Dole frustrated over budget difficulties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, venting frustration over difficulty at reaching GOP budget accord, lashed out at Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Friday for trying to "sit out" deficit-reduction efforts.

In an unusually sharp attack on the administration official, the Kansas Republican also accused Weinberger of using inflated economic figures to exaggerate Pentagon belt-tightening.

"They've been able to survive over there (the Pentagon) without much difficulty," Dole said in a speech to public relations officials. "I think the rest of the country needs to survive too."

Dole suggested Weinberger's unyielding attitude on military spending was hampering efforts by Senate Republicans to craft their own deficit-reduction package.

"I'm willing to go after sensitive programs... but don't count on me if Weinberger continues to sit it out," Dole said. "We're in real trouble if we can't get together on defense numbers."

"I won't say everything is lost if we don't get more defense spending restraint — but we might be close to it," he added.

Weinberger did not respond personally to Dole's criticism. Late Friday, however, top Pentagon spokesman Michael I. Burch issued a statement noting it was not Weinberger's budget that was under attack, "but the president's budget."

"And cutting defense does not solve the deficit problem," the spokesman added. "Cutting defense means the loss of national security, the loss of jobs, the loss of taxes. Every billion dollars of defense spending means 35,000 jobs."

After his speech, Dole and other Republican senators met with White House chief of staff James A. Baker to discuss the budget. Dole left the meeting without talking to reporters, but Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., predicted that the administration and GOP senators would probably reach a compromise embracing "some kind of a freeze" on cost of living increases, including those for Social Security recipients, and "some kind of a substantial reduction" in proposed military spending.

"I would not expect that Cap Weinberger would ever surrender," Heinz said. "That's not his job as the chief civilian over at the Defense Department. But I do hope that we will have the benefit of his expertise in the event that we go for something close to a freeze" on Pentagon spending.

Weinberger agreed to trim $8.7 billion from an overall proposed defense budget of $286 billion, but that figure still represents a substantial increase over the current budget. Weinberger has repeatedly cautioned congressional leaders not to include Pentagon spending in any across-the-board spending freeze.

Bishops will review Second Vatican Council

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday announced a special worldwide bishops' conference to review the Second Vatican Council and prepare the church for the next thousand years.

The council known as Vatican II, which ended 20 years ago, was a major move in modernizing the Roman Catholic Church.

In a move aimed at Christian unity, John Paul said that "patriarchs and some archbishops of Eastern Churches" will participate in the "extraordinary general synod."

The conservative, Polish-born pontiff, in making the surprise announcement, did not specify any Vatican II reforms that may be under scrutiny during the conference that will be held from Nov. 25 to Dec. 8.

John Paul has indicated he would like to see some revisions in the Vatican II reforms.

On Oct. 17, 1978, in his first sermon after becoming pope, he said that "general criteria of loyalty to the Vatican Council" must not affect loyalty to the church's basic doctrinal truths.

Last October he increased the number of instances in which the traditional, pre-Vatican II Latin Mass can be said.

However, John Paul has gained a reputation as a conservative mainly in such areas such as birth control, divorce and abortion, which were not among the main topics of Vatican II.

The pontiff, who announced the conference during a Mass in the Basilica of St. Paul's Outside the Walls, said the synod would "relive" the spirit of the council. But he also said it would re-examine the changes the council made "in the light of new demands."

"In total and persevering faith, today's church wants to proceed along the road toward the third millennium of its history," the pontiff said.

He told several thousand people who had filled the church for the evening service, "I attribute to this extraordinary assembly a particular importance."

He said that "patriarchs and some archbishops of Eastern Churches and the presidents of all the bishops' conferences of the five continents will participate" in the synod.

The pope said Vatican II has been a "constant point of reference" of his pontificate and "remains the fundamental event of the contemporary life of the church."

Vatican II was called by Pope John XXIII and lasted from 1962 to 1965. Drawing together all of the bishops of the church, it examined the status of Catholicism in the modern world and instituted major reforms.

Among many other things, the council permitted the saying of Mass in the local language, or vernacular, and stressed greater participation of lay people in the church liturgy. It also stressed religious freedom, ecumenism and condemned anti-Semitism.

Among its many innovations, Protestant and Orthodox Eastern Churches sent observers to the sessions.

Vatican II also fostered greater papal consultation with church bishops, and proclaimed the Blessed Virgin Mary as the "Mother of the Church."

The pontiff made the announcement of the 20th-anniversary synod on the eve of his trip to Latin America, and more than five hours after Vatican offices had closed for the day.

Man gets three 99-year terms for aggravated sexual assault

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A 22-year-old former Midland delivery man, whom the prosecution claimed had an uncontrollable urge for "grossly perverted acts of desire" with small girls, was sentenced Friday to three 99-year sentences for the aggravated sexual assaults of a Midland couple's three small daughters.

Barry M. Wion, 22, was sentenced to 99 years despite Administrative Assistant District Attorney Thomas S. Morgan's request for a lesser sentence of at least 50 years for each count.

The jury, which included a former Lee High School principal serving as foreman and the wife of a former Texas Rangers captain, deliberated 23 minutes before finding the defendant guilty of the three first-degree offenses. Sentencing deliberations took 20 minutes.

"It is unusual" that the jury would give a longer sentence than requested, Morgan said after the trial.

"Based on the fact that Mr. Wion's testimony in the guilt-innocent phase was that he didn't commit the offense and then during the punishment phase that he had, I think that was a significant factor as well as the fact that the offenses happened on numerous occasions," he said.

"I'm very pleased. I'm very pleased that the jury set this kind of standard for Midland County. The emotional trauma and damage suffered by the three young innocent girls may easily last a lifetime."

Dressed in matching navy sailor shirts, white skirts and navy knee socks, the 7-, 9- and 11-year-olds testified during the one-day trial that Wion, a friend of the family and a neighbor in the Permian Motel last May, would invite them into his apartment as they passed on their way to visit a friend who lived in a nearby motel.

The family has since moved into another motel.

"Would he open the window and call out?" asked Morgan.

"Sometimes," said the 9-year-old.

"Would he shut the door when you came in?"

"Yes."

"Would he lock it?"

"Yes."

Millionaire's gifts help finance projects for mother's home town

OKOLONA, Miss. (AP) — For 24 years, this farming town has built and remodeled municipal facilities and air conditioned its schools with only a small tax bite, thanks to yearly gifts made in the memory of a millionaire's mother.

"We can build a lot of things we otherwise couldn't build," said Bill Whitt, mayor of the northeast Mississippi town of 3,409.

Counting last year's check for $10,000, the Rockwell Fund Inc. has sent nearly $750,000 to Okolona. In 1960, Henry M. Rockwell wrote to the town's Chamber of Commerce asking if Okolona Female Academy was still open, recalled then-chamber manager Dorothy Darnell.

Rockwell's mother, Sara Wade Richardson, had attended the boarding school in the 1880s, and his grandfather had once served as mayor of Okolona.

After finding out the school had closed long before, Rockwell and his cousin Joe Greene visited the town.

"We ought to go over to Okolona and give them some money," Greene quoted Rockwell as saying.

Rockwell and Greene met with town officials and said they wanted to help with projects that couldn't be financed in other ways. Rockwell mentioned $50,000 but left without handing over any money.

The lumberman wanted to make a gift in memory of his mother, Ms. Darnell said.

"On the way back (to Texas), he said, 'Those are good people,'" remembered Greene.

Three weeks later, town officials received a letter containing a card with a picture of a little girl, said Ms. Darnell.

"When I opened it, the card said 'April Fool.' I saw a piece of tape on the card, though, and found a check on the back," she said.

It was for $75,000. "He loved to do the unexpected, and did," Greene said.

The first gift went to build a nursing home, which was named in memory of Rockwell's parents and grandparents.

Rockwell died in 1978 at age 77, but Greene continues to send the yearly gifts. They usually arrive around Christmas and have been for $10,000 to $25,000.

The gifts have benefited everyone in the town.

"We have one of the lowest tax rates in north Mississippi," said City Clerk Lynn Fair. "I think it can partly be attributed to the four lation."

"We've air conditioned all the schools," Ms. Darnell said.

In addition, the gifts have paid for a school band hall, a vocational-technical center, a science laboratory at the town's only high school and municipal tennis courts.

Parent company puts Drilco up for sale

MELLA McEWEN
Business-Oil Writer

Drilco Industrial will not be closing, as was announced last October. Instead, Smith International, the parent company, has put the Midland plant up for sale.

According to Bog Powers, vice president of Drilco Industrial, Smith has "determined that they are going to exit a substantial amount of their mining business." The company wants to keep Drilco and sell it as a mining business, he said.

Powers said he feels the decision to sell Drilco will be a good opportunity for the employees and the community, saying he hoped a buyer would be able to help the company expand. He also said there have been several inquiries at the Smith offices in Newport Beach, Calif.

Back in the boom days of the early 1980s, Drilco had 365 employees. During 1982 and 1983, the work force was cut to the present 147 employees. Powers said there will be an as yet undetermined reduction in the work force, mainly because many of the employees had committed to other jobs.

Drilco was founded in 1949 by Midlanders Stanley Moore, Don Morris and Bill Bachman as an oilfield tool company. Drilco Industrial, the mining tool manufacturing division, was formed in 1964. About 10 years ago, Smith International acquired Drilco and moved the oilfield manufacturing division to Houston, closer to the ports.

Drilco Industrial has operations in Australia, Africa and Canada. In April, the company announced the awarding of a $5 million contract to manufacture drill tools and pipe for construction of an exploratory shaft in the U.S. Department of Energy's high-level radioactive waste management program. Work on the contract is expected to continue until January 1986.

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service forecasts snow for today for parts of Nevada, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan and showers for parts of Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas.

Spring-like temperatures expected to end in Basin

Partly cloudy skies will prevail over the Permian Basin today through Sunday bringing an end to week-long spring-like temperatures. Forecasters for the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport say today will be fair, becoming partly cloudy by noon with a 20 percent chance of rain. The high will be in the 50s with southerly winds at 10-20 mph.

Tonight will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain. The low will be in the mid 30s. Sunday calls for mostly cloudy skies and colder with a 20 percent chance of rain. The high will be in the 50s.

Friday's high of 67 was 16 degrees below the record set in 1983. The low of 36 was 21 above the record set in 1940.

STATE

A dry, fast-moving cold front was moving deeper into Texas late Friday and was expected to bring chiller temperatures and produce rain over much of the state by late today.

By 4 p.m. Friday the front was located near a Midland-Waco-Lufkin line and was heading toward the Texas coast, the National Weather Service said.

Skies were clear to partly cloudy over much of the state. Temperatures behind the front were in the 50s and 60s with northerly winds 15 to 25 mph. South of the front readings were in the 60s and 70s with variable winds 10 to 15 mph.

Extremes ranged from 50 degrees at Amarillo to 78 at McAllen. The forecast called for clear to partly cloudy conditions, turning colder by early today.

Lows should range from the 20s in the Panhandle to the 50s in far South Texas.

Increasing cloudiness is expected today, with slightly cooler temperatures and a chance of scattered showers in Southwest Texas, and rain elsewhere. Sunday, the cold front will continue to bring rain to most areas of the state and push temperatures downward, the weather service said. Scattered rain mixed with snow is forecast for the Panhandle.

Highs will range from the 40s in the Panhandle to the 60s over far South Texas, the weather service said.

NATION

A cold front carried snow and gusty wind across much of the Midwest on Friday, with northwesterly wind gusts of 35 to 45 mph common across Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and northern Missouri.

Snow fell from the Great Lakes region across Indiana, the upper Ohio Valley and much of New England.

Gusts of near 50 mph were reported in Indiana at South Bend and Grissom Air Force Base. At South Bend, 2 inches of snow fell and windows were blown out at a motel.

A blizzard warning was posted for northwestern and north-central Indiana and travelers' advisories were issued for much of Illinois, Ohio, northern Kentucky and much of Michigan. Blowing and drifting snow cut visibility to near zero over parts of northern Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Calumet, Mich., near Lake Superior, reported between 15 and 18 inches of new snow, and as much as 8 inches fell in Allegan and Van Buren counties of southwestern Michigan.

Gale warnings were issued for much of the Great Lakes. Winter storm warnings were posted for parts of the central Appalachians from western Maryland across central Pennsylvania.

BUDGET

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., also voiced frustration on Friday with Weinberger's uncompromising attitude, but in a gentler fashion than his Senate colleague. "That's (Weinberger's) posture. I know it. We've been dealing with it. We've got to deal with it again," Michel said, speaking later in the day to the same group addressed by Dole.

"I never saw a defense budget that couldn't be cut," Michel added. Meanwhile, Dole announced that he will seek to use a parliamentary shortcut to try to win quick congressional action on the deficit-cutting plan, but the scheme immediately ran into strong opposition from House Democrats.

"The House is not going to go along with that," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, adding that the House would stick to the usual procedure of requiring a congressional budget outline to be completed by May 15, with measures to implement the outline to follow later in the year.

"The idea that you can come up with a razzle-dazzle package and expect us to swallow it whole is poor reasoning. ... We're not going to do it," Wright said.

Dole said he hoped to use a single so-called "reconciliation" bill to handle all the budget cuts, a process similar to that used in early 1981 when Reagan domestic budget cuts were moved through Congress in one package.

Dole has been overseeing an effort by Senate Republicans to seize the initiative on deficit reduction and to craft their own package apart from the one President Reagan is expected to submit to Congress on Feb. 4, setting a goal of reducing this year's projected deficit by $50 billion.

But the Senate Republican plan faltered this week as GOP senators argued among themselves over military spending levels and over whether a spending freeze should include a halt to scheduled cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients, a move that would save $6 billion.

The refusal by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, to even participate in the budget-reduction effort until the administration's Pentagon budget is unveiled further slowed the Senate GOP effort.

MC's nursing program receives full accreditation

From Staff Reports

Midland College's Associate Degree Nursing (ADN) program has received full accreditation from the National League of Nursing (NLN). The accreditation is for the maximum eight-year period, without restrictions or interium visits. It also is retroactive one year, to cover the first ADN graduating class, which received degrees in May, 1984.

"It is unique for a new Associate Degree Nursing program to receive full and unconditional accreditation upon its initial application," according to Dr. Eileen Piwetz, acting chairman of the Health Sciences Division.

The ADN program was initiated at Midland College in 1981 under the direction of Celia Harris, Ms. Piwetz and Clara Uesery, faculty members. The women organized the initial curriculum and recruited the first class that started in September 1982.

Findings based on the July 1984 Texas State Nursing Board exams showed the division ranked fourth in Texas among 62 programs; 102nd nationally among the 1,386 nursing schools including those granting bachelor of nursing degrees and 67th out of 735 ADN programs in the

The child said Wion usually would have her sit on the bed before he would kneel before her. Using an anatomically-correct doll, the child demonstrated how he would push her shorts and panties to the side.

"Did you do it or did he do it himself?" Morgan asked.

"He'd do it himself," the Santa Rita Elementary School student said.

Lifting the doll's skirt, the child turned to the jury and, while demonstrating, said, "He would lift up the shorts, pull them up and to the side. Then he'll put his tongue between it. Sometimes he'd blow and sometimes he'd put his finger inside it."

"He'd stick his finger up your private parts?" Morgan asked.

"Yes, up inside."

"Could you feel it inside there?"

"Yes."

The child, under questioning by Morgan, said that although it sometimes hurt and she would tell him to stop, Wion would not.

"After he finished, what would happen?"

"He'd do it to my sister."

"But did he ever offer you anything to eat or drink?"

"Yeah, Tang and candy."

When asked if Wion told her it was a secret, the child replied: "It wasn't mine but it was his."

Under cross-examination by court-appointed defense attorney Edward Downing, the child said during the incidents her sisters "sometimes would watch and sometimes they'd watch TV."

The 7-year-old and her oldest sister, who was 10 at the time of the alleged offenses, also testified of several similar incidents.

The older sister said she told her father about the incidents "after he did it to my sisters."

The father, a roughneck, testified he first met Wion in 1979 when the two were in basic training in the Army. He became re-acquainted with him when they saw each other at the Christian Life Center on Andrews Highway, where the family attended church.

Wion, who has been in jail since his arrest June 6 in Hobbs, N.M., lived with the family in their one-bedroom motel room until he found a job and got his own room at the motel, the father testified. On May 28, when his oldest daughter told him what Wion was doing, he immediately got the two younger girls from their friend's room and asked them if it were true. He then called the police.

"Did you see Barry Wion before the police got there?" asked Morgan.

"Yes, he tried to get in to ask what was going on," the father said, testifying he told Wion he needed to talk to the girls and they could not go outside.

When police arrived, the father told them which room was Wion's but Wion had left by the time they knocked on his door, according to Ronnie Wilson, detective sergeant with the Midland Police Department.

Wion, who took the stand in his defense, denied all the charges until he was found guilty.

According to his testimony, he also lived with the family after May 11 car accident in which he and the family were injured.

Although Wion settled within a month with the insurance company of the driver of the other car, who was charged with the offense, the family only received reimbursement for medical expenses Jan. 18.

The defense charged that the family resented Wion for the accident and because the father lost his job because of his injuries. Wion also testified the girls often called him "Daddy," and that their father resented him for that.

"If we're looking for a motive (for lying under oath), my motive is revenge," Downing said during closing arguments. "I think they (the parents) were mad about the accident and I think they blame Barry and I think they resented him because he got the money before they did."

Morgan asked the defendant if he was saying that the children were lying under oath.

"I'm just saying they were coached to come in and say what they did."

"Isn't it true, Mr. Wion, that you prefer younger girls?" Morgan asked.

"No."

"Isn't it true, Mr. Wion, that you have a tremendous urge for oral sex with little girls?"

"No. I don't have a tremendous urge for anything."

After the jury returned the verdict of guilty, Wion confessed to the offenses and asked the court to grant him probation.

The defendant has prior misdemeanor convictions in California for possession of marijuana, public intoxication, traffic violations and receiving a stolen pistol, according to testimony.

Whether the sentences will be served concurrently or stacked is left up to the discretion of 142nd State District Court Judge Pat Baskin, who said he will make a decision Monday.

Downing, who said he was "very shocked" at the jury's severe punishment, said he felt Wion, when confessing to the crimes, was actually agreeing with what he thought was the jury's verdict and not his actual crimes.

"Barry's not a very articulate person," Downing said. "My understanding of it is he thought, 'The jury said I did it, then I did it.'"

Downing said he had not yet discussed the possibility of an appeal with Wion. "I really felt I didn't need to," he said. "If I'd discussed an appeal before he was found guilty, it'd almost look like an admission of guilt."

Midland man arrested in Arizona after high-speed chase

From Staff Reports

MESA, Ariz. — A high-speed chase ended in the arrest of a Midland man Friday on charges of felony theft, attempted kidnapping, armed robbery and felony flight, police reported.

Mesa Police Lt. Linn Brown said Claude Banks Tillman, 30, of Midland was being held in Mesa City Jail Friday on $65,000 bond for investigation of auto theft, attempted kidnapping, armed robbery and felony flight. He is scheduled to be transferred to Maricopa County Jail in Phoenix today.

The nearly 2-hour, 80- to 100-mile chase through six Phoenix area communities at speeds of up to 85 mph began Thursday night when a man stuck a gun in the back of Robert Eugene Venglik, 31, of Mesa, as Venglik was getting into his truck after leaving work at a Mesa health spa, Brown said.

Brown said the gunman ordered Venglik to slide over to the passenger's side, but Venglik then jumped out and ran to call police as the gunman got in on the driver's side.

He noted that he was making the announcement on the same day and in the same church that John XXIII in 1959 announced the Second Vatican Council.

In Washington, William Ryan, spokesman for the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said "Everybody here was caught completely by surprise."

He noted that the president of the conference, Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, and the general secretary, Monsignor Daniel Hoyer, were completing a visit to Cuba and said no formal statement has been prepared.

The Rev. Avery Dulles of Catholic University in Washington, a participant in Vatican II, said there have been radical and conservative views among Catholics about the council and the pope "probably wants to clear the air."

Clarification

The caption accompanying a photo of the Lancaster House which appeared in the Jan. 22 edition of the Reporter-Telegram indicated no adaptive reuse was found for the house.

It should have read: "In the view of the museum board, no acceptable adaptive reuse was found."

Cold drives homeless from urban shadows to shelters

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The fierce winter cold that flashed out of the arctic into the cities of Europe and North America this month flushed the homeless from the doorways and alleys, the park benches and sidewalk grates where they bundle in worn blankets, cardboard and newspapers.

From Paris to Nashville, from Rome to Philadelphia, from Brussels to Chicago, from Madrid to New York, they emerged from the urban shadows to seek shelter.

By President Reagan's Inauguration Day, thousands were settled in emergency shelters in New York, Chicago and other major cities. The mayor of Philadelphia ordered the police to sweep the streets and alleys of the City of Brotherly Love and bring in the homeless, whether they wanted help or not.

In Chicago there were an estimated 10,000 homeless youths on the streets, some as young as seven, and perhaps 25,000 homeless adults. As the wind chill off Lake Michigan dropped to 80 below zero, there were less than 2,000 available shelter beds.

In Nashville, Tenn., where the temperature dropped to an all-time record of 17 below on Monday, rescue mission patrols and the police found the homeless huddled in parked cars and buses or numb with cold, walking the streets.

The surge of arctic air dropped temperatures to record lows throughout the Midwest, the East and deep into the South. On Monday it was 8 below zero in Water Valley, Miss., and it was cold enough in New York City to freeze a glass of water in half an hour. The wind chill was 35 below zero in Atlanta.

One Midwestern meteorologist said it was probably "one of the major cold snaps of the century."

In Europe this month, temperatures sank to 12 degrees in Rome, 9 degrees in Florence and 21 degrees in London, 10 degrees in Zurich and 4 below in Geneva and Paris. There was snow in Rome and 8 inches of downy white covered the beaches and palm trees of the Riviera.

The homeless were sleeping in the subways of Paris, Brussels and Vienna. In Washington, D.C., where the cold forced Reagan's second inaugural inside the Capitol, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler took a walk in the winter wind and promptly sent a truckload of 300 blankets to a Washington shelter where 800 homeless people had sought relief from the bitter winds. The wind chill was 16 below zero in Washington on Monday.

In Nashville, the Rev. Carl

Resner, director of the Union Rescue Mission, which was mounting nightly patrols, said, "I believe we've saved some people from freezing to death and frostbite."

"There were some of the street people who would have frozen to death, I'm sure," said Salvation Army Maj. Ted Arrowood in Memphis, Tenn. "We've been swamped. In a time like this, we drop all the rules and regulations and take in as many as we can."

In Omaha, Neb., "they're filling the floor space," said one shelter director.

In Massachusetts, the same winds that blew skiers off the slopes of the Berkshires on Sunday filled Boston shelters to overflowing. "We have about 200 people sleeping on the floor," said one shelter official. The 350-bed facility was drawing over 600.

New York City was housing some 20,000 homeless people a night.

The urgency in Europe was the same.

In Brussels, the Red Cross said, "We have never seen such a crisis. Our 19 centers are open day and night and they are always full. Also we have some 60 beds in a heated downtown subway station."

In Austria there were 23 dead by last Friday, most of them men who had been drinking and froze to death on the icy roads.

Most of the homeless in Vienna found shelter in subways and asylums. Among them, the not quite homeless. A relief agency said some 11,000 households had been cut off from electricity and gas for non-payment of bills.

In France, a news agency counted 160 cold wave deaths. In and around Paris youth hostels, railroad facilities and other shelters were opened to the homeless, providing space for almost 9,000. The Luxembourg and Nation stations of the Paris subway system were ordered to remain heated and open all night.

Gramm gives up on budget panel

HOUSTON (AP) — Newly installed U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm said Friday he has given up hope of gaining a seat on the Senate Budget Committee and instead will concentrate on landing a spot on two of five other major legislative panels.

"At this point it's very doubtful I will get on the Budget Committee in the Senate," he said at ceremonies dedicating the opening of his new Houston office. "In the Senate, everything is done by seniority. And in the Senate my seniority is 52nd out of 53."

Gramm, who served on the House Budget Committee and was instrumental in the Reagan tax cut, had expressed hope that he would be able to move to the same panel in the Senate.

"The reality is that there's one seat on the Budget Committee that is open and five senior members say they are going to ask for it," Gramm said.

Instead, the College Station Republican is hoping to be assigned to two panels from among Armed Services, Energy, Banking, Housing and Commerce.

The Agriculture Committee also was a possibility, he said.

About 50 supporters crammed into Gramm's new office in the Houston Federal Building, one of five such offices Gramm said he would have around the state.

"This office is how I'd like to see the government — small and economical but sufficient to do the job," he laughed.

The office, formerly used by

Sen. Phil Gramm

John Tower, the retired Republican Gramm is replacing, was repainted and refurbished. Carpeting is maroon and the walls are painted white. The colors are those of Texas A&M University, where Gramm taught before running for Congress.

On other matters, Gramm said he has been meeting with Navy officials, "actively promoting" Texas as a site for the battleship Wisconsin.

More than a half dozen Texas communities are among at least 19 Gulf Coast cities bidding to become the home port for the battleship.

White urges schools to combine resources

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Friday urged state colleges to concentrate precious dollars on their best programs and to combine their resources and energies to create "centers of excellence."

White told the Texas College Coordinating Board:

"Every campus cannot be all things to all people. The hard fact is that it is neither possible nor desirable for all universities to offer programs in all fields. That is an unrealistic goal under the best of circumstances, and is irresponsible under present conditions."

The latest revenue estimate is that the Legislature needs over $1 billion just to finance state services at current levels, and the Legislative Budget Board has recommended a 26 percent cut in higher education appropriations to avoid a tax increase.

It was with this in mind that White spoke to the board. He said higher education would "have to absorb its fair share of budgetary reductions" but only in administration and maintenance — not faculty — and he added "we are not going to sacrifice the core of excellence in our colleges and universities on the altar of budgetary expediency."

"Throwing money at a problem has never been the answer; this year it is not even a remote possibility," White said, but he added, "I have no intention of turning my back on higher education. And I do not believe the leadership in the Legislature will either."

The governor said the time has come to "elevate a new concept," that of "centers of excellence." He urged colleges to examine what they are doing and to "intensify and sharpen those programs that are of the highest quality."

He also urged the board to promote, and colleges to undertake, even greater cooperation among institutions. "Spreading our educational dollars thinly across the state does not serve the public interest. It only guarantees that we have many watered-down, malnourished programs."

White, a Baylor graduate, recalled how the University of Texas and Texas A&M University had helped to bring MCC (Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp.), a consortium of high-tech industries, to Texas, and digressed from his prepared speech with this personal story:

"I'll never forget Don Walker (former UT chancellor), in an effort to bring about that cohesive effort, was talking about bringing SMU because of their engineering school and Rice because of its strong science and engineering programs into this consortium with the University of Texas and A&M, and then finally looked at me across the room and said, 'Yes, and even Baylor, we need Baylor in this.'"

"I said, 'Come on Walker, don't be doing this to me. You know Baylor doesn't have a strong engineering department — that's not their business up there. What do you expect Baylor to do in this? And he said, 'Oh, you can pray for us.'"

After laughter from board members had subsided, White added, "I think that's really what go this whole thing done. We may need Baylor some more the next few months, let me assure you."

A&M announces Space Research Center

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University announced Friday to establish a Space Research Center that will undertake special studies with the cooperation of industry and the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The research center was authorized Friday by the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents and officials said the center already is negotiating for five research tasks under the sponsorship of the Johnson Space Center.

The university center will be operated by the Texas Engineering Experiment Station, which is the engineering research agency for the state and is a part of the Texas A&M University System.

"This new cooperative venture with NASA, universities and industry presents an exciting opportunity for TEES, Texas A&M and the State of Texas to contribute to U.S. preeminence and continued leadership in the commercial and scientific exploitation of space," noted Dr. Herbert Richardson, Texas A&M's dean of engineering and TAMUS vice chancellor for engineering.

The Space Research Center will be directed by Oren Nicks, who has been with TEES for five years, working on aeronautical research.

"The reason for this increased research involvement is that commercial applications of space are greatly expanded by the opportunity for man's longtime presence in space. Man will be there as well as his instruments in the laboratory environment," Nicks said.

Nicks said five research projects that are being negotiated with the Johnson Space Center would be funded with about $300,000.

Anthropologist studying village dating from circa 950 A.D.

WICKLIFFE, Ky. (AP) — Kit Wesler, an anthropology professor and archaeologist who directs the study of a prehistoric Indian village here, has some popular misconceptions to contend with these days.

One is the romantic view of his profession presented in the hugely popular movies "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

"People expect me to carry a whip and be a lot more interesting than I am," he said.

Another misconception is about what kind of place it is he runs.

For years it was Ancient Buried City, a combination tourist attraction and museum whose main draw was an unearthed burial ground strewn with about 150 skeletons.

It became the Wickliffe Mounds Research Center last year after the site was donated to Murray State University.

Visitors are still charged admission to look at the skeletons, but Wesler hopes to develop the site into a more serious museum and the center of an anthropology program for the university.

"This will give us probably the best facility for an ongoing field school in the state," he said in a recent interview.

The village, which housed 500 to 1,000 people for about 300 years before being abandoned around the year 1250, is one of the best-preserved examples of mound-building Indian culture in America.

While the school's administrators prepare the required state applications for a new degree program, Wesler is taking stock of just what has been dug from the site since a geographer discovered it 100 years ago.

The mounds were undisturbed until around 1830, Wesler said, when workers putting a highway through the area began digging up a lot of artifacts.

"That got everybody pretty excited," he said.

Particularly excited was Colonel Fain White King, a Paducah lumberman who bought the surrounding land with the idea of developing Ancient Buried City.

Though ignorant of archaeology, King got some training from a University of Alabama team and did what Wesler called "a fairly respectable job" of excavating enough of the site to offer a good tour.

More than 120,000 artifacts were dug from the site before King's death in 1950, but his field notes were lost by the time the site was donated to the university, and many details of the early digs were lost.

"I'm spending as much time reconstructing 1930s archaeology as I am 11th-century Indian life," Wesler said.

What he has found in the past year indicates that about 90 percent of the site is untouched. A group of Murray State students began a dig at the mounds last summer, and Wesler said excavation work will continue as at least an annual summer project.

One of the questions researchers hope to answer is why there were no mound builders in the area when the European settlers arrived. All of their settlements were apparently deserted around the same time for reasons no one knows.

Wesler said one theory is that a huge earthquake along the New Madrid fault terrified the mound builders into leaving the area.

Another is that disease decimated the population and forced the more nomadic Indian cultures found later by the Europeans.

The earlier Indians, known as the Mississippians, had a more sophisticated culture like that of the Central American tribes. They built large walled cities housing thousands of people and carried on trade from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

One of the priorities of the site's new operators, Wesler said, is remodeling the exhibits to give visitors a glimpse of that lost civilization.

"Most people don't realize the Indians ever had this kind of society," he said. "They think in terms of the stereotypical Plains Indian on his horse chasing buffalo. This was a very different group of people."

Engineer sues for allegedly being overcharged 34 cents for doughnuts

BRIGHTON, N.Y. (AP) — Dollars to doughnuts, it's the smallest case Brighton Town Justice John J. Ark will ever have to hear.

An engineer with a taste for raspberry-filled doughnuts sued the manager of a Dunkin' Donuts franchise in suburban Rochester, claiming he was overcharged 34 cents last month for a dozen and a half assorted doughnuts.

Brian Dodds, 38, has already spent

$6.10 to prosecute the 34-cent case against James Ehmann, but he says it's the principle of the whole thing: "I just felt it was unfair."

Ark heard 27 minutes of arguments in the case one night earlier this week and announced that he would reserve his decision for later. "I've never seen (a case) that small," he said beforehand.

When Dodds ordered his dozen and a half doughnuts Dec. 13, he said, he expected to pay exactly 1 1/4 times the price for a dozen. Instead, he had to pay the price for a dozen plus the price for a half-dozen, which cost him an extra 34 cents.

Small mall holds owner's big dreams

By MITCHELL ZUCKOFF
Associated Press Writer

EXETER, R.I. (AP) — Two battered gas-pump sentries stand guard outside a tiny wooden building. A solitary soda machine leans against the structure near a shaky bench and an American flag.

An easy place to miss — if not for the sign.

"Welcome to the Exeter Mall," it boasts in a sunburst of yellow and blue.

Come one, come all. Step right up to a purely American curiosity.

On the edge of 200 acres going brown in the nation's smallest state is what its owner claims is the nation's smallest shopping mall.

By now, most people are familiar with malls: giant conglomerations of stores serving kids to kittens, selling everything from shoes to shingles.

The Exeter Mall is something quite different.

"There's not too many stores like this left," 41-year-old "mall" owner Costas Papadopoulos said proudly. "I call it a mall because here you can find anything you want. You want cat food? I got. Work shoes? Diesel fuel? Anything you want."

Papadopoulos, a large balding man with a Greek accent, is close to the truth. He's got almost everything.

A stack of puzzles and games teeters next to a shelf of mustard, relish and apple sauce bottles. "Home-style" cookies share a spot with dog food, and work boots hang above cereal boxes. Wiffle-ball bats stand in a rack below post cards singing the praises of the Ocean State.

"People are always surprised at all I've got here," Papadopoulos said as he let fly with a booming laugh.

To get an idea just how small the store is, consider this: the Exeter Mall takes up about 1,700 square feet, including an old trailer Papadopoulos attached to the main building after he bought it in 1981.

The Danbury Fair Mall in Connecticut, which when complete will be New England's largest, covers 1.2 million square feet.

More than 700 Exeter Malls would fit into the one Danbury Fair Mall. That's a small mall.

Because of its size, or lack thereof, tourists who travel Route 2 through southeastern Rhode Island and pass the mall on their way to the beach are "always taking pictures of the sign to show their friends. They know they won't believe it."

But that won't always be the case. Papadopoulos has big dreams and an ambitious plan.

Someday, he and his wife, Pota, hope their 28-month-old son, John, will be the well-to-do owner of a major shopping center here.

Woman sells sweet smells successfully

By LOIS BREEDLOVE

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — The smells of Joan Gilbert's business welcome visitors at the door. Gold brocade fabric is spread out over the breakfast bar. Boxes of dried herbs and flowers cover a table. On the walls, on the mantle, in every corner are examples of what Mrs. Gilbert makes with potpourri.

The making of potpourri goes back to the Middle Ages, Mrs. Gilbert says. Recipes for some of her favorite combinations come from medieval times, others from the Elizabethan period. Other recipes are her own.

"I've become a little unorthodox," she said. "I like for it to be colorful." Some of the recipes combine 20 ingredients all designed to blend for their smell and to make the smell last.

Mrs. Gilbert, 55, got involved with potpourri when she started drying flowers. Her hobby grew into a full-time business that she calls Elegancees.

"It's my life," she said simply. "I spend sometimes 12 hours a day."

Using the potpourri, she creates the cachets that are usually associated with potpourri. But she also decorates straw hats with the dried flowers and herbs. Or wreaths made of grapevine woven into shapes and then decorated with the dried materials. Or baskets, lined with heirloom material, and scented with rose petals. Or decorations for Christmas that are not only pretty but fill the house with perfume.

Most of the work she does is custom designed for someone. "I don't want it to become like an assembly line," she said. "That's what makes it fun being in your own business, you can accommodate people."

Mrs. Gilbert moved to Grand Prairie from New York City while working for the telephone company. A year ago she took early retirement and began working full-time on Elegancees.

"The American crafts are a part of our history," Mrs. Gilbert said, noting that many women are getting back into crafts again. "It inspires me that the pioneer women would take these flowers in the summer to have charm and beauty during the winters."

"I love it so much; it has so much history," she said.

Mrs. Gilbert makes and sells her work in her home. She also has work for sale in several shops in the area. Some of her work has been used in "Good Housekeeping" magazine for craft ideas. She offers lectures and seminars in making and using potpourri to women's and garden clubs. A middle school art class asked her to talk about her craft.

And as she runs her fingers through the dried herbs, she talks about more projects — writing a book, recreating the old-fashioned still rooms where potpourri was made in the Middle Ages, finding new uses of potpourri.

"You get ideas from everything," she said. "Then you make it yourself; you do your own thing. You put your own creativity into it, and it is so rewarding."

Man creates laid-back town in Florida Keys

LAYTON, Fla. (AP) — Back in 1963, when Del Layton agreed to incorporate the land he owned here to create the third city in the Florida Keys, he recalls he did so with one proviso: "I wanted no city taxes and no speed traps."

More than two decades have passed and much about this city remains unchanged. There are still no local taxes, the job of Layton's one-man police department has been vacant for some time and Layton, now 77, remains the city's first and only mayor.

There are few among the estimated 350 residents who would dispute this 80-acre community is "Layton's town" and, over the years, there has been little effort to change that.

That's easily explained. People who come here to live are usually longtime friends, fishing buddies or those whom Layton approves. There are other similarities that bind the community together. Most are members of the Layton Community Baptist Church and enjoy the laid-back atmosphere the city offers.

Layton and his wife, Mary, came here from Miami in 1947 and set up "Layton's Long Key Fishing Camp," using surplus Army buildings he shipped from Camp Blanding in North Florida.

There were no permanent residents living on the island at the time. Layton had sold his Miami grocery business and property he owned there to invest in what he calls his dream — a piece of Long Key covered with red mangroves, sea grapes and coconut palms.

"From my earliest moments, I wanted to have a place where I could gather people around me that I liked and that I felt comfortable with," he explains.

There's little commercial activity here — a bait and tackle shop, a motel, a restaurant, a coffee shop, a convenience store, two service stations and one marina. Most were built by the McAlester, Okla., native, who also established the city's post office in 1962 and was its first postmaster.

Ella Verrier has operated the motel for a number of years.

"This is a place to cogitate," she says. "There's no better place to sit under a palm tree and read a book."

Layton doesn't attract much attention as one drives through the city on U.S. 1.

Goetz not indicted for attempted murder

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury on Friday refused to indict Bernhard Goetz for attempted murder in the shootings of four young men on a subway, and instead indicted him only on three counts of criminal possession of a weapon.

Goetz

"What the grand jury decided here was that he was illegally carrying a pistol but he was justified in protecting himself from a robbery," said Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, in announcing the indictment.

Goetz's lawyer, Joseph Keiner, called the action a vindication, and said Goetz was "very pleased." It increases his sense of confidence and respect for our system of law and justice.

Goetz, 37, who remains free on $50,000 bail, was not available for comment. Arraignment was scheduled for Feb. 6.

The indictment by the 23-member grand jury was the latest twist in a case that has drawn national attention since Dec. 22, when the four youths asked Goetz to give them $5 and he reeled off five shots instead.

Morgenthau said he hoped the public would "read that in this case, the grand jury found justification. I hope they won't read anything else into it. I also hope that they notice he was indicted for a felony and faces up to seven years in prison."

The most serious charge on which Goetz was indicted carries a maximum term of seven years in prison.

Goetz had been charged by the district attorney's office with attempted murder, but no case can be brought to trial in New York unless a grand jury indicts.

Public officials decried the shootings, but were careful not to criticize Goetz until the courts acted.

Mayor Edward Koch said Friday he had awaited the grand jury action to decide whether Goetz had been a "victim or a villain, depending on whether he exercised self-defense or went beyond self-defense and exercised revenge."

"The grand jury has found, in effect, that he exercised self-defense."

But an attorney for Shirley Cabey, the mother of a youth paralyzed in the shooting, said she was "in shock" over the indictment.

"She said that what the government is now telling people is that it is all right to go out and pick up guns and shoot black people," said the attorney, Ronald Kuby.

Keiner said after the jury action, "This constitutes a vindication of the various acts that composed the shooting."

"This case or any case cannot be deemed as a barometer or a signal or an indication that people should ever take the law into their own hands. We insist that Mr. Goetz did not take the law into his own hands. He did what was reasonable and justifiable under all the circumstances in the case," said Keiner.

The jury indicted Goetz on one count of third-degree criminal possession of a weapon — illegally having a loaded pistol during the shooting incident.

He also was indicted on two counts of fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon.

Third-degree weapons possession carries a maximum seven-year sentence, and fourth-degree carries a maximum one-year term.

The incident occurred as an IRT train approached the Chambers Street station in Lower Manhattan. Four Bronx youths allegedly accosted Goetz and asked for $5; he then reached into his coat and pulled out a .38-caliber revolver, according to police accounts.

The four men shot by the gunman were identified as Barry Allen, 19; James Ramseur, 18; Troy Canty, 19; and Daryl Cabey, 19. Cabey was the most seriously injured. Shot in the chest, he was paralyzed from the waist down.

Crash victims' bodies to be shipped home

RENO, Nev. (AP) — This usually nonstop gambling city paused to observe a day of mourning Friday as the names of 87 of the 88 tourists killed in a charter airplane crash were released.

Sixteen caskets of victims from Galaxy Airlines Flight 203 were being readied for shipment back to Minnesota late Friday, with five more to be shipped early today and more to follow today and Sunday, said Coroner Vern McCarty.

He said the identity of the final victim would be released today, after a final set of fingerprints had been received.

Across town from the temporary morgue at the county fairgrounds, federal investigators removed the charred engines of the Galaxy Airlines turboprop Electra to an airport hangar to search for clues to the disaster.

That prompted the airline to announce it was grounding its three remaining Electras for inspection. Its other planes fly only cargo and one is out of service for maintenance.

Flight 203, carrying a chartered party of vacationers from Minnesota, plowed into the ground Monday near Reno's airport shortly after takeoff on its way home. Just three of the 71 people on board survived.

Mayor Pete Sferazza declared Friday a day of mourning in the city and told a memorial service attended by hundreds, "Throughout our community we hear expressions of disbelief and concern."

"To have a tragedy like this causes one to consider the temporariness of life," he said. "And yet to see the community rally to offer support and services, makes one consider the quality of life."

Sferazza said he wants a memorial erected at the crash site, 2 1/2 miles south of the Reno airport and on the edge of U.S. 395.

Galaxy Airlines releases names of crash victims

Major Kenneth Angel, commander of the Salvation Army, said the service showed a unity in a community that is accustomed to offering high times to visitors, not solace.

"These kinds of things always happen someplace else," he said.

Meanwhile, Galaxy Airlines president Phillip Sheridan, announcing the grounding of his airline's other problem-plagued Electras, said the doomed craft had been properly maintained despite reports of smoke and fluid leaks in days before Monday's crash.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators were examining the wreck and continuing to interview witnesses, some of whom have said the plane never appeared to get higher than 200 feet before it shuddered and dropped.

The only person on the plane to walk away from the crash was allowed outdoors for the first time Friday, to meet briefly with reporters.

George Lamson Jr., 17, of St. Paul, Minn., said he was looking forward to leaving the hospital and getting back home to his friends.

"I miss them a lot. I'll be glad to be back," he said.

Lamson, who received a head gash and minor hand burns, said he probably would remain in the Reno area with his mother for about one month until his father, who was injured seriously in the crash, is able to leave.

George Lamson Sr., 42, remained in critical but stable condition with multiple injuries at St. Mary's Hospital. He still cannot open his eyes, his son said, but "They told him I was alive and he began moving his arm up and down. He's responding," he said.

The third survivor, Bob Miggins of Plymouth, Minn., had burns over 90 percent of his body and was in critical condition at Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital in Las Vegas.

Weapons protesters acquitted of trespassing

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Twenty weapons protesters have been acquitted in two separate cases of trespassing at Honeywell Inc.'s headquarters.

Six women were acquitted Thursday in a jury trial of trespassing charges stemming from a May 16 protest at Honeywell, a major defense contractor.

Wednesday, Municipal Judge Kevin Burke acquitted 14 others charged with trespass during a vigil at Honeywell Plaza on Dec. 28, 1983.

Honeywell has been a frequent target of demonstrators objecting to the company's manufacturing of nuclear arms components.

New York teens warned against 'One Dumb Move'

By DAVID EGNER
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York state has entered the music video business with a rap tune called "One Dumb Move," to warn teen-agers: "Do not fall under the spell of smoke, drugs or alcohol."

The star of the one-minute video is Gary Byrd, the self-styled "Professor of the Rap." A former Buffalo disc jockey, Byrd uses fast talk, fast moves, and music with a heavy beat to chant his message on "One Dumb Move."

"Alcohol may cause you no alarm, until you wake up and find that you are harmed," Byrd raps.

"You may laugh and think cigarettes are a joke, but is it worth bad breath and health to smoke?"

"And when you check out the score in drug abuse, what you find is a game you can only lose."

The refrain of the song is: "One dumb move, can blow your groove!"

Byrd said at a news conference earlier this week that he tried in the song to combine education and entertainment to create "edutainment."

The survey and production of the records and the music video have cost the state $80,000.

"One Dumb Move" is patterned after typical music video programming, and TV stations around the state have agreed to broadcast the video 2,783 times this year as a public service announcement, said Penny Murphy, director of health education promotion for the Health Department.

Radio stations will also play the song, she said.

In addition, the Health Department has released 50,000 "One Dumb Move" records for free distribution and hopes to use the song as the foundation of a proposed 45-minute program for presentation in schools, Ms. Murphy said.

The whole production was triggered by a Health Department scientific survey of 1,214 New York teen-agers who are considered to be a representative sample of the state's 2.15 million teen-agers. The survey found that:

— 65 percent have tried illegal drugs and 19 percent use drugs at least once a week.

— 36 percent drink alcohol at least once a week and 21 percent have five or more drinks at a time.

— 21 percent of girls and 18 percent of boys smoke.

The statistics are "mind-boggling," said Matilda Cuomo, wife of Gov. Mario Cuomo and the honorary chairwoman of the state Council on Children and Families.

Police don't know where couples are

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Nearly two months after four Americans were last seen in a Guadalajara neighborhood, police have no substantial clues in the case.

"To the best of our knowledge, there are no new leads or theories that the police are pursuing," Alan Rogers, a U.S. consulate spokesman said in a phone interview Friday.

"We have no clues and we just have no idea" what happened to them, Rogers added.

Norman Carlson of Vacaville, Calif. — the father of one of the missing persons — recently offered a $5,000 reward for any information on the couples' whereabouts, but according to Rogers, "There have been no takers."

Dennis and Rose Carlson of Redding, Calif., and Benjamin and Patricia Mascarenas of Ely, Nev., were last known to be selling Bibles in an affluent neighborhood of Guadalajara on Sunday morning, Dec. 2.

Both couples — who are all in their late 20s or 30s — are Jehovah's Witnesses and were proselytizing when they were approached, according to the Mexican Foreign Ministry.

Newspapers here have linked the couples' religion with their disappearance, but police investigators say they have no evidence of any connection.

Norman Carlson said in a formal complaint filed with the Attorney General's Office here that the couples were tourists and were not in Mexico to proselytize.

The Mascarenas couple had lived for more than a year in Guadalajara — Mexico's second largest city, located 330 miles northwest of Mexico City — but the Carlsons arrived here just three days before they disappeared.

Witnesses told police several cars drove up, and people escorted the two women and two men into separate cars. No violence was reported.

The Foreign Ministry issued a statement last month saying an investigation showed the apparent captors were "more than 60 years old and Anglo-Saxon in appearance," and "conversed in English."

But one witness, Ramon Cerda, told police he heard one of six or seven men who drove up shout something like "There they are," in Spanish. The men then forcibly escorted the two men into a car, according to Cerda.

According to Rogers, another witness who saw the women being escorted into a car thought the alleged captors might have been speaking English.

Because there apparently was no violence and there has been no ransom note, officials are carefully calling the case a disappearance and not a kidnapping.

Iran denies oil, arms deliveries to Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Iran's prime minister denied Friday that his government is arranging new oil supplies for Nicaragua or delivering arms to the leftist Sandinista government, as the Reagan administration believes.

"I am very astonished to hear about arms deliveries," Mir Hussein Musavi said at a news conference. "There is nothing like that here."

He added that "Nicaragua does not need our arms. It is armed with its determination and its faith."

Musavi spoke with reporters at Managua's airport as he ended a two-day visit to Nicaragua that President Reagan said Thursday was posing "a new danger" to Central America.

In Washington earlier Friday, Robert Simms, a deputy White House press secretary, said the Reagan administration believed Iran was "in the process of arranging support in the form of oil supplies and funding for armaments which would add to the Nicaraguan arsenal."

Asked about oil shipments to Nicaragua, Musavi said: "In previous years, Nicaragua was purchasing oil from the Islamic Republic of Iran like other countries. This year there were no talks on new purchases in this regard."

Musavi said it wasn't unusual for Reagan "to try to present lovers of liberty as terrorists" while his own administration was "responsible for worldwide terrorism."

He added that his talks with Nicaragua's president, Daniel Ortega, included discussions of problems in Central America and "the worldwide situation."

"We have much in common," he told reporters.

Musavi said Iran also had agreed to buy some beef and sugar from Nicaragua, but did not give the amount.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported Friday that Musavi had wished the Sandinistas success in its fight against U.S.-backed rebels and said Iran "will always be by the side of Nicaragua."

During his stay in the Nicaraguan capital, Managua, Musavi conferred with Juli Ramos, described by IRNA as "Nicaragua's brigade commander and a member of the Sandinista army."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Physicists to be honored

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — An American and a French scientist will share a $100,000 prize for their physics research, the Israeli-based Wolf Fund said Friday.

Winners of the 1984-85 prize are Coyner Herring of Stanford University in Stanford, Calif., and Philippe Nozieres of the University of Grenoble in France. The prize, established by the late diplomat and philanthropist Ricardo Wolf, will be awarded in May at the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

The foundation praised Herring and Nozieres for their contributions to the physical theory of solids, especially the behavior of electrons in metals.

Assad nominated again

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The 21-member regional command of the governing Baath Party, Syria's most important policy-making body, announced Friday it had nominated President Hafez Assad for a third term.

Assad, 54, who took control of Syria in a bloodless coup in 1970, was re-elected secretary-general of the party at a recent meeting of the Baath Party Congress. His current seven-year term ends March 13, and his renomination had been expected.

The regional command said the recommendation had been sent to the Syrian Parliament, which will hold a special session Sunday to discuss the nomination. If Parliament approves, Assad's name will be submitted to a public referendum before Feb. 13, it said.

Cut-rate flights rejected

LONDON (AP) — Britain's Civil Aviation Authority on Friday rejected an airline company's plan to offer cut-price trans-Atlantic flights from Scotland to the United States and Canada.

The government agency described the plan by Scottish-based Highland Express as "imaginative and innovative," but said its financial arrangements were inadequate.

The decision allows the airline's chairman, Randolph Fields, co-founder of the fledgling trans-Atlantic airline Virgin Atlantic, to seek approval under new financial arrangements.

Train derailed in mudslide

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A passenger train ran into a mudslide Friday about 70 miles southwest of the capital and two cars derailed, the official Tanjug news agency said. At least eight people were killed and 33 were injured, it said.

All of the victims were believed to be Yugoslavs, but the passengers had not all been accounted for, the news agency said.

Hoyas risk 29-game streak

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The only people not getting excited about top-ranked Georgetown's Big East basketball showdown with No. 3 St. John's may be the Hoyas themselves.

Georgetown's 29-game winning streak, the nation's best, would be 40 had the Redmen not beaten them at the Capital Center last February.

"It's just another ball game," said point guard Michael Jackson. "All our conference games are big ones, and we really don't put any special importance on any of them."

Georgetown, 18-0 overall and 7-0 in the Big East while St. John's is 14-1 and 6-0. The Redmen also are on a nine-game winning streak, the last an 82-80 overtime victory over Syracuse at Madison Square Garden.

Georgetown has leveled off somewhat in recent games, allowing Connecticut to stay close before the Hoyas finally pulled away to win 79-66. Bill Martin and Reggie Williams picked up the slack against Connecticut while the Huskies held Patrick Ewing to just three field goals in five attempts and forced five turnovers by the All-American center.

"I don't feel that we're unbeatable," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "The league is a continuation of concentration and pressure. Those teams that are able to sustain a certain level of concentration are those teams that are going to be there in the end. If you do get stung one time, you've got to recover from it."

Generals hook Flutie

BOSTON (AP) — Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Doug Flutie of Boston College has agreed to a long-term contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League.

It could make him the highest paid player in pro football and the highest paid rookie in any sport.

"I'm just very excited about the opportunity and a little relieved this is out of the way now and I can get to work," Flutie, major-league football's career passing and total offense leader, told The Associated Press on Friday at the office of his attorney, Bob Woolf.

"It was a relatively easy decision," he said. "All along in the back of my mind I've been very confident about this working out ... I guess I made the decision yesterday (Thursday)."

Details of Flutie's contract were not released, but it was believed to be worth at least $7 million over at least five years.

The 5-foot-9½ quarterback, whose exploits thrilled the nation during the 1984 season, said he had "no regrets at all" about bypassing the more established National Football League in favor of the 3-year-old USFL. "I'm excited. It's going to be a new challenge for me going to the USFL."

Woolf said earlier Friday that he and Flutie reached a verbal agreement with Generals' owner Donald Trump and the club's president, Jay Seltzer, on Thursday afternoon. The attorney said Flutie will officially sign his contract next Tuesday or Wednesday and report to the Generals' training camp in Orlando, Fla., immediately thereafter.

"It'll set me back," Flutie said of the delay in reporting to the Generals, who have been in camp since last week, "but I just finished one season. It's going to feel good being with a good organization ... opportunities are really boundless in New York."

The Generals play their home games at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., just a few miles from New York.

Woolf said the agreement "is very acceptable. There were improvements made" in the offer initially presented by the Generals earlier this month.

Bobcats hold off Lee

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The San Angelo Bobcats used deadly free throw shooting in the fourth quarter to hold off a furious Midland Lee charge Friday night to take a 60-58 victory at Chaparral Center. The outcome tossed District 4-5A into a three-way tie for first place.

Ottoway Perryman, the district's second leading scorer with a 20.4 average, was almost perfect from the line, hitting 9-of-10, to lead the Bobcat foul shooters.

"The Bobcats did a lot of things right tonight," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "They hit the key baskets and free throws down the stretch. San Angelo has improved about 200 percent since we last played."

Rebel postman Brian Marczynski, who led all scorers with 18 points, added, "I can't believe the way they hit their free throws. We kept chipping away at the lead but they kept shooting the free throws."

SAN ANGELO built up a 10-point lead in the fourth quarter after Perryman hit four straight free throws for a 50-40 score. Marczynski countered with a 15-foot jump shot at 5:46 to bring the game back to an eight-point spread.

The Bobcats were able to keep Lee at bay for the next 3:30, leading 55-46 with 2:16 to play but the Rebels weren't going to let them have the victory easily.

Playing an intense man-to-man defense, Lee kept the Bobcats from getting off a shot from the field, forcing them to continue scoring from the line. In all, San Angelo only got off four field goal tries and hit two in the final period.

With 2:00 left on the clock, Raymond Morney hit a 12 footer which was immediately followed by a Marczynski steal and a close-in bucket for a 55-50 score.

Perryman countered with a pair of free throws 10 seconds later.

IN ALL, the Bobcats were 21-of-36 (58 percent) from the field and 18-of-24 (75 percent) from the line. Lee had a little trouble with field goals, hitting 25-of-58 (43 percent) but hit 8-of-11 from the line (73 percent).

"That kind of shooting is hard to beat, 21-of-36. Boy, that's pretty dog-gone good shooting," said Stueckler.

Marczynski looked back to the first half of play when Lee hit only 10-of-27 shots, saying, "If we could have just shot a little better... We came out in the first half a little cold. If we could have kept close at the half, we could have won."

Lee trailed 27-23 at intermission.

REB NOTES: The loss dropped Lee into a three-way tie for 4-5A first place with San Angelo and Abilene High, a 78-72 winner over Odessa Permian. All three teams have 6-2 records.

On Tuesday, Lee has to travel 120 east to take on Abilene Cooper at 8 p.m.

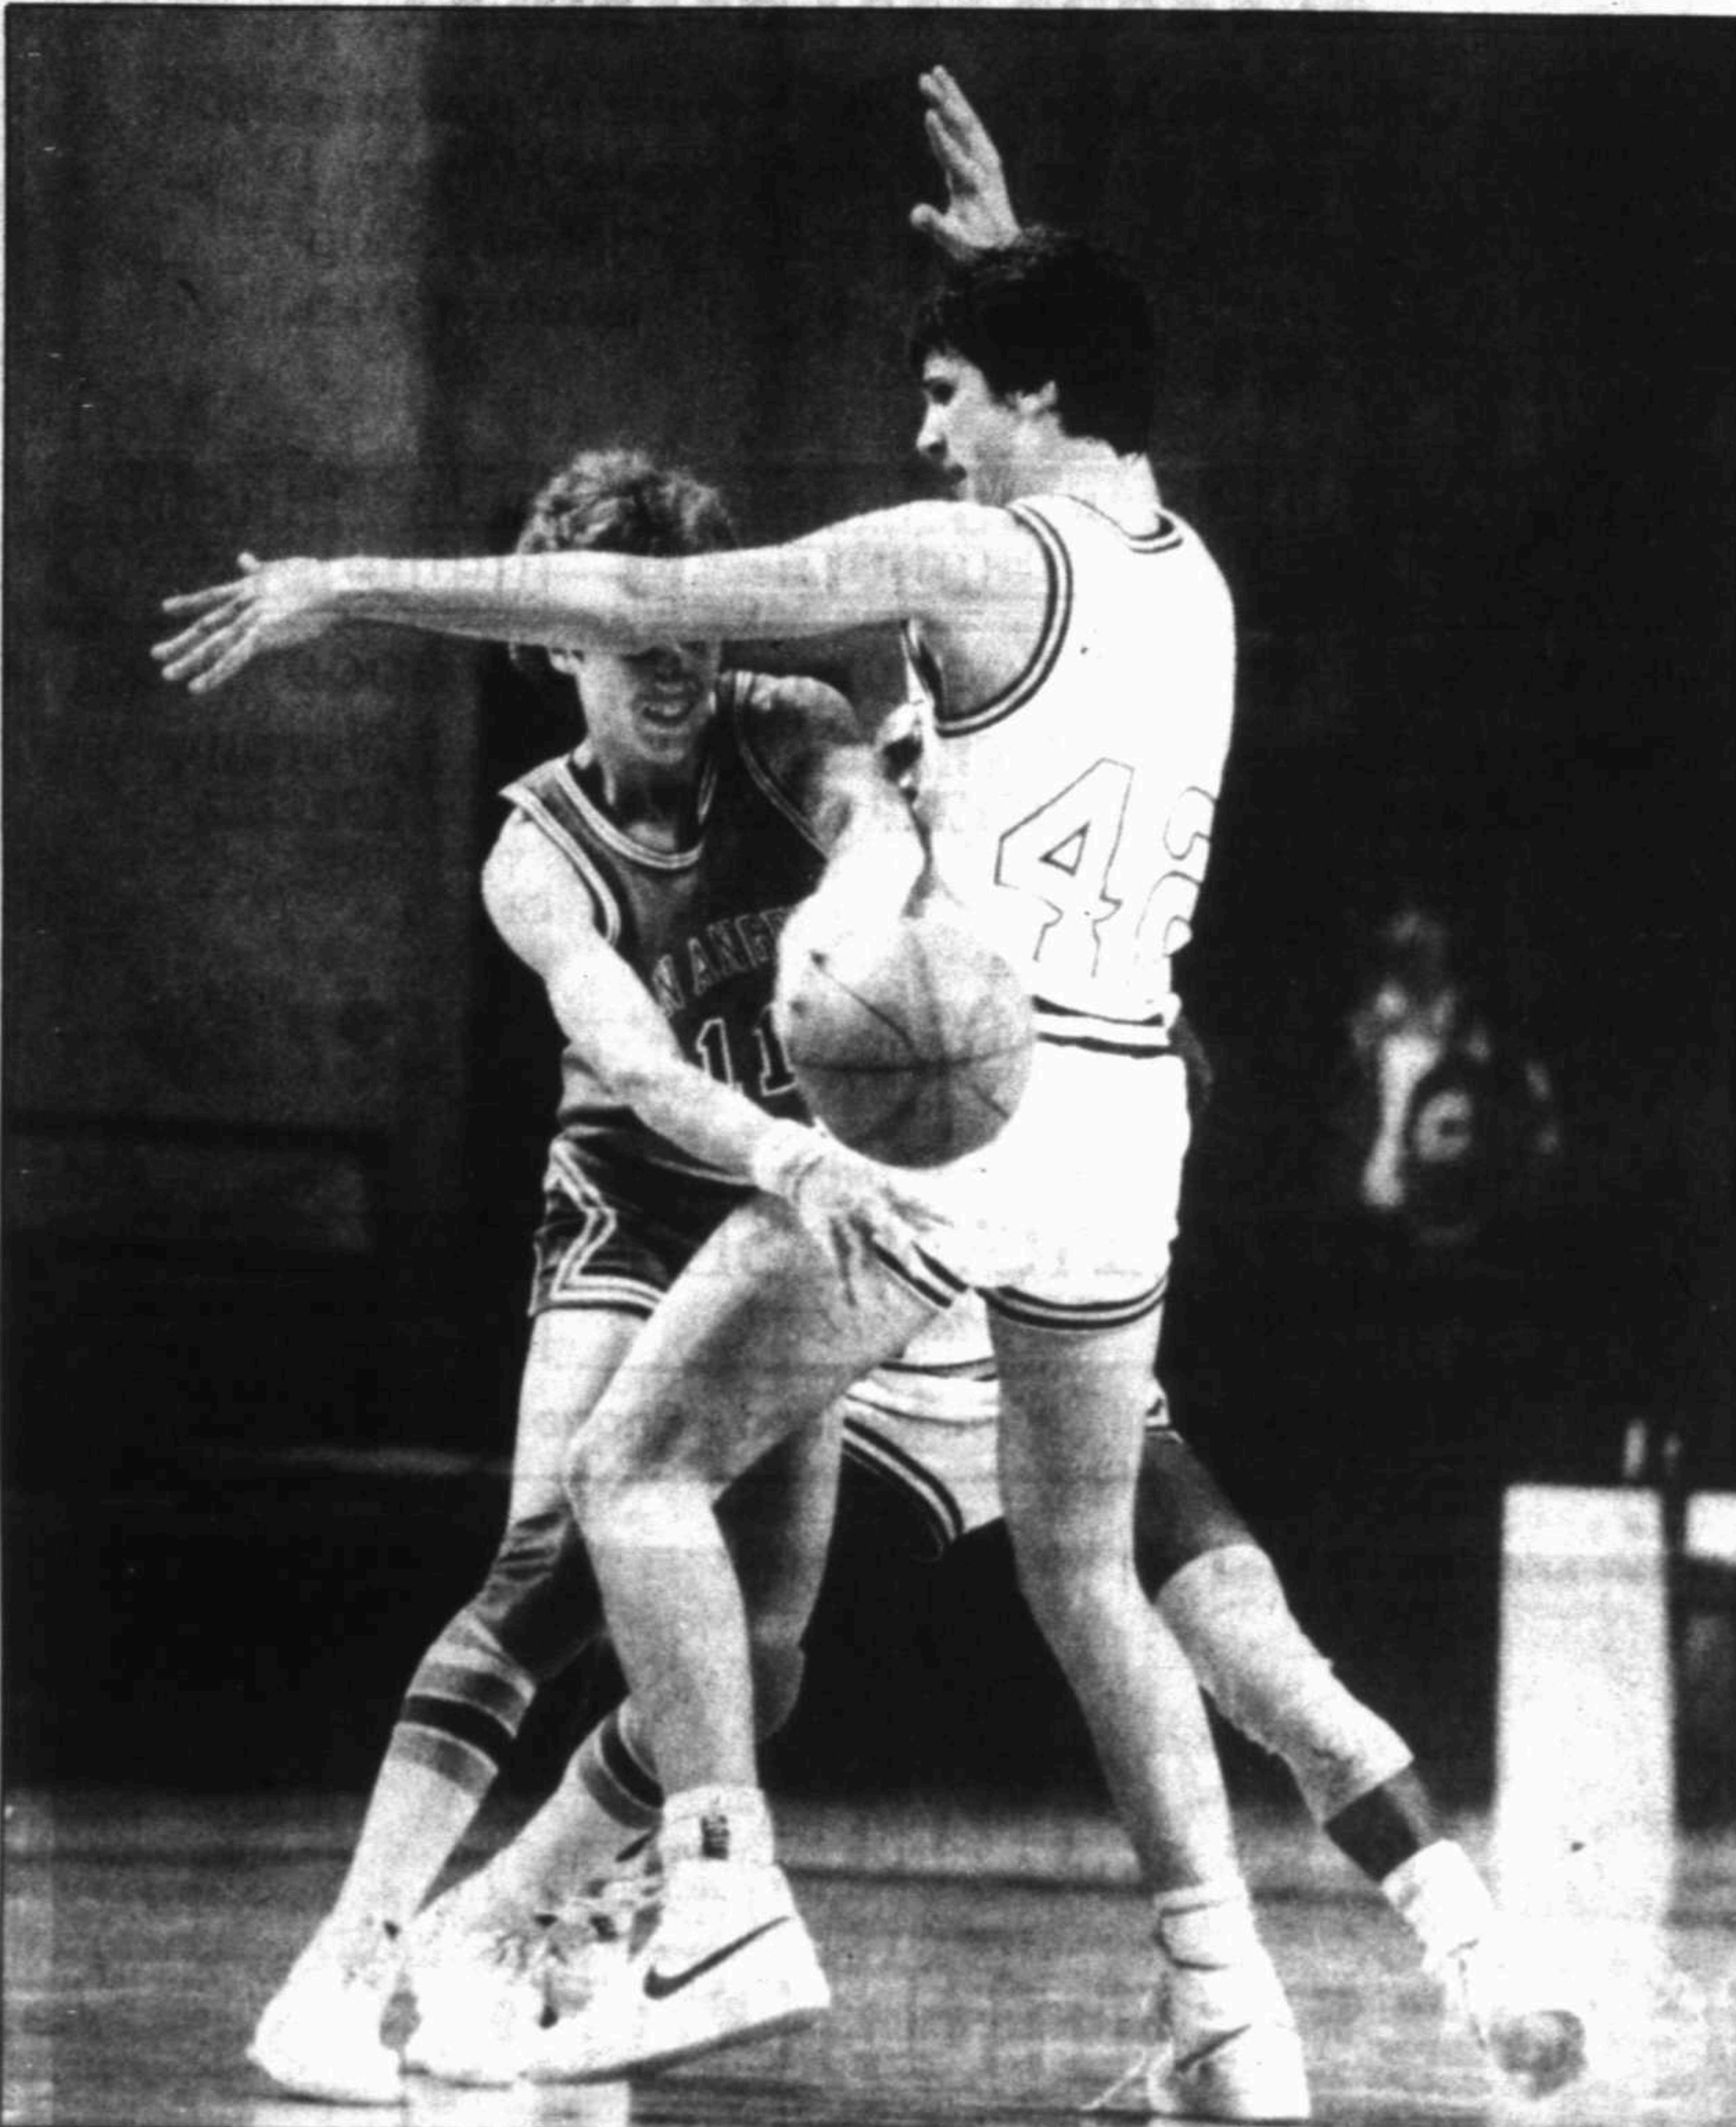

Four Rebels broke into double figures against the Bobcats led by Marczynski with 18, Morney with 13, Westbrook 12 and Dickens 10. San Angelo was paced by Brian Ross' 17, Perryman's 15 and Hulise with 10.

In junior varsity action, Lee posted its 20th victory of the season against four losses, beating San Angelo 61-43. Quintus Hampton paced the Rebs with 11 point while Rodney Smith was high for the Cats with seven.

Rangers sweep Eldorado

Girls boost record to 23-1

From Staff Reports

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood Rangers pulled off a District 8-2A basketball sweep over Eldorado here Friday night as the boys won by a 44-36 margin and the girls by a 38-31 score.

The Rangerettes now own a gaudy 23-1 record and a perfect 6-0 loop mark while the boys climbed to 18-6 and 5-1.

Maria Morgette led the Greenwood girls with 12 points while Deonna Dean had nine and Stephanie Smith eight. Terri Busic added seven points. Eldorado's girls were paced by Julie Stensby with 10.

John Gilliam poured in 16 points and Will Willman 13 to lead the Ranger boys to victory. Ken Wallace added an eight-point night. Eldorado was led by Jay Tuberville's 11 and Victor Gutierrez 10.

The Rangers will host Stanton in girls and boys games Tuesday in Greenwood.

McEnroe, Connors post wins

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe, second-seeded Jimmy Connors and two comparative unknowns advanced to the semifinal round Friday night in the $300,000 U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championship.

McEnroe defeated fifth-seeded Yannick Noah of France 6-2, 6-4. Connors defeated Mel Purcell 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

NEW YORK (AP) — Carl Lewis won the long jump at the 78th Wanamaker Millrose Games Friday night, but the four-time Olympic champion incurred the wrath of the fans just as he did at last summer's Games because he skipped his final two jumps.

While Lewis was winning the long jump for the fourth consecutive time, Eamonn Coghlan captured the Wanamaker Mile for a record-equaling sixth time and Mary Decker wore down the field in romping to victory in the women's mile.

Lewis, winner of Olympic gold medals in the 100-meter dash, 200-meter dash, long jump and 400-meter relay, had irritated the fans at the Los Angeles Games after passing his final four attempts in the long jump.

At that time, he said he did not want to over-exert himself for the

Millrose Games

200 final, which he had to run the same night.

This time, he quit after four tries after suffering an injury to his right groin during his final attempt.

"It's nothing serious," Lewis said. "It's nothing bad. I didn't want to aggravate it. I accomplished what I wanted to do. I'm pleased with my performance."

Lewis said he didn't hear the boos. "I don't hear negative things," he said. "I'm basically an upbeat person."

"I didn't jump later (the last two jumps) because I was pleased with the three (legal jumps) that I had. I had a little soreness in my right groin area, so I listened to my body. I don't over-compete."

Westbrook answered with an 18-footer followed by the final two Per-

Lewis' performance included a foul jump of 27 feet, 8½ inches, a winning effort of 27-10¾, 27-8¾, and the two passes.

His failure to take his last two attempts drew loud boos from the crowd of 18,328 at Madison Square Garden.

Lewis, in his first competition of the season, also admitted to "first-meet jitters."

"I get nervous every competition whether it's the Olympics, or a meet in Europe, or a meet in New York," he said.

Coghlan, "The Chairman of the Boards," showed no signs of jitters in the men's mile.

As is his custom, he started slowly, moved up toward the leaders midway through the 11-laps-to-the-mile race, then burst in front with about 2½ laps remaining.

OC gym outdated already?

The Odessa College Physical Education Complex is only a year old and already it's too small.

The miscalculation came to light Thursday night when Midland College faced Odessa College in that WJAC showdown.

The gym holds 3,500. They squeezed about 3,800 into the place and there's no telling how many more wanted to see the game.

Perhaps we'll find out when the teams meet in the return game at the 5,000-seat Chaparral Center later in the season.

IT ALL DEPENDS on whether the Chaps and Wranglers can retain their lofty perches through the second half of the conference race, which begins after Monday's games. The good part of the second half schedule is that both Midland and Odessa catch Amarillo College, the preseason favorite, at home. Other than that, it's full of ambushes for both teams.

MC and OC both must face Western Texas, New Mexico Military Institute, both legitimate Region V playoff possibilities, on the road, not to mention Howard College.

Howard got off to a slow start, but the Hawks will have a lot to say about which teams reach the playoffs in the second half, whether HC makes or not.

The Chaps barely escaped with a win over Howard and the Wranglers were upset by the Hawks, and that was on a friendly court.

SPEAKING of friendly courts, Midland College fans came home Thursday night feeling as though the Chaps were the entire on the Chuckwagon Gang's menu.

One non-foul in particular produced such an uproar that a stranger might have wondered which was the home team.

Midland's Eddie Frazier was thundering toward the basket pell mell with a dunk looming, one that might have changed the entire complexion of the game.

Suddenly, Frazier was pitching forward face first and the ball went out of bounds. It was ruled no shove or trip and the ball was turned over.

As Coach Jerry Stone said, "If we'd only been able to get the lead, it would have changed the entire strategy of the game. We'd have been able to do some things we weren't able to do when we were behind and they would have had to do some things they didn't want to do as long as they were ahead."

That play was a play that could have turned it around.

It was a game definitely decided at the free throw line. MC got just three all night. OC had so many, it could afford to blow the first shot on eight one-and-one opportunities and get away with it.

Still, the Wranglers are quick and agile, a tough team to contain when they want to run.

While the Chaps didn't win, the fact that they turned things around and were in position to rescue a victory in the second half is a tribute to the team's poise and determination.

Down by 11 at half and with all the whistles seemingly going against them, it would have been easy to chuck it all and say, "wait until we get them over in Midland."

Turner to make payments on superstation telecasts

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner said Friday he has agreed to make annual payments to other major-league teams while continuing to broadcast baseball games across the nation over his cable television "superstation."

Turner said that under a five-year agreement reached with Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, the Braves will pay into baseball's central fund for equal distribution to other major-league clubs. In exchange, the commissioner's office will not try to stop the Braves from sending their cable broadcasts outside the Atlanta area.

Frank Miller, a spokesman for Turner Broadcasting System, declined to say how much the payments would be.

Since succeeding Bowie Kuhn as commissioner last year, Ueberroth had set his sights on ending nationwide superstation broadcasts of baseball games. The Braves, New York Mets, Chicago Cubs and New York Yankees each have games carried via satellite to cable systems across the country.

Ueberroth said such broadcasts were cutting into the profits of baseball teams in other cities, and he called the superstations the most serious problem facing major league baseball.

Under the agreement announced Friday, the commissioner's office will discontinue efforts to repeal the compulsory license provisions of the copyright act that lets cable systems carry the superstation signals.

The commissioners office also will cease efforts to expand current blackout regulations governing such broadcasts.

"This agreement represents practical recognition and acceptance of the reality of the superstation and its ability to promote and benefit major league baseball financially and through increased public interest in the game," Turner said in a statement.

"The commissioner is to be commended for his foresight and statesmanship in developing and implementing a plan to resolve the so-called 'superstation issue' that has divided baseball for several years," Turner said.

Turner's superstation, WTBS, is retransmitted nationally to more than 33 million households by more than 8,000 cable systems.

Swimming resumes today

From Staff Reports

Competition began Friday in the three-day McDonald's City of Midland Swim Team Invitational at the COM pool with the distance races and will resume at 9 a.m. and continue until late afternoon.

The meet will conclude Sunday with a session beginning at 9 a.m.

Some 413 swimmers were on hand Friday and the entry list is expected to swell to close to 450 today, making the Texas Age Group swim the largest meet ever in West Texas.

Competition is being conducted in A, B, C classes and swimmers ranging in age from eight-and-under to 15-18 are competing.

Twenty-two teams are in the field with host COM entering 87 swimmers. Team favorite Tarrant County Aquatic team of Fort Worth has 63 entered while has four teams competing here with a total of 86 swimmers. El Paso Aqua Posse has the largest contingent with 54.

Davis' 22 paces Midland romp

From Staff Reports

The Midland High Bulldogs came up with a four-man shooting attack led by Darrell Davis' 22-point effort, built up an early big lead and then ran their way to a 90-72 victory over the Big Spring Steers in Big Spring Friday.

Midland High had things under control by halftime with a 44-31 lead and only lost three points off the margin in the third quarter, leading 66-56 going into the final frame.

The victory was one desperately needed for the Bulldogs as it improved their record to 4-4 in league play while Big Spring, already eliminated from any possible playoff hopes, fell to 0-8.

Midland High returns home Tuesday night to take on Abilene High at Chaparral Center at 8 p.m.

Along with Davis in double figures, Midland High's Matt Sears matched his best 45A game of the season with 19 points while Anthony Deande added 11.

Bulldog point-guard Roger Henderson easily had his best offensive game of the year, hitting the two figure mark for the first time with 15 points.

The Steers were led by Benard Williams and Collin Carroll with 20 and 18 points respectively.

IN OTHER 45A action Friday, Abilene High joined Midland Lee and San Angelo atop the district standings at 6-2 with a 78-72 victory over Odessa Permian. The Panthers fell to 5-3 in league play and are alone in fourth place, one game better than 4-4 MHS.

The Eagles jumped out to a 20-11 first quarter lead and held a 35-30 advantage at the half. The third quarter was the killer for the Panthers as AHS won the frame 23-14, giving the Eagles plenty of room to absorb Permian's fourth quarter charge.

Mickey Russell had the game's hot hand, scoring 24 points while teammate Kirt Robinson added 18. Permian's Orlando Ontiveros scored 16 followed by Terry Williams with 14, Jimmy Davis with 13 and Danny Servance with 12.

In a game that held very little effect to the leader board, Odessa

High picked up a 55-50 victory over Abilene Cooper to keep the slim Broncho playoff hopes alive. OHS is now 3-5 while Cooper fell to 2-6.

Odessa High jumped out to a 19-16 first quarter lead and increased it in each of the next two periods to hold a 38-29 lead going into the final period of play.

Cooper managed to win the final quarter, but couldn't offset the lead.

Keith Smith led the Broncos with 17 points while Alan Bailey scored 13, Tracey Blaylock and Mike Bunker 10 each.

For Cooper Leo Williams canned 20 points and Fred Starks scored 12.

Scratchpad Tomato-Pickers lead in series

From Wire Reports

BASEBALL—The Culiacan Tomato-Pickers downed the Mexican Eagles, 7-4, to take a two-one lead in the Mexican Pacific League's championship series. The winner will represent Mexico in the Caribbean Series starting Feb. 2 in the Pacific resort of Mazatlan, against the national champions from Venezuela, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico. Aurelio Lopez was the winner and Sid Monge the loser.

GOLF—Gavin Levenson shot par 72—209 Friday for a 1-stroke lead after three rounds of the South African Open at Durban. John Bland and Phil Simmons were tied for second at 212.

Lily Wu Ming-yueh of Taiwan took a three-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the Hong Kong's Women Open at par 141.

SOCCER—Russia, favored to win the fourth Jawaharlal Nehru Gold Cup international tournament, lost to Yugoslavia, 2-1.

BASKETBALL—Terry Holland, Virginia coach, has been readmitted to a Charlottesville hospital with a flareup of an intestinal upset and will miss the Cavaliers' game today's against Wake Forest.

BOXING—Randy Milton, Randy Milton, once the WBC's No. 10-ranked welterweight, has been sentenced to five years in prison for an attempted courthouse escape. Milton, 29, of Bridgeport, Conn., pleaded Thursday under the Alford Doctrine, admitting no guilt but conceding that the evidence would have been enough to convict him. Milton's sentence will be served at the same time as a 15-year term he is now serving on manslaughter charges in the 1982 death of a Fairfield, Conn., man and a 10-year term he is serving for a 1983 bank robbery.

AUTO RACING—The troubled 53rd Monte Carlo Rally starts today with a field sharply reduced from previous years, but with the major contenders for the 1985 World Rally Championship present. The "Monte," the oldest and most famous rally, was cancelled Dec. 27 and revived the next day in an ongoing quarrel between the organizing club and the French Auto Sport Federation (FFSA). The problems cut the entry list from last year's 236 cars to 131—but since it counts toward the world championship, the top works teams are obliged to compete. Audi decided to cut from three to two Quattros, for German former world champion Walter Rohrl and Christian Geistdörfer, and current champion Stig Blomqvist and Björn Cederberg of Sweden, while Lancia entered only one official car, for Finns Henri Toivonen and Juha Kari.

SKIING—West Germany's Maria Eppler posted her first-ever World Cup slalom victory Friday by the narrowest of margins—one-hundredth of a second ahead of fast-climbing American Tamara McKinney at Arosa, Switzerland. McKinney, of Lexington, Ky., rallied from fifth to almost steal the top prize.

Hermann Weinbuch, the king of the Nordic Combined, captured his second gold in the 35th Nordic World Championships Friday as West Germany cruised to an easy victory in the team event at Seefeld, Austria. The young West German team, sitting on a big lead after the ski jumping phase Thursday, took second in the final cross-country relay to wrap up the gold with 1,276.90 points.

TRACK—Edwin Moses, two-time Olympic gold medal hurdler, appeared Friday at a high school track coaches' clinic, but refused to discuss charges he solicited a prostitute in Los Angeles.

"I don't want to answer any questions about that incident. I'm here strictly for the clinic," he told newsmen before delivering the keynote address at the Ohio High School Coaches meeting.

Bird scored 13 points in Boston's 38-point second quarter that boosted the Celtics to a 68-53 halftime lead.

San Antonio 122, Houston 107

HOUSTON—George Gervin tied his season high with 42 points, including 16 in a third-quarter scoring spree, to lead the San Antonio Spurs. Gervin hit 10 of 14 first-half shots and out-dueled Houston's Ralph Sampson, who finished with 30.

The Spurs evened their record at 21-21, while the Rockets slipped to 24-19.

Day Brock quit sad for Broglio

By MICHAEL KATZ
New York Times Service

Ernie Broglio could always laugh about it, even before it became evident that he was a sore-armed pitcher traded for a future Hall of Famer, Lou Brock. Every time there was a one-sided baseball trade, he would laugh. In fact, he said the day Brock retired was one of his saddest "because now no one will be telephoning me."

Broglio, now a 49-year-old beer company employee in San Jose, Calif., reckons his sore-armed pitching gave him another connection to baseball's Hall of Fame.

"I either put them in or I got traded for 'em," said Broglio, who was to wind up with a 77-74 lifetime record with a 3.74 earned run average.

Until his trade from the St. Louis Cardinals in 1964 for a rookie outfielder then hitting .251, Broglio was a very tough right-handed pitcher.

He won 21 games in 1960 for the Cards and 18 in 1963. But he was damaged goods, suffering from bone chips in his right elbow and a sore shoulder, when the Cubs got him.

Brock, meanwhile, went on to hit .348 for the 1964 world-champion Cardinals, to set a season record with 118 stolen bases, which has since been broken by Rickey Henderson, and, five years after his retirement, to get into the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility.

"I knew he was going into the Hall of Fame," said Broglio. "All it meant was no phone calls for five years."

Broglio won only 7 games, against 19 losses, while lasting with Chicago through 1968. The following year, his last in baseball, was spent in the Cincinnati Reds' farm system.

"I had the great thrill of pitching to Johnny Bench before he came up to the majors," Broglio said. "I broke him in pretty good, bouncing balls in the dirt. Taught him everything he knows."

BEFORE THIS season began, only 86 players had ever worn an Islander jersey in the 12-year history of the club. But in this injury-riddled season, the team has had new faces arriving almost daily, and the count now is up to 94.

Tuesday against the Detroit Red Wings, four new Islanders made their National Hockey League debuts — the defensemen Ken Leiter and Vern Smith, and the forwards Scott Howson and Mark

Sports Notes

Hamway. And, as has become traditional with the club, the newcomers were fitted with unorthodox jersey numbers. Leiter was given 44, Smith 45 and Howson 46. Hamway got the number 57, and a new nickname to go with it — "Heinzie," after the H.J. Heinz Co. slogan, "57 Varieties."

"We wanted to keep them all in numerical order," said Jim Pickard, the trainer, "but we couldn't get four in a row. So, what the heck, I gave him 57."

Players, if they remain with the team, are customarily given more traditional roster numbers, usually under 31. Hamway, if successful, could get rid of the 57.

"But not the nickname," said Pickard. "That'll stay for sure."

EVERY DOG has its day, and now, thanks to a pair of computer research scientists who were given a Siamese cat as a wedding present 20 years ago, cats will have their weekend. The first Madison Square Garden International Cat Show, with 800 entries from as far away as Japan, France and Alaska, will open Friday at the Garden's Exposition Rotunda and run through Sunday. The Garden Cat Club Inc., which is running the show, hopes that 20,000 visitors will help dispel some of the myths about feline popularity.

"Did you know," said Vicky Markstein, the show manager, "that according to pet-food manufacturers, 75 percent of the pet owners in the metropolitan area have cats? It's an easy pet for city dwellers to handle. You don't have to walk them."

Mrs. Markstein's husband, Peter, is the president of the Garden Cat Club, and both will be among the judges at the show. Dr. Markstein said it took him longer to train to become a cat show judge than it did for him to earn his Ph.D. in mathematics. The Marksteins, who have been cat fanciers since their first Siamese, believe the aversion some people have to the animals is that they are so independent.

"All the other domesticated animals are rather subservient," said Mrs. Markstein. "Cats are independent and a lot of human beings can't tolerate this in a pet. Hitler, Mussolini, Napoleon, they all hated cats. But Abe Lincoln had four in the White House and Mark Twain loved them, and so did Hemingway, and Maurice Ravel had 32 cats."

Lifters admit use of steroids

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-four percent of YMCA and community-gymnasium weightlifters interviewed admitted using steroids at some time, a study conducted by a Chicago doctor has revealed.

"My hepatologist colleagues tell me that they are seeing more problems with athletes and steroids," Dr. John Payne, a professor at Chicago's Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, said. "Athletes have to be told that steroids are not vitamins and that their side effects can be devastating."

Payne's findings were published in the current issue of Consumers Digest.

Payne said that of the 250 weightlifters interviewed, 110 admitted some use of steroids.

"Fifty of the 110 were interviewed in detail," he said, "and 28 said they were not competing in weightlifting, body-building or any other sports. Twenty of the 50 started using the drugs in the last year and 12 had been using them for two to three years."

Skins Games plan OB

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

LOS ANGELES — An announced plan for a series of Skins Games at weekly PGA Tour events this season quietly has been dropped.

The plan drew immediate opposition from three of golf's biggest guns when it was announced late last year as one of the changes to take effect, with the nationally-televised Skins Game moving under the Tour umbrella.

"We won't have it at my tournament," said Jack Nicklaus, founder and sponsor of the Memorial tournament.

"Mine either," said Arnold Palmer, host of the Bay Hill Classic.

"The plan simply won't work," said Tom Watson.

"I guess that settles that," said Palmer.

And it did.

PALMER, NICKLAUS, Watson and Gary Player competed in the first two Skins Games, independent and unofficial events. The Tour now has taken control of the unique affair and will change the format for the selection of the four-man field that will play this fall.

The precise formula has not been announced. One of the participants will be the defending champion, Nicklaus. Another will be a sponsor's choice. A vote of fans and/or players could be used to pick the other two.

In any event, the Skins Game now is listed on the Tour schedule. And some changes will be made.

"You can be sure," Palmer said, "that if Mr. Beman (PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman) has anything to do with it, he'll change it."

And Palmer, for one, was less than completely enthusiastic about the Tour's action in giving "Approved Tournament" status to such events as the Skins Game and the Kapalua International, a late-season, big-money tournament in Hawaii that has, until recently, been an independent.

"I think it's important to have the independent tournaments," Palmer said. "I think it's good for the game to have the independents. I'm not at all sure that it's a good thing for the Tour to be taking over everything."

ANOTHER INNOVATION this year will be the expansion of the U.S. vs. Japan team matches to include squads from Australia and Europe, also to be played in Hawaii this fall. And this, too, received a guarded, suspicious response from one leading American player.

"We may be getting too many of these team events," said Tom Kite, a frequent competitor in the U.S.-Japan and Ryder Cup (U.S. vs. Europe) matches. "When you get too many, you start diluting the attraction and importance of all of them."

"I think it would be just about right to have the Ryder Cup matches in odd-numbered years, like we do now, and have U.S.-Japan in even-numbered years, alternating the site between Japan and the United States."

"That would give us one team match a year, and, really, that's about all you want or need. If you get more than that, I think the interest — the public interest and the players' interest, will start to wane."

U.S.collegian could be best hockey prospect

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Each year, the National Hockey League's Central Scouting Bureau rates the best amateur players who will be available for next June's draft. Central Scouting uses eight full-time scouts and six part-timers, under the direction of Jim Gregory.

While the 1985 class does not appear to be very deep, several players already have caught the eyes of the scouts and are rated as certain first-round selections.

For the first time, an American collegiate player could be the top pick. Craig Simpson, a 6-foot-2, 180-pound center for Michigan State, became the first 16-year-old to play varsity hockey in the United States. He also was the highest-rated player coming out of midget hockey when he opted for college rather than Canadian juniors.

The native of London, Ontario, is considered the best player in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association and is being wooed by Canadian Olympic Team Coach Dave King.

But if the NHL calls, he said "I'll have to listen."

"When he's 21, he could be a great skater," said Red Berenson, a former NHL regular who coaches the University of Michigan. "In the draft, Simpson has everything the NHL teams are looking for."

Other highly rated players in the early scouting reports are forwards Danny Gratton of Oshawa of the Ontario Hockey League, Stephane Roy of Chicoutimi of the Quebec Major Junior League, and Rayn Stewart of Kamloops of the Western League; defensemen Alain Cote of Quebec (QMJHL), David Espe of White Bear Lake (Minn.) High School, and David Manson of Prince Albert (WHL), and goalie Kay Whitmore of Peterborough (OHL).

IF YOU think Wayne Gretzky dominates all the NHL's offensive categories for which he is eligible, you're in for a surprise. Gretzky surely is the greatest scorer the game has known, but he has company among league scoring leaders this year.

For instance, Tim Kerr of Philadelphia led the NHL at the halfway mark with 13 power-play goals. Mike Bullard was second with 11.

Kerr and Edmonton's Jari Kurri (Gretzky's linemate) were tops with six game-winning goals; Gretzky had five.

Though Gretzky had 177 shots on goal (almost 4 1/2 per game), he trailed Boston defenseman Ray Bourque by 26 shots. And Gretzky wasn't anywhere to be seen in the shooting percentage rankings, which were led by Pittsburgh rookie Warren Young (35.7) and Kurri (29.6).

It should be no shock, however, that Young and Kurri were up there: Gretzky sets up most of Kurri's goals with perfect passes and rookie sensation Mario Lemieux does much the same thing for Young.

STATISTICALLY, the most improved teams through 40 games were Pittsburgh, up 15 points from 23 to 38, and New Jersey and Washington, up 12 apiece. All three teams are in the Patrick Division, with the Capitals on top and the Penguins and Devils battling the New York Rangers for the fourth and final playoff berth.

Okamoto forges lead

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ayako Okamoto, Japan's most successful woman golfer, surged out of the pack with a 7-under-par 65 Friday to take a 2-stroke lead after two rounds of the $200,000 Mazda Classic Ladies Professional Golfers Association tournament at Deer Creek Country Club.

While most of the women had trouble battling the windy conditions, Okamoto produced seven birdies, including five in a row, to score her best round in LPGA play.

That combined with her shaky opening-round 73 to give her a two-round total of 6-under-par 138 and put her two shots up on the four-some of Jane Geddes, Pat Bradley, Donna White and Chris Johnson.

First-round leader Lauren Howe and the quartet that was tied for second after 18 holes faded in the wind during the second round.

Okamoto, speaking through an interpreter, said she didn't feel like she was striking the ball especially well and termed the round "an accident."

"I didn't feel ready in a competitive sense in the first round," said the 33-year-old former softball pitcher who has captured five tournament titles in her 2½ years on the U.S. tour. "I think I can call the second round an accident, but I hope it carries over the next two days."

Sutton shares first in LA Open

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hal Sutton, whose last victory came on this same course 1½ years ago, birdied his first three holes and shot a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a three-way tie for the lead Friday after the second round of the $400,000 Los Angeles Open golf tournament.

Following his victory in the PGA national championship, which made him the game's No. 1 money-winner and Player of the Year in 1983, "I just forgot all about how to play golf," Sutton said after completing two trips over the Riviera Country Club course in 132, 10 shots under par.

He shared the top spot with Larry Mize, who set a course-record 62, and Gary Koch, who had a no-bogey 66 in mild, sunny weather.

Mize chipped in for a birdie on the extremely difficult 18th hole to set the course record at 9 under par. His 62 was one stroke better than Lanny Wadkins played it in Thursday's opening round.

Mize, 28, starting his fourth season of PGA Tour activity, played the front side in 29, birdied the next two holes, then parred around until his closing birdie broke the 18-hole record for the 59-year-old course.

Wadkins, the first-round leader, opened his day's play with an eagle-3 but couldn't keep it going. He finished with a 70 that left him one shot back at 133, nine under, at the tournament's halfway point.

"Well," said Wadkins, who played in the same group with Mize. "I was real pleased to hold the course record. I slept on it very nicely last night."

He called Mize's effort "a magnificent round of golf... fantastic... unbelievable," and said it "conceivably could have been in the 50s."

Mize, whose only tour victory came in the 1983 Memphis Classic, leaped high in the air — "I think I went straight up for about five feet," he said — when his 25-foot chip curled left at the last moment and dropped in the cup for the 18th hole birdie.

Mark O'Meara came on with a 67 and was two shots off the pace at 134. He was followed by Don Pooley at 66-135. Mark Lye, with a 68, and Bruce Lietzke, 70, were at 136.

New rules to help run

Blockers may extend arms

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

College football will have a new rule this fall designed to bring uniformity to run-blocking and pass-blocking. And while it may indeed benefit teams that like to run the ball, the people it will probably help the most are the officials.

In the most significant rules change — none of which should raise the ire of too many coaches — the NCAA has fully liberalized its blocking rule to permit blockers to fully extend their arms on both running and passing plays.

"This will certainly help from the standpoint that officials will be able to call penalties," said Army Coach Jim Young, whose team led the nation in rushing last fall. "It's been a real problem to figure out what's legal and what's not."

UNDER THE old rule, blockers were not allowed to extend their arms "more than one-half of a full extension" unless they were blocking "behind the neutral zone while retreating" — i.e., pass-blocking. They may now legally block with the shoulder, hands, outer surface of the arm or any other part of the body provided the hands are in advance of the elbows, inside the frames of both the blocker's and the opponent's bodies and at or below the shoulder of the player being blocked.

"It's not that big a deal and I don't think it will make any difference," said Pat Dye of Auburn, another team that likes to run the ball. "They're just legalizing something that everyone's been doing."

There have been numerous complaints in recent years that offensive linemen were holding on almost every play. The uproar reached a peak following national champion Brigham Young's 24-17 victory over Michigan in the Holiday Bowl when BYU Coach LaVell Edwards claimed it was a misconception that passing teams do more holding than running teams. He cited run-oriented Michigan and Ohio State as two of the principal offenders. Michigan's Bo Schembechler replied that BYU, the nation's top passing team in seven of the last nine years, "should be outlawed, absolutely outlawed" for its alleged holding tactics.

"I DON'T think this (new rule) will help anybody (i.e., running teams)," said David M. Nelson, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee. "We're just getting into the flow of the game the way 75 percent of the teams are playing. The American Football Coaches Association's rules committee asked that this be done."

The rules committee met this week at Point Clear, Ala., and the changes were announced Thursday at NCAA headquarters in Mission, Kan.

In another key change, the committee abolished after one year the rule that gave the receiving team the ball at its 30-yard line when a kickoff carried beyond the end zone on the fly. It went back to the old rule which puts the ball at the 20 on all touchbacks.

Nelson said the blocking rule "is now the same for running plays as it is for passing plays. This was done to accommodate the way the game has been played and officiated recently. We haven't been able to separate the run- and pass-blocking rules. We now have one blocking rule instead of two. 'Basically, blockers can have their arms fully extended anywhere on the field. There's no more restriction within zones and the full arm extension isn't limited to a retreat block. You no longer have to be retreating or not moving toward anybody (for full arm extension).'"

ALTHOUGH coaches said it would be easier to teach blocking now, there was some doubt that the new rule would help running teams.

Edwards said he was "not really sure it will be as big a change as a lot of people think. The main reason is for the officials. They were pushing for it. My only concern is that holding will become even more of a problem than it is. All joking aside, that's a major problem in football and I don't know what the answer is."

Bobby Collins of Southern Methodist, another ground-oriented club, said "it might be true" that running teams will be helped "but I'm not sure how until we've been through a season with it. Maybe where we'll see the benefit is on draw plays. We got called on a number of occasions for a retreat block when we were firing out and running downfield."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, a member of the NCAA committee, said the liberalized blocking rule "has been coming for some time now. We've been concerned about the methods of teaching blocking across the country. Blockers have been using their hands more and more. We're not trying to teach anything illegal, but it's difficult to teach extending your hands behind the line of scrimmage and not extending them in a drive-type block. In essence, all this does is allow you to come off the ball with your arms extended."

TEAFF SAID he voted to restore the old touchback rule "on the recommendation of the AFCA. I liked the 1984 rule. I thought it was a good rule. There were approximately 1,100 more kickoff returns than the previous year in Division I, about one per game."

Four rules changes were adopted concerning player safety. An automatic first down was added to the penalty for flagrant face mask violations and for fouls out of bounds. Hurling, previously defined as an attempt by a runner to jump with one or both feet or knees foremost over a player who is still on his feet, now will apply to all players and still carries a 15-yard penalty. Also, the exception for blocking below the waist on field goals and conversion kicks was deleted.

Super Bowl? Packer prefers Boston, thanks

By DICK JOYCE
AP Sports Writer

Earlier this week, Billy Packer said he still hadn't seen last Sunday's Super Bowl. "A friend of mine taped it," said Packer. "It's secondary. I had to be in Boston, and I'd rather see a Celtics game."

Such is the life of a "basketball junkie." Packer, a businessman and former player and assistant coach at Wake Forest, also has been able to juggle a career as a television color analyst for college basketball games.

Packer averages two or three games a week as an analyst. In addition to handling CBS' national game, he also works for the Jefferson Raycom cable TV network which does Atlantic Coast Conference games in the proximity of Packer's home in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"I'll also tape every significant game I can," he said. "It keeps me involved. It keeps me on edge."

It's all preparation for CBS' college basketball package, which includes the Final Four.

Packer takes pride in having a major input in arranging the schedule.

"Nineteen of the Top 20 in the preseason AP poll have been either on national or regional TV for us," he said.

Today's CBS national telecast pits Big East Conference leaders Georgetown, ranked No. 1 and the defending NCAA champion, against third-ranked St. John's in a Big East Conference game beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Georgetown has won all 18 games this season, while St. John's is 14-1.

"Georgetown had a leveling off around Christmas," Packer said. "It's hard to keep a team mentally interested. That's a big part of the game. But (coach) John Thompson usually has his team ready when they have to."

"They better be ready, or St. John's will beat them. St. John's is a legitimate contender for the national title. If they run with Georgetown, I'd think they'd be better off."

Packer's thinking is that a running game would stop the Hoyas from setting up a half-court zone defense with premier shotblocker Patrick Ewing roaming about.

Before the season, Packer had predicted that Georgetown, St. John's, Illinois and Indiana would make the NCAA Final Four.

"I still think they can," said Packer, although he readily admitted there are many contenders, such as Southern Methodist, Memphis State and Oklahoma, who could make it to Lexington, Ky.

"The Big East has maturity and I believe Illinois and Indiana are the top two teams in the Big Ten," Packer said, "although there are multiple teams in the Big Ten with talent and size."

At the risk of offending his ACC neighbors, Packer said, "I think the ACC teams are a year away from making a big run. It's hard to be consistent with young teams."

Any day now, Packer might get around to watching San Francisco beat Miami in Super Bowl XIX.

NEW YORK — The California Angels, making positive use of the loss of Fred Lynn as a free agent, shored up their depleted relief corps Thursday by plucking former Midland Cub Donnie Moore of the Atlanta Braves from the free-agent compensation pool.

The selection of Moore did not ignite the controversy that arose last year over the selection of Tom Seaver and Tim Lincecum from the pool. Neither did the other two selections this year — Argenis Salazar, a Montreal shortstop, by St. Louis, which lost Bruce Sutter, and Tom Henke, a Texas pitcher, by Toronto, which lost Cliff Johnson.

The Blue Jays would likely have taken Moore if the Angels had not, but the teams selected in the reverse order of their 1984 records.

MEANWHILE, 13 players filed for salary arbitration, bringing to 26 the total who have filed ahead of Thursday's deadline. Included in the latest batch were three Met pitchers — Jesse Orosco, Doug Sisk and Ed Lynch — in addition to Bill Caudill of Toronto and Wade Boggs of Boston. Ruppert Jones, a free agent, agreed with the Angels on a one-year contract with an option for a second year.

The Angels expect Jones to help replace Lynn, who signed a five-year, $6.8 million contract with Baltimore. Because Lynn was a Type A player, classified as such by a complex mathematical formula, the Angels were entitled to a player from the compensation pool made up of the unprotected players from the 17 clubs that had to stock the pool.

Free Agent Draft

Of the five compensation choicer in the previous three years, Seaver was the most-established player selected. Steve Mura was the only other major leaguer picked. Joel Skinner and Danny Tartabull were minor leaguers, and Belcher had yet to pitch professionally when Oakland took him from the Yankees a year ago.

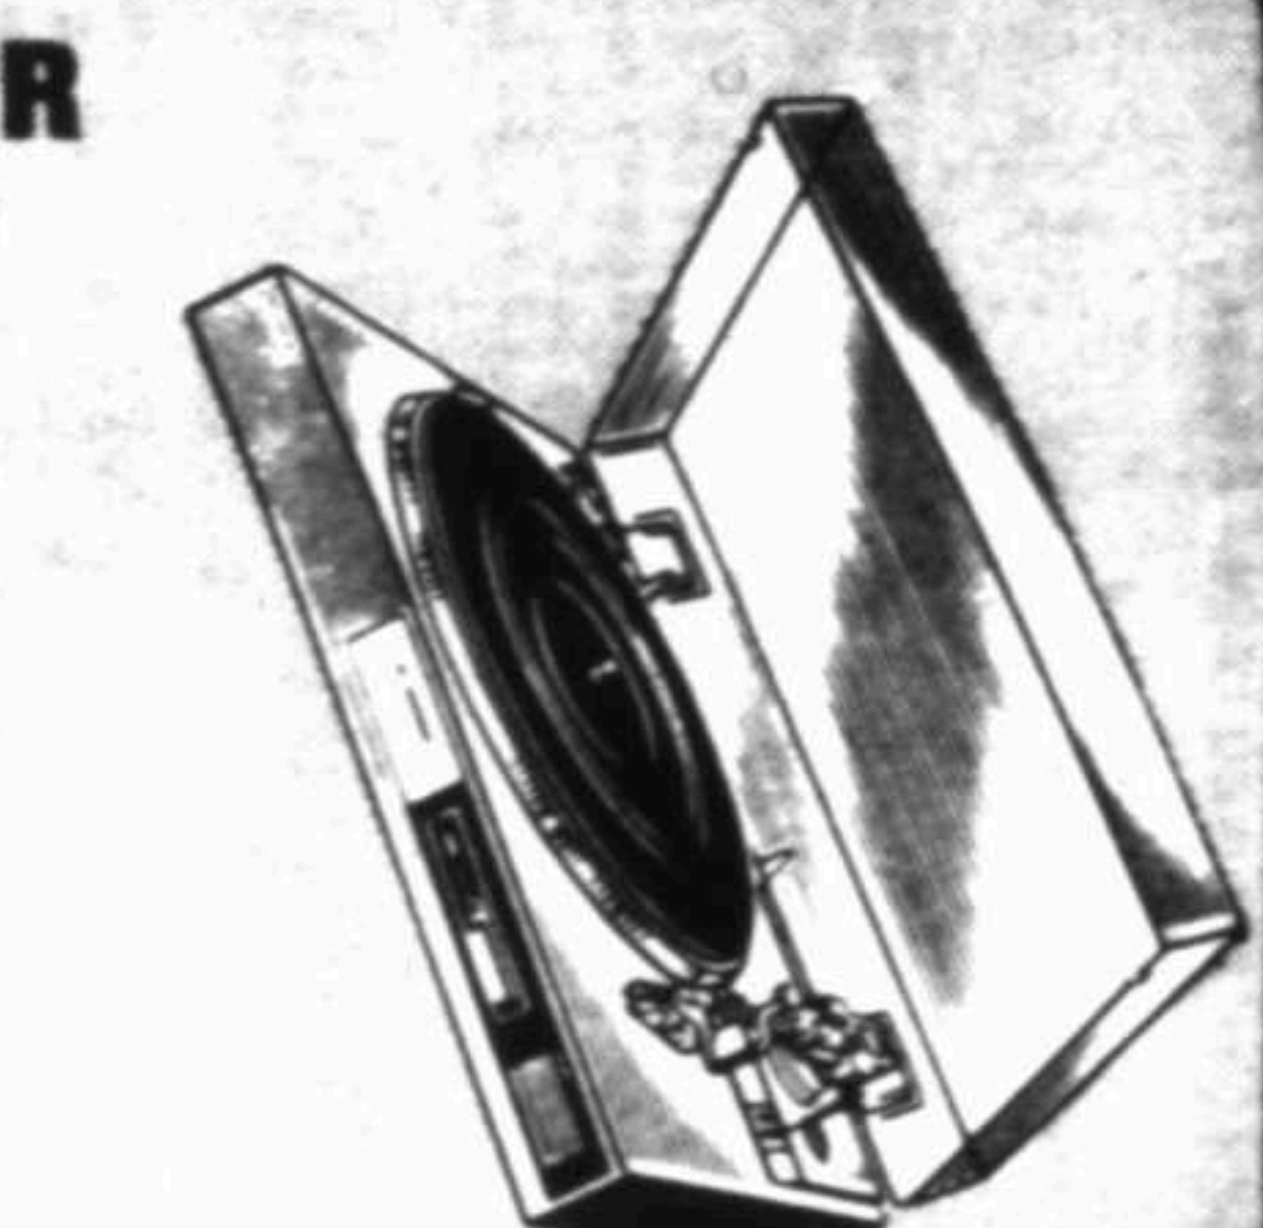

Moore, whose 16 saves led the Brave relievers and ranked him eighth among National League relievers last season, was left unprotected by the Braves, who were allowed to protect 24 players rather than 26 because they had signed Sutter. The addition of Sutter altered the team's bullpen needs.

"It's not an insult that they didn't protect me," Moore said by telephone from Atlanta. "I'm happy to be going to California. Someone else might not like the system, but it worked for me. I'd rather be pitching for California than stay here. Our bullpen here was crowded. Sutter cuts down a lot of work for a lot of people. I'm a control pitcher and I have to pitch."

With California, Moore should get many chances. The Angels last season had 26 saves, second fewest in the American League, and their top reliever was Luis Sanchez, with 11. Don Aase had eight, but he has joined Baltimore as a free agent.

Moore, who will be 31 years old next month, had filed for salary arbitration, a case the Angels inherited. He earned $130,000 last season, and submitted a request for $490,000; the Braves offered $375,000.

Australian film director learns Amish way of life

Ford takes refuge with an Amish family and learns their austere ways: no autos, electricity, radios, not even buttons on their plain clothing, since buttons are considered vain.

UNITED ARTISTS

Brad Davis ("Midnight Express")

How Cliff De Young ("Protocol") ever made it into the miniseries as John Kennedy is baffling. De Young plays Kennedy as more diplomatic than his hot-headed brother, and that's fine.

Ecumenical 'eggs' still aren't hatched

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Accumulating batches of ecumenical "eggs" are in the incubation stage, but when they'll hatch remains uncertain.

That was the situation as most of the world's churches this week observed their annual week of prayer for Christian unity.

"All the baptized — Catholic, Orthodox, Anglican and Protestant — are called to collaborate so that full unity is re-established," says Pope John Paul II.

But to bring it about, "something further" is needed to implement the theological agreements that have been reached, Bishop James R. Crumley Jr. of the Lutheran Church in America emphasized in a recent visit with the pope.

Crumley says the pope indicated he concurred. "We agreed that it is important to seek the next steps, even though they are yet unclear."

That was the indefinite, yet germinating state of the churches' effort to live up to Christ's plea that they "all be one that the world may believe" as they joined again in praying for it.

The observance featured ecumenical services in many communities.

The week was sponsored nationally by the National Council of Churches and National Conferences of Catholic Bishops and internationally by the World Council of Churches and the Vatican's secretariat on Christian unity.

"Reconciliation is penultimate to unity," said the Rev. Emmanuel Sullivan, director of the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute in New York City. "It is a process already in motion."

That reconciliation has gone on in a wide range of joint theological dialogues between representatives of Roman Catholicism and various Protestant and Eastern Orthodox bodies, as well as between different Protestant groups.

Several of the talks have reached broad agreements on matters of doctrine, baptism, the Lord's presence in communion, and ministry, but mostly without specific steps to implement the accords.

The "trickle-down theory of unity from the top" has been stymied by church bureaucracies that have become preoccupied with institutional self-preservation, says noted United Methodist theologian Albert Outler of Dallas, an elder statesman of the ecumenical movement.

However, he says the "old order ecumenism" is being supplanted by a lively, grass-roots ecumenism at the local level as Catholic and Protestant laity get together for Scripture study, prayer and social action without waiting for official approval.

They're discovering themselves that "the old barriers are no longer insurmountable," he told a recent gathering sponsored in Indianapolis by the unity-minded Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

At the same time, some tangible steps are being taken, or considered, at the upper levels as a result of the various theological convergences.

In one dramatic case, representatives of the U.S. Roman Catholic bishops disclosed last week that they have approved an accord reached by the Anglican-Roman Catholic international commission.

Catholic Archbishop John Whealon of Hartford, head of the bishops' evaluating committee and co-chairman of talks with U.S. Episcopalians, said it was the first time the bishops have responded specifically and positively to dialogue conclusions.

The bishops want further exploration of some points that they felt were ambiguous or inadequately covered, he says, but are suggesting that the Vatican call a synod of bishops to consider Anglican-Roman Catholic reunion.

Branches of the worldwide Anglican communion, including the U.S. Episcopal Church, are in the process of acting on the document, while the international commission now is discussing possible intercommunion and Vatican recognition of Anglican orders.

POSITIVE THINKING

*Energy, enthusiasm
keys to success*

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

be unkind. But frankly your apathy and lack of enthusiasm turn me off. You see, I'm used to a salesman, my husband, who has unlimited energy and boundless enthusiasm, and he projects these to his customers. My advice to you is to go get yourself some real energy and enthusiasm if you expect to succeed in your job."

Angered a bit, but honest enough to realize she was telling him the grim and exact facts of life, he shuffled dejectedly down the walk and sat glumly in his car. But where could he get energy and enthusiasm? You couldn't buy a pill in a drug store that would produce it. He couldn't go back to school and take courses in energy and enthusiasm.

Later he happened to read about Professor William James, the father of American psychology, who taught what he called the "as if" principle. The essence of the teaching is that if you do not possess a desired personal quality, act "as if" you did have it, and presently you will have it.

This "as if principle" made sense to the discouraged young man and thereafter he deliberately acted energetic and enthusiastic. He practiced being a vitalized person in due course the old desultoriness passed off. People began speaking of him as a "ball of fire." Enthusiasm for everything began to be a characteristic of his total attitude. In short, he came alive.

Some years later he became head of a selling company having hundreds of sales representatives. As the motivator of the organization, he stimulated every recruit to have those two vital qualities: energy and enthusiasm.

Baptists urged to pray for Africa

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Southern Baptist leaders have urged the denomination's 14.3 million members to make 1985 a year of prayer for rain in drought-stricken Africa.

"Starving millions of Africans in some 30 countries have long since passed the point at which human wisdom alone can find a solution to their agony," says the Rev. R. Keith Parks, head of the denomination's foreign mission board. "Water is life. Pray for rain in Africa."

Other Southern Baptist leaders joined in the call to prayer, and the missions board also urged the denomination's 3,400 foreign missionaries to participate in the prayer effort.

NEW YORK (AP) — A leader of the American Jewish Committee terms "irresponsible and immoral" current proposals to change Israel's law of return to recognize only Jewish converts approved under Orthodox Jewish rules.

Rabbi David M. Gordis, the committee's executive vice president, says that for a small Israeli minority to "impose their definition of Jewishness" would violate the "religious freedom and equality" of the world's Jews.

Midland-Odessa Symphony & Choral Society Subscription Concert of the season will feature Roy Clark and the MOSC "Blue Jean Symphony" in an evening of Country and Western music Thursday, 8 p.m. Feb. 21 at the Ector County Coliseum. RELIGION IN BRIEF

Rick Stanley to preach

Rick Stanley will be speaking at Greenwood Baptist Church, 10 miles east of Midland off Farm Road 307, at 7 p.m. today and 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday.

In 1980, Stanley's mother married Vernon Presley. Beginning at the age of 6, Stanley lived in the Graceland Mansion, Memphis, Tenn. When he was 17, he became Elvis Presley's personal aid and body guard.

Stanley

As Elvis' step-brother, Stanley lived the "good life," with plenty of money, cars, travel and big name friendship. The "good life" also included teen-age drug addiction and alcoholism.

After Elvis' death, Stanley gave his life to Jesus Christ in 1977. He is now involved in an evangelism ministry.

Dr. W.A. Criswell, senior minister of First Baptist Church, Dallas, says of Stanley, "This young preacher commands the attention of all ages. When he stands to preach, he most adequately and convincingly proclaims the message of Jesus Christ."

The public is invited to attend.

Communion service set

The Rev. Jean Pierre Mesheux, archdeacon of the Diocese of the Southwest of the American Anglican Church, will celebrate Holy Communion for St. Paul's American Episcopal Church at 10 a.m. Feb. 3.

Services are held in the chapel of Ellis Funeral Home. The 1928 Book of Common Prayer is used by the congregation for all services.

The theme is "Being a Woman of God." A free nursery will be provided.

The public is invited to attend.

Choir to present concert

The Chancel Choir of First Presbyterian Church will hold a Concert of Sacred Music at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 3 to begin celebrating the church's centennial year. The church was organized Dec. 22, 1885.

The Concert of Sacred Music will consist of a series of the choir's favorite anthems by Beethoven, Marshall, Mozart, Brahms, Beck, Dawson, Wilhousky Gounod. It will be held in the church's sanctuary, 800 W. Texas Ave. Thomas R.

Roberts serves as musical director and conductor and Judy Congdon as senior organist.

The program will last about an hour. A nursery will be provided. The public is invited to attend.

Forum series scheduled

Guest lecturer Paul Pause will present a two-part forum series at the Unitarian Universalist Church, Midkiff and Neely streets, at 10 a.m. Sunday and Feb. 3.

Part I of the series is "The Creation/Evolution Controversy: A Critical Analysis of the Claims of Scientific Creationists."

Pause is a consulting geologist in Midland. He is a vice president of the Texas Council for Science Education, first vice president of the Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists and the editor of the Bulletin of the West Texas Geological Society.

The public is invited to attend.

Concert set at Bellview

Soprano Nancy Olson will perform at 10:50 a.m. Sunday at Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St.

The Baylor graduate is on a tour that will conclude in Washington, D.C., where she is scheduled to sing at the National Presidential Prayer Breakfast on Jan. 31.

She received her undergraduate degree in voice and piano with honors from Baylor University and holds a master's of music degree from The University of Texas at Austin, where she also graduated with honors.

In addition, she studied at Juillard School in New York and has worked with accompanist David Garvey, Leontyne Price's pianist.

In Washington, Jennie Logsdon of Cannon Beach, Ore., will accompany Ms. Olson in "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," which will be followed by a speech by President Ronald Reagan.

Bellview Baptist Church's pastor, the Rev. G.A. Magee, invites the public to attend.

Service time altered

Wednesday services at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, will be changed from 8 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. beginning Feb. 6.

The church meets at 1001 W. Tennessee Ave. The public is invited to attend.

Seminar on education

"Home Schooling: An Educational Alternative" is the topic of a seminar to be held at 7 p.m. Monday in the Community Room of the Texas American Bank Building, Wall Avenue and Andrews Highway.

The seminar will feature a talk on home education and constitutional liberties by J. Scott Henderson, former Midland county attorney, and a video entitled "Home Schooling History, Research and Common Sense" by Dr. Raymond Moore, a nationally recognized educational authority who has testified before Congress and many state legislatures.

There will also be an information and material table available for viewing before and after the meeting.

The public is invited to attend this free seminar sponsored by Grace Chapel. For more information call 694-3413.

Special meeting planned

The Free Methodist Church, 4712 Shadylane, will be conducting special meetings Tuesday through Feb. 3. Guest speaker will be the Rev. Ron Harlow, pastor of Casa View Free Methodist Church, Dallas.

Harlow

A graduate of California State University and Wesleyan Evangelical Seminary, Harlow has served as youth pastor in Sacramento and assistant pastor in Vancouver, Wash.

He and his wife Jo have one son, Ron Jr., age one.

Hours are 7 p.m. Tuesday through Feb. 2 and 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Feb. 3. The public is invited to attend.

Seminar, sermon slated

Guest speaker at the Sunday services of the Permian Basin Church of Religious Science at 11 a.m. Sunday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., will be Dr. Mark Victor Hansen.

His topic is "I Am Special." The nationally-known professional speaker is in Midland to present a seminar from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Hilton Hotel on "How to Achieve Total Prosperity." His speaking engagements place him in front of a quarter of a million people annually.

Hansen is the author of "Future Diary," "How to Achieve Total Prosperity" and "The Miracle of Tithing." He has a bachelor of arts degree in communication and philosophy, a double master's in design science and health and a doctorate in human behavior. He was a research assistant to the Dr. R. Buckminster Fuller.

The public is invited to hear him speak at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Installation service set

The Rev. Greg Smith will be installed as senior minister at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., at 10:50 a.m. Sunday.

Smith

Officiating the service will be the Rev. Herb Miller, Lubbock, executive director of National Evangelistic Association, and the Rev. Earl Bessex, an area minister from Abilene.

Smith was born in Pennsylvania, grew up in New York and spent his teenage years in Florida. He is a graduate of Phillips Graduate Seminary.

Smith comes to Midland from Cushing, Kan.

The public is invited to attend.

Video course presented

The Unity of West Texas Study Group will view a special video presentation by the Rev. Jack Boland Sunday.

Boland is an inspirational speaker and teacher. He is the senior minister of a fast-growing church, The Church of Today at Warren, Mich.

Much in demand as a motivational speaker, Boland was a business executive for most of his life and is a member of the board of directors of several corporations.

"By utilizing his unique talents and drawing upon the experiences of his rich and varied life, Jack has helped to change the lives of thousands of people by instilling in them a sense of self-esteem, direction and a desire to take responsibility for their own lives," says a Unity spokesman.

Unity meets at 9:30 a.m. in the Hospitality Room of the airport Executive. For more information call 697-6523 or 1-333-6043.

Films on depression screened at Kelview

Kelview Heights Baptist Church, 401 W. Scharbauer Drive, is presenting a 6-part film series on "Depression, the Symptoms, Causes and Cures — Happiness is a Choice" at 5:45 p.m. Sunday in the church's main auditorium. This week marks the second in the series.

Dr. Frank Minirth and Dr. Paul Meier, authors of the best seller, "Happiness is a Choice," are psychiatrists who have distinguished themselves on several fronts. The Minirth-Meier Clinic is one of the largest of its kind in the world. Their books, along with their national radio and television broadcasts have made available the expertise, experience and personality that marks them.

According to them, the majority of Americans will suffer a serious depression sometime during their lives and at the present time one in 20 is medically diagnosed as suffering from depression.

Depression is the leading cause of suicide and about 15 percent of those people who are significantly depressed will eventually commit suicide.

Their contention, however, is that suffering from the emotional pains of a clinical depression is an unnecessary and avoidable experience. To avoid it, the person must choose happiness as a way of life and follow the right path to obtain it.

Film topics in their series include "Symptoms of Depression," "Causes of Depression," "Times of Depression," "Depression is Anger Turned Inward," "Chasing Happiness" and "Guidelines for a Happy Life."

'Prodigal' to be screened at local theater in February

"The Prodigal" will be shown Feb. 8-14 at the UA Cine.

A modern-day allegory of the Biblical story that intimately probes the interactions of an American family, "The Prodigal" is set in a contemporary urban framework. Writer-director James F. Collier's screenplay examines the gradual spiritual and emotional breakdown of the Stuart family as each member searches for his identity in a world of conflicting values and changing life-styles.

John Hammond, who plays the prodigal, starred in the television mini-series "The Blue and the Gray."

He mother is played by Hope Lange, who won two consecutive Emmy awards as Best Actress for her television series, "The Ghost and Mrs. Muir." The father is played by Broadway award-winning actor John Cullum. The other brother is played by Arliss Howard, who makes his motion picture debut in this film.

Rated PG, the film is produced by World Wide Pictures, Billy Graham's film organization. Graham has said of the film, "I believe 'The Prodigal' may be the most powerful film ever made to reach people for Christ."

Evangelist plans ministry center

DALLAS (AP) — Television evangelist James Robison has announced plans to build a "ministry center" in the Dallas-Fort Worth Center area that includes a building for religious retreats and seminars.

"We feel it's something the Lord is leading us to do," said Jim Rogers, executive director of the James Robison Evangelistic Association.

The building would cost about $5 million to $6 million, excluding the cost of the 50 to 100 acres of land where the facility will be built, Rogers said in an interview with the Dallas Times Herald.

The center will be funded through donations and will include a television equipped auditorium that will seat as many as 4,000, Rogers said.

Dr. C. Ellis Nelson, interim president of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary, will preach at the 10:50 a.m. worship service Sunday at Midland's First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Nelson received his master of divinity degree from Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary and his doctorate from Columbia University.

He previously served as president and professor at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, professor and dean at Union Theological Seminary, New York, and as national director of the youth program of the Presbyterian Church, U.S. He was ordained and served as a minister in the University Presbyterian Church, Austin.

The author of books and articles in the field of Christian education and moral development, Nelson has been a research fellow at Oxford University, has lectured in many seminars and universities in North America and Europe and has been a consultant on curriculum for Protestant denominations.

He pioneered the idea that the congregation is a learning community and what a community of believers does in worship and ethical living is as important for the spiritual life of its members as is the formal education program.

His sermon topic will be "A Success Story." The Scripture will be Isaiah 9:2-8 and Matthew 28:16-20. The public is invited to attend.

Arizona copper producer claims 19-month walkout ends

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Phelps Dodge Corp. says the overwhelming vote by its Arizona copper workers against continued representation by striking unions is the "formal legal end" of a bitter 19-month walkout. But union spokesmen call it "only one of many skirmishes."

Phelps Dodge, the nation's second-largest copper producer behind Kennecott, has continued to operate most of its mines and smelters despite the strike and multimillion-dollar losses blamed mostly on low copper prices.

Ballots were counted Thursday from union decertification elections held in October by the National Labor Relations Board at Phelps Dodge mines and smelters.

An unofficial tabulation compiled by The Associated Press of results from 30 bargaining units showed workers approved decertification of 13 unions as bargaining agents by a vote of 1,908 to 87. No union came close to a majority at any unit.

The results were expected, largely because strikers — estimated at about 1,000 — were not allowed to vote under federal labor law because the strike was more than a year old, beginning on July 1, 1983.

The strike had been marked by periodic rock throwing and other violence, mainly in Clifton in southeast Arizona and often on holidays or strike-related anniversaries. The state Department of Public Safety in 1983 and 1984 sent hundreds of officers at a time to the Clifton-Morenci area, and twice was reinforced by National Guard troops.

State and local police said Friday no trouble had been reported in the mining communities since the vote count. "There's been nothing happening," said duty Officer Paul Anderson at the DPS Phoenix headquarters.

"This vote shows that terrorist activity just doesn't work in Arizona," said Art Pritchard, one of the workers who petitioned for the elections.

Union attorney Michael Keenan called the election results "a significant victory for Phelps Dodge." But, he added, "This is only one of many skirmishes. This is not the end of the war." United Steelworkers of America President Lynn Williams said last year the union "will never forget what (Phelps Dodge) has done to those courageous strikers and their families."

Phelps Dodge officials contend the strike was decided when the company hired replacements for strikers in late 1983. Company attorney Nathan Niemuth called Thursday's vote-count "a formal, legal end" to the dispute.

If all appeals are dismissed, decertification orders will be issued, meaning the unions can no longer picket or organize at the Ajo, Bisbee, Douglas and Morenci plants, said NLRB regional director Milo Price.

Alex Lopez, chairman of the multi-union bargaining committee, said the election results gave Phelps Dodge "a free hand" to reduce wages and cut benefits won for workers by unions.

"There is nothing to keep the company from doing anything it wants," Lopez said. "The scabs will realize that soon."

Jack Ladd, Phelps Dodge labor relations director, said he did not anticipate any further reductions in wages, benefits or work force.

When the strike began, Phelps Dodge cut wages for new hires, reduced fringe benefits and eliminated cost-of-living pay raises, citing a need to slash expenses because of low copper prices.

During unsuccessful contract talks, the unions had refused to give up the cost-of-living raises, which other producers maintained in contracts negotiated during the same period.

The company closed several units last year, including the Morenci smelter, laying off hundreds of workers.

Phelps Dodge, which previously reported losses of $50.2 million on revenue of $746.7 million for the first nine months of 1984, said Thursday it expected to post operating losses for the fourth quarter and all of 1984 "as a result of depressed copper prices throughout the year."

Bakery employees have to find new place to earn daily bread

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Pa. (AP) — The end of the line came Friday for 70 workers at a 125-year-old bakery that made its final batch of bread, shut off its ovens, emptied its baking pans and wrapped its last loaves.

The closing, blamed on three straight years of losses, is part of a national shakeout that has seen the number of wholesale bakeries shrink by 46 percent since 1967, industry officials say. And in an area already reeling from steel mill shutdowns, the job loss cuts deeply.

"It really hurts to see it shut down. We knew it was coming, but it's still hard to take," said Wallace Sharpe, 58, after his final shift at Keystone Bakery Inc. where he earned his daily bread for 15 years.

"It's like getting a divorce from your wife, and it's final," said Sharpe, who took the last loaf from the line and plans to put it in his freezer at home. "It's closed. We just got to walk away."

After the last shift ended at 6:10 a.m., Sharpe and a band of co-workers headed for a nearby bar for a misty-eyed toast to the bakery. It was a mainstay of this hamlet of 800 residents located on the west bank of the Beaver River about 20 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

"This is our wake. This is our funeral," said Loring "Lucky" Sarver, drinking a shot and a beer. "When you're 44 years old, you look like a fool when you're crying. It hurts too much to laugh and I'm too old to cry."

The decision to terminate the bakery was originally made in April but was postponed to try to attract new business. The final order to close came this month from Stroehmann Co., which acquired Keystone in 1981. Stroehmann in turn is owned by George Weston Ltd. of Canada.

"It's an antiquated plant. We are not capable of keeping up with the modern, state-of-the-art bakeries," said plant manager Thomas Coen.

The plant last turned a profit in 1981. From then through May of 1984, it lost $500,000, according to the company.

"It's simply a reflection of the changing economy of most industries. If you don't upgrade and modernize, you don't keep up," said Charles Caffrey, senior vice president for industrial relations at Stroehmann.

"What's happening in the baking industry is similar to what happened in the brewing industry. The small family operations who haven't invested in new equipment can't compete with the larger, more efficient bakeries," Caffrey said. "More and more, bakeries are being centralized. These (older) bakeries were built in neighborhoods to serve local markets."

During the shakeout, the number of wholesale bakeries has plunged from 3,445 in 1967 to 1,863 in 1982, according to the American Bakers Association in Washington. The baking industry is a $20 billion a year business, according to the U.S. Commerce Department.

"The trend has been that smaller baking operations are being taken over by the larger, more diverse companies. Nationwide, the people who survive are the stronger, more efficient ones," said Robert Wager, president of the ABA.

Keystone will remain open as a warehouse and distribution point, and 60 of its 130 workers will keep their jobs, officials said. The bread will probably be baked at a plant in Erie, Pa., and will be distributed with Keystone's red, yellow and white checkered wrapper, according to Caffrey.

But the loss of 70 jobs will mean added hardship for a smokestack region where steel mills have closed or cut back drastically. Beaver County's jobless rate in November was 11.1 percent. It peaked at 24.6 percent in January 1983.

"Every job we lose hurts more than ever. In this day and age, everybody is trying to keep their job. We're in bad shape down here," said Mike Brkich, 69, the mayor of West Bridgewater.

"I feel darn bad about it. We'll miss it," said Brkich. "You could smell that bread baking from one end of town to the other. It smelled so good, it made you hungry. And I never tasted better bread."

The mayor said the borough has applied for redevelopment money in an attempt to attract other industry.

"A lot of people in the smaller communities are being injured. These large corporations don't seem to care what happens when they leave these areas," said Sam Papa, president of Local 12 of the Bakery, Confectionery and Tobacco Workers Union.

"Bread is being shipped farther and farther. There's no way to get fresh bread. It might be baked fresh daily, like they say, but it's not freshly sold," Papa said.

Woman finds bags of cocaine

MANALAPAN, Fla. (AP) — An elderly woman strolling along a nearly deserted beach found 15 duffel bags containing more than half a ton of pure cocaine, police said.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, found the bags on the beach Thursday and called police.

Palm Beach County Sheriff's Lt. Thomas Thompson said the cocaine, nearly 1,100 pounds with an estimated street value of about $200 million, was left there for someone to pick up.

He said the "rock-pure" cocaine probably was bound for an illegal processing laboratory to be turned into white powder for sale. One thousand pounds of rock cocaine can produce 4.8 million grams of cocaine in granular form.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: American war hero Gen. Douglas MacArthur was born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Paul Newman, director Roger Vadim, cartoonist Jules Feiffer, Eartha Kitt, football's Jack Youngblood and political activist Angela Davis. Joint endeavors will pay off handsomely, boosting both profits and your earning power. Bonuses help finance a college education. Your respect for someone grows stronger and stronger. Romance could follow no matter what your age. Be open to new ideas. A lot of people look to you for advice. A born peacemaker, you are excellent at mediating political, business or domestic disputes. Choose a career that involves travel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid discussing or doing anything you are confused about. You need to review your financial situation and investments. Find a way to help someone in need. Your generosity will be richly rewarded.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A long-distance phone call leads to new travel plans. A research project helps you reap larger profits. Let go of the past and concentrate on a current romance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A conversation with an old friend puts you in a nostalgic mood. Pay more attention to loved one's needs. Mate could seem overly emotional. Be a good listener and offer reassurance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Reevaluate your priorities. You could be wasting time on things that are not really important. Discuss ways to cut expenses with family members. Make amends to that special person in your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasize the need for teamwork at home. Even if others irritate you, show mature judgment. Your understanding means a lot to someone who has had a traumatic experience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Arguments with partners could hamper your efforts to get what you want. Keep an eye on all expenses. Give a wide berth to speculative ventures involving friends or neighbors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is time to acknowledge that you cannot be all things to all people. Be true to yourself. A mystery remains just that despite your best efforts. Keep your sense of humor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21):

The business outlook is excellent for those who like to wheel and deal. Find a way to help a deserving person without embarrassing him or her. Your productivity rises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance is prominent in today's plan. Improve your relationship with a family member by revealing the whole truth about something. Your intuition is right on target. Follow your heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mend some emotional fences and the weekend will be filled with joy. A family business shows nice progress. Weigh financial choices with greater care. Romance could fool even you!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work at a steady pace to get the best results. A child or difficult neighbor could interfere with some of your plans. Balance your checkbook and answer pressing correspondence. Romance beckons to-night.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Patience is a virtue when dealing with pushy people. Look for a quick solution to a temporary financial problem. A private family conference boosts your spirits. Share any good news with mate.

Homeowner offers Hawaii trip to anyone who buys his house

CHICAGO (AP) — Stanleigh Fox is going to great lengths to sell his suburban home — about 4,200 miles. He's offering an eight-day paid vacation in Hawaii to anyone who buys his $143,000, three-bedroom house on a 1 1/2-acre lot.

The 38-year-old businessman says he will even consider adding meals to the deal, which covers air fare and lodging.

Visions of warm beaches and Hawaiian luau have kept his telephone answering machine busy, Fox said Friday.

"The recorder was full last night; there were over 30 messages on the recording when I got home last night," he said.

"I have five appointments this weekend. People are also just calling to find out what was going on."

Before he offered the vacation, Fox had advertised his house in suburban Winfield for four days in a local newspaper and gotten just four inquiries. He said it was especially difficult to sell a house in mid-winter in the Chicago area.

Then he and his roommate, Daryl Paddock, came up with the Hawaiian travel gimmick during a moment of wine-fueled inspiration, he said.

"We just sat there drinking wine and dreamed it up," Fox said. The idea of offering a vacation was Paddock's, who works as a marketing manager for Ozark Airlines, Fox said.

Fox decided the vacation should provide a sun-swept respite from the Chicago area's frigid weather and settled on Hawaii.

In front of his home, he placed a "for sale" sign, advertising a "free Hawaiian vacation for two" on one side and showing a picture of a jetliner on the other.

Fox said he figures it will cost him $4,000 to provide the Hawaiian trip, and that's cheaper than the 7 percent commission charged by most real estate agents.

Donna Cox-Rodriguez, a Chicago real estate agent, said Fox's idea was catchy — but against the rules for licensed real estate agents.

"In the real estate business, you can't do that, you can't offer prizes or anything," Mrs. Cox-Rodriguez said Friday. "That's against the law, that's enticement."

However, she said such restrictions don't apply to private owners.

Winfield is 27 miles west of Chicago, and Fox said it takes him three hours to commute in rush-hour traffic. Fox, who is divorced, said he wants to move closer to downtown Chicago, where he works as a business development manager for an engineering firm.

His single-level, five-year-old home is several hundred yards from the nearest neighbor. Included with the house are all kitchen appliances, central air conditioning and a three-car heated garage.

"I'm not selling it because there's anything wrong with it," he said. "I need to get closer to my job."

In buying the house, he said, "you get to go on a nice Hawaiian vacation and come home to a fairly new home."

Ringo Starr's son marries

LONDON (AP) — Zak Starkey, 19-year-old son of former Beatles drummer Ringo Starr, married the 25-year-old daughter of a hairdresser in a secret ceremony in a London suburb, the bride's mother said Friday.

Starkey and Sarah Menikides were married in a civil ceremony Thursday in Bracknell, 30 miles west of London, the bride's mother, Bunty Menikides, told the British news agency Press Association.

She said there were only three witnesses at the ceremony, which was kept secret on instructions from Starr, 44, whose real name is Richard Starkey.

"Ringo's family and our family decided to stay away from the service to try to protect Zak and Sarah from publicity. I don't think they would have been able to cope with all the razzmatazz," said Mrs. Menikides, whose husband is a hairdresser in London's swank Mayfair district.

She said the family and friends attended a champagne party Thursday night at Starr's mansion, Tittenhurst Park, at Ascot, near London. The bride and groom will live in a small cottage on the grounds, she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Since he doesn't think the Rolling Stones will still be rocking and rolling when he's 50 — six years from now — Mick Jagger has decided to prepare for the future by doing a solo album.

"I don't want to wait until I'm that old to do it; it seems silly," Jagger, 44, says in the Feb. 14 issue of Rolling Stone magazine.

The album, titled "She's the Boss," is due out soon, the magazine said.

In the past, Jagger has done duets with performers including Carly Simon and Michael Jackson.

He called Jackson "really professional," but criticized the Jacksons' "Victory Tour" of last summer.

"I don't want to be an expert, but I think the ticket price was too high. I think Michael knew it," he said.

Tickets to the concert cost $30 and had to be bought in blocks of four.

Mick Jagger

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Wittkowski, who won $40 million, the single biggest prize known in lottery history, says he's bored and might buy a bowling alley.

Wittkowski, 29, a "retired" Chicago printer, was the center of attention at the third annual get-together of Illinois lottery millionaires at the Whitehall Hotel Thursday.

Wittkowski, a good bowler with a 184 average, said he is thinking about buying a bowling alley.

"I'm not into traveling — I'm bored," he told a reporter.

The $40 million man became the $40 million family last month when the state allowed him to share his jackpot in the Labor Day weekend Lotto game with his family so he could enjoy a tax break. The Internal Revenue Service is still studying the maneuvering.

Wittkowski was one of 80 millionaires, representing $200 million in prizes, at Thursday's gathering, sponsored by the Illinois Lottery.

Wittkowski may be bored, but Arizona Harris, 72, of Chicago, said "I've had a ball" since she collected her million last winter.

Mrs. Harris, who was decked out in a white fur coat and matching hat, had spent 30 years sealing cans for a packing company.

"At last, I finally got my mink," she said.

LONDON (AP) — A woman from New Zealand who became a British countess when her husband inherited a title, has ended her 22-year marriage and dumped the earl for a village handyman.

"My marriage is at an end. It's heartbreaking, but what's done is done," Lady Joan Mount Edgumbe, a mother of five, told London's Daily Express this week.

The countess said she has left her husband, Lord Mount Edgumbe, for Brian Robinson, a 43-year-old odd-job man in the village of Crathole in south-west England.

The newspaper said the countess has moved out of her 12-bedroom mansion overlooking Plymouth Sound, and into Robinson's flat.

Lord Edgumbe, a New Zealand sheep farmer, moved his family to England a year ago after inheriting his earldom.

The countess said she was astonished by the interest in her romance. But, she said, "I suppose it's understandable. After all, in a small village people should be fascinated when the lady of the manor runs off."

"The British are just fascinated by the private lives of their aristocrats — and by complete accident, I have ended up being one of them."

The city of San Antonio has given Dora Guajardo five days to move out of this house, which is scheduled for demolition. Mrs. Guajardo says there is no reason to demolish the 80-year-old house, even though it slipped off its foundation three years ago and she and her husband are living in a room in a vacant building next door.

Woman believes collapsed house can be salvaged

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The city has given Dora Guajardo five days to move her belongings out of a house that has been declared unsafe and is to be destroyed.

But Mrs. Guajardo said there is no reason to demolish the 80-year-old house, which slipped off its foundation three years ago.

"I have talked with contractors and movers," she said. "They all tell me that part of the structure can be salvaged, but the city won't listen."

Gene Carmargo, director of the city's Building Inspection Department, said the city has told the woman the house is unsafe and must be demolished.

"Action on this structure has been delayed three years because the woman kept saying she was going to salvage part of the building," Carmargo said.

"But she hasn't done anything yet and the situation has gotten worse. The structure is slipping back even further," he said.

Mrs. Guajardo and her husband were forced to move out of the southside house after it collapsed. They have been living in a room in a vacant building next door.

Bill may require self-service stations to have air

AUSTIN (AP) — Larger service stations would be required to offer free air for tires and equipment for washing windshields under a bill filed in the Legislature Friday by a lawmaker who says it would make roads safer.

"A car with under-inflated tires or a dirty windshield is clearly not safe," said Al Price, D-Beaumont, who is sponsoring the legislation.

Price said the problem has been caused by the increasing number of self-service gas stations and convenience stores which only have fuel pumps.

"The reduction of the number of full-service gas stations and the increasing amount of fuel purchased from self-service stations and convenience stores has had a profound effect on the way Texans maintain their cars," Price said.

"No longer does someone check their oil, water, tires and clean their windshields. It is up to the customer to do it. Unfortunately, it isn't always easy to do this because fewer stations are providing the necessary equipment and materials to maintain vehicles," he said.

The bill would apply to any business with four or more fuel pumps. It would require them to offer free of charge air for tires, water for radiators and fluid and equipment for washing windshields.

The lawmaker said he drafted the bill to exempt those with fewer than four pumps to protect "small businesses and the mom and pop operators."

Price also introduced a bill to require that credit reporting bureaus notify people when the bureaus have received "adverse" credit information about them.

"The Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act allows a consumer to contest adverse credit information and to place their side of the story in their credit file. Unfortunately, this can only occur if you have knowledge that the adverse information is in your file," Price said.

He said the bill includes a provision to require creditors to notify a credit bureau when a problem has been resolved, so negative information won't dog people after they have paid a bill.

Lady Bird Johnson honored by Texas arts council

AUSTIN (AP) — A commemorative proclamation marking the 20th anniversary of the National Endowment for the Arts was presented to Lady Bird Johnson during an arts council ceremony on Friday.

The Texas Assembly of Arts Council gave Mrs. Johnson the commemorative proclamation and announced the creation of an endowment program which will honor the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Johnson signed the National Endowment for the Arts into law in September 1965. The endowment led to the creation of the Texas Commission on the Arts.

"He thought that arts ought not to be limited to just the great cities but the little towns and medium size towns too," Mrs. Johnson said of her husband.

"For me, in those years since, through changing climates of all sorts, this program has grown and flourished," she said.

The funds generated by the Lyndon Baines Johnson Arts Management Intern Endowment will be used to train two interns a year in arts management skills, said Peter Fox Jr., president of the Texas Council.

"The economic impact of the arts in Texas is projected to double during this decade and it is imperative that we provide trained arts management professionals to meet these growing demands," Fox said.

Ana Riddel, chairman of the board of the Texas Council said Johnson "expanded the horizons for all Americans for generations to come."

U.S. Congressman Jake Pickle, D-Austin, said $163 million was appropriated in 1964 for the arts of which Texas received in excess of $3 million.

Mrs. Johnson received congratulatory telegrams from President Reagan and Francis M. Hodsell, national endowment for the arts chairman.

Lincoln Mercury has designated
Joe White Lincoln Mercury of Odessa as its only dealer in this large West Texas zone to receive this special allotment of Lincolns and Lynx's. Maybe that's another reason Joe White has been the largest Lincoln Mercury dealer in West Texas for 23 years.
