Delta 191

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday let stand a lower court ruling that blamed a 1985 crash at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport on the crew of Delta Flight 191. Ending a drawn-out legal battle over an accident that claimed 137 lives, the court declined to consider an appeal filed by Delta, the widows of two crew members and the relatives of other accident victims. /4B

Professor cries foul

Thomas accuser assails Senate committee

■ Statements reverberate through Capitol, confirmation vote might be delayed.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Publicly defending her accusation of sexual harassment against Judge Clarence Thomas, an Oklahoma law professor assailed the Senate Judiciary Committee on Monday, saying it gave short shrift to her repeated allegations against the Supreme Court nominee.

The statements by the professor, Anita F. Hill, at a news conference in Norman, Okla., reverberated through the Capitol, despite the efforts of President Bush and other supporters to contain the fallout on the eve of the confirmation vote by the full Senate.

They produced a series of difficult questions for the Judiciary Committee and its chairman, Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., and a swirl of angry speechmaking on the Senate floor. It was perhaps the most intense examination in American politics of the issue of sexual harassment.

George J. Mitchell, the Senate Democratic leader, said several senators, including some who had declared their support for Thomas, asked him to delay the vote, now scheduled for this evening. But he said he had told them that would not be possible because a delay would require the consent of all 100 members.

Mitchell also delivered a vigorous defense of Biden on the Senate floor, commending him for "exemplary leadership." Nevertheless, prospects for a vote today appeared riskier.

Though Thomas' supporters predicted that he would still be confirmed, they conceded that the allegations could be damaging. Some erosion in support of the Court hears guilty plea by Abrams

■ Ex-Reagan official to cooperate with Iran-Contra prosecutors.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Elliott Abrams, the former assistant secretary of state who was one of the Reagan administration's fiercest advocates of armed support for the Nicaraguan rebels, pleaded guilty on Monday to two misdemeanor counts of withholding information from Congress about secret efforts to aid to the guerrillas.

Abrams' guilty pleas and his promise to cooperate with Iran-Contra prosecutors may open another avenue for investigators as they make what appears to be a final push to broaden their search for wrongdoing at the senior levels of the Reagan administration.

WWII bombers drop into town

■ Rare warplanes among first to arrive for CAF's Airsho'91.

World War II's heaviest bombers, the B-24 Liberator and the B-29 Superfortress, rumbled into Midland at noon Monday as if they had been victims of a time warp.

And they were almost cast into oblivion.

Hardly victims, these two rare examples of America's air power from another era are beneficiaries of a "Keep 'em Flying" campaign.

And they are among the first of 1939-'45-period American, British, German and Japanese warplanes to fly into Midland International Airport for the Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 this weekend.

"I have been waiting two years to see that happen," CAF Chief of Staff Joe Mabee said, as the two four-engine bombers made a pass over the airport, circled around, landed and lumbered over to a corps of newspaper, television and radio news people as well as CAF colonels and other aviation buffs.

"This is the end of the great beginning," said Mabee, who was a principal force behind the CAF's relocation to Midland.

The CAF, which had been headquartered in the Rio Grande Valley since its inception in 1957, is winding up its move to Midland and into the the CAF's new international headquarters and the American Airpower Heritage Museum that is to open on Park receives the last of its city dollars.

New park receives final matching funds

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Some say Midland's new northwest park is one of a kind, others that it should be the last of its kind.

Bluebird Park, now under construction along Bluebird Lane west of Midkiff Road, recently was allocated the last of its city dollars, effectively clearing the way for its completion. Although built as a much-needed relief valve for overcrowded youth sports, some city officials said part of its $650,000 price tag might have been better spent elsewhere.

The new park was funded by three sources — an Abell-Hanger Foundation Grant, private donations raised by youth sports associations and the city of Midland.

It originally was designed to solve a space crunch in youth sports and to provide northwest Midlanders with a neighborhood park.

"This park is one of the most rewarding things the city has ever done," said Bill Williams, former City Council member and a supporter of youth sports. "Cooperatively, we were able to solve a crisis and solve it very well."

According to community services information, the city's contribution totals just under $200,000, about equal to money raised by Midland's Junior Baseball Association and Soccer Association.

Abell-Hanger donated $250,000 for the park in 1989, on the condition that it be matched by other sources before

New Mexico to take WIPP issue to court

SANTA FE (AP) — New Mexico Attorney General Tom Udall said Monday he would file suit in Washington, D.C., as early as today to try to block the opening of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

The state will try to convince a federal judge that New Mexico would suffer irreparable harm if the U.S. Department of Energy facility near Carlsbad were to begin taking plutonium-contaminated trash, Udall said.

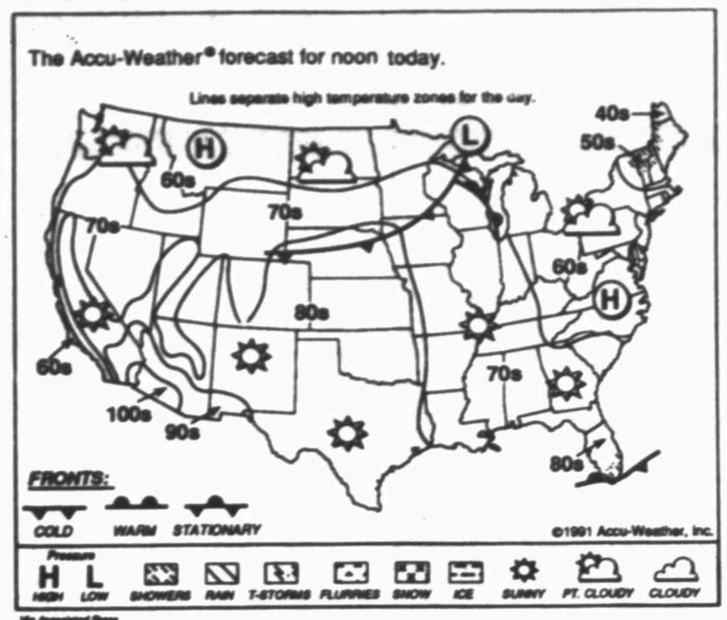
WEATHER SUMMARY



The Associated Press

Look for clear skies, 80s

Today's forecast calls for clear skies, with a high in the mid-80s and south winds at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight should be clear with a low in the low 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Wednesday should be clear with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 44, Monday's high was 78 compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1979. The record low for that date is 33 set in 1976.

STATE

Sunny skies and mild temperatures were reported across Texas on Monday, and the National Weather Service said more of the same is on the menu for today.

High pressure at the surface and aloft was credited for the dry, fall weather. Relative humidities Monday afternoon were only in the upper 20s to lower 30s.

Because dry air warms and cools very efficiently, large diurnal temperature ranges have been common. Lows Monday morning were generally in the 40s, but temperatures had climbed into the 70s by mid-afternoon.

Winds generally were brisk along the coast, but light and variable elsewhere. Winds of 20 to 30 mph were common along the coast, and gusty winds and high tides came together to cause coastal flooding along the lower Texas coast, from Port O'Connor to Brownsville.

NATION

Much of the Southeast had a frosty morning Monday, with record low temperatures from Alabama to Texas. A cold front produced rain over the southern tip of Florida, while the Appalachian region got its first snow of the season.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ACCUSER: Confirmation vote might be delayed nomination set in almost immediately, with more than a half dozen Democrats calling for a delay in the vote. But most Democrats decided to wait at least overnight before getting caught in the crossfire.

At her news conference, Ms. Hill broadened her criticisms of Thomas, first reported over the weekend by National Public Radio and Newsday, a New York newspaper, to include the charge that he harassed her with sexual remarks in a way that violated the regulations he was supposed to enforce as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

In her statement last month to the Judiciary Committee's investigators, she did not describe the activities as illegal harassment. Thomas has denied the allegation to investigators and to some senators. Neither Ms. Hill's statements nor Thomas' denials were made under oath.

Ms. Hill also went beyond criticizing the conduct of Thomas on Monday to questioning the Judiciary Committee's handling of her complaint. She said she had struggled for nearly two weeks last month to put before the 14 male members of the committee a confidential account of being verbally harassed by Thomas when she was his assistant from 1981 to 1983, first at the Education Department and later at the EEOC.

Her account of the period in September differed markedly from the accounts offered this weekend and Monday by the White House and Sen. Biden, who said Ms. Hill's demand that her statements be kept confidential had impeded the committee.

The Senate seemed caught in a state of confusion.

ABRAMS: Ex-official pleads guilty to 2 charges

(From 1A)

The independent prosecutor, Lawrence E. Walsh, was recently forced to drop all charges against a main figure in the case, Oliver L. North, but he has made some headway in pursuing efforts to conceal the affair at the CIA. The Abrams investigation takes Walsh for the first time into the Reagan State Department.

Monday's legal action came in two parts. In the morning, prosecutors disclosed the charges against Abrams, making public the two misdemeanor counts against him. Later, at the hearing in federal court, the plea bargain was disclosed along with Abrams' promise to cooperate by agreeing to testify truthfully to the grand jury or in court proceedings in other cases.

The guilty pleas do not make clear whether Abrams was aware of the Iran-Contra affair as it unfolded, including the covert arms sales to Iran. But other Reagan administration officials in previous testimony to Congress have not included Abrams among those who knew about the diversion of profits from the Iran arms sales to help the Contras and there is no evidence that he was aware of the transfer of funds until it was publicly disclosed in November 1986.

The events on Monday came as a stunning reversal for Abrams, who has insisted that he never knowingly misled Congress. But in court, Abrams admitted that he had unlawfully kept information from two congressional committees in the fall of 1986 when he testified about his knowledge of the secret Contra supply network and about his role in soliciting a $10 million contribution for the Contras from the sultan of Brunei.

HAITI: Hard-line soldiers open fire, hold lawmakers

voys from the Organization of American States were meeting with Haiti's de facto leader, Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras, who led the Sept. 30 coup against Aristide.

Witnesses said some of the soldiers stormed into the room where the OAS diplomats were meeting, but left without harming them. They said soldiers also threatened to kill Col. Alix Silva, one of the coup leaders, who had joined Cedras in the meeting. U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson and U.S. Ambassador Alvin Adams were among the diplomats.

Also at the airport, the troops beat and arrested Port-au-Prince Mayor Evans Paul, an Aristide ally, as he and other politicians were preparing to board a plane for Venezuela.

The troops told journalists at the airport that they were acting to stop Cedras and Silva from negotiating the return of Aristide.

"The military was going crazy," said a Haitian journalist, who did not wish to be identified. "They told us that Cedras had sold them out, that he made a deal allowing Aristide to come back."

Monday's naming of a provisional president complicated diplomatic efforts to restore Aristide to power.

PARK: Some city officials question price tag

(From 1A)

February 1992.

"We needed to go ahead and get the final matching funds now so we could make our plans before the deadline," said Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services. The council recently allocated $52,000 for the final match.

But funding for the completion was not popular with some members of the City Council. Some members were hesitant, saying the city has spent enough on new parks and needs to focus on renovation of existing facilities.

District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston said no more money should be spent on the city's newer parks, Bluebird and Windlands.

"I had heard citizens in areas around some of the older parks say they were not being taken care of like those new ones," Johnston said. "I felt we should look into some of our older parks rather than keep building on these new ones."

He said he would oppose further funding for new parks. At-large councilmen J.D. Faircloth and John Castro expressed similar views.

"I've been a supporter of Bluebird. I think it's been a tremendous buy for the city," Faircloth said. "But it points up the need to focus on some other parts of the community. There is a real need, for example, for a Bluebird-type park in southwest Midland."

Williams said the park was well worth the price.

"Yes, to build a first-class facility it takes money," he said. "Somebody has to be the seed, the starter, and finisher in order for it to work. That's the city of Midland in this case, I guess."

Bluebird, which was begun in late 1988, is a 33-acre grouping of baseball and soccer fields with space for a play area and walking trail. It was built as the result of a failed bond issue that would have funded construction of a major northwest park.

"It's a perfect example of what people can do if they see the need and get to work on it," said Community Services Director George Logan. "A lot of people were involved in the design and it turned out great."

Buildings for restrooms, concession stands and storage were funded completely by the sports associations. Without those groups' participation, the park would likely not exist, or at least not to the extent it does, Logan and Swallow said.

Work left to do includes a walking path around the park's perimeter and building of a permanent playground for neighborhood children. Swallow said he hopes to have the park entirely complete by March.

Meanwhile, parks officials say they face a constant struggle to maintain current parks while continuing to meet new park needs.

Since the bond issue's failure, "Bluebird is a chance to catch our breath," Logan said. "It helps, but it's not really big enough. There still exists a need for a major metropolitan park out there. If we built it today, we'd fill it."

"You can tell what's needed in parks by looking at population growth," Swallow said. "Bluebird came along with a big youth explosion. In the '70s to the early '80s, we were building facilities for adults, and we got that pretty well where it needs to be. But we're a little behind where we need to be with youth facilities.

"And northwest is where most of the growth has been," Swallow said. "Before (Bluebird), we had only one small park north of Loop 250. It just wasn't enough for all the people living up there."

"We're very close to being somewhere near filling up (youth facilities)," Williams said. "Of all the things we do, I think one of the most important is keeping our young people busy and off the streets."

Faircloth said available funds should be distributed throughout the city to capitalize on parks as a tourist attraction and entertainment for youth.

"All of these parks take time and money," Faircloth said. "I think what some of the council was saying is that there are more kids than in Northwest Midland, that we need to get these kind of facilities in other areas as well."

BOMBERS: 'This is the end of the great beginning'

(From 1A)

Dec. 7. The move is scheduled to coincide with the 50th anniversary of the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor in 1941 and America's entry into the war.

Flight crews' of the two big bombers shut down the radial engines. But they will crank up again on Saturday and Sunday when the air show will be held from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Between 80 and 90 World War II aircraft are to perform in the show.

Already on board, in addition to the B-29 and B-24, are the carrier-borne Grumman Wildcat, the Curtiss C-46 Commando of "The Hump" fame in flying in the China-Burma-India theater, and the durable and once-ubiquitous Douglas C-47 Skytrain.

Following briefings by pilots Tom Cloyd of the B-29 and Alan Stricklin of the B-24, members of the press corps climbed aboard the old airplanes to get a "feel" of what big-iron flying was like during the war.

They were airborne for a 30-minute air show promotional flight around Midland and Odessa.

Back on the ground, Stricklin, a Fort Worth pilot who "rode" submarines before he got into flying, spoke well of the Consolidated B-24.

"It was the only combat airplane that was in production before the war began and was in production in the last day of war," he said. All told, almost 19,000 B-24s were produced.

And Stricklin is among the privileged and grateful few who get to fly the B-24 and the B-29.

"During World War II, about 50,000 pilots flew the B-24," he said. Right now, there are about 10 of us who get to fly it."

Though the B-24 fought in all the war's theaters of operations, the Liberator got second billing to the dependable and lighter Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, which grew to legendary status thanks, in large measure, to the press corps.

"You hear all about the B-17," Stricklin said. "It was mainly in England where all the (news) media was, and that's why they (the B-17s) got all of the glory. And the B-24 was all around the world doing the heavy-duty work."

Today, most of the B-24s are gone. They, like most warplanes, were victims of a people, a nation and a world grown tired and weary of war. If not destroyed in battle, they were flown to aircraft bone-yards and, if not left to be eroded by time, were chopped up, smelted and turned into aluminum ingots for peacetime use.

"There's only about a dozen that are still in one piece," Stricklin said. Of those, only a couple are flying: the CAF's B-24 and another B-24, which an East Coast man "spent two million cash dollars to get it back into the air."

The Boeing B-29, designed as a long-range heavy bomber to span much of the Pacific Ocean to raid Japan, is even more rare; only one of almost 4,000 B-29s are flying. It's the CAF's B-29 named "Fifi."

B-29 co-pilot Normond B. McAllister Jr. of Mobile, Ala., spoke of the honor of flying the old Superfortress.

"I like seeing the old fellows who served on these things in World War II come around and hearing their stories," he said. After all, McAllister said, World War II is "probably the most intensive time and most interesting part of their lives."

On one occasion, a graying fellow, about 70, climbed up to the flight deck when the B-29 was on tour at Wichita, Kan., and, sat in the pilot's seat.

He had flown B-29s during the war.

Tears came to his eyes.

"I was embarrassed, and he was embarrassed," Stricklin recalled. "He said, 'Son, I hate for you to see me cry like this, but probably the best friend in my whole life got killed (by anti-aircraft flak) sitting right where you are sitting (in the co-pilot's seat).' "

CHAPMAN: Area oilman discovered several fields completed his high school education at The Schreiner Military Institute in Kerrville.

(From 1A)

He met Geraldine Layton in El Paso and they were married Feb. 15, 1945, in Pecos.

As a 1928 graduate of Schreiner Institute, Chapman was awarded that school's highest award, the Distinguished Alumnus Award in 1979.

Following graduation, he went to work in the oil fields as an apprentice on a cable tool drilling rig, working for room and board only. His first paying job was on a cable tool rig near Mentone, where he earned $2.50 for a 12-hour day.

Following service in the U.S. Army during World War II, Chapman returned to West Texas, purchased a Fort Worth Spudder drilling rig and worked as a contract driller near Post and Goldsmith.

In 1947, on the advice of friend and fellow wildcatter George T. Abel, who told him he should get his own production, Chapman moved to Pecos and began to explore extensively in the Delaware Basin.

He played a dominant role in opening Delaware Sand production in the Trans-Pecos with the discovery of such major fields as The Regan, Oria-Chapman, Chapman and Ford fields, and the Geraldine and Martha fields, which were named for his wife and daughter.

His first well was a strike that opened the Oria-Chapman field. His second strike was the Regan field, which he discovered with partners Ken Regan and Jack Bay.

Chapman resided in Pecos from 1947 to 1970 then moved to Midland to continue his oil and gas interests. He was a charter member of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum. He also was a former president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

During the early 1950s he became a mentor, and close personal friend to President Bush, who was then a young oilfield salesman in the Permian Basin.

A lifelong Republican, Chapman and Bush were among the first Republicans in West Texas and helped establish and make the Republican Party a political force in West Texas.

He also had been friends with former presidents Dwight Eisenhower and Richard Nixon.

Survivors include his wife; one daughter Martha Scott Chapman Fowler of Wailuku, Hawaii; five sisters, Mrs. J.V. Hardwick of Midland, Mrs. W.R. Mays of Kilgore, Mrs. W.W. Hering of Kingwood, Mrs. Wade Blount of Springerville, Ariz., and Jean Chapman of Estes Park, Colo.; two grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Petroleum Museum or a favorite charity.

ISSUE: New Mexico seeks to block WIPP opening

(From 1A)

await an answer, Udall said.

The lawsuit could be filed as late as Wednesday, but the office was aiming for today, he said.

The DOE has notified the state the first, partial load of nuclear waste from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratories could be received at WIPP as early as Thursday.

The federal agency wants to begin tests at the site, where the waste would be buried in caves carved in salt beds 2,150 feet below the earth's surface.

Udall said his office was interviewing scientists and other experts about the possibility the waste could be prematurely entombed by a rock fall and be irretrievable.

The attorney general said he had not determined whether to make so-called interim status for WIPP an issue in the lawsuit.

The DOE maintains WIPP has interim status — that is, authority to begin disposing of hazardous waste on an interim basis while its application for a permit under the federal Resource Conservation and Recovery Act is pending.

But the state Environment Department, which has jurisdiction over the matter, made a preliminary determination in July that WIPP did not qualify for interim status.

Udall pressed Environment Secretary Judith Espinosa to make a final determination before he filed suit, saying it would strengthen the state's case.

But Espinosa is not ready to do so, Deputy Environment Secretary Ron Curry said Monday. The secretary said last week she was awaiting information the DOE had promised her in August.

"I think we would have a much better chance of getting a temporary restraining order or a preliminary injunction if we had a final decision on that issue," Udall said.

In Washington, meanwhile, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee scheduled a meeting Oct. 16 to discuss and vote on the WIPP land transfer bill sponsored by New Mexico's senators, Republican Pete Domenici and Democrat Jeff Bingaman.

It was after negotiations on that bill broke down last week that the DOE announced it had administratively taken control of the WIPP site and would open it.

State officials and congressional representatives wanted the land transferred in legislation that would give New Mexico money and health and safety guarantees.

No agreement has been reached on the sole remaining issue in dispute in the bill, how much waste the DOE should be allowed to place at WIPP during a test phase, spokesmen for the senators said.

The bill specifies one half of 1 percent of the facility's 900,000-barrel capacity, or 4,500 barrels. The DOE said that was too limiting, and sought a 1 percent ceiling.

Inspectors discover possible nuclear nerve center

UNITED NATIONS (NYT) — United Nations inspectors have discovered a complex of buildings that apparently served as the nerve center of President Saddam Hussein's covert nuclear weapons program but largely escaped allied attack during the Persian Gulf war.

In a report to the Security Council, United Nations inspectors sent to ferret out Saddam's nuclear plans said that on their most recent trip to Iraq they had found a top-secret document indicating that the hub of Iraq's weapons-development program was a scientific research installation called Al Atheer, about 40 miles south of Baghdad.

It was here, the report says, that Saddam planned "to design and produce a nuclear device," although Iraq has said the installation "had no nuclear connection."

Previous inspection teams decided that Al Atheer was probably intended for the production of components for a nuclear weapon.

American and other allied intelligence agencies also apparently failed to spot the importance of this plant, officials say. It was only lightly bombed during the gulf war, with about 15 percent of its buildings hit, far fewer than at many other suspected nuclear sites that were almost completely destroyed.

The allies' failure to destroy this central nuclear installation in the air war against Iraq is a further indication that they underestimated the size of Iraq's nuclear program and overestimated the damage they had inflicted on it.

On Jan. 23, for instance, a week after the start of the air war, President Bush said: "Our pinpoint attacks have put Saddam out of the nuclear bomb-building business for a long time."

On different occasions in late January, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the allied commander, said attacks had "destroyed all their nuclear-reactor facilities" and "neutralized their nuclear manufacturing capability."

The new report summarizes the preliminary findings of the sixth nuclear inspection visit that the Vienna-based International Atomic Energy Agency has made in Iraq under the terms of the Security Council's cease-fire agreement with Baghdad.

The report is based on a partial examination of more than 25,000 secret Iraqi documents, which the inspectors finally managed to remove from the country last month after twice being expelled from the sites where they were collecting material.

The whole team was then detained for 96 hours, held in a Baghdad parking lot in Iraq's most serious confrontation with the Security Council since the end of the war.

The report says the 44-man inspection team, which included American and British nuclear-weapon designers, "obtained conclusive evidence that the government of Iraq had a program for developing an implosion-type nuclear weapon," which was code-named "Petrochemical Three."

Documents taken by the inspectors describe "nuclear weapons development experiments" involving, among other things, "neutron initiators, enriched uranium cores, reflectors, high explosive lenses, and electronic firing sets."

One document says Iraq successfully produced nuclear weapons components out of natural uranium.

Warplanes attack Zagreb

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav air force jets rocketed the presidential palace in the capital of secessionist Croatia Monday, narrowly missing the republic's leaders and the federal premier.

The attack came hours before a deadline set by the European Community for the parties to cease hostilities or face economic sanctions. It came despite an appeal from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev not to escalate the civil war with attacks on Zagreb.

Many Zagreb residents fled to shelters Monday night.

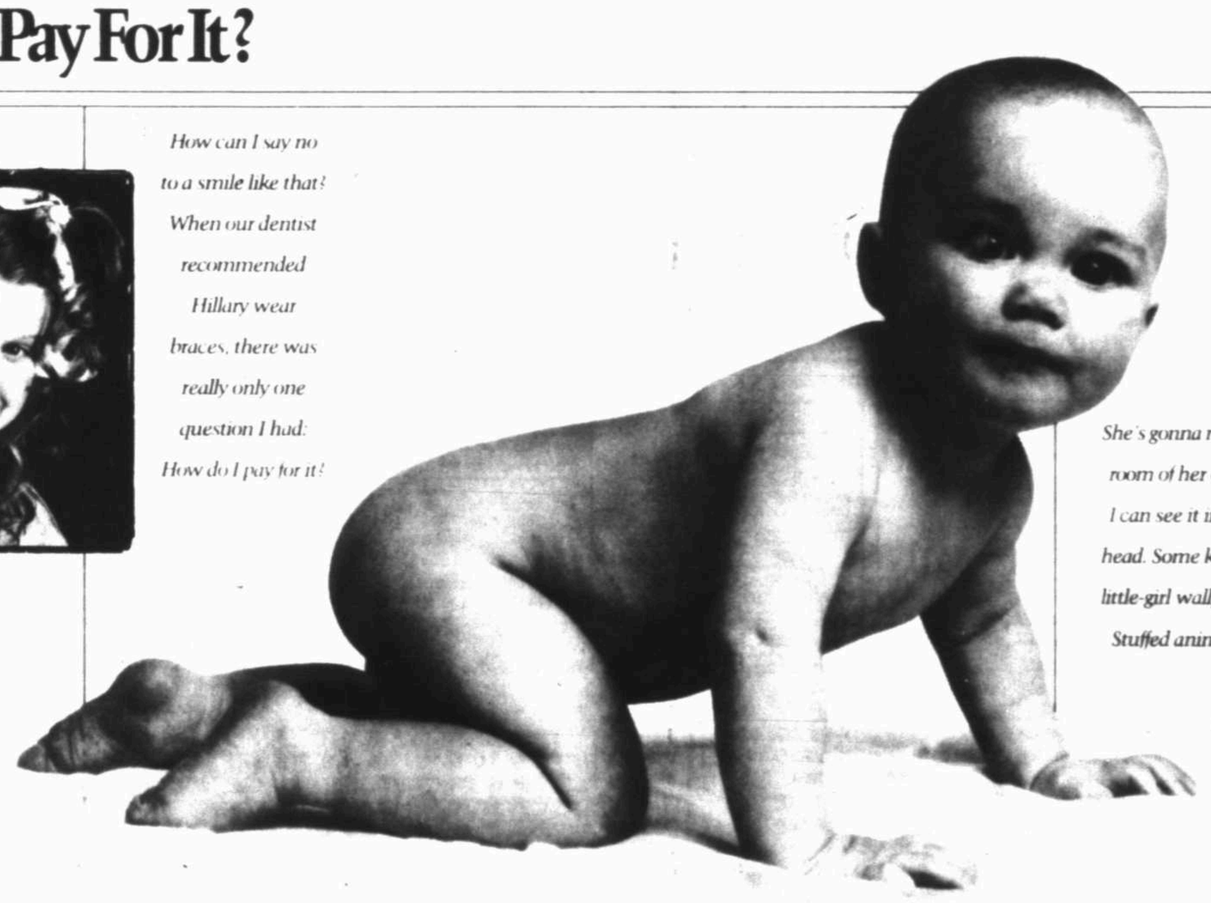
So How Do I Pay For It?

How can I say no to a smile like that? When our dentist recommended Hillary wear braces, there was really only one question I had: How do I pay for it?



She's gonna need a room of her own. I can see it in my head. Some kind of little-girl wallpaper. Stuffed animals.

I think we can add on over the garage. Maybe we'll need another bath there, too. The neighbors recommended a good contractor. Only thing is, how do I pay for it?

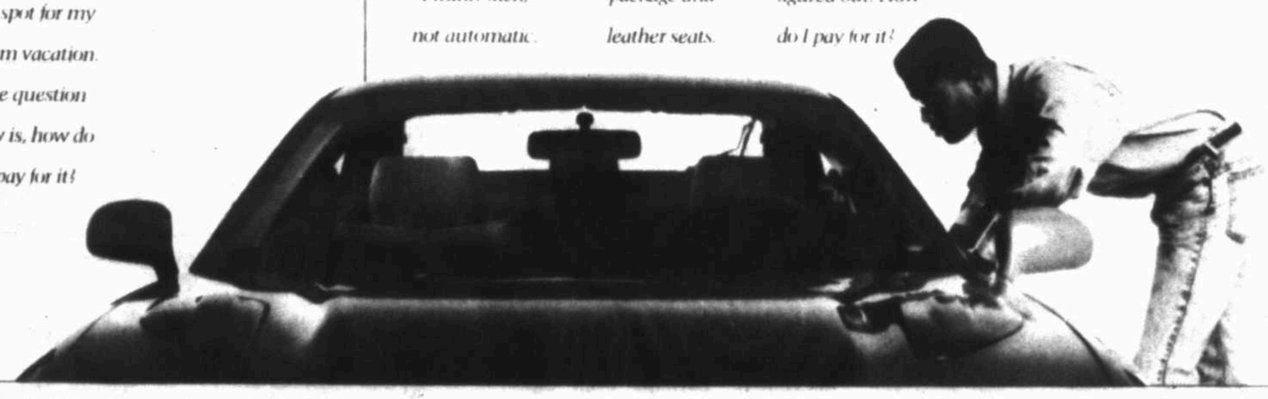
I started with a travel agent. Looked at all the brochures. I asked questions. And finally picked out the spot for my dream vacation. The question now is, how do I pay for it?

Just Ask.

Definitely red instead of blue. I think stick, not automatic.

Probably go with the optional stereo package and leather seats.

There's only one thing I haven't figured out. How do I pay for it?



We started with a list of almost 50 schools. Narrowed it down to a dozen or so. Then my son was accepted by a couple of his top picks. Now I just have one question. How do I pay for it?

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ◇	3 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇

No, don't go through your file of Goren Bridge columns. If this hand looks familiar, it is because we ran it about two months ago.

North-South landed in a heart slam after North showed a limit raise in hearts with a three-diamond cue-bid. South bounced right to six hearts, since there was no good way to investigate the full potential of the hand.

We suggested that the right way to play the hand was to strip the pointed suits and cash the ace of clubs while drawing trumps, then lead a club to the queen. That wins any time East holds the king of clubs or when West holds a doubleton king, as in the diagram.

That is probably the correct way to tackle the hand had there been no opposition bidding. When West has bid diamonds, however, there is an alternative, perhaps even better, path to success.

West, who has little enough in the way of high cards for a two-level overcall, almost certainly has a six-card suit. So ruff the opening lead, cross to the queen of hearts and ruff another diamond. Draw the last trump, cash the king and ace of spades and ruff a spade on the table. Now cash the ace of diamonds for a club discard and lead the board's last diamond. Instead of ruffing, discard another club from hand. West must win this trick, and then has a choice of methods with which to commit suicide.

A club return would be into declarer's ace-queen tenace, and any plain suit would permit declarer to ruff in dummy while discarding the queen of clubs from hand.

Former surgeon general wins 1991 Albert Schweitzer Prize

BALTIMORE — Dr. C. Everett Koop, the blunt-speaking former U.S. surgeon general, has won the 1991 Albert Schweitzer Prize for Humanitarianism.

Koop

Koop, 74, will receive the award, including $10,000, during a ceremony Oct. 22.

Koop was surgeon general from 1981 until 1989. He helped redefine the AIDS debate with a 1986 report that recognized the disease as a health problem and not a moral issue.

He warned that nicotine was as addictive as heroin and cocaine and made a smokeless society by the year 2000 a national goal.

The Schweitzer Prize, administered by Johns Hopkins University, is named for missionary, theologian and musician Albert Schweitzer.

Previous winners include former President Carter and author-educator Norman Cousins.

BOSTON — Camelia Sadat, daughter of the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, marked the 10th anniversary of his assassination by urging further strides toward Mideast peace.

"It's going to be hard. Peace is a battle exactly as war is," she said Sunday at a small gathering at a hotel.

A ceremony included a reading from the Koran by an Islamic iman, a song by a Jewish cantor and a Christian prayer.

In 1978, Sadat joined President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin in signing the Camp David peace accords. Sadat was assassinated Oct. 6, 1981, by Islamic extremists.

"Every year passes and I'm sad that there isn't more movement for peace," Ms. Sadat said. "I used to feel he has paid his life for peace and look what's happened. But this year is special. I feel there is movement. At this time, I don't feel my father's blood has been in vain."

NEW YORK — Rhonda Fleming, yesterHollywood's ravishing redhead who made her movie debut in "Spellbound," came out of retirement to play a world-weary farmwife in a television drama.

Fleming, 68, retired 14 years ago. Last month, she resurfaced in the syndicated, half-hour drama "Waiting for the Wind."

She plays the wife of a Kansas farmer who is dying of cancer. Robert Mitchum portrays the husband.

"Now that I've worked again, I wonder if that little ember isn't starting to burn inside me," Fleming said in an interview in this week's People magazine.

Fleming, who appeared in movies with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Kirk Douglas, Charlton Heston and Burt Lancaster, said she was cast for years in unsatisfying roles dependent on her looks.

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Alexandra Ripley is looking forward to slipping into blue jeans and munching pizza at home once the publicity whirlwind subsides from her sequel to "Gone With The Wind."

"I'm going to go home and scrape all the paint off my face, take off my gaudy clothes, put on blue jeans and scratch the head of my cat and see if she remembers me, get re-acquainted with my husband and then probably do something exotic like have a pizza. Double anchovies," she said.

Despite brutal reviews, readers have bought more than half a million copies of the 823-page "Scarlett: The Sequel to Margaret Mitchell's Gone With The Wind."

"I hope I can find my dinner jacket," John V. Lindsay said the other day as he routed around packed moving cartons. The former mayor of New York City is to be honored Monday night by the Stage Directors and Choreographers Foundation.

Tuesday, he and his wife, Mary, move to a new apartment in the city, and he had mistakenly packed his formal wear. "Never move, if you can help it," he said with a chuckle.

The organization is putting on a show saluting Lindsay, Tommy Tune, the director, choreographer and dancer, and Ming Cho Lee, the set designer, with a gala show that is to feature Lucie Arnaz, Keith Carradine, Karen Akers, Hal Prince, Gene Saks and the cast of "Forbidden Broadway" at the Equitable Theater.

Among the accomplishments for which Lindsay is being honored are his chairmanship of the Lincoln Center Theater, guiding it into activity after a long period of darkness, the zoning initiatives he set in his mayoralty that encouraged the construction of theaters, and the help he gave to help save Joaseph Papp's Public Theater.

The last thing Marvin S. Traub wrote, his senior thesis at Harvard in 1946, landed in the Library of Congress. Now he has taken pen to paper, or, more likely, keyboard to computer, and is writing a book that is likely to get a broader readership: the memoirs of his life and times, mostly at Bloomingdale's.

Traub is to step down as chairman and chief executive next month. The book will be published by Times Books, a division of Random House, sometime in 1993, "a date that is rapidly approaching," Traub said.

Aristide should return to power

President Bush was quick to throw his support behind ousted Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, but Bush has since modified his stance in light of indications that Aristide's backers have killed opponents.

Bush's demand that Aristide denounce violence in Haiti was answered by the Haitian president's announcement that "we condemn all forms of violence."

That step was important to assure that Aristide's own government is not falling toward dictatorial rule.

The day of the dictator is over in the Americas and both the coup leaders who overthrew Aristide and the Haitian president must recognize that fact. Aristide is Haiti's first democratically elected president, a fact that should render his ouster an affront to the million of Haitians who elected him.

But that sentiment has been tempered by the fact that in his seven months in office Aristide has permitted — even encouraged — mobs of fervent supporters to intimidate even law-abiding political opponents. His backers have even killed opponents — including soldiers — by putting gasoline-soaked tires around their heads and setting them ablaze.

Aristide's seeming acceptance of the violence is reprehensible. As Haiti's first democratically elected president, he has the responsibility of standing up to those who thrive on violence and repression.

To many Haitians, Aristide is a hero whose charisma, courage and energy finally vanquished dictatorial rule. He has bravely embraced fiscal austerity and cultivated excellent relations with the United States, but all that is countered by the fact that violence is continuing in Haiti. Aristide should take the lead in bringing the violence to an end.

The immediate priority is that constitutional rule and the legitimate government of Aristide be restored. Then Aristide should start Haiti on the road to a new future where human rights abuses are out of the picture.

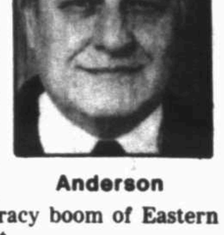
Democracy goes bust in Romania

WASHINGTON — Stefan, a young professional in Bucharest, was one of the students who risked his life to help topple Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in 1989. Last year, Stefan stood up to miners when the post-Ceausescu government ordered them to beat up demonstrating students.



Anderson

But now Stefan is ready to leave. He is Romanian to the core, but he feels his country holds no future for him. In Romania, the democracy boom of Eastern Europe has been a bust.

Stefan poured out his feelings in an emotional rush lasting several hours during our visit to Romania.

His was one of the families uprooted to make way for Ceausescu's monumental centerpiece, a massive palace called the House of the Republic in downtown Bucharest located on a huge street called the Boulevard of Socialism Victory. Ceausescu was obsessed by the project, which began in the late 1970s.

He razed a quarter of historic Bucharest and evicted 50,000 people from their homes. "It was a very awful human experience," Stefan told us. A knock came at the door of his family's villa in 1987. Ceausescu's messengers told the family that within three days they had to move out of the home they had lived in for 25 years. The family was relocated to a small apartment, and Stefan's father never got over the trauma of the forced move. He later died of a heart attack.

Meanwhile, the House of the Republic continued to grow. It is a monstrosity of architecture and expense, as our private tour evidenced. The 13-story building stands 300 feet tall. Beneath it are bunkers and tunnels for the paranoid Ceausescus. More than 1,000 rooms add up to floor space in excess of 475,000 square feet — three times larger than Bucharest's largest public park. One hall is 240 feet long and 90 feet wide. One chandelier weighs 5 tons. Ceausescu managed to spend at least $1 billion on the palace before he and his wife were executed in December 1989.

Stefan acknowledges that the house and the broad avenue leading to it are impressive. "But you must remember tens of thousands of people died for this." They froze in their homes because Ceausescu had imposed energy-use restrictions, and they starved so he could sell Romanian food abroad to raise cash.

The new government has renamed the building the "House of the People," and is preparing to spend another $250 million .

In Stefan's view, nothing has changed. The "reformers" who took over after Ceausescu are reconstituted communists who are not sufficiently democratic. Stefan had hoped that the new regime would replace the homes that Ceausescu razed to build his palace. "But it seems that a lot of people who were in key positions then, and threw us out of our houses, are still in very good positions today."

He added, "They are not ready to do what the country really needs now. Even if they are not communists, they do act like communists. It doesn't matter what you say you are, it matters what you do."

Hundreds, maybe thousands, of people died in the revolution that overthrew Ceausescu. At the time, Stefan thought it was worth the price. Now he says, "We're not willing to see communists or neo-communists running the country. Too many people died. So I don't feel very nice to these people. It's bad to say that I hate them, but this is how I feel, and this is how a lot of people feel. We must have a better life for future generations than I and my parents have had. Or else, as so many are already doing, those of us who care will give up and leave Romania to them."

Remark proves Jordan's a closet sexist

Former Congresswoman Barbara Jordan informs us that men lack the compassion and understanding exemplified by, say, women.

This makes big tears well up in my eyes. My lower lip starts to quiver. Sob. Choke.

Of course I'm not supposed to take all this personally. "I believe," said Ms. Jordan, speaking at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs in Austin, Texas, "that women have a capacity for understanding and compassion which a man structurally does not have, does not have it because he cannot have it. He's just incapable of it."

Murchison

Oh, my sainted aunt! Or is that exclamation lethally sexist? I plead for help and understanding. What does sexist mean these days?

Ms. Jordan assumes leave to stereotype males. Now let me make inquiry. Does anyone believe that if a male former congressman denied the existence within the female species of this or that human property, he would escape the premises unlynched? Why, Barbara Walters and Sally Jessy Raphael would serve up his head on a salver. He'd be skewered from Manhattan to Berkeley.

Remember how delicately, how mincingly, male advocates a few months ago had to tread when opposing congressional legislation permitting military women to lead bayonet charges and step on land mines? It wasn't nice to say that women "structurally" — to borrow Ms. Jordan's useful word — are less combat-suited than men. The fact of physiological difference between men and women is indisputable — but rude, in feminist terms.

However, along comes Barbara Jordan, talking about psychological differences, and that's, well, different.

Now, as it happens, I think Ms. Jordan may have a point. I think that, for some reason inaccessible to scientific inquiry, women as a sex may be more tender and compassionate than men as a sex. Anybody who has raised boys will probably concur.

But fair is fair. Must men, inhibited from pointing to differences between the sexes, nevertheless license particular women to talk and act on whatever differences they choose to notice? Does Barbara Jordan's sex confer on her a kind of immunity from "insensitive" remarks and behavior? Why isn't sauce for the goose sauce equally for the gander?

This thing has policy implications.

You will recall the flap over the all-male Virginia Military Institute. The federal social engineers wanted to inundate this venerable campus in a lake of non-sexist ideology. Never mind VMI's unique tough-guy traditions. Never mind that the state of Virginia lets military-minded women attend another military school. Never mind (most of all, perhaps) the chorus of hosannas from women's-rights folk when an all-woman college on the West Coast voted not to admit men.

Ellen Goodman, the columnist, archly suggested turning VMI into a museum of the bad old days: "Look, kids, see the young men in uniforms shave each other's heads. See the older students heaping abuse upon the younger. Hey, Pops, where were all the women?" Ms. G., unable herself to see the point of VMI, can't see why anyone else would see it. That's what we like all right — tolerance, liberality.

Then there was the more recent episode when Detroit tried to set up a school for inner-city, i.e., black, males, a school tailored to the special needs of this violent, crime-prone underclass. The Ellen Goodmans hopped up and down and said outraged things, such as that boys and girls have the same, the very same, educational needs. The idea died aborning.

Ms. Jordan, ma'am — to get back to you — you may not be subtle, but you're modern. You're in the mainstream.

Social tolerance, my friends, is not a two-way street in the 1990s. It runs one way only. Blessed are they are at the right end of it, for they shall cream the rest of the traffic. And get by with it . . . why? Because, for one thing, nobody ever calls their hand.

Well, I'm calling Ms. Jordan's. If I may, please.

Local county officials are 'below average'

I have lived in Midland County going on 40 years and never missed voting in any primary or general election. I have never voted for any of the present members of the Midland County Commissioners Court. I tried numerous times before the last election and after to talk to the present county judge and presiding officer of the commissioners court without success. I have never had any success talking to my commissioner for Precinct 2.

If the best we citizens of Midland County have for sheriff is Dallas Smith, who served in that office before Gary Painter, for county judge and presiding officer of the Midland County Commissioners Court is Charles Seltzer and for county commissioner is Win Brown, then in my opinion the citizens of Midland County are way below the average in these offices compared to other Texas counties.

I believe in any office set up to control and operate facilities for county or state operations, such as the appraisal district for taxation, jail standards board for jail standards, voter registration or any other agency should be headed by an elected official.

The Midland County tax assessor-collector used to appraise property values, then the county commissioners sat as the review board for these appraisals. We never had a county tax collector caught with their hand in the till and I will never be in favor of turning over this tax collection to the Midland County Appraisal District. I believe the present Midland County tax collector whom I have known and done business with before and after she was elected to this post has run the finest, most courteous office, along with the Midland County Clerk's Office, of any office in the State of Texas. This is more than I can say about the Midland County Appraisal District.

If the Midland County Commissioners Court gives any employees a raise, let the employees on the bottom pay scale have a raise, such as those in the county courthouse, county library and other county offices.

Taxpayers really need a better kind of relief

With regard to the controversy surrounding Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, I would like to say that I agree with E.R. West's letter of Sept. 27th, particularly his comment that soon only indigents will be able to "afford" hospital care.

I would like to see a hospital bill that reflects that portion of the total bill to be applied toward indigent care and call it "Charitable Donation to Indigent Care Fund" so that I may at least get some tax relief from the IRS. I don't mind helping those in need, but I would like a little credit for it.

As a self-employed property owner, I pay high insurance premiums, have a high deductible and pay high property taxes. The kind of relief I need isn't spelled out in the dictionary!

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 8, the 281st day of 1991. There are 84 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date:

In 1869, the 14th president of the United States, Franklin Pierce, died in Concord, N.H.

CHARLEY REESE

Security Council action violates U.N. charter

Let's suppose members of the United Nations Security Council were feeling impish one day. When the U.S. representative walked out for a smoke, the other members passed a resolution demanding that all U.S. weapons of mass destruction be destroyed under U.N. supervision.

What would our reaction be? First, we would point out that such a resolution violates the U.N. Charter, which forbids interference in the internal affairs of a member state. Secondly, we would protest that such an action is an infringement on U.S. sovereignty.

Reese

Well, that's exactly what Iraq is saying and Iraq is 100 percent correct. That Iraq is led by a dictator hardly anyone likes does not alter the fact that the Security Council turned itself into an international lynch mob.

It's one thing to require Iraq to pay reparations for the damage it caused in Kuwait and to return stolen property. It's another for the international body to take it upon itself to decide what kind of weapons Iraq needs for its defense. That is, whether we like it or not, an internal affair to be decided by the Iraqis.

Americans ought to be concerned. The principle of lynch mobs doesn't change just because the mob is made up of nations rather than individuals. Nor does it change just because the victim of the mob is unpopular and unlikable. If the United Nations can violate the sovereignty of Iraq, it can violate the sovereignty of other states. If we accept as a principle that the United Nations can override the sovereignty of any state, we are accepting that it can over-ride our own sovereignty.

Iraq has no choice in the matter having been bludgeoned by arms and strangled by an embargo that continues to cause death and sickness among the Iraqi civilian population.

Nevertheless, the Iraqis are now being treated unjustly, and injustice always breeds resentment and hatred. Democracies should act in a just manner, even in dealing with a tyrant, or else morally they are no different than the tyrant.

What international law says one nation can build nuclear weapons and another can't? What international law says one nation can build or buy rockets but another can't? What international law says the strong can do anything but the weak must abide by arbitrary rules set by the strong?

It's true, Iraq invaded Kuwait. The U.S. invaded Panama, Grenada, Cambodia, and Laos. Israel invaded Lebanon.

It's true Iraq was trying to build an atomic bomb. It's also true Israel has built about 200 atomic bombs at least in part with technology and materials stolen from other countries, including the U.S. Who is going to decide which nations can build nuclear weapons and which ones can't and by what criteria?

To be sure, nuclear weapons should be eliminated but by negotiation, treaty and mutual consent. To act arbitrarily is to act unjustly. Double standards are always unjust.

If the U.N. Security Council was the proper vehicle to settle the matter of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, why is it not the proper vehicle to settle the Arab-Israeli disputes? If U.N. Security Council resolutions apply to Iraq and are so precious Americans must die enforcing them, then why do not U.N. Security Council resolutions apply to Israel? There are several, you know, and U.S. politicians studiously avoid mentioning them.

Anybody who thinks you can build a peaceful world out of injustice, double standards, and double-dealing is wrong. That's the formula for civil strife and war. That's exactly why the past has been so bloody.

Right now we are acting in ways that will create a bloody future when all around us there is opportunity for a peaceful future. We are like a fool dying of thirst in the middle of a lake.

Defense slams government deals

MIAMI (AP) — The government has rewarded the prosecution's most damaging witness so far against Manuel Noriega by allowing him to keep bank accounts and exempting him from some criminal penalties, jurors were told Monday.

The defense also brought out on cross-examination that the witness, confessed Colombian drug pilot Roberto Striedinger, used drug-related money to buy his $4 million home adjacent to the former Nixon winter White House.

The government ultimately confiscated the Key Biscayne home, but allowed Striedinger to pay his attorneys $500,000 out of the proceeds.

Noriega, the former Panamanian leader who surrendered to U.S. invasion troops in January 1990, is accused of accepting bribes to turn Panama into a way station for Colombia's Medellin drug cartel. If convicted of all charges, he could be sentenced to 140 years in prison.

Only days before his own arrest at the home in July 1990, Striedinger said he transferred $340,000 through a Texas bank to reduce his mortgage.

"Was this Colombian drug money?" defense attorney Frank Rubino asked.

"Related to it, sir," Striedinger responded.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler cut Rubino off when he tried to further discuss ex-President Nixon's relationship to the house, ruling it irrelevant.

The home was built on property once used for a helicopter pad next to the home Nixon used as a winter White House.

Striedinger last week provided the most damaging testimony yet against Noriega, putting him in a 1983 face-to-face meeting with Medellin leaders. The defense attempted to show that prosecutors handsomely rewarded him for that testimony.

The government allowed Striedinger to keep all of his U.S. and foreign bank accounts and foreign property, along with his Mercedes-Benz and two trucks.

Study reveals Alzheimer's high risk group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Children of younger fathers are at higher risk of developing Alzheimer's disease late in life, according to a new study by researchers in Boston.

Lindsay Farrer, a researcher at both Boston University School of Medicine and Harvard Medical School, said Monday that the conclusion was reached as a result of a study of 237 patients diagnosed with late-onset Alzheimer's.

It found that their fathers were an average of 2.2 years younger than a comparison group that had no Alzheimer's disease.

Farrer said that the younger the father, the more was the risk of the disease for the child.

U.S. lowers threshold of lead poisoning in children

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The federal government Monday officially lowered the threshold at which children are considered to have lead poisoning, thus increasing the number of children considered poisoned to four million or more, from several hundred thousand.

The Federal Centers for Disease Control Monday said that scientific evidence was "so overwhelming and compelling" that children suffer mental problems when their blood contains even 10 micrograms of lead per deciliter of blood that the threshold of poisoning, 25 micrograms per deciliter, must be lowered.

Even below 10 micrograms, the centers said, adverse effects in children have been reported, and if the evidence continues to accumulate, a still lower standard may be needed.

Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the secretary of health and human services, said all children should be tested for lead in their blood over the next few years, as cheaper and more convenient tests are developed.

For now, he suggests that any parent who has concerns about the lead paint at home and has a child under six years old "should see their physician or go into their clinic" to get the child tested.

Children are typically exposed to lead by eating chips of lead paint or breathing in dust from the paint.

As he announced the new "threshold of concern" in Washington Monday, Sullivan called for a broad national program to clean up the lead, particularly in houses.

But he said that most of the burden of that program should fall on state and local governments

Court rules against drug company

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Monday approved a consent order against a California pharmaceutical company accused of fraud in its effort to win federal approval of a drug it said could slow the onset of AIDS.

ICN Pharmaceuticals Inc. of Costa Mesa, Calif., and its subsidiary, Viratek Inc., admitted no wrongdoing in accepting the injunction that bars it from using false information in its business or filing false reports with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The order, approved by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell, also requires the company to comply with the law on reporting its acquisition of securities.

The case concerns ICN's drug, ribavirin, which has received Food and Drug Administration approval only for use to treat infants hospitalized for a serious respiratory infection.

In 1986, ICN conducted clinical tests of the drug on patients infected with the AIDS virus.

According to the SEC's complaint, ICN changed the focus of one of its clinical tests when officials found the initial goals — inhibition of the AIDS virus and improvement of the body's immune system — were not being achieved.

College president stresses technical skills

■ David Daniel tells Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs of training plan for high school graduates.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

Touting the benefits of Midland College and the entire community college system, Midland College President David Daniel addressed the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs Monday night and said today's graduates of these colleges will see increased opportunities for employment.

"They will be the technicians of tomorrow," Daniel said. "They will be skilled in mathematics and the sciences and they will be well-versed."

Daniel, who moved to Midland from Pennsylvania just two months ago, referred to a "Tech Prep Program" and his desire to instill it in the Midland schools.

"Twenty five percent of high school students are classified as 'college material' and 25 percent drop out of school around age 16, get married at 18 or 19 and take a menial job. But what happens to the middle 50 percent? They are left unfocused, they don't receive adequate counseling and they are labeled as not-college material," said Daniel. "These are the people we would target in the Tech Prep Program."

"We see them as the potential technical scholars who will fill the jobs in Midland. The effort is to get them to think of themselves as employable," he said. "This is part of the answer to our future."

Daniel said the main goal within a community should be to furnish a trained labor force.

"All other attributes of a community are inconsequential if the people are unskilled," he said.

Daniel is planning to meet with community leaders soon to discuss implementation and the specifics of the Tech Prep Program in the Permian Basin. He cited a similar program in Richmond, N.C. where SAT scores improved, attendance improved and the drop-out rate decreased.

"If, indeed, this program can work in our community it would be a win, win, win situation for all. The community wins, Midland College would win and the businesses employing these people would, of course, win," said Daniel. "I consider part of my job being to work with the chambers, schools and citizenry to provide the best education possible."

Daniels pointed to a recent study that said seven out of 10 new jobs will not require a four-year degree but will require more than a high school diploma.

"We're the future. I'm not putting down a four-year college but I'm saying not everyone should explore it if the jobs aren't there," he said. He added that many of the students at community colleges have returned, after earning a bachelor's degree, to learn a technical skill to help make them "employable."

With an enrollment of 4,154 students, Daniel said the future of Midland College is bright. He called the cross-section of people who attend the college part of the "wonderful mystic" of the institution.

"We're a myriad of people. All colors, ages and economic backgrounds. That's the miracle of Midland College," he said.

Tony Valadez, Permian Distributing vice president, is the new chairman of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

Hispanic chamber president practices what he preaches

By Allen E. Howland
Assistant City Editor

To Tony Valadez, everyone he meets is a potential customer. That's how he approaches his business and how he feels about the role of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, which he was recently elected to lead.

"We Midlanders are all in this together. It doesn't matter what part of town you're in, something that is good for any part of the city is good for the whole city," he said.

"Whether someone is involved in the Midland Chamber, the Hispanic Chamber or the Black Chamber, the important thing is being involved."

Valadez said that one of his major goals for MHCC in the coming year is to break down barriers between the three groups and "do some 'we' type projects emphasizing our common goals."

Valadez and incoming Midland chamber chairman Doug Henson have already begun discussions, he said.

"Each group brings talents and skills to the table which will prove a strength in building a united chamber role in economic development," Valadez said.

Valadez is sold on Midland as a place for raising a family. He and his wife Rona have five children — two in junior high, two in high school and one in college.

The family moved here almost six years ago, from Austin, where Tony graduated from St. Edwards University with a degree in marketing in 1976.

He joined a local beer distributor there when Coors was introduced in Texas in 1976, and has been promoting "Rocky Mountain spring water," ever since.

While making time for his family, Valadez and his staff also find plenty of time to sell beer. Last year, Permian was one of four distributors nationwide which earned the Founder's Award from the Golden, Colo.-based brewer, on the basis of sales as well as community involvement, merchandizing and facilities.

After going to work for Permian Distributing Inc. principal Larry Stewart in 1985, Valadez has largely taken over the day-to-day operations of the distributorship.

Putting together a top flight management team has enabled Valadez to increase his involvement in outside activities, including MHCC.

It's involvement that's encouraged both by Permian and by Coors, whose brands account for 80 percent of the distributor's business.

"Hardly a weekend goes by that we aren't involved in some event in the community," Valadez said.

But he is careful to maintain a balance with his family life and offers this advice for keeping things in perspective: "Ask yourself frequently if you are being fair to those closest to you."

Valadez has helped out coaching little league football and baseball, and making time for at least nine holes with the golfer in the family.

"You can find the time to do it, if you plan for it."

Beer sales and service "never ends" unless you draw the line, he said.

While making time for his family, Valadez and his staff also find plenty of time to sell beer. Last year, Permian was one of four distributors nationwide which earned the Founder's Award from the Golden, Colo.-based brewer, on the basis of sales as well as community involvement, merchandizing and facilities.

Corporately, Coors has made a major commitment to minority business, in its hiring practices, distributor ownership and community involvement, Valadez said. Their five-year plan has been reflected in major improvements, he said.

"They support anything I want to do."

It's not simply a matter of good corporate citizenship, Valadez said.

The Hispanic market is a major opportunity for the brewer. Culturally, beer is the beverage of choice in a booming market

Rate increases get one last look by council today

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council is expected to give final approval to water, sewer and sanitation rate increases at its meeting today at 10 a.m. in the chambers at City Hall.

An ordinance under consideration would increase the base water rate from $10 to $10.50 per month and add 6 cents to the cost of each additional thousand gallons of water, now $1.83.

It would increase sewer costs from $11.67 per household per month to $12.17. Residential garbage pickup, now $7.50 per month, would increase by 25 cents.

Water and sewer cost increases are expected to generate about $700,000. The money is slated to fund the city's share of the cost for the Colorado River Municipal Water District pipeline, which will bring water to Midland-Odessa from the O.H. Ivie Reservoir.

At-large City Councilman J.D. Faircloth said he will continue to oppose water increase, which was approved 5-1 on first reading.

"If we were up front, it would be different," Faircloth said. "We tell the taxpayers the increase is to fund the pipeline, but that's been on the drawing board for years." He said the increase is being used to make up for about $750,000 transferred to the general fund from the water fund each year.

City Manager Fred Poe said the transfer is a franchise fee, much like that paid by the local electric, cable and phone companies. Fiscal year 1992 will be its second year, he said.

"It's a benefit for the general fund, but not for the water fund," he said. "The council just felt like it should pay something for the lines they lay throughout town and all the repairs they cause, that sort of thing."

The money is slated to fund the city's share of the cost for the Colorado River Municipal Water District pipeline, which will bring water to Midland-Odessa from the Ivie Reservoir.

Faircloth said the franchise fee effectively siphons money from an already over-burdened water and sewer fund.

"If we treated this (situation) correctly, we wouldn't have to raise the rates, but find some other way," he said.

The garbage fund, which pays no franchise fee, should receive about $80,000 in additional revenue with the increase.

Assistant City Manager Susan Thorpe said businesses, which pay an individual sanitation rate based on the number of containers they use and the number of collections per week, would pay an additional 3.333 percent of their current bill.

Sanitation increases are planned as a way to meet costs associated with tightening federal and state regulations. Rules for storage of waste at landfills will get stricter, requiring implementation of new, more costly methods, officials said.

The increase package also adds $1 per ton to the current $7 charge for dumping at the city's landfill, expected to generate about $36,000 per year.

Budget cuts halt police hiring plan

■ While police calls are increasing, the department won't be able to add positions.

By Darren J. Waggoner

A citywide personnel budget cut — ordered by the Midland City Council — has cancelled the police department's plan to hire six additional people.

And those cuts, according to Chief of Police Richard Czech, could hamper the department's ability to perform its job.

"Our citywide call load is going up, police activity is increasing and we simply don't have enough officers," said Czech. "When we're short, response times will be slower and the chances of apprehending a criminal are naturally lessened."

In April, the city council requested that all city government entities, except for the fire department, cut their personnel budgets

YMCA plans first corporate cup challenge for May

Staff Report

The First Midland Corporate Cup Challenge is planned for May 4-10, 1992, The Midland YMCA announced Monday.

The challenge will be an event that is designed to promote health, physical fitness and a sense of community through the spirit of friendly competition, organizers said.

There will be a variety of events designed to appeal to both athletes and non-athletes, including volleyball, cycling, running/walking time predicition contests, swimming, track, tug-of-war and softball.

Also, "just for fun, there will be events such as the greased inner tube swim relay, wet swimsuit swim relay and in the track event category, the Kentucky Derby Relay," the organizers said. To encourage spectator participation, a spirit trophy will be awarded.

The competitors will be separated into three divisions: Division 1 will be comprised of companies which have 300 or more employees. Division 2 will be for companies with 100-299 employees and Division 3 for companies with fewer than 100 employees.

Team size will range from a minimum of 20 employees to a maximum of 50 members. Each team member's participation is limited to three events. Traveling cups will be awarded to the winning teams in each of the three divisions.

There will be a variety of events designed to appeal to both athletes and non-athletes . . .

Stephanie Levin, program director for Corporate Health Enhancement for the Midland YMCA, explained the benefits for participating companies. "The cup challenge will encourage employees to train for athletic competition and also will encourage individuals to improve their health and fitness levels," she said.

As executives and staff work together in friendly competition with other companies, a team spirit will develop along with pride in the community, according to organizers.

The competition, while serious in some aspects, is intended to be fun and help to generate a positive outlook for employees, which could possibly result in enhanced productivity, organizers said.

"The YMCA is involved in this type of project because we have historically been a leader in the promotion of health and physical fitness," Mrs. Levin said.

"Nationally, the YMCA has recognized the promoting of healthy lifestyles as a primary concern. Locally, the event will help celebrate the growing commitment of our community to good health and fitness."

"The YMCA can conduct a project of this magnitude because of the availability of fine facilities at different locations in the community, a competent professional staff trained in exercise science and leadership, dedicated volunteers and, of course, the longtime support of businesses and the city of Midland's Parks and Recreation Department," she added.

Persons interested in having their company participate, or people wanting to work as a volunteer on one of the various committees preparing for the Challenge, contact Ms. Levin at 682-2551 or Wyatt Fender 687-4338.

Houston pays woman's rent during dispute

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman awaiting repairs to a home she won in a city-sponsored lottery has been living for 15 months in an apartment paid for by local taxpayers, according to a published report Monday.

Lisa Burleson and her two daughters moved into ah apartment so a contractor could fix several problems with the house she received in 1987 through the Urban Homesteading Lottery.

The city program randomly selects low- and middle-income applicants to receive a house. The city also guarantees the winner a low-interest federal Housing and Urban Development loan to cover repairs needed to bring the house up to city code standards and is responsible for making sure the contractor does the job.

In Ms. Burleson's case, she hired a contractor in May 1988 to do $24,000 worth of repairs to the north Houston house, the Houston Chronicle reported Monday.

But there were still problems with the house after the work was completed, she said. She contacted city officials, who called the contractor.

The company promised to make the repairs and pay Ms. Burleson $400, but it went bankrupt before any repairs were made, the Chronicle said.

Last summer, then-Housing and Rehabilitation Division Director Paula Phillips told Ms. Burleson the city would pay a contractor to repair the home. Ms. Phillips also said the city would rent Ms. Burleson an apartment and store her furniture while the work was completed.

Electrical short gets blame for fire Sunday

Staff Report

The fire at the Windscape Apartment complex Saturday night is believed to have been caused by an electrical short in the kitchen of a downstairs apartment, fire officials said.

Seven units from the Midland Fire Department were called to the scene at 3609 Caldera Blvd. shortly after 8 p.m. Firefighters battled the blaze until about 10:45 p.m.

The fire quickly spread to four apartments of the complex through open areas in the attics, fire officials said.

Damage estimates have not been determined.

POLICE: Budget cuts put halt to hiring plans

by three percent by October 1. According to at-large councilman J.D. Faircloth, the fire department was excluded because it is already operating with a bare minimum staff.

But for the Midland Police Department, the cuts meant six people — two patrol officers, three airport officers and a clerk from Crimestoppers — needed to be laid off.

Ironically, last February the council had approved the hiring of six more people to the police force. At the time, the council agreed that extra security was needed at Midland International Airport due to potential security risks resulting from the Gulf War.

So, in effect, there was no actual change in department personnel because the six had not yet been hired when the department was informed of the recent cutback.

"We have to have an academy in order to hire and there was none at the time. It's a three-month process," explained Czech, adding that none of the reasons for the original approval to hire the extra officers have gone away.

"There is more and more business at the airport all the time," said Czech. He also noted the upcoming arrival of the Confederate Air Force, which will be located at the airport, is expected to attract a large number of visitors.

A workload study conducted by the department indicates a need for 10 to 20 more officers. The study, based on a national police service study, weighed the number of calls for service and the amount of time used for each call.

Faircloth feels the cuts were necessary to avoid raising taxes.

"If the taxpayer is saying, 'don't raise taxes', which they are loud and clear, we have to reduce some level of service," said Faircloth. "As the citizens force us to pull the level on taxes, which I agree we should, we can't hold the line without reducing services. The department will have to prioritize its manpower."

Faircloth hopes the residents of Midland will be patient with the department.

"The police department will certainly have to be more efficient but the public will have to realize that the patrol might not be able to respond as quickly to something that isn't considered an emergency," said Faircloth.

District 4 Councilman Tom Johnston agrees.

"Naturally response times could be slower if there are fewer officers on duty. But as far as the overall protection of Midland, I don't anticipate a drastic change," said Johnston. "I would think that if someone wanted an officer, they would be able to send one out."

A telephone response system installed at the department last year has helped reduce some of the workload. Eight officers work the phone system around the clock seven days a week.

"When somebody calls with a minor call, we handle it over the phone instead of sending someone out. This has really helped allow our officers more time for other things but it can only do so much," said Czech.

Czech plans to push the council for additional funds again next April when the budget is reviewed.

Doctor joins UT medical staff

Staff Report

Dr. Dianna McGookey Milewicz, daughter of Donald and Doris McGookey of Midland, has joined the faculty of the University of Texas Medical School at Houston.

She is credited with a major discovery in medical science's understanding and treatment of the Marfan syndrone.

Dr. Milewicz, whose research helped identify the biochemical defect in Marfan syndrone while at the University of Washington, goes to the UT Medical School as an assistant professor of medicine, responsible for establishing a new Division of Medical Genetics.

The research achievement is significant because in the past the defect that caused the Marfan syndrone was unknown and identifying the defect is the first step to prevention of the disabling condition or its treatment.

The Marfan syndrone, named after a French pediatrician who first identified the syndrone in the late 1880s, is an inherited disorder characterized by circulatory problems that can lead to sudden death.

Dr. Milewicz and her husband, Allen L. Milewicz, a pediatric surgeon in private practice in Houston, have an infant daughter, Rachel.

EVENTS: Awards banquet planned

(From 1B)

In other chamber events, Odell Crawford, a representative from the Permian Basin Black Chamber of Commerce, discussed the Ebony Bar Awards banquet to be held at 7 p.m. October 26 at the Ector Lions Club auditorium.

An award will go to the male and female businessperson of the year. The guest speaker will be Ron Wilson, a member of the Texas House of Representatives. Wilson is the author of the Martin Luther King state holiday bill and a sponsor of the lottery bill.

Also discussed at the meeting was next month's performance of Les Ballets Africains, a traveling ensemble group from the Republic of Guinea. The show is scheduled for Nov. 20 at the Yucca Theatre. Tickets are available at several locations, including Midland College, for $25.

VALADEZ: family comes first

segment.

Valadez considers himself culturally traditional: with a strong sense of family and work ethic, a keen competitive sense and enthusiasm in celebrating accomplishments.

Building corporate partnerships, like the one with Coors is a familiar strategy to the MHCC. The company has worked with Mobil, Texaco and other companies in its Partners in Schools programs.

"And it's not just funding, company involvement is crucial in programs' success," he said. "People are much more concerned in the end result of something they have participated in building into a success."

Valadez said the chamber has "a couple of 'major' developments on the horizon" in coming weeks. He credited immediate past chairman Charlene Romero-Wurtz and chamber president Elvia Hernandez for major progress in the past two years.

Of the upcoming term, Ms. Hernandez said, "We feel he will be a strong leader, he has many new and innovative ideas. We look forward to another great year under his leadership."

British director to discuss altering plays

Staff Report

British play director Johnathan Miller will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday in Bates Recital Hall of the University of Texas of Austin.

Miller will speak on "The Afterlife of Plays," a discussion of how a director can change the context or setting of a classical play or opera and still preserve the quality of the work.

He directed Jack Lemmon in "Long Day's Journey Into Night" on Broadway and the westernized version of "The Mikado," staged originally for the London Coliseum and later shown on PBS. He also directed "The Body in Question," a PBS series on the history of medicine.

A reception will follow the lecture in the first floor lobby of the university's music building.

Miller's visit is sponsored by the Barron Ulmer Kidd Centennial Lectureship and the College of Liberal Arts.

Enchanting Kountry Karousel is land of beauty, make-believe

Marion McMillan poses in from of one of her beautiful carousel horses.

Enter a world of fairy tales, happy-ever-afters and whimsical childhood dreams. Golden reindeer dance around an evergreen wreath, carousel horses, bedecked with ribbons and flowers wait their turn on the merry-go-round. Frolicking unicorns adorn the walls and friendly dragons wait for a chat. A carousel goes gently round and round, following the rhythm of the music.

No, you haven't fallen through the looking glass. You're merely visiting Kountry Karousel, perhaps Midland's most unique and enchanting store.

Days of childhood delight are recalled by the myriad carousel horses, which are the main focus of this retail business. They range in size from Christmas ornament proportions to 4½ feet high to 5 feet wide. "My hobby outgrew my home," said owner Marion McMillan who operated her business from her house before opening her retail store.

It's rather obvious that refurbishing carousel horses is much more than a hobby to McMillan, it's a much-loved art. "It's our childhood memories we hold dear," she said. "We all have exciting memories of riding carousels."

She finds the basics of her horses at garage sales, flea markets, and occasionally even buys them directly from the manufacturer. Then, with her magic touch, she turns them into delightful carousel horses. Some are replicas of the Victorian era variety, some reminiscent of the 18th century originals.

The store also has a Victorian corner with porcelain cherubs, fans, all kinds of sprightly unicorns and lots of lace.

There's also a southwest corner, with baskets, rugs, pottery, Indian figures and more.

Anyone wishing to make special orders for the holidays should do so very soon, McMillan said. It takes quite some time to create a gift with the minute and loving attention she gives it.

McMillan plans an open house from Tuesday, Oct. 15 to Saturday, Oct. 19. There will be drawings for prizes and no purchase is necessary to win.

Store hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Kountry Karousel is located at 350 B North Midland Drive. Call 520-3916 for more information.

Young adult board meets at Pages & Prints, selects books

Paraclete (adj): discriminating; choosing with great care. A group of Midland seventh-graders have adopted this word as their name, and a fitting one it is. (Doesn't it sound better than "Young Adult Board?").

The "Paracletes" will meet weekly to discuss and help select books for the Young Adult section, which will soon become a new addition to the store. Beverley believes that young people will be more inclined to read books selected by their own peers.

It would be hard to believe that anyone, of any age, would not be intrigued and delighted by Pages & Prints. Lots of rooms, nooks and crannies hold a variety of reading materials in all kinds of categories. It's a lot like a fine, comfortable old-fashioned house. Comfortable and comforting, shoppers want to curl up with their favorite books.

It would seem that Pages & Prints has fulfilled its Mission Statement, which reads, "Pages & Prints is dedicated to bringing together book lovers and books and to encourage the enjoyment of reading by being a forum for book-related activities both in our store and in the community."

The children's section, for one, is quite impressive. The science section has all manner of reading material, specimens, environmental projects and inflatable globes. The ideal place to start preparing for upcoming science fair projects. The children's art, music and poetry section is beautifully displayed and sure to intrigue and inspire a child.

The children's department also houses a fun (not just for kids) and exciting new computer game. Called the Geo Safari, it is designed to impart a considerable amount of information on the geography of the world. Games involve identifying states, their capitals, world landmarks topographical regions and so on. Each game packet includes about 20 activities.

Other areas, with books of corresponding interest, include the Women's Room, poetry corner, art, photography and music, and an inspiration room. The cookbook section is situated in an actual kitchen, complete with sink!

And, there's always something going on at Pages & Prints. Beverley wants to remind friends and patrons that the West Texas Story Guild will be present with seasonally appropriate readings on Oct. 26, Nov. 23 and Dec. 14 and 15.

Also, Pages & Prints is sponsoring a writing contest for children. Selection of the five top stories, to be printed in the Midland Reporter Telegram, will be made during National Children's Book Week, Nov. 11 through 17.

Also on tap for that week is the ribbon cutting for Pages & Prints' new Young Adult section. Ceremonies will be held at the store.

For more information on books and reading-related activities call Pages & prints at 687-5172. The store is located at 40 Plaza Center in Midland.

Court leaves Delta crash blame on crew

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday let stand a lower court ruling that blamed a 1985 crash at Dallas/Fort Worth Airport on the crew of Delta Flight 191.

Ending a drawn-out legal battle over an accident that claimed 137 lives, the court declined to consider an appeal filed by Delta, the widows of two crew members and the relatives of other accident victims.

The appeal asserted that U.S. District Judge David Belew of Fort Worth erred in not assigning a major part of the blame to air traffic controllers and federal weather forecasters.

The Delta aircraft, en route from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., crashed short of the runway at D/FW while trying to land in a severe thunderstorm.

The issue of blame was particularly important to Delta Air Lines, which at one point faced 115 lawsuits and damage claims totaling at least $175 million from the crash. A company spokeswoman in Atlanta expressed disappointment with the court action but declined further comment.

Delta's insurance underwriter, United States Aviation Underwriters, paid the final crash-related claim earlier this year. John Poppageorge, a spokesman for the underwriting firm, would not reveal the total amount paid on Delta's behalf.

House fire kills 5 family members

DALLAS (AP) — Five members of one family, spanning three generations, were killed early Monday by a smoldering fire that began with a gas leak, authorities said. Doctors also were unsuccessful in saving a pregnant victim's unborn child.

The mother, 35-year-old Karen Burton, was pronounced dead at Parkland Memorial Hospital, said Dallas Fire Department Capt. Don Howard. Doctors at Parkland Memorial Hospital said the fetus was about 24 weeks old.

Two men, aged 31 and 69, were dead at the scene. A 70-year-old woman died at Methodist Medical Center and 10-year-old David Wayne Burton died at Parkland.

Diet Center: begin slimming program well ahead of holidays

Tina Blake (right) congratulates Sherry Harrington on the 44½ inches (to go along with the 41½ pounds she's lost on the Diet Center Program.

According to Diet Center owner Tina Blake, seven pounds is the average amount of weight gained during the holiday season. "Those who are already overweight might find it even more difficult to cope after the New Year," she said.

The fact is, excess weight and obesity have a negative effect on the quality of life of over 80 million American men, women, and children. That's why in 1970 Diet Center's Life Management Program was founded — they believe it to be the most comprehensive and effective weight control program in existence.

Midlander Sherry Harrington agrees.

"I didn't believe I could lose the weight. Before this program, I could only diet in short spurts," she said. "But I read about the program and it made sense. For one things it involved regular food. No pills, strange drinks, formulas.'

That's because the Diet Center philosophy is that there is no miracle cure for the problem of excess weight, but that individual commitment to get the necessary knowledge, change eating habits and increase physical activity is the only solution.

So far, Diet Centers across North America have helped more than 4,000,000 people lose weight. When female dieters take full advantage of the Diet Center program, they can lose an average of two to three pounds per week. Male dieters can lose an average of three to five pounds per week. Diet Center surveys show that dieters also experience an inch loss (overall body measurement) of one inch per pound lost.

The Diet Center program teaches that sound nutrition, with an emphasis on real food, is more important than counting calories, that the focus should be on long-term weight maintenance, not just weight loss.

With this approach, the Diet Center program provides nutritionally balanced diet, individual motivation, physician involvement and direction in the necessary discipline for long-term weight control.

"I can't believe how easy it's been," Harrington, who lost 41½ pounds and 44½ inches, said. And there have been a lot of bonuses, the weight loss has given me self confidence, it's made me a happier person."

Clients are guided through four necessary stages of the weight reduction program: Conditioning, Reducing, Stabilization and Maintenance. Nutritional eating habits are established for lifelong weight maintenance.

And to make losing weight and inches even easier, Diet Center owner and counselor Tina Blake recently purchased an Electro Lipo Graph (ELG).

Scales can measure weight, but they can't tell if weight is the result of big bones, well-developed muscles, excess water retention or just too much fat. What really counts is not how much a person weighs, but how much of that weight is fat.

When body composition changes are noted ELG results allow diet counselors to make appropriate adjustments and recommendations to suit the specific client.

There are no contracts to sign or hidden costs at Diet Center. A one-time registration fee is $75. The weekly fee covers private daily counseling and weigh-in sessions as well as the daily supplement.

Call Tina Blake at 684-5081 to arrange for a free consultation. Or come by Diet Center at 2034 W. Cuthbert, across from Memorial Stadium. Hours are 7 a.m. to noon and 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday. Visa and MasterCard are now accepted.

And now is the time to call. The fall special features five weeks for the price of four. The special is available through November 29.

Candiotti meets Morris

■ The Blue Jays will send their knuckleballer up against Jack Morris of the Twins in Game 1 of the American League playoffs.

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — It's hard to figure out the best pitcher in the American League playoffs. The luckiest is easy — Tom Candiotti.

Candiotti will start for Toronto on Tuesday night against Jack Morris in Game 1. The Blue Jays knuckleballer is looking forward to it.

"This whole season has been something special for me," Candiotti said. "Being in the playoffs is not something I was thinking about in May."

That makes a lot of sense since Candiotti was still with the Cleveland Indians. The Indians, last seen in a pennant race in 1959, finished the '91 season with a club-record 105 losses.

"I had some good years in Cleveland," Candiotti said. "They gave me a chance after Milwaukee let me go and it turned out."

When it became evident that Dave Stieb would not make it back from an injury, Toronto general manager Pat Gillick traded young outfielders Mark Whiten and Glenallen Hill to the Indians for the 34-year-old Candiotti.

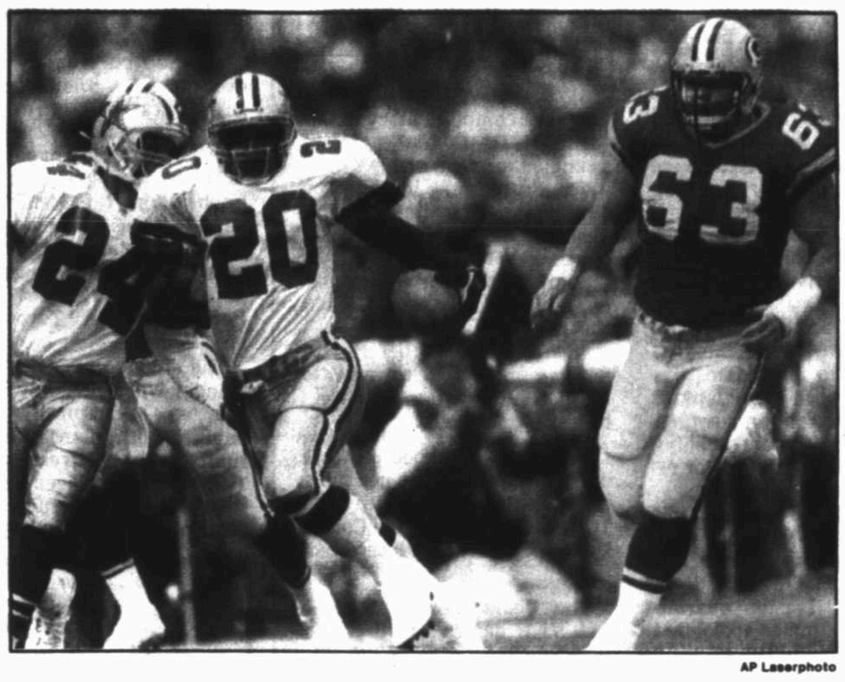
Cowboys wary of Bengals

Jimmy Johnson says winless Cincinnati can be dangerous



AP Laserphoto

Dallas safety Ray Horton (20) gets a block by teammate Larry Brown (24) and races past Packers' center James Campen for a 65-yard touchdown.

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys are off to their best start since 1986 and would seem to be catching an easy opponent Sunday when the winless Cincinnati Bengals visit Texas Stadium.

Guess again, says Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson.

"Most people are going to look at the record and say this should be a win," Johnson said Monday. "But when you look at people like Boomer Esiason, Eddie Brown and the Pro Bowl players they have, they get your attention."

Johnson said he was especially wary because the Bengals, a playoff team last year, are winless.

"I am more concerned about 0-5 Cincinnati than I would be about 1-4 Cincinnati," Johnson said. "They're a dangerous team. You know they have the ability to put it together. This is not a lower echelon team, and this isn't just coach talk."

The Cowboys moved into early playoff contention with Sunday's 20-17 victory over the Green Bay Packers, grabbing sole possession of second place in the NFC East at 4-2 behind the unbeaten Washington Redskins (6-0).

Johnson said after reviewing tapes of the Green Bay game, that the Cowboys were fortunate to escape with a victory, considering the cold, windy conditions on a slippery field that had been drenched by a downpour two days earlier.

"After looking at the tapes, I don't think any of us realized the part the conditions played in the game," Johnson said. "Our receivers had trouble making their cuts. I don't think even Emmitt Smith was cutting and slashing like he

Chiefs hand Buffalo first loss

Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City's defense gave Buffalo's no-huddle offense no hope.

The Bills, averaging more than 32 points and 450 yards in winning their first five games in defense of their AFC championship, suffered six quarterback sacks, five lost fumbles and their most lopsided defeat in four years Monday night as the Chiefs romped to a 33-6 victory.

Christian Okoye, following two Buffalo turnovers, scored two touchdowns two minutes apart as the Chiefs took complete control in the third quarter.

The Bills, who haven't been held without a TD since Dec. 4, 1988, suffered their

By Mike Nadel
AP Sports Writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Devon White, the Toronto Blue Jays' game-breaking No. 1 batter, is leading off the AL playoffs with a trend-breaking prediction.

While most combatants are predicting a long, low-scoring series between two evenly matched teams, the man his teammates call "Devo" is singing another song.

"I don't know if it's going to go the distance, to tell you the truth," he said. "I think we'll take it before that. Maybe five games. We'll be satisfied if we get away with one in here because we're pretty tough at home."

The best-of-7 series between the Blue Jays and the AL West champion Minnesota Twins starts Tuesday night (8:39 p.m. EDT) at the Metrodome.

Observers generally agree that the Twins have advantages in hitting, power, starting pitching and defense.

Durocher dead at 86

Associated Press

PALM SPRING, Calif. — Leo Durocher, a fiesty and controversial manager for nearly a half-century and the man who coined the phrase "nice guys finish last," died Monday. He was 86.

Durocher

He died at 1:20 p.m. PDT at Desert Hospital of natural causes, hospital spokesman Randy Bevilacqua said.

Durocher played for 17 seasons, almost all as a shortstop, with the Brooklyn Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds, St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees, the team he broke into baseball with in 1925.

Yet it was his fiery style as a manager that drew "The Lip" his greatest attention. He received his share of fines and suspensions during his managerial career, which included stints with the Brooklyn Dodgers, the team he started with in 1939; the New York Giants, the Chicago Cubs and the Houston Astros,

MC Green in third at OC Invitational

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

ODESSA — Midland College's Green Team overcame a lackluster morning round to end up 12 strokes off the pace after the first 36 holes of the Odessa College Invitational, held Monday at The Club at Mission Dorado.

McLennan Community College, which owns four of the top medalists, finished the day with a 295-301—596, an 11 shot bulge over second place San Jacinto College.

Midland Green's 312-296—608 is one shot up on fourth place Western Texas College.

Host Odessa College finished the first 36 holes in at 626, in seventh place.

"Let's just say we were victims of circumstances that were not their fault, and that caused a distraction," MC golf coach Delnor Poss said of his team's morning round. "I think they showed a lot of character by coming back this afternoon."

Two of the three sub-300 rounds Monday were shot by Midland College teams. McLennan, and the MC Gold team both had 295s, and MC's Green team shot a 296 on the final 18 holes of the day.

"Grant Thomson played really well for us, and Darren Eckhardt played like he's capable," Poss said.

Thomson, a member of the gold team, was shooting even par going into his final hole of the day — a shotgun start had him finishing at No. 14. Thomson, though, hit water on the hole for a double bogey to finish the second 18 at 2-over.

Mojo, Garden City retain spots, Rankin climbs

Associated Press

No. 1 Arlington Lamar retained its top ranking in Class 5A of the Associated Press Schoolboy Poll on the strength of a 30-18 victory over crosstown rival Sam Houston. All-state running back Shawn Walters led the Vikings with 240 yards and three touchdowns, including a 91-yard run.

Lamar received 238 points and 17 of 25 first-place votes, finishing ahead of No. 2 Dallas Carter, which received 223 points and six votes for first.

Odessa Permian was third, followed by Waco, San Antonio Marshall, Alief Elsik, West Brook, Aldine, Huntsville and Jersey Village.

Schulenburg and Garden City both remained the near-unanimous No. 1 choices in classes 2A and A, respectively. Both teams received 21 votes for first. Rankin, although idle last weekend, moved one notch up to the sixth spot in Class A.

Prep Football

Beaumont West Brook coach Jerry Hentschel credits much of his team's 5-0 record to a first-time varsity quarterback and a 155-pound running back.

Quarterback James Brown and running back Derel Williams lead an explosive West Brook offense that has propelled the Bruins into the poll.

The Bruins, who debuted at No. 7 in Class 5A, were one of four teams to enter the poll. Jersey Village ranked 10th in 5A. Tomball debuted at 10th in 4A and Edna, which knocked off Class 3A No. 1 Cuero 35-20, entered at No. 10.

In 4A, Bastrop remained No. 1 with 242 points and 18 first-place votes after its 19-13 victory over Brenham. Houston C.E. King again was second with four votes for first and 215 points.

McKinney was No. 3, followed by Wilmer-Hutchins, Waxahachie, Sulphur Springs, El Campo, LaMarque, Austin Westlake and Tomball.

Sinton, which beat West Oso 41-13, is the new No. 1 team in Class 3A after Cuero's 35-20 loss to Edna. Sinton received 216 points and 12 first-place votes, narrowly edging Southlake Carroll's 215 points and seven votes for first.

Sinton's Gary Davenport said coaching a No. 1 team will take some getting used to.

"I don't know if I'm uncomfortable with it or not," he said. "I've been in this business for 21 years and it's the first time I've been associated with a No. 1 ranking."

Quarterback Adrian Robinson ran for touchdowns of 17, 37 and 1 yards and caught an 11-yard scoring pass in Edna's upset victory. Robinson also had two interceptions.

normally does because of the footing."

Johnson said he was concerned that the Cowboys made errors in the kicking game, especially on an 82-yard kickoff return for a touchdown by Charles Wilson to open the second half.

"We can't have that kind of performance and expect to win," Johnson said. "We've been very good in that area. But breakdowns allowed Green Bay to stay in the game. I got that message across to the players."

The Cowboys were able to head off a potential problem Monday when free safety Ray Horton backed off on threats to walk out on the team.

Horton said after Sunday's game that he was upset at the lack of progress in talks for a new contract and told reporters he would go home to Seattle Monday to attend to personal business and ponder his future.

But Horton arrived at the practice facility in time for meetings Monday afternoon. Horton, in his option year, said he received assurances from owner Jerry Jones that the team would reward him at the end of the season, if not before.

"They said they'd take care of it, and I believe them," Horton said. "I work on a handshake and that's good enough for me."

Horton returned an interception 65 yards for a touchdown against the Packers and had a 20-yard fumble recovery and touchdown return two weeks ago in a 21-16 victory over the New York Giants.

Horton's mental state becomes even more important with the loss of backup safety Vince Albritton, who's out for the year after breaking his left arm Sunday. Dallas has three healthy safeties.

Albritton will have surgery to have a pin inserted into the arm. Johnson said he may shift a cornerback to safety or sign another player.

NFL: Thomas suffers injury

(From 1C)

worst defeat since a 47-6 loss to Indianapolis by replacement players during the 1987 strike. Derrick Thomas had four of the Chiefs' sacks, with two of them causing fumbles.

Okoye ran for 130 yards, setting a Chiefs record with his 13th 100-yard game, and rookie Harvey Williams rushed for 103.

The Bills, held to 210 total yards, still were in the game when Thurman Thomas took a pass from Jim Kelly deep in Buffalo territory and was immediately hit by Lonnie Marts, who knocked the ball loose for Kevin Ross to scoop up and run 13 yards to the Buffalo 17.

Steve DeBerg hit Robb Thomas for 12 yards to the 5, then Okoye went over on the next play for a 23-6 lead with 2:52 left in the third quarter. A moment later, Thomas sacked Kelly, knocking the ball loose, and Dan Saleaumua recovered on the 11. On fourth and goal from the 2, Okoye knocked a defender backward into the end zone.

A fumble by Don Beebe on the ensuing kickoff led to Nick Lowery's 22-yard field goal. Lowery also kicked a 41-yarder in the first quarter, a 40-yarder in the second and a 24-yarder in the third.

Thomas, the Bills' leading rusher, left the game late in the quarter with an apparent ankle injury.

Adding to their miseries, even the officiating went against the Bills. Officials placed the ball 5 yards away from where they should have after replay officials overturned a Buffalo pass completion in the third period.

DeBerg, after faking to Okoye, hit Pete Holohan with a 1-yard touchdown pass on the second play of the second quarter.

The Chiefs sacked Kelly four times in the first half and harrassed him on almost every passing down.

Buffalo got a 44-yard field goal in the second quarter from Scott Norwood and then a 25-yarder after wasting a first down on the Chiefs 11 after Okoye fumbled into the arms of Buffalo's Leonard Smith on the Chiefs 34.

A roughing-the-passer call against Bill Maas two plays later moved the Bills 11 yards to the 11, but the Chiefs' defense, which came into the game allowing an AFC-low 12 points per game, refused to yield. On second and three from the four, Maas recorded the Chiefs' third sack, downing Kelly on the 12.

Kelly was pressured on the next play and had to dump the ball off to Thomas as the Bills settled for a 25-yard field goal.

Teaff says cheap shots planned by University of Houston coaches

Associated Press

WACO — Baylor coach Grant Teaff said Monday that Houston's defensive unit was instructed by Cougars coaches to take a cheap shot at the Bears by jumping offsides en masse on the Bears' first play Saturday.

Tempers flared throughout the game, which eighth-ranked Baylor won 38-21, ending the Cougars' 15-game Astrodome winning streak.

Houston and Baylor players had to be separated by coaches at the end of the game after a few players ended the final play scuffling in a pile. Officials warned both benches in the first half to control players.

Teaff said Houston's game captains refused to shake hands with Baylor captains during the coin flip before the game at midfield, and on the Bears' first play from scrimmage, the Houston defensive line purposely jumped offsides and unloaded on the Baylor line.

"Both of those incidents were by direction of their coaching staff we were told," Teaff said. "So it was by design to be a very intense ball game, and that's fine — that's right up our alley.

"If you want to intimidate somebody, we're not the best ones to try to intimidate."

Houston coach John Jenkins was at practice and in meetings Monday afternoon and evening and couldn't be reached for reaction to Teaff's comments.

Teaff said the scuffle after the game "was just the outgrowth of a very intense ball game played to the hilt."

Teaff said Houston quarterback David Klingler apologized to him.

"He was somewhat disturbed as I was by the pushing fights and different things that happened on the field and wanted me to know," Teaff said. "He was very complimentary of our team. He is a very gracious young man, very classy."

The Bears broke into the Top 10 for the first time in five years Sunday and face Rice (2-2) next week in Waco.

Teaff, in his 29th year as coach, said he's not excited about the ranking.

"I've been there before. It's not any big deal. I just want to be there close when it's over," he said.

"It's fine, it's good but we don't dwell on it. It's not a big conversation piece with us," Teaff said. "I'm sure the Cotton Bowl people are real interested, though."

The Bears have won their first five games for the first time since winning the Southwest Conference in 1980. They've won eight of their last nine against the Owls, who scored a 6-3 upset in Waco two years ago.

Tyson predicts victory both in the ring and out

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson predicted Monday he would win the two biggest fights of his life — one in the ring, the other in an Indianapolis courtroom.

The former heavyweight champion declared himself focused for his title fight next month against Evander Holyfield, and said he wasn't terribly concerned about the rape charges against him.

"I'm looking forward to it being over with," Tyson said of the trial scheduled for January. "I'm very confident about the outcome."

Tyson met with a handful of media following a workout at a local gym, where he dismissed suggestions he might be distracted by the rape charges when he fights Holyfield on Nov. 8 for the undisputed heavyweight crown.

"Even though the situation occurs to me at a crucial time, I'm not dispirited or disheartened," Tyson said. "The job comes before the legal situation. I can't worry about that when I have a job to do."

Tyson continued Monday to prepare for that job with a light workout of a little more than an hour in a hot gym near the downtown area.

He appeared relaxed and upbeat, despite the legal difficulties that escalated last week when the mother of his son sued him for allegedly reneging on a deal to support her and the child.

"Nobody can ever say I don't care about my son," Tyson said. "All you have to do is see the checks I've paid out. I don't say she doesn't love the baby, but she uses him to try to get money."

Tyson shadow-boxed, worked on the speed bag and did stretching exercises. He didn't spar, but said he has sparred all but a few days since beginning training 10 days ago.

"I've been sparring six or seven rounds a day," Tyson said. "I'm glad you guys (writers) came over. It was an easy day for me."

Tyson said his return to training had taken the outside pressures off him, and given him something to focus on.

Auto Club alters engine specs

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The U.S. Auto Club on Monday delayed a decision on a 3.5-liter engine for Indy-cars, but announced a change in engine specifications for the 1992 Indianapolis 500.

There was speculation USAC might adopt the 3.5-liter formula already in use on the Formula One circuit in hopes of attracting such other manufacturers as Ferrari, Renault, Ford, Peugeot, Mercedes, Porsche, Nissan, Toyota, Jaguar and Yamaha.

The engine changes announced Monday will affect only non-turbocharged, or naturally aspirated, engines with non-overhead camshafts and two valves per cylinder. The piston displacement will be reduced from 390 cubic inches to 366 "in order to stimulate innovative design in the areas of cylinder blocks and heads," King said.

All cars with non-turbocharged engines also will receive a 75-pound advantage in weight with a lowering of the minimum from 1,475 to 1,400 pounds.

"We are encouraged by the announcement that additional Chevrolet-Ilmor engines will be available to competitors next year," King said.

"In addition, recent reports relative to the new Cosworth XB engine, the advent of the second-generation Ilmor engine and our newly enacted changes should provide a wide choice of competitive power plants for the Indianapolis 500."

In recent years, Indy-car racing has been dominated by the Chevy V8, with its main competition coming from Cosworth.

The AT&T Area Code Plan announced by notice published on September 13, 1991, has been modified. The following notice provides a description of the modified plan:

AT&T INTRODUCES A NEW CALLING PLAN: THE AT&T AREA CODE PLAN

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T") is pleased to announce a new family of services, AT&T's SMALL BUSINESS℠ Options. The first service offered in Texas as a part of this new family is the AT&T Area Code Plan (to be filed as AT&T Plan Q in AT&T's Custom Network Service Tariff). This service has been designed to be attractive to the small business user with a majority of calls to one area code. It provides customers a 10% discount on all undiscounted direct dialed monthly usage, including AT&T CIID/891 Calling Card charges and surcharges, billed to the single area code with the highest monthly dollar usage (whether interstate or intrastate). The AT&T Area Code Plan is offered only in conjunction with AT&T's interstate version of the plan.

The AT&T Area Code Plan offers customers discounted outward calling and consolidated billing for interstate and intrastate usage, giving customers better control over their usage while receiving discounts on calls placed to the most frequently called area code.

Key features of this plan are:

* A separate intrastate rate schedule.
* A 10% discount off this rate schedule on usage billed to the area code with the highest monthly dollar usage.
* Subminute timing on direct dialed station calls in Texas. After a 30- second minimum, billing is rounded to the next 6-second increment.
* Customers will receive a $5.00 credit when total interstate and intrastate monthly usage is greater than or equal to $20.00.
* Two rate periods for direct dialed station calls; Day and Offpeak. Offpeak hours equate to the AT&T standard Evening and Night/Weekend long distance rate periods.

For more information about the AT&T Area Code Plan, please call your AT&T Account Executive or AT&T's business consultants toll-free at 1-800-222-0400.

AT&T plans to file its tariff offering this service with the Public Utility Commission of Texas on September 24, 1991 with an effective date of October 24, 1991. This service will be available to customers in territories served by Southwestern Bell and GTE on the effective date of the tariff. For individuals in territories served by Centel, Alltel, Contel and United, availability dates will vary; however, the service should be available by no later than the 4th quarter of 1992. Persons who have questions regarding this tariff filing may contact the Public Utility Commission Public Information Division on or after September 24, 1991 at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

PITCHERS: Series moves to Toronto Friday

(From 1C)

Candiotti finished the season 13-13 with a 2.65 ERA. He only gave up 12 homers in 238 innings.

Like Candiotti, Morris also found success with a new team in 1991. He was 18-12 with a 3.43 ERA.

Morris, 36, was the winningest pitcher during the 1980s in helping the Detroit Tigers win two division titles and the World Series in 1984.

"I think both the Blue Jays and Twins have teams that can beat you in a lot of ways," Morris said. "One hot pitcher or batter can make the difference in a short series."

After Candiotti, the Blue Jays will go with hard-throwing rookie Juan Guzman (10-3) in Game 2 Wednesday afternoon. Kevin Tapani (16-9) goes for Minnesota. The series moves to Toronto on Friday and the Twins' Scott Erickson (20-8) is scheduled to oppose Jimmy Key (16-12). Todd Stottlemyre (15-8) will probably pitch Game 4 for Toronto against Morris.

Toronto manager Cito Gaston likes the idea of having Guzman between the soft-tossing styles of Candiotti and Key.

"Pitching and defense," Gillick said. "It'll come down to that. It always does."

When the Twins won the World Series in 1987, all they really had was Frank Viola and Bert Blyleven. The 54 victories by Morris, Tapani and Erickson tied the club record for three starters in a season set in 1969 by Dave Boswell (20), Jim Perry (20) and Jim Kaat (14).

Erickson, 23, was the Twins' best pitcher in the first half, winning 12 straight decisions at one point. But he landed on the 15-day disabled list with a sore elbow and struggled for a while when he returned, going 6-5 with a 6.85 ERA in one stretch.

The Blue Jays have a deeper bullpen, but the Twins have Rick Aguilera. Aguilera, who came from the Mets along with Tapani and David West in the Viola trade, had 42 saves.

Tom Henke, nagged by injuries the last month, and Duane Ward combined for 55 saves. The Blue Jays have tough middle-inning relievrs with David Wells and former Midland High star Mike Timlin.

POWER: Knoblauch is top Rookie candidate

(From 1C)

And they have the home-field advantage — a pretty good edge to have when the Metrodome is the home field.

Toronto's biggest advantage, however, may be enough to turn the series.

"What they don't have that we have is speed," said Roberto Alomar, the Blue Jays' No. 2 batter. "That's how we're going to beat them. If me and Devo get on base, I like our chances a lot."

White and Alomar, who came to Toronto in separate offseason trades, have set the table all season for No. 3 hitter Joe Carter, who had 108 RBIs.

White batted .282 with 40 doubles, 10 triples, 110 runs and 33 steals in 43 attempts. He also has some pop, with 17 homers and 60 RBIs, impressive totals for a leadoff batter.

Alomar batted .295 with 41 doubles, 11 triples, 69 RBIs, 88 runs and 53 steals in 64 attempts. Only Rickey Henderson stole more bases in the AL than Alomar, probably the league's best second baseman.

Statistically, Dan Gladden and Chuck Knoblauch pale in comparison.

Gladden, Minnesota's leadoff man, batted .247 with 14 doubles, nine triples, 64 runs and a career-low 15 stolen bases. At 34, he has apparently lost a step; he was thrown out nine times.

Knoblauch is the top Rookie of the Year candidate. He filled huge voids at second base and in the No. 2 spot in the order. Nevertheless, he can't approach Alomar's numbers. He batted .281 with 24 doubles, six triples, 78 runs and 25 steals in 30 attempts.

Gladden's production, or lack thereof, is especially a concern. He finished the season in a .184 slump over his last 39 games, as manager Tom Kelly even tried several other leadoff hitters and moved Gladden down in the order.

But Kelly, who personally pitched batting practice to Gladden after Sunday's game, said Gladden is his leadoff man.

"Danny has done a pretty good job all season," Kelly said. "He's had some ups and downs, just like other players. Right now, he's not swinging as good as he can, but it's not for lack of effort. As long as he's doing the best he can, that's good enough for me."

Gladden was good enough for the Twins in 1987, when he was one of their most effective postseason players. He batted .350 with five RBIs in the playoffs and .290 with a homer, seven RBIs and two steals in the World Series. He batted safely in all seven Series games and rose the roof with a Game 1 grand slam that set the event's tone.

"He's definitely a gamer," Knoblauch said. "I don't see him putting pressure on himself."

Pressure is exactly what White and Alomar want to put on the Twins' pitchers, catchers and infielders.

"It's nice to have speed. You can't beat speed," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "The reason we give a guy the green light ... is because these guys know how to run the bases. They know when to go."

Brian Harper, who will catch Jack Morris on Tuesday and Kevin Tapani on Wednesday (Junior Ortiz catches Scott Erickson), has thrown out only 22 of the 121 baserunners who have attempted to steal against him.

Said Morris: "I've never had the reputation of being a pitcher who holds runners on."

Yankees fire Merrill

■ New York deposes yet another field manager.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — For weeks, Stump Merrill knew he was going to be fired as manager of the New York Yankees. That didn't stop him from feeling angry and hurt when it happened.

Merrill

"When you've spent 15 years of your life to work for this kind of a goal, and you finally achieve it, and then you're told you're let go for betterment in the organization, that's a slap in the face to me," Merrill said Monday after the team announced his dismissal.

General manager Gene Michael told Merrill after Sunday's season finale, but waited a day to let the world know.

"He just said they were going to make a change for the betterment of the organization," said Merrill, speaking from his home in Maine.

He sounded angry Monday and said he hasn't decided if he'll stay with the organization. He has one year left on his manager's deal and a separate, long-term personal services contract.

"It's no longer tampering to talk to me," Merrill said. "So if somebody wants me, I'm available."

The Yankees finished fifth in the AL East at 71-91 after finishing last in 1990 at 67-95. Merrill, who has been with the Yankees' organization for 16 years, took over as manager when Bucky Dent was fired June 6, 1990. The team was 18-31 at the time.

Merrill, 120-155 over the two seasons, was the ninth manager fired since the start of the season.

LEO: The 'Lip' reached World Series thrice

(From 1C)

whom he finished with in 1973.

He guided three teams into the World Series — the 1941 Dodgers, who lost to the Yankees; the 1951 Giants, who lost to the Yankees; and the 1954 Giants, who swept the Cleveland Indians.

And the man who talked about nice guys finishing last did wind up in the cellar once, with the 1966 Chicago Cubs, who went 59-103. But the next season, his second with the Cubs, they improved to 87-74.

At various times in between, he worked as a coach for the Los Angeles Dodgers and an announcer for NBC-TV. After leaving the Astros at age 68, he retired to Palm Springs. He continued to appear at baseball functions and remained active on the Hollywood and social circuit, spending time with the many who knew him, including one of his best friends, entertainer Frank Sinatra.

Leo Ernest Durocher was born on July 27, 1905, in West Springfield, Mass. He made it to the majors in 1925 and played just two games with the Yankees, a team that featured Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. He did not play again for the Bronx Bombers until 1928, then went to the Reds in 1930, the Cardinals in 1933 and to the Dodgers in 1938.

Durocher was hired as manager of the Dodgers before the 1939 season and played 116 games that year while also managing. He was also a player-manager, although in a limited role, in 1941, 1943 and 1945, his last active season.

He ended his career with a .247 batting average, 24 home runs and 567 RBIs. His Dodgers of 1939 finished third in the NL. The next season, they improved to second. And, in 1941, they won the pennant before falling to the Yankees.

Brister hurts knee vs. Colts

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bubby Brister sprained his left knee in the second quarter of the Pittsburgh Steelers' 21-3 victory over the Indianapolis Colts and will be examined Tuesday.

"You're always concerned when your starting quarterback gets banged up. Hopefully, it'll come around," Steelers offensive quarterback Joe Walton said Monday.

The Steelers were not sure whether Brister's knee was damaged. The injured knee was the same one the quarterback sprained badly during a game at Three Rivers Stadium in 1989, causing him to miss two games.

Brister remained in the game Sunday after the sprain and threw two touchdown passes in the second half.

"In my business, trust is everything. And I trust my Texas National Bankers."

Franz Weis
General Manager,
VDS Racing Engines

Not too many Midland companies have a customer list that includes A.J. Foyt; Mario, Michael and John Andretti; Al Unser, Jr. and Bobby Rahal. But Franz Weis does. VDS Racing Engines, the Midland-based company he manages, builds racing engines for an impressive list of drivers who race in the Indy 500 and other major car races around the world. VDS is one of only two companies authorized to build, rebuild and maintain Chevrolet racing engines. Franz expects the same kind of performance from his banker as his professional racing clients do from the engines they buy from VDS. So it's no surprise that Franz Weis banks with Texas National. He knows that his bankers are as professional as his clients. That's why we're Franz Weis' banker. And why we're Midland's Banker.

Prices jump

NEW YORK — Oil prices jumped Monday to their highest close since the Gulf War, flirting with the $23-per-barrel mark over a heightened perception in the market that energy demand will grow amid tight supplies.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in November settled at $22.98 per barrel, up 37 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Oil for next-month delivery had not settled that high since Jan. 22, when the final price was $24.18 a barrel.

Analysts found no specific news moving the market. But they said a combination of technical factors and the belief that any news coming in will move prices up was forcing buyers to pay more.

At its peak Monday afternoon, oil hit $23 per barrel. Oil had last touched above that level on Aug. 19, when it hit $23.10 in the market's initial reaction to a coup attempt in the Soviet Union.

As the price surged, building on gains of 29 cents a barrel from last week, futures prices for refined petroleum products joined the rally, with home heating oil taking a lead for seasonal reasons.

Natural gas prices were mostly higher, with contracts for delivery in November settling at $1.913 per 1,000 cubic feet, up .9 cent.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar benefited from cross-trading Monday and settled mostly higher on world currency markets.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 129.53 Japanese yen from 130.20 yen on Friday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.7360 from $1.7570 late Friday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late rates Friday, included: 1.6805 German marks, up from 1.6775; 1.4735 Swiss francs, up from 1.4695; 5.7230 French francs, up from 5.7155; 1,255.50 Italian lire, up from 1,255.00; and 1.1293 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1314.

Job tour

AUSTIN — State officials have kicked off a series of job seminars to help people find work and aid businesses to grow.

Gov. Ann Richards said Monday the "Greater Texas" program "exemplifies everything that government can be."

The two-day seminars, coordinated by the Texas Employment Commission, will be held throughout the year across the state, starting Oct. 28-29 in Beaumont.

Seminars are also planed in Odessa, Corpus Christi, Fort Worth, Tyler, San Antonio, Lubbock, McAllen, El Paso, Houston, Dallas, and Austin.

Energy official touts natural gas

Official: Policy focuses on setting of prices by free market forces

Associated Press

DALLAS — The Bush administration's energy policy, facing its first test in Congress this month, encourages greater use of natural gas without artificial mechanisms like price supports or tax breaks, an Energy Department leader said Monday.

"Science and technology, R&D will do that, not regulations, not throwing money at it," Henson Moore, deputy secretary of energy, said at a conference of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

When President Bush introduced the policy proposal in February, he drew criticism from oil and gas producers for leaving out incentives that will revive domestic production.

Natural gas producers, who have slumped through five years of low prices, particularly complained that a fuel that is abundant and inexpensive in the United States received poorer treatment than foreign oil in the policy.

But Moore said the policy focuses on the setting of prices by free market forces.

"The world is going to need oil for a long time to come," Moore said. "Each country has got to view its mix of energy for what's in its best interest."

For the United States, he said, less dependence on foreign oil and more consumption of natural gas is important.

"Oil is always going to play an important part . . . but in the long term, we also see a great value in natural gas," Moore said. "We just don't see that developing as quickly as it should. We're moving now trying to find a way to make that happen."

The administration proposes amending a nearly 60-year-old public utility law about where electric-generating plants can be built, raising the prospect of natural gas as a fuel for electricity.

In addition, the Bush plan encourages conversion of vehicle fleets to compressed natural gas and reduces the restrictions on natural gas pipeline construction, Moore said.

On a separate matter, Moore said administration officials, including himself, are meeting with Japanese leaders this month and next to seek support in building the $8.25 billion superconducting super collider south of Dallas.

Southwest raises ante for Midway

- Airline offers $28 million buyout for all Midway gates.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Southwest Airlines Co. Monday offered $28 million for struggling Midway Airlines Inc.'s Chicago gates, upping the ante against a rival bid from Northwest Airlines.

Northwest has offered Midway Airlines $20 million for its 21 gates at Chicago's Midway Airport. Northwest would then let Midway, which is in Chapter 11, lease back all the gates.

Southwest is offering more money but wants to use some of the gates itself, saying Midway could buy back or lease "most of those gates at Southwest's cost if Midway should continue as an independent airline." Southwest would not say how many gates it wants to use.

Under the proposal from Northwest, Midway and Northwest also agreed to enter negoatiations that might result in a purchase of all of Midway's assets by Northwest. Chicago-based Midway tentatively accepted the Northwest offer on Sept. 23, subject to the approval of the judge in Midway's bankruptcy case.

The parties were to discuss the Northwest offer today before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge John Squires, who is overseeing Midway's Chapter 11 case in Chicago.

Midway would continue discussions with both Southwest and Northwest, spokeswoman Sandra Allen said. She declined further comment.

Northwest, based in Eagan, Minn., will not act on Southwest's bid, spokeswoman Amy Spreeman said.

"Our offer is still dangling out there. We're just going to let it stand the way it is," Ms. Spreeman said.

Southwest's offer raises the prospect of larger presence in the Chicago market for the Dallas-based carrier, a 20-year-old airline built on short hauls and low fares that has already been turned down once in an attempt to get some of Midway's gates.

Both Southwest and Midway operate in the Chicago market exclusively at Midway Airport.

Northwest, the nation's fourth largest airline, has been talking to Midway and other carriers as it looks for deals that might help it get closer to the size of the industry's giants, American Airlines, United Airlines and Delta Air Lines. The biggest carrier Northwest is talking to is Continental Airlines, which has been in bankruptcy court since last December.

Whiz building $1 billion Vegas theme park

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Financier Kirk Kerkorian broke ground Monday for his grandest dream yet, a $1 billion Wizard of Oz theme park and hotel targeting this gaming city's growing family market.

"We've been waiting a long time for this. It's great to finally have it on the way," the 74-year-old billionaire said as political figures and gaming executives swarmed around him.

Burt Reynolds, Loni Anderson and Jennifer O'Neill also were at the groundbreaking, which was capped by fireworks.

The project is designed to capture a share of the fast-growing family market in Las Vegas.

"This is a complete new dimension. It's not like building just another hotel," Kerkorian said.

"Our research shows that even the high rollers, such as major players from the Pacific Rim, will come with their families if they think there is something for them to do here," said Robert Maxey, MGM Grand Inc. president and chief executive officer.

With 5,007 rooms, the MGM Grand will be larger than the 4,032-room Excalibur Hotel and Casino across the street and the Mirage Hotel a few blocks away.

Visitors will walk through an 88-foot MGM lion into a 33-acre park reminiscent of the back lot of a movie studio. Plans include 12 major attractions and a 171,500-square-foot casino.

William Bennett, chairman of Circus Circus Enterprises Inc., whose medieval Excalibur Hotel has drawn more than 11 million people since it opened in June 1990, said he expected the competition.

Bank merger hearing draws critics, defenders

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Critics of a proposed merger between two big southeast banks told federal regulators Monday the deal would create a greedy, sprawling superpower that would stifle competition and deny loans to needy neighborhoods.

But NCNB Corp. Chairman Hugh L. McColl Jr., who engineered the combination of his Charlotte, N.C.-based bank with C&S-Sovran Corp. of Atlanta and Norfolk, Va., said the new NationsBank would be capable of helping the communities it serves better than other banks.

NationsBank would be "a national power with a Southern accent," McColl said.

His 20-minute speech marked the start of several public meetings set this week by the Federal Reserve Board to listen to community groups and others concerned about the merger.

Announced in July, the merger would create the fourth-largest U.S. bank with an enormous geographic reach through the Southeast. It is one of several combinations of big U.S. banks announced in recent months, part of a broader consolidation in the banking industry.

NCNB and C&S-Sovran shareholders are to vote on the deal Nov. 1, and the Fed has extended the public comment period to Nov. 8 before concluding its review.

McColl recalled how shortly after the merger announcement, NCNB and C&S-Sovran announced a 10-year, $10 billion commitment of resources to low-income communities.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Rules hazy for corporate NOW accounts

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have been looking for a checking account that pays interest for the small business I own. I learned the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 allowed NOW accounts for individuals and nonprofit organizations only. Has the law been revised to included businesses?

Doyle

If not, what options are available for a business to invest small amounts of cash — $5,000 or less — for short periods of time and obtain interest?

A. That piece of federal legislation — DIDMCA, for short — has not been changed in the area you mention. But, all is not lost in your search for interest-paying checking.

Corporations and partnerships are still prohibited from having NOW accounts. If your business is incorporated or set up as a partnership, no bank or savings and loan association is authorized to open a NOW account for your concern.

However, an attorney at the Federal Reserve Board says the rules "are hazy" for a proprietorship, because the sole owner might be using a NOW account for both personal and business purposes, making withdrawals from the account "difficult to sort out."

As a result, the Fed lawyer explains banks and S&Ls are not prohibited from opening NOW accounts for proprietorships. If you are the only owner of that business, go ahead and open one.

Another option available to you is to have a money market mutual fund with check-writing privileges. Most money market mutual funds pay higher dividends — not interest — than checking accounts. When you write such a check, you redeem some of the shares in the account.

Q. What makes a NOW account different than a checking account?

A. NOW stands for "negotiated order of withdrawal" and technically is not a check. The two accomplish the same purpose and for all intents and purposes are equal.

As well they should, banks and S&Ls promote NOW accounts as interest-paying checking. When you open a NOW account, you get a book containing slips of paper that look just like checks and serve the same purpose.

Q. You were right when you told a woman who wants her Social Security number to be put on some of the joint bank accounts she has with her husband that the accounts are owned equally by both. But you went astray when you added it makes no difference which SS number is used. You suggested putting her SS on enough of the accounts to put her mind at ease.

For Internal Revenue Service purposes, the SS number used must be that of the first name on a joint account. Won't some of the accounts have to be changed to list her name first, so that her SS number can be used?

A. You make a good point. To follow IRS rules to the letter, that should be done.

Nonetheless, that won't make any real difference. As with all joint accounts, she and her husband will remain equal owners of everything in the accounts.

Q. If I have $100,000 in certificates of deposit and other accounts at a bank and another $100,000 in my name and/or another name at the same bank, is everything covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.?

A. Yes. The $100,000 maximum FDIC coverage applies to each depositor — technically each "right or capacity." The two accounts you describe are in different rights or capacities, each insured up to $100,000.

DEAR ABBY

Readers debate seat belt buckle-up laws

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "J.C. in Gainesville" who wondered if he was wrong for ordering his passenger to "buckle up or get out!"

Van Buren

If he was writing from Gainesville, Fla., he should know that buckling up is the law in Florida. He could receive a ticket if he or his passenger does not have on a seat belt.

Recently a father was arrested in Florida when his unbuckled child died in a car accident. It is the driver's responsibility to make sure that everyone in his car is buckled up! J.C. definitely did the right thing. — M.P. IN FORT LAUDERDALE

DEAR M.P.: Read on for an opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: In regard to your column on Sept. 12, "Buckle Up or Bail Out": The person who didn't want to use a seat belt may have had a serious phobia about it. I wish the do-gooders would use their own seat belts but keep their noses out of other people's lives. There have been cases of UN-belted survivors who would have been killed if they had been belted — but that information is withheld from the average citizen.

I have done enough investigating on my own around here and have found that when nothing is said about a traffic fatality being belted or not, they were belted. Regarding the state trooper who said, "I have yet to unbuckle a seat belt from a dead person," I have also heard that only medical personnel can remove a body from a car. (Maybe that varies from state to state; I don't know.)

I prevented an accident some years ago while I was a front-seat passenger and the driver fell asleep at the wheel. I couldn't have acted in time had I been belted. If the driver demands the passenger use a seat belt, then the passenger has the right to demand that the driver obey every law and rule, too! It's possible to be belted and dead.

I'd feel a whole lot safer on the road if the seat belt zealots put as much effort into preventing accidents as they do in protecting their great god and savior, the Seat Belt Law!

This letter is not intended to stop anyone from using his belt. I'm not opposed to healthy diets, either. But I don't think anyone would want a law enacted and enforced that would penalize everyone who has gotten overweight or let his blood cholesterol get too high — even though such a law might save lives. — H.O. IN SUMNER, IOWA

DEAR ABBY: Your column on "faking it" created a big stir in Mesa, Ariz. A radio station in our town asked women over the age of 18 to call in and tell listeners whether they "faked it" or not. The results were: Out of 100 women, 58 said they did not fake it, and 42 said they did. — NOT FAKING IT IN MESA

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Men prefer Betty over Wilma

NEW YORK (AP) — Here's a flash for those desperate to unravel the male mystique: men prefer Betty to Wilma, 58 percent to 30 percent.

Yes, that's Betty Rubble and Wilma Flintstone. Of Bedrock.

That's just one of the gems unearthed in a random, nationwide telephone poll of 1,001 men published in Esquire magazine's October issue.

Want more?

The majority of those questioned — 52 percent — would marry earthy newswoman Jane Pauley over sultry singer Mariah Carey and 74 percent would rather be Prince Charles (of England) than Prince (of Minneapolis).

Men also would rather be Clint Eastwood than Woody Allen (70 percent to 27 percent.)

The poll, conducted by Beta Research Corp., had a margin of error of plus or minus 3.2 percentage points.
