Dreams for future become nightmare

By STEVE RAY
Herald Editor

BIG SPRING — It is a love story of sorts. Except there is no beautiful Cinderella, no handsome prince. The castle is a burned-out trailer house, repaired in a slipshod manner with only a wood stove for heat and a big, tin washtub that serves as both bath and washing machine. It is doubtful that the hero and heroine will live happily ever after. Happy probably isn't in their vocabulary. It is something they have known too little of in their lifetimes. For Mike and Jennie Campbell, married one year last month, Big Spring was supposed to be their Camelot — it was here they had hoped to start new lives, to forget the past and look to the future. * * * Jennie Campbell is no Cinderella. She was raised in a Louisiana orphanage before she made her first venture into marriage at age 16. She had just completed the ninth grade. Her 5-foot 3-inch frame is marked with tragedy. She says her parents were killed in a car wreck when she was just three weeks old. Two of her bottom teeth are missing, and the rest are in dire need of dental work. A birth defect left her right hand nothing more than a stub, with two long, twisted appendages where her thumb and little finger should be. She says her health is bad. • CAMPBELLS page 2-A

Grades sideline 137 BSISD students

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Fewer Big Spring ISD students were sidelined by "no-pass, no-play" restrictions this school year than in previous years, and officials are hoping that the trend will continue. The information was released during the regular monthly meeting of the district's board of trustees Thursday afternoon. A total of 137 students — out of 1,890 — in grades 7-12 will be prohibited from participating in extracurricular activities for the next six weeks because of failing grades, Superintendent Bill McQueary said. "No-pass, no-play" is the popular term for a provision of the 1984 state educational reforms that requires a student to maintain an average of at least 70 in all classes to remain eligible for extracurricular activities. "These students will be sidelined for the next six weeks," McQueary said. "Hopefully, they'll get their grades back up and be able to re-enter those programs." McQueary said fewer students were sidelined this term than in the past. "There were fewer casualties" • GRADES page 2-A

Ex officer not indicted in Gomez killing

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — A Mitchell County grand jury chose Friday not to indict a former police officer who fatally shot a Colorado City man he was attempting to arrest on a sexual assault charge. The grand jury, the second one to investigate the case, decided to not indict then part-time police officer Billy Ray Williamson in the May 13, 1988 shooting of sexual assault suspect Sammy Gomez after deliberating for about six minutes. Many local officials hope that the 17-month controversy is over, but local League of United Latin American Citizens supporters said they will continue to push for a federal grand jury investigation. The case is now closed on a statewide level. "The case is over," 32nd District Attorney Frank Conard said of the three days of testimony. "These are 12 citizens selected randomly. Their decision was (based on the question) Was the officer justified in using deadly force?" "The truth is what we're after," he said. Williamson, the only person providing an eye-witness account of the moments when he fired three shots, said Gomez lunged at him with a knife. LULAC officials suspect Gomez was unarmed when shot and that a knife was planted on him afterwards in an attempted police coverup. A grand jury which convened one week after the shooting, before an autopsy report was complete, chose not to indict Williamson. A second grand jury investigated the case following pressure from LULAC officials. Ruben Sandoval, a LULAC attorney representing the Gomez family, said he was not surprised of the no-bill decision. "In fact, we had anticipated this outcome months ago," he said. He charged Conard with providing a "lopsided, one-sided presentation" to the grand jury. Sandoval said testimony by the alleged rape victim and a representative from the state board of pardons and paroles was irrelevant to the actual shooting incident. Sandoval also complained that certain witnesses, including Williamson and the alleged rape • GOMEZ page 3-A

German natives happy over border openings

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — Marianne Brown cried when she heard Friday that the Berlin Wall and its western borders had been opened for the first time in 28 years. "I am happy, very happy," said Brown, 51, a native of Heidelberg. "It's something that hit you, and you didn't realize it until a couple of hours later. Right now I'm still in shock." Brown, who is executive director of the Northside Community Center, said she plans to call her relatives in West Germany and see which of her East German relatives will be crossing the Wall. Among her East German relatives, she said, is a cousin named Edelgard, who lives in Boxberg and is like a sister to her. East German authorities said Thursday they would open the western borders and allow citizens to travel freely anywhere for the first time since the Berlin Wall was erected in 1961. "I was thrilled," said Inge Grisham, a native of East Germany who moved to the United States in the 1950s. "It was unbelievable, something that should have been done a long time ago. And I hope it gets better. I hope they tear that thing down." Grisham, who is now a Big Spring resident and American citizen, said she would like to return to East Germany for a visit, "if it's free to go and I have assurance I could leave East Germany again." George von Hassell, deacon of St. Mary the Virgin Episcopal Church in Big Spring, said he is "more than happy" about the opening of the Berlin Wall. "There's no word that can express how happy I am. I wish I was there." Von Hassell, who is originally from East Berlin and left Germany in 1948, said most of his relatives live in Leipzig and Dresden. He hopes to visit Germany on his next vacation, von Hassell said, and he also would like to move back to Germany if reunification occurs. Concerning the prospect of reunification, von Hassell said, "I hope so. It's certainly in my prayers." "I think this is the beginning" of reunification, said Brown. "There's such a strong force between the people. The West Germans want it, and the East Germans want it. But I never thought this was going to happen as long as

Offenders really clean up their act

By BRADLEY WORRELL

BIG SPRING — A group of area people given probation for misdemeanor offenses are cleaning up their act — literally — in a county-initiated work program. The program places county misdemeanor offenders sentenced to probation, and in some cases similar offenders from city municipal court and justice of the peace courts, in an eight-hour work program designed to clean up sections of city or county property, Howard County Attorney Hardy Wilkerson said. It can also be used to clean up the properties of non-profit charities, he said. "We feel it provides us with a necessary alternative in the punishment process," Wilkerson said. "I feel just putting them on probation is not always enough, sometimes they need a little sweat to reinforce the point." Hotels sold, renamed AUSTIN (AP) — The former Ramada Inn Capitol has been purchased by Waugh Development Corp. and renamed The Quarters Motor Inn-Best Western.

The 148-room hotel at 11th and San Jacinto streets was sold for an undisclosed price by Northwestern Life Insurance Co., which took over the hotel through foreclosure about two years ago.

Waugh Development Corp. owns two other Austin hotels and one in Nashville, and manages eight in Oklahoma, Missouri and Kansas. The Quarters Motor Inn will be affiliated with the Best Western hotel chain and its nationwide reservations system.

NOW honors lawmaker

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Juan Hinojosa of McAllen, who has announced his retirement, was named legislator of the year by the National Organization for Women's Texas chapter because of his legislation to defend women's rights.

Hinojosa was honored for measures to prohibit police from requiring polygraph tests of rape victims before investigating the crime; mandating that courts consider evidence of family violence in determining custody of children; and requiring judges and police officers to receive more training on family violence.

"Family violence is a major social problem that cuts across ethnic and economic lines," said Hinojosa, a Democrat who is wrapping up his fifth two-year term in the House. "I am just glad I had the opportunities to pass legislation that protects Texas women and children."

Probation for 'hacking'

HOUSTON (AP) — The teenage son of socialite Carolyn Farb was given probation for using a computer to steal personal access codes from a long distance telephone company.

Kennyon Schulman pleaded no contest to a misdemeanor charge of breach of computer security and was sentenced Friday to a year's deferred adjudication and ordered to pay $19,432 in restitution.

Deferred adjudication means that if he stays out of trouble during the probation term, Schulman could emerge with no final conviction on his record.

In February 1988, authorities searched Ms. Farb's River Oaks home where they said they found Schulman's computer in the process of trying to crack telephone access codes.

Women attack teen

FRIENDSWOOD (AP) — Three women were charged with injury to a child after one of them allegedly paid the others with beer to assault a teen-age girl who was a rival of her own 13-year-old daughter, police said.

Jeanine Coody, 32, allegedly became angry after her daughter and another 13-year-old girl fought over "kid stuff" the week before Halloween at a school bus stop, detective Frank Fidelibus said Friday. The teenagers' names were not released because they are minors.

The girl who had fought with Ms. Coody's daughter was attacked in the parking lot of an apartment complex in Friendswood, a Houston suburb, while trick-or-treating Halloween night, Fidelibus said. The attackers were two women — one in a witch's costume and another dressed as a devil.

The girl, who was taken to a hospital for observation but was not admitted, suffered eye and nose injuries.

Through an anonymous tip that led to a weeklong investigation, police Wednesday arrested Pamela Gail Mays, 31, and Belinda Qualls, 20, both of Pasadena, a Houston suburb.

Boy Scouts to collect food for hungry residents

By JAMES FLEEHR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Boy Scouts of Howard County will be conducting their Goodturn Food Drive Nov. 18.

"The purpose of the drive is to collect food for the hungry and needy of Howard County. Everything we are going to collect is going to stay right here," said Chairman C.R. Jones.

"The Boy Scouts of the U.S.A. and the local community are going to make this an annual project," he said.

Last year was the first food drive as the collection effort produced over 60 million can and packages of non-perishable foods to help the needy, said a report for the local branch.

Today's edition of the Big Spring Herald will insert a plastic bag into each of the home-delivered papers to help the cause.

"You may place your non-perishable food items in the bag on the following Saturday and put it on your front porch. A Boy Scout will be around between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. to collect the bag," Jones said.

There will also be boxes in Winn-Dixie, Don's IGA and Fiesta Stores and Furr's Supermarkets for collection.

If it is more convenient you may use the boxes at the store locations for the collection of your donation, said the news release.

There will also be a trailer in The Box west parking lot where the donor can leave food on Saturday.

"That's going to be like our central collection point," he said.

"We think it's a top-notch community project," he said.

All food donated will be equally divided between the Salvation Army and the Northside Center and all items will be used in Howard County.

"Due to the large area covered by our city we may not get down every street," Jones said.

"If your food bag had not been picked up by 2:30 p.m., Saturday Nov. 18 please call 263-3752 and a scout will be sent to make the pickup."

Some 7,000 bags have been inserted in the Big Spring Herald today courtesy of the newspaper at no cost to the Boy Scouts.

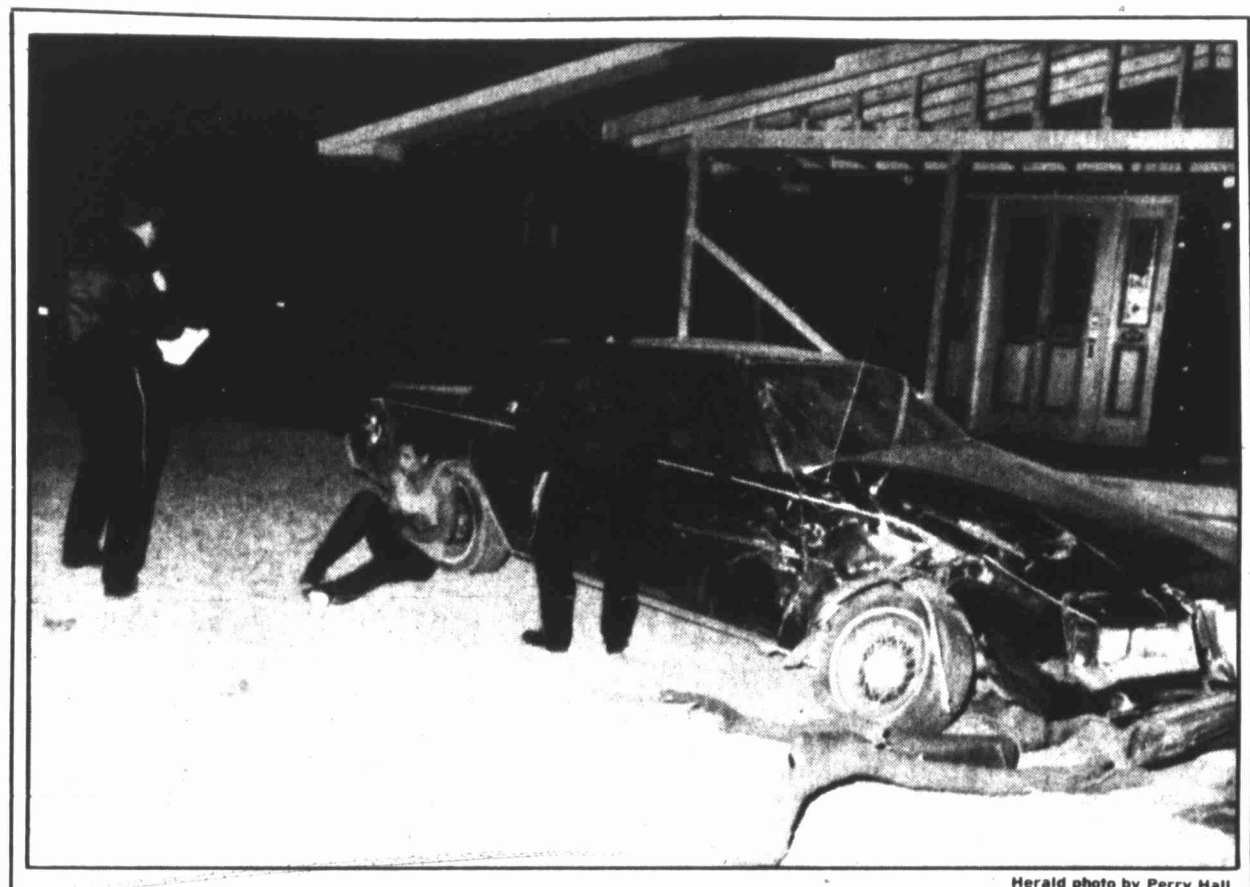

Textbooks to teach about AIDS

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education on Saturday approved health textbooks for Texas schools with a requirement that they include more detailed information on drug abuse and such sexually transmitted diseases as AIDS.

"What Texas as a state is saying is that we're very concerned with teen pregnancy. We're very concerned with sexually transmitted diseases. We're very concerned with the problems of drugs and alcohol," Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby said after the board adopted the changes without objection.

"In the books that are sold in Texas, we want to make sure that those subjects are dealt with, and that they're dealt with up front, straightforward and factually," Kirby said.

The health texts for grades 4 through 8 were among $123.3 million worth of new books approved for use beginning next fall. Texas is the second-largest market for textbooks in the country, after California.

GOP gubernatorial contenders criticize Midland oilman

DALLAS (AP) — Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams, who a poll found enjoying greater name recognition, was stung by his fellow office-seekers Saturday for suggesting they needed fewer debates.

The barbs came in a debate as a new poll showed Williams, who has spent more than $1 million in television ads, emerged in name recognition to at least equal status with front-runner Kent Hance, a Texas Railroad Commission member.

"We're not surprised. If you spend $3.4 million dollars, your recognition should come up too," Hance said. "We're not concerned about polls. We're concerned about the future of the state of Texas."

The debate itself produced few surprises, except for former Secretary of State Jack Rains' comments on abortion.

While saying he opposes in most cases, Rains added, "As governor of Texas I will not permit further restrictions on abortion. I want to see (the party) concerned about the important issues of the state."

Rains explained his stance is part of a philosophy of expanding the Republican Party in Texas and trying not to alienate any groups.

Williams, a multimillionaire oilman from Midland, said the Texas Poll results showing a boost in recognition indicate people are learning that he is the best-qualified candidate and not simply that he is the richest.

"I think a lot of Republicans like my message — that of voting out of office liberal Democrats. My policies have created a lot of jobs, that's what makes me a good businessman and will make me a good governor," Williams said.

But Williams said he was not enticed by other candidates' calls for additional debates across the state. "I'm not a lawyer," he said.

Dallas lawyer Tom Luce said more debates are needed. The first GOP debate was held last week in McAllen.

"The important thing is we need debates all over the states, and they need to be focused," Luce said. "We need one on education, one on drugs, one on our schools."

Luce also said the poll showing Williams' dramatic rise, held little weight this early in the campaign. The primary election is March 13.

"It just tells us how many commercials he ran this month," Luce said.

Big Spring pulled together on project

When the Texas Department of Criminal Justice said no to Big Spring Wednesday, what did we hear?

Without question, everybody heard the resounding "no" when the prison proposal was not included among the finalists.

There were other things heard afterward as well.

There are people saying: "I believe in Big Spring."

Among them are those who remind: "Passed over again; we don't have the political clout."

You can also hear people say: "We worked together — really together — on a project like we've never seen before."

Others will say: "Just like the SSC, the gravy's gone elsewhere."

There are also those in Howard County who are saying:

"You know, we had quite a lot to offer this prison proposal, promising 300 jobs; surely we have the very same things to offer prospects with just as many or more jobs."

You can hear people say — "They used us just to pass Proposition 8, then gave us nothing for it."

But others say: "The prospect of the state prison galvanized us to the point that 91 percent of the city's voters voted in favor of the proposition. This community can be motivated, when the need exists."

Of course, the need does exist, and it exists now.

And for all the unfavorable thoughts directed at the TDCJ board for not selecting us, we are obliged to thank them for what they did.

Thank you, TDCJ. We needed some help in rediscovering that we have tremendous resources, money for the right projects, a county airport with huge potential, a hospital willing to provide very specific services and a college ready to provide courses to properly train people.

And, to go along with all this, the prison proposal also proved we have people who care, people with the energy to make things happen and willing to make the effort.

No, we did not win in the effort to bring a prison and its jobs.

At the same time, we must realize that we did not lose in this effort either. The losers were those communities who never tried, or tried and discovered they had nothing to offer.

We have proven we have very much to offer and that's a long-term victory.

Voters reject strings

By ROBERT WERNSMAN
Publisher

Welcome to a meeting of the Flat Earth Society.

It is hereby declared open by a surprised member, who hadn't realized we could be detected so easily.

Flat Earth Society members are hereby alerted that the vote in the constitutional amendment election of Tuesday has exposed us blatantly — so greatly that even David Hudson, D-Tyler, figured us out.

He was unhappy Wednesday as he looked at the shambles of the amendment proposal he authored, which would have raised legislators' salaries to somewhere around $24,600 — triple the $7,200 they now get paid each year.

Hudson is bitter. His was one of only two amendments that failed; 19 others were approved. The fact that the other failure was an increase in per diem allowance for legislators cannot be lost on this group.

It did not take Hudson long to figure out why 63 percent of the people who went to the polls said no to the raise.

David was quoted as saying it is a good ol' boy country mentality that believes this isn't a full-time legislature for an industrialized, urban state. He also declared that "elections are not always determined by what's right and what's wrong, but who turned out. And every member of the Flat Earth Society turned out to vote yesterday."

What happened was not disgruntlement with the simple, yet apparently impossible ability to enforce rules dictated by good conscience.

Mr. Hudson, you give us too much credit.

While we all probably did turn out — Flat Earth folks are serious about constitutional rights and enjoying the chance to exercise them — I don't think we entail the 63 percent who told you "No."

Actually, you missed the point entirely. It was not a bunch of redneck, country boys who said no; it was a bunch of educated types. Because they are the only ones who understood your proposal well enough to vote no.

You remember your amendment wording:

"The constitutional amendment to limit the salary of the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the house of representatives to no more than one-half of the governor's salary and to limit the salary of a member of the legislature to not more than one-fourth of the governor's salary."

You put forth the argument that lobby and campaign contribution expenditure troubles shook our confidence; no, no. What happened was not disgruntlement with the simple, yet apparently impossible ability to enforce rules dictated by good conscience.

What you don't seem to understand — and you should — is that we Flat Earthers, as we call ourselves, actually believe that you have earned a salary increase. Do we expect as much or more from you than what we expect from a County Commissioner? Likely so, and we should be willing to pay you decently for it.

But when you come asking, as you will again, know that it wasn't what you were asking for, it was the sneaky way you were doing it. By connecting it to the governor's salary that legislators control, you're asking more than even a Flat Earth member can tolerate.

So, there is a motion on the floor. Would the Flat Earth president ask a vote on this suggestion: Mr. Hudson, we hereby inform you that you'd be better off just asking for a raise and not messing up the works with gobbledygook that confuses voters and doesn't say what you really mean. Talk like a Texan — we can take it. How about: I want a raise; I've done my work well for you; I'm worth $25,000 each year.

The only way it could be worse than it was Tuesday is if 64, instead of 63, percent say 'No'. If so, then perhaps you have a lot of people who simply don't agree with your presumption. But please, don't let your wording be part of your problem.

Common sense ideas for education

By JESSE TREVINO

Those of us granted the privilege of expressing our opinions in public often must sustain attacks from outraged readers. Many are good people who simply disagree with the thrust of a column. Others are certifiable loons, whose letters go into a folder for the FBI in case of a mysterious accident.

Then there's the special class of reader who makes simple, common sense. The following slightly edited letter possesses such and can apply to almost any part of the state.

Dear Mr. Trevino,

I read your articles in our San Antonio Light and enjoy your insight into the education problems in Texas. I have been doing substitute teaching for the past four years in a local public school district in S.A. and I would like to share some insights of my own with you.

First of all, I am transplanted from Pittsburgh, Pa. About three years ago Rand McNally named it the No. 1 liveable city in the U.S.A. Last week, in another study ranking liveable cities, Pittsburgh came in No. 5. One of the reasons for the Rand McNally honor was the educational system of the city.

Granted, Pittsburgh is only 30th in size to San Antonio's 10th ranking, but they must be doing something right.

I could never understand why in Texas there are so many independent school districts in one city. I would certainly enjoy knowing why in San Antonio, a city with so many poor and 40 percent of all minorities not completing their education beyond the 10th grade, there are 14 separate public school districts. Money always seems to be the first reason for blaming the poor quality of education. Why are there 14 school superintendents, school boards, solicitors and the zillions of administrative people in all these 14 districts? Why isn't there a centralization of districts to help economize and standardize the public school system?

In Pittsburgh there is one public school system, one board of education, with one large building to house all the administrators; only one supervisor for music on secondary level, one for music on elementary level, one sports administrator, etc. And their system works! Or seems to. Just one set of school board members, not 14 sets. One set of school buses, not 14 sets.

Somehow, all of this seems to be more logical to me. I don't have any comparison in the test scores of public school students in Pittsburgh compared to those in San Antonio or Austin or Houston, but I am sure this is available.

Pittsburgh is a melting pot of many cultures, more so than the state of Texas. There just aren't Slavic people but Bulgarians, Russians, Carpatho-Russians, Czechs, Poles, Greeks, Macedonians, every type of Arab, Italians, Irish, Germans, Dutch, Poles, and blacks (even Nigerians and Gambians). Universities in Pittsburgh draw peoples from all over the globe, so you find a mix of backgrounds in the children of the public school system.

I was told once the reason for so many public school districts in Texas was a "political reason." How can this be explained?

In such large cities as Houston, Dallas and San Antonio wouldn't it be more efficient to "semi-centralize" districts? For example, section off each city into four sectors, four major sections, perhaps even having a core or inner city sector, if needed? So that instead of 14 or more districts, there could be four or five.

This would be a major undertaking and would eliminate jobs. But, as in other industries, when the status quo does not produce, the job is over. Those laid off could be offered other alternatives or re-educated or retrained.

Perhaps if dead wood ad-

ministrative jobs were phased out or eliminated in favor of business-smart managers, many of the problems we see in this state's education system could be eliminated.

Also, I read in Time magazine (Oct. 9) a report on the President's new Council on Education. A good point brought out was that 23 states have eased training and certification requirements, considered to be the most formidable and unnecessary barrier to attracting teaching "talent."

The result of this has been an influx of career-switchers from other professions. I count myself in this group. I am a professional nutritionist who dropped out of hospital work after eight years to raise my family. When I decided to return to work, we had moved to Texas. I saw an ad for substitute teachers in our district, applied and was hired.

I have a degree (post-graduate training included) and graduate credits in English, yet I would have had to go back to college for 1 year to get all the education course credits necessary and then take a teacher's exam to become certified.

At my age (50 plus) and with all my life experience, I did not feel I wanted to go back to college so I could start out at $18,500 a year. There has not been a raise for substitute teachers in four years in this city, yet teachers and clerical staff have gotten raises. I feel school districts should at least differentiate between those with minimum college hours and those of us who may have more credentials than some full-paid teachers. (Bad salaries) discourage good people with qualifications in other fields with good academic credentials who love to teach and want to teach. New Jersey Education Commissioner Saul Cooperman stated it right: Those education courses in college are "Mickey Mouse busy work."

I agree. They create jobs on the college level — but what do they do for the quality of education in the classroom?

Responding to bigotry

To the editor:

This is a letter in response to the very ignorant old man who stated in the Big Spring Paper ("Reactions mixed to first march" 11-5-89). "I think they ought to shoot all the sons of bitches" who took up their constitutional right of peaceful protest.

I was one of those marchers, and I along with others, feel very insulted by those backwards comments. The small-minded, unbelievably dense man would like to think that any Mexican (not meskin) black, or white person that wants the same rights to fair treatment as he is given, should be shot — I disagree.

It is time-warped thinking like this that has kept this place moving backwards in time. I suppose he would like Colorado City to go back to the 1930's where the execution of a Mexican would not only be noticed, but celebrated by he and his white-hooded friends. Wake up guy!!! The Klan may not be dead, but their ideas, for most of us are dead.

Now before you start your response, yes the poor girl that was raped deserves rights too. I knew her. She was one of the few bright spots left in this town. I have almost no doubt she was raped. She deserves justice, but on the other hand, so did the suspect.

You seem to think the only issue we were protesting was the death of Gomez. Once again your limited mind keeps you from seeing the whole picture.

I was at the protest. What was I protesting??? I was protesting the lack of rights given to Sammy Gomez. You and many others probably have said "Well, he raped that girl, he deserved it." I see.

Well could I ask a few simple questions? How long did you and the jury deliberate Sammy's guilt? Who was Gomez's attorney? What was the name of the judge who gave him the death penalty? Oh, you can't answer those questions. Why? Because he never got his day in court. That's what I was protesting.

I have this really stupid idea that "all men are created equal" and that you are "innocent until proven guilty."

Now, I am signing my name to my opinion like a man. If you are half the man you think you are, you will state your name to your backward, time-warped, Klan-like opinion. I, along with others are anxious to see if you will (but I doubt it).

Play it safe with fire drills

To the editor:

"Big fires start small; keep matches and lighters in the right hands" is the fire prevention theme for this year. Fire prevention week is only seven days but fire prevention is for the whole year. The Big Spring Firefighters and I have enjoyed bringing this message to your children. It has occurred to us some years ago that our children are taught fire drills in school but not at home. We hope this year you will take the opportunity to practice fire exit drills in the home, in showing our children two ways out of the home in case of fire, and having a meeting place, so once they get out they will remain safe.

We pray you will never have need of our services, however we are trained and ready to serve. We want to thank the teachers and businesses who helped to make this year's program a great success.

Freighter runs aground off Keys

MIAMI (AP) — Coast Guard and environmental officials were working today to free a 470-foot Greek freighter that ran aground in a fragile coral reef off the Florida Keys, the scene of two other ship groundings in less than a month.

Efforts failed early today to dislodge the freighter Elpis from the reef about five miles east of Key Largo.

Coast Guard spokesman Jeff Karonis said a tugboat will be brought in to help free the freighter, carrying a cargo of sugar and 356 tons of fuel oil.

There have been no reports of leaks from the ship, which ran aground about 11:30 p.m. Friday, but officials are not certain of the extent of the damage to the reef.

The Elpis was grounded near the site in the Key Largo National Marine Sanctuary where the 155-foot freighter Alec Owen Maitland ran aground Oct. 25, cutting a 200-foot swath in the reef.

Dukakis falls politically, personally

BOSTON (AP) — Almost one year from the day Gov. Michael S. Dukakis lost the presidential election, his wife was hospitalized after drinking rubbing alcohol and his mother for fainting spells, and the state posted an additional $220 million in debt.

Just 15 months before, Dukakis stood before a cheering convention hall in Atlanta and accepted the Democratic nomination, basking in the glow of his image as the American immigrant dream.

Few American political figures have fallen so far, so fast, without the taint of scandal to hasten their demise, say historians and political analysts.

"Part of it is he's not a sympathetic figure," said Larry Sabato, a professor of government at the University of Virginia. "I feel sympathy for him now because of his wife but people really don't feel for him. It's part of the coldness in him."

Philippines president visits Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Philippines President Corazon Aquino basked in a Texas welcome nine years after her late husband had heart surgery at a Dallas hospital.

Mrs. Aquino was scheduled Saturday to visit Baylor University Medical Center, where Benigno Aquino underwent triple bypass surgery in 1980.

Mrs. Aquino was making her second trip to the United States, and first to Dallas, since she rose to power in 1986 after strongman Ferdinand Marcos was toppled in a popular uprising.

An assassin's bullet killed her husband as he returned to Manila from exile in the United States in 1983, transforming him into a martyr for Filipinos who wanted freedom from the corrupt Marcos regime.

Krenz rules out plan for a reunification

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East German leader Egon Krenz ruled out any idea of reunification in a telephone call Saturday with Chancellor Helmut Kohl, a day after Communist authorities began punching holes in the Berlin Wall.

Kohl announced he will meet soon with the new East German leader, and he offered financial aid if East Germany follows through with promises of free elections and other reforms.

Kohl convened an emergency Cabinet meeting to discuss the developments in East Germany, where Krenz's 3-week-old government opened the nation's borders for the first time in 28 years Thursday and began cutting additional transit points through the Berlin Wall on Friday.

Kohl later flew back to Warsaw, resuming a visit to Poland that was interrupted for 27 hours to deal with the dramatic events back home.

As uncertainty grows over East Germany's future, there has been more speculation that reunification is a realistic possibility. Krenz ruled out that possibility.

"It is important that we serve people, and not discuss things that are not open to debate," Krenz said in an interview on the East German television news program "Aktuelle Kamera" after his conversation with Kohl.

Krenz said that in their telephone conversation, Kohl "referred to" the passage in West Germany's founding Basic Law that calls for German reunification.

But Krenz said any suggestion of discussing reunification was totally out of the question, saying West German Basic Law "is his (Kohl's) concern."

"It is my concern to stress that there are two totally sovereign German states."

Honduran police to disarm contras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The head of Honduran police said Saturday his forces will begin disarming Nicaraguan Contras around the country this week to guarantee peaceful general elections here.

Col. Lazaro Avila, chief of the Public Security Force, told a news conference the nationwide disarming program would start Monday. He said the Nov. 26 elections "will not be tarnished by intransigence."

However, with only 5,000 men, he did not say how his forces would cope if they met resistance from the more than 12,000 U.S.-backed Contras living in Honduras.

"While I truthfully don't know the exact location of these people or their equipment, the disarming is indiscriminate and there will be no exceptions," Avila said.

Hondurans will elect a president, three vice-presidents, 130 members of Congress and 289 municipal councils for four-year terms.

21 officials charged with corruption

MOSCOW (AP) — A score of top Communist Party and government officials in the central Asian republic of Uzbekistan have been charged with corruption after an investigation by Soviet officials, Tass said Saturday.

Among those charged was the republic's former Communist leader, Inamzhon Usmankhodzhaev, who a year ago was expelled from the national party's Central Committee.

Usmankhodzhaev and three other officials had been accused by the weekly magazine Ogonyok of accepting bribes.

Tass identified 20 officials from the republic's national and regional party organizations and local government who had been charged.

An investigation "revealed that they accepted large sums of money from their subordinates and other officials for patronage, promotion at work and assistance in solving economic and other problems," it said.

Official declares voting free, fair

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — Polls closed Saturday after five days of U.N.-supervised voting for an assembly that will write a constitution and declare Africa's last colony independent from South Africa.

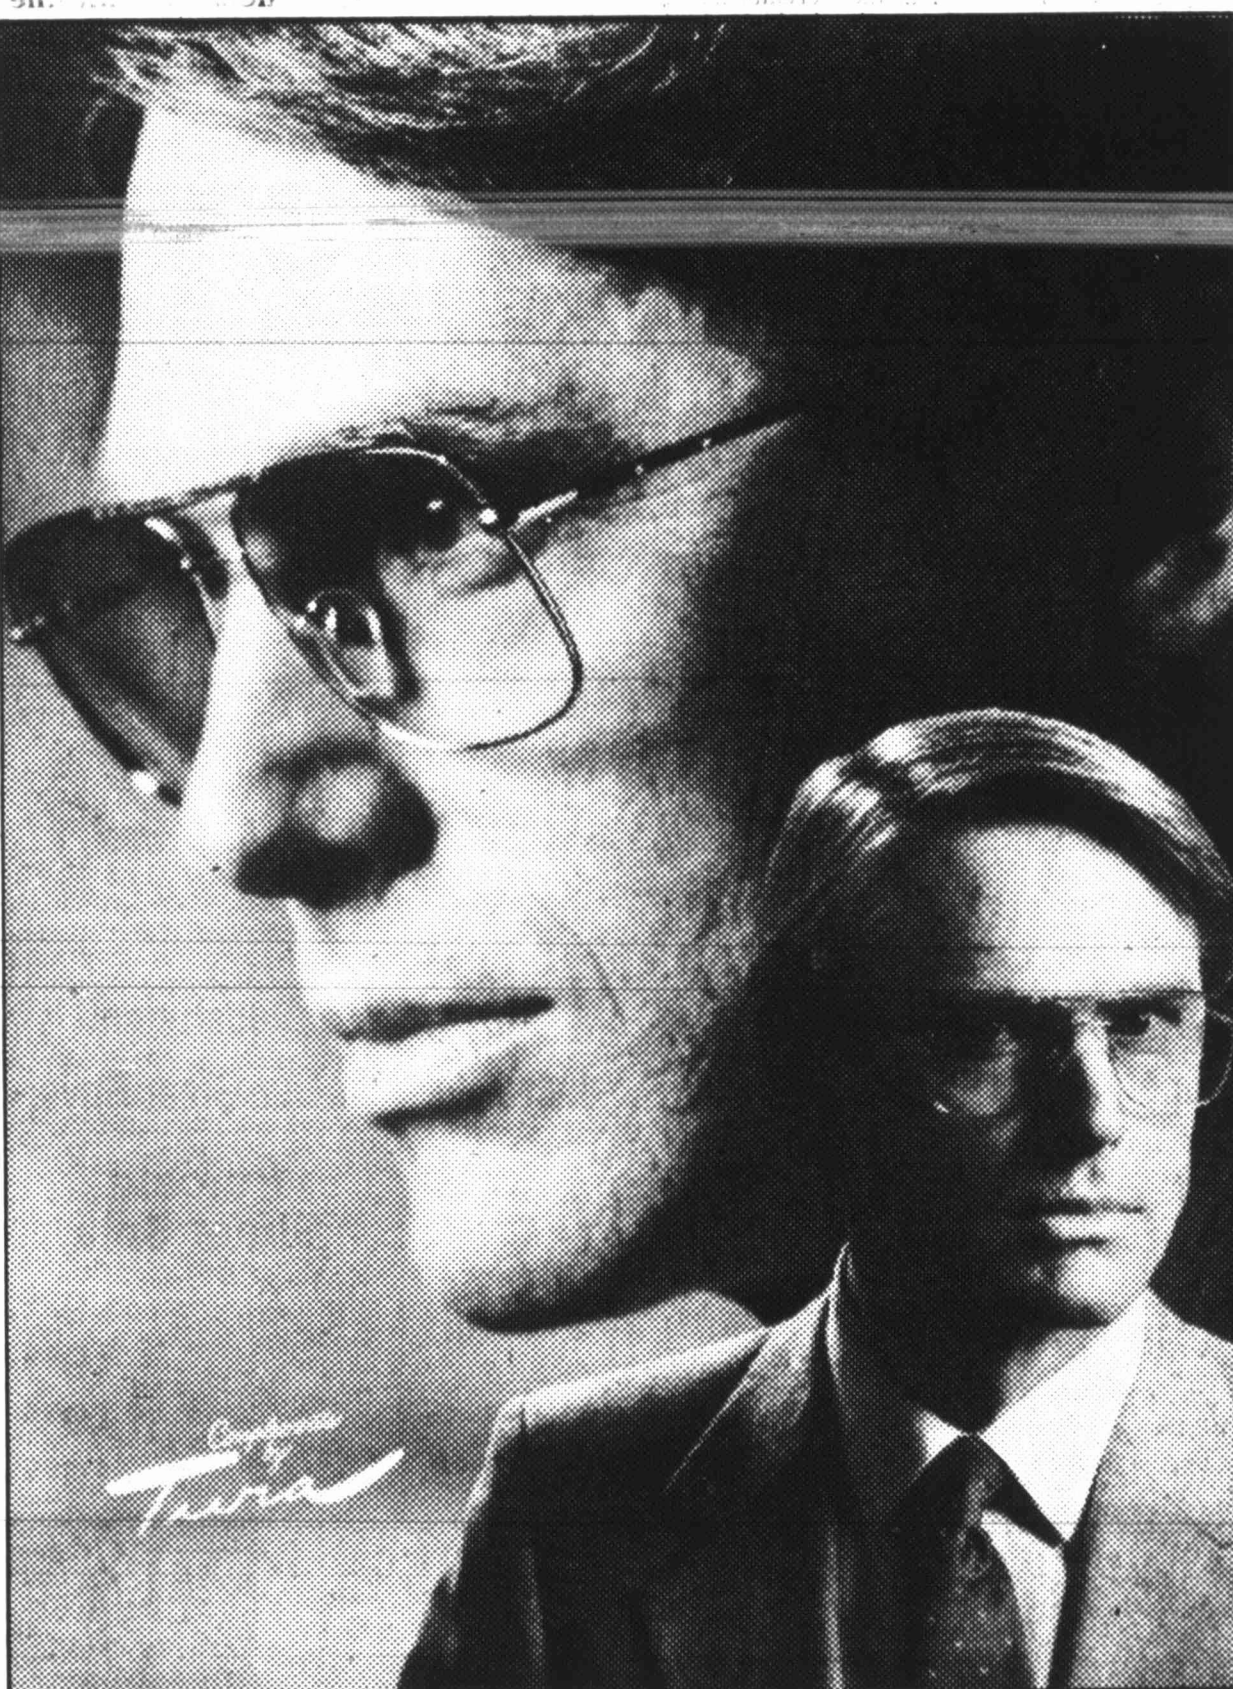

Thirty minutes after the election ended, U.N. Special Representative Martti Ahtisaari called the balloting "free and fair," a declaration necessary for the counting to begin.

"The people of Namibia have given the whole world an exemplary lesson in democracy," Ahtisaari told a news conference.

When the counting is completed, possibly by Wednesday, Ahtisaari will decide whether the entire election process met U.N. requirements. He will then make a recommendation to the U.N. Security Council on accepting the results.

Smoking ban on hold at local VA

By JAMES FLEEHR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The decision to ban smoking in all U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs facilities across the country by mid-1989 was deferred recently after the American Federation of Government Employees strongly objected to the decision.

Dr. James Shelton, DDS at the Big Spring Veterans Administration Medical Center, said the hospital will take a wait-and-see attitude.

"The last I heard was that they were waiting, pending national legislation," Shelton said. "We're just going to stay the way we are right now until further notice."

Shelton said a smoking ban is the desired decision of the hospital, which already has a restricted smoking policy, he said.

"We are not banning, but we would like moving to that goal," he said. "We would like to go smoke-free, but will have to wait and see with the union."

Either way, Shelton said, the deferment will not change anything at the local VA facility.

The recent move by 33 hospitals and 185 Vietnam outreach centers to ban cigarette smoking may be viewed as a precedent when the union votes, Shelton added.

According to other VA sources, the union is still negotiating the matter and no other information is available through local administrative channels.

AFGE, which represents more than 121,000 employees in VA health care facilities nationwide, said the VA failed to negotiate the ban with union leaders.

Whenever there is a change in work conditions, employers are required to consult beforehand with employee unions, said an October news release about the proposed ban.

AFGE is concerned that smokers will not be accommodated while the deadline on the ban (mid-1989) has already passed. The deadline was not met because of union pressure to have a say in the working conditions change — something that was originally ignored — said union officials.

"The only thing we object to is how the employee who does like to smoke will be able to smoke," said Samuel Camp, vice president of AFGE's National VA Council.

AFGE is backing a more accommodating policy, which includes well-ventilated smoking lounges near work areas, and smoking breaks scheduled into the workday.

Book-lending program may be discontinued

By JOHN McMILLAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — The Howard County Library may discontinue its book-lending program to those confined to their homes, a library official said this week.

The official, Rebecca Taylor, reference librarian and coordinator of the "books for homebound" program, said unless demand for the program increases, it will probably be ended by Jan. 1. Currently, only one Big Spring resident is borrowing books through the program, she said.

The largest number of book borrowers in the 15-year-old program was about eight during its first year, Taylor said.

Under the program, which is available only to Big Spring residents, the homebound can obtain a library card by calling the library and supplying the necessary information over the phone, she said. They inform Taylor of their book interests, such as mysteries or romance novels, and she selects books for them accordingly, Taylor said. Volunteers carry books to the homebound every three weeks; as many as 10 books can be checked out each time, she said.

Joy Decker, director of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program, whose members have carried books to the homebound for the library, said "a lot of people in the county may not even know that that service is available."

"If there are homebound people out in the community that can still read and would like to have the books, I think it would be great" to continue the service, she said.

Decker noted that the program also offers a valuable social service to the homebound. RSVP volunteers "stay and visit," she said. "Sometimes that one-to-one companionship is almost as important as the books," she said.

Most of the program participants have been the elderly, and they have favored large-print fiction books, Taylor said. The program is available to all age groups, however.

Taylor said homebound residents of Big Spring who want to receive the book-lending service should contact her at the library, 267-1756. Howard County Library is located at 312 Scurry St.

Spence found dead in hotel room

BOSTON (AP) — Craig Spence, a lobbyist linked to a Washington sex scandal under federal investigation, was found dead after barricading himself in a hotel room, police said Saturday.

"Spence, 49, was found dead Friday in his room at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel after firefighters used a saw to cut the door in half."

Spence had apparently barricaded the door with a bed. He was found fully clothed and there were no visible signs of injuries.

Authorities said Saturday an autopsy had been conducted, but the results would not be immediately released.

The Washington Times reported in August that Spence disclosed he had AIDS and had threatened to commit suicide rather than die of the disease.

Spence was identified this summer by the Times as a major client of a homosexual escort service being investigated by the Secret Service, the District of Columbia police and the U.S. attorney's office for possible credit card fraud.

Survey: Mail service often slow, inconsistent

By MARIO CRISTALDI
Herald Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service is meeting its delivery goals just 60 percent of the time, a nationwide mail survey suggests.

Of 216 first-class letters mailed to and from cities in 32 states, 129 were delivered on time in the unsolicited survey by the Herald's Washington Bureau.

A letter mailed from the capital to Big Spring took three days to arrive, as expected. But the letter took four days on the return trip.

Mail is supposed to take a maximum of three days anywhere in the country. Overnight delivery is expected for mail traveling within roughly 100 miles and two-day service for items sent within 600 miles.

Among the survey results:

In the long-distance category, 68 percent of 87 letters sent beyond 600 miles arrived within the three-day window. (Of those letters, 16 percent arrived in just two days.)

In the Washington-Virginia-Maryland area, 68 percent of 38 letters arrived overnight.

Performance was poorest within 600 miles, with just 44 percent of 91 letters arriving within the expected two days.

The Postal Service's own recent surveys claimed a 95 percent success rate in overnight areas, and about 90 percent in the two- and three-day service areas.

Performance times are based on "station-to-station," rather than actual door-to-door delivery times. Critics say the Postal Service's standard is meaningless to average customers and allows for inflated success rates.

Postal Service spokesman Ralph Stewart questioned the methods and "misleading" results of the Washington Bureau survey, which gauged door-to-door delivery. He said mail room delays and other factors could have skewed the findings.

"I think you're doing a disservice to your readers," Stewart said.

But in recent years, several independent and congressional surveys have also indicated that the postal officials are not delivering on their service promises.

Rep. Bill Green, a New York City Republican, said the new survey is "remarkably similar" to surveys he has regularly conducted in response to constituent complaints. He said next-day delivery in his Manhattan district ranged from a low of 33 percent in 1981 to a stable rate of about 66 percent in recent years.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of the Governmental Affairs subcommittee on federal services, post office and civil service, said he was not surprised by the results.

"The Postal Service uses a shorter yardstick to measure service," Pryor said. "And now it appears they're planning to modify their service standards on the grounds that people are more interested in consistency than speed."

The Postal Service has begun a nationwide "re-examination" of the size of the overnight service areas, a change that could mean slower delivery of some mail. Officials say the areas are outdated and do not necessarily best serve customers.

Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank said critics have prematurely cast the re-examination as a service reduction.

"The result will be more consistent service, not less," Frank said recently. "I think that will save all of us money and a lot of pain."

Other survey results showed that:

Mail delivery times are inconsistent. A letter mailed from downtown Washington to Capitol Hill traveled the 1.5-mile distance overnight — but took four days to return. Similarly, a letter to Canton, Ohio took two days — but then six days coming back.

Letters mailed from Washington generally arrived faster than those mailed to the capital from the 32 states. About 72 percent of the test letters sent from downtown Washington arrived on time; just 32 percent of the letters mailed back from the states were on time.

Nationwide, late letters took an average of 1.5 days extra. No early letters arrived more than one day ahead of schedule.

BIG SPRING — Salvation Army Lt. William Owens, left, and Sue Williams-Ryerson check some of the gifts that the local SA post has purchased for its Christmas Relief program. Persons wishing to receive aid have until Friday to apply.

Salvation Army plays Santa for needy kids

By STEVE REAGAN
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — After receiving aid from the Salvation Army's Christmas Relief drive for the past two years, Sue Williams-Ryerson is thankful to the program for providing "the only Christmas" her children will receive.

Sue, an unemployed mother of two small boys, received toys, clothes and food through the Salvation Army program the past two years and has been accepted for this year's drive, SA Lt. Bill Owens said.

Sue said that — without the help of the Army — her sons, Paul and Mark, would not receive Christmas presents this year.

"This is the only Christmas they're going to get," she said. "I have no income, whatsoever, and my father has to pay the bills, so he can't afford to help. What they get here is it."

Until two months ago, Sue was employed, but she said that the demands placed on her at the workplace — she said she worked up to 12 hours a day — were too great for a separated mother of boys age 2 and 3 years old.

"My boss told me that I had to choose between work and the kids," she said. "Naturally, the kids won out."

She first applied for SA aid two years ago and was "adopted" by Wal-Mart employees; the Army program allows for individuals and businesses to sponsor needy families.

"There was no money coming in (at the time) whatsoever," Sue said. "Whatever food we had my father provided... Wal-Mart had a Christmas party for the people they sponsored. There was punch and cookies, and all of the employees who had 'adopted' a child were there to watch the children open the presents."

Last year, her children were sponsored by the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp Jaycees, and her sons got their first look at Santa Claus.

"This prisoner dressed as Santa Claus came out of this chimney, and there were other guys dressed as elves," Sue said. "They gave the children toys and clothes."

As Christmas 1989 approaches, Sue said she is once again thankful for the Salvation Army's assistance.

"This year, I'm separated from my husband," she said. "I'm staying with my dad, and he's having to pay my bills and his. We're not making it too well... We're low on food, so the food we get here is going to be our Christmas dinner."

Owens, who is in his first year at the local post, began his involvement with the Salvation Army in much the same way as Sue. He said his family was a recipient of Christmas relief when he was a child, and he became more actively involved with the Army as he grew older.

The local post provided aid for 647 families last Christmas, and has received more than 300 applications for aid so far this year. Owens expects to number to climb to between 500 and 600 before the Friday application deadline.

There are no set guidelines for acceptance into the program, although he said that the family's financial situation is the most important determining factor.

"No one is really turned down here unless their income level is above a certain level. Their income level is the biggest thing," Owens said. "If they are receiving food stamps, they probably will receive help."

"This is the only Christmas they (two small boys) are going to get. I have no income, whatsoever, and my father has to pay the bills, so he can't afford to help. What they get here is it." — Sue Williams-Ryerson, Salvation Army relief recipient.

Other groups, such as senior citizens living on a fixed income, would probably qualify for aid, also, he said.

The local post has already bought toys for the drive, and is now dependent on donations to help pay for the gifts, Owens said.

"We buy the toys up front and depend on the community to help pay for it," he said. "There's no way we can do it by ourselves. When the community gets involved and sees the need, we're able to be the middle man for (the drive)."

The food, clothing and toys will be distributed by the Army between Dec. 18 and 20, Owens said. Persons wishing to sponsor a family may do so by contacting the local post at 267-8239.

Ex policeman faces trial

HERALD STAFF REPORT

BIG SPRING — An ex police officer indicted on a charge of voluntary manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife could face trial Monday.

"It looks like we'll be picking a jury Monday. It looks like it's going to go," said William Dupree, Howard County assistant district attorney.

"It just doesn't seem as if there's going to be any changes," Dupree said.

Dennis Dunn, 39, is currently free on $90,000 bond following his arrest April 13, 1988 in the shotgun slaying of his wife, Carlye. Mrs. Dunn died as the result of a single gunshot wound.

Mrs. Dunn was transported to Scenic Mountain Medical Center by her husband, where she was declared dead on arrival. Her husband was arrested at the hospital on charges of involuntary manslaughter a short time later.

The charge was later upped to voluntary manslaughter by a grand jury. If convicted, Dunn could face a maximum sentence of 20 years in state prison.

Dupree said he expects jury selection to begin at 9 a.m. Monday and trial to begin Tuesday. The trial is expected to take about three days, he said.

Marfa 6

MARFA — For the second consecutive year, the Stanton Buffaloes went through District 5-2A undefeated as they whipped the Marfa Shorthorns 49-6 here Friday night.

The win is Stanton's second district crown in as many years in the league. The Buffs heads into state playoff action with an 8-2 mark. Marfa finishes at 3-7 and 1-4.

Stanton will play District 6-2A runnerup Ozona (8-2) at 8 p.m. Friday in Ozona.

Stanton broke a 7-6 halftime game wide open in the second half, scoring two TD's in the third quarter, and adding for more scores in the final quarter.

Kenny McCalister started Stanton's second half barrage by catching a 50-yard scoring pass from Randy Navarez. Tony Moses added thesecond of his seven extra points on the night. Stanton's other third quarter tally was a 58-yard run by Gary Don Thompson.

In the fourth quarter, Thompson again came through with the big play, a 57-yard run. This was followed by another big play from McCalister, an interception returned 76-yards for a score.

Navarez added the fifth Stanton score of the half on a three-yard run. Thompson finished it off with a seven-yard run.

Stanton struck first in the opening quarter when Navarez scored from eight yards out. Marfa's only score came in the second quarter, Daniel Roland scored from 10 yards out. The extra point attempt failed.

Roland paced Marfa with 123 yards on 32 carries. Thompson led all rushers, accounting 139 yards on only five carries.

STERLING CITY — The Garden City Bearkat offense shredded a proud Sterling City Eagles defense for more than 500 yards as the "Kats" plucked the Eagles 69-0 in District 8-A play here Friday night.

The win gives Garden City the right to advance to the state playoffs as the district runnerup behind Rankin. Garden City is 3-1 in league play and 7-2 overall. Sterling City falls to 2-2 and 2-7.

The Eagles came into the game only allowing 14 points per game. Garden City changed all of that in a hurry, exploding for 21 first quarter points, and 21 more points in the second quarter.

Tailback James Soles scored G-City's first two scores, the first from three yards out, and the other a 46-yarder. Fullback Eric Seidenberger got into the act by bursting loose for a 75-yard run with no time left in the first quarter.

Soles led two more scores in the second quarter, on runs of four and seven yards. Allan Hoelscher passed 21 yards to Jim Bob Scott for the last G-City TD in the half.

The rout continued in the third quarter. Armando Rodriguez scored from five yards out, and Soles ran in from the nine.

Two more tallies were racked up in the final quarter. Mario Aguilar scored from two yards out, and Jody Bradford scooted in from 55 yards out. Bradford, a freshman, also booted seven extra points, but he had a string of 27 consecutive extra points stopped when he missed in the first quarter.

Soles led Garden City with 164 yards on 12 carries. His backup Mario Aguilar, rushed for 128 yards in 24 carries. Armando Rodriguez picked off a pass for the Bearkats.

Garden City will conclude the season by hosting Robert Lee Friday.

Steers outslug Snyder; claim league crown

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

SNYDER — The first goal the Big Spring Steers set out to do was accomplished here Friday night.

Since spring of last year, the Steers put in many tiresome hours to win a district championship. Cliching the District 4-4A crown, Big Spring put in 48 tiresome minutes, outslugging the Snyder Tigers 28-16.

The score is really not indicative of the game. It was a defensive struggle at its best; a hard-hitting contest with lots of turnovers was the theme of the night.

It was clear that the intensity of this rivalry hasn't lessened; there were several short fisticuffs, with three players being ejected.

Janszen: Rose not telling the truth

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Pete Rose has contradicted himself and lied during a series of broadcast appearances promoting sales of his book, says his chief accuser in the gambling scandal that led to Rose's banishment from baseball.

Paul Janszen, who told baseball investigator John Dowd that Rose bet on baseball and the Cincinnati Reds, said Friday night that Rose was not telling the truth when he claimed in interviews that he did not wager on baseball.

"When all this started, he denied at least five things that I told John Dowd," Janszen told the Dayton Daily News in a copyrighted story published Saturday.

"Now he has admitted to four of them. One, he said he never won any Pick Six tickets. Two, he said he never bet with bookies. Three, he said he always paid his taxes, never evaded them. Four, I said Pete had a gambling problem. He denied it, now he says he is getting help for a gambling disorder. Five, he said he never bet on baseball."

"Right now I'm four for four ... and they say I have no credibility?"

Barbara Pinzka, a spokeswoman and adviser to the former Reds manager, said Saturday that Rose acknowledged he has a gambling disorder and has sought help for it. "I believe that Pete did not bet on baseball," Ms. Pinzka said.

"I don't think contradiction is fair, because that implies that Pete is consciously changing his story. He didn't think he had a gambling problem until he sought professional help and came to realize in that process that he had a problem," she said.

Ms. Pinzka said she had not seen the Janszen story.

Evidence cited in Dowd's report included three betting slips Janszen and his girl friend, Danita Marcum, turned over to federal investigators. The slips allegedly containing Rose's hand-writing and a Rose fingerprint. The late baseball Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti cited the report in August when he banned Rose from baseball for life.

For the Brothers Bearkat, G-City football is a family affair

By STEVE REAGAN

GARDEN CITY — Most coaches like to extol a feeling of family in their teams. At Garden City, they practice what they preach.

Three sets of brothers — the Soles, Seidenbergers and Scotts — take the field on Friday nights during football season to do battle for the Bearkats.

And while having brothers on the same team is not unusual, having

Third and long three sets on a small class A team like Garden City is not your everyday occurrence.

Head coach Sam Scott, father of players Jim Bob and Shea, says that the "family affair" going on in Bearkat land can have its advantages.

"They push each other, get after each other and fuss and fight every day," Scott said of the trio of brothers. "But when they line up

When the Steers threw in Merritt's direction, it was usually fatal. The cornerback intercepted two Rance Thompson passes in the first half, killing drives at the goal line and the six.

But Thompson shook off the interceptions and engineered two decisive fourth-quarter scoring drives to pull Big Spring from a 16-14 deficit.

The Tigers had scored nine consecutive points to take the lead early in the fourth quarter after the Steers had broken a 7-7 halftime tie by scoring with 6:32 left in the third quarter.

Taking the second half opening kickoff, the Steers' offense marched 75 yards in 13 plays. Thompson started the drive with a 19-yard completion to tight end Joe Dowgney and ended it with a 15-yard scoring toss to Mayfield. The

'Stangs win first-ever district title

By STEVE REAGAN

GAIL — The Sands Mustangs were only a couple of plays better than the Borden County Coyotes here Friday night — but they were very, very big plays.

The Mustangs took advantage of a key defensive mistake by the Coyotes to score the game-winning touchdown, then later iced the contest with a gutsy fake punt, en route to downing Borden 36-30.

The win gives Sands, a perfect 10-0 mark for the season, its first-ever District 6A Six-Man title. The Coyotes, who saw their only shot at the playoffs go down the drain with the loss, ended their season with a 6-3-1 overall mark, 3-2 in district play.

The Mustangs will now advance to play the Marathon Mustangs, runner-up of District 5-A, in Imperial Friday night at 7:30 p.m.

An elated Sands' head coach Randy Roemisch was basking in his team's new title after the game. "It's been a long time for me," the coach said of his first-ever title.

"I've been waiting 16 years for this ... I knew (Borden) was going to give us the game of a lifetime, and they did. But that's OK. I'd rather win the district this way. "This is one of the best feelings there is," he added. "There ain't nothing better."

On the opposite side of the field, Coyote coach Joe Bond expressed pride in the way his team had played.

"We're really pleased with our kids," Bond said. "They played about as good as they could play. We couldn't ask for more than that."

It was a strange sense of deja vu for Roemisch, who was a coach for Borden in 1981 when the Coyotes lost by an identical 36-30 score to Highland for the district championship.

The game began as if it would be a Sands rout. After forcing a Coyote punt on Borden's first possession, the Mustangs struck quickly, marching 56 yards in four plays. Charles Rhodes did the scoring honors when he scooted around right end for a 28-yard TD run.

The lead held for the rest of the quarter until a Sands miscue led to the Coyotes only lead of the game. The Mustangs went for a first down on fourth-and-one from the Sands' 18, but quarterback Albert Franco bobbled the ball and his desperation pass to Brandon Riddle fell incomplete, giving Borden the ball.

The Coyotes wasted little time cashing in the gift. On the second play from scrimmage, tailback Jimmy Rios ran 10 yards for the score. Brian Bond's conversion kick gave Borden an 8-6 lead with 9:54 left in the half.

Bird's back in form

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — At times he's felt the frustrations of a rookie. Shots have bounced off the rim. Passes have gone awry.

"It has not been easy to come back," says Larry Bird, who missed most of last season after surgery on both ankles in mid-November.

Bird, who will be 33 on Dec. 7, made it look easy, though, as he scored 50 points Friday night in the Boston Celtics' 117-106 victory over the Atlanta Hawks.

"I still have a long way to go," Bird said. "I'm back a little quicker than I anticipated, but I have to keep playing and get my timing."

Bird, a three-time MVP, was ready mentally, but even he thought it would take time to get back into the playing shape which established him as one of the top players in NBA history.

His shot with three seconds left beat the Bulls in Chicago last weekend. However, he had trouble in losses in Milwaukee on Tuesday and against Washington in Landover, Md., Wednesday.

He complained about being rusty, his timing and "erratic" shooting after hitting just 9 of 26 shots from the field, including 1 of 9 in the fourth period, against Washington.

"I feel good, I'm getting back into shape, but this is still new to me," Bird said. "It will come back, though."

And, unfortunately for the Hawks, 0-3 for the first time since they were 0-4 in 1971, Bird got his act together much sooner than he figured.

He hit on 19 of 25 field-goal attempts, including his lone Four plays later, Sands regained the lead when Franco found Jay Johnston on a six-yard scoring pass.

The Mustangs struck again on their next possession. Beginning on their own 22, the 'Stangs quickly marched down the field. Runs of 12 yards by Eric Herm and 23 yards by Bill Grigg gave the visitors and first down on Borden's 23. Two plays later, Franco connected with Herm for 19 yards and the score.

The Coyotes, however, responded with some lightning of their own on the ensuing drive. Borden took four plays to score on their 58-yard march. On second and one from the 16, fullback Patrick Herridge gain-

This all-for-one attitude pervades even if one brother is getting more glory than the other. James Soles is the Bearkats' leading rusher this season and, consequently, has been getting more recognition from coaches and news media. Does this bother his brother?

"No, it doesn't," Chad said. "I or not.

"We're always telling each other what to do," Chad said. "I tell (Eric) where to run sometimes," lineman John said, "because he doesn't know where to."

On a serious note, they said they are quick to encourage and slow to disparage the other's actions. "We can't get down on each other," James said.

With all this togetherness, it is perhaps ironic that the Seidenbergers' and Soles' fathers were football rivals during their high school careers.

But, whatever rivalry existed between the fathers is non-existent in the sons, who stand four-square (or is it six-square?) for the Bearkats.

So, at least for the next two weeks, Garden City will have a unique triple-double working for its benefit.

One would think that with all the brothers running around, coach Scott might have a hard time telling them apart, but he said he's had previous experience in the area. "We had eight sets of brothers playing for us last year," he said.

"Now," Scott added, "that's unusual."

Wolves surprise Coahoma in season finale

By MARCELLINO CHAVEZ
For the Herald

COLORADO CITY — Defense was the name of the last district game for both the Colorado City Wolves and the Coahoma Bulldogs Friday night in C-City. The Wolves stopped the visitors twice inside the 20-yard line to preserve an 8-2 win.

It was hustling defensive play that set up Colorado City's first and only score. After both sides failed to move the ball in their first two possessions, the Bulldogs received a C-City punt around the 30-yard line. Unable to move the ball, Coahoma faced a fourth and 13-yards to go. Carlos Cervantes went back to punt, but the snap was bad and Cervantes was ambushed by Wolves at Coahoma's own 24-yard line.

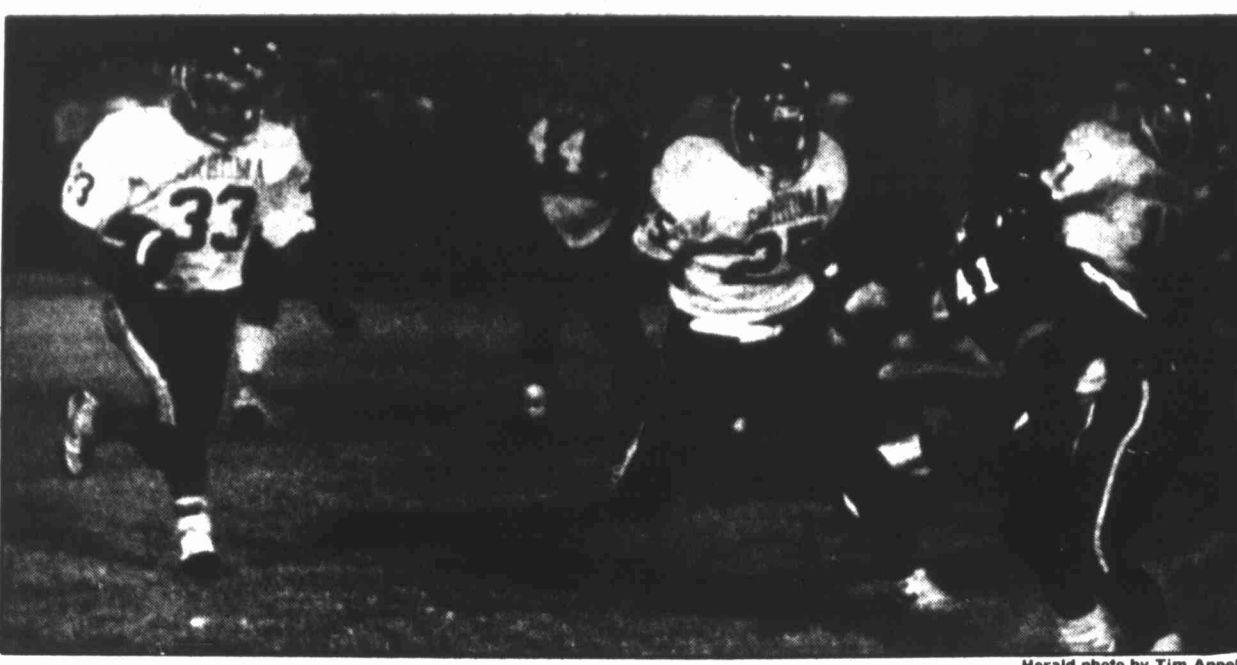

With 10:22 left in the second quarter, the Wolves, led by junior quarterback George Ramsey, pushed the ball inside the Coahoma 20-yard line. Ramsey found Darrin Emerson for a five-yard toss to the Bulldog ten-yard line. From there, Tracy Edwards went seven yards and then a Wolves score.

The Wolves decided to go for a two-point conversion. Edwards took the goal line and C-City led 8-0 before intermission.

Both teams' defenses continued to do their jobs, stopping each other's offense and running out the clock. Although he didn't get into the end zone again, Ramsey ran loose for C-City, breaking away once for a 24-yard gain.

The Bulldogs countered with fine defensive plays from Marty Phillips and Phillip Anderson.

C-City received the second half kickoff and set up shop on its own 30-yard line. Coahoma held the Wolves, and after a home-team punt, started their drive with good field position. Coahoma began moving the ball on the ground with good gains from Mike Mendez and quarterback Shane Walker.

Walker found Overton for an important 11-yard gain on fourth and 10 from the home team's 17-yard line. However, C-City's Mike Boatwright intercepted a Bulldog pass and returned it to the Wolves' 45-yard line. A clipping call against C-City pushed it back to their own 13-yard line.

With 6:39 left in the third stanza, Ramsey went back and tried to scramble away from a host of Bulldogs. The Dogs, however, pounced on Ramsey, knocking the ball loose. Instead of covering it in the endzone, though, Coahoma only managed to touch the ball before it went out of the back of the endzone.

Since the loose ball was last touched by the defense, the Bulldogs were awarded a safety, cutting C-City's lead to 8-2.

Both teams could not jar the door loose on each other's tough 'D' as they traded punts through the rest of the third quarter. The Bulldogs used up four minutes of time as they began a drive from their own 20-yard line. Aided by a C-City penalty the Bulldogs began to roll through the strong defense of the Wolves.

Good plays by Ginnett and Cervantes were followed by a busted play that still worked when quarterback Walker ran into a lineman but managed to stay on his feet, finding a Bulldog receiver for a 23-yard pickup. The surprise gainer moved Coahoma to the Colorado City 39-yard line. Once again the Wolfpack defense rose to the occasion; C-City stopped the visitors and forced them to give up the ball.

Later in the period, the Bulldogs threatened again. Walker gained eight yards on first down, and teammate Cervantes scampered for 22-yards and a first down at the Wolves 27-yard line. On third and three from the 20-yard line, Cervantes gained three more yards and a Bulldog first down. After four consecutive incompletions, C-City took over at their own 12-yard line.

The Wolves were stopped by the Bulldogs, and it appeared Coahoma might have another chance. They fell short, however, and C-City ran out the clock preserving a tough 8-2 win.

Colorado City improved their overall record to 4-6 and 2-3 in district action, while the Bulldogs dropped to 4-6 overall and 2-3 in district play.

Thursday night action involved both teams junior varsities, as the Bulldogs came away with an 18-6 win. In the first quarter Brent Elmore passed to Mark Arguello for 11-yards and a Bulldog touchdown. The try for two points was stymied by the Wolves and Coahoma led 6-0.

In the second quarter Elmore found Kenny Lowery for a 32-yard toss. Coahoma led 12-0 as the PAT again failed. In the third stanza both teams stopped each other and the period ended without a score.

In the fourth quarter, Elmore found Lowery again for another score, this time for 48 yards. Again the extra points failed and the Coahoma's JVs led 18-0. C-City added six points late in the ballgame as the tilt ended with the visitors taking a 18-6 win.

The Bulldogs JVs ended their campaign with a 4-5-1 record. Coach Kim Nichols expressed his recognition for the following players who played well all year. They are: Bryan Moore, Steve New, Matt Coates Bryan Sledge, Isa Castellano, Greg Atkinson, Cadet Bryant, Steve Garcia, Chad Tidwell, David Park, Chris Jones, Shane Sayles, Kirby Brown, Wes Rowell, Chad Archibald, Drew Bell and Oscar Gonzales. Others include: Brent Elmore, Mark Arguello, and Kenny Lowery.

ed 10 yards, was hit and fumbled. An alert Rios, however, covered the fumble in the end zone to bring Borden to within 20-16 at the half.

The two teams continued trading scores in the second half. Sands struck on its initial possession, going 46 yards in eight plays. Franco and Johnston again did the scoring honors, connecting on a six-yard TD pass.

Not to be outdone, the Coyotes responded by going 69 yards in nine plays. The TD came when Rios went left, stopped and ran up the middle for 15 yards. Shane Kemper's PAT made the score 28-24. Sands, with 3:27 left in the quarter.

But the Mustangs were not finished scoring yet. They took the ensuing kickoff and methodically marched down the field, grinding minutes off the clock during their 12-play drive.

The first of two major plays that decided the contest came when, on fourth-and-goal from the three, a Franco-to-Grigg pass was stopped at the one. An offside penalty against the Coyotes, however, gave the 'Stangs new life, and Grigg converted from two out to give Sands a 36-24 lead with 7:26 left in the game.

The second major play of the game came after Rios' 1-yard run with 2:14 left brought the score to 36-30. Sands, the Mustangs, trying to kill the clock, faced fourth-and-eight with about a minute left.

Johnston went back into punt formation, took the snap then rolled out for about four seconds before finding a sliding Herm for the game-clinching first-down pass.

"I told Jay that if the play was covered to punt the ball," Roemisch said. "It was covered, all right, but Eric ran a great route and Jay threw it right in there. It was a great play."

CHIROPRACTIC TREATMENT

The whiplash injury is a very real problem and should receive special attention. The chiropractic physician is an expert on neck disorders. A thorough examination and x-ray study of the area will disclose the extent and area of injury. The strain and sprain of ligaments and muscles can cause the normal position and flexibility of the neck to be altered. The chiropractic physician is trained to detect and correct these problems and restore the neck to normal function. Gentle manipulative therapy or "adjustment" is administered to restore normal function to the area. Depending upon the severity of the injury, additional treatment consisting of braces, physical therapy and exercise may be warranted.

If you have been subjected to whiplash injury and are experiencing any of these symptoms, have a chiropractic examination and consultation. This will determine whether you need special attention.

SWC roundup

Arkansas 19 Baylor 10

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Freshman Todd Wright kicked four field goals and senior James Rouse topped 100 yards rushing for the third straight week as Arkansas slipped by Baylor 19-10 and set up a Southwest Conference showdown with Texas A&M.

Wright's 40-yard field goal with 2:56 left secured the victory. Rouse carried 28 times for 133 yards and a touchdown.

His 38 yarder broke a 7-7 tie and his 19 yarder broke a 10-10 tie with 4:06 left in the third quarter. Wright, who has made 16 of 18 this year, kicked it to 16-10 with a 21-yard field goal with 10:17 to go.

Tenth-ranked Arkansas improved to 8-1 for the season and 5-1 in the SWC, same as the Aggies. Neither team plays again until they meet Nov. 24 at College Station. Baylor dropped to 4-5, 3-3 in the league.

Baylor quarterback Brad Goebel was injured in the third quarter and the Bears could do little against the Arkansas defense with Ed Lovell at quarterback.

In the second half, Baylor had the ball a total of seven minutes and made 53 yards.

Wright's second field goal came at the end of 78-yard drive. Derek Russell got the Razorbacks started when he made 34 yards on a reverse behind a block by quarterback Quinn Grovey.

Houston 47

Texas 9

HOUSTON (AP) — Manny Hazard caught two of Andre Ware's four touchdown passes, setting a new NCAA record for most touchdown receptions in a season, as 15th-ranked Houston drubbed Texas 47-9 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday night.

The Cougars were ahead 27-9 at the half on Ware's touchdown passes of 18 and 31 yards to Kimble Anders and an 18-yarder to Hazard that tied the NCAA record set by San Diego State's Tom Reynolds in 1969.

Hazard, the nation's leading receiver with 118 catches, broke the record in the third quarter with a 7-yard catch and now has 19 touchdown catches this season. He caught 19 passes for 226 yards against the Longhorns.

Texas Tech 37

Texas Christian 7

LUBBOCK (AP) — James Gray rushed for 209 yards and scored three touchdowns Saturday to lead 23rd-ranked Texas Tech to a 37-7 victory over Texas Christian.

The Red Raiders (7-2 overall, 4-2 in the Southwest Conference) kept alive their slim Cotton Bowl hopes. Texas Christian fell to 4-6 overall, 2-5 in the conference.

Tech's upset of Texas last week led to its first national ranking since 1977. The Raiders jumped to a 30-0 halftime lead against TCU and never was threatened.

Jamie Gill threw first-half touchdown passes of five yards to Anthony Manyweather and 34 yards to Gray. Gray, Tech's career rushing leader, scored on a 16-yard run, and Anthony Lynn's 6-yard run capped Tech's first-half scoring.

By halftime, Gray had 170 yards rushing, including a 69-yard run on his third carry that put him over 1,000 yards for the season. Gray, a senior who carried 19 times, leads the conference with 1,177 yards rushing. It was Gray's third 200-yard rushing game this season.

Notre Dame 59

Southern Methodist 6

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Top-ranked Notre Dame showed muscle and mercy Saturday against Southern Methodist.

The Irish knew it would be an easy day, and it was.

Notre Dame labored to keep the score down against SMU, taking delay-of-game penalties and deliberately avoiding one touchdown while setting a school record with their 22nd consecutive victory.

"I didn't want the scoring to get out of hand," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz said after the Irish (10-0) demolished the Mustangs (2-7).

Despite even Holtz's best intentions, the score was a lopsided 59-6.

"He did everything he could to keep the score down after the game was settled," SMU coach Forrest Gregg said. "I would not have wanted them to lay down and not try to score."

Notre Dame's previous mark of 21 consecutive victories was set under Frank Leahy in 1946-48.

Records fall by wayside in Saturday action

By The Associated Press

What a day for records! Anthony Thompson of Indiana ran for 377 yards, both Clarkston Hines of Duke and Terance Mathis of New Mexico caught their 35th touchdown pass and Shane Montgomery of North Carolina State threw 73 times, all Division I-A marks set Saturday.

While rushing, receiving and passing records all changed, college football's bowl picture did not.

Top-ranked Notre Dame extended its winning streak to a school-record 22 games, easily beating Southern Methodist 59-6 and second-ranked Colorado routed Oklahoma State 41-17. That moved both teams closer to a possible national championship game in the Orange Bowl, although bids cannot be issued for two weeks.

Third-rated Michigan defeated No. 8 Illinois 24-10 and stayed on the inside track for the Rose Bowl. Ninth-ranked Southern California clinched its third straight New Year's Date in Pasadena with a 24-3 victory over No. 25 Arizona.

Elsewhere, No. 6 Nebraska crushed Kansas 51-14, No. 7 Miami topped No. 14 Pittsburgh 24-3, No. 10 Arkansas beat Baylor 19-10, No. 11 Tennessee romped past Akron 52-9, No. 12 Auburn defeated Louisiana Tech 38-23, No. 13 Penn State played to a 13-13 tie with Maryland, No. 15 Houston pounded Texas 47-9, CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Michigan's Jarrod Bunch, center, goes over the top of the University of Illinois defensemen to score a touchdown during the first quarter of Saturday's Big Ten football game here.

No. 18 Virginia beat Virginia Tech 32-25 and No. 19 West Virginia held off Rutgers 21-20.

Iso, Georgia stopped No. 20 Florida 17-10, No. 21 Brigham Young defeated Air Force 44-35, Duke downed No. 22 North Carolina State 35-26, No. 23 Texas Tech beat Texas Christian 37-7 and No. 24 Fresno State trounced New Mexico State 45-5.

Fifteenth-rated Houston faced Texas in a late afternoon game and fourth-ranked Alabama played at Louisiana State at night.

Thompson, who last week set a record with his 60th career touchdown, ran wild as Indiana beat Wisconsin 45-17. He carried 52 times, scored four more TDs and surpassed the single-game record of 357 yards set by Reuben Mayes of Washington State in 1964 and tied last weekend by Mike Pringle of Fullerton State.

"I think if I was a little faster I could have got maybe 500 yards, the way they were blocking out there," Thompson said. "The first play where I went off tackle ... I mean there was a hole you could drive a semi through. I just took off running and I felt it was going to be a great day for me."

He was right.

Indiana coach Bill Mallory put Thompson back in the game with three minutes left to break the record. Thompson broke off a 27-yard run — his longest of the game — for the mark.

"I didn't know at all. Coach just smiled at me and told me to go back in. I smelled something fishy was going on," Thompson said.

Something strange was in the air, too, in Durham, N.C. Duke and North Carolina State combined for 1,139 yards of offense, a year after the Wolfpack won 47-45 in a game with 1,100 yards.

This time, Montgomery completed 37 of 73 passes for 535 yards with five interceptions. He broke the mark of 71 attempts by Northwestern's Sandy Schwab in 1982.

"I'd rather throw for 100 yards and win than throw for 300, 400 and lose," Montgomery said.

Four players dropped from Oklahoma squad

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Starting tailback Ike Lewis and three other players have been dropped from the Oklahoma football team for violating team rules, apparently after being stopped earlier in the week by university police.

Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs didn't specify what rule had been broken. In a two-paragraph statement released Friday, Gibbs said that when he took the Oklahoma job, he "pledged my total commitment to maintain the integrity of the University. I expect the actions of all student-athletes to reflect favorably on the team and the university."

Dropped from the team along with Lewis, a Dallas native, were reserve defensive back Fred McClintock of Forrest City, Ark., redshirt running back Reggie Fitch of Irving, Texas, and linebacker Corey Mayfield, who has been out with an injury.

"Although the full nature of the incident is yet to be determined, I felt immediate action was necessary," Gibbs said. He said the players' future with the football program would be determined after a full review.

Oklahoma sports information

"Although the full nature of the incident is yet to be determined, I felt immediate action was necessary." — Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs.

director Mike Treps said that Gibbs and Athletic Director Donnie Duncan would have no further comment on the action.

Campus police said that, although the players had been stopped, officers did not arrest them and no charges have been filed. Police Chief Neal Stone said the athletes were stopped late Wednesday by an officer who observed their car moving with its lights off through a university apartment complex.

"We are still actively working the matter and we are not prepared to release any more information until the investigation has been completed." Neal Stone.

The car was stopped at a nearby city park by the officer, who found some beer and some auto trim parts during a search of the vehicle.

"We are still actively working the matter and we are not prepared to release any more information until the investigation has been completed," Stone said. "I expect it will be resolved Monday."

Lewis became Oklahoma's starting tailback when Mike Gaddis sustained a season-ending knee injury in the Texas game. Lewis had 558 yards on 92 carries.

Treps tabbed freshman Dewell Brewer to replace Lewis in today's game against Kansas State.

Oklahoma has been hit hard by discipline problems. Five football players were kicked off the team within a span of about five weeks in January and February.

One player pleaded guilty in the wounding of a teammate in a shooting in the athletic dormitory. Former starting quarterback Charles Thompson pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute cocaine. Three former players go on trial Monday on charges of first-degree rape in an alleged assault in the dormitory.

BSHS' Regalado finishes 30th at state AAAA meet

HERALD STAFF REPORT

GEORGETOWN — Big Spring High School junior Mimi Regalado finished 30th at the state cross-country meet held here Saturday.

Mimi, a junior, finished the race with a time of 13:12, according to her coach, Randy Britton.

"She finished 30th out of 100," Britton said. "Anytime you can finish in the top 30, you've done a good job."

Regalado's time was not a personal best, but Britton said the unfamiliar course may have had something to do with that.

"That's hard to go by unless you run the same course all the time," he said. "She ran (a faster time) at regionals, but this course is a little harder than regionals. It was a pretty respectable time."

Dallas Highland Park won the girls' 4A title. The winning individual time was a 12:10 posted by a girl from Crowley, Britton said.

This was Mimi's second time to compete in the state event.

"She finished 27th as a freshman, but her time was a lot slower," Britton said. "Every year it gets a lot harder. They've changed the course since the last time she was here."

"Overall, I'm real pleased with her. I thought she did a good job," he added. "She's happy with the time she got."

The BSHS runners will now have a week off before beginning training for the spring track season, the coach said.

A kicker's life: Waiting for the phone to ring

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. — In the National Football League, the same kickers come and go... come and go... come and go... and keep coming back.

It's just a matter of waiting for a phone call from the next team with a kicker who has suddenly lost his sense of direction.

The New England Patriots have been calling a lot.

They began the 1988 season with rookie Teddy Garcia. After eight games, they signed Jason Staurovsky. Last summer, Greg Davis beat out Staurovsky in training camp. Last Tuesday, the Patriots cut Davis and held a tryout between Staurovsky and former San Diego kicker Vince Abbott.

Guess who's back?

"The day I was released from here I cleared waivers, then I went to Phoenix for a week, kicked real good down there. Then I went to Atlanta, went 10-for-10 down there" on practice field goals but didn't get the job, Staurovsky said.

"So I'm back home waiting again. It was getting really frustrating," he added. "Then the Giants called up here asking about me because (Raul) Allegre had a sore leg. So I was staying active, just ready for an opportunity."

After completing his college career at Tulsa in 1985, Staurovsky also tried out with Buffalo before the 1986 season and kicked for the St. Louis Cardinals in the three games during the 1987 NFL players strike.

"You've got to learn the business from a kicker's standpoint," he said, sitting on the bench in front of his old locker. "You've got to bounce around. You've got to be able to prove yourself."

"The day I was released from (New England) I cleared waivers, then I went to Phoenix for a week, kicked real good down there. Then I went to Atlanta, went 10-for-10 down there" on practice field goals but didn't get the job. — Jason Staurovsky.

Rich Karlis proved himself in the eight years he kicked for Denver. But David Treadwell took his job this season. Karlis ended up in Minnesota after the Vikings tried Garcia, who had failed earlier this season in Phoenix, where Staurovsky also had tried out.

Got all that?

Now get this.

New England coach Raymond Berry, the man who fired Davis, said, "He'll be around kicking again."

Aside from keeping it, the toughest part of a kicker's job may be making long field goals. That was no problem for Davis. He was perfect on his two kicks this year from beyond 50 yards. In fact, his 51-yarder on Oct. 29 gave the Patriots a 23-20 overtime victory over Indianapolis.

In keeping with a kicker's strange existence, it was the usually automatic extra points that did him in. He missed three of them.

"Greg's got his problems with the easy part of his job," Berry said.

On Oct. 15, Davis kicked three field goals but missed an extra point against Atlanta. Paul McFadden, whose knee problems led to Staurovsky's tryout with the Falcons, kicked a 22-yard field goal with nine seconds left. Atlanta won 16-15.

And why was McFadden with the Falcons in the first place? Because Davis, who kicked for them last season, became a free agent and signed with the Patriots.

The flaw did in Davis occurred last Sunday.

He missed another extra point, and the New York Jets won 27-26 when Pat Leahy kicked a 23-yard field goal on the last play.

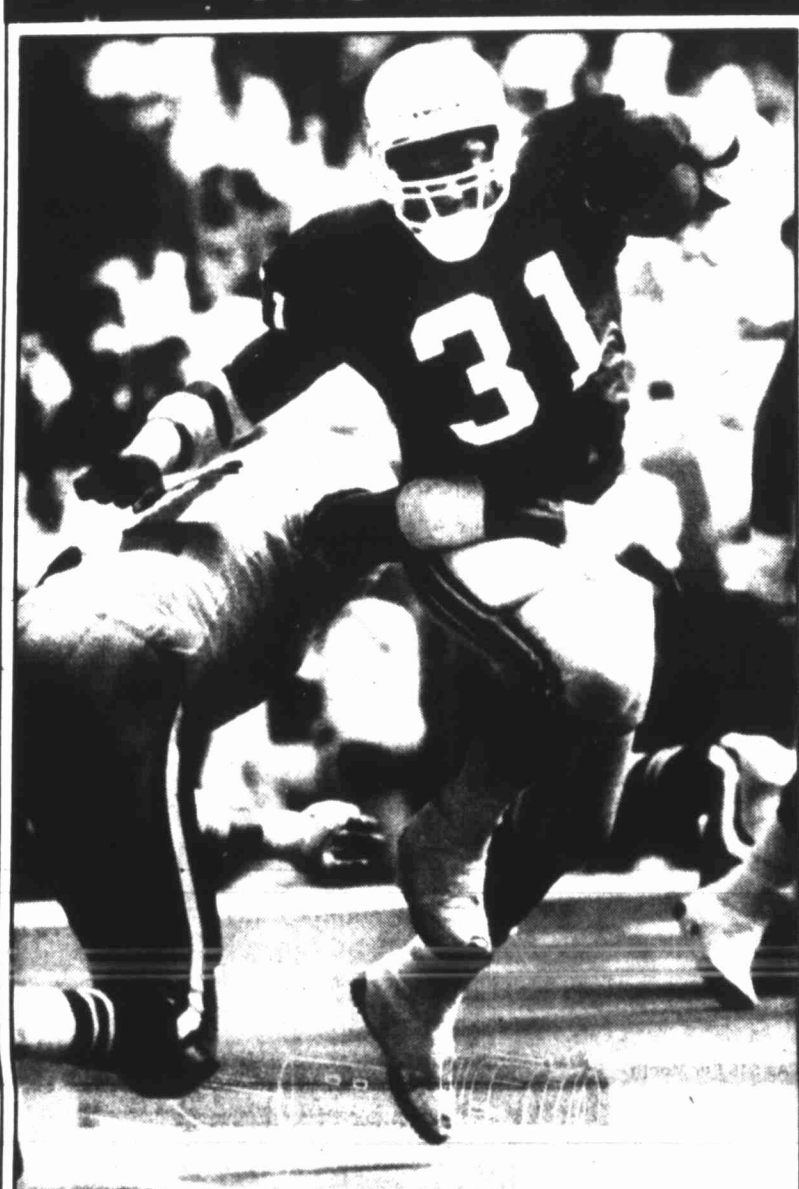

The Patriots wanted former Philadelphia kicker Luis Zendejas to make Tuesday's tryout a trio. He wasn't available. He signed the same day with Dallas, which cut Roger Ruzek.

"If you're not a Hall of Famer, this is going to happen to you sooner or later," said Davis, released despite being the AFC's fourth leading scorer and tied for the conference lead with 16 field goals. "If I were in their shoes, I would have done the same thing."

It happened to Garcia, a fourth-round draft choice who missed five extra points and his last five field goal tries with New England last season. Staurovsky stepped in and won two games with field goals. But he also missed a 27-yarder on the last play of a 24-21 loss in Indianapolis.

Isn't that the same place where Davis just won a game with a final-play field goal. And isn't Davis the kicker who lost his job nine days later to the guy who lost a game there?

The NFC

Phoenix Cardinals' running back Earl Ferrell (31) looks for yardage as Dallas defender Jim Jeffcoat moves in during the teams' first meeting in October. The Cowboys and Cardinals will meet again at 3 p.m. today at Phoenix.

Dallas at Phoenix

The Cowboys, whizzing along with a 1-game winning streak, go for two in a row against Gene Stalling's hospital ward. "It takes away a lot of negative talk," coach Jimmy Johnson says of the 13-10 win in Washington. "It takes away all that 0-for-16 stuff."

The Cards, who beat the Cowboys 19-10 in Irving two weeks ago, are less worried about their psyche than their physical health. Last week against the Giants, a Phoenix team that has had 16 starters hurt this year lost offensive tackle Luis Sharpe and J.T. Smith, the league's leading receiver, and quarterback Gary Hogeboom bruised a hand.

The Cardinals also don't know which quarterback to prepare for — Troy Aikman's injured hand has healed and Johnson may not decide if he will replace Steve Walsh until game time.

Minnesota at Tampa Bay

The Vikings are 3-1 in the Herschel Walker era but they're struggling on offense in particular and offensive coordinator Bob Schnelker is hearing it — both from the media and the fans. Walker will probably play more now that fullback Alfred Anderson is out for three weeks with a sprained arch.

A month ago, the Bucs were talking playoffs after beating the Bears. Four straight losses later, they look like the same old Bucs — Vinny Testaverde, who set an NFL record with 35 interceptions last year, threw four against Cleveland last week, two returned for touchdowns.

"There's no use crying like a baby," says cornerback Rod Jones. "This isn't a negative team. We'll be back."

Chicago at Pittsburgh

Despite what Mike Ditka says, the Bears' problem isn't replay officials — it's offense, particularly up front, where the aging offensive line seems to have lost a little.

But Ditka still hasn't lost faith, despite the fact that the Bears are off to their worst start since 1983 and are tied with the Packers, a game behind Minnesota. "It's still in our hands, not Minnesota's hands," he said. "All those people still have to dance through here."

First he has to dance through Pittsburgh, which is 4-3 since its horrendous start. The Steelers, routed 34-7 in Denver, are tougher at home.

Green Bay at Detroit

The Lions are the best 1-8 team in football, which doesn't mean much since the Cowboys are the other. The defense, which was supposed to be the strength, is suffering, the offense thriving, although three sacks, a fumble and an interception probably prevented an upset in the 35-31 loss in Houston last week.

The Packers come in flying high, having beaten the Bears for the first time in nine tries, which probably means they're ripe for an upset. They're 0-3 on the road and needed overtime to beat the Lions in Milwaukee 23-20 just two weeks ago.

Washington at Philadelphia

The Eagles literally stole the first meeting when Wes Hopkins grabbed the ball from Gerald Riggs to set up the winning touchdown. But these are different teams now.

The Redskins, 11-14 since their Super Bowl victory two years ago, may have hit a new low last week by losing 13-3 at home to Dallas, the Cowboys' first win of the Jerry Jones-Jimmy Johnson era.

Joe Gibbs blames himself although injuries have played a part — offensive linemen Mark May, Russ Grimm and Jim Lachey may all be out — leaving Doug Williams, in his second start at quarterback, vulnerable to Reggie White and friends.

Packers still waiting for Tony to contribute

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Tony Mandarich signs autographs in shopping malls, poses for pictures with infants, fields questions on call-in radio shows and consents to countless interviews.

He's made peace with Green Bay, the small city he still calls a village, a place that wasn't his first choice to live and work.

But what the 6-foot-5, 315-pound Mandarich hasn't done much this season is play football for the Green Bay Packers. Most of his Sundays have been spent on the sidelines waiting and watching.

It's a new and frustrating experience for a player who was so dominating in college, who promised to revolutionize the offensive tackle position, who says he was offered a fight with Mike Tyson.

Mandarich, with a body bulked up from hours of weightlifting and the speed of a linebacker, was considered by many pro scouts to be one of the best offensive linemen ever to come out in the college draft.

But from the outset of his professional career when the Packers made him the No. 2 pick overall in the 1989 draft, he's been behind.

Now, he's behind veteran tackle Alan Veingrad on the right side of the offensive line.

Mandarich skipped the team's minicamps then sat out training camp in a salary dispute before settling on a four-year, $4.4 million contract that included a $2 million signing bonus.

That made him the highest paid rookie in Packers history and one of the team's wealthiest players.

But instant money didn't make him an instant hit in the NFL.

"I'm used to being a starter — and not just being a starter, but one of the top two or three contributors on the offense," said Mandarich, an All-American at Michigan State.

"It's been tougher than I think I've shown it. I go home and sometimes I want to put my head through the wall because I get so angry and so mad at myself just for the fact that I haven't performed well yet.

"I don't show that, but it's definitely put a lot of stress on my life, especially since I'm supposed to be all this and all that. And I will be all this and all that. I ain't saying that, but I missed camp and this offense is not that easy to learn — but that's no excuse.

"When you get paid this much, you should perform."

Once they signed him, the Packers got a two-week roster exemption for Mandarich and hoped to ease him into their system. And that's what they did in his first game in the third week of the season at Los Angeles, where they played him on short-yardage situations.

But since then, Mandarich's

"I'm used to being a starter — and not just being a starter, but one of the top two or three contributors on the offense." — Tony Mandarich.

playing time has increased very little. Last week when the Packers beat the Chicago Bears, Mandarich played only a handful of downs.

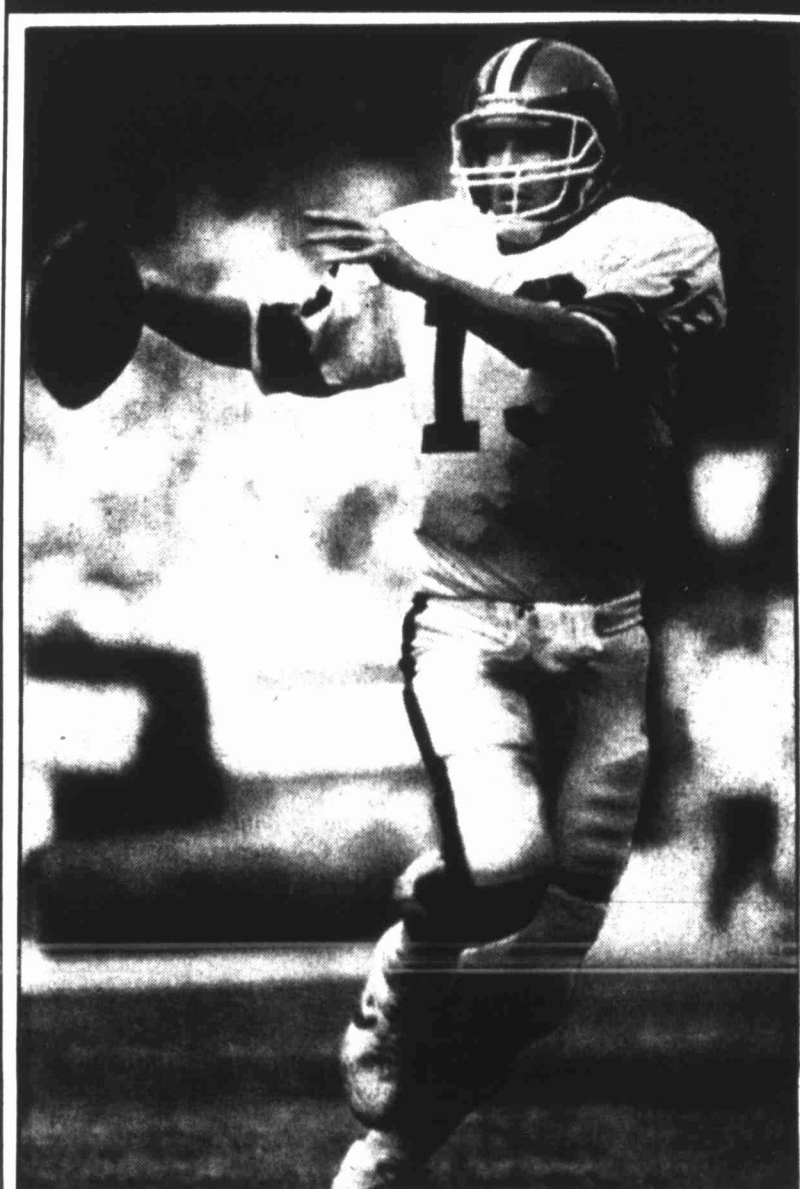

He has not been able to unseat Veingrad, who would probably have been on the Packer bench himself this season if tackles Keith Uecker and Mike Ariey had not been suspended 30 days for steroids. Veingrad spent all of last season on the injured list with a hip ailment.

Veingrad is a more consistent pass blocker than Mandarich and the Packers' multiple offense relies heavily on its line's ability to protect quarterback Don Majkowski and give him time to throw.

Coach Lindy Infante says it's too early to measure Mandarich's potential impact. Way too early, especially after seven games.

"His value to this football team is going to be the return on our investment over the long haul," Infante said.

The AFC

Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar, shown in this file photo, will lead the Browns today when they travel to Seattle to take on the AFC West's Seattle Seahawks. The Browns currently lead the AFC Central.

Cincinnati at Houston (Monday)

"Pain," is the operative word for this one, not only because of what the Oilers call the Astrodome but because of the Bengals' physical condition. The Bengals lost 28-7 to the Raiders last week without Boomer Esiason, who left in the first quarter after bruising a lung, and running backs James Brooks and Eric Ball, who also got hurt.

Esiason was still spitting blood early in the week but should be ready. If not, it's rookie Erik Wilhelm.

The Bengals and Oilers are tied for second in the AFC Central, a game behind Cleveland. Houston barely beat Detroit 35-31 last week, relying primarily on Warren Moon, who was 30 of 38 for 345 yards.

Cincinnati has already lost as many games as it did all last season, but even with the injuries, Sam Wyche isn't panicking, largely because the Bengals are 3-0 in division games.

"This is not a desperate situation," Wyche says. "We're not in as bad shape as everybody thinks right now. It's not good, but it's still in our hands."

LA Raiders at San Diego

Since Art Shell took over, the Raiders are 4-1. Bo Jackson got there about the same time and his 92-yard TD run against the Bengals last week made him the first player ever to have two 90-yarders from scrimmage in his career.

"Having Bo on the team makes things a lot easier," says Howie Long, one of the many Raiders whose recovery from injury has also helped.

Bo plays into the Chargers' weakness — stopping the run. Leslie O'Neal and Lee Williams do a good job of pass rushing, but they gave up 178 yards on the ground to the Eagles last week.

Cleveland at Seattle

The Browns are suddenly in first place in the AFC Central and playing like they want to stay there. After two losses in which they scored 17 points, they've won three straight, scoring 97 as rookie Eric Metcalf has emerged as runner, receiver, kick returner and passer and Bernie Kosar has completed 54 of his last 70 passes for 707 yards.

So coach Bud Carson, whose province is defense, is now praising the offensive staff he was criticizing three weeks ago. "They've brought this offense along to a point now where we're not limping in there, where if we let down defensively, our offense finds a way to win," he says.

Indianapolis at Buffalo

A television poll last week indicated Buffalo fans prefer Frank Reich (3-0 as a starting quarterback) to Jim Kelly (3-3), although the defense was more to blame for the 30-28 loss in Atlanta than Kelly, who was 17 of 22 for 231 yards in his return from a shoulder injury.

Injuries are also hurting the Colts, who left Eric Dickerson on the sidelines with a sore hamstring in their 19-13 loss in Miami. He may sit out again this week along with quarterback Jack Trudeau, who has a broken finger on his left hand — Don Strock or Tom Ramsey would replace him.

Denver at Kansas City

Arrowhead Stadium has never been the easiest of places for the Broncos, who beat the Chiefs 34-20 in Denver on opening day. Despite a generally better record this decade, the Broncos have lost 8 of 10 games there since 1980.

Moreover, the Chiefs are 3-1 at home this year and have a new, somewhat puzzling look. Not only is Christian Okoye leading the NFL in rushing, but they started Steve Pelluer at quarterback last week in a 20-13 win over Seattle and he ran for almost as many yards (69) as he passed for (80).

Cleveland 104 Boston 101

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Mark Price returned from a sprained foot and scored 19 points, including three 3-pointers, as the Cleveland Cavaliers won their first game of the season by beating the Boston Celtics 104-101 Saturday night.

Price was one of three starters missing from the Cavaliers' first four games, all losses, but he joined Craig Ehlo in making three 3-pointers. Ehlo also scored 19 points.

Showing few ill effects from the sprained right foot, Price scored 10 first-half points as Cleveland overcame an early 11-point deficit. He then added nine in the third quarter to help put Cleveland ahead for good.

His 22-foot shot with seven seconds left in the second quarter tied it 47-47 at halftime, and Ron Harper then scored six of his 21 points during an 8-2 flurry opening the second half, giving the Cavaliers a 55-49 lead they never lost.

Ehlo's 3-pointer expanded Cleveland's lead to 92-80 with nine minutes to play before Kevin Gamble led a Boston rally that brought the Celtics within four with 1:38 remaining.

Kevin McHale's layup made it 101-99 with 30 seconds left, but Cleveland's John Williams answered with a baseline jumper to widen it to four again. Robert Parish's jumper made it 103-101 before Harper hit one of two free throws to clinch it with one second left.

Gamble's long 3-point shot missed badly at the buzzer.

Parish led the Celtics with 31 points. Larry Bird and Gamble each scored 18.

Portland 99
Dallas 91

DALLAS (AP) — With leading scorer Clyde Drexler sent home for treatment of an elbow injury, the Portland Trail Blazers figured to struggle against the Dallas Mavericks.

But Portland got a lift from its bench and 24 points from starting center Kevin Duckworth, 12 during a 32-21 third quarter, for a 99-91 victory Friday night.

"You have to be happy to beat a team as good as this," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "That's especially true when you are up against all we were, with Clyde out and the third game in four nights." "It just shows the depth of our team," said forward Jerome Kersey, who had 18 points. "There's no telling what would have happened if Clyde had been here."

Sonics to Memphis?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Dick Hackett, who would like to lure an NBA team to Memphis, says he expects a second meeting with Seattle SuperSonics owner Barry Ackerley in the coming weeks.

Promoter Sidney Shlenker, who until recently owned the Denver Nuggets, confirmed that city and county officials met with Ackerley in Seattle on Oct. 27 and made a "strong presentation" in support of Memphis, where the second meeting would be held.

Shlenker, named to manage The Great American Pyramid sports and entertainment complex when it opens in 1991, said city officials made an undisclosed offer during the meeting, which was also attended by Sonics president Bob Whitsitt.

"Barry's a good friend of mine, and I feel certain he'll give Memphis every consideration," Shlenker said. "Everybody would have been proud of the presentation the officials made for this city."

Bird

3-point attempt with 1:49 left during a decisive 10-point run. He also made 11 of 12 free throws, grabbed 13 rebounds and passed for seven assists.

And, in just his fifth game since surgery nearly one year ago, Bird played a team-high 39 minutes, taking a rest in the second period and again briefly in the third quarter before being pressed back into action by an Atlanta comeback.

"I never get tired at home," Bird said of his playing time. "He (the coach) can rest me on the road."

As if to prove he still has his old endurance, Bird scored 17 points in the fourth period in rallying the Celtics to their third victory in five starts.

"When you're a shooter you never know when you're going to have a big night," Bird said. "I was coming off picks and getting open. I had the rhythm and I was looking for my shots."

"You dream of hitting all your shots every game, but it doesn't work that way."

"Bird had the stroke," Boston coach Jimmy Rodgers said. "He was in the groove and the game flowed to him."

Atlanta led 103-102 with just over three minutes left. Bird then triggered a 15-2 run with a jumper from the free throw line. He scored five more points in the surge, while Kevin McHale added six of his 20.

"It was important for me to play well tonight because I'm coming off a couple of bad games," Bird said. "A big thing was that we were at home. When you're in Boston Garden, it's easier to get your confidence than when you're on the road."

"Larry was phenomenal, unbelievable," McHale said.

"His shooting was the best since he's come back. He was squaring like the Larry of old and that ball was just flowing off his fingers."

"Larry was sensational," Atlanta coach Michael Fratello said. "I had a funny feeling he might have one of those nights. I've been reading the papers here and I saw how he wasn't shooting well. He's truly one of the all-time greats."

"The only thing you can do when he's hitting like that is try to keep the ball out of his hands, and that's not easy to do," Atlanta's Glenn Rivers said. "It's definitely a downer when you have a player hitting like that against you. You play great defense, run the shot clock all the way down, and then he just hits a shot out of nowhere."

Normally, Bird and Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins engage in a war when they meet. However, Wilkins scored just eight points, going 2 of 14 from the field.

"I took myself out of the game," Wilkins said. "I missed a couple of shots, then I missed a couple of free throws and that affected my whole game. When a guy's hot, he's hot and you try not to focus on it. Even though he had 50 points, we still had a chance to win."

"Dominique is one of the best forwards in the league," Bird said. "It's me and him. He just had a bad game. I'm sure some night I'll have a bad game."

It marked the fourth time Bird has scored 50 or more points since he joined the Celtics as a No. 1 draft pick from Indiana State in 1979. He hit a career high 60 against Atlanta in New Orleans on March 12, 1985. He had 53 against Indiana in 1983, and 50 against Dallas in 1986.

Steers

Steers' QB also mixed in a 13-yard scramble.

Snyder started its comeback when Damien Haywood blocked Neal Mayfield's punt out of the end zone for a safety, cutting Big Spring's lead to 14-9.

The Tigers took the lead a few minutes later when fullback DeWayne Cato bolted 38 yards off-tackle. Merritt's kick put Snyder up with 11:57 to go in the game.

Then Thompson went to work, dissecting the weary Snyder defense. Following Snyder's touchdown, he took the Steers on a 62-yard, 13-play journey. It devoured just over five minutes of the clock. It featured a 12-yard completion to Jason Davis, and Thompson runs of 11 on a scramble, and 16 yards on an option keeper.

Otis Riffey then scored from the one. Jermaine Miller blasted in for the two-point conversion, and Big Spring led 22-16.

The clincher was a four-play, 37-yard drive. Mayfield caught a 20-yard pass during the march, and scored around the left end from nine yards out.

The drive was set up when a Snyder receiver was jarred from the ball and free safety Freddie Rodriguez recovered at the Snyder 37. Rodriguez was "Johnny-on-the-spot", making a touchdown-saving tackle in the first quarter and again in the third quarter. Snyder failed to produce any points after those tackles. He also nabbed his fifth interception of the year.

Davis picked off his first pass of the season.

The Steers also had turnover problems. To go along with Thompson's two interceptions, the Steers lost three fumbles. Big Spring had great field position most of the first half, but Snyder was able to go in with a 7-7 tie.

The Steers started drives at the Snyder 43, Snyder 36, Snyder 22, Big Spring 46 and the Snyder 46 yardlines.

The Steers drove 55 yards in only four plays to score late in the second quarter, taking just over a minute. The big plays were a 20-yard slant-in pass to tight end Joe Downey and a 34-yard pass to a diving Neal Mayfield at the one. Mayfield scored a play later.

Downey, who had three catches for 55 yards, left the game and didn't return after taking a hard shot late in the third quarter. The extent of his knee injury was unknown.

Following the Steers' score, the Tigers promptly marched 70 yards in four plays, and had four seconds to spare before halftime. Rios, making his first start of the season, completed passes of 12 to Gary Morris, 18 to Carlton Sanders and 41 yards to Paul Anderson. Cato scored from the three. Merritt's kick tied it up.

While Snyder somewhat contained the elusive Mayfield, Thompson picked up the slack. Thompson completed 10 of 18 passes for 158 yards, and for the first time this season led the team in rushing, with 51 yards in six carries.

Mayfield was limited to 33 yards rushing and 69 yards receiving.

Snyder finally established a one-two rushing combo. Tailback Sidney Bufkin led all rushers with 96 yards in 12 carries and Cato added 86 yards on 10 carries.

The district-champion Steers are now 7-2 overall and 6-0 in league play. Snyder falls to 2-7 and 2-4. The Steers conclude the regular season by hosting Fort Stockton Friday at Memorial Stadium.

After they conclude the regular season, the Steers will begin Class 4-A playoff competition when they travel to Lubbock to play the Hereford Whitefaces, runners-up of District 1-4A. The game will be played at 7:30 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 25 at Lowery Field.

Thomas Edison had a bright idea. And his simple invention is so marvelous that the world has yet to come up with a better way to illuminate our lives.

Like all the great inventions, a gas furnace is simple, reliable, and has stood the test of time. It does its job so well that no one has invented a better way to keep your home snug and warm year after comfortable year.

Electricity is great for lights and other small appliances. But an electric heat pump just can't do the job your gas furnace was designed to do. Never has. Never will.

Enlightened folks know that for comfort and efficient home heating, the most effective invention ever made is a natural gas furnace. Period.

Big Spring woman wins $1,000 in McDonald's Money Mania

By JAMES FLEEHR
Staff Writer

BIG SPRING — A Big Spring woman bought a very profitable meal recently at McDonald's. Brenda McKnight, 809 Wyoming St., won $1,000 in the McDonald's Money Mania promotion.

"They called the number that I had on the card (on the television). I was happy about it," McKnight said. "Pay bills that is all I can do" is how she plans to use the money. It is the first time McKnight has ever won anything, she said.

She is an employee of the Veterans Administration Medical Center here in Big Spring.

Customers picked up "McDonald's $15,000 Money Mania" game cards at their local McDonald's. Each card, good for only that evening's drawing, had a scratch-off panel that revealed a number.

Each weeknight the winning number was announced during KMID's Big 2 News on Channel 2. The winning numbers were also posted at McDonald's restaurants the following day. The person holding the winning number won $1,000.

Besides the daily drawings and announcements, there were two other ways to win. There were instant winners of $1,000 and a Bonus Sweepstakes at the end of the contest for all unclaimed nightly amounts.

The Bonus Sweepstakes number was announced Oct. 10 during KMID's news. McDonald's guaranteed that all $15,000 would be given away.

McDonald's is the world's leading quick service restaurant organization, serving 22 million people each day in more than 10,500 restaurants in 50 countries. Seventy-five percent of McDonald's restaurants are locally operated by independent entrepreneurs.

Bingo receipts

AUSTIN — The cities of Big Spring and Colorado City reported receiving checks from the State

Comptroller's Office for returns on the gross receipts of charity bingo games in their communities for the third quarter.

Big Spring claimed a net payment of $4,257.60 this period compared to $3,481.11 in net payments for the same period last year.

For the year 1989 payments to date have increased 51.4 percent in Big Spring totaled $15,166.15 as compared to 1988 payments to date of $10,015.23.

Colorado City claimed a $412.23 check this period also amounting to total payments to date for the year there.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock sent checks totaling $2.4 million to counties and cities in Texas that levy a local tax on the gross receipts of charity bingo games.

Hise wins award

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — Ronnie G. Hise, group leader of pulping and bleaching at the former Big Spring resident was presented the award and a check for $5,000.

Hise was given this year's award "in recognition of his outstanding and timely research at Westvaco Corporation related to technology for reducing trace quantities of chlorinated dioxins and furans, which has recently been applied to a commercial bleaching operation."

The purpose of the George Olmsted Award is to encourage original and outstanding paper industry-related research by young scientists and engineers. The Award was named in honor of the late George Olmsted in recognition of his leadership in organizing the

James Fleeher's Business beat

American Paper Institute and his service as first chairman of the Institute's board of directors.

A native of Big Spring, Texas, Hise, graduated from BSHS in 1974 received a B.S. degree (1979) in forestry from Texas A&M University and both his M.S. (1981) and a Ph.D. (1984) in wood and paper science from North Carolina State University.

He joined Westvaco Corporation in 1984 as a research chemist, pulping and bleaching group, and was promoted to his present position last year. He is a member of TAPPI, active in its bleaching committee and presented two papers on dioxin-related issues to its pulping conference in Seattle and to the Ninth International Symposium of Chlorinated Dioxins and Related Compounds in Toronto recently. He is a member of the technical section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, the American Chemical Society and Sigma Xi, the professional scientists honor society.

He and his wife, Barbara, who has a Ph.D. in statistics and genetics and also works for Westvaco at its forest research facility in Summerville, S.C., are the parents of a daughter.

Ronnie is the son of Lynn and Mary Nell Hise of Big Spring.

Openings

Silk Designs by Paula Angel is holding its grand opening from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m., Nov. 18. Three arrangements will be given away and refreshments will be served.

A second local business would like to announce its opening. Avon by Sue Ward has been started in the local community. The number to call is 263-6695.

Cosmetics open house

BIG SPRING — Cosmetics under the banner of Merle Norman have been in Big Spring for quite some time, said the Highland Mall location owner.

Joyce Phillips, local Merle Norman merchant, bought the operation 10 years ago and has been in Highland Mall for three years — before that the store was in College Park.

"I have a real positive outlook about what's going on in Big Spring. I appreciate Big Spring and my customers for letting me stay 10 years," she said.

"I purchased it from someone else. I thought it would be something I enjoyed and I wanted to own my own business," Phillips said.

"I had no idea what the cosmetics business could be," she said about her success. "Business has been good. I've lived here all my life."

The store is planning an open house for Nov. 17 and 18, with a 10 percent discount on any purchase, drawing for prizes and refreshments.

There are approximately 3,000 Merle Norman stores across the country.

"It's not a chain operation in that we buy a franchise, but we sell their products. I own my own store," Phillips said. "We have to follow certain guidelines."

The national business is 58 years old and is based in Los Angeles.

Phillips was honored with the 1989 Business Woman of the Year Award by the American Business Women's Association.

She said, "The store is home-owned and self-employed."

BIG SPRING — Described as a fallen hero by his colleagues, the Scenic Mountain Medical Center staff and administration held a memorial service for the late, Roney (Woody) Wood Thursday.

Wood served 37 years as a radiology technician — originally hired at Malone-Hogan Hospital in Oct. 1952 and moved to the clinic when it was established in what is now the State National Bank.

The memorial was also a dedication for Room 3 of the radiology department at Scenic Mountain.

Director of the hospital David Wiley as he performed the honors said, "Woody was a friendly, outgoing individual. He was an example to us all. He was an example to all hospital workers everywhere."

"Woody, long before I was born was making a positive difference in peoples lives. He was an excellent teacher," added Wiley.

Wood died Oct. 27 in the hospital. Wiley remained at Wood's side before Wood expired.

Co-workers' comments were read by Wiley at the service. Some of the excerpts follow:

• "Woody was always around to help with the patients and their families. There were a number of times when he would come to the hospital and sit with the patients to relieve the family. His loyalty to this institution should be an example to us all."

• "Woody always cared about the job he did. If he was unable to get perfect pictures (no matter what the circumstances), it worried him all day. He always did his best for the patient."

"I have never seen anyone that was kinder to the patients than Woody. Patients asked for him by name on numerous occasions."

"No matter how many technologists are hired, there will always be a void in our department. Woody will never be replaced in our hearts."

Wood was nominated in 1980 for his first Humanitarian Award by Norman Knox, hospital administrator at the time.

"I wish you could have been a little mouse in the corner when the selection committee met so you could have heard all the nice things said about you. It certainly makes me proud to have such outstanding, warm, friendly, compassionate and caring people such as you on our staff taking care of our patients and representing our hospital," wrote Knox in 1980 about Wood.

A tree fund has been established for the purchase of red oaks for the island by the Emergency Room in Wood's memory.

A Roney Wood Memorial Scholarship Fund has been established through the Malone-Hogan Foundation.

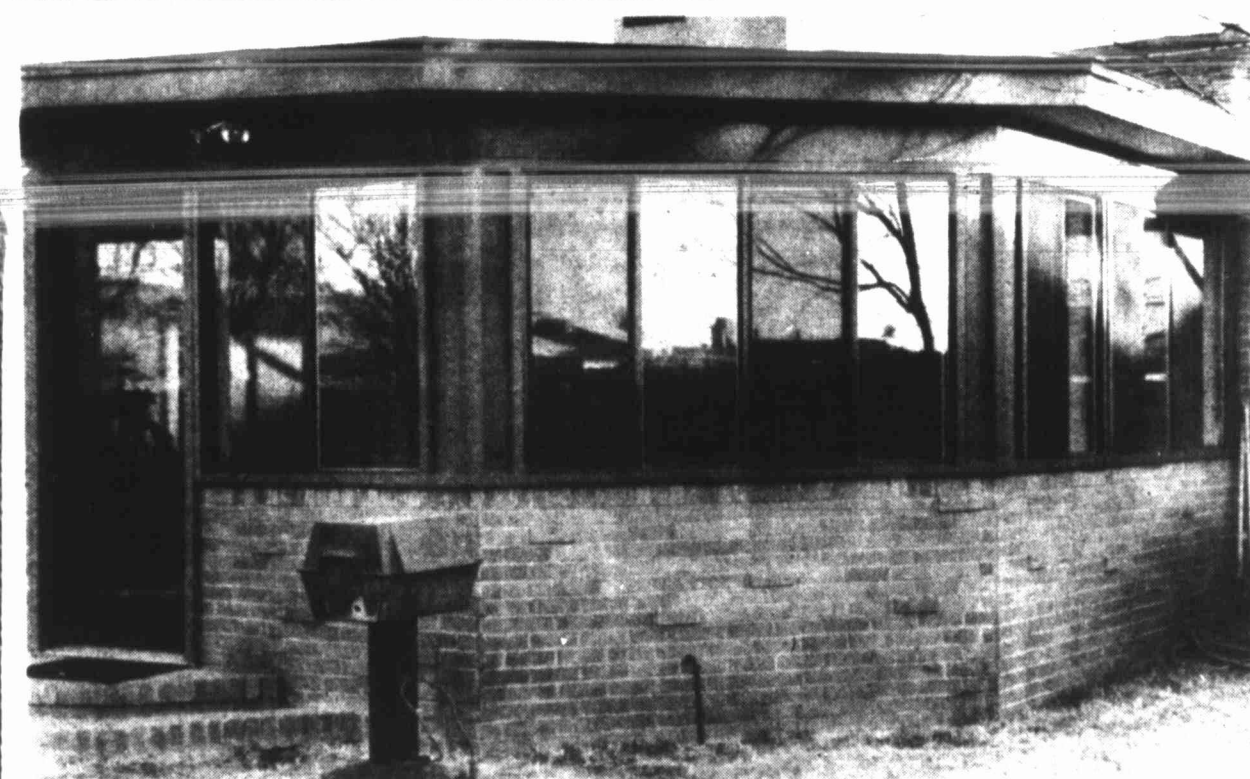

"The scholarship will be awarded yearly to a student that has exhibited Wood's brand of patient care. The fund was established because Woody was such an excellent teacher for the younger employees," said Radiology spokesperson Vivian Gordon.

A plaque with a picture of Wood will be placed in dedication to Room 3. The plaque reads: "In honor of 37 years of dedication to the profession of x-ray technology, his patients and his co-workers" followed by Wood's favorite expression "Don't you know."

AUSTIN — A total of 1,275 drilling permits were issued by the Railroad Commission in October, according to RRC Chairman Kent Hance. In September, the total was 1,236. October 1988's total was 839.

The October total included 839 permits to drill new oil and gas tests, 43 permits to re-enter existing well bores, 68 to deepen existing holes, and 175 to plugback existing holes, and 15 for other wells. Operators were also issued 135 amended drilling permits.

In the first ten months of 1989, the Commission has issued 11,792 drilling permits, a nine percent decrease from the 12,954 issued during the same period of 1988.

The 1,275 permits issued in October included 586 oil permits, 236 gas permits, 394 oil and gas permits, 32 injection permits, seven disposal permits, and 20 other permits.

Completions

AUSTIN — Texas oil and gas operators reported 247 gas and 433 oil completions in October, according to Railroad Commission Chairman Kent Hance. September's total was 177 gas and 387 oil completions. October 1988's total was 241 gas and 454 oil completions.

Total completions reported in October included 433 oil, 247 gas, and 39 service completions. In September, operators filed 387 oil, 177 gas, and 41 service completion reports.

In the first ten months of 1989 the Commission has recorded a total of 6,925 well completions, a 19 percent decrease from the 8,584 well completions recorded during the same period of 1988.

Hance said operators reported 714 holes plugged in October, compared to 849 in September. A total of 35 dry holes were reported in October, compared to 178 in September.

Oil-gas fines

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission assessed a total of $33,500 in administrative penalties Monday to six oil and gas operators for problems under Commission rules.

Four operators were ordered to pay $3,000 each for an inactive and unplugged well on the Spacek Unit in Lee County. Those assessed fines were: Dodd Disposal Service, Inc. of Dime Box; Johnny R. Jones of Lexington; Don K. Milner, Charles L. Henke, W. Barry Milner and Tom Huitt DBA Texho Energy Co. of Houston; and SBS Petroleum Service, Inc. of Houston.

To date in 1989, the Commission has levied more than $998,000 in pollution and well plugging penalties.

Borden County

Two new producers with combined ability to make 178 barrels of oil per day have been brought on line in the Jo-Mill Field, Borden County, about 15 miles southwest of Gail.

Texaco is the operator.

The wells include the No. 5523 Jo-Mill Unit, pumping 162 barrels of oil daily plus 157,000 CF gas, and the No. 1430 Jo-Mill Unit, making 14 BOPD plus a minor volume of gas and 102 barrels of salt water.

Production is from Spraberry Formation perforations ranging from 7,148 to 7,532 feet into the wellbore.

Glasscock County

Pumping 97 barrels of oil and 60,000 CF casinghead gas per day, the No. 1 Perry-Brooks has been brought on line in the Blalock Lake Field, Glasscock County, by Can-Tex Energy Inc. of Dallas.

Location is about nine miles west-northwest of Lees. The well will produce from two sets of Wolfcamp Formation perforations, 7,925 to 8,960 feet into the wellbore. In addition to oil and gas, the well made 33 barrels of water daily, pumping on an open choke.

First production data have been posted for the No. 2 Wraga, a successful developmental well in Glasscock County's portion of the Spraberry Trend. Location is about 16 miles west of Garden City, with Autry C. Stephens of Midland as the operator.

The well pumped 34 barrels of oil with 65,000 CF casinghead gas and 65 barrels of waste water per day.

It will produce from Spraberry Formation perforations, 6,893 to 8,510 feet into the wellbore.

Stanton boot maker Mitch Holt cuts out leather for the custom-made boots that he makes.

THESE BOOTS are made for walking...

BY STACY PAYNE

STANTON — A few years back, Mitch Holt took a pair of store bought boots apart. Then he tore away at a handmade pair. The differences impressed him and he's been custom-making boots ever since.

"I liked repairing saddles and boots, and I liked wearing good hand made boots, so I thought if I wanted to wear a lot of them then I ought to learn how to make them," he said.

Folks come in to Mitch's store in Stanton and tell him exactly what they want.

"And that's exactly what they get," he said. "That's why they're called custom made boots. Made just for the person who orders them."

Holt explained that the first step is having the customer take off their own boot and put their bare foot on a piece of paper. He then carefully traces around the foot in order to catch all its particulars.

"I have the customer flex their foot back," he said. "When that happens, the measurements around the heel changes, and I write that down — when the foot is relaxed, it is one size, and when it is pulled back it is another size, and I split it down the middle."

"So when the foot is relaxed you will have a little bit of room around the foot, and then it is tight enough to keep the heel from slipping up and down when you are walking. I lay a piece of tape down the instep of your foot, and mark around the bone right on the outside of the foot...."

The explanation goes on and on. Holt doesn't miss a step and he seems caught up in the process even as he talks about it. To the listener, it seems that he conceptualizes each step in his head as he tells about them.

"I consider bootmaking an art form," he said. "It takes a lot of patience and practice. It takes a certain kind of artistic ability to make boots."

Holt restores saddles, and has created one.

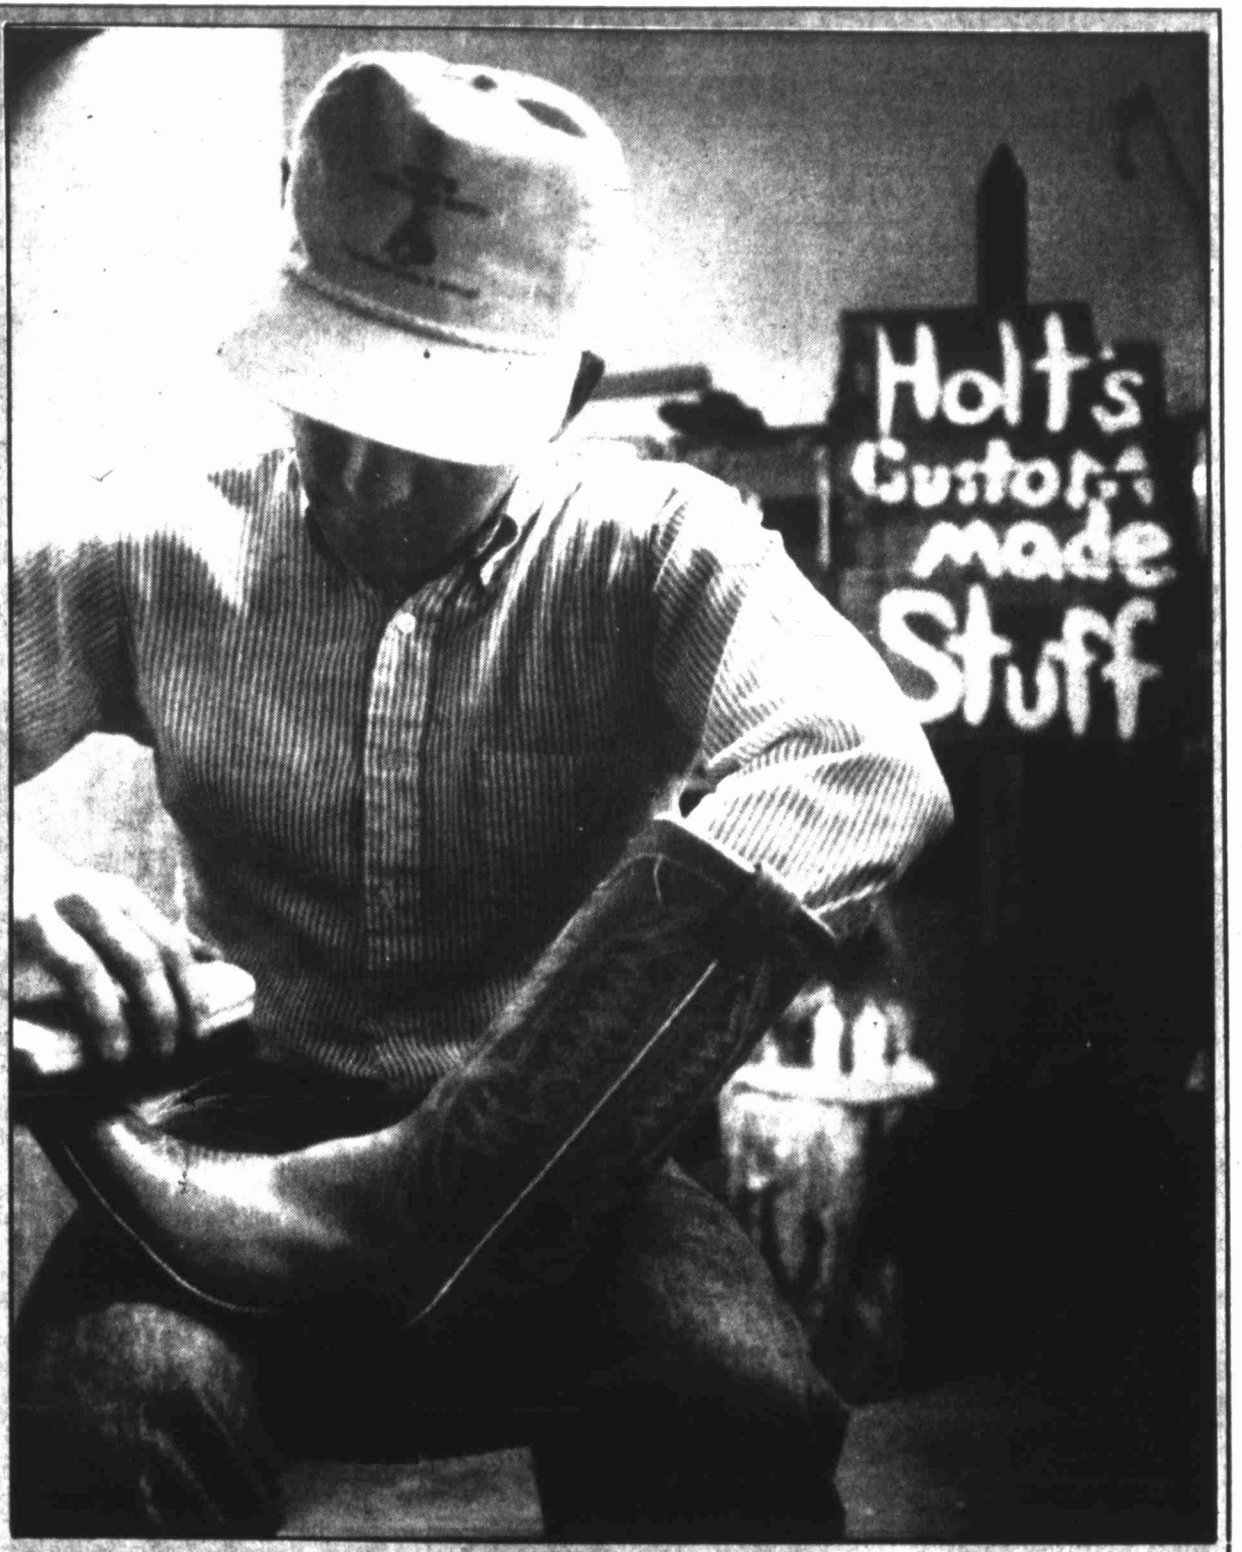

"Saddles are as important to a cowboy as anything," he said. "We got saddles from the Spanish, though they have changed in style some according to cowboy needs. But not boots. Boots belong to us here in the U.S. They are unique to America."

"Nothing is written down anywhere on bootmaking, so you just have to learn it on your own, or get it from an old bootmaker."

"The art of bootmaking has passed down since the Great Leather Act of 1770 (or around then). People who make custom boots make them the same way they were made before the factories got to making them."

Holt admits that his customers are satisfied. "They keep buying them, paying for them," he said.

"Some folks really appreciate a good pair of boots, and other folks like things just because they are exotic or high dollar. A man came in and paid me money to call a cor-tain friend of his, measure him and make him some boots. Then he had a pair of boots made for a daughter who went to a certain university.

"I make boots out of just about anything people want if I can get it. I've used ostrich, lizard, sharkskin and alligator. The most exotic I guess was the ostrich. Some skins are harder to get than others. It's getting pretty hard to obtain elephant skin."

While Holt talks of boots, it is hard for an observer to miss a bronze of a Texas Ranger over his shoulder. It is intricate in detail, the artist having captured the weary hardness of a lawman on the Texas border years back.

"I started working on this after I'd read a book on Frank Hamer," Holt said. "He was an older Texas Ranger, one of those in charge of catching Bonnie and Clyde. At one time he was in charge of 90 miles of border all by himself, kind of like his own border patrol. He was pretty rough, had cold blue eyes that look through you."

"I guess he is who I had in mind while making the bronze. I think it would take a pretty good hombre to take care of that. He was told that if he caught anybody, to bring them back to the courthouse, but it was such a long ride that he only did that a few times. After awhile he would just hang one man and the next man he'd stake out over an ant bed — he came up with different punishments. He was the judge, jury and executioner."

As Holt talks, the observer looks again at the artwork and sees what he is describing in the face of the bronze. (In this writer's opinion, the bronze is incredible, if not unsettling. It is worth entering Mitch's boot shop just to view it). There's more. At present he is hard at work on a bronze of a grizzly bear, a cowboy jumping through his own lasso and others pieces of art.

"When I first started doing bronze, I tried to do every last detail of the object I was creating," he said. "But the more I went the more I kind of liked just being loose with it. When you are loose, it looks more natural."

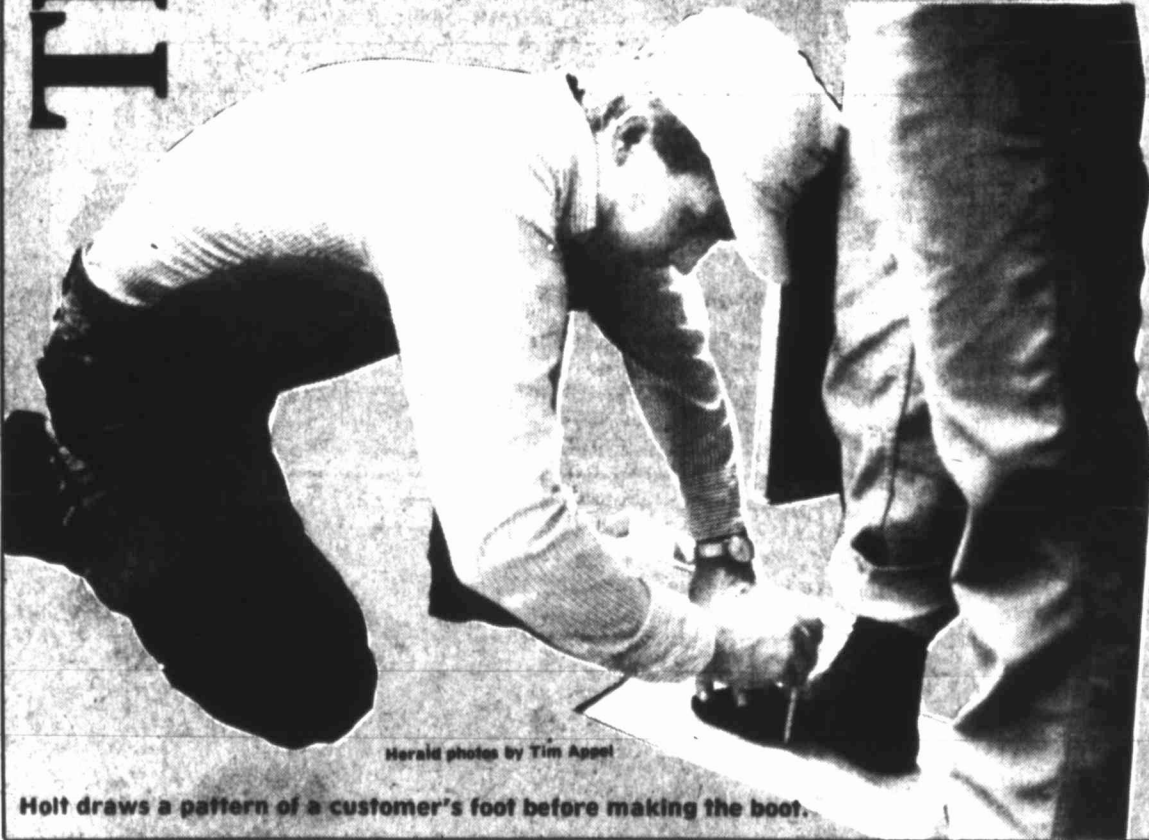

"I just get out of the way and let creativity have its own way."

"I consider bootmaking an art form. It takes a lot of patience and practice. It takes a certain kind of artistic ability to make boots." — Mitch Holt, Stanton bootmaker.

He has sold his work in art shows and in galleries, yet what seems to please Holt most is the subject of bootmaking.

"Bootmaking is a lost art," he said. "I love making boots. I make belts and saddles and bronzes, too. But I love making boots."

Holt's Boot & Saddle Shop is located at 106 E. Santa Anna in Stanton. Even if you don't need boot repair or a new pair of custom made boots, stop by to see Mitch, and ask if you can observe while he practices his crafts. It will be a treat.

Ann Richards is a tough, funny woman ready to take on Texas

By STEVE RAY
Herald Editor

Ann Richards is tough. She's also funny.

In fact, it's almost impossible to not like Ann Richards unless you're facing her in a campaign for governor.

If you believe a lot of the political pundits — Ann Richards doesn't have a chance to be elected governor of Texas.

There aren't any historical precedents — only one woman governor and even fewer state treasurers who got to the state's top office.

But political pundits aside, the polls are showing a different story. In fact, they're showing Richards with a pretty comfortable lead over her male opponents.

It was the anniversary of Ma Ferguson's election to Texas' top job in 1923 a couple of months back and I took that opportunity to talk to Richards about 'Ma' and how Richards viewed women and their political opportunities.

"I think that women in politics is not a new thing," Richards said. "What is new is that women are achieving a level in politics greater than ever before."

"Women have been filling positions on the school board level in a large number since WWII when men went off to war," Richards said. "It was necessary to find people to take their place. Women began to serve on the school board level and as they gained expertise people would look and say 'well, they did a good job there'... and then came city councils and county commissioners courts."

"As more and more women came into politics that began making progress in the state legislatures. But there have been few women in Congress and few women succeed at the statewide level."

Richards concedes that women have failed to succeed in many instances because they don't have the access to money to make the expensive races.

When Ma Ferguson was elected governor in Texas she ran against an opponent with ties to the Ku Klux Klan.

She promised to "put the pillow cases back on the pillows" in response to KKK endorsement of her opponent. She also won in hard economic times and instituted state Bread Bonds sales to feed the destitute.

It is that attitude of caring for people that she shares with Ann Richards.

"I think there is a difference between men and women," Richards said. "It is not that we are better, but women grow up with different sociological experiences. We have always been the caretakers, the nurturers, the support, the civilizers of Texas."

"In the early days it was the women of the state that founded most of the libraries, the hospitals, the schools... and so I think we come from a very caring point of view. We don't lose sight of the people that are affected by public policy... and Ma Ferguson bears that out."

And so do Ann Richards' heroes.

"I think (former Texas Congresswoman) Barbara Jordan would certainly have to be one of those," Richards said. "There was a woman who runs Girls State, where I went as a high school student, named Frances Goff — she would be one of my heroes — that's where I first really learned to love government and politics, and Francis is certainly one of my heroines."

But if those two women are her heroines — a man also fits into that category — a man from whom Richards says she inherited her famous sense of humor.

"I think I got my sense of humor from my daddy," Richards says. "My daddy is a very funny man and he's a great storyteller."

If there is one thing that Richards likes to talk about it is education. To her a good education would solve many of the problems that face the state.

"Unless we prepare our young people all of our efforts at economic development and attracting industry will be for naught. Unless we get a handle on education we can't solve the problems in our criminal justice system."

"We have to begin when children are young. It is difficult to change the pattern for lives after reached junior and high school. Our dropout rate is horrendous and 80 percent of inmates at TDC are school dropouts."

Richards doesn't expect an easy race because she is a woman. Her Democratic opponent Jim Mattox is well known for mud slinging that some Democrats claim makes him look more Republican than Democrat.

Mattox already has mentioned Richards bout with alcoholism — a fight Richards has fought and won. "It's going to get worse," she said. "I went into this campaign knowing full well it would be extremely difficult and extremely personal."

"I simply do not think that is the way politics should be run. We should be talking about where the state's supposed to go... but name calling and fights — I think that's very sad."

If Richards faces problems from any one group — it could be from those who don't believe in abortion.

"I believe that the decision on abortion is very personal and one made by an individual after consulting with her family, doctor, clergy or whoever that person determines is necessary."

"I don't think the American public wants the U.S. Congress or a state legislature making those decisions in their personal lives."

Richards says abortion is not as big an issue with her as is the way we care for our children.

"I think one of the biggest problems faced in this state is how well we care for our children — whether it is child abuse, education care for children with working parents — and the state does a very poor job in this endeavor."

Can a woman give us the leadership that could help shape solutions for those problems?

"Oh absolutely," Richards said. "I think it is really time for leadership in Texas. I intend to provide it."

Anniversary

The Luis Rios

Luis A. and Erlinda Rios Sr., 3206 W. Eighth St., celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Saturday at a reception at their home.

The event was hosted by their family.

Rios was born in Brady.

Mrs. Rios, the former Erlinda Escovedo, was born in Fort Davis.

The couple met while they both worked in the cotton fields. According to a family member, for Rios it was love at first sight until Mrs. Rios finally noticed him.

They married Nov. 14, 1964 at St. Thomas Catholic Church, with Father McDermott officiating.

The Rios have six children, they are: Luis, Jacob, Nancy, Teddy, Patrick, and Timothy John Rios, all of Big Spring. They have 11 grandchildren.

During their marriage, the Rios lived in Little Rock, Ark., and Big Spring.

Mrs. Rios is employed by the Veterans Administration Medical Center. She was a teacher's aide for 10 years.

Rios was a masonry contractor. They are members of St. Thomas Catholic Church.

When asked to comment about their marriage, they said "We are hoping for another 25 years of marriage filled with love."

Hobbies and interests include spending time with their grandchildren and vacationing when possible.

Lead in drinking water

By NAOMI HUNT
County Extension Agent

High contaminations of lead in water can be serious.

Most lead in household water comes from plumbing, not the local water supply. Lead levels in drinking water are likely to be highest if your home has lead pipes or copper pipes with lead solder, if you have a water softener, if water sits in pipes for several hours, or if your home is less than five years old (mineral deposits in water form a protective coating in the pipe after that time).

You do have some direct control over lead in your water, even though you can't see, taste or smell it when dissolved. One simple precaution, with any faucet that has not been used in six hours or more, is to "flush" the pipe by running cold water for about five seconds.

Use only water from the cold tap for drinking, cooling and especially making baby formula (hot water is likely to contain higher lead levels).

Sizing a water heater: Water heater size or capacity should be based on the maximum amount of hot water you consume during any one-hour period. This is called the peak hour demand. To determine the peak usage hour for your family, list all water consuming activities during that period.

Typical hot water consumption

Focus on family

in gallons per usage for various activities is as follows: Shower, 20; bath, 20; shaving, 2; hands and face washing, 4; hair shampooing, 4; hand dishwashing, 4; automatic dishwasher, 14; food preparation, 5; and automatic clothes washing, 32. The peak for one family might occur in the morning and consist of three showers (20 gallons each, 60 gallons total), hands and face washing, 5 gallons, shaving (2 gallons) and food preparation (5 gallons) — a total of 72 gallons.

A water heater can provide more than its storage capacity during the first hour, is referred to as the first-hour rating. In the sample above, a water heater with a first-hour rating of at least 72 gallons would be required. Residential water heaters are most commonly available in 20-30-40- and 50-gallon capacities, with first-hour ratings ranging from 22 to 100 gallons.

Gas and propane water heaters typically have higher first-hour ratings than electric heaters of the same storage capacity.

Cotton prices not up to times

By DON RICHARDSON
County Extension Agent

One of my favorite columnists is Baxter Black, DVM, who writes for a number of livestock publications.

In one of those rare moments when I caught a few minutes to read his column, he was telling, in his most common sensical, humorist way, about changes in time and the image of ranchers.

In an age, according to Black, where a ranch is now an 18-acre spread, a Quarter Pounder is a meal and George Strait is a tall cowboy, he explained how a friend of his justified trading for a new pickup.

Twenty years ago, he explained, it took 35 cows at $250 each to buy an $8000 pickup. This year it takes only 20 cows at $800 to buy a $16,000 rig. According to his calculations, the way pickups are going down in price, how could he afford not to trade! If you are a cotton farmer you can sure figure that somewhere along the line that something is a little out of whack and you are getting a little behind!

Twenty years ago it took about 35 bales of cotton to get that same pickup that cowboy bought and today that $16,000 pickup is going to cost that cotton farmer about 64 bales of cotton to drive it off the lot. Talk about behind times! With a year like this one has been a lot more folks than the cotton farmers are going to be affected by our county crop.

Our economists have estimated, through their computerized world, that for every dollar a cotton farmer receives it is multiplied three times in the local economy. And new car (pickup) dealers aren't the only ones that will feel the effects of a crop, failure in the county. That farmer's wife might decide that she really doesn't need that extra new dress this year or that new watch she's been eyeing and maybe, just maybe, she can get by one more year with her present car and that trip to the coast can wait another year. That college-age son or daughter might have to take on a part-time job (if they can find one) and that son can forget about that new car (or even up-graded used one!).

That new designer dress for the daughter might have to wait until the next season's fashion show and that farmer has to wrestle with the problem of can he afford to spend less money for fertilizer and quality cotton seed for next year's crop. Will the bank take a little interest payment and renew his operating note?

Forget about that diversification idea with livestock! It's so dry that it looks like all he could do would be to borrow more money to feed the darn things! How much insurance can he afford (or not afford!) and how much fuel does he think he has to have for next year? With questions like this facing our cotton farmers can there be any doubt as to how important they are to our own local economy?

Let's all hope for a great crops year in 1990 for our farmers. We all benefit!

Ricky and Pam Mitchell hosted a Symphony Warm-Up Party last weekend for members of the Big Spring High School Band who were attending the opening performance of the Big Spring Symphony Association's concert season.

Attending were Tim Osmulski, Sidney Dixon, Melissa Shelton, Heather Hendrickson, Tim Gibson, Melanie Gilckman, Collin Woodall, Marilyn Corwin, and Marilyn's guest, Chris Carter, drum major of the San Angelo Central High School Bobcat Band.

Cleo Reid got together with all of her brothers and sisters recently for the first time in about four years. And what was supposed to be a quiet birthday party, turned out to be a big surprise.

Cleo knew three of her brothers and their wives were coming — Bailey and Rosemary Choate, Abilene; Jack and Florence Choate, Sweetwater, and Cecil and Reta Choate, Roscoe — to help celebrate her Nov. 3 birthday. But she was surprised at who else came: her two sisters, Irene Ballard, Oklahoma City, and Vergie Shankles, San Diego; and her other brother, Hollis Choate, Altus, Okla. Plus four nieces from Oklahoma City — Coella Mann and husband Jim; Shirley Gray and husband, Ron; Pat Bradshaw and Judy Pawley. Pat was surprised, too; she didn't know her mother, Vergie, was coming in from San Diego!

"We just had birthday party, Thanksgiving and Christmas all rolled into one," says Cleo, who prepared a traditional turkey dinner with all the trimmings.

The next day, Cleo and DeWitt and all the family drove to Sweetwater for a barbecue cookout at the Jack Choate home. The festivities actually marked three birthdays — not only Cleo's but sister Irene's on Nov. 7 and sister Vergie's on Nov. 11.

"We just had a wonderful time," Cleo says.

Several Big Spring residents have just returned from a hunting trip at Circle K Ranch, Delores, Col. which turned out to be a reunion of old friends and family.

The hunt plans began last winter, when Boyce Hale met some new friends, Homer and Joyce Conner, who had just moved here from California.

"Homer and I got to talking about hunting," says Boyce. "Both of us are avid hunters of elk and deer and, if we can afford it, other big game." Boyce mentioned to Homer that he represented the Circle K Ranch and escorted hunters and family groups there during hunting season.

Homer promptly contacted his sons — Robert Conner, Portland, Ore., Leslie Conner, San Diego, Calif., as well as Mike Conner, Big Spring — and they all agreed to a hunting reunion of the the men folk.

Leslie and Robert added a few friends; then son-in-law Pete Pegan, Big Spring, joined the group — until finally the count was 16.

Mike Conner bagged the largest mule deer — 13 points Texas count or 6x7 western count.

Bobby and Margie Hill picked up their son, Alan, and granddaughter, Kaitlin, 15 months, at the airport Friday for a weekend visit. The Alan Hill family lives in St. Louis, Mo. "This is the first time Kaitlin has been here since she started walking, so she's going to be full of business now," Margie says.

By the way, Margie retired Nov. 1 after 21 years with First Federal Savings & Loan (now Bluebonnet Savings). She went to work there in June of 1968.

"I'll always remember the fun (and sad times), the people I've worked with these 21 years, and the customers I've served," Margie reminisces. "I have loved my job and am very thankful for the many customers I had the privilege of serving."

Margie admits she's having a "hard time" slowing down. But she's determined to be a lady of leisure now.

Wife feels bound after tying the knot

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago when I was 24, I married a wealthy, 48-year-old divorced father of three grown children. In addition to signing a prenuptial agreement, I agreed to three stipulations: I honor his privacy, love his family, and agree to a childless marriage since he had no desire to start a second family.

At the time, I was willing to accept any terms in order to marry him, but now I have some regrets about these stipulations.

His demands for "privacy" make me uneasy, since I remember only too well the way he deceived his wife so we could be together. Second, I have tried to love his family, but his mother blames me for breaking up his marriage and never passes up a chance to let me know how she feels about me.

The third stipulation has been the hardest to accept because now I realize that I would like to have a child.

What do you advise? — SECOND THOUGHTS

Dear Abby

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: If "honoring" your husband's privacy means closing your eyes to his philandering, since there is no cure for AIDS, you could be foolishly risking your life.

No one should agree to "love" anybody's family. You can agree to treat them with respect and even to be cordial, but it's impossible to "love" on command.

And if you want to have a child, keep in mind that a man who doesn't want a child usually makes a poor father.

I advise you to seek counseling, and ask your husband to join you. You don't have a marriage — it's a business deal you may both want to end.

DEAR ABBY: This is a weird problem, but I am stumped. My husband and I returned from our vacation to find that our across-the-street neighbor had mounted a cannon in his front yard!

This monstrous metal relic, set in concrete, is aimed directly at our house. When we sit on our front porch, all I can see is that ugly weapon trained on our front door, and it makes me nervous.

I went over there and told that neighbor that his cannon was making me very uncomfortable, but he just laughed and said he thought it was an interesting piece of art and I had nothing to worry about because the cannon wasn't loaded.

My husband keeps telling me to relax — the cannon is harmless and hasn't been fired since the Civil War, but I'm not convinced. What do you suggest? — "IN THE SIGHTS" IN SYRACUSE

DEAR IN: To put your mind at ease and your fears to rest, call your local police department and ask to have an arms expert sent to examine your neighbor's cannon. The expert will examine the cannon to make sure that the firing mechanism is inoperative. And since your neighbor assured you that the cannon was harmless, he should have no objections to an expert's examining it to confirm the fact.

DEAR ABBY: I took off a lot of weight recently. It wasn't easy and I am very proud of myself, but what do you say to someone who says, "I liked you better fat"?

CATHY

DEAR CATHY: Say, "I liked you better before you said that!"

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter! This rich man doesn't make speeches

By TUMBLEWEED SMITH

Sam Walton made a speech the other day and I was in the audience. He doesn't make speeches very often and it showed. He was constantly tapping the microphone and yelling, "Is this thing on?" He didn't really need a microphone anyway. "I developed a good set of lungs out in the woods with my bird dogs," he said.

When he got behind the podium, the first thing he told the audience was that he didn't have any idea what he was going to say. He was there as a favor to a longtime employee.

Sam looked mighty uncomfortable. He showed the audience his notes — a few words scribbled on a napkin from a Kettle restaurant. "You ate better than I did this morning," he told the 400 people at the luncheon.

As a whole, the audience was forgiving. Sam Walton is the richest man in America and to see him up there struggling to make a speech was fascinating. Everybody thought that since he had been interviewed so many times by financial publications and programs that he would be at ease behind a podium. Far from it. He is living proof that fear of speaking before an audience is the biggest fear in the world.

The man doing the introduction said that in 1945 Sam Walton got out of the Army and went to Newport, Ark. He and his wife had managed to save $5,000 while in the military and they opened a store. The first Wal-Mart store opened in 1952 in Rogers, Ark. Sam believes in hard work, dedication and surrounding yourself with people who share your ideals. He now has 1,351 stores plus 120 Sam's wholesale stores.

Sam was born in Kingfisher,

Okla., and graduated from the University of Missouri. He was an athlete and president of his senior class.

There's no doubt about Sam being a retailing legend. He has been named the "Outstanding Chief Executive Officer" in America.

"I wish I wasn't up here speaking to you," he said. "Anybody in the audience could do a better job than I'm doing."

Sam believes that getting out with his customers and store employees is the most important thing he does. He likes to see how many stores he can get into and how many hands he can shake and how many people he can thank for helping him.

He says his organization develops people. Their attitudes. Their morale. Their integrity. Their capacity. "That's the story of Wal-Mart," he said he was most grateful for the opportunity that exists in the U.S.A., the greatest country in the world.

Sam fished around for something to say and in frustration asked the audience, "Can I turn this into a vocational speech? It's the only thing I know to talk about. I just don't make speeches." The audience applauded.

"I have two rules," he said. "Number one: The customer is always right. Rule two: If the customer happens to be wrong, we refer to rule one."

"With our company it has been a matter of teamwork, of developing the best kind of rapport with each other and having our antennae up and listening to what our folks are telling us. We share our profits with our employees."

He kept looking at his watch and asking the head table "What time did I start?"

His bird dogs ride around in his airplane with him. "Sometimes we drop in on stores with a whole pack of bird dogs. That shocks some people."

Sam was relieved when his speech finally came to an end. He left the impression that he was just a good ol' country boy who was getting by the best he could. The audience gave him credit for trying.

Achievement day

Extension Homemakers Achievement Day was celebrated Thursday at the Community Center with a luncheon, fashion show, bazaar and demonstrations on Leisure Arts. Lakeview Club demonstrated how to make use of scraps of fabric. They can become beautiful colorful quilts or winter throws. Bow making for little girls hair ribbons and stenciling also was demonstrated. Turn scraps into rug purses with a wrap, wrap and a poke.

4-H banquet

STANTON — 4-H family members and leaders gathered for the annual Achievement Banquet Oct. 28 at the Community Center in Stanton.

Approximately 85 4-H'ers, parents and leaders attended the event where they were recognized for their accomplishments and shared a covered dish supper.

Call: 756-2281

A Parade of Champions kicked off the awards portion of the evening. 4-H'ers were recognized for the participation and achievements in rifle, trap and skeet, district food show, district fashion show, district roundup and area fair competition. 4-H'ers were also awarded county medals for completing a project which involved turning in a project record form.

Reports were given on various other 4-H activities by Kathryn Burch such as County Camp, County Fair and Old Settlers' Reunion. Greg Jones gave an overview report on the major livestock shows that were attended, i.e., Dallas, Odessa, Martin County, Ft.

Worth, El Paso, San Antonio, Houston and San Angelo. He also discussed the trainings held on swine, beef cattle and sheep for the 4-H families.

Gary Reid, club manager for the new rifle club gave a report on their club's activities for the year followed by Bob Wilson, 4-H leader, who reported on the Trap and Skeet Shooting Sports Club activities. At the end of Bob's report, with assistance from David White, 4-H Shooting Sports member, they presented Charlie and Lou Smith, 4-H Shooting Sports coaches, with a painting from the club members.

4-H members that help keep our highways clean and join in during the National "Trash Off" received an iron-on community service patch.

4-H Shooting Sports members that competed in the State Postal League Trap and Skeet Shoot receive plaques for their placings.

Robby Wilson was recognized for his second place State record book in Shooting Sports. Robby received a check for $125, a certificate and a Regional winners' watch for his efforts.

One of the highlights of the evening was the presentation of the Silver Spur Awards. The Silver Spur Award is given to two outstanding 4-H leaders annually. For their dedicated work and service to the 4-H program, the 1989 recipients were Rebecca Riley and Gary Reid.

Riley has been a 4-H leader for the past five years. She has worked predominately with the 4-H clothing project. She is a strong supporter of county-wide events giving leadership and manual labor to the highway clean up, ice cream freeze-off, Old Settlers 4-H float and ice cream parlor.

Reid has been instrumental in organizing the 4-H Rifle Club. They have set up two rifle ranges, participated in two postal leagues, and attended District and State rifle competition. This is Gary's first year as a 4-H leader and it has been a very outstanding year.

Throughout the evening, everyone enjoyed looking at the Project Show displays. Fourteen 4-H'ers were in charge of getting others to bring items for the tables of various 4-H projects and activities. The projects and activities represented were: Beef, sheep, capon, horse, food and nutrition, clothing and textiles, rifle, trap and skeet, swine and county camp.

Surprise party

Annette and Martha Couch, Lubbock, were visitors in their parent's home, John and Lennis, the last weekend in October.

The Luther Couches returned to Lubbock with their daughters to celebrate an early surprise birthday party for Annette Nov. 1. The actual birth date is Nov. 3. Martha arranged for 25 of Annette's co-workers at Texas Instruments to conceal themselves as Annette came home from work to the unexpected celebration.

Chips and dips were served with a cheese roll, Coke and other soft drinks.

The Couches went to College Station Monday with the girls to witness the acquisition of a significant award by Dr. Martha Couch, returning home on Tuesday.

Wedding shower

Lisa Iden, bride-elect of Scott Underwood, was honored at a wedding shower Nov. 4 at the home of Mrs. Robert R. Hunt, Ackerly, from 2:00 to 4:30 p.m.

Hostesses were: Mrs. Robert (Janie) Hunt, Mrs. Darrell Bearden, Mrs. Eddy Herm, Mrs. Scott Zant, Mrs. Robert Bilbo, Mrs. Terry Brown, Mrs. Keith Nichols, Mrs. James Blake, Mrs. Rex Zant, Mrs. Stan Smith, Mrs. Joe Dean Hall and Mrs. Bruce Parker.

The hostess gift was a 10-piece set of Farberware stainless steel cookware and double boiler.

The bride-elect was presented a corsage of alstromerias. A floral arrangement of alstromerias, asters and mini gladioli centered the refreshment table that was covered with an ecru ruffled lace tablecloth laden with crystal appointments. Punch and hors d'oeuvres were served.

Special guests attending the event were Pat Underwood, prospective bridegroom's mother; Ida Underwood, his grandmother; Denise Iden, the bride-elect's stepmother, Dorothy Ragsdale, her grandmother; Tessa and Cassie Underwood, the prospective bridegroom's sisters and Neasa Iden, the bride-elect's sister-in-law.

Out-of-town guests included Patricia Jones, Seminole, the bride-elect's aunt; Jay Oakes, Richardson, the prospective bridegroom's aunt; Margaret Saunders, Midland, another of his aunts and Jacque and Becca Saunders, Midland, his cousins plus Melinda Bearden of Irving.

The bride-elect's great aunts, Helen Clanton of Big Spring, Maurine Hanks of Vealmoor and Wanda Clayton of O'Donnell also attended the shower.

A camel Christmas

NEW YORK — Stephanie Chase, a Rockette in Radio City Music Hall's annual "Christmas Spectacular," escorts one of her co-stars in the show, a domreday camel named Azira.

Classic books for modern children

NEW YORK (AP) — Joshua Greene is from the if-you-can't-beat-'em, join-'em school. So, apparently, are Judy Collins, James Earl Jones, Mia Farrow and Arlo Guthrie.

They've teamed up to bring good literature to young children via tape on the theory that kids these days are more attuned to watching and listening than they are to reading.

Greene, a producer of children's films who watched his 11-year-old son bypass books for more stimulating forms of entertainment, decided if kids were going to watch and listen it might as well be something worthwhile. And maybe, just maybe, the tapes would spark an interest in the books.

The couple will wed Jan. at the First Baptist Church, Big Spring, with Kenneth G. Patrick officiating.

The Luther community was shocked and saddened by the tragic automobile accident Nov. 4 that claimed the life of Georgia Garcia and seriously injured her sister Mary Ann.

The two girls were on the way to work at McDonald's at 2:00 p.m. when suddenly Georgia lost control of her 1979 Ford Mustang, crashing into a telephone pole, half a mile north of the Luther Gin and a few feet from the intersection of Highways 846 and 669.

Georgia was excited about her upcoming Cosmetology Board examination Nov. 16 in Austin. She planned to use her mother Virginia Garcia as her exam model. She graduated from the Howard College Cosmetology Department last spring.

Georgia was in line for the position of crew chief at McDonald's, according to Jim McDonald. Mary Ann had previously remarked teasingly, "I don't know if I'll like taking orders from Georgia."

Georgia was popular and successful in school as shown in her yearbook and as related by her family. At Union High School she was chosen the Most Popular, the Most Athletic, the Most Outstanding Student and Miss UHS, all in 1987. In addition she was runner-up for Homecoming Queen that year, and a cheerleader.

Georgia played basketball at both Union and Borden High Schools and was the lone student to go out for track at Union. She was a member of the Future Homemakers of America, serving as president in 1985.

Georgia, 20, was born Dec. 12, 1968 in Brownfield where she grew up, attending UHS. Moving to Luther in March of 1987, she attended Borden High School at Gail, graduating that year.

Jesse and Virginia Garcia are her parents in Luther and she has two sisters: Mary Ann and Elizabeth Garcia and three brothers: Julian and Luciano Olvera and Manual Garcia, all of Sinton. Other survivors are grandmothers Georgia Reyna of Elgin and Josephine Barrientes of O'Donnell. She also had one nephew and a number of aunts, uncles and cousins.

Rosary was conducted Monday evening at Myers & Smith Funeral Home; a funeral Mass was conducted Tuesday at St. Thomas Catholic Church.

Mary Ann Garcia is improving in Scenic Mountain Hospital as she recovers from a broken back, a broken rib and a brain concussion.

Player profiles

As the season comes to an end, we are presenting our last player profiles for the 1989 football and volleyball seasons.

Tracy Ausbie No. 81 — He is the son of Queetie Ausbie. This is his first year to play football with the Wolves. He plays split end. He enjoys playing "because it's fun and I like the excitement." Tracy's other school activities include basketball. When he graduates in May, he plans to attend college. He enjoys watching TV and playing ball.

Brittany Bridgford No. 17 — She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B.B. Bridgford. She has played volleyball for 2½ years. She plays hitter for the Wolves. Brittany says she enjoys volleyball "because it takes teamwork to make it work. If you use your talent to play, your teammates will help you win the game. It's a game of timing, communication, and skill. She is also involved in basketball, student council (vice president), National Honor Society, SADD and she is also Sluefoot, the school mascot. After graduation she plans to attend Texas A&M and major in pre-dental.

This concludes the series of articles on our athletes. I hope you enjoyed getting to know them maybe just a little better.

Congratulations volleyball girls on your district championship. We're proud of you.

The Opti-Ms Club sponsored a "Safe House" for trick or treaters, and also held a costume contest for anyone wanting to enter. A table was set up and the kids could come get candy and a cupcake. The winners of the costume contest were: First place and winner of $15 — Otis Johnson; second place and winner of $10 — Nicole Rodriguez; and third place and winner of $5 — Emily Oursbourn. There were 35 entrants in the contest. According to Opti-Ms Becky Manning, about 100 children were served.

The VFW Ladies Auxiliary held a Pinata Party Halloween night free for any child up to 10 years old. It was held at the VFW Post 9178.

State bound

Three students from CHS will be going to the state speech competition in San Antonio in March. The students won the speech tournament Oct. 21 in Midland. We were the only 3A school involved, competing against 4A and 5A schools.

Tammy Loving placed second for her foreign extemporaneous speech; Wesley Brown was third for his domestic extemporaneous speech; and George Levesque placed fourth for his domestic extemporaneous speech.

Nationals bound

The Colorado High School cheerleaders and mascot Sluefoot recently traveled to Haltom High School in Ft. Worth to compete in the Regional Cheerleading Competition. There were seven squads entered in the Small Varsity Division of which our girls were one. They had to perform a two-minute constant routine of cheers and stunts. Everyone was given ribbons according to how good they were, with the squad winning a trophy and qualifying for nationals. Three squads from each division were chosen. The CHS girls won a blue ribbon — meaning superior — and received a trophy. They will compete at the national competition Dec. 28-29 in Dallas. A 2½ minute routine of cheers, dance and stunts must be choreographed to be performed at the competition. If the girls make it to the finals they will have the privilege of doing their routine on ESPN. There will also be a Best Mascot competition of which Brittany Bridgford/Sluefoot will be competing. I'm sure our girls will do very good. I am looking forward to seeing them on ESPN!

Booster news

The Wolves Booster Club met Oct. 30 at the fieldhouse. Chuck Claxton spoke on his job as the secondary coach. The game film was indeed fun to watch as it was projected to five times greater size. A tour of the facilities was the highlight of the evening for a lot of the members, who have never been to our fieldhouse. Claxton was the tour guide that showed everyone the equipment room, filled to the brim with various and assorted football gear. He showed and explained about the different kinds of shoulder pads and why different positions played needed different equipment. The helmet that you fill with air so it will fit the boys heads perfectly, was interesting as was seeing the size 14½ shoe used by Carl DeVorce from 1968-70. The Boosters were also shown the new knee braces that all of our football boys wear to avoid injuries. Next, a tour of the weight room, where Coach Rick Robinson showed how the Wolves worked out. He showed the neck weights they use to build a strong neck and also the inclines, the guys use to do sit ups. He showed the bench presses that are used to build a strong upper body. Coach Robinson told of six men that can bench press more than 250 pounds. Those six are John Pharris, Hadley Weaver, Tracy Edwards, Raymond Sutton, Bobby Silva and Michael Boatright. It all proved to be an interesting evening.

Newcomers

The First Baptist Church of Knott is happy to welcome the Rev. William Kaberle and his wife Cynthia, and their son Hans, 3. The Kaberles moved to Knott from New Braunfels. Cynthia is a certified elementary teacher. She also ran a bakery in New Braunfels. Kaberle is the district R.A. director of this area.

Garden City

 named the school's top Century III Leader. The Century III Leaders Program is designed to recognize student leaders who show strong leadership abilities and an interest in the future of America. Competitors are judged on the basis of leadership skills, academic success, school and community involvement, and a current events examination. John is now eligible to compete with other local winners from around the state for one of two $1500 college scholarships and an all-expense paid trip to the National Century III Leaders Conference March 2-5 in Colonial Williamsburg, Va. State delegates will compete for the national winners prize of an additional $10,000 scholarship.

Thanksgiving dinner

The Thanksgiving dinner will be Nov. 16 in the Garden City cafeteria. The public is invited. We suggest that patrons attend between 11:50 a.m. and 12:15. The cost is $2.00 per plate.

Scrimmage

On Nov. 7, the girls junior varsity and varsity basketball teams scrimmaged against Forsan at Forsan. The first game will be here with Stanton Tuesday with JV playing at 6:00 p.m.

The way it looks at the time of this publication, if the Bearcats succeed at winning their games with Sterling City and Robert Lee, it is possible that they will play Anthony which is located west of El Paso. A mutual site will be agreed upon for the playoff game.

Unconstitutional

The Texas Supreme Court ruling for method of school finance is unconstitutional. Look for a minimum tax rate (somewhere around .72 per hundred) being imposed on the school district. The state is needing $600,000,000 the first year (1990-91). The total is around $3 million. Some politicians in Austin are proposing a sin tax, state income tax and to broaden the tax base for sales tax. Please contact your state representative and senator and express your views.

Special concert

Forsan band director Bob Fishback brought the whole Buffalo Band, twirlers and all, to present a special concert for the Elbow students Tuesday morning. The kids' eyes became wider and wider as they listened to the band play "Old Time Rock and Roll", "Maleguena" and "Proud Mary". The twirlers were dressed in long-sleeved black suits with white sequined cuffs with a slash of silver sequins across one shoulder as they danced and twirled with each song. The whole performance was "truly a class act", the Elbow staff agreed.

Mr. Cregar remarked, as he looked across the audience of elementary children, that he noticed some playing pretend drums and trombones, some twirling imaginary batons and many undertaking to lead the band. The band never missed a beat, climaxing their program with the school song and fight song.

School contest

Elbow fifth graders Deana Johnson and Amanda Hensley propose a contest for all Elbow students. Monday will begin "Keep the Lunch Room Clean Week", much to the delight of the cafeteria ladies, aides and janitors. The three lunch groups will compete with each other for a popcorn and movie party for first prize and candy treats for second prize.

Meeting

Parents of fifth and sixth graders and parents of all students involved in the Chapter 1 program are asked to meet Monday 7 p.m. in the Elbow H.E.P. room. Chapter 1 teacher Lorna Simmons, fifth grade teacher Bo Fryer and sixth grade reading and language arts teacher Ida Flowers will conduct this meeting.

Class trip

The second grade classes plan to go Thursday to the Planetarium in Midland. Teachers Regina Newsom and Diana Newton will give us a full report next week.

Elbow 4-H Chapter participated in a food show at the Health Fair held at Highland Mall last weekend. Zack Womack won first place in the bread cereal division and will go to District competition. Travis Womack and Cam Blackshear won blue ribbons in the nutritious snacks and desserts category. Cam will also go district. Wendie Wallace won a blue ribbon in the fruits and vegetable category. Shane Simmons, first grader, won the mini chef division in nutritious snacks and desserts.

Mike Henderson won a red ribbon for his main dish entry, and Kristen Screengost won a red ribbon for her entry in the fruit and vegetable division. Ethan Screengost and Jennifer Newton won red ribbons for their entries and Jennifer will also go to district.

The same day, Tasha Rock was in San Angelo at the 4-H District Wool Show. Tasha was showing a 100 percent wool dress she made that won the $100 prize in the Big Spring Wool Show.

Star party

Forsan Junior High Science Club staged a Star Party Thursday night behind the school tennis courts.

They identified constellations and viewed Venus with the school telescope.

Science teachers Brian Stringer and Paul Lindell sponsored the club. The club was initiated last year "because there were a lot of exceptional kids in Junior High". Stringer notes "There just isn't enough time in the classroom to really cover some of these subjects the way we want to." The members of Science Club learn about the necessity of recycling and are collecting paper and aluminum cans for recycling.

In order to belong to the Science Club, students must maintain an 80 average in science and be passing all their other classes. Events like the Star Party are open to any interested student.

This year's Science Club officers are: President, Bryan Alexander; Vice President, Ryan Hamby; Secretary, Gwen Cooper and Treasurer, Chris Lewis.

Science related careers are increasingly important to each of us as we struggle to reclaim our land, sea and air from pollution. Teachers who take the time to encourage our children toward these goals are investing in our future. You kids learn a lot. We're counting on you.

Induction ceremony

Forsan Junior High National Junior Honor Society conducted its induction ceremony Monday night. Junior high school principal Doug Parker and sponsor Ida Flowers presided. The 1989-90 members are: Bryan Alexander, Tabatha Alexander, Aaron Bellinghausen, Misty Carter, Jenny Conaway, Gwen Cooper, Ryan Hamby, Jacoby Hopper, Chris Lewis, Laurie Light, Summer Rawls and Kim Roman. Kim Roman, Ryan Hamby and Jenny Conaway are second year members.

Officers are: President, Kim Roman; Vice President, Jenny Conaway; Secretary, Laurie Light; Treasurer, Ryan Hamby and Parliamentarian, Bryan Alexander.

Junior High Student of the Week was Larry Murphy. Congratulations, Larry.

Parker implemented this program to encourage the junior high kids to be good students. A different junior high teacher is assigned each week to choose a student for Student of the Week. The teachers look for qualities such as courtesy, effort, good work, classroom participation and promptness.

Student winning the award in past weeks are: Jessica Gaffney, Kim Barton, Brian Newton, Angie Jackson, Josh Rainey, Amber Ceniceros, Chris Lewis and Wes Cooper.

On Nov. 3, the Forsan Buffalos played Big Lake. The last home game awards were presented. Senior Rhonda Stendebach was chosen as the 1989-90 Football Sweetheart. Band favorite is Joey Henkel. Band Sweetheart is Teresa Averette. Teresa was also selected for "Buffalo Gal". Mr. Buffalo's name was not released.

The Senior Band members were also honored at half time.

Donation

The Forsan Student Council donated $25 to the Permian Basin Vietnam Memorial Fund.

Basketball game

The girls basketball team will play Colorado City there on Tuesday. J.V. game will start at 5 p.m. and varsity at 6. The girls will also play Sterling City Saturday and the boys basketball team will play Coahoma.

Honoree

Dane Driver, Forsan sophomore, will be honored with his team, the Texas High School Rodeo Team at the second called session at the 71st Legislature Tuesday in Austin.

Following the reception, Speaker of the House Gib Lewis will recognize each team member on the House floor.

Dane won fourth place in the state cutting horse contest that qualified him for the state team competition. The Texas Team competed in Pueblo Colorado in July and won the National High School Rodeo Team title. Thirty-seven states and two Canadian Provinces also competed.

Fellowship

Forsan Baptist JOY (Just Older Youth) group will have a fellowship at the church Monday at 7 p.m.

Monthly luncheon

Dorcas Ladies Sunday School will have its monthly luncheon at Evelyn Cowley's house at 11:30 a.m. Bible study will follow.

News

You folks call me with your news or send a card to P.O. Box 541, Forsan, Tx. 79733.

4-H meeting

The Coahoma 4-H Club will have their monthly meeting on Monday in the AV Room at the Coahoma Elementary School at 7:00 p.m. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Addition

A name was left out last week in the article about the Cross-Country race that was held in Greenwood. Stephen Hanks placed fourth in the junior high division.

Speaking of the race, runners that qualified for the regional race did well last weekend in Lubbock. Sarah Hanks placed seventh in race. This qualified Sarah for the state cross-country race in Georgetown, which was conducted Saturday.

Pot luck supper

Members of the "Pot Luck" Senior Citizens Group will host a chili supper and a drawing for a handmade Texas Star quilt Nov. 18.

The supper will be held at the Sand Springs Lions Club building on Scout Hut Road in Sand Springs and will begin at 5:30 p.m.

Tickets for the supper are $3.50 for adults and $1.50 for children and will be available at the door. The chances for the handmade Texas Star quilt will also be sold at the supper and will be $1 each. The drawing for the quilt will be at 9:00 p.m.

With a main course of chili, other items on the menu include beans, salad, and homemade pies and cakes and a drink.

Give the member of your family in charge of kitchen duty a break, and have a good time by coming out Saturday evening at 5:30 for a bowl of Texas-style chili.

A little about the "Pot Luck" Senior Citizens Group: This group includes approximately 35 seniors from all over the Big Spring, Sand Springs, and Coahoma area. Seniors get together every Thursday morning at the Sand Springs Lions Club building for a little "farkle" or dominoes. Some come and knit or work on crafts, some come just to see friends and visit.

A "Pot Luck" lunch is held on the first Thursday of each month and seniors gather for fun and fellowship. Members with birthdays during the month are recognized with a cake and song.

Thanksgiving service

The First Baptist Church of Coahoma will host a Thanksgiving Community Service today at 7 p.m.

Darren Skinner, pastor of The United Methodist Church of Coahoma, will conduct the services. A fellowship will follow the services and everyone is urged to attend the service.

Bible study

The women of the First Baptist Church have started a Ladies' Bible Study group. The idea got started by women who have children that attend the evening classes at the church: the ladies decided to make good use of their time while waiting for their children and for evening services to begin. The group was formed in September and Dianah Collom, who leads the group, states the group is doing well, with ten to twelve regular members.

The class is currently studying material published by Charles Windoll, pastor of the First Evangelical Free Church in Fullerton, Calif. Windoll is quite well-known in the religious sect. The title of the six-week course is "Strengthening your Grip". Anyone interested in joining the class is welcome.

Basketball

The girls' basketball teams will have their first game Tuesday against Jayton. Play will begin at 6 for the JV game and 7:30 for the varsity.

The girls' varsity will participate in a tournament that will be held at Howard College on Thursday through Saturday. This tournament is unique in its form because both high school and college students play in alternating games. The high school girls will be given the opportunity to see college play at its finest.

Booster news

The All-Sports booster club has been busy again. Although football is winding down, basketball is gearing up for a winning season. Booster members raffled off the rifle and the winner is Doug Earnest of Big Spring. The club made $230.

The boosters want to remind all students and parents that basketball pictures go on sale Nov. 21.

The men's basketball tournament that was scheduled was postponed. Only three teams signed up for play. The lack of interest surprised booster sponsors until it was pointed out to them that Nov. 4 was the opening day of deer hunting season. Boosters are going to try again at a later date.

The next booster meeting will be Nov. 20 at 7:00 p.m. at the elementary cafeteria.

Birthday dinner

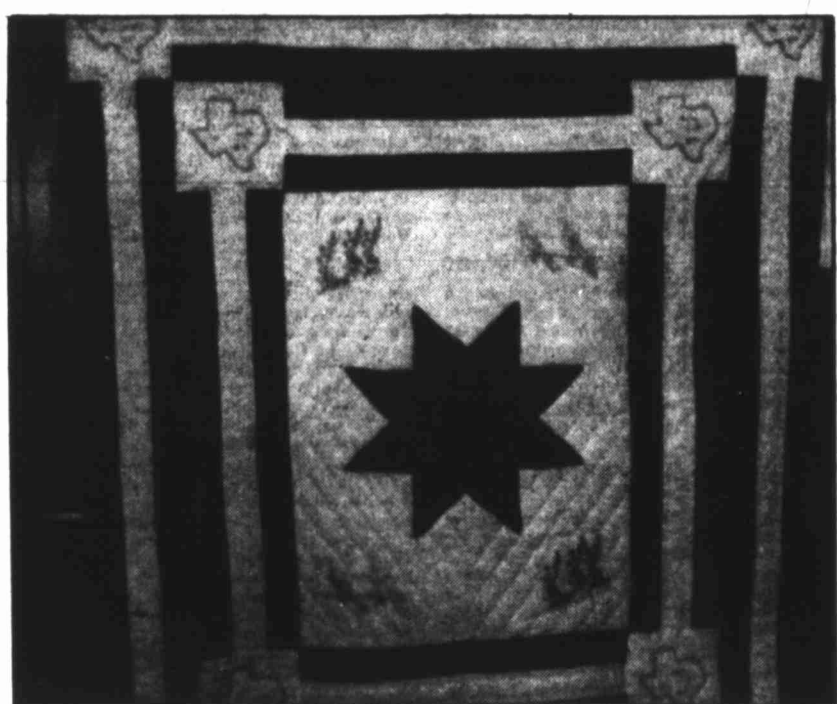

Friends and family of John Overton, son of Ricky and Cindy Overton, gathered Nov. 4 for John's 18th birthday. The group went to Golden Corral and had a great time.

Canned goods

The student council is sponsoring a canned food drive to help families in need. The drive, deemed "Can-n-Care", will run through Nov. 20. Cans are being gathered at the high school office.

The drive is also a competition between grade levels with the freshmen and sophomores teaming up against the juniors and seniors. The canned goods will be handed out to different churches and organizations that will in turn hand the goods out to families in need.

This handmade Texas Star quilt will be raffled during the "Pot Luck" Senior Citizens Group's chili supper Nov. 18.
