Railroad Arrival In 1928 Fulfills Longtime Dream

The coming of the railroad in 1928 fulfilled a longtime dream for the Hart community.

The first train coming into Hart on that eventful day in Nov., carried officials of the Fort Worth and Denver Railway Company to join in the celebration. Three passenger cars made their debut into the city that day.

The first depot agent at Hart was Jack Hall. John Gibson was the engineer, Pee Wee Ray was conductor and a Mr. Nobles was the first section foreman.

The railroad coming into Hart was the planning of several citizens and took several years to accomplish. The Fort Worth and Denver Railway executives had declined to consider Hart for the railroad until 1925 when an inspection of the Hart area was made and Hart was approved. The planning and work then began.

During the 60's, Hart's yard proved to be a sound investment for the railroad company as it was the second largest billing station on the line. There were as high as 50 cars a day billed from Hart.

Although original plans called for a passenger coach to accompany a freight car and stay overnight at Hart, this did not prove to be feasible. Pass-

Fire Chief Is Speaker For Lions Club Monday

Speaker at the noon's Lion Club meeting Monday was Frank Barnes, local fire chief on the Hart Volunteer Fire Department.

Barnes pointed out the assets of the present fire department and noted some of the needs to update the system.

Through efforts of local men the fire department became a reality several years ago. Volunteers now have a large truck capable of pumping water from fire hydrants. The 68 model Ford also has a 600 gallon tank on it, which serves in rural fires or at places where hoses won't reach fire hydrants.

The older truck (a 48 Ford) holds only 250 gallons of water.

Plans are now being formulated by the county to supply another truck to Hart Fire Department for rural calls. The county truck would be on call anywhere in the county if it is needed and manned by Hart firemen.

Barnes told the members of the Lions Club that with the present facilities, an emergency could create problems for the city. Because of no overhead storage unit, electric pumps must be working to get water. If the electricity was knocked out, and a fire occurred, the city would be out of water in a matter of a few minutes.

"According to State Board of Insurance, we are not listed as having fire protection," Barnes engers who needed to ride to Dimmitt or Plainview to attend to business were permitted to ride in the caboose. Among those who occasionally did this were J.M. "Grandpa" Scott and Mrs. Vida Jackson, both deceased.

The depot agent at the present time is R.L. Stewart who moved here from Vernon. He has been with the railroad almost 26 years.

H.E. "Pappy" Loman, agent for more years than any other agent at Hart, served the community from Christmas day, 1942 until his retirement Oct. 29, 1966.

At the time Loman was depot agent, a telegraph system was also in operation. Loman's wife, Myrt, helped at the depot during cotton and milo shipping out times. Other commodities shipped in the earlier days were "lots of wheat and also cattle."

Myrt remembers that there was a cattle yard located at a place by the tracks between what is now Grain Handling and Farmers Grain. "We shipped out a few sheep, too," Myrt recalls.

Duties of the depot agent include checking the yard the first thing each morning. This is to make a survery of the cars in the yards, take their numbers and report it to headquarters. At the present time, Stewart says, he calls Plainview, who in turns relays the message on to Fort Worth. Then if anyone in the company wants to know where a certain car is , all they have to do is call in and the IBM can tell you in a matter of minutes."

Office work consists of making out bills of lading, mailing all reports and keeping station records. The bills of lading for switches at Roy, west of Hart; Hillburn and Grisham, east of Hart, are all sent from the Hart depot.

Cars not unloaded within 2 days are charged a "demurage" or a fee for staying on the yard. This is another reason for the check of the yard each morning, Stewart says.

If the depot looks old..it's because it is. It is the original building which was built in 1928. Although most of the depots were built at that time of wood, Hart was fortunate enough to get a brick building.

It was equipped with all necessary office equipment, telegraph equipment and all the comforts of home with two "potbellied" stoves, Myrt remembers.

Mrs. Loman recalls that express used to be shipped into Hart for surrounding towns of Olton and Nazareth, but in the past few years, this practice was discontinued and is now shipped to Plainview or Dimmitt.

Recalling the older days, Mrs. Loman and Stewart remember when trains had to stop and fill with water from water tanks along the tracks.

"Now the tank and well belongs to the city," Stewart said. "With diesel trains, there is no need for that quanity of water as in the old days of steam engines.

New business was brought to the Hart depot with the advent of potato sheds in the area. Seed potatoes are shipped in by train, Stewart said, but the potatoes grown in the area still go out by truck.

An idea of the enormous amount of seed potatoes that are planted in this area is evident with the processing of 77 carloads last year, 59 the year before and 61 the year before that.

Stewart said that 24 cars had been received this year already. Each car holds 50,000 pounds.

Also adding business to the depot was the added acreage of corn being grown in the area for food purposes.

"Corn is shipped to Frito-Lay from here to various parts of the United States," Stewart said. "From Florida to Washington."

"Milo stays in the county and area to be fed in the area feed lots," Stewart said, "but we still ship out quite a bit of wheat."

It's a fascinating business according to Stewart, but it does have its drawbacks. In the railroad business, you can get "bumped" by another person with more seniority than you and you are on the move...usually looking for someone else to "bump". In order to be "bumped" or removed from the station you are serving, you must be one of the five youngest employees on the line, however, Stewart said, and the general manager has to approve it.

"That's why I came to Hart, I got "bumped" at Vernon." Stewart said.

But in talking with him, you get the impression that maybe that "bump" was something that turned out to be a good thing as his enthusiasm over his job at Hart comes through to you.

Biology II class was requested to choose a famous scientist to play a Who Am I? game - this selection was from Mario Martinez-

Though history books do not really know my age, I am proud to say I am under thirty. I was born in Paris. Upon graduating from a small school of learning I entered my country's defense programs. After a few years of doing this important and top secret work for my country, I was given my honorary release and returned to my homeland to further my education in the science field. I entered a small school. I graduated from this school, I entered another University to even further my education. I accomplished one of my life's goals of teaching in the same learning center with another great and gung-ho scientist Von Rossi. Just last summer I accompanied him on an expedition to the deep dark jungles of Arkansas, where we took photographs and studied thousands of different species. I am great Teacher and Professor and an even better husband because I now have a son.

My name is Dennis Humphreys.

BLANKET PROPOSAL

Though most blanket statements have little value, here's one that can save you work and money and keep you extra warm during the cold months ahead:

Choose a pair of wool blankets and make them into draperies for your living room. By contrasting them with your wallpaper, paint or carpeting, you'll achieve a fresh, dramatic effect.

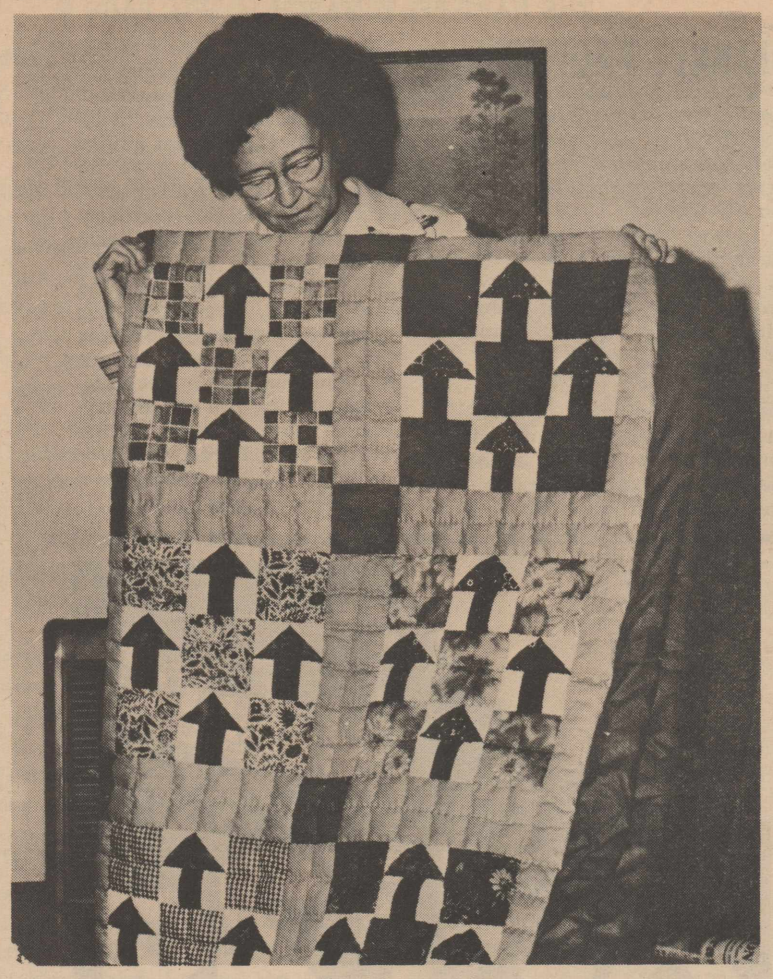

The mood can be delicately feminine--a white or pink "see-through" thermal blanket--or ruggedly masculine, using a strong solid color blanket--or one with a tartan or American Indian pattern.

Wool blanket "draperies" are a natural for the living room. Wool's inherent ability to hold moisture--up to 33 percent of its own weight--acts as a natural fire retardant. And the wool fiber itself acts as an insulator--it keeps the room's heat in and keeps the cold air out. You get all this when you buy a wool blanket with the Woolmark label on it, a meaningful blanket statement assuring you of a quality-tested product made of the world's best...Pure Wool!

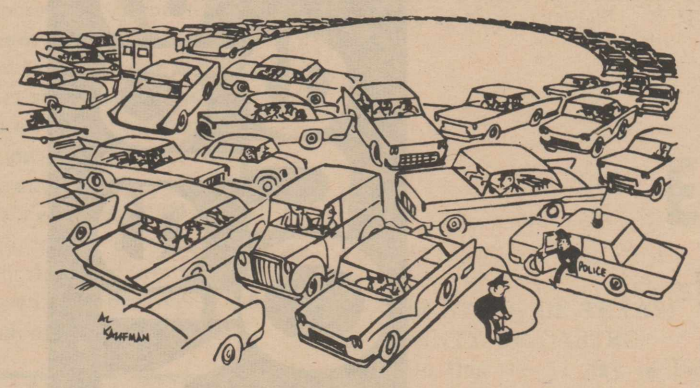

Wool blanket draperies--a good idea to hang on to!

92 Year Old Still Reads, Pieces 8 Quilts Last Year

Mrs. H.L. Reed observed her ninety-second birthday Saturday, March 9 and was recognized as the oldest resident for the month at the Heritage Home in Plainview, which has been her home for the past four years.

Receiving many nice gifts and cards, Mrs. Reed was especially pleased with a card from the Governor of Texas.

Born in Johnson County in 1882, she married Henry L. Reed June 10, 1919. They moved to Hale County in 1927 and lived in Hale and Castro County. Mr. Reed died in January 1971.

Hart is still called "home" by Mrs. Reed, since that was where she was living at the time it became necessary for her to move to the Heritage Home

Hobbies of gardening and piecing quilts kept her busy before she moved to the Heritage Home. Although she complains that she can't make a garden, she hasn't given up piecing quilts. She made eight tops last year and has never worn glasses, despite her age. She also reads the daily paper and has a memory as sharp as ever, remembering much of "the earlier days."

Mrs. Red is mother of three children and has six grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren. Her quilts usually go to someone in the family, but some of her friends boast that they are proud owners of one.

Her son, Marvin lives in Clayton, Okla. A daughter, Mrs. Hazel Banducea lives in Sunnyvale, Calif. and another daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Davis makes her home in Hart, as does a grand-nephew, Bobby Reed.

Girls In Action Study Alaska

Girls in Action met Wednesday at the church with their leader, Mrs. Mack Davis.

They started a new unit Study, Alaska, U.S.A. Opening the meeting by playing a game "Did You Know," poster board with 10 questions about Alaska was placed on the wall and answers were written on strips of paper and hidden around the room. Answers were found and written on the poster board.

They then discussed home missions and the girls set a goal for Annie Armstrong offering. Prayer Calendar was read by Diane Davis.

Each girl made an Eskimo puppet with a cup cake holder and popsickle stick with construction paper for dresses and cotton for fur.

Girls present were Kayla Gleghorn, Dara and Gracie Bonsal, Linda and Irene Ladesma and Diane and Debra Davis.

said. "We'd like to change this situation, but one of the first things we need is an overhead storage unit for our city water."

"Other needs of the fire department include more fire hose, which we are now taking bids for." Barnes said.

In order to remove the 'U' from their name with the State Board of Insurance, Barnes said that the fire truck had to meet certain standards, and that at least 17 members of the fire fighting unit had to be at drill two hours two times each month.

There are 25 volunteers on the Fire Department, Barnes said, and more members are needed.

"We meet each first and third Monday night of each month and anyone interested may join us." Barnes stated.

The unit is strictly on a voluntary basis and there is no compensation for the firemen.

"As Fire Chief, I want the citizens to know exactly what protection they can expect with our present facilities. Many men ahead of us have spent many hours in acquiring the equipment that we now have. In order to update our facilities and meet state requirements to be listed as having fire protection by the State Board of Insurance and get our Key Rate (which is now 99 cents) down to reduce our insurance rates in the city, we need to keep on improving our department." Barnes said.

Career Education Day To Be Held In Levelland

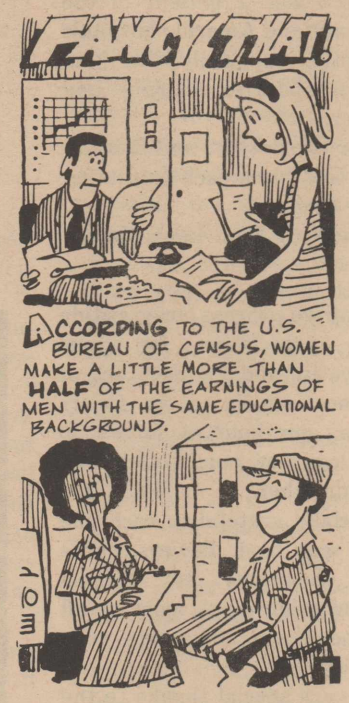

South Plains College has extended an invitation to all area high school students to attend "Career Education Day" on Wednesday, March 20, scheduled in conjunction with Gov. Dolph Briscoe's proclamation of March as "Career Opportunities for Youth Month."

A general assembly at 10 a.m. in the SPC Auditorium will kick off the program. Two "interest sessions" are planned for 10:25 and 11:15 a.m. During the sessions, students will be able to talk with SPC faculty and staff about the variety of careers available to students who enter any number of fields.

Lunch will be from noon to 12:45, followed by a program of entertainment. The day concludes with visitations, tours and conferences starting at 1:30 p.m.

Rx for your child's safety

Accidental poisoning is one of the leading killers of young children, according to Dr. Albert H. Domm, child safety specialist and medical director of the Prudential Insurance Company.

"The best precaution the parent can take is to keep all poisonous substances locked up or otherwise out of the reach of children," Dr. Domm advises.

Dr. Albert H. Domm

"You should also label all bottles containing drugs and chemicals and never give your child medicine in the dark."

Cosmetics, nailpolish and remover, perfumes, cleansers, furniture polish, pesticides and medicines are among the potentially lethal materials found in the house.

"If your child does swallow a poison, call a doctor and then start first aid procedures," Dr. Domm says.

He recommends giving the child five glasses of milk or a solution of baking soda or salt in a glass of water and inserting a finger into the throat to induce vomiting.

However, if the mouth is burned, give the victim raw eggs or olive oil and do not induce vomiting.

Our Health

by C. H. Tracy, M. D.

My mother and I are both cross-eyed. Will my children be? Is there any treatment for it?

In most cases, cross-eyes, or strabismus, is inherited. It is generally caused by excessive contraction of one of the muscles which moves the eyeball. When strabismus occurs in the first or second year of life, it is generally the result of abnormal functioning of the "fusion center" in the brain. There are actually two types of cross-eyes: convergent strabismus, where the eye turns in, usually associated with farsightedness; divergent strabismus, where the eye turns out, is associated with nearsightedness. Eyes that turn in are easier to treat. Fifty to 60 per cent of cross-eyes can be cured without surgery. Most essential in the treatment is wearing the proper glasses and following the eye exercise program prescribed by an ophthalmologist. It is important to start treatment early in a child's life, as soon as the condition is discovered. Chances for favorable results decrease considerably the longer it persists untreated. If after wearing eyeglasses, the strabismus has not improved, surgery is usually indicated. Overcoming cross-eyes by surgical procedure is certain.

I am 16 and have a common teen-age problem . . . acne. What causes it and is there anything I can do about it?

Acne is seen so often among adolescents and young adults, it's almost "normal." At this stage of your development, your body is constantly changing and growing. The change of hormone secretions affects the function of the skin, and this can result in the appearance of pimples or blackheads. Proper diet, fresh air and an abundance of exercise is an important part of a conscientious skin care program. Daily use of a medicated skin cleanser such as Fostex is beneficial as a cleansing agent for the treatment of pimples and blemishes. To conceal pimples and blackheads, try using a medicated lotion such as Fostril. It's flesh-toned to blend in with your skin while it helps combat skin blemishes associated with acne.
