Political signs missing from all over town

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

Local Republicans and Democrats alike were screaming "foul" when the sun came up Friday morning. More than 500 political signs were missing from all over town.

Sheriff Gary Painter said his office had been contacted by the Republican campaign in Midland reporting that at least 500 "Bush/Cheney," "Henry Bonilla," and "Tom Craddick" signs had been stolen.

Painter said the majority were the small yard signs posted on a stake, but a few of 3-foot-by-6-foot signs also had been taken.

"Whoever did it would have to have a truck, considering the size and number of signs taken," Painter said.

The other party was affected, too.

Midland County Democratic Party Chair Michael Higgins reported, "a handful of Gore signs were stolen."

Higgins said he was shocked by reports that 500 signs were taken. "Five hundred is an outrageous amount. This seems like an orchestrated effort."

Higgins said he never had heard of that many signs being stolen before.

He added, "The Democratic party supports the right of political organizations or individuals to display campaign material," Higgins said. "We deplore any form of intolerance."

Gore supporter Joyce Silverman said she watched someone take a 'Gore' sign out of her front yard Thursday morning.

"My animals were barking, and when I looked out the window, I saw a businessman in an SUV. When

County hoping land is donated for future route

■ TxDOT officials have pinpointed a potential spot for a reliever route for the La Entrada Al Pacifico about four miles north of Midland City limits. The land needed for the highway is divided up among private investors.

By Ian Heald

Faced with a tight budget, Midland County is hoping that some of its residents north of the city of Midland will donate portions of their land for a future international highway project.

The project in question is a 15-mile segment, or reliever route, of the La Entrada Al Pacifico, a highway that by 2015 will connect Midland to the Pacific Coast of Mexico, thus spurring trade and boosting the Permian Basin economy, proponents argue.

Many of the highways needed for the trade route already exist. But with plans of routing the highway through the north side of Midland County, something other than Loop 250 will be needed to accommodate the truck traffic.

Texas Department of Transportation officials in May pinpointed a potential spot for the highway approximately four miles north of Midland City limits, extending east-west from State Highway 349 to Farm-to-Market Road 1788.

But an exact route connecting SH 349 and FM 1788 has not yet been defined. The land needed for the highway is divided up among private investors.

TxDOT officials say they are in negotiations with approximately 20 landowners whose property would be affected by the new highway. The bulk of the land in question is owned by the SBC Corporation and Fasken Oil and Ranch Ltd. Spokespersons for each company were unavailable for comment.

The county has the jurisdiction to purchase the land from the owners, either through a negotiated deal or by claiming eminent

City Council studies possibility of raises based on merit, skills

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Although it is far from fruition, city officials are hoping in the future to implement a payment system that rewards employees for good performance while simultaneously saving the city money.

Under the current system, a city employee is limited in how much they can move up the pay scale. In some instances, city employees cannot progress beyond a certain point because of city budget limitations.

And when the City Council is asked to consider giving city employees a raise or cost-of-living adjustment, it does so for all employees at once; the exceptional and the average. City officials believe changes need to be made so excellent employees receive adequate raises while the mediocre or underperforming ones receive nothing more.

David Hunter, director of personnel for the city, is developing a system that would do just that. Under the new system, employees would have one review every

Texas Tech surveying health care needs of senior citizens

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

West Texas senior citizens are being asked to participate in what promises to be the most comprehensive survey of elderly health care needs to date.

"This is the most aggressive survey of the elderly that's been done," said Cookie Wetendorf, executive director of the Permian Basin Area Agency on Aging. "Once those needs are collected, it will give us the broadest view of the aging population's needs that we've ever had."

The survey, begun earlier this month, will continue until data have been collected from 5,000 West Texas residents in 205 counties, aged 65 and over, is being conducted by Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center with funding from the U.S. Administration on Aging.

"It's a random selection of people taken from residential listings," said James Rohrer, director of the Texas Tech 5000

White House Web site praises Texas progress

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After all the bad things Al Gore has been saying about the state of George W. Bush's Texas, it seems conditions there are on the mend after all.

Says who? The Clinton-Gore administration.

The White House has a Web section listing "Clinton-Gore administration accomplishments" state by state. Some of the headlines for Texas sound like a campaign ad that could be run by Gov. Bush, the Republican presidential candidate, and not at all like the Texas that Gore is describing in his Democratic campaign.

The White House says of the state:

■ "More high-quality teachers with smaller classes for Texas' schools."
■ "Crime falls 15 percent in Texas."
■ "496,746 fewer people on welfare."
■ "Health care for nearly 50,900 uninsured Texas children."
■ "More toddlers are being immunized."
■ "Child support collections up 178 percent."
■ "2,005,800 new jobs."
■ "Homeownership has increased in Texas."
■ "11 toxic waste sites cleaned up."

To be sure, the White House credits President Clinton and Vice President Gore, not Bush, with helping to bring about the 53 positive Texas trends it identifies. But altogether, it paints a rosier picture of Texas than the one Gore is trying to fix in voters' minds.

"This highlights the hypocrisy of Al Gore's attacks on Texas and further shows why he has a problem with credibility," said Bush spokesman Dan Bartlett.

Doug Hattaway, speaking for Gore, said the list merely shows that "some things have improved in Texas despite Governor Bush's misplaced priorities."

For the most part, Gore has not been contradicting the White House points. Instead, he's been accentuating the negative on Texas health care, education, the environment and more, trying to lay the blame at Bush's feet.

"Under Governor Bush, Texas has sunk to be 50th out of 50 in health care, in health insurance for their citizens," Gore said, for example, in the third presidential debate. "Houston's just become the smoggiest city in the country, and Texas is No. 1 in industrial pollution," he said in the second.

This week the Gore campaign challenged Bush's crime record in a way that contrasts vividly with the posted White House view.

"In fact, Texas now is fifth worst for overall crime and violent crime," the campaign said in a news release citing new FBI crime figures. "On his watch, crime has increased in Texas cities," it said

Navy revises key detail in sequence of events preceding Cole attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has revised its timetable of the events leading to the bombing of the USS Cole in Yemen, raising new questions about how the attackers foiled Navy security.

The Navy said Friday the explosion occurred nearly two hours after the Cole was moored to a fuel dock, not during the mooring operation, as it had said before. That would mean the boat believed to have detonated the explosives did not blend in with a flotilla of harbor craft to mask the attack, as the Navy had said.

It is now less clear than before how the attacking boat could have approached the Cole without raising suspicion.

The Oct. 12 attack killed 17 U.S. sailors and injured 39. The last four bodies recovered from the Cole on Thursday were prepared Friday to be flown back to the United States from Bahrain. The remains of eight other Cole victims were returned to Dover Air Force Base, Del., on Friday in preparation for burial.

Among the first set of five remains sent home last week was Craig Wibberley, a 19-year-old Maryland native. A wake and visitation were held Friday for Wibberley in Hagerstown, Md. He will be buried Saturday.

In a brief statement Friday, the Navy's Office of Information said earlier Navy statements now known to be erroneous were based on initial reports from the ship that were either wrong or were misunderstood by Pentagon officials. The Navy said it now has obtained additional information from the Cole's records that change at least three points of fact in the official timeline.

- The explosion occurred at 11:18 a.m. local time (4:18 a.m. EDT), or about an hour earlier than originally reported.
- Refueling began at 10:30 a.m. and was ongoing at the time of the attack. Before, the Navy had said refueling had not yet begun.
- The Cole was completely tied up at the fueling dock in Aden harbor at 9:30 a.m., nearly two hours before the attack. The Navy previously had said the mooring operation was completed just minutes before.

This last point is of particular significance to investigators because it would seem to undercut the theory previously advanced by Navy officials that the small boat seen sidling up to the Cole at the time of the explosion used the mooring operation — involving several harbor workboats — as a means of masking its attack.

Navy officials had said the attacking boat did not raise suspicions because it appeared to be part of the mooring operation, in which small harbor boats take the ship's lines to secure it to the floating dock.

The Navy has said the Cole and its crew were at the second-highest level of alert observed in the Fifth Fleet, of which the Cole was a part at that time. Crew members would have been assigned to watch through binoculars for boats approaching the Cole, and others keeping watch would have been armed with weapons.

Cmdr. Greg Smith, a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon, said the revised timeline was established this week by using more precise information from the Cole's records, information collected in response to an inquiry by the Navy Times newspaper, a nongovernment publication.

The Navy Times said an unidentified source associated with the port of Aden told it the Navy's original timeline was incorrect.

On the day of the attack, Adm. Vern Clark, the chief of naval operations, told a Pentagon news conference the explosion happened at 12:15 p.m. local time, that the Cole had just finished being tied up at the fuel dock and that the refueling had not yet begun He also said this information was based on initial reports from the scene and that he could not be sure it was "100 percent accurate."

Retired Navy Chief Petty Officer Louge Gunn, father of USS Cole crewmember, Signalman Seaman recruit Cherone Louis, of Rex, GA., gives Louis' cousin, Christian Taylor, 8, the flag that covered his uncles' casket during a funeral at Arlington National Cemetery, Friday. In all, 17 sailors were killed aboard the USS Cole in what U.S. officials believe was a terrorist suicide attack.

Pentagon and State Department officials canceled planned appearances Friday before a closed-door session of the Senate Armed Services Committee. The committee heard Thursday from retired Marine Corps Gen. Anthony Zinni, who said he made the decision to refuel at Aden, largely because there was no good alternative.

The administration told the committee Friday it needed more time to prepare for the hearing, said committee chairman Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

Asked if Aden should have been used for refueling Navy ships, Warner said, "I don't think any of us has had sufficient facts to reach any conclusions."

Midland, Odessa unite for Red Ribbon Week

By Brian Rogers
Staff Writer

Police and politicians from Midland and Odessa met Friday morning at the Friendship Marker on State Highway 191 Friday to kick off Red Ribbon Week.

Red Ribbon Week acknowledges the combined efforts of police, fire departments, and other local and national agencies in educating everyone about the importance of being drug free.

Executive director of Drug Free Youth in Texas Alma Thompson said Red Ribbon Week is a national movement that began in 1988 in response to the murder of DEA agent, Enrique (KiKi) Camarena.

"Red Ribbon Week is important not only because it increases drug awareness but it also honors Camarena," Ms. Thompson said.

Ms. Thompson said Red Ribbon Week brings Odessa and Midland together in a positive way, making them both better places to live.

"These activities constantly keep the message in front of people that drugs and alcohol are dangerous, especially to students," Ms. Thompson said.

Midland police chief John Urby said the kick-off was attended by about 80 people. "This reinforces the message that Midland and Odessa care about each other and the kids in both communities," Urby said.

Sheriff Gary Painter said it was the best turn out for a kick-off in years and he was impressed with the number of students involved.

"Red Ribbon Week draws attention to the fact that we have drug abuse in our community. We tend to focus on the kids that aren't doing well, but in reality, less than 10 percent of the kids are the problem. This allows us to recognize the kids who are doing good," Painter said.

Rid Ribbon Week activities will continue next week in Midland schools.

AREA BRIEFS

Fund-raisers

Xi Alpha Mu Sorority will host a fund-raiser to benefit the Thermal Imaging Camera fund for the Midland Fire Department next Saturday, Oct. 28, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The local sorority will be collecting quarters at the fire station at Midkiff and Haynes.

The "rescue cam" allows firefighters to see images by detecting body heat in a fire where, due to smoke, visibility is zero. The thermal imaging camera saves firefighters valuable time and reduces the amount of fire control damage for property owners, and most importantly, saves lives.

The Midland Fire Department has three "rescue cams". Their goal is to have one camera at each fire station, for a total of seven more cameras at about $17,000 each. All proceeds will go toward the purchase of the lifesaving camera.

Also, another fund-raiser will be held to benefit those same efforts.

A fast pitch softball game between the City of Midland firefighters and the Midland College women's softball team will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 28, at field No. 7 of the Ulmer Park Midland United Girls Softball Complex at the corner of Kentucky and Clark streets. All money raised will benefit the camera fund.

Drama workshop

The Second Baptist Church, 3125 Travis, will host a drama workshop today from 3-5 p.m. The workshop will be presented by The Company, a Christian drama team from Southwestern Seminary in Fort Worth.

The team will teach how to use dramatic exercises, how to create materials to use in your worship services, how to learn and develop improvisational skills, how to develop character and how to be interactive with other characters.

Snacks and drinks will be provided. The cost will be $10 per person. For more information or to register, call 694-9856.

Concert

"The Brashears," Arkansas' governor appointed-ambassador of goodwill, will be singing at South Memorial Baptist Church, 1900 W. Carter at 7 p.m. today. An offering will be received.

H.E.A.T. drive

The Midessa Auto Theft Task Force will be conducting a H.E.A.T. registration drive in Midland today at Rosa's Mexican Food Restaurant, 2501 Big Spring.

The Help End Auto Theft (H.E.A.T.) program allows citizens to register their car so any peace officer has permission to stop the car between 1-5 a.m. to determine if the person driving the car has permission to be driving the car.

In order to register your car, bring proof of insurance, driver's license, and proof of ownership to Rosa's between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. today. A fajita burrito will be given to each person who registers their car.

That FBI report also found the overall crime rate in Texas dropped 1.6 percent last year and the violent crime rate declined 0.8 percent.

The White House list trumpets declining crime in the state, its cities and among juveniles.

It generally uses figures back to 1993, the year Clinton and Gore took office, to show how far Texas has come since then. Bush has been governor since 1995..

STUDY: City looks at pay system

six months. Based on performance, certification, education and cost-of-living adjustment, a city worker could receive anywhere from a 3 percent to 8 percent raise. Underperforming employees and those who have not shown improvement would receive no raise.

"It would be based on performance and skills," Hunter said. "Instead of saying pay this amount of dollars, we'll pay this much for somebody with these skills. As they progress in skills and performance level so will their pay and consequently their level of responsibilities."

And Hunter claims the new program is anticipated to beg less of the city budget than the current pay system. But unlike the current system, the money would have to be available in the budget so proven employees could be compensated adequately on a regular basis. Such is not currently the case.

But, Hunter does not yet have numbers to convey the true benefits or cost savings of the prospective system.

"We think we'll save money," Hunter said. "The theory is that we will. It will allow people to progress if they take advantage of it. It saves money in that it just doesn't give across-the-board raises to everybody."

'It saves money in that it just doesn't give across-the-board raises to everybody.'
— David Hunter, director of personnel for the city

The payment system won't be considered for adoption until early 2002.

Council member Bill Dingus supports changing the city's compensation system.

"I think it's a good thing that we're looking at the overall pay structure," Dingus said. "The way we look at it currently is that when we give raises, everybody gets one. That's not good for morale. That's not good for rewarding excellence. The current structure we have has stranded a lot of people without the hope of a raise. This new system I hope will enable more people to receive more raises more often."

ELDERLY: Survey is strictly voluntary

(From 1A)

Senior Poll. "We call and ask if someone 65 or older lives there. We ask general questions about their health, specific diseases, functional abilities. And there are some questions about their satisfaction with their health care, ability to get appointments, if they think the care is what it should be. It's an opportunity for seniors to tell health care providers what they need."

He stressed that the survey, strictly voluntary, does not target only patients at Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

"We don't even ask where they get their health care," he said. "This is for all patients and health care providers."

Rohrer added that the survey is important because "For one thing, there's never been a study like this. First, it deals with a frontier population — a mix of urban and rural residents. Second, it crosses populations — minority and Anglo, and third it crosses care groups. We're measuring if physicians are doing as well treating diabetes as they are heart disease."

Ms. Wetendorf added that the data uncovered in the survey are important because they "will identify what the needs are and how we can as a region help meet those needs. It also gives us grounds for advocating for more funding. This will benefit not just the elderly but all residents — adults, care givers. We Baby Boomers will need those services in place. We need so much of it now and we're already behind."

She said when she learned of the survey, she announced it to regional senior centers and aging networks to help educate the elderly — already cautious about telephone surveys and solicitations — that the company contracted by Texas Tech is experienced in surveying the elderly and will identify themselves as agents of Texas Tech.

Rohrer said preliminary numbers should be available in December, and next February Tech will begin a second survey that will seek more in-depth information about senior health care.

With the first survey, he said, surveyors are collecting demographic information and information on health care quality and needs such as transportation barriers, he said, and getting permission from respondents to contact them again.

"This will enable us to look at their health care and see if their health improves or declines. We want to track them. In February, we want to dig into more detail, ask about their medications, their dosage and affordability. We want a continuous dialogue about health care."

He urged senior West Texans contacted to participate.

"We want them to look at this as winning the lottery, not as a burden," he said.

POLICE REPORTS

Drug arrest

The Midland County Sheriff's Office confirmed that Frederico Vijar, 54, was arrested Friday at 6:45 p.m. in the 1000 block of Mineola Street on charges of manufacturing and/or delivering over one gram, but less than four grams of cocaine.

Mark Greenhaw, of the Trans-Pecos Drug Task Force, said the task force and Midland County Sheriff's Office executed a search warrant for two arrests.

"Through the power of undercover work, we stopped major distribution center, at least for awhile," Greenhaw said.

He also said at the time of the bust the house was occupied by two juveniles, three adults and two infants.

"We had intelligence that high school kids had been in the house, presumably buying, so we used kid gloves in this bust. We want to take the narcotics off of the street, but we don't want to endanger innocent people, unnecessarily," Greenhaw said.

The second suspect remains at large.

STOLEN: Stealing political signs is misdemeanor

(From 1A)

he got out and looked up and down the block, I knew he was after my sign. By the time I got to my front yard, he was already gone," Ms. Silverman said.

She also said the man was definitely more than 50 years old.

Ms. Silverman said she did not call the police because she didn't realize it was a crime to steal political signs.

"People pull down 'garage sale' signs all of the time," she said.

Republican Party Chairman Sue Brannon said, "People started calling Thursday night reporting missing signs. The signs cost a dollar each; and that's all the signs we had. We've called the printer to get more, but I just can't imagine who would stoop this low," Mrs. Brannon said.

"This has just made us more determined to get everybody to vote, so the Republicans will all win in landslides," Mrs. Brannon continued.

Mrs. Brannon said she hoped the signs would be recovered, and those who are responsible would be punished. "That's a lot of signs to dispose of, so unless they are in a warehouse, the authorities may be able to find them," Mrs. Brannon said.

Mrs. Brannon said the Ector County Republican Party will be sending more than 50 signs, which will be up by Monday.

"The chief of police and the sheriff have both assured me personally that officers are out looking for these signs," Mrs. Brannon continued.

Democrat David Rosen said of the thefts of both parties' signs, "Not only is it morally wrong, but it is legally wrong. Although we don't approve of Bush's policies, we certainly don't approve of any signs being taken down."

Sargent Victor Rivera of the Midland Police Department said he isn't aware of similar incidents in any previous campaigns.

Stealing a political sign is a Class C misdemeanor with a maximum fine of $500.

Stealing 500 political signs is a Class A misdemeanor with a maximum penalty of one year of jail time and a maximum fine of $4,000.

Officer Sherry Thompson of the Odessa Police Department said there has not been any report of numerous political signs being taken in Odessa.

The investigation continues, according to Sargent Ed Krevit, of the Midland sheriff's office.

LAND: County, TxDOT negotiating right of way domain. Right of way needed for the highway will be 1,200 feet wide.

(From 1A)

But, the county budget is tight. And without knowing what the estimated costs of purchasing 15 miles of right of way could be, County Judge Bill Morrow conceded the county probably could not afford to make the purchases.

So instead of paying landowners for the right of way, Morrow said landowners may be convinced to just donate the land.

"We're kind of negotiating on that," Morrow said. "A lot have indicated they would donate. That's what we're working on. They would get access to an international road. It's an advantage for them to do it. The disadvantage to some would be how it cuts up some of their property."

Still, the majority of property owners have been receptive to the idea, said Ajay Shakyaver, advanced planning engineer for TxDOT.

"The property owners have been pragmatic and realistic," Shakyaver said. "They see this as something good for the community, not just their own personal interests. They see the potential for Midland having a more diverse economic base. They see this as something that might benefit the community in the long run. We're trying to avoid relocating somebody or negatively impacting a business. It's really like threading a needle."

And property owners aren't the only obstacle.

"There are serious utilities out there with TXU and Caprock transmission lines," Shackyaver added. "There are caliche pits, oil wells, gas wells. All these things need to be taken into consideration. Based on our field investigation we will come up with cost estimates."

Next on the agenda will be an aerial survey of the land in question.

"That's a vast area and they can't access it by road," Morrow said. "They're going to fly it with some check points on an aerial map, see what it looks like. The overhead view will show the obstacles in the proposed path."

Once the aerial survey and negotiations are completed, Shakyaver said a route could be finalized by January. Route selection will be followed by an environmental impact study. Construction of the reliever route is scheduled to begin in 2003.

Jimmy Carter to leave Southern Baptist Convention

ATLANTA — Jimmy Carter, a third-generation Southern Baptist and the first U.S. president to call himself a born-again Christian, has reached what he calls "a painful decision" to sever ties to the Southern Baptist Convention, saying that parts of its "increasingly rigid" doctrines violated the "basic premises of my Christian faith."

His decision, announced on Thursday in a letter that is being mailed this week to 75,000 Baptists nationwide, comes four months after the Southern Baptist Convention, the United States' largest Protestant denomination, declared its opposition to women serving as pastors, and in the same doctrinal statement, adopted last June, called for a literal interpretation of the Bible. Two years ago the group called for wives to be submissive to their husbands.

"I have seen an increasing inclination on the part of Southern Baptist Convention leaders to be more rigid on what is a Southern Baptist and exclusionary of accommodating those who differ from them," he said in a brief interview Friday." In the last couple of years this tendency of the Southern Baptist Convention leadership to ordain their creed on others has become more onerous for me and more difficult for me to accept."

The Southern Baptist Convention president, the Rev. James G. Merritt, said Friday that while he was saddened by Carter's decision, he did not expect a mass exodus. More than 41,000 churches belong to the convention, he said. And while a handful of churches have left, he said, many more new Southern Baptist churches have been built. His group could not provide hard numbers.

"The vast majority of Southern Baptists are extremely happy with the direction the convention is taking," said Merritt, pastor of First Baptist Church in Snellville. "We felt the need to turn our denomination back to a more conservative theology, and for whatever reason the president did not agree with that."

"I think it's a sad day for him," Merritt added. "It's a sad day for us."

Carter's announcement is the most high-profile defection yet from the Southern Baptist Convention. He not only made his born-again Baptist beliefs a part of his public life during and after his presidency but also helped move evangelical Christianity closer to the American mainstream. He still teaches Sunday school at the Maranatha Baptist Church in his hometown of Plains.

"He made talking about Jesus Christ a part of our public discourse in politics," said Douglas Brinkley, a historian at the University of New Orleans, who has written a book about Carter's postpresidential years.

But Carter's decision to dissociate himself from the national denomination is also the latest sign that as conservatives have wrested control of the group over the last 15 years, liberal and moderate believers are giving up hope of having a home among them.

In recent years, a handful of churches have broken off from the national group or joined alternative national networks, like the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, based in Atlanta, of which Carter is a member. The Texas and Virginia state Baptist conventions have rejected the national group's latest doctrinal changes.

"In Southern Baptist Convention history, this is a very big moment," Brinkley said. "The born-again Southern Baptist president breaking with the hierarchy of the church because of their rigidity and dictatorial posturing. I think turmoil will result in the Southern Baptist Convention because of this."

Politicians on both sides of the aisle are Southern Baptists, Brinkley said, from President Clinton and Vice President Al Gore to Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss. "Here's Jimmy Carter questioning their conscience," he added. "It's like going to an all-white country club."

Carter's announcement is strategically timed, coming just weeks before the annual meeting of the Georgia Baptist Convention in Savannah, where the statewide body is to vote on a resolution affirming the national group's revised [illegible], known as the Baptist Faith and Message.

'I have seen an increasing inclination on the part of Southern Baptist Convention leaders to be more rigid on what is a Southern Baptist and exclusionary of accommodating those who differ from them.'

— former President Jimmy Carter

In the interview and letter, Carter singled out the provision that calls for a literal interpretation of Scripture, saying he feared that interpretations of the Bible would be left to the conservative national leadership and not to individuals and their churches.

"I have been disappointed and feel excluded by the adoption of policies and an increasingly rigid Southern Baptist Convention creed, including some provisions that violate the basic premises of my Christian faith," he wrote in the letter, addressed simply "To My Fellow Baptist."

"As Georgia Baptists," it continued, "we are quite concerned by the effort of SBC leaders to impose their newly adopted creed on our state convention."

He discussed his decision in an interview published in Friday's Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

In an interview Friday, Carter said the decision was painful for him and his wife, Rosalynn. Being a Southern Baptist, he explained, had been a natural and unquestioned part of his life. "I became a South Baptist when I was 11 years old," Carter, now 75, said. "My father was a Southern Baptist before me and so was my grandfather. Rose's grandfather was a Baptist. We never had questioned that fact before."

House GOP seeking long-term health care tax break compromise with Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Striving for a last-minute election-year accomplishment, House Republicans are negotiating with President Clinton on tax breaks to help people pay for long-term care for the elderly and disabled as well as their own insurance premiums.

The long-term care issue is one of several health-related tax measures costing $75 billion over 10 years that could emerge in a final package Congress is expected to move next week — some of them linked to a $1 increase in the minimum wage sought by the president.

With powerful opposition in their own ranks to Clinton's proposed $3,000 tax credit for long-term health care, House GOP leaders have outlined an alternative letting people claim a tax deduction on up to $10,000 a year in long-term care expenses, Republican leadership sources said Friday, speaking on condition of anonymity. The bottom-line benefit of the deduction would vary based on a taxpayer's income.

House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., is also insisting on a new tax deduction for people who pay at least 50 percent of their own health insurance premiums. The nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation estimates this could help 26 million people when fully effective in 2007 — including 1.6 million people who previously couldn't afford health insurance.

The break would apply "above the line," meaning people could claim it on Internal Revenue Service forms whether or not they itemize their tax deductions.

"We have proposed that individuals be given the same opportunity to write off health care costs as big corporations," Hastert said in an opinion piece published Friday by The Washington Post.

The health care items are part of an end-of-session tax cut totaling up to $260 billion over 10 years that Republican leaders intend to finalize next week. The GOP wants to gear much of those tax cuts toward small businesses, contending they are needed to offset the higher labor costs of a $1 increase sought by Democrats in the $5.15-an-hour minimum wage over two years.

Other items expected in the tax package are expanded contribution limits for IRAs and 401(k) accounts, tax incentives aimed at reviving impoverished areas, several small business tax breaks and a new export tax regime for U.S. corporations to replace a system invalidated by the World Trade Organization.

Under current law, taxpayers can only deduct health expenses that exceed 7.5 percent of their adjusted gross income.

The White House has repeatedly pushed for tax relief targeted at the needs of middle-class people. An administration source, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Clinton and Hastert have discussed ways to compromise on long-term care, particularly since it is not a politically divisive issue in the presidential race between Al Gore and George W. Bush.

The gist of a recent Clinton-Hastert conversation, said a GOP source, was, "Why can't we do it now?"

The $10,000 long-term care tax deduction is being floated by GOP House leaders partly because of staunch opposition to new tax credits in general by Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing Ways and Means Committee. Credits have a constant value no matter how much a taxpayer earns, while a deduction's value depends on a taxpayer's income.

"A tax credit becomes a spending program — a spending program administered by the IRS, which is not set up for that purpose," Archer said this week in explaining his opposition to credits in general.

Archer has proposed a new personal exemption for long-term care of a relative in a taxpayer's home, which this year would be worth $2,750.

Democrats have raised questions about Hastert's proposed tax deduction for health insurance costs. Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said it would help only a fraction of the estimated 43 million people with no health insurance, would mostly benefit people who can already afford premiums and might persuade some employers to drop coverage they provide.

"This is another case of the Republicans using the uninsured as an excuse to give tax breaks to other groups, including the affluent who already have health insurance," said Rangel, senior Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee.

The health-related portion of the tax package is also expected to immediately permit self-employed people to fully deduct their health insurance premiums, which is sooner than under current law, and contain incentives for people to take out health insurance policies.

GE bids on Honeywell

NEW YORK TIMES — General Electric has made an offer to buy Honeywell International, executives close to the talks said Friday, scuttling a bid by United Technologies Corp..

General Electric would likely keep some of Honeywell's businesses while selling off other parts of the company, the executives said. Details of General Electric's offer were not available.

United Technologies, an old-style conglomerate which makes everything from jet engines to elevators, had offered to buy Honeywell for about $40.3 billion in stock but called off the talks after it learned another suitor had emerged.

Before General Electric made its offer, the boards of both United Technologies and Honeywell had been planning to meet Friday to approve the deal. Those two companies on Thursday issued a news release confirming they were "in discussions regarding a possible business combination."

But Friday afternoon Peter Murphy, a spokesman for United Technologies, issued a brief statement that said Honeywell officials had told United Technologies this morning that their company was considering another offer.

Honeywell confirmed the merger talks with United were over, but did not identify the new suitor.

The acquisition of Honeywell by United Technologies would have created an industrial behemoth, bringing together United Technologies' Otis Elevators, Pratt & Whitney aircraft engines, Sikorsky helicopters and Carrier air-conditioners, with Honeywell's aerospace systems, power and transportation products, specialty chemicals and home security systems.

According to the executives, United Technologies had offered about 0.74 of a share, or $50.32, for each of about 801 million outstanding shares of Honeywell, making the purchase price $40.3 billion.

Honeywell has had a rough year both in terms of stock price and earnings, and several analysts have said it was vulnerable to takeover.

The merger between United Technology and Honeywell had made sense to many analysts because the two companies have many complementary businesses. The companies had hoped to save about $1 billion annually by combining, the executives said.

AUCTION
OIL & GAS PROPERTY BUY/SELL MADE EASY
OCTOBER 24 & 25, HOBBS COUNTRY CLUB, HOBBS, N.M.
OCTOBER 26 in MIDLAND CENTER, MIDLAND, TX.
Over $500 Million Worth Of Oil & Gas Leases/Minerals To Be Auctioned...
THE OPTION PROCESS
Today's oil and gas industry is characterized by a renewed sense of stability and opportunity. There is increased activity and TRADE DAYS, INC. has reactivated this auction process at the request of many of its clients.
Many of you, though, are not familiar with our process of auctioning options on property. Let me explain:
• First, the seller agrees with TRADE DAYS to sell the property through TRADE DAY'S option process at a specific minimum auction price and furnishes information which will be made available to potential buyers.
• Individuals and companies bid for a six (6) day option to purchase the property at a stated minimum price, which typically sells for an option ranging from several hundred to several thousand dollars to hold property valued up in the millions.
• In the six (6) day option period, the property can be examined by a geologist, title search made, pumper contacted, and an on-site inspection performed. Doubling the option money extends the option agreement after purchasing the option at the auction.
• The seller has placed a minimum price on the property, but the buyer has the choice to negotiate with the seller on purchase price as a part of a purchase and sale agreement executed by the Buyer and the Seller with TRADE DAYS INC. as agent.
• In these privately held auctions, all that is auctioned is the option to evaluate and research the property for up to six (6) days, during which the winning bidder has the exclusive right to buy the lease at a full price or a negotiated price with the seller.
• Should the option bidding exceed 20% of the minimum price for the property, the auction converts to bidding on the property itself and is sold at final auction. A real-life example; the bid option for a one-million dollar piece of property exceeded the 20% value of the property ($200,000) and the property was immediately re-auctioned for a final sale price of $1.29 million.
TRADE DAYS, INC. conceived this way of marketing oil and gas property in order to make the evaluation process more cost effective and timely for the buyer. This process eliminates the expensive advance due diligence that is wasted when a buyer is outbid on a chosen parcel. This concept of putting down a small amount of cash in order to optimize the opportunity to evaluate and make the purchase decision on the oil and gas property provides a new level of excellence in auction effectiveness, insuring minimal risk for the buyer.
There are also pluses for the seller as well. These include the seller's option to set the minimum bid price, the short tie-up period for the property, few people with whom to deal with before the sale, and only one winning party with whom to deal. Another advantage is that the seller can walk in the day of the sale and list the property, thus minimizing the cost of advertising fees and related expenses.

Co-defendant ties bin Laden to embassy bombings plot

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Army sergeant pleaded guilty Friday to helping plot the deadly U.S. embassy bombings in Africa, admitting he joined terrorist mastermind Osama bin Laden and others in a holy war to kill Americans anywhere they could be found.

Ali Mohamed, a 48-year-old native of Egypt, became the first person to plead guilty or to be convicted of murder charges resulting from the Aug. 7, 1998, bombings in Nairobi, Kenya, and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. The attacks killed 224 people, including 12 Americans.

Mohamed and bin Laden were among 17 people named in an indictment that resulted from the bombings. Eight are fugitives, including bin Laden, the Saudi-born millionaire who allegedly engineered the bombings and is believed to be in Afghanistan.

Mohamed, a U.S. citizen who once taught soldiers in the American special forces about Muslim culture, said he was part of a jihad, or holy war, to cleanse the Middle East of Western influence. He said he joined the conspiracy in the early 1980s, before meeting bin Laden and before joining the Army for a three-year stint that ended in 1989.

Mohamed said he was told by bin Laden in late 1993 to survey potential U.S., British, French and Israeli targets in Nairobi, preparing a report with pictures and diagrams of the American Embassy, the U.S. Agency for International Development Building, the U.S. Agricultural office, the French Cultural Center and the French Embassy.

"These targets were selected to retaliate against the United States for its involvement in Somalia," he said.

The work was later reviewed by bin Laden in Sudan, Mohamed said.

"Bin Laden looked at the picture of the American Embassy and pointed to where a truck could go as a suicide bomber," Mohamed said.

Mohamed, who was scheduled to go on trial in January, pleaded guilty to five counts. He admitted he conspired with bin Laden and others to murder Americans, to attack the U.S. military in Somalia and Saudi Arabia, to kill Americans at unspecified embassies, and to conceal the conspiracy.

U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand at first said the plea bargain with prosecutors guaranteed a minimum of 25 years in prison. After defense attorneys objected, the judge did not specify the potential prison term.

Prosecutors declined to comment.

In entering his plea, Mohamed read from a three-minute statement in which he said the goal of the conspiracy was to force the United States and other Western governments out of the Middle East. In response to a question, he said one means of forcing the United States out was the killing of Americans.

Mohamed made no effort to apologize for his actions or to express regret.

He admitted he helped secretly move bin Laden from Pakistan to Sudan in 1991 and gave members of his terrorist organization, al Qaeda, military and basic explosives training in Afghanistan. The goal, he said, was to create terrorist cell organizations.

Mohamed also said the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, a guerrilla group, trained members of bin Laden's terrorist organization in the early 1990s.

In the 1980s, Hezbollah was believed to be behind pro-Iranian militants who claimed responsibility for the 1983 suicide truck bombings of the U.S. Embassy and the U.S. Marine and French military bases in Beirut, three attacks that killed 258 Americans and 58 French soldiers.

Mohamed said he once arranged security for a meeting in the Sudan between Hezbollah's chief and bin Laden. He also said Iran supplied bin Laden's group with weapons and with explosives that were "disguised to look like rocks."

Gunman kills self after shooting two others in courthouse

YREKA, Calif. (AP) — A man accused of sexual assault pulled a gun in a courthouse hallway Friday and shot one of his alleged victims and her husband, then killed himself as sheriff's deputies closed in.

The jury had just begun deliberations in the case against Edward Lansdale, 68, when he fired two shots into Amber Pearce, an Oklahoma woman who was brought to Yreka to testify against him.

Pearce's husband, Jeffrey, also was wounded.

Husband and wife, both 26, were hospitalized in stable condition. Amber Pearce was shot in the abdomen, her husband in the leg.

Lansdale fatally shot himself in the head on a stairway landing at the Siskiyou County Courthouse, authorities said.

Lansdale had been on trial all week, charged with taking two girls into his home when they were teens and having sexual intercourse. Amber Pearce was 14 at the time.

Lansdale faced nearly 60 years in prison if convicted of all charges. He was free on bail during the trial.

Prosecutor Bill Davis said Landsdale "went into the bathroom right after he left the courtroom and then he came out with the gun."

Undersheriff Mike Lyon said there are airport-like metal detectors used outside two of the three courtrooms. Officers also use portable metal detectors at the third courtroom.

There are no detectors at the courthouse entrance, Lyon said, because officials decided it would be too costly and an "inconvenience to the general public."

CAMPAIGN 2000

Gore: Clinton's help welcome but 'I am running on my own'

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Al Gore said Friday he'd welcome homestretch help from President Clinton but everyone should remember, "This is a campaign that I am running on my own."

For his part, the president said he wasn't sure how much he could influence the election, less than three weeks away.

"People make their decisions independently, so it would only matter if I had an argument to make (that) people would listen to," Clinton said after he and Gore attended a memorial service for the late Gov. Mel Carnahan. Asked if he could do more for Gore, Clinton told reporters, "I don't know. I think it's not time yet, you know?"

Some supporters have been urging Gore to ask for more help from the man he's served with for the past eight years. However, the two are not expected to campaign together.

"The president is my friend and I appreciate his help in the campaign," Gore said in a brief interview with The Associated Press on Friday. "We've had a chance to work together and we've been able to accomplish a lot of good things on behalf of the American people."

'I am running in my own right with my own vision for the future of the country.'
— Al Gore

Asked if he planned joint appearances with Clinton during the campaign's closing days, Gore said that the president's own schedule is crowded with Congress and the Middle East, and details of how he might help the campaign haven't been worked out.

As for Republican George W. Bush, Gore took a new swipe at his rival's plans for partially privatizing the Social Security system, saying Bush must clarify how he would make up for money that people might take out of the system for private investments.

"The days are ticking down and Governor Bush has a choice to make," Gore said. "It's time for him to tell us whether he will break his promise and cut benefits or raise the retirement age. Which will it be and when will he tell us?"

Bush has said repeatedly that his plan would require no such drastic adjustment.

Gore rarely mentions Clinton on the campaign trail, though he says the economic prosperity built up while the two have been in office is the foundation of his campaign. Aides to both men say Gore's arms-length approach to Clinton has caused tensions between the men, though Gore himself denied it.

A main reason Gore and his supporters have not pressed for more appearances with Clinton is concern about fallout from the president's personal problems. When asked whether Clinton would represent more of a negative or positive force, Gore deflected the question.

Gore noted that Clinton has made campaign appearances on his behalf.

But he added, "This is a campaign that I am running on my own. I am running in my own right with my own vision for the future of the country."

McCain campaigns with Bush in Maine

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Sen. John McCain campaigned side by side with George W. Bush on Friday, saying the man who bested him for the GOP nomination was "fully prepared" to serve as commander in chief.

It was the second time the two former rivals had campaigned together since the GOP convention in August.

"We found out with the USS Cole that we live in a dangerous world," McCain said, referring to the terrorist attack on a U.S. warship on Oct. 12 in Yemen. Seventeen sailors were killed and 39 injured in the explosion.

McCain, a Vietnam War pilot and prisoner of war, criticized Democrats for dismissing Bush's expressions of concern bout the state of military readiness.

"It is unpatriotic not to talk about military readiness," he asserted.

McCain shared the stage with the GOP presidential nominee at an airport rally here after bowing out of an earlier scheduled appearance at St. Anselm College in Manchester, N.H.

McCain's upset victory in the New Hampshire primary last February, drawing strong support from independents, jolted Bush's presidential effort.

At the Maine rally, Bush renewed the appeal for independents and Democrats that he makes frequently in swing states.

"I'm counting on you in the next nearly two weeks to find a neighbor, convince a friend to go to the polls, and don't be afraid if they're an open-minded Democrat or an independent either, because you know what? Open-minded Democrats and independents want to change Washington, D.C., They're tired of what's going on," he said.

Both the Bush and Gore campaigns were adjusting their ad strategies entering what's known as "week two," the second-to-last week of the campaign.

Bush was pumping up his TV advertising in normally Democratic Minnesota and in Tennessee, Gore's home state. Gore was responding in Tennessee, edging up his spending there. But there were no immediate plans to buy ads in Minnesota.

Bush was also alone on the air in California, where the Republican National Committee was adding to its advertising in Los Angeles, bringing spending there to about $900,000 next week.

The campaigns were in a high-priced ad war in Florida, with the Democratic National Committee planning to increase its advertising to nearly $900,000 next week.

Before Friday, Bush and McCain had campaigned only once together since Bush received the GOP nomination, a train trip in California the week between the two conventions. However, McCain has been campaigning on his own for Bush and for GOP congressional candidates.

McCain's staff said he did not make the first event Friday because of food poisoning caused by tainted catfish that he had eaten the day before in Mississippi.

However, McCain made no mention of the ailment in his remarks, and he bounded up the stairs of Bush's campaign plane to greet him, then energetically shook hands with those in the crowd.

"We're coming down the stretch and I want your help. Let's go to work and get the vote out," Bush told several thousand cheering supporters.

McCain praised Bush's performance in the three presidential debates, calling him "calm ... assured ... and fully prepared to restore integrity and respect to the White House."

"On the other side, we saw three different people," he said, suggesting Vice President Al Gore's personality changed from debate to debate.

Both McCain and Bush referred to their bitter primary battle.

"I didn't particularly like him when he beat me in New Hampshire," said Bush. "But I'm a better candidate. This man put me through my paces."

Gore, meanwhile, was launching a television campaign in New Hampshire reminding voters that McCain argued in the primary season that Bush offered "not one new penny for Social Security."

"That's anything but straight talk," the Gore ad says, mimicking McCain's campaign slogan.

The Bush campaign called the ad misleading.

"Our friendship is now as strong as ever," Bush said, invoking McCain's name several times at the New Hampshire event.

Nine killed in clashes throughout West Bank; helicopters fire over villages

NABLUS, West Bank (AP) — Defying an Israeli deadline for a truce, Palestinian gunmen and rock-throwers attacked Israeli soldiers at West Bank friction points on Friday. The Israelis returned fire, killing nine Palestinians in the deadliest day of fighting in two weeks.

The clashes, in which Israeli tanks and combat helicopters also fired on Palestinian positions near Jerusalem and Bethlehem, all but destroyed hopes that a cease-fire declared at an emergency Mideast summit earlier this week would hold.

Prime Minister Ehud Barak, speaking after the passing of a 4 p.m. deadline set by Israel for an end to the violence, indicated Israel would wait and see what happens at an Arab League summit this weekend, then decide if it would continue with the peace process.

After the summit, he said, if it appears that the violence is continuing, "we will take time out to re-evaluate the situation of the peace process," Barak said on Israeli TV. He said Israel would take "as much time as is needed to evaluate the situation."

In Friday's worst clash, south of the West Bank town of Nablus, gunmen hiding behind olive trees opened fire on Israeli soldiers just moments after the deadline expired. Israeli soldiers returned fire, and four Palestinians were killed.

Two Palestinians, ages 13 and 17, were killed by Israeli fire in rock-throwing clashes in the West Bank town of Ramallah and the village of Salfit. Both were killed by shots to the head. In other deaths, a 16-year-old stone-thrower was killed in the town of Qalqiliya, a 21-year-old in Jenin, and another 16-year-old in the town of Tulkarem, bringing the day's death toll to nine.

The fighting also reached the outskirts of Jerusalem and Bethlehem. Israeli combat helicopters fired on the village of Beit Sahour, next to Bethlehem, in response to Palestinian fire, the army said.

Israeli tanks also fired at Palestinian positions in the nearby Arab village of Beit Jala after gunmen there fired on the Jewish neighborhood of Gilo, built on land captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war, police said. No casualties were immediately reported.

President Clinton had hoped that a truce would take hold before the weekend and eventually pave the way for a resumption of Israeli-Palestinian peace talks. But Friday's gun battles quelled hopes that the three-week-old fighting would end soon. The violence has left 113 people dead, the vast majority Palestinians.

Israel has said its troops have shown great restraint, while the Palestinians have accused Israeli soldiers of using excessive force. In addition to those killed, hundreds of Palestinians have been injured.

A government spokesman, Avi Pazner, blamed the violence on Arafat's Palestinian Authority, which he said had encouraged rioters in the streets.

"We see that the incidents are getting worse as a direct result of the behavior of Yasser Arafat and the Palestinian Authority," Pazner said.

Barak held an unscheduled meeting with Likud opposition leader Ariel Sharon, who has repeatedly said he would reject participating in an emergency unity government. Entering the meeting, Barak said he thought the chances now of a unity government were "very good, but it takes two."

"The people need this, the nation needs this," he said.

The commander of Israeli forces in the West Bank, Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Eitan, said earlier Friday that Israeli soldiers would respond with force to cease-fire violations, especially by the Tanzim militiamen linked to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's Fatah movement.

"If the Palestinians won't stop the Tanzim movement from shooting at our forces, we will not have any choice but to shoot back," he said.

The violence came on the eve of the Arab summit in Cairo, a gathering Arafat has sought as a show of broad support for the Palestinian cause. Israeli officials have accused Arafat of orchestrating the violence to improve his standing in the eyes of Arab leaders leading up to the summit.

At the Mideast emergency summit earlier this week, Israel and the Palestinians had agreed that there would be a two-day transition period leading to a cease-fire.

Israel initially did not set a specific deadline, but Israeli Foreign Minister Shlomo Ben-Ami announced Friday that Israel expected the truce to take hold by 4 p.m.

"We don't care about the deadline," said Teissir Natche, 17, a stone thrower in Hebron. "We just want a Palestinian state, with Jerusalem as its capital."

Moments after the deadline passed, the gunfire began.

In Ramallah, some 2,000 demonstrators marched toward an Israeli checkpoint, unleashing a barrage of stones at troops there. Within minutes, about 20 Palestinians were injured by Israeli rubber bullets.

Groups of rioters overturned burned car wrecks again and again, using them as cover to approach the Israeli positions. One Palestinian teen-ager who had taken cover behind a wreck was struck in the head by a live bullet that killed him instantly. Soldiers continued shooting as other Palestinians tried to evacuate the body.

In a moment of lull, a young rioter crouched behind one of the wrecks to adjust his green headband which signals support for the Islamic militant group Hamas.

AP Photo

The body of Ala Beni Nimera, 13, reportedly fatally shot by Israeli soldiers in the West Bank village of Salfit, southwest of Nablus is carried during his funeral procession Friday. Defying an Israeli deadline for a truce, Palestinian gunmen and rock-throwers attack Israeli soldiers in the West Bank, setting off gunbattles in which nine Palestinians are killed - the deadliest day of fighting in two weeks.

'Cursed firewater' brings death to El Salvador

SAN VICENTE, El Salvador (AP) — Antonio Lopez Maldonado thanks God he is merely blind — the liquor that robbed him of his sight has killed 119 people across El Salvador in the last three weeks, dozens in San Vicente alone.

"It was only one drink, a drink of that cursed firewater," Lopez, 51, said from his hospital bed Thursday, rubbing his eyes with his hands.

"Every day I hope to see the light when I wake up, but everything is black. Today the doctor told me I will never see again. The cursed firewater left me this way."

In this community of 60,000 people, 40 people died and 27 were, for a time, gravely ill. Lopez is one of two left blind.

The federal prosecutor's office says alcoholic drinks laced with methyl alcohol are to blame.

All the victims drank either an alcohol sold in small shops and used to spike juice or a cane-sugar alcohol known as "Trueno" — Spanish for "Thunder." Both are common here. But in recent weeks, some have contained methyl alcohol, officials say.

Regional prosecutor Juan Carlos Fuentes Real said authorities are still investigating how the methyl alcohol got into the drinks. Tests of Trueno at the factory and in shops did not turn up adulterated products.

The results have been tragic.

Most of the 119 people who have died across the nation were farmers or poor city dwellers. And many Salvadorans suspect the toll was higher, because some deaths are not carefully recorded.

"They say ... some died in the street, others died in their homes. They are so poor that they had no money to be taken to the hospital," said Napoleon Vigil, director of San Vicente's Santa Gertrudis hospital, where 35 people have died.

In his hospital room, Lopez sat beside Jose Roberto Ruiz, 35, the other man left blinded by the liquor.

"A friend gave it to me," said Lopez, who has five children. "I'm not used to drinking but I was tired. I thought it would pick me up and it almost killed me."

Ruiz said he had purchased 90-proof alcohol at a pharmacy. "I mixed it with water and took a drink and that left me blind," he said.

"It was only a little ... but when I drank it, it felt oily and soapy," he said. "I slept and I haven't seen the sun since."

Local officials have tried to ban the sale of Trueno, but the drink has long been popular because a bottle costs only about 80 cents.

On Friday, the national congress enacted a 10-day ban on the sale of liquor containing more than 25 percent alcohol. Police have raided more than 100 shops and seized their bottles.

Those who violate the sales ban face fines ranging from $1,150 to $57,471.

Chess king Kasparov faces dangerous threat

LONDON (AP) — Chess superstar Garry Kasparov frowned, shook his head and muttered under his breath.

The 37-year-old Russian, famed for his intimidating stare, his arrogance over the chessboard and the psychological pressure he exerts on opponents, looked astonished — but at his own blunders, not his challenger's.

Kasparov has ruled the chess world for 15 years, surviving five previous challenges. But the man who once declared chess a violent sport where players "are plotting to crush one another" and destroy their opponent's ego is trailing nearly midway through the 2000 World Chess Championship.

And this scrap is different from his past championship matches, which were marked by Cold War posturing, ideological differences or personal animosity: This time, the fellow Russian he must defeat if he is to retain his title and win two-thirds of a $2 million purse is his friend and protege, Vladimir Kramnik.

Kasparov, an athletic-looking man with graying hair and sharp taste in clothes, has played seven games against the tall, bespectacled 25-year-old Kramnik in a London television studio. Kramnik has taken the upper hand against his former mentor, winning one game and earning six draws.

The latest draw came Thursday after a mere 48 minutes in a game where Kasparov — playing with the white pieces, which is akin to a tennis player serving — should have held the initiative.

Kasparov has yet to win a game.

"Kasparov will be getting very frustrated," said international chess master Andrew Martin, who is providing commentary on the match for its sponsor, Brain Games Network, an Internet company.

But chess experts caution that with nine games to go in the 16-game tournament — play resumes Saturday — it is too early to write Kasparov's chess obituary.

The man who dominates this mental sport and who many consider the best player ever is hardly likely to give up his most prized title without a vicious fight — regardless of who sits across the board.

"Kasparov is still very dangerous, and Kramnik knows that," said Anatoly Tonkonogy, a senior chess master and close friend of Kramnik's coach.

Kramnik was part of Kasparov's training team when Kasparov crushed another challenger in 1995. He had been tapped by Kasparov early on as a possible successor, and the warmth between the two players is apparent.

"Kasparov feeds on tension. Psychologically, he relishes it," said Dominic Lawson, editor of Britain's Sunday Telegraph newspaper and a former chess writer.

"There isn't a lot of tension around this match. In my opinion, it is quite relaxed," Lawson said. "The lack of any kind of political tension and personal aggression probably suits Kramnik, just as it doesn't suit Kasparov."

The players spent months training. They've perfected opening techniques, worked on attacks and defenses and honed their physical fitness to ensure they survive the stress of the four-week tournament, in which games can sometimes last six or seven hours.

While Kasparov is vastly more experienced at tournament play, Kramnik is a good match for the chess superstar. They have met 23 times in games played under classical rules; each man has won three times and 17 games ended in draws.

Kasparov conceded Thursday that he had faced some problems from Kramnik's play but, he added, "I am working (on it) now."

Chess experts note that Kramnik is vulnerable. While he has been able to stymie Kasparov's well-prepared opening attacks, he also has had to settle for draws after squandering winning positions.

At times, both men look worn out as they face each other across the board. Kramnik extends his long legs and leans his elbows on the table, while Kasparov holds his head in his hands and sinks deeper into his tan leather chair, tapping his polished black shoes against the floor.

Neither likes to watch while the other plays, preferring to retire to their private rooms to pace, calculate their moves or munch chocolate bars for energy.

While the roughly 200 spectators watching from the shadows beyond the stage are audibly disappointed when the battles end in a draw, Fred Waitzkin, who followed Kasparov's 1990 world championship match against Anatoly Karpov for his book "Mortal Games," likened successive draws to "violent skirmishes within one huge battle."

"Everyone knows that the end of this standoff must come," he wrote.

Albright visit to North Korea might pave way for Clinton trip

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — For decades, North Korea seemed to relish confrontation with the United States at the negotiating table, a strategy that U.S. officials viewed as brinkmanship: ratchet up the tension to win concessions.

These days, threats, insults and walkouts have faded as North Korean negotiating tools. So Washington's Cold War-era foe is sure to lavish pomp and protocol on Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on a visit to North Korea next week.

Albright, who leaves for Pyongyang on Sunday, will likely be treated to orderly crowds of well-wishers, theater performances and toasts and handshakes with North Korean leader Kim Jong Il. These images of rapprochement could lead to a visit by President Clinton next month.

But there will also be blunt talk of the communist North's missile program and its desire to get off a U.S. list of terrorism-sponsoring nations — issues that have stalled hopes for permanent peace on the Korean peninsula since it was devastated by war 50 years ago.

Both sides declared their intent to "formally end the Korean War" by resolving these quandaries in a joint statement that was released in Washington during a trip this month by Gen. Jo Myong Rok, a top aide to Kim Jong Il.

The two sides might wait before tackling other complex topics such as troop reductions and weapons withdrawals from the Demilitarized Zone, a buffer zone separating the two Koreas.

"These are very tough. It's going to take a while to work out. Now the North is saying it's time to start," said Leon Sigal, author of the book "Disarming Strangers: Nuclear Diplomacy with North Korea."

The Albright visit is part of a coordinated strategy involving Washington and its allies, South Korea and Japan, to end the North's isolation and remove the threat of war in one of the world's most volatile regions.

South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and Kim Jong Il set the stage for reconciliation by pledging at a summit in June to pursue reunification. Kim Dae-jung won the Nobel Peace Prize last week for his peace efforts.

Meanwhile, Japan plans talks with North Korea in Beijing on Oct. 30 and 31 following two rounds held earlier this year.

Europe is also responding to North Korea's attempts to shed its image as a pariah state and attract international aid to revive its economy and stave off food shortages. Britain and Germany plan to open diplomatic relations soon.

Albright's meetings next Monday and Tuesday in Pyongyang may serve as an opportunity for the North to publicly clarify its stand on the 37,000 U.S. soldiers based in South Korea.

Kim Dae-jung has said that Kim Jong Il acknowledged at their summit that the U.S. military could play a role in Korea as guarantors of regional security even after reunification. There are fears in South Korea that the removal of U.S. forces could destabilize the balance of power in Northeast Asia by emboldening Japan and China.

A deal appears close on removing North Korea from Washington's terrorism list, which bars all but humanitarian aid to the Pyongyang government and forbids other economic benefits.

This month, Pyongyang met a U.S. condition for getting off the list by issuing a joint statement with Washington renouncing all forms of terrorism.

North Korea was put on the list because of involvement in the bombing of a South Korean airliner near Burma, now Myanmar, in 1987, that killed all 115 people on board.

North Korea, which rattled the region by test-firing a rocket over Japan in 1998, has offered to drop its long-range missile program in return for billions of dollars in compensation.

U.S. officials have refused the offer, but some experts speculate that Pyongyang might settle for aid and investment rather than a cash payoff.

The fruits of the hard bargaining might only be announced during a possible Clinton trip to Pyongyang.

"Albright may try to draw attention to Clinton's visit by announcing one or two small agreements such as opening liaison offices," said Seo Joo-seok, an analyst at the state-run Korea Institute for Defense Analysis.

Cindy Vogel and family thank her loving and caring friends for their thoughts and prayers during her treatment and recovery.

War crimes tribunal subpoenas NATO

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — An international tribunal issued its first subpoena to NATO on Friday, ordering the military alliance to disclose how it detained a Bosnian Serb war crimes suspect who says he was abducted illegally by mercenaries.

The U.N. International Criminal Tribunal on the former Yugoslavia also summoned a U.S. commander, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Eric Shinseki, to provide evidence on the Sep. 27, 1998, detention of Stevan Todorovic.

Shinseki, the former commander of U.S. peacekeepers in Bosnia, was called to appear at a hearing. No date was set.

NATO and the 33 nations in a peacekeeping force it leads were ordered to disclose all documents, reports and audio and videotapes on the detention by Nov. 17.

Todorovic claims his arrest took place on Serbian soil outside the mandate of SFOR, the NATO-led Stabilization Force for Bosnia.

The NATO subpoena marked the first time the tribunal, established in 1993 by the U.N. Security Council, issued a binding order to the U.S.-led military alliance to hand over information.

However, the three-judge chamber chaired by Patrick Robinson of Jamaica gave NATO the option of applying to have the order set aside "on the grounds that disclosure would prejudice national security interests."

NATO has already said "operational security" concerns prevent disclosure of circumstances of the arrest.

The tribunal has had to tread a fine line between antagonizing NATO commanders — whose soldiers risk their lives to capture suspects — and safeguarding the rights of accused war criminals.

A former police chief in Bosanski Samac in northern Bosnia during the 1992-95 ethnic war, Todorovic was in charge of detention camps where Muslims and Croats were beaten, tortured, raped and killed on a daily basis, according to his indictment.

He is charged with torture, murder and deportation as war crimes and crimes against humanity.

Last year, Todorovic submitted a motion contesting the legality of his detention, claiming he was snatched in Serbia by mercenaries who handed him over to SFOR troops at the Bosnian border.

Judges are reviewing the precedent of the capture of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann, who was kidnapped by Israeli secret agents in Argentina and hanged in 1962 after a trial in Jerusalem.

Todorovic's arrest has become a test case for the tribunal. With some 40 suspects in custody after their arrests in Bosnia, fugitives have increasingly sought sanctuary in neighboring Serbia.

Key suspects at large include recently ousted Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, former Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and wartime military commander Ratko Mladic.

Yugoslavia's new president, Vojislav Kostunica, has so far refused to hand any of them over, saying cooperation with the tribunal is not his immediate priority.

Milosevic ouster was well-planned uprising

CACAK, Yugoslavia (AP) — The factory workers and farmhands who surged through the doors of Yugoslavia's parliament seemed to be acting on impulse, seizing the moment to oust Slobodan Milosevic.

Truth is, every step was planned.

Activists from this central Yugoslav city had been planning the uprising long before they drove to the Yugoslav capital on Oct. 5. They brought a list of targets, 10 days worth of food, a front-end loader and trucks full of rocks — ready to do battle with the Milosevic regime.

"People were ready for this," said Dragan Kovacevic, a local coordinator for pro-democracy forces. "We had had enough of these piecemeal acts. We needed concrete action."

The Cacak activists had also infiltrated the ranks of Milosevic's feared police and said they knew in advance how they were likely to react.

The groundwork for the tumultuous events that toppled Milosevic had been laid as much as four years earlier, when the opposition won elections in Cacak and Velimir Ilic became mayor.

The job came with a television and radio station, one of many local media outlets that dotted the Yugoslav countryside. Considered too small to worry about, Milosevic loyalists didn't bother to shut them down when they muzzled the Belgrade media.

Tensions had been building since the Sept. 24 elections, which the opposition claimed Vojislav Kostunica had won. A showdown loomed.

Then, Knez, Bozo, Janjo, Vaske and other activists, who spoke on condition they only be identified by their first names, heard radio reports that miners in the nearby town of Kolubara were on strike to pressure Milosevic to step down.

Urged on by their mayor, the men, who had lost much of their youth fighting wars that kept Milosevic in power, headed to the mine. They joined thousands of others who had already swept past police blockades.

The events at the Kolubara mine provided a dress rehearsal for the next day. That's when Kovacevic unleashed the next phase of the plan.

Thousands gathered at 7:30 a.m., along with 230 trucks loaded with rocks, farming tools and other equipment, "ready for God knows what," Kovacevic recalled.

The mood was somber. Most of the crowd knew only that they were going to "liberate" Belgrade. Details weren't revealed until the convoy was under way, passed from car to car as it snaked along the 60 miles of twisting highway.

The first target was the parliament building. Then the state television station. Finally, the presidential palace.

"Every time I fought, I fought for my countrymen," Knez said. "This was the same."

On the road to Belgrade, others joined in, heeding a call by Kostunica's forces to converge on the capital. The Milosevic regime knew people would be coming and had erected roadblocks.

Ilic led the Cacak group, just behind a truck carrying the front-end loader.

After a brief effort at negotiation, they smashed through two police barricades, crushing trucks blocking the road, using crowbars, hammers and stones.

Some police officers stepped aside after subtle persuasion: Those in the convoy reminded their neighbors they knew where they lived.

By the time the Cacak convoy arrived in Belgrade, it stretched for 10 miles. People in the capital watched in disbelief as it rolled in.

Participants stopped to smoke and regroup before taking on the parliament, the symbolic seat of power.

They stormed its steps, then stopped. Thousands joined the Cacak group. After nearly two hours, someone in the crowd hit a police officer with a bottle. Tear gas flew.

The crowd surged into the building. At about this time, the crowd split in two, with half staying behind to secure the parliament and the others moving to the television station, according to plan.

Ilic said the opposition had recruited some of the elite police units safeguarding the regime's most important asset — its propaganda voice.

"This Belgrade unit, that Milosevic counted most on for special actions, was completely on our side," Ilic said. "We had an agreement with them to do this together, and they supported us fully."

Just in case the police unit changed its mind, the pro-democracy forces sent along another front-end loader. With little resistance from police, the station fell quickly. Ringleaders opted not to march to the third target — Milosevic's palace. They feared their ranks were too depleted.

Back in Cacak, another element of the plan snapped into shape: Pro-democracy operatives reminded the local police they knew where they lived and the officers quickly surrendered.

The Kostunica camp seized a transmitter belonging to the Milosevic-controlled state television network and broadcast news of the events in the capital to as much as two-thirds of the country.

Soon, everyone learned about front-end loader revolution.

Palace complains about photos of Prince William

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles' office complained Friday to Britain's press watchdog agency over photographs published in a British magazine showing Prince William in the Chilean jungle.

The pictures in the latest issue of OK! magazine show the 18-year-old prince wearing combat gear and a large backpack as he makes his way through the jungle. Other shots, taken with a long-lens camera, show the prince in shorts and a T-shirt using a rope to cross a cascading river.

St James's Palace has repeatedly requested privacy for William, who is taking a year off to work and travel before starting his studies at St. Andrew's University in Scotland.

Stephen Lamport, private secretary to Prince Charles, called the published photographs "immensely disappointing."

In a letter to Lord Wakeham, chairman of the Press Complaints Commission, Lamport said the photographs "emerged as a result of the continuing — if thankfully — sporadic activities of the Chilean paparazzi."

Lamport wrote that while other British media have refrained from publishing the photographs, "OK!'s actions will, in our view, have the effect of inflating the market for such photographs and of encouraging further intrusive photography."

OK! magazine did not immediately return a call for comment.

The elder son of Prince Charles and the late Princess Diana is in Chile as part of an international expedition where he is working with 110 other young volunteers in a remote area of Patagonia on environmental and community projects. William raised the $8,000 for the trip himself.

Midland High's Aaron Robison hits Odessa High quarterback Danny Vasquez just after he releases a pass. OHS took over first place in District 4-5A with a 19-10 victory Friday night.

OHS stops 'Dogs, tops district

ODESSA — After just two weeks of action in District 4-5A football play, only one team stands at the top — the Odessa High Bronchos.

OHS slipped past Midland High 19-10 at Ratliff Stadium Friday night to take sole ownership of the District 4-5A lead at 2-0.

Midland Lee downed Abilene Cooper, 49-36, in Midland, leaving only the Bronchos with a 2-0 mark in league play.

"There's only one team in 4-5A with a 2-0 record and that's right here," OHS coach Jim Carson informed his kids after the win over the 1-1 Bulldogs.

So, how does it feel to be the surprise leader in 4-5A after two weeks?

"Well, we were 0-2 at this time last year, and I can tell you this feels a lot better than that," Carson said. "This was an ugly, but effective win for us. After playing against that Midland defense, I can see how they won (over Abilene High) last week, because they are tough."

The Bronchos held the Bulldogs to a meager 26 yards rushing (a minus-30 yards rushing in the first half) and that turned out to be a huge difference in the game. The Bronchos also intercepted MHS quarterback Chris Howard three times in the fourth quarter to stall any comeback hopes the Bulldogs might have had in mind.

"Our inability to run the football in the first half really hurt us," said MHS coach David Browning. "Odessa High played great defense. We did a poor job running the ball, but you have to give them (OHS) some credit for that."

The outcome of the game realistically was sealed with 2:26 left in the third period. That's when OHS quarterback Danny Vasquez hit Brad Fox with a 34-yard touchdown pass to make the score 19-10. The Bronchos had just been penalized two plays before for 15 yards on a personal foul by Gabriel Slack. OHS faced third and 24 from the 34 and looked to have been moved even out of field goal range. Then came the bomb, and it blew

Rebels' offense churns out win

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

For Midland Lee, week 2 in District 4-5A meant a chance to get down to business after an upsetting loss to Odessa High one week before.

Friday night at Memorial Stadium, business definitely picked up.

The Rebels, the No. 10 team in Class 5A, got another record-breaking effort from Cedric Benson and an extraordinary effort from Jernard Lee to hold off a courageous effort from Cooper quarterback Jordan Neal in a 49-36 victory over the Cougars.

Lee, 5-2 overall, improved to 1-1 in 4-5A. The Rebels are one of four teams tied for second in the district standings. Cooper, also 1-1 in 4-5A, fell to 4-3.

As the score indicated, it was a night for the offenses. Actually, it was a night for contrasting offenses. Lee's offense, took a page out of the Van Tom Whatley page book, not running out of the Wishbone, but running the ball over and over again.

For the game, the Rebels totaled 477 rushing yards on 36 carries, a far cry from the production of one week ago against Odessa High. That was all of Lee's offense. The Rebels passed one time in the game.

"There is no doubt coach (Randy) Smith and the offensive line did a good job. They were out to make amends and they certainly did," Midland Lee coach John Parchman said.

"Coach P told us coming into this game that we were going to run the ball down their throats, and that got us fired up," center Brad Stovall said. "We knew after last week we were going to have to pick it up and start making holes for Cedric. We needed to get him open field, and that is what we did tonight. We will win football games doing that."

Also having a better night was Cedric Benson. All Midland's cover boy did was use the holes from his offensive line and rush for 335 yards. It was his fifth career game with more than 300 yards, a state record.

He also had five touchdowns.

"We gave him that little crease, and once he gets out there it is nothing but open field and he is gone," Stovall added.

Neal, an off-the-field assault victim in Abilene last Saturday night, showed what kind of an athlete and quarterback he is. Cooper had no running game Friday, but Neal put the team on his shoulders, throwing for a District 4-5A record 429 yards and four scores. He also added another touchdown on the ground.

Due to Jordan's heroics, Lee needed someone to step up, even if it wasn't Benson. With three minutes, 56 seconds to play in the game, Neal hit Tony Cunningham for a score for the second time in the fourth quarter. It tied the game, 28-28.

Cooper had momentum until the ensuing kickoff, because Lee took the ball 101 yards to give the Rebels the lead back. It was a return play Lee had been working on during the week's practices.

"I ran hard and looked for the holes and made the big play," said Lee, a senior wingback and return man. "I pray to God during times like that. It is close in the game, I have been messing up a lot and then something big will happen for me. It is nice to make the play."

Following a four-and-out drive by the Cooper offense, Benson blew the game open with his fifth touchdown run of the night, a 21-yarder. Twenty-five seconds later, Brown made a great play on an attempted pass by Neal, first snatching the ball from a would-be receiver and then marching 46 yards to give Lee a 21-point cushion.

"I am proud of our effort, but we made too many mistakes that costs us," Cooper head coach Randy

WORLD SERIES

Series pervades New York

By Ben Walker
AP Baseball Writer

NEW YORK — Even when he stepped into the batting cage, there was no escape for Paul O'Neill.

Because there it was, in huge letters on the center-field scoreboard at Yankee Stadium: "Next Stop ... Subway Series."

■ Series Matchup/2B

"Being in New York, you can't get away from it," the Yankees right fielder said Friday. "I mean, you turn on the television, you turn on the radio, you walk into the restaurant, you walk into the grocery store, that's all people are talking about."

"How much can you hype a World Series?" he said.

Plenty.

Especially with the two-time champion Yankees just one victory away from winning their record 13th straight World Series game.

"As a player, it's kind of fun, especially in New York," Mets star Mike Piazza said. "I've seen it on smaller levels in other cities, but it's fun to get into the rivalry thing and experience it."

All over the city, there were signs the New York Mets and Yankees were about to meet in Game 1 Saturday night.

In Rockefeller Center, near the famous skating rink, there was a giant pep rally. In the subway stations leading to the Bronx, there were "wet paint" placards. In the streets, the most popular phrase was, "Got any tickets?"

Managers Bobby Valentine and Joe Torre were preparing, too, for the opener at Yankee Stadium. Al Leiter will pitch for the Mets against Andy Pettitte.

Valentine decided to pick Piazza, the All-Star catcher, as the Mets' designated hitter and put Todd Pratt behind the plate.

"I think he's our next best right-handed hitter and there's a left-handed pitcher tomorrow," Valentine said. "Todd Pratt's been a big part of our team for two years and more."

"I think he's as deserving as any per-

Chargers rip Amarillo team on Homecoming

By Garrett Luft
MRT Correspondent

The Trinity Chargers offense ran over Amarillo San Jacinto 47-13 Friday night at homecoming at Coombes Field, while the Charger defense stood like a wall against the San Jacinto rushing attack.

Clint Adcox ran for 200 yards and four touchdowns on 23 carries and caught a 34-yard touchdown reception. Jeehoun Yi added another 101 yards on the ground. Both running backs have been filling in for senior Nathan Pirtle who hurt a foot in a non-district tilt against Marfa earlier in the year.

"The line did great," said Adcox. "The holes were just there. They were just getting them out of the way."

"Clint Adcox has been a blessing for us, obviously," said Trinity coach John Wilkins, whose team is now 6-2 overall and 2-0 in TAPPS District 1-3A. "With Pirtle being out, then Clint had to step up, and he's done more than step up. He's performed at a high level, and he's also playing defense for us. We're very proud of Clint. He's a darn good football player."

Similar to the successes of the offensive front, the defensive line controlled the line of scrimmage. The Charger defense allowed only 13 yards rushing

Garden City outfights Eagles for 20-6 victory

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

GARDEN CITY— It didn't get nearly the hype of Tyson-Golota, but Friday night's football game between Garden City and Sterling City turned out to be a more interesting — and complete — slugfest.

In a game that was pretty much a must win for the District 9-A combatants, Garden City survived a contest that got a little testy at times, as the Bearkats again rode a stellar defensive effort to a 20-6 victory which kept their playoff hopes alive.

Garden City (5-2 overall, 1-1 in district) controlled the game for the most part, but unlike Golota, Sterling City (1-6, 0-2) didn't exactly quit when things didn't go its way. The Eagles often moved the ball successfully, but saw three drives end inside the Garden City 20-yard line, when the Bearkats defended the "red zone" superbly.

"The only thing I felt was that we bent a little bit on defense and never did break," said Garden City coach Wade Wesley. "You're going to lose the field position battle eventually, but if you don't give up anything on the scoreboard, that doesn't hurt so much."

World Series Matchups

By Josh Dubow and Ben Walker
Associated Press Writers

A look at the New York Mets and New York Yankees going into the World Series, starting Saturday night at Yankee Stadium:

First Base

Mets: Todd Zeile. Brought in to replace the popular John Olerud, Zeile has done the job competently. Drove in eight runs in the NLCS, making the Cardinals pay for pitching around Mike Piazza. Has shown improvement in the field in his first year at the position, but still isn't smooth.

Yankees: Tino Martinez. Became dangerous in postseason (.364) after a bad regular season. Had just 16 homers and 91 RBIs, by far his lowest totals in five years with Yankees. Endured a career-worst 0-for-28 slump, though he hit .350 against the Mets. Good enough glove.

Edge: Yankees.

Second Base

Mets: Edgardo Alfonzo. The Mets' steadiest player and best performer in the clutch. Gold Glove-quality in the field, showing range that made him a shortstop in the minors. Has become a leader, chiding his teammates for lackluster Game 3 in NLCS.

Yankees: Jose Vizcaino/Luis Sojo/Chuck Knoblauch. Vizcaino starts Game 1 because of his 10-for-19 (.526) career performance against Al Leiter. Sojo, acquired from Pittsburgh on Aug. 7, is a smooth fielder who occasionally gets key hits — he'll start at Yankee Stadium with Knoblauch at DH. Knoblauch, a former Gold Glover, was banged up and continued to have throwing problems — still, he'll start at Shea Stadium. A career .328 hitter in the World Series, he's a patient, pesky leadoff man.

Edge: Mets.

Shortstop

Mets: Mike Bordick. Brought in from Baltimore to settle the infield when Rey Ordonez went down with an injury, Bordick hasn't had quite the range or arm the Mets expected. Has some pop at the plate — a career-high 20 homers — but is easily pitched to.

Yankees: Derek Jeter. Added All-Star MVP this summer to his growing, glowing resume. The team leader, will probably be the last Yankees player ever to wear No. 2. Looking to win fourth World Series ring at only 26. Great all-around player, gets even better in October. Hit team-high .407 vs. Mets this year.

Edge: Yankees.

Third Base

Mets: Robin Ventura. Slumped in the season, but delivered some big hits in the playoffs. The only left-handed power bat on the team, Mets need Ventura swinging well to put pressure on opposing bullpens and to protect Mike Piazza. Has .350 average with bases loaded with 14 grand slams — tied for most among active players. Strong in the field. One of the best at charging balls and playing bunts

Yankees: Scott Brosius. Steady glove helped offset weak bat. Like Ventura, excellent at coming in for balls. Slowing down at 34, slumped to .230 this season and dipped even more in AL playoffs. Rises to the occasion in the World Series — was MVP in 1998 and hit .375 last year.

Edge: Mets.

Catcher

Mets: Mike Piazza/Todd Pratt. Piazza is the best-hitting catcher and one of the most dangerous right-handed bats in baseball. Hits balls with power to all fields. Much fresher this postseason than in 1999, when he wore down from nagging injuries. Hit .412 in NLCS. Owns Roger Clemens (7 for 12, three homers), perhaps prompting beaning from the Rocket in July. Has excelled in regular season against the Yankees. Weak in the field and can be run on. Piazza will be the DH in Game 1, giving Pratt the start behind the plate.

Yankees: Jorge Posada. Blossomed in first year as a full-time starter (.287, 28 homers) and became an All-Star. Switch-hitting adds to his value, as do his 107 walks. Threw out 33 percent of would-be basestealers — Piazza was at 23 percent. Only 1 RBI in AL playoffs, hoping to break loose.

Edge: Mets.

Left Field

Mets: Benny Agbayani. Almost quit baseball in 1996 before manager Bobby Valentine added a leg kick that revived his career. Not expected to start the season in the majors, Agbayani has fought his way on the roster. Has some pop, evidenced by game-winning homer in Game 3 against San Francisco. Faster than he appears, he is solid in the field — as long as he remembers how many outs there are.

Yankees: David Justice. MVP of the ALCS with eight RBIs. Obtained June 29 from Cleveland after deals for Juan Gonzalez and Sammy Sosa fell through. Perhaps the key acquisition in Yankees' reshuffled roster. All-time leader in postseason games (88) and RBIs (51). Seemed revitalized with the bat and glove in pinstripes.

Edge: Yankees.

Center Field

Mets: Jay Payton. His career derailed by injuries, the Mets' former top prospect won the center field job as a 27-year-old rookie. Has two game-winning hits in postseason. Hits for some power. Strong in the field and one of few Mets with speed. Hit in the face by a fastball from Dave Veres in Game 5 of the NLCS. Will be fine physically, but watch to see if he is as aggressive diving for outside pitches.

Yankees: Bernie Williams. Set career highs with 31 homers and 121 RBIs and hit over .300 for sixth straight year. Switch-hitter and a four-time All-Star. Weak arm. Takes a couple of steps to get going, then accelerates on bases and in field. Has not done well in three World Series (.151).

Edge: Yankees.

Right Field

Mets: Timo Perez. Most of his teammates hadn't even heard of him until he was called up at end of August. The 23-year-old Dominican played in Japan until being discovered by assistant GM Omar Minaya. Fearless at the plate, in the field and on the basepaths, Perez has been a sparkplug at top of lineup. Led off four of five NLCS games with hits and scored record eight runs against Cardinals. Looks awkward in field, but gets job done.

Yankees: Paul O'Neill. Hard to tell what to expect from him at 37. Is he the old pro who comes through in the clutch or the old player who twice was taken out for pinch-hitters in the ALCS? Slowed by injured hip, slumped to .283 with 18 homers, his lowest totals in eight years with the Yanks. Lifetime .172 hitter in four World Series. Extremely emotional.

Edge: Yankees.

Designated Hitter

(used in games at Yankee Stadium)

Mets: Piazza/Bubba Trammell/Darryl Hamilton. Piazza starts in Game 1. Trammell was 7-for-18 lifetime against Pettitte. Hamilton missed most of season with foot injury, but is solid hitter.

Yankees: Chuck Knoblauch. Did it the AL playoffs, familiar with the role. Takes a lot of pitches, especially in the postseason, and can set tone for rest of lineup.

Edge: Yankees.

Starting Pitching

Mets: LH Al Leiter, LH Mike Hampton, RH Rick Reed, RH Bobby Jones. Will start three lefties in four games at Yankee Stadium if series goes seven to take advantage of spacious left-center and Yankees' lefty power. Hampton and Leiter are two of the best. Hampton pitched 16 scoreless innings to win NLCS MVP. Leiter is one of few Mets with World Series experience. Reed struggled against Cardinals, but has been strong in last two postseasons. Jones pitched brilliant one-hitter against Giants, but was knocked out early against St. Louis.

Yankees: LH Andy Pettitte, RH Roger Clemens, RH Orlando "El Duque" Hernandez, LH Denny Neagle. All have big-game experience. Hernandez is the only pitcher ever to win his first eight postseason decisions. Clemens coming off one-hit, 15-strikeout performance in ALCS, though his overall postseason record is just 4-5. Pettitte pitches in and out of trouble. Neagle could be bumped by former Mets ace David Cone. Clemens will see Mets for first time since beaning Mike Piazza — the Rocket will not face the Shea crowd or the prospect of batting against Mets.

Edge: Yankees.

Relief Pitching

Mets: RH Armando Benitez, LH John Franco, RH Turk Wendell, LH Dennis Cook, RH Rick White, LH Glendon Rusch. Have three capable lefties and the dependable Wendell to set up Benitez. Hard-throwing right-hander was nearly unhittable in regular season, but has tendency to give up long ball — especially in postseason. Franco has adjusted well in switch from closer to set-up man. Cook has kidney stone, but expects to be fine come Saturday.

Yankees: RH Mariano Rivera, LH Mike Stanton, RH Jeff Nelson, RH Dwight Gooden, RH Jason Grimsley, RH David Cone. Rivera extended scoreless streak to postseason record 33 1-3 innings before giving up a run in ALCS. Owns explosive cut fastball, ranks as one of best October pitchers ever. Stanton and Nelson were shaky in stretch as set-up men, but combined with Rivera and Grimsley for 10 1-3 scoreless innings vs. Mets this year. Gooden ranks up near Tom Seaver as greatest pitcher in Mets' history.

Edge: Mets.

Bench

Mets: Lenny Harris, Joe McEwing, Kurt Abbott, Matt Franco, Pratt. Harris is experienced pinch-hitter (fourth all-time in career pinch hits) and clubhouse leader. Pratt is solid backup catcher who could spell Piazza behind the plate at Yankee Stadium. McEwing can play almost any position and is very versatile. Franco had game-winning hit in interleague game against Mariano Rivera in 1999.

Yankees: Jose Canseco, Glenallen Hill, Clay Bellinger, Luis Polonia, Sojo, Vizcaino. Canseco, left off the ALCS roster, and Hill, who struck out in a pair of pinch-hitting appearances, provide power possibilities. Plenty of infield depth, and Bellinger provides flexibility in the outfield. In general, AL teams tend to use bench much less than NL clubs in Series.

Edge: Mets.

Manager

Mets: Bobby Valentine. Has outmanaged highly regarded Buck Showalter, Dusty Baker and Tony La Russa in the last two postseasons. Now he gets his shot at Joe Torre. Makes lots of moves. Loves to double-switch and pinch-run, sometimes taking his best players out of games early. Uses entire roster, and that has kept starters fresh and backups sharp. Steamed at front office for not giving him a contract extension yet and could leave team after World Series. Can start a controversy at any minute.

Yankees: Joe Torre. The exact opposite of Valentine. Torre is the voice and picture of postseason calm and experience. His Yankees have won record-tying 12 straight World Series games, and he's a big reason. Does not rattle or panic, taking advice from bench coach Don Zimmer. Fills important role by often serving as a buffer between owner George Steinbrenner and the players.

Edge: Yankees.

Midland Christian volleyball team hosts bi-district match

By Jay Peden
Sports Writer

It's been a while since the Midland Christian volleyball team won a playoff match — seven years, in fact — but it's also been a while since the Lady Mustangs have hosted a playoff match.

They're hosting one today, and that might make the difference in ending their three-year string of bi-district losses. San Antonio Castle Hills Baptist comes to Midland Christian's gym at 10 a.m. today for a bi-district showdown in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools' Class 4A playoffs.

There are a number of reasons for coach Kathi Hutton to think that her team is ready for the next step. One is an outstanding record of 24-5.

"This team has learned how to win," said Hutton, in her 11th season coaching the Lady Mustangs. "That's been a big step, just to learn how to finish and win."

But it's not just any matches that MCS has won. The Lady Mustangs have won the big matches. On Tuesday in Seminole, they beat Lubbock Trinity — the defending TAPPS champion — in a playoff for the District 1-4A title. The two schools split in district play, but MCS won when it really counted, earning its first district title in six years.

"One of our big steps this year was being able to play and beat Lubbock Trinity," Hutton said. "When we played them here and in Seminole, we stayed with our game plan. We have more weapons, and they can't stop all of them. When we played at Lubbock, they were able to tip (the ball), and that took us out of our game plan. That's when they beat us."

The words "District Champions" look good on a trophy, but that status isn't just for decoration. Along with the title, the Lady Mustangs go into the playoffs as a No. 1 seed in the bracket. That means home-court advantage. MCS drew a big crowd to Seminole on a Tuesday night, Hutton said, so it's reasonable to think the crowd may be even bigger at home.

"We have had great support from the fans," Hutton said. "The Seminole gym was so loud during the game. You could hear the roar after the game was over, it was so loud."

A crowd is worthless without good players, though. Fortunately, Hutton is well-equipped with a team that is strong up front and in the back line.

Most of Midland Christian's offense comes from the outside hitters, especially senior Sasha Hollar, who has recorded 259 kills this season. She gets a kill on nearly half (46 percent) of the times she hits the ball. Sophomore Hayley Whiteside also has 148 kills from the outside position. One is always on the front row, so opponents don't get to rest.

"Sasha Hollar is a very strong outside hitter," Hutton said. "She's able to go crosscourt or down the line — whatever we need her to do. She's been our leading hitter this year. And we've got another strong outside hitter with Hayley Whiteside, so on each rotation, we're strong there."

Ashli Raindl sets up most of Hollar's and Whiteside's kills. The senior setter has recorded 308 assists.

"She's had a very successful year running the offense," Hutton said.

Defensively, the Lady Mustangs' plan starts with the middle blockers: senior Lindsay Epley (73 solo blocks and 44 stuff blocks) and junior Amy Lowery (39 solos and 22 stuffs). If the ball gets past the middle blocker, Hutton isn't worried about her back line defenders. Whiteside leads the team with 93 digs, while seniors Angie Berryhill (83 digs) and Jeannie Burke (73) and sophomore Paige West (72) are right behind.

Burke earned first-team all-district status last season as a defensive specialist, which is a largely overlooked position. Burke, Berryhill and Whiteside all played defense for MCS last year, so they're experienced.

"They've played lots of games together, and they've got a lot of speed back there," Hutton said.

Midland Christian will likely need to play its best. Castle Hills was the runner-up in TAPPS District 3-4A, and it has a record of 21-14, which isn't as impressive as MCS' 24-5. But Castle Hills has an impressive recent history.

"They made the final four last year," Hutton said. "Their coach (Marty Schumaker) has taken them to the state tournament many times, so they have that tradition."

Castle Hills lost in the semifinals last year (to Lubbock Trinity). It won a championship in 1997 and was state runner-up in 1996.

This year's team has some weapons.

"They have a very big middle (hitter) — over six feet," Hutton said, "and they have a strong outside hitter, so that's two things we'll have to key on."

Hutton said she feels good about her team's preparation.

"We're going in confident.," she said. "We've really worked on our blocking, put in the extra time, working on blocking the strong side hitter.

"We really feel like the key to Saturday will be if we serve receive well, which makes your passes, and if we block well."

And if the Lady Mustangs do that, they can get past the bi-district roadblock.

Mets go out to restaurant

GREAT NECK, N.Y. (AP) — Bill Roosa didn't know who was coming to dinner when he entered a Great Neck steakhouse Friday night wearing his Yankees hat and jacket.

Two motor coaches carrying the New York Mets, their wives and the team's staff arrived around 6:30 p.m. They had a room to themselves at Peter Lugers Steak House for what was supposed to be a relaxing dinner for about 80 people the night before Game 1 of the World Series against the Yankees.

Once customers figured out the identities of their dinner companions, some grabbed napkins for autograph requests, said a restaurant manager. Others called friends to share the news. Before long, police arrived at the scene to control the growing crowd.

"One of the waiters said, 'See if you can get (Robin) Ventura to sign your jacket,'" Roosa said. "Ventura laughed at me and said, 'Not that jacket!' I can understand why he wouldn't want to sign it."

MHS: Bulldogs falter in showdown

(From 1B)

up in the face of the Bulldogs.

"Obviously, that was a tough one," Browning said. "It was a big turnaround right after we had gotten ourselves into a good situation. That was a big play in the game."

Carson said, "The big thing about that touchdown was that it made it a two score game, and we were able to do some different things on defense from there on out and it forced Midland into a throwing game."

Fox, who raced down the sideline for the score, said, "It looked like their coverage was backing off, but then they bit in front of me and I was suddenly open."

OHS defensive back Steven Lujan, who came up with two fourth quarter interceptions, also thought that was the big play in the game.

"Midland High had kicked a field goal (to cut the margin to 12-10) right before that series and our heads were a little down," Lujan said. "But we got that score and our heads came up. Our defense knew then that they would have to throw the football and we were ready for it. We got three (interceptions)."

The Bulldogs led once in the game when Howard hit wide receiver Lamar Hickey for a 76-yard TD pass in the first quarter for a 7-3 lead. If you take the one play, 76-yard pass out of the first half totals, the Bulldogs would have had a minus-13 yards of offense. Still, MHS was only down by a 12-7 margin at the half.

The Bulldogs ended the game with five turnovers. They had eight earlier this year against Lubbock Monterey.

MHS had its chances in the second half. Linebacker Matt Bose intercepted a Danny Vasquez pass early in the fourth quarter to set up MHS at the OHS 35, but Hickey fumbled a pass from Howard and an opportunity was missed.

Later in the fourth, Howard marched the Bulldogs to the OHS eight-yard line with key passes to Hickey, Joey Rigney and Cody Connell, but an Ivan Hernandez interception also drove a stake in that drive.

The MHS defense was again superb, giving up only 210 total yards to the Bronchos, who like the Bulldogs, had trouble moving the ball most of the night. Bose, Aaron Robison and Adrian Lopez came up with huge stops on the night.

OHS had to go only 16 yards for a 37-yard Cody Armer field goal in the first quarter. And then had to travel just 12 yards for a Vasquez TD and a 10-7 lead later in the first quarter after MHS muffed a punt.

Still, the Bulldogs hung in and had chances. Once MHS punter James Gripp had a 70-yard punt to turn around some field position.

But when the smoke had cleared, it was another giddy OHS day at life at the top.

'KATS: Garden City gets first district win

(From 1B)

called a sparkling offensive performance, Garden City did break two big plays which turned out to make all the difference. Both came from quarterback Justin Hillger, who returned to the lineup after missing two starts with a broken jaw.

On Garden City's first possession of the game, Hillger kept the ball on an option and raced 32 yards to the end zone, capping an 80-yard drive and giving the Bearkats a 6-0 lead which lasted through halftime.

Then early in the third quarter, just after the Bearkats held on a fourth-and-three deep in their own territory, Hillger ran behind the left side of his line, cut to the corner and outraced Sterling City's defense into the end zone for an electrifying 76-yard touchdown. Hillger threw a two-point conversion to Roger Alvarado to make it 14-0 and effectively make the difference in the game.

"That's the reason we got into some of the spread stuff," said Wesley of the formations from which Hillger scored his two touchdowns. "We're still not all that good at it because we haven't gotten enough reps at it."

But Hillger made those few reps pay off as he led the Bearkats with 122 yards on only six carries. He had been ready to run those plays all week after returning behind center in practice.

"They were set up pretty good," said Hillger. "The trap was working real well and they (the Sterling City defense) bit on it. (On the second touchdown) I haven't run that much all season, but it's a fun play to do if the whole team executes."

As has been the case for the past six weeks, it was Garden City's defense which came up big again. The Bearkats (who have given up only 31 points in six weeks) surrendered only 245 yards, and didn't allow Sterling City in the end zone until Chase Hord scored on a 7-yard run with only 1 minute, 36 seconds left in the game.

The Eagles made no secret of what they were going to do offensively as they tried to establish Hord as their ground weapon. While Hord picked up 113 yards, he needed 32 carries to do so.

"Most of the teams we've played have had good offenses," said Garden City middle linebacker Anthony Wheat, who was involved in several tackles. "Our coach watches many hours of films and we know the plays (opponents) are going to run."

Not that the whole game was smooth sailing for the Bearkats. Hillger got upset in the third quarter when he felt Sterling City defensive end Blake Davis had pulled his face mask, and ironically, Hillger got flagged 15 yards for unsportsmanlike conduct for protesting in Davis' face.

Wesley pulled Hillger from the game after that for the quarterback's safety, but worried that his team could have gotten too caught up in the emotion of the game.

"Our kids felt like we were getting cheap shotted," said Wesley. "You go into a self-protection mode so I pulled (Hillger) out."

TRINITY: Chargers win on Homecoming

(From 1B)

on the evening as the Patriots struggled all evening just to get positive yardage. The Chargers made tackles for losses 12 times in the game. San Jacinto also failed on all 11 of its third-down conversions. Trinity did not allow a first down until San Jacinto's last drive of the first half when the Patriots drove 58 yards for their first score on eight consecutive passing plays.

"Our defensive line did a great job tonight," said Wilkins. "The kids performed especially well in the offensive and defensive lines."

The Chargers dominated in every fashion except for the passing and kicking games. The Chargers muffed the snap and failed to convert on their first extra-point attempt. Quarterback and kicker Matt Midkiff missed an extra point after the second Trinity touchdown, but managed to convert a muffed snap into a two-point conversion in the third quarter.

Midkiff was 7-of-14 passing for 97 yards. He threw two touchdowns and an interception and returned a punt 48 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter.

"I was concerned about our passing game being mostly ineffective, and our extra-point attempts were just ugly," said Wilkins. "We've got to improve in those areas if we are going to go very far.

"It was a hard week for us, because we beat these guys pretty easily the first time (a 47-7 Charger victory in Amarillo), and it was a hard week trying to get ready. I was really concerned because we had flat practices all week long, and in some aspects we showed that tonight. In other aspects we did well. We just need to move on to the next level, and right now we've got to start working harder to get there."

Trinity now prepares for Lubbock Christian in its final district matchup next Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Coombes Field.

NOTES: Melissa Singh was crowned homecoming queen during half-time ceremonies, while Charger defensive starter Jeesoung Yi was named king.

SERIES: New York goes crazy over baseball

son who's ever put on a uniform to play in a World Series game, and this might be his only opportunity," he said.

Pratt also is better at throwing out runners. He caught 39 percent of would-be basestealers while Piazza nailed only 23 percent.

Valentine also moved up Todd Zeile to the cleanup spot. Zeile hit there only 11 times this season, but is 7-for-20 (.350) with two home runs and three doubles against Pettitte.

In a surprise, Torre chose Jose Vizcaino as his starting second baseman over Luis Sojo, who had been there in every AL playoff game. Chuck Knoblauch will remain the DH until, possibly, the Series shifts to Shea Stadium.

Torre picked Vizcaino because he's 10-for-19 (.526) lifetime against Leiter.

"He and Sojo are interchangeable for me, as far as defensively," Torre said. "What I think jumped out at me are the numbers that he's had against Al."

The Mets and Yankees are extremely familiar with each other, having met for four years in interleague play. The Yankees went 4-2 against the Mets this season and hold an 11-7 edge overall.

"We're the defending champs," Pettitte said. "I think a lot of people, or most people, expect us to win or say we should win because we have the experience and stuff like that. If we win, we were supposed to win. If we lose, then the Mets did an unbelievable job."

"So I think we really don't have a lot to gain — except another World Series title, which would be awesome, and a threepeat," he said. "They've got a lot to gain."

So does Valentine. He's in the World Series for the first time while Torre is trying to win his fourth title in five years.

The two managers have their own history. In 1978, when he was an outfielder for the Mets, Valentine was cut by Torre, the manager.

LUBBOCK — Konrad McKay scored a goal and three assists to lead the Odessa Jackalopes past the Lubbock Cotton Kings, 6-3, Friday night.

McKay, a 5-foot-11 forward, was also in a scuffle with the top fighter in the Western Professional Hockey League, the 6-1 Ryan Schmyr, and McKay fought him to a complete standstill.

Mike Rusk, Scott Hillman, Mike Lankshear, Don Margettie and Derek Laxdal all had scores for the Jacks, which improve to 1-1.

Odessa heads to Alburquerque to face the Scorpions at 8:05 p.m. today.

DISTRICT 4-5A FOOTBALL

Abilene High 14, Od. Permian 6

ABILENE — The Abilene High Eagles rebounded from a district-opening loss to Midland High with a 14-6 victory over Odessa Permian Friday night at Shotwell Stadium.

Abilene High, 6-1 overall, improved to 1-1 in District 4-5A while Permian, 3-4, owns sole possession of last place in the district with a 0-2 record.

The Eagles got on the board, thanks to the run, and David Willis in particular. Willis scored on runs of three and six yards in the first half. Kevin Goodman threw for 177 yards but no scores. He also had one interception.

After Willis' scores, the rest was up to the Abilene High defense, which allowed just 55 yards on 32 carries and 159 yards passing. Permian did get a 16-yard rushing touchdown from Mark Gonzales, but nothing else.

AREA FOOTBALL

Andrews 36, Frenship 35, OT

WOLFFORTH — Andrews scored what might have been one of the most epic wins in school history Friday night, as Jamie Bueno scored on a 2-yard run then won the game by scoring on a two-point conversion in overtime to give the Mustangs a 36-35 win over No. 5 Wolfforth Frenship in a District 4-4A game.

It was a tight game throughout as neither team led by more than a touchdown. Jorge Rodriguez scored the final three touchdowns for Frenship, including a 2-yard run in the extra period which gave the Tigers a 35-28 lead. But Andrews (4-3 overall, 3-1 in district) responded when Bueno, who scored two touchdowns in regulation, scored to pull the Mustangs within a point then ran in the conversion to give Andrews the upset victory.

J.J. Hays also ran for two touchdowns for Andrews, including one in the fourth quarter which tied the game at 28-28 and sent it into overtime.

Andrews did a solid job of limiting Frenship quarterback Kendal Briles to 120 yards through the air. Briles threw an 80-yard scoring pass to David Thomas in the first quarter and connected with Thomas from 12 yards in the second quarter, but didn't get into the end zone again.

Big Spring 27, Plainview 26

PLAINVIEW — Jason Woodruff was Mr. Everything for Big Spring as the senior rushed for 168 yards, scored four touchdowns and kicked three extra points as the Steers escaped with a 27-26 win Friday night.

Plainview (2-5 overall, 1-3 in District 4-4A) took a 26-14 lead into the fourth quarter, but Woodruff had other plans. Woodruff scored on runs of one and five yards to go along with his pair of 3-yard TD runs early in the game.

The Steers improved to 5-2 overall and 4-0 in District 4-4A.

Colorado City 21, Stanton 18

COLORADO CITY — The Colorado City Wolves' defense came up with a couple of big stops and Stanton couldn't convert on opportunities as the Wolves beat Stanton, 21-18, in a District 3-2A contest.

Stanton (5-2 overall, 1-1 in district) intercepted five passes and recovered one Colorado City fumble but yet had trouble converting on the Wolves' miscues.

When Stanton did score, the Buffaloes couldn't convert on their extra points as they missed two point-after attempts and missed out on a two-point conversion. Those missed extra points proved to be crucial because Stanton took an 18-13 lead into the fourth quarter.

Late in the fourth quarter Colorado City quarterback Chase Phariss scored on a 27-yard run and added a two-point conversion on a pass to Albert Luera.

Stanton's Jeremy Hull had a good game rushing as he surpassed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season with 151 yards on 27 carries. Hull also picked off a Colorado City pass.

Buffs' fullback Clay White rushed for 75 yards and scored on a 38-yard run. White was also a standout on defense with two interceptions, one returned eight yards for a score, and two fumble recoveries.

Colorado City improved to 6-1, 2-0.

Mid. Christian 41, FW Temple 0

FORT WORTH — The Midland Christian Mustangs held Fort Worth Temple to 60 total yards of offense and romped to a 41-0 victory in the TAPPS District 1-4A opener for both teams.

It was all Midland Christian (6-2 overall, 1-0 in district) on a rainy night as the Mustangs compiled 435 yards of offense.

Quarterback Jamie Beeghley threw for two touchdowns and also ran for a touchdown from 18 yards out. Nick McAdams was the benefactor of Beeghley's passes with TD scores of 1 and 6 yards.

Josh Gunter rushed for 84 yards with an 8-yard scoring run, and also had three catches for 78 yards with a 58-yard TD catch.

Americans hold 5-shot lead in Presidents Cup

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

GAINESVILLE, Va. — The American report card from this Presidents Cup should include the following notation: Plays well with others.

Long criticized for being out of sorts when it comes to alternate shot, the Americans handled it easily once again. Led by Tiger Woods and Kirk Triplett, they turned back an International team rally and restored their five-point lead Friday.

U.S. captain Ken Venturi was asked to explain how the Americans have won nine out of 10 foursome matches.

"Can you?" he asked incredulously. "We never play that ... 9-1 is absolutely phenomenal. I thought we'd have a better chance at fourballs than we did the alternate shot, and it just turned upside down."

That summed up a topsy-turvy day.

Inspired by a rare motivational speech from Ernie Els, the International team made short work out of a 5-0 deficit by winning four of the five best-ball matches in the morning and seemed to be on their way to an incredible comeback.

Just like that, the Presidents Cup was back to where it began the day — the Americans comfortably in charge, with a 10-5 lead.

They didn't just win. They shot better scores in alternate shot, a rare accomplishment.

"I can't explain that," International captain Peter Thomson said. "I saw some amazing golf from the U.S. team. It was a magnificent performance."

Perhaps the best explanation came from Woods, who noted that both teams found a way to shift the momentum.

"Each team, when they have the onus on them, they seem to come back and play well," Woods said.

No one did that better than Woods. After he and Notah Begay were thumped in the morning, they won their first six holes against the slumping star pairing of Els and Vijay Singh and cruised to a 6 and 5 victory.

Triplett, the 38-year-old Presidents Cup rookie, continued to hole one big putt after another as he and Stewart Cink won a crucial point late in the day.

Almost everyone else followed suit with a birdie binge unheard of for alternate shot.

— Triplett and Cink, trailing by one with six holes to play, birdied the next three and were 6 under in a 2-and-1 victory over Robert Allenby and Stuart Appleby.

— Loren Roberts and Paul Azinger, captain Venturi's wild-card selections, birdied five of their last six holes in a 5-and-4 victory over Carlos Franco and Shigeki Maruyama. It was the Japanese star's first loss in seven Presidents Cup matches.

— Hal Sutton and Tom Lehman, both losers in the morning, birdied five of the first seven holes and never came close to a bogey in their 3-and-2 victory over Michael Campbell and Retief Goosen.

"All I know is that our team is great in foursomes," Cink said. "Our team has jelled."

The only match that prevented another clean sweep in foursomes was Phil Mickelson and David Duval, who managed just one birdie and were beaten 5 and 4 by Nick Price and Mike Weir. Duval never made it to the 15th tee in two matches Friday.

Not to worry.

The Americans' 10-5 lead was their largest ever in three Presidents Cup matches at RTJ, and they went on to win both of them.

"We've got to get as many points as we can," Venturi said. "I'm looking forward to tomorrow and Sunday. All being well, we'll walk out of here with the cup."

The International players, in a state of shock as they left the course in fading sunlight, were down and possibly out. Five best-ball matches follow Saturday, their best chance to try one again to cut into the lead before the final round of singles.

Mayfield captures pole

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — As happy as Jeremy Mayfield was to win the pole for Sunday's Pop Secret Popcorn 400, the biggest smiles in the North Carolina Speedway garage belonged to Bobby Labonte and his Joe Gibbs Racing team.

Mayfield recorded a fast lap of 157.342 mph. Labonte, closing in on his first Winston Cup championship, drew an early qualifying spot and slid quietly into the second spot at 157.248.

"We're having a good time," Labonte said. "I'm a little calmer, maybe, than in years past, and that's probably just experience. We're just trying to keep everybody as composed as possible and keep doing things the way we've been doing them."

That's exactly what the No. 18 Pontiac team did Friday, with Labonte qualifying fourth out of 48 entries.

Heading into Sunday's race, Labonte leads runner-up Dale Earnhardt by 210 points. If he finishes 10th or better in each of the four remaining races, Labonte will join older brother Terry, a two-time series winner, as a Winston Cup champ.

Crop Walkers to take steps to alleviate hunger

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

Midlanders who want to get a little exercise while making a difference for a cause will be gathering Sunday at Reyes Nelms Mashburn Park on Midland's east side to "walk with the world."

Every step they take for Crop Walk will be a step toward alleviating hunger, according to the Rev. Dennis Bade, associate pastor at St. Luke's United Methodist Church.

"We want to call attention to the people not only worldwide, but to the growing numbers of people here in Midland who are hungry," said Bade. "Taking a walk to raise money is a very simple thing. It's healthy, and it helps to impact a problem."

Crop Walkers act toward alleviating hunger in a number of ways, according to Bade.

"They can ask their friends and co-workers to pledge donations in support of the walk they're making. They can bring canned and wrapped non-perishable goods to the event to be donated to local food ministries. And they can, simply by walking with others, focus attention on this worldwide problem."

Sponsored by Church World Services, more than 4 million Crop Walkers across the nation and the world have raised almost $200 million over the past 15 years. Beneficiaries have been food banks, food pantries and other local food ministries. Here in Midland, 25 percent of funds raised will be given to the Salvation Army, Area Missions Outreach Services (AMOS) and Church On Wheels (COW).

Bade, who is Midland Crop Walk's co-chair along with Jennifer Sise — youth director at Midland's First Presbyterian Church — said this year's event has been modified to attract more families.

There will be food for the walkers and families as well as for the food ministries Crop Walk supports, and games, and even a chance, for unerring or lucky pitchers, to do a little informal baptizing of the clergy.

"This year we're going to have a lot more things going on than just the walk around the park," he explained. "There will be a moon walk for kids to walk around and bounce on, and board games, and we're working on putting together a dunk-a- pastor tank, which will probably be more fun for laity than for the clergy."

Since walking does stimulate appetites, participants will be treated to hamburgers, hot dogs and drinks.

Bade said the emphasis is on the positive way families, churches and communities can work together.

"When families do things like this together, parents demonstrate to their children that they can make a difference in their own community and in the world.

"I hope that this year people will make a real effort to get pledges to demonstrate to

Crop Walk, which raises funds for food banks and other local ministries, is scheduled for 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. Sunday at Reyes Nelms Mashburn Park on Fairgrounds Road.

Churches offer alternatives to trick-or-treating

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

White strings festoon the trees and pumpkins both carved and pristine as they came from the field sit at the doorsteps of houses along the streets. Retail stores are decked out in full orange and black regalia, and cat and witch and pumpkin silhouettes are seen in the windows of elementary schools all over town.

This is the holiday you can't ignore. For many, Halloween, or All Hallows Eve, is a day rich in cultural interweaving, with customs borrowed from the Celts, indigenous people of the Americas and Wiccans. Others see its pagan origins as an evil, a danger to the soul.

And thus the stage is set for a dilemma in Christian faith communities.

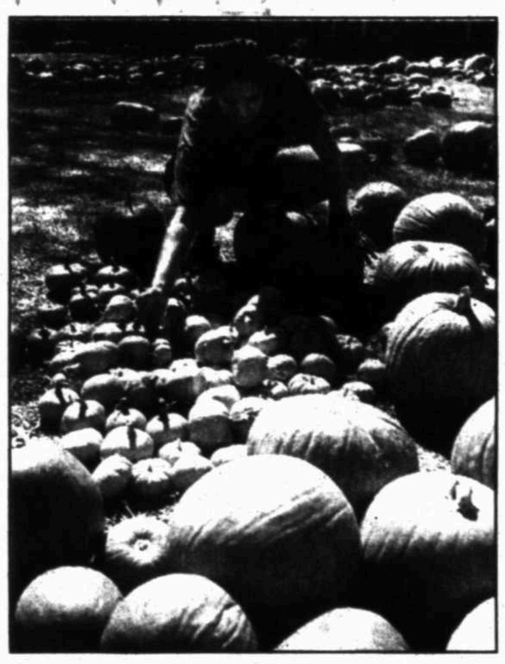
Should parents allow their children to don costume and mask and hit the streets on Halloween? Should they be allowed to attend Halloween parties and carnivals? Bob for apples? Pay a dollar to the fortuneteller?

Is Halloween the lighthearted prelude to All Saints Day, or a day of Satanic ritual? How seriously should you examine the question, and assuming you have no spiritual dilemma, do you worry about the safety of children in the streets, wearing dark clothing and in their excitement forgetting to watch for traffic hazards?

Many Midland churches nicely sidestep the issue by offering alternative ways for families to celebrate the turning of the year from warm to cool, with church celebrations honoring God for the bounty of harvest time, often renaming it to realign the focus and re-establish priorities.

Alison Porter, director of Christian education at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, said she has no problem with continuing the customs of Halloween.

"I am aware that our fun and celebration on All Hallows Eve is often mistaken as celebrating a holiday given over to Satan," she said. "But the reason we are able to play is because Christ has conquered the powers of darkness and revealed the old gods to be nothing. The fear and terror born of ignorance can be replaced with joy and fellowship born of our victory in Christ."



These are some of the choices Midland families have for celebrating no matter what the season is called.

■ The Amazement Park

✔ 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. Oct. 28, southwest corner of the Kingsway Center, Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road. Free.

Hosted by Crestview Baptist Church, Amazement Park will offer 11 games and events for elementary age children; "Ark Park," a separate area of games and activities for toddlers to preschool; and a concert by Modern Day John at the mall's Trinity Center for seventh- through 12th-graders.

Crestview Baptist Church member Becky McRaney is one of the coordinators of the event, which continues Crestview's ongoing ministry to the community surrounding the church.

"This event is our gift to our neighborhood," said Ms. McRaney. "We took the name 'Amazement Park' from the Scripture in Habakkuk 1:5, 'Look at the nations and watch — and be utterly amazed. For I am going to do something in your days that you would not believe, even if you were told.'"

Main attractions of Amazement Park include: Adrenaline Rush, in which participants climb, crawl, squeeze and slide their way through an 80-foot, 11-challenge obstacle course; airbrush face painting using hypoallergenic materials that wash off with soap and water balloon typhoon, a giant teddy bear with balloons circulating inside for kids to play with; bean bag games; bounce house; bungee run, where participants race, wearing vests attached to bungee cords; a 22-foot slide with rope ladder; laser tag; and obstacle course.

Ms. McRaney said that this is a continuation of Crestview's ministry and activities designed to serve the Dellwood neighborhood and beyond.

Composer to conduct Lee choirs in his 'Gospel Mass'

By Johnnye Montgomery
Religion Writer

When awe, regret, love, need, anguish or joy are simply too overwhelming for words, we sing.

From the beginnings of civilization, whenever words were inadequate to convey the meaning, we've used ram's horn, harp, psaltery and lyre and voices to say what words can't say. Composers down through the ages have poured the music of their hearts into masses.

The greatest of these, the masses that we've loved the most, were written around themes familiar to the people — folk tunes that were easy to hum and impossible to forget.

When contemporary composers write masses, they take the sounds they hear around them and use them to create prayers.

Composer Robert Ray was a liturgy team member of the National Office of Black Catholics when he wrote "Gospel Mass" in 1978. Ray, a classically trained musician, combined the liturgical and classical elements of the Mass with the sounds he heard around him — combinations of blues, jazz and African-American gospel songs, celebrating in a new way after Vatican II allowed the singing of the Mass in the vernacular.

Since then, Ray — director of Keyboard Studies at the University of Missouri in St. Louis and director of the University Community Chorus that performs with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra — has traveled the world conducting his "Gospel Mass" at performances by internationally recognized choruses and by neighborhood church choirs alike.

He has directed the prestigious Europa Cantat in Linz, Austria, and the past summer conducted the European Youth Chorus in a two-week tour of Europe ending in the World Expo in Hanover, Germany.

He is in Midland this weekend conducting a workshop for the Lee Freshman and Lee High schools' combined choruses. He will lead them in a free performance of the "Gospel Mass" 3 p.m. Sunday at the Lee High School Auditorium.

Paula Edwards, director of the Lee choirs, said she met Ray several years ago while attending a conference of the Texas Music Educators Association where the Lee choirs had been invited to sing, and where he had conducted his "Gospel Mass."

"He was so friendly and so easy to talk to, that I really felt that we were friends," said Ms. Edwards. "He performed his 'Gospel Mass' there, and I heard it, and this year, when we were trying to think of a major work to combine all our choirs, something that would be appealing to the public, I thought of this, because it would be different and unique and appealing to the audience.

"It really doesn't really require extensive musical knowledge, yet at the same time it introduces the form of the Mass," she said.

"I called to ask him to come to Midland, and he said yes."

She explained that the "Gospel Mass," while conforming to traditional liturgical elements will also appeal to those who come for entertainment alone.

"If you seek a religious message, you'll find it in 'Gospel Mass.' If you seek high- energy entertainment, consisting of jazz, blues and music to which you must tap your toes, you will not be disappointed."

LESLIE WILLIAMS

In the kingdom of heaven, mercy is stronger than death

Williams

My children called it a "wall-eyed fit." I wouldn't go that far; but when the dead bird our cat brought in suddenly fluttered and flapped back into life two inches from my face, I did scream. And I did jump back and flap around a little myself, shouting, "Don't worry kids; I'm going to handle this!"

I want so badly to be a calm, unruffled, Kool-aid mom. Instead, I am a highly strung, overly verbal, on-the-verge-of-chaos mom. It doesn't mean I love my children any less than a collected, soft-spoken mother; it just means that I don't measure up to my own ideal.

Paul talked about this problem of doing what he didn't want to do and not doing what he wanted. In many ways, the Christian life is the process of growing more and more Christ-like. We all fall short. We all need fine-tuning — or major overhauling, depending on the problem. As the bumper sticker says, "Christians aren't perfect, just forgiven." Now that I've been a Christian for a quarter of a century, I've noticed some progress, due to much prayer on my part and patience on God's. No longer am I at my best when I'm asleep. Through God's grace, I can once in awhile rise to the occasion fully awake, with love greater than I understand.

The bird incident also gave me another theological insight. As we gathered around the pathetic, yellow-headed bird that we thought was dead, our hearts went out to the tiny creature. Our cat seemed like a vicious monster. Yet, Tiger Zebra Woo is not cruel; he's just a cat, doing what cats do.

What we witnessed was the food chain in action.

Which led me to reflect on the "food chains" in our lives. The food chain in corporate organizations is clear: power is outlined in a flow chart. Social food chains are harder to spot, but some outward indications of hierarchy include cars — rattletraps at the bottom, rising to Jaguars and Ferraris at the top. Church food chains are often invisible to newcomers, but just try to sit in an old-timer's spot and see what happens! Families have food chains, too, some more obvious than others.

As part of the animal kingdom, our natural human tendency is for the strong to destroy the weak. Jesus reversed the trend. As God, He could have zapped Pilate and the Jewish Sanhedrin with lightning and vanquished them. Jesus was so far above the people who persecuted Him, He wasn't even in the same flow chart. Yet, as man, He allowed Himself to be crucified. His whole life was about loving people, not trampling the weak. Not squelching opponents. Not winning at others' expense.

Left to our own devices, the killer instinct operates whenever something we want is at stake. Sibling rivalry is a classic example. (Once my sister and I actually bit each other over who got to go to the movie, but we won't go there.) Like Tiger, we are driven by nature to survive, whatever it takes. Unlike Tiger, though, we do not have to kill the bird. In the kingdom of heaven, mercy is stronger than death.

FESTIVALS: Third annual Pumpkin Patch now open

this community economically, but we're still here in spirit, and we want to show that by activities such as this," she explained. "We want everybody to know they're welcome to worship and (for) Bible study, and any other activity here.

"We hope that Amazement Park will bring in people who have never been here before, and that they will like us so well they'll want to come back."

■ The Pumpkin Patch

✔ 10 a.m. until sundown Mondays through Saturdays and noon until sundown Sundays until Oct. 31 at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave.

The third annual Pumpkin Patch is now in session on the front lawn at St. Luke's with tons of pumpkins, Indian corn and cornstalks, gourds and other autumn decorating items for sale brought down from northern New Mexico, where it is grown. There will also be recipes and foods to sample.

Weekend activities including pace painting, pumpkin decorating, birthday parties and pumpkin tasting. Photographers will be on hand to take pictures, but visitors are also welcome to bring their own cameras.

Pumpkin Patch proceeds benefit St. Luke's Spirit Wind Youth Choir.

■ Christian Family Day

✔ 8:55 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Sunday at Grace Lutheran Church, 3000 W. Golf Course Road. Free

Grace Lutheran's fall celebration starts with a continental breakfast, then continues with regular worship services, including a children's sermon by Grace's new pastor, the Rev. Robert Pase.

Activities include a space walk, putt-putt golf, basketball shoot, face painting, crafts and games. Hot dogs, ice cream and drinks will be served all afternoon, with cookies baking in the kitchen, and prizes, candy and other mementos given away.

Other special attractions will include Joyful Noise Children's Choir, Kindergarten Choir, puppets and Christian Book Fair.

The Midland Police Department will fingerprint and photograph children, with parents given a free CD containing all the information about their children.

In the church's east hallway, displays and posters will be set up illustrating various groups and ministries of the church.

The event will culminate with a balloon launch at the west parking lot.

■ Kids Plus Halloween Carnival

✔ 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at Holy Trinity Episcopal Church's St. Francis Hall (enter through the parking lot on Ohio Street). Bring donations of wrapped candy or a bottle of soda.

Children 3 to 10 are invited to come in costume to play games, eat candy, bob for apples and wrap the mummy. There also will be food and game booths.

■ Halloween Party

✔ 5 to 9 p.m. Oct. 31 at St. Paul's CME Church Fellowship Hall, east of the church at 409 S. Lee St. Free.

This is one of Midland's oldest continuous celebration and offers an alternative to parents with concerns about the prospect of kids vs. cars on the dark streets. The event includes games and prizes and food.

The public is invited. Participants may wear costumes.

■ Fall Family Festival

✔ 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 31 at First Baptist Church. The cost is $1 per child; adults get in free.

The festival includes carnival booths, clown shows, face painting, balloons, balloon animals, prizes and candy.

Children are encouraged to come dressed as their favorite Bible character or in other non-scary costumes.

■ Harvest Fest 2000

✔ 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Oct. 31 at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, 2900 Princeton. Free.

An alternative to trick-or-treating where there will be games and prizes and a short presentation by St. Nicholas' youth group.

Bush or Gore Supreme Court appointees could rewrite church-state policy

NEW YORK (AP) — During the first presidential debate, Al Gore said the Constitution "ought to be interpreted as a document that grows with our country and our history," while George W. Bush countered that the Supreme Court shouldn't supplant legislatures and "use the bench to write social policy."

What will the candidates' views mean for Supreme Court rulings on church and state if, as expected, the next president names up to three new members? Two justices have survived cancer scares; three are 70 or above. The oldest, 80-year-old John Paul Stevens, has consistently voted to limit government accommodation of religion, court-watchers say.

The next appointments will "make a huge difference for the far future" because the court is so narrowly divided on so many religiously contentious matters, says American Jewish Congress attorney Marc Stern, who favors strict separation of church and state.

For instance, the candidates flatly disagree on vouchers to support pupils in religious schools. So analysts on both sides say a single Bush appointee could make vouchers legal while Gore justices might prevent this.

The issue for the Supreme Court in such cases is the First Amendment's prohibition of "an establishment of religion." The justices must also interpret the constitutional guarantee of "free exercise" of faith.

Over the past 15 years, the court has inched toward accepting public aid to religious schools. Justice Clarence Thomas' plurality opinion last June allowing grants of computers and other equipment presented a sweeping pro-aid doctrine. But Thomas won only three supporters, so the court majority endorsed a more limited concept.

"You have five votes to go further, and certainly four to go a whole lot further," observes H. Douglas Laycock of the University of Texas School of Law. Since "there's a limit to how much equipment you can shove into one school," the "serious money" involves vouchers, he remarks.

On school prayer, Stern says, the challenges usually arise in Southern states that oppose the Supreme Court's rules. Democrat-appointed justices generally favor these nationwide dictates while "Bush will look for judges to interfere less with the states," he expects.

In a Texas case, Bush filed a brief defending the legality of student-led prayers and expressed disappointment when the Supreme Court voted 6-3 to forbid officially organized football game invocations. A spokesman said Gore opposes government-sponsored prayers and thinks pre-game invocations are "not truly voluntary."

A leading conservative, Michael W. McConnell of the University of Utah College of Law, thinks judges have all but settled this issue. The consensus forbids prayers authorized by school officials but lets students pray publicly on their own initiative — for instance, in a graduation speech not cleared with the principal.

MASS: Composer to conduct LHS choirs

(From 1C)

Guest soloists will be Lee High School alumni Edward Pleasant and soprano Sue Roseberry.

Ray's wife, Sylvia, in a telephone interview from the couple's home in St. Louis, said Ray had made use of not only centuries of traditional Mass settings, but the sounds of the contemporary African-American church that he had grown up hearing.

"Vatican II opened the door," she said. "He (Ray) took the text of the Ordinary of the Mass and put the words in English, with black musical settings because he wanted everyone to experience the sense of joy and celebration usually felt in African-American worship."

Besides the "Gospel Mass," Ray has also written other works widely performed in worship services and concerts, including "Gospel Magnificat" and "He Never Failed Me Yet."

"This is our gift of song and celebration to our community," Ms. Edwards said of the local performance.

Mark Spellman, Pastor

"the fire will test the quality of each man's work."
1 Corinthians 3:13

In the days of the pioneers, when men saw that a prairie fire was coming, do you know what they would do? Since not even the fastest of horses could outrun it, the pioneers would take a match and burn the grass in a designated area around them. Then they would take their stand in the burned area and be safe from the threatening fire. As the roar of the flames approached, they would not be afraid. Even as the engulfing flames surged around them there was no fear, because the fire had already passed over the place where they stood.

We are told in the Scriptures that a day of reckoning is coming. This day of judgment has been appointed by God (Acts 17:31). It is a day when not only the fallen angels will be judged (2 Peter 2:4), but all people that have lived upon the earth will appear before the judgment seat of God to give an account of their thoughts, words, and deeds. It is a time for receiving "reward." Each person will receive according to what he has done in his body, whether it be good or bad (2 Corinthians 5:10). God will bring every deed into the light, whether it be good or evil, private or public. (Ecclesiastes 12:14).

It's standard fare to think of God in the Old Testament as the God of wrath and judgment. There are those who tell us that God in the New Testament is a God of love, but all you have to do is read a few pages of your Bible beginning in the chapters after Malachi and you will find at once that the Old Testament emphasis on God's action as Judge, are not diminished, but are actually intensified. The entire New Testament is overshadowed by the certainty of a coming day of universal judgment. We find that Jesus Christ, 'the righteous judge' (2 Timothy 4:8) is the one who has been designated by God to execute judgment (Romans 2:16, John 5:22ff). Jesus of the New Testament, is Savior and also Judge!

As in the days of the pioneers, the 'prairie fire' is coming. The day is coming when the quality of each man's work will be tested by fire. Where have you taken your stand? The roar of the flames is approaching.

For godless men, this thought has frightening implications. But for those who have taken their stand in the place where God has already poured out his wrath upon sin that day will be filled with joy in knowing that 'There is therefore now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus' (Romans 8:1).

We invite you to come worship with us each Lord's Day, every Sunday morning, at 10:50 a.m. where we joyfully celebrate the free gift of God's grace - new life in Jesus Christ.

Harry Potter author lets title of next book slip on 'Today' show

NEW YORK — Here's a tidbit for all the Harry Potter fans waiting for the fifth book in J.K. Rowling's series. The title, straight from the author, is "Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix."

That was all Rowling would let slip Friday morning on the "Today" show and at a breakfast with children who had written winning essays about her books.

"I kept saying I wouldn't tell anyone, but then this cute boy, about 8, asked me, and I knew it would make him so happy," she said.

Rowling has no deadline for the book and said it would probably not be ready by July, as had been rumored.

"Although book five is underway, I really haven't got that far with it yet," she said. "I'd like to ensure that I really like the writing ... I would like to take my time."

All is not lost, however. Rowling is penning two other related books to be released March 16. Proceeds from the sale of the books — "Fantastic Beasts And Where to Find Them" and "Quidditch Through the Ages" — will benefit Comic Relief.

"Fantastic Beasts" is a title on the boy wizard's school supply list in a previous book. The second new volume will be an anthology of Harry's favorite sport, quidditch.

LONDON — George Michael promised that as soon as he records a song on the piano John Lennon used to compose "Imagine," he'll return the instrument to Liverpool's Beatles museum.

"It's not the type of thing that should be in storage somewhere or being protected, it should be seen by people," Michael told London's Capital Radio on Friday.

The pop singer paid $2.1 million on Tuesday to buy the Steinway Model Z upright, the centerpiece of an auction of Beatles memorabilia held at London's Hard Rock Cafe.

"I think I'll hold on to it for a couple of months and see if I can get it on to my new record and then it's going back to the museum in Liverpool where I think it rightly belongs," he said.

Michael downplayed suggestions that his composition would live up to the standard set by Lennon's "Imagine."

"It'll probably be 'Chopsticks' in comparison," he said.

PORTLAND, Maine — Thanks to the honor system, horror writer Stephen King will continue to offer installments of "The Plant" online.

King had threatened to stop after three installments if fewer than 75 percent of those downloading sent him the $1 fee. After the second installment, only 70 percent were sending the money.

The number climbed back up to 75.6 percent four days after part three was released last month, and the story, about a vampire vine that takes over a publishing company, is still on track.

"I think he'd like to see that a little bit higher, but still is happy at least that people are coming through," King spokeswoman Marsha DeFilippo said Friday.

The fourth part of this serial novel will be posted on King's Web site, stephenking.com, on Monday. It will cost $2 instead of $1, but at 54 pages, will be twice as long as the previous installments, DeFilippo said.

LOS ANGELES — Cher, who is sometimes a topic of conversation on television's "Will & Grace," will make an appearance on the NBC comedy next month.

Playing herself, Cher will meet one of her biggest, most obsessed fans: Jack McFarland (Sean Hayes). The actress-singer filmed her cameo in the episode, called "Gypsies, Tramps and Weeds," on Tuesday.

"Will & Grace," which airs Thursday nights, received the best comedy series Emmy in September. The episode with Cher is scheduled for Nov. 16.

BOULDER, Colo. — President Fonda? Unlikely, says the actress.

Jane Fonda, campaigning against a proposed amendment to the Colorado constitution that would require a 24-hour delay in abortions, was asked Thursday if she would consider running for president.

Her initial response — laughter.

"It's important we all remain realistic. I couldn't be elected dog catcher," Fonda, 62, said.

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. — The Snappy Lunch restaurant, famous for its pork chop sandwiches and as the boyhood haunt of Andy Griffith, may be forced to move.

The building housing the town's oldest restaurant — mentioned frequently on "The Andy Griffith Show" — is for sale.

Jack Snow, 72, a retired veterinarian, bought the building in 1976 for $12,500. He's asking $159,000 for it.

Charles Dowell, 71, has worked the grill at Snappy Lunch since the 1940s, and has rented space in the building since 1960, when he bought out his partner.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Oct. 21, 2000:

Aim for what you want. You could be tossed a curveball, but don't back off. Your endurance and follow-through count. How you phrase what you want makes all the difference in how it is received. Keep seeking out new ideas and break patterns. Stay open to change. If you are single, take a lot of time before you decide for sure that any relationship is long-term. If you are attached, you might go through some changes together. Learn to express your vulnerabilities. LEO is always your friend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Fire up the burners and get going. You have a lot that you would love to do. Allow more fun into your day. Invite a friend along. Don't get uptight if there's a change in plans. Tonight: Play the night away.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★ Think about a family member who might be wild and touchy. A boss or someone you consider to be in charge pushes your buttons. Establish limits with this person. Don't fight unpredictability. Tonight: Happy at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Check in with others. Make sure you have the same ideas about where and when to meet. Misunderstandings won't happen if you confirm your plans. What you might think is about to happen could change substantially as the day progresses. Go with the flow. Tonight: At a favorite spot.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ Use special care with conversations. Double-check that you and someone else mean the same thing. Don't worry about spending a little on yourself; it's about time. Someone who has strong opinions could surprise you with his point of view. Tonight: Fun doesn't need to be expensive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★★ Your personality helps eliminate a bump or two. Confusion surrounds plans and finances, but you also have the resources to clear the problem. Count on yourself, rather than friends and associates. Spice up a relationship. Tonight: Whatever you desire.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ Take a deep breath and stop. It is the weekend and time to take a break. You might be out of sync with a loved one. You have taken some risks professionally and pushed beyond your limits. You're exhausted. Don't allow anyone to toss more onto your plate. Tonight: Put up your feet and relax.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★ Check out what is going on with someone at a distance. You might need to revamp plans. Join friends and have a good time. Kick up your heels, but be careful about flirting. Don't allow that extra twinkle to cause a problem in an important relationship. Tonight: You are the center of the party.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★ Others don't get your message in the way you intended. Confirm meetings and go out of your way to please an older relative. Others might be difficult. Let problems slide away. Stay focused on what is important to you. Pave the way for another, even if it costs you. Tonight: In the limelight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Allow your enthusiasm to come out. You see things from another point of view. Others might be difficult to calm down. Unexpected news comes your way. Adapt and change plans if need be, and you'll enjoy yourself. Tonight: Try a new nightspot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★ Stay focused when speaking to others. Your personal contact means a lot more to others than you realize. Evaluate a financial decision, even though you might be inclined to act spontaneously. Relax and think about what's right. Don't stand on ceremony. Reach out for another. Tonight: Togetherness works.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★ Your unpredictability works against you right now. Carefully think through a decision that involves another. Confusion surrounds a child as well as a loved one. Pick up the tab for dinner or the movies. Another relaxes once he understands where you are coming from. The fun begins. Tonight: Go along with another's suggestion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★ Use your time well. Work through nervous energy with fall cleaning or preparation. Get into a pastime you enjoy and share it with a loved one. If someone close to you is on the warpath, pull back and give him space. Tonight: Just take it easy.

Man without country stuck in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Jamal Rashid has no passport, no birth certificate, no driver's license and no record of employment. In decades of moving through a half dozen countries, he left no trace.

But when he stowed away on a ship to Houston two years ago, he started a paper trail that now fills boxes.

Rashid, 32, claims he is from Eritrea, in northeast Africa, born to Ethiopian parents. He can't prove it.

Neither of those warring African nations will allow him entry because he has no documents. The United States doesn't want Rashid because immigration officials say they have no way to determine if he is dangerous.

What they do know doesn't help his case.

He says he has spent most of his life as a shepherd and hasn't had a day of schooling. Officials fear he could become a street person.

Since December 1998, he has been jailed by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Ennis, La., and Houston. He wants to go home but could spend his life behind bars.

"There are many people in my country who have no documents," Rashid said this week from an INS detention center in Houston. "I wasn't born in a hospital. I was born in a house. Eritrea isn't like the United States, where you have to have an ID to do everything. I was paid in cash, and so I didn't have a bank account."

He filed suit last week against the INS, asking the government to explain why he is being held.

He belongs to a small population without a state. About 100 in similar circumstances, including European gypsies, Palestinians and former Soviet Union residents are detained in Houston and could be held for years, INS district director Roger Piper said. They are among 1,600 detained in INS lockups nationwide, Karen Kraushaar, an INS spokeswoman in Washington, said.

"They fall through all the cracks," said Nestor Rodriguez, director of University of Houston's Center for Immigration Studies. "It is like they are in permanent limbo. People disconnect from their family and home for whatever reason and can't prove they are part of any nation state. They are literally men without a country."

Rashid's lawyer, Salvador Colon, wants him released under INS supervision in Houston. His case will be reviewed every 90 days but unless a business or halfway house sponsors him, his lack of job skills might make survival difficult, Piper said.

Rashid says he has been an illegal immigrant most of his life.

At 12, he moved from what is now Eritrea to neighboring Djibouti with his mother after his father was killed by guerillas. He talks of repairing yachts on the Red Sea for English and American sailors, of his mother dying of malaria, of stowing away to Saudi Arabia and of working as a shepherd until he was deported to Djibouti.

He said he hid in the anchor room of a ship bound for Houston because he wasn't a legal Djibouti resident.

AP Photo

Jamal Rashid poses at the visitor area of the Service Processing Center Thursday in Houston. Rashid, who claims to be from Eritrea, has been jailed in the Immigration and Naturalization Service detention facility since December, 1998.

When the crew discovered him, they tried to put him off in Kenya and Tanzania but neither would take him. After he was denied asylum in the United States, the INS told the shipping company it would have to return Rashid to Africa, a procedure Piper says is common.

Rashid said he was beaten by private security guards, left in a holding room at the Johannesburg, South Africa airport without food, water or a bathroom for four days.

Piper said guards abandoned Rashid after he refused to sign Tanzanian entry papers. INS officials in South Africa didn't know Rashid was arriving and wouldn't confirm his story to South African immigration, Piper said.

After 25 days at the airport, he was returned to Houston.

The INS isn't responsible for what happened, Piper said.

Rashid disagrees.

"I have been mistreated," he said. "I'm afraid of what they will do next. I just want to be free."

Perry says Archer compromised his effectiveness

AUSTIN (AP) — Suspended Health Commissioner William "Reyn" Archer III has compromised his ability to lead the state's health agency by his racially insensitive remarks to a former black female employee, Lt. Gov. Rick Perry said Friday.

Perry, a Republican who would become governor if Gov. George W. Bush wins the presidency, said Archer's remarks were inappropriate and that suspending Archer was the right thing to do. Bush approved Archer's 1997 appointment.

"I don't know anyone that condones his statements or how he handled that," Perry said. "I think his ability to do the job has been compromised greatly."

Also on Friday, the head of the health department's equal opportunity office said the agency suffers discrimination problems deeper than Archer's comments. Charles Pankey last week filed a discrimination complaint with the agency's governing board.

Asked if Archer, who was suspended with pay on Thursday, should resign, Perry said: "We're going through a period of time of which we're looking at this performance and I think he'll make the right decision."

Archer did not immediately return a telephone message left at his home Friday. Health department spokesman Doug McBride said Archer does not plan to resign.

'I don't know anyone that condones his statements or how he handled that. I think his ability to do the job has been compromised greatly.'

— Lt. Gov. Rick Perry

Health and Human Services Commissioner Don Gilbert and the health department's governing board suspended Archer while it investigates a discrimination complaint filed this week by Dr. Demetria Montgomery. She was fired from her top-level administrative job last month.

Archer was already undergoing an annual performance review when she filed her complaint, officials said.

Montgomery tape recorded a February conversation she had with Archer. He can be heard making several race-related remarks, including telling Montgomery that she had used her head instead of heart to advance her career like "white people do."

He also asked Montgomery to confess her "brokenness" in public as in the Biblical story of the prodigal son and he would like to play the role of forgiving father.

Archer, 46, the son of Congressman Bill Archer, R-Houston, is a licensed gynecologist and obstetrician.

Reyn Archer came under fire earlier this year over comments to reporters that Hispanic teen-agers "want to get pregnant."

Pankey, 65, who heads the agency's equal opportunity office, alleges that the health department has an "old boy" and "old girl" network that has tried to limit his effectiveness by making him report to agency administrators instead of directly to its board.

"It's not about me," said Pankey, who is black. "I want to leave this agency better than I found it. I want it to be a stand-alone office reporting to the board of health. There are a lot of minority employees suffering here and there and a lot of (white) employee suffering here also."

Pankey filed his complaint Oct. 13, naming Archer, general counsel Susan Steeg, deputy commissioner Ben Delgado and agency attorney Don Bradley as defendants.

Board Chairman J.C. Chambers of Lubbock said acting commissioner Charles Bell will look into the complaint and report his findings to the board.

Pankey said Friday he has never had a conversation or confrontation with Archer similar to Montgomery's but believes his allegations are symptoms of systematic discrimination.

"I believe Dr. Archer's problems, aside from the slip of the tongue from time to time, comes from very bad advice and counsel," Pankey said. "Dr. Archer is not a bad person. When he first came, I had high hopes. He brought promise."

Pankey says the department ignored his attempts to get an official nondiscrimination policy approved in 1998 and that white employees are paid larger salaries than minorities in similar positions. Since 1994, the office has been allowed to investigate complaints only from current employees. The change came after the determination that race played a role in the rejection of a black job applicant, Pankey said.

Pankey said requiring him to report to the agency's general counsel's office instead of to the board was an attempt to limit his power and protect the agency from complaints.

Chambers said he believes it makes sense to have Pankey report to another administrative office before coming to the board.

"That won't be a sticking point with me," Chambers said. "He can come directly to me. I'll give him my number."

Board of Human Services approves eliminating Medicaid interview

AUSTIN — The Texas Department of Human Services on Friday approved eliminating face-to-face interviews of parents who want to renew their children's Medicaid eligibility.

Beginning in December, children can be re-enrolled by mail or over the telephone. The change is expected to cost the state $31 million over two years.

Advocates for the poor applauded the decision, saying it was a step toward making the Medicaid process easier so that more needy people will apply.

"It's great news. I think this will really make a difference," said Anne Dunkelberg, senior policy analyst at the nonprofit Center for Public Policy Priorities. "This is certainly going to break down the barriers for a lot of families and improve continuity of care for kids."

The change comes as the children's Medicaid program has been under intense scrutiny while Republican Gov. George W. Bush runs for president. In August, a federal judge said Texas was failing to meet a 1996 agreement in which the state promised to make major improvements to the program.

A message left with Bush's office was not immediately returned.

The Texas State Employees Union opposed the change, saying more better-paid workers are needed to help ease the Medicaid work load.

"The answer to ensuring that people get signed up for Medicaid and all the other wide array of programs . . . is to make sure we have trained, qualified eligibility workers who can get them enrolled properly in this program," said Ted Melina Raab, the union's legislative director.

Before Friday's change, parents had to meet with a department representative to review their renewal applications. The process discouraged many from reapplying, causing lapses in coverage for children, advocates say.

There are 1.5 million children enrolled in the state's Medicaid program. An additional 130,000 children have been enrolled in the state's Children's Health Insurance Program.

But some 600,000 of Texas' 1.4 million uninsured children are eligible for but not enrolled in Medicaid.

Susan Zinn, the San Antonio lawyer representing the plaintiffs in the Medicaid lawsuit against the state, said eliminating interviews was positive, but not enough.

"We hope that the state will make it easier for children who already have Medicaid to get the health care that they need," Zinn said. Access to some Medicaid programs is a major issue in the lawsuit, which the state is appealing.

Dunkelberg agreed, saying the application process that people must go through when first applying for Medicaid also needs to be simplified.

Parents are required to complete large amounts of paperwork, including a 17-page application; conduct face-to-face interviews; and supply proof of income and other documents. Parents must also show they have less than $2,000 in assets, including automobiles.

The bureaucracy intimidates many needy families, said Stacy Barber, a social worker at the El Buen Samaritano clinic on Austin's south side.

"They come to me really confused and frustrated," Barber said. "If there's any one thing I spend most of my time on it's that. They just want to give up and I try to help and encourage them."

Plano man suspected in fatal shooting of Brazilian couple

PLANO (AP) — A Plano man was jailed Friday on suspicion of capital murder in the death of a Brazilian man in August, police said.

Michael Adam Sigala, 22, was arrested late Thursday at a Dallas apartment on a warrant for a probation violation involving robbery, police said. During an interview with investigators after his arrest, Sigala gave a statement regarding the shooting death of Kleber Santos, police said.

The investigation is ongoing, police said.

On Aug. 23, Plano police discovered the bodies of Kleber and Lilian Santos in their Spring Creek Parkway apartment. Kleber Santos, who worked for Ericsson Inc. in Richardson, was found just inside the door of the apartment with a gunshot wound to the head. Lilian Santos' body was found in a bedroom in the apartment with two gunshot wounds to the head.

Sigala has been arraigned on a capital murder charge and was being held without bond.

Detectives were led to Sigala when two gold wedding bands, a diamond solitaire ring and a gold ring with diamond chips turned up at a Dallas pawn shop, according to an affidavit. Friends and family members of the slain couple told police the rings belonged to Kleber and Lilian Santos, the affidavit states.

Individualized online program aims to cut heart attack, stroke risk

DALLAS (AP) — The American Heart Association on Friday unveiled a Web site aimed at informing people about the risks of heart attacks and strokes.

The free program, called "One of a Kind," gives users an assessment of their risk factors from information entered on the Web page, www.onelife.americanheart.org, AHA officials said.

The program then individually tailors messages to inform and motivate each user to change behaviors that heighten their risk.

"We think this will have an enormous impact in reducing heart attack and stroke," said Dr. Rose Marie Robertson, president of the AHA. "It takes advantage of very clear cut research that if we can target into, focus on their particular issues, that it makes if far easier for them to follow."

The Web page should not be viewed as a substitute for going to see a physician, Robertson said.

Participants' responses will remain confidential but aggregate data will be stored and used by the heart association. Users of the program will give information about physical activity, nutrition, smoking, blood pressure, cholesterol and medication compliance.

Dr. Benjamin Levine, associate professor of cardiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, applauded the AHA's preventive and educational approach to reducing cardiovascular disease.

"Generically, I think that any effort to improve knowledge and education to help people make the transition from committed to uncommitted is good," Levine said. "I think it's a good idea. I hope it works."

The program can benefit any user, whether he or she is ready to make a change or is just contemplating one, Robertson said. "The program addresses people at their own stage of readiness," she said.

The frequency of the tailored messages, which will come as e-mails, is up to the user. Someone without access to a computer can fill out the information at the Web site and request information and support be mailed to them.

Cardiovascular disease is the No. 1 killer of Americans, claiming almost a million lives a year.

It takes quite a lot to become a Certified Pre-Owned BMW. But quite the opposite to afford one.

See BRONCO BMW Today for the test ride of your dreams.

6.9% A.P.R.

Certified Pre-Owned by BMW

Before a pre-owned BMW can become a Certified Pre-Owned BMW every inch of it is checked by a factory-trained BMW technician, making it better than some manufacturers' new cars. Of course, the price of a Certified Pre-Owned BMW just adds to mits allure. With affordable financing, great lease rates and Protection Plan* up to 6 years or 1000,000 miles, you can finally drive the car of your dreams. Take a certified Pre-Owned BMW for a test drive and see for yourself. Then you can decide which you love more; its legendary performance or its affordable price.

TOP TEN REASONS TO BUY YOUR NEW VEHICLE FROM A MIDLAND DEALER

1. PRICING: New car dealers buy direct from the manufacturers. Prices are equalized no matter how far the dealer is from the factory. You can be assured that you're getting the best price possible on your new vehicle.

2. SELECTION: Dealers have a tremendous inventory and quick access to a wide selection of models, options, colors and safety features that meet your needs.

3. REBATES: Dealers offer you attractive manufacturer rebates that can bring you substantial savings.

4. SERVICE/REPAIRS: By maintaining your car according to the manufacturer's maintenance schedule you can retain better value and increase the life of your vehicle. Dealers employ factory-certified mechanics.

5. REGULATIONS: Dealers must comply with all federal, state and local laws, as well as standards established by the vehicle manufacturers.

6. WARRANTIES: Dealers employ factory-trained professionals to perform warranty work. Dealers can provide extended factory warranties and other factory sponsored products that protect your investment.

7. FINANCING: Dealers offer attractive financing rates through a number of sources which could result in monthly payments to fit your budget.

8. STABILITY: You can feel confident knowing that they will be available to provide service and support long after you make your purchase.

9. PRODUCT KNOWLEDGE: Dealers and their sales and service personnel are equipped with specialized knowledge of their particular product lines, giving you valuable information on vehicle performance.

10. COMMITMENT: Dealers are committed to the community, employing skilled professionals, generating tax revenues and participating in civic, cultural and charitable activities. They value lasting relationships with customers and a variety of businesses to build your trust and your loyalty.
