Third Lubbock County Road District Will Be Sought

Petition Will Be Presented Monday To Commissioners

Paving of Highway No. Nine From Hale To Lynn County Line Is Object Of Proposed New District

Plan Bond Issue

Action Follows Rescinding Of Idalou-Lubbock Highway Routing by State Highway Department

ANOTHER faction in Lubbock county's complex road proposals was created Saturday with the circulation by John F. Turner of a petition which will be presented Monday to the county commissioners court asking for creation of road district No. 3, preliminary step toward plans for voting a bond issue within the proposed district for paving of Highway No. 9, running from the Lynn to the Hale county line through the center of Lubbock county.

The proposal is designed, as leaders say, to complete hard-surfacing of the principal highways of the county in view of the uncertainty of highway 53, routing of which out of this city on Avenue H was rescinded Friday by the state highway department. Action of the highway department in nullifying the designation of Highway 53 out of this city to Idalou holds in abeyance a prepared petition by the Lubbock County Good Roads association asking the county commissioners court to call a $1,000,000 road bond election for the recently created road district No. 2.

Plans Await Decision

"Our future plans with reference to asking for a $1,000,000 road bond election in District 2 will await the decision of the highway department in routing Highway 53," said Charles F. O'Neall, chairman of the good roads association. "The association is not aiding in the petition for a new district. In the event a new road district is created, the new road District No. 2 will have to be modified."

Expressing confidence that the commissioners court would create the new district, Mr. Turner said Saturday that he had secured 23 signatures to the petition. The new district would be a strip 6 miles wide through the county, three miles on either side of Highway 9. "If the court should create the new district

Endurance Record Holder Accepts Invitation Of City Commission Despite Previous Engagements

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

AMARILLO, June 8.—Although expected back in Fort Worth not later than noon Sunday to confer with various business executives clamoring for his services, and with petitions for visits from enough towns throughout north, south and central to fill out two year itinerary, Lieut. Col. Jim Kelly finally yielded to petition of Amarillo city commission Saturday night and agreed to remain over through Monday afternoon.

Furthermore since he still aches to fly despite his recent sustained flight of 172 hours, 32 minutes and one second in the "Fort Worth" the joint holder of the world's endurance flight record announced Saturday night that he would carry as many passengers as possible with him on flights Sunday afternoon. The commission wanted him to make a speech but he said speech making wasn't his line, and said he would take up passengers, if they wanted, all afternoon.

Beauties Parade To Open Pageant

GALVESTON, June 8. (AP) — Under a blistering sun Galveston's fourth annual International pageant of pulchritude got under way today.

The first event was a parade late this afternoon in sports clothes and afternoon costumes. Automobiles were parked four abreast for about a mile on the island city's seawall boulevard as the colorful procession of ten foreign and 34 United States beauties wended its way atop the boulevard incline.

With the spectators seated in uncovered grand stands, cold drink and umbrella vendors did a rushing business. Despite the hot sun the crowd did not lose patience even though the parade was slowed up by the host of moving picture photographers.

Mystery Reopened Saturday In Hall Mills Murder Case

Federal Prisoner Claims To Have Been Witness To Famous Killing 7 Years Ago; Accepted Money

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, June 8.—The Detroit Free Press tomorrow will say that the mystery of the murder of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills seven years ago near New Brunswick, N. J., was reopened here Saturday as a result of the declaration of a federal prisoner that he overheard the quarrel which led to the shooting of the minister and the choir singer.

The prisoner, Kenneth Gladeau, is in the county jail here, being held for federal authorities. He told the sheriff of Wayne county and a Free Press reporter that he witnessed the murder from a thicket. Gladeau's story is in the hands of Francis L. Bergen, prosecutor of Somerset county, N. J., who is expected to come here soon to question Gladeau.

Paid Hush Money

Gladeau said he received $3,000 from one of the murderers to keep silent about the affair.

Gladeau was arrested May 2 at Plymouth, Michigan, for federal authorities. Remarks he made then to Chief of Police Springer at Plymouth and to Robert E. Moore, identification superintendent at the Wayne county jail, caused them to question him closely. He said that a knife which was found in his room had figured in the Hall-Mills killing.

According to Gladeau's statement which will appear in the Free Press he was hiking near New Brunswick, and had stopped to sleep in a thicket on the night of the slaying. He was disturbed by the voices of a man and a woman who called each other "Edward" and "Eleanor." He said that after the man and the woman had talked for a time, appar-

(By Associated Press)

WILMINGTON, N. C., June 8. Lieut. Col. John A. Hambleton of Baltimore and Mr and Mrs. J. Von Der Heyden of New York were killed instantly near the county airport here today when Von Der Heyden's airplane, "The Governor" crashed.

The accident was witnessed by Mrs. Hambleton who was Miss Margaret Elliott of Wilmington. Col Hambleton, Baltimore banker, vice-president of the Pan-American Airways and close friend of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was coming to Wilmington for the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Von Der Heyden were week-end guests.

Cause Is Unknown.

The cause of the accident had not been determined tonight.

Who was at the controls was not known. Colonel Hambleton was a capable aviator and often flew here. Members of Mrs. Hambleton's family tonight said that Mr. Von Der Hayden was director of sales promotion for the Consolidated Instrument company of New York.

Witnesses said the plane circled the landing field at little more than 50 feet. It appeared to be approaching the field on the final round when suddenly it shot straight down and struck in a cleared space in the woods. The cabin of the single-motored monoplane was telescoped and the occupants killed instantly.

Early Enactment Of Farm Relief Bill In Balance

Export Debenture Group Is Campaigning In Senate For Rejection of Conference Committee Report

BY RAMOND Z. HENLE
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 8. (AP)—Early enactment of farm relief legislation hung in the balance today as the export debenture group undertook a campaign in the senate to reject the conference committee's farm bill.

The division was held by leaders of both groups to be even closer than when the debenture proposal was voted into the senate bill, 47 to 44.

Adverse Arguments Heard.

Arguments against the compromise bill were based on contentions that the house overstepped its authoity in refusing to vote on the debenture plan. That stand resulted in elimination of the plan from the bill.

The house has approved the conference bill and only a favorable vote in the senate is necessary to send the legislation to President Hoover.

Robinson Brings Optimism.

The optimism of the debenture group was enacted by the return of Senator Robinson of Arkansas,

Talked Too Much

Youth Jailed On Robbery Count

BALLINGER, June 8. (AP)—Inability of a young man to keep from talking resulted in his being jailed here tonight with the prospects of facing charges of attempted bank robbery.

A gunman, about 24 years old, ordered Duncan Hensley, cashier, and Miss Leila Harper bookkeeper, of the Security State Bank at Wingate, to "stick 'em up" today. Miss Harper screamed and an exchange of shots followed. Miss Harper was injured slightly by a spatter of lead.

The man went to Winters, 15 miles away, changed clothes and resumed his work there. During the afternoon, he confided to a fellow worker what had happened The officers were notified, and the young man arrested and taken to the Winters State Bank where Dr. J. W. Dixon of Winters, president of the Wingate bank, quizzed him.

Student Death At Haverford College Is Declared By Police To Be Suicide

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.(AP)—Haverford county police who have investigated the death of Bramwell Linn, son of Judge William B. Linn of the Pennsylvania Superior Court, said today that the young man had killed himself.

Young Linn, who was 21 and was to have been graduated from Haverford College today, was found dead in his room at the institution with a bullet wound in the head. Nearby stood a .22 calibre rifle, which the police said, he had placed so as to send the bullet into the back of his head.

When the name of Bramwell Linn was reached in the list of graduates read at today's commencement at Haverford the entire class stood up and remained silent for a minute. Later his name was called as the winner of a $45 prize for improvement in scholarship.

Although police authorities say young Linn committed suicide, his father does not subscribe to it. He feels that a thorough investigation should be made to determine the facts.

Police authorities said Linn's death followed a "farewell" party at his home late Thursday night in which a few close college friends participated. The were some drinks, it was said, and the young man told his friends "This is my farewell dinner to you; call it my last supper if you will."

Hamilton To Seek Change of Venue For Murder Trial

Amarillo Attorney Will Be Tried June 13 For Killing His Young Son-in-Law Five Weeks Ago

State Is Ready

Newspapers Have Created Prejudice Against Hamilton, According to Defense Counsel

(By Associated Press)

AMARILLO, June 8.—A motion for a change of venue will be sought for R. H. Hamilton, prominent Amarillo attorney charged with murder in the slaying of Tom Walton, jr., his son-in-law, here on May 4, it was revealed today by a member of one of the law firm representing Hamilton but who refused to be quoted.

Hamilton's trial has been set for June 13. Whether the motion will be filed far enough in advance for the state to prepare to fight it or the day the trial opens was not disclosed.

Ready For Trial

The state is ready for trial, according to District Attorney Ed W. Thompson. Forty or fifty of Amarillo's leading business men, who, so far as a recent habeas corpus hearing disclosed, know nothing of the facts in the case, have been subpoenaed as witnesses. It is believed that they will be called to testify in a change of venue hearing.

Newspapers have created prejudice against Hamilton, it was declared his attorneys would say, by insinuating Hamilton knew he was killing his son-in-law when he shot Walton, and also through the report young Walton had gone to Hamilton's office to make an explanation. These allegations both will be denied by the defense, it was understood.

May Go To Canyon

If a change of venue is granted in the manner usual with transferred cases in Amarillo, it will go to Canyon, Randall county.

The defense council, however, was expected to oppose a transfer to any point in the Panhandle or Texas covered by the Amarillo News and Globe on the ground it would give no relief.

A special venire of 300 was summoned. About 130 witnesses have been subpoenaed.

Adams Found Not Guilty of Murder

Bartlett Rancher Is Freed Of Election Bet Slaying By Jury At Corsicana Amid Relatives' Applause

(By Associated Press)

CORSICANA, June 8. (AP)—Amidst the applause of relatives and friends, V. Ray Adams, Bartlett rancher, was acquitted by a jury in district court here today of the slaying of Orville L. Mathews, Dallas banker.

The shooting of Mathews on a busy downtown street corner in Dallas grew out of an election bet on the Connally-Mayfield senatorial race last year. Adams, according to testimony given in the trial, was one of the betters in a wager aggregating $2,000. Mathews, who was connected with the Republic National Bank of Dallas, was the stakeholder.

It was Adams' attempt to collect the bet that caused trouble between Adams and Mathews, the testimony further showed.

Lindy And Anne Driven To Cover

PORTCLYDE, Maine, June 8. (AP)—Driven to shelter by a sudden squall which struck the Maine coast yesterday afternoon Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh remained in their haven a few miles from here during the day and indications wer that they would stay for the night.

The Lindberghs were only a short run from the Morrow summer estate at North Haven. The Morrow maids were expected at the house at North Haven Monday and it was believed Mrs. Morrow and the chidren would follow shortly.

Deadlocked Jury Is Dismissed In Stallworth Trial

Deliberation of 43 Hours Fails To Get Verdict In Amarillo Slaying; Conviction Favored, 7 to 5

(By Associated Press)

AMARILLO, June 8. (AP)—Hopelessly deadlocked after approximately 43 hours of deliberation, the jury in the trial of Mrs. Levi P. Stallworth of Amarillo for the slaying of Mrs. Grace Morrison of Plainview in front of a hotel here on May 13 was discharged today.

The jury voted seven to five for conviction on every one of about 30 ballots, it was said.

Released Under Bond

Mrs. Stallworth was released under a renewal of her bond of $15,000. Defense council sought to reduce the amount materially, but met strong opposition from the State.

Although defense council had not mare an official announcement that they would ask a change of venue, it was generally recognized that it would be difficult to select another jury in Potter County because of the wide publicity given the case.

If a change of venue were obtained the case automatically would be transferred to Canyon, Randall county, 18 miles from Amarillo. The next term of court opens there the latter part of July, and it is probable that the case would be reached some time in August.

Shortly after being taken to a home nearby for treatment of wounds, they returned home.

Settlement Of Controversy Between Mexico And Catholic Church Is Seen

MEXICO CITY, June 8. (AP)—President Emilio Potes Gil tonight told newspapermen that he anticipated amicable discussions with Archibishop Leopoldo Ruiz, who is expected to arrive here tonight from Washington, and hoped that a way could be found to end the controversy with the Catholic church that has been acute for three years.

The President declared that he did not know precisely what proposal the Archbishop would bring for solution of the problem but stated emphatically that there would be no change in the existing laws in Mexico governing religious activities.

He explained that the Archbishop had sought an interview with him through the embassy at Washington and did so as a Mexican citizen and a prelate of the Mexican church. It was understood that he would be received in this capacity rather than as an apostolic delegate due to the fact that Mexico does not maintain official relations with the Vatican.

The Archibishop will be received by the president probably on Monday. The latter today denied that there had been any preliminary communication between his government and the Vatican, either directly or indirectly, and said no such communication was in prospect. The negotiations will be on the

Lubbock Eleventh In State Building

City Holds Fifth Place For Year Despite Low Week's Total; Houston Holds Big Lead

By Associated Press

DALLAS, June 8.—(AP)—Houston topped San Antonio by a small margin in building permits, both cities registering more than $200,000. Fort Worth and Dallas were the only other towns in the state to run above the $100,000 mark. A tabulation of building permits over the state follows:

for alleged misdeeds came as a surprise to many members of the legislature.

Hope For Accounting

It was generally believed that the reprimand given Mr. Robison in the joint committee report following an investigation of his department, and the suggestion that the attorney general enter suit to force an accounting of the funds collected from land owners to pay expenses of the 1925 reappraisement would satisfy the land commissioner's critics.

With many witnesses summoned, it seems certain the hearing on the charges and trial on impeachment should the house vote indictments, would consume many weeks, probably forcing one or two more special sessions.

Although almost $12,000,000 apart in their appropriation bills, the senate and house set about putting their respective measures through, evidently with the thought the differences could be adjusted in free conference.

The senate made no effort to cut down its total of $57,711,013, but, on the contrary, added about $50,000 to the eleemosynary and judiciary bills and was increasing the amount of the departmental measure when it recessed for the week-end. The house had shaved off a total of $60,000 from the $46,000,000 appropriations it proposed and had only the departmental measure pending when it finished the first week's work.

Trotzky Seeks To Visit In England

LONDON, June 8. (AP)—The new Labor government has been handed its first problem in foreign policy by the request of Leon Trotsky for permission to visit England. It appeared as though the former soviet leader, now in exile near Constantinople, had awaited only the fall of the conservative government of Great Britain and the accession of a government known to favor recognition of Russia.

The former red army chief appealed direct to Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald for authorization to visit England "For urgent medical treatment and scientific work." It appeared from a letter handed the British consul at Pera at the same time that the "scientific work" would be oversight of the publication of the auto-biography of Trotsky in England.

Crop Report Shows Increase In Wheat

Annual Forecast Of Agricultural Department Given

Production Indicated To Be 43,000,000 Bushels More Than Last Year In Winter Wheat Crop

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 8. — Farm leaders in congress received with considerable interest today the forecast of the departmnt of agriculture that the winter wheat crop on the basis of June 1 indications showed a probable production of 622,148,000 bushels—more than 43,000,000 bushels increase over last year.

In view of the general consensus that the farmer's difficulties can not be surmounted without an orderly disposition of the surplus, the news that a further expansion of he already substantial excess of wheat appears to be in store was regarded by many members of congress as serving to focus attention upon the course a federal farm board would pursue in the event one is authorized in the farm relief legislation now approaching enactment.

Will Aid Farm Bill

The leaders also contended that the crop report would direct added attention to the progress of the farm bill in the senate, where only a favorable report on the conference relief bill is needed to send that measure to President Hoover. Some leaders felt that if the senate would act favorably and the farm board be set up promptly, there would be a psychological tendency towards increasing prices in spite of the large additional surplus forecast, but all of them were agreed such possible results most depended on the willingness of the board to put the provisions of the farm bill quickly into operation.

The 622,148,000 bushels forecast by the department of agriculture represented an increase of four per cent over the indicated condition as of May 1 and compared with the five year average of 549,000,000 bushels and the 1928 crop of 579,000,000 bushels. The increase since May 1 was ascribed by the department mainly to favorable rainfall in the great plains states from Kansas to Texas in which a total increase of 31,000,000 bushels is anticipated. In most other states a slight change downward was reported.

Private Reports Of Rain Result In Early Advance

NEW YORK, June 8. (AP)—Early advances influenced by private reports of rain in the Mississippi valley were followed by reactions in cotton Monday under realising and selling inspired by relatively easy Liverpool cables and a more favorable view of the weather outlook. October contracts sold off from 18.93@18.75 and closed at 18.76, with the general market closing barely steady net 1 point lower to 2 points higher.

Summer School

both terms of the present summer would easily exceed the 1200 mark.

Growth Unlimited

"There is no limit to the growth of the school except in the limit of the legislature's appropriations," Dr. Paul W. Horn, president, said. The coming long session would see even greater increases in enrollment, it was predicted.

As one of the features of the session, a school in cotton classing is to be offered from July 15 to August 10. The classes will be conducted in the textile engineering building with Prof. E. W. Camp, head of the department, in charge.

The classes include grading white cottons; grading colored cottons; stapling cottons; marketing, street buying and selling; F. O. B. buying and selling; list buying and selling; cotton office practice work and various other phases of cotton business.

Lectures will be accompanied by laboratory work in all of the instruction.

Cotton Reacts From Advances Early Saturday

NEW ORLEANS, June 8. (AP)—Failure of the weather map to confirm early reports of rain caused cotton to react from an early advance today. Expectations of bearish textile statistics Monday added to the weakness which carried October down from 18.81 to 18.65. The delivery closed at 18.70, or net unchanged for the day. The general market closed steady net one point down to two up.

Under pressure of the offerings July traded off to 18.69, October 18.65 and December 18.77, or 12 to 16 points down from the highs.

There was some covering for over the week-end in late trading and final prices showed recoveries of 5 to 8 points from the lows and little net change for the day.

Hale County Man Buys Tech Lambs

Fred Weyl, of Plainview, the only breeder of purebred Hereford cattle in Hale county, and also a breeder of Delaine Merino sheep, has purchased from the Texas Technological College, the entire crop of Southdown ram lambs, according to Prof. W. L. Stangel, head of the animal husbandry department of the Tech school of agriculture.

It is Mr. Weyl's intention to use the lambs purchased from Texas Tech in crossing with his Delaine Merino ewes, in the production of early maturing market lambs. He also purchased the only yearling ram Tech had for sale.

Heretofore, Prof. Stangel explains, the college has been castrating some of the rams, but such demand was obtained this year that all of them have been sold. With all of the Southdowns sold, the Tech's Hamshires are spoken for and will be sold soon.

Trading Drags In Two-Hour Session Of Stock Market

Slowest Pace Since Last August Experienced As Price Movements Have No Definite Trend

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, June 8. (AP)—Trading dragged along at the slowest pace since last August in today's two-hour session of the stock market, in which only 1,201,500 shares changed hands. Price movements were without definite trend, and appeared to reflect little more than week-end evening up of accounts.

With the credit outlook for the rest of the month complicated by the government financing, income tax payments, and the exercising of rights to large offerings of stocks, and made doubly obscure by conflict of opinion within the federal reserve system, many pools are understood to have suspended operations until July, expecting some clarification of the situation by that time. Somewhat tighter money is regarded in the financial district as in prospect for next week, although a temporary government overdraft in connection with its financing may temporarily ease the situation.

Daily Markets

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK

FORT WORTH, June 8. (AP)—Not enough cattle of any one class arrived at Fort Worth today to test values. Those that came, however, sold in line with similar quality on yesterday's market.

Trading in hogs fairly active at steady prices with the best rail butchers selling at 10.90 and the best truck butchers at 10.85. The bulk of the sales on 175-250 pound butchers ranged from 10.25 to 10.85 with packing sows from 8.75 to 9.25.

Sheep considered steady with no sales to make a test of market.

MID-WESTERN LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, June 8. (AP)—(U. S. D. A.)—Cattle trade around the 11 market circuit was marked by a further widening of the price spread on killing classes of cattle. Choice quality fed steers and yearlings at most markets were strong to slightly higher, but the less desirable grades were steady to 25c lower. Medium yearlings at some centers were as much as 50c lower. Lower grades of she stock were also under pressure. Packers were especially bearish on grass cows. Choice heavy steers in Chicago reached 15.25 and 15.20 was paid for long yearlings. Aggregate receipts were around 169,800, as compared with 148,574 last week and 191,863 the corresponding period a year ago.

Thanks His Star
Falling Stone Hits Near Visitor

Aubra G. Cox, salesmanager of the Wichita Hardware company, of Houston, thanked his lucky star Saturday morning that fate had placed him walking on the east side of Avenue K rather than on the west.

Just as he was passing in front of the Lubbock Hotel he glanced up and saw a black object come hurtling down to the street. "I ducked involuntarily," said Mr. Cox. The falling object proved to be a large stone about the size of an ordinary hat and its flight was brought to a halt on the hood of a new Ford sedan, striking just behind the radiator cap. The hood itself was demolished but no apparent damage was done to the engine.

Much Maligned Younger Generation Has Many Supporters, Reporter Finds Here

By MRS. W. A. McGee
(Avalanche-Journal Staff)

Faith in the "Younger Generation" and the belief that the boys and girls of today—in this automobile, aeroplane, telephone, moving picture and radio age—are no different than were their fathers, mothers, and grandparents yesterday, was brought out recently by Lubbock parents who were interviewed on the subject which for ages past has reverberated around the world.

Again it's no "pipe-dream" to hear some one exclaim, "if you want to know something, we think they're hopeless—and, pretty apt to stay that way!"

Times Have Changed

True today, things are different. Times "ain't what they used to be." In this modernistic age, times have changed and conditions have changed, not alone in the social life of all the peoples' of the earth. But also in the business and commercial world—and our forefathers and mothers of yesterday, we dare say—would not hold on to the "horse and buggy" transportation when a glittering new automobile was at their command, nor would they burn their home in order to dispise of the telephone or the loud speaking radio! What is more they would have even denied themselves in order to save "pennies" with which to indulge in an evenings' entertainment at the "movies," it is believed.

While parents of today, according to some are "stumbling blocks" in the lives of their children,—instead of the "stepping stones" that they should be. Still other parents cater to fashion, frills and frivolity, as much as do their children, and should in no case criticize them for following in their foot-steps.

Mrs. Sawyer Talks

So said Mrs. T. W. Sawyer, president of the First Baptist Women's Missionary union, when asked regarding the younger generation as compared with that of yesterday. "I think we have the most outstanding young people today, that we have ever had, regardless of their being called "flappers and jelly beans." And we have more Christian young people than we have ever had. They launch out earlier, yet they are capable and assume more responsibilities, than did their forefathers or parents. Also the boys and girls of today are better equipped for solving life problems. They have more educational advantages and more opportunity, but are just as staunch as the young people ever were in any age. Girls today are more efficient than were their mothers or grandmothers.

"It used to be that girls or women could not go out into the business world without bringing reflection on the home—but today, look at the girls and women who are independent, efficient and self-supporting. I do not feel that the boys and girls of today are any worse according to the population and the conveniences that have brought about the modern trend of the times, than were the boys and girls of yesterday. On the other hand they cope with many situations with whcih their parents did not have to deal," declared Mrs. Sawyer. "There are exceptions of course."

Viewpoint Is Different.

Dr. W. N. Lemmon, in commenting on the question said, "I am not in touch with the young life like I once was, but I know they do not have the same viewpoint as the older generation. However, they need to learn a few things that they "don't" know. Another thing they do not have the reverence for older people that they once had, perhaps the parents ar most to blame for this. While war, picture shows and so on, have greatly influenced their lives, yet I believe that Bible students will agree with me that this is the age of apostasy according to Thessalonians 7th chapter."

According to another Lubbock mother, "There's a great controversy of opinion over the behaviorism of youth, and I still hold to the belief that the greatest influence emanates from the home. We are sadly in need of parental authority. We need better educated parents along these lines. They need to know mor of child psychology. I think that you can love children into doing more than you can any other way, and I think parents should join into their childrens' amusements as one of them. I feel that laxity in the home life today, is the real problem, and too many parents are indifferent about their childrens' welfare and allow them to simply do as they please and to rule the household if they like.

Home Should Rule

"We should build up a real home atmosphere and try always to hold to the happy medium of doing things. However, it would be the old maids' and old bachelors' I suppose, that could tell you most on this paramount topic of "rearing children," she explained.

Mrs. L. G. H. Williams, in a burst of enthusiasm, said, "I like the young people of today and I'm for them. They get a perfectly direct point of view. I also think they are more practical and have a clearer view of things generally. They want religion, and are intensely interested in Christ and the Christ life—but they are tired of form, creed and denominationalism. They are unpretentious and frank and want people to "measure up" to what they profess. They do not like the practice of hypocricy. And as for their mode of dress, styles today are far more sensible than they were when I was a girl and women and girls were loaded down with yards and yards of cloth and lace, and our dresses served as street sweepers.

"The press should try further to encourage the youth of today in their selection of better literature and cleaner news and should give them more clean front page news stories—playing up the many good things that are daily taking place, and using them to exclusion of the grueseme, blood-curdling murder stories and others. Young people should be taught to use discrimination in the selection of amusements, for while they must have entertainment, of some sort, it should be cultural as well. All in all I am a believer in the youth of today—they are no less splendid than were their forefathers. They merely see life from a different perspective!"

Says They're Wonderful

Mrs. J. W. Story, said, "I think we have a wonderful lot of young folks. They are so capable and ambitious, —and they should be,—for their educational opportunities and advantages have been far greater than were their parents or grandparents before them. They need guidance of course in whatever they undertake, either socially or in the commercial world. And if they fail, it's because their parents have failed in properly directing them. Have not stayed on the job as parents should, in other words. As for the present day dress taken as a whole, I think its the most sensible and practical that history tels us about. And most certainly the most sanitary and economical. As for our younger generations' religious life, I think we have numbers who are just as spiritual perhaps, as have ever been the young people of any age—yet' I think fewer of them are demonstrative as were the people of days gone by—and seldom are they of the shouting variety. Its the trend of the times coupled with 20th century progress, that has brought about this new world condition, and parents and grandparents themselves have also changed marvelously under this condition that has largely been blamed on the "younger generation."

Loss of Wade To Be Felt In Area, Local Men Opine

Resignation of Manager Of W. T. C. C. Is Blow to Organization, Leaders In Local Work Declare

The resignation of Homer D. Wade as manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, announced Friday, comes as something of a blow to the inside workings of that organization. Wade, an executive in the machinery of the chamber ever since its debut, has helped make of West Texas the most talked of section in the south and west by the wide publicity given through the channels of chamber work.

No expense was spared during his term of office to sell West Texas to West Texans and, as a result, West Texas has been sold to its inhabitants. Now the question has arisen, since Wade's resignation has been made public, whether the policies of the chamber will be continued in the same channels or whether they will be changed and different angles branched into. Varied opinions have been expressed, both pro and con of the Wade administration but the majority believe that a change is due and must be made if the West Texas chamber of commerce is to continue to advance.

Growth Phenominal

Its growth in recent years has been phenomenal, according to the views of some, but these same men are firm in their belief that at this time the organization has reached the summit of its value unless a general reorganization is made and policies ordered to cope with the progress of this section of the state. West Texas, in its infancy, had to be sold to those who lived here. That was the job set for the W. T. C. C. This has been accomplished, there is no doubt of that. Now then, in order to move forward and not slide back West Texas must be sold to the world and this can only be accomplished through the chambers of commerce." This statement is the general opinion set forth by prominent men of Lubbock who are interested in chamber of commerce work and who are enthusiastic over the possibilities of West Texas.

Rix Praises Wade

W. W. Rix, of the Rix Furniture company, and a great booster of Lubbock and West Texas, said Saturday: "I am a great admirer of Mr. Wade. I believe that he is one of the best informed men I have ever known. He is a hard worker, capable and very valuable. He proved to be one of the biggest factors in getting the Technological bill through and I think Lubbock owes him and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce an eternal debt of gratitude. It is my opinion that if some of the policies are changed, money handled by the organization used conservatively, that there is hardly any limit to be reached in the service the W. T. C. C. can render."

Wells Wants Change

Spencer Wells, of Hemphill-Wells company in speaking of Mr. Wade's resignation, said: "The period of office of Mr. Wade in the organization of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce was one of very rapid development. The methods used by this man in developing a pioneering country left a marked effect over the whole section. Today West Texas is just coming into its own and, inasmuch as Mr. Wade has seen fit to step aside, it seems to me that this is the ideal time to reorganize the whole idea more along the lines of the United States chamber of commerce, this idea being more the advancement of service than of boosting. West Texas is past the "hip-ip ho rah" stage and constructive ideas and methods are needed. West Texas has sold itself to its own people, now we must force ourselves to the front in the eyes of the world. "Personally I believe Lubbock should recognize the great work done by Mr. Wade in his efforts to locate the Technological college in West Texas." Mr. Wells is a vice-president of the W. T. C. C.

These and many other expressions have been made. "I am sorry to see Mr. Wade leave West Texas and its work. He has been in it always and knows it from top to bottom. I sincerely hope and believe that his successor will be a West Texan one familiar with the needs of this section and one who will give his every effort to the advancement and progress of its representative organization." These were the words of B. Sherrod of Sherrod Brothers, former president of the local B. C. D.

Anti-Ranger Bill Up In Legislature

AUSTIN, June 8. (AP)—State rangers would be forbidden to act in any incorporated town unless requested on a petition signed by one-fourth of the citizens, or because of need as for assistance from the chief of police or sheriff, under a bill introduced today by Representative John White, Borger, fifteen other lawmakers were listed as co-authors. The bill recites that Texas cities and county authorities are able to combat lawless elements and that the present ranger force is needed on patrol the border for apprehension of liquor, narcotic and alien smugglers.

LAMESA, June 8.—J. D. Boren, former pastor of the Church of Christ at Big Spring, for the past three years, has accepted the work with the Church of Christ at Lamesa. He succeeded J. T. Barr, who is now pastor of the Church of Christ at Midland.

Paved Roads Are Great Asset To Traffic In Hale

Plainview to Be Center Of Much Tourist Trade Due To Completion of Paving Program In County

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PLAINVIEW, June 8.—Following the completion of the seventy miles of hard-surfaced roads in Hale county that are now under construction, and the linking up of several counties east and west of Hale county in the concerted action to get State Highway 28 and Federal Highway 70 paved from Vernon, to Clovis, New Mexico, and with the completion of the Hilton Hotel at Plainview giving additional first class hotel accomodations, an enormous increase in the big tourist traffic through this section is expected.

Plainview will be, and is at the present time, a day's drive from Fort Worth, and Dallas, for the average tourist, and a day's drive from El Paso on the west. It is expected that Plainview will be the night stop for tourists on their way to or from California, Old Mexico, and for those on their way to or from Dallas, Fort Worth and other eastern points. One of the best drives in the southwest is that from Plainview west to El Paso through the Lincoln National Park west of Roswell, The Mexcalero Indian Reservation, Roswell, Clovis, and Alamogordo. Four hundred and twenty miles long, the drive is easily made in one day, the roads are so good.

East of Plainview every county between Plainview and Vernon has voted bonds for the paving of the highway except Floyd county, and it is expected that it will vote them during this year. Most of the construction is under way, and before next spring the road should be paved practically all the way to Vernon. In Hale county the grading and drainage structures are being built now.

Seven Miles of Amarillo To Canyon Road Complete

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

CANYON, June 8.—Seven miles of the Canyon to Amarillo highway will be complete this week if weather conditions permit, according to county highway officials.

The Ben F. Flynn Construction company, well ahead of its contracted schedule, will complete the second unit of the new road within the next three days, it was believed. This unit will finish the paving from the foot of the hill north of Canyon to the Hollywood filling station seven miles north.

None of the paving will be opened until the five miles unit from Amarillo to Hollywood is completed according to A. E. Dyatt, county resident engineer. The system of lateral roads over which traffic is routed from Canyon during the construction of the new highway, does not make feasible opening of the units now complete until the entire slab has been laid, Mr. Dyatt said.

TOO MUCH RAIN

Wheat Crops Near Idalou Reported Damaged

Too much rain on the wheat crop from Idalou east through Crosby county, has done considerable damage and prospects are rather discouraging, according to Prof. H. J. Bower, of Texas Technological college, who is doing field work for the Texas Wheat Growers association.

Prof. Bower returned Saturday from a trip into Crosby county and reports that he will be engaged in field service for the wheat growers in Hale county this week.

Officers Reply To Editorial Which Urges Attention to More Important Crimes; Say Dozen Arrests Made

DIFFERING with an editorial appearing in Saturday morning's Avalanche, in which the newspaper urged more attention to major crimes and less to those of a minor nature, O. B. Conley, deputy sheriff, yesterday issued a statement which he said could be signed "Officers of Lubbock City and County, by O. B. Conley."

Deputy Conley's statement, in full, reads:

"Editor Avalanche-Journal:

"In reply to 'Timely Suggestions' editorial feature of the Lubbock Morning Avalanche, Saturday, June 8, 1929, we regret that you have been so badly misinformed as to law enforcement of your county and city and also request that you inform the public as to the action of the officers of your city and county.

"There has been three arrests for burglary and nine for stealing automobiles and their accessories of recent date.

"We feel that your criticism is very unjust and would like to know what your attitude would be in regard to a city which tolerated all such misdemeanor violations as you suggested.

"It grieves us to know of families in such destitute circumstances as the L. E. Lansing case mentioned in the same paper on the same day. However, the law requires us to make such arrests regardless of person or circumstances surrounding same.

"Officers of Lubbock City and County, By O. B. Conley."

Editorial Reproduced

The editorial in question led the editorial column of Saturday Avalanche and reads as follows, a perusal of which will answer the Deputy's question concerning 'a city which tolerates all such misdemeanor violations':

A TIMELY SUGGESTION

"Not so long ago a series of house robberies were reported in Lubbock, but to date no arrests have been made.

"A couple of days ago another home was entered, a filling station was looted, a car was stolen, then stripped of its accessories and left by the side of the road.

"No arrests have been made in these cases and if they have any clues as to the identity of the marauders officials of neither city nor county have seen fit to report them.

"The Avalanche is of the opinion that too much importance is being laid to observance of traffic ordinances, on breaking up petty gambling games, fining negroes for vagrancy and arresting youngsters for insignificant misdemeanors and that not enough stress is being laid upon the prevention and cure of these more serious offenses against the statutes.

"All the laws of the city and state should be upheld. There's no gainsaying that. But when too much attention is paid to the breaking of minor laws and apparently not enough to those of a more serious nature, there's bound to be an increase in the latter.

"The collection of fines for traffic law violations, intoxication, gambling and offenses of the like keep law enforcement departments on a self-suporting basis but the practice does not guarantee society, as a whole, the protection which it has the right to expect from more serious violations of our statutes. For this reason officers may be strict and stern in the matter of speeding, matching nickles and imbibing too freely of the cup that cheers, yet still not be dishing up the brand of protection which the public demands.

"The Avalanche would like to see a little more attention paid to the things that really count in this matter of law enforcement in Lubbock. It would like to see anti-intoxication, traffic, gaming and vagrancy law upholding be more of a sideline in the future than it has been in the past. After all, you know, the man who loots your home is a much more dangerous enemy to society than the fellow who spends a few hours over rollicking dominoes or who makes a "U" turn at the intersection of Texas avenue and Broadway, and it is between you and the more serious enemies of society that officers are proposed to stand."

Charles A. Guy, editor of the Avalanche-Journal publications was author of the editorial. He said yesterday that if the arrests outlined by Deputy Conley's statement had connection with the burglaries and the automobile theft mentioned in the editorial, newspaper reporters who regularly make city and county law enforcement offices had not been informed of the fact.

The story referred to in the Deputy's statement covered the case of the L. E. Lansing family, in destituted circumstances while Lansing is serving a 23-day jail sentence for alleged passing of a $5 worthless check. Lansing's fine in the case, $23.40, is being "laid out" in jail. It had no connection with the editorial.

No Sir! Chivalry Is Not Yet Dead!

Lubbock Women Of All Types Disagree With Opinion Of Much-Married Hopper That Chivalry Has Flown

By Blanche E. Bean

Do you have an inner urge to dash out and fling your top coat into the hole in the pavement for some flap to trod across on a rainy day?

Maybe you do and perhaps you are chivalrous.

Do you lend your manly shoulder to feminine tears and not scowl over the thought of a cleaner's bill for stains and lip-stick?

Perhaps and maybe so, again.

Do you tip your hat to lady acquaintances? Throw away your half-lighted two-bit cigar when you stop to engage a lady friend in conversation on the street, and do you take care that you stop only intimate acquaintances, and only when it is necessary?

Mebbe You Do

Do you fight bloody duels at sunrise over the mere mention of some woman's name? Do you rise when your stenographer enters the room and remain until she indicates that you may be seated? Do you—?

Well, this might be another questionnaire and it wouldn't be an innovation at all.

DeWolf Hopper—and it would have been a lot more convincing if some of the ex-Mrs. Hoppers had spoken—has said that chivalry is dead.

Lubbock women have an opinion, too, provided they are each given an opportunity to define chivalry—a little particular that Mr. Hopper seems to have overlooked.

Means Many Things

Chivalry may mean courtesy or kindness, consideration, fair play, some powers of observation; it may mean that rather intangible thing, good manners; or it may mean—now this is the first definition advanced by Mr. Webster—mounted men at arms; heavy cavalry of the Middle Ages; a medieval army, whose strength was in its mounted men.

Other dictionary definitions suggest that chivalry is "the rank, position, or characteristics of a feudal knight; especially, martial valor, dexterity in arms, etc.

"The dignity or system of knighthood; the spirit, usages, or manners of knighthood; the practice of knighterrantry.

"The qualifications or character of the ideal knight of the age of chivalry according to the romantic traditions, as honor, protective kindness to the weak, generosity to foes, and gallantry, chivalrousness."

They Are Interviewed

A flapper, a divorcee, a personnel worker, a public stenographer, members of a women's bridge society, an office girl in a clinic, just women, married and single, were approached for opinions.

And they agreed that real chivalry, the innate, well bred sort of thing that makes a man thoughtful to women, is a very vigorous sort of thing; but flashing armors, elaborate bows, fuss and feathers, and all such artificialities are as dead as the proverbial door nail.

"I am optimistic concerning the world and its customs. I married a man; I lived with my father and brothers and I am quite sure that genuine chivalry is not dead," one woman who has taught school and has been advisor for school boys and girls for a number of years, said, after requesting that her name should not be used.

"Sometimes, when these young boys run through a door ahead of me and slam it in my face I am inclined to believe that there is no chivalry, but I may as well attribute that to poor rearing," she laughed.

Women Responsible

"Women probably are responsible for the lack of chivalry in men in most cases," Mrs. C. J. Atchison, clerk for the 72nd and 99th district courts, explained.

"Real chivalry, that inherent and sincere kind, is certainly very much alive," she continued.

"Women don't want all those insincere actions which are associated with knighthood. We work with men and neither of us have time for such trifles. But courtesies are appreciated and this sort of chivalry is shown by most men with whom I have had dealings."

Before her election to office, Mrs. Atchison was stenographer with several prominent firms in this city, situations which have called for almost constant business association with men.

Then there is Mrs. Howard Holt, who is now with the American Automobile association with a desk in the lobby of Hotel Lubbock—a position which throws her in almost constant association with every type of man and particularly men who are away from home. Mrs. Holt has, also, just completed a college education in co-educational institutions.

Finds Lack Negligible

She finds that lack of chivalry in men is negligible characteristic.

Nurses express a preference for men patients saying that they are less querulous then women, and they find that few men forget the thoughtfulness and kindness shown them during illnesses.

"Men do sometimes forget to be courteous when they are ill, but chivalry is not dead." This was an opinion of Miss Alberta Johnston, who is now with the Lubbock Sanitarium clinic and who has been in the office of several Lubbock doctors before the clinic was organized, a position which has brought her in contact with a countless army of maimed and ailing.

Most Business-Like

"Occasionally a man will attempt to 'get fresh' when he finds that he is alone in the shop with me." Miss Glidewell Mullins, who is assistant at the Green Lantern Art Shop, said, but she hastened to explain that the majority of men who call at the shop are busnesslike and thoughtful.

There are always boors, virtually every one commented in interpreting her idea of chivalry, but these are exceptions which need not be considered in a question of whether or not men are chivalrous, they explained.

There is no further need of chivalry, several flappers thought. Women have not been granted equal privileges with men, they are able to care for themselves and chivalry, like the appendix, is of no further use.

Between bids the bridge players disagreed, qualifying chivalry and classifying men, but there seemed to be a general opinion that a lot of men are chivalrous.

The divorcee had been hard several months ago and declared that never again would she so much as have a date with a man, "the brutes," but she is softened now and did little more than smile—a doubtful opinion.

George Simpson Leads Ohio Buckeyes To National Collegiate Cinder Title

Twenty-Year-Old Streak Clips One Fifth Second From World's Record In Century to Defeat Nation's Best

Claude Bracey Nosed Out By Single Stride In 100-Yard Dash; Simpson's Mark Official at :09 2-5

By CHAS W DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

CHICAGO, June 8.—(AP)—A 20-year-old youth with a shock of brown hair, who started his brilliant career on the cinder path by request today became the fastest human of the age.

He is George Simpson, a lithe, spindle-legged streak from Ohio State University.

Competing with the fastest field ever brought together in an American meet, this smiling Buckeye streaked down the 100-yard stretch in the National Collegiate track and field championship meet on Stagg Field today in :09 2-5 seconds, clipping one-fifth of a second from the officially recognized world's mark.

Buckeyes Win Meet

The Buckeyes, winning four of the fifteen events and placing in two others, amassed a total of 50 points, with the University of Washington second with 42.

Illinois, winner of the Big Ten outdoor championship was third with 5 1-2, the University of Southern California fourth with 32, and Stanford, winner of the Inter Collegiate A. A. A. A. meet a week ago, fifth with 28. Forty-six of the 85 teams broke into the scoring.

Simpson, in his startling victory, defeated the famous Claude Bracey, the Dixie Flyer from Rice Institute and Eddie Tolan, sensational negro sprinter from the University of Michigan, who twice within two weeks had run the century in :09 5-10 seconds.

Putting his heart and soul into every step of the race and dunning with machine-like smoothness Simpson beat Bracey by a stride in a heart-breaking finish. Tolan was third, about six feet behind Bracey. Simpson got away from the mark like a shot and led from start to finish, with Bracey snapping at his heels.

Official Mark

Officials said there could be no question as to the acceptance of his record. He was timed by five watches. Two caught him in :09 3-10 and three clicked :09 4-10. Engineers immediately masured the track and found it 100 yards and one inch.

Conditions were almost perfect for Simpson's record breaking performance. The track was dry and fast. There was a moderate wind blowing across the course.

Simpson, who began his track career as a boy in Columbus, when the high school coach yanked him out of a crowd and told him to run, was the highest individual point winner of the meet, scoring twenty.

After his world record breaking performance in the century he came back to defeat virtually the same field in the 220-yard dash in 20.6 seconds, setting a new meet record. This time Tolan finished second with Bracey third.

Set Discus Record

The Buckeyes added another world's record when Pete Rasmus in the preliminaries yesterday tossed the discus 159 feet 1 7-8 inches. The mark stood through the finals this afternoon.

Two of the three meet records smashed were accounted for by two of Stanford's trio of athletes. Harlow Rothert established a new meet record in the shot put with his toss of 50 feet, 3 inches in the preliminaries yesterday and R. W. Edmonds came back today to tie Tommy Warne of Northwestern for a new meet record in the pole vault with a leap of 13 feet, 7 7-8 inches.

THRILLED BY DUBBING

Tony Lazzeri's debut in a world series, it is a matter of record, was none too auspicious. Toney was caught in the toughest spot of the whole series when everything depended on him for a hit. And old Pete Alexander struck him out.

Nevertheless, Lazzeri says the spot, even if it made him look bad, offered him the greatest thrill he has had in the major leagues.

"Alex was called out of the bull pen in that seventh inning and we all knew that he hadn't warmed up," Lazzeri's story goes. "It was my turn to hit, and I asked Huggins if I should hit the first one Huggins said no and that I should wait him out. If I could get a pass I would force in a run.

DIDN'T OBEY THE BOSS

"But I went up to the plate decided to knock the hide off the ball and win the game. It might have been different if I had followed orders, although Old Pete sure has control.

"The first one was bad, high and wide and Alex grooved the next one and caught me looking at it. I fouled the third one and decided to hit the next one Old Pete must have read my mind. He threw a slow curve on the outside. I knew it was a ball, but I was all set to swing and I couldn't stop. I let go at it and missed it by eight inches and I was the goat of the series.

PETE DIDN'T STIFFEN HIM

I read some accounts of the game saying that Alex froze me with a look when he started to pitch to me. Maybe I was tightened up, but I wasn't scared. He got me because he outsmarted me."

GAME NOT DEAD UP THERE

Owners of the clubs in the Eastern League have lamented for years that they have to endure a dead season until the middle of June. They claim that they have to compete with college baseball until the boys get out of the class rooms and they admit that they can't compete with some of the college teams.

This may be a surprising situation inasmuch as baseball has been abandoned in a number of higher educational institutions and that the game has degenerated into a minor sport in others.

PACKED HOUSE FOR GAME

But in Worcester, Mass., the schedule for the professional league has to be arranged so that it does not conflict with the games arranged by Holy Cross College.

A recent game between Holy Cross and Boston College drew a crowd of 10,000 customers and the crowd saw Frank Nekola, the Holy Cross pitcher, shut out Boston with one hit.

Nekola is the pitcher who is said to be better than Owen Carroll was when he was in college. All the major league scouts were after him, but the Yankees have him.

Firey Hornsby In National League Spotlight

Now that the National League is tightening up into a race that gives promise of being one of the closest in recent years, the subject of Rogers Hornsby and his influence on the Chicago Cubs is again brought to the front.

With the teams of the first division so closely bunched and the daily scrambling of positions, the next few weeks should give some insight into what fighting spirit the Texan has added to the club.

When Hornsby was first corralled by the Wrigley millions, many opinions were voiced that the Rajah was just the necessary batting impetus the Bruins needed to win the pennant.

But there were also quite a few who thought Hornsby would be more of a handicap than a boon to McCarthy's clan. They pointed to his stormy record with the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Giants. They asked why the Boston Braves were so eager to part with him.

Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, recently was quoted to the effect that Hornsby would do any team more harm than good. He went further to say that he thought Maguire, the man who went to the Braves for Hornsby, would have been of much more value to the Cubs right now, his better fielding more than offsetting the extra batting Rogers would furnish. To make his argument more forceful he said he'd rather have his Hughie Critz than a dozen Hornsbys.

Here is what Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs, has to say: "This talk of how Rogers Hornsby is going to wreck my team is the bunk! There isn't a man on the team who hustles like Hornsby. He's the first man on the field every day and he's in bed every night long before midnight. He is constantly thinking and talking baseball. What more can a manager ask?"

California raises lemons, quinces and prunes, but there is none of these on your California track teams.

Of course, it's the climate. Trackmen can run around all year in Beeveedees without fear of arrest.

They say Iowa can get back into the Big Ten as soon as the school demonstrates it isn't proselyting any more. That ought to be easy. They can lose a game to Chicago.

Ambition and optimism are not dead yet. More than 1,000 people have signed their willingness to compete in the National Open against a young lawyer from Atlanta.

Serious fears were expressed here and there for the destiny of the New York Giants—until they played Chicago a couple of games recently. The plans for the wake have been changed. It's to be a wild party.

Pmock of the Yanks has been suffering from boils and Meusel has had a bad cold. Huggins ought to seat the boys next to one another on the bench and maybe they'd neutralize.

That's the part Cincinnati has been playing—strictly neutral.

National League Leader Drops To .399 Bat Average

Frank O'Doul Still In Van Of Senior Circuit Slugging; .400 Hitters Disappear

NEW YORK, June 8. (AP)— The name of Frank O'Doul, Philadelphia slugger still appears on top of the individual batting table in the National League, but this week the figure opposite it is .399. The four-hundred hitted has disappeared in Jno. Heydler's circuit, probably for the rest of the season. The averages were issued today, including games of last Wednesday.

Taylor Douthit, of St. Louis, with 44 runs, is the leading scorer, while his teammate, Chick Hafey, tops the field in runs batted in with 49. Frank Frisch and Andy High of St. Louis are tied for the greatest hit total, 65, while Frisch leads alone in doubles with 17. The Fordham Flash also enjoys a tie with Lloyd Waner of the Pirates with seven triples.

Klein Leads In Homers

The St. Louis monopoly is broken in home runs with Charlie Klein of the Phillies leading with 14, but Hafey is next with 13. Babe Herman of Brooklyn and Kiki Cuyler of Chicago are tied for the greatest number of steals, 12 each.

Other leading regular batsmen are: Hendrick, Brooklyn, .394; Herman, Brooklyn, .379; Terry, New York, .374; Stephenson, Chicago, .370; Frederick, Brooklyn, .365; High St. Louis, and Klein, Philadelphia, .363; Cuyler Chicago .362 and Clark of Boston .361. Rogers Hornsby was well down the line with .331.

Berleigh Grimes tops the pitchers with nine victories and no defeats, and also leads with 101 innings pitched in 13 games. Charley Root of Chicago is the only other boxman to work in so many contests, while Red Lucas of Cincinnati shares first place with Grimes in complete games, each having nine. Sylvester Johnson of St. Louis is second to Grimes in pitching, with five victories and no defeats.

Others Undefeated

Other members of the undefeated circle are Irvin Brame of Pittsburgh and Clise Dudley of Brooklyn, each with three victories; and Harold Haid of St. Louis, Ray Moss of Brooklyn and Elmer Hearn of Boston, each with two.

The Phillies remain on top in team batting, this time with .314, but the rampaging Pirates not only have ousted the Cubs from second place but have joined the Phils in the .200 class with a mark of just .300. The Cubs have plunged down the ladder to fourth with .291.

Chicago leads in team fielding with .975 to .973 for the Giants.

West Texas Youth Takes Gruelling Match For Crown

Nineteen-Year-Old Abilene Sensation Comes Back Strong After Ragged Round In Morning

By GAYLE TALBOR, JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, June 7. (AP)—Fighting back doggedly after a ragged morning round that left him two down at the intermission, Dennis Lavender, imperturbable Abilene youth, came from behind to catch Lanham Connor, Dallas crack, on the home stretch and defeat him, 1 up, for the Texas amateur golf crown here today.

Fully 1,000 spectators braved the scorching sun to follow the youngsters in their gruelling struggle for the 1929 links toga. It was the first time in 23 years history of the Texas Golf association that a final match had gone the full 36 holes. Both players were worn when the last put hit the cup.

Fights Uphill Battle

Almost from the start of the match Lavender was forced to fight uphill. His putting, brilliant in four previous matches, went bad in the championship tilt, and the straight shooting Connor quickly piled up an advantage. At the end of the first nine the Dallas star was 1 up and as Lavender's putts continued to rim the cup, Connor increased his advantage to two holes at the turning point. Both had miserable first rounds, Connor an 80 and Lavender an 81.

Refreshed after an hour's rest, the pair came back to show the gallery some fine golf in the afternoon, although Lavender's putter still refused to function properly. When he three-putted the first hole in the afternoon Connor's lead was increased to three up, and it looked like the Dallas star was in.

The Tide Turns

That marked the turning point. Lavender, cool as a cucumber, began knocking the flag out of the hole with his approaches and won three successive holes with a birdie and two pars to square the match. From there it was nip and tuck, Connor going ahead again at the twenty-third, Lavender squaring with a birdie two on the twenty-sixth, and Connor regaining his advantage with a birdie three on the twenty-seventh.

The first three holes on the last nine were halved. Then Connor, weary from the strain, three-putted the thirty-first and the match was square again. The Dallas youngster rallied to halve the thirty-second with a par four to hold his own, but he only delayed the killing, as Lavender apparently was gaining strength with every shot.

Lavender Gets Break

At the long thirty-third, a 540-yard hole, came the break that put the Abilene star into the lead for the first time in twenty-seven holes and probably decided the match. After Connor had made two great recovery shots to lay up for a possible par, Lavender sank his 40-footer for a birdie four. It was the first sizeable putt knocked in by the new champion all day.

Lavender went two up with a par three on the thirty-fourth, and, although Connor made a splendid recovery on next to the last hole, a spear a birdie and decrease his rival's advantage to one up, the West Texas boy closed the gate by matching Connor's five on the home green. Lavender turned in a fine 72 on the second round, while Connor could manage no better than a 76.

Only a Youngster

The new state titleholder is one of the youngest ever to ascend the throne, having just celebrated his nineteenth birthday. His victory over a formidable field of 208 players this week gives him two of the state's major links titles and ranks him in the forefront of the nation's sons. He has held the West Texas championship a year and will defend his title in the meet starting Monday at Stamford.

With the exception of his putting today, Lavender did not display any flaw in the five-day test. His driving is long and straight and his approaching deadly in its accuracy. In addition to this, he has the temperament of a veteran and the physical stamina to carry him through. When the slender Connor appeared to wilt in the intense heat Lavender looked almost fresh.

Hagen Brings Cup Back To U. S. A.

NEW YORK, June 8. (AP)—Five great golfers came home today from the golfing wars in Europe furnishing a guard of honor for the British open championship cup, which arrived at quarantine for its first consecutive annual visit. The famous 60-year-old trophy was greeted by customs officers as an old friend and given the freedom of the city for the eighth time in the last nine years.

Walter Hagen, who won the British cup for the fourth time, and Muirfield last month, was a leader in seeing it safely into the hands of the United States by Johnny Farrell, Horton Smith, Joe Turnesa and Ed Dudley. The other members of the victorious cup team preceded their leader home.

Ruth Anxious To Get Back In Harness Before Athletics Run Off With Flag

Rookie Gardener With Reds Rates As Real "Find"

CINCINNATI, O., June 8.—It looks as if Jack Hendricks had hit youngsters mixed when he was roaming young outfielders during the spring training period.

Hendricks was telling the world the many things that Marty Callaghan and Estel Crabtree would do as regulars this season, but both Callaghan and Crabtree were shunted to the minors weeks ago and the young star today in the Reds' outfield is Evar Swanson.

Evar Swanson

Swanson played out in the Pacific Coast League last summer and batted for an average of .346. He has been in almost every game for the Reds this season and has been hitting around .300. His play, during the early weeks of the campaign, makes him stand out as one of the best rookies of the year.

L. R. Keeth has returned to Amarillo after a business visit in Lubbock.

J. N. Moore has returned to his home in Becton following his discharge Saturday from a hospital here.

Sultan Of Swat Must Take It Easy For Period Of Time

By ALLEN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, June 8. (AP)— Babe Ruth, the not-so-pale but always interesting invalid, granted an audience today to the representatives of his subjects, otherwise "newspaper fellas," just to prove that he has lost neither the power of lung nor limb.

"Hey, do I look so sick or all through?" bellowed the Babe as he greeted the vanguard of a dozen reporters, whose admittance to the presence of the king of clout was deftly arranged by his business manager, Christy Walsh.

The answer was reassuring and convincing. There seemed no reason for it to be otherwise. The Babe, except for some shakiness due to nearly a week's confinement, has lost none of his ruddy color, his good spirits and banter or his impatient desire to be back in the game.

Far From Pink

Yet there seems no question that Ruth has been a sick man and that he still is far from being in the pink of condition. He admits he could feel a lot better but the pains in his chest, resulting from a severe cold, and twinges across the shoulders have largely disappeared, he said. He has been sitting up most of the past two days, and he is indignant at the exaggerated reports of his illness.

"It looks like a guy has got to die before the people are satisfied nowadays," he bewailed.

What everybody wants to know is when Ruth will be back in the game. It is somewhat indefinite but here's what he says about that:

"I ought to be back in there soon. Believe me, I'm going to be in there before that series with the Athletics that starts at the stadium on June 21.

"The Doc, (Dr. E. A. King) thinks I'll be O. K. by then but he says, first, that I should ga away from the city for three or four days for a change of scenery. Then, even when I get back, he demands that I stay out of exhibition games and do not play in complete doubleheaders, and the club officials say 'he's the boss'."

Jimmy Foxx Still Murdering Junior Circuit Pitching

Mack's Handy Man Loses 14 Points But Holds Edge Over Mickey Cochrane; Lazarri Climbs to 3rd

CHICAGO, June 8.— (AP)—Still whaling the ball at better than a .400 clip, Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia first baseman continued to set the batting pace in the American League at the end of the seventh week of the campaign. He lost 14 points during the week, but had an average of 410.

Some distance back of Conny Mack's handy man was his teammate, Mickey Cochrane, who added a point to his mark for .388.

The biggest gain of the period was made by Tony Lazzeri of the Yankees, who picked up an additional 23 points to jump from eleventh position to third with an average of .364. Other leaders were: Fathergill, Detroit, .362; E. Rice, Washington, .361; Narlesky, Boston, .358; Simmons, Philadelphia, .353; Kamm, Chicago, .345; Jamieson, Cleveland, .342 and Gehringer, Detroit, .340.

Detroit remained in second place but dropped below .300 for the first time during the season, winding up the week with .299.

The task of taking a game from George Uhle finally was accomplished by the Athletics who trimmed him and the Tigers in a 13-inning contest. Uhle held his place at the top of the department, however, with a record of nine victories and one defeat. Robert Moses Grove won two games to raise his standing to eight triumphs and one setback. Eddie Rommel of the Athletics and Warren Collins, St. Louis Browns, each won a contest for standings of four won and none lost.

Washington and St. Louis again exchanged places in their team duel. The Senators led with an average of .796, with the Browns a point behind. DALLAS, June 8. (AP)—His batting wings unclipped, Starr, Shreveport catcher, continued to lead Texas league batters through Thursday's games with a fat average of .420. Lubbock Hubbers play a return game with the Lamesa Loboes on the latter's diamond this afternoon. The game is called for 3:30.

The following will make the trip today: Infielders—Morgan, Rigney, Gaither, Ater, Wooten; outfielders—Hensley, Jackson and B. Wilson; catcher, D. Waller; pitchers—R. Waller and Wells.

A large number of local fans are expected to be on hand at Lamesa for the game.

Thurston Ballyhoos Return Trip To Majors With Booming Bat

By NEA Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—If early season performances mean anything, the major league magnates will be waving to get Hollis Thurston a little more vehemently than they waived him away in 1927.

Thurston, in two years in the Pacific Coats league, has shown himself to be an effective hurler, a walloping hitter, a capable first baseman and an outfielder of parts.

Los Angeles fans now are preparing to tender the slender right-hander a "Hollis Thurston Day." This, mind you, in spite of the fact that he is with San Francisco and also the further fact that he never has won a game in which he has pitched in the movie city.

Thurston

"My arm is right again, for the first time in a couple of years," he explains his rejuvenation. "I think I still belong in the big show and I expect to go back again."

The former White Sox and Senator isn't too old to return to the majors. He went up for the first time in 1923 to St. Louis, but Chicago claimed him when he was about to be sent back. After service with Chicago and Washington, he was waived out.

As a pitcher, Thurston won nine games and lost seven in 1928. However, that was only part of his chores. He played first in 85 games. He played the outfield. He hit .347 in 129 games and was named as utility man on the all-star team.

This year, he won seven of his first 10 games and has appeared in more than half of the games the Seals have played. And he's treating the league to some plain and fancy hitting, ranking third among the league batters in middle May with an average of .467.

It won't come as any great surprise to Pacific coast experts if Thurston trains down south next spring with some major league club.

British Amateur Crown At Stake

SANDWICH, Eng., June 8. (AP)—A record entry of 253 golfers, including young John Dawson who has been heralded in England as "The Bobby Jones of Chicago," and nearly a dozen other Americans of less reputation, will start Monday in the British amateur championship over the Royal St. George's course, skirting the English channel.

The trophy and title will go the player who survives seven 18-hole matches and the 36-hole final next Saturday.

Dawson is a co-favorite with T. P. Perkins, the champion at odds of five to one.

The second game was a Red Sox victory, 4 to 1, with Milton Gaston registering his third consecutive victory. A feature of the second game was that not a White Sox outfielder had a single chance. Race Tightens In Local City League

First Month of Season Closes With Four Closely Matched Teams Battling For Leadership

Lubbock's City Baseball League closed its fourth week of the current season Friday with the four teams in the race batting for supremacy in what promises to be a close tussle throughout the remainder of the season.

Auto-Barbers added another victory at the expense of the Carpenter-Painters and pulled away a full game from the Hardware and Santa Fe teams, tied for second place in the league. The leaders are now two games behind in their schedule, the Tuesday tilt with the Hardware dealers being stopped by a windstorm.

The Carpenter-Painters were buried deeper in the cellar by losing both games during the week, one to the Santa Fe and the other to the Auto-Barbers. Both games were lost by a one point margin.

Hardware dealers and Auto-Barbers will meet tomorrow in a postponed contest.

Standing of the Teams

CLUB	P	W	L	Pct
Auto Barbers	6	4	2	.667
Hardware Dealers	6	3	3	.500
Santa Fe	8	4	4	.500
Carpenter-Painters	8	3	5	.375

Santa Fe Meets Tradesmen Today

Two arch rivals of the Lubbock City League clash at Merrill Park this afternoon in what promises to be a rare baseball exhibition. The Carpenter-Painters and Santa Fe nines have been at each other's throats throughout the first month of the current season and will give vent to their feelings in today's encounter which begins at 3:30.

Not content with their regular week-day battles, these two teams are matched today in a full nine-inning contest that will give both an opportunity to get the desired revenge.

Managers Perry and Hargrove of the Carpenter-Painter and Santa Fe teams respectively will have their big guns in their lineups today. Dunlap will likely be on the firing line for the Railroaders and Helton for the Tradesmen.

Farmers Responsible For Relief Action, Stokes Says

Prosperity Is In Hands Of Farmers With Cooperation

Short Cotton Crop and Good Price Foreseen By Head Of Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Asseociation

Pressure that has been brought to bear by the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association, at Austin and Washington, along with continued insistence from many other farmer co-operative organizations, is responsible for the present action of congress in making a gesture at farm relief, is the declaration of Lynn Stokes of Ballinger.

Mr. Stokes is president of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton association and general manager of the Texas Farm Bureau Gin corporation. He spoke to about 250 farmers of Lubbock and surrounding counties Friday night, at the regular monthly meeting of the county bureau, held in the Shallowater community house.

A Start in Right Direction

"The present farm bill is good," declared Stokes. "The $500,000,000 fund provided in it is a start in the right direction.

"It has taken several years work on the part of co-operatives to gain today's attention and to impress upon congress that the farm is the primary source of income of the United States.

"Farmers are not asking favors, nor a penance. We are not asking any more than labor, industry, or the railroads have asked. But, we know that you must either raise agriculture up to the level of other industries, or else lower the level of others to where agriculture is. We can not last long in the present lop-sided position."

Prosperity Rests With Farmer

Stokes declared that the farmer holds the prosperity of farms in the palm of his hand, if he will co-operate and let congress know what he wants, and that he is trying only to do the right thing.

"Stabilization of the cotton market is the only thing that can drive the speculator out of business," he contends. "Legislation can not eliminate him, but you can, if you hold your cotton. Speculators can't control the futures, unless they control the spots."

The Farm Bureau was compelled to form a subsidiary organization and go into the gin business, Stokes explained, because of practices by some ginners. The project is one of the steps essential to carrying out the program started by the bureau in shortening the gap existing between the producer of cotton and the spinner. He declared that in the past eight years of its existence the bureau had cut the distance in half, eliminating many middlemen who formerly made money off of handling cotton that now goes to the farmer.

The program, as he explained, is to take cotton from the farmer to the spinner and handle each process it goes through at every step of the way, or control the process.

"Our bureau organization is designed to do just what the chambers of commerce are doing for your town)—raising and bettering conditions."

Two years ago the Farm Bureau organized its gin corporation, operating 16 gins the first season and ginning 27,000 bales of cotton. Last year 34 gins were owned and operated, a total of 50,000 bales being handled during the season. The 34 plans represent approximately $1,000,000 in buildings and equipment, all financing having been done by the co-operative.

Of the 34 gins in Texas, 22 of them are in West Texas and 14 of these located on the South Plains, Mr. Stokes explains.

"Every gin we operated last year made its community more money than the initial cost of the plant. And the profits made went back into the pockets of the farmers who belong to the organization.

As to price outlook for cotton this year, Stokes said:

"Last August 1, over 4,000,000 bales were left over. This year, at the present outlook, there will not be more than one million. It looks like an impossibility for a 16,000,000 bale or higher crop this year, and from all indications, the present crop has been oversold by about a million pounds."

New Merico Buys Hale County Bulls

Seven Animals From Circles In And Around Plainview Sold to Three Counties In New Mexico

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PLAINVIEW, June 8.—Seven pure bred registered Jersey bulls produced in Hale county, and all but one aired by Hale county circle bulls were sold to breeders in Eastern New Mexico for foundation animals through the offices of county agent, R. M. Millhollin of Plainview, who located the animals wanted by the buyers.

J. O. Wood, of Clovis, county agent of Curry county, New Mexico, with a group of farmers from his county, and Ralph R. Wills, Roosevelt county agent with a group of Portales farmers came to Plainview and purchased the animals direct from their owners.

Go To Bull Circles

Four of the bulls go to a bull circle in Curry county. Two bulls go to Roosevelt county, one one to a private use in Clovis. Three of the four bulls that will make up the Clovis bull circle come from Register of Merit Dams tested in Hale county as a part of the work that Millhollin is doing for dairy develop-

Easy To Put Up Preserves With a Pressure Cooker Advises Experts

EASY TO PUT UP PRESERVES

The easiest way to have a well stocked preserve cupboard at the end of the season is to can a few jars here and a few jars there of each of the fresh fruits as they appear. In this way, the work is not so heavy and it is astonishing how quickly one shelf after another is filled and ready for winter.

The woman who has a pressure cooker will find that this canning requires little time, effort or expense. Also it is endorsed by the United States department of agriculture as being the only safe method of cold pack canning. This is because the high steam pressure effectively kills all germs and makes spoilage virtually impossible.

Strawberries are the first fruit to appear, and it is well to put up plenty of these as they are a favorite on almost every table.

Use sound, ripe berries, thoroughly picked over, washed and hulled. Pack them into clean glass jars, shaking them down lightly. Cover them with a syrup composed of two parts of sugar to one of water. Put on the rubbers and tops of the jars, partly screwed on. Pour two cups of water into the bottom of the pressure cooker and set the jars on the rack. Cook for five minutes at ten pounds pressure. Do not open the petcock of the cooker until the steam guage has come down to zero. Then open and remove the jars. When cold, store in a dark place.

Dawson Farmer Successful With Jersey Breeding

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

LAMESA, June 8.—J. M. Peterson, farmer of Dawson county and Jersey breeder of the lower South Plains has the distinction of owning some of the very best milk cow stock in this section.

Recently, Peterson refused $500 for a bull calf he has. This calf has the following record: a double great grandson of Sophie 19, the world's champion long distance dairy cow, a grandson of Sophie Agnes with a record of 16,212 lbs. milk and 1000.01 lbs. butter fat. He has 7 own aunts that produced 114 lbs. butter fat, in 30 days, 211 lbs. in 60 days or 325 lbs. fat in 90 days. He has a first cousin on his mother's side that holds the world's record for one year with 23,677 lbs. milk, 1,197 lbs. butter fat.

His mother made 19,033 lbs. milk, 879 lbs. fat in 365 days at two years and 5 months old. Sold to Ed C. Lasater at the age of 5 years for $2500 has made all the big fairs of the United States and a tour of Old Mexico, taking blue ribbons in most places.

Tahoka Men Are Proving Profits Of Poultry Work

Taylor White, County Agent And Verner Smith, Have Success In Conducting Work In Past Year

(Special To The Avalanche)

TAHOKA, June 8.—Taylor White, president of the Tahoka Chamber of Commerce and teacher of high school vocational agriculture, and Verner Smith, are proving that poultry raising is a very profitable business, even in town where space is limited.

A little over a year ago, Messrs White and Smith bought 1,500 White Leghorn baby chicks, raised them to the broiler stage, and sold all but 600 pullets. This year they are brooding off 2,000 baby chicks and are keeping 300 of last year's hens. From their flock they have realized a profit of $2 per hen, above feeding and other expenses, in addition to the young chickens and culls that were sold on the market. They consider this an excellent profit, especially considering the fact that the chickens were raised on a quarter of a city block for range and that all the feed given them was bought at market prices.

Hatchery In Operation

A hatchery of 15,000 egg capacity is operated in connection with the chicken farm, and 60,000 chicks have been delivered to farmers near here during the season. Next year they plan to double the capacity of the hatchery. In the fall, during the months of September and October, Mr. White and Mr. Smith will start a unique practice of operating the hatchery to meet a growing demand for fall-hatched chickens.

Every farmer should have 200 or 300 standard-bred laying hens on his farm," Mr. White says. "Any farmer should be able to make an excellent profit from chickens, and, properly handled, any city dweller who has only room for a small pen in his back yard can make an excellent profit, in addition to supplying the table with eggs and meat."

WHEAT GROWERS TO HOLD MEET

The wheat growers of the Abernathy vicinity will meet in that city next Friday night, for the purpose of discussing plans for handling this year's crop, according to Prof. H. J. Bower of Texas Tech, who is doing field service during the summer for the Texas Wheat Growers association.

Chris Benn is manager of the wheat growers organization at Abernathy.

Lynn County Crop Prospects Bright

Planting Of Feed Finished In Territory; Outlook Is Good Despite Recent Hail Damage In Areas

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

TAHOKA, June 8.—With the past few days of good weather, Lynn county farmers have almost finished planting feed and cotton. Farmers report from practically the entire county that there was never a better season in the ground, and that prospects for a big crop this fall are excellent in spite of the fact that it will be a little late and of the recent hail damage. There will be very little increase in acreage, bankers declare, however, there will possibly be a little larger acreage in cotton than last year due to the fact that the farmers as a whole have an extraordinary large supply of feed on hand to start the fall and winter with.

The largest fruit crop in the county's history is due to be gathered unless a destructive hail hits this section. Cherry, peach, apple, plum, pear and apricot trees are loaded down. There is also a large crop of grapes and berries.

Business of railways in France continues to increase.

Diversification Stressed In Spur

Poultry Work, Dairying And Other Features Sponsored By Chamber of Commerce As Building Flocks

(Special To The Avalanche)

SPUR, June 8.—Much is being done in the Spur country to build up the standards of the various farm products marketed here. Recently the County Agent E. L. Tanner, working with the Retail Merchants association and the Chamber of Commerce began a campaign for the production of infertile eggs.

The chamber of commerce securred stamps for marking the eggs, and the farmers have co-operated by selling off their male birds. A premium is being paid by the local grocerymen for stamped infertile eggs, and the idea of quality is going to be paramount both with the farmer and merchants. The idea of a rigid culling campaign, with a view of building up the flocks of the Spur country, is being worked out, and those who are sold on the idea will not try to produce fertile eggs from their whole flock, but will select from their flock some ten or twelve birds for their breeding pen or pens and with the money that they have been paying for several cockerels they will buy one or two high quality birds for their ma... ings, and with this practice ov... period of years they will be abl... build up some very enviable floc...

ABERNATHY BOY HOLDS RESPONSIBLE POSITION

Rudolf Fuchs, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fuchs, formerly of Abernathy, returned recently from New York City, where he has been doing advanced studying in music.

He left this week for Canyon, where he will have charge of the art department at the West Texas State Teachers College.

Mr. Fuchs has made wonderful progress in his music and will likely some day make his mark among musicians.

Misses Erna and Tony Goeth and Louise von Struve visited friends and relatives at Tatum, New Mexico, this week.

W. A. Goeth and family and Miss Meta Ulrich, are expected back in a few days, from Hays and Blanco counties, where they have been visiting relatives for several days.

Mrs. Lockney C. James returned Wednesday, from Plains, Texas, where her son, George has been attending school. Her son accompanied her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Choat, of Houston, Texas, stopped in Abernathy for a while Wednesday. They were on their way home from Colorado, where they spent their vacation.

Mrs. Choat is a sister to Mrs. J. C. Hurst, wife of Editor Hurst of the Abernathy Review. They were anxious to get home and see what damage the storm and flood had done in their absence.

Henry Fox and C. W. Bohannon, former citizens of this community, but now living near Plains, Texas, were here for a few days this week, shaking hands with old acquaintances.

Thy report crops in good condition there. Plenty of rain and most crops up to a good stand.

Margie Clayton, of Tulia, Texas, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. C. E. Donnell, here for a week or two. She reports wheat in fine shape around Tulia.

The hail which fell here Wednesday was not very destructive. Gardens and fruit suffered more than anything else. Very little damage has been reported from the wheat farmers, as the territory hit by the hail was not very extensive.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. R. A. McAllister, a young son. He has been christened Kenneth Robert.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl G. Goodman, of Plainview, passed through Abernathy, Tuesday. Mr. Goodman has been advised by his physician not to attend to his regular duties as active vice-president of the Security State bank, at Plainview, and he is spending his time recuperating by looking after his interests outside of the bank. He has considerable interests around Abernathy.

Mrs. F. W. Struve and Miss Elsie Struve returned this week from an extended visit in South and Central Texas. They report heavy rains and floods in all of that part of the state.

The First State bank has received some samples of the new currency issued by the government. It is not ready to be put in circulation as yet, but the samples look good to us. Since the bills are smaller in size perhaps they wil lnot be so hard to get, as the old bills were. At least we hope they will.

Transformation Of Slaton Is One Of Plains' Sagas

Santa Fe Center Blooms Into One Of Texas' Finest

Bald Prairie Is Turned To Bustling City In Brief Span Of 17 Years; People Proud Of Record

BY LLOYD A. WILSON
Special Correspondent

SLATON, June 8—Transformed from a bald prairie in 1911 to a modern city of over 6,000 people, and ranking third in size now among cities within a radius of 100 miles roundabout—that's the astounding record made by the city of Slaton in the last 18 years—years that have witnessed a most amazing era of expansion and growth.

Established on June 15, 1911, by Santa Fe Railway company, Slaton will observe her eighteenth birthday on Saturday, June 15, this year. Since 1920 the population has increased from 1,525 to its present figure, and in the past seven years building permits have reached an annual average of over $350,000. This year's total is now well above $200,000. For the second week in May, Slaton held fifth place in the state building total, being outranked only by Houston, Fort Worth, Dallas and San Antonio.

Give Slaton Time

It is said Slaton is the third largest town, not a county seat town, west of Fort Worth. The only two larger ones are much older. Given as much time, Slaton bids fair to go far beyond them.

Slaton is commonly referred to as "The Santa Fe Center of West Texas." This is because the city is the division point for 542 miles of Santa Fe railway lines which extend out into almost every corner of the South Plains, and because of the large division point facilities located here.

The main line of the Santa Fe from Sweetwater to Farwell, the north line toward Amarillo as far as Canyon, and branch lines to Lamesa, Crosbyton, Floydada, Seagraves and Bledsoe are all on the Slaton division.

Repair Shops There

To serve this area, large repair shops, a roundhouse with 18 locomotive stalls, extensive yards, division superintendent's offices club room for employees and many other facilities are maintained at division point headquarters in Slaton. The company's total Slaton investment now approximates $5,000,000, and is being enlarged each year.

Employed in Slaton and as trainmen on the Slaton division are hundreds of people who live in Slaton, giving this city a railroad payroll of splendid proportions. This, added to other industries' payrolls, helps to make Slaton one of the most substantial cities in West Texas.

In Ranch Section

When Slaton was established in 1911, the surrounding country was exclusively a ranch territory, sparsely settled. Today there are thousands of farms, 1,200 farmers residing in Slaton's immediate trade area. They produce cotton, grain sorghums, oats, wheat, fruits, vegetables, livestock, and many other products, and engage extensively in dairying and poultry raising. Virtually any crop grown elsewhere in Texas can be produced sucessfully here. The annual agricultural income for Slaton's trade territory is approximately $3,000,000.

Dairying is growing enormously throughout the Slaton country. A new creamery, with annual capacity of 1,000,000 pounds of butter, was opened this spring. Since then, five carloads of fine milk cows have been added to the herds of this section. A bull circle, with four young registered Jersey bulls, was organized last year by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce. Better and larger herds are rapidly coming to all the farms. Cream checks are paying the farmer's current expenses and the money crops remain as a surplus.

Two Hatcheries Here

Poultry raising during the past five years has increased 500 per cent. Two hatcheries operate here, one, with capacity of 48,000 eggs, is owned by E. L. Hicks, while the other, with 10,000 egg capacity, is owned by Mrs. H. M. Binion. Besides serving a large local area, many other parts of Texas and even other states are served by these hatcheries.

In March, this year, Slaton adopted almost unanimously a special city charter form of government, permitted for cities of 5,000 population or larger. This Home Rule charter is expected to greatly aid in more rapidly developing the resources of the city and section.

Slaton now boasts 35 blocks of paved streets, costing $300,000; a modern telephone system costing $80,000; natural gas, electric light and power service; splendid street lighting, including a "white way"; large ice plant; one of the best water and sewer systems in West Texas, the daily water supply amounting to 1,600,000 gallons; two municipal buildings costing $40,000; a $25,000 hospital building now under construction; one of the largest cotton oil mills in the state; a cotton compress with capacity of 1,500 bales daily; a grain elevator and grain heads threshing plant costing $25,000; an efficient fire department with fine equipment ;a club house costing $20,000; three public parks; two splendid theatres, one with Vitaphone equipment; six modern cotton gins; two banks; a semi-weekly newspaper; seven churches; four public schools and one parochial school, the scholastic enrollment reaching 1,466 this year, and the teaching staff numbering 50; free city mail delivery, all houses numbered and streets marked; and more than 150 retail and wholesale business firms.

Slaton's remarkable growth has been hastened by the aggressive work of her citizens through the local Chamber of Commerce, Horace Hawkins is president, T. A. Worley, jr., is vice-president, and the other members of the board of directors are: J. H. Brewer, H. S. Riggs, W. H. Smith, J. A. Elliott, George G. Green, O. Z. Ball, R. P. Burks, M. V. Uzzell, J. W. Hood, A. J. Payne, CarlCarl W. George, T. E. Roderick, and Dr. W. E. Payne. These men also constitute the Board of City Development, of which J. H. Brewer is president and T. E. Roderick is vice-president.

The immediate outlook in Slaton and surrounding territory is considered unusually good, farm prospects being excellent, and giving promise of another prosperous year.

New Railroad Will Open Up Greater West Texas Areas

Application Is Made For Line From Fredericksburg To San Angelo; Gives Direct Gulf Outlet

(By Associated Press)

SAN ANTONIO, June 8—A railroad line which was conceived two years ago to open up a new territory is one step nearer realization. Application for a permit to construct the line from Fredericksburg, to San Angelo, has been filed with the Interstate Commerce commission.

The application was filed by the Gulf and West Texas Railroad. Two years ago a group of San Angelo business men came to San Antonio and proposed the new line to the Chamber of Commerce. The Gulf and West Texas company was organized, and three directors each from Corpus Christi, San Antonio and San Angelo named.

The routes have been surveyed tentatively, and most of the cities to be effected have raised their quotas of the $1,250000 worth of 7 per cent preferred stock which the road proposed to issue.

Two routes have been suggested in the application. One would utilize the Fredericksburg and Northern, and Southern Pacific from San Antonio to Fredericksburg, and the other would call for the laying of rails to Fredericksburg to Wetmore, a point about 15 miles north of San Antonio on the Missouri-Pacific. From Fredericksburg the road would run through Mason, Broady and Eden to San Angelo, using the Santa Fe tracks from Brady to Eden.

The new route would give the San Angelo area a direct outlet to the Gulf of Mexico.

Theses ocntests, which include bull-dogging, roping, riding and all regular rodeo features, are open to every cowboy in the Panhandle, Oklahoma, and New Mexico, Mr. Taylor said. Baptists Depart From Church, Is Survey's Report

(By Associated Press)

DENVER, June 8.—Approximately 400,000 members of the Baptist faith have severed their connection with the church in the last 15 years, a survey prepared for presentation to the Northern Baptist convention which convenes in Denver next week revealed today.

The survey compiled by five prominent clergymen of the denomination also recites that despite salary increases effected in the last decade ministers still remain the lowest paid class of men in the nation.

DALLAS, June 8.—(AP)—Plans for an evangelistic campaign for 50,000 new members by the end of the present quarter were made here today at the executive board meeting of the Texas Baptist church.

Attempt also will be made to increase the number of churches from 809 to 1,000. Revivals and other phases of evangelism will be given special attention, it was said.

South Africa is reducing its income taxes.

Mother Was Cause Youth Robs Rather Than Pull Weeds

LOS ANGELES, June 8. (AP)—Mrs. Effie Kelsey, socially prominent wife of Newton S. Kelsey, mining engineer, told police today an artistic temperament and rebellion against pulling weeds in their garden was responsible for the burglary career of her son, Hasting S. Kelsey, Hollywood school student.

Hastings, 17, was captured dressed in a tuxedo with burglar tools in his hands, behind a show case in a drug store.

"It's all my fault," the boy's mother sobbed, "my boy is an artist. I didn't take that into consideration when I made him give up his drawing to earn his allowance by pulling weeds in the garden. He just couldn't see anything artistic in pulling weeds, so I took his allowance away altogether. He took up burglary for spending money."

Kelsey confessed he had robbed two other drug stores, police said.

Wales has a Sunday-boxing war.

TURKEY, June 8.—C. A. Mullinnix, of Hearne, arrived in Turkey this week to succeed Mr. Burelsmith as manager of the Turkey Coca Cola Bottling and Ice company. The latter having been transferred to Vernon, Texas.

Have You Heard the Joke

—about the Scotchman who was seen standing with a piece of toast in each hand on a busy downtown street? "What are you standing there for, Sandy?" he was asked. "Why, Mon," he replied, "I'm waiting for this traffic jam they tell about."

Well, Sandy found out that traffic jam wasn't good to eat. And he has also found out that he can save money by sending his old shoes to us to be repaired, instead of throwing them away. For we make your Old Shoes look like NEW.

When You Force 'Em They Admit It

Superstition Still Rules A Goodly Portion Of People, Black Cat At Fire Station Episode Reveals Here

Just how far has civilization travelled in the direction opposite to superstition?

Are people today ruled, to any considerable extent, by superstition?

What are some of the things of which people are superstitious?

A searcher after solutions to these three questions will bump against such remarks:

"Certainly, I'm not superstitious."

"The very idea. This is not the superstitious age."

"Well, to tell the truth, perhaps I am. But, I wouldn't want people to know it. Don't menton my name in the paper.

Cat Started Whole Thing

And the whole thing started when the Lubbock central fire station personnel mentioned the fact that a black cat had made its home there. 'Twas said first of last week, that since the black cat came, no fire alarms had been witnessed.

"Is there anything to this black cat bogey? Or, is the truth just the other way, and block cats bring good luck?"

About the time these questions were propounded, the second black cat arrived at the fire station. Since then there have been two or three fire alarms answered by the department, but since the first cat came, no disastrous fire has been known in Lubbock.

What of it?

All For Good Luck

Boys, ages ago, when white or gray horses were to be seen about town and country, were wont to spit (excuse please, expectorate is the word) into one palm. Pronto, and a doubled fist would whack against the moistened palm. Some counting of numbers obtained. Quick eyes looked to see in what direction the greatest percentage of the expectorated spittum travelled. And this very simple procedure was supposed to tell fortunes—good luck or bad luck.

Lubbock folks prominent men and women, have been seen to dodge quickly, back up and go around, when encountering a ladder upon a down-town sidewalk. To go under that ladder— would it bring bad luck? Is that superstition?

One young bachelor, a well known business man about town, will not permit friends, who visit him at his apartment, to place their hats upon his bed.

Some Won't Go Back

Once started from home, of mornings, how many people, remembering something that should have been attended to before departing, or another thing that should be taken to town, will retrace their steps without remembering the saying: "It's bad luck to turn around?"

There are innumerable Lubbockites who admit they never step over a reclining broom handle.

Farmers, too, are afflicted with the bugaboo of superstition. Witness planting arrangements. "Don't plant when the moon is so and so."

Theatre and theatrical folk are said to be terribly afflicted. Seldom, if ever, if one racks the memory, has the song, "Home," ever been heard inside a theatre, moving picture palace, opera house or tent show. It brings bad luck, 'tis said.

How Can They Hurt?

Some more questions: "What's the black cats got to do with affecting the daily destiny of human beings? How's walking under a ladder going to effect one? What harm can a hat do to humans, whether it's on the bed or hanging somewhere on a nail? How's a broken mirror going to curse seven years of one's life?

Yet, travel the world over, and it will be difficult to find very many people who do not believe in some form of fetish. Note the watch charms and its latter day equivalent the watch fob. These date back only a few years to savage instinct of wearing buffalo teeth of whatnots to keep off the devils. Earrings, the same. Good-luck coins, so-called.

And William Shakespeare summed it all up when he said:

"Nothing is either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." And George Ade opined: "If you believe it, it's so."

But harken to this:

Here's A Good One

From Kansas City, Mo., appearing in a recent issue of the New York Times: "All Missourians, we believe in signs, will know in a few days whether there will be another great war soon.

"Word that the 17-year locust is coming has been confirmed by Dr. Leonard Haseman, entomologist of the Missouri College of Agriculture, who says that the cicada should appear in the wooded regions of northern Missouri within the nxt 10 days.

"If the 1929 cicada bears the letter W in the fine membrane of its wings, the nited States may as will prpar for aneothr war, say the superstitious. Did not the 1912 cicada have such a W? And see what happened in 1914. Similarly, did not the 1895 cicada herald the Spanish-American war of 1898?"

Bathers and Beach-Roamers Alike Are In Fashon Stylie Swim

Backless Suits Show There Is Something New Under The Sun In Styles For Beach Wear

By JULIA BLANSHARD
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, June 8.—The profusion of stunning beach togs this season quite bewilders one in making a choice.

Sea suits and sun suits and some suits for sea sports furnish such a selection, in summary, that smart women should insist on several!

There are, first of all, suits built for swimming, perfectly tailored, abbreviated, comfortable. Then there are beach suits, with little or no back, designed to aid and abet those suntan shoulders that evening gowns show to such advantage. Third, there are tricky togs for beach sports that obviously never dreamed of going very near the water.

One's first choice, of course, should be a bathing suit, provided one swims. Some are skirted, in which instance they feature brief, circular skirts or godets or pleats to give perfect freedom for the crawl. Others have scanty shorts, buttoned around the waist over jumpers that really are step-ins so they neither pull up nor billow out when one hits the blue.

Jersey has the edge on all other materials for regular swimming suits, though rayon moire, crepe silks, linens, cretonnes, ginghams, and wash satins all are festively present. Few are solid color, but figures are more subtle in color and less flagrant in design than last season. Orange, browns, chartreuse and other yellow tones are the newest colors but they by no means corner the market. Pastel shades are represented by luscious lavenders, powder blues and flesh tones. Now the marriage of Madame Louisa Tetrazinni aged more than 60, to Pietro Vernati, 25, has been annulled by the Rome tribunal. It lasted less than three years. The boy was supposed to have fallen in love with the voice of the prima donna. It takes more than voice and much romance to bridge a chasm of 40 years, and even shame for being married to a world famous prima donna could not balance shame for being married to a very fat old woman.

ROMANCE A LA TROLLEY

And here's the romance of one neither so fat nor famous as Tetrazinni. She is Mrs. Grace Hardin of Chicago, who always took his lunch to her motorman husband on car No. 6 on the 61st street line. While he was eating it she would perambulate to the rear and converse with Conductor William Hayes. If Motorman Hardin essayed to protest Conductor Hayes would give him the signal to proceed down the car track with his car.

Now Mrs. Hardin has divorced the motorman and announced her engagement to the conductor. The street car company has transferred the conductor to another line.

Interest Growing In PTA Societies In Memberships

Chairman Of Committee In State Association Makes Report On Work; Fifth District Is Winner

With one hundred seventy life memberships pledged and one hundred and one memberships actually paid into the state treasury, Austin, for the first six months of the fiscal year, 1928-1929, the life membership committee of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations is forging ahead for a record, according to Mrs. Edward Kneeland, Dallas, state life membership chairman, who introduces her semi-annual report by saying that the official reports from the fifteen district conferences of the congress show "marked increase in interest in life membership, exceeding any previous year since the work started."

The work has been done in conformity with the plans submitted by Mrs. Kneeland to the January meeting of the board of managers of the congress. These plans call for a state committee composed of the state chairman and the fifteen district presidents who are aided in the educational and soliciting campaign for life memberships by a co-director and eight additional persons in each district.

Each district was to secure a minimum of ten life memberships and the district securing the first ten and sending in the ten paid to the state treasurer, be awarded two complimentary memberships from the Wilkins Trunk Manufacturing Co., Dallas, and would be allowed to present these memberships to persons whom the district winning the award wished to honor. Mrs. Kneeland states that fifth district of which Mrs. E. H. Marek, of Yoakum, is president has won this distinction.

Report Given

"The fifteen district conferences of the Texas Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations, occurring in March and April, by their official reports to the state chairman show a marked increase in interest in life membership, exceeding any previous year since the work started," according to the report.

"Including pledges made at the state meeting held November, 1928, in Amarillo and the spring conferences, one hundred and seventy life membership pledges have been reported.

"Some districts heretofore taking a small part in life membership are forging to the front ranks and taking their place alongside the districts who in the past have taken the lead. The newly organized districts, five in number, are likewise demonstrating their determination to share the responsibility of an enlarged organization program by the pledges they have made.

Fee Is $25

"The life membership fee of $25 is used mainly for district extension, eighty per cent of which is prorated among the fifteen districts. The rest is used for national and state dues and for the general conduct of the work. At the mid-year board meeting in January the state chairman presented new plans which were accepted. To the state committee composed of fifteen district presidents and state chairmen was added a district president and a co-chairman serving jointly as district directors of the work with eight more persons completing the group of ten.

"The duty assigned these committees was to secure not less than ten life members for their respective districts and more where conditions were favorable. Also to the district sending in the first ten paid memberships two complimentary life membership fee were to be awarded.

"The fifth district, with Mrs. E. H. Marek of Yoakum as president, won this award. The check has been sent to the state office to be accredited to her district. Last year the fourth district won the loving cup which is awarded annually to the district securing the greatest number of life members.

"Any life membership funds reaching the state office later than October 31, 1929, will become a part of the next year's record."

She Keeps Alive Lore of Old-Time Darkies

Isidora Newman and her painting "The Birth of Jazz" which received much praise in Paris.

By JULIA BLANSHARD
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, June 8.—From New Orleans via Paris, Isidora Newman comes as a champion to save for future America the rich, human darky lore of the old-time Southern negroes.

Miss Newman, in private life Mrs. Frederick Neugrass, was born in New Orleans and lived as a child in the midst of negro and Creole legends. When her own children were born she told them tales in native dialect. Later she began writing them down. Visiting America a few years ago, after living abroad for years, she saw with dismay the changes that the old South was undergoing.

Old Negro Is Passing

"Modern civilization has set an artificial Harlem standard everywhere and it is destroying all the natural vividness of the old negroes," Miss Newman said.

"They have a real contribution to make to America and the machine age. There is a peace in their souls, a philosophy of life in their hearts and a spirit and vivid beauty in their existence that should be preserved. If moderns only realized it, those old-time negroes could even give them a lot of valuable ideas about the education of the young."

Miss Newman's negro tales not only appealed here and in England, but have been translated into French and German, proving her argument that the negro is the kind of story-teller that all the world appreciates.

Realizing the eye-mindedness of this age, Miss Newman started to paint darkies to illustrate her stories. So Vivid, picturesque and amusingly natural were her things that they were called "spirituals in water colors," were exhibited in Paris and Vienna and brought her the Palm Academique from the French government.

The latest medium brought into use by Miss Newman to portray her favorite subject is tiny dolls. She has made dozens of them, none higher than a foot, all different characters that show the gradations of yellow in different types, the different characteristics of dress in the different sections of the South and different generations.

Her collection of dolls was made for the New Orleans museum, but has proved so authentic in detail and so popular with children who have seen them that other museums have asked for duplicates.

Writes Fairy Stories

In addition to all these avenues of appeal that Miss Newman has opened up, she has published a charming book on flowers in which she incorporates the fairy stories that her negro mammy told her about the little beings that lived in the violets, daffodils and other flowers around her home.

Listen to Isidora Newman tell one of her stories—say, about the "planting," meaning burial, of one of the brethern or the weddin' where the bridegroom didn't show up, and hearty laughter breaks out spontaneously. Hear her tell a sad story, tears come as easily. For Miss Newman is as fine an artist at story telling as she is at writing and painting. So, by writing, painting, story telling and fashioning dolls, this daughter of the South is paying, with compound interest, the debt she feels to those old negroes that made her childhood so gay, so happy and so meaningful.

two dollars for their offspring's silk hose, which is a most conservative estimate, said parents would rise up and call her blessed.

Rest assured that, no matter what it meant for Dad or Mom to buy those silk hose, the damsels wouldn't follow suit for any reason other than style—for thrift, never!

Seriously, I know several girls who might have had high school educations and not been sent to work at 16 if it hadn't been for the silk stockings problem—it's either silk or bare legs.

THEIR WEDDING PRESENTS

That's right—Anne and Lindy must have a terrific wedding present problem! Think of the attic they'll have to have for all the atrocities that come in! Wonder if they'll like the painting that President and Mrs. Emilio Portes Gil, of Mexico, are said to have purchased for them. It is called "Mexican Flowers" by Ramos Martinez, Mexican painter; is said to have taken 15 years to paint, and represents four types of Mexican womanhood.

"THE SMELLIES"

The "smellies" will follow the "talkies," we are told, with the news of an invention which will permit the movie set flower garden to throw off fragrance, or permit us to sniff the voluptuous incense burned in the vamp's buodoir.

Verily, verily, there is no end to what the gods send us, whether we want their gifts or not!

I am still sighing for the peacefully sweet good old days of the silent movie!

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

BY MADAME RUBENSTEIN

Nowhere in the world is there so much face cream bought and used as in this country—and nowhere is there any more confusion about the meaning of it.

To many women all cream is just "cold cream." Some kinds they know are for cleansing, others for stimulating and bleaching and others for nourishing. But still all remain cold cream, and the distinctions among them seem to many rather hazy.

These are the women who often ask for one cream which will do the work of several, a kind of three-in-one. This seems to me like asking a great deal of the toilet cream manufacturer. Because it is not easy to make a panacea for all complexion ills.

Some creams and lotions do combine properties which make them suitable for several uses. But the most effective creams are specialized just as foods are.

When you go out to do your shopping you do not demand of he grocer a food—one food—that will have in it every known food element. Do you? Even supposing that you had no appetite, would you expect one food to satisfy your needs under all conditions and at all times? And not only for you but for any number of other people, whatever their habits and states of health?

Milk is said to be a perfect food because good milk combines in one easily digested form all the food elements. And for the very young child milk is enough as a food. But the older person prefers not to go on a continuous milk diet unless illness makes it necessary. This one food is hardly enough to satisfy the complex needs of the average adult system.

Demanding of the beauty specialist one cream for everyone for every purpose for all the time, is a little like asking for a treatment for the skin more perfect than milk is as a food for the body.

There is one cream, the pasteurized face cream, made with pasteurized milk, and containing stimulating ingredients, which comes nearer to combining all the necessary properties for cleansing, stimulating and nourishing the skin than any other one cream. The milk which it contains makes it an ideal cleansing and soothing agent (good pure milk has always been recognized as a refreshing bath for the skin) and a moderate nourisher as well, while the stimulating ingredients give it mild tonic properties. This cream is enough for the needs of the young skin, or the mature skin that has not aged preceptibly, in which the circulation is good.

But the older skin and the skin that is not normal needs still other treatment. Even if it were chemically possible to combine in one preparation the ingredients which cleanse, stimulate, tone and nourish in sufficient strength to accomplish perfectly each of these functions, one might defeat the purpose of another. For example, a cleansing cream should be light in texture in order that its oils may properly cleanse the skin and yet be easily removed. The necessarily rich texture of a nourishing cream makes it less suitable for cleansing. Then, too, the richer, rarer oils and other ingredients which go into stimulating and nourishing creams make them cost more. A cleansing cream is the cream you use in large quantities and does not need to be so expensive as it is removed immediately. To use a cream for cleansing which is a perfect nourisher would be an unnecessary extravagance, since it would not be the best type of cleansing cream, and, on account of its ingredients, is necessarily a more expensive cream.

Miniature Aviation City Is Built Near Snyder, County Seat Of Scurry County

By GEORGE F. SMITH

SNYDER, June 8.—It remained for a small city of 5,000 inhabitants in the Southwest to provide the most modern and unique airport ever conceived for any town or city under 100,000 population.

D. P. Yoder, an engineer and business man of long standing and widely known in the southwest, originated the idea of providing an airport at Snyder sufficiently large to take care of great air fleets, together with a series of modern cabin inns to handle the road tourist traffic that comes to this city, which is a junction point of the famous Dal-Paso Cavern highway, shortest route from Dallas to the west coast, and state highwty No. 7, principal outlet to Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene and south Texas.

Between Highways

Located between two state designated highways, Nos. 7 and 101, and across the road from the Santa Fe depot, more than 3,000 feet of landing area will be provided with clear approaches in all directions. Plans for the air cen ter were drawn up after visits to many fields in this and adjacent states. The field proper includes an iron hangar already completed and large enough to house six planes, and electric service re-fueling pump, one of the few outside an army field in Texas; together with administration offices and plane supply room attached to the hangar with complete machine shop facilities available for servicing visiting planes. The landing field is said to be one of the finest in the country, and is already covered with grass, providing landing in any kind of weath. A Curtiss-Robin monoplane is provided at the port for commercial work, flying school and cross-country jumps, with a government licensed pilot to be in charge. Air markers that can be seen for fifteen miles are located at the center of the field with arrow pointing north and "windsock" will be located atop the hangar. An airport designation sign is also located down town.

Within 100 yards of the hangar is located the first of a series of cabin inns where every service a modern hotel provides is given, with shower baths, lavatories, telephone, telegraph, gas, water, electricity, with radio hookups provided in each cabin. Of the ten cabins already completed each is an individual unit constructed of stucco with interiors of wall board trimmed in green and ivory. Exteriors are green tinted with all wood work in green and cream white. Twenty-five cabins will be the goal of the builder. A waiting room that also provides showers and lavatories is provided with a main depot containing a first class restaurant, grocery, sundries and field superintendent's residence. The Santa Fe depot is directly opposite the main office, while at the north end of the field is the Snyder Golf and Country club and swimming pool. The course of nine holes is open free of all fees to visiting planes and their passengers.

Park by Cabins

The park adjoining the cabin inns is now being beautified with flowers, shrubbery and trees.

Aviation magazines and pilots who have been here declare that Snyder has the most model airport in the United States of any city under 100,000 population, as every requirement is fulfilled, and location could not be improved, being but one mile north of the public square with taxi service available at the port at "two-bits" down town. Since the first announcement was made of the temporary opening of the field, planes have been dropping down from all points of the compass whose pilots and passengers are enthusiastic over the "air-mindedness" of such a small city and the wisdom of its owner and founder, D. P. Yoder, who originated out of Goshen, Ind. Scurry county and Snyder were first introduced to aviation in 1926 when Paul Schattel of near Hermleigh constructed and flew his first plane, a Curtiss "Jenny" and which is still being used by his brother, Eugene, who has lately installed a new motor.

Planes are now in the making for one of the greatest airport dedications ever held in the west, and hopes are being expressed by the Lions club and the Scurry County Chamber of Commerce to have 100 planes here for an old fashioned West Texas barbecue with all the trimmings.

West Texas Misunderstood

To the unitiated who live north and east, West Texas has long been misunderstood as regards longhorn cattle and sixshooters, and let it be known that none such prevail there now, as diversification in all lines of agriculture has taken hold with a recent record of $4,110.30 being paid by one produce house here for eggs, poultry and cream in one day. A county farm agent and county home demonstration agent are employed by the county. Not only is West Texas air-minded, but likewise sold on diversification of their agricultural products.

It's Dangerous
Can't Bring Booze Back So Easily

LAREDO, Texas, June 8. (AP)—Visitors from Laredo to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, no longer can bring back with them a "sniffter" without danger. Customs Collector Roy Campbell has been ordered to search all automobiles returning to the United States from Mexico "at regular intervals."

The first announcement, for an hour on the afternoon of June 1, netted 13 violators, each of whom were fined $5. The contraband was confiscated.

Similar orders have been in effect at other Texas border towns for some time.

In line with the understanding made last year, that if the Chinese Eastern Railway be permitted to retain the gold ruble as a basis of currency it would give one-half of its profits to other Chinese railways, nearly $6,750,000 was paid the other lines last year.

Channel Cleared

HOUSTON, June 7 (AP)—The Houston Ship channel, partially blocked since late Sunday by tankers aground between Baytown and Morgan's Point, was opened today.

The Tanker John Worthington, outbound from Baytown, which went aground near the south tip of Jennings Island late Wednesday was floated last night. The U. S Shipping Board SS. Volunteer which went aground while attempting to pass the Tanker was lightened last night and dragged away from the main passage of the channel.

Cinderella's slippers were really not glass, says an author. With George Washington's cherry tree declared false, the apple that William Tell shot from his son's head taken away from us, it wouldn't be surprising now if some one were to declare brazenly that there is no such thing as farm relief.

Veterans of the World War shouldn't throw away their trench hats. There always will be friendly little games of bridge in which they may be worn to advantage.

English Drama To Be Attraction At Palace For 3 Days

Four Actors Appear In Equal Roles In Famed Play

"INTERFERENCE", the stage "hit" is to be presented today as the opening attraction at the Palace this week and will run for three days.

That famous old English play which enjoyed a run of over two years on the foreign stage and then crossed the Atlantic for another long stay on Broadway is considered even greater on the screen with the addition of talking according to advance press notices. The picture is a 100 per cent talking production, actors

It is the kind of a picture that lovers of sheer drama will fairly revel in.

Four Players Prominent

Four popular screen players have equally important parts in the film. They are Clive Brook, Evelyn Brent, William Powell and Doris Kenyon.

"Interference" has to do with a man who cared for his wife's caresses too late. When he is reported killed in the war, she remarries, unknown to him and when he is found to be alive, the wife is blackmailed by a former love of her first husband. In a most unusual way, he discovers the plight of his wife, and resolving to make amends for dissolute habits, obtains the damaging evidence—letters—and kills the revengeful one. The second husband becomes involved and is suspected of the murder.

William Powell is his suave, dissolute self as the wayward husband; Evelyn Brent is the revenging cast-off love; Doris Kenyon is the harassed wife and Clive Brook is the second husband. Lothar Mendes directed the picture from the original play by Roland Pertwee and Harold Dearden.

Music Becomes Important Part In Sound Films

"Tin Pan Alley" Is Turning Out The Tunes

By DAN THOMAS
NEA Service Writer

HOLLYWOOD, June 8—Music is getting to be a more important adjunct of the sound film every day. "Tinpan Alley"—Broadway's name for the group that writes the words and music for most popular songs—has moved to Hollywood in a body and has been working overtime ever since it got here.

Just now a good share of the alley's attention is being devoted to the new starring vehicle for Alice White, "Broadway Babies." This picture will very likely create quite a stir, it has lots of talking, lots of music, and lots of singing and dancing in addition, and the musical numbers that go with it are fetching in the extreme.

"Broadway Babies" is adapted from Jay Gelzer's story of three young hoofers on Broadway. Miss White, who sings and dances as if she had gone to the movies from the musical comedy stage instead of from the script department of a Hollywood film organization, has as her comrades in this trio Sally Eilers and Marion Byron. Charles Delaney is the male star who plays opposite her.

They do say that when "Broadway Babies" appears certain of its songs will become instant hits. They tell you especially to watch for "Broadway Baby Dolls" and "Jig Jig Jigaloo."

"This thing called love" is now under production at Pathe's studios as Constance Bennett's first starring picture. This film will be a talking version of the stage play in which Violet Heming has been starring in New York, and will mark Miss Bennett's return to the screen after an absence of three years.

Moving picture fans are on the verge of getting something entirely new—the comedy of the famous for Marx brothers. "The Cocoanuts," brought over from the musical comedy stage for these famous funsters, is now finished, and will be appearing in movie houses throghouw the country in the immediate future.

First showings of the film in New York, it is reported here, have proved that the peculiar comedy effects used by the Marx brothers go over just as well in the films as on the stage. The mustachioed Groucho, the silent Harpo and the brothers Zeppo and Chico have lost none of their drollity to get laughs in the transition.

And speaking of comedy—Harold Lloyd is hard at work on "Welcome Danger," his first sound and dialogue picture, which will be released through Paramount. This film lands the bespectacled comedian in San Francisco's Chinatown and puts him into a series of excruciating situations such as only he can devise.

It might be noted that he is making two complete versions of the picture—one with sound, and the other without. The silent version is now practically completed, and as soon as it is edited Lloyd will go to bat with the dialogue version.

Modernistic Film Booked For Lyric

Dancing Daughters Will Be On For Two Days

Three very modern girls who choose different paths to an ultimate goal of happines provide motivation for "Our Dancing Daughters" which will be shown at the Lyric Theater today and Monday.

The production, with its modernistic theme, is set in an impressionistic background and was filmed upon a scale of lavishness that brings to the screen a new triumph in cinema artistry.

With Joan Crawford, Johnny Mack Brown, Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian in the leading roles to play has a stellar cast. In support to the principal players such screen artists as Nils Asther, Kathlyn Williams, Eddie Nugent and Huntley Gordon are seen.

The plot concerns a reckless flapper who kisses freely and loses the affections of the man she loves because of the gossip that follows in the wake of her mad'ap adventures. A whirl of activities carry out the ultra-modernistic trend of the story in which tragedy brings the participants to the realization that life is more than a whirl of pleasure and at last find happiness in domesticity.

Tyron In Funny Film At Lyric

The funniest theatrical scene ever filmed are an important part of Glenn Tyron's "The Gate Crasher," which is scheduled to open at the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday and Wednesday. In these scenes Tryon is surprised on the stage when the curtain goes up and not being a member of the troupe is forced to go through with an act so as not to spoil the show. Patsy Ruth Miller is featured with Tryon, while the supporting cast includes Beth Marol, T. Roy Barnes, Fred Malatesta, Tiny Sandford, Claude Payton, Russell

Lindsey To Show 'Br'dway Melody' For Entire Week

Elaborate Film To Show Back-Stage Life On Screen

"THE Broadway Melody," an elaborate all-talking, all-singing all-dancing production with Bessie Love, Charles King and Anita Page as the principals is the attraction at the Lindsey all this week.

It is proclaimed as the most vividly portrayed drama of backstage life to reach the screen, with all its glamour, tinsel and clatter for which life behind the scenes is famous.

The story, an original by the celebrated playwright, Edmund Goulding, relates the sad yet humorous experience of a small town "sister act" that looks like material for the Follies but flops in rehearsal. Through it all runs a humanly interesting romance, such as is carried on only in the averace life of show people, whose chief aim in living is to entertain the public for which they perform.

Climax Is Dramatic

The dramatic climax is a most heart-cripping episode, for after struggling to keep her "little sister" from wandering off the straight and narrow, the good samaritan sees true love take its course by sacrificing her own lover. Anita Page and Bessie Love appear as the "sister act," and Charles King, musical comedy star, as the hopeful song-and-dance-man lover.

A specially written theme song, "Broadway Melody," is heard throughout the production. It is augmented by several novelty numbers among them "The Wedding of the Painted Dolls," "Love Boat" and others. These catchy songs create the musical background for the technicolor sequence in which a chorus of more than sixty specialty dancers appear in one of the most sensational dance creations ever attempted for the screen.

Beaumont Directs

Harry Beaumont, responsible for the successful direction of "Our Dancing Daughters" and other outstanding classics of the screen, directed the huge production. Others in the cast are Jed Prouty, Kenneth Thomson, Edward Dillon, Mary Doran, Eddie Kane J. Emmett Beck, Marshall Ruth and Drew Demarest.

Adolphe Menjou has commenced work on "The Concert," the picture that was to star Emil Jannings?

Crane Wilbur is writing dialogue for and may act in forthcoming picture?

Sally O'Neill's next is "Kathleen Mavourneen"?

Lupe Velez and Chester Morris are in line for stardom?

"Sons of the Gods" is Richard Barthelmess' next picture?

Bebe Daniels has the stellar role in "Rio Rita."

Powell and Al Smith. William Craft directed.

Fourteen Stars To Have Part In Film

"Strange Cargo", Pathe's first one hundred per cent dialogue picture which is booked for one of the Lindsey houses during the week of June 16 offers one of the greatest array of stars ever shown in one single picture. Jouett Shouse Is Busy Rebuilding Democratic Party

Talk That Democracy Is Dead Gets Denial From Rodney Dutcher; Visit With Chairman Is Real Eye-opener

Party Was Never In Better Condition, Is Belief Of Washington Correspondent Of Avalanche

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, June 8.—The futility of declaring the democratic party a corpse after each presidential election and seeking to bury it has never been better demonstrated than it is being demonstrated in Washington right now.

Your correspondent has just sat in the new furniture over at the vastly expanded national headquarters of the party and very swell furniture it is, so comfortable that if you sit down suddenly you'll bounce. It is recommended to all good democrats wh odesire to revive their faith in the party's future that they come and see all this handsome walnut and tan leather—and sit down in the chairs and lounges.

More impressive than the furniture and the space, however, is Mr. Jouett (pronounced "Jewett") Shouse (pronounced "Sr-house"), the new chairman of the executive committee, whose job is to keep the party functioning and functioning cohesively between campaigns.

JOUETT SHOUSE

He's Hard at Work

Most impressive about Mr. Shouse was the fact that your correspondent found him working, with two secretaries and his coat off, on Memorial day, when nearly every other office in Washington was closed. The reason was that Mr. Shouse had work to do, but it was more or less surprising to find a politician, so far in advance of an election, plugging away on a holiday. Mr. Shouse does not appear to be an 'easeful executive." One may sympathize with Mr. Shouse because he has the democratic party on his hands, but no one need sympathize with the democrats because they have Mr. Shouse.

Mr. Shouse is not going to talk a great deal, will not issue many public statements and will not attempt to glorify Mr. Shouse, facts which discerning democrats will appreciate. He will work in close contact with leaders in congress, but will devote himself mainly to organization.

He's Optimistic

In common with most other democrats, he has not observed anything in the first months of the Hoover administration designed to diminish democratic hopes. He apparently considers it too early to join with others in the party who publicly assert that the republican tariff bill will be a bad boomerang and that the Hoover prohibition enforcement program appears to be non-existent. There will be time enough, Shouse appears to suspect, to talk about those things. But he comes from Kansas City and knows the grain belt, so he asserts confidently that:

"The republican party has largely failed to meet the agricultural situation. The results of the Hoover measures will speak for themselves, but the measures and means provided in the Hoover program are not what the farmers expect and want. The farm issue is very far from dead. What is now selling lower than the cost of production, lower than it has been since 1914, and is worth remembering that the price the farmer gets is 15 per cent lower than the price quoted at Chicago."

Mr. Shouse appears to have few illusions as to the difficulty of the job of being the party's boss welder. He knows that although there are many serious differences in republican ranks, the G. O. P. has had a stronger party discipline and that most democrats are individualists. Nevertheless, the reception of his appointment within the party produced no discordant notes and he feels pretty certain of large co-operation.

A Tactful Executive

He is 50 years old, tall and looks as intelligent as he appears to be. He isn't the table thumping type of executive, but rather the sort, one might expect to be chosen for a job requiring both tact and decision. He lives uietly here at the Mayflower hotel, which is the unofficial hostelry of the democrats.

There's a smart reception hall at the new democratic headquarters, large private offices for Shouse and his secretary, a still larger room for the executive committee, where the committee will meet once a month and which will be used as a lounge by visiting democrats in between times. Further along are offices for a publicity department, a research department and a woman's division. There are about ten offices in the suite and a large filing room elsewhere.

In the past the party's Washington headquarters has been manned by only two or three persons. In the future the peace time strength will be about a dozen workers, who, according to thosre, will operate along business lines.

Hey! Do You Wanta Go On A Picnic?

* ** *** *** *** **

There Are Plenty Of Good Places If You Really Want To Enjoy A Pleasant Day's Outing On Plains

"Come on, come on! What is this, a picnic or a show motion picture?"

That's what father says every five minutes for at least an hour before the rest of the family is ready to start.

And about the time the door is locked and every one has crowded in among the lunch baskets mother will remember that the gas wasn't turned off or that she had left one of the bedroom windows up and that it might rain.

When everyone is finally settled father will say, "Well, where are we going on this picnic?"

Then another half houh is lost trying to decide which place has the best water and the most shade.

It's A Problem.

And that is the problem faced by every Lubbock citizen when planning a day's outing for the family.

In this part of the country good water and shade are extremely rare in any place that is suitable for a picnic. Recently, people who own land where there is a stream and a few shade trees are making picnic grounds where people may come and enjoy a holiday or Sunday for a very low fee. This fee is charged in order that they might be able to keep the grounds in good shape.

The Johnston brothers have recently opened up Igo ranch, about fifteen miles southeast of town, and are charging a very small sum for admittance. Swimming, boating, horseback riding and other diversions are offered.

Buffalo Springs was opened a few years ago, but a membership is required before anyone can picnic there.

County Has Park.

The county maintains a municipal park just east of town on the canyon where swimming, fishing and golf may be enjoyed.

The city has just opened a park where the Tumble-N pool formerly was. There is a large pool and bath houss and playgrounds for the children.

Members of the Country club and their friends may enjoy the club grounds for picnics.

If anyone wishes to go some distance out of the city, the canyon near Slaton is a good place for folwho like to climb hills and scout around over the country. To get to this canyon one turns east at the compress at Slaton. This place is about twenty-five miles from Lubbock.

Silver Falls Popular

Silver Falls, about five miles east of Crosbyton and about forty-five miles from Lubbock, offers swimming, skating, boating, dancing, hiking and almost any other form of amusement.

Two-Draw Lake at Post is about the same distance from Lubbock and offers about the same forms of amusement as Silver Falls.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts and classes and clubs on early morning hikes go to the County Park or City Park. Some just hike until they find a pretty spot and then stop. The creek located north of town on the old Plainview highway draws many an early morning hiker.

Before the highway was changed and brought under what is known as the "second Crosbyton bridge" many picnics were held there, and a few still are.

But all-in-all people of Lubbock are not so bad off as they might be. It is true that we have very few places that are suitable but we should appreciate what we have and do all we can to take care of them.

The United States, Germany and Norway are leading Great Britain in electricity production in proportio nto population.

Great Expansion Of Plainview Is Feature Of Year

Hale County Capital Goes Onward And Upward; Many Business Houses Enlarge Their Places

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

PLAINVIEW, June 8.—The biggest commercial expansion of its history is taking place in Plainview at the present time, and since January first of this year the city has undergone its greatest development from the standpoint of retail business firms moving in, and older houses enlarging their stocks and storerooms.

Early in the year Montgomery-Ward company and J. C. Penney company opened for business in Plainview with large stores. The F. W. Woolworth company which opened in Plainview about two years ago doubled the size of its store this year when it led all other stores in this section for 1928 in volume of sales. The Jarvis Tull Implement company, the largest distributor of International Harvester products to retail trade in the United States found it necessay to build a new house fo its business. A fifty-five thousand dollar modern home was moved into about forty-five days ago.

W. U. Enlarges

In line with the expansion that is taking place the Western Union Telegraph company is moving this month into larger quarters that are being prepared for them in the Skaggs building.

The A. V. C. store has found it necessary to enlarge its storeroom, and they are completing the building of a new front on the buildings which they have leased next to their old stand. Dr. C. M. Clough, local optometrist, is fitting one of the best equipped plants of its kind in the Panhandle.

Other new stores that have opened in Plainview during the past few weeks are: Cave's Department Store, Nip and Tuck Grocery, Lena Glenn Beauty Parlor, W. L. Hinson Jeweler, Loebel's Fashion Shop, Joe Hilton Motor Company, Dickinson Rubber Company, West Texas Tractor company, Blue Bonnett Cafe, L. W. Kiker's T. P. Filling Station, Davis and Gibbs Implement company.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

He mocketh at fear and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the sword.—Job 39: 22.

THERE'S a brave fellow! There's a man of pluck! A man who's not afraid to say his say, though a whole town's against him.—Longfellow.

SOMETHING WE SHOULD DO

YOU probably never stopped to think about it—few people would—but the physicians of Lubbock, particularly those operating hospitals, are performing a public service which they should not be expected to perform. In the name of fairness, the situation should be changed.

The City of Lubbock and the County of Lubbock are two great, big solvent, propering institutions. Yet neither of them makes an adequate provision for sick and injured people who are unable to pay for medical attention and subsequent care.

If John Doe is without funds and becomes so ill that he must be taken to a hospital for care, he's taken there and he gets the care but there's nobody to foot the bill unless John gets well and happens to be man enough to meet his just obligations, slowly but surely.

If Mary Roe, penniless and without friends, moves to Lubbock and is suddenly stricken with appendicitis, she goes to the hospital, is operated upon, recuperates and goes on her weary way—while the operators of the hospital lose the use of a room, equipment, meals and a nurse's time, not to mention time taken up by the attending physician in operating and overseeing the care of the patient.

If a Lubbock county officer in pursuit of his duties is forced to shoot a recalcitrant prisoner the prisoner is carted to the sanitarium, operated upon, nursed back to health—but the county, the prisoner or the officer never pays a dime. No sir, not a dime even if the prisoner himself has plenty of money in his pocket to take care of the expense, something which happened here not so long ago.

What Lubbock city and county should do is make some provision for a city-county hospital. It's probably not necessary at this time to pass a bond issue, erect and operate with open staff a hospital just for city and county cases. But it is necessary, in the spirit of fair play, that some provisions be made whereby the operators of hospitals and sanitariums in Lubbock do not have to stand all the expense entailed in caring for charity cases.

"Oh, you say 'the doctors are making plenty of money. As a class they're the wealthiest men in town and they can stand it."

Lubbock doctors—and we may be thankful for it—are of the type who deserve to prosper and they probably can stand it, but, basically, is it fair to expect them to do it?

The Avalanche-Journal would like to see Lubbock city and county make some kind of a contract with either or all of the hospitals in the city to take care of charity cases on a business basis. For instance, a portion of the West Texas hospital might be set aside for the year 1930, where charity cases for both city and the county might be treated and the city and county pay for the rent of the rooms thus used, the food and medical supplies necessitated and other incidentals. In charity cases, The Avalanche-Journal feels quite certain local doctors would continue to donate their services in treating and operating as they have in the pas

Then, in 1931, the scene of the city-county ward might well be changed to the Lubbock sanitarium or to the Ellwood hospital and the third institution be asked to take it the following year. Thus, by rotating the proposition none of the hospital staffs would be over-worked in the matter of charity cases and still the cases would be looked after in systematic way.

Lubbock's hotels do not house people who have no money to pay for their conveniences and Lubbock restaurants do not feed people who have not the where-withal to compensate their owners. Why then, should Lubbock hospitals be expected, not only to save lives, but also to house and feed convalescents when it is no more their business to do so than it is the restaurants or the hotels?

A city the size of Lubbock, in a county the size of Lubbock county should certainl ymake some provision for unfortunate sick. The Avalanche-Journal believes the hospitals have bourne all the burden long enough and that it's time for the balance of the population to bear its share of the expenses thus entailed.

NEW SKYLINES

Architects and city planners have been engaging in a discussion which turned largely upon the artistic merits of the modern commercial building and whether American cities are not about the ugliest in the civilized world by virtue of their leadership in skyscraper architecture.

It is a perennial question—rather two questions and two very distinct questions. One is whether tall office, apartment and mercantile buildings can ever be made beautiful. The other is whether a city of jumbled skyscraper construction can ever be considered a beautiful city. The first question must be answered in the affirmative. There are too many examples of such buildings of pleasing design, beautiful proportions and impressive dignity, to admit of any other answer. But just as certainly must the second question be answered in the negative.

Tall commercial buildings in the United States are, on the whole, the most beautiful in the world and, given an even, harmonious skyline the business districts of American cities would be more beautiful than those of Europe. The beauty of the American city suffers not because of the height of architecture of the individual structures but because of the lack of symmetry of skyline. No street can be called beautiful whose buildings range in height from one to 100 stories.

Awake to the situation cities large and small are adopting and enforcing zoning regulations which contemplate among other things the creation of a skyline which compares with the beauty of the horizon of the plains rather than with the ragged ruggedness of the mountain horizon.

Leading booticians are said to view the Hoover law probe without the slightest worry. Having dodged scores of enforcement agents for a decade, why should they fear a mere committee of 11.

That Texas woman who trumped her husband's ace and received a punch on the nose now wants a divorce. In the interest of auction bridge, she should not get it.

On the Firing Line at the Nation's Capital

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Interstate Commerce Commission presumably will have to shoot in the dark with its railroad valuation decisions until it finally hits a scheme of valuation which a majority of the United States supreme court can approve.

The court's recent decision in the case of the St. Louis & O'Fallon railroad, while it doubtless has encouraged railroad and other public utilities owners who always yearn for higher rates and greater profits, probably will not in itself affect the utilities rate structures at this time.

Nevertheless, the decision has forced the I. C. C. to do a lot of work all over again and has put off the day which will determine whether the railroads must surrender or be permitted to retain millions of dollars which is claimed by the government under the recapture provisions of the Transportation Act which allow them a profit of six per cent. Some of the recapture money has been paid, but railroads have held out a lot more.

It's Still Unsettled

Those are the immediate results of the O'Fallon decision, in case anyone has been confused.

The supreme court has left up in the air the question of how a regulating body should value a public utility for rate-making purposes. It said the I. C. C. decision in the O'Fallon case was wrong because it didn't take in the cost of reproduction factor, but failed to say to what extent that factor should be allowed to count.

The court has been leaving the issue up in the air for 30 years. In 1898, in the famous case of Symth vs Ames, it enumerated several factors, including "the present as compared with the original cost of construction" and said that these were "all matters for consideration, and are to be given such weight as may be given such weight as may be just and right in each case."

That decision, of course, left it up to the court in the event of final appeal to determine whether or not each of these factors had been given proper weight. It gave rate-fixing commissions no yardstick to go by and they had to make up their own.

In the O'Fallon decision the court devoted itself principally to rebuking the I. C. C. for not taking the reproduction cost factor into account. Justice Stone, in his dissenting opinion, suggested in effect that the I. C. C., by wording its decision differently, could have avoided this objection, but it appears to have been the idea of the commission that the problem ought to be publicly threshed out. If so, it was an admirable aim, but the court now virtually leaves the I. C. C. back in 1898 with Smyth vs. Ames.

Justice Brandeis, in his dissenting opinion, says should be the actual value and his conception of its that the majority of the court held that the rate base idea has not been contradicted. Members of the I. C. C. point out, however, that actual value fluctuates from year to year and that it is always a terrific job to determine it. The court's majority opinion went out of its way, incidentally, to admit that no doubt the actual value of some railroads would have to be placed "far below the cost of reproduction."

A Tough Problem

As long as the supreme court continues to lay down no general rule as to the relative weight which rate-making bodies should give to various valuation factors, it is likely to be against such a problem as would be presented if a state commission in one state gave reproduction cost 60 per cent weight in determining a utility valuation and another in another state gave a similar utility's reproduction cost only five per cent weight—and both cases were carried to the supreme court. Such an occurrence would make it much more difficult for the court to maintain its present position.

But the court has changed its attitude before.

Away back in the seventies, in the case of Munn vs. Illinois, one of the Granger cases, it held that it wasn't up to the courts to determine the fairness of utility rates, but to the legislatures.

Diet and Health

NORMAL PERSON NEEDS 250 TO 350 CALORIES OF PROTEIN EVERY DAY

Protein Requirements.

"WOULD one-half pound of English walnuts a day be too much or too little protein for me? I cannot eat meat, eggs or cheese by doctor's orders as autointoxication sets in each time. I get tired of milk each day and depend on the walnuts. I do all my housework. Is the amount of protein I get enough for me? I am 5 ft. 1 inch tall, 31 years old. I reduced by following your instructions from 191 to 149. "MRS. H."

One-half ounce of walnuts is 100 calories, of which but 11 are protein, 82 fat and 7 carbohydrates. If you took 8 ounces, or one-half pound, you would have a total of 1,6600 calories; 1766 of which are protein, 1,312½ fat and 112 carbohydrates. You see from this, Mrs. H., that you would be getting altogether too much fat, so you would very soon be putting on your excess weight again. Also, such a consumption of nuts would unbalance your diet altogether.

All nuts are practically the same in their content of fat and protein, except chestnuts, which are mostly carbohydrate. I wouldn't advise you to take nearly so many. If you get tired of milk, ask your doctor if you can't have some simple cottage cheese, that is often allowed where other cheeses are not. In 100 calories of this cheese, (3 ounces), there are 76 protein calories.

One needs from 250 to 350 calories of protein daily, depending upon the size of the framework, not upon the physical activities. (Protein is the principle of food which has to do with growth of new tissue and repair of old.)

You are still considerably overweight, Mrs. H. Hasn't your overweight had considerable to do with your condition for which you are now on a diet?

We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may have. Those who need instructions on reducing may have our pamphlet on the subject by following column rules.

Mrs. L.—It seems to me you need a good physical check-up, for it may be possible your mental disorder may be caused from some toxemia (poison in the blood) from absorption of poisons and putrefaction in the intestines or from some other point of infection in the body.

You have been sent our article on Constipation. Follow that and get your bowels in good condition. Get eight hours of sleep each night, with a good circulation of fresh air, and then stay out of doors all day long, if you can.

Say to yourself emphatically that you are going to snap out of it! If you could have the help of a skillful psychiatrist, you would get along more rapidly, but you can do a good deal by yourself. I know you want to do this, or you wouldn't be writing to me. And wanting to do a thing strongly enough, will give you the will power to get started.

N.—Spots that itch intolerably, without any apparent cause, and are not relieved by simple ointment and lotions containing a few drops of carbolic acid to the ounce, may be relieved by treatment with the X-Ray, so I have seen reported in my medical literature. Deep pressure on the spot instead of scratching may relieve more.

Chicago is said to have started "payroll pruning." If current reports are well founded, the word "blasting" would seem a bit more accurate.

Wedding Bells Are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine!

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MILDRED LAWRENCE falls in love with STEPHEN ARMITAGE, who is lured away by PAMELA JUDSON when she tells him Mildred is trying to marry her brother, HAROLD, for money. Harold fears HUCK CONNOR, who is blackmailing him over a forged check. Huck is infatuated with Pamela, and when she announces her engagement to Stephen frames him for the theft of an auto and causes his arrest. Pamela drops Stephen, but Mildred tries to get him out of jail.

Harold had once told her he feared Huck, who had threatened to get rid of Stephen to keep him from marrying Pamela. Mildred determines to force Harold o help her, and is shocked to hear of his death —apparently accidental. She tells Stephen her suspicions but they have no proof and it seems hopeless.

Finally she goes to MR. JUDSON, who takes her to headquarters to tell her story. Judson bails Stephen out and Pamela begs forgiveness. On the way from the jail to the hotel, Stephen narrowly escapes a shot from a thug in a passing taxi. He reports to Mr. Judson and learns that Mildred was also wounded slightly by a gangster shot.

His concern over her leads the elder man to doubt Stephen's love for Pamela, and he tells her the man is trying to marry her for money, not love. She taunts him by saiyng that his money had bought two step-mothers for her and disposed of the first and that he has no right to keep her from buying her man. Believing she really loves Stephen, the father gives in to her pleading.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Stephen was not in his room. Mr. Judson immediately called the office and asked to have one of Markenson's men sent up.

Together they went to Stephen's door. Pamela was forbidden to follow but she disobeyed instructions a few minutes later and proceeded toward the room.

A pass key admitted Mr. Judson and the detective and they say that Stephen had stopped in the midst of unpacking his belongings when he left the room.

A thorough search of the hotel was instigated but Stephen was not located.

The inquiry at the switchboard revealed that he had made one outside call on the telephone.

Mr. Judson's face grew thunderous when the operator told him the number Stephen called was Mildred's. Had she listened to the conversation? Certainly not.

Mr. Judson was unconvinced. The operator and Mildred probably were friends, he reasoned.

"Call the number," he directed, "and say Mr. Judson wishes to speak to Mrs. Lawrence."

It was Connie who answered the call. "Can't I talk to Mr. Judson?" she asked. "Mother is with Mildred. I don't like to disturb her."

The operator repeated her words to Mr. Judson.

"Very well," he said impatiently and stepped into a booth. Connie thought him unnecessarily sharp when he asked if Stephen Armitage was there.

"No, he isn't" she said, and was perverse enough to withhold the information that he had been there. She thought Mr. Judson would ask, but he said, "Thank you," quickly and hung up.

"Well, if you hadn't been so short I'd have told you," Connie said to herself, trying to placate a troubled conscience. She was remembering the things Mildred had said about Mr. Judson's kindness to her after her "accident" in the subway.

Mildred hadn't explained just how he came to be so interested in her and Connie was eaten up with curiosity. But Mildred told them Stephen was out on bail so they weren't surprised when he telephoned. He was told Mildred was sleeping but he went up anyway, thinking she might awaken before he got there.

Connie had greeted him coldly but her heart softened when she saw how much he was disappointed because he couldn't see Mildred, who was still sleeping.

"I'll drop in tomorrow,' he said when Connie was speeding him at the door.

"Do," she drawled, "but don't happen along when Mildred's regular is here. He's frightfully jealous."

Little loyal trouble maker. She just wanted to give Stephen something to think about. She did.

"I don't suppose she wants me hanging around," he concluded with a "lost" feeling that he did not understand, and but for Pamela he might not have gone back.

Mr. Judson met him in the lobby of the hotel when he returned and took him to task at once for his recklessness.

"Connor isn't a master mind," Stephen returned unemotionally. "But I went out a back door."

"I suppose you mean he couldn't guess that you would leave Pamela this evening?" Mr. Judson retorted. "After all, Armitage, you're engaged to her."

"I didn't consider what Connor would think" Stephen declared; "but now that you speak of it I guess that's how it worked."

"You weren't considering the fact that he knows my daughter isn't going out socially?"

Stephen looked straight at him. "I'm not scared to death of Connor," he said. "And I wanted to see for myself that the man you've hired to guard Miss Lawrence is on the job."

"Oh, so you went to see Miss Lawrence? Was my man there?"

"Right outside in the hall. I've an idea Miss Lawrence hasn't told her mother and sister what happened. The girl spoke of it as an accident."

"Yes, Miss Lawrence wanted to keep it from them," Mr. Judson said. "I instructed my driver and the plainclothes man not to reveal anything to the family. How is Miss Lawrence?"

He looked at Stephen closely as he asked the question, his doubts of Stephen's love for Pamela again made active by Stephen's conduct.

"I didn't see her," Stephen explained. "She was sleeping."

"She's an exceptionally fine girl," Mr. Judson remarked. "She will make some lucky man a splendid wife."

Stephen nodded. "I understand she's engaged," he said, thinking of what Connie had said to him. A "regular" with Mildred was the same, to Stephen, as a fiance.

Mr. Judson was taken completely unawares. He said nothing and Stephen started to walk away.

"Pamela is waiting for you upstairs," Mr. Judson found voice to say before he got out of hearing.

Stephen paused. "Please make my excuses to her," he said. "I'm all in."

Mr. Judson nodded.

"Good night," Stephen said and went on.

Mr. Judson looked after him. "I don't believe he's ever been in love with either of them," he told himself suddenly. "Pamela's hooked him

Reminiscences Of An Old Timer

A Series Of Articles, Anonymously Written By An Old Timer In The South Plains Section

EVEN if we had no automobiles or home brew in pioneer days, we had some hilarious times. One day just after annual payday a bunch of us cowpunchers and nesters got together and having nothing else to do, we started a poker game. Every thing was moving along fast and furious and most of the boys were broke. "Slim" Burnett, a youngster from the North Plains was one of the luckiest suckers that day, I remember.

Another cowhand from beyond Clarendon was playing and had lost about everything he had except his spurs, he would not risk them.

He Bet Oil Land

"Buck" was sore because he'd just learned that some relative of his had died and left him a lot of land up along the Canadian River, so he figured he'd just get rid of the stuff. He told "Slim" he'd bet the land against the "pot." It had become a considerable by that time. "Slim" was a sort of an optimist, and took "Buck" up and I'll be jiggered if he didn't draw four sixes. "Slim tried to back out, he didn't want "Buck's" land, but "Buck" made him take it and I want to tell you, today some of the biggest oil wells in the Panhandle district are on the 6666 Ranch. "Slim's children busted into "Texas' Four Hundred," but "Slim" was just an ordinary cowhand when I first saw him.

Another fellow that sure fooled me when I recall his first start in life is the Chamber of Commerce head in Lubbock. Several years ago, I was visiting at the McDavie home in Bonham, they are sort of connections of mine, you know. They had a little red headed freckle-faced boy that was always a playin' with a little pink faced girl (I thought) with long yellow curls. "Sissie" Davis —he called her.

"Sissie's" maw was so proud of her curls, she always made "Sissie" wear a little blue sunbonnet. Everybody in Bonham thought "Sissie" would grow up to write poetry. But instead of being a girl, "Sissie" was a boy and grew up to be a rip-rearing good Chamber of Commerce man. He has built up a right good business on the Plains and is getting more folks to come to West Texas every day. I would never have believed that "Sissie" had the ability to make such a business man, if I did not know it to be a fact.

Another pioneer family of note is the Chambers folks that live near Tahoka now. They came to the Plains about the time Nunn moved his cattle to this section. They were not as strong on the cow business as some folks but stuck to horses—all except one boy—he failed to stick one time and limps just a little yet as a result. I remember one winter day one of the girls was teaching school over near the caprock. A norther came up after she had started home and she came might nigh freezing to death. She told me one day that she had no idea where she was or which way to go but her horse was a ranch bred animal and took her safely home. We don't have such storms any more. There are so many wind mills on the Plains that most of the wind is used up running them and there is not so much left to be worn out in storms.

The town of Tahoka is partly on land once owned by the Chambers and the lumber their house was built with was hauled 125 miles from the nearest railroad at that time. Grandma Chambers occupies a place in the hearts of Tahoka folks, just about the same as "Aunt Mary" Green does with Lubbock folks. Another woman who will be remembered by many for her great deeds of kindness is Mrs. "Hank" Smith. This family were old settlers in West Texas before any of the other old timers even thought of coming to the Plains. I don't have time to tell you about them today ,but will wind up my yarn next Sunday and tell what I know about them at the same time.

and he'll stick because he's the sort to tilt at windmills."

"Your man has gone to bed," he said to Pamela when he joined her in his suite. "And I can't say that I blame him."

"Where in the world has he been?"

"Calling on Miss Lawrence."

Pamela got up quickly. She didn't want to discuss what she'd just heard until she'd talked with Stephen about it.

"Why, of course," she said. "Wasn't that thoughtful of him?"

But her father knew, when she left the room, that she wasn't so calm about Stephen's call as she appeared to be.

The next day she arose early and breakfasted downstairs at an inconspicuous table, hoping to see Stephen, but he was not about. Later she telephoned his room and he told her he was unpacking.

"Bother," she exclaimed; "I'll send up a valet. Have you had breakfast?"

Stephen said yes.

"Then get ready and come down to the mezzanine in 15 minutes. We're going for a drive."

Stephen assented and Pamela rushed upstairs to get her hat and light wrap.

"Tell the operator to have my car right around right away," she ordered the maid.

When she met Stephen on the mezzanine he was of a different mind about going out with her.

"I don't think your father would like it," he said.

Pamela argued.

Stephen didn't want to tell her that he thought it was unsafe for her to leave the hotel in his company, so he simply refused to go.

"If you hadn't gone out last night I might think you were afraid," she said crossly.

"Perhaps I am," Stephen replied.

"You're not; you're just stubborn," Pamela retorted. "Well, I'll ask dad. If he doesn't object you'll go, won't you?"

Stephen did not expect her father to consent when he said yes. But Pamela returned after leaving him for a few minutes and told him her father said it was all right if they would be careful.

Stephen had no idea that she lied. There was a plan in her head and she did not mean to let parental dictates stand in the way of carrying out.

Stephen saw no glory in the beautiful day. He ought to have been feeling exuberantly happy, tingling with the joy of his freedom; instead he was conscious of a dull depression lying heavily upon him.

Pamela's radiant spirits did not endure in his blue company. She fell into a gloomy silence before they had gone ten blocks.

Time and again she started to say something and checked herself before the first word was out. Stephen was pleased not to talk. That made it easier for Pamela to hold her silence.

Inwardly she was fuming, but she didn't want to spoil what she was going to do by prematurely quarreling with Stephen over his visit to Mildred.

Stephen wondered, as they drove along, if her father had told her about Huck's attempt to have him shot. If so she was either very brave or very reckless, he thought.

"You're not going to the club, are you?" he asked with a touch of misgiving as Pamela took the route they had followed so many times to Westchester.

"Oh, no," she said. "I'm going to pay a call."

The idea did not appeal to Stephen. He saw himself being set upon by Pamela's friends to tell them what it was like in jail. Even Pamela's recent bereavement would not deter them from being fresh, Stephen knew.

He dared a suggestion that they turn on and enjoy a drive in the country.

"We won't be long," Pamela replied.

A few minutes later she turned off in the direction of Mildred's home.

"Where are you going?" Stephen inquired, vaguely distrustful.

"To see Mildred Lawrence," Pamela told him.

Stephen said nothing more until they came to a stop before the shabby building, faced with clinging fire escapes, where the Lawrences lived.

"I'll wait here if you don't mind," he said then.

"Of course I mind. I've only been here once before, but you know the apartment. Come along," Pamela snapped.

Stephen reluctantly escorted her to Mildred's door. Connie answered their ring and regarded them in undisguised surprise. Pamela stepped through the door she held open without waiting to be asked in.

Stephen hesitated. "Come in," Connie said to him most uncivilly. She was boiling, as she told Mildred later.

"We've come up to see Mildred," Pamela said brightly. "Please tell her."

Graham-Paige Is Trophy Winner

American Car Scores Highest In Class In 2,730 Tour Of France Under Auspices Of Club

PARIS, June 8.—Graham-Paige won the challenge trophy of the Automobile club of Paris, scoring highest in its particular class, in the 2730 mile Tour de France, a classic French motoring competition under the auspices of the Motorcycle club of France.

The Graham-Page entry, a four-speed six-cylinder cabriolet, strictly standard, finished without penalization of any sort, despite the strict schedule that imposed a loss of points for the slightest delay due to mechanical trouble.

The Tour de France is unique in its arrangement. The route covers all the principal cities of the country, and at the end of each day's run, averaging over 300 miles, the cars may compete in regional contests in hill-climbing, acceleration, cold starts, etc. In these events, Graham-Paige carried off three regional cups, those of Alsace, Provence, and the Mediterranean. The hill-climbing contests required a start from a stand-still, and a stop at the finish mark, thus testing acceleration, power, and braking.

Plymouth Makes Production Peak

Production of 1000 cars a day within ten months from the time its first car was manufactured is the record recently established by the Plymouth Motor Corporation at Detroit. "This is not only a record for the Plymouth," according to A. van Der Zee, general sales manager, "but for the entire industry, no other car ever reaching such an enormous production in such a short period of time.

"Although every effort is being made to meet the demand for cars, orders continue to be in excess of production figures," he says. "In the Plymouth plant, which is one of the most modern in the industry, everything is being done in installing the latest automatic machinery and time and labor saving devices to speed up production in order to meet the growing demand for the Plymouth. The speed of the assembly lines has been gradually increased until now a complete car is coming off every thirty seconds.

Changes Rapid In Automobile Style

"Style improvement has been more pronounced and rapid in the automobile industry than in any other business," said the local dealer for the De Soto Six, a Chrysler Motors product, recently in discussing the evolution of the modern automobile from the days of the horse-drawn vehicle.

"Until the birth of the motor car, practically all development of carriage and other transportation was along lines of varied but little fundamental worth, with the coming of the automobile every effort was made to render the bodies more comfortable and attractive to the eye. In the early days, design and style naturally were copied from the lines of the leading types of carriage. And as their appearance improved the makers retained the names of the favored vehicles of the past. Thus we have today the coupe, roadster, brougham, limousine, victoria and sedan, though they would hardly be recognized by the old coach makers who originated style when horse was king.

EX-SHERIFF POPULAR

BROWNSVILLE, June 8 (AP).—Mrs. Pinkie Vann, a former Cameron county sheriff, is more popular than ever. Last week she returned a check of $3,000 for fees in excess of amounts allowed her as sheriff under Texas laws. That remittance was the largest ever made by an out going sheriff.

BRANCH HOUSE PLANNED

An extensive program of expansion is being planned by Scroggin-Dickey company, Lubbock's new Oakland-Pontiac dealers. In addition to the enlargement of the business in Lubbock, dealerships will be established in all outstanding business points of the South Plains territory.

At the present time, negotiations are under way to locate branch houses at Lamesa, Brownfield and O'Donnell. It will require anly a short time to establish agencies at these points as well as at Slaton, Tahoka and Post.

NOT CURBSTONE AGENCIES

These branch houses will be equipped with a complete service department just as the Lubbock concern, it was announced yesterday by the management. No curbstone agencies under the Oakland-Pontiac banned will be allowed.

OPENING PLANS LAID

The new Oakland-Pontiac dealers here are making elaborate plans for their formal opening on or about June 15. It will require at least another week to get their new building in readiness for the introduction of the business and its personnel to the people of Lubbock. Meanwhile the Panhandle Durant company, formerly the occupants of the same building, have stored the new Durants on hand until another building can be secured suitable for the location of the Durant agency.

TO STRESS SERVICE

Scroggin-Dickey company will emphasize its service department, Mr. Dickey said yesterday in speaking of the policies of the new organization.

"To build a lasting business in a locality a concern must give its patrons the sort of service that they deserve and that will be our aim in Lubbock."

NEW CARS HERE

West Texas Motor Company, local Hupmobile distributors, unloaded two full carloads of new Hupmobiles Thursday, including a new cabriolet job that is making its first appearance in Lubbock. The body of the new machine is a mulberry color and the solid wheels are painted a bright cherry red. It has attracted consideable attention since it was first put on display Friday morning.

NEW CARS SOLD

Cap Rock Motor company, De Soto distributors in Lubbock, announce the sale of three new machines during the last week. C. W. Lackey of this city purchased a new De Soto coach, Donald Turner a De Soto coupe and W. A. Hart a De Soto coupe.

BRINGS CAR BACK

T. E. Llewelling, a member of the sales force of the Gough Motor company, Studebaker-Erskine dealers here, was in Dallas last week where he went to drive back a car sold by the local concern.

J. W. Thompson, formerly of Texico, N. M., who recently moved to Lubbock, has taken delivery of a new President State Sedan, according to C. E. Gough, manager of the Lubbock Studebaker house.

KENT OPTIMISTIC

Frank Kent of the Kent Buick company, which has recently succeeded the Slaughter Buick company in Lubbock, is highly optimistic over the business prospects for the new concern here. Co-incident with the opening of the new automobile house, was the first showing of the new Marquette by Buick. The new machine fas afforded a rousing reception in the automobile circles of Lubbock.

TO PLANT SUNFLOWERS

LAMESA, June 8 (AP).—Approximately 3,000 acres of Dawson county land will be planted in sunflowers this year, agriculturalists believe.

J. R. Weaver has announced he will plant 1,500 acres since he got from 600 to 700 pounds of seed to the acre last year. The crop was worth 5 to 6 cents a pound.

MEETING DATES SET

AMARILLO, June 8 (AP).—Directors of the Panhandle Livestock association, in a recent meeting here, set March 3-5, 1930, as the dates of their fourteenth annual convention.

Essex Speedster New Hudson Make

Latest Addition To Line Is Flash, Ultra-Stylish And Suggestive Of Fastest Race Cars

The most recent addition to the 1929 line of the Hudson Motor Car Company is this flashy, ultra-stylish, special "eighty" speedster mounted on an Essex the Challenger chassis. The body, custom built by Biddle and Sharp, is low and suggestive of the fastest of race cars. I is equipped with a folding windshied and there is a surprisingly large rumble seat in the rear deck. A cop and side curtains are included as standard equipment.

The car comes in a variety of colors, and all bright work is chromium plated as on all Greater Hudson and Essex the Challenger models.

On account of the extreme lightness of this type of body, and the low center of gravity found in this model, Hudson engineers have found it practicable to incorporate an overdrive, which makes it possible to combine safety with the tremendous speed which this car attains.

By means of special construction which makes it possible to lower the back of the seat to the floor, it is possible to convert the entire rear of the car into a very comfortable bed.

Following the finding of a rat which had died of bubonic plague on an Italian ship at Hull, England recently, 271 other rodents were killed on the vessel.

Dodge Completed In Record Time

How long is required for the final assembly of a motor car?

Despite the precision and care necesary in handling the various units along the two parallel assembly lines of Dodge Brothers, a chassis frame of the New Six models is a completed car ready for shipment just on hour and 59 minutes after it starts down the assembly line. These assembly lines are 1,451 feet long, and have a capacity of one car every 36 seconds.

Behind this final assembly—usually the most interesting place to visitors of an automobile factory—is a story of efficiency comparable to the system of getting food and munitions to the front line trenches in warfare. Every department must function so the parts continue to move forward without interruption. Costly delays would result if the final assembly line were held up for one part, so exacting time-table schedules are kept on all departments.

New Plant Added To Olds Factory

Erection of another new addition to the Oldsmobile-Viking factories—a mammoth sheet metal plant—is announced by I. J. Reuter, president and general manager of Olds Motor Works. The building will be 180 feet wide and 500 feet in length, and will materially increase th productive facilities of all sheet metal operations.

With this latest addition to the Oldsmobile-Viking factories, more than 1,000,000 square feet of new floor space will have been constructed since the summer of 1927. It is just two years ago since the announcement of the first new building which was the start of what has proven to be a continuous expansion program.

The new buildings will be of reinforced concrete and brick construction, matching the other new buildings which have been erected recently. It wil have a large covered concrete loading dock 500 feet long; thre crane bays 60 feet wide for the rapid and efficient movement of material and machinery, and deep concrete foundations for the heavy presses used in stamping out the larger sheet metal parts of Oldsmobiles and Vikings.

Fully 275 motion-picture theatres are operating on the 13 islands of the Philippines.

Chrysler Parts Are Inspected

No part of a Chrysler car is so small, its function so insignificant, as to be slighted during the period of probation on which it is put before being assembled in the completed product.

In the huge engineering building of Chrysler Motors at Highland Park, Detroit, hundreds upon hundreds of accessories are constantly being tested for the Chrysler "65" "75" and Imperial cars.

Not only are devices invented by Chrysler engineers put to the most rigid tests before being adapted for use in these products, but all equipment submitted by outside manufacturers for use in these cars is also subjected to the most minute examination, so they will live up to the high standards set for all Chrysler-built products.

A Sweeping Success

because it offers Big Car Qualities for only $745

THUS far in 1929, the New Pontiac Big Six has attracted a volume of sales far surpassing the spectacular sales recorded for earlier Pontiac Sixes. The New Pontiac Big Six is a sweeping success—an even more pronounced success than its famous predecessors. And it owes its success largely to the fact that it offers big car qualities at low prices.

The New Pontiac Big Six has introduced a new standard of values into the low-priced field. There is big car luxury and comfort in its sturdy, skillfully designed Fisher bodies with their beautiful, long-wearing upholstery and their adjustable drivers' seats. Big car power, speed and acceleration are developed by its big, smooth engine equipped with a 1¼-inch carburetor. And big car safety is assured by its two separate braking systems—the emergency brake which operates on the transmission and noiseless four-wheel internal-expanding service brakes.

Oakland produced the Pontiac Big Six to enable progressive people to step up in motor car quality without leaving the low-priced field. And the very people for whom it was created have made it an impressive sales success.

DURING the first five months of 1929, sales of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes totaled over 151,000 as compared with 131,305 for the same period in 1928 and 79,285 for 1927. The New Oakland All-American Six has come to be known through the enthusiasm of its owners as the finest medium-priced car in America today.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

NAN CARROLL, private secretary to ATTORNEY JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, discovers she is in love with her employer and determines to resign, but postpones her resignation when she learns Morgan is staking his professional integrity on the innocence of his friend, BERT CRAWFORD, whom he is preparing to defend.

Crawford is indicted for embezzlement. Nan distrusts him and IRIS MORGAN, beautiful wife of the lawyer. On the last day of Crawford's trial she finds convincing proof of his guilt and of his intention to elope with Iris as soon as her husband shall have won Crawford his freedom.

Crawford is acquitted before Nan can reach the courthouse. Relieved that she is spared the necessity of showing him the proof of his wife's and his friend's faithlessness, she tucks the note in her bag and leaves the courtroom.

Crawford immediately leaves town. When Iris announces a few days later she is going to New York on a pleasure trip, Nan believes Iris means to desert her husband and little son, CURTIS. While Nan and Morgan are working on Morgan's next case, the defense of LOIS DOWNS, a nurse, accused of murdering her patient, a letter comes from Iris telling Morgan she does not love him, that she will not return, and begging him not to hunt for her.

The letter omits all mention of Crawford. Morgan is crushed, and turning to Nan, he asks her to read the letter. When he masters himself, Nan drags him back from despair by forcing him to listen to her theory that Lois Downs is not a murderess and that the dead woman is a suicide.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

Late Tuesday afternoon, the first day of court after the two-day adjournment which had been granted to defense counsel for the exhumation of the body of Mrs. Andrew Ward for whose murder Lois Downs, her nurse, was being tried, John Curtis Morgan entered his office with a gleam of triumph in his despair-haunted black eyes.

"Well, the defense rests, Nan," the lawyer announced to his secretary. "Want to hear all about it, or have you been reading the extras?"

"Why buy extras when my boss is the manager of the show and can tell me about it himself?" Nan retorted as she followed him into his private office.

"Brainerd knew he was licked long before adjournment today, but he stubbornly refused to admit it." Morgan began eagerly, and the girl, whose big brown eyes searched his beloved face intently, knew that he was grateful for the chance to talk, that he dreaded to be alone. "He stuck into our fingerprint expert savagely on cross-examination, but he couldn't budge Cornwall a hair's breadth. Cornwall made it plain enough for an imbecile to see that the fingerprints found on the bathroom cabinet and on the poison bottles had been made by Mrs. Ward and that at least two of these prints had been superimposed upon prints made by the nurse's fingers, indicating that Mrs. Ward had handled them last."

"Good point," Nan nodded, her face glowing with interest. The man opposite her could not know that she was visualizing that day's dramatic scenes in the courtroom, where again the man she loved had played the hero's role, even though the heart in his breast was heavy with humiliation and despair. A man to be worshipfully proud of—this man she loved!

"I didn't call Dr. Holtzmann until after my fingerprint expert had testified, but I let him hear Cornwall's evidence. Fortunately, the doctor is a brilliant, fair-minded man. When I asked him if it would have been physically possible for Mrs. Ward to walk, he said that it would have been, if her desire had been keen enough. Her paralysis was due to a psychosis, or, possibly, was shammed, he admitted, while Brainerd positively clawed the air."

"I wish I'd seen him," Nan chuckled "Did you call Lois Downs' young man, Chester Parks?"

"Yes. Parks testified that he and Lois were engaged to be married, that she had complained to him of Andrew Ward's unwelcome attentions. His testimony will go far toward destroying the motive which Brainerd has tried to pin on the girl, speeially as Ward himself has admitted that Lois did not return his love.

"Brainerd rested without calling any witnesses in rebuttal, but he'll make a stab at saving his face before the jury tomorrow in his summation. Naturally he'll contend that the old lady's fingerprints in the bathroom don't necessarily mean that she killed herself, even if she did toy with poison bottles, but the jury will be glad enough to believe that the unpleasant old lady committed suicide, rather than that a pretty young thing like Lois Downs committed murder. And so—that's that!"

The moment which Nan had been dreading and pushing away since Friday night had come at last. His only big case on the court calendar at present was won, or practically so. There was nothing to keep him from sinking into the slough of despondence.

The telephone rang with that peculiar long-drawn-out insistence which heralds a long distance call. "Maybe," Nan thought gloatingly, as she swooped for the instrument before Morgan could reach it, "there's a nice, juicy murder, just dripping with mystery which will keep him so darned busy—" Then, aloud, "Hello! Yes, John Curtis Morgan's offices. Oh! Yes, he's right here!"

She cupped her hand over the receiver and whispered excitedly to Morgan: "It's the governor's secretary. Says the governor wants to talk to you."

"Governor Hogarth?" Morgan was eager again. "About that Brownlee case, I hope. . . . Hello, hello! Morgan speaking. Yes . . . Oh, hello, Governor! Yes, still trying to keep 'em out of jail. . . . Not so's you'd notice it! But I'd like to flirt with the trout with you this summer, if you can get away. . . . Yes, I suppose so. Presidential year is a Godsend to the long-suffering trout, at any rate. . . . Yes, Governor? . . . Of course I'm mighty anxious to see Brownlee get a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment. . . . That's mighty decent of you, Ben, but I don't see how I could get away just now. . . ."

Nan laid an eager hand on his shoulder, shook him slightly. "Of course you can go—tomorrow night. I'll look after everything."

Morgan shook his head at her and frowned, then grinned with wry humor, as he turned back to the telephone. "All right, Ben. I'll arrive at the capital tomorrow evening. . . . Oh, don't bother Evelyn. A hotel will be all right for me. . . . Oh, all right, and thanks, Ben. My best to Evelyn and the future president of the United States."

When he hung up the receiver he turned to Nan ruefully. "The governor insists on my staying at at the executive mansion. Ben and Evelyn Hogarth are both good scouts, and ususally I'd enjoy a visit with them, but right now—" He paused, passed a hand wearily across his eyes, and Nan knew that his unfinished thought was that it would be almost unbearable for him, a man whose wife had left him because she did not love him, to go into a home that was nationally famous for its domestic felicity.

"But it is awfully decent of them, and you'll enjoy it more than you think." Nan insisted with forced casualness. "Isn't it splendid that the governor's got around to the Brownlee case so soon? I'm sure you can make him see that this is one case where the granting of executive clemency is a high privilege, not merely an act of mercy."

Morgan's mouth twisted in the wry, humorous smile that she loved to call forth. "I think I'd better send you to the capital in my place. Poor Brownlee has always been your special pet, anyway."

"Thanks awfully," Nan grinned, "but it would be very inconvenient for me to get away right now."

"And so it is for me," Morgan remembered glcomily. "I had intended to spend most of this week, after the Downs case goes to the jury, in hunting for a—boarding school for Curtis."

"Oh, Mr. Morgan, you can't mean to shut him away in a boarding school! He's so little, so young! Why, he's just a baby—six years old! Do you thing it's fair to—"

"Whoa, Nan!" Morgan interrupted. "I admit it's not fair to the boy, but I've been watching him rather more observingly than usual since—since Friday." He still could not bring himself to utter Iris's name. "He's a spoiled little devil. No nurse will stay more than a couple of weeks. Yesterday when I got home I found Clara, the nurse that Ir—that we hired only 10 days ago, just waiting to get her money and walk out on the job, and I couldn't blame her. Curtis had flung a fork at her head and cut her cheek pretty badly—"

"Why?" Nan demanded. "I suppose you cross-examined her and put the defendant on the stand?"

Morgan smiled at her vehemence, but she saw that he was grateful for her implied championship of the child. "It seems that he insisted on having his dinner with his father, rather than in the nursery with his nurse."

"You see!" Nan triumphed, rather obscurely. "He should have dinner with his father. I'd fling forks, too! And he shouldn't have a nurse—a great big boy of six—"

"You were just saying that he's a baby," Morgan minded her, smiling.

"Well, a baby as far as being sent away to school is concerned, and a big boy as far as having a nurse goes," Nan explained impatiently. "He belongs in public school, along with other six-year-old boys. Put him with a bunch of other young hodlums and they'll knock selfishnes out of him too quick to talk about."

"The primary grades only have half-day sessions," Morgan reminded her. Someone would have to be responsible for him until I got home. Besides," and he sighed heavily, "there's the nuisance of keeping up a big house, just for a man and a child—"

"I think," Nan broke the silence hesitatingly, laying the words down gently so as not to anger him, "that Curtis has a right to a real home to grow up in. And since he's been—left—to you alone, it will have to be your job to make that home for him somehow. It won't be easy. But seeing him grow up, your companion and friend as well as your son, will pay you, I believe— Oh, can't you see the other side of the picture?—a poor, lonely little misfit, shuttling from boarding school to summer camp and back to school again, homeless, parentless, except for a father whom he sees two or three times a year and who is worse than a stranger, because he takes liberties and scolds?"

Morgan groaned. "Lay off, Nan! I'm not like Brainerd. I know when I'm licked. Will you help me a bit—dig up a good housekeeper that will take an intelligent interest in the boy? God knows I want to do the right thing by him."

Nan considered a moment, her capable, slim fingers twisting a lock of her short brown hair. "You'll be at the state capital several days, I imagine. Would you think it awfully cheeky of me if I suggested going

U. S. Consul To Sweden, Visiting In Son's Abernathy Home, Tells Of His Experiences In Years Of Diplomacy

H. C. Von Struve, Home For Rest, Has Represented Uncle Sam In Many Lands Since 1914

By SUTTON CHRISTIAN
(Avalanche-Journal Staff)

Abernathy, June 8—"See America First" and then see H. C. Von Struve, American consul stationed at Goteborg, Sweeden, if you wish further information as to interesting cities and nations of the world.

Taking the rest cure at the farm of his son, H. C. Von Struve, Jr., near Abernathy, the consul is recuperating from a minor nervous breakdown, due to exigencies of his office. Incidentally, he included Dallas in his itenerary long enough to extend Sweden's greetings to Rotarians at the International convention.

SEES MUCH SERVICE

Fifteen years in consular service of the United States, Mr. Von Struve has been shifted from scenes of sunbaked Mexico, through island possessions, to Germany and to the ineffably picturesque Sweden.

His travels and contacts have made him a student of the world, and he apparently has an uncanny faculty of adapting himself to any environment. A few days ago he was concerned with the commercial interests of the United States in far away Sweden where mountains are covered with mossy herbage and vagrant firs accentuated in charm by rivers and streams straggling among recesses of stone in their journey to the Baltic. Today he is seeking tranquility and rest on the South Plains of Texas. When his condition permits he may be found at the Struve Cheese factory, operated by his brothers at Abernathy, chatting affably with farmers and dairymen who are marketing milk. He seems to know and understand the things that interest the Texas farmer, as he knows the customs of widely separated nationalities.

Posts Constrast Widely

His posts have been widely contrasting in physical aspects and in customs of inhabitants. He has served at the following posts: Curacao; Dutch West Indies; La Guiara, Venezula; Havana, Cuba; Edfurt, Germany; Mexicala, Mexico; Stavanger, Norway, and Goteborg, Sweden.

Mr. Von Struve was born near Austin 55 years ago. Graduated from the University of Texas, he practiced law in Gonzales for several years, receiving his first appointment as consul in 1914.

His wife died at Calexico, California in 1925, and since that time he has been spending much of his time visiting with his children in Texas. He is father of three children, Henry C. Von Struve, Jr., and Miss Louise Von Struve, both of Abernathy, and A. W. Von Struve, member of the staff of the Wichita Daily Times, Wichita Falls.

Praises Sweeden

"Rich in streams and lakes, numerous falls and rapids, Sweden has a picturesque charm," Mr. Von Struve said. "Nearly half the inhabitants support themselves by farming, though only 12 per cent of the land area is under cultivation. Oats, sugar beets and dairying are the chief means for livlihood on the farm.

"Agricultural conditions are being improved by founding of schools by the government and by appointment of peripatetic teachers; Education is placed upon a high level."

Mr. Von Struve will return to his post in Sweeden about July 1.

to your house and staying nights with Curtis while you're gone? I could get things in shape with the cook and the maid. I could also get Curtis started in school and have time to look around for a housekeeper—"

"Would I think it cheeky?" Morgan interrupted. "Good Lord, Nan, I'd think it angelic of you, and you know it! Curtis will be tickled to death, too. You're the only human being that can do anything with him."

The next day the Lois Downs case went to the jury just before noon, and within five minutes a verdict of "Not Guilty" was returned. John Curtis Morgan, with another sensational court victory to his credit, boarded a train at two o'clock to the visit the governor of the state and at half-past five Nan Carroll walked up the steps of the home which Iris Morgan had abandoned. A small figure hurtled out of the door into her arms.

"Hello, Nana! I wanted to see you. Nana, Estelle's an awful liar. She says my mother ain't coming back. If she ain't, are you gonna stay, Nana?"

Pertinent Facts About Automobiles By Israel Klein, Science Editor For NEA Service

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

The remarkable success made with air cooled motors in airplanes has led many enthusiasts to muster up further hope for this type of engine in the automobile. Weighing its advantages and disadvantages against those of the more successful water cooled product, it is hard to realize why the air cooled motor has lost so much in popularity. Yet today there is only one air cooled car in the United States, one each in England, France and Germany—and that is all!

At the beginning of the automotive industry, the air cooled engine was supreme. Soon, however, water was circulated over the cylinder head and later the water system was directed around the cylinders as well. At the same time, the engine that remained tirely air cooled was improved so that the disadvantages which water cooling was introduced to correct will be nullified without water.

Modern airplane practice also has shown the way toward improved design of the cooling fins around the engine, so as to produce greater efficiency and less loss of power when the motor is hot and under heavy loads.

The question that might arise first in the mind of motorist is the one that least troubles engineers of the air cooled motor. That is whether it will keep cool. This type of motor has been improved so that no matter what the condition, enough cooling air will be distributed over it to keep it operating at the most effective temperature.

The most serious condition an automobile encounters is a pull in low gear up a steep, long hill. Here even good water cooled engines overheat, forcing their drivers to stop and get fresh water. Yet the make such climbs with ease.

The reason for this is the improved blower system provided for such engines. The metal jacket over the engine direct the air sucked in by the fans in front of the motor over the surfaces of the cylinders, so that fresh air passes over the motor no mattor how slow the car may be going. In the heat of summer, pulling up a hill at low gear, there would be practically no wind through the "radiator" were it not for the blower.

However, the fan uses up 10 per cent or more of the engine's power under such conditions, and that is a disadvantage that can't be eliminated, either.

The air cooled engine seems to be preferred in very hot and very cold climates, says its sponsors. In mountainous districts too, even in the heat of summer, this type of motor works well. In cold climates it hasnt the disadvantages of the water cooled motor which freezes over easily unless extreme care is taken to keep the system supplied with an efficient anti-freeze solution.

In addition to all this, the air cooled engine takes the credit of being much lighter than the other type. And it costs less to build. But while there is no water pump, no cylinder jackets nor radiator in this type of car, these are balanced by the necessity of having a blower fan, a metal jacket around the engine, fins on the cylinders and, for appearance sake, a false radiator.

While the temperature of the engine doesn't bother the driver of the air colled job, and he has no worry over possible leaks in the water cooling system, he hasn't the advantage of quieter operation. The sound of the valves and detonations in the cylinders are deadened considerably by the jacket of water around the engine. Lack of this jacket of water in air cooled engines has resulted in much greater noises from them.

However, their manufacturers have by this time succeeded in eliminating much of this noise.

Frigidaire Unit Used In Display

(Special To The Avalanche-Journal)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 8—Transported in a Fokker tri-motored monoplane, the one millionth electrical refrigeration unit produced by Frididaire Corporation, a General Motors subsidiary, has been brought here for display at the National Electric Light association convention.

Lieut. J. A. Macready, former army flier and one time holder of the world's altitude, endurance and distance flight records simultaneously and now a member of the company's sales organization, piloted the plane, making his first cross country flight since resigning from the air corps three years ago.

The one millionth Frigidaire, ornamented with a gold serial plate, is a feature of the organization's exhibit at the convention.

Germany's leading air-line company expects to carry 11,000 passengers this year.

Trend of Motors Is Toward Eights

The trend of the fine car field to the eight cylinder motor is emphasized by a recent survey which discloses the remarkable gain in perference for this type of motore in the past six years, according to C. E. Gough, Studebaker-Erskine dealer here.

"In 1923," said Mr. Gough, "only 14.2 per cent of passenger car engines were the eight cylinder type. Today, however, the preference for eights is so markd that 41 per cent of engine types are eights. Of these the majority are straight eights, such as Studebaker's world champion President Eight and the Commander Eight. The success of these two cars has ben such to give Studebaker the distinction of building and selling more tight cylinder cars than any other manufacturer in the world."

Valuation Of County's Motor Cars Is Five Millions

Practically Ten Thousand People Possess Own Cars

Business Of Selling Autos Here Is Good, Survey Of Conditions Here Shows; Many Used Cars Sold

ONE of the most accurate of modern-day tests of the business prosperity of a section can be gained through an accurate check of its automobile investment.

With the one exception, agriculture, Lubbock County's greatest industry is the automobile industry, indicating a marked era of prosperity in the section around the Hub of the Plains.

In spite of the fact the South Plains section is a comparatively young country and its populace is said to be made "automogile conscious," a conservative estimate of the present investment in this country shows a tremendous amount of capital tied up in motor-driven vehicles.

9,050 Cars In County

Automobile registration for the county reveals that a total of 9,050 motor cars are being driven. Of this number, 1022 are new machines delivered in 1929.

Lubbock dealers estimate that the average value of the caron the road is approximately $600. With this figure as a basis, the aggregate automobile investment in Lubbock county at the present time reaches a grand total of $5,430,000.

This enormous increase in automobile investment is indicative of the present-day trend of the growing industry made famous by Henry Ford and General Motors. Time payments and the various systems of trade-ins on used cars has made it possible for the man of moderate means to own his own car. A salaried man who is unable to afford a new automobile, can buy a reconditioned used machine with only a partial payment on delivery.

Don't Drive 'Em Long

This condition whereby the automobile dealer handles on an average of four used cars on each new delivery, has increased the number of car owners. The practice of driving an automobile until it is worn out is a thing of the past. Today the accessibility to the new models causes the average owner to change often as the styles change. This is another factor in the increase in motor car investment in Lubbock county.

Although Lubbock county is ranked as one of the leading automobile counties in the state of Texas, there are less expensive cars in this section that in metropolitan centers further east. The consensus of opinion among Lubbock business men who have studied the situation in this section is based on the fundamental newness of the Plains country with the accompanying desire on the part of the settlers to save for the future.

Many men of means who had already made a financial success in the business world came to West Texas. The majority of the people who "came west" were seeking cattle lands and fortunes and therefore regarded automobiles as luxuries. Even today, prospective buyers of motor vehicles think in terms of economy when considering a car deal.

Could Afford Costlier Cars

This is because of a lack of "automobile consciousness," local dealers believe. The majority of Lubbock county citizns are yet to be educated to the point where the pride of ownership and luxury of a finer car enter into the sale of a new machine. Well-to-do merchants and ranchers of the county are known to drive cheaper cars when they could well afford costlier cars.

This is more or less a matter of conjecture, but there are indications enough to show that such is the trend. Builders of automobiles are producing cars to fit the pocket book of off classes and the "price" will likely remain the determining factor for years to come.

Youngster Changes Auburn From Losing To Winning Automobile In Five Years

By NEA Service

AUBURN, Ind., June 8.—Five years ago the Auburn Automobile company of this city turned out 10 automobiles a day and even then had a hard time getting rid of them.

Today the same company produces a cary every two minutes and is 6000 cars behind its orders! Today nearly half a dozen other companies are combined with the parent motor company to make this one of the outstanding organizations in the automotive industry.

Yet those who are acquainted with the business say there is only one man to whom credit is given for this rise of the Auburn company to success. He's a young fellow, only 34, not especially striking in appearance, yet he's looked upon as the brains and the motive force back of the entire organization.

The man is E. L. Cord, president of Auburn.

Cord used to think of automobiles when he was very young. Today he is entirely wrapped up in automobiles. Slender, dark of eye and square of chin, his sleek dark hair combed back and his lips set firm, though full, he looks the man of action that he is. As an executive he issues few orders. He's a great listener instead.

Makes His Own Tests

Just after the auto show in New York last January, the Auburn engineers had completed a new product. Cord took it immediately on a 10,000-mile journey over desert and mountain and valley, through all sorts of territory and weather, to try it out in action. He wanted to prove to himself that the car was built right.

On the way, Cord stopped into gasoline stations and asked the attendants how they liked the looks of the car. He asked them how they thought an automobile should perform and got their opinions on rival cars as well. Te asked about lines and colors, about seating positions, riding comfort, brakes and in fact every detail a regular driver would be interested in.

Then he drove into garages and talked to shopmen, to foremen and to salesmen. Not satisfied with their "expert" opinions, he parked his car at curbs, stod on the sidewalk and talked to passersby who stopped to inspect it.

Learns From People

Here was this youthful manufacturer, many times a millionaire, head of half a dozen companies, with an engineering staff of 200 men at his command and a sales force of several thousand, finding out what he wanted to know directly from the people on the sidewalk. This incident gives a true insight into the character of E. L. Cord and the factor that has made him a success.

Significantly Cord was born in Missouri. He remains a Missourian.

Early in his life he got into the automobile game, "just like any other kid," he says. He used to hang around automobile garages. He drove cars and watched auto races. And his first job of any account was selling automobiles in Los Angeles. As a salesmen from used to new cars, ten as a dealer and later as a dealer and later as a trucking operator in Arizona, Cord floundered about until he turned up in Chicago, again sellig automobiles for the distributor there. In three years he became general manager of the firm.

In 1924, with the bankers threatening the fate of the Auburn company, Cord took a hand. He became the firm's general manager and in less than two years is president.

Nothing Unusual In It.

Since then Auburn has grown fast. Today it is one of the most important independent factors in the manufacture of automobiles. Yet Cord is nonchalant about this success. It was nothing unusual to him. He merely refrained from making the mistakes which other small companies had made in the past. He worked hard with the rest of his men and pulled through from a critical condition to one of safety and profit.

In his administration, Auburn has acquired the Lycoming Motor company, Duesenberg Motors, the Limousine Body company and one or two parts companies, all combining to advance the prestige of Auburn as well as themselves.

Cord, though careful and conservative in his progress, isn't afraid of trying out anything that to others might appear too radical for their financial health. Witness the front drive automobile which Auburn is soon expected to spring into the American automotive field.

Cord knows his business thoroughly. He's just as much at home among a group of his directors discussing the financial problems of Auburn as he is among his engineers planning next year's models. His associates call him a genius.

Modest and Appreciative

Yet he, on the other hand, considers himself merely a human being who is willing to work hard to achieve his purpose.

"When I become convinced that I am a pretty smart fellow," he says, "you can conclude that our company has gone forward as far as it can with me at its head."

That modesty extends to his faith in those who work for him.

"Most men have ability," he explains. "Given the proper working conditions, they will apply it. At Auburn we have merely given a lot of good men a chance to prove their worth."

Outside of his work, Cord does little in the way of recreation. He plays golf rather indifferently. He dislikes social functions. One of his chief interests lies in fine horses, and he is often found with his two small sons horseback riding. Again he spends hours at times in the boys' miniature machine shop helping them build some mechanical device.

BAND FAME GOES ABROAD

ABILENE, June 8 (AP)—The Cowboy band, musical organization of Simmons university here has broken into a foreign press. A picture of the cowboys being received at the White House in Washington several weeks ago, appeared in the April 15 issue of the China Press, Shanghai.

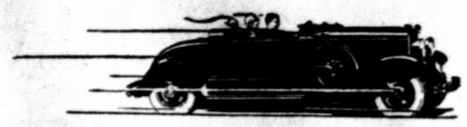

A clipping of the picture was seen by a missionary who sent it to Pres. J. D. Sandefer of Simmons.

A FIVE-YEAR-OLD FORECAST MORE THAN REALIZED

JUNE 7 1924

"+ + + the Chrysler is, in reality, the first step in the general revision of motor car design which is bound to follow its advent. + + + For it is an entirely new type of car, built on a new kind of engineering, which produces results radically different from any heretofore registered in the industry."

CHRYSLER'S INFLUENCE ON YOUR CAR

It has become an axiom of the motor car industry that much of what comes tomorrow originates in what Chrysler engineering does today.

For five years, Chrysler has been the acknowledged leader in thrilling performance. For five years, Chrysler has led the way in individuality and modern smartness of design.

Those in possession of the facts know that there is scarcely a motor car today that does not owe some improvement in its make-up to Chrysler—and has not become a better car by reason of Chrysler engineering achievement.

Emulation is a nice compliment to Chrysler leadership, of course. But the mere copying of features cannot equal the complete Chrysler results.

To you who are about to choose a new car, a natural question arises: Why not enjoy a Chrysler itself, so long as Chrysler smartness, comfort, performance and quality are the goals to which other cars are striving? Let us show you in a test of your own choosing the superiority of Chrysler to anything aspiring to compete with Chrysler.

CHRYSLER "75"—$1535 to $1795—Eight Body Styles. + CHRYSLER "65"—$1040 to $1145—Six Body Styles. All prices f. o. b. factory. Chrysler dealers extend convenient time payments.

Togs For

and white has soce smart combinations. Stripes are more often diagonal than not, checks are chic and new.

Many bathing suits are really ensembles, with capes, coats or jackets to slip on when one emerges dripping and pauses for a cup of tea or cooling beverage. The very latest thing in beach outfits is Mary Nowitzky's "garden skirt," sandals and parasol ensemble. This consists of a stunning quilted skirt of finely patterned green, pink and blue flowers on a yellow background, with sash of apple green parasol of the same sweet material. With this long skirt slipped over one's more or good swimmer immediately is transformed into a perfect lady.

Silk Suits Have Novelty

Bathing suits of silk look much like little girls' party frocks, featuring novel necklines, bow ties, godets and so on. Very short jersey tights go under practically all of these, with the abbreviated legs banded in the frock's silk. Many of these are really meant only for beach wear, though the rayon moire ones and some of the crepes claim sea worthiness. The latest beach pajama outfits take fashion notes from farmerette outfits and tuck-in, gingham, sleeveless jumper, topped by a flopping straw hat, the linen overalls or trousers with promise genuine popularity. They are jaunty, youthful, new.

Knee length coats, cut much on the order of last season's coolie coats but fuller, are in the majority for beach wear. Jersey is good, silks are lined with some spongy materials in the silk's color. Rather short capes are newer than coats. Coats usually top the suits that feature shorts while coats top the more feminine bathing suits with skirts.

Bathing caps come in the shape of firemen's helmets, aviation caps and other novel skull types as well as the fashionable rubberized kerchiefs that women like so well.

Fashion Underfoot

Beach shoes are extremely varied this year. Clogs develop heels, because women are uncomfortable with their feet flat on the sand. For the same reason rubber shoes have heels, also—a very new style point. Shoes come in all color combinations. One pair of black lacquered sandals uses a nosegay of felt flowers in gay colors to decorate its vamp. There is more decorativeness all along the line in beach togs.

Big floppy hats usually have only a line of color in their bandings, or else several strands of colored straw weaving a braided banding, with the narrow ends knotted into streamers. Parasols appear in many shapes and fabrics, with the majority copying color or fabric from one's beach wrap.

Whether one swims this season or not, there is no reason on earth why she should not go down to the sea in style, anyhow. Sun baths being the popular institution they now are, one has a fine excuse for beach outfits. And of all the season's costumes, there are none more delicately colorful, varied, nor better calculated to enhance feminine beauty than the current model of the old time alpaca bathing suit.

Nearly $5,000,000 was spent in repairing electrical breakdowns in England last year.
