked up his fourth save.

The Tigers loaded the bases with one out in the last inning. Nunez struck out Lou Whitaker, but Alan Trammell then walked to force in a run.

"We haven't played really well here. They swept us the first time and they took two of three this time," Trammell said. "But we showed the character of our team. We battled back and had an opportunity to tie. That's why we're in first place."

When Gibson grounded to second, school was out.

Brewers 7, Indians 6

The Brewers, mathematically eliminated Tuesday from the AL East race by Cleveland, are already playing spoilers. They dragged the Indians down with them into the "Wait 'til next year" club.

Cubs scalp Braves with tenth-inning heroics, 8-3

Associated Press

The Chicago Cubs reached into their bag of tricks, then gave away all their secrets.

Assured of afternoon games in their cozy Wrigley Field lair in any postseason action, the National League East leaders promptly made themselves feel right at home after dark in Fulton County Stadium.

They made a 3-2 deficit in the ninth inning disappear, as Thad Bosley cracked a home run to tie the score. The Cubs then transformed the nail-biter into a laugher, scoring five times in the 10th for an 8-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Chicago Manager Jim Frey, however, said his players aren't magicians.

"We got a lot of guys that can hit," Frey said. "I don't think you can put it any other way. There are no mirrors, no miracles."

Chicago loaded the bases with none out in the 10th, then a two-run single by Keith Moreland past a drawn-in infield, a two-run double by Ron Cey and an RBI single by Jody Davis put the Braves away.

"Somebody different every night seems to pick us up, to either win a ballgame or tie it like Thad did tonight," Moreland said.

Bosley said he's no mind reader. "Larry Bowa told me to look for a slider or change-up on the first pitch. I was fortunate enough to hit it pretty good," he explained.

Lee Smith, 9-4, gained the victory with two innings of relief work as the Cubs won for the 10th time in 12 games.

Braves starter Pascual Perez allowed only four hits, fanned nine batters and walked three in eight innings.

Atlanta broke a scoreless tie in the fourth with four consecutive hits off starter Scott Sanderson.Singles by Brad Komminsk and Dale Murphy and doubles by Gerald Perry and Randy Johnson brought in three runs.

Perez lost his shutout bid in the seventh when the Cubs scored two unearned runs. Cey was safe when third baseman Johnson booted his grounder, Bosley singled and pinch-hitter Jody Davis walked to load the bases.

Left fielder Komminsk trapped pinch-hitter Jay Johnstone's blooper but forced Davis at second as Cey scored. The second run scored on pinch-hitter Dan Rohn's foul sacrifice fly.

Murphy collected his 1,000th career hit in the sixth, a bad-hop single.

Expos 5, Dodgers 2

Dan Driessen drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a double and Bill Gullickson tossed a six-hitter as Montreal, behind new manager Jim Fanning, ended a string of six straight one-run losses.

The home run was the fourth for Driessen in his last three games.

"I changed to a lighter bat when we came off the road trip last week, and ever since then I've been having success," Driessen said.

Fanning, who managed the Expos for the final month of the 1981 season and all of 1982 before returning to his front office duties, donned the double-knits again, replacing Bill Virdon, who was fired earlier in the day.

Gullickson, 10-7, has won his last four decisions and is 9-2 in his last 17 starts.

National League

Giants 6-5, Phillies 5-6

Pinch-hitter Sixto Lezcano's bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning drove home Al Oliver with the winning run in the nightcap. Jeff Leonard's two-run homer in the ninth inning rallied the Giants past the Phillies in the opener.

Lezcano fought back from a 1-2 count to gain the base on balls. Two intentional walks in the inning came back to haunt the Giants.

Chili Davis homered in the seventh to give the Giants a 5-4 lead, but John Wockenfuss' RBI single in the eighth tied the score again.

Mike Schmidt, out of the regular lineup with a hamstring injury, stroked a two-run pinch homer in the sixth of the first game. Von Hayes added a two-run homer of his own.

Giants reliever Gary Lavelle made his 635th appearance with the club, breaking a record set by Christy Mathewson between 1900 and 1916.

Reds 4, Pirates 1

Ron Oester's two-run double capped a four-run third inning and rookie Jay Tibbs spaced seven hits as Cincinnati won the battle of the NL cellar dwellers. Tibbs, 3-2, ended a five-game Cincinnati losing streak. He walked four and struck out five. Jose DeLeon, 6-12, took the loss.

"These games used to be important between us and Cincinnati. Now we're just being the spoilers," Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner said.

"We've been near .500 since the All-Star break," Tanner said. "We're playing pretty good ball right now so we can look forward to next year. Right now, we're in the role of the spoiler."

Tibbs, 3-2, came in a trade earlier this year with the New York Mets for pitcher Bruce Berenyi.

"I know I can't overpower anybody, so I just try to mix my pitches up," said Tibbs, who struck out the side in the sixth inning.

Rebuilt Kern's future on hold

The initial reaction is: What's a relief pitcher like Jim Kern doing in the Texas League?

Back in the years before the streamlining of baseball's farm system, a player spent almost a career working his way up through the various levels of Organized Baseball...Class D, C, B, A, A-1, AA and, at last, if he was one of the lucky few, to the majors. In those days, it wasn't too unusual to find a "former major leaguer" playing out his years on a minor league team.

In fact, it was one of the attractions of minor league ball, watching a Charlie Root or Floyd Herman with Hollywood, an Alex Kampouris or Freddie Frankhouse with Newark, a Herschel Martin with Albuquerque, Clay Bryant with Tulsa, Gordon Maltzburger or Red Murff with Dallas, Goody Rosen with Syracuse, Joe Vosmik or Elon Hogsett at Minneapolis...the list goes on endlessly...

NOT ONLY were they playing out the string, but, whether they realized it or not, were in the process imparting wisdom and tricks of the trade to the young bull off the farm.

Then they streamlined the minor league set eliminating B, C, D classifications. The emphasis was youth and rapid development. The expanded roving coaching staffs of today replace playing with and against the wizened veteran of yore.

Still, every once in a while, an "ex-major leaguer" finds his way back, like Kern, but he's the ex-major leaguer, who figures he still has some years left and is trying to prove it to somebody.

"I started the season with the Phils and could have gone to triple A ball, but I needed the innings, so I came to El Paso. Milwaukee gave me a chance and the deal is that if they don't call me up in September, I'll be free to go to spring training with another club, providing I can convince them I still have something to offer," Kern said as the Diablos completed their season's series in Midland.

STILL, THE question remains as to how the American League's co-Fireman of the Year with the Texas Rangers found himself in this predicament.

"I hurt my arm last year with the White Sox," he explains, holding up his right elbow to display the scars. "They gave me a cortisone shot and then I was told I could pitch without any danger of hurting the arm...."

So 133 stitches later, Kern finds himself coming back from surgery that almost makes the rotator-cuff malady that afflicts pitchers seem mundane.

Kern had chunks taken out of the elbow during surgery and had to have corrective surgery on the damaged tendon.

"It was somewhat revolutionary," he explains. "Instead of stapling the tendon to the bone, they did it by using muscle."

As far as Kern is concerned the operation was a success. "I'm throwing 93-to-95 mph again and now I'm in the process of fine-tuning my delivery."

Midland Manager George Enright, who has seen Kern in action briefly, agrees that Kern "can still move the ball."

WHAT MAKES Kern of special interest is that the Texas League is from whence he came. He pitched for San Antonio, then a Cleveland farm, in 1973. From that club second baseman Duane Kuiper is about the only one still active.

Kern shutout Midland 1-0 April 21, 1973 on one hit, but recalls best a duel with El Paso lefthander Frank Tanana. "He struck out 15 and I struck out 14. I think it wound up 2-1."

Kern didn't convert to relief until 1976, his second full season with the Indians. He had 15 saves and from there went on to become a hot property. The Texas Rangers acquired him in 1979 and Kern responded with a 13-5 record and 29 saves.

Although he was traded by Texas, Kern still lives in Arlington.

As for the end of the season, "I might go to the Instructional League, but with a wife and three kids, Winter ball is out."

With the season's end at hand, Kern should get an opinion on his future soon. If the Brewers, a team in dire straits for pitching, do not call him up for a look, it may be hard to convince someone else that he still has something left.

Gators picked to shame 'Canes

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Just when everyone was wondering what Miami could do for an encore to its 1983 national championship, the Hurricanes provided an impressive answer with a 20-18 victory over No. 1-ranked Auburn in the Kickoff Classic.

The 'Canes started the season No. 10 in The Associated Press poll and considered it a slap in the face after last year's heroics.

The Kickoff Classic served as sufficient proof that the Hurricanes will not relinquish their crown without a struggle. But they will have even more incentive when they meet 17th-ranked Florida at Tampa Saturday night. Last season's opening-game loss to the Gators was Miami's only blemish en route to the national championship and they are getting tired of the bumper stickers which read "Florida 28, National Champions 3."

Miami was supposed to be the team in turmoil this year with a new head coach — Jimmy Johnson was named June 5 to succeed Howard Schnellenberger — and a rebuilt defense. But Florida stole the headlines this week when Coach Charley Pell announced his resignation at the end of the regular season as a result of a continuing NCAA probe into the Gators' program.

And just when it appeared that nothing else could go wrong, Murphy's Law prevailed. Dale Dorminey, the Gators' only veteran quarterback — his "experience" in three seasons consists of 11 passes and five completions for 55 yards and seven rushes for minus 10 yards — was lost for the season earlier this week with a knee injury.

Miami's Bernie Kosar, on the other hand, completed 21 of 38 passes for 329 yards and two touchdowns against Auburn. He was 24-of-45 for 229 yards against Florida in his varsity debut a year ago, but was intercepted three times. The Hurricanes also lost four fumbles.

This time Miami is a 4-point favorite. Technically, it's Miami's home game, but the majority of the spectators in Tampa Stadium will be Gators. For the first pick of the season ... Florida 24-21.

Four other members of the preseason Top Twenty make their 1984 debuts this week, with most of the others beginning next week.

BRIGHAM YOUNG at No. 3 Pitt (favored by 9): Playing quarterback for BYU makes you almost as visible as playing center field for the New York Yankees used to be in the DiMaggio-Mantle eras. The new man in the line of succession that goes back through Steve Young, Jim McMahon, Marc Wilson, Gifford Nielsen, etc., is junior Robbie Bosco. He was 17-of-28 for 252 yards and three touchdowns as last season's backup, which is what Young usually accomplished in two periods. "No matter who the quarterback is, you know what they're going to do — pass," said Pitt Coach Foge Fazio. The pick is ... Pitt 28-14.

Appalachian State at No. 4 Clemson (no line): Appalachian beat Wake Forest, one of Clemson's Atlantic Coast Conference brothersin the 1983 opener. But the Tigers are 30-2-2 over the past three seasons and have won 20 straight home games. This is just a warmup for ... Clemson 49-7.

Western Carolina at No. 19 Boston College (no line): Trying to keep his players from looking ahead to Alabama, BC Coach Jack Bicknell warns that "Western's passing game is a threat to any team they play." But BC's Doug Flutie, who threw for 2,724 yards last year, needs 2,875 to become major-college football's first 10,000-yard passer ... Boston College 42-14.

East Carolina at Florida State (13): Last year, in one of the wildest games ever played in Tallahassee, FSU prevailed 47-46 in a contest that featured 948 yards of offense. The Seminoles finished 7-5 and were 15 points shy of being 11-1; East Carolina went on to an 8-3 season add a No. 20 final ranking, the three losses coming at Florida State, Florida (24-17) and Miami (12-7). No one's taking the Pirates lightly this time, least of all ... Florida State 38-24.

Northwestern at Illinois (28): If passing is your thing, sit back and watch Jack Trudeau and Sandy Schwab fill the airlanes with flying objects ... Illinois 35-21.

Washington State at Tennessee (3½): This may come as a surprise to those who are used to the Cougars being an also-ran, but their five-game winning streak is the longest among Pac-10 teams and you have to look hard to find three better runners on one club than Kerry Porter, Rueben Mayes and Don LaBomme ... Washington State 24-17.

Mississippi State at Tulane (2½): Last season, the courts wouldn't allow Tulane to keep its quarterback all year. The new starter, Ken Karcher, found his way to New Orleans via Notre Dame and Pierce Junior College. MSU's Emory Bellard begins his push to get off the hot seat ... Mississippi State 28-21.

Rams to pick up where they left off

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The last time the Miami Dolphins saw the Washington Redskins was in Super Bowl XVII, a cloudy day in Pasadena, Calif. But the Dolphins got a clear view of John Riggins — usually from the back. The final score: 27-17 Dolphins.

The Redskins will be five-point favorites when Miami visits RFK Stadium in Washington Sunday, a big spread against a Don Shula-coached team, which rarely repeat past errors. And Dan Marino, last year's NFL offensive Rookie of the Year, is the quarterback instead of David Woodley, now trying to succeed Terry Bradshaw in Pittsburgh.

But Marino, while he played in last Friday's exhibition loss to Tampa Bay, is coming off a dislocated finger and could be a little rusty. And the Dolphins' defense is missing a key ingredient for stopping the likes of Riggins — linebacker A.J. Duhe, out with a knee injury.

So take WASHINGTON.

Monday night's DALLAS at LOS ANGELES RAMS (-2) is another replay — this one of the Rams' 24-17 victory in last season's NFC wild-card game that knocked America's Team out of the playoffs.

It's a revamped Dallas team that will be seeking revenge in Anaheim, with Gary Hogeboom starting at quarterback over Danny White and the likes of Harvey Martin, Drew Pearson and Billy Joe DuPree retired. Hogeboom isn't the most solid of choices — Coach Tom Landry says he may only be in for the first half.

The other White, Randy, signed this week, but his present value after missing training camp and preseason games is questionable. Eric Dickerson and Vince Ferragamo should be able to exploit the Dallas defense enough to eke out a close victory for the RAMS.

NEW YORK JETS (-1) at INDIANAPOLIS. Everything points to the Colts. It's their first regular-season game in the Hoosier Dome, where 61,000 fans will be cheering for them. The Jets haven't plugged the quarterback gap that opened when they traded Richard Todd to New Orleans and are missing injured Joe Klecko, Lam Jones and Bob Crable, among others.

Still, the Colts offense is land-based, and the Jets' strength is stopping the run. It'll be a low-scoring, maybe even a no-scoring game ... Take the JETS.

LOS ANGELES RAIDERS (-6) at HOUSTON. The Oilers have a new coach in Hugh Campbell and a new quarterback in Warren Moon, both from Canada. The Raiders don't have a new anything, which makes the choice ... the RAIDERS.

ATLANTA at NEW ORLEANS (-6). The Falcons are minus injured running back William Andrews, the Saints are plus quarterback Richard Todd and a defense that ranked second in the NFL last year. Chalk this one up for the SAINTS.

KANSAS CITY at PITTSBURGH (-6½). No Franco Harris and no Terry Bradshaw for Pittsburgh, but no Bill (broken thumb) Kenney at quarterback for the Chiefs. Jack Lambert and Co. provide a cruel welcome back to Pennsylvania for Todd Blackledge, whose father, ironically, is a Pittsburgh assistant ... Take the STEELERS.

NEW ENGLAND (-2½) at BUFFALO. The Patriots are hurting (Craig James, Irving Fryar, Clarence Weathers, Rich Camarillo). But Joe Cribbs, aka Buffalo's running attack, is in Birmingham with the United States Football League, and Joe Ferguson has just been introduced to his best receiver, Preston Dennard. Take the PATRIOTS.

Other games (home teams in caps):

NEW YORK GIANTS (-2½) over Philadelphia

San Diego (-3) over MINNESOTA

DETROIT (PLUS 2½) over San Francisco

CHICAGO (-6) over Tampa Bay

St. Louis (PLUS 3) over GREEN BAY

Cincinnati (PLUS 2) over DENVER

SEATTLE (-4½) over Cleveland

BEST BET: New England

No lights for Wrigley playoff

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Cubs, should they reach the World Series, will be allowed to play daytime games at Wrigley Field although it will cost them the chance to open at home.

Should the Cubs win the National League pennant, the first two games of the World Series will be switched to the American League city, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced Thursday.

Wrigley Field is the only major league stadium without lights, and with the Cubs currently leading the NL East by six games, the situation presented baseball with a problem.

If all the games scheduled to be played in the NL East city during the National League Championship Series and World Series were shifted from night to day, each major league team would lose an estimated $700,000 in television revenue.

An adjustment to the NL and AL playoff schedules will be made if the Cubs win their division, Kuhn said.

The first two games of the NL series would be played by day in Chicago, with the first two AL games at night. If Chicago does not win the NL East, Game 1 of the NL series would be a night game and Game 2 would be played during the day.

Statistics show the team that played the first two games at home has won the World Series 53 percent of the time. Kuhn also pointed out that visiting teams have won the seventh and deciding game 15 of 26 times that the Series has gone the distance.

"It's not a perfect solution," Kuhn admitted. "But it's the one that is the best compromise."

The option of installing temporary lights at Wrigley Field was blocked by state and local laws, Kuhn said. A state law restricts the amount of noise allowed at night games while the local ordinance prohibits athletic contests that would draw more than 10,000 people in an area surrounded by a large residential area.

"In our discussions with the people in Illinois, we decided we could not get relief for either one of the regulations," Kuhn said.

Other options included moving the Cubs' home games to either Comiskey Park, home of the crosstown White Sox, or County Stadium in Milwaukee, about 90 miles away.

Under the plan announced by Kuhn:

—If the Cubs win the NL East, the best-of-five playoffs will start with day games in Chicago Oct. 2-3. Both American League playoff games in that case would be played at night.

—If the Cubs do not make the playoffs, they will start with a night game at the NL East Oct. 2, followed by an afternoon game the next day. The American League playoff would begin with a day game Oct. 2 and a night game Oct. 3.

The AL playoffs will begin in the home park of the West winner.

—If the Cubs win the National League pennant, the World Series will start in the American League city with night games Oct. 9-10, moving to Chicago for day games Friday through Sunday, Oct. 12-14. The last two games, if necessary, would be at night in the AL city.

—If the Cubs do not win the NL, the Series will open with night games Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 9-10, in the NL park and move to American League for a night game Friday, Oct. 12, and day games Saturday and Sunday. The last two games, if necessary, would be at night in the NL city.

The possibility of moving the games from Wrigley Field "was an option we had in mind," the commissioner said. "It was not a frivolous one."

"However, I would not rule it out as an alternative for the future," Kuhn said. "Baseball must promptly find a clear-cut solution to the lights situation."

Had the original schedule held, and if Cubs hosted three weekday games during the World Series, baseball would have been required to rebate to NBC a large sum of money to compensate for the loss in advertising revenue.

The change will mean that only one game would be involved, Game 3 of the Series. Games 4 and 5, weekend games, would be played at night anyway.

An NBC-TV spokesman said the network and baseball executives would have to work out "an appropriate adjustment" if the Cubs are in the Series and Game 3 is played played by day instead of at night.

Minnesota Viking Jan Stenerud (19) is still doing the job kicking in the NFL at age 41 and after 18 eventful years. Stenerud is the field goal record holder with 338 entering the season opener Sunday against San Diego.

Stenerud turns back clock in 18th season

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It was 1967. A Beatles song called "All You Need Is Love" topped the charts, and a 24-year-old Norwegian ski jumper named Jan Stenerud kicked his first field goal in the National Football League.

Eighteen seasons and a record 338 field goals later, Stenerud is still kicking. He will try to add to his NFL record Sunday when his new team, the Minnesota Vikings, opens the season with San Diego.

Stenerud, at 41 the oldest player in the National Football League, is a living football museum.

He was only the second kicker to approach the ball from the side and swing his leg around in what's been called soccer style.

"Pete Gogolak of the (New York) Giants was first, but I didn't know that when I started doing it my senior year at Montana State," said Stenerud, who left Norway for Montana on a skiing scholarship.

Now, only Washington's Mark Moseley does not kick soccer style.

Stenerud's 338 field goals are three more than George Blanda's total, and Blanda attempted 129 more than Stenerud.

Minnesota fans are happy Stenerud has joined the Vikings after 13 seasons in Kansas City and four with Green Bay. After all, Stenerud's three first-half field goals for the Chiefs buried the Vikings in the Super Bowl IV in 1970.

"Luckily, nobody's around here anymore from that team," Stenerud said.

When you play in three different decades, history tends to repeat itself. A rival league, this time the United States Football League, challenging the NFL's supremacy is nothing new for Stenerud.

He and San Diego receiver Charlie Joiner are the only two active survivors from the American Football League.

"Is that right?" Stenerud said. "I didn't think any of us were left."

Times, of course, have changed.

"In the old days, it used to be tradition for kickers to come to training camp with pot bellies and their straight-toed shoes," Stenerud said. "But not anymore."

Stenerud was traded to Minnesota from Green Bay earlier this summer, but he had to beat out two other veteran kickers, Benny Ricardo and Rick Danmeier, to get the Vikings job.

Training camp wasn't as lax as the old days, either. Minnesota's new coach, Les Steckel, a lieutenant colonel in the Marine reserves, opened camp with a grueling ironman competition, complete with weightlifting and sprints.

Stenerud beat out all the kickers, punters and quarterbacks to win a new video recorder.

"I lift weights about once a year, but I do run a lot," Stenerud said. "I've never had a VCR. I think I'm the last guy in the league who doesn't tape all the games."

Steckel, who is three years younger than his kicker, wasn't surprised by Stenerud's condition.

"We have a mutual acquaintance in Iowa, and we played tennis together one day," Steckel recalled. "We jogged five miles to the tennis court, played two hours of real hard tennis and jogged back. That guy's amazing."

Jacksons score another 'Victory'

DENVER (AP) — Officials of Denver's two professional football teams say they're upset that rock star Michael Jackson and his brothers are getting lower Mile High Stadium rents for their Victory Tour than the Denver Broncos and Denver Gold must pay.

"It's disappointing to hear a sweetheart deal is being made for a one-time event when some people have a long-term commitment," said John Beake, assistant general manager of the National Football League Broncos, in comments Thursday to KUSA-TV.

Doug Spedding, owner of the Denver Gold of the United States Football League, said "It's obviously not right for someboody who has the stadium for three nights to be charged less than somebody who uses it nine or 10 times a year."

The sports team officials said both the Broncos and Gold pay 8 percent of their net ticket proceeds for stadium rental.

Officials push for Lewis H.S.

WILLINGBORO, N.J. (AP) — Local education officials say they want to rename either the township's high school or athletic stadium after quadruple Olympic gold medalist Carl Lewis, a native son.

Lewis, who at the Los Angeles Games became the first man since Jesse Owens to win four gold medals in track and field events, graduated from Willingboro High School in 1980.

Board of Education President William Whitehurst said he proposes renaming Willingboro High after Lewis and placing a life-size portrait of him and a plaque in the school.

"This guy has put Willingboro's name on the map, not only nationally, but internationally," Whitehurst said.

He said the move "probably would entice and inspire our youngsters academically and in other talents, like sports."

Sixth-place Cleveland, by losing, became the second team in the majors this year to be eliminated.

Rick Manning scored the winning run from third on an eighth-inning wild pitch. He had singled and moved to third on a double by pinch-hitter Bobby Clark, which chased reliever Steve Farr, 3-11.Mike Jeffcoat came on and threw the ball away.

Tom Tellmann, 5-3, pitched two-thirds of an inning and got the victory even though he gave up Andre Thornton's 29th homer and Mel Hall's fifth of the year.

Red Sox 9, Twins 3

Wade Boggs drove in three runs, scored three times with three hits and Jim Rice added a two-run double to highlight Boston's 16-hit attack. Rice grounded into his 33rd double play of the season — a major-league record — but Boggs scored to put the Red Sox ahead to stay.

Al Nipper, 7-5, settled down after a shaky start, retired 20 of the last 21 batters and finished with a six-hitter. He struck out seven.

Ed Hodge, 4-3, was knocked out in Boston's four-run fifth inning as the Twins dropped the sixth of their last eight games.

Blue Jays 4, White Sox 3

Lloyd Moseby's two-run pinch single capped a three-run ninth inning. With one out in the ninth, Willie Upshaw singled for only the fifth hit off Tom Seaver, 12-9. George Bell beat out a hit off Seaver's glove and Upshaw scored on a single by Willie Aikens.

Ernie Whitt then grounded out to first as the runners advanced before scoring on Moseby's looping single to left.

"Moseby battled Seaver and Seaver did a good job," said Toronto Manager Bobby Cox. "The hit blooped in and that about sums it up the way things have been going for Chicago."

Jim Gott, 7-6, working in relief of starter Jim Clancy, was the winner. Jimmy Key pitched the ninth for his seventh save.

Ron Kittle stroked his 27th home run for the White Sox.

Rangers 4, Royals 3

Charlie Hough, 14-12, scattered seven hits over eight innings, benefiting from three double plays in leading Texas over Kansas City. Hough struck out three and raised his lifetime mark against the Royals to 7-3.

In a game that featured five triples, Pete O'Brien drove in a run with his, George Wright scored once after his, but Willie Wilson failed to score after both of his as his Royals' teammates left him stranded at third three times.

Jorge Orta was more fortunate. After tripling home a run in the eighth, he scored the Royals' final run on a wild pitch.

Reynolds needs 'deliverance' from ear, jaw, teeth problems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds could use some deliverance from an inner-ear infection and jaw and teeth problems, but he hasn't been afflicted with any "mysterious" ailment, an aide said.

"Burt has had his physical problems, but he's on the mend," David Gershenson said Thursday. "It's nothing serious."

Gershenson labeled as "total inventions" recent reports by star-watching tabloids that the 48-year-old Reynolds was suffering from a serious illness. Earlier this summer, Reynolds was knocked out of work briefly by a kidney stone, and since then reports have persisted of his medical problems.

"He has not been well. He's had an inner-ear infection, he's had a jaw problem, he's been having an incredible amount of dental work and he's not been feeling well. But there's nothing mysterious or ominous," Gershenson said from Jupiter, Fla., where Reynolds operates a dinner theater.

Gershenson noted that Reynolds was scheduled to begin post-production work in about two weeks on "Stick," in which he directs himself playing an ex-convict.

Meantime, "he's riding horses, working out and visiting with his family," Gershenson said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ten years after her husband's testimony helped uncover the Watergate coverup, Maureen Dean is establishing hersalf as a stockbroker and wants to be known as "my own person, not just John Dean's wife."

Maureen Dean

"It's a very high-pressured job," Mrs. Dean says. "I think I'm attracted to that. When the pressure's on I seem to work better."

Mrs. Dean has been a career woman before, but to millions she is best remembered as the young, pristine and poised helpmate who sat in the hearing room day after day as Dean testified. Her nickname, Mo, became the title of her best-selling Watergate memoirs.

At 38, Mrs. Dean is still blonde, still clean-cut and still married to Dean, who after a stab at running a syndicated radio show is now in investment banking.

"We have a lot of fun talking about business," she said. "I'm proud of him. He's really happy. We've really grown together.

LONDON (AP) — A 16-page prose and poetry manuscript by the late John Lennon went for $22,880 as Beatlesfans shelled out more than $269,000 for memories of yesterday at Sotheby's auction house.

The jewelers Asprey and Co. bought the manuscript Thursday for an anonymous client, Sotheby's spokeswoman Anne-Marie Arpels said.

The seller, Rod Murray, who shared an apartment with Lennon in Liverpool before he became famous, said he was asked to join The Beatles but was unable to do so because he could not then afford a bass guitar.

A restaurant chain, the Hard Rock Cafe, bought a number of items, including one of Ringo Starr's snare drums for $1,430.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has a new pink rose named after her — one that can prick if mishandled.

Mrs. Thatcher officially named the rose after herself in a ceremony at her 10 Downing Street office, toasting it with a glass of wine.

The rose was developed by West German grower Reimee Kordes, who called it "Margaret Thatcher."

Donna Reed will be Miss Ellie on CBS show

NEW YORK (AP) — Donna Reed used to be concerned with measles, school grades and whether her TV kids, Mary and Jeff, were picking the right friends. Now her prime-time offspring are J.R. and Bobby, and she's worried about them fussin' and fightin' and maybe killin' each other.

Miss Reed, the all-American mom in the old "Donna Reed Show," has become the new Miss Ellie, mama of the irascible J.R. Ewing (Larry Hagman) and his brother, Bobby (Patrick Duffy), on "Dallas."

The two maternal roles are 18 years and miles apart.

"That's the attraction," said Miss Reed. "Miss Ellie does have bad boys. But they can't do anything that keeps her from loving them."

That sentiment could be severely tested if J.R. turns out, in some way, to be responsible for Bobby being shot. It was Bobby who fell from the chair after he was pelted with bullets apparently intended for J.R. on the final episode of "Dallas" last season. The cliffhanger will be repeated tonight.

Lee Rich, head of Lorimar, the production company behind "Dallas," said the actors involved didn't even know that Bobby was the one hit by bullets.

"We shot four different endings," said Rich. Sue Ellen (Linda Gray), Pam (Victoria Principal) and J.R. all were filmed in the hot seat. "I think everybody was amazed when Bobby fell out of the chair," Rich said.

The identity of the shooter, however, got out, and Lorimar had to re-shoot the first episode of the new season. Supermarket tabloids reported that the assailant was Morgany Brittany's character, Katharine Wentworth.

For many longtime TV watchers, the new Miss Ellie will also be a surprise. Miss Reed, winner of an Academy Award in 1953 for "From Here to Eternity," is taking over for Barbara Bel Geddes, who had open-heart surgery and "chose not to come back," said Philip Capice, the show's executive producer.

"I've always identified with that role," said Miss Reed. "I've coveted it for years."

Capice said Miss Reed was the producers' first choice because she was the appropriate age and had the right physical qualities and presence. "She has a kind of quiet authority, a simple elegance," he said.

The producers also had considered killing off the character, as they had when Jim Davis, who played papa Jock Ewing, died two seasons ago.

"The two situations are not the same," said Capice. "When (Jim) was no longer with us, we still had a strong maternal figure."

J.R. only shows a vulnerable side with his beloved mama. "We didn't want to remove the only remaining control factor in that family," said Capice. He said bringing in a favorite aunt character wouldn't ring true.

Having Miss Ellie undergo plastic surgery, a favorite soap-opera device, also was rejected. "The audience is sophisticated enough to know that this is entertainment, not real life," said Capice. "I think they'll suspend disbelief and go with the character."

The new Miss Ellie's coming-out party won't be until late fall, in the seventh episode. With Miss Bel Geddes in fragile health, the writers had constructed story lines that avoided her.

The hiatus will give Miss Reed, who won't use a Southern accent, a chance to get acquainted with the role and feel comfortable with the production.

Since "The Donna Reed Show" ended its eight-season run in 1966, the 63-year-old actress has been in semiretirement, writing a book about her real family and doing only a couple of TV guest shots.

"I didn't work because I didn't get the kind of scripts I wanted," she said. "I didn't want to play helpless women and victim roles. I had reached an age and stage where I could not, and would not, play that kind of role."

The highly visible "Dallas" part was a lure, but she said "the real reason I came back was because I received a fan letter from someone who had just seen (the 1946 film) 'It's a Wonderful Life.'

"He closed the letter by saying, 'Keep up the good work.'"

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

The opponents don't always get off to the best lead—if you know anyone who claims he does, he is either given to terminological inexactitudes or his methods should create suspicion. But don't give back any advantage you might have gained from the opening lead.

Four hearts was a perfectly normal contract to reach. South needed little more than heart support from partner to have a good shot at the contract.

West got off to the second best lead of a club. Declarer won in hand, crossed to the table with a trump and led a diamond to the king. West took the ace and seized the opportunity to lead a trump. Declarer played another diamond, but West won and returned his last trump. Since declarer could ruff only one diamond in dummy, he ended up losing three diamonds and a spade.

When West did not find a trump opening lead, declarer was a tempo ahead of the game. All he needed to make his contract was to ruff two diamonds on the board. At trick two, declarer should simply have led a diamond from hand!

The defenders can win and shift to a trump, but declarer is a move ahead. He wins and leads dummy's last diamond. Although the defenders can lead another trump, dummy still has two trumps to take care of declarer's diamond losers. Declarer has more than enough entries to his hand in the A-K of spades and club ruffs to ruff both losing diamonds and get back to draw the remaining trump.

How should declarer play at duplicate? That is a close question. The contract is normal, and if the ace of diamonds is onside, you can make an overtrick. In addition, even if the ace of diamonds is wrong, you still make the contract if trumps are 2-2 or if the defender who wins either the first or second diamond doesn't lead a trump. It is just about worthwhile to go for the overtrick.

Midland Lee cheerleaders get the crowd fired up for the football season at Lee rally Thursday.

Rebels rally for repeat

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

A crowd of over 1,000 Lee boosters gathered at the Lee Fieldhouse to meet the 1984 edition of the Lee Rebel football team Thursday night at a rousing rally, which was followed by a barbecue.

Football spirit is rampant at Lee these days, following, of course, in the wake of Lee's 13-3 season in 1983 and a berth in the state finals.

The Lee varsity, junior varsity and sophomore football teams were introduced to the throng as new head football coach Jack Tayrien promised an "exciting season."

Scotty Alcorn, the annual master of ceremonies at this event, once again stressed that Lee has the second smallest enrollment in District 4-5A with just under 1,700 students, but have "the largest football program with 160 players" from the sophomore level to the senior level.

Alcorn also said that Lee Freshman had 150 players out for football with an enrollment of 698 students. "The tradition is going on and on," said Alcorn. "We must be doing something right."

Although the summer heat was trying to tell the fans that football wasn't really upon us, the Lee band, cheerleaders, drill teams, Rebelettes and twirlers did a convincing job that fall was just around the corner. Those groups were so much a part of Lee's 1983 playoff glory and Lee band director Chester Story promised to "follow the team all the way, just like we did last year."

Cody Bell/Reporter-Telegram

Coach Jack Tayrien

J. Murphy Horton, who served as Lee Booster Club president in 1965 and 1973, was also given a special award for his service. He took the opportunity to take a blast at the state's new education reform legislation.

"I'm surprised that Gov. (Mark) White and His Excellency, Mr. H. Ross Perot are allowing a gathering like this. They are doing their best to destroy extra-curricular activity like this in our schools," said Horton.

"Education is not what is only found between the covers of books. It's the people who participate in extra-curricular activities who are our future leaders."

Horton's message brought the biggest response at the rally.

Alcorn followed by saying, "Over 40 percent of Lee's student body is participating in this rally when you count everyone involved. This is extra-curricular because everyone is here because they want to be here."

Herb Pearce, who is beginning his second session as Lee Booster Club president, will join Horton as the only two people to serve in that position two times.

Lee will scrimmage Andrews today in Andrews' Mustang Bowl. The JV teams will square off at 5:45 p.m. while the varsities will meet around 7:30 p.m. Lee's sophomores will entertain San Angelo at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the Lee Field.

Alcorn did make one obvious mistake Thursday, noting that Lee "is the only unbeaten team to play in Ratliff Stadium." He conveniently forgot Lee's 9-7 loss to Permian at Ratliff in 1981. He can be forgiven, however. Scotty probably left that game before it was over. Permian won in the final 13 seconds with a long field goal.

Lee scrimmages Andrews today in Andrews' Mustang Bowl. The JVs will start at 5:45 p.m. while the varsities are scheduled to scrimmage around 7:30 p.m.

Lee opens the season Friday, Sept. 7, by hosting the Lubbock Coronado Mustangs at Memorial Stadium.

Bulldogs take final exam tonight

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Tonight, for the first time in the six months Doug McCutchen has been the head football coach at Midland High, the Bulldogs will be facing a team wearing something other than purple as they host Lubbock Coronado in a scrimmage game.

The game is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at Memorial Stadium.

Though the game has no meaning as far as a team's record is concerned, it holds tremendous importance from the standpoint of showing McCutchen and his staff how much the Bulldogs have accomplished and how much farther they have to go before next week's season opener against Lubbock Monterey.

McCutchen installed a totally new game plan — both offensively and defensively — for the Bulldogs to learn during spring drills and has only had four weeks of practice time to teach his system: The Veer and 4-3 Defense.

"The main thing I want to find out is how far along are we," said McCutchen. "We feel pretty confident in a lot of areas but we haven't played anybody yet except ourselves since I've been here and we're really anxious to see how much we've accomplished. We want to see how we can compete against somebody else. I think it will be very educational for us."

Educational for Lubbock Coronado coach Kenneth Wallace as well since he too is in his first year as the team's head coach.

The scrimmage will also be a reunion of sorts.

"Kenneth Wallace got his job about the same time I got mine here," said McCutchen. "I've known him for years. We played football at Tech together, Wallace, (MHS assistant coach) Davis Corley and I."

THE FORMAT for this year's scrimmage will be the same as last year with both teams alternating possession of the ball.

"Nothing is firm yet but we'll probably run 15 plays with the first team offense and turn around and go 15 with the first team defense," said McCutchen. "Then we'll do 15 offensive and defensive plays with the second teams and probably repeat the cycle."

McCutchen said the kicking game probably won't play much of a factor in the scrimmage though both teams might want to lineup in a goal line defense and offense to run a few plays. He also mentioned practicing a few kickoffs, but the kickoff won't be used to start an offensive series.

Since both teams are learning new systems under new coaches, plays run will probably be kept close to basic.

"We've both kind of come to an agreement that we won't do much stunting on defense or run too many different ofensive formations," said McCutchen. "We're going to try and keep things pretty basic."

AFTER THE scrimmage, Midland High will hold it's annual Super Dog Night to give fans a chance to meet "players, coaches, cheerleaders, the band if they're present," said McCutchen. "We'll just introduce a lot of the people who will be involved in the athletic program this year."

The players will be given a few minutes after the scrimmage to go into the locker room for a refreshment and a quick breather. McCutchen thinks they'll be back out on the after 15 minutes or so.

Friendship '84 Games end with crowing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's answer to the Los Angeles Olympics, the Friendship '84 Games, ended with the hosts trumpeting their sporting achievements and taking a final blast at the Summer Games they shunned.

Sports and ceremony closed out the Friendship Games on Thursday, with the Soviets scoring a final triumph by winning the basketball championship and Soviet Olympics Committee president Marat Gramov proclaiming the Games more successful than the Olympics.

At a closing ceremony in Moscow's Rossiya Hotel, adjacent to the Kremlin, Gramov reiterated that the Soviet Union and 14 other countries, mostly its East bloc allies, were right not to go to Los Angeles.

"Boundless commercialization" characterized the Summer Games, he told an invited audience. "The atmosphere of Los Angeles once again proved the correctness of the decision" to boycott the Olympics, he added.

"In all aspects, Friendship '84 surpassed Los Angeles," a Bulgarian woman basketball player, Vanya Dermedzhiyeva, also told the audience.

After the speeches, the audience, which included only a few Soviet athletes in their bright red track suits, rose to watch a film of the Friendship '84 flame at Lenin stadium burning out.

The flame was lit in an Olympic-style opening ceremony Aug. 18 in the same stadium where the 1980 Moscow Olympics were opened. The ceremony launched two weeks of competition in nine sports.

Competition was held in several communist countries, including Cuba, site of the boxing tournament.

Though the Soviets insisted their Games were not meant to rival the Olympics, Gramov, both at a press conference and at the closing ceremony, said that Friendship athletes set 18 world records, compared to "only 11" at Los Angeles, and said that 47 Olympic records were bettered, compared with 45 in the Olympics.

There were some disappointments. Soviet swimmer Vladimir Salnikov failed to beat his own world records in the 400- and 1,500-meters. But he beat the Olympic gold medal times.

East Germany, whose athletes were said by other competitors to be bitterly disappointed at missing the Olympics, proved its sporting prowess in swimming, winning 16 events.

The Soviets dominated in most other sports, sweeping aside all opposition in field hockey, track and field, gymnastics and basketball.

Their basketball team took the last Friendship '84 title with a 105-70 clobbering of Czechoslovakia. Lithuanian Arvidas-Romas Sabonis scored 32 points and the Soviet coach declared afterward that his squad could have beaten the gold-medal American team in Los Angeles.

Nothing like Olympic Fever was generated by the Games, although Muscovites were enthusiastic spectators and television showed hours of competition throughout the day.

A few athletes emerged as stars. East German schoolgirl Sylvia Gerasch broke the world record in the 100-meter women's breaststroke.

Her compatriots also broke two relay marks, swimming the 4 x 100 meter freestyle in 3:42.41 and the 4 x 100 medley in 4:03.69.

In all three cases, East Germans held the previous marks.

Soviet swimmer Sergei Zabolotnov was the only man to break a world record, clipping American Rick Carey's mark of 1:58.93 to 1:58.41 in the 200-meter backstroke.

No world records fell in track and field, but 23 performances would have gained medals at the Olympics. All but three were in field events, a traditional strength of the East bloc.

County inmate sues ex-probation officer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 19-year-old Midland County jail prisoner on Thursday filed a $3 million federal suit against his former probation officer, Dr. Bobby Joe Mobley, whom, he alleges, sexually harassed him and performed sodomy with him.

The inmate, Alan Todd May, jailed for violation of his 10-year probated sentence for theft in 1983, is charging that Mobley, 51, "had other probationers in his home in which I also lived" and that Mobley and the probationers were "involved in sexual acts" and alcoholic beverage consumption.

Mobley, who resigned his $26,400-a-year post following an investigation by Texas Rangers and the Midland County Sheriff's Office, pleaded guilty Aug. 22 in Midland County Court to falsiying May's probation record and was fined $500 by Judge Bill Ahders. That same day, he pleaded guilty in justice court to having "deviate sexual intercourse" with May. Judge Robert H. "Bob" Pine fined him $81.50.

Mobley declined to comment "for the record" on the suit and his alleged involvement with May after he had consulted with his attorney, Ed Shelby.

In his suit, May, a bookkeeper, claims Mobley "used his position (as a probation officer) to constantly manipulate" May "to indulge in various sexual acts in order of not going to the Texas Department of Corrections for a term of 99 years."

May alleges Mobley violated his civil rights by coercing him to "indulge" in sexual acts and caused him to violate other conditions of his probation by taking him to Harrigan's Restaurant and to Leo's Oyster Bar for mixed drinks. May, who had pleaded guilty to theft, was placed on probation by 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin last December.

May will turn 20 on Saturday.

Though May names the State of Texas and the Midland County Adult Probation Office as co-defendants, Midland County Attorney-elect Mark H. Dettman said the 11th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution prohibits a state or a state agency from being sued for damages in federal court.

Mobley was one of nine probation officers in the Adult Probation Office.

"He's a good officer; he's one of the best," said Chief Probation Officer E.H. "Kirk" Kirksey, who was out of town on vacation during the Mobley investigation, misdemeanor convictions and resignation. Mobley post-dated his resignation to Aug. 22.

"But I don't want to say I condone any of that stuff," Kirksey said. He said he was "shocked" by the allegations against Mobley.

Mobley had been on Kirksey's staff since April of 1982.

The case initially had been in District Attorney Vern Martin's Office, which handles felony cases, but was transferred to county and justice courts.

Judge reduces sentence of pilot in hunting case

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Thursday re-sentenced Midland helicopter pilot J.C. Short Jr. to prison but at a reduction of his earlier sentence for violating federal wildlife laws.

He ordered Short to prison for one year, fined him $10,000 and placed him on probation for five years.

Short, 36, and co-defendant Larry Weldon Todd, 31, a Midland-Odessa hunting supplies businessman, had been convicted in federal court in 1983 of plotting to kill wildlife from Short's airborne helicopter in 1981 and 1982.

However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals dismissed one of three convictions against Short, but upheld the conspiracy conviction and his conviction of violating the Bald Eagle Protection Act. The court had dismissed the conviction that Short violated the Lacey Act, which prohibits the sale of wildlife taken or possessed in violation of the U.S. Airborne Hunting Act. The court dismissed that conviction due to insufficient evidence to prove the value of an eagle, deer or javelina shot from the air exceeded $350.

Todd, the alleged "promoter" of illegal airborne trophy-hunting trips costing up to $5,000 a hunt, was convicted of conspiracy, was sentenced to one year in prison and was fined $10,000. However, his attorney, Walter Wilson of Odessa, is appealing the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

At the appellate court-ordered re-sentencing, Bunton told Short that he hadn't changed his view of the Short-Todd deeds. At the original sentencing, Bunton termed their actions "despicable."

The judge initially had sentenced Short to 1½ years in prison, fined him $20,000 and placed him on probation for five years. A condition of probation was that Short not fly any aircraft. However, the judge did not impose that condition in his re-sentencing. And during the appeal, the judge had granted Short permission to do limited flying to maintain his livelihood, to paid his fines, and to try to sell his helicopter.

The judge ordered Short to begin serving his one-year sentence Oct. 1 at the Big Spring Prison Camp after Short said he needed "a little extra time" to work on his helicopter. Bunton told him a month's time should be sufficient for Short "to get your business affairs in order." Meanwhile, Short told the judge he is working for the King Ranch.

Short's attorney, Bill Alexander of Odessa, told the judge that the wildlife case's publicity "would deter him (Short) from committing another crime" and that the humiliation of being convicted would be hard to bear.

After the sentencing, Alexander said Short will "never be allowed to own a gun and therefore won't be able to hunt."

MCHD puts scalpel to property taxes, raises rates

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District directors Thursday put the scalpel to property taxes by decreasing the effective tax rate by almost a penny despite a 3 percent tax rate increase.

Hospital rates, however, were increased 6 percent for fiscal year 1985, which begins Sept. 1.

The effective tax rate was dropped from 7 cents to 6.24 cents per $100 valuation — meaning the owner of a $100,000 house will pay $62.40 in taxes instead of the $70 paid last fiscal year.

According to Midland Memorial Hospital Vice President of Finances Ron Peterson, with a projected 94 percent collection rate, about $2.98 million will be brought into the district.

He pointed out taxes will make up less than 7 percent of revenues in the $43.5 million budget.

The district's taxes are used for retiring or paying off the interest and principle on a $10 million general obligation bond, approved by voters in 1978, and paying for the care of the county's indigent patients. Another $100,000 of the taxes is set aside for the district's "nominal" operating expenses.

Indigent costs are expected to climb to $2.2 million for the fiscal year 1984, which ends Sept. 30, while projections for the next fiscal year call for a $2.8 million bill, Peterson said.

Total revenues should increase about $4 million with the 6 percent rate increase, according to Peterson, who cited the increase in revenues will come from new services that will be offered.

An IV admixture program, where the hospital's pharmacists rather than nurses will be responsible for mixing drugs to be administered to patients intravenously, is one service that will increase rates. According to Peterson, most hospitals have already switched over to using pharmacists.

"For better practices and appropriate medical control, the pharmacists should be the ones that are mixing the drugs," he said.

Additional equipment, such as a sterile air space, will be needed to control the environment in which the drugs are mixed.

Hospital rates will increase about 6 percent, compared to the 14 percent increase last year. Room rates will be hiked 6 percent, with the cost of a private room increasing from $160 to $169 and a semi-private room from $157 to $165 per day. The increase, however, is the first time since October 1982 that room rates have not been increased twice or more in a 12-month period, he said.

Costs for services such as laboratory tests, physical therapy treatments and X-rays will go up an average of 6 percent.

Total salary expenses are expected to climb 7.5 percent. About 6.5 percent of that increase is related to the hospital's merit program, which begins its second year. Under the program, employees only receive raises through merit evaluations, based on a 400-point scale, Peterson said.

For example, if an employee receives 290 points on the evaluation, he or she may receive a 2.5 percent salary increase. Those that score 390 points could receive a 9 to 9.5 percent increase.

During the last fiscal year, a 5.5 percent increase in salaries was budgeted for the program. Salary increases are only running at about 4.9 percent, however, indicating employees are not scoring as high on evaluations as projected, he said.

Hospital trustees say tax increase needed to fund indigent care

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 3 percent increase in Midland County Hospital District taxes is needed to fund a growing bill for the county's indigent care, according to hospital trustees. A majority of those costs come from indigent pregnant women who are having complications at birth — often the only time they show up for medical care.

Many of these patients, "drop-ins" at the emergency room, are transferred to Lubbock General or to Fort Worth Children's Hospital, which both have the sophisticated prenatal units these women and their babies need.

The cost of transportation to and care in these specialized facilities is substantial.

The total Midland County indigent care bill is expected to climb to $2.8 million during the next fiscal year.

"It may be less expensive to keep the money in Midland for indigent neonatal care," Midland Memorial Hospital President Ray Branson said Thursday. "We've got a six-bed neonatal intensive care unit but we're talking about acute care. It may be more feasible to put our money in our own acute care facility (than to pay for transporting the patients long distances)."

That move could come within six months, he said, depending on expansion plans of such units in area hospitals.

Since Oct. 1, 1983, indigent care has cost the district $1.92 million, $420,000 more than was budgeted.

"In terms of the dollars being spent, in the three years I've been here, it's been interesting to see how these numbers have grown," Branson said. "They are huge."

As an example, MCHD directors Thursday approved paying $24,226 to Fort Worth Children's Hospital for a woman who was transferred for neonatal care. Another $74,388 was paid to Harris Hospital in Fort Worth for a similar case, although this woman normally would have been transferred to Lubbock or to Fort Worth Children's. Because both were full, she was admitted to Harris Hospital but was treated by the Fort Worth Children's Hospital staff.

If many of these women had received proper prenatal care, they would not be suffering these expensive complications at delivery. Some of the children may require costly medical care for the rest of their life, depending on the severity of their conditions at birth.

According to Dr. Walter Parks, MCHD director, there are several reasons these women do not seek out medical help at the beginning of their pregnancies.

"Ignorance, lack of funds and I don't think the (public health) clinics can take care of them all anyway," he said.

"We have people caught in between who are not indigent but they're medically indigent. We have people who don't know, don't care or will only come to the hospital to have their baby."

Billy Joe DuPree to speak at United Way luncheon

From Staff Reports

Billy Joe DuPree, recently retired tight end for the Dallas Cowboys, will be the guest speaker at the United Way Kick-off Luncheon scheduled for 11:45 a.m. Sept. 10 at the Midland Center. The event signals the beginning of the United Way's fund-raising campaign in Midland, which runs through Oct. 25. This year's goal of $1,950,000 will support 22 member agencies which will provide services to more than 27,000 individuals in the coming year.

DuPree, a first-round draft choice from Michigan State in 1973, played his entire professional career as a Cowboy and established himself as the premiere tight end in the club's history. A durable player with a streak of over 163 consecutive games played (including playoffs), DuPree set a club record for receptions by a tight end in 1976 with 42. He was voted to the Pro Bowl in 1976, '77 and '78. His nine touchdown catches in 1978 led NFL tight ends. DuPree had two 100-yard games, catching six passes for 100 yards against St. Louis in 1975 and five for 108 against New Orleans in 1976.

As a college player DuPree caught 69 passes in three seasons in a run-oriented offense to finish third among all-time Michigan State receivers. He earned All-Big Ten honors his senior year. He also played basketball for the Spartans.

Winner of the 1982 Cowboys NFL Man of the Year award, DuPree is active in the United Way of Dallas. He is also a board member of Big Brothers of Arlington and board member of the Dallas Heritage Society. DuPree was a finalist in the 1979 Brian Piccolo-YMCA Humanitarian Award.

Midlander convicted in alleged dog fight

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 23-year-old Midland man who claimed two pit bulldog pups just "naturally" got into a scrape in his front yard became the fourth person in two years to be convicted in Midland County court for dog fighting — cruelty to animals.

The six-woman jury on Thursday placed the defendant, Anesto Espinoza Montez, on probation for one year and fined him $300.

Montez said "thanks," as each juror filed past the defense table. He could have been sentenced to jail for one year and fined $2,000 for the misdemeanor offense.

Prosecutor James Zane Brazell had argued for a $1,000 fine in addition to a 30-day sentence to be suspended and converted to a one-year probation.

"No more dogs for me," Montez, a construction worker, said after the jury had convicted him in Judge Willie DuBose's court-at-law. "That was my first and my last. They weren't hurt."

Montez said the two bulldogs were 3- to 4-month-old male brother pups. One belonged to him and was in his front yard about noon on April 1, day of the alleged dog fight. The second dog, belonging to Guadalupe Rodriquez, jumped out of Rodriquez's pickup just as he had driven up to Montez's house.

"There was no fight," he said.

His attorney, Edward Downing of Odessa, agreed.

"There was no organized fight. "The dogs just got together on their own accord. Pits are naturally aggressive animals. And when they make contact with other animals, they have a natural tendency to defend themselves."

Montez, who did not testify in the trial, said Rodriquez's dog jumped out of the pickup and lunged at his dog. But they were just playing, he said.

"(There was) no pit, no nothing," Downing said. "That's why we're arguing there was no fight."

However, Downing admitted that Montez's pup did have a puncture wound about the size of a "ball-point pen tip" in his neck.

Both dogs were picked up by Midland Animal Control officers but later were stolen, Montez said.

Two defense witnesses had testified that the pups were "playing" in Montez's front yard in south central Midland.

But a neighbor had telephoned police to complain of a dog fight.

"These dog cases are very hard to prove," Brazell said. "The moment police arrive, they (dog fighters) scatter."

The prosecutor admitted that pit bulldogs "are aggressive enough they'll fight at any age. They're just aggressive dogs."

Co-defendant Rodriquez is yet to be tried.

Animal Control Officer Lisa Ferguson had signed an affidavit in which she alleged a witness saw that "two men were fighting pits" and that police later spotted the two dog owners "standing around dogs, drinking beer, watching dogs fight."

Her affidavit, filed in the County Clerk's Office, said one dog had two puncture wounds in his neck.

Though Montez did not testify in the first phase of trial, he did testify in the punishment phase of the trial.

"Who's the victim of this crime," Brazell had asked Montez.

"Me?"

"Wouldn't the dog be the victim?" Brazell replied.

Later, Brazell told the jurors that the victim of the dog fight was "someone who cannot speak up for himself...This is one of God's creations — this poor dog."

In 1982, eight people were charged with fighting pit bulldogs in a makeshift pit southeast of Midland. Four of the eight apparently left town and still are at large. Of the remaining four, one, Bill Rich, was acquitted. Another, David Heard, pleaded guilty to promoting a dog fight and was fined $250. Two others, James Wayne "Bubba" Burton, and Willie Whitmire were convicted. But the Texas Court of Appeals reversed Whitmire's conviction due to insufficient evidence. Each had been fined $1,000 by a jury and was placed on probation for one year.

Rio Grande Valley faces 'crisis'

McALLEN (AP) — The Rio Grande Valley faces another unemployment "crisis" this fall as an estimated 10,000 migrant farm workers begin coming home to an area still suffering from last winter's devastating freeze, an official said.

But a state public works bill that will be introduced when the legislature meets in January could provide long-term relief against future economic disasters, said Hector Rodriguez, a leader of Valley Interfaith, a non-partisan coalition of Valley churches and parishes.

Unemployment could rise by 10,000 in the Valley during the next eight weeks, according to Michael Patrick, an economist with the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service in Weslaco.

The increase in migrant workers coming home from fields in the north could push the unemployment rate to 21.5 percent this fall, only slightly less than the 22.6 percent peak last January.

The public works bill would create a fund to be used in areas of chronic unemployment or sections of the state hit by a natural or economic disaster, Rodriguez said.

Currently 13 counties, including six South Texas counties, would qualify for public works funds under the proposed bill, sponsored by Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownville.

The measure was passed by the Senate during the special session of the legislature this summer. However, the bill was not considered by the House and so it will have to be introduced in both houses when the next session begins in January.

Rodriguez said a state appropriation of at least $35 million would be needed to set up the fund, which he called "unprecedented."

"The issue of unemployment and hunger is with us again, only it will be worse this year. By the time the freeze destroyed agriculture last year, much of the crop was already in," Rodriguez said. "Unemployment in the Valley promises to reach crisis proportion."

Last winter's freeze, which devastated the citrus industry and destroyed crops, left an estimated 70,000 people unemployed.

Long lines formed as soup kitchens, state unemployment offices, churches and other agencies fought to provide assistance to impoverished, unemployed workers throughout the Valley.

Patrick said more than $15 million in assistance came to the disaster-stricken area.

Pecos County judge named in suit

FORT STOCKTON (AP) — The Pecos County Judge has been named in a federal suit which accuses him of violating the constitutional rights of 2,000 defendants who allegedly were denied legal counsel in his court.

The suit, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Pecos, accuses Pecos County Judge Charles E. Warnock of violating the 6th and 14th amendments.

Attorney Dick Barajas, representing three plaintiffs, said the suit follows an investigation into court records, revealing that more than 2,000 defendants since 1978 were denied legal counsel during court proceedings.

"The implications are substantial. The investigation indicates that more than 2,000 cases are void from a legal standpoint," Barajas said. "The law is clear. If a defendant is charged with a crime and, in fact, sentenced to jail, he must be allowed an attorney. Since 1978 this hasn't been the case."

Barajas noted that, should the suit prove successful, the expense to the county could be immense due to the fact that defendants in this and potential suits filed in the future, could be ordered to pay court costs and attorneys fees in the numerous cases.

"I have not had the opportunity to study (the contents of the complaint)," Warnock told the San Angelo Standard-Times Thursday. "I've been in court all day and I haven't had the opportunity to even look at it."

On Thursday, one of the plaintiffs — Carlos Mata — was denied a motion for a new trial after Barajas said Mata was denied legal counsel in the original trial.

Mata was charged with assault and sentenced to six months in jail, three months suspended, fined and ordered to pay court costs.

Other plaintiffs are Ricky Baiza, charged with assault and Cruz Villalba, charged with driving while intoxicated. Both men were sentenced to 90 days in jail and ordered to pay a fine and court costs.

Stephen Spurgin, the Fort Stockton city attorney, has joined Barajas in the lawsuit.

"Judge Warnock's actions toward the plaintiffs were illegal and unconstitutional," Spurgin said.

Spurgin said the federal suit alleges Warnock denied counsel for defendants on trial before county court and that the defendants were indigent.

Project promotes U.S. citizenship among Texas Hispanics

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A project aimed at promoting American citizenship among Hispanics has drawn hundreds to naturalization classes, officials say.

"Never before have so many people been in citizenship classes in San Antonio," said Mariana Scuros, director of the naturalization project for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

San Antonio is 52 percent Hispanic and much of South Texas is heavily Mexican-American.

MALDEF launched the citizenship project in March and already 577 persons have enrolled in classes and 425 have applied for citizenship. The enrollment marks a 400 percent increase over last year, Ms. Scuros said Thursday.

MALDEF will start a similar project in San Francisco in October, she said.

The project was applauded by San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who said Hispanics have shunned citizenship for various reasons.

"They felt they might be disloyal to the mother Mexico or the benefits of society were accruing to them without their making that choice of the heart," he said during a news conference in the city council chambers

"Now there are very strong reasons for people to take part in the citizenship drive," Cisneros said.

"What we are seeing here is an unprecedented opportunity for Hispanics to participate in the political process. Never before have we had such opportunities to elect minority people," the mayor said.

Albert Bustamante, unopposed for the 23rd District congressional seat, said he remembers when most Hispanics rejected the idea of citizenship because they planned to return to Mexico or because they feared approaching immigration authorities.

Bustamante, a Democrat, said he would work to beef up naturalization personnel at South Texas Immigration and Naturalization offices, where backlogs are cropping up because of the citizenship drive.

On the average, it takes a year for citzenship applicants to get interviews in San Antonio. In Laredo, and Corpus Christi, the wait is even longer.

INS has added four examiners in its San Antonio office and the service has beefed up its staffs nationwide because of the backlogs.

But Ms. Scuros urged more INS efforts.

"The good faith effort INS is making to increase its manpower in naturalization and MALDEF's initiative to increase the number of Hispanic citizens represent a bona fide opportunity for both organizations to work closely together in mainstreaming more people into American society.

Two unidentified women rob Midlander

From Staff Reports

A Midland man was robbed early Thursday morning of more $12,000 in jewelry and other items after he offered two out-of-town women a place to stay for the night, according to police reports.

Harold Riggan of 5103 Brighton Court told police he was at the Kent convenience store and gas station at Fairgrounds Road and U.S. Highway 80 at 3 a.m. Thursday morning when he met two black females who told him they were in town for a funeral and did not have a place to stay. Riggan said he offered to let them spend the night and they followed him to his residence.

According to reports, Riggan said the three talked and played cards for about an hour before he fell asleep. When he awoke at 5 a.m., the two had left.

Also missing were a $7,950 gold watch, a $4,000 diamond and gold nugget and three checks worth $11,950.

The women, no other descriptions provided, were driving what Riggan thought was a green Oldsmobile, reports indicated.

In other complaints filed with police Thursday, Cruz Nabarrete, 2301 Orchard Lane, reported his wife had left the house at 4:30 p.m. and returned an hour later to find the house burglarized. Taken were three watches valued at a total of $80, a $90 phone and $8,000 worth of pesos, reports indicated. Entry was gained through a bathroom window.

Julie Faubel, 4501 Falcon Place, reported her home had been burglarized and an unknown amount of jewelry taken between 8 a.m. and 5:50 p.m. Thursday. Entry was gained by breaking out a kitchen window.

The jewelry included a pair of diamond earrings, a black onyx heart, gold ring, diamond pendant, gold chain and a watch.

Lisa Reed of 5101 N. A St., reported a man's gold and diamond ring valued at $800 was missing from her apartment. Reports indicate the ring was thought to have been taken a month ago.

In another burglary, a woman reported her residence in the 100 block of East Oak had been entered between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Wednesday. Reports indicate the only items taken were 20 pair of women's underwear from a dresser drawer.

Midland man hospitalized after barn fire

From Staff Reports

A Midland man remained in satisfactory condition this morning and a woman was treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital after suffering burns in unrelated fires Thursday.

Morris Jackson, 60, of rural Midland, suffered first and second degree burns on his arms and legs when his barn on South Lamesa Road caught fire at 10:20 a.m. Thursday.

Misuse of gasoline was believed to be the cause of the fire but no source of ignition had been determined by fire department officials this morning.

Three hundred gallons of water were used on the fire, which totally destroyed the barn.

Laticia Salazar, 23, of rural Midland, was treated and released at the MMH emergency room following a fire at a mobile home on South County Road 1218 at about 1 p.m. Thursday. The fire, believed to have been started in a bathroom by a child playing with matches, was extinguished by the occupant before firemen arrived.

Owner of the mobile home was listed as Jaime Salazar, also of rural Midland. The bathroom received moderate damage.

Midland firemen were called to the scene of a storage room fire at Furr's Supermarket, 2208 N. Big Spring, at about 10 a.m. Thursday. The fire, believed to have been caused when a water heater pilot light ignited a dust mop, was extinguished by the sprinkler system.

The room and its contents sustained moderate damage from the water and the water heater sustained minor fire damage.

Firemen also responded Thursday to a car fire at West Wall and Eisenhower at about 11:30 a.m. Teri McNeish of Odessa was the owner of the car, which was blazing on arrival and considered a total loss. Cause of the fire was traced to a fuel leak.

Hospital offers medical seminars

BIG SPRING — "Hair Transplants as an Office Procedure" will be the first in Malone-Hogan Hospital's September series of continuing medical education seminars. DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Procedures could help victim

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our neighbor has seizures. If one occurs, what should I do? — Mr. R.G., Miami, Fla.

Dear Mr. G.: There are generally three different types of seizures: tonic-clonic ("Grand Mal"), absence ("Petit Mal") and Complex-Partial ("Temproal Lobe" or "Psychomotor"). If you are trying to help a person who is have a tonic-clonic seizure, the following procedures are recommended:

1. If you or the person with epilepsy senses an impending seizure early enough, you may be able to help the person lie on the ground.
2. Don't try to restrain the person. The seizure must run its course; it can't be stopped once it has begun.
3. Clear the area; particularly, remove hard or dangerous objects so the person experiencing the seizure will not be injured by them.
4. If the person is wearing glasses, remove them.
5. Loosen clothing in the neck and head area.
6. Turn the person on the side to allow saliva to drain from the mouth.
7. Do not place any hard objects in the mouth or between the teeth. (It could cause choking or damage to the mouth or teeth.)
8. When the person regains consciousness and the seizure ends, help him find a place to rest or become reoriented. Most persons recover spontaneously. Thus, it's usually unnecessary to call a physician. However, if the seizure lasts more than 10 minutes, or if one seizure follows another, medical help should be sought. Since the absence seizure is only a momentary loss of consciousness and the chance of injury is remote, no help is necessary. Generally, with a complex-partial seizure, there's little you can do or should do other than calmly and reassuringly help to protect the person having the seizure from accidental injury. When consciousness is regained, you may help the person get reoriented.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Without getting too complicated, can you explain what happens to a woman's ability to have satisfactory sexual relationships after she has had a mastectomy? — Beatrice, Eugene, Ore.

Dear Beatrice: A noncomplicated answer to your question is "nothing". From a physiological standpoint, the sexual functioning of a woman who has had a mastectomy is in no way different from what it was before the surgery. Moreover, her partner's physiological sexual response is not affected in any way either.

If a couple's sexual adjustment is affected after a woman has a mastectomy, the cause must be sought elsewhere — in attitudes, myths and misperceptions.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would you discuss the place of a liquid meal before a scheduled athletic event? Is there any reason that a liquid meal could not take the place of a regular pre-game meal? — Tony, Oakland, Calif.

Dear Tony: Some liquid meals are easily digested and nutritous and are appropriately high in carbohydrates and low in fat. However, a regular pre-game meal can provide a greater variety of nutrients and, since a meal is a social activity, may be more pleasurable.

Fame doesn't turn pet pig into a 'ham'

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Just like a popular comedian, pigs don't get no respect.

As a matter of fact, they are usually ignored altogether unless someone is trying to put them on a plate with a side order of eggs and hash browns.

But a Houston pig, named Priscilla, rose from the ranks of obscurity into the limelight a month ago. And her owner says fame has not gone to Priscilla's head.

This courageous swine is said to have saved the life of an 11-year-old boy at Lake Somerville July 29 by pulling him safely to shore after he had wandered too far out into the water.

This "Superpig" is owned by Victoria Herberta. She claims that her pet is one of the few pigs around that is able to swim.

Ms. Herberta said teaching her pig to swim was easy, even though it didn't like the idea at first.

"She squealed about being in the water for a few days," Ms. Herberta said. "But all I did was take her out and let her paddle her legs in the water. After three or four days I let her go and hoped she would swim, and she did. Now she loves it."

It was Pricilla's love of swimming that got her to Lake Somerville, her owner says.

Ms. Herberta and a few friends went to the lake to swim and they decided to take the pig.

She said her friend Carol Burk decided to go along with the group, and brought her son Anthony, a resident of the Brenham State School which is near the lake.

While Ms. Herberta and her other friends were on one side of the lake, Mrs. Burk, Anthony, and Priscilla were swimming, when Anthony wandered too far out, she said.

Priscilla was swimming nearby, and Mrs. Burk told her son to grab hold of the pig's collar. At first, Anthony and the pig went down, but soon they were afloat again, and Priscilla pulled the boy close enough to the shore where his feet could touch the ground, Ms. Herberta said. He walked the rest of the way to safety.

Anthony was coughing a little and was frightened, but he was all right.

Ms. Herberta said she was very proud of her pig after she heard what it had done.

"I was very thrilled and overwhelmed by what she had done," said Ms. Herberta. "But I have always said Priscilla is very sensitive to human pain."

And what are some of the rewards the courageous pig has received for her life saving efforts?

Ms. Herberta said she has been getting everything she likes, but more and more of it.

"She has gotten more walks, and more rides in the car," she said. "She has also gotten more of her favorite foods like chocolate-chip cookies, tuna fish, and pimento cheese sandwiches. She has been rewarded so much that she has gained over eight pounds."

Researchers breeding crocodiles

PORTO JOFRE, Brazil (AP) — Government researchers in one of the world's largest swampland wildernesses are breeding crocodiles, hoping to increase their numbers and make the smuggling of their hides much less lucrative.

"We're not sure how this will work out, but maybe we could flood the market," said the head of the Parks Division of the National Forest Service, Raquel Milano.

Most of the contraband crocodile hides, about 500,000 yearly, slip out of Brazil from a massive, beautiful swampland called the Pantanal, about 1,250 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro, and wind up as expensive belts, shoes and handbags abroad, officials say.

The marsh also is home for several hundred species of birds, cattle, tapirs, jaguars, fish and the world's largest rodent, the four-foot-long capybara.

Game hunting and skin exporting are illegal in Brazil, but that hasn't stopped the coureiros, as the skin poachers are called in the nation's Portuguese language.

The smugglers come at night in canoes. They stun the crocodiles with flash lights, shoot them, take the hides and toss the carcasses back into the dark waters.

The government researchers work during the day, studying the crocodiles' habits and breeding.

"This is just the beginning," said Carlos Yamashita at the government's research center. "As the law now stands, breeders still could not kill or export crocodiles."

Biologist Renato Centra Soares works at marking crocodiles taken into captivity.

"We need to study and watch to see what the real danger to the crocodiles is in the long run and the viability for breeding," he said.

Three concrete tanks hold several dozen young crocodiles in waters made to simulate their natural habitat. The dirt bottoms of the tanks hold native greenery and fish.

"The smugglers have better arms and better boats than the government," said Justice Ministry press aide Antonio Alberto Simoes during a telephone interview in Brasilia, the capital. "It takes a lot of money, helicopters, boats and people to control this."

Marigold hunt ran for 21 years

David Burpee in 1954 started the longest-running publicity stunt that seedsmen have ever known when he offered a $10,000 prize to anyone who could come up with a white marigold.

Gardeners submitted 8,208 entries, and Burpee's spent over $250,000 evaluating their seeds until on Aug. 12, 1975, Mrs. Alice Vonk, Sully, Iowa, a widow with eight children and 25 grandchildren, won the $10,000.

Tourists have returned to Galveston following clean-up of the beaches from an oil spill earlier this month that saw globs of oily, tar float ashore.

Galveston beaches clean-up ends

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Scattered patches of oil still stain Galveston beaches, but efforts to clean up what's left of the tar-like mess that washed ashore Aug. 3 have been halted because "you'll never get it squeaky clean," a Coast Guard spokesman says.

By the end of the week, Mayor Jan Coggeshall said, only one cleanup crew will be on call. Scores of teams scoured the beaches in the weeks after the spill.

Sand on the island's beaches still has an oil content of between 1 percent and 4 percent, Coast Guard Lt. Larry Clark said Thursday.

Ordinarily, Clark said, the sand contains no oil "except right where there's a tarball." But "natural processes" will break down the remaining oil, Clark said.

"You'll never get it squeaky clean," he said. "You'll never get it as clean as it was before the spill."

The British tanker Alvenus spilled about 2.8 million gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico July 30 after it ruptured south of Cameron, La.

The 690-foot vessel is now docked at Todd Shipyards in Galveston, awaiting repairs, Clark said.

He said he was uncertain how much the cleanup had cost.

Between 80,000 and 100,000 cubic yards of sand have been removed from the island's beaches since the spill, Ms. Coggeshall said. But she said the loss "isn't going to make that much difference" to the environment, according to a report by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Cleanup efforts of the city's seawall will continue, Clark said.

City officials had asked that that cleanup also stop for enough time to let the oil weather on the rocks.

"They've tried about seven different things, different kinds of water blasting, sand blasting, (chemical) dispersion, but because this is such a crude oil, they're having a difficult time figuring out how to get it off the rocks and the seawall," the mayor said.

Pressure mounts to guarantee all deposits in troubled thrift bank

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Pressure on thrift industry regulators to announce a guarantee of all deposits at the American Savings and Loan Association appears to be mounting, despite the appointment on Tuesday of a new chairman and chief executive of the Financial Corp. of America, the embattled parent of the nation's largest thrift institution.

"It's an emergency situation," said Andrew Racz, managing director of Rooney, Pace Inc., a New York-based securities firm. A guarantee of all deposits, he added, "may be the cheapest way now for the regulators."

A former executive of the industry's chief regulating body, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, who asked not to be identified, said, "Financial is still in a position where many investment managers at big insurance and pension funds are going to be looking very hard at their certificates of deposit when they come due, regardless of who's in charge there."

A spokesman for the Bank Board, which insures thrift unit deposits of $100,000 or less through the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., declined comment.

Financial reported on Aug.15 that $15 billion of the $25 billion in deposits at American Savings and Loan would come due for payment by Sept.30, with nearly half of the money owed to major depositors who typically had accounts of $5 million or more.

A guarantee of all deposits at a savings institution would be unprecedented by the Bank Board; the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. authorized one for all deposits at the floundering Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. last May.

The decision to guarantee the Continental deposits gave rise to a debate as to what incentives managers of large financial institutions had to avoid unnecessary risks if the government stood ready to rescue depositors once too many loans went sour.

Donoghue's Money Fund Average (Averages for all 256 taxable funds)		38	10.60	10.58

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 256 taxable money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (R) of Holliston, Mass. 01746 increased $432 million to $170.8 billion during the week ended August 29, 1984. The taxable funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 10.60 percent from 10.62 percent. The taxable funds' 30-day average yield increased to 10.58 percent from 10.54 percent. The taxable funds' average maturity increased one day to 38 days.

William E. Donoghue says, "Average maturities of money funds have not changed significantly over the past four weeks. This indicates that portfolio managers are not convinced that short-term money market rates have peaked, despite the increased activity in the stock market during August. Of the 21 largest money funds, 12 now have shortened their maturities, 8 have lengthened and one fund's maturity has remained unchanged. The slight decrease in the 7-day DONOGHUE MONEY FUND AVERAGE is largely due to lower yields of funds which invest heavily in Treasury securities."

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven- and thirty-day period. Past returns are not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. x - average term to next rate adjustment date, g - one-time sales charge, r - restricted availability. Delay on lead gas is urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is being urged by several of the nation's largest oil companies to delay for two years the ordering of a 91 percent reduction in the use of lead in gasoline.

EPA Administrator William Ruckelshaus last month proposed ordering the 91 percent reduction by January 1986, saying that doing it then rather than waiting until 1988 would save 50,000 children from possible brain damage.

But because several companies said they could not upgrade their refineries that fast, the agency is looking instead at the possibility of ordering a smaller, 54 percent reduction by next July and delaying the rest of the cut until January 1988.

Edward DiCorcia, vice president of refining for Exxon Co. USA, estimated at a hearing Thursday on the proposal that the 91 percent reduction — from the currently allowed 1.1 grams per gallon to 0.1 grams — will increase the cost of gasoline production by 3 to 5 cents per gallon.

"A lead phasedown schedule which is too rapid will have negative supply effects which would place unnecessary costs on consumers," DiCorcia said. "It is not likely that all the needed facilities could be completed before mid-1987."

However, he and officials of several other oil companies refused to speculate just how much of the cost increase would be passed on to consumers through higher prices at their service station pumps.

Officials for Union Oil Co. and Standard Oil Co. of Indiana (Amoco) echoed DiCorcia's views on adopting the 1988 timetable.

"Amoco does not object to the removal of lead from gasoline," said Jerrold Levine, director of corporate studies for the company. "We do, however, have serious reservations about the industry's ability to meet the accelerated timetable EPA has proposed. At worst ... (it) could lead to shortages and gas lines in some parts of the country."

LEGISLATIVE WATCH

Is Congress considering a federal severance tax?

By ED THOMPSON

Although the domestic petroleum industry escaped any major taxation in the Texas legislative sessions, the severance tax in New Mexico was jumped considerable, and there are 52 petroleum tax proposals still in the congressional hopper.

One congressional member has introduced a bill to limit the state severance tax to the amount it takes to administer the respective states' oil and gas program. Could congress be considering a federal severance tax? Such a federally inspired tax program could impose heavy penalties on Texas and New Mexico by limiting income for schools.

•••

ONE ECOURAGING comment read recently was made to Senator Ted Kennedy, and it was to the effect that, the only thing that price controls and increased taxes do is to create shortages and increase prices. Those pearls of wisdom were uttered by young Joe Kennedy, son of the late Senator Robert Kennedy. Young Joe is now in the oil business, and has discovered what the oil business has been preaching for the past 20 years.

Hopefully, Senator Kennedy will listen to someone that close but there are others on whom the industry can focus its attention, namely Senators Metzenbaum and Bradley and Representatives O'Neill, Rostenkowski, Dingel and Sharp. Each of these legislators continues to believe that the domestic petroleum industry, and the independent segment in particular, are singularly under-taxed, as well as over-regulated.

•••

ONE WAY the oil industry might find its lobby efforts more effective would be to concentrate on committees and sub-committees of the House and Senate. These people are permanent employees actually doing the nitty-gritty of putting bills together, so that the Senate and House can vote on them. Maybe, by doing an educational job on them, we could change the whole attitude of the bureaucracy in Washington.

•••

WHILE THE domestic petroleum industry is busy trying to fight its way back from a devastating slump in drilling and production, following the OPEC cut in crude oil prices and the double whammy of the Windfall Profits Excise Tax, Congress seems to be trying to find ways to further hamstring the industry with added taxes.

They continue to worry about raising money while ignoring a perfect obvious source of income. We keep selling Russia grain, at world market prices, when all studies have shown it would cost them at least 50 percent more to grow that same grain, if the weather, land and their primitive methods would even allow them to produce said grain. Why not, then, let that grain help recoup some of our defense budget and, maybe, even reduce our deficit, by charging Russia what the grain is really worth.

Of course, there are some problems. Do they ever actually pay us for any of that grain, and do we end up sending the money back to buy Russian Vodka, probably made from that grain we sold them too cheaply. Another way to cut taxes, and the deficit, might be to ship surplus butter, flour, grain and whatever else we pay farmers for to third world countries instead of loans.

Workers are installing more than 410 tons of steel reinforcing bars in preparation for some 3,100 cubic yards of concrete to be used in the foundation of a renovation project at an Exxon Co. U.S.A. refinery in Baytown, east of Houston. When complete, the $500 million project will allow the refinery to process lower-cost crude oil from Exxon says.

FTC fines Texas oil firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission says a Texas oil and gas firm has agreed to pay a $230,000 civil penalty to settle charges that it violated the Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust act.

The fine to be paid by Coastal Corp. of Houston is the first such penalty collected under the act, the commission said Thursday.

Coastal also agreed to divest shares of Houston Natural Gas Corp., stock which it was charged with acquiring in violation of the act.

Under the act, firms contemplating mergers or acquisitions must inform the commission and the Justice Department in advance. There is a specific waiting period to allow the agencies to consider whether the merger would violate federal antitrust laws.

Coastal, which already owned $15 million worth of Houston Natural Gas stock, purchased another 75,500 shares of that firm's stock on Jan. 19, the trade commission said.

On Jan. 27, Coastal filed notice of its intent to acquire Houston Natural, and announced a tender offer for the remaining shares of that company. It claimed the Jan. 19 purchase was exempt from the filing requirement, because the law exempts purchases solely for investment purposes.

Crews cleaning up oil spill

BAYTOWN (AP) — Crews working for the Exxon Pipeline Co. were cleaning up about 84,000 gallons of crude oil from the San Jacinto River Wednesday after a barge or tugboat apparently struck a pipeline, a company spokesman said.

The oil was contained inside booms in a mile-long stretch of the river, spokesman Perry Smith said. He said 10 vacuum trucks were working to clean up the mess, but that the effort would likely take five to seven days.

Technicians monitoring pipeline traffic noticed a sudden drop in pressure in the 20-inch pipeline, one of the main lines feeding crude oil to the Exxon refinery at Baytown, about 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Former Reagan aide indicted in insider trading deal

NEW YORK (AP) — A former special assistant to President Reagan faces up to 20 years in prison if convicted on all four counts of a federal indictment charging him with making $431,000 on an illegal insider stock tip.

Thomas C. Reed was accused in a federal grand jury indictment Thursday of trading options in Amax Inc. stock on the basis of inside information from his father, Gordon W. Reed, a member of the company's board of directors.

Gordon Reed retired from the board in May. Gerald Ford, who was president when Thomas Reed was Air Force Secretary, is currently on the board.

According to the indictment, the senior Reed told his son of a plan by Standard Oil Co. of California to acquire Amax stock. Thomas Reed, 50, was charged with exploiting the information by buying 500 Amax options contracts for $3,400, earning $431,000 when he sold them after stock prices rose sharply.

Thomas Reed, Reagan's former special assistant for national security affairs, was also accused of perjury because he allegedly gave false testimony and submitted phony documents in a civil lawsuit involving the deal.

"I am innocent," Reed said in a statement released shortly after the indictment was filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. "My trial will prove that and clear my name."

The indictment "comes at the start of an election campaign involving the administration I sought to serve," although it involves "events which have been public for over 3½ years, since March 1981," Reed said.

Reed, an assistant to Reagan in 1982 and 1983, was charged in a four-count indictment with securities fraud, wire fraud, perjury and obstruction of justice. Each count is punishable by up to five years in prison if he is convicted.

Gordon Reed was not charged because there was no evidence he intended to do anything wrong, authorities said.

Thomas Reed resigned last year as a presidential assistant working under national security adviser William P. Clark. He also served on the presidential commission that studied possible plans for the MX missile.

During a news conference, U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani was asked by reporters whether the Reagan administration knew about the insider-trading allegations through an FBI security check when Reed was appointed to his sensitive post.

"Those are legitimate questions that really have to be asked of other people," said Giuliani, a Reagan appointee. "I can't answer those questions."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he had no comment about Reed.

Reed was also involved in a Securities and Exchange Commission civil suit which was settled when he put his $431,000 into an escrow account.

The indictment asserts Reed learned in two telephone conversations with his father early in March 1981 that Socal offered to buy stock in the Greenwich, Conn.-based Amax, a mining company, at $40 per share higher than the current market value.

Reed then purchased Amax stock options on March 4, 1981, on the basis of illegal inside information, according to the charges.

Races or rain, Ruidoso has adventure

From Staff Reports

RUIDOSO, N.M. — It is known for its horse races, its skiing and, to a lesser degree, its golf courses.

But visit Ruidoso when the ski slopes and race track are closed — that's when you get a real feel for the area.

For the first time in the history of Ruidoso Downs, the track was closed because of flash flood threats. The town's mayor felt the facility's location on the floodline was reason enough to shut the gates.

The track's closing was an opportunity to see something else in the Ruidoso area — even though it was too early to ski and to wet to bet.

A rainy afternoon drive up 12,000-foot Sierra Blanca mountain was invigorating. Removed from the mesquite and flat prairie scenery, the lush, rich greenery of the mountains was enough to intrigue a Rocky Mountains native.

Winding back down the mountain, a trip to the Inn of the Mountain Gods was reminiscent of ski season when the roads have been closed.

Though the large copper fireplace in the hotel's lobby did not cradle the roaring blaze it does during the winter, guests mesmerized by the piano bar musician couldn't have cared less. Some danced in the aisles. Some listened and stared out the window at the falling rain. Some were more concerned about what they were going to eat next.

This hotel, owned by the Mescalero Apache, features in its Apache Tee restaurant a namesake salad, The Midland/Odessa.

Away from the Mescalero area, visitors weaved in and out of downtown boutiques, cafes and bars.

Antiques set the scene at Wingfield's, one of Ruidoso's oldest homes, where fried fish is the specialty.

The newly opened Casa Blanca restaurant, an old family home restored to contemporary Santa Fe decor, boasts tangy margaritas and tasty hamburgers.

Nottingham's Pub, on Sudderth Drive, is a hot spot for dinner. Live bands, such as Chicago Jazz Exchange, are featured in the restaurant decorated with etched glass, brass railings and and polished oak.

Lodging ranges from hotels and motels to cabins and condos. One of the newest in the area is the luxurious Triple Crown Condominiums, which overlooks the racetrack. The split level units — complete with fireplaces, whirlpools, balconies, washers and dryers, kitchens equipped with dishwashers and microwaves — were completed this month.

The condominiums may be purchased or rented on nightly, weekly or monthly bases.

Celebrities have discovered the development, project of former Texas Gov. John Connally, former Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes and Houston developer Joe McDermott.

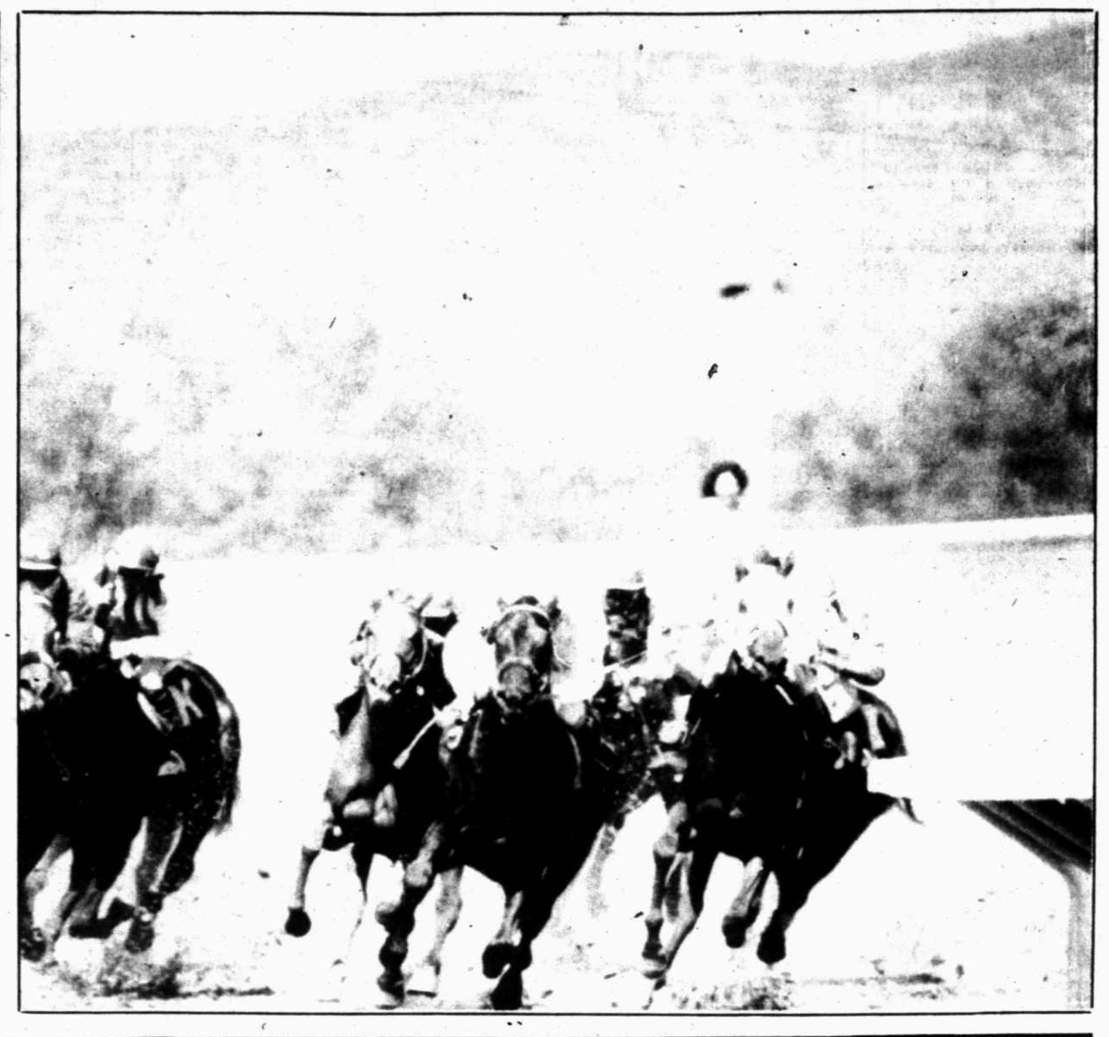
Climax of Ruidoso Downs' racing season is this weekend, offering the world's richest horse race — a $2.5 million purse — The All American Futurity.

Post time at the track is 1 p.m., but earlier times may be scheduled this weekend.

Saturday's races include the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity, 2-year-olds, 6 furlongs with an estimated purse of $150,000; and the Ruidoso Thoroughbred Futurity Third Consolation, 2-year-olds, 440 yards.

Sunday's races are the Ruidoso Mile Handicap, 3-year-olds and up, 1 mile, $40,000-added, one mile; and the All-American Futurity Second Consolation, 2-year-olds, 440 yards.

The $2.5 million All-American Futurity — almost four times as much as the Kentucky Derby — is schedule part of Monday's races. The 2-year-olds will run 440 yards. Other races of the day include the All-American Futurity First Consolation for 2-year-olds, 440 yards; Ruidoso 550 Championship Handicap, for 3-year-olds and up, 550 yards with $12,5000 added to the purse; and the Countess Blade Handicap for 3-year-olds, 7 furlongs and $10,000 added to the purse.



Nestled in the charming Sacramento mountains are the new Triple Crown Condominiums, in the above photo, overlooking the Ruidoso Downs horse race track. The track concludes its season this weekend with the world's richest horse race — $2,530,000, with $1 million going to the winner.

DEAR ABBY

Glow from marriage lights up years

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, an article came out in our newspaper about husbands. I think it was in your column. I thought it was so beautiful, I tore it out and saved it. Here is the first part:

"Today is a very special day for me. It's my 25th wedding anniversary and I have this to say:

"I had a mother and father who really loved each other, so I know what love is.

"I've seen two teen-agers safely through the traumatic teens, so I know what satisfaction is.

"I've prayed, and my prayers have been answered, so I know what faith is.

"And I've had by my side for 25 beautiful years, the kindest, gentlest, most considerate human being I've ever known, so I know what happiness is."

That's all I have, Abby. I lost the rest of it. If it was in your column, please print the rest. — MADELEINE LYNCH, RED OAK, TEXAS

DEAR MRS. LYNCH: Here's the rest of it:

"And because I've known all these things, I know what wealth is."

I wrote it in 1964 as a tribute to my husband. And it's just as true today as it was 20 years ago. Thank you for asking.

DEAR ABBY: Not only parents, but friends and relatives often have trouble introducing live-in companions. I have found the smoothest way is to say: "May I introduce John/Jane and his/her constant companion?"

No one has misunderstood yet. — MAE S., ARCADIA, CALIF.

DEAR MAE: I don't think it's necessary to clarify the living arrangements of John and Jane when introducing them. But if you do, "constant companions" do not necessarily live together.

DEAR ABBY: I thought the letter from "Big-Busted in Birmingham" was a riot, so I brought it up at my arts and crafts group at Valley View Nursing Home to give the residents a laugh. ("Big-Busted's" fiance wanted to raise chickens but was too cheap to buy an incubator, so he asked her if she'd mind hatching the eggs in her bra.)

Well, the laugh was on me when an 88-year-old resident told me that her grandmother, a large-busted woman, had brought some chicks to full term in her bra after the mother hen had died. — LINDA A. MURPHY, ACTIVITY DIRECTOR, VALLEY VIEW, N.H.

AT WORK

Others can be tools for job jumps

By ADELE SCHEELE, PH.D.

Watching the Olympic pole vaulting event on TV a while back made me compare the sport to the way we perform in our careers.

Think about it: Athletes can jump possibly seven feet high on their own, but they can double that with a pole.

When I began watching pole vaulting in the mid-50's, athletes used bamboo poles. By the '60s they used fiberglass. The newer synthetic material is better than the bamboo, but not foolproof. Often, the prevailing winds will affect an athlete's performance.

Remember the announcers talking about the winds of Los Angeles and the consequent split-second decisions athletes had to make about where to place their poles?

So the sport becomes skill combined with timing. The comparison with climbing the corporate ladder becomes amazingly clear.

We have been so conditioned by the myth of independence: "Don't ask for help. Do it yourself."

There's even that old expression that your teachers and fathers told you: "Pull yourself up by your own bootstraps." Just try to do that and you'd fall on your face. It's not possible to advance that way.

Yet the only way we are tested and judged in school, from elementary to graduate, is by our own answers, albeit often carefully memorized ones. We still have one chance to prove ourselves.

We have even been taught how to protect ourselves, by covering our papers with the left hand lest others copy and by averting our eyes lest we do the copying.

Granted, we should know answers, but funny enough as we grow older and wiser we learn that answers are often amalgamations of others' advice and experience. Even presidents hire consultants.

So perhaps we could be tested in choosing from many appropriate sources and answers the way we do in life.

But the myth still prevails. And with it, some of us develop a real contempt for those using the help of others to gain access to ideas and connections.

And those of us who don't use it, are trapped where we are, while others, who not only do the work assigned but also are open to such access, advance.

According to studies of achievers in the early stages of their careers, we all need someone to show us the ropes, encourage us, introduce us to new ideas and methods, direct us or redirect us when new possibilities arise. We need a bamboo pole for some assist.

That pole may be our boss, our boss's boss, the assistant manager, even the manager. It is someone two or three levels above us.

It is not the president nor the chief executive officer, for we are too inexperienced to even make sense of their advice.

Some years later, with more experience, we need that fiberglass pole — the president or the CEO — to be our sounding board, influence, proposal guide, launcher of our ideas, broker to more powerful individuals.

And we need practice using such poles — call them mentors, guides, experts — in order to test the prevailing winds. We need to learn when to ask, when not to; where to push, and where not to.

Adele Scheele is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

Home computers' role in banking questioned

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Will you soon use a personal computer to transfer funds electronically?

"Probably not," says George Benston of the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Management.

"Unless you have a very large volume of transactions," he said, "using a home computer, which usually costs over $2,000, becomes a way of moving money around at odd hours at a very high price. If you made money by shifting funds from one account to another, it might pay to bank by home computer. But to stay competitive, deregulated banks will offer comparable interest rates.

"When regulations are removed, they can offer a single, interest-bearing account from which most people won't want to transfer funds. So, I suspect home computers and home banking will be a nice toy."

Scientist sails into Arctic

Copley News Service

Dr. James H. Swift finds it difficult to explain his fascination for ice. He just knows he likes it — the more, the better.

So when he recently journeyed deep into the frozen Arctic waters, Swift felt he was on top of the world in more ways than one.

"It was beautiful, the ice, " he says. "It's something you can't buy.

Swift, an oceanographer with the University of California at San Diego's Scripps Institution of Oceanography, and a team of three other Scripps scientists, have just returned from a scientific journey to study the origin and circulation of waters in the Arctic Ocean.

To achieve that goal, their ship — the German-owned Polarstern — penetrated farther into the Arctic seas than any oceanographic research vessel in history, coming within 420 nautical miles of the North Pole.

Ap times, the scientist in Swift speaks of his mission in dry, technical terms such as "baseline data," ocean "ventilation," and "dense water" — hardly the language to produce shivers of any kind in the average layman.

The most significant finding so far has been the detection in the Arctic sea of significant amounts of freon — a chemical used as a refrigerant as well as aerosol propellant.

The finding proves that the deep Arctic Ocean is actively — and rapidly — mixing and absorbing atmospheric gases, a previously unknown fact. This could have implications for climate forecasters worried that the accumulation of pollutants, such as carbon dioxide, may warm the planet some time next century through a so-called "Greenhouse Effect."

Stephanie's father, Efrem Zimbalist Jr., also attended the concert.

Islamic art on view in Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A showing of 1,000 years of Islamic art will be on view at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts July 28-Jan. 2, 1985.

"Islamic Art From the Permanent Collection" features miniature paintings, calligraphy pages, glasswork and woodwork, intricate inlaid metalwork, ceramics and books.

The objects, all drawn from the institute's permanent collection, are from Iran, Iraq, Egypt, India, Turkey and Syria, which all came under the influence of the Islamic religion. They span many centuries and diverse cultures but they are linked by their Islamic heritage.

Articles from China trade on show

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two hundred years ago, the first American ship sailed for China and returned with tea, spices and a sampling of the arts of China.

"Philadelphians and the China Trade, 1784-1844," on view at the Philadelphia Museum of Art through Sept. 23, is a display of over 300 objects.

The museum says it reveals that "Philadelphians commissioned not only the highly-prized Chinese porcelain and silks but also a rich assortment of furniture, games, carvings, and paintings."

Commercials now 'pearls of the past'

ENTERTAINMENT

By SUSAN PAYNTER
Hearst Feature Service

Commercials are irritants in the oyster of the TV viewer's mind. Who'd have guessed they'd become the pearls of our past, that we'd miss old friends from our childhood like Marky Maypo and the Frito Bandito?

Unlike old films, lovingly filed away in archives, TV ads are dumped as soon as they've sold their Chevrolets or Cocoa Puffs. But a new paperback by media observer Jim Hall, "Mighty Minutes: An Illustrated History of Television's Best Commercials," not only revives the jingles and images but reflects on what those spots say about our society and its evolution.

But first, a commercial trivia quiz:

1. You know those men from Texaco who worked from Maine to Mexico, but when and on whose show did they first appear?

2. Before the surgeon general's report shooed cigarette advertising off the air, what tobacco company had a dancing woman's legs protruding from a cigarette pack? On what shows did she appear? And what did she wear on her feet?

3. We all missed the Hamm's bear when he hibernated for 10 years between the time Heublein Inc. bought the company and sold it to Olympia. What year did he come out of hiding? And what were the three words he always said?

4. When did the real, ever-cool Morris the Cat die?

5. WHAT '30s child-actress rival of Shirley Temple came back adult-sized as Josephine the Plumber, advertising what product?

6. "Take it off, take it all off," purred a Swedish blonde in 1966. What was she selling? To what music? And what was her name?

7. Two of TV's most familiar faces are Virginia Christine and Jan Miner. The first is the Folger icon, Mrs. "It's mountain-grown, the richest kind" Olson. The second is Madge the Manicurist ("It's Palmolive, you're soaking in it.") In what serious dramatic movies did the first appear in 1961 and the second appear in 1974?

8. What TV and movie star started out as the Wella girl? And what current ad makes her ex-husband sweat?

9. I told you the Maypo kid's name was Marky. Who stole his cereal to convince him it was yummy? What other cereal featured Little Freddie in his Doctor Dentons, humiliating his no-name brother with the super strength he got from eating his hot cereal? And what part of Little Freddie did we never see?

10. What three colors were the in cold cereal Trix? And why couldn't that silly rabbit ever get any?

11. What was the name of the ship commanded by Cap'n Crunch?

12. And finally, who was the funny and innovative ad maverick of the late '60s and what two edibles did his bizarre ads sell?

AND NOW, the answers:

1. Those men from Texaco appeared in 1948 on The Texaco Star Theater starring Mr. Television, Milton Berle.

2. That dancing cigarette pack was Old Gold, later joined by her taller sister, Old Gold king-size. They tapped onto TV on "The Original Amateur Hour" and "Stop the Music" in their white cowboy boots.

3. The Hamm's bear reappeared in TV's land of sky-blue waters in 1978 and those three little words were, "It bears repeating."

4. That same year, Morris died at 17.

5. Actress Jane Withers came out of retirement to sell Comet (to send her husband to law school).

6. The blonde with the sexy overbite was Gunilla Knutsen, crooning "Take it off" to the tune of "The Stripper" in 1966.

7. Mrs. Olson (Virginia Christine) appeared as the German housekeeper assigned to Nazi trials judge Spencer Tracy in "Judgment at Nuremburg," and Jan "Madge the Manicurist" Miner played Lenny Bruce's (Dustin Hoffman's) mother in "Lenny."

8. Farrah Fawcett-Majors was the Wella Balsam girl. Her ex, Lee Majors, now works out in those "Everybody's gotta Diet Rite" ads.

9. It was snoring Uncle Raphie who copped Marky's Maypo, making him squeal the "I want my Maypo!" heard by mothers 'round the world. Little Freddie got strong on Malto-Meal and his backwards cap always covered his eyes.

10. TRIX WERE raspberry red, lemon yellow and orange orange and out of bounds to bunnies since Trix are for kids.

11. Cap'n Crunch commanded the S.S. Guppy.

12. The irreverent Stan Freberg sold Chun King and Jeno's Pizza Rolls.

Ads still fall into few categories. There are the ID ads in which a product is identified with a celebrity like James Garner and Polaroid, fictional faces like Charmin's Mr. Whipple, and animals, real or animated, like Charlie the Tuna and Morris.

GOP convention may have lowest ratings

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Republican Party gathering in Dallas apparently will go down as the lowest-rated political convention ever televised, but it escapes the distinction of being the least-watched.

That anomaly comes from the fact that although the Nielsen ratings are expected to be the lowest, a rating point today represents more homes than in the past.

The highest-rated convention night was NBC's coverage of last Thursday's session, when President Reagan spoke. It was 39th out of 58 shows. ABC's Thursday coverage was 41st and CBS's was 44th. But three other nights of coverage were among the five lowest-rated shows of the week.

Arnold Becker, CBS vice president for national television research, said the combined network ratings for last Thursday, 22.8, were about what a single top-rated show would get in the fall.

ABC's "Love Boat" was the top show for the week ended Aug. 26, and ABC claimed its fifth straight victory since the beginning of the Summer Olympics. NBC was second and CBS was third.

ABC had a network average of 10.6 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. NBC was second with 9.0 and CBS was third with 8.8. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 10.6 percent of the TV homes were tuned to ABC.

The four-day Republican convention was seen in an average 16.3 million homes each night for all three networks, while Thursday night's appearance of Reagan reached 19.1 million homes. The Democratic convention had a nightly household average of 17.2 million homes.

Becker said the Republican convention probably would be the lowest-rated political convention ever covered by the networks. But all of the data was not available yet for a definitive comparison.

Becker attributed the low ratings to the lack of suspense about the outcome of the convention and to the fact television viewers have more alternative choices than they had in the past.

Second place in the ratings went to NBC's rerun of the first part of its "V" miniseries. In third place was ABC's new summer series "Call To Glory," which has apparently earned itself a place on the network's fall schedule.

Completing the Top 10: "60 Minutes," CBS, fourth; "Matt Houston," ABC, fifth; "The A-Team," ABC, sixth; the ABC movie "And Justice for All," seventh; "Alice," CBS, eighth; and ABC's "Webster" and CBS' "The Jeffersons," tied for ninth.

The lowest-rated show of the week was NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA." The bottom five shows in descending order were CBS' "Domestic Life," CBS' Tuesday convention coverage, NBC's Wednesday coverage, NBC's Monday coverage and NBC's "Summer Sunday, USA."

Here are the top 20 shows of the week:

1. "The Love Boat," ABC, a rating of 17.7 or 14.8 million households.
2. Miniseries-"V," NBC, 16.6 or 13.9 million.
3. "Call To Glory," ABC, 15.8 or 13.2 million.
4. "60 Minutes," CBS, 15.3 or 12.8 million.
5. "Matt Houston," ABC, 14.8 or 12.4 million.
6. "The A-Team," NBC, 14.7 or 12.3 million.
7. Movie — "And Justice for All," ABC, 14.6 or 12.2 million.
8. "Alice," CBS, 13.7 or 11.4 million.
9. "Webster," ABC, 13.6 or 11.39 million.
9. Tie — "The Jeffersons," CBS, 13.6 or 11.39 million.
11. "Family Ties," NBC, 13.5 or 11.31 million.
12. "Trapper John, M.D." CBS, 12.7 or 10.6 million.
13. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 12.5 or 10.4 million.
13. Tie — "Blue Thunder," ABC, 12.5 or 10.4 million.
15. "Gimme a Break," NBC, 12.4 or 10.3 million.
16. "Dallas," CBS, 12.2 or 10.2 million.
17. "Different Strokes," NBC, 12.0 or 10.0 million.
17. Tie — "Silver Spoons," NBC, 12.0 or 10.0 million.
19. "Benson," ABC, 11.9 or 9.9 million.
20. "Hardcastle & McCormick," ABC, 11.6 or 9.7 million.

Singer ready to move on after hit single

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a "For Sale" sign outside Deniece Williams' hilltop home, and part of the reason she's looking to move stems from the spectacular success of her single "Let's Hear It For The Boy."

"The other day," she recalled, "I was working with my brother on my 1959 Mercedes. We were in the garage and I was in medical greens and under the hood, covered with grease. And these people came up looking for pictures!"

The garage and home both front directly on the street, so it's difficult for Ms. Williams to hide from fans who somehow manage to learn her address. And since "Let's Hear It For The Boy" climbed to the top of the pop, rhythm 'n' blues and dance charts, the admirers are increasing.

Even before that, Ms. Williams was no stranger to the top 40. It's been several years since the former nursing student from Gary, Ind., parlayed a job as backup singer for Stevie Wonder into a solo career highlighted by a 1978 duet with Johnny Mathis, "Too Much, Too Little, Too Late."

Although best known as a singer, she also has composed much of her own material and recently has started producing as well.

But with "Let's Hear It For The Boy," her exultant contribution to the best-selling soundtrack of "Footloose," Ms. Williams proved herself as adept with a bouncing pop tune as she is with an R&B ballad or a gospel classic.

"This is my biggest solo hit," she confirmed during a recent interview. And, she added, she almost didn't get to sing it.

"They had really wanted me to sing the Karla Bonoff song (from 'Footloose'), 'Somebody's Eyes Are Watching,' which I love as well," she explained.

But when she went to visit Dean Pitchford, who wrote the "Footloose" script and all the lyrics for the songs, "it ended up that they thought, 'Let's see if she likes this particular song and what she can do with this song.' I liked it, and we went for it."

The song, co-written by Tom Snow and produced by George Duke, couldn't have come along at a better time. Ms. Williams was intending to reach for more of a pop sound in her next album, which has since come out with "Let's Hear It For the Boy" as the title track.

"I was moving in that direction with the last album, but didn't want to do too much of a departure to give to the public something radically different too soon," she said. "But it was never said out loud to Dean Pitchford or to anyone. I'd spoken to George Duke about the direction that I wanted to go, and that was it.

"When it's your time for things to happen, they just happen," she said.

In fact, "Let's Hear It For The Boy" was not supposed to be on the solo album. "It was a completely separate and apart project," Ms. Williams said.

Luckily, she records on Columbia, which also put out the "Footloose" soundtrack, and so she was given permission to re-issue the song on the solo LP.

Ms. Williams' conversation is punctuated by explosions of laughter. At 33 she looks more like older sister than mother to sons Kevin, 11, and Ken, 13. They were born during her first marriage; a second also ended in divorce last year.

Perhaps as a result, she makes an effort to maintain a solid family life. Although she's been on the road more than ever, both in this country and abroad, she tries to take her sons with her whenever possible.

"I want them to see that this money doesn't grow on trees and I'm working very hard for it," she said, waving at the house she expects to leave soon.

She hasn't yet decided where she'll be moving to, but her new home will have more security — and could well be outside of California.

London is in the running, and "I love the East Coast — Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey," she said.

"I've been in California for 11 years and now I feel like it's time to move on," she added. "I'm on the threshold of a new phase in my life."

Coalition files lawsuit against Forest Service to protect ruins

New York Times News Service

ALBUQUERQUE — Hundreds of ancient Indian ruins in remote New Mexico mountains have been destroyed by logging operations and thousands more are similarly threatened, according to a lawsuit filed here against the U.S. Forest Service.

The lawsuit was filed in federal district court by a coalition of Indian tribes, environmentalists and archeologists. It contends that the agency has violated the National Historic Preservation Act by failing to locate and mark such sites in National Forests to protect them.

Gov. Toney Anaya also announced that the state would soon file its own lawsuit against the Forest Service in support of the coalition.

M.J. Hassell, the service's regional forester, said he had not seen the lawsuit but was "disappointed" that it had been filed. "They got all the information from our own files, and they're not telling us anything we don't already know," he said. "I think the legal action will just complicate matters."

Hassell did not dispute that some sites had been damaged but denied that his officers had been disregarding the law, as the suit contends.

"I believe we are in compliance with the law and have been making fantastic progress in protecting these resources," he said.

The sites at issue are a dense concentration of structural ruins and other remnants of an Indian civilization thought to have florished in the Jemez Mountains around 1200-1450. Many of these ruins, the plaintiffs say, are of a size and historical importance that would warrant inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places. Several of them, they say, are equal in scale and archeological value to such recognized areas as the nearby Bandelier National Monument and Chaco Canyon National Park.

"Destruction of archeological sites on the Santa Fe and other forests is rapidly becoming a major disaster," Carol Condie, of the New Mexico Archeological Council, said at a news conference. She said the "loss to humanity can be likened to burning entire libraries of previously unknown manuscripts before they can be read."

The ruins, including a ancient village of 2,000 rooms and remnants of hunting camps and irrigation systems, also continue to have religious significance for the descendants of those villagers, said Joe Loretto, governor of the Jemez Indian tribe.

"We have been living in the high mountains — I don't know how many years — and our ancestors' ruins are still standing today," Loretto said. "The Forest Service has done much damage to these ruins. We want this to stop. We want to keep our ancestors' ruins as they are."

The suit charges that loggers, working under federal contracts administered by the Forest Service, have already damaged more than 500 known sites in the Santa Fe National Forest using bulldozers, large disking machines and other heavy equipment.

The plaintiffs in the suit are the Sierra Club, the Jemez tribe, the All Indian Pueblo Council, an association of New Mexico pueblo tribes, the New Mexico Archeological Council and Save the Jemez, a local group.

Philadelphia's low-key mayor moves into high profile

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — He has talked with Walter Mondale about sharing the Democratic ticket and with the Jacksons to woo the Victory Tour, but Mayor W. Wilson Goode's proudest accomplishment after six months in office is a new business tax, and his most lasting legacy may be a loftier skyline.

Goode, formerly the city's low-key managing director, gained national prominence when he became the first black mayor of the nation's fifth-largest city. As he sees it, the limelight comes with the job.

"The mayor of a city is an inspirational leader, a definer of problems and policy, of programs and agendas — a visionary, the dreamer and the articulator of all the things he hopes for in the city," Goode said in an interview from his dark-paneled City Hall office. "You cannot do that in a low-key way."

But with dreams come nightmares: Seven members of his police department, including the former deputy commissioner, have been convicted of taking protection payoffs from illegal gamblers, and seven more go on trial next month.

"The biggest disappointment has to be that there are police officers with a strong history of inappropriate, illegal, corrupt dealing," Goode said, while claiming that Philadephia's police are the least corrupt of the nation's 10 largest cities and have the best arrest record.

"But at the same time, we have police officers who would indeed sell their badge for a dollar, and I want to send a message to those officers that school is out."

Goode, 46, was born in poor, rural North Carolina, moved to Philadelphia at 15, and graduated from Morgan State University in Baltimore. After serving in the Army, he earned a masters degree in government administration from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School.

His public career took him from the Philadelphia Council for Community Advancement — where he pushed for housing improvements — to the state's Public Utility Commission, and then to the managing director post in 1979.

He defeated former Mayor Frank Rizzo in a hard-fought Democratic primary in May 1983, then defeated two opponents in November to become the first black mayor in this city of 1.6 million people.

He dodges questions about his impact as a black chief executive, prefering to focus on running the city in a businesslike fashion, down to his conservative suits and subdued manner. He has spoken of someday heading a corporation.

Since taking office in January, he has told city unions that there could be no pay raises until July 1986 and trimmed the city budget by 4 percent as part of his goal of rebuilding Philadelphia's economic base.

"We have to make sure the fiscal part of the city works well," he said. "Thus far, after seven months, we have a net gain of more than 10,000 jobs. The trend is running 2 percent up from last year.

"We lost an average of 14,000 to 15,000 jobs a year for the past 10 years. To have a trend that reverses that almost totally, where we could pick up 15,000 to 20,000 jobs a year, is where I want to be."

For all his fiscal concern, Goode has shown a sense of popular priorities.

Pop music fans rejoiced when he made a deal to bring the Jacksons to Philadelphia. Others questioned some of the deal's concessions.

He saw to it that the Army-Navy football game would return to its traditional home of Philadelphia after a year in California, and even braved ridicule by proposing to bring the Super Bowl to the city in 1989.

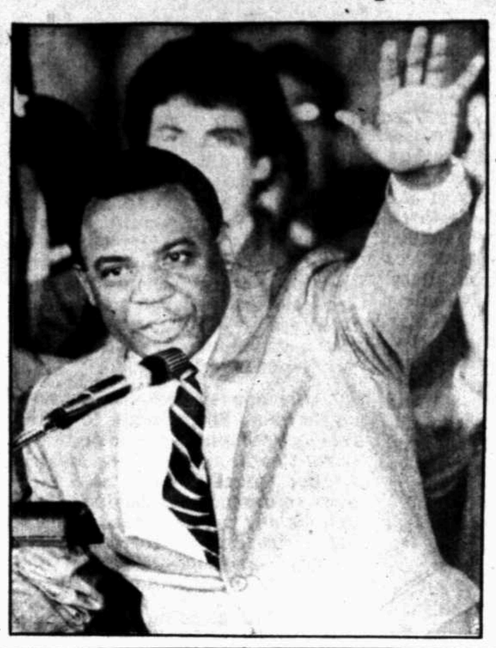
He has challenged the gentleman's agreement that has kept buildings no higher than 491 feet — lower than the statue of William Penn atop the ornate City Hall, finished in 1901. Goode backed a plan for two buildings 700 and 800 feet tall, and proposed a limited skyscraper zone west of City Hall.

Goode has a list of city priorities: an anti-graffiti campaign, a literacy campaign, a clean slate for cable television negotiations and a new, larger convention center.

Typically, however, Goode said he feels proudest of a new, unified general business tax, which shifted the tax burden off those businesses with narrow profit margins — many retailers, for example — and eliminated what the local Chamber of Commerce called "nuisance taxes."

"The tax called for labor and the Chamber of Commerce and Republicans and Democrats all to join forces," Goode said. "In my view that was the single biggest accomplishment in the first six months of this administration."

He called Mondale's interest "an honor" and said it was another chance to put Philadelphia in a favorable light.



Philadelphia's Mayor W. Wilson Goode has had a host of accomplishments to his credit since assuming the job as mayor of Philadelphia.
