Oil Tanker Burns After Gulf Crash

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — An oil tanker struck an unmanned oil platform in the Gulf of Mexico and caught fire early today, forcing the 46-man crew to abandon ship and causing a fiery two-mile oil slick.

The Coast Guard and commercial vessels in the area rescued 41 of the men and searched for the remaining five.

Ten of the survivors were injured, two of them seriously.

The thing happened so fast a lot of people jumped into the water without life jackets," said Coast Guard Lt. Ed Mullian.

He said the ship, the Globtik Sun, was bound for Galveston, Tex., from the Bahamas when the collision occurred about 185 miles southwest of New Orleans. The 33,000-ton, 795-foot vessel carried a cargo of 350,000 barrels of Arabian light crude oil.

A heavy oil slick about two miles long and half a mile wide has leaked from a hole in the ship's port bow which was caused by the collision," Mullian said. "The slick is on fire."

The oil platform was on fire at first, but burned itself out before major damage was done.

The skipper of the Globtik Sun, identified only as Captain Strangeland, was among the survivors.

It was not known what caused the collision.

"Those platforms are supposed to be lit up," said Coast Guard spokesman Stan Cristman. Seas in the area were less than five feet with winds at about 12 miles an hour.

The chief officer of the Globtik Sun today said his ship's collision with an oil platform and resulting fire happened too fast for anyone to panic, but they were scared later.

Reidar Knutsen, 44, of Norway, said he was sleeping when the ship exploded.

"I tried to get everyone in life boats," said Knutsen, who was treated for a foot injury and released from John Sealy Hospital. "I'm not sure if anyone was left on the boat, but I ran back twice to see."

Knutsen and others lowered a lifeboat over the side of the tanker where there was no fire, but the flames spread to that side quickly.

"Fire was all over the place. We couldn't see anything," the Norwegian said. "The water was burning all around us, on all sides, so we rowed away from it."

Standing outside the hospital emergency room, the barefooted Knutsen said he got scared later.

"You don't get scared when things happen so fast," he said. "I scared now, afterwards."

The Globtik Sun's captain, Norval E. Strangeland stood in his stocking feet with seven other seamen who were treated and released. He refused to talk.

Knutsen stood, showing his hands deep into his pockets, and talked in broken English.

Most Wanted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI today named William Lewis Herron to its 10 most wanted list, describing him as a "vicious, cunning, professional killer."

Herron was convicted on two counts of first-degree murder and was serving a life sentence at the Kentucky State Penitentiary at the time of his escape last April.

While being transported to a nearby clinic for medical treatment with another inmate, Herron took out a revolver, disarmed the guard and forced him to drive to Tennessee. He fled after shackling both guard and inmate to a tree.

Herron, 29, a native of Indiana, has been convicted on two counts of first degree murder, armed robbery and burglary, the FBI said.

panic," he said. "We were trained not to get scared. I have been on the sea since I was 15."

The chief officer turned to a hospital official and asked about another Norwegian seaman, Gudmund Veting. The official told him Veting was burned over 80 per cent of his body.

Knutsen turned slightly and wept.

The survivors were flown by helicopter to Galveston where two were admitted to a hospital. Francisco Gaugman, 25, of the Philippines, was in satisfactory condition with burns over 2 per cent of his body. Gudmund Veting of Norway was hospitalized in critical condition with burns over 80 per cent of his body.

Officials said the other injured crewmen were treated and released.

A spokesman for Chevron Oil Co., which owns the platform, said it was the first time a ship has ever crashed into a drilling platform. But he said the platform, designed for 12 oil wells, was in the process of being installed and had no wells yet.

The navigation lights were functional at the time of the collision and they are still operating," the spokesman said.

The judge must be impartial," Hobgood told the jury during his charge. "You are not to draw any inferences from any ruling I have made or from the inflection of my voice or from questions I may have asked or any other actions during the trial."

Hobgood told the jury it could return one of three verdicts—guilty of second degree murder, guilty of voluntary manslaughter or innocent.

The third-floor courtroom rang with impassioned scripture, biting sarcasm and claims of divine guidance for nearly seven hours Thursday as seven lawyers tried to sway the jury during their final arguments.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Business inventories — warehouse supplies — are one of these economic barometers.

When business has more goods than it can sell, it slows production and lays off workers. But as inventories decline, production resumes and workers are rehired.

After four months of inventory reductions, the Commerce Department reported Thursday, retail and wholesale businesses increased backroom supplies in June.

The inventory situation was partly reflected in the latest jobless figures that reflected a 630,000 increase in the work force, mostly in retail trades. But the unemployment report said factory workers still were not being rehired.

That fact also turned up in Thursday's inventory statistics, which showed manufacturers continuing to sell goods from stockrooms. But Pate said the factory inventory liquidation should end shortly.

Business sales of retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers increased 1.5 per cent.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment and factory production will show major improvement in the next four months, says Assistant Commerce Secretary James Pate.

"I think the economic recovery is ahead of schedule, both in terms of timing and in terms of magnitude," Pate told UPI.

In a report today, the Commerce Department said the nation's balance of payments was $1.23 billion in surplus for the second quarter to provide the United States with its first six-month surplus in 15 years.

The improved picture indicated that the U.S. dollar was stronger against other world currencies. For the average American that meant less inflationary pressures at home.

The two consecutive surplus quarters followed quarterly deficits of $1.2 billion, $6.2 billion, $3.9 billion and $7.7 billion in 1974. Those deficits contributed to double-digit inflation last year.

Pate said key statistical measures of the nation's economy are continuing to show "surprising" improvement.

VAIL, COLO. (UPI) — President Ford said today he will veto a six-month extension of controls on domestic oil prices and will remove the $2 a barrel tariff on imported oil if the veto is upheld.

Ford said the net effect of the immediate decontrol and removal of import fees will mean an increase of a few cents a gallon in the price of petroleum products.

His experts have said fuel products will increase no more than 6 cents a gallon as a result of decontrol. But they estimated decontrol, along with removal of the import fees, would raise the price of gasoline only 2 or 3 cents a gallon.

The on-again, off-again congressional approach to energy is hazardous, expensive and frightening," Ford said in remarks prepared for delivery today at the Vail Symposium of Energy.

He referred to Congress' refusal to pass his compromise offer for gradual lifting of domestic oil price controls and its subsequent vote to extend those controls for six months.

A federal appeals court in Washington ruled this week the President had no power to order the $2 a barrel tariff on imported oil in February. The administration said Thursday it would appeal the ruling to defend Ford's right to impose the tariff.

The domestic oil price ceilings of $5.25 a barrel expire Aug. 31. Congress will deliver to the White House Aug. 27 a bill extending the price ceilings for six months. Both the Senate and House passed the extension by large margins, but some White House aides believe Ford's veto will be sustained.

Approval of this extension would mean only more months of delay without the critically needed incentives to promote conservation and spur new domestic oil production," Ford said.

"An extension would continue price uncertainty for consumers and producers alike and tend to increase dependence on foreign oil sources. More important, it would signal to foreign producers our inability to face up to this problem."

The representatives in Congress should keep this in mind as they vote to sustain my veto," he added. "This is particularly important at a time when producing nations are considering increasing the price pay 16 cents per $100 on the first $3,000 assessed values.

However, they must file for the special exemption.

No changes in the assessed rate nor the tax rate were made for 1975.

Gray County's welfare costs in July were $1,645.86 which included help for 41 families. Commissioners also approved that report.

The cost distribution shows hospital, $86; doctors, $402; drugs, $93.52; groceries, $41.40; transportation, $85.09; and miscellaneous, $737.85.

The welfare costs included $200 in grants to support several of the county's needy children who have been placed in children's homes.

Another Side of Truman

Lately, there has been an effort to resurrect former president Harry Truman as a wise and sagacious man. While there can be little doubt that the salty, talking Truman was glib, as politicians go, and that history will treat him kindly as compared to Franklin D. Roosevelt, for example, the attempt to cast him in the role of a paragon of wisdom is quite another thing.

Certainly the indomitable Harry was no economist and just as certainly his understanding of either socialism or private enterprise left much to be desired. This was made quite clear in a column written by the late R.C. Hoiles, founder of Freedom Newspapers, during Truman's tenure of office. The column follows.

President Truman in one of his speeches on his western trip says: "The truth is that government action during the last 17 years has been the salvation of private business in this country and has strengthened the private enterprise system against Socialism, Communism, and all other isms."

The fact that people of the United States elect a President who would make a statement like that is certainly evidence that the public is not very well educated in economic matters. If the public understood what private enterprise is and what causes prosperity no president would think of making such an absurd statement.

How can the government save business when the government has nothing that it does not take from production to do the saving with?

It isn't the government that saves business. It is the government that destroys business. It is the government that causes long periods of unemployment. It is because the government has tinkered with credit and passed discriminatory tax laws and tried to protect certain groups, that resulted in the great crash in the late 20's and 30's. Now the government is doing exactly the same thing that brought on the crash, and we have a president of the United States running over the country contending that "government action during the last 17 years has been the salvation of private business."

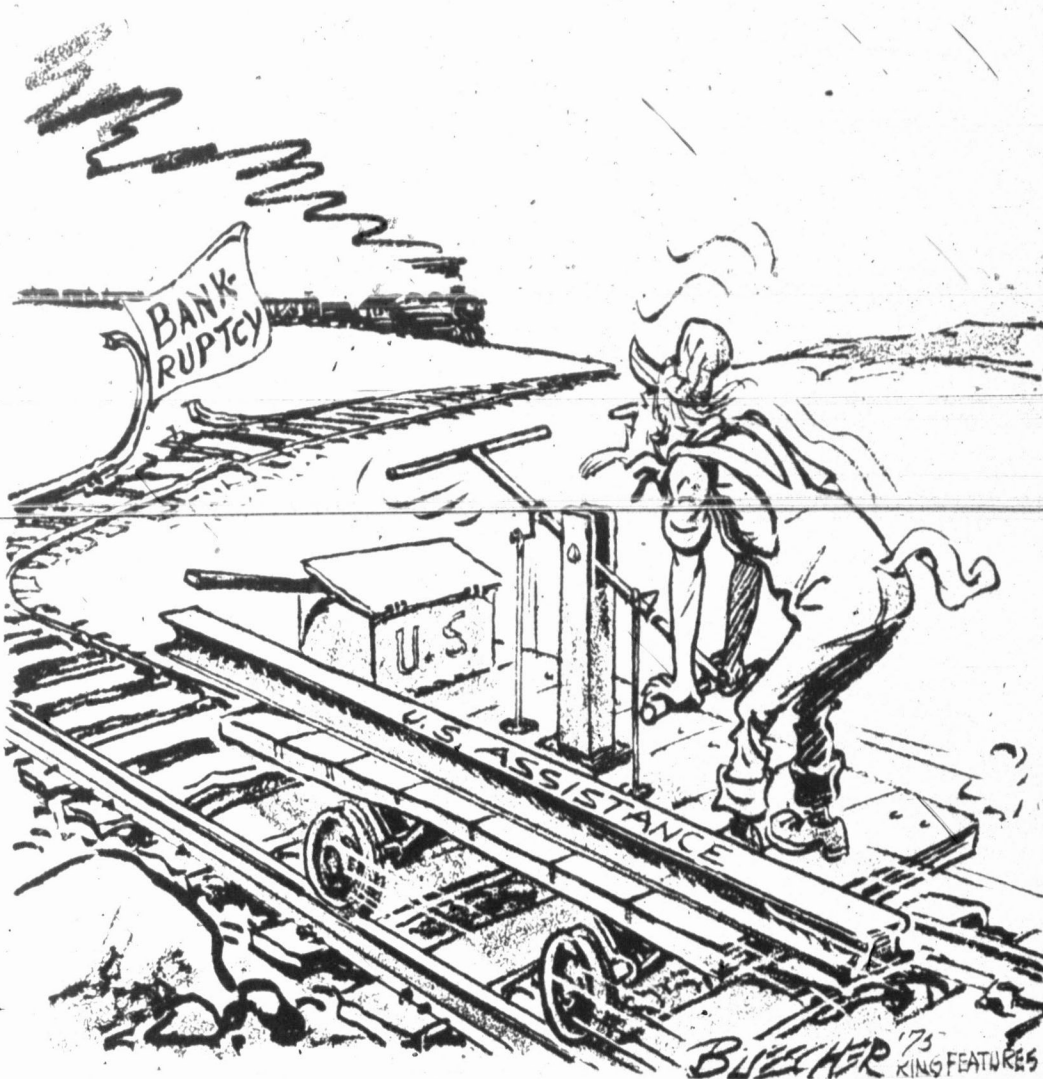

The government has wrecked the money system and caused dollars to buy less and less and less. It has made it a crime to own honest money. Business men cannot figure how to measure the value of things because they have no unit of money that has value in itself by which to measure. It is no more possible to measure value without a unit of value to measure by, than it is to measure distance without a unit of distance.

The only remedy the government has known for the last 17 years has been to issue more fiat, dishonest, credit money. The government has saved private business just as Hitler saved private business in Germany by making the mark worth less and less. Anybody who believes in any moral laws knows that the government has only fooled the people and made it more difficult for business to operate. It has made it especially difficult for the little man to grow and develop, because the government has made it impossible for the little business man to hire men on the basis of what they produce, and it has made it impossible for him to accumulate the necessary capital, due to the government taxing the man who creates wealth. There is no more sense in the government taxing the man who creates wealth than it would be for the government to tax a soldier on a graduated basis in proportion to the number of enemies he captured or killed. Everybody who creates wealth benefits everybody in the world. And to tax a man and penalize him in his creation not only hurts the working man who wants a better job.

President Truman knows about as much about the true functions of a government and what it can do as he did about the haberdashery business in which he failed, and didn't make any pretense of paying his honest debts. A country is certainly ill-educated when it elects as president a man of the type of Truman, or even had it elected Dewey, who advocated about the same thing.

WORKING ON THE RAILROAD

Who'll Bail Out Uncle Sam?

The U.S. Conference of Mayors, meeting in Boston over the July 4th weekend, was virtually unanimous in wanting Uncle Sam to bail out New York City, which is nearing bankruptcy.

Apparently the mayors had more than just charity for New York in mind. Many of them have been operating on deficit budgets and, being politicians, did not dare raise taxes to meet their expenses. In fact, they claimed that Uncle Sam has cornered the tax field and therefore should be obliged to meet their deficits.

Not one of the mayors wondered about the natural question: If Uncle Sam bails out the cities, adding that much more to his deficit spending programs, who will bail out

Uncle Sam? For an answer we only have to look at England's fiscal condition today — herself near bankruptcy, with an inflationary rate of 25 per cent, her printing press money losing value in world trade, or take a look at what happened to several South American countries that overspent.

The truth is that only production of wanted crops or goods is the real gauge of values.

New York City is only the most flagrant example of deficit spending. In the last ten years, all state and local government spending jumped from $47.5 billion to $228 billion. Each seemed to try to keep abreast of others in the spending game.

This meant spending from a little under 11 per cent to over 15 per cent of the gross national product, which, with federal spending, has now reached 37 per cent of the national product. Which means, of course, that only 63 per cent of the sales price of products, on the whole, is left to cover labor, material and other manufacturing and sales costs.

No wonder inflation haunts us. And it will continue, along with periodic recessions, until we tighten our belts, live within our means, and start paying off the public debt.

Freedom Threat

FREEDOM AND ENTERPRISE

By ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Efforts by the Labor Party government in Great Britain to expand state ownership of industry into new fields of manufacturing have caused great concern among Britons who believe in freedom and enterprise. They view recent and proposed nationalization moves as an effort to jettison economic freedom.

Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, leader of Britain's Conservative Party, recently addressed herself to the choice facing Britons: competitive enterprise or state bureaucracy. Writing in The Manchester Guardian, Mrs. Thatcher pointed out that under so-called "public enterprise" schemes the state merely takes over a going concern, usually when all the enterprise has been knocked out of it.

"The people at large," she noted, "are given no choice as to whether or not they will invest. Their money is taken from them by taxation and they have no vestige of influence or control over the purposes to which it is then applied."

Mrs. Thatcher observed that "historically, free political institutions have always been linked with a free enterprise economy. I do not believe that political freedom can exist without economic freedom. They are two sides of the same coin. If we lose one, we do not doubt that we shall lose both."

The socialists who are in charge of Britain's government do not understand this historical fact. Indeed they deny its validity. They recently nationalized Rolls-Royce and the shipyards and are planning the takeover of British Leyland and the aircraft industry. The socialists are pumping public money into various businesses. But they can't supply authentic enterprise or initiative. As a result, nationalized companies become a burden on the taxpayers.

The same process is taking hold in the United States. For example, indirect nationalization is proposed for railroads in receivership. The taxpayers are asked to supply vast sums to rebuild roadbeds and provide new rolling stock. But nothing is done about antiquated union work rules which are responsible for the financial plight of the railroads.

The creation of vast and monopolistic public corporations or nationalized industries only compounds the problems facing the economies of the United States and Britain, for vast monopolistic unions have crippled what should be viable business units.

How to fight nationalization and big government in general is a question being considered by thoughtful people on both sides of the Atlantic. What is needed, public pressure at the grass roots level against specific expenditures by government, against grandiose public programs and services which could be done just as well by private organizations.

People in free societies everywhere need to understand that waste, overmanning, and inefficiency are the hallmarks of an economy and political regime which rejects or hampers private enterprise.

Individual citizens must organize to protest the use of tax money to prop up ailing businesses, whether they be debt-ridden aircraft companies, near-bankrupt railroads or whatever. They also have a vital stake in protesting further subsidization of the postal service when private postal companies are prepared to offer better service at lower cost. And the taxpayers have every reason to object to both the proposed federal oil and gas corporation and federal drilling for offshore oil.

Activities of this sort only involve the state deeper and deeper into industrial planning and government ownership of production facilities. Such intervention cripples the spirit of enterprise and leads directly to a curtailment of freedom.

Jackson Steps On Oil

through costs" regulations imposed by the Federal Energy Administration (FEA). Never mind that the oil companies, one after the other, protested that there was no real shortage but only an apparent shortage caused by FEA allocation regulations.

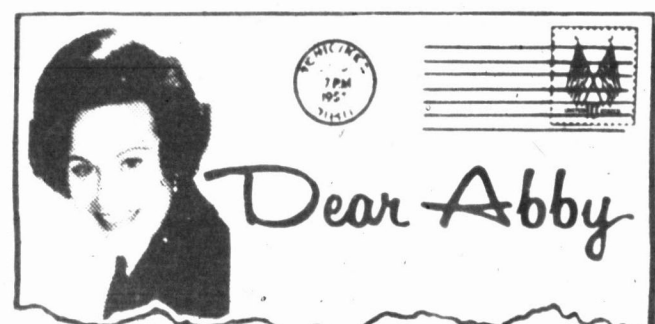

Never mind all that. Presidential aspirant Jackson had decided that the industry was guilty and, using the power of his office, so announced to the world. Only after having judged the oil industry guilty in advance, did the publicity seeking Jackson, backed by Senator Adlai Stevenson, call for an investigation to determine if the charges against the industry were true.

Replying to the pre-judgment of guilt, Mobil Oil Corporation gungently pointed out that, "It is disturbing that Senator Jackson should announce that he had found the U.S. oil industry guilty of this charge in the very same press release in which he and Senator Adlai Stevenson jointly announce plans to conduct an inquiry into their allegations."

As to that inquiry, the Wall Street Journal had this to say: "Senators Jackson and Stevenson will find, if they conduct fair and honest hearings, that the spot gasoline shortages and nation now faces result not from conspiracy, but from the very controls they and their congressional colleagues created. Once they make this discovery, there is no doubt will be apologies all around to the oil companies and no further attempt to extend controls past the August 31 expiration date. The great gasoline conspiracy was unwittingly concocted on Capitol Hill."

Secretary Broke from Treating Boss to Coffee

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1975 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Several months ago a new lady boss came to work in the firm where I am a secretary. She began asking me to please get her a cup of coffee or a candy bar. (We have dispensing machines.) She is always in a hurry, rushing to another meeting, and never has her purse with her.

Of course, I oblige. She is so lady-like and has such lovely manners. I thought she would reimburse me, but she never has.

Abby, I like my job and don't want to make a big deal out of it. But over the months her coffee and candy bars have put a hole in my budget.

What would be a tactful way of handing this without appearing cheap, embarrassing my boss or getting stuck for the rest of the year?

STUCK

DEAR STUCK: It's not "cheap" to ask for what is owed you. But you will have to make a choice between recouping your losses and sparing the lady boss from embarrassment. As for protection against being stuck again: When she asks for something from the machine, ask her for the change because you're "fresh out."

DEAR ABBY: I have an uncle who calls himself "Doctor" because he was given an honorary degree at some little obscure college to which he gave a lot of money after he struck it rich.

He introduces himself as "Doctor." When he makes reservations for trips and even at restaurants, he always makes it in the name of "Doctor So and So." Is it legitimate for him to do this? He didn't even graduate from high school.

NO NAMES

DEAR NO: Persons who appropriate the title "Doctor" solely upon the pretense of an honorary degree are reaching for self-esteem and are rather pathetic. But your uncle is harming no one, so let it ride.

DEAR ABBY: I have attended many weddings this summer and am so annoyed by one of the traditions that I have to get this off my chest.

When the bride starts to walk down the aisle, everyone stands up (I suppose it is to pay tribute to the bride). Then everyone (except those who are lucky enough to be sitting next to the aisle) starts to twist and turn and bob around, trying to get a look at the bride. Usually, all they can see are the backs of others who are also trying to get a look.

From the center seats, there isn't a chance of seeing the flower girl or ring bearer. This is unfair to everybody. Will you please ask ministers to request that everyone remain seated when the bride makes her entrance?

SHORTLY IN VENTURE

DEAR SHORTY: Consider it done.

Exodus from Cities

The metropolitan area of Los Angeles gained over a million in population in the 1960s but has lost over 100,000 so far in the 1970s.

It is a story that is repeating itself across the country. Metropolitan areas like New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles are experiencing a sharp decline in the number of people moving into them. This trend has developed dramatically since 1970. It is believed to be without precedent since the first census in 1790.

The big cities have become overcrowded. The quality of life in them has become degraded. Not even the suburbs of the great metropolitan areas offer an escape any longer. People are moving out to the medium-size cities, the small towns and the rural areas of America, the 1980 census will probably show that for the first time in American history the big cities are losing population.

It isn't because of any nogrowth policy. They are desperately seeking growth. Their revenues are down. Their facilities and services are deteriorating. Their problems are increasing. They are on the skids.

There is an object lesson for smaller cities. Bigger alone is no asset. It can become a desperate liability.

Drug Users and Life

The individuals who get hooked on drugs and wind up by committing suicide may be telling us something.

Some of them are big names — like the 32-year-old magazine executive found dead recently in a Chicago hotel room. Others are nameless, some have great ability. Others are not even good plotters.

The message coming from this series of doleful events is that the victims are dissatisfied with life as they normally find it. All of them try to change the standard pattern of living or escape from it. Often they try music to give their feelings a lift. Not infrequently they give some far-out religious cult a whirl. Many latch on to pure sensual gratification.

The obsession to reject one's own self reaches an acute stage when the subject undertakes a chemical transformation. When that fails short, the consequence may be to seek out nonexistence, or what is believed to be nonexistence.

Being on drugs is a temporary compromise with death; it is a way of eliminating the appearance of reality while retaining some means for returning to it. Eventually both normality and drug-induced abnormality become sufficiently unpleasant that the suffering human may be willing to let loose the rope of survival and slide into supposed oblivion.

The disenchantment that drug users find in a normal perception of their environment stands in contrast to the enthusiasm for life demonstrated by those who accept the difficulties and opportunities of existence without any need for camouflaging them. The farmer on a tractor, taking the beating of sun, wind, dust and insects; the laborer on the business end of a pick ax, the housewife with hands in hot soapy water; the newspaperboy with his bicycle heavily loaded — these are pictures of individuals who accept the struggle, who submit to its teachings, who win and lose and accept both success and failure, who have learned or are learning to accept themselves in just the way they were created.

Perhaps most humans resort to therapy of some kind. Some take the therapy that comes from prescriptions, others from unprescribed alkaloids evolved out of the centuries of the drug traffic, others from daily drudgery. But among many who toil, you see a radiance. The visible evidence is that they have found cause to rejoice in life rather than reject it.

Objectively, the same world is set before two pairs of eyes. One pair stays open, the other closes. The fact that one observer detects something wholesome, good and valuable suggests that the search is worthwhile. Those who so believe have two characteristics in common. First they happily indulge in work. Second, they accept themselves.

If any supposes the value of life to be zero, he has much to gain by experimenting in normality therapy — plunging into plain hard work and considering the possibility that the scheme of the universe holds a mission for him that no other person can fulfill.

The wagtail bird was once believed to have three drops of the Devil's blood on his tail, which he cannot shake off, no matter how hard he tries!

Rattlesnake Bites Local Man

By ANNA BURCHELL
Pampa News Staff

Frank Hobson, 33, was released from Highland General Hospital in Pampa Thursday after being treated for 48 hours as a result of a rattlesnake bite.

Hobson's neighbor's dog also was bitten by the rattler and was diagnosed as being very ill for several hours. However, before Hobson left the area where he was bitten he shot the snake.

"The dog got most of the venom," his wife reported.

Hobson was cutting weeds 1 1/2 miles from his ranch home near Skellytown when the rattler struck.

He said he heard it of tin and shot the snake, presumed it was dead. The neighbor's dog picked up the two foot rattler, and just as quickly threw it onto Hobson's leg.

"Of course, when the snake bite the dog, the dog threw it away," Mrs. Hobson said.

Hobson said he felt a sting and looked down to find his leg bleeding; the snake nearby. Hobson took the gun for a second time and finished killing the rattler, then took of his belt and wrapped it around the injured leg.

When he returned to the house, Mrs. Hobson reported, "He wasn't the calmest person in the world."

However, she succeeded in getting him into the car and drove him into Pampa to the hospital.

"The first thing the doctor did was cut an X where the bite was and take suction equipment and remove blood until he thought all the venom was gone."

Hospital attendants kept a tourniquet on the leg for 10 minutes and they would remove for five, and start all over again, Hobson's wife, Becky, explained.

Hobson was given a skin test to determine if he could take the medicine normally given snake bite patients. He couldn't.

Mrs. Hobson said physicians then determined that the dog got most of the venom.

Hobson laughed and said: "The husband might die, but the dogs doing fine."

Mrs. Hobson explained that if a person attempting to help a snake bite victim by sucking the venom out has one cavity in his teeth he would be as bad off as the one bitten by the snake.

Mr. and Mrs. Hobson are country-western entertainers who moved to the Hideaway Ranch Home north of Skellytown a few months ago from Hasville, Tenn. She is the daughter of Mrs. Sadie Durning of Skellytown and Buck Durning, Pampa. They make the ranch their home when not on the entertainment circuit.

Scientists studying the effects of all poisons produced by dangerous snakes found that, drop for drop, the venom of Crotalus scutalatus (the scientific name for the Mojave rattler) has proven extremely dangerous.

They add that if normal persons bitten by rattlers are in good health have excellent chances for recovery.

However, they add that there are several key factors to consider when bitten, such as the size of the snake and the amount of venom injected into the wound.

Deadly Enemy

A Skellytown resident who was bitten earlier this week by a rattlesnake is recuperating at home today. Frank Hobson, 33, was bitten as was his neighbor's dog. Hobson's wife said the dog apparently received most of the venom. However, both man and dog were in good condition this morning. Rattlesnakes are found in every state except Alaska, Hawaii, Maine and Delaware.

Judge Convicts Captain Of Cuban Shrimp Trawler

HOUSTON (UPI) — A federal judge Thursday convicted a Cuban shrimp trawler captain of violating the U.S. 12-mile fishing zone, sentenced him to a one-year probation prison term and ordered him deported without his ship.

U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton ordered Roberto Ayo Gonzales, 22, be deported along with the crew of the Cuban shrimp trawler which has been under guard in Corpus Christi since it was seized Aug. 2.

Singleton found Gonzales guilty after two days of testimony and sentenced him to one-year in prison but probated it under the conditions the captain not engage in commercial fishing or enter the United States for any reason during that time.

The judge ordered the vessel confiscated and turned Gonzales over to the U.S. marshal's office for deportation to a destination of his choice. The maximum punishment was a one-year prison term and a $100,000 fine.

Gonzales testified earlier Thursday he drifted off course using rudimentary navigational guides and did not know he was violating the territorial waters.

Gonzales, of Havana, testified he was separated from the four other vessels in the shrimp flotilla Aug. 1.

"The mothership said the fishing was bad," Gonzales said through an interpreter. "I told the mothership I would fish on other courses, but always staying seaward."

Gonzales said the procedure was for the four smaller vessels to fish at night and leave their catch with the refrigerated mothership. The larger vessel also handled navigation for the smaller ones because they only had rudimentary navigation equipment.

He testified for several hours Thursday and demonstrated to the court how he navigated with official Thursday said.

"What I'm personally upset about was that she was not very frank and honest about the settlement and I felt like she should have gone ahead with the lawsuit," said Dell Gibson, press coordinator for the Texas Women's Caucus.

The Texas Observer reported Thursday Mrs. Farenthold, Briscoe's Democratic opponent during 1972 and 1974 primary elections, settled the $500,000 suit for $125,000 and agreed to a stipulation that she and her attorneys make no statement to the press about the settlement.

The newspaper said Mrs. Farenthold reluctantly settled out of court because she could not find the funding for a long and expensive court fight.

"In the interest of reforming campaign fund raising practices, I would have definitely liked to have seen the lawsuit continued to test the new campaign law — not because Briscoe was personally involved and not because Farenthold was involved," said Ms. Gibson.

a sextant, compass and depth finder called a fathometer. He used charts made by the Department of Cartography in Havana which were on his vessel, the E82.

He said he left the mothership 22 miles offshore St. Joseph Island near Rockport, Tex. — well beyond the 12-mile territorial limit.

The boat was seized by the Coast Guard shortly before dawn Aug. 2 and taken to Corpus Christi.

Coast Guard pilot, Lt. David Belz, testified Thursday he flew over the Cuban shrimp trawler and confirmed it was within the 12-mile limit. He said he determined the E82 was seven to nine miles off the shore of St. Joseph Island, the inner boundary of the territorial limit.

Federal Campaign Funa May Lower

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential candidates dreaming of millions of dollars in federal campaign funds may be rudely awakened by the Federal Election Commission.

The FEC Thursday considered a proposal that in many cases would sharply reduce or eliminate matching federal funds for presidential candidates. Action on the plan was delayed until next week.

The proposal says that before a candidate can qualify for federal matching funds he first must deduct from his own money the amount it took to raise it.

The gross amount that Gov. George Wallace of Alabama has raised, for instance, is about $4 million. But he has spent $3 million in fund-raising and under the proposal only the net difference of $1 million would be matched.

Two FEC members said during the meeting they favored the proposal. But another, Thomas Harris, said it would raise such havoc he doesn't see any way out except by matching the gross amount raised.

"This would virtually wipe out several candidates" as far as federal funding is concerned, FEC counsel John Murphy said.

Murphy said an informal survey showed the Democratic candidates who claim to have qualified — Wallace, Rep. Morris Udall, former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia and Sens. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Henry Jackson of Washington — probably could not qualify if fund-raising costs were deducted.

Under the new campaign finance law, a presidential candidate can receive up to $5 million in federal matching funds for a primary campaign. Two commissioners said the candidates are spending so much to raise their share of the funds there would be nothing left to match if fund-raising was deducted.

"As much as two-thirds of the money raised is spent on raising it," FEC vice chairman Neil Staeber said. "If we don't do this way, the public would be putting up $5 million to match the $1.6 million that is left after fund-raising."

Under the proposal, candidates also would have trouble qualifying initially for federal financing. The law says that to qualify a candidate must raise $5,000 in each of 20 states in individual contributions of $250 or less.

"Without deducting fund-raising, you could qualify in a state by raising $5,000 at a chicken barbecue that cost you $4,900," said commissioner Vernon Thomson, who favors the new proposal.

Sissy Settles Out of Court

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Frances Farenthold, unable to fund a long and expensive fight in her campaign practices suit against Gov. Dolph Briscoe, collected $125,000 in an out of court settlement, the Texas Observer reported Thursday.

Mrs. Farenthold, who lost to Briscoe in the 1972 and 1974 Democratic primaries, announced the settlement jointly with Briscoe earlier this year and neither party has given details of the settlement. Mrs. Farenthold is currently out of the country and Briscoe's office said he would have no comment on the Observer story.

Kaye Northcott, editor of the bi-weekly Observer, said Jess Hay of Dallas, Briscoe's 1974 campaign chairman, wrote the check. Hay said the money came from a defense fund built by "some personal friends of mine."

Hay was interested in settling the suit, the Observer said but Briscoe and Joe Kilgore, an Austin campaign organizer and defendant in the suit, "would not even discuss the possibility."

"When her lawyers first broached the subject with Farenthold, she was angered and hurt by the proposal and wanted to continue the suit. The key to continuing, however, was additional funds and those funds apparently could not be raised. In the end, Farenthold reluctantly agreed to settle," Ms. Northcott said.

Attorney General John Hill recommended the settlement upon receiving information about the case from attorneys for Briscoe and Farenthold.

"I wouldn't settle the case if there was going to be any implication of a coverup," Bill

Brice, Hay's attorney, told the Observer.

Ms. Northcott said state Democratic party Chairman Calvin Guest sent an emissary to a Houston liberal leader last fall to propose a settlement before Briscoe was forced to give Farenthold's attorneys a detailed deposition.

"Farenthold and her attorneys angrily rebuffed the approach," Ms. Northcott said.

The Observer said it learned the details "by skulking around Texas trying to piece together a reliable account of the settlement of the Farenthold-Briscoe lawsuit. The lengthy article by Ms. Northcott said the settlement 'is a very painful subject' to Mrs. Farenthold.

"The story is necessarily complicated, involving a precarious tangle of legal niceties and political sensibilities. In many areas the story is incomplete, mainly because the settlement stipulated that Sissy Farenthold and her attorneys make no statement to the press about the case," the Observer said.

Mrs. Farenthold filed the suit in early 1974 before announcing her intention to challenge Briscoe for the second time in the Democratic primary. She finished second to Briscoe in 1972.

The suit charged Briscoe and his campaign managers — Hay and Kilgore — illegally raised $750,000 in conjunction with a Briscoe October, 1973, appreciation dinner before the governor had announced for re-election or designated a campaign manager.

Farenthold hurt her credibility in any future political race by settling out of court a lawsuit against Gov. Dolph Briscoe, a women's rights official Thursday said.

"What I'm personally upset about was that she was not very frank and honest about the settlement and I felt like she should have gone ahead with the lawsuit," said Dell Gibson, press coordinator for the Texas Women's Caucus.

The newspaper said Mrs. Farenthold reluctantly settled out of court because she could not find the funding for a long and expensive court fight.

"In the interest of reforming campaign fund raising practices, I would have definitely liked to have seen the lawsuit continued to test the new campaign law — not because Briscoe was personally involved and not because Farenthold was involved," said Ms. Gibson.

Lulu Will Discuss Relationship to God

"LuLu" of television's "Hee Haw" program will be in Pampa Aug. 24 to speak in M.K. Brown Auditorium beginning at 8 p.m.

Raised in an orphanage, LuLu upon graduation, went to work at the telephone company and soon found herself deep in the drug scene.

Two and one-half years later, after being fired from her job because of her cursing and foul language, LuLu was dancing at a night club one evening when someone remarked: "Hey, you're good. Listen, I'll pay you a dollar a pound to be Dallas' biggest go-go girl."

LuLu states "at that time, that was about $300 a week."

Later, without an audition or a screen test, she was invited to join the cast of "Hee Haw."

At the height of her television career, she was busted twice by narcotics agents for possession of marijuana. She was told "Hee Haw" could not use her anymore.

She was invited to attend Beverly Hills Baptist Church in Dallas.

Since then LuLu has traveled across American proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus Christ at conventions, rallies, churches and on television. The demand for personal appearances grew to the point where she has opened offices in Dallas and has organized a staff to assist her in her full-time Christian ministry.

While awaiting the outcome of her court cases, she has written gospel songs, recorded her first two albums under a three-year contract and has accepted an invitation to return to "Hee Haw."

Local churches sponsoring the program include Community Christian Center, First Assembly of God, Church of God, Calvary Assembly of God, Highland Pentecostal Holiness, First Pentecostal Holiness, Pampa Chapel, Bethel Assembly of God, Four Square Church and Lamar Full Gospel Assembly.

Old Traveling Tent Show To Be Featured

LUBBOCK. — Although many West Texans remember Harley Sadler and his traveling tent show, few can match the recollections of Paul Thardo Kalmbacher who was a member of the company that performed regularly throughout the Panhandle and South Plains region during the 1920s and 1930s.

Kalmbacher, whose professional name was Paul Thardo, toured many seasons with Sadler and participated in countless performances as a drummer and xylophonist and with band and as an actor.

Over the years, he and his wife, the former Daisy Lowe of Lubbock, have assembled some 10 scrapbooks of newspaper clippings, photographs, playbills, programs and other memorabilia concerning Sadler and the other show companies with which they have been associated.

The Kalmbachers, who now live in Fort Worth, recently placed their voluminous collection on loan with the Southwest Collection at Texas Tech to be used as resource material for the university's production of the New Harley Sadler Show next summer.

The Tech production scheduled to open July 4, 1976, as a highlight of Lubbock's bicentennial celebration, will be a tent show production featuring the plays, music and even some of the specialty acts presented by the late Harley Sadler, according to Prof. Clifford Ashby, director of the project. A four- to six-week schedule of performances is planned, in repertory format, so that several plays can be presented.

"The Kalmbacher collection will be invaluable in recreating authentic versions of these early-day shows," Dr. Ashby said. "Much of the material is about the Sadler show and will help to fill in some major gaps in the Sadler story."

Sadler, whose personal records were either lost or destroyed following his death in 1954, has been called "a West Texas phenomenon of folk hero proportions." In addition to providing family entertainment for more than 30 years to an area that had few contacts with the performing arts, he also was highly regarded as a citizen and businessman. When the movies and World War II drove the "rage operas" out of business, Ashby related, Sadler's popularity was such that he was elected state representative and, then-state senator from his home base in the Abilene-Sweetwater area.

Reaching back into the 19th Century, it includes personal mementoes, photographs and other records pertaining to various members of the "performing Thardos." Born on a wagon tent show in Pennsylvania, Kalmbacher is the third generation of a show business family.

His father and mother and his son were with him on the Sadler Show and, continuing the tradition, one of his grandsons currently is working in the Western Shootout at Six Flags.

"Overall," said Ashby, "the Kalmbacher Collection is certainly the most extensive collection that has thus far been uncovered in the research we are conducting at Tech concerning the history of the tent show."

Kalmbacher, a very active 78-year-old who can still lay the palms of both hands flat on the floor without bending his knees, says he would like to do one of his drum arrangements for the opening of the Tech show next summer.

In fact, he's already rehearsing.

Mrs. Hearst Subpoenaed By Federal Grand Jury

United Press International
Catherine Hearst, mother of fugitive heiress Patricia Hearst, has been subpoenaed to answer questions by a federal grand jury investigating her daughter's underground life.

Mrs. Hearst, wife of San Francisco Examiner President and Editor Randolph Hearst, said Thursday in San Francisco she was handed a subpoena by Charles Bates, the FBI agent who has directed the search for their daughter since her abduction from a Berkeley, Calif., apartment in February, 1974.

Patricia later joined her abductors, the Symbionese Liberation Army, and now is wanted on federal bank robbery charges.

Mrs. Hearst, ordered to appear before the grand jury in Harrisburg, Pa., Tuesday, said she did not know why she and not her husband was called as a witness. There were reports the panel was interested in learning of her dealings with Jack Scott, 33, and a possible $200,000 reward.

Scott, a controversial sports critic, has had several meetings with the Hearsts. He allegedly rented a Pennsylvania farmhouse which was used by Miss Hearst last summer as a hideout. It was alleged he sought the reward.

Scott has been called to testify before the same grand jury Sept. 4 and his wife, Micki, Monday. Both said they would refuse to cooperate in the investigation.

In a related development, Scott rejected a claim by his brother, Walter, 42, that he saw Miss Hearst Sept. 27 in their father's Las Vegas apartment. The father also denied the statement.

Three letters postmarked in Tripoli and a telephone bill for two collect calls were offered as evidence Walter was outside the United States at the time.

Walter, held by the FBI in protective custody, was described by his brother and father as an alcoholic who has been in "at least five mental hospitals" and is now providing agents with false information. They said he was trying to avoid prosecution for other crimes.

Jack and his father displayed three envelopes with postmarks from Tripoli on Sept. 12, 13 and 15. The two also produced a telephone bill showing collect calls from London on Sept. 26 and 27.

"W.J. Scott" was penned on the envelopes. Two of the three letters inside were addressed to "Ma and Pa." The third carried no salutation.

They said Walter apparently had gone to Tripoli to join an oil company.

Walter, in an interview with reporters arranged by the FBI in Philadelphia Wednesday night, said his brother knew the whereabouts of Miss Hearst and had offered to cooperate with the FBI in return for immunity and a large sum of money.

Jack and his father denied they had approached anyone about a reward and said they did not know Miss Hearst's whereabouts.

But, they said, the FBI had offered them immunity and up to $200,000 for information leading to the capture of Miss Hearst.

Micki Scott said in New York Thursday the attorney for her and her husband would try to have Walter placed on the witness stand in open court Monday.

Superior Court Judge Robert Wenke approved a suit Thursday calling for retraining of the pistol which was wrested from the hand of Sirhan Sirhan after a dozen eyewitnesses saw him firing bullets into the senator's body.

Sirhan, a Palestinian immigrant, was convicted of first-degree murder and is serving a life sentence at San Quentin.

Wenke set Sept. 11 for a hearing to decide the circumstances under which the ballistics evidence will be reexamined. There have been claims that bullets removed from Kennedy's body did not match one removed from a bystander wounded in the shooting.

The suit was brought by Paul Schrade, a United Auto Workers executive who was standing at Kennedy's side seven years ago and who also was hit by a bullet.

"It's a great victory because it opens up the possibility of finding out the truth in this case," Schrade said after the court ruling.

"There are very serious errors and gaps in the original testing by the Los Angeles police crime lab. Some of the evidence is missing and we've got to find out the answers to these questions if we're ever going to find out if there was another gunman in the room that night."

The Los Angeles district attorney's office, which prosecuted Sirhan and brought about his conviction in the 1969 trial, supported reexamination of the evidence but said it was concerned how such a procedure might affect Sirhan's status.

Robert Kennedy Assassination Case Reopened in California

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Robert Kennedy assassination case of 1968 has been ordered reopened to determine whether there may have been a second gunman in the Ambassador Hotel pantry where he was killed.

Superior Court Judge Robert Wenke approved a suit Thursday calling for retraining of the pistol which was wrested from the hand of Sirhan Sirhan after a dozen eyewitnesses saw him firing bullets into the senator's body.

Bangladesh Head Shot

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, the founder of Bangladesh, was shot to death by his own bodyguards today in a military coup that replaced him as president with a rightist lawyer considered to be pro-American, reports from Dacca said.

Reports reaching Calcutta, 150 miles southeast of the Bangladesh capital of Dacca, said Mujib was slain in the presidential palace along with his two nephews and Prime Minister Mansoor. He was replaced as president by Commerce and Foreign Trade Minister Khondakkar Mustaque Ahmed, 56, a one-time Mujib ally.

Ahmed, vice president of the ruling Awami League party that was instrumental in winning Bangladesh's independence from Pakistan, was sworn in as president by the acting Chief Justice Mohammed Hussain, Radio Dacca reported.

The radio said Ahmed received pledges of loyalty from the three chiefs of the armed forces, the inspector general of Dacca police and other law enforcement agencies and from the acting chief of Rakhi Bahini, the force that Mujib used as a private storm trooper force in his days as absolute ruler.

India, Pakistan and the Soviet Union all could find cause for worry in the change because of Ahmed's actions in the past. He fought Pakistan for independence and he has struggled to free Bangladesh from Indian and Soviet domination.

Radio broadcasts from Dacca said the coup came because of Mujib's inability to solve the staggering economic problems of the densely-populated country ravaged periodically by floods, drought, civil war and cyclones, a country plagued by corruption and a painfully inept bureaucracy.

Dacca radio said messages were received from people of all walks of life congratulating and hailing the armed forces for "taking over and serving at this critical hour."

"Special prayers were offered in the city's mosques and an unprecedented gathering thronged the morning Thanksgiving prayer in which the new president also took part," the radio said.

Radio Dacca said the name of the new regime had been changed from "The People's Republic of Bangladesh" to "The Islamic Republic of Bangladesh," a further evidence of Ahmed's break with the leftist past of the Soviet-backed Mujib. Ahmed is a professed rightist.

Reports reaching New Delhi said there was initial sporadic fighting around Dacca at time of the 5:30 a.m. coup but diplomatic reports said foreigners were not molested and the U.S. State Department said the 765 Americans including 111 government personnel and dependents were safe.

Radio broadcasts said the armed forces imposed a 24-hour curfew and martial law for an indefinite period, but later broadcasts said it had been lifted, indicating Dacca was calm.

Sheikh Mujib had been a hero of the Bangladesh in their fight for independence but his popularity waned because of the country's perennial crises and widespread government corruption. Last year he abolished the parliamentary system and installed himself as absolute ruler.

Bangladesh, with a population of 80 million, is probably the world's most crowded and underfed nation—the scene of almost continuous famine. It has accepted more than $2 billion in foreign aid since independence in 1971, mostly just to keep its citizens alive—more than 30,000 persons starved to death in the last three months of 1974.

No Strike in Pampa

The mess in this picture was not due to sanitation workers strike. The cause is unknown — maybe a big dog, maybe a little vandalism, possibly a homeowner who has poor aim. But it is an eyesore and it is in Pampa. City residents may soon be paying $4.50 per month instead of the current $3 fee for having their garbage collected. The raise is part of the City Commission's proposed budget for next year.

Bar Association Turns

Down Amnesty Proposals

MONTREAL (UPI) — The American Bar Association has turned down proposals for amnesty that would have encouraged 30,000 draft evaders and deserters to return to the United States from Canada.

In its closing session Wednesday, the ABA house of delegates, governing body for the nation's largest legal organization, rejected two proposals calling on President Ford to extend amnesty to Vietnam war deserters and draft dodgers.

One proposal backed unconditional amnesty. The other, introduced by Albert Jenner, former chief minority counsel for the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment inquiry last year, asked Ford to grant unconditional amnesty limited to men who avoided service because of "principled objections to the war."

Parents and wives of men who died or lost limbs in Vietnam spoke on both sides of the issue. But opposition to the resolutions was apparent at the outset as delegates trooped to the podium to declare that unconditional amnesty in any form would dishonor those who died in Vietnam.

Herbert Johnson, a delegate from Atlanta, typified opposition when he said "we as lawyers, of all people, should not encourage disrespect of laws that were in effect at the time they were broken."

ABA resolutions have no legal effect but carry the weight of the organization.

A resolution urging legalization of prostitution was unanimously deferred for consideration until the house meets in February in Philadelphia.

Man Injured In Accident

Randall Higgins, 26, of Pampa received a fractured leg Thursday night in a motorcycle accident near the National Guard Armory.

He was in satisfactory condition this morning at Highland General Hospital here. The accident was investigated by officers of the Texas Highway Patrol.

Accident Causes Injury

A Pampa woman is scheduled to be charged with driving while intoxicated today following an accident which involved three cars and a mobile home, and resulted in one injury.

The driver was allegedly traveling at a high rate of speed, when the vehicle turned off Finley onto E. Frederic, swerved across the median into the west bound lane, then back across the median into the east bound lane.

The vehicle reportedly skidded back across the street, jumped the curb and hit two vehicles, knocking one vehicle into a third vehicle pushing it into a mobile home.

Pampa Police Department officer Wayne Maynard investigated the accident. John Roy Dean of 719 Zimmers was treated and released at Highland General Hospital.

Stay in Jail

BELLEVILLE, Kan. (UPI) — Ragnar Harvey of Philadelphia says he'll gladly spend the rest of his vacation in the Republic County jail to protest the 55 mile an hour speed limit.

Harvey, a computer programmer, was arrested 11 days ago for driving 70 miles an hour in a 55 mph zone.

Washington Watch Lloyd Bentsen Relies On Money from Texans

By TINA MAY
Pampa News
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Despite Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's claim that his 1976 presidential campaign is national in scope, financial records show almost half of the individual contributions he has received this year have come from Texans.

According to reports filed with the Federal Election Commission (FEC), Bentsen supporters in Texas have contributed nearly $230,000 of the $474,000 he has collected nationally since January.

Since 1973, Bentsen has collected a total of $1.96 million, including funds from loans, interest and sales. He has received $1.5 million in contributions from individuals during that period.

Records also show that in 1973 and 1974, the bulk of Bentsen's campaign bankroll came from Texans. Larry Letscher, comptroller for the Bentsen campaign said 95 per cent of the 1973 and 1974 contributions came from Texans.

Most of the Texas funds collected this year came from residents of Houston, Dallas and McAllen — part of the valley area Bentsen represented as a congressman — whose occupations were listed in the report as ranchers, lawyers, and real estate and corporation employees.

Ten per cent of the Texas funds, or more than $25,000 of the contributions, were from individuals listed as independent oil operators or those employed in oil-related enterprises.

Federal campaign laws limit political donations to $1,000 from individuals and $5,000 from political groups.

Although the laws also prohibit corporations from contributing to candidates, several employees from the same corporations or firms have contributed to Bentsen individually.

For example, six representatives of Arco Steel Corp. in Houston, the fifth largest steel company in the country, contributed a total of $3,000, including $500 each from vice president George Hansen, and Robert E.E. Harris, general manager of the oil industry division.

In another instance, three of the four partners of the Houston law firm of Liddell, Sapp, Zively, and Brown contributed $1,000 each. Another member of the firm, R.B. La Boon also added $1,000 to the Bentsen campaign.

Closer to home, five members of Bentsen's family are also listed as contributing $1,000 each. They are the senator's brother, Kenneth, a Houston architect; a cousin, two nieces; and a nephew. One niece, Karen Bentsen, is listed as a student under the occupation section of the report.

Another large sum came from R.D. Winn, president of the retail drug company Medico Inc., and his family. A Pharr resident, Winn and his wife Betty, who is Bentsen's sister, and their three children are each listed as $1,000 contributors. Vice president of the drug company, William R. Duck and his wife are each listed as giving the allowed maximum.

Other large contributors include: Denton Cooley, Houston heart surgeon, $1,000; H.W. Finck, cigar manufacturer and former chairman of the Texas legislature's appropriations committee, $500; Paul Thayer of Dallas, chairman of the board of LTV Corp., which handles defense contracts and aerospace designs, $1,000; and Searcy Bracewell, a Houston attorney and former state senator, now a lobbyist for conservative business interests, $1,000.

Also contributing were William Fredman, president of the Port Arthur Towing Co. and member of the Texas Offshore Terminal Commission, $1,000; Kenneth Schnitzer of Houston, chairman of Century Development Corp., a large real estate firm, $1,000; Mike McKool, a liberal Texas state senator and three-time Democratic congressional candidate, $500; and J.C.

Martin, mayor of Laredo, and his wife, $1,000 each.

In addition, more than 600 other Bentsen supporters contributed sums of less than $1,000 but more than $100 this year to the senator's presidential campaign.

Although Bentsen officially declared his candidacy in February of this year, FEC reports show that he has been collecting money since 1973, under various campaign organization titles.

Bentsen's fundraising drive was launched two years ago with "A Fall Evening With The Bentsens Committee." That year he collected $432,000 in individual contributions, more than three-quarters of it from a fund-raising dinner in late December.

Last year through the "Bentsen Committee Fund," contributions totaled $674,000.

Other $1,000 contributors included V.P. Patterson, banker, Amarillo.

WINDSOR, England (UPI) — Under the spreading chestnut trees beside the queen's most staid circus-sized tents filled with an Englishman's dearest passion, roses.

The English rose is a national mania. Or so it seems each summer when every park and suburban or village street is heavy with the sight and scent of the queen of blooms.

The 100-year-old Royal National Rose society, with more than 65,000 members, is the nation's biggest gardening group. It has more than 1,200 local affiliated societies, and every one holds an annual show.

The Royal Windsor Rose and Horticultural show is one. This year, as every year, it spread its tents on the queen's own meadows in the private grounds of Windsor Castle. For something which expressed a national mania it fairly oozed gentility.

Matrons in printed silks strolled from the tea tent to sit decorously by a lily-filled moat under the frowning battlements of the world's largest inhabited castle.

Dancers and handbell ringers performed on the grass. A school band tooted atrociously to ringing applause. Pony rides carried children past Windsor Bowmen arching arrows across the drought-browned lawns.

But the business of the day was roses — big ones, small ones, new ones, favorite ones, milk-white roses and those of a deep lavender blue.

"We have fewer roses this year than usual, I fear," apologized the show manager, a harried-looking gentleman counting coins in the secretary's tent. "It's the drought, you know."

Several weeks had passed without rain, a drought which brittle thorny stems and tumbled parched petals far ahead of time. British roses are not bred for drought.

Most are bred in Northern Ireland, in fact, simply because rainless spells are even rarer there than here. Nearly all new ones come from two breeders — the McGredys and the Dicksons — who discard some 100,000 seedlings for every new variety they market.

Each new variety must pass a three-year test in the biggest rose garden in Britain — the National Rose society's eight acres of nothing but roses. Its garden blazes with upward of 35,000 bushes of about 1,500 rose varieties.

Once certified by the society, a new rose can be sold to the legion of British gardeners who pour out $18 million a year on roses.

Few of their products wind up in more glamorous settings than the show under Windsor Castle's walls. But the Windsor show, like most rose shows, was no just roses all the way.

There were delphiniums and pinks, cactus and cakes, rhubarb and home-made wine — one gentleman living in the castle entered "black mead" and fig wine with printed labels reading, "Schloss Windsor."

"Flowers of every kind mingled with roses in a tent full of fancy flower arrangements, all on musical themes."

"Moonlight Sonata" was interpreted in cool curves of ivory white roses. First prize in the "Top of the Pops" category went to an arrangement in an electric guitar. A ceramic cowboy held up one bunch of "The Yellow Rose of Texas," and "Bye Bye Blues" arrangements incorporated trumpets, or, in one case, champagne.

A Women's Institute tent demonstrated home crafts like patchwork and paper sculpture and chair caning. One stall sold trinkets to benefit the Save the Children fund, and the tent judged the prettiest stand in the show displayed bird pictures made of feathers.

Near the screened-off members' enclosure — cucumber sandwiches and a flourishing bar — stood a marquee with five ranks of silver cups and trophies, prizes for the winners among the show's 750 entries.

Lady Egworthy, wife of Windsor Castle's governor, handed over the golden rose of the Royal Windsor Rose trophy and the tub-sized cup King George V donated in 1913.

Just a Ride

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Standing at a bus stop after a rain shower, juror Anthony Green was most grateful for the nice gentleman's offer to drive him home and he accepted.

"It had been raining and I was just standing there. He said, 'Are you stranded for a ride?' I said yes," Green said of the incident which occurred after jury selection Monday.

What Green did not know was the solicitous driver was Wilson Smiley, a defendant in a heroin case Green and five other jurors were supposed to try.

Circuit Court Judge Gordon Duncan declared a mistrial in the case and set a new trial for Smiley next Monday.

Tricks Offered for Restoring, Remodeling Historic Houses

United Press International
An old house can offer much in good living—space, charm, established trees and plantings—often at a good price. But buying an old house is akin to acquiring a spouse.

Like all long-term relationships, it should be entered into with your eyes wide open," says Clem Labine, editor of The Old House Journal.

The most important part of buying an old house, Labine says, is knowing just what you are getting into. Exciting as it can be to restore and live in an old house, it can be a trap for the unwary. Behind a charming facade, a beautiful window, lovely fireplace and all that space, may lurk a host of mechanical and structural faults that will tax your patience and empty your bank account.

Just about any flaw in a house can be corrected—if you are willing to invest enough time and money. The trick, Labine says, is in balancing the physical deformities of an old house against your reserves of cash and energy.

Once you are interested in a house, Labine recommends an inspection tour, dressed in old clothes "so you" can closely inspect important places like the cellar and underneath porches. You should be equipped with:

Flashlight for poking into dark places.

Penknife for probing old wood, masonry.

Small magnet to check out water lines. A magnet will not stick to brass or copper which is longer lasting than galvanized iron. A magnet won't stick to lead either. This will be soft and silvery when scratched with penknife and probably will have to be replaced.

Plumbline or a string with a small weight to determine sagging or settling. This is not necessarily a major drawback since almost all old houses settle haphazardly, but the reasons for it should be determined. Some require no remedy, others can be fixed with a few extra supporting posts; others may require major foundation surgery.

A marble. Rolled across a floor it will test for tilt or sag.

Binoculars. Useful to inspect roof or other areas you may not be able to reach.

Pad and pencil and a checklist.

The Journal checklist itemizes 73 points to examine when considering any pre-1914 house, and emphasizes the importance of an evaluation by reputable professional house inspector, usually at a cost between $50 and $150, when you are seriously considering a purchase.

Some of the highlights:

ROOF—A sound, tight roof is the first line of defense against the No. 1 enemy of an old house: water. If it is in bad shape, you should plan on repairing or replacing it right away.

ATTIC—Look for signs of leaks, such as dark water stains, on underside of roof, especially around chimneys, valleys and eaves. Check for adequate venting. Mildew on the underside of roof boards is a sign of poor ventilation.

FOUNDATION—A dug cellar with wood sills resting solidly on a masonry foundation well above ground level is desirable. Some old structures have "mud sills," heavy beams resting directly on the ground. These eventually have to be replaced, a major undertaking.

CELLAR—Should be checked carefully for signs of rot or termites, flooding or dampness, for indications of sagging floors, rotted support posts or rigged props to shore up weak flooring.

WASTE DISPOSAL—Municipal sewers are best. Check carefully on septic systems. Clogged drain fields, overloaded septic tanks are sources of trouble. Repairs or a new system may be expensive and, if new tile fields are necessary, be sure there is room for them to be located properly, especially if the house is supplied by well or spring water.

Once you're sure your old house won't be more than you can handle, a money-gobbling trap, restoring it and living in it can be exciting, creative and satisfying.

Pass Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♥.

East captured the opening heart lead with his queen, after which he cashed the ace of hearts.

To trick three he led the five of hearts, on which South followed suit with the jack.

West, quite naturally, ruffed with his seven—spot, for otherwise South's jack would have won the trick. Dummy overruffed the seven with the jack.

Declarer next led dummy's four of spades. East played the ten, and South took the trick to East's king of spades, plus a diamond to one of the defenders.

So he went down one.

East made a good play when he led a low heart at trick three (instead of the high king). In so doing, he forced West to ruff South's jack, with the resultant overruff by Dummy. Had East played the king of hearts at trick three, West probably would not have ruffed, and dummy's four of trumps would have captured the trick. A successful trump finesse would then have been taken, thus avoiding the loss of a trump trick.

Declarer's mistake came at trick three, when he overruffed West's seven—spot with the board's jack. This play cost him a trump trick. What he should have done instead was to have discarded dummy's six of diamonds. This play could never have cost anything, because South's losing diamond could later be ruffed in dummy. At worst, South would be trading a heart ruff now for a diamond ruff later.

With West's seven of trumps winning trick three, West would probably now lead a diamond (no other return would change the outcome), dummy's king capturing the trick. Next would come the queen of spades, and the finesse taken. Another spade lead would now pick up East's king.

It would then become a routine matter to cash the diamond ace, and lead South's remaining diamond, which would be ruffed in dummy. Thus, by playing correctly, and resisting the urge to overruff West at trick three, South would have won the game and rubber.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal was played, the East-West defenders cooperated nicely, and the result was the defeat of South's vulnerable game contract. In the post-mortem analysis, it was revealed that declarer could have overcome the good defensive play, and fulfilled his contract.

Pickles and relishes certainly can add a lot to warm weather meals. And now's a good time to plan for the ones you'll want to make when your garden is ready to harvest.

Museum Pickles

NOTE: These pickles are made each year and served at the annual barbecue at Square House Museum in Panhandle. The recipe was submitted to the Square House Museum Cook Book by Jo Randel and also by Mrs. Leo Latta who suggests it be used for tomato and watermelon pickles.

Dissolve 2 cups of lime in 2 gal. of cold water. Pour over 7 pounds of washed, sliced cucumbers. Let stand 24 hours and wash at least 7 times to remove all the lime. Drain and cover with cold water at least four hours or overnight. Drain.

Make a syrup of:

4½ lbs. sugar

1 tablespoon celery seed

2 quarts of cider vinegar

2 tablespoons pickling salt

Spice bag of 1 tablespoon mixed spices and 1 tablespoon whole cloves.

Pour this syrup cold over the drained pickle slices and let stand overnight. The next morning cook slowly until the pickles become clear. Seal.

Old-Fashioned Pickles (14 day)

2 gal. cucumbers split lengthwise or small cucumbers whole but stick knife through center.

1 pt. salt

boiling water to cover

Place cucumbers in a stone vessel, pour salt solution over them. Let stand 7 days.

Drain cucumbers and cover with clean boiling water. Let stand 24 hours.

Drain and cover with boiling water to which 2 oz. of alum has been added. Let this stand for 24 hours.

Make syrup of:

2 qts. of cider vinegar

5 lbs. sugar

Cloves

Whole spice and stick cinnamon

Boil syrup and pour pickles, drain and reheat for 4 days. On 5th day, can pickles hot into well sterilized jars.

NOTE: This recipe is compliments of Mrs. Bob Roberts, and was published in The Square House Museum Cook Book.

The following Pear Relish, Black Pepper Pickles and Pickled Okra recipes are also featured in the Museum Cook Book.

Pear Relish

By Milly Bunton

30 medium pears, grind fine

12 bell peppers part red, grind fine

12 onions, grind fine

3 hot peppers, grind fine

3 cups sugar

2 cups vinegar

2 tablespoons celery seeds

2 sm. jars French's prepared mustard

2 tablespoons mustard seed

Cook all ingredients for 5 minutes. Add fruit, cook 10 minutes. Half of the recipe makes about 8 pints. This is a good way to use Del Rio garden pears.

Black Pepper Pickles

By Jo Randel

1 gal. cider vinegar

1 cup sugar

1 cup salt (Pickling salt)

1 cup black pepper

½ cup dry mustard

Pour over washed, pickling sized whole cucumbers which have been packed in jars. Pour this mixture over cold and seal. Pickles require six weeks to make.

Pickled Okra

By Faye Allen

Equal parts of vinegar and water that equals 1 quart. ½ cup salt.

Bring to boil.

Pack okra in jars with 2 garlic buttons, 1 hot pepper, 4 peppercorns. Pour hot mixture over the packed jars and seal. For this amount of mixture, use very small jars that will seal good. Pint jars are fine, too.

Pepper Relish

Grind 12 each of green and red sweet bell peppers and 12 onions. Scald the ground onions and peppers and let stand 10 minutes, then drain. Add 4 cups sugar, 4 cups vinegar, and 2 tablespoons salt. Boil 20 minutes or longer, until mixture is thoroughly cooked and is thickened. Pour into hot, sterilized jars and seal. For a small amount, make only one-fourth this amount. Makes about 8 pints, (or 2 pints for smaller amount.)

Mix well, chill two days. Makes two cups.

If you would rather not use gallon jars, you can put peppers in quart, pint, or odd jars, but do save your used vinegar, it can be used again next year. This recipe came in so good that we have quit using cucumber pickles of any kind.

Slice and green tomatoes. Slice tomatoes, salt and let set about 2 hours. Then squeeze the water. Chop the cabbage (most people grind it, but some prefer it best chopped).

VICKIE CARTER

Slates Art Show

Recipient of a $250 scholarship from the Pampa Fine Arts Association, Vickie Carter, will exhibit a one-woman art show Aug. 17-23 at the Pampa Fine Arts Gallery. Miss Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Carter, 1160 Terrace, studied art at Pampa Junior High School, Pampa High School and took private lessons from Mrs. Janice Sackett and Mrs. Ruth Barrett. She says oil is her favorite painting medium. Planning to make a career of art in either the teaching or commercial field, Miss Carter will attend Phillips University in Enid, Okla., this fall. She will display 20 to 25 works of art including paintings, pottery, a rug and bedspread at The Gallery from 2-5 p.m. through the week. The public is invited to a reception from 2-5 p.m. Sunday honoring the artist.

Old Cracker Jacks

CHICAGO (UPI)—The city of Chicago has issued tickets for deceptive practices against Borden Inc. and four retail stores, charging the manufacturer and stores were selling outdated Cracker Jacks.

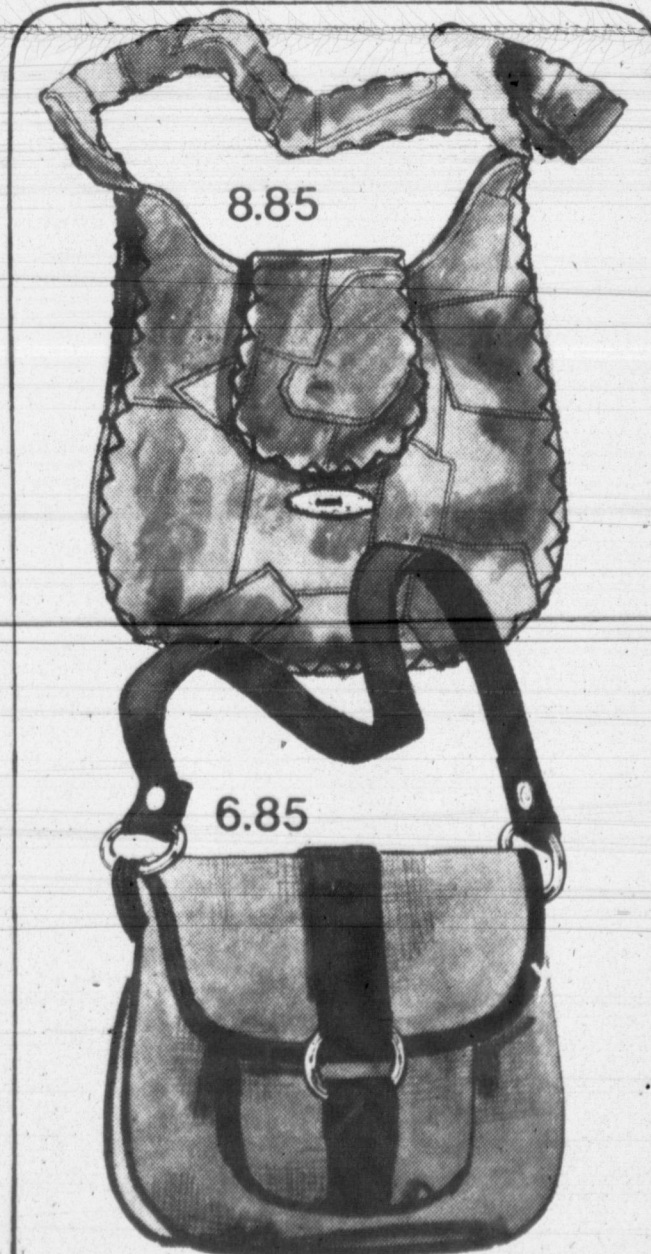

Commissioner Jane Byrne of the Consumer Sales Department said Wednesday some of the old Cracker Jack boxes were being offered for sale 18 months after the expiration date on the box.

Mrs. Byrne said Borden had pasted small red labels over the expiration dates. The labels said, "The more you eat, the more you want."

However, she said Borden had promised to remove all expired Cracker Jack boxes from retail outlets.

A Borden spokesman said there had been "a misunderstanding" over the expiration dates. He referred all further queries to Mrs. Byrne.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Did you ever have chapped hands and nothing seemed to soothe them?

Try squeezing the rind of a grapefruit until the oil comes out of it. Then rub the outside rind on your hands.

What a nice, smooth feeling it gives them, or it does for me, and I have the roughest hands in the whole wide world, I do believe.

Mrs. O.E.G.

Just couldn't believe this would work so rushed to the kitchen to get a grapefruit.

Was I amazed how soft my hands felt and not sticky!

Of course, the office had an aroma of grapefruit from all us gals trying this great hint. It was lovely.

Heloise

LETTER OF TRUTH

Dear Heloise:

A little girl weighing approximately 50 pounds (or less) can accomplish the impossible feat of wrapping 170 pounds of bone and muscle (namely her daddy) around her little finger.

Mrs. Charles Woods

Dear Heloise:

A young mother told me the way she fixes apples for her two small children.

She peels, cores and halves several apples. Wraps each half separately in plastic wrap and puts them in the refrigerator. When the children want a snack, they can get half an apple for themselves.

The wrap keeps the apple from turning dark.

Nellie Ingram

Dear Heloise:

When I buy a new box of pepper, salt or chocolate, etc., I turn the box upside on the shelf then I'm not picking up the new box before the old one is finished.

Mrs. Walter Hallowell

Dear Heloise:

When my husband was hospitalized, adding to his distaste for food was the tepid state of the beverages served.

So I bought one of those electrical gadgets you plug in and put in the cup of coffee, tea or soup and it was hot in an instant.

Mrs. D.H.

Dear Heloise:

I am a person who hates to waste anything. So many times when I bake I have cake batter or corn meal batter left over.

I put the leftover batter in a greased small individual baking dishes and bake.

This way I don't waste any batter and can freeze the individual cakes for another time.

Mrs. Don Simmons

Dear Heloise:

I buy colored short-sleeved shirts in the summer for my son. In the winter he has a few white long-sleeved shirts which he wears underneath the colored ones.

This gives the layered look along with warmth and also allows more wear with the summer shirts which they grow out of during the winter.

He also uses the lighter short-sleeved knit shirts as T-shirts during the winter time to obtain more use out of them.

Mrs. G. McCracken

Dear Heloise:

For your leaf-collecting excursions, carry along an old magazine and a pencil.

Carefully insert the leaf specimens between the pages and write on the top of the page any pertinent information about the tree or its location.

This method not only preserves the leaves until you get home, but also makes identification much easier.

C.E.W.

THIS COLUMN is written for you the housewife and homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem, write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer all individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

THE JENKINS FAMILY
...Gospel Singers

Gospel Group Sings Saturday

On Saturday, the Jenkins Family from Sharon Springs, Kan. will perform at the First Pentecostal Holiness Church, 1700 Alcock, for an evening of gospel singing. The service will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Jenkins Family have sung the gospel from California to Virginia.

For the past three years this group has been regularly featured on KLOE T.V. channel 10, in Goodland, Kan.

Marvin and Wanda Jenkins sang together before the children were born. Now, Dave 21, his wife Debbie, Bonita 19, Donita 17, Paul 15, and Vonita 12, have all joined the team.

The group consists of its own musicians with Bonita at the piano, Dave on the bass guitar, Marvin on the standard electric guitar, and Vonita playing the drums.

The Jenkins Family has recorded several albums and will have them available for those who wish to purchase them.

Rev. Albert Maggard is pastor of the church.

Rev. Hall To Lead Services

Filling the pulpit for Capt. Bart Deggs of the Salvation Army Sunday, will be Rev. Jim Hall, formerly of the Community Church of Skellytown.

Rev. Hall will speak at the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services.

Treasure Hunt Will Conclude Youth Activities

A treasure hunt today will conclude this week's Youth Summer Happening activities sponsored by Barrett Baptist Church, 903 E. Beryl.

All interested teenagers are invited to participate in the hunt. The group will be leaving from the church by bus at 7:30 p.m. The Bible study following the hunt will be "Where Your Treasure Is," taught by Clark Thompson.

Earlier activities this week included a Guys - bury Bake - Off and Muscle - Gal contest Monday night at the home of Larry Johnson, 2100 Coffee. The boys brought items they baked themselves and were awarded prizes accordingly.

The Grand Prize, Buddy Crocker Award, went to Michael Smith - Terry Hair and Mark Davis took second and third respectively. Biggest Flop Award went to Bruce Ray, and Alvin Morse received the Galloping Cramp Award.

Winners of the Muscle - Gal contest, were first place, Francis Hair, second place, Shelly Thompson, and third place Kathie Sober. Topic of Bible study was "The Formula for Success."

Tuesday night the group met at the home of Bert Queen, 2417 Comanche, for a Hawaii Luau. Bible study taught by Pastor Jackie Lee was "The Ultimate Trip."

The World's Largest Banana Split highlighted the Wednesday night activities. Bible study was "The Superlatives of Life."

"The Christian's Wardrobe" was Thursday night's Bible study topic. The group met in City Park for a Hobo costume party and hot - dog cook - out.

Youth Conduct Worship Services In Longview

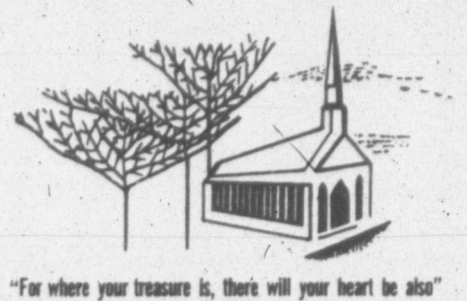

A Youth Mission Team from Barrett Baptist Church conducted worship services last weekend at Longview Baptist Church, South of Muleshoe.

Pastor of the Longview Church is the Rev. Robert Shugart, formerly of Pampa. The group of young people and sponsors arrived by church bus Saturday and conducted singing and testimony services that night. The Sunday morning service consisted of ministry through the use of puppets, drama, singing, testimonies, and preaching.

Youth preachers were Todd Chumbley and Travis Jennings.

Other young people participating were Cindy Olson, Keith Fisher, Terry Hair, Kim Rich, Terri Edwards, Kaye Hair, Shelly Thompson, and Francis Hair.

An investment in Your Future ...ATTEND CHURCH

"YOU TOOK MY PICTURE... AND I WASN'T READY!"

How concerned we are with the image we present to others! And it is right that we should be. How mightily we influence others. It is so important that the self we present is one that will influence others for good.

With guidance from God we will be ready to present ourselves to the world in such a manner as to sway others toward God and all that is worthwhile and good.

"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God," come to His Church.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Racial Incidents Persist

By United Press International

Black leaders, responding to several days of racial outbreaks, are trying to ease tensions in racial incidents in Massachusetts and Ohio. But despite some cooling off, five persons were injured Thursday in Boston, and firebombing and minor skirmishes were reported in Elyria, Ohio.

Boston NAACP President Thomas Atkins was among a group of black leaders who toured sections of predominantly black Roxbury where youths had thrown rocks and bottles and occasionally attacked whites the four previous nights.

In Elyria, Ohio, several black leaders joined police in trying to persuade youths on the city's south side to go home peacefully. Police and highway patrolmen cruised the streets Thursday night to prevent a third night of the disturbances.

Leisure Lodge Now Member Of Association

The Leisure Lodge of Pampa, Kentucky Street, was accounted as a member of the Texas Nursing Home Association by the TNHA Executive Board at their August meeting in Tyler. Joy Aileen Statler will serve as the representative of the home in TNHA activities.

By becoming a member of the Texas Nursing Home Association the Leisure Lodge Nursing Home has agreed to abide by the TNHA Code of Ethics and to join with the state organization in its efforts to raise nursing home standards and to improve patient care in Texas.

TNHA is the professional association of licensed nursing and custodial care homes in Texas. Its membership is made up of proprietary and non-proprietary homes. All members of TNHA are also affiliated with the American Nursing Home Association.

that apparently were triggered by the fatal shooting of a black burglarly suspect by a white policeman.

The latest injuries in Boston came in fighting and rock throwing incidents in South Boston, Mattapan and Roxbury. It raised the total injured to more than 100 since unrest developed Sunday during a confrontation at a "swim-in" at a predominantly white South Boston beach.

The rock throwing prompted police to seal off traffic to three low-income housing projects in Roxbury. But by early today the areas were reopened.

"It's been much better than it has been," said police information officer George Landry. "It's been relatively quiet."

The Committee Against Racism, a multiracial group, called off a planned weekend "wade-in" at South Boston's Carson Beach, scene of the confrontation Sunday.

In Thursday's fighting, a black man was pulled from a car and beaten by a group of white youths in South Boston, police said. John Wyman, 37, was treated at Boston City Hospital and released.

A white man, George Blaney 54, was treated for lacerations after he was beaten by three black youths near his Mattapan home. Police reported a group of girls stoning cars in that area.

Two firemen were stoned by blacks when they responded to a school fire in Roxbury and another man was treated after he was beaten by eight black youths in that section.

In the north central Ohio city of Elyria, police reported a small firebombing at a bar south of town Thursday night and said shots were fired in the area. No injuries were reported.

Kansas Governor Compares Alligators to Bureaucrats

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — There aren't any alligators on the flat Kansas prairies so a new federal regulation protecting the endangered reptile wouldn't seem to apply to the state.

But Gov. Robert Bennett decided there were some marked similarities between the American alligator and the federal bureaucrat.

"It now appears abundantly clear to me that there is a high probability your regulation is designed to protect federal bureaucrats as it has been suggested the comparisons are quite obvious," the governor said in a letter to the U.S. Department of Interior.

"Both the alligator and the federal bureaucrat have the capability of devouring their prey both thoroughly and expeditiously. Likewise, both have extremely thick hides totally impervious to outside force just as neither are known for their beauty."

The governor recently received notice of an Interior Department regulation dealing with the American alligator. Alligator mississippiensis. The detailed sections spelled out states' responsibilities in protecting the vanishing reptile and invited comments. Bennett has long been a critic of the federal government's encroachment into state government.

The governor said he was especially interested in a section giving the director power to expand protection whenever he determines specific wildlife is neither endangered nor threatened but should be protected because it resembles endangered or threatened species.

"I have given this matter a great deal of thought realizing the unique propensities of federal bureaucrats to enlarge their baronies and fiefdoms at each opportunity and frequently without much reason or justification," Bennett said. "I am constrained to note that as a result of these federal intrusions through bureaucratic expansions the most endangered and threatened species are clearly now the citizens and the states. "While to my knowledge neither bears much resemblance to the Alligator mississippiensis their plights are similar which hopefully could give a modicum of encouragement to you to embrace them with your protective governmental bureaucratic wings," Bennett said.

The governor said if the director does not consider the citizens or the state sufficiently similar to the alligator to extend protection, he will continue to keep an eye out for any other Kansas wildlife which might qualify.

Ford Motors May Take Government to Court

DETROIT (UPI) — The Ford Motor Co. may go to court in the first test of the government's right to order automakers to recall and pay for repairs on defective automobiles.

It involves an order from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration Thursday that Ford recall and repair about 625,000 1968 and 1969 Ford Mustangs and Mercury Cougars because of defects which it said could cause partial collapse of the front seat.

Ford said the government agency was "mistaken" in labeling the breakage of seat-back pivot pins a safety defect and said it was considering a court challenge — its only recourse under a new safety law enacted last December.

"Ford built more than 800,000 of these vehicles in 1968 and 1969 and all are now between six and eight years old and have traveled an estimated 50 billion miles," Ford's chief lawyer, H.R. Nolte Jr., said in a statement.

A spokesman said more than 600,000 of the vehicles are still on the road.

"Only six claims of relatively minor property damage and 19 claims of minor injury — of the aching back and sore neck variety — have resulted from alleged pin failures," he said.

Owners of the vehicles will have to be notified even if Ford decides to contest the government action. The law required

Ford to advise them of the alleged defect and to note the matter is in the courts.

Previously, the NHTSA had the power only to suggest that vehicles be recalled for repairs and order the company to notify owners of an alleged defect, a procedure General Motors has successfully fought in court. There was no authority to order the vehicles recalled or repaired.

The recall, if Ford does not contest it, would not be the largest by the No. 2 automaker, second only to a 4.1 million-cars recall for the repair of inexpensive pieces of plastic used to help anchor shoulder belts.

The industry's largest recall involved 6.7 million GM cars with defective engine mounts.

Meredith To Stage 'People of '76'

FRITCH — A National Park Service Bicentennial Living History presentation, "People of '76", will be staged at Lake Meredith Recreation Area Wednesday, Aug. 27, according to Bill Dyer, superintendent at Lake Meredith. This performance will be the only Texas showing during the 1975 tour, which opened Aug. 5 in Boston and will close Sept. 14 in San Francisco.

The free presentation, being hosted by Lake Meredith Recreation Area and the Fritch Bicentennial Committee, will be in the Sanford-Yake area one mile west of the marina.

Two different presentations are scheduled for afternoon and evening. Between 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. spectators will be able to visit a small colonial town, called New Bristol, and a military encampment nearby. Visitors will be able to chat with the citizens of the colonial town, populated by a cast of 56 young performers and stage technicians. They will see some of the crafts which sustained the people and the army during the struggle and have a chance to participate in the political arguments which characterized the time," Dyer said. "At the military camp, the visitor will be able to see soldiers of the Continental Army going about their daily duties." He noted that the military drill will include firing of the unit's "grasshopper" cannon.

The evening performance in a theatrical format, will be from 9 to 10:30 p.m.

Both productions reflect the lives of ordinary Americans on the military front and at home during the Revolutionary period. The great names of history are notably absent for this is the story of the "People of '76."

Little's Seven Lawyers Presents 7-hour Summary

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — For nearly seven hours, the third-floor courtroom where Joan Little is on trial for murder rang with impassioned scripture, biting sarcasm and claims of divine guidance.

Seven lawyers left scarcely a phrase unturned Thursday in their efforts to sway the jury of six blacks and six whites, who take Miss Little's fate into their hands today after the judge's instructions.

Miss Little's chief defender, trying to convince the jury she stabbed jailer Clarence Allgood to death to stop his sexual abuse, announced God had been in charge of the defense.

Prosecutors, who claim the 21-year-old black woman killed the white jailer in a callous escape plot, quoted scripture interspersed with sarcasm.

Miss Little faces a maximum of life in prison if convicted of killing the 62-year-old Allgood, whose body was found nude from the waist down, stabbed a dozen times with an icepick, in the cell where she had been awaiting appeal on a larceny conviction.

The trial began on a first-degree murder charge, which carries a mandatory death sentence. The judge reduced it to second-degree murder when the state rested its case.

Assistant State Attorney General Lester Chalmers said Miss Little's flight from Beaufort County jail in Washington, N.C., showed she was guilty.

"The wicked flee when no man pursueth," he quoted from the Book of Proverbs, "but the righteous stand as bold as a lion." "Joan Little has violated the law of God," he said. "Joan Little has violated the law of North Carolina."

"Where was the law?" sneered Jerry Paul, the chief defense lawyer. "The law was back there forcing her to perform an unnatural sex act."

Paul, a 33-year-old native of the little town of Washington who practices in Durham, N.C., said "I believe that this case was chosen, not by me, but by God, or the great Spirit, whatever you want to call it."

"It's just because of Divine intervention that we found out things in the order that we did," said Paul. "It came to me in a dream that they were gonna try to use a phony phone call. It came to me in a dream. You can call it what you want."

Paul referred to a major unresolved point in the trial. The state produced a telephone operator who testified she handled a collect call from Miss Little about an hour before Allgood was stabbed to death with an icepick in her cell.

Miss Little testified she made a call to the woman much earlier than that. The state claims the call is evidence of an escape plot.

Neither side produced the woman who received the call, and each side accused the other of covering up.

Paul appealed directly to the blacks on the jury with a summary of the civil rights movement that began when a woman named Rosa Parks refused to sit in the back of a Montgomery, Ala., bus.

"If Rosa Parks had sat at the back of the bus instead of the front, you wouldn't be sitting on this jury today," he said.

NEW PRAYERS. WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Conference of Catholic Bishops has announced that the Vatican has approved five new eucharistic (communion) prayers for the Roman Catholic liturgy — three to be used in masses with children and two for Masses of Reconciliation.

It Sims To Me...

By PAUL SIMS
Sports Editor

People probably often wonder why some sports aren't covered to the extent others are. For example, Pampa's bowlers, particularly the younger ones, haven't received nearly the amount of coverage they deserve.

With as many sports as there are, it's just not feasible to staff, in person, every event involving a Pampa competitor. In regard to a story's length, it's not feasible to give every sport equal space — there just isn't enough space to go around so length is determined by priority or fan popularity.

Here is the first paragraph of a story brought into this office last week: "Pampa Junior bowlers participated in the Texas Youth Bowling Association State Tournament in El Paso in June."

At first glance, I was tickled to finally get some information on junior bowling. A closer look at the story revealed when the tournament took place.

It's sad that persons involved with a particular team, like the young bowlers, often aren't fair with the athletes in the group. The bowling story was brought in two months late, which immensely takes away from the impact it could have had if the tournament had happened recently.

Anyway, the kids deserve to have their achievements published. Here are the results:

Seniors Boys Team No. 2 consisting of David Wortham, Terry Pettiet, Ray Muns, Carl Mumford and Michael Mayes, first place in Class C. Senior Boys Team No. 1, consisting of Curtis Haynes, Gary Griggs, Mike Sells, Mark Epperson and Robert Lambright, third place in Class C.

Sells, third in All - Events; Haynes and Mumford in Class B singles; Wortham, Sells and Epperson in Class C singles, and Mumford in Class B All - Events.

Others from Pampa at the tournament included Danny Williams, Louis Cox, Richard Wuest, Jimmy Rigsby, Darrel Baston and Joanna Warminski.

Lou Allred, Pampa High defensive secondary coach, did not attend New Mexico State as was mentioned in Wednesday's News. Allred, at the time I was getting information for the cutline in Wednesday's paper, said, "Be sure you say New Mexico University and not New Mexico State. There's only one university in New Mexico."

Fact is, coach, there are five universities in New Mexico. I just had trouble remembering which one you said.

Howie Lewis, former Pampa High football standout, will miss at least the first part of the season at Texas Tech this fall because of a broken foot suffered in the Oil Bowl game recently at Wichita Falls. Lewis' foot will be in a cast for six weeks.

"We were running a sweep," Lewis said. "The noseguard was angling across the field and I saw him coming. I hit him high and just bounced right off him. I remember hitting the ground and then my foot was hurting."

Norton TKO's Jose Garcia

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A fresh and confident Ken Norton scored a fifth round technical knockout over Venezuelan heavyweight champion Jose Garcia Thursday night, apparently putting himself in line for a shot at the winner of the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight next month in Manila.

Norton's win at the St. Paul Civic Center avenged a previous loss to Garcia five years ago, one of only three in the fighter's career.

Before the fight Ali's manager predicted a bad night for Norton, a Jacksonville, Ill., native, citing the small ring and Garcia's power. But Norton scored knockdowns in the third and fourth rounds and finished the tired and dazed Garcia at 1:52 of the fifth.

over the idle Kansas City Royals to six games Thursday when they beat the New York Yankees 5-1, with Dick Bosman pitching a five-hitter to gain his eighth win.

Oakland won the game with a four-run eighth-inning outburst during which Bill North drove in the tie-breaking run with a single, another run scored on shortstop Fred Stanley's error and Gene Tenace and Sal Bando also drove in runs.

Rudy May, tagged for five hits and three runs in 7 1/3 innings, suffered his eighth loss against 11 victories.

Chicago defeated Cleveland 6-4 and California downed Boston 5-3 in the other American League games. In the National League, Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 6-1, Atlanta downed St. Louis 6-4, San Francisco ripped Montreal 9-2 and Chicago topped Houston 5-3.

and the Panhandle antelope season Oct. 4-7, 1975.

Hunter success since 1960 has been high with 91 percent of the antelope hunters bagging their animal. The wide open country that the antelope inhabit make it easier for the hunter to see and bag his buck.

"Most of the antelope herds consisted of six or seven does and a buck in the Panhandle region survey," David Dvorak, project wildlife biologist at Canyon, said. "However, we spotted one large herd of 23 animals on one ranch."

Antelope permits are normally issued to the landowners the latter part of August. Sportsmen are reminded to contact the prospective landowner now and arrange the antelope hunt while the permits are being issued.

The antelope season in Texas has become very popular and the permits go fast. This is also a good time to get your rifle in shape for the hunt with a few hours on the target range developing that long range antelope load.

These good reports from the field and continuing excellent range conditions should prompt the P & W department to issue the normal number of permits to the landowners for the Permian Basin antelope season Oct. 4-12

Anderson Announces Retirement

UPI Sports Writer

It was Jan. 12, 1966, and the Green Bay Packers were playing the Kansas City Chiefs in the first Super Bowl. Fred "the Hammer" Williamson lay stretched out on the field, his mind in a fog.

"Donny must have hit him with his wallet," cracked a Packer defensive lineman on the sidelines as Williamson was helped from the field.

The quip typified the regard in which Donny Anderson was held. He was one of the glamor signees in the pro football war of the early 1960s, raking in an estimated $650,000 from Vince Lombardi's Packers to join the National Football League.

While Anderson managed to play well with the Packers, he never achieved the superstar status expected of him when he signed his lucrative contract. He was dealt to St. Louis three years ago and this past spring was traded to Miami for wide receiver Marlin Briscoe. The end of the line came Thursday when Anderson announced his retirement at age 32.

"It's time to face realities," Anderson said. "I didn't think I could contribute as well as I thought I could when I came to camp. I suppose I could hang on but I like to be a frontrunner. It would be disappointing to me if I was put into a situation where I had to perform and I didn't do it.

"When you get older, you don't heal as fast as you used to. I don't want to be 50 and crippled, unable to support my family or play golf or go fishing. But football's been good to me. I've had a lot of good times and some unfortunate times.

Anderson said he'll return to a real estate and insurance business in Dallas.

In his nine NFL seasons, Anderson carried 1,197 times for 4,696 yards and scored 41 touchdowns. He caught 209 passes for 2,548 yards and 14 TDs and punted for a 39.9 average.

Another highly regarded collegian of a more recent vintage also found himself out of a job today. David Jaynes, heralded as one of the top passers in the nation at Kansas two years ago, was released by Atlanta. The Falcons said Jaynes, obtained last month from Kansas City for wide receiver Tom Gerredine, had a sore arm.

Elsewhere, the New York Jets announced that David Knight, a starting wide receiver, will Another in a series, Linebacker coach Bill Balcom is one reason Pampa High's defense led the district in fewest yards given up last season. Balcom, a one defensive halfback at Northwestern State (Oklahoma), coached in Kansas, Artesia, N.M., Alva, Okla., and Shawnee, Okla., prior to coming to Pampa for the 1974 season.

The Jets also said that quarterback Joe Namath suffered a slight muscle pull in his right side during a passing drill but that he would be ready to start in a pre-season game against St. Louis Saturday night.

Tight end Mike Hancock, obtained from Washington on Wednesday, failed the Buffalo Bills' physical and was returned to the Redskins.

Philadelphia picked up rookie guard John Nessel of Penn State on waivers from Atlanta and Green Bay obtained second year running back Terry Wells from Houston. Rookie defensive back Bill Deery pulled a muscle in a Pittsburgh Steeler workout and joins starters Ernie Holmes and Mel Blount and reserve Reggie Harrison on the injured list for Saturday's game against Oakland.

Detroit obtained veteran defensive back Honor Jackson on waivers from the New York Giants, who also released barefoot kicker Ricky Townsend of Tennessee.

Buffalo plays host to Cincinnati tonight to open the four-day weekend pre-season schedule. Wide receiver J.D. Hill will be out for Buffalo with a thigh bruise, and free safety Tony Greene has been sidelined for six weeks with a broken collarbone.

In Saturday games, Atlanta meets Baltimore at Lincoln, Neb., Chicago takes on Green Bay at Milwaukee, San Francisco is at Los Angeles, the Jets at St. Louis, Washington at Houston, Detroit at Miami, Philadelphia at Cleveland, the Giants at San Diego and Denver at New Orleans. On Sunday, Pittsburgh takes on Oakland at Berkeley, Calif., and Minnesota is at New England and Monday night, Dallas is at Kansas City.

Gridders To Meet

Pampa High football coach John Welborn has announced that those players to be juniors and seniors will hold a squad meeting at 8 a.m. Monday in the athletic building. Sophomores will work out in shorts at 2 p.m. Monday.

Oakland Pops Yankees

UPI Sports Writer

It hasn't come out in the papers yet but the Oakland A's must have had a clubhouse fight or, at least, burned Charlie Finley in effigy for the umpteenth time.

It was only a week ago that the Kansas City Royals were going like gangbusters and had cut the three-time world champion A's lead in the American League's Western Division almost in half.

The A's, as has been their custom for the last three years, didn't get interested until they began to read in the papers that the Royals were threatening their dynasty.

That's when they undoubtedly held a clubhouse rumble, exchanged a few black eyes and settled down to the business of winning the AL's Western title.

The A's increased their lead

White Sox 6, Indians 4

Jim Kaat won his 17th game with the relief help of Dave Hamilton in Chicago's win over Cleveland. Pat Kelly tied the score with his eighth homer in the seventh inning and the White Sox took the lead when George Orta and Deron Johnson followed with doubles. Roric Harrison was the loser.

Angels 5, Red Sox 3
Jerry Remy doubled in two runs and Lee Stanton singled in two more to lead California to its victory which cut Boston's lead over Baltimore in the AL East to 5 1/2 games. Fifteen-game winner Bill Lee suffered his seventh loss for the Red Sox while Bill Singer went 6 1/3 innings for the win.

Reds 6, Pirates 1
George Foster hit his 20th and 21st homers and drove in five runs for Cincinnati. Gary Nolan went eight innings, allowing four hits, to win his 11th game against six losses while Pittsburgh's Jerry Reuss suffered his ninth setback against 12 victories.

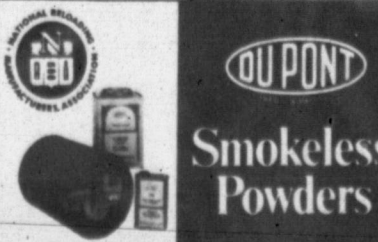

Braves 6, Cardinals 4
Dave May hit a three-run homer in the first inning, propelling Atlanta past St. Louis. Lynn McGlothen, the victim of the homer, was tagged with his ninth loss against 12 wins while Phil Niekro won his 12th game compared with 10 defeats.

Giants 9, Expos 2

Jim Barr won his 11th game behind a 12-hit attack which included Dave Rader's three-run homer in the second inning. Willie Montanez added three hits to the San Francisco attack which dealt Dennis Blair his 14th defeat against seven wins. Larry Biittner had three hits for Montreal.

Now Bring Home Bacon Costs More

Bringing home the bacon is no easy task in these days of inflation and unemployment — and it's getting harder. Bacon prices are skyrocketing.

Harold Hill, general provisions manager for Oscar Mayer & Co., headquartered at Madison, Wis., says distributors are paying a record high $1.92 a pound for Oscar Mayer bacon, meaning a price of more than $2 a pound at the checkout counter.

A spokesman for George C. Hormel Co. packers of Austin, Minn., said prices were between $1.25 and $1.45 a pound a year ago and is now up to around $2.00 a pound.

A spokesman for a major Atlanta-based grocery chain says bacon prices have gone up 50 per cent in five months with Oscar Mayer bacon now selling at $2.18 and the chain's own label selling at $1.78.

"Hog prices were so cheap about a year ago that farmers killed off their brood sows so they are not producing any piglets," the spokesman said. "Basically what we are looking at now is a short crop."

"There is very little bacon in the freezers."

Ed Smith, a spokesman for St. Louis National Stockyards in East St. Louis, Ill., said prices are higher for all pork products. Wednesday's top price for hogs was $60.50, he said — $1.50 off the record of $62.00 paid two years ago.

A spokesman for Krey Packing Co. of St. Louis said the company's price was "somewhat below" Oscar Mayer's, but with the way things are going we'll probably be up there, too.

A spokesman for Safeway stores in San Francisco says Rath Blackhawk bacon is selling for $1.93 a pound and Oscar Mayer for $2.12.

"We are not selling as much bacon," the spokesman said. "Some people are switching to sausage."

Joe Rottano, manager of San Francisco's Cal-Laurel Choice Meats and Poultry, said he charges $1.99 a pound for bulk bacon and $2.49 and $2.59 a pound for sugar-cured bacon such as Oscar Mayer.

"The consumer thinks the situation is very bad. I think it's ridiculous," said Rottano.

Some people who are avoiding bacon are finding other problems.

Mrs. Estel Barnes of Marion, Ill., says she and her husband like bacon — but not at the $1.99 to $2.39 prices. She's just buying more hog jowl.

"I paid 99 cents a pound for hog jowl about two weeks ago and I notice that now it's up to $1.09."

"You can't win for losing."

Proxmire Hires His Assailants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two teen-agers who jumped a jogging Sen. William Proxmire in 1973 and were arrested with his aid later were hired by Proxmire to work in his office for a year, it was announced Wednesday.

Proxmire, D-Wis., resisted the youths, aged 14 and 15, when they accosted him near the Capitol. Then, with police, he gave chase and they were arrested.

Proxmire disclosed Wednesday that afterwards he hired them as aides in his Senate office for a year to work at the minimum wage after school at getting out the senator's mail.

The boys were cut from the payroll in February because of payroll demands and a reduced workload, according to William Shuman, Proxmire's administrative assistant.

Since that time, one of the juveniles has been arrested for shoplifting in a downtown Washington department store, sent to a reform school and is now out helping in a day-care center. The other youth has remained out of trouble with the law.

Patman Calls for Audit Of Federal Reserve

JACKSONVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., today called for Congress to order an audit of the Federal Reserve.

"It's the world's biggest economic agency. It literally decides whether people have jobs; the price of goods and services; the level of interest rates; whether or not people get an opportunity for decent housing. Without question, the most important single agency dealing with the domestic economy," Patman said in a speech prepared for delivery to a civic club.

He said despite the importance of the Federal Reserve, Congress has never required an audit by the General Accounting Office.

Patman said his bill to require such an audit was being opposed by special interests.

"The big bankers and big business lobbyists have unleashed a campaign against it. They are doing everything possible to block early consideration and to defeat — or weaken — the legislation when it does reach the floor," he said.

He said the Federal Reserve, which handles transactions of more than $30 trillion annually, maintains a portfolio of U.S. government securities in the vaults of the New York Federal Reserve bank.

"This is a portfolio of bonds that have been paid for once by the credit of the U.S. government," Patman said.

He said the Federal Reserve draws a "cash fund of $6 billion annually" from the U.S. Treasury.

"It is an open-ended fund unchecked, unaudited by the Congress or any other public agency. It's an invitation to loose and wasteful handling of taxpayers' funds."

Wright said a few examples of how the funds had been spent included:

— $280,000 to move employees from bank to bank in the Federal Reserve System including $14,000 to one employee and his family for a move covering less than 700 miles.

— $389,000 for cocktail parties and dinners-meetings. One Federal Reserve Bank — New York — listed $34,000 for "refreshments" for its officers, staff and guests. Other items included thousands of dollars for entertaining members of various tank trade associations.

— $94,000 for jewelry, watches, lunches and related items for "employee recognition."

— $134,000 for dues to various organizations including affiliates of the American Bankers Association and other banking entities.

— Thousands of dollars for holiday parties with one Federal Reserve Bank spending nearly $20,000 on Christmas luncheons and decorations.

Virgil Romack, owner of the Owl Liquor Store, 108 E. Craven, does more than sell the general lines of wine, liquor and beer. At one side of the store one may find a gallery of paintings which Romack creates behind on easel in his store.

The Owl Liquor Store was originally a member of the chain of Owl Drug stores which eventually sold out to small businesses. Romack's father changed the name from Owl Drug to Owl Liquor and went into business. Romack went to work for his father in 1949 across the street from his present location.

Romack began painting in the first grade, but it wasn't until about six years ago that he really got serious.

Romack has been endorsed by Merlin Enabnit, one of the foremost color authorities in the world. "He called me highly professional," Romack said.

Romack explained that he mostly paints Navajo, Western, and portraits. "I think my most favorite subject is the Navajo," he said. "I try to get out among them as much as I can: they are a very friendly people."

The painter has had people from coast to coast buy his work. "Last year I had 70 some pictures finished to sell, now I have 11 and I am trying to find the time to paint more."

He is presently painting a scene entitled "50 Horses."

We Hold These Truths... A Chronicle of America

Summer, 1775:

John Murray Dunmore, the Royal Governor of Virginia, writes to Lord Dartmouth, Secretary for the Colonies, describing the growing spirit of rebellion: Virginians "manifest no other disposition than for resisting the authority of government. Bodies of men are everywhere set on foot, arming, and disciplining with great diligence, and appearing in uniforms. His Majesty's English subjects, indentured servants, are compelled to take arms and submit themselves to all orders they shall receive (from the rebellious colonists); some of these [faithful subjects] have escaped to the ship of war, [Fowey, at anchor in the York River], the only protection they can meet with now [because] the laws have no operation."

Family Will Not Bury Dead Man

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Paul L. Juery died three months ago in a Texas hospital. An autopsy showed his death was from natural causes, but his family refused to believe the report, packed the body in dry ice and moved it to New Orleans.

The body is still unburied and Orleans Parish Coroner, Dr. Frank Minyard, calls the incident "the most bizarre case I've ever experienced."

To wrap it up, he filed a writ in Civil District Court Wednesday seeking jurisdiction to bury Juery's body.

Juery, 58, died May 19 in Fort Worth, Tex.

His wife, Evelyn Francis Juery, and stepson Reuben Edwin DeLoach, accused the All Saints Episcopal Hospital and attending doctors of foul play. DeLoach demanded an autopsy.

The chief medical examiner for Tarrant County, Dr. Felix Gwozdz, found that Juery died naturally of a brain hemorrhage.

DeLoach insisted his stepfather died from "supernatural means," and got a district court order authorizing him to take the body from the funeral home to Houston for an autopsy.

Instead of taking the body to Houston, DeLoach and his mother took it to New Orleans packed in dry ice, but unembalmed and rapidly decomposing. The body was placed in the morgue at Mercy hospital.

DeLoach got a criminal court order directing Minyard to perform an autopsy on his stepfather, and the body was transferred to the city morgue July 25.

Minyard refused to perform an autopsy, but conducted an external examination that showed no evidence "of any penetrating injury."

Minyard said that since Juery had been dead more than two months, he could not recover any body fluids to perform toxicology tests. But he said toxicology studies in Texas proved negative.

A city health inspector said the decomposing body posed a "definite health hazard" unless kept in the morgue or buried.

Cleaver Shows Revolution in Pants

PARIS (UPI) — Former U.S. revolutionary Eldridge Cleaver staged a one-man fashion show today of his newest revolution—in men's pants.

Even he said it was a shock. "Can you stand a shock?" asked the one-time Black Panther leader as he walked around his office.

He was wearing black velvet slacks, high-waisted to the ribs and wide at the belled bottoms. At the crotch was what he called an "aperture." The effect was of a nude man with his legs covered.

"The Cleavers," as the new designer has named his patented creation, make a sex object of men in the same way that low-cut dresses for centuries have made sex objects out of women.

Since men have enjoyed women as sex objects, does Cleaver think they will mind being sex objects themselves?

"These pants will give men a chance to assert their masculinity," Cleaver said. "How can clothing shops sell trousers to girls and expect men to buy girl pants?"

"The situation in men's clothing is so boring. The creativity is nil. They change the shape of the pockets. There are some beautiful materials out for women's pants but men can't wear those. They can in my designs since there is no mistaking they are men's pants."

His trousers are planned in all fabrics including denim. For the U.S. Bicentennial he envisages his pants with an eagle or red and white stripes or 13 stars on the aperture.

"The world's been waiting for these pants ever since pants were invented," Cleaver said in an advertisement in the Paris International Herald Tribune.

He called for business associates around the world to join him in marketing the pouch, which he described as a "second skin" for the genitals.

"It's a repeat of the same phenomenon as the brassiere for women or the mini-skirt or the bikini," he said.

Cleaver, who called for black revolution in the United States during the 1960s, said he designed his pouch trousers because women took over men's pants and turned them into a "unisex" fashion.

"The pants that men wear now will be looked upon as girl's pants after my models are sold," he said.

Cleaver said his design "will provide a framework for men to respond to the women's lib groups and provoke negotiated peace between men and women."

"It will arouse controversy as any addition of clothing has done down the ages," he said. "This will be loud because it will be kicked around in the world."

Cleaver said he has contacted manufacturers in Japan, West Germany, Sweden, Holland, England, France and the United States to make the trousers.

He said the new trousers, an answer to the traditional "fig leaf mentality" in men's fashions, would be called "Cleavers."
