Fire scorches 250 acres

■ A wandering prairie fire near Loop 250 and State Highway 191 sends columns of colorful smoke skyward before it is contained Wednesday afternoon.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

Midland firefighters struggled Wednesday to contain an unpredictable fire which bobbed, ducked and weaved its way across hundreds of acres of parched prairie west of the city.

The 1:55 p.m. blaze came within 300 yards of houses in a northeast Midland County neighborhood before units from the Midland Fire Department and Northeast Midland County Volunteer Fire Department stopped it.

More than 250 acres of the Crowley Place Ranch, owned by the Scharbauer Cattle Co., were scorched, but no one was injured and no other property damage was reported, Deputy Fire Chief Dean Williams said.

Meanwhile, huge plumes of gray, brown and black smoke could be seen from all over the city.

It took firefighters more than two hours to control the fire, loosely bordered by State Highway 191 on the south, North Loop 250 on the east, County Road 60 on the north and State Highway 158 on the west, Williams said.

Units were still on location and spraying hot spots until about 5:45 p.m., he said. The fire's source had not yet been determined, he said.

A section of North Loop 250 was closed for about 30 minutes and a stretch of County Road 60 was blocked off for more than an hour so firefighters could move equipment in and out of the area, Williams said.

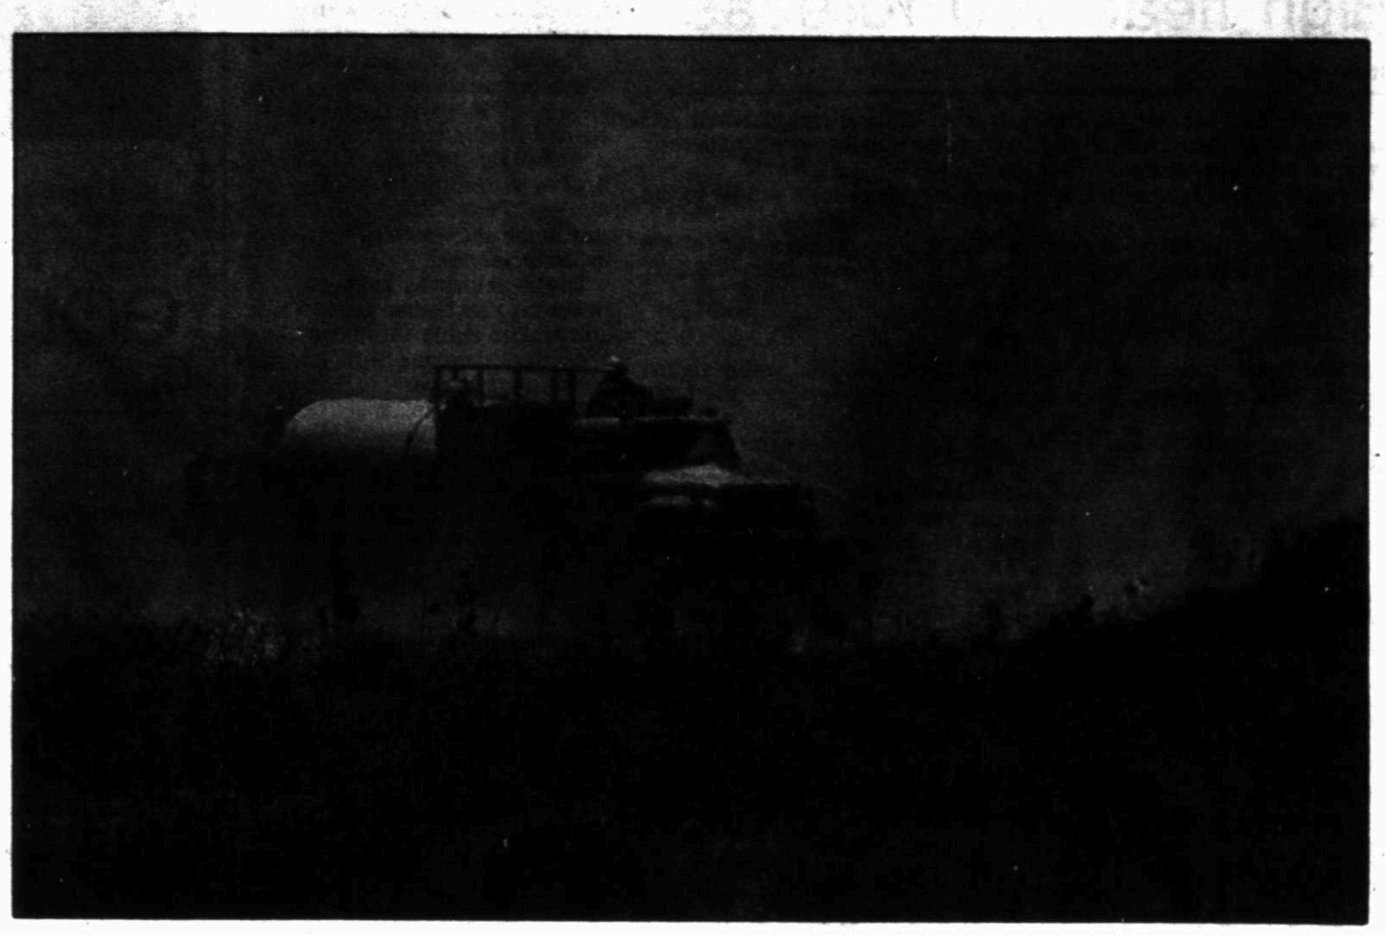

Scooter McGee, a Midland Fire Department fire truck driver, said shifting winds helped spread the fire in every direction.

McGee, after fighting the blaze for more than an hour, had to break away from the fire, drive to the nearest fire hydrant and refill his truck with water.

"That's a good grass fire," McGee said, looking across the flaming prairie as sweat dripped from his forehead. "It's as good a one as I've seen in a long time. It's got a lot of different points it's burning from."

Williams said the fire initially appeared to be moving west and southwest,

Grass fires a seasonal hazard, fire chief says

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

So far this month there have been 22 grass fires in Midland County, according to Midland Fire Department records.

"We've had months without any (significant amount of) rain, so we're ready to go," said Midland Fire Chief James Roberts, adding that rains earlier in the year have caused vegatation to flourish, thus making grass fires even more common than usual.

"The last two or three years have featured very dry summers that make that abundant growth real easy to burn," Roberts said. "High and dry tempertures have contributed a lot lately," he added.

Wednesday's grass fire west of the city that burned more than 250 acres occurred during the prime of grass fire season, fire officials said.

But the worse may be yet to come.

"We're looking straight at the firework season," Roberts said. "When they start shooting them (firworks) we're going to have more and more fires. It's really going to be a big problem."

Last July 4, there were 19 reported fires in the city, the majority being grass fires, according to Midland police department records. Roberts said fireworks were responsible for most.

As with fireworks-related blazes, Roberts said most grass fires are the result of carelessness.

"People throwing cigarettes out their (car) windows, careless burning of trash, children playing with matches ... some are 60 years old and still playing with matches," Roberts said.

Roberts added that lightning and even trains are to blame for some grass fires.

Fiery particles of soot coming from the diesel engines that generate electricity to run railroad switch engines are sometimes to blame for grass fires. "Unfortunately it's very common," Roberts said.

Another source of grass fires is when a "hot box," caused when cotton waste functioning in a ball-bearing like manner in the axle-wheel component of some of the older trains gets hot and catches fire. The burning material drops out and if caught by the wind can cause a fire in a neighboring pasture.

"We had one this year," Roberts said.

Mandela given hero's welcome

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson Mandela received a hero's welcome Wednesday as he arrived for his first visit to the United States. The South African freedom fighter was feted with a ticker-tape parade, the key to the city and an outpouring of support by nearly 1 million people.

The African National Congress leader responded with a plea for continued economic sanctions against his homeland — a theme he has sounded throughout his worldwide tour.

"We appeal to you in all humility and in all sincerity that you must join us in the internal actions that you are taking to force the government to abandon apartheid," Mandela said shortly after landing at Kennedy International Airport.

There and at City Hall, Mandela thanked Americans for their support of the anti-apartheid movement. After receiving the key to the city, he declared: "Apartheid is doomed. South Africa shall be free. The struggle continues."

He told the City Hall crowd that he envisions a new South Africa, one "which banishes forever racism in all its forms and becomes a truly non-racial, non-sexist society."

Long-time marriages celebrated

■ "Communication" key to a life together, advise participants in an annual party for Midlanders married fifty years or more.

By Brian Pearson

They don't build marriages like they used to, especially not one like Burell and Ruby Cramer have had for the past 66 years.

So it was only fitting to throw a full-blown recognition party for the Cramers and about 40 other Midland couples with more than 50 years of marriage experience.

About 140 people crowded into the Dellwood Senior Citizens Center dining room Wednesday to honor those who had hurdled their golden anniversaries.

The matrimonial veterans were treated to bride's and groom's cakes among other refreshments at the 3303 W. Illinois Ave. facility.

"We wanted to make it a special day for them," said Marilyn Harrison, the center's director. "It's very important to them. In this day and age it is really an achievement to reach that milestone."

During the festivities at the eighth annual event, the couples were asked to stand up, introduce themselves and deliver a brief speech about their married

Barry tried to hide his drug use, dealer says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted drug dealer Charles Lewis testified at Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial Wednesday that he and the mayor agreed "to get our stories straight" and hide their crack cocaine use when police began closing in on them.

Lewis said Barry also told him to drink "lemon juice and lots of water" to obscure results of a possible drug test by police.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy swiftly sought to undermine Lewis' effect on the jury. He displayed a notebook belonging to Lewis and said it showed the witness was a courier for a Washington cocaine ring.

Then, under Mundy's cross examination, Lewis conceded he didn't begin to cooperate with prosecutors until after he was convicted of drug charges in the Virgin Islands, where he is awaiting sentencing.

A key prosecution witness, Lewis has testified he and the mayor used cocaine frequently between 1986 and 1988 in the Virgin Islands and the nation's capital.

Barry, 54, has pleaded innocent to 10 misdemeanor cocaine possession charges, one misdemeanor charge of cocaine conspiracy, and three felony counts of lying to a grand jury about his alleged drug use.

The three-term mayor could face up to 26 years in prison and fines of $1.85 million if convicted on all counts at the trial, which is expected to last several weeks.

Beginning his second day of testimony, Lewis said he and Barry used crack cocaine three times together in December 1988 at Lewis' Washington hotel room.

He said he spoke with Barry by telephone Dec. 22, 1988, after learning that police were investigating Lewis' actions, about how to conceal their drug use.

"It was ... like fixing a dam," said Lewis. He said he and Barry agreed, "We have a problem. We need to fix it. We need to get our stories straight."

Lewis destroyed a crack pipe Barry had given him and flushed the remains

High near 100 forecast

Staff Report

National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for continued hot temperatures today, with a high near 100 and southeast winds at 10 to 15 mph.

Tonight will be fair, with a low near 70. Friday's high will be in the upper 90s.

Wednesday's high was 105 degrees, four degrees off the record of 109 set in 1951. Wednesday's low was 72. The record low for today is 53, set in 1973.

STATE

A cold front that moved through West Texas on Wednesday stalled near El Paso, prolonging the hot and humid weather across the Lone Star State.

An excessive heat advisory remains in effect for most parts of North Texas through Thursday.

Some thunderstorms lingered in the eastern part of the Panhandle and South Plains Wednesday afternoon. Skies were mostly sunny elsewhere, as Texans enjoyed yet another typically muggy day.

Winds behind the cold front in West Texas were from the northwest, with speeds ranging from 5 to 15 mph.

Mid-afternoon temperatures were in the mid to upper 90s over much of the state. But temperatures in the low to mid 80s were reported in the Panhandle. Readings in the low 90s prevailed along the Gulf Coast.

There were scattered 100-degree readings across the state. The extremes temperatures at 3 p.m. ranged from 82 degrees at Dalhart to 101 degrees at Midland and at Laughlin Air Force Base in Del Rio.

The afternoon heat indexes will range from 105 degrees to 110 degrees in North Texas. Isolated scattered thunderstorms were expected over the western sections of North Texas and the lower coast Wednesday night. Fair skies are predicted elsewhere.

There is a slight chance for thunderstorms over the Panhandle, Rio Grand Valley, and North Texas on Thursday. The highs will be in the 90s and up to 106 degrees in the Far West and along the Rio Grande.

NATION

Heavy rains caused flooding in Illinois, where a rescue worker was dragged off a collapsed bridge and was missing Wednesday, and vicious storms pummeled parts of Kansas, where 30 people were hurt, but only one seriously.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

MANDELA: Thousands line his route

(From 1A)

In Huntsville, Ala., President Bush reiterated that the United States would not lift economic sanctions against South Africa until that country meets the requirements of the sanctions law. Those requirements include the release of all political prisoners in South Africa.

Police estimated that 350,000 people lined streets along Mandela's route from the airport, and another 450,000 turned out for the ticker-tape parade up Broadway's "Canyon of Heroes."

The crowd cheered wildly as Mandela passed by. Many wore Mandela buttons and waved posters with his picture.

"I just feel proud," said Denise Brutus, an American Airlines employee. "I'm so happy. I couldn't stay home and watch it. I had to be in his presence."

The avenue was ankle-deep in ticker tape and other paper. Trees and traffic lights throughout the area were dripping with streams of computer paper.

Judith Bateman, a senior citizens program director from Irvington, N.J., showed up early to insure a first row seat.

"I pray for him every night," said Bateman, who was outfitted in a red T-shirt with a map of Africa and wore a Mandela button. "He is a dream to the human people."

Bateman's traveling companion, Shirley Coxson, said she wished she could give Mandela this simple message: "We love you. God bless you."

Along with those who showed up to cheer Mandela were thousands of city police, and federal and state agents — part of a security detail dubbed "Operation Topaz."

Mandela was greeted at the airport by dignitaries including Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said Mandela's visit was "not a victory lap but a long distance journey to remind us that until South Africa is completely free the march toward freedom has not reached its final destination."

Mayor David Dinkins, the city's first black mayor, gave the man he has called his hero a giant bear hug upon meeting him and promised:

"One day in this lifetime we will reach freedom's gate together and ... pass through to a land where we all will be judged by our fellow beings for the content of our character rather than the color of our skin."

Despite a two-hour arrival delay, Mandela insisted on stopping at a Brooklyn high school where thousands of students and residents from the predominantly black Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood greeted him with cheers of "Mandel-a!" and "Keep the pressure on."

"I sincerely feel very strong and encouraged because if in our struggle we receive the support of the youth of the world, then our cause can never fail, can never be lost," Mandela told the crowd.

He then ate lunch at the Coast Guard station in Battery Park overlooking the Statue of Liberty.

The Mandelas arrived from Canada nearly two hours late after tour organizers decided the 71-year-old Mandela needed extra rest. Mandela had a benign cyst removed from his bladder less than three weeks ago.

Organizers said the U.S. leg of Mandela's 13-nation tour may be pared back. The schedule calls for Mandela to participate in 34 major events during his 12-day, eight-city trip.

So what's the secret to a long and successful married life?

"Having a good man," quipped Burell Cramer, 86.

On the serious side, Cramer said communication between partners is the key.

"If you don't have that, you don't exist," he said. "It's not one sided. It's two sided. You have to give and take."

His wife, Ruby, 81, added that patience and understanding are ingredients to a healthy married life.

The Cramers were given a special gift for having the most years of marriage among those attending Wednesday's event.

Having 60 anniversaries behind them, A.C. and Myrtle Reeves, ages 78 and 81, respectively, noted that the meaning of marriage has changed for the worse over the years.

"Things seem to change every 10 years," A.C. Reeves said. "Young folks back when we got married didn't live together like they do now."

Mrs. Reeves noted that today's young couples seem to take life easier than when she was young.

"Kids don't know how to work," she said. "We knew how to work."

Widows and widowers who were married more than 50 years before their spouses died also were honored at Wednesday's event.

down the hotel room toilet, he said.

Lewis said that the next night Barry asked him on the telephone to lie to authorities about their drug activity.

"He wanted me to tell the police the same thing I had told the Post reporter," said Lewis, who earlier testified that he told a Washington Post reporter he and Barry had never done drugs.

Barry also coached him on how to obscure evidence of cocaine use if police gave him a drug test. "He told me, 'Just use lemon juice and lots of water,'" Lewis told the court, adding, "I used a considerable amount of lemon juice."

Barry leaned back in his chair at the defense table and smiled broadly at the remark.

Saying he had lied to police and a federal grand jury when he denied using drugs, Lewis said, "It was my effort to protect myself and the mayor."

In the days after Barry's visits to Lewis became public, the mayor denied in several statements to the press that he had used drugs with Lewis or at any other time.

Mundy took aim at Lewis' motives in cross-examination.

"You didn't start looking around to make deals until you were convicted, did you," Mundy asked. "You started cooperating with the government because you wanted to help yourself, didn't you?"

"Yes," Lewis replied.

And Mundy said Lewis' notebook showed he was involved in a cocaine ring with James McWilliams, another potential government witness.

Lewis insisted he had not been coached by prosecutors and was not testifying "to convict the mayor."

Lewis, growing defensive, said he wasn't getting a free ride from the government.

"This agreement that was approved, it wasn't something like a present," complained Lewis, who served a seven-month prison sentence outside Washington on federal drug charges.

Police began investigating after Lewis is alleged to have offered cocaine to a maid at the Washington hotel.

Lewis said he learned from a reporter that city police had aborted a planned undercover drug buy from him the afternoon of Dec. 22, 1988 after they learned Barry was in the hotel room.

Lewis testified that he and the mayor spoke in code about sticking to the same story because Lewis feared his telephone was bugged.

He said he told the mayor that he had told a Washington Post reporter "there were no drugs in the room. He (Barry) said, 'No, that's right.'"

Lewis then asserted he did not use drugs. "'No, none,'" Lewis said Barry replied.

Lewis said he then added, "You don't use drugs either, and he (Barry) said, 'No, right, I don't.'"

HAZARDS: 'High, dry' days taking toll

adding that fires caused in this manner are not as common as they once were due to trains being built differently.

Whether a grass fire is caused by a "hot box" or intentionally set, more than vegatation is in jeopardy.

Grazing pastures, oil equipment, fence posts, telephone lines and housing can be threatened, according to Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

"There not easy fires to fight because they're spread out ... it's a movable thing and you've got to move with it," Petree said.

Sometimes highways acting as fire break don't even stop grass fires, Petree said. "The wind carries it across," he said, adding that the wind can make a "difference between a small fire and a major fire."

In fighting grass fires, water and fire breaks made with road graters are a firefighter's best weapons, Petree said.

The Midland Fire Department is presently looking at a obtaining a water expansion system to help fight grass fires. Roberts said the $12,000 unit will be submitted to the city budget for approval.

The unit, which can be used with one of the fire department's existing vehicles, expands water five times by using a high detergent-type chemical and air. The system thus reduces the great amount of water used to fight fires.

So far this year — through the end of May — there have been 401 grass fires in the city and 387 in the county. Last year for the same period, there were 261 in the city and 167 in the county, records show.

but shifting winds sent it moving north toward County Road 60. "That's where we made our full-court press," he said.

He said the blaze was going strong by the time firefighters arrived. "With any grass fire it takes awhile to get it contained," Williams said. "We were fortunate."

NATION IN BRIEF

Senators push for dollar coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the flops of the too-large Eisenhower dollar and the too-close-to-the-quarter Susan B. Anthony dollar, 29 senators are ready to gamble on Americans accepting a gold-colored, 11-sided dollar coin.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., appeared before the Senate Banking Committee on Wednesday to urge support for legislation he is sponsoring to authorize the minting of Christopher Columbus dollars slightly larger than the quarter. It has 28 co-sponsors.

Domenici, who is from a copper-producing state, wants the dollars to be 90 percent copper, giving them a gold tone to differentiate them from other coins. They would also have 11 smooth sides in contrast with rough-edged, round quarters.

Domenici acknowledges that Americans prefer bills over coins but he said inflation alone has made it time for a change.

"The $1 bill today buys about what a quarter purchased in 1950," he said.

Loggers protested

SAMOA, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of environmentalists demonstrated outside a giant lumber mill Wednesday and 44 were arrested in a "Redwood Summer" protest of logging that they say endangers California's ancient forests.

About 350 protesters environmentalists and a sprinkling of labor union activists demonstrated at the coastal Louisiana Pacific mill as part of a summer of protests planned by the militant Earth First! environmental coalition.

About 250 miles to the southeast in the Sierra Nevada range, a group of loggers was fired on Wednesday by gunmen with semi-automatic rifles, but no one was hit and authorities didn't draw a connection with the demonstration on the coast.

Redwood Summer organizers hope activists from around the country will converge on northern California's redwood country to protest logging of ancient trees in an environmentalists' reprise of the 1964 "Freedom Summer" civil rights demonstrations in Mississippi. They demand an end to what they say is excessive clear-cut logging, and cutting of virgin redwood trees.

The group renounced its old practice of driving spikes into tree trunks to make them useless as lumber after sawmill workers were hurt by the spikes.

Teens spread AIDS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The spread of AIDS is slowing among some gay men, but soaring among teen-agers, women, crack smokers and heavy drinkers, researchers reported Wednesday on the opening day of the international AIDS conference.

"In particular, the emergence of crack cocaine use as a risk factor for the transmission of HIV is a new and disturbing development in the epidemiology of AIDS," said Don C. Des Jarlais of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City. HIV is the virus that causes AIDS.

Des Jarlais is one of the authors of "AIDS: The Second Decade," an attempt to summarize all existing information on the likely future course of the epidemic. It was prepared by experts assembled by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences.

The report was released in San Francisco as 12,000 delegates and 1,800 reporters gathered for the Sixth International Conference on AIDS, a forum for the presentation of new research and a target for protests and demonstrations by AIDS activists.

Violence discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former New York model whose face was slashed with razor blades described her ordeal Wednesday at a congressional hearing on legislation calling for tougher penalties for violence against women.

The legislation introduced by committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., calls for tougher penalties for sex crimes and would make gender-related violence a civil rights violation, entitling the victim to sue for punitive damages.

Ms. Hanson, a 29-year-old student at New York University, underwent extensive plastic surgery to diminish the scars she suffered. The attack occurred after Ms. Hanson rebuffed advances from her landlord.

Rare lion-headed monkey discovered

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An unknown species of monkey with a lion's head and a striking gold and black coat has been found in one of Brazil's most populous regions, researchers said Wednesday.

"It's quite remarkable, because it's almost like finding something in the suburbs of Los Angeles," said Russell Mittermeier, president of Conservation International in Washington, D.C.

The black-faced lion tamarin, as the new monkey is called, is a golden squirrel-size monkey with black face, forearms and tail.

It is only the fourth species of lion tamarin known. It will be the highlight of a meeting on lion tamarins to be held in Brazil beginning Thursday.

The new lion tamarin was found by this spring two biology students who had just graduated and taken their first jobs as professors, Lucia Lorini and Vanessa Guerra Persson. They were collaborating with Dante Martins Teixera of the National Museum in Rio de Janeiro.

The discovery "is biologically important and an important conservation challenge as well," said Benjamin Beck, associate director of the National Zoo in Washington.

The black-faced lion tamarin was discovered on the island of Superagui, south of the city of Sao Paulo, in the Brazilian state of Parana.

The black-faced lion tamarin, an unknown monkey with a lion-like mane and a striking gold and black coat, has been discovered in one of Brazil's most populous regions, researchers announced Wednesday. Shown in this sketch, the find has been called "quite remarkable" by one of the researchers.

Human ancestor provokes skepticism

NEW YORK (AP) — An ape-like creature that lived about 10 million years ago may be the earliest known direct ancestor of humans, a study suggests.

The analysis implies that ancestors of humans may have started evolving away from ancestors of chimps and gorillas millions of years earlier than many scientists believe.

But experts familiar with the study said they strongly doubted that the creature is really a direct ancestor of humans.

The study is presented in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature by scientists from France and Greece. It analyzes a fossil found in September in northern Greece.

The fossil, believed to be 9 million to 10 million years old, represents a previously known animal called Ouranopithecus macedoniensis.It includes the right part and a portion of the left part of an adult's face, plus the upper jaw and almost all of its teeth, the researchers said.

They said the fossil's anatomy suggests that Ouranopithecus macedoniensis appeared on the human branch of the evolutionary tree after that lineage split from the ancestors of gibbons, orangutans, gorillas and chimpanzees.

That would make it a direct ancestor of humans.

The reseachers suggested that the human lineage may have started evolving away from the ancestors of chimps and gorillas as long as 12 million years ago.

Other scientists have put that split at only 5 million to 7 million years ago, said Lawrence Martin, assistant professor in the antholopology department at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Martin, who has studied other fossils from Ouranopithecus macedoniensis, said he is "absolutely sure" that the new study is wrong in assigning the beast to the human lineage.

Martin said he puts the beast further back in evolution.

Peter Andrews of the Natural History Museum in London, who wrote an editorial accompanying the Nature report, said Wednesday in an interview that "I don't believe for a minute" that the creature was a direct human ancestor.

Greyhound racing killed by panel

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The House Criminal Justice Committee turned a deaf ear Wednesday to proponents of greyhound racing, who claimed the industry would have a $300 million impact on Louisiana. The panel, long opposed to extending gambling, got an assist from the religious community and the horse racing industry in its decision to kill the bill by Rep. Buster Guzzardo, D-Independence.

President George Bush announces he will end all dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization Wednesday at the Marshall Space Flight Center.

Bush hoping for peace

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration hopes its limited response to the Palestine Liberation Organization's failure to denounce a recent terrorist raid against Israel will encourage PLO leader Yasser Arafat to combat terrorism, a senior White House official said Wednesday.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Bush "went out of his way to make clear this is a suspension — not a cutoff. This is an opportunity for Arafat if he steps up to it."

The official spoke after President Bush announced that the United States was suspending an 18-month dialogue with the PLO.

Bush said "any time the PLO is prepared to take the necessary steps, we are prepared to resume the dialogue." He called on the PLO to "satisfy us that those who are responsible" will be disciplined for the May 30 attack against the Israeli coast.

Nelson Mandela's fans of all races line New York City streets to glimpse him

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson Mandela's admirers stayed away from work, skipped school and ducked out at lunch Wednesday to greet "the last of the black heroes" with clenched fists and open hearts.

From Kennedy Airport to City Hall, hundreds of thousands of people of many races lined the streets to catch a glimpse of the black South African leader.

Mandela's ride through a storm of confetti in Broadway's "Canyon of Heroes" was the day's emotional apex.

TO ALL FORMER AND CURRENT INTRASTATE WIDE AREA TELECOMMUNICATIONS SERVICE (WATS/800) SUBSCRIBERS:

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company has instituted a Class Action Lawsuit seeking judicial approval of a settlement reached in Docket No. 7297, an inquiry of General Counsel of the Public Utility Commission of Texas into possible overcharges which occurred between September, 1976, and February, 1987, due to rounding practices, on bills of intrastate WATS/800 customers sent by Southwestern Bell and other telephone companies which concur in Southwestern Bell's tariff. The suit is styled "Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, Plaintiff, vs. MCI Telecommunications Corporation, A Member of the Class of Texas Intrastate WATS and 800 Service Customers Who Paid Overtime Charges From September 1976 Through February 1987, Defendant," and identified as Cause No. 471,460 in the 126th Judicial District Court of Travis County, Texas.

Pursuant to the settlement, while not admitting liability, Southwestern Bell, the other local exchange telephone companies in Texas, and AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. have agreed to pay refunds to those WATS/800 customers who paid overtime charges attributable to the rounding practices for intrastate WATS/800 services at any time between September, 1976, and February, 1987. The refunds will be based upon either the actual or estimated amount of overtime charges attributable to such rounding practices. An exact refund will be determined for customers able to produce copies of their WATS/800 service bills. For customers who do not have copies of their WATS/800 service bills to establish actual overtime charges paid, an average refund of $4.53 to $5.95 per WATS/800 service line per month will be applied. All claims will be subject to verification. The refunds will also include interest at the rate of 7.80% per annum.

Chamber's plan good for Midland

The tax abatement policy already approved by the City of Midland and Midland County and now being considered by other local taxing entitites is not only a good idea whose time has come, it's almost a necessity in this day of heavy-handed competition between cities trying to lure new businesses to their locality.

Under the proposal from the Midland Chamber of Commerce now being considered, new businesses would be granted tax abatements based on a system of points given for such factors as projected payroll size, number of jobs created and the business's taxable value, among others.

Industries which fully qualify would receive 100 percent immunity from local taxes their first and second years in Midland, 90 percent the third year, 80 percent the fourth, and 70 percent the fifth year. The abatement would be for up to $50 million of the industry's property value.

The policy would give the Midland chamber an edge when negotiating with businesses considering a relocation to Midland or businesses considering starting operations here. To be considered for the tax abatement, businesses would need to locate in Midland's enterprise zone, located mainly in the south and east parts of the city.

According to chamber officials, other cities already are using tax abatements which can — and realistically should — be viewed as "pluses" for a city in attracting new firms.

The abatement will be an incentive for businesses to come to Midland because it will reduce their operating expenses in the critical first few years of operation or the period immediately following a move.

Mayor Carroll Thomas is seeking economic diversification for the city and notes that tax abatements would be an effective tool for industrial development.

He's right and officials with the Midland Independent School District, Midland College and the Midland County Hospital District would be wise to approve the tax abatement plan.

Midland needs all of the "selling points" it can get in the competition for new businesses and industries. Tax money "lost" in the abatement will be returned to Midland many times over in a more stable business economy that will benefit all Midlanders.

Military leisure facilities scrutinized

WASHINGTON — When it's playtime at Air Force golf courses, clubs and bowling alleys, it's pay time for American taxpayers. An internal Air Force audit shows that millions of tax dollars are being spent on fun and games, contrary to a congressional mandate to cut that spending. And, the expenses are being hidden by the local bases to fool Congress and the Pentagon.

Anderson

Auditors are still crossing the "T's" and dotting the "I's" on the audit of the Air Force's Military Welfare and Readiness Division, or MWR, but we have obtained an official summary of their findings. It shows $20 million in fraud in the Air Force MWR, the agency that administers recreation and social facilities at the bases.

The Air Force Audit Agency investigated 32 of the 140 bases around the world, including the headquarters of eight Air Force commands. The auditors were looking at how those bases spend money on golf courses, tennis courts, bowling alleys, clubs, day care centers and other amenities. What they found wasn't pretty.

In 1985, Congress ordered the military to stop building major new recreational facilities and even stop large additions to the old ones. The auditors found that $8.4 million has been spent or is slated to be spent in violation of that order. Another $12.6 million in expenses were labeled by the auditors as "questionable."

Air Force sources told our associate Tim Warner that there is nothing to stop the fraud — no external or internal oversight system to keep the local brass from juggling the figures they report to the Pentagon and Congress.

The auditors found cases where base officers deliberately under-reported their expenses, or split a major construction contract into several small contracts that didn't need approval from headquarters.

In some cases, the base commanders have ordered the construction of a new officers club or golf course in blatant disregard for the congressional mandate.

Four Air Force bases spent more than $1.5 million total to build or make major repairs to golf courses. Myrtle Beach Air Force Base in South Carolina spent $646,505 on golf course construction without congressional approval. The city of Myrtle Beach is already the golf course capital of the United States, but apparently the Air Force brass needs its own.

Similarly, Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio spent $446,068 on a golf course in violation of the order from Congress.

At Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma, it was a $772,000 skeet-shooting club.

At Yokota Air Force Base in Japan, it was a $1 million bowling alley. Also at Yokota, the brass simply had to have a $221,600 Italian restaurant. It went out of business in two years. The auditors put that one under the heading of "questionable expenditures."

The auditors also found what they called a "conspiracy" to mislead the Pentagon and Congress by splitting major construction projects into smaller dollar amounts.

Mildenhall Air Force Base in England had approval to spend $70,000 repairing the officers club. Instead, the base spent $2 million on miscellaneous repair contracts.

At Ramstein Air Force Base in Germany, internal memos disclose that base officials worked out a plan to under-report their expenses, the audit says. They submitted paperwork on $1.8 million when they had spent $4 million.

Apparently the folks at Ramstein haven't learned their lesson. It was the revelations about an $8 million fraud at Ramstein last year involving private profiteering at recreational facilities that prompted the Air Force Audit Agency to look at the other bases too.

ABDICATING RESPONSIBILITY — For years we have reported on the slipshod practices of the Food and Drug Administration. A new congressional investigation confirms that half of the products approved by the FDA between 1976 and 1985 should not have been OK'd for public consumption.

Can politician be Jim Hightower?

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox recently ruled that the Agriculture Department must release some information used in an audit of the department and a crop inspection service. Mattox's decision is the correct one. What is curious is that Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower would have requested the opinion in the first place.

Hightower requested an AG's opinion to find out whether the Texas Open Records Act required disclosure of a state audit of the department and of the Texas-Federal Inspection Service. That audit was conducted after federal officials questioned some travel and meal expenses billed to the inspection service by Hightower and Deputy Commissioner Mike Moeller. Both officials defended the expenses as appropriate.

In general, the audit found that expenses were billed appropriately. But Hightower questioned whether he was required to release a list of charges made on a government credit card, as well as a list of inspection service meetings. The AG ruled that yes, such charges are a matter of public record.

Surely this is not the same Jim Hightower who has made a career of taking on the fat cats, with the huge expense accounts and three-martini lunches.

It's disappointing to see a populist hero acting like the rest of the politicians. Let's hope the former "Texas Observer" editor remembers his raising. He, of all people, should know it's best to shed light in all dark corners, and not try to hide behind the law.

Respect nation's flag

Like last summer's Fourth of July, this year's celebration of Flag Day carried added emotion for many Americans.

It should always be meaningfully observed, of course. The American flag represents so much to so many. It stands for this country's creation, its powerful history and its unique character.

The flag represents victory over tyranny and the battle for an individual's right to participate in government. Its symbolism can also be intensely personal, in both aching and exhilarating ways.

The flag honors young men and women killed in battle defending our freedom. It honors heroes who've risked their lives and made great sacrifices. It can move us to tears of joy and bitter tears of agony.

Last week the U.S. Supreme Court, as expected, struck down the new federal law banning the burning of the American flag. It said that in passing the law, Congress violated the First Amendment's free-speech protections.

Even some of those who agree with the court's decision may wish the court had remained silent, if only to avoid a repeat of last summer's arguments and the inevitable push for an amendment.

This country has had laws against flag-burning for many years. The republic has survived.

Breakfast with Donald makes my day

I don't see Donald Trump as much as I used to. But when I do, it makes my day. The other morning he walked into the coffee shop and took the stool next to mine.

"How is it going?" I asked him.

"I can't complain," he replied. "Are you planning on eating the other half of that English muffin?"

"Why do you want to know?"

"I hate to see English muffins go to waste."

"Be my guest," I said. "I hear that you've got trouble with your wife and the banks."

Buchwald

"Don't believe everything you read. I'm only having trouble with my wife because of the banks, and I'm only having trouble with the banks because of my wife.

"It's all part of doing business. The problem with banks is that they beg you to take their money, and when you do they get mad if you can't pay it back. Are you going to eat all that marmalade?"

I handed it to him. "I'd give you some coffee but I have only one cup."

"It's OK," he told me. "I'll drink out of the saucer."

I then said, "So tell me, Donald, where did it all go wrong?"

"I can only blame it on my good name."

"Why your name?"

"The public begged me to put it on everything.

"Skyscrapers, plazas, Taj Mahals, soccer teams, airlines and heavyweight prize fights. I was within a whisker of their changing New York to Trump City. Everyone said that Trump was on a roll, but something scary happened on the way to Atlantic City. A chartered bus full of little old ladies in tennis shoes broke down outside Paterson, N.J. The ladies were coming to the Taj Mahal to play the slot machines, and when they didn't show I started drowning."

"Why?"

"Those women were my cash flow for June."

"One bus load?" I spluttered.

Donald was removing packets of sugar from the bowl and sticking them under his shirt.

"You seem to have a sweet tooth," I remarked.

"Donald, people say that your junk bonds are riskier now than ever before."

"Every bond has a likeness of me printed on it, and that's the same as its being guaranteed by the United States Treasury. The reason the public is dumping on me is because they get pleasure out of seeing a billionaire with wit, charm, yachts, private planes and other intangible assets fall on his keester."

The counterman said, "Hey, aren't you Donald Trump?"

Donald answered, "How did you know?"

"You were in here last week and ordered a pot of coffee with 2,000 of those little cream things."

"I always drink my coffee light."

"There was a banker eating here yesterday and he was talking about you," the counterman told him.

Donald seemed pleased. "What did he say?"

The counterman replied, "He said that you gave the best debts he ever had."

Anti-Slavery Society still fighting bondage

LONDON — South of the river, in a slightly seedy section of the city, in a down-at-the-heels building that has seen better days but not better uses, the Anti-Slavery Society is still in business, because slavery is, too. Founded in 1839, it is the world's oldest human rights organization.

Will

As it raises its small voice amid the incessant clamor for public attention, it faces the problem of stark incredulity concerning its threshold assertion: Slavery exists.

Today there may be as many, perhaps many more, people in conditions properly denoted as slavery as there were when the Society was founded. So says the Society's director, Lesley Roberts.

She is not one of those flurried people one so often sees in the world of altruism, the kind who perpetually look as though they had risen late and dressed in haste. She has the brisk manner of one who has worked in banks, which she has done, and she has the restlessness to have been bored by that, which she was. In an office lit only, and dimly, by watery sunlight that struggles through unwashed windows, she enumerates the Society's concerns, beginning with chattel slavery — the total ownership of one person by another. It was officially outlawed in the Arabian Peninsula less than 20 years ago, and may even be expanding in parts of northern Africa, particularly Sudan.

Far more prevalent, and properly called slavery, is debt bondage, especially of children. Such laborers are bound for payment of debts and are entirely subservient to a power from which there is no appeal.

There are workers in servitude in both hemispheres. Roberts says that many Haitians living illegally in the Dominican Republic have been, in effect, sold to state-owned sugar plantations. But the biggest problems are in Asia, where slavery often is a particularly odious, because routinized, form of child abuse.

Children are, in a sense, "natural" slaves — a renewable source of slaves — because they are born into total dependence on adults. Children are sometimes sold outright, with common prices ranging from $20 in the Sudan to $200 in Bangkok.

Social traditions no longer sanctioned by laws — traditions of caste and class — can still be as strong as iron fetters. There is the tradition of giving a child for, say, a year in payment of debt — sometimes a debt incurred by parents who borrow from loan sharks, using children as collateral. At the end of the year, the person holding the child in bondage may say the child has eaten so much that the bondage must be extended.

No one knows even within several scores of millions how many children are enslaved in domestic service, in sweatshops or in Asia's huge sex trade. When computing the probable numbers, says Roberts, "it is not hard to get up to 200 million."

In India, for example, the government says there are fewer than 200,000 bonded laborers. The Society's sources say 5 million.

While sifting abundant evidence of such slavery (and worse: Millions of children, male and female, are devoured by Asia's prostitution industry), the Society maintains a remarkable emotional equipoise, advocating piecemeal remedies for absolute evils. For example, it does not favor banning imports of carpets made with coerced labor. It knows that destroying the carpet industry would destroy many lives. An existing industry can be improved.

Publicity, embarrassment, persuasion, organized labor — these are among the remedies required. But the first requirement is the patience of politics, which acquires special dignity in the face of such shattering facts.

Roberts and the Society (180 Brixton Rd., SW9 6AT) are echoes of the distinctive moral earnestness that redeemed the 19th century and leaven this one. "I get bored easily," she says. "This is not boring."

Gorbachev could lose party post

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev came under fire from hard-line Communists on Wednesday and acknowledged that he could lose his party post at a national congress in less than two weeks.

Critics at a party meeting castigated the national leadership. They did not mention Gorbachev by name but said they did not think one person should be Soviet president and general secretary of the Communist Party. Gorbachev holds both jobs.

Gorbachev

"It is impossible to run the party, this guiding force, without devoting full time to it," said Yegor Ligachev, the most prominent Soviet hard-liner. He spoke at a meeting called to found a new Communist Party of the Russian Federation, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics.

Another Communist leader said he expected Gorbachev to be nominated for the national party's top job at a party congress starting July 2, but he said he expects other candidates to surface as well.

In recent months, Gorbachev has transferred some of the Communist Party's powers to elected legislative bodies, thereby protecting himself somewhat from personal political damage that could result if he lost the party leadership.

Moreover, he was elected in March to a five-year term in the new post of president and has wielded considerable power in that job.

The 28th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party is to consider structural changes and elect a leader when it convenes July 2.

The 2,700 delegates to the current Russian conference will also attend the national congress, where they will form a majority of the 4,700 votes.

The mood of the Russian congress was decidedly conservative and critical of Gorbachev.

"Really important miscalculations and serious mistakes were made in the tactics and methods and approaches to the transformations" under way in the Soviet Union, said Ligachev.

"The Socialist community has disintegrated, while the positions of imperialism have been dramatically consolidated," said Ligachev.

Gorbachev has acknowledged making mistakes, but he said in a speech to delegates Wednesday that his accusers were poorly informed and disrespectful.

Carrier under way after explosions; 2 crewmen missing

AP Laserphoto

The U.S. aircraft carrier Midway steams under its own power Thursday evening at sea off Japan en route to the U.S. Navy base at Yokosuka, Japan, near Tokyo, after a fire and two explosions rocked the 51,000-ton ship, leaving two crew members missing and 16 injured.

YOKOSUKA, Japan (AP) — A fire on Wednesday raged for hours aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway, injuring 16 crewmen, at least nine seriously, and blocking attempts to find two missing sailors, the Navy said.

The accident prompted demonstrations in the ship's home port of Yokosuka, where city officials demanded the Midway be barred from returning until its safety had been confirmed and cause of the fire clarified.

Red Cross officials Wednesday afternoon assured relatives of local servicepeople aboard the Midway that the Navy had notified the next of kin of all the dead and injured.

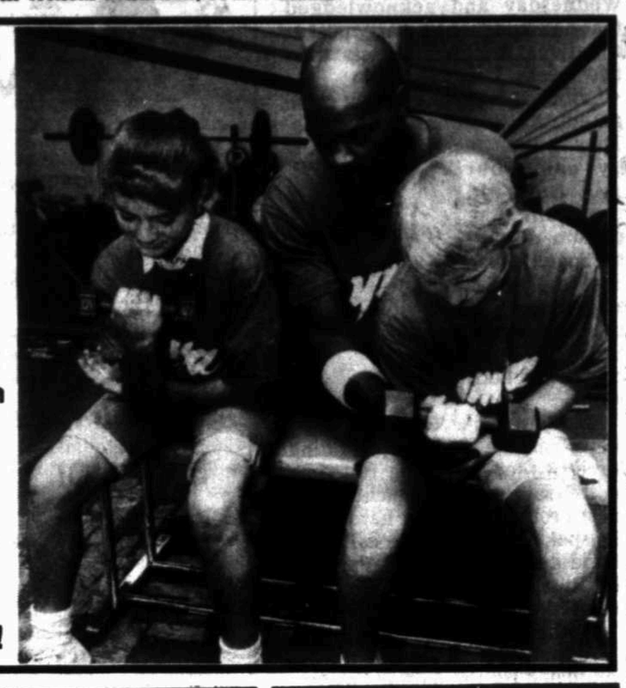

There were no reports of any Permian Basin casualties aboard the ship, officials said.

Smoke was detected aboard the Midway shortly before noon during flight exercises at sea off Japan, said Lt. Jeff Gradeck of the Public Affairs Office at the U.S. Navy base at Yokosuka, near Tokyo.

An explosion occurred on the ship about a half-hour later, and a second blast followed shortly after, Gradeck said.

Nine of the injured were flown to hospitals in Japan, and seven others were treated aboard the ship, the Navy said. Of the nine, one was in critical condition, four suffered very serious burns, two were in serious condition, one was in guarded condition and one was stable.

MISD to study tax reduction plan further

■ Midland's four taxing entities continue to debate the merits of deferring taxes for new and existing businesses built within a designated 'enterprise zone.'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Although three local taxing entities — Midland College, the county and city — have all approved a tax abatement proposal, which is being supported by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, school district board members would like more time to study the plan before saying "yea" or "nay."

"We (the school district) have the most at stake," board member Kenneth Marks said, before the proposal was tabled at the Tuesday evening Midland Independent School District board meeting. MISD, the county's biggest taxing entity, would stand to lose the most from having to wait five years to fully tax an industry.

Jerry Jones, a member of the Enterprise Zone Committee, said that about 50 percent of all property taxes charged in the county go to MISD, "If you don't go along with it," he said, addressing the board, "we can't do it."

The plan, presented by Jones and Joanne Langston, representing the chamber, would abate taxes for new and expanding businesses located in an enterprise zone, a designated area located mostly in south and east Midland.

'We're not giving up $1 million of taxes by abating them. Instead we are giving up $4 million in tax revenue if don't get the new jobs.'

— Jerry Jones, Midland Enterprise Zone Committee

The five-year abatement plan policy would allow tax relief for businesses meeting certain criteria. Abatement would be granted based on a system of points accumulated for projected payroll size, jobs created and taxable value among other factors.

Fully qualified industries would receive 100 percent tax immunity the first and second years, 90 percent the third year, 80 percent the fourth year and 70 percent the fifth year. The abatement would be for up to $50 million of the industry's property value (which the school district would levy at $519,000, according to Jones).

In a Wednesday interview, Jones offered an example of how the $50 million abatement would break down. MISD would abate $519,000; the city, $290,000; the county, $82,500; Midland College, $58,250; and the hospital, $68,600.

At the board meeting, Ms. Langston said the abatement plan "is one of the tools we have to attract new businesses and support the expansion of existing businesses. The plan won't abate taxes already being received."

She stressed that all the taxing entities "must participate equally or none can participate."

Jones said industries taking advantage of the tax abatement plan would be required to hire a proportion of employees from the enterprise area.

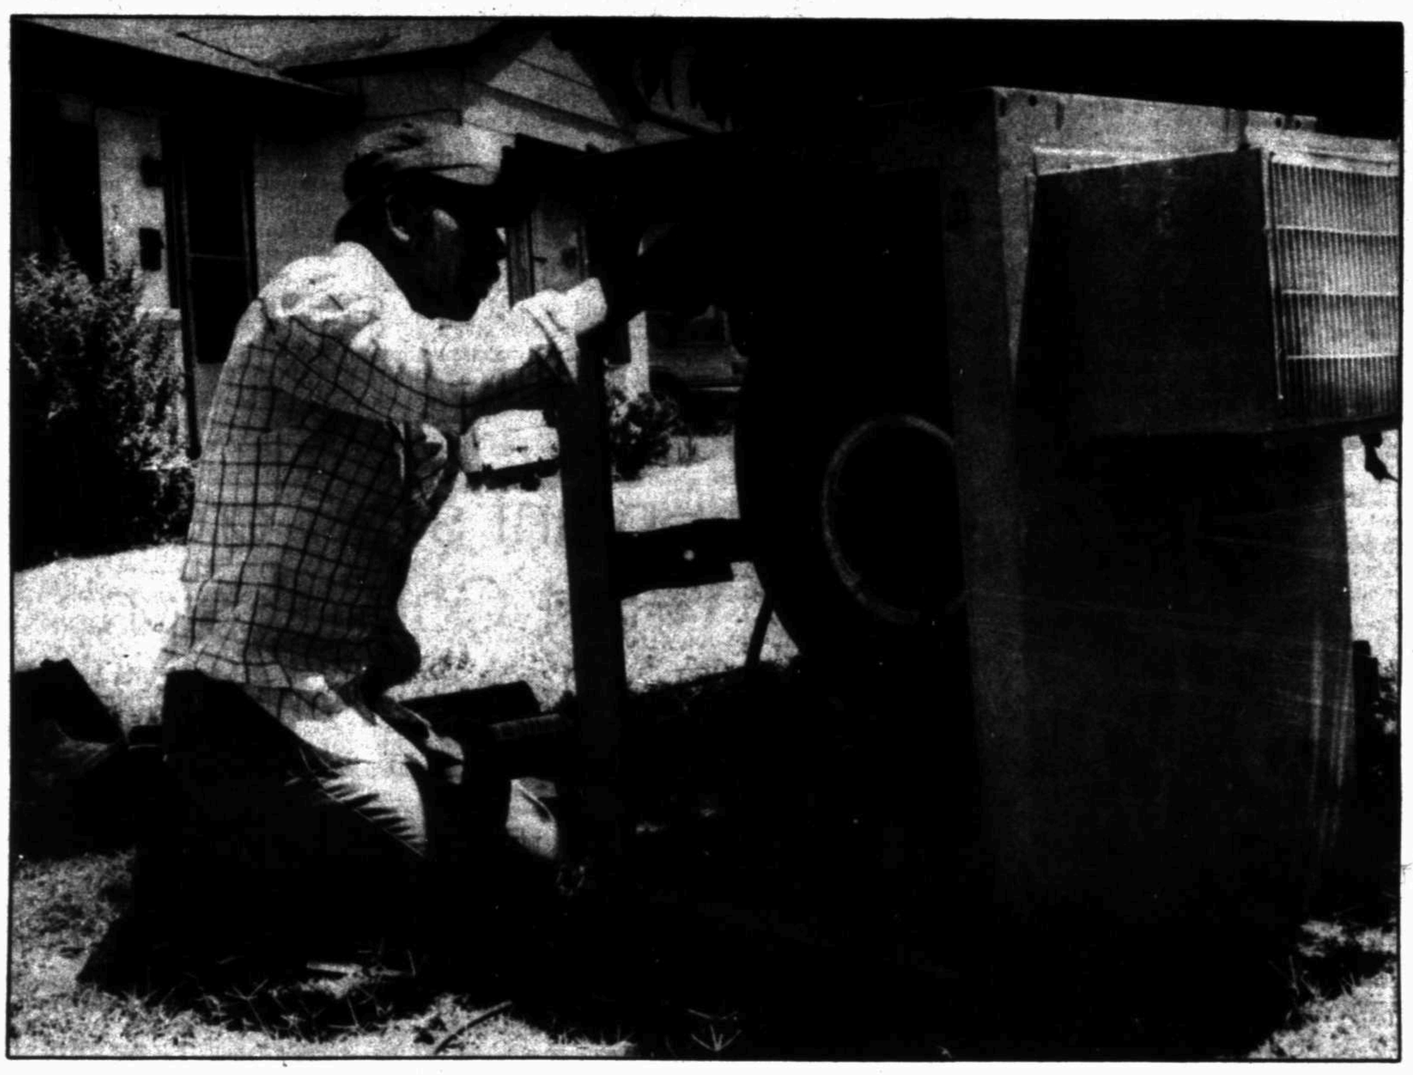

Marks expressed concern that a large manufacturer relocating into Midland would flood the school system, and the schools would be required to furnish services without the benefit of taxes to pay for the services.

The possibility of an impact fee to offset overloading the school system was discussed and Jones pointed out that new businesses would raise property value as well as increase sales taxes.

Jones said the worst possible scenario would involve businesses leaving as soon as the five-year abatement period had ended. "But there are checkpoints and safety valves which will make mistakes become quickly apparent," he said.

Ms. Langston said businesses applying for the abatement would be selected on "a case-by-case" basis. She noted that businesses would

Midland County 'fine sweep' is under way

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland County got tough on delinquent fines Wednesday, as constable's deputies began arresting individuals who failed to pay county court- and Justice of the Peace-assessed fines on time.

County Attorney Mark Dettman gave offenders a week of grace beginning June 12 to voluntarily turn in the typical $200 to $1,000 fine owed for misdemeanors ranging from bad checks to drug possession.

Then he mobilized County Constable Ron Rice, his deputies and an investigator from the county attorney's office to round up the delinquent fine payers at their homes or businesses.

"We got one out of his home just as he got off work and was fixing to go to bed," Rice said.

"We asked him if he got our letter (about the overdue fine) and he said yes but he didn't have the money."

Dettman said most of the offenders know they have outstanding fines, but aren't too worried about it.

"Some people just forget about it or put it off to the side, thinking nothing will happen, but this is serious and it has consequences," Dettman said.

The county is owed almost $300,000 in fines, some of which are two years old. Last week County Judge William Ahders issued 890 warrants for the offenders, some of whom have several fines to pay off.

At the end of the first day of the sweep, Rice said the group had picked up 15 individuals, 11 of whom owed a total of $4,441 in fines. An additional seven people came to the courthouse with their money or were arrested on other warrants earlier in the week.

"From the 12th to today we've collected $11,694," Rice said. "Of course not all of that represents dollars; some will have to lay out the time in jail."

Each day served in jail is worth $50, Rice said. The county does not accept partial payment of fines and these people are not eligible for any more deferrals, he added.

They will also have to pay a $35 arrest fee, even if they surrender themselves to the county, because warrants have been issued for their arrest.

"Today we didn't make a significant dent in the numbers, but we'll keep working on it through the week," Rice said.

He said his office would continue concentrated sweeps twice a month until all the fines are collected.

"We know where they are. If they're in Midland County, we'll catch up with them sooner or later; if they're in the state, they'll get stopped sometime and the warrant will show up in a DPS check," Rice said.

Good access to Midland critical to CAF, Thomas says

■ Mayor Thomas outlined the city's transportation needs to the Texas Highway Commission at a hearing Wednesday in Austin.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas on Wednesday thanked Texas highway commissioners for including two north-south routes from the city within a proposed state highway "trunk system" of four-lane, divided thoroughfares.

Noting that the Confederate Air Force will re-locate to the city, Thomas said increases in tourism traffic will help justify the new status for Texas 349 heading north from Midland and Texas 158 heading south.

During a hearing before the commission on Wednesday, Thomas noted that Midland is one of the state's largest cities without four-lane, divided-highway access to northern and southern destinations.

State highway officials hope the new trunk system, to be constructed over the next 30 years, will stimulate economic growth, smooth trade with Mexico, improve safety, and make the state's playgrounds more accessible.

Lasting through the afternoon, Wednesday's hearing saw more than 50 speakers, most from communities which were left off the system.

A spokesman for the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, Marcy Goodfleisch, said the final system of routes won't be made public for at least a couple of months.

The new system has a goal of connecting all cities of 20,000 population or more. The system also seeks to have all cities of between 10,000 and 20,000 population within 25 miles of the network.

Highway Commission Chairman Robert Dedman of Dallas during the hearings again reiterated the need for more highway money if the state is to maintain roads that are considered among the best in the nation.

Dedman this past week called for a 10-cent hike in the state gasoline tax to raise $1 billion annually. About a quarter of the new money would go toward education needs, and the remainder would go to roads.

"We're already committed to doing $3 billion worth of work over the next seven years," he said, but the current budget won't allow that level of construction.

The department already is robbing maintenance budgets to pay for new road work, he said.

Dedman also decried federal highway policies that are holding up payment of between $350 million and $400 million in transportation dollars to the state.

He said the money is helping the federal government appear to be balancing its budget.

Speaking to the many state representatives and senators in the audience, he said they should send a message to their Washington, D.C., counterparts.

"You need to paraphrase Moses: 'Let our money go,' " he said.

Man seeks damages from automaker for 1989 crash

By David Morris
Staff Writer

A Midland man is seeking undisclosed damages in a suit filed against Chrysler Motors Corp. for injuries his daughter suffered in a 1989 car accident, federal court records show.

Kenneth L. Ward, 40, claims the accident was caused by defective computerized anti-lock brakes on his 1988 Chrysler New Yorker.

Ward's daughter, 17-year-old Joanna Lynn Ward, was driving the car south on State Highway 349 in January 1989 when the car went into a skid, left the road and rolled onto its side, Department of Public Safety reports show.

Miss Ward was transported by private vehicle to Midland Memorial Hospital following the accident, reports show. She was reportedly suffering from injuries such as bruises, abrasions and minor lacerations.

DPS investigators attributed the accident, which occurred Jan. 9 shortly before 7 p.m., to speeding and driver inattention. However, the suit claims the car was at fault because its brakes locked "suddenly and without warning."

Ward's attorney, Abner Burnett of Odessa, said the car had experienced other computer-related malfunctions prior to the accident.

"Doors would lock and unlock inexplicably — it was like having a poltergeist in the car," he said. He said he has evidence showing that other late-model Chryslers have experienced computer problems.

Recall information on 1988 Chrysler New Yorkers was not immediately available Wednesday from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Ward said his daughter spent at least a week in the hospital following the wreck, went through about four months of physical therapy and still suffers from hip problems associated with the accident.

He said he decided to file suit only after Chrysler refused to pay his daughter's medical bills and provide him with a new car.

The car crashed when his daughter touched the break pedal to disengage the cruise control and the right front wheel locked, Ward said.

"We had 90 feet of skid marks, and these were anti-lock, anti-skid brakes," he said.

Chrysler's Austin attorneys declined to comment on the suit, as did a Chrysler spokesman in Detroit.

CAF to honor Midland man with 'missing-man formation'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The Confederate Air Force (CAF) will fly the missing-man formation over Midland at mid-morning today in tribute to Robb Satterfield — a "pilot's pilot" who was a colonel in the CAF and a former test pilot in the United States Air Force.

"Robb was a great gentleman pilot who had a great love for airplanes," said George Coombes, a Midland aviator who will be among pilots flying today in tribute to Satterfield. "He was just dedicated to airplanes," Coombes said. Satterfield's death is "quite a loss to the aviation community."

Satterfield, 65, died Monday afternoon in his Midland home following an illness.

The missing-man formation will be flown over Resthaven Memorial Park following today's 9:30 a.m. funeral service for the aviator in St. Luke's United Methodist Church in Midland.

Traditionally, the missing-man formation consists of four airplanes. The No. 3 aircraft in the flight breaks off, pulls up, and peels off to the west.

"It's a final salute to an aviator — a final tribute," said Coombes, a colonel in the CAF and a World War II naval aviator.

CAF members were trying to round up four North American P-51 Mustangs to make up the missing-man formation. Satterfield, who flew World War II fighters (pursuit aircraft) and post-war jets, often flew the P-51, the P-47, the Me.-108 and the MiG-15 in air shows throughout North America and Europe.

He was a member of the P-51 Pilots Association.

Other than the missing-man formation, other aircraft, both CAF "warbirds" and civilian-type airplanes, will be flown today by Satterfield's friends in paying tribute to the flier.

"He was a genuine, dedicated pilot," said Coombes.

Joe Mabee, the CAF's chief of staff, said that "There's nobody more enthusiastic over the CAF and old World War II airplanes as Robb Satterfield. Every time he saw one, he was thrilled just like it was the first time he ever saw one."

Satterfield was a charter member of the CAF's West Texas Wing and Desert Squadron, which were formed in the mid-1970s.

Bill Stepp, the Desert Squadron's leader who described Satterfield as a "pilot's pilot," said that Satterfield was "one smooth pilot." And as a friend, Satterfield "would do anything for you that he could."

Don Luttrell, the Desert Squadron's public information officer, characterized Satterfield as a "front-line representative of the CAF" and an "absolute gentleman.

"He was widely loved and respected," Luttrell said. "He touched everyone he met in some positive way. He was very friendly and open and always was with a smile."

MISD: Tax plan to be on next agenda

be re-considered each year to ensure that they qualified for the abatement.

Businesses would be evaluated by a committee composed of one representative from each taxing entity, plus four persons appointed by the chamber.

Board member Larry Rusk questioned the logic of having four voting chamber members (who had nothing to abate, unlike the taxing entities) on the committee.

It was noted that in the committee of nine, with majority rule, the four chamber-appointed members plus one member from a taxing entity could form a majority.

Jones offered examples of other committees in a proposal presented to the board at the meeting, including the Reinvestment Zone Advisory Committee of Greenville. The Greenville committee is composed of eight members: two members of the Board of Development of the City of Greenville, the mayor of the city or his or her official designee, the president of the Greenville Independent School District, the county judge of Hunt County or his designee, and one member appointed from the Commissioners Court of Hunt County.

Jones said no matter how the committees were set up, he said the purpose of the committee would be to create jobs.

"Using a multiplier of four, a conservative estimate," he said, "there would be a $1 million tax potential. We're not giving up $1 million of taxes by abating them. Instead we are giving up $4 million in tax revenue if don't get the new jobs."

Jones said based on the ratio of one new job per each $40,000 capital investment, 1,250 jobs would be created.

"We need to get on to the business of getting this plan on the books," Jones said. "Texas is competitive and we desperately need to encourage economic development in Midland. Timing is critical. We need to act now to compete with other cities around the state."

The Texas Department of Commerce has already approved Midland as an enterprise zone community.

Ms. Langston said the school district has "an opportunity to get more taxes" in the long-run "by investing in the future."

"We want to be very sure what we are doing," Marks said. "We would like to study this."

Although the proposal was tabled, it was noted that the proposal would be on the next school board agenda.

The purpose of the Texas Enterprise Zone, according to information from the Texas Department of Commerce, is to create jobs and spur investments in areas of economic distress. To accomplish this goal, special local and state incentives may be provided within these areas to encourage business retention, expansion or start-up.

The TDC is responsible for administration of the program including adoption of the rules; coordination of local, state and federal efforts; providing community assistance; evaluation of zone and project applications, and monitoring and reporting on program effectiveness to the State Legislature.

Midland County Hospital District directors will review the proposal June 27.

Motion seeks to block school finance plan

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — An attorney for poorer school districts in the Edgewood v. Kirby lawsuit is asking a district judge to block the state's new school finance plan from going into effect, despite previous hints from the judge that he would not.

Attorney Al Kauffman said in a motion filed Wednesday that the new plan "continues a system with vast disparities between poor districts and rich districts."

Kauffman's motion listed 10 other grounds for blocking the plan and also asked State District Judge Scott McCown to "order the implementation of a constitutional plan for the 1990-91 school year."

Attorneys involved in both sides of the suit have said McCown told them this past Friday he would allow the first year of the state's new five-year plan to go into effect unaltered.

While Kauffman asked that the matter be resolved in a previously scheduled June 25 hearing, attorneys for other poorer school districts involved in the suit asked that the hearing be put off until July 9.

McCown has indicated that on the later date he will start a trial that will decide the constitutionality of the state's new plan. Orders on some of the motions may be handed down today.

Gov. Bill Clements and the Legislature needed four special legislative sessions to develop the system that Kauffman is calling into question.

The new system would provide $538 million in new state aid to school districts next school year and up to $4.2 billion over the next five years.

In his motion, Kauffman said the state violated an October Texas Supreme Court order that required a constitutional school finance plan be put in place by May 1.

Kauffman also asked that McCown order implementation of a "Robin Hood" school finance plan drawn by Special Master Bill Kilgarlin, a former Texas Supreme Court justice. Kilgarlin's plan should ameliorate "any difficulties or confusion caused to school districts throughout the state," Kauffman said.

Under the master's plan, wealthy school districts and those with low tax rates would lose millions in state aid, which then would be re-directed to poorer school districts.

Bryant's bill creates 'Flag Commission'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members Wednesday pondered whether to amend the Constitution to prevent flag burning while a Texas congressman touted his bill to license the Stars and Stripes.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, said his plan will pass the constitutional test that last year's flag burning law did not.

The bill creates "a U.S. Flag Commission that would authorize the manufacture of the official United States flag, thereby creating a property right in each flag and allowing us to prohibit the desecration of the official U.S. flag," he said.

Bryant is one of three Texas congressmen who oppose amending the Constitution to prohibit flag burning. He said, "Amending the Constitution is going too far and leaves us in the position of doing damage to the very thing that the flag stands for."

Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-San Antonio, who said he is leaning in support of the amendment, expressed frustration with the way some members of Congress are viewing the issue.

"I'm bothered by the politics of this thing," Bustamante said. He said that when colleagues talk about making campaign commercials out of their flag stance, "They're not real sincere about the flag."

Aides to Democratic Reps. Martin Frost of Dallas, Jake Pickle of Austin and Charles Stenholm of Stamford said the congressmen were still undecided on the eve of the amendment vote.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, who pushed the amendment through the Judiciary Committee he leads, said Thursday's vote will be close.

In an Associated Press survey earlier this week, 242 House members were supporting the amendment, 11 leaning in favor, 109 opposed and six leaning against. Fifty-four were undecided and 11 were not available.

"It would be close this week, it would be close next week," Brooks said.

To become part of the Constitution, the amendment must get 290 votes in the House and 67 in the Senate plus ratification by 38 state legislatures.

Austin policeman indicted on racketeering charge

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Austin police Sgt. Byron A. "Bubba" Cates was indicted Wednesday on federal racketeering charges in the operation of a prostitution service.

Two women allegedly involved in running the prostitution service were charged Wednesday with money laundering.

Cates, 37, wasn't in custody when the indictment was issued, the U.S. Attorney's office said. But an attorney for Cates said the former officer, who was fired last month, would surrender shortly.

Cates was charged in connection with a prostitution business allegedly operated by two women, Suk Blake and Yong Bullard, who also were named in the indictment. Both were being held Wednesday by U.S. marshals.

Austin police and Internal Revenue Service agents seized $200,000, two automobiles and a $150,000 Austin residence as part of the investigation that led to the indictments, the U.S. Attorney's office said.

Cates' attorney, Greg Zaney, said he could not comment on the indictment, which accuses Cates of racketeering and interstate commerce to facilitate the operation of a prostitution business. But he said he had been told that the indictment accuses Cates of extorting money from Ms. Blake and Ms. Bullard.

The U.S. Attorney's office refused to comment on the indictment other than to issue a statement detailing the charges.

Cates, a senior sergeant, was supervisor of the police department's vice division. He had been on the force for 14 years and had headed the vice squad for 13 months before being placed on leave.

Police said in February that they were investigating allegations that Cates and several friends visited a massage parlor and that Cates had taken a prostitute to Las Vegas in January.

SUIT: Recall data not available

(From 1B)

Burnett said Ward is suing for his daughter's past and future medical expenses and damages for mental anguish and physical suffering. Burnett declined to say how much money Ward was seeking.

"The damages can change as time goes by," Burnett said.

Burnett said he probably will not be able to pursue action against a co-defendant in the suit, Odessa's Bill Stallard Volkswagen, because the company has filed for bankruptcy. Ward said he bought the car from Stallard in August 1988.

Burnett said he could not comment on the likelihood of settling the suit out of court.

The suit was originally filed in January 1990 in Matagorda County and was transferred to Midland's U.S. District Court June 15.

Death row inmate blasts 'do gooders'

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Convicted killer James Smith says "do gooders" have already cost him time in his new life, so he wants no one to interfere with his execution next week.

Smith, 37, faces lethal injection before dawn Tuesday for the 1983 robbery-slaying of Larry Rohus, the manager of a Houston insurance office.

In May 1988, he came within six hours of execution before his mother agreed to pleas from capital punishment opponents to intervene in the case. The U.S. Supreme Court stayed the execution.

However, in a recent ruling in an Arkansas case, the high court ruled that inmates have the right to refuse appeals and may volunteer to be put to death.

"All I'm trying to do is get out of here," Smith said in an interview.

"In the long run, I think you'll see it's hurt more than helped people here," he said of court delays and efforts to keep condemned inmates from execution. "It's certainly hurt me. It's been two years since they prolonged this against me. I don't appreciate these people. They claim to be looking out for my rights, but they trample my rights."

"If they're really concerned, they should be there at the initial phase of trial."

Smith said the Texas Resource Center, a University of Texas-based group that arranges legal help for death row inmates, has been trying to get him to agree to have them handle his case.

"I told them to kiss my ass," he said. "They're wasting their time. I've told them that before but they're wasting my time too. It's been two years. I could be in another body — a 2-year-old prodigy playing ragtime."

Smith is a former tarot-card dealer in New Orleans who was working as a Houston taxi driver when he was arrested fleeing from the Rohus shooting scene.

The Harris County district attorney who handled Smith's case called him the most evil and dangerous man he's ever prosecuted.

Smith gained notoriety two years ago when he asked for a lump of dirt as his final meal. The dirt, he explained later, was to ancint parts of his body and was not intended as food.

Texas prison officials refused the request because it wasn't part of the regular prison menu.

He also admitted to at least six other slayings in New York, South Carolina and Florida, including mutilation deaths in a voodoo ritual.

Law enforcement agencies in those states could not confirm the slayings, and Smith said Wednesday he was toying with reporters when he made those statements.

"I laughed. I had a big hearty laugh," he said of stories about his statements. "When I was telling you I'm innocent, I'm innocent, I'm innocent, I couldn't get half a paragraph."

Hospital patient facing charges

TERRELL (AP) — An escaped state hospital patient who set himself on fire in a police station and threatened others will be formally charged in the episode, authorities say.

Alvin Bray, 45, was in fair condition Wednesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. He suffered second- and third-degree burns over 42 percent of his body, said Colonial Hospital spokesman Mike Portacci.

Bray was covered with gasoline when he walked into a police station lobby Tuesday, claiming he was Gen. William Westmoreland Jr., officials said. Then he set himself afire.

Two police officers rushed the burning man out of the smoke-filled lobby and rolled him on the lawn to put out the fire.

Bray scaled a fence at the Terrell State Hospital about 6:20 a.m. Tuesday and escaped from officials who chased him, said Don Gilbert, Terrell State Hospital superintendent.

Terrell is 25 miles east of Dallas, in Kaufman County.

"He said his name was General Westmoreland Jr. and it was a matter of national security or something like that," Police Chief David Walker said.

Westmoreland, who does not have a Jr. after his name, was commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam from 1964 to 1968.

"We're going to charge him, for sure," Walker said. A relative told police that Bray had been involved in other violent incidents, and Walker said prosecutors planned to look his background before filing charges.

In Cleburne, Johnson County Attorney Dale Hanna said Bray was sent to the Terrell State Hospital after claiming on March 30 to be Westmoreland's son and attempting to deposit what he said was $1 million into the First State Bank in Keene.

Man turns down honor

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Arlington Mayor Pro Tem Bill Snider says it is too soon to have his name stuck on anything.

A city councilwoman had suggested that a structure in a new city park be named after Snider because he helped secure land in 1985 to build the park. Snider quickly deflected the suggestion at a meeting Tuesday.

"Wait 'til I'm dead," Snider said.

STATE in brief

Kilgarlin seeks fee payment

AUSTIN (AP) — A court-appointed special master in the school finance reform case on Wednesday asked the state to pay him $18,688 for his work — including time spent being interviewed by reporters.

William Kilgarlin was appointed to develop a school finance reform proposal in case lawmakers and Gov. Bill Clements didn't come up with their own plan to meet a Texas Supreme Court order for change.

Kilgarlin, a former Supreme Court justice, left the court before it handed down its order last year. At a rate of $190 per hour, Kilgarlin asked to be paid for time on such activities as conferences with State District Judge Scott McCown, who appointed him; associate masters; and with experts, attorneys and officials, including Education Commissioner W.N. Kirby and Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Funds ensure service

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Health said it can continue aiding thousands of children with serious medical problems because state lawmakers have approved extra funding.

The program for Chronically Ill and Disabled Children was threatened with having to suspend services for the summer until the Legislature in a recent special session gave the department an addition $10.9 million.

John Evans, program director, said an unexpected increase in applicants and spiraling medical costs had almost depleted funding by the end of May.

"If we had had to begin canceling services, the timing couldn't have been worse," Evans said.

Clements unapologetic

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he stands by his earlier statement that U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius told Clements he grew up at Cal Farley's Boys Ranch because his father was on the ranch staff.

Sarpalius, D-Texas, has demanded that Clements apologize. Sarpalius' aides and a Boys Ranch spokesman said the congressman lived at the ranch north of Amarillo from 1960 to 1967, roughly ages 11-19, because his father had abandoned the family and his mother was unable to support her three sons.

On Monday, Clements told an Amarillo fund-raiser for Sarpalius' Republican opponent, state Rep. Dick Waterfield, that he had pressed Sarpalius and learned that he grew up at Boys Ranch only because his father worked there.

Sarpalius also said Tuesday if Clements failed to publicly apologize, he would consider filing a lawsuit.

Officials allege fraud

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials involved in the largest insurance company failures in Texas and a former state insurance regulator were indicted Wednesday on charges that they bilked policyholders and looted premiums.

Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle said he hoped the indictments and ongoing special investigation into some 60 insurance companies would avert a savings and loan type scandal that "shakes the foundation of the whole industry."

Miss El Paso indicted

EL PASO (AP) — A former Miss El Paso has been indicted on charges of stealing more than $60,000 from El Paso Natural Gas Co. where she worked.

Naomi Medrano Ramirez, who won the Miss El Paso crown in 1976, was arrested Tuesday after being indicted on one count of theft over $10,000, said District Attorney Steve Simmons.

She was released Tuesday night from the El Paso County Detention Center on $20,000 bail.

Hosiery company takes stockings seriously

CNS Photo

By Nancy Miller Lewis
Copley News Service

Her feelings are understandable. As a vice president of Hanes Hosiery, which owns an estimated 57 percent of its market, Volker is high on hose.

As a woman, however, she's surely gotten at least one pair of the contrary contraptions. The stockings that bag at the ankles. The pantyhose that leave red marks from a too-tight elastic waist. The hose that run on contact with human skin — meaning they're shot as soon as you take them out of the package.

And Volker is also aware that buying hosiery is no walk in the park.

"It's an intimidating process. Women go into the department and they're literally surrounded by a sea of packaging where no two manufacturers use the same terminology," she says, spewing forth a litany of stocking-speak, such as "demi toe" and "ultra sheer."

"Women want to get in and get out of the department. No wonder there's such brand loyalty. It's difficult to flip through all those packages to find your size and the color you want. It becomes an ordeal."

Ordeal or not, according to the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers in Charlotte, N.C., 1.4 billion pairs of pantyhose — and this figure doesn't even take into consideration stockings or socks — were produced and shipped to retailers in 1989.

IN ADDITION, Volker offers these figures:

Only one out of five women buys her hosiery at a department or specialty store. The majority of sales take place at drug and grocery stores, along with mass-merchandise stores such as K mart.

On the average, women purchase 2.5 pairs of hose per transaction.

When it comes to the hot designer line of Donna Karan hose, manufactured by Hanes, the average sale comes to $60.

"I don't know why any woman would just buy one pair of pantyhose at a time. But I don't know if I'd buy three dozen at a time, either. You never want to admit you're spending that much on pantyhose," Volker muses.

"I know a woman who buys six dozen of every color, for fear of not having the right thing when she needs it. In essence, she has some things she'll never use."

Volker believes women don't buy pantyhose in great quantities because of the yuppie need for instant gratification.

"You want to buy something and wear it. You can't wear a dozen pantyhose all at once," she notes.

You may, however, need a dozen different kinds of hose. A veritable wardrobe, if you will, of styles and colors.

"Black by far is the No. 1 color. Working women won't give up black," Volker says.

But what kind of black? Black opaques? Black support hose? Black sheers? Black patterned hose? Black fishnets?

"That's the reason buying hose is a chore," explains Tembra Hammond, hosiery buyer for a department store, referring to all the different styles of hose available.

"Seven years ago, there were just a couple of brands. You bought beige panty hose and you went home. Now there are colors, different weights (densities). It's very confusing to the customer."

HAMMOND SAYS one large department store tries to cut down on the confusion by having sales associates approach customers as they enter the department. The associate is instructed to ask about the outfit for which the hose are needed (if the customer isn't requesting a specific kind of hose). Then — and this is the good part for the customer — the associate will find the right hose and bring them to the customer.

For spring, Hammond predicts the return of the nude leg, which should not be confused with a bare leg.

"The nude is a clear, sheer product. It's not beige or suntan," Hammond notes.

The new nudes are especially important to summer's countless strapless dresses — these hose make the legs and arms match, so that all four look like part of the same body.

"The new nudes have a bit of sheen — they don't look like you're wearing hosiery. These hose come in makeup colors, and, indeed, they are like makeup for the leg," Volker says.

"Just in the last couple of years, the opaque leg has come into focus, and it will get stronger for fall," Hammond predicts. She added that this more-dense style met with some skepticism when it was introduced, but "it was needed because of the short skirts."

At Hammond's store, their private-label opaques start at $4 and go up to $7.50. Brand labels start at $6.50 and go as high as $22. Hammond estimates that 80 percent of all the hose purchased there are control top.

Hue spokesman Shawn Riddell believes fishnets will come back this summer.

"We don't see fishnets as 'sexy' or 'nighttime.' Fishnets are a way to be cool during the summer while giving a finished look to the leg," Riddell explains. He notes that chestnut, ivory and white will be more fashionable this summer than the traditional black fishnets.

Pattern hosiery hot for men

By Jan Larsen
Copley News Service

How's your socks life?

Men: Are you still wearing those dull, old, gray, brown or navy-blue socks? You're out of date! Get with it! This is the '90s!

If you are wearing the new patterned hosiery, you're hip, but don't get too smug. You're just doing what your dad and granddad did.

Nothing is new in fashion, you know. Everything is recycled.

Young is menswear buyer for a chain of 10 upscale stores.

"Patterned dress hosiery is a business that in the last four years has just been explosive," he said. "It's doubled our hosiery business.

"But basically, this is nothing new. My father wore patterned dress hosiery, his father wore patterned dress hosiery. Most men prior to the 1950s did. Then Orlon came in. It was next to impossible to do a patterned dress sock out of Orlon. So patterned socks, especially for dress, just disappeared."

Then, about five years ago, fancy hosiery with socks appeal started showing up again, thanks to new technology.

A generation that thought it was on to something new started scooping them up.

Now these hot socks are hot. One store is planning a 55 percent increase in patterned hosiery. Another expects sales of socks by high-fashion designers such as Perry Ellis, Christian Dior and Giorgio Armani to surge 35 percent this year. Some of the ornate socks can cost as much as $65 a pair.

Young thinks at least 50 percent of the men out there are wearing patterned dress hosiery.

"The guy that first started out four or five years ago wearing a little pin dot on his sock may now be wearing a bold geometric or paisley pattern," Young said. "He keeps progressing, getting a little more daring."

Young says the wild stuff should be saved for sports wear.

"I haven't seen the wild patterns, with airplanes or happy faces, paired with suits," Young said. "For casual, the sky is the limit."

Socks, along with suspenders, ties and pocket squares, are a way for a man to express an individual fashion statement, Young said.

But don't match paisley socks with a paisley tie. Complement. Maybe pair striped socks with a paisley tie.

"If you have got a brown suit with a little bit of blue running through it, you don't want a brown tie with a little bit of blue running through it," said Young.

"I have got on a green tie right now with yellow socks."

Brooks Brothers goes wholesale

N.Y. Times News Service

Brooks Brothers, the center of the universe for traditional men's style, is planning to distribute its clothing wholesale. Company executives said that Brooks will sell its clothing to selected retailers, who have to be at least 50 miles from any of their 52 stores.

"There's certainly a demand for it," said George Hanley, the senior vice president for development at Brooks Brothers. "We've had many requests from other retailers. Brooks Brothers is really a brand."

Since the company was founded in 1818, Brooks Brothers clothing has been sold only at its own stores or through its catalogues. But when the company was bought from the Campeau Corp. in 1988 by Marks & Spencer, the British retailing chain, some analysts said the purchase price, $750 million, was high.

"They've got to recoup the premium price they paid for the stores," said Alan Millstein, a retail analyst. "They've already saturated the major cities with men's stores. The only way out is to expand into less urban areas, like some small town where the doctor, the lawyer and the minister all like Brooks Brothers, but in the past had to travel to a city to buy it."

Roman sandal leads footwear parade

By Debi Martin
N.Y. Times News Service

Summer's here, and you can be ready to step out in comfort with a variety of footwear fashions.

The top look in summer shoewear this season recalls the Roman sandal. Straps that wrap around the ankle. Up the leg. Across the foot.

In step with summer fashions that emphasize the gypsy look with ethnic jewelry and chiffony fabrics, these sandals are embellished with metallic and golden coins, glass jewels, rhinestones, all kinds of trinkets. This is fun footwear that jangles when you walk. It's ornamental. Elegant but casual.

Most of these gladiator shoes come in shades of brown leather, but those in gold tones and bright whites also are selling well.

■ Coming soon to a swimming hole near you: If we didn't live in such a polluted world, these shoes wouldn't have a chance. They are not much more than socks made of plastic. But they are pretty to look at. Reef runners and aqua socks have been worn for some time by swimmers who want something to slip on after they get out of the pool. Now the shoes are being marketed as at-the-lake or at-the-beach footwear. Not a bad idea, considering the prevalence of broken glass and trash in natural surroundings.

Besides protecting the foot, these shoes' chief attribute appears to be in the comfort zone. Slip them on. Nothing to it. The shoe molds itself to the shape of your feet.

Both come in colors that coordinate with the neon-colored T-shirts, shorts and swimwear this summer — bright yellows, lime greens.

But don't wear them more than a couple of times a week, because there is no support in the shoes and nothing to absorb shock.

■ They're baaaaccckkk: Just when you thought you could handle the nostalgic, '60s looks in the stores without having flashbacks, come shoes from the '70s. The decade that gave us Saturday Night Fever discos, polyester suits and shoes that made us all look a bit taller. Platform shoes. Remember them? Not just heels, but a platform on which to stand — and we're not talking politics here. Platform sandals are expected to make a comeback by midsummer. E-gad. But why? Women sometimes want a little more height in their summer sandals, and the higher the heel, the more flattering to the leg.

■ This Ked's for you: The high-tech sports shoe is as popular as ever, but the simple, sturdy Keds tennie continues to steal hearts and soles. Worn with rolled-down, dainty socks, Keds shoes come in a rainbow of colors — pastel pink, khaki green, school-bus yellow, swimming-pool blue, cherry red.

■ For the office, slip-on, closed-toe pumps are still standard summer wear. Basic black-and-white shades still reign despite this summer's accent on earth-tone shades. Most stores are stocking pumps in khaki and other shades of beige, and heels are low. How low? Pumps this summer are almost — but not quite — flats.

T-shirts offer some protection from sun

By Deborah Blumenthal
N.Y. Times News Service

Sunscreens work well, if you use them, but it's often difficult to keep track of active children. As a result of frustrating attempts to protect her fair-skinned, red-haired young son from the Arizona sun, Jan Steinberg, a Scottsdale mother, developed an alternative, at least for the upper torso: Frogskin swim shirts.

For use in or out of the water, these tightly woven nylon T-shirts, resembling cotton sheeting, have a sun protection factor of 36, compared with the average T-shirt, which has an SPF of about 5.

Unlike cotton shirts that sag and feel heavy when wet, Mrs. Steinberg says the Frogskin shirts are lightweight, dry quickly and do not stretch, pull or feel heavy.

The shirts can be ordered by writing Frogskin, Dept. N., 2625 South Roosevelt St., Tempe, Ariz. 85282., or by calling 602-451-7164.

Men's 'great sense of direction' mostly myth

By Erma Bombeck

Bombeck

I'd like to destroy the myth that women can't read a road map and men, on the other hand, are endowed with a great sense of direction.

A schoolteacher from Stevensville, Md., has asked that I settle the dispute once and for all. She teaches children how to read road maps, and yet her husband charged, "Put you in a phone booth, Joan, turn you around, and you couldn't find your way out of it." Her retort is, "What about Christopher Columbus?"

Yeah, what about Christopher Columbus? Turn the guy around in the Bahamas a couple of times, and he couldn't find America if it was on fire. And he can't blame it on a woman reading the navigational charts!

And while we're illuminating some of the gems of direction, let us not forget Douglas Corrigan, a pilot who in 1939 climbed into his monoplane in New York headed for California. Twenty-four hours later, he looked out and, instead of a palm tree, saw Dublin's airport. Did people say to him, "Is figuring out east and west too hard for you?" No, they gave him a hero's welcome.

Men are always pointing out their great explorations. The truth? They were lost half of the time. Burton and Speke didn't know if they found the source of the Nile or a new strain of mosquito. Dr. David Livingstone just sort of "stumbled onto" Victoria Falls.

In 1531, when Pizarro and his troops went to Peru to relieve it of its gold, a hundred maidens escaped and found refuge in a secret hideaway, Machu Picchu. The women found it, but Pizarro didn't have a clue where they were hiding. In fact, it took 380 years for it to be rediscovered.

And, of course, no argument on bearings would be complete without mentioning Roy Riegels. Maybe his is not a household name, but sportsmen and history will remember him as the defensive lineman for the University of California who blew the 1929 Rose Bowl for his team by galloping into the sunlight with ball in hand for a total of 70 yards — to reach his own goal line.

The trouble with all of these men is that they didn't ask. The stubbornness of explorers probably set this country back 400 years. That and the fact they wouldn't listen to their wives.

Men just have to learn to trust us. As my friend Joan wrote, "Where would men be today if Eve hadn't helped Adam find his way out of the Garden of Eden?" Isn't that the truth?

DEAR ABBY

Secretaries stall when boss's wife quizzes

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am one of four secretaries in a very busy office. Our boss is wonderful. So what's the problem? His wife.

Van Buren

She calls nearly every day, asking questions we would prefer not to answer. For example: With whom is "Mr. L" having lunch today? What time did he get to the office this morning? What are Mr. L's travel plans?

We think if Mr. L wanted his wife to know these things, he would have told her. Of course we give her as little information as possible, but she is very persistent.

We don't want to be rude, but she is getting on our nerves. Any ideas? — FED-UP FOURSOME

DEAR FED UP: On the chance that your boss doesn't view his wife's questions as infringements on his privacy, tell your boss that you are unsure of how to answer these inquiries, and let him decide how they should be handled.

DEAR ABBY: Our 24-year-old daughter has been living with a young man for two years. They recently became engaged. My husband and I were very hurt when, on the advice of their friends, they did not think it was necessary to ask for our blessings.

The groom's parents did not approve of their living together and gave the news of their engagement a very cool reception. We were not happy about their living together, but we love our daughter and have tried to be supportive.

Now our daughter expects us to give her a large, expensive wedding. (Her girlfriends have had large, expensive weddings, but they had not been living with their fiances prior to the ceremony.)

Do you feel that a large extravaganza is appropriate in view of the fact this couple has been living as husband and wife for two years? Or would a smaller, more modest celebration be more suitable under the circumstances?

Your candid expertise would be appreciated. — TRYING NOT TO BE OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR TRYING: A wedding is a gift that some parents traditionally bestow upon their daughter, but nowhere is it written that they have an obligation to do so. Under the circumstances, I think a smaller, more modest celebration would be more suitable. But your daughter and her fiance are entitled to have any kind of wedding they wish — providing they are willing and able to pay for it.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me how to introduce my ex-daughter-in-law. We are very close and see each other often. We run into friends quite a bit when she is visiting. Do I say, "This is my ex-daughter-in-law, Annie"?

I would greatly appreciate your help. This has been puzzling me for quite some time. — HER EX-MOTHER-IN-LAW

DEAR EX: Just introduce her as "Annie, my son's former wife."

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to the woman whose daughter is going to wear her wedding gown and now wonders whose gown it will be after the wedding.

My wedding gown has been worn 15 times. I wore it first when I was married in Seattle.

After that, it's been to California twice, South Africa once, and in Seattle 11 times. Never has there been any question about who it belongs to. It's mine, and will be mine until the day I die. — MRS. E. NIKSICH JR., SEATTLE

DEAR MRS. NIKSICH: A wedding gown that has been down the aisle 15 times must have set some kind of record. (Readers?)

Don't put off writing thank-you notes, letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Private schools want designer uniforms

N.Y. Times News Service

More convincing evidence that the Japanese are absolutely hooked on fashion: a group of international designers recently were asked to submit sketches for Japanese private-school uniforms. A catalogue being circulated to more than 1,600 private high schools and junior colleges includes designs by Michael Leva, Todd Oldham and Jennifer George.

"What's amazing to me is they are so fashion-conscious a child may even choose a school on the basis of the uniform," said Leva, who submitted two young women's uniform designs based on styles from his last collection, which had a schoolgirl theme.

IRVING (AP) — There will be no place to escape if the Cowboys fare again as poorly as they did last season.

Team officials will pump radio play-by-play into Texas Stadium concourses, restrooms and parking lots. Owner Jerry Jones also is having television monitors installed throughout the stadium concourse.

"The intent is for fans not to miss a beat, no matter where they are," said Larry Wansley, director of operations for Texas Stadium Corp.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M University has named John Thornton as an assistant to Athletic Director John David Crow.

Thornton, who took over as interim head basketball coach for the Aggies after Shelby Metcalf left the post midway through the 1990 season, will serve as a career counselor for student-athletes.

"We're happy John has decided to stay and help us in this area," Crow said.

Arizonan, New Yorker buy Haloes

■ Wednesday's sale will not affect the team's field and front office operations, according to general manager Monty Hoppel.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Saying he has accomplished his goals as owner of the Midland Angels, Chicago real estate executive Rick Holtzman sold the Double A Texas League baseball club Wednesday to Scottsdale, Ariz. baseball consulting firm president Bob Richmond and New York City attorney E. Miles Prentice.

Monty Hoppel, first year general manager of the Angels, said the change in ownership would not have an effect the fans would be able to notice, nor would it affect the current front office structure.

"It's not going to affect us at all," Hoppel said. "In fact one of the things (the new owners) told me was they were impressed with the way things were being run and they weren't going to change anything at all."

Neither Holtzman, Richmond nor Prentice would comment on the asking price, but according to an unnamed minor league source, Holtzman reportedly made "a huge profit."

The June 11 issue of Sports Illustrated reported Double A teams "fetch $2 million and up" a figure Richmond said was in the ballpark, but on which Holtzman refused comment.

"I'm not going to characterize it (the price) or refer to it because it's a matter between the buyers and the sellers," Holtzman said.

"I had some goals that I established when I bought the team. And I was real clear with what they were and I believe I have accomplished everything. That didn't necessarily make it time to sell, but they made it appropriate. I don't have any regrets."

The Angels are the second team Holtzman has sold this year. Just last month, the sale of the Columbia (S.C.) Mets became final after Holtzman experienced a series of cash flow problems, according to The Columbia State newspaper.

According to State sports writer Neil White, who covered the Mets' sale, Holtzman was sued by a Columbia printing company for being nine months late on a $4,100 bill for team programs. Holtzman, the February article said, was also late on payments to the radio station which broadcast the Mets' games.

"I know he left a lot of unpaid bills here," White said Wednesday. White also added that Holtzman "basically alienated everyone in city government here" after the two parties bickered over a stadium dispute.

Richmond said he is "not sure" why Holtzman had decided to sell the Angels.

Holtzman has refused comment and has not returned phone calls to either the Columbia or Chattanooga, Tenn. newspapers. Holtzman currently owns teams in Chattanooga, Davenport, Iowa, and Tucson, Ariz.

"The things I'm most proud of are the fact that we established baseball in Midland," Holtzman said.

FRONT ROW SEAT

Fallen Angels, Die-hard Fans

■ The Midland Angels are on a pace to break the franchise attendance record despite a last-place finish in the first half of the Texas League season.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Angels are one of 1990's strange paradoxes.

Not in the last four years have the Angels had a won-loss record so bad. Yet never have they drawn so many fans for half a season.

Nothing lends itself to suggesting that the on-field Angels will improve for the second half. And nothing appears to be in the way of stopping the overflow of fans at Angels Stadium.

How bad did things go for the Midland Angels in the first half?

■ Their 25-42 first-half record was not only the worst in the Texas League, but also among the worst in all of professional baseball. Of teams still yet to complete the first half of play, only Peninsula and Salem in the Carolina League, and Portland in the Pacific Coast League have worse winning percentages than the Angels.

■ Two weeks ago, when the Angels' team earned run average skyrocketed to well over the 6.00 mark, the Howe News Bureau, which keeps track of minor league statistics, said the Angels had the worst team ERA in all of baseball, bar none. The ERA for the squad is still hovering around the 6.00 mark today.

■ The Angel pitching staff has allowed 10 or more runs in twelve games.

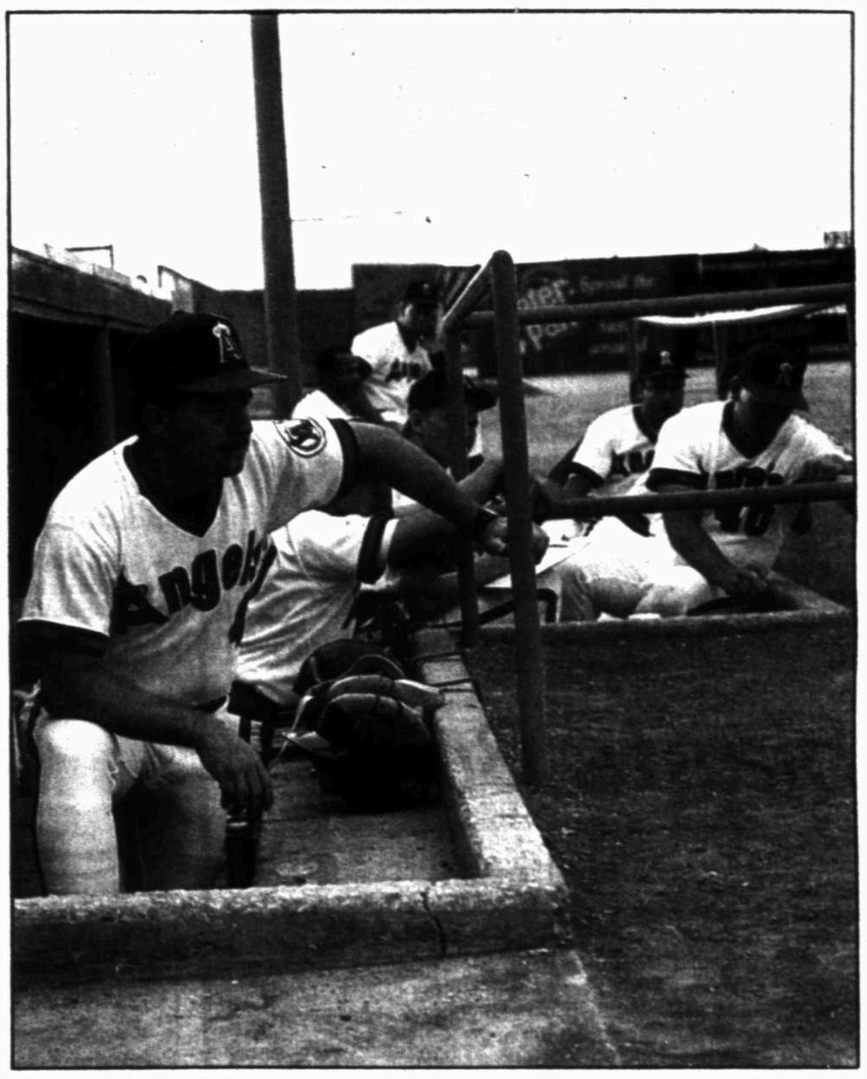

■ The low point of the season — at least from a pitching standpoint — came on April 28, when the Angels lost 33-17 to Wichita. The Wranglers got 28 hits off Angel pitching and three of the five Midland hurlers gave up at least five runs.

■ In the first half, the Angels had a 13-18 won-loss record at home. Only once did they manage to crawl above the .500 mark here (May 7, after beating San Antonio 13-4, Midland was 7-6 at Angels Stadium.)

■ During a recent homestand, when San Antonio defeated Midland in five of the six games, the Angels were outscored 59-29.

■ The team had losing streaks of four (thrice), seven, three (four times) and six. After opening the season with a 1-11 record, the Angels plunged again, going 2-13 from May 30-June 12.

Aside from those two rough stretches, the Angels were 22-18 over the remainder of the half.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Eddie Rodriguez looks for better days.

There are not many other bright spots. Midland has only two winning streaks of more than two games (five and three).

The most obvious problem has been a lack of pitching. The starters consistently fail to get into the late innings and the Angel bullpen has become a physical wreck because of overuse.

Visiting teams have scored more runs in the ninth than any other inning, according to Midland play-by-play announcer Russ Langer.

What is at times just as difficult to understand as the Angels' losing is the fact that the fans continue to come to the stadium in droves.

Through 31 dates, 84,281 people paid to see the team this season. That compares to 53,522 through 28 first-half dates in 1989. An average of 2,719 fans attend each game this season, over a 50 percent average per game increase from the 1,911 the team had at this point last season.

At the current rate, 171,281 will pass through the Angel turnstiles this season, which would be almost a 70 percent increase from 1989's 106,000-plus — staggering numbers which Angel general manager Monty Hoppel is very impressed with.

"In the preseason, we had the best response to sales and season tickets in the history of the team," Hoppel said. "And we've added a lot of promotions."

"With kids out of school, I don't see any reason why it should change. The atmosphere at the ball park ... it just seems like everybody's having a good time."

Rick Holtzman, former Angel owner who sold the team Wednesday (see related story) said the fans come for more than baseball.

"I'm sure everyone wants to see the Angels win," Holtzman said, "but the fact is minor league ball is more than baseball. It's nine innings of entertainment. "There are more good reasons to come out of it than just victory on the field. (Juice) the Moose is an example of that. It's the little things. Good food and reasonable prices. I think that's more important than winning."

The "Good Times in the Summertime" radio and television ad campaign for the Angels is true everywhere but on the field it would seem.

"If we get the pitching that we need — and we do have the arms — then we'll have a chance to win," said Angel field boss Eddie Rodriguez. Like a child awaiting the start of the new cartoon season, Rodriguez has been looking forward with great anticipation to the second part of 1990.

"I've been thinking about the second half for awhile, but until it was actually here, I didn't want to bring it up because I didn't want these guys thinking ahead of the next

SWC officials discuss expansion

■ Southwest Conference president James Vick said the SWC executive committee discussed a variety of issues at its meeting Wednesday.

AUSTIN (AP) — A key Southwest Conference committee Wednesday discussed expanding the league and revising sports schedules so that every SWC team might not play each other in all sports.

The discussion came in the wake of Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles' comments that the Razorbacks are considering severing their 76-year association with the SWC to join the Southeastern Conference.

SWC president James Vick emphasized that Wednesday's 3½-hour discussion by the SWC executive committee was much broader than whether the league could survive without the Razorbacks.

"I think everyone is concerned about what the conference will look like in five or 10 years, so we're not just talking right now about whether Arkansas is going to change conferences," Vick said.

There is speculation that conference powers Texas and Texas A&M might also be lured away by the SEC. And then there's Texas Christian, a private school that joined the SWC in 1923, which wants Texas and Texas A&M to declare its intentions so it can plot its own future.

A Texas Tech official said the Red Raiders are considering options, such as moving to the Big Eight or Western Athletic Conference, if Arkansas should leave.

There's more. Some reports said that Big Eight power Oklahoma, a charter SWC member which left in 1920, might be a logical choice to replace Arkansas. Another suggestion that surfaced at the College Football Association meeting in Dallas earlier this month was the formation of a Big Southwest Conference, combining the SWC and Big Eight, said Vick, faculty representative at Texas.

"Part of the problem is to make sure that we keep the whole conference strong and not just increase one team's share or one school's share" of television or gate receipts, Vick told a news conference.

"I wouldn't rule out the possibility of expanding the conference, because I think that's the sense of what's going on around the country," he said.

But Vick added, "It's not clear that adding one team, adding three teams, combining conferences — it's not clear that any one of those options really benefits the conference."

Asked if SWC member schools were "ticked off" at Arkansas for thinking of pulling out, Vick said, "I don't think anybody really blames Arkansas for looking at the options. I think they may question whether it would be a wise decision for Arkansas to change conferences."

"Everyone is concerned about what Arkansas might do, so I would say everyone wants to try to keep Arkansas in the league. But I don't really sense panic or overreaction to what has been in the press," Vick said.

Vick declined to discuss possible additions to the SWC, such as Oklahoma, but he said: "You can assume that we talked about possible additions to the conference whether Arkansas stays or Arkansas decides to leave, and that's an issue that we will want to explore."

As for Texas and Texas A&M leaving, Vick said prior to the meeting, "There's always conversation going on."

Welch, Steinbach defuse red-hot Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — Oakland catcher Ron Hassey could tell during warmups that Bob Welch would pitch well.

Welch won his eighth consecutive game and Terry Steinbach had six RBIs with a grand slam and a single Wednesday as the Athletics beat the Detroit Tigers 12-7 to avoid their first sweep of the season.

As the catcher in 45 of Welch's last 47 starts, Hassey saw the signs.

"He came ready to go," Hassey said. "I think he realized the last two games he didn't come ready with his best stuff.

"The only difficulty he had today was probably not getting the leadoff batter. He was pretty much in control other than that."

Welch, a Detroit native who starred at Eastern Michigan, didn't issue a walk. In his previous two starts, against Kansas City and Chicago, he walked four and six batters respectively.

"One of the things I wanted to do today was not walk anybody," Welch said. "Those guys can swing the bat and they can hurt you twice as bad if you walk a lot.

"I think the key to no walks was being aggressive. That helps you get ahead of them and puts them in the hole, instead of putting yourself in the hole."

Mark McGwire, who had a two-run homer for Oakland, said Welch is probably less well-known than any other top-flight pitcher.

"He's one of those quiet pitchers that doesn't get too much recognition," McGwire said. "That can happen on a team like this. There are a lot of stars on this team."

The loss cost the Tigers a chance to reach .500 for the first time since the end of the 1988. Detroit hasn't swept a three-game series from Oakland since 1984.

The Tigers now face a grinding 13-game road trip that takes them to four AL West cities in 14 days.

"The trip is important as far as staying in the (AL East) race is concerned," Detroit manager Sparky Anderson said. "If we can even get through 5-8, we won't be in too much danger."

Welch (11-2), who hasn't lost since May 5, gave up two runs on six hits in six innings to tie Boston's Roger Clemens for the AL lead in wins. Welch's last eight-game winning streak was in 1985 while pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Bob never forgets to pitch," Oakland manager Tony LaRussa said. "He doesn't lose track of where he is and what he has to do, like some pitchers are prone to do."

Oakland scored three runs in each of the first two innings off Dan Petry (5-4), who entered the game with a 2.61 ERA and exited with a 3.23.

American

Rangers 8, Twins 0

Kevin Brown fired a four-hitter for his first major league shutout and Geno Petralli broke out of a 4-for-31 slump with a two-run first-inning double as Texas completed a three-game sweep of Minnesota.

Texas hadn't swept a series since taking three from the New York Yankees from April 20-22.

Brown (9-4) struck out four, didn't walk a batter and retired 17 consecutive batters over one stretch. The 25-year-old right-hander won his fourth straight start and pitched his third straight complete game.

The Twins lost for the 12th time in their last 13 games. Before the losing streak, Minnesota was third in the American League West, 4½ games out. They left Arlington Stadium 12 games behind Oakland.

The Rangers scored four runs with two out in the first inning off Tim Drummond (0-3). Drummond, making his fourth major league start, yielded a single to Rafael Palmeiro and walked Pete Incaviglia and Ruben Sierra to load the bases before Harold Baines hit a two-run single and Petralli, who had gone 26 games without an extra-base hit, doubled to make it 4-0.

Orioles 3, Indians 1

Randy Milligan had three hits, including a tie-breaking home run in the ninth inning, as Baltimore ended Cleveland's four-game winning streak.

Winner Pete Harnisch (7-3) gave up one run and five hits in eight innings. Gregg Olson pitched out of trouble in the ninth for his 15th save in 16 opportunities.

Jerry Browne singled and went to third on a single by pinch-hitter Dion James. After Stan Jefferson ran for James and stole second, Olson struck out Sandy Alomar and Candy Maldonado and Ken Phelps lined out to center.

Milligan lined an 0-2 pitch from Jesse Orosco (3-3) over the fence in center for his 11th home run, giving Baltimore its second win in the last eight games. Cleveland lost for the third time in 10 games.

White Sox 2, Angels 1

Sammy Sosa's fifth-inning home run enabled the White Sox to beat California and Mark Langston, ending a five-game losing streak.

Winner Barry Jones (8-1) relieved Greg Hibbard in the fifth and escaped a bases-loaded jam. He blanked the Angels over the next two innings and Bobby Thigpen pitched the final two innings for his 22nd save, striking out four.

Langston (4-7) lost for the fourth time in his last five decisions despite striking out 10. Sosa's one-out homer broke a 1-1 tie. It was Sosa's fifth of the season and only the second surrendered by Langston in his last 64 1-3 innings.

Blue Jays 11, Red Sox 0

Toronto held onto first place in the American League by crushing Boston behind the pitching of Dave Stieb and Tom Henke and a club record-tying eight straight hits in an eight-run eighth inning.

Stieb (10-2) yielded all eight Boston hits in 7 2-3 innings, struck out seven and didn't walk a batter in lowering his ERA to a league-leading 2.26.

Mariners 3, Royals 2

Ken Griffey Jr. legged out the second inside-the-park home run of his career and Brian Holman scattered seven hits in eight innings for Seattle.

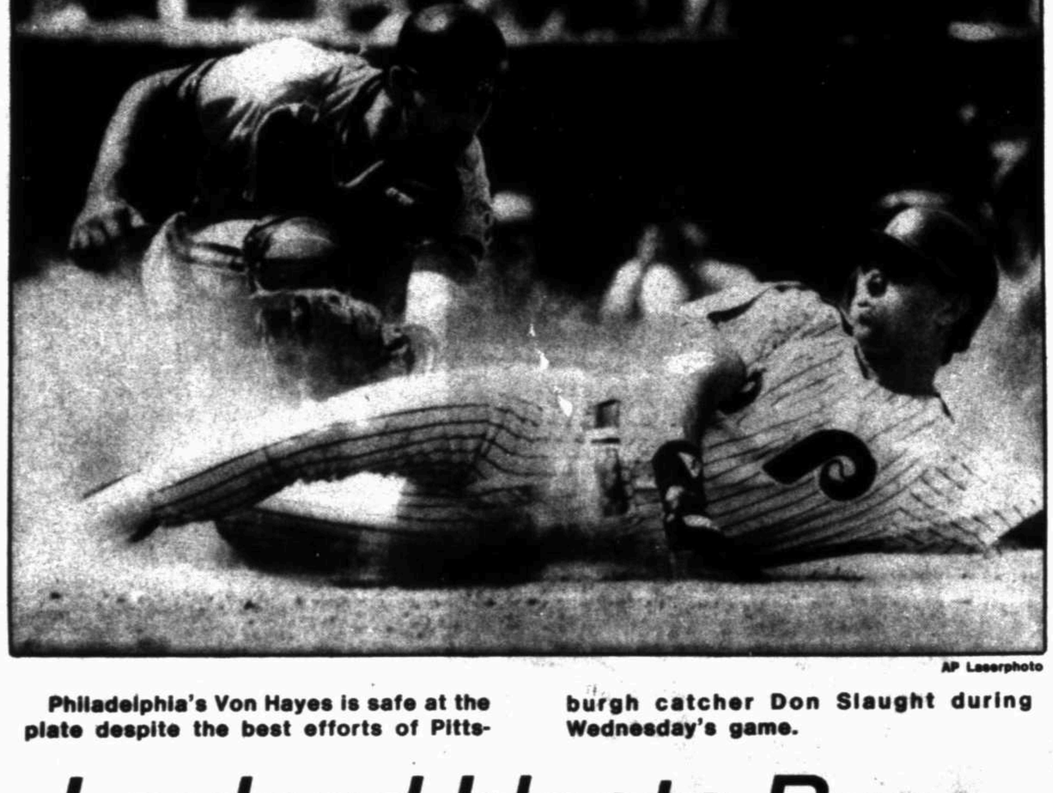

Holman (8-5) was relieved by Mike Schooler, who pitched the ninth for his 16th save.

Yankees 5, Brewers 4

Roberto Kelly's third home run of the season, with two out in the ninth inning, gave the Yankees a comeback win.

The homer came off reliever Chuck Crim, 2-3, and treated Stump Merrill his fifth victory in 13 games since he succeeded Bucky Dent as Yankees manager.

Philadelphia's Von Hayes is safe at the plate despite the best efforts of Pittsburgh catcher Don Slaught during Wednesday's game.

Leyland blasts Bucs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pittsburgh manager Jim Leyland was in no mood for Bruce Ruffin.

"We stunk," Leyland said after Ruffin allowed just five hits as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Pirates 7-2 on Wednesday. "Ruffin pitched good, but we stunk."

The lefthander pitched eight innings as the Philadelphia swept the two game series with Pittsburgh, the leader in the East division.

Ruffin (5-6) struck out seven and walked three before being relieved by Roger McDowell, who pitched a hitless ninth. In his previous outing, Ruffin beat Chicago 7-0 on three hits.

"That's two good outings in a row, and I feel like I'm in a real good groove," Ruffin said.

"However, I'm not going to get overconfident. I threw a home run ball (to Bobby Bonilla), and I walked three guys, so there's still a lot of work to be done."

"Bruce did a tremendous job," said Phillies manager Nick Leyva. "If he's consistent, that's what we need to stay in the race."

The Phillies scored a run in the first off loser Bob Patterson (4-3). Len Dykstra opened with a single, stole second, went to third on a groundout and scored on Von Hayes' single.

Dykstra raised his major league leading average to .384 with two hits. He also scored three times.

Thon, playing on his 32nd birthday, hit his second homer of the year in the second.

In the Phillies' third, Dykstra walked, stole second and moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Herr's groundout.

The Pirates scored a run in the fourth when Bobby Bonilla doubled, went to third on a grounder and came home on Don Slaught's sacrifice fly.

Bonilla hit his 16th homer in the sixth, cutting Philadelphia's lead to 3-2. In the bottom of the sixth, the Phillies got an unearned run as Hayes reached second on second baseman Jose Lind's throwing error and scored on Charlie Hayes' single.

The Phillies got three runs off Doug Bair in the seventh. Herr tripled in two, and Randy Ready's RBI single accounted for the final run.

Mets 6, Cardinals 3

Kevin McReynolds hit a three-run homer in the first inning and the Mets held on to beat St. Louis for their 10th victory in 12 games.

The Mets, who have homered in eight straight games and 23 of 26, moved within four games of first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East. New York trailed the Pirates by 9½ games on June 7.

The Cardinals, who often win with pitching and defense, got neither in the first inning as New York took a 4-0 lead against Bryn Smith (6-6). The Mets have scored in the first inning in eight of their last nine games.

With one out, Dave Magadan's fly ball to center field was dropped by Willie McGee for a two-base error. McGee, who made only three errors last season, has six this year. Gregg Jefferies then reached on an infield single when third baseman Terry Pendleton obstructed shortstop Jose Oquendo's view while he was moving into position to field the ball.

Darryl Strawberry extended his hitting streak to 10 games with an RBI single to score Magadan from third and McReynolds followed with his 12th homer. McReynolds, who homered in New York's 6-0 victory over St. Louis on Tuesday, has six homers and 15 RBIs in his last 15 games.

National

Expos 3, Cubs 2

Pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson's RBI single keyed a seventh-inning rally as Montreal scored three unearned runs against Greg Maddux to beat the Cubs.

The Expos were held to three hits by Maddux (4-8) over the first 6 2-3 innings. Larry Walker then struck out for what would have been the final out of the inning, but the ball got past catcher Joe Girardi, allowing Walker to go all the way to second on the passed ball.

Mike Fitzgerald drew a walk before Tom Foley singled, scoring Walker. Johnson, pinch-hitting for Dale Mohorcic (1-1), then singled to center, scoring Fitzgerald, and Foley came home with the go-ahead run when center fielder Marvell Wynne's throw to third base skipped past Domingo Ramos.

The victory moved the Expos within 1½ games of first-place Pittsburgh in the NL East. The Pirates visit Olympic Stadium this weekend.

Padres 4, Giants 3.

Pagliarulo led off the inning with a triple off Steve Bedrosian (3-4). Abner then doubled off the glove of right fielder Rick Parker to score Pagliarulo.

Craig Lefferts (5-1) earned the victory with 2 1-3 scoreless innings. He pitched out of a 10th-inning jam by retiring Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell.

The Giants put runners on first and third with one out, but Lefferts got Clark to ground into a fielder's choice as shortstop Garry Templeton threw out Brett Butler at the plate. Mitchell lined out to third to end the inning.

Reds 9, Braves 8

Billy Hatcher's run-scoring single in the 10th inning gave Cincinnati its seventh win in eight games.

The Reds scored once in each of the last three innings to overcome an 8-6 deficit.

They started their winning rally when Mariano Duncan opened the 10th by drawing a walk from Rick Leucken (0-2) and went to second on Jeff Reed's sacrifice. Todd Benzinger beat out an infield single, sending Duncan to third, and Hatcher singled to right.

The victory went to Randy Myers (2-1), who blanked the Braves over the last two innings.

Mid-City Angels advance to championship

Staff Report

The Mid-City Angels advanced to the "A" League championship game after a 4-1 win over the North Central Angels Tuesday at Windlands Park.

Should Mid-City win the championship game Friday at 6 p.m., they will win the "A" League title. If the Angels lose the Friday game against the winner of the losers' bracket final today, a Saturday "if" game will be played Saturday at 11 a.m.

Clay Johnston pitched six innings to earn the win for Mid-City; Keith Lant took the loss for North Central. There was only one extra base hit — a double by North Central's Nick Benavidez.

Mid-City racked up two double plays to highlight defensive heroics in the game.

In losers' bracket action, the Mid-City Rangers downed the Tower League Astros 5-4, and the North Central Rangers defeated the Western Angels 8-2, to advance.

Jeremy Delcore struck out 10 and picked up the win for Mid-City, pitching a complete game five-hitter. Jaime Ramirez took the loss for the Angels.

Delcore also tripled to help the Rangers offensively. Mark Holly also triple for North Central while Ryan Elder homered and Britt Harper had two doubles.

SALE: New owners plan to be visible

From 1C

"There was doubt that it would continue here and that it would move to Austin. We solidified that the Angels would stay by entering into a lease (with the City of Midland) and (renovating) the ballpark."

Bringing the parent California club to town last season for an exhibition game was also listed by Holtzman as one of his major accomplishments. It was the first time in 15 years a major league club had paid a visit to Midland.

Holtzman's first GM with the Angels — Bill Davidson, now the GM with Holtzman's Chattanooga Lookouts — established a streak of three straight attendance records while he ran the front office. Hoppel's staff has the team on the way to shattering the record by a projected 70,000 fans (see "Front Row Seat").

Both Prentice and Richmond said they have no plans for wholesale changes with the Angels. The club, which has a lease with the city until 1994, will not be moved. Both said they plan to become more community oriented, the only suggestion at change.

"We want to get involved more in the community," Richmond said. "We're just going to spend a lot of time in Midland. We want our front office staff to be more in tune. It's a community ball club, it's Midland's ball club and that's the way it should be."

Prentice, a 47-year-old New Jersey native is married with three children. He cited the atmosphere of West Texas as the main reason for his choosing the Angels over other teams.

ANGELS: Rodriguez, Knapp optimistic

From 1C

game. I know these guys are not going to give up. You can take that to the bank."

Aside from the players, Rodriguez and pitching coach Gary Ruby the only other person likely to have seen every Angel game this term is Langer, who belts out each and every Angel broadcast.

A lot of armchair experts have theories on the Angels' demise. But Langer has been there through it all with a watchful and learned eye.

"I think it's a matter of primarily the pitching," Langer said. "The main problem with that is the fact that in general in the first half — not counting the marked improvement in last couple of weeks — the starting pitching has not shouldered the burden and carried the bullpen into the later innings. If the starters can work six or seven innings then the bullpen would have more of a breather and could be more effective."

The Angels have had only one nine-inning complete game this season, and just one other seven-inning complete game as part of a doubleheader. On the average, the battered starters are being pulled as early as the third and fourth innings.

Langer said the Angels have proved they can still carry the big stick even in the absence of Ruben Amaro and Steve DeAngelis, who are still credited with being the No. 2 and 4 hitters in the Texas League despite being called up to Triple A Edmonton earlier this month.

As for the drastic rise in attendance, Langer gives credit where he feels its due.

"I think it's a combination of things," he said. "You have to credit the fans themselves. The support has been tremendous despite the losing record, and that says a lot for the sort of fans we have."

Mike Knapp, a member of the 1988 Angels which finished last in that season's first-half race but bounced back to finish just 3½ games out during the second half, says there's cause for hope.

"I still think we have one of the better teams in the league," Knapp said. "We have a lot of young guys, but that's the way it was when I was here in '88, and we won 10 of 11 games to start the second half.

"It's just a matter of getting some confidence. If we do, I think we're capable of doing the same thing this second half."

Added Rodriguez: "A lot of people out there are second guessing, and they have a right to voice their opinions — but we'll see what happens in the second half and let the guessing take care of itself.

Donald praised after Open loss

PGA

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) - As a three-time winner of the U.S. Open, Hale Irwin is no stranger to celebrity. But it's a new, exhilarating feeling for Mike Donald, who's receiving as much attention for losing the Open as Irwin is for winning.

"I could see it at the airport," Donald, who until last weekend was a virtual unknown on the PGA Tour. "People recognized me, and they come up and shake my hand and tell me I played good. And I could see people pointing at me and everything."

Irwin won the Open with a bridie on the first sudden death hole after he and Donald were still tied after an 18-hole playoff.

"Monday night I was feeling pretty bad," Donald said. "But the way everybody treated me, all the nice things they said, pretty soon I started feeling like a winner again."

"I'm just sitting there by myself having a slice of pizza and these two kids come in, and they're yelling, 'Hey, there's Mike Donald. He almost won the Open.' They were all excited about seeing me," Donald said. "This isn't something that happens to me a lot.

Irwin said Donald can expect a lot more attention and celebrity in the future.

"It's a new Mike Donald now," Irwin said. "The way he played, the way he handled himself, he made an awful lot of friends in Chicago. And he made millions of more friends — literally, millions of friends — among the people who watched him on TV.

"He's raised his game to a new level. He's raised himself to a new level. In the future, Mike is going to be a very recognizable figure in the game."

Donald, who nearly lost his playing rights for lack of performance in 1988 and last season scored the only victory of his 11-year career, was not at all sure he'd reach this level.

The self-doubts were planted, he said, in Augusta, Ga. earlier this year. He led the first round of the Masters with a magnificent 64, then blew to an 82 in the second round.

"The most nervous I was last week was Friday," Donald said. "I'd played a good first round. But I'm thinking if I shoot another big number, if I'm out there choking, after what happened in the Masters, I might never be able to recover from it. Never. If I'd done that, I don't think I'd ever again been able to contend in a major."

He put those fears to rest, however, stayed among the tournament leaders and went on to the biggest week of his life.

Sheehan eyes title defense

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — Patty Sheehan, fresh off a victory two weeks ago at the LPGA McDonald's Championship, says patience will be the key to defending her title at this week's Rochester International.

Sheehan, who won the 1989 tournament on the first hole of a playoff with Ayako Okamoto, has posted the best season of her career so far this year, winning two tournaments, finishing second in two others and placing in the top 20 in 11 of her 12 starts. She is second on the money list behind Pat Bradley, who withdrew this week because of tendinitis in her thumb.

The 34-year-old Sheehan, who moved to Reno, Nev., after her San Francisco home was destroyed in last October's earthquake, believes she has a chance at repeating.

"I've still got a goal of winning two more tournaments," Sheehan said Wednesday. "So I've got to get moving and do that."

Forecasters are calling for wet weather when the tournament begins Thursday, and Sheehan says that will require extra patience on slower greens.

"Last year was super wet too and I did all right then," she said. "The main thing is patience ... and there are so many times you don't want to be patient out there.

"Right now I probably have more confidence than I did last year. But that's kind of a roller coaster. You just have to go with it while it's with you and try to get it back when it's not there."

Sheehan insisted that her status as defending champion hasn't put extra pressure on her.

"It's no different — a few more people know who you are, that's all," she said. "Defending a title is so rare that when you do it's a bonus. You always try to but you never expect to."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Profits will increase when new technology is adopted. In August, follow your instincts where a money matter is concerned. Your ardent pursuit of a professional goal will pay off handsomely in October. Romance remains secondary to work but can be satisfying. Using your keen intuition will win you a raise or promotion in early 1991. Someone who has been by your side for a long time may decide to call it quits in the spring. Try to persuade this special person toward a change of mind.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: philosopher Jean-Paul Sartre, actress Meredith Baxter-Birney, actor Michael Gross, pitcher Rick Sutcliffe.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A selfish approach will boomerang. Think things through before you act. Success comes faster when you work on your own. Protect your privacy. A temporary sacrifice will produce a gold mine.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A unique relationship will save you from embarrassment today. Consult with a friend or neighbor. Your optimism is an important asset in a tough contest. Focus on practical concerns.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have to pay for past mistakes. You feel compelled to pursue your goals more diligently now; recent results tend to reflect a half-hearted approach. Buy art for your home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Deadlines must be met. Get expert help in cutting through the red tape that is hampering progress. You can score record gains by moving into a new field. Secret resentments erode domestic harmony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A rumor is correct. Sit back and wait for others to make the first move. Budgeting will help alleviate money woes. Discuss intimate questions with a loved one. Lay your cards on the table.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You need to know where you stand and how much pressure to exert. Ask probing questions. Diplomacy will help you resolve a conflict with a loved one. Be cautious if traveling by car today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your health improves. You may be anxious to break out of a rut. A friend plays a surprisingly helpful role. Consider a property investment or government bonds after seeking experts' advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could experience difficulty communicating with young people. Emotional outbursts will only complicate matters. Stay calm. Money may be at the root of a disagreement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish one project before getting involved in another. People are drawn to you and your ideas. Deal with praise intelligently. Do not let compliments go to your head. Romance beckons!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Long-term goals need to be set. Someone who painted a free-and-easy picture was misinformed. The emphasis now is on revising certain programs. Careful planning will lead to future success.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid mixing money with friendship or you could lose both. Member of opposite sex may mean well but not know what to do. Share important news. Listen to your heart in romantic matters.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You feel more secure now than in the past. Handle business matters cautiously. Others may not live up to their promises. You will be obliged to test your theories. Enlarge your social horizons.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are patient, persuasive and sensitive to other people's feelings. They may act clingy when very young and will resist being shoved out of the nest later on. Their parents should resist the urge to be overly protective. Learning to stand on their own two feet will foster valuable self-confidence. Count on these Cancerians to respect tradition and their elders. These youngsters often feel especially close to their grandparents. They have a real flair for languages.

Opening lead: Ace of ♡

The late Lew Mathe often said that the only good slams were those that made. By that yardstick, six spades was an excellent slam!

North's raise to six spades was rather optimistic—had he chosen to bid at all an immediate five spades would have been more logical. North should have realized his partner was bidding under pressure and the two tricks he was delivering might be needed just to make game.

West led the ace of hearts and declarer heaved a sigh of relief when he saw dummy—North-South had just dodged the deadly diamond bullet, which would have netted the defenders three fast tricks. With the help of some luck and excellent technique, declarer wrapped up his slam in short order.

After ruffing the opening lead, declarer drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy, then led a club to the jack. When that held, declarer cashed the king of clubs, crossed to the table with a trump and played the ace of clubs for a diamond discard. When the queen of clubs dropped, declarer was able to discard another diamond on the ten of clubs and bring home his slam for the loss of a diamond trick.

Declarer had a two-way club finesse. Was South's decision to play East for the queen just a lucky guess?

Not at all. To make his ambitious slam, declarer needed four club tricks. Had he elected to play West for the lady, he could not have made more than three tricks as long as West covered the jack. To come to 12 tricks, declarer had to find East with specifically the queen of clubs guarded no more than twice. That was declarer's only legitimate chance for the contract.

Dysart films TV spots for Oregon's state bar

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — "L.A. Law" star Richard Dysart believes everybody should be treated equally by the law, and he has filmed two TV spots for the Oregon State Bar Association to say so.

Dysart, who plays senior partner Leland McKenzie on the NBC-TV series, was in Lake Oswego on Tuesday filming the pubic service announcements.

"All of us, rich and poor, should receive fair treatment under the law," he says in one.

In an interview, Dysart said the justice system is "so complex that everyday I think thousands of people give up." Dysart said he thinks the public announcements will let people know what is available for them.

"You're telling somebody that justice is equal, and if they don't have money ... there is assistance," he said.

The bar's Tel-Law program is a collection of recorded legal information messages prepared by lawyers. Each message is three to nine minutes long and provides basic information about a wide range of topics, including taxes, insurance and family law.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Talk show host Larry King is asking fans "to go to bat for the Babe" in a fund drive to expand the Babe Ruth Museum.

King

"These are exciting times for baseball fans. Starting today we're going to offer fans across the country membership to the Babe Ruth Museum," King said Tuesday behind the house where the Sultan of Swat was born 95 years ago.

"We hope we can count on all of you to go to bat for the Babe."

The museum hopes a broadened membership will pay for a 12,000-square-foot addition, including a 6,000-square-foot auditorium.

Bosworth

Bosworth stars in "The Brotherhood," a $10 million movie being shot here in which he continues to play defense — in this case, as an FBI agent seeking to stop a political assassination by a motorcycle gang.

Director Bruce Malmuth called Bosworth the star of the 90s.

"Boz is great," Malmuth said Monday. "I see in him Marlon Brando, James Dean and Gary Cooper, all in one package. He's got the same appeal of a Stallone or an Arnold Schwarzenegger."

LEXINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond wants a $25 refund — even if the money might be water over the dam.

The 87-year-old Republican from South Carolina has requested a refund for a water deposit he paid in 1938 to the town of Lexington for some property he sold last year.

The letter arrived last week, Mayor Eli Mack said Tuesday. Lexington is a town of 3,000, 13 miles west of Columbia.

"I was real amused, How in the hell can anyone save a receipt for 52 years," Mack said. "This is the first request to go back that many years. I think it's rather cute."

Thurmond, whose net worth is more than $2 million, believes he is entitled to the $25 because he sold the property, said his spokeswoman, Pam Montgomery.

Mack said Thurmond will have to live without the $25. Water deposits cannot be refunded, he said.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo's only son was married at the presidential palace Wednesday morning in a ceremony conducted by Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon.

Roh Jae-hon, 25, a student at the University of Chicago, was married to Shin Jung-hwa, a 22-year-old music student. The 200 guests included politicians, business associates and friends of the families.

Korean news reports said the couple expected to go to the United States in late June and would live in Chicago until Roh finishes his studies.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter was met by protesters when he arrived at a low-income neighborhood to help build seven homes for impoverished families.

About a dozen pickets who spoke to Carter before he and his wife, Rosalynn, started working on the project Tuesday objected to the number of homes that will be built on the 1½-acre site in southeast San Diego.

Costa Ricans advance

ROME (AP) — What the United States could not do, Costa Rica did.

The Costa Ricans, who finished just ahead of the Americans in their qualifying group, made their first trip to the World Cup a memorable one Wednesday night. Their 2-1 victory over Sweden — the first comeback win in the tournament — qualified them for the second round.

The Americans, who came to the soccer championships with brave thoughts of getting at least that far, were 0-3 and are headed home.

"This is a team that never stops trying, and they got exactly what they have deserved," said Costa Rica coach Bora Milutinovic, a Yugoslav who guided Mexico into the quarterfinals four years ago. "This is a group of players always giving their all."

Sweden, one of the major disappointments of the tournament with an 0-3 record, led for 74 minutes on a goal by Johnny Ekstroem. But Roger Flores tied it with a header off a free kick and Hernan Medford won it by converting a breakaway five minutes later.

"We must take respsonsibility for a player in that area of the field," Sweden coach Olle Nordin said. "I can't tell you which defender was caught unaware, but it should not happen that way."

Also Wednesday night, Brazil clinched Group C with a 1-0 victory over Scotland that put the Scots on the verge of first-round elimination for the seventh time in as many appearances. A tie probably would have gotten them into the next round, but a mistake by goalie Jim Leighton with nine minutes to go was devastating.

Leighton, who was having an outstanding game, stopped a long shot by Alemao, but he couldn't hold the rebound. A charging Careca nudged it past the goalie and Muller, unguarded at the right post, put it in.

While Brazil won the group at 3-0 and Costa Rica was second, Scotland managed just two points for third place. The four top third-place nations move on and the Scots have a slim mathematical chance.

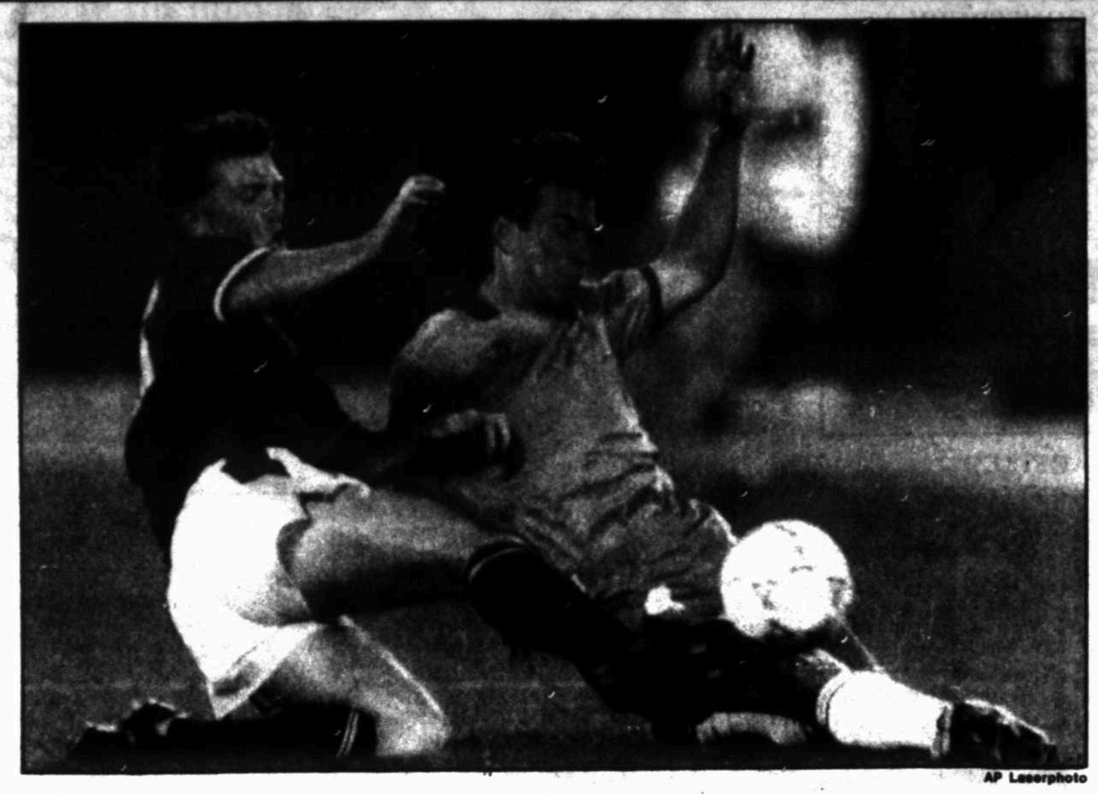

Not that they believed it.

"We knew that if we didn't get a point, we wouldn't qualify," Coach Andy Roxburgh said.

Cameroon did qualify for the second round and the Indomitable Lions are becoming wealthy soccer players for it.

Cameroon has been the sensation of the first round of the world championships, winning Group B over defending champion Argentina and strengthening the claim that Africa deserves more than two spots in the 24-team field. The Cameroonian players aren't collecting only glory.

By advancing to the second round, each player has earned 13 million f.c.f.a., a currency used in French-speaking Africa that is stabilized by the French franc. That comes to about $46,180.

Yanks prove to themselves that they belonged in World Cup

TIRRENIA, Italy (AP) — By 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, 15 of the 22 players on the United States World Cup team had left camp.

The U.S. did as most people expected this time, losing three straight in America's first World Cup appearance since 1950. The Americans were outscored 8-2 and never came close to taking a lead. Still, they felt they did their best.

"Unfortunately we didn't win," goalkeeper Tony Meola said. "But I think we proved to ourselves and we proved to a lot of people that we belonged here."

Meola was one of the players who stayed to relax a day. By afternoon he was on the beach by the Ligurian Sea, drinking beers with teammates, playing paddleball with the Italian girls and soaking up some sun.

For the first time in a while, players could relax. Even with few expectations from the American public, they had felt pressure.

"We are going to have to take a long, hard look at what it's going to take to get to the next level," said Bruce Murray, who scored the U.S. goal in Tuesday night's 2-1 loss to Austria.

Murray, like most players, had wanted more.

"The first game for us was a very embarrassing game," he said of the 5-1 loss to Czechoslovakia. "We felt we gave it our all but we got hammered, and it was difficult to deal with."

Back at the training camp a few miles down the road, Coach Bob Gansler sat back on his bed, looking a bit drained. It was too soon for him to evaluate things. So much had happened so quickly.

"You don't want to say it's inevitable, but in a way it was," the coach said. He thought back 10 days, to the game against the Czechoslovaks. The Americans held on for 20 minutes and then everything went wrong.

This Riley not Chester

No, not the old series starring William Bendix. This time, the star will be Pat Riley and the subject will be pro basketball.

NBC announced Wednesday that the former Los Angeles Lakers coach will host the network's first year of NBA coverage next season. The announcement wasn't a surprise, but the role was.

Riley, who resigned last week after leading the Lakers to four NBA titles, was expected to join NBC as a commentator. Instead, he will anchor the network's pregame, halftime and postgame shows during the regular season and playoffs.

"Coaching the Lakers for nine years was a great challenge. Now I'm ready for a new challenge at NBC," Riley said at a news conference attended by NBC Sports executives and NBA commissioner David Stern.

"This season, I was coach of the year in the NBA. Next season, I hope to be rookie of the year for NBC."

Terms of Riley's multi-year contract weren't disclosed, but sources said he will be paid about $400,000 per year.

Bob Costas and Marv Albert will share play-by-play duties, but NBC has yet to name its NBA commentators.

NBC wants to hire Detroit Pistons coach Chuck Daly, but he hasn't decided whether to leave coaching for television.

"We hope to have an answer by next week," said Dick Ebersol, president of NBC Sports.

Last November, NBC took the NBA away from CBS with a four-year, $600 million deal. On Wednesday, the network grabbed Riley away from a life of leisure in southern California.

But O'Neil said Riley's looks weren't the main attraction.

"He has two very important traits — likeability and honesty," O'Neil said. "He has no formal training in journalism, but he has a reverence for the truth."

Riley, who was a Lakers' broadcaster for two years before becoming an assistant coach, is confident he can make the transition from the bench to the studio.

"When you coach in LA, you get used to being on television," he said. "I feel very comfortable in a studio setting."

Despite his friendships in the NBA, Riley said he won't shy away from tough issues.

"I've been around the league a long time, and I have a pretty good idea of what goes on there," he said. "If there's a story worth telling, we're going to tell it."

O'Neil said NBC decided to make Riley a host instead of a commentator to "exploit his on-camera ability."

Crude falls

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices continued to slide Wednesday, remaining at levels not seen since late 1988, amid ongoing concerns about oversupply.

The futures price of WTI for July delivery tumbled 35 cents to settle at $15.30 a 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Other contract months also fell.

The last time crude traded in that range was in November 1988, according to energy analysts.

Market watchers said the drop was due partly to the fact that the July contract was set to expire on Wednesday. But they said continued concern about overproduction among the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was also a big factor.

"There's concern that OPEC is not willing to take steps to shore up the market," said Peter Beutel, an assistant director of the energy group at Elders Futures Inc.

A report released late Tuesday by the American Petroleum Institute also didn't help. API said inventory levels of crude oil, an important factor in pricing, fell 1.2 million barrels last week to 384.4 billion barrels.

But analysts said the drop was slight and, therefore, not enough to lift prices.

Spindletop heirs

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that thousands of decendants of an early Texas resident have no claim to a share of the Spindletop oilfield fortune or the estimated $200 billion worth of oil pumped from it since the Lucas gusher came in in 1901.

Cobb

U.S. District Judge Howell Cobb's ruling came in the latest of a long series of lawsuits brought by would-be heirs against oil companies.

The ruling came in a summary judgment in favor of Amoco Production Inc., Mobil Oil Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co., Texaco Inc. and Chevron Inc. in a suit filed by four relatives who claimed kinship to Pelham Humphries and asked for $200 billion in oil, gas and mineral rights from the companies.

Dollar climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar rose against most other major currencies Wednesday in light trading, boosted by concern about political uncertainty in the Soviet Union, traders said.

Gold prices rose domestically after a mixed performance overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold rose $1.40 an ounce to $350.50.

In London, the pound rose to $1.7225. Dollar rates in New York: 1.4130 Swiss francs; 5.6410 French francs; 1,231.00 Italian lire; and 1.1730 Canadian dollars.

Horizontal boom growing, spreading

■ A prolific completion and a new application have intensified the horizontal drilling boom.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

The horizontal drilling boom continues to grow and spread in Texas with reports of more prolific discoveries and new applications.

Wednesday the Associated Press reported the most prolific well to date in the Austin Chalk of South Texas with the testing of a 19,568 barrel well by Winn Exploration Inc.

At the same time Service Fracturing Co. (Serfco) of Pampa has reported the first horizontal project in which a horizontal lateral was drilled into an existing well.

It is a horizontal drilling practice that could have wide impact on marginal wells throughout Texas, according to operators in the Panhandle.

"The Serfco well is an exceptional well. It's very good, but it's a tight hole," said J. Riley, a spokesman for the company. He said the Texas Railroad Commission was currently testing the well, and it would probably be 30 days before the well's potential was announced.

He said that Serfco would look at the well for at least 60 days before making other drilling determinations. "If the production holds up — we have really got something here." He said the origina! pump jack on the well could not handle the increased production and had to be replace with a larger one.

Results of the horizontal success, if they are as successful as expected, could fuel a new horizontal drilling boom in the Brown Dolomite of the Panhandle much like the Austin Chalk. Meanwhile continuing reports of prolific completions is expected to fuel the Austin Chalk play to a new intensity.

Parker Drilling Co. of Tulsa, which has drilled horizontal wells in New Mexico and New Zealand, announced this week that it has joined the list of drilling contractors joining the horizontal play in South Texas. Parker has a multi-well contract from Clayton W. Williams, Jr. Inc. of Midland to drill an unspecified number of wells in Frio County. The project will be managed by Parker's Odessa office.

For the first time in decades horizontal drilling in the Austin Chalk has rekindled memories of Texas' early boom days. While not equal to the 200,000 barrel per day Yates field discovery or the

Ostrich breeders fight proposed import rules

■ Local ostrich breeders are concerned that proposed USDA rules allowing renewed importation of ostrich eggs, babies and adults could have disastrous effects on both the health of U.S. livestock and the fledgling U.S. ostrich industry.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Several Midlanders have joined a new, growing American industry: Ostrich breeding.

Now these Midlanders fear their investment and hard work are endangered by a proposal by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to lift the ban on and revise rules on importation of ostriches and ratites — emus, rheas, cassowary and kiwis.

The proposal would allow importation of ostriches 36 inches high or less and weighing 30 pounds or less. They must be treated for ectoparasites at least three and no more than 14 days before shipping, must be shipped in unused containers, certified by a veterinarian in the country of origin and quarantined in Newburgh, N.Y. for 30 days.

Eggs from captive-bred ratites could be imported, certified by an authorized veterinarian, shipped in unused containers and incubated in either private or government incubators and tested during the 30 days after hatching.

"My stand is, let's stop all imports," said Roy Kimsey, a Midland breeder and independent oilman. "We have enough birds in the country to build a strong ostrich industry and to keep bloodlines going."

He and fellow breeders Tony Traweek and Faye Lehenbauer, meeting in Kimsey's office, worry that a flood of imports could lower the value of their investment in the big birds.

But more importantly, they worry about the potentially disastrous effect these proposed rules could have on the health of livestock and humans, if they're put into effect.

Imports of ostriches and ratites were banned in August 1989 after a tick that had never before been found in the U.S. and was potentially fatal to livestock and

By John D. McClain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy is continuing to grow sluggishly although the construction sector appears to be weakening, according to a Federal Reserve survey released Wednesday.

"The tone of district reports suggests continued slow growth in the economy with little change in the underlying inflation rate," said a summary of the survey of the 12 Fed district banks.

The survey, completed June 8, was similar to three polls conducted earlier this year that found slow but continued economic expansion with moderate inflation.

It was conducted by the Cleveland district bank for use at the July 2-3 meeting of the central bank's Federal Open Market Committee, which establishes U.S. monetary policy.

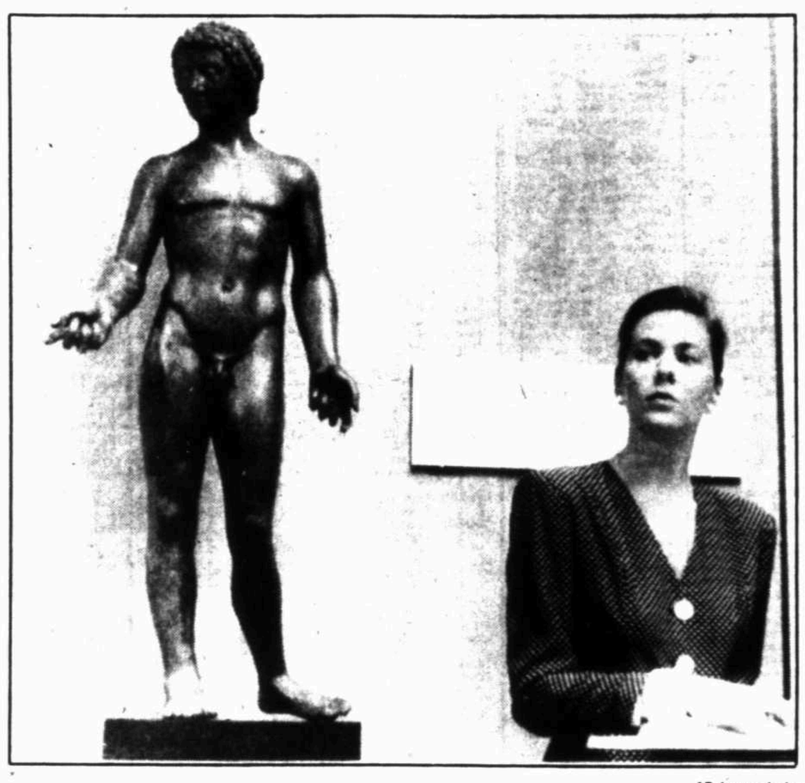

The Fed has kept a tight grip on credit to slow the economy and lessen inflationary pressure. Some officials and economists believe the economy has slowed too much and could slide into recession if the Fed does not loosen its grip.

One sign of sluggishness, the survey found, was "very little growth, if not a decline, in real consumer spending for durable and non-durable goods this quarter from last."

Consumer spending accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and has been a driving force for the economy for much of the last eight years since the last recession.

"Recent behavior in retail sales and reports from retailers in several districts indicate that sales have been slow in recent months and are expected to remain so in the short term," the summary said.

Retail sales, about half of consumer spending, fell in May for the third consecutive month, the Commerce Department reported last week. The last time retail sales declined for three straight months was in the fall of 1981, during the last recession.

Hunt brothers auction brings record prices

■ The auction of coins and antiques owned by the Hunt brothers drew record prices and generated $20 million to help pay off the Hunts' creditors.

By Beth J. Harpaz

NEW YORK (AP) — A 2,500-year-old Greek vase and two ancient silver coins brought record prices at a court-ordered auction of antiquities owned by the one-time billionaire Hunt brothers.

The 18-inch-tall vase from about 510 B.C. sold for $1.76 million Tuesday at Sotheby's. The old record for an ancient vase sold at auction was $493,000.

The gleaming black vase depicts the death of Kyknos in battle with Herakles, or Hercules. It was reconstructed from a vase fragment signed by Euphronius, one of the most important Greek artists of the period, said Sotheby's David Redden, an expert in the field.

Nelson Bunker Hunt and brother William Herbert Hunt, heirs to an oil fortune, lost more than $1.5 billion in an alleged attempt to corner the silver market a decade ago and sought bankruptcy reorganization.

The Dallas businessmen were ordered to sell off their possessions to pay their creditors, the biggest of which is the Internal Revenue Service.

R. Carter Pate, the trustee in charge of liquidating Nelson Bunker Hunt's estate, expected all the sales, which will be held through 1991, to raise between $20 million and $25 million.

But Tuesday's sale of 164 vases, coins and bronze figures generated $20 million alone, Sotheby's said.

The record-setting Greek coins were the Decadrachm of Agrigentum, from about 465 B.C., which sold for $572,000, and an Athenian decadrachm, circa 465 B.C., which sold for $528,000.

Dealers from Europe, Japan and the United States were among those bidding. Many items sold for two and three times their presale estimates.

On July 21, 600 items owned by Bunker Hunt — including bronze sculptures of bulls, Indians and horses and porcelain birds and waterfowl — will be auctioned in Texas. An auction of sports paintings formerly owned by Bunker Hunt also is planned.

SCOTT BURNS

Yes, some save too much for retirement

By Scott Burns

Q. I am 36 years old with an annual salary of $24,000. I am married and have a 3-year-old daughter. We have an additional income of $167 per month from the sale of a prior home. My wife no longer works. At present we have $55,000 in CDs and passbook savings; $32,000 in various IRA accounts invested in mutual funds and CDs; some shares of Xerox; and $25,000 in a company 401k plan. We also own our home which is sitting on prime commercial property. We have been offered four times what we paid for it about eight years ago which was $45,000. This does not include $6,000 in zero coupon bonds and some cash value insurance.

Burns

I am now putting 15 percent of my annual salary into the company 401k fund and the company is matching the first 6 percent at a rate of 50 cents on the dollar.

Sometimes I feel like we are saving too much... at times we only have a few dollars in our checking account. Our objective is to retire at 60 years of age and enjoy our life a little without having to worry. Am I saving too much for our objective? — R.C., Snyder, Texas.

A. In a word, YES. You listed $118,000 in financial assets, nearly five years of your current income. Let's be conservative and call it four years. Let's also assume your money will grow at a compound rate of 8 percent, doubling every 9 years.

Assuming a reasonable investment return, YOUR CURRENT SAVINGS will grow enough to replace your current earning power at age 60. Social Security at age 62 provides a safety margin, as does paying off your home mortgage.

We could, of course, add a lot of worry factors. Inflation will affect the outcome. Your income could rise faster than your investment fund, etc. But I feel very prudent in suggesting that you reduce your savings through your 401k plan to 6 percent of your income. With the company contributing 50 percent this means, in effect, that you are saving at a 9 percent rate relative to your income. This rate will accumulate a great deal in the next 24 years.

To give you some idea of the power of 401k plan saving, I built a model using Microsoft Excel that allows me to put in your current salary, an assumed rate of income growth, an assumed rate of inflation, the percent of salary saved, the company percent matching contribution, the return on the fund before retirement and after retirement. Here's what it shows for you:

Your $24,000 income, if it only matches 4 percent inflation, will grow to $61,500 a year by the time you are 60; your personal 401k contributions will grow from $1,440 a year to $3,691 a year and the fund will grow to $323,500... or more than 5 years of your final income. In other words, reducing your savings rate to 6 percent of current income will produce a fund that will — alone — replace 40 percent of your final income at retirement. That is a significant margin of safety.

None of this counts the very large cache of value you have in your home. If it is now valued at $180,000 you could sell it and replace it with an equivalent home in a residential neighborhood. You could pay for that home in cash, pay any capital gains taxes due from the sale, and still have a large sum of cash to reinvest. Viewed as a separate fund and invested in growth stocks it would produce enough income to pay all the ongoing costs of living in the new house, forever.

What's the bottom line?

With a little effort, you can increase your standard of living substantially, reduce your savings, AND still have a very secure future.

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices dipped slightly this morning as the stock market moved into its third day of light trading.

Market watchers said the sluggish activity shows investors are waiting for movement on interest rates, but not anticipating what the Federal Reserve might do.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 0.24 to 2,893.32 by noon on Wall Street today. The Dow had gained 11.38 Tuesday as it rebounded from a 53.71 point drop Monday.

Advancing issues were about even with losers on the New York Stock Exchange, with 638 up, 632 down and 572 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 64.76 million shares as of noon EDT today.

Big Board volume totaled 134.93 million shares Tuesday, against 133.47 million Monday.

Institutional investors have been largely absent from this week's activity as concern over interest rates and corporate earnings have slowed their buying, analysts said.

"It's a period of marking time and waiting for things to happen," said Edwin Kantor, chairman of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. "They expect some easing (of monetary policy by the Fed) but nobody knows the timing. ... A lot of people are just sitting on the sidelines waiting for the other shoe to drop."

Canadian Pacific was up ⅛ at 18 as the most active stock on the NYSE this morning. Officials at the Montreal-based transporation company did not immediately return telephone calls seeking comment.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

You can not own real estate directly in IRA

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am 63 and retired. My wife is 60 and is going to retire in two years. At that time, we plan to move to a three-acre plot of land we own just outside a small Texas city. Another three-acre parcel adjoining ours is for sale.

Can I use part of my individual retirement account to buy that land and still keep it in my IRA?

Doyle

A. Nope. You cannot own real estate directly in your IRA. In theory, you could have the bank, brokerage firm or whatever other outfit is your IRA custodian place the land in trust in your IRA. But that would be mighty complicated and expensive.

In practice, the only way you can have real estate in your IRA is by investing in a real estate limited partnership or a real estate investment trust. But I would caution against going either of those routes.

Over the past couple of years, newspapers have been full of horror stories detailing how investors have taken financial beatings in real estate limited partnerships. Even now, things apparently are getting worse.

You don't need a terribly long memory to recall that this is a repeat of what happened in the 1970s to real estate investment trusts. REITs were investment disasters back them. Although some have recovered, most did not. Many went belly up and out of business.

If you have your hearts set on those additional three acres and can buy at a good price, I say do it. It could turn out to be a wise investment. And, although six acres is a small spread by Texas standards, it should keep you busy in retirement.

You and I will then share a common bond, as I am about to relearn farming. With our daughter and her husband, my blue-eyed finance officer and I have purchased 12 acres and a 100-year-old farmhouse in the Appalachian foothills.

Q. What are the advantages and disadvantages of purchasing mutual fund shares, with 100 percent reinvestment, for my IRA?

A. Let's get the disadvantages out of the way first. If you choose a "load" fund, up to 8.5 percent of your IRA contributions can go to pay commissions. Except for money market mutual funds, there is risk the values of mutual fund shares will drop.

You can beat the first disadvantage by investing in a true no-load mutual fund, which has no commission at the time of purchase, no rear-end load in the form of redemption fee or contingent deferred sales charge when shares are cashed in and no 12b-1 plan constantly eroding share value.

You can't automatically shunt aside the risk that comes with most mutual funds. However, risk is accompanied by potential reward. And most mutual funds have produced profitable investment results for their long-term shareholders. That is the funds' basic advantage.

Each time you reinvest a mutual fund dividend and/or capital gain distribution you purchase additional full and fractional shares. You then have the power of compounding working for you.

Also, a fund gives its shareholders diversification at reasonable cost. Diversification because each mutual fund usually holds many different investments, thereby spreading risk. Although some are higher, most mutual funds keep their annual operating expenses below 1 percent of fund assets.

Q. I am 20 years old. I am considering putting half of my annual IRA contribution into a mutual fund and the other half into a bank IRA to reduce risk. What do you think of that?

A. It's a conservative way to go. I can't fault it, if you are extremely cautious in your investment thinking. However, I do feel a young person should be willing to take more risks and reach for greater financial rewards. Give some thought to putting your entire IRA contributions into a mutual fund with growth in value as its investment objective.

FIGHT: New rules could harm livestock, humans

(From 1E)

The proposed changes have the three Midlanders — as well as other breeders across the country — wondering what new product or procedure has been devised since last August that guarantees the birds are free of disease and parasites that could be fatally transmitted to livestock and poultry, and even humans. And they say there is no way to determine if imported eggs are disease-free as well, without sacrificing them to laboratory tests.

They're also skeptical of the proposed safeguards, particularly the credibility of the certificates required from veterinarians in the country of origin, and say more than one quarantine location would be needed.

As Traweek put it, "I don't believe any import like this can be controlled to the point you can be sure diseases are eliminated."

They fear the proposals were made to benefit a small number of importers who are in the business to make a lot of money quickly to the detriment of breeders — like Kimsey, Traweek and Lehenbauer — who are willing to invest and earn a slow, long-term return on their birds.

"This industry could turn the Texas economy around, especially for farmers, ranchers, and even oilmen who need another source of revenue," Lehenbauer stated.

Agreed Traweek: "This industry can have a long-term impact. The Texas Department of Agriculture is predicting it could be a $1 billion industry in Texas alone in a few years. These rules could nip that in the bud."

He went on to predict that it could be only five to six years before the industry matures enough to start production — processing the ostriches for their meat, hide and feathers.

Given the short notice of the proposed revised rule — publication was May 30 and the period for comment ends June 29 — members of the American Ostrich Association, National Ostrich Breeders Association, Western Region Ostrich Association, Southwest Ostrich Breeders Association and the American Emu Association are rushing to gather support for their opposition to the proposal.

Members of the various associations and the 2,200 subscribers to "Ostrich News" are urged to write their congressmen and senators to voice their opposition to the rule revisions before the June 29 hearing.

BOOM: Horizontal spreads

(From 1E)

100,000 barrel Spindletop, the Winn well is the second in the past three weeks to come in at potentials higher than anything recorded in the past 50 years. Meridian recently announced a 12,254 barrel completion in the Chalk.

Since November of 1989, Winn Exploration has potentialed horizontal wells for 5,472 barrels, 5,388 barrels and 3,600 barrels. The allowable on the wells will be around 1,400 barrels per day. All of the wells have been drilled on a single 8,891 acre lease in Zavala County.

Wells in the Panhandle field will certainly not potential nearly as high as the Austin Chalk wells, according to Serfco, but any increase will be substantial over the present 10 barrels per day that most of the wells are producing. In terms of drilling, even more rigs could be working in the Panhandle than the Austin Chalk, because every well could become a target for at least one horizontal lateral.

Future Energy, a Dallas-based, oil company has a rig ready to drill a 1,500 foot horizontal lateral in the same area, and has been waiting the outcome of the Serfco well.

"We have 180 wells right here in this vicinity that could be potential candidates," said Riley. "We will just have to wait and see how production holds up." He said the economics for kicking off a horizontal boom in the Panhandle were a matter of costs and sustained production. Riley noted that drilling the 871-foot horizontal drain hole was expensive and slow drilling, but it appeared that the economics were in order. "If the Brown Dolomite, at 3,300 feet, proves economical, so will other formations," said Riley.

Riley noted that the wells was a success even though it did not intersect with the vertical well 871 feet away: "We missed it by 12 feet, but that was well within our parameters."

Communication between the drain hole and the vertical well was established by a nitrogen-foam frac in the vertical well. "Communication was so good that at 800 psi the frac blew foam, out of the horizontal lateral and all over the countryside."

The drain hole was completed with a slotted liner and stimulation.

The completion technique will be marketed by Serfco to stripper operations as Low Pressure Alternative Completion Technology or (LPRACT).

Cost of crossing from Mexico to U.S. increases

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The cost of crossing from Mexico to the United States increased Monday, surprising hundreds who cross the border each day to shop, work or visit family.

"They (bridge crossers) are mad. They are very mad," said Efren Luna Salgado, Mexican customs operations inspector at the Paso del Norte Bridge in downtown El Paso. "Many who find out about the increase and don't want to pay it are just going to the free bridge."

The Bridge of the Americas in El Paso is free, but many border crossers avoid it because of long traffic lines. Pedestrians seldom use it because it is too far from the downtown shopping area.

Tolls in Ciudad Juarez went up from weekday prices of 35 cents to 55 cents and auto charges rose from $1.10 to $1.85. Weekend prices used to be higher, but will be the same as the weekday ones.

"Instead of doing more for the poor, creating jobs and giving them work, they just raise the price on everything," said Alicia Ramirez, who planned to cross from Juarez to El Paso later in the day to return her grandchildren to her daughter. "Like me, I am a poor person. Where am I going to get that kind of money? Maybe I shouldn't come."

Prices vary on bridges along the border, but all increased Monday. Cars crossing from Matamoros to Brownsville were charged $1.75, up from $1.10.

"It's robbery," said Jose Luis Avila, a Texas Cab driver. "We don't know what they do with that money."

Taxi drivers must pay about $1.75, and each passenger they carry must pay the pedestrian fee.

"My passengers are upset. They don't understand why crossing from El Paso to Juarez costs them 15 cents and crossing back is $1.85. It should be cheaper (to leave Juarez) because the people in Juarez are not making that much money."

The government said the additional revenue would be used to automatically insure vehicles against accidents and damages on Mexico's tollways for up to $30,000. Revenue also will be used to improve and build roads in Mexico.

Joe Lacambra, Matamoros Maquiladora Association president, said he received several calls from maquiladora managers in the area concerned about the increases.

The mostly U.S.-owned manufacturing plants in Mexico export cargo and have raw materials shipped by trucks crossing the border daily. In El Paso, all cargo trucks must cross at the free bridge, but at other parts of the border, trucks will be paying hefty tolls.

"It seems to go against promoting international trade," Lacambra said. But he said if the money truly is earmarked for road improvements the increases could benefit the industry.

"We make a very small contribution to the building of infrastructure that is so badly needed in Mexico. If this is the Mexican government's way of saying we are all going to share the burden of the cost of infrastructure ... it will be worth it because God knows we need more streets and more highways for the industry to grow."

An 18-wheeler would pay about $15.85 at the Matamoros Bridge, up from approximately $10. Lacambra said that could be burdensome to a company such as Fisher-Price which has at least a dozen trucks crossing every day.

Sensors help police U.S.-Mexican border

A few minutes later, a Border Patrol 4X4 met the pickup on a remote road on William Hurt's 4H Ranch east of the Antelope Wells border crossing in the Bootheel of New Mexico. A second agent worked his way around the other side of the Alamo Hueco Mountains in a flanking maneuver. The agents stayed in communication with each other and with the pilot by radio throughout the encounter.

"As soon as the pilot saw the truck, he knew who it was," said Harold Kuenstler, Border Patrol agent in charge at Lordsburg.

It was Hurt giving an Associated Press reporter and a photographer a firsthand look at the border where dozens of illegal foot and horseback crossings have occurred in the past year.

Sensors along the 30-mile north-south borderline fence were triggered by the rancher's truck, Kuenstler said.

Seismic, metal-detecting and other sensors also are placed strategically along New Mexico's 150-mile east-west border with Mexico, Border Patrol and U.S. Customs officials say.

But the sensors are well concealed, and officials refuse to describe them for security reasons.

The sensors have played a role in most of the illegal-crossing arrests along the border in his sector, Kuenstler says, and ranchers also help agents keep track of intruders.

About 1,200 to 1,500 illegal aliens were apprehended after crossing New Mexico's 4-foot-high wire border fence last year, Kuenstler says. Of those, about 1 to 2 percent were carrying drugs, he says.

"We've had an increase in horseback crossings, packing in narcotics on horseback in the last year," Kuenstler says in Lordsburg, 60 miles north of Hurt's ranch.

Kuenstler says within the past six to eight months, he has seen one rider and tracks left by dozens of others — up to four horsemen at a time.

The rider he saw was guarding a stockpile of marijuana on a ranch adjacent to Hurt's. The marijuana was to be traded for weapons.

"We had tracked a bunch to their stash site. As we were watching their stash, the horseman rode in. I do know they were receiving arms. We apprehended an M-16, AK-47 ammunition and other such stuff. They were receiving arms as part of their payment."

Juices better for dieters, study shows

By Jean Carper

If you're trying to lose weight, is it better to drink a diet soft drink with virtually zero calories or a glass of orange juice with around 100 calories?

Carper

Most people would choose the no-calorie diet soda. But the fact is, the orange juice is more likely to stifle your appetite causing you to eat many fewer calories at the next meal. That's because fructose, the main sugar in fruit, seems to depress appetite, whereas the sweetener aspartame, used in diet drinks, does not.

In recent tests, Dr. Judith Rodin of Yale University had a group of 24 men and women drink a lemonade-flavored drink with different sweeteners, including fructose and aspartame. About 40 minutes later the subjects were offered a buffet and told to eat until "comfortably full."

The fructose drinkers generally ate 20 percent to 40 percent fewer calories than those who consumed aspartame. And that more than exceeded the 200 calories consumed in the fructose drink itself, said Dr. Rodin. Further, after drinking fructose, the subjects chose fewer high-fat foods like ham, cheese and cookies.

Her conclusion: Fruit sugar before a meal sends signals to the brain, suppressing appetite.

Vitamin E and Parkinson's

Could eating a lot of vitamin E early in life help stave off Parkinson's disease? Parkinson's is a nervous-system disorder, characterized by shuffling gait and shaking hands, that usually shows up after age 50.

Some experts theorize that lack of vitamin E exposes brain cells to damage in early life leading to Parkinson's decades later.

In a new study of 106 Parkinson's patients, Dr. Lawrence Golbe, a neurologist at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, found that women with the disease were less likely as young adults to have eaten peanuts and peanut butter, high in vitamin E. Men patients had skimped on salads with dressing earlier in life. The oil in salad dressing is rich in vitamin E.

This confirms Dr. Golbe's previous study showing that people free of Parkinson's said that as young adults they ate more seeds, nuts and salad oils, all rich in vitamin E.

In a major study, Dr. Golbe and others are giving Parkinson's patients high doses of vitamin E (800 to 3,000 I.U. per day) to see if the vitamin slows down progression of the disease. A preliminary study suggested it could, but final results are not due for another year.

New questions about low cholesterol

Is it possible to have blood cholesterol that is too low? That's a prickly question among health experts. Several studies suggest that men with low cholesterol are more vulnerable to colon cancer.

A new study by researchers at the University of Oklahoma of over 5,000 men and women noted that men with total blood cholesterol under 187 and low levels of detrimental LDL cholesterol were more likely to die of cancer, notably colon cancer.

The investigators did not find a connection between low cholesterol and increased cancer risk in women.

In contrast, a major study by Cornell University researchers found that very low levels of blood cholesterol — from 88 to 165 — were not linked to more cancer deaths among a large group of Chinese.

Nobody is quite sure what it all means. Perhaps naturally occurring low cholesterol in men is an indication of other factors predisposing to colon cancer. In any event, Dr. James Cleeman, National Institutes of Health, says it does not mean men should stop trying to get their cholesterol down to prevent heart disease. His cholesterol is 165, he says, and he's not worried.

Test may warn of diabetes

By Warren E. Leary
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Scientists say they are nearing a long-sought goal of producing simple, easy-to-use tests that can screen large numbers of people to find those prone to developing insulin-dependent diabetes.

Some research groups say they believe they are only a year or two away from getting government approval to sell tests that could find likely diabetes patients.

These people could then be tested with more detailed methods to confirm their progression toward the disease.

The tests would automate the process of looking for tell-tale antibodies in the blood that can indicate, years before the first signs of diabetes, that insulin-producing cells are being destroyed, researchers said.

In contrast to the best current tests, which cannot be used to screen large numbers of people and rely on subjective visual judgments about the presence of antibodies, scientists said the new tests should work much like the tests that can scan multiple samples of blood for hepatitis or AIDS.

Being able to predict those who will come down with Type-1 diabetes, also called juvenile diabetes because it most often begins in childhood or adolescence, has gained new importance because of the possibility of preventing or slowing the progress of the chronic condition with early treatment.

With this kind of diabetes, cells in the pancreas that produce insulin appear to be attacked by a person's own immune system and slowly destroyed.

The reason is unknown, but many scientists believe there is a trigger, perhaps a virus or environmental poison, that starts the process in people who were born with the susceptibility.

SOME RESEARCHERS believe it may be possible to intervene in this relatively slow process with immunosuppressive therapy, early insulin supplementation or other means.

More than a million Americans are believed to have Type-1 diabetes, which is treated by daily doses of insulin, the substance that regulates the body's sugar metabolism.

Diabetes is a major health concern because it is a leading cause of blindness, heart attack and stroke, blood vessel and organ damage and other problems.

"Good progress is being made toward making screening tests, but it is only relevant if you can do something to stop people from getting the disease," said Dr. Noel K. Maclaren, professor of pediatrics and pathology at the University of Florida in Gainesville. "I think it is possible to screen the whole population of children, particularly those with a family history of diabetes, with tests that are likely to be available shortly to find those likely to get the disease."

'I think it is possible to screen the whole population of children ... with tests that are likely to be available shortly to find those likely to get the disease.'

— Dr. Noel K. Maclaren, University of Florida, professor of pediatrics

Drugs used to suppress the body's rejection of transplanted organs, like cyclosporin and steroid hormones, have been suggested as possible treatments to check diabetes.

Early tests indicate immune suppression can stave off diabetes progression, but the benefits vanish when treatment is discontinued.

In addition, the drugs are toxic and the American Diabetes Association and others have questioned their long-term use, particularly in children.

But Maclaren said a trial was about to begin at five medical centers to see if less toxic immunosuppressants can also be effective.

DOCTORS CURRENTLY have a battery of tests that can be used for people in danger of getting diabetes, including checking blood for the antibodies that attack the insulin-producing pancreatic beta cells or the hormone itself, and monitoring sugar tolerance.

But some of these tests are cumbersome, slow and hard to do in great numbers, experts say, rendering them impractical for large-scale screening.

Moreover, said Dr. Abner L. Notkins, a diabetes expert at the National Institutes of Health, "even if people are positive on all the tests, not all of them come down with diabetes."

Most of the proposed rapid screening tests would check for antibodies in the blood that specifically attack parts of beta cells, which are clustered together in the pancreas in structures called the Islets of Langerhans. These islet-cell antibodies are believed to play a role in the destruction of beta cells.

Researchers have long noted that antibodies to islet cells can appear years before any symptoms of diabetes. In fact, symptoms of diabetes, like high blood sugar, thirst, excessive urination and acidic buildup in the body, do not become evident until 80 to 90 percent of the beta cells have died, they said.

For years, scientists have been trying to identify the proteins or protein-like substances on beta cells that stimulate the immune system to create antibodies against them.

Finding these stimuli, called antigens, purifying them and making them in quantity would be a boon to research and a major step toward screening tests.

Some diabetics appear to show different islet-cell antibodies at different levels, and finding a common antigen that stimulates a common antibody in all patients would be the basis of an ideal standard test, experts said.

The leading beta cell antigen candidate has been a protein discovered a decade ago called 64-K, named for its molecular mass of 64,000.

SOME RESEARCHERS said more than 80 percent of diabetics have antibodies to this protein, but sometimes at levels so low they are difficult to detect.

Despite intense work by several research groups, including Laclaren's and one at the University of Washington Medical School in Seattle led by Dr. Ake Lernmark, the protein has yet to be fully isolated or characterized, nor has the gene that makes it been cloned. These steps are necessary to produce it in quantity.

Only small quantities of the 64-K protein are available from human pancreas tissue. To circumvent this problem, a California biotechnology company is using 64-K protein extracted from more abundant animal pancreases.

The protein, which is obtained from three animal species and reacts with human islet-cell antibodies, has been combined with three other proteins that react with other relevant antibodies to produce a prototype quick test, the company's head scientist said.

Allergy Immuno Technologies Inc., an affiliate of Biomerica Inc. of Newport Beach, Calif., is developing this test, which initially is planned only as a laboratory tool and not as an instrument for mass screening, said Dr. Wai-Sai Ma, the company's technical director.

Between 20 and 30 percent of diabetics develop antibodies to insulin, an added clue of disease, Ma said.

His company has also developed one of several tests for insulin antibodies and, he said, when a patient shows positive responses to both tests, there is an 85 to 90 percent chance of identifying a person who will become an insulin-dependent diabetic.

FDA not enforcing prescription drug laws, panel told

By Mike Christensen
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal efforts to curb the market in illegal prescription drugs have largely collapsed in recent months, law enforcement officers told a House subcommittee Wednesday.

As a result of inaction by the Food and Drug Administration, the volume of mislabeled, expired or counterfeit drugs in circulation "is almost as big as when we first discovered it in the early '80s," said C. Richard Allen, senior agent for the Georgia Drugs and Narcotics Agency.

The danger to the public is that these medicines are reaching the shelves of unsuspecting pharmacies across the country.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Energy and Commerce oversight subcommittee, made it clear he blames Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan's decision last winter to give the FDA responsibility for all criminal investigations.

"No one is really enforcing the law," Allen told the subcommittee. "Over all, we have gotten virtually nothing from the FDA in the past three years but additional complications to an already complicated problem."

Similar testimony in 1986 from state agents struggling to control a vast illegal drug network led to the Prescription Drug Marketing Act, which strengthened the federal hand in dealing with drugs diverted from the normal marketing chain or repackaged and sold under counterfeit labels.

A year ago, Sullivan formally put the prosecution of serious violations in the hands of his inspector general. According to Dingell's subcommittee, the inspector general has referred about 1,200 cases a year for prosecution, while the FDA last year referred 16.

Defective gene may explain albinos

BOSTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered a specific genetic defect that causes the pale skin and white hair of people who are albinos.

The discovery should help doctors tell parents before birth whether their babies are likely to have this inherited condition.

Doctors from the University of Wisconsin studied a family in which four sisters were albinos, but their parents and brothers had normal skin color.

They found that the sisters inherited two different genetic mutations, one from each parent. The defects were in a gene that makes a protein essential for skin color.

The researchers screened 15 other unrelated albinos, but found that only one of them had the same defects. They believe that many different mutations in this gene may cause albinism.

The research, conducted by Dr. Richard A. Spritz and colleagues, was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine

A 4,000-year-old Babylonian temple discovered by University of Chicago archaeologists in the ancient desert city of Nippur, southwest of Baghdad, Iran, may shed new light on the origins of medicine. The temple is as large as a football field and about 20 feet high.

Ancient temple may reveal more about early medicine

CHICAGO (AP) — Archaeologists have unearthed a 4,000-year-old Babylonian temple in southern Iraq that may shed new light on the role of temples in ancient civilization, a researcher said Wednesday.

The relatively untouched site in Nippur provides researchers an opportunity to examine in greater detail the role of temples in politics, economics, medicine and social structure, said McGuire Gibson, a professor of archaeology.

"We really still don't understand a lot about Mesopotamian culture," said Gibson of the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute.

Mesopotamia, the area between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in what is now Iraq and Syria, was the site of several ancient civilizations beginning some 8,000 years ago.

Much of what is known about those times comes from clay tablets.

Remnants of other temples found in Nippur and elsewhere have been examined piecemeal, and have often been disturbed by illegitimate diggers who have removed important artifacts, archaeologists said.

"In previous decades, archaeologists would sort of mine in to retrieve 'treasures,' whereas the significance of this research lies in its systematic excavation" and that of its neighborhood, said Harvey Weiss, an archaeology professor at Yale University.

The research can supplement written information from clay tablets and show archaeologists "not what people say they did, but what they actually did," said Weiss, who was not involved in the dig.

Nippur was the religious heart of Mesopotamia and the site of many temples, but Gibson and his colleagues were surprised by the size of this temple, believed to honor Gula, the goddess of healing.

Gibson said he first found a corner of the temple in 1973 but shifting sands prevented excavation. Serious digging began in January.

Because of the temple's apparent importance in the city, Gibson and his colleagues hope to find new evidence about Babylonian medicine.

They have only uncovered about a sixth of the temple's foundation, estimated to be 100 yards long and 40 yards wide. But already they have discovered baked clay figurines in the shapes of humans and dogs inside the structure.

"One figurine shows a man clutching his throat; another shows a man holding his stomach," Gibson said. "They're obviously showing Gula where it hurts."

The dog figurines may have been left to honor the goddess, since dogs were associated with Gula, Gibson said.

Several dozen burials of real dogs previously had been discovered at a temple to Gula in Isin, where a team of German archaeologists are conducting a dig.

There was a highly developed system of health care during the period in which the temple existed. Doctors prescribed herbs and when the herbs didn't work, there were magicians who performed exorcisms or other spiritual intercession, said William Biggs, a University of Chicago professor who studies ancient writing on clay tablets.

But that information is based largely on written information from early clay tablets, the equivalent of modern day letters, said Biggs.

The best possible discovery would be medical texts, which might have been stored in the temple, Biggs said.

"I think if we found a medical archive, that would be tremendously important because most of the medical texts we have are from 800 years later," Biggs said.

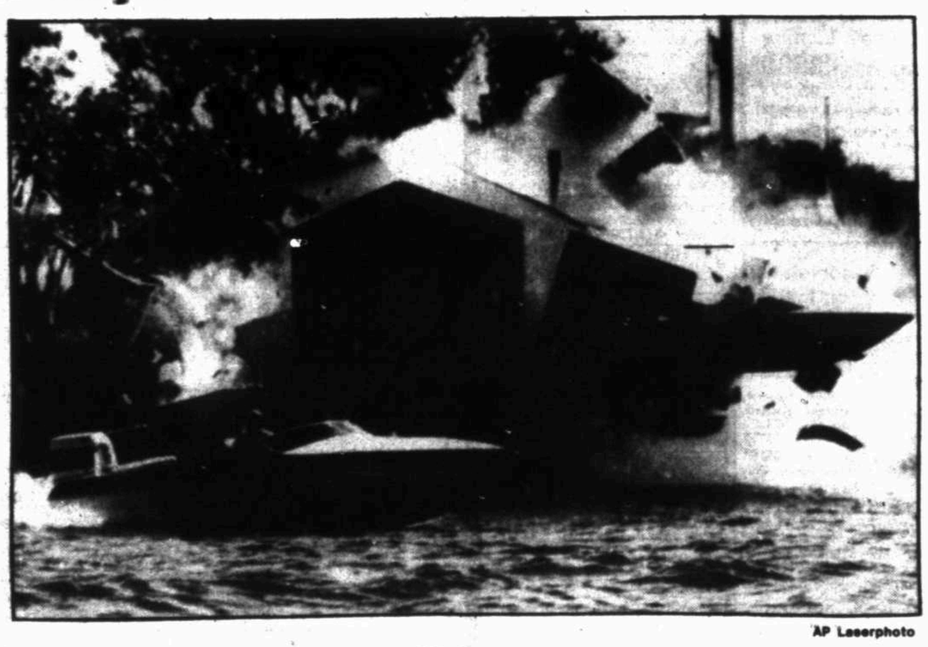

Excavation of previous temples have unearthed "thousands" of texts related to the administration of the temple, including loans made to citizens, and the Gula temple's untouched status makes it a potential treasure chest of such finds, Biggs said.

Archaeologists also will explore the area around the temple to learn more about the daily lives of those who worked there.

"We'll see a bigger picture ... the whole organization of the temple and how it functions and how it relates to other temples in the city," Biggs said.

Digging is at a lull during the hot summer months, but Gibson said he will return to the site in January 1991 to continue the examination.

Archaeologists from the Oriental Institute have been digging in Nippur for 40 years under an agreement with the Iraqi government, Gibson said.

Stuntman Geoff Carrington, visible against foliage, left background, flies through the air as a water ski stunt for Fox television goes awry at Seaworld Lake, Australia, 70 miles outside Brisbane Wednesday. Carrington, 30, suffered serious internal injuries when his towboat failed to reach the proper speed for the stunt, which called for him to jump through a specially constructed exploding break-away building.

Water-skier hurt during stunt

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A water-skiing stuntman was seriously injured Wednesday when a stunt being filmed for a U.S. television production went wrong.

Geoff Carrington, 30, who holds several world records for water-skiing, was to hit a ramp and soar over the speedboat towing him. The boat was then to lift off from a second ramp and fly into a specially constructed bait shop near the edge of the water.

Several practice runs went well, but during the actual filming the boat slowed unexpectedly as it hit the second ramp. This threw Carrington off-course and into a pier.

A medical team treated Carrington for more than 15 minutes before he was airlifted to the Gold Coast Hospital, where he was undergoing treatment for internal injuries.

The attempted stunt, which also called for the bait shop to explode with pyrotechnics when hit by the speedboat, was one of six stunts planned for a Fox Television special.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Thatcher along for rescue trip

FOWEY, England (AP) — A rescue boat carrying British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on Wednesday dashed to the aid of a yacht battling high seas off southwest England.

Thatcher had just witnessed a 10-minute Royal Navy air-sea rescue demonstration from aboard the 44-foot Faithful Forester when the lifeboat was called into action.

She watched from the cabin as the crew delivered a salvage pump to the 32-foot sloop Slipshod, which was taking on water a half-mile from the entrance to Fowey harbor, in eastern Cornwall.

"There was a yacht in trouble with a loose keel so we went out to see if it was all right," Mrs. Thatcher said.

Gary Heward, 24, from Southampton, one of the Slipshod's five-man crew, said: "We did not know anything about the prime minister until afterwards. I did not even look in the lifeboat."

Iliescu takes office

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Former Communist Ion Iliescu pledged Wednesday to be a democratic president of reconciliation, but the United States boycotted his inauguration to protest his role in violent attacks on opposition figures.

The capital was generally quiet following a tumultuous week of anti-government riots, mob rule by loyalist miners and a crackdown on dissent.

"This is the happiest day of my life," Iliescu told reporters, before swearing "faithfulness to the Romanian people and to their ideals of freedom and prosperity."

He pledged "to defend democracy (and) ... fundamental human rights and freedoms."

"I shall firmly militate for the safeguarding of civic liberties ... on our way to a genuinely free and democratic society," Iliescu said, pledging to be a "president ... of reconciliation."

Iliescu's inauguration came one week to the day after riot police brutally dispersed a 53-day rally of his opponents demanding that he and other former Communists be banned from politics for 10 years.

Casualties reported

LONDON (AP) — An earthquake measuring 7.7 on the Richter scale rocked northern Iran early Thursday and the Iranian news agency reported widespread destruction. It said high casualties were feared and that people were being pulled from collapsed buildings.

The agency said in Zanjan, a town 190 miles northwest of Tehran, that two people had been killed and at least another 25 injured.

IRNA also said an unspecified number of people were killed and injured in the Caspian Sea port of Rasht, 175 miles northwest of the capital Tehran, and that houses in Rasht had crumbled under the strain of the quake.

The earthquake struck in the Caspian Sea about 15 miles off the Iranian coast, said Russ Needham, a geophysicist with the U.S. Geological Survey National Earth Information Center in Golden, Colo.

He said according to preliminary data, the epicenter of the earthquake was 210 miles northwest of Tehran and 160 miles south of Baku, an oil port and capital of the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan.

He said the Geological Center had notified the Soviet Embassy in Washington there was "a good possibility of casualties and damage" in southern Azerbaijan.

Murderer sentenced

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A man was jailed Wednesday until at least the year 2014 for a bungled contract killing in which the wrong man was shot.

Justice Barry Beach, in imposing the stiffest sentence possible, called Roy Anthony Pollitt an evil man. "You have demonstrated you are a person without pity and are quite incapable of remorse," the judge said.

Pollitt, 38, was convicted this month of the murder of Lindsay Simpson on Sept. 18, 1984. He pleaded innocent.

Prosecutors said Pollitt was hired by another man to kill a confessed heroin supplier, Alan Williams. But Williams heard of the plot and left his house, even though he was aware that Simpson, his brother-in-law, was due to arrive there, Beach said.

Pollitt shot Simpson after he arrived with his wife and 8-month-old daughter, according to the prosecution. Mrs. Simpson testified that her husband got out of the car, argued with Pollitt and insisted he was not Williams, but was shot in the back of the head.

Donkey kills master

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A male donkey separated from its mate by its master bit the man to death Wednesday, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the donkey was so incensed when its master, Bashir Khedmat, separated him from his female companion that it went for Khedmat's throat. The animal was clubbed to death by farm workers, the agency said.

It said the incident occurred in the village of Owj-Tappeh in northwestern Iran.

Bobbing ruins eyes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Long hours of Torah study and bobbing of the head in fervent prayer make Jewish seminary students twice as likely to be nearsighted as the average Israeli teen-ager, a new study finds.

Professor David Berson, head of ophthalmology at Jerusalem's Shaarei Zedek Hospital, said Wednesday he started the study eight years ago among 167 students of Jerusalem's Kol Tora Yeshiva, a Jewish seminary.

The results showed that 46.7 percent of the boys were nearsighted and 13.1 percent were severely myopic.

At a Jerusalem high school, 24.6 percent of the students were nearsighted and 1.6 percent severely so, he said. Berson said he recently repeated the study and got similar results.

Ferry sinks in Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A ferry capsized and sank during a monsoon near the Burmese capital, and more than 50 people were feared drowned, state radio reported Wednesday.

Rangoon Radio said the privately owned ferry sank in the Irrawaddy River about 20 miles from Rangoon on Tuesday night.

The ferry, on a regular run between Henzada and Rangoon, was carrying about 200 passengers. The radio said 147 passengers were saved and seven bodies recovered by Wednesday afternoon.

The radio report gave no other details.

Vessels plying Burma's rivers and coastal waters are frequently involved in accidents due to overcrowding and failure of aging equipment.

Landslides kill 9

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Torrential rains and landslides have claimed at least nine lives and caused extensive damage in northeastern Turkey, the state radio reported Wednesday.

The broadcast also said at least six people were missing in towns and villages in an area between Trabzon and Giresun, 680 miles east of Istanbul on the Black Sea coast.

The rains, which began several days ago and subsided Wednesday, snapped power lines and interrupted communications, the radio said.

Tanker blast kills 5

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — An explosion ripped through an American-owned tanker south of Crete on Wednesday, killing five South Korean crewmen, the Merchant Marine Ministry said.

A ministry spokesman said the blast occurred about noon on the American-owned Sea King, which was empty. There were 27 crewmen on board, and five died, he said. The others were not injured, and there was no fire or external damage to the empty tanker.

The captain of the Liberian-flagged tanker radioed that he was heading for Ierapetra harbor in Crete after the blast, the spokesman said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The ship's captain said the explosion occurred in a tank but did not give details, the spokesman said. The official could not give the nationalities of the captain and other crewmen.

Steamroller kills 2

BOURG-EN-BRESSE, France (AP) — A steamroller fell off a flatbed truck that ran out of control Wednesday, smashing into a school bus and killing the bus driver and a 12-year-old girl, police said.

Three other young girls were seriously injured in the morning accident. It occurred when the driver of the flatbed lost control of his vehicle as it rounded a sharp corner in the town of Coutelieu, in southeast France.

The V-8 engine and the big car had reigned supreme in the United States since 1955. The sudden shortage of gasoline was a rude awakening. Sales of imported cars soared, as Detroit slowly got the message that "gas sippers" were needed. True, small cars like Ford's Pinto were already on the market by 1973, but there was a greater variety of Japanese and other small foreign cars, and they were luring away the customers.

When the next fuel shortage came, in 1979, American manufacturers were better prepared. Ford had its Pinto and even smaller Fiesta, introduced to the United States from Ford's European factories in 1978 model year. Chevrolet had its small Chevette (since 1976).

The Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon were introduced by Chrysler Corp. for 1978, and they were well liked. They were small, but didn't look or feel "cheap." The latest fad was front-wheel drive, and Omni and Horizon included it! The manual transmission for these cars was supplied by Volkswagen, but the automatic transmission was Chrysler-built. Engine blocks and cylinder heads were VW-built, but modified by Chrysler Corp. with longer strokes, greater displacement, "Lean Burn" electronic ignition, etc.

The MacPherson strut and coil suspension system was similar to that of the VW Rabbit, but Chrysler-built. At high speeds, the Omni/Horizon engine was not as quiet as a VW Rabbit: 85 decibels for the domestic car, compared to 77.0 for the German import. (VW Rabbits were also built in the United States for a few years.)

Motor Trend magazine named Omni/Horizon "Car of the Year" for 1978, but Consumer Reports didn't agree, giving these two a "Not Acceptable" rating in emergency handling situations. However, the Omni/Horizon cars were built for comfort, not for sports car use. With wheelbases of nearly 100 inches, they were not classified as subcompacts like the Rabbit or Fiesta.

Since bad publicity about handling had finally killed off the Chevrolet Corvair in 1969, Chrysler Corp. didn't want such a thing to happen to their new economy cars. Fortunately, most of the buyers of these cars were well pleased, and customer satisfaction is what counted in the long run. The Omni and Horizon have continued, ever since 1978, which is proof of their worth; many of their rivals' offerings have fallen by the wayside.

Another Omni/Horizon "plus": four doors, when most "econoboxes" had just two. The hatchback could be considered a fifth door.
