Midland unemployment rate rises slightly

Workforce Solutions Permian Basin CEO says 'everything looks steady'

Mella McEwen
mmcewen@mrt.com

Unemployment in Midland-Odessa inched higher in December as seasonal jobs began to come to an end.

The Texas Workforce Commission said Friday that Midland's December unemployment rate was 3.1 percent, up from 3.0 percent in November but below 3.7 percent last December. The city reported the lowest unemployment in the state, followed by Odessa at 3.7 percent — up from 3.6 percent in November — and Amarillo at 4.1 percent. The Bureau of Labor Statistics said Midland was tied with Lincoln, Neb., and Fargo, N.D., for the second-lowest unemployment nationwide, using November figures.

"The month was relatively flat with the rise due to seasonal factors," said Willie Taylor, chief executive officer, Workforce Solutions Permian Basin. "Everything looks steady — the industrial composition is steady with mining, logging and construction still 25 percent, trade transportation and utilities 20 percent. The rest of the sectors are steady, wages are steady."

Midland's job count remained unchanged from November to December, with the mining, logging and construction sector losing 100 jobs, which was offset by a 100-job gain in trade, transportation and utilities. All other sectors were unchanged.

Between December 2011 and December 2012, Midland added 2,100 jobs for a growth rate of 2.8 percent. Mining, logging and construction added 700 jobs; transportation and utilities and leisure and hospitality, 400 new jobs each; education and health services, 300 new jobs; professional and business services, 200 jobs; and government, 100 jobs.

Midland and Odessa enjoyed a phenomenal 2012 and "some say 2013 will be even better," Taylor said. "It depends on our ability to attract good, skilled labor."

The Permian Basin has all the key ingredients to attract workers: good wages, good jobs, good schools and good training facilities, he said.

He gave a presentation about the region at the Permian Basin Infrastructure & Development Summit last week in Dallas. He said potential developments like the emerging Cline Shale play east of Midland could have a tremendous impact on the area's economy and labor market.

"It looks like Midland could hold onto that No. 1 spot for some time. With all the positive news, Midland can attract good, skilled workers," he said.

Rather than focus on recruiting new workers, there should be an emphasis on

PRESERVE MAKES DEBUT

ABOVE: Midlanders and area naturalists get a tour of the newly opened I-20 Wildlife Preserve and Jenna Welch Nature Study Center on Friday.

The wildlife preserve, at 2201 S. Midland Drive, was made possible through a $1 million matching grant from the Texas Parks and Wildlife. It has a 3.4-mile trail, as well as several unimproved trails. Beginning today the preserve will be open daily between dawn and dusk and features a pavilion and restrooms. Volunteers working to create the preserve have seen monarch butterflies, badgers, coyotes, porcupines, bobcats and various reptiles.

DA: Case dismissals can drop to 10 percent

■ Officials discuss strategies for jail management, reducing costs

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

Consulting firm Carl R. Griffith & Associates Inc. presented several improvements that Midland County's jail management system could make, but the solutions require improving law enforcement agencies and alternate means to punish offenders instead of jail.

The strategies — education and alternative sentencing programs — were suggested by county officials and consultants during and after the Thursday presentation.

District Attorney Teresa Clingman said there is a way for the DA's office, district courts and grand juries to decrease their total percentage of dismissed cases from 25 percent — or 480 cases — to 10.

"(The percentage) is going to be lowered by improving the quality of the law enforcement — through training and education — that we have here in Midland," she said Friday, the day after the consulting firm presented its report.

Clingman said law enforcement agencies should be held to a higher standard, which means more evidence should be provided.

"That way, we can properly evaluate a case and make a decision as to whether this case ought to be filed and go forward or not," Clingman said.

About 90 percent of cases received by the DA's office are from the Midland Police Department, according to Clingman.

Police Chief Price Robinson said time constraints are the reason why there could be a lack of evidence.

"In some instances, not all the evidence can be submitted under the timeline given," Robinson said. "Evidence such as in-car video, photographs or witness

Council member announces 'green' nonprofit organization

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

City Council member Michael Trost, along with two founders, announced on Friday the launch of the Sustainable Research Center, an organization that focuses on sustainable strategies.

The nonprofit has seven objectives to fulfill, such as teaching sustainable strategies to businesses and building energy-efficient homes.

The organization chose Midland as its headquarters because of the city's economy and its role in international trade and travel, according to co-founder Lynn Loya.

Loya designs energy-efficient homes. Her husband and co-founder, Mike Loya, has an environmental background from his time as an advisory board member of the Las Alamos National Laboratory. The couple has moved to Midland from New Mexico.

Both of them, along with Trost and Allen Spires, who was not present for the announcement at the Petroleum Museum, want to implement changes to the farming industry, the oil industry, other businesses and Midland residents.

"I'm gonna have to be very blunt," Trost said. "I don't think (sustainability in Midland) is very good."

Trost said the city needs to learn about and use sustainable technology.

"The City Council is pretty much onboard," said Trost, who represents District 4. "It's just a matter of them actually knowing (the program)."

The organization's first component, teaching sustainable strategies to the job market, will be for all industries, Lynn Loya said.

"With the energy-efficient green build technologies, we're doing budget-driven housing," she said.

Mike Loya said the group also plans to implement solar and wind energy sources in commercial and residential settings.

One project the organization is working on in Midland is a "green" home. Construction is expected to start within the next four to six weeks, Trost said.

"This type of home has not been actually built in Midland," he said. "There are other styles like it, but not like this one."

Mike Loya said the project has been funded out-of-pocket so far, but he declined to say how much has been spent.

Trost said Sustainable Research Center — which does not yet have a permanent home — plans to try to obtain state and federal grants as well as private donations.

Michael Trost: City Council member wants to improve Midland's sustainability through better strategies and technology.

Conrad Charles Tull, Jr.

C.C. Tull went to be with our Lord and Savior on January 16, 2013 in Midland, Texas. A Celebration of Life Service will be held on Monday, January 21, 2013 at 11:00 AM at Stonegate Fellowship Church with Patrick Payton officiating and service arrangements under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

C. C. was born on May 25, 1931 in San Angelo, Texas to Conrad Charles and Evelyn Tull.

He grew up in Midland and graduated from Midland High School in 1948. He attended Schreiner Institute in Kerrville, Texas and Sul Ross University in Alpine, Texas. C. C. served with the 822nd Engineer Aviation Battalion during the Korean War. He married his High School sweetheart, Betty McCain and they were married 59 years and one week.

C. C. accepted Christ when he was 12 years old and was a member of First Baptist Church. He later joined Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Following in his father's footsteps, he managed Tull Drug. C.C. then went on to own and operate Tull's Grocery. C. C. sold Tull's Grocery in 1986 and became a partner in Stevens & Tull, Inc., with his son, Doug and close family friend, Bob Stevens.

He enjoyed the challenge of the oil business but his real passion was being the "tractor man" for Rock the Desert Ministries. He loved donating his time to the ministry by keeping the grounds of the festival field in great shape.

C. C. was a loving husband, brother, father and grandfather. He was thought by all to be one of the most trustworthy, honest and kind-hearted men. Tull's Grocery was part of many young lives in Midland. "It was as important to the LHS kids as, 'Hanks' was to the MHS kids. He will be remembered by many with fond memories" as quoted by a family friend.

C. C. was preceded in death by his parents. He is survived by his wife, Betty McCain Tull; and sister, Patsy Tull Pederson; brother-in-law, James McCain and his wife, Clarice McCain; his daughter, Candice Tull McPherren and son Douglas Ashley Tull and wife, Marcy Butts Tull. He is also survived by six grandchildren; Ashley McPherren, Miles McPherren and wife, Katie Ivanhoe McPherren, Allison Tull, Michelle Tull, Carly Tull and Sara Tull.

Serving as Honorary Pallbearers are Bob Stevens, Jim Walton, Frank Shepherd, Bert Conly, Jack James, Russ Robken, Jim Shaw and Ervin Baumann.

The Tull Family will receive guests at the home of Betty Tull, 4700 Greentree Blvd. on Sunday, January 20, from 4:00 - 5:30 PM.

In lieu of flowers the family suggests memorials be made to Rock the Desert Ministries, P.O. Box 61377 Midland, Texas 79711.

The Family wishes to honor C. C. and carry on his legacy by naming their newly acquired ranch after him. It will be called the "Double C Ranch" and is located outside of Colorado City, Texas. The Family would like to thank Greentree Country Club for their prayers, kindness, and support during this time.

Reba Jo Curry Jones

Reba Jo Curry Jones, Lubbock resident for 42 years, born May 15, 1923 passed to her rest on January 11, 2013 in Austin Texas, where she had resided since December 2009, following hip-replacement surgery. She is survived by two sons, U.V. Jones III (and wife Ettie) of Midland Texas, and Joe David Jones of Austin Texas, and four grandsons: U.V. Jones IV (and wife Laura Berger) of Midland, Bullard Williams Jones, of Broussard, Louisiana, Peter Maxwell Jones, and Peyton Daniel Jones, both of Austin Texas, and numerous nieces and nephews. Her son Daniel Ray passed in 1992, as did her husband, U.V. II in 2008, who were both cared for by her until their deaths.

Born Reba Jo Curry, daughter of F. Ray and Tommie Curry, and sister to her brothers Max Earle and Daroyl Ray Curry, grew up in Altus Oklahoma where their branch of the Curry family had moved from Waxahachie Texas shortly after the turn of the twentieth century, and where her father made his living in partnership at hardware and lumber businesses. Reba Jo early distinguished herself as a scholar, graduating two years before her class at Altus High as valedictorian. She attended Altus College, and upon the outbreak of World War II, worked for the Jackson County Draft Board in Altus from mobilization through the end of the war.

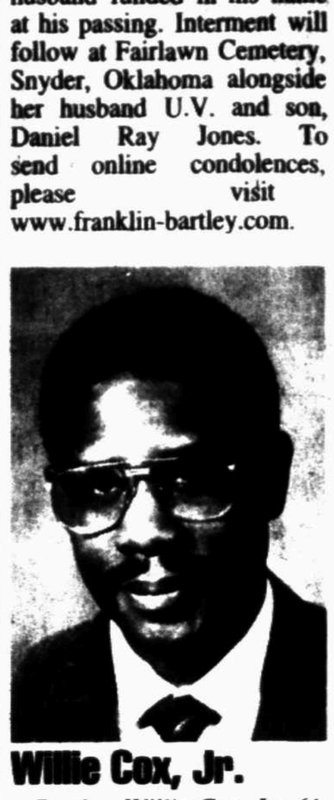
While working at the Jackson County Courthouse in that capacity, she met and later married U.V. Jones II of Snyder, Oklahoma, graduate of Oklahoma Military Academy and the University of Oklahoma Law school, and then Kiowa County Attorney. In 1945, after moving to Snyder, she delivered her first of three sons U.V. Jones III, followed by Daniel Ray Jones in 1950 and Joe David Jones in 1957. In 1959, the family relocated to Seattle Washington where her husband left his public and private law practice, and completed his Doctor of Law (Juris Doctor) and Master in Law Library Sciences, and then again in 1962 to Decatur, Georgia where her husband joined the faculty at Emory University Law School and again in 1966 to Lubbock, Texas where he co-founded Texas Tech Law School (then Texas Tech College) as Head Law Librarian and Professor of Legal Research and Writing, and later Professor Emeritus of the school. There the couple remained for 42 years until his death in 2008 and her retirement to Austin Texas in 2009, where she resided with her son, Joe David, and his family, in senior care, until her passing from complications of age.

A life-long home-maker, Reba provided tender care for their son, Daniel Ray Jones, whose cerebral palsy required considerable sacrifice of all else, which she provided with love and constant home-care through his difficult forty-two years, as well as raising to maturity and educating two sons, U.V. III and Joe David, while yet accomplishing the duties and activities required of a professional faculty wife, and even further service to her community through numerous contributions to the activities of First Christian Church of Lubbock Texas, which she made her family church home since their arrival in Lubbock. She was active in Eastern Star throughout her adult life.

Reba Curry Jones maintained her early academic interests throughout her life; an avid reader and student of all subjects, as well as a skilled pianist, she attained two degrees (literature and history) by correspondence despite domestic commitments that prevented a professional academic career of her own. For more than fifty years, she researched her family's genealogical history, documenting their migration to this continent and previous history, and recorded her 25th year as an active member of the Daughters of the American Revolution (Lubbock Chapter) last year. She had many good friends, kept treasured life-long correspondence, and loved all that was high and noble in life.

A devoted daughter to her parents, a life-long "Big Sister" to her brothers, a loving wife and caring mother to her sons and grandsons, her entire Christian life was devoted to family in its every root-and-branch. Brought to her rest before reaching her 90th year, her persistent and last thoughts were of her family and their welfare, not her own. A brilliant individual who chose to serve her family with a devotion that others could scarcely imagine bearing themselves, we ask that you celebrate Reba Jo's extraordinary life upon the event of her passing, in joy that her labor is complete.

Services for Reba Jo Curry Jones will be held for all friends and family this Sunday January 20, 2013, 3 p.m. at the Hodges Chapel of First Christian Church. Pastor David Mindell conducting the service following a brief viewing, Broadway and Avenue X, Lubbock, Texas, with a reception following until 5:30 pm in the Green Room. Services are under the direction of Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home. Following Reba's wishes, the family requests that, rather than flowers, any memorial gift received will be donated to the Texas Tech Law School endowment, which she and her husband funded in his name at his passing. Interment will follow at Fairlawn Cemetery, Snyder, Oklahoma alongside her husband U.V. and son, Daniel Ray Jones. To send online condolences, please visit www.franklin-bartley.com.



Willie Cox, Jr.

Brother Willie Cox, Jr., 61, of Midland, passed away Friday, January 18, 2013. Viewing will be held all day Sunday, January 20, 2013 at the funeral home. Memorial services will be held at 1:00 pm, Wednesday, January 23, 2013 at Northside Church of Christ with Brother Gene Collins, officiating.

Willie was born March 28, 1951 to Mozella and Willie Cox, Sr. in Memphis, TN. He grew up in Memphis and received a bachelor's degree from the Memphis School of Preaching. He received an associate's degree in business from Shelby State College in Memphis.

Willie was dedicated to the call of Christ and served that call to the fullest. He was the minister for the Green Acres Church of Christ in Osceola, AR for 13 years. He was then the minister for the Parkview Church of Christ in Jackson, MS. He and his family moved to Midland, TX in 2001 and he became the minister for the Northside Church of Christ for 12 years.

Willie never met a stranger. He loved to say, "You are too blessed to be stressed". He was an excellent counselor. He worked part time as a sales associate at Wal-Mart.

Survivors include wife, Renee Cox of Midland; daughter, Carla Lee and husband Ricky of Jonesboro, AR; daughter, Whitney Cox of Jonesboro, AR; god daughter, Sherdonna Bragg of Edinburg, TX; and grandchildren, Jordan Lee, Braelen Lee, Kaniya Bonnett, and Zione Scates.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Mozella and Willie Cox, Sr., 1 sister and 2 brothers.

Arrangements are under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home & Crematory of Midland. Online condolences can be made at: www.npwelch.com

Norma Morrison

11/29/1927-1/11/2013

I have lost my loving mother as she has gone to join Dusty her husband of sixty years. The good Lord has called one of the best home to rest.

Beautiful of body, mind, spirit, she was born in Vegas, Texas to Ethyl and Theodore Langley. Norma attended high school in Stephenville, Texas. After college, Norma met my father Charles R. ("Dusty") Morrison in Fort Worth, Tx. They married in Weatherford, Tx. in 1949 and moved to Bryan, Tx where Dad attended Texas A & M.

After I was born, Norma became a wonderful, stay-at-home Mom and supportive wife while Dad began his career in aerospace and electronics. We lived Fort Worth, Texas, Dunedin, Fl, and Saint Louis, Mo. and El Paso, Tx., while Mom and Dad traveled the globe employed with General Dynamics and later Emerson Electric. My parents returned to Texas; first to Fort Worth, Tx. and later to Midland where Mom entered into property management with Lincoln Property and McNeil Property. My father started his own business in Midland.

Norma was kind, giving, and loving to animals. After I returned to Midland in 2006, to care for my parents, I knew Mom as determined, humorous, loving; a classy lady.

Norma is survived by her only child and daughter Debra Lynn Morrison, M.D., nieces Lynette Walker;Kerr, Amarillo, Tx, Earleen Morrison Laminec, Dumas, Tx, Kathy Ann Morrison, Lubbock, Tx, brother-in-law John E. Morrison Dumas, Texas. She was preceded in death by her husband Dusty, her only sister Dorothy Walker, her mother Ethyl "Gran" McCurdy, and sister-in-law Katie Morrison.

The Morrison family extends their special appreciation to the physicians caring for Norma, Dr. James Corwin, Dr. David Watkins, Texas Oncology

A joint Memorial Service for C.R. "Dusty" and Norma Morrison will be held at Ellis Funeral Home Sunday, January 20, 2013 from 3:30pm.

Woman convicted in stepson's dehydration death

DALLAS — A Dallas woman was convicted Friday in the dehydration death of her 10-year-old stepson who was denied water for days during record-high temperatures in North Texas.

Jurors deliberated more than two hours before finding Tina Marie Alberson, 44, guilty of reckless injury to a child, a second-degree felony, in the July 2011 death of Jonathan James. Alberson faces up to life in prison because of a previous felony conviction.

Testimony in the punishment phase of her trial began Friday afternoon, but jurors went home after deliberating for about an hour without reaching a decision about her sentence. The jury will resume deliberations Tuesday.

2 immigrants report rapes by South Texas smugglers

The U.S. Border Patrol says two Central American women have reported being raped by human smugglers in two separate incidents in South Texas.

A Border Patrol statement Friday says a Honduran woman apprehended Tuesday in the brush by agents from the Kingsville station said she was raped Jan. 6 by three men at a stash house near Hidalgo. She was taken to a Kingsville hospital for evaluation.

A woman from El Salvador found by Border Patrol agents in Brooks County on Jan. 6 said two smuggling guides had separated her from a group of illegal immigrants in the brush and raped her at gunpoint. Then they left her behind. She filed a report of the assault with the sheriff's office.

20 North Texans indicted in drug ring case

Authorities say 20 North Texas residents have been indicted and more than 600 marijuana plants seized in a drug ring investigation.

Federal prosecutors in Dallas on Friday announced the indictments on charges of conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute marijuana. Some of the suspects from the Dallas-Fort Worth area also face money laundering counts in cases since 2010.

Investigators said more than half of the defendants have been arrested as part of the multi-agency drug suspect sweep.

No link between man in Texas and slain Arizona agent

A man held in an Edinburg jail on charges he threatened a South Texas sheriff had nothing to do with the 2010 killing of a U.S. Border Patrol agent in Arizona, according to the sheriff and the FBI.

In an interview with the Spanish language network Univision, a man identified as Gustavo Lozano Cruz claims to be a Mexican drug hit man responsible for agent Brian Terry's death. The man spoke to Univision in an interview in Monterrey, Mexico, before he turned himself in to U.S. authorities in Texas. His face was obscured during the interview, but Univision said a crew followed him to the border as he surrendered.

Terry was mortally wounded on Dec. 14, 2010, in a firefight north of the Arizona-Mexico border between U.S. agents and five men who had sneaked into the country to rob marijuana smugglers. The killing figures in the Fast and Furious gun-walking scandal because two rifles found at the scene were linked to that botched federal investigation.

James Turgal Jr., head of the FBI office in Phoenix, said Lozano Cruz acknowledged to FBI agents in Texas that he lied about being involved in Terry's death to draw attention to himself.

When asked about the Lozano Cruz's purported link to Terry's killing, FBI spokesman Manuel Johnson in Phoenix said Friday "that information is inaccurate" but declined to elaborate.

School district to train teachers to carry guns

Associated Press

DALLAS — A small, mostly rural school district in East Texas will allow some teachers and administrators with training to carry concealed weapons, making it at least the second school system in the state to implement such a policy.

The seven-member board of the Union Grove Independent School District voted unanimously Thursday evening to enact the policy, Superintendent Brian Gray said Friday. Residents asked that faculty and staff be allowed to carry guns after the Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre in Newtown, Conn., that left 26 dead, including 20 young children.

"We wanted it, our community supported it, and it's a local decision," Gray said.

The district has about 750 students at its two adjoining campuses near Gladewater, about 110 miles east of Dallas.

Officials haven't decided how many faculty and staff members will be trained to carry weapons or whether the district will provide them with guns, Gray said.

Texas law bans guns in schools unless the school has given written authorization. The state doesn't track which schools allow them, said Debbie Graves Ratcliffe, spokeswoman for the Texas Education Agency.

The Texas Association of School Boards helps local school boards draft policies. Association spokeswoman Shelley Stoll said at least two Texas districts have policies for concealed weapons, but there could be more.

The Harrold school district, about 160 miles northwest of Dallas, implemented such a policy in 2007. The school board decides which teachers and staff members can carry guns on campus. Those teachers must take additional training on shooting accuracy, hostage situations and how to clear a classroom.

Since the Newtown shootings, dozens of school superintendents, board members, even state lawmakers from around and outside Texas have been calling David Thweatt, superintendent of the single-campus, 110-student Harrold district.

"We spent a lot of time problem-solving and looking at some of the various situations that have come up" in school settings, he said. As for the need for incorporating teachers and staff into the security structure of the school, Thweatt said, "it would seem pretty obvious to me."

Opponents insist that having more people armed at a school, especially teachers or administrators who aren't trained to deal with crime on a daily basis, could lead to more injuries and deaths.

Dog rescued from drainage pipe

ABOVE: With the help of the Texarkana Fire Department, Texarkana Animal Control Officer Rocky Childress pulls a dog from a sewer drainage pipe Friday in Texarkana. Officers were notified of the dog by residents across the street. They were unsure how the dog got into the sewer, but with the help of a tag on the dog's collar, the owner, who lives in Fouke, Ark., was notified.

Convicted killer indicted in stepson's drowning

Associated Press

McALLEN — Attorneys for a woman convicted three decades ago of killing her boyfriend in California were at a loss Friday to explain her indictment this week on a capital murder charge after her 6-year-old stepson drowned during a beach outing.

Court records indicate a Nueces County grand jury indicted Laura Lee Day, 47, of Corpus Christi, on Thursday on three charges: capital murder, injury to a child with intent to cause serious bodily injury and child endangerment.

"I was taken by surprise by it," Gabi Canales, one of Day's attorneys, said Friday. "We intend to defend the charges."

Day could face execution or life in prison if convicted in the Oct. 5 death of Taylor Syring. She was held in the Nueces County jail Friday.

Asked if he thought Day's 1982 second-degree murder conviction in California would have played a role in the indictment, Canales' co-counsel, Les Cassidy, said, "I don't believe that figures into this case at all." Canales and Cassidy declined to comment further on Day's case, but said they expected her to be arraigned next week.

The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, Division of Juvenile Justice confirmed Friday that Laura Lee Feist, sharing the same birthdate with Laura Lee Day, was convicted in Orange County in 1982 of second-degree murder and sent to the juvenile detention system until she was 25.

The Los Angeles Times reported at the time that the then-17-year-old girl fatally shot her 21-year-old boyfriend in Laguna Beach after he told her he wanted to end the relationship. She then turned the gun on herself. She survived and was tried as an adult.

Court records in Maryland also show that Day, then using the married name Laura Lee Marsden, was convicted in 1993 of one count of bigamy for marrying a man while still married to another. Her six-month sentence was suspended.

Manziel gets more press after speeding ticket

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Manziel recently got a speeding ticket near Dallas and a local judge thought it newsworthy enough to post something on Facebook.

Ennis City Manager Steve Howerton on Friday issued a news release saying Judge W. Lee Johnson's Facebook post was "insensitive and inappropriate." He said Johnson could face disciplinary action.

Manziel, the Davey O'Brien winner and the AP player of the year, got the ticket in Ennis, a small city about 35 miles south of Dallas. The Ennis court did not immediately respond to a request Friday for a copy of the ticket or for details about the incident, which was first reported by USA Today.

Johnson, who has worked for the city for 25 years, posted about the ticket on Facebook. Manziel's name wasn't mentioned. Instead, the judge wrote about "a certain unnamed (very) recent Heisman Trophy winner."

Johnson did not return messages left Friday afternoon at his home and law office, and he was not in the municipal court office. Johnson is trying to reach out to the freshman quarterback to apologize, the release said.

"Receiving a traffic ticket is not a humorous matter," Howerton said. "Further, it is not the policy of the city of Ennis to indiscriminately publish the identity of traffic ticket recipients or to publicly lecture them."

Manziel has drawn attention recently for Twitter photos that have shown him drinking champagne at a Dallas club with his mom and flashing cash at an Oklahoma casino. It is legal to drink in Texas when a minor is accompanied by a parent. A club manager said nobody saw Manziel drinking.

Last summer — months before Manziel was dubbed Johnny Football as he took over college football — he was arrested after police say he was involved in a fight and produced a fake ID.

Today in history

Today is Saturday, Jan. 19, the 19th day of 2013. There are 346 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

On Jan. 19, 1953, CBS-TV aired the widely watched episode of "I Love Lucy" in which Lucy Ricardo, played by Lucille Ball, gave birth to Little Ricky. (By coincidence, Ball gave birth the same day to her son, Desi Arnaz Jr.)

On this date:

In 1937, millionaire Howard Hughes set a transcontinental air record by flying his monoplane from Los Angeles to Newark, N.J., in 7 hours, 28 minutes and 25 seconds.

In 1955, a presidential news conference was filmed for television for the first time, with the permission of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

In 1966, Indira Gandhi was elected prime minister of India.

In 1970, President Richard M. Nixon nominated G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court; however, the nomination was defeated because of controversy over Carswell's past racial views.

In 1977, in one of his last acts of office, President Gerald R. Ford pardoned Iva Toguri D'Aquino, an American convicted of treason for making wartime broadcasts for Japan.

In 1981, the United States and Iran signed an accord paving the way for the release of 52 Americans held hostage for more than 14 months.

In 1992, German government and Jewish officials dedicated a Holocaust memorial at the villa on the outskirts of Berlin where the notorious Wannsee Conference had taken place.

One year ago: Gov. Rick Perry abruptly quit the Republican presidential race.

Today's birthdays: Former PBS newsman Robert MacNeil is 82. Actor-singer Michael Crawford is 71. Country singer Dolly Parton is 67. ABC newswoman Ann Compton is 66. TV chef Paula Deen is 66. Actor Desi Arnaz Jr. is 60.

statements may not be available at the time, and then the case is dismissed. But when the evidence is submitted, then the case is re-filed."

The second solution, alternative sentencing programs, is for people who are arrested for "minor, low-level, non-violent, non-sexual-related, non-children-related" crimes, said Dick Kirkland, law enforcement manager for Carl R. Griffith & Associates.

"These are people, unfortunately in life, that either made a mistake or they'll make one or two more and (they'll never be arrested) again," Kirkland said.

A community work program, house arrest and ticketed fines are examples of alternatives that help make the jails less crowded, according to Clingman and Kirkland.

Clingman said public intoxication is one instance where there is a conflict between making an arrest and knowing that the person will sober up given an amount of time.

"When they do (sober up), do you really want them sitting in county jail for 10 days?" Clingman said. "That type of offense is punishable by a fine."

She said putting public intoxication offenders in jail will have more consequences, such as court costs, jail costs, possible unemployment for the offender and possible placement of the offender's children into Child Protective Services.

"Make the punishment fit the crime," Clingman said. "And at the same time, don't make the cost of it so onerous for the citizens that it gets into diminishing returns."

Robinson said it is at the discretion of the officer whether to arrest an offender. He said some instances, such as class C family violence, require an arrest.

"The officer looks at the totality of the circumstances," Robinson said. "Family violence class C offenders are arrested to ensure the safety of the victim or victims."

He said that citing class C offenders can't be applied "across the board."

THE COOKIES ARE HERE

Tasha Riddle, Girl Scout troop leader and service unit cookie manager, unloads cases of Girl Scout cookies Friday morning at the Midland office. Cookie sales begin today and run through March 3 for Midland's 26 troops participating in this year's sale, said Janice Hogan, membership management director.

This year's cookies — Thin Mints, Caramel Delights, Peanut Butter Patties, Peanut Butter Sandwiches, Shortbread, Lemonades, Thanks A Lots and Mango Cremes, a new mango-lime cookies infused with Nutrifusion vitamins — will be sold for $3.50 a box. All proceeds from cookie sales stay locally to benefit West Texas Girl Scouts.

Scouts will sell a limited number of cookies through door-to-door and face-to-face sales this week before booth sales begin Jan. 26.

Times and locations for booth sales can be found by entering a zip code on www.girlscoutcookies.org or by downloading the "Cookie Finder" iPhone app.

Some road warriors are standing by Boeing's 787

Associated Press

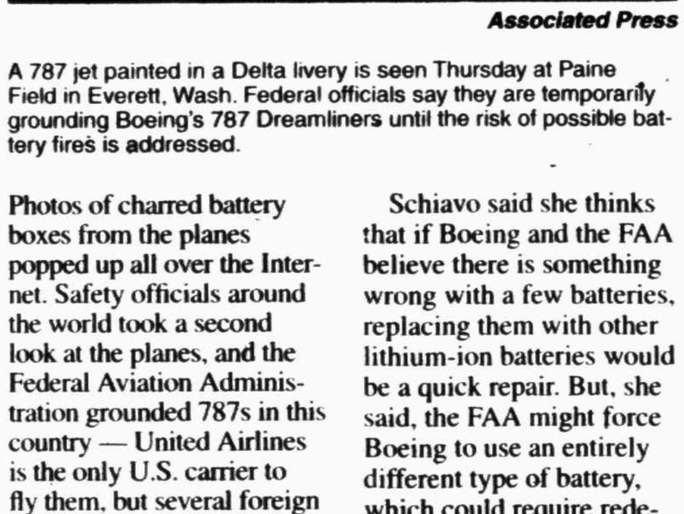
DALLAS — Some frequent fliers say they aren't worried about safety aboard Boeing's problem-plagued 787 aircraft, while many less-seasoned travelers are often unaware of what model of plane they're flying on.

That makes it anyone's guess whether Boeing Co., or the airlines that use its planes, will pay a price for concerns surrounding the 787. The planes were grounded worldwide on Thursday after a battery fire on one, and an emergency landing on another after pilots smelled something burning.

"I'm as excited today to get on a 787 as I was a year ago," says Edward Pizzarello, a travel blogger who has logged four flights on the 787, which Boeing calls the Dreamliner. "Boeing will fix this, and I'll be flying on this plane for many years."

Lee Simonetta, a research engineer at Georgia Tech, said he too would hop on the Dreamliner again. He was among the aviation fanatics aboard the plane's first trip with paying customers, an All Nippon Airways flight from Tokyo to Hong Kong in October 2011. It was a time to marvel at a jet made of composite materials that make it lighter and far more fuel-efficient, and at its use of electrical systems to do just about everything.

That was before a series of incidents including fuel leaks, cracked windshields and overheating batteries gained worldwide attention.



Associated Press

A 787 jet painted in a Delta livery is seen Thursday at Paine Field in Everett, Wash. Federal officials say they are temporarily grounding Boeing's 787 Dreamliners until the risk of possible battery fires is addressed.

Photos of charred battery boxes from the planes popped up all over the Internet. Safety officials around the world took a second look at the planes, and the Federal Aviation Administration grounded 787s in this country — United Airlines is the only U.S. carrier to fly them, but several foreign airlines use them on flights to and from the U.S.

Boeing officials and some frequent fliers say there are hiccups with just about every new plane, and the 787 was a particularly bold technological leap over previous aircraft. But will those reassurances satisfy the flying public?

Mary Schiavo, a former inspector general of the U.S. Transportation Department and FAA critic who's now an aviation lawyer, said she would not fly aboard a Dreamliner.

"It's very serious. Nobody wants to get on a plane with these things happening," Schiavo said.

Schiavo said she thinks that if Boeing and the FAA believe there is something wrong with a few batteries, replacing them with other lithium-ion batteries would be a quick repair. But, she said, the FAA might force Boeing to use an entirely different type of battery, which could require redesign work and a new round of regulatory approvals that might take months.

Blake Fleetwood, president of Cook Travel in New York, said a few customers have called in the past two days to ask about the plane but none have changed their itineraries. Of course, those flights won't involve 787s if safety regulators haven't cleared the planes by take-off time.

"A month ago we had people who were dying to get on this plane," Fleetwood said. "Now they're showing a bit more trepidation."

Jury hears terror suspect's dramatic takedown

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — At a darkened train station, the teenager and the purported jihadi pulled into a quiet lot where months of planning were to culminate in this: a plot to kill thousands at a Portland Christmas tree-lighting ceremony.

"You know what to do," the man said to the teenager, breathing heavily. "O Lord, O Lord, O Lord."

"Ready," the teenager said. "Alhamdulillah." Praise be to God.

They were 14 blocks northeast of this city's busy tree-lighting ceremony two years ago on Nov. 26, 2010. On Friday, they found themselves across a federal courtroom from each other where the man — who Mohamed Mohamud would learn was an undercover FBI agent — testified against the now 21-year-old and a jury listened to a recording of the moments leading up to his arrest.

The recording crackles as the FBI agent reads out numbers and the teenager punches them into his black disposable Nokia cellphone. He then apparently encounters an error.

"Dial it again," the man said, words that were in fact the cue for his fellow agents. Mohamud dialed again and waited for the explosion.

Instead: "FBI, FBI, FBI! Get down!"

The agent, whose cover name was "Hussein," had told Mohamud the number he dialed was connected to a cell phone that would set off six 55-gallon drums filled with diesel fuel in a van parked next to the tree-lighting. The explosion, "Hussein" told him, would destroy two blocks in any direction.

Mohamud's defense team doesn't dispute the sequence of events, nor that their client intended to kill thousands of people at the tree-lighting ceremony.

But the path by which he reached that point is the substance of the defense's claim that Mohamud was entrapped. The entrapment defense has been launched, unsuccessfully, in several post-9/11 terrorism sting operations like the one that targeted Mohamud.

He came to the FBI's attention, agents testified, when he kept up email contact with a Saudi Arabian man suspected by Interpol of terrorism.

Without the bureau's intervention, prosecutors say the already-radicalized Mohamud would almost certainly have found a way to reach al-Qaida or one of its affiliates and commit an act of terror in the U.S.

Nonsense, Mohamud's attorneys said in opening statements and cross-examinations of prosecution witnesses. He was a 17-year-old when his emails were identified by the FBI, a teenager with grand but muddled ambitions of achieving some sort of fame in the Islamic world.

Jurors had by Friday heard the details of the undercover sting operation and testimony from the men who led it. "Youssef," another undercover agent testifying under a pseudonym, said he encountered an angry young man at the outset of the sting on July 30, 2010.

But "Youssef" said he didn't believe Mohamud was truly capable of violence. Not yet. It wasn't until an August 2010 meeting in which Mohamud picked the tree-lighting ceremony as a target that "Youssef" became concerned that he was dealing with a potentially dangerous person.

After that meeting on Aug. 19, 2010, at least one agent or handler left his or her recorder running. The agents were heard saying it was "fantastic" that Mohamud had identified a "sexy" terrorist target, according to transcripts of the meeting quoted by Mohamud's defense team.

That plays in direct contrast to the FBI agents' assertions that they kept hoping Mohamud would turn his back to violence and instead choose a different option offered by the agents: Pray five times daily, get an engineering degree, fundraise for al-Qaida.

Instead, they say, he insisted on becoming "operational," at first even asking to be a martyr before the agents talked him out of it. It was a theme that they said continued throughout the sting: Agents offered peaceful options, Mohamud repeatedly chose violence.

UNEMPLOYMENT

the local workforce and ensure the area provides strong training opportunities, Taylor said.

Don Ritter, chief executive officer of Dallas-based Endurance Resources, is counting on Midland's strong oil and gas industry as he prepares to open a new office in downtown Midland. With $100 million in equity funding from Lime Rock Partners, he said the company has plans to develop its acreage position on the Permian Basin.

He has hired M.A. "Manny" Sirgo as vice president of operations and will be looking for a drilling engineer, completions engineer, and land and geotech specialists.

"This is wave No. 1," he said.

The company will later add administrative and office staff and increase its technical staff. He also has accounting, reservoir/finance tech and division order analyst opportunities in the Dallas office.

"We've had no trouble attracting the first few folks we've needed," Ritter said. "I think there will be plenty of opportunity, and I look forward to seeing the response we get. Anyone in the industry with good skills and a good work ethic can find a job."

AT&T, which recently opened a second retail store at Midkff Road and Wadley Avenue, has 18 positions available in Midland primarily retail sales, but including technical positions for its wireless technology services, including cellular phones to cable. The company offers paid training and competitive salaries and benefits.

Statewide, the unemployment rate dropped to 6.1 percent from 6.2 percent in November, the fourth consecutive month of declines. There were 4,100 jobs added in December, bringing the total new jobs added over the past year to 260,800.

While Midland had the lowest unemployment, Brownsville-Harlingen and McAllen-Edinburg-Mission had the highest at 10.3 percent each.

FROM WIRE REPORTS

HOUSTON

US rig count drops this week by 12

Oilfield services company Baker Hughes Inc. says the number of rigs actively exploring for oil and natural gas in the U.S. dropped by 12 this week to 1,749.

The Houston-based company said in its weekly report Friday that 1,316 rigs were exploring for oil and 429 for gas. Four were listed as miscellaneous. A year ago, Baker Hughes counted 2,008 working rigs.

Of the major oil- and gas-producing states, North Dakota gained five rigs, Pennsylvania increased by four and Arkansas by two.

Meanwhile, Texas declined by 11 rigs, Oklahoma three, New Mexico two, and Colorado, Louisiana and Wyoming one each.

Texas had 813 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas this week.

California and West Virginia were unchanged.

NEW YORK

Oil little changed, investors weigh global economy

The price of oil remained at a four-month high Friday after new data showed China's economy rebounded and a global demand forecast rose.

Benchmark oil for February delivery rose 7 cents to finish at $95.56 per barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the highest since Sept. 17, when crude was above $96 a barrel.

Prices have remained steady at the pump, however, with the average price for a gallon of regular drifting down from $3.31 a week ago to $3.29 on Friday. That's right about where it started the year.

On Friday the global economy took center stage for energy traders. The economy of China, the second largest energy consumer in the world behind the U.S., grew by 7.9 percent in the fourth quarter, up from the previous quarter's 7.4 percent, according to China's National Bureau of Statistics.

The prospect of more oil demand from China helped push up an oil consumption forecast from the International Energy Agency. Global oil demand is expected to rise to 90.8 million barrels a day this year, according to the IEA in Paris, which released its monthly report Friday. That's 930,000 daily barrels more than in 2012 and 240,000 more than the agency's previous forecast released in December.

Associated Press

This April 19, 2005, file photo released by Statoil via NTB scanpix, shows the Ain Amenas gas field in Algeria, where Islamist militants raided and took hostages on Wednesday. The State Department announced Friday that a Texas man at the facility was killed during a standoff.

State Dept.: Texas man dead in Algerian gas plant standoff

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — One American worker at a natural gas complex in Algeria has been found dead, U.S. officials said Friday as the Obama administration sought to secure the release of Americans still being held by militants on the third day of the hostage standoff in the Sahara.

How Frederick Buttaccio, a Texas resident, died was not noted in a statement from State Department spokeswoman Victoria Nuland. A spokesman for the Buttaccio family in the Houston suburb of Katy declined to comment.

"We express our deepest condolences to his family and friends," Nuland said. "Out of respect for the family's privacy, we have no further comment."

It was not immediately clear whether Buttaccio was the only American killed in the hostage standoff.

U.S. officials told The Associated Press that Buttaccio's remains were recovered Friday. Officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they weren't authorized to speak publicly on the matter.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said she spoke by telephone with Algerian Prime Minister Abdelmalek Sellal to get an update on Americans and others in danger at the sprawling Ain Amenas refinery 800 miles south of Algiers. She said the "utmost care must be taken to preserve innocent life."

Clinton talked to reporters after the Obama administration confirmed that Americans were still being held hostage, even as some U.S. citizens were being flown out of the country for recovery in Europe. The Algerian state news agency reported that 12 hostages had been killed since Wednesday's start of an Algerian rescue operation, and world leaders steadily increased their criticism of the North African country's handling of the attack.

Clinton, however, defended Algeria's action. "Let's not forget: This is an act of terror," she told reporters in Washington. "The perpetrators are the terrorists. They are the ones who have assaulted this facility, have taken hostage Algerians and others from around the world as they were going about their daily business."

Earlier Friday, Algeria's state news service reported that nearly 100 of the 132 foreign workers kidnapped by Islamic militants were free. That number of hostages at the remote desert facility was significantly higher than any previous report, but questions remained about the fate of more than 30 other foreign energy workers.

BP evacuated one American, along with other foreign workers, to Mallorca, Spain, and then to London. And an American official said a U.S. military C-130 flew a group of people, including some lightly wounded or injured, from Algiers to a U.S. facility in Europe on Friday.

Lawmakers: Give counties more North Dakota oil tax money

Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — The 17 oil-producing counties that have helped swell North Dakota's coffers to record levels should get a larger share of production tax revenues to improve infrastructure strained by rapid energy development, a group of lawmakers proposed Thursday.

House Minority Leader Kenton Onstad joined lawmakers from both parties in introducing a measure they called a "catch up and plan initiative." It would redirect to those counties a one-time $2.4 billion payment from the oil production tax, or about 80 percent of the entire fund over the next two years.

Funding for oil-producing counties in recent years hasn't come close to meeting the needs for such things as road building and repair, utilities, housing and schools, he said.

"There are infrastructure needs that should have been addressed six years ago," said Onstad, D-Parshall.

The state currently trails only Texas in oil output. North Dakota has risen from the ninth biggest oil state just six years ago with improved horizontal drilling techniques in the rich Bakken shale and Three Forks formations in the western part of the state.

Gov. Jack Dalrymple's $12.8 billion budget proposes that $532 million be allocated to oil-producing counties over the next two years. The Republican governor's plan also includes 171 new state employees, including more law enforcement, court, health and regulatory workers to monitor the growing energy industry. Dalrymple's budget also includes about $1 billion in road work in western North Dakota.

Dalrymple spokesman Jeff Zent said the governor's budget also includes $214 million in so-called energy-impact grants to communities affected by oil development.

Onstad said there are more than $828 million in immediate infrastructure needs in Williams County, which currently is the biggest oil-producing county in the state. Money would be divided between counties based on the percentage of their oil output, said Onstad, whose district is in Mountrail County, which has gone back and forth with Williams County as the state's top oil-producing county.

Onstad's bill is co-sponsored by Republican Reps. David Drovdal, of Arnegard and Keith Kempenich of Bowman, both of whom are from oil-producing counties. Sens. John Warner, D-Ryder, and John Andrist, R-Crosby, also have signed on the bill and are from oil-rich counties.

Government again delays proposed fracturing rule

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department is again delaying a proposed rule that would require companies drilling for oil and natural gas on federal lands to publicly disclose chemicals used in hydraulic fracturing operations.

The Obama administration first proposed a fracturing rule last May, with a final rule expected by the end of the year. Officials later revised the timeline to early 2013.

On Friday, the department pushed the deadline back again, announcing plans for a second draft version by the end of March, with publication of a final rule not expected until late 2013.

Interior Department spokesman Blake Androff said the administration is committed to responsible expansion of domestic oil and gas production, but said it is important that the public have confidence that proper environmental protections are in place.

POLITICS BRIEFS

FROM WIRE REPORTS

SOUTH CAROLINA

Stephen Colbert's sister will enter congressional race

No joke: Comedian Stephen Colbert's sister is running in earnest for a vacant South Carolina congressional seat.

Campaign manager Bill Romjue said Friday that Elizabeth Colbert-Busch plans to file next week and make a formal announcement. She did not immediately return messages from The Associated Press.

Colbert-Busch will file as a Democrat seeking the vacant 1st District seat. Colbert-Busch is a Charleston native like her brother and development director at the Clemson University Restoration Institute in nearby North Charleston.

One other Democrat and at least 10 Republicans are seeking the seat along South Carolina's south coast.

GOP candidates include former Gov. Mark Sanford who is returning to politics four years after an affair with an Argentine woman was exposed.

Former Bachmann aide files complaint to FEC

DES MOINES — A former aide to Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann says he's filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission, claiming the one-time presidential challenger made improper payments to an Iowa state senator.

Peter Waldron says in a letter he sent Monday to the FEC that Bachmann paid Sen. Kent Sorenson thousands of dollars a month through a third party. Sorenson, a Republican from Milo, once served as the Iowa state chairman for Bachmann's presidential campaign.

Waldron's letter also claims the campaign violated FEC rules involving other illegal payments and extortion.

NEW YORK

Fox News signs Karl Rove for 4 more years

Karl Rove enlivened Fox News Channel's election coverage last year by questioning the network's declaration that Barack Obama had been re-elected. It hasn't affected Fox's desire to keep him on the air.

The network announced Thursday that it had signed Rove to a new contract as a contributor. The deal runs through the 2016 election.

House to vote on debt limit increase

Action comes with threat to cut off lawmakers' pay if no budget is passed this year

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Republican leaders Friday offered President Barack Obama a three-month reprieve to a looming, market-rattling debt crisis, backing off demands that any immediate extension of the government's borrowing authority be accompanied by stiff spending cuts.

The retreat came with a caveat aimed at prodding Senate Democrats to pass a budget after almost four years of failing to do so: a threat to cut off the pay of lawmakers in either House or Senate if their chamber fails to pass a budget this year. House Republicans have passed budgets for two consecutive years.

The idea got a frosty reception from House Democrats but a more measured response from the White House and Democratic Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada.

Republicans hadn't settled on full details, but the measure would give the government about three more months of borrowing authority beyond a deadline expected to hit as early as mid-February, No. 2 House Republican Eric Cantor of Virginia said Friday.

The legislation wouldn't require immediate spending cuts as earlier promised by GOP leaders such as Speaker John Boehner of Ohio. Instead, it's aimed at forcing the Democratic-controlled Senate to join the House in debating the federal budget.

"We are going to pursue strategies that will obligate the Senate to finally join the House in confronting the government's spending problem," Boehner told GOP lawmakers at a retreat in Williamsburg, Va. "The principle is simple: 'no budget, no pay.'"

But the move ran into opposition from House Democrats, including leader Nancy Pelosi of California, who called it a gimmick because it would set up another potential confrontation in just a few months. Votes from Democrats may be needed to help pass the measure if GOP conservatives opposed to any increase in the debt limit withhold their support.

"This proposal does not relieve the uncertainty faced by small businesses, the markets and the middle class," said Pelosi spokesman Drew Hammill. "This is a gimmick unworthy of the challenges we face and the national debate we should be having. The message from the American people is clear: no games, no default."

But Senate Democrats and the White House were more cautious and sounded encouraged that Republicans seemed to be beating a tactical retreat.

"We are encouraged that there are signs that congressional Republicans may back off their insistence on holding our economy hostage to extract drastic cuts in Medicare, education and programs middle-class families depend on," said White House Press Secretary Jay Carney in a statement. "Congress must pay its bills and pass a clean debt-limit increase without further delay."

"It is reassuring to see Republicans beginning to back off their threat to hold our economy hostage," said Reid spokesman Adam Jentleson. "If the House can pass a clean debt-ceiling increase to avoid default and allow the United States to meet its existing obligations, we will be happy to consider it."

But in Washington-speak, a "clean" debt limit increase means a stand-alone measure without additional items — such as the "no budget, no pay" idea — attached. Jentleson said Reid and his fellow Senate Democrats have yet to decide how they'll respond to the measure.

The "no budget, no pay" idea is backed by No Labels, a group started about two years ago by both Democrats and Republicans in hopes of easing the partisanship and gridlock that has engulfed Washington. Sponsors in Congress include Rep. Jim Cooper, D-Tenn., and Sen. Dean Heller, R-Nev.

The Democratic-controlled Senate passed a similar idea in 2011 when unanimously adopting a measure to deny pay to members of Congress and the president if the government shuts down for lack of an agency funding bill. But top lawmakers such as Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., have argued that the idea violates a provision of the Constitution that says Congress can't change its pay until an election has passed.

At the same time, while Democrats such as Pelosi and allies such as Rep. Chris Van Hollen of Maryland protest the idea of a short-term debt increase in the government's $16.4 trillion debt cap, they orchestrated comparable short-term debt relief when they controlled Congress in 2009.

GOP leaders, meanwhile, have been grappling with how to gain leverage in their battles with Obama over the budget.

Boehner successfully won about $2 trillion in spending cuts as a condition of increasing the government's borrowing cap in 2011.

Obama, however, was dealt a stronger hand by his re-election in November and successfully pressed through a 10-year, $600 billion increase on upper-bracket tax payers earlier this month.

Other choke points remain, including sharp, across-the-board spending cuts that would start to strike the Pentagon and domestic programs alike on March 1 and the possibility of a partial government shutdown with the expiration of a temporary budget measure on March 27.

Failing to meet those deadlines would have far less serious consequences than defaulting on U.S. obligations such as payments to bondholders, Social Security recipients and myriad other commitments when the government confronts a cash crisis and can no longer borrow to make payments.

That could cause a meltdown in financial markets and would inflame voters already disgusted with Congress.

Republicans eye new election laws

Some states consider eliminating winner-take-all Electoral College system

Associated Press

BOSTON — After back-to-back presidential losses, Republicans in key states want to change the rules to make it easier for them to win.

From Wisconsin to Pennsylvania, GOP officials who control legislatures in states that supported President Barack Obama are considering changing state laws that give the winner of a state's popular vote all of its Electoral College votes, too. Instead, these officials want Electoral College votes to be divided proportionally, a move that could transform the way the country elects its president.

Republican National Committee Chairman Reince Priebus endorsed the idea this week, and other Republican leaders support it, too, suggesting that the effort may be gaining momentum. There are other signs that Republican state legislators, governors and veteran political strategists are seriously considering making the shift as the GOP looks to rebound from presidential candidate Mitt Romney's Electoral College shellacking and the demographic changes that threaten the party's long-term political prospects.

"It's something that a lot of states that have been consistently blue that are fully controlled red ought to be looking at," Priebus told the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel, emphasizing that each state must decide for itself.

Democrats are outraged at the potential change.

Obama won the popular vote with 65.9 million votes, or 51.1 percent, to Romney's 60.9 million, or 47.2 percent, and won the Electoral College by a wide margin, 332-206 electoral votes. It's unclear whether he would have been re-elected under the new system, depending upon how many states adopted the change.

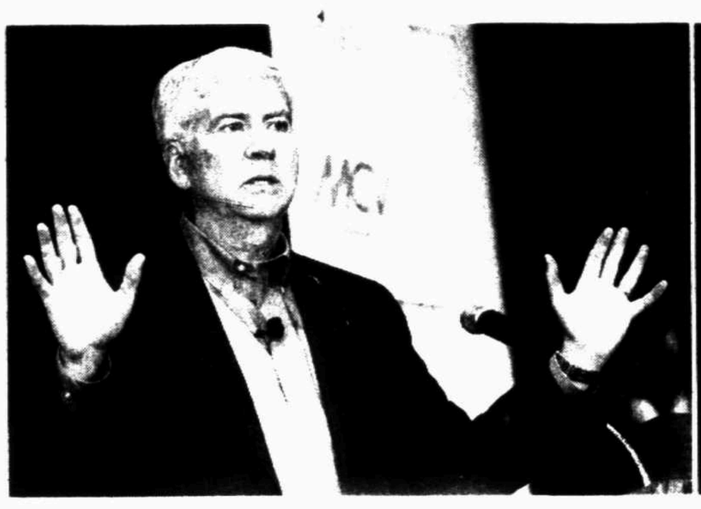
While some Republican officials warn of a political backlash, GOP lawmakers in Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania are already lining up behind proposals that would allocate electoral votes by congressional district or something similar.

"It's something that a lot of states that have been consistently blue that are fully controlled red ought to be looking at."

Rience Priebus, RNC chairman

"I am open to that idea, but I would have to hear all the arguments."

Rep. Robin Vos, Wisconsin Assembly speaker



"It could be done in a thoughtful (way) over the next couple years, and people can have a thoughtful discussion."

Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder

"We can't sit silently by as (Republicans) try to manipulate the democratic process for political advantage."

Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett

Michigan Gov. Rick Snyder told The Associated Press on Tuesday that he "could go either way" on the change and doesn't plan to push it. But he said it's a reasonable issue to debate and that he prefers that leaders discuss it well before the next presidential election.

"It could be done in a thoughtful (way) over the next couple years and people can have a thoughtful discussion," Snyder said.

Republican leaders in the Michigan Statehouse have yet to decide whether to embrace the change there. But state Rep. Peter Lund, a Republican who introduced a bill to change the allocation system two years ago, said some Republicans might be more receptive to his bill this year following the election.

"We never really pushed it before," he said, adding that the bill wasn't designed to help one party more than the other.

Democrats aren't convinced. And they warned of political consequences for Republicans who back the shift — particularly those governors up for re-election in 2014, who include the governors of Michigan, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, among others.

"This is nothing more than election-rigging," said Michigan Democratic Chairman Mark Brewer.

Each state has the authority to shape its own election law. And in at least seven states — Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Florida and North Carolina — Republicans control both chambers of the state legislature and the governor's office.

Already, Maine and Nebraska have moved away from a winner-take-all system to one that allocates electoral votes based on congressional district.

"This is a concept that's got a lot of possibility and a lot of potential," said Washington-based Republican strategist Phil Musser, acknowledging that the debate would "incite different levels of partisan acrimony." Musser also predicted that more pressing economic issues would likely take priority in most Republican-led statehouses.

In Pennsylvania, Senate Republican leader Dominic Pileggi this week renewed his call for the Republican-controlled Legislature to revamp the way it awards electoral votes by using a method based on the popular vote that would have given Romney eight of the state's 20 votes.

Democrats quickly criticized it as partisan scheme.

"It is difficult to find the words to describe just how evil this plan is," said Pennsylvania state Sen. Daylin Leach, a Democrat. "It is an obscene scheme to cheat by rigging the elections."

Gov. Tom Corbett, who supported a related proposal from Pileggi last year, had not seen the new plan and could not say whether he supports the new version, the Republican governor's spokesman, Kevin Harley said.

In Wisconsin, Republican Gov. Scott Walker has said that changing how electoral votes are allocated was an "interesting idea" but that it's not one of his priorities, nor has he decided whether he supports such a change.

It's gotten a lukewarm reception in the Republican-controlled Legislature as well. A proposal has not been introduced yet and no lawmaker has announced any plans to do so, but the state Assembly speaker, Robin Vos, first proposed the change back in 2007.

"I am open to that idea," Vos said in December as lawmakers prepared for the start of their session. "But I would have to hear all the arguments."

All 10 of the state's Electoral College votes went to Obama last fall under the current system. If they were awarded based on the new system, the votes would have been evenly split between Obama and Romney.

Democratic Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett sent an email plea urging people to sign a petition against the change: "We can't sit silently by as they try to manipulate the democratic process for political advantage," Barrett wrote. "We can't let them attack the very democratic institutions and rights that others have sacrificed so much to gain — just because they don't believe they can win in a fair election fight."

So far, Republicans have only advocated for the change in states that have supported Democrats in recent elections. The view is predictably different in states where the Republican nominee is a cinch to win.

"The Electoral College has served the country quite well," said Louisiana GOP Chairman Roger Villere, who doubles as a national party vice chairman.

"This is coming from states where it might be an advantage, but I'm worried about what it means down the road," Villere said. "This is a system that has worked. That doesn't mean we can't talk about changes, but we have to be very careful about any actions we might take."

Abortion bill would require link to ultrasounds

Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — Abortion clinics would be required to post ultrasound images of fetuses to a state website under a bill that a Nebraska senator introduced Thursday.

Sen. Bob Krist of Omaha said he introduced the measure because he wants women to have access to non-judgmental, scientific information when deciding whether to have an abortion.

The live images, provided by the nonprofit Endowment for Human Development and posted on the website of the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services, would show fetuses at various stages of growth. The state website also would provide alternatives to abortions, and a list of health care locations that offer free ultrasounds.

Jill June, president of Planned Parenthood of the Heartland, said in a statement that women should receive unbiased information on health care, but doesn't agree with posting the informational link about fetus development to its website. She said Planned Parenthood doctors provide one-on-one discussions with patients and answer any questions a woman might have.

"We oppose any legislation that attempts to interfere in a woman's ability to make her own health care decisions," June said. "The bottom line is that a woman should be able to make informed decisions about her own pregnancy without biased government intrusion."

Medical privacy rules get an update, roll out in September

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Those medical privacy rules you run into at hospitals, pharmacies and in your own doctor's office are getting an update.

Regulations unveiled this week by the Obama administration create new information rights that should make life easier for consumers. They also tighten restrictions on medical service providers trying to use patient information for marketing, and they greatly expand the list of businesses that can be punished for unauthorized disclosures.

"The government has taken pretty dramatic steps to strengthen privacy protections that previously existed for consumers," said Dianne Bourque, a Boston lawyer specializing in medical regulation. The long-awaited rules carry out a 2009 law promoting electronic medical records and updating federal privacy protections.

On the privacy front, doctors will now have to get prior approval from patients to pitch new medications or medical devices if those pitches are being paid for by a drug company or manufacturer.

For example, sometimes a pharmaceutical company will pay doctors to send all their heart patients a letter about a new medication. It may not be readily apparent to the patient that the drug company is compensating the doctor for sending the update.

The rules also create new rights for consumers.

For instance, you should find it much easier to get your medical records electronically instead of on paper. Up to now, some doctors and hospitals have been able to avoid providing records electronically by saying they don't have the capability.

"They won't be able to default to, 'Sorry, we can't send this to your home (computer) system; we have to give you a paper copy,'" said Susan McAndrew, a government lawyer who oversaw the regulations at the Health and Human Services Department.

> "They won't be able to default to, 'Sorry, we can't send this to your home (computer)system; we have to give you a paper copy.'"
> Susan McAndrew, government lawyer

Another welcome change: with your permission, your doctor can share your children's immunization records directly with a school. That simple tweak to existing rules will save parents from having to shuttle forms back and forth.

And, if you pay cash for a medical service, you can tell the doctor not to share information with your insurer. The sensitivity sometimes arises with people paying out-of-pocket for mental health counseling, McAndrew said.

The onus of complying with the new rules will fall mainly on the health care industry and contractors. One of the most notable changes is that companies that provide support services to doctors and hospitals now will face steep penalties for unauthorized disclosures of patient information.

"The compliance bar for folks who work with health care providers is much higher now," said Bourque.

The rules take effect at the end of September, after a period for health care service providers to learn the new requirements.

The original federal privacy law, the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, known as HIPAA, dates back to 1996.

Sheriff: Burglar was using sauna

Associated Press

SAN ANDREAS, Calif. — Authorities in Northern California say a man arrested in nothing but a trench coat and socks after a break-in told investigators he had been using the homeowner's sauna.

Calaveras County sheriff's deputies arrested 49-year-old Robert London this week after they responded to a report of a burglary at a home in San Andreas.

London pleaded not guilty Thursday to charges of burglary and possession of stolen property.

Sheriff's Sgt. Chris Hewitt said arriving deputies found the homeowner on top of a nearly naked London on the driveway.

The homeowner said he discovered London going through his kitchen cabinets and chased him out the door.

Hewitt said London told investigators he thought the house was vacant and that he had used the sauna there in the past.

Lee, MHS pleased after first day of President's Cup

The Lee and Midland High boys soccer teams were not necessarily feeling the urgency at this weekend's President's Cup soccer tournament.

It's a non-district tournament, but for both squads coming out with good results on Friday on their home field at Grande Communications Stadium was something both teams wanted heading into the start of District 2-5A play on Tuesday.

Lee won its lone game on Friday, beating El Paso High 2-0 with a pair of second half goals, while Midland High tied its two games on Friday, including a wild 3-3 draw with El Paso Riverside where all six goals were scored in the second half.

"At times we looked pretty good and had a lot of chemistry," Lee co-head coach Scott Hicks said after Friday's game. "At other times, though, we made a lot of little mistakes and it almost cost us."

The Rebels dodged some solid scoring chances by the Tigers in the first half, as Johnny Baeza made a key save about midway through the half. Then later in the half, El Paso High was called offsides on a solid scoring chance.

Lee, though, finally broke the ice in the scoreless game when Cesar Gonzalez blasted about a 25-yard shot past the El Paso High goalkeeper to finally break the ice.

"Once I saw the ball, I was open and I took the shot," said Gonzalez, who is a junior midfielder. "Coach gave us a quick pep talk at halftime to get into it and go hard. We were in that tournament in (Forney) and we improved every game. Today, I guess we showed up ready to play."

Freshman Leo Barba added the final tally off an assist from senior Felipe Sinisterra with less than five minutes remaining in the game. Lee improved to 1-2-2 on the season.

"I thought we played better in the second half than we did in the first, and that's what we talked about at halftime," Hicks said. "Hopefully we can come out (today) and improve on this game and be more consistent."

Midland High, meanwhile, remained undefeated on the season at 3-0-2 after its two games on Friday by playing to a scoreless draw with El Paso Irvin on Friday afternoon and the tie against Riverside. Coach Warren Cottle said his squad didn't play as well against Irvin as it had played through the early part of the season.

But against the Rangers, Cottle said he saw a much better effort in a game that had four of the game's six goals scored in the final five minutes.

"It was a heck of a game, and both teams were very good," Cottle said. "Both teams were playing extremely hard, and they are probably the best team we've played yet. It was just two really good teams that weren't

Lady Bulldogs take 15th win in a row against Lady Rebels

By Jonathan Hull

Nothing was going to keep Catarina Rendon off the court Friday, not even the flu.

Rendon was determined to play in her final game against crosstown rival Lee, and while her minutes were limited the Midland High senior post ended up recording a double-double and led the Lady Bulldogs to a 44-40 victory in District 2-5A play at Chaparral Center.

"I woke up (Thursday) in a cold sweat and I was running a high fever," said Rendon, who had 10 points and 10 rebounds before fouling out late in the fourth period. "The doctor said I was supposed to be out for two days. That wasn't an option for me. I took medicine, I drank like seven bottles of Gatorade in one day and I had soup. (Friday morning) I felt good enough to play.

"I wasn't going to miss my last game against Lee. There was just no way."

With the win, Midland High (20-8, 9-2 in 2-5A) picks up its 15th consecutive win against Lee (12-11, 8-3), including its fourth this season. The Lady Dawgs also move into sole possession of second place in the 2-5A standings and hold the head-to-head tiebreaker against the Lady Rebels, who are now tied for third in the district with Abilene High.

"Our kids have heard the whole deal about the streak and how Lee is going to keep getting after us," MHS coach Ron Berry said. "They're the ones who are going to set the tone. They've got the best backcourt. But you know what, it's 15 in a row, baby. That's all I've got to say."

The game didn't start in Lee's favor as Midland High held the Lady Rebels scoreless in the opening period of play, taking an 8-0 lead. Lee struggled shooting the ball throughout the night, connecting Grant Coffman can't even remember the joke his father, Lee coach Mark Coffman, told his team before Friday night's clash with Midland High.

"It was something about a hunter and shooting a horse," Grant Coffman said. "It was funny."

Whatever the joke was, Grant Coffman said it calmed the team down before the normally intense rivalry game, which Lee ran away with in a 56-38 rout at Chaparral Center.

While most of the recent meetings between the teams have been decided in the final two minutes, Lee spent the last two minutes Friday in a stall offense after answering the only MHS run of the second half with a 10-1 run of its own.

The win gave Lee (11-15) its second district win of the season and its second straight against Midland High (6-21), who has now lost eight straight 2-5A games since defeating Lee in the opener.

Williams, Azarenka into 4th round at Aussie Open

By John Pye
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Title favorite Serena Williams and defending champion Victoria Azarenka advanced in contrasting styles Saturday to the fourth round of the Australian Open.

Williams, aiming for a third consecutive major title, recovered from a break down in the second set to win six straight games and finish off a 6-1, 6-3 win over Japan's Ayumi Morita in 66 minutes.

The 15-time major winner even surprised herself with another serve at 128 mph (207 kph), matching her career fastest serve she hit earlier in the tournament.

"I tried to hit it really hard. I hit 207 (kph) the other day and I thought it was luck," she said. "But I did it again and I was like whew! I'm going to try to go for 210. We'll see."

Top-ranked Azarenka struggled to hold off injured American Jamie Hampton 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, and didn't help herself with six double-faults.

Hampton, who needed a medical timeout for a lower back problem before she served out the second set and winced in pain, frequently on the verge of tears, throughout the third, still managed to hit 41 winners to keep the Belarusian under pressure.

Azarenka appeared frustrated at times, but overcame an early break and fended off triple break point in the seventh game of the deciding set before clinching the match in 2 hours, 9 minutes.

"She played incredible, went for every single shot. I felt it was touching every single line," Azarenka said. "She took a medical timeout but she rips winners all over the place and I was like, 'Can I have a back problem?' I'm feeling great, but I'm missing every shot."

After wasting two set points on Azarenka's serve late in the second set, Hampton had to leave the court for nine minutes to have treatment on her back.

Azarenka practiced her backhands and

LAMESA 46 STANTON 44

STANTON — The Golden Tors scored a pair of baskets late in the fourth quarter to help clinch a District 4-2A victory on Friday night at Stanton High School.

The two teams were tied at 42 with just less than a minute remaining in the game when Stanton's Scott Smith scored what looked like the go-ahead basket. But he was called for a charging foul and the basket did not count, and Lamesa scored on its next two possessions.

Stanton, though, had a chance to win or tie the game after Cole Schroyer missed the free throw on a three-point play in the final seconds but Stanton coach Doug Gordon said the Buffaloes (18-5, 2-1 in 4-2A) could not get a shot off.

Schroyer and Smith each scored 11 points in the loss.

Midland High's Mazelle Justice dribbles around Lee's Chris Marshall on Friday at Chaparral Center.

REBELS

From 1B

11-2 run as Grant Coffman canned three straight 3-pointers, his only makes from the field, to get the offense going.

"You get one shot that goes in and then you just get your confidence up and up and you just keep making them and making them," Lee junior Jordan Williams said of the effect Coffman's baskets had on the team.

The onslaught continued in the second quarter as Lee opened up a 33-16 halftime lead — the largest lead either team had held in the series the last two years.

Midland High, meanwhile, had a hard time against the stifling Rebel defense as Lee held the Bulldogs to 32 percent shooting in the first half while forcing 11 turnovers and even drawing two charges.

Grant Coffman credited assistant coach Chris Packer for the stellar defensive play.

"(Packer) watched a lot of film, and we jumped to the spots before they were there," Coffman said. "And it really helped us out because we knew what they were running."

Williams also played a big role, pulling down 17 rebounds for a double-double to go with 12 points.

"Coach Coffman talks about having roles and jobs, and I felt like that my role was to get boards," Williams said. "I feel like I can get boards over anybody, and I feel like I did a good job with that."

After a technical foul against Lee early in the second half, Midland High pulled within 10 on sophomore Justin LeClear's second 3-pointer of the third quarter at the 4:19 mark.

But 24 seconds later, Lee got a four-point possession when junior guard Ian Johnson put back a free throw miss by Williams that came after a layup and the foul.

Then with 1:49 to play in the third, Midland High was called for a pair of technical fouls, leading to Grant Coffman sinking 3 of 4 free throws to give Lee its biggest lead of the game at 48-28.

Coffman led all scorers with 14 points while MHS senior Mazelle Justice had 13 points to lead the Bulldogs.

For Midland High, who lost freshman starting point guard Shawn Rivers to a tweaked ankle in the second quarter — he returned briefly in the third but that was it — the outlook was simple after the game.

"Practice (is) at 6 a.m.," Hardin said. "If (Rivers) misses time it won't be the first time this year will it? That's just the status quo for this team."

Lee, meanwhile, is hoping that its impressive win can be the start of a late-season run as the Rebels play five of the last seven at home.

"I don't have any idea what the standings look like," Mark Coffman said, "but I just want through the end of the year to be the best team playing when it's over with.

"We've got a lot of get-back games to get back people that beat us the first time, so maybe we can start Tuesday with Odessa High."

on 12 of 64 shots for an 18.8 shooting percentage from the floor.

The Lady Rebels ended up making more free throws (13) than field goals. Midland High also limited Lee's second-shot opportunities, outrebounding the Lady Rebels, 51-28.

"It came down to a couple plays again. We didn't box out and we were caught watching," Lee coach Morgan Moylan-Fowler said. "Our shots didn't really fall (Friday). If we hit one or two there, it's a different game. I really thought that was the best we've played Midland High. The shots just really weren't dropping."

Lee rebounded from its scoreless first period, and slowly began chipping away at Midland High's lead. The Lady Dawgs were up 16-11 at halftime and a driving layup by sophomore guard Daija Stanford with three seconds left in the third period cut Midland High's lead to 27-25.

Lee tied the game less than a minute into the fourth period when Stanford found Jackie Rivas cutting to the basket for a layup. After a free throw by MHS freshman Alexandrea Washington, the Lady Rebels took their first lead of the game, 29-28, thanks to a pair of free throws by junior guard Shay Ray with 5 minutes, 53 seconds to play.

"We found our offense with our defense," said Stanford, who led Lee with 13 points. "We weren't making shots. Once we started playing better defense, we started playing better offense."

Lee's lead didn't last long, though. Washington got a putback bucket at the 4:32 mark to put Midland High back in front and Rendon followed with a pair of free throws for a 32-29 MHS advantage with 4:01 to play.

Midland High appeared to be pulling away for good, going up 37-32 with 2:32 remaining in the game, but Stanford drilled a 3-pointer, pulling Lee back within 37-35 at the 2:21 mark.

The Lady Dawgs responded again, though, using a 5-0 spurt to put the Lady Rebels away. Rendon started the short rally with a 15-foot jumper after a nice pass from Alexis Washington at the 1:55 mark.

Sophomore post Aubrie Elliott, who had a team-high 13 points, followed with a short jumper of her own and senior guard Rebecca Gallegos capped the rally with a free throw for a 42-35 MHS lead with 39 seconds remaining.

It's the second time this season Lee had a lead in the fourth period only to see Midland High rally to win.

"We responded well," Berry said. "I thought we were going to pull away but then we made some lame-brain stuff that hurt us a bit. But, when it came time to buckle down, we pulled it together."

Texas Tech coach Kingsbury rounds out his coaching staff

From staff reports

LUBBOCK —Texas Tech head football coach Kliff Kingsbury has put the final touches on his first coaching staff, which includes five others who played football for the Red Raiders under head coach Mike Leach.

Kingsbury, a former Texas Tech quarterback who was named the 15th head coach in school history on Dec. 16, now has a complete coaching staff in place. Kingsbury said the group has hit the ground running in advance of National Signing Day on Feb. 6.

Texas Tech grads Sonny Cumbie and Eric Morris will serve as co-offensive coordinators, while Cumbie will coach the outside receivers and Morris the inside receivers. Both Cumbie and Morris had successful playing careers in the spread offense while at Texas Tech. Cumbie was the only assistant retained from coach Tommy Tuberville's staff. Meanwhile, Morris was an assistant coach last season under Leach at Washington State.

Completing the offensive coaching staff will be offensive line coach Lee Hays, a one-time coach at West Texas A&M. He was the offensive line coach at the University of Houston this past season, and running backs coach Mike Jinks, the highly regarded former head coach at Cibolo Steele High School.

Defensively, the Red Raiders will be led by defensive coordinator Matt Wallerstedt, who comes to Texas Tech from Texas A&M where he served as linebackers coach. Teaming up with Wallerstedt will be Tech graduate and co-defensive coordinator and outside linebackers coach Mike Smith. Smith comes to Texas Tech from the New York Jets and was teammates at Tech with Cumbie, and newly named safeties coach Trey Haverty, who was as assistant at TCU.

Kevin Curtis, a 2002 Texas Tech graduate who was at Louisiana Tech the last three seasons, will coach the cornerbacks while John Scott Jr., who was at Georgia Southern, will lead the defensive line.

Chad Dennis will coordinate the strength program as he has been named the head strength and conditioning coach. Dennis also comes from Texas A&M where he served as assistant strength and conditioning coach.

Cowboys add former Lions coach Marinelli to staff

Associated Press

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys hired former Detroit head coach Rod Marinelli as defensive line coach Friday, a day after the Chicago Bears said he wasn't returning as defensive coordinator.

Marinelli's hiring reunites him with new Dallas defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin. Marinelli held the same title from 1996-2005 under Kiffin in Tampa Bay, and the Buccaneers consistently finished in the top 10 in total defense.

Marinelli left Kiffin's staff in 2006 to become head coach of the Lions, who had the only 0-16 record in NFL history in his final season in 2008. His three-year record was 10-38.

A four-year stint in Chicago ended this week when Marinelli decided he didn't want to return after coach Lovie Smith was fired. New Bears coach Marc Trestman said he wanted to keep Marinelli, who was defensive coordinator the past three seasons.

The Cowboys hired Kiffin after deciding to switch back to the 4-3 defense. Marinelli and Kiffin won the Super Bowl under Jon Gruden after the 2002 season, the year after Gruden replaced Tony Dungy. The Bucs were the first team since the 1985 Chicago Bears to lead the league in total defense, points allowed and interceptions.

Under Marinelli, Tampa Bay's defensive line, led mostly by Warren Sapp and Simeon Rice, had an NFL-high 328 1/2 sacks from 1996 to 2005. In Marinelli's three years as Chicago's defensive coordinator, the Bears' defensive line had 88 sacks.

"The big part of playing the defense this way is getting people who really, really believe in it," said Dungy, who was in the Dallas area Friday for the NCAA convention. "You have to sell it to your group. And what we had back then, we hand Monte, Herm Edwards, Lovie Smith and Rod Marinelli. And they all believed."

Marinelli has 17 years of NFL experience among his 37 in coaching. He was a college assistant at Utah State, California, Arizona State and Southern Cal.

Jackalopes' woes continue in Frisco

From staff reports

FRISCO — The Texas Tornado scored five goals in the second period to break open a tight game and hand the Odessa Jackalopes another big loss, this one 10-2 at the Dr Peper Arena on Friday.

Odessa (5-30-2, 12 points) was down 2-1 in the first period as Jalen Krogman scored an unassisted goal with just under 10 minutes remaining. Justin Greenberg and Jason Eddy scored for Texas in the opening period.

In the second period, though, five different Texas players scored in the period as Greenberg, Brandon Hawkins, C.J. Reuschlein, Nick Neville and A.J. Duggan all tallied goals.

Texas (29-10-1, 59 points) added three more in the third period as Mike Mezzano scored a power-play goal in the third period for Odessa.

Odessa's most recent losing streak is now at nine games and it was the ninth consecutive game the Jacks have allowed five or more goals.

Sockers release season's schedule

■ West Texas will open season on May 11 against El Paso

serve while Hampton was in the locker room, but the break didn't help her immediately. Hampton returned and held in the next game and needed more treatment in the break at the end of the set.

Even with the pain of two herniated disks, the 23-year-old Hampton, from Auburn, Ala., went down swinging — making 47 unforced errors to go with the winners that caught Azarenka off guard and had her asking, loudly at one point, what she could do to counter them.

Sensing an upset, and stirred by the obvious signs of pain, the crowd on Rod Laver Arena got right behind the No. 63-ranked Hampton, who had never previously gone past the second round at a major.

Azarenka had her share of supporters in the stands, too, including friend and musician RedFoo who was wearing a shirt emblazoned with "We Go Hard" across the front.

If results go according to rankings, Azarenka and Williams will meet in the semifinals. Williams has won the Australian Open five times and is on a 19-match winning streak — and she has lost only one match since her first-round exit at the French Open last year.

Considering Azarenka has lost 11 of their 12 meetings, including all five in 2012, it's a potential matchup where Azarenka will have to play better than ever.

But they both have to advance to the last four, something Williams failed to do here last year when she was knocked out in the fourth round.

In the corresponding round this year, the 31-year-old American will meet No. 14 Maria Kirilenko, who beat No. 20-Yanina Wickmayer 7-6 (4), 6-3. Azarenka next plays Elena Vesnina, who beat 16th-seeded Roberta Vinci of Italy 7-6 (4), 6-4.

Elsewhere, two-time major winner Svetlana Kuznetsova advanced with a 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 win over Spain's Carla Suarez Navarro.

On Friday night, Maria Sharapova celebrated with extra exuberance after her 6-1, 6-3 win over Venus Williams, her first victory over the seven-time major winner in a Grand Slam.

"I was just really pumped," she said. "Why shouldn't I be?"

After back-to-back 6-0, 6-0 wins in the first two rounds — the first time that happened at major since 1985 — Sharapova has conceded the fewest number of games en route to the fourth round at the Australian Open since Steffi Graf did so 24 years ago.

Graf also lost only four games in her first three matches on her way to the second of her three consecutive titles in Melbourne.

willing to lose."

Riverside opened the scoring in the second half with a goal in the 45th minute. But Midland High's Nico Francino came back with a goal off an assist from Ethan Baltier to tie the game.

The Bulldogs opened up a 2-1 lead on a goal from Isaac Venegas in the 75th minute, but that was only beginning of a scoring barrage by both teams in the final five minutes.

Riverside tied the game in the 78th minute, and then MHS took the lead back when Bart Connor scored 40 seconds later. Riverside, though, tied the game with a goal with just over minute remaining.

Despite the wild finsh to the game and allowing some late goals, Cottle said he was pleased with how his team responded to Riverside's scoring.

"You could tell both teams were getting sore and tired, and things were bound to happen," Cottle said. "The character of this team is incredible, and they were fighting and continued to play. That's what makes it amazing and fun at the same time."

Anti-doping officials say Armstrong must do more

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press

For anti-doping officials, Lance Armstrong's admission of cheating was only a start. Now they want him to give details — lots of them — to clean up his sport.

Armstrong's much-awaited confession to Oprah Winfrey made for riveting television, but if the disgraced cyclist wants to take things further, it will involve several long days in meetings with anti-doping officials who have very specific questions: Who ran the doping programs, how were they run and who looked the other way?

"He didn't name names," World Anti-Doping Agency President John Fahey told The Associated Press in Australia. "He didn't say who supplied him, what officials were involved."

In the 90-minute interview Thursday night with Winfrey — the first of two parts broadcast on OWN — Armstrong said he started doping in the mid-1990s, using the blood booster EPO, testosterone, cortisone and human growth hormone, as well as engaging in outlawed blood doping and transfusions. The doping regimen, he said, helped him in all seven of his Tour de France wins.

His openness about his own transgressions, however, did not extend to allegations about other people. "I don't want to accuse anybody," he said.

But he might have to name names if he wants to gain anything from his confession, at least from anti-doping authorities.

Armstrong

Armstrong has been stripped of all his Tour de France titles and banned for life. A reduction of the ban, perhaps to eight years, could allow him to compete in triathlons in 2020, when he's 49.

Almost to a person, those in cycling and anti-doping circles believe it will take nothing short of Armstrong turning over everything he knows to stand any chance of cutting a deal to reduce his ban.

"We're left wanting more. We have to know more about the system," Tour de France race director Christian Prudhomme told the AP. "He couldn't have done it alone. We have to know who in his entourage helped him to do this."

U.S. Anti-Doping Agency chief Travis Tygart, who will have the biggest say about whether Armstrong can return to competition, also called his confession a small step in the right direction.

"But if he is sincere in his desire to correct his past mistakes, he will testify under oath about the full extent of his doping activities," he said.

Pierre Bordry, the head of the French Anti-Doping Agency from 2005-10, said there was nothing to guarantee that Armstrong isn't still lying and protecting others.

"He's going in the right direction, but with really small steps," Bordry said. "He needs to bring his testimony about the environment and the people who helped him. He should do it before an independent commission or before USADA and that would no doubt help the future of cycling."

It's doubtful Armstrong could get the same kind of leniency today as he might have had he chosen to cooperate with USADA during its investigation. But in an attempt to rid cycling of the doping taint it has carried for decades, USADA, WADA and the sport's governing body aren't satisfied with simply stopping at its biggest star. They still seek information about doctors, team managers and high-ranking executives.

Tyler Hamilton, whose testimony helped lead to Armstrong's downfall, said if Armstrong is willing to provide information to clean up the sport, a reduction in the sanctions would be appropriate, even if it might be hard to stomach after watching USADA's years of relentless pursuit of the seven-time Tour de France winner.

"The public should accept that," Hamilton said. "I'm all for getting people to come clean and tell the truth. I'm all for doctors, general managers and everyone else coming forward and telling the truth. I'm all for anyone who crossed the line coming forward and telling the truth. No. 1, they'll feel better personally. The truth will set you free."

Te'o tells ESPN: Not involved in creating hoax

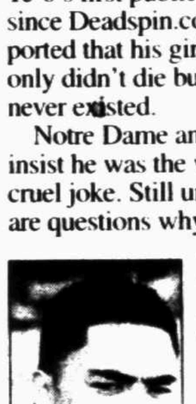
Associated Press

NEW YORK — ESPN said Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o maintains he was never involved in creating the dead girlfriend hoax.

He said in an off-camera interview Friday night: "I wasn't faking it. I wasn't part of this. When they hear the facts, they'll know. They'll know there is no way I could be a part of this."

The comments were Te'o's first public remarks since Deadspin.com reported that his girlfriend not only didn't die but, in fact, never existed.

Notre Dame and Te'o insist he was the victim of a cruel joke. Still unanswered are questions why the All-American never made it clear he knew the woman only online and by telephone.



Te'o

Earlier Friday, athletic director Jack Swarbrick urged Te'o and his family to speak publicly about the hoax.

Te'o was interviewed at the IMG Training Academy in Bradenton, Fla., where he is preparing for the NFL draft. ESPN said a public relations consultant was with him.

The Heisman Trophy finalist and his family had planned to go public with the story Monday, but Deadspin.com broke the news first on Wednesday.

Te'o led the Fighting Irish to a 12-0 regular season and the BCS title game, where they were routed 42-14 by Alabama and Te'o played poorly.

Swarbrick said again he is confident Te'o is the victim and did not back away from the strong support he gave the All-American during a news conference Wednesday night, when the AD said an investigation done by a firm hired by the school turned up evidence that supports Te'o's claim he was not involved.

Swarbrick said he will continue to believe that until given "compelling evidence to the contrary."

He said he understands why some people are skeptical about Te'o's story.

"They have every right to say that," Swarbrick said "Now I have some more information than they have. But they have every right to say that. I don't feel any sort of ill will toward that position. If I was on the outside of this presented with the only facts I have at this point — and importantly at the time we're recording this Manti has yet to speak publicly — I think that skepticism is easy to understand. I just ask those people to apply the same skepticism to everything about this.

"I have no doubt the perpetrators have a story they will yet spin about what went on here. I hope skepticism also greets that when they're articulating what that is."

Dallas Stars head coach Glen Gulutzan speaks to players on the bench during training camp in Frisco on Tuesday.

Stars seek end to playoff drought in short season

By Schuyler Dixon
Associated Press

DALLAS — Brenden Morrow played for the Dallas Stars back when short seasons were the ones that ended in the conference finals.

The Stars are a long way from playoff relevance after four straight years without a postseason trip, unthinkable when Morrow was a rookie in 2000 and Dallas was in the middle of a four-year stretch that included 73 playoff games.

Ending the drought will require the Stars to navigate the NHL's version of a short season — a 48-game schedule trimmed by the 113-day lockout. Whether it takes one game or a hundred, Morrow just wants back in the playoffs. The long-delayed opener is tonight at home against Phoenix.

"First year, go to the Stanley Cup final and think that's going to happen every year," said Morrow, now a team captain who turned 34 three days before his 12th season. "You do take it for granted a little bit. Now you see the parity in the league and how tough it is to get back and you have to take advantage of the opportunity."

The Stars think they created an opportunity with several offensive additions, including a pair of 40-year-olds who went through the NHL's last 48-game season in 1994-95 — Jaromir Jagr and Ray Whitney. Who knows how older legs will respond to a compressed schedule — Jagr already noticed Dallas has seven games in the first 11 days — but the experience of having done it should count for something.

"We had our team meal where our veteran core got up there and spoke," second-year Dallas coach Glen Gulutzan said. "They voiced what they thought needed to be done here, and I thought it was real good for our young guys and good for all of us."

While Morrow returns, Dallas changed its leadership by sending pesky fan favorite Steve Ott to Buffalo for Derek Roy and center Mike Ribeiro to Washington in a draft-day deal. The Ribeiro trade ended the Dallas tenure of a player who never quite was the "next Mike" the Stars hoped he would be when they moved on without Mike Modano two years ago. Modano rejoined the franchise this week in a front office role.

Roy had a similar legacy of underachieving with the Sabres, but last season he played through a shoulder injury that required offseason surgery. He benefited from the lockout because he probably wouldn't have been ready if the season had started in October. The Stars need him, too, because they're still without top center Jamie Benn, a restricted free agent who missed the abbreviated training camp while contract negotiations dragged on.

"Very fortunate to be starting the season with (Roy) completely healthy," Gulutzan said. "The way he can play the game on both ends of the ice provides for our offense. Without him and Jamie would be two big holes."

The Stars return points leader Loui Eriksson (71) and top goal-scorer Michael Ryder (35). Goalie Kari Lehtonen is coming off career bests of a 2.33 goals-against average and a .922 save percentage, and the core of the defense in front of him is the same with Alex Goligoski, Trevor Daley and Stephane Robidas.

Daley and Robidas were part of the last Dallas playoff team in 2008, when the Stars lost to Detroit in the Western Conference finals. It was only the third time that Dallas got out of the first round since consecutive trips to the Stanley Cup finals in 1999 and 2000. The Stars beat Buffalo for the title in 1999 and lost to New Jersey a year later.

"We've got to be a harder team to play against," Robidas said. "Last year at times we were hard to play against and at times we weren't. We've just got to be relentless."

Six new college hoops coaches find success

By John Marshall
Associated Press

In his first season as Kentucky's coach, John Calipari led the Wildcats to 35 wins and a trip to the regional finals of the NCAA tournament.

Coach Cal's first season was a bit of an anomaly; most coaches don't have that kind of success right after taking over a team.

Calipari did have an advantage. It was Kentucky, after all.

It usually takes a little longer for coaches to put their imprint on the program by getting their own players and their own philosophies in place.

Many don't get very long to do it, either, which is why there's so much turnover seemingly every year, including more than three dozen before this season.

Some of the new coaches have had decent starts at their new homes, while others have labored.

Here's a few that have had varying degrees of success so far:

■ Larry Brown, SMU. Brown was 71 when he was hired and hadn't coached in college since leading Kansas to the 1988 NCAA title, so there were more than a few question marks when he took over the Mustangs. Brown made the transition a seamless one, leading SMU to eight wins in its first nine games while creating excitement that Moody Coliseum hasn't seen in years. The Mustangs (11-8) have lost three of four to open Conference USA, including Wednesday's 74-70 setback against conference leader Southern Mississippi, but Brown seems to have them on the right track.

■ Bruce Weber, Kansas State. Weber took over a program that had five straight 20-win seasons and had been to the NCAA tournament four times under previous coach Frank Martin. He's tried to keep the Wildcats rolling by being the anti-Martin — calm to fiery Frank's screaming. The nonconference schedule was shaky at times, including blowout losses to Michigan and Gonzaga, along with uninspired wins over Missouri-Kansas City and South Dakota. But the Wildcats (14-2) also upset then-No. 8 Florida and have opened the Big 12 season with three straight victories, including over No. 22 Oklahoma State in the opener, to move up to No. 16 in the latest Top 25 poll.

■ Danny Manning, Tulsa. The former Kansas star was a protege under Bill Self in Lawrence, so he learned from one of college basketball's best. Manning took over a program that didn't have much of an identity and tried to mold it in his own hard-working image. It's been an up-and-down process. The Golden Hurricane opened with three wins in their first four games, then lost four of six and are now back on the upward trend after opening Conference USA 3-1. He also beat his former coach, Larry Brown, when Pat Swilling Jr. hit a 3-pointer with 3.8 seconds left to give the Golden Hurricane (11-7) a 48-47 win over SMU on Jan. 6. Beating his former coach is a nice accomplishment no matter what happens the rest of the way.

■ Kevin Ollie, Connecticut. The former Huskies point guard was given a one-year contract to serve as Jim Calhoun's successor after the Hall of Fame coach retired last year. The school's administration didn't get halfway through the season before signing him to a long-term deal that will keep him at UConn through the 2017-18 season. Despite losing five underclassmen after Calhoun left, the Huskies (12-4) opened 10-2. UConn followed with losses to Marquette and new No. 1 Louisville on Monday night, but it also beat then-No. 17 Notre Dame on the road.

■ Frank Martin, South Carolina. Martin was elevated to the head job at Kansas State after Bob Huggins left. He turned the Wildcats into a national power and now he's trying to do the same thing in Columbia. Taking over a program that had gone into a free-fall the previous four seasons under Darrin Horn, Martin had his work cut out for him with a team picked to finish 13th in the SEC. Martin's intensity has worked so far with the Gamecocks (11-5).

■ Richard Pitino, Florida International. Like Manning, Pitino learned from one of the best minds in basketball. Unlike Manning, his mentor was his father, Louisville coach Rick Pitino. The younger Pitino got his first head-coaching job at 29 and had a big hill to climb at FIU, taking over a program that hasn't had a winning record since going 16-14 in 1999-2000. Even with a roster he had to piece together, Pitino has been able to make the Golden Panthers (8-8) respectable.

Arians named coach of Arizona Cardinals

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — After nearly 38 years in the business, at age 60, Bruce Arians finally is an NFL head coach.

And he's made it clear that he's ready to run with it.

Arians was introduced as head coach of the Arizona Cardinals on Friday, promising to build a team that's "smart, disciplined, fast and physical — accountable, no excuses."

The man who went 9-3 as interim coach in Indianapolis after Chuck Pagano left to be treated for leukemia choked up when he talked about his family, saying of his wife "this is our 15th move."

And Arians moved quickly, saying he wants a staff assembled by Sunday. He parted ways with popular Cardinals defensive coordinator Ray Horton, who in a matter of hours was named to the same position in Cleveland.

Arians will call the offensive plays himself, although he will bring in someone with the title of offensive coordinator.

He said he proved to himself last year that he can be a successful head coach.

"And it was fun," Arians said. "I got a taste of the blood."

His offense, he said, will be as aggressive as he is. He believes that teams can turn their fortunes around in a hurry.

"I'm a straight shooter," Arians said. "I don't come home with any bullets left in the gun. I think players respect honest and discipline, and we're going to work hard. They're going to be accountable, not to me, to each other. It's not my football team. Our players will decide how good they are. It's their football team. If they want to win, we'll win. I'll show them the way. I'm no magic man. I've never tried to be.

Cowboys LB Spencer going to Pro Bowl

Associated Press

IRVING — Dallas Cowboys linebacker Anthony Spencer will play in his first Pro Bowl, replacing the injured Clay Matthews of Green Bay.

The Cowboys announced the move Friday. Fellow Cowboys Jason Witten and DeMarcus Ware were also picked for the NFL's all-star showcase that will be played in Honolulu on Jan. 27, a week before the Super Bowl.

Spencer

Witten was selected as a reserve and will be playing in his eighth career Pro Bowl. Ware was named a starter for the seventh straight year, but is unable to attend this year due to injury.

Sticky-handed wedding guests load up on keepsake glasses

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter was recently married. My niece — a talented artist — hand-painted flowers on wine glasses for the dinner reception following the ceremony. They were intended to be keepsakes for each of the adult guests.

The glasses turned out beautifully, and made each place setting extra special. I knew they'd be treasured by our family for years to come.

At the end of the evening, I gathered four glasses from our family's table, then glanced at the bridal table of eight — as some guests approached to offer thanks for a fabulous evening. When I turned around, the four glasses were gone. Not only had glasses disappeared from our table, but also from the head table and from my niece's (the artist). Those of us who had worked hardest on the wedding were left with nothing — and that includes the bride and groom.

The following day, someone mentioned to me that they had seen certain guests leave with four to six glasses each. One woman even had her child, who was loaded down with glasses, make several trips to her car.

We've figured out who the culprits were: some out-of-towners who stayed at the home of one of the groom's relatives. I heard that the glassware covered the entire top of their dining room table. My question: Should we ask these people to return the glasses? Thanks for your input, Abby. — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR MOTHER: By all means ask — but there is no guarantee they'll be returned. People who take more than their share usually feel an inflated sense of entitlement. Although their manners were atrocious, please don't let this cause in-law problems before the marriage has even begun. Perhaps out of sympathy, the artist will be generous enough to craft another pair of goblets for the bride and groom.

DEAR ABBY: I am in a one-year relationship with a wonderful man who is divorced with two children. The kids and I get along great — or at least I thought we did. It turns out they are making up lies about me and telling their mother. My boyfriend and his ex have a strained relationship and fight about everything. I love his children, but I don't know how to handle this. What do you think I am doing wrong? — TELLING THE TRUTH IN DULUTH

DEAR TELLING THE TRUTH: You're not doing anything wrong. Either the kids are trying to cause a breakup with the idea their parents will reunite, or they are telling their mother things they think she wants to hear. There's nothing you can do about it. Your boyfriend will have to clear the air with his former spouse.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who was raised in the South by a very proper mother. She told me that a man should never give a woman "intimate" gifts like lingerie.

A friend and I have argued about whether this "rule" applies today. I still believe the practice is unacceptable, even if you are engaged. She thinks it is OK. Please settle this so we can get on with our lives. — CONFUSED IN OREGON

DEAR CONFUSED: Perhaps the two of you should agree to disagree on this one. Your mother is part of the "hands off" generation, and the logic was that knowing lingerie sizes was "too intimate" for couples who weren't married. In today's world, however, such logic would put companies like La Perla and Victoria's Secret out of business.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, Jan. 19, 2013:

This year you often question your direction and energy. You have what it takes; you are just being challenged. Your creativity soars for the most part, except at key moments. Learn to defer to others. If you are single, your desirability summons many potential lovers. You will have choices to make. If you are attached, you do a lot of kissing and making up this year. Respect each other, and don't quarrel over your differences. TAURUS' earthiness appeals to you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Note how different your ideas are from a close friend or family member. Avoid giving this person the cold shoulder or picking a fight. Simply accept this individual as he or she is. Join friends at a movie or for a special get-together. Tonight: Treat a loved one to an event.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★ You might feel more in harmony or sure of yourself in the morning. Make phone calls, and catch up on a friend's news. Do not forget to reach out to someone at a distance. Handle a responsibility that pops up later in the day. Tonight: You are the lead player.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Back off from a situation that obviously is transforming. Express your caring to someone you put on a pedestal. Detach, and you will understand this person better. Make plans to go to the movies or a nice dinner. Tonight: Let your imagination call the shots.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ Share a goal or desire with friends; their support will surprise you. They also might shorten the path to your objectives. A child or loved one does not see or understand his or her own negativity or coldness. A discussion might be in order. Tonight: Follow the party.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★ Take a stand. You might not be as sure of yourself as you would like to be. Others seem more challenging than in the past. You are ready for a change, but getting there without others' support could be challenging. Express your caring to a loved one. Tonight: A must appearance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★ Opt for an escape. For some, this happening could be taking a drive to a flea market. For others, this will involve losing themselves in a movie. You'll enjoy yourself no matter what; however, be ready to return to your daily routine. Tonight: Try a new restaurant.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Deal with someone directly. A subtle comment might not be heard or internalized. You would prefer to be more discreet, but you also want to be effective. Someone lets you know how important you are in his or her life. Tonight: How about dinner for two?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★ Tension builds as the day goes on. You understand where others are coming from and why they are doing what they are doing. Fatigue spells a cat nap today. You might find that when you wake up, you will be less stressed. Tonight: Go along with a suggestion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★ You are willing to express your ideas, and you are prepared to act on them. Still, someone could be unusually testy, or you could be worried about this person's reaction. Your caring comes out with a child or loved one. Tonight: Put your best foot forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Your creativity peaks early in the day as you are making plans. You could be justifiably cynical about the cost of bringing certain loved ones together. Express your concern before this happens, and you will enjoy yourself more. Tonight: Act as if there is no tomorrow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You might decide to stay close to home, but by the end of the day, you are likely to be throwing the party of all parties. On the other hand, you could opt to be more sedentary, and invite certain friends over for a special meal. Tonight: Trust your judgment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★ Use the morning for making calls and visiting those at a distance. In the afternoon, you might become more critical about your company. A problem with a key person could be preoccupying your thoughts. Try not to act on any coldness. Tonight: Not to be found!

Atlanta Falcons tight end Tony Gonzalez tries to avoid Tampa Bay's Mason Foster during a game in December. Gonzalez is one game away from playing in the Super Bowl and possibly winning the first championship in his Hall of Fame career as a tight end.

Gonzalez another step closer to going out a champ

Paul Newberry
Associated Press

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — Tony Gonzalez remembers talking to Michael Strahan after the former New York Giants defensive lineman won a Super Bowl title in his final game.

Talk about going out in style.

"That's the way you want to do it," Gonzalez said Thursday. "That's every athlete's dream. I don't care what sport it is. You'd love to win a championship and leave. That's where I'm at now."

It took him 16 years to finally win a playoff game.

Now, he's two victories away from a Super Bowl championship with the Atlanta Falcons, two wins away from going out the same way Strahan did.

"There's no doubt I could play this game another three years if I wanted to, and at a high level too," the 36-year-old Gonzalez insisted. "But there comes a point in your career where you've gotten everything you ever wanted from this game."

Everything except a ring.

"Really, the only reason I played the last couple of years was for an opportunity like this," Gonzalez said. "Now that it's presented itself, I feel closure coming on. But there's more closure to take care of. It's about winning this week, and winning the Super Bowl."

The top-seeded Falcons (14-3) will host the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday in the NFC championship game, looking to reach the Super Bowl for just the second time in franchise history. Even though Gonzalez has not fully committed to retirement, there's a definite sense in the Atlanta locker room of wanting to give him the ultimate going-away gift.

He's given so much to the game, catching more passes than anyone in NFL history except Jerry Rice. He's given so much to the Falcons over

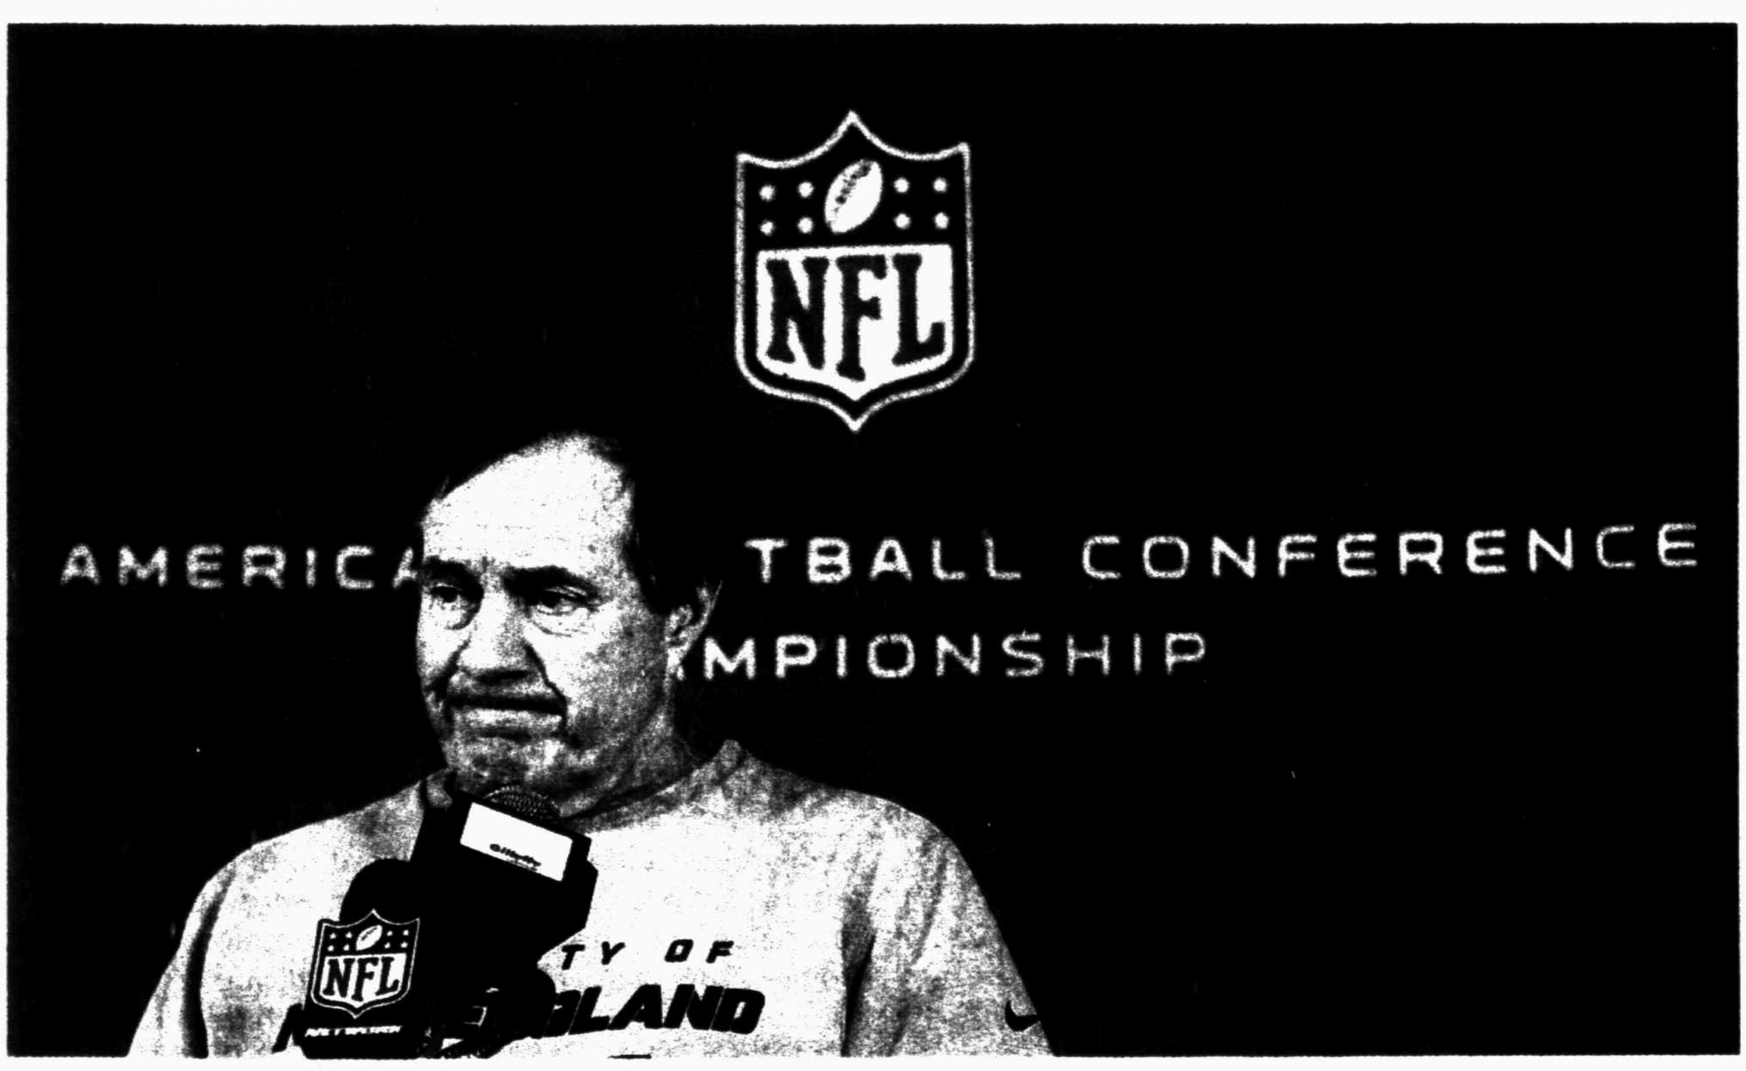
Patriots' coach Bill Belichick and Ravens' coach John Harbaugh show that there can be coaching stability in the NFL



Barry Wilner
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. —

Bill Belichick has this nice habit. He coaches in Super Bowls.

John Harbaugh has established an impressive trend, too: winning playoff games.

When they face off Sunday for the second straight year in the AFC championship, Belichick's Patriots and Harbaugh's Ravens will offer further proof of the value of stability.

No coaching carousels in New England and Baltimore.

Belichick has been on the job since 2000 and has gone to five Super Bowls, winning the first three. One more trip to the big game and he will tie Don Shula for most Super Bowl coaching assignments.

"He never changes," veteran guard Logan Mankins said. "It's always the same way from him. He coaches the same way. He demands the same things. So, when you have that leader in that role, I think it's easy for everyone else to fall in line."

Harbaugh has managed something Belichick, Shula and every other NFL coach has not: winning in the postseason in each of his first five years on the job. He's also been to seven conference title games, four as an assistant in Philadelphia.

"There's nothing like the playoffs in the National Football League," Harbaugh said. "I've never been in any other sport, so it's hard to compare it to a seven-game series or something like that. But, it would be hard to imagine, for me, a more exciting thing than being in the NFL playoffs and getting

Four coaches in conference title games made key decisions that paid off

Bob Glauber
New York Newsday

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — If we've learned anything from the four teams that advanced to the NFL's conference finals on Sunday, it is this: The coaches for each of the four teams faced crossroads decisions that carried major risks. All four used the courage of their convictions to embrace those risks and overcame those issues to get to within a win of the Super Bowl.

The results are unequivocal: At a time when bold action was required, even in the face of unrelenting criticism and second-guessing, the coaches went with their gut instincts and made the right calls.

Even if it took some time for the decisions to be validated.

For 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh, it was taking a calculated gamble to stick with second-year quarterback Colin Kaepernick, even after Alex Smith recovered from a concussion he suffered in the 10th game of the regular season. It was a huge move and was second-guessed relentlessly, but Harbaugh stuck by his plan, even though Smith nearly got the 49ers to the Super Bowl last season.

Kaepernick, who went 5-2 in seven regular-season starts, starred in the 49ers' 45-31 win over the Packers in the NFC divisional playoff round. He went 17-for-31 for 263 yards, passing for two touchdowns, and ran for 181 yards and two touchdowns.

The 49ers' opponent on Sunday, the Falcons, went into the playoffs as the top seed in the NFC, but also with a playoff albatross: In the Mike Smith-Matt Ryan era, they were 0-3 in playoff games. But despite playing against a Seahawks defense that allowed the fewest points per game (15.3) during the regular season, the Falcons attacked with the same style of football they'd been using all season.

There was no going conservative for Smith and Ryan, as the Falcons used the long pass throughout the game against Seattle's highly regarded secondary. And even after the Seahawks mounted a furious fourth-quarter comeback to take a 28-27 lead, Ryan prevailed. On the final drive, with 25 seconds left, he drove the Falcons from their 28 to get in position for Matt Bryant's game-winning field goal in a 30-28 win.

For Ravens coach John Harbaugh, Jim's brother, it was firing longtime offensive coordinator Cam Cameron on Dec. 11 and replacing him with quarterbacks coach Jim Caldwell 13 games into the season. Harbaugh called it the most difficult football decision he has ever made but believed it had to be done to reinvigorate the offense, which bogged down after Cameron refused to use a more balanced approach to help quarterback Joe Flacco.

The result: The Ravens have

49ers lean on Gore's smarts, savvy at key times

Antonio Gonzalez
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif.

San Francisco 49ers offensive coordinator Greg Roman wants to be a head coach one day soon, and he already knows at least one person he'd hire on his staff.

Running back Frank Gore.

"I always tell Frank, 'Man, when you're done playing, come find me or I'll find you,'" Roman said Thursday. "Because he's a guy I love working with as a player, and I'm sure I'd love working with as a coach."

Gore

Often underappreciated and overlooked around the NFL, Gore has carried the 49ers through good times and mostly bad the last eight seasons. Coaches are quick to credit the reliable running back's smarts and savvy, doing everything from breaking down film of opponents to scouting potential draft picks.

Gore's latest adaptation has come in the new read-option run game anchored by quarterback Colin Kaepernick that some thought might not suit his style. Instead, Gore surpassed 100 yards rushing in a playoff game for the first time in last week's 45-31 win over Green Bay, and the 49ers insist his knowledge is a vital part of the plan heading into Sunday's NFC championship at Atlanta.

"It's top shelf," 49ers coach Jim Harbaugh said of Gore's football acumen. "Not to categorize it, but I know I have learned a lot from Frank, as well as the other running backs on our team. He sees it. He sees the big picture. He sees the whole picture. He sees it slowed down and he's got a very quick mind. He's able to make quick-minded decisions."

Despite tearing ligaments in both knees at the University of Miami, Gore has rebounded to become one of the NFL's most durable players at a position that takes perhaps the biggest pounding.

Gore is the franchise leader in yards rushing (8,839) and touchdowns rushing (51) and has been a staple of San Francisco's offense under three different head coaches. His versatility is what makes him special, coaches said, running inside and out and catching passes from all kinds of formations.

"Frank is such an adaptable player that it doesn't take him long to pick something up," Roman said. "He's one of the most gifted, knowledgeable, intelligent football players that I've been around really at any position. He just has a feel and an understanding for the game. It's funny, when you install something or put something new in, he can just see it. It's pretty impressive."

Until last week, though, Gore's role had seemingly diminished since Kaepernick took over in Week 10 and the 49ers ran more of the Pistol offense.

Gore admits the first time he watched teams such as Oregon and Nevada run read-option plays on television he "felt like that's not real football." With Kaepernick and the 49ers one win from the Super Bowl now, he's become a believer.

"It's helping us. If it's helping us get to where we want to go, I'm with it," Gore said. "I feel like I'm a football player. I'm a ball player. I'll adjust to anything. I just had to be more patient getting the ball. That's about it."

The 49ers also have kept Gore fresher as opposed to years past when he often wore down late from countless carries.

He split time with Kendall Hunter before the backup suffered a season-ending ankle injury in a Week 12 win at New Orleans. Speedster LaMichael James, the former Oregon standout, has limited Gore's touches since Hunter's injury and had an increasingly expanded role in the Pistol offense.

San Francisco's strategy showed results when it mattered. Gore ran for 119 yards and a touchdown on 23 carries against the Packers, even while Kaepernick set a quarterback playoff record with 181 yards on 16 carries.

"Hopefully, they keep looking out for him and 21 keeps getting the ball and I'll just do what he did last week," Gore said, referring to his jersey number.

It's Ray vs. Tom show, again

Brady, Lewis meet one more time with Super Bowl on the line

Barry Wilner
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass.

You again!

Ray versus Tom.

Tom versus Ray.

Oh yeah, the Ravens and Patriots, along for the ride. Ray Lewis' last ride, one Tom Brady hopes to cut short on Sunday in the AFC championship game.

A year after a brutal last-minute loss in Foxborough, Baltimore is back, looking for a reversal of fortune and a spot in the Super Bowl for the first time since winning it in 2001. If the Ravens fall again, Lewis' superb 17-year career as the NFL's best linebacker of his era will end as he retires.

Brady, the most successful quarterback of his time, has no thoughts of retirement — or of failing to make his sixth Super Bowl in the last dozen seasons.

That Lewis and Brady will bring a mutual admiration society to Gillette Stadium adds some flattery to what has become an intense rivalry.

"Both sides understand the game of football," Lewis said. "There have been some great, great rivalries and we have one of those going on with New England now."

Adds Brady: "It's really a pleasure to play against him. He's really been so consistent over the years and durable and tough. He's so instinctive."

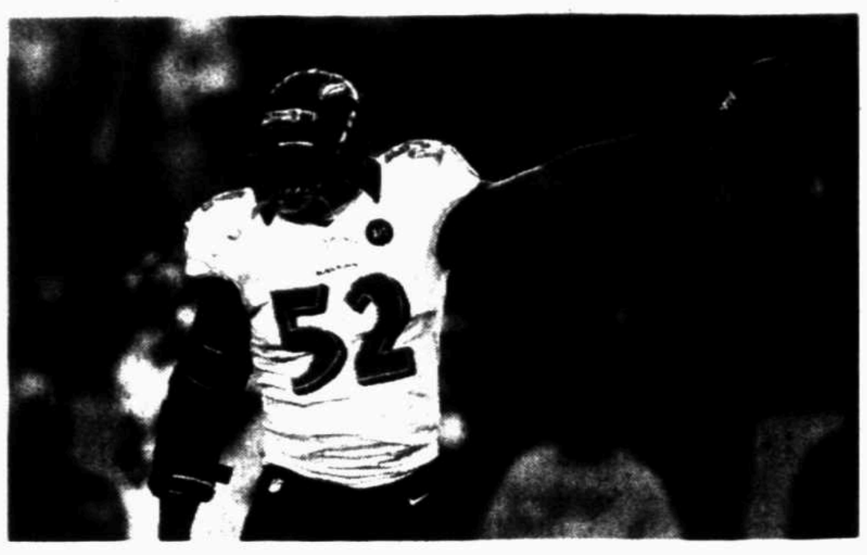
At the forefront in this rematch, naturally, is Brady, who has won three NFL titles and would be only the second player to reach six Super Bowls by leading New England (13-4) past Baltimore (12-6). And there's Lewis, the most dominant inside linebacker the league has seen since the heyday of Mike Singletary.

Brady is all about composure, accuracy and even sophistication. Lewis brings aggression, ferocity and mayhem to the field.

An odd couple, indeed, but one that appreciates the attributes of the other.

"He doesn't give up hardly any plays, makes a ton of tackles," Brady said of the 37-year-old Lewis, who missed 10 games with a right triceps injury, but has been a tackling machine in the postseason. "He's great in the pass game, great in the run game. He blitzes well, like he did a few years ago. He's really a playmaker for them, so they give him an opportunity to make those plays. You see when he makes a play, their whole sideline gets really amped-up."

No one can be more amped-up for this opportunity than Lewis. No one, of course, raises his teammates to a more fevered pitch than Lewis.



AP Photo

But what the Ravens need Sunday is discipline to go with the fervor. Otherwise, Brady will pick them apart.

For all the energy and clutch plays Baltimore's defense has made since Lewis returned, it remains vulnerable because it's three biggest stars — Lewis, safety Ed Reed, outside LB Terrell Suggs — are aging and not nearly 100 percent healthy.

There's also the exhaustion factor: The Ravens have played one more postseason game than the Patriots, and went into the sixth period last week at Denver.

"In all honesty, I thought we were as fresh in the overtime game the other day as we looked at any time during the year," Ravens defensive coordinator Dean Pees said. "I think at this point in time during the year, too, everybody is a little fatigued.

"But at the same time, your adrenaline is pumping, and the emotion is a lot different now than it is if you're playing the seventh ballgame of the season playing 87 plays. It's just different. You've got to find a way to pull a little more out of you, and I think the guys do. I think everybody does that — both teams."

No matter who finds his way into the spotlight, though, he won't shove aside Lewis or Brady.

Lewis thinks it is an honor to face Manning and then Brady in consecutive weeks. Then again, it's a necessity if Lewis is going to end his career hoisting the Lombardi Trophy.

"You're talking about arguably the top two or three greatest quarterbacks of all time," Lewis said. "So when you go from Peyton Manning to Tom Brady, you're going from 1A to 1A. It's not like you get a drop-off.

"I'd back up to the same fact we had last week. Is he going to make plays? Absolutely. But you have to play the whole game. You have to be patient enough to let them make plays and move on to the next play. ... They play chess matches.

"Playing against Brady and just watching him sometimes, you're always in awe on watching on how good he really is."

Better not watch too much, Ray. Or retirement will be at hand.

shown dramatic improvement on offense and earned a repeat trip to the AFC Championship Game with a stirring 38-35 double-overtime win over the Broncos. Flacco sent the game into overtime with a 70-yard touchdown pass to Jacoby Jones near the end of regulation.

And don't forget how Harbaugh's opposing coach reacted in the final seconds of the fourth quarter. Believing that the Broncos were so rocked by Flacco's touchdown pass that they needed to gather themselves, John Fox had Peyton Manning take a knee on the ensuing possession. No matter that the Broncos had the ball at their 20-yard line with 31 seconds to play and two timeouts. Bottom line: Fox played not to lose in that situation ... and he lost.

The Patriots? Well, you might think Bill Belichick didn't have to worry about any major decisions with his AFC East juggernaut, but he did make a controversial move at the trade deadline, acquiring cornerback Aqib Talib from the Buccaneers.

Talib, whose myriad off-field problems prompted his ouster in Tampa, still had a game left on a four-game suspension for violating the league's policy on performance-enhancing substances. The trade allowed Devin McCourty, who had struggled in pass coverage, to move from cornerback to safety, and the Patriots' defense has been vastly improved since.

The Patriots have reduced third-down success by opponents from 43 percent to 30, lowered the number of passes of at least 20 yards from 4.7 per game to 3.3 and allowed only one completion of more than 40 yards since a Week 11 win over the Colts.

The secondary baffled Texans quarterback Matt Schaub in last week's divisional playoff win.

Four teams left standing, all of whom have operated with a three-word motto that has served them well: Go for it.

AFC

to championship games and ultimately the Super Bowl. That's what it's all about. To me, it's the pinnacle of sport."

Belichick and Harbaugh have reached the pinnacle in the AFC, which hardly is enough for them. They will remain true to their philosophies and personnas as they try to guide their teams to New Orleans.

For Belichick, that means a high level of secrecy, never providing any bulletin board material or any real insight when asked about how the Patriots (13-4) have been so triumphant under him. Belichick flopped in Cleveland in his first stint as a head coach, but his work in New England is the envy of his peers.

Of course, it helped a tiny bit to have Tom Brady on his side.

Brady emphasizes Belichick's steadiness as a key to that success.

"Coach talks about doing your job," Brady said. "Whatever your role may be — third receiver, third running back — you have to perform your role. You know whenever your number is called ... everyone is counting on you. The expectation is you will play at a championship level."

The Patriots have done that for a dozen years; Belichick is third with 18 postseason victories and would tie Shula for second with a win Sunday. He would tie Tom Landry for the top spot by also winning a fourth Super Bowl, which would equal Chuck Noll's four in the big game with the Steelers.

Quite a resume, which also includes three Super Bowls as an assistant. There's a wealth of knowledge there — even if Belichick is unwilling to share it with anyone not wearing Patriots colors.

"It has been good for me," said inside linebacker Jerod Mayo, the 2008 Defensive Rookie of the Year and one of New England's steadiest defenders for five seasons. "I've tried to be a sponge and learn as much as I can from coach Belichick. My first couple years, we had a lot of those individual meetings where he pulled me to the side and taught me, not necessarily the techniques of the game, but just situational awareness of the game and what the offense can do to you. I'm still learning."

If you stop learning in the NFL, you will be left behind. If you stop adapting, you won't contend for championships.

Harbaugh, a former special teams coach who reached the Super Bowl with the 2004 Eagles, has adjusted well throughout his tenure in Baltimore (12-6). When he joined the Ravens, they had a premier, shutdown defense. Recently, they've become more dependent on their offense.

Regardless, Harbaugh approaches the job in the same way: tirelessly.

"We get after it in practices and games. We try to bring a physicality and toughness to everything we do," said veteran center Matt Birk. "We have a willingness to work hard, and we do, and that comes from coach Harbs."

Harbaugh is 6-3 in the playoffs, including a 33-14 victory at Gillette Stadium three years ago. He's lost in both trips to the AFC title game, including 23-20 to New England last January.

Should he help the Ravens get to their first Super Bowl since the 2000 season, he just might meet his younger brother, Jim, in the Big Easy. Jim Harbaugh's 49ers are playing at Atlanta for the NFC championship.

"I haven't taken a DNA sample lately," John Harbaugh said, "but it's a pretty cool thing."

GONZALEZ

the last four years, working with younger players and setting an example that all were encouraged to follow.

"We know what he's capable of doing on the football field," Falcons coach Mike Smith said. "But Tony is a mentor to so many players in that locker room. He's not a guy of many words, but when he comes to work, he comes to work. We always tell the new guys in the locker room, 'See that guy over there? Mimic what he's doing.'"

Gonzalez's influence has surely rubbed off on players such as receiver Julio Jones, already a Pro Bowler in just his second season. Even Roddy White, who already was one of the NFL's better receivers when Gonzalez was acquired by the Falcons after a dozen seasons in Kansas City, has picked up a thing or two since No. 88 arrived.

"I'd like to think I've helped them with their routine," Gonzalez said. "I'm a big believer in routine. Yeah, you can talk about being great. When young guys come in, I ask them their goals. They all want to be Pro Bowl players. Well, how are you going to get there? You can't just say you're going to work hard. That's so ambiguous."

He'll encourage them to settle on some well-defined goals — say, catching 50 balls before practice, 50 balls during the workout, and 50 balls afterward. Whatever works, make it a habit. And keep looking for ways to make the program even better. Even at his age, Gonzalez still tweaks his regimen if he comes upon something new that might give him an edge.

The 49ers (12-4-1) will have their hands full trying to defend everyone in what Gonzalez calls the PYP offense — Pick Your Poison. But the ageless tight end could be even more of a factor Sunday, facing a defense that doesn't stray far from its base packages and relies heavily on its linebackers in coverage.

As good as they are, Pro Bowlers Patrick Willis and Aldon Smith could have their hands full trying to cover Gonzalez, even if he has lost a step or two.

"He's still playing at a high level for them. He's still making big plays for them," Willis said. "He may not be as fast as he used to be, but he's really crafty and knows how to get open."

For Gonzalez, the idea of working harder than anyone else was instilled at an early age, but the benefits of setting a routine became apparent in his second season with the Chiefs. Facing high expectations after moving into the starting lineup, he dropped 17 passes. He knew something had to change, so he started reading books on other great athletes, from Rice to Michael Jordan.

"When I looked at their routines, I couldn't believe how much work goes into being a great player," Gonzalez said. "I knew if I wanted to be great, this is what I've got to do. I came up with a routine. I started adding to it and changing it a little every year, but it kind of stays the same too. I'm always looking for an advantage."

His methods have sure paid off. Gonzalez has 1,242 receptions and 103 touchdown catches, sixth on the career list. This season, he led the Falcons with 93 receptions for 930 yards and eight touchdowns.

Gonzalez was really at his best last week in the divisional playoff against Seattle. He made a brilliant touchdown catch in the back of the end zone, leaping up to snatch the ball away from a defender like the basketball player he was in college, boxing out for a rebound. He made a couple of other impressive grabs when it looked like he was completely covered.

Finally, after the Falcons squandered a 20-point lead in the fourth quarter and seemed on the verge of handing Gonzalez another playoff loss, he hauled in a 19-yard pass, picking up a few extra yards with a nifty move after the catch, to set up Matt Bryant's winning 49-yard field goal with just 8 seconds remaining.

When it was done, Gonzalez broke down in tears — the first time he can ever remember crying after a win.

Of course, he had never won in the playoffs, losing his first five tries.

"I was thinking, 'I guess it's not meant to be,'" he recalled. "Then to go out there and get it done, to get that victory the way we did, the floodgates opened in me."

After waiting 16 years to get that first postseason victory, the idea of winning two more in the next three weeks doesn't seem so farfetched.

If that happens, Gonzalez sounds like any uncertainty over his planned retirement will surely be wiped away.

"That's the goal: win a championship and get out of here," he said. "We're right at the door. The door is opening for us. We've just got to push it open a little bit more."

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT & PUBLISHING

COME JOIN OUR UNIVERSAL DESK

The Midland Reporter-Telegram is accepting résumés for a full-time copy editor and page designer position on our universal desk. The right candidate should have a knack for grammar, punctuation and Associated Press style but also can find inconsistencies in stories and isn't afraid to ask questions. He or she also should have an eye for page design.

This is a great opportunity for anyone who wants to make a difference at a daily newspaper and who wants to perfect his or her craft at copy editing and page design.

A bachelor's degree in journalism or English, two years of editing experience, InDesign or Quark knowledge and proficiency in AP style are preferred. Recent college graduates and those who are graduating soon are welcome to apply. Time on a universal desk and experience editing sports copy are pluses.

The Reporter-Telegram is part of Hearst Corp. and offers a competitive salary and benefits.

If you are interested in our copy editor and page designer position, please email a cover letter, résumé, your best design samples and three references in PDF or Word format to News Editor Trevor Hawes at thawes@mrt.com. You can also mail a hardcopy submission to Midland Reporter-Telegram, Attn.: Trevor Hawes, 201 E. Illinois Ave., Midland, TX 79701. Call 432-687-8854 after 4 p.m. to learn more.

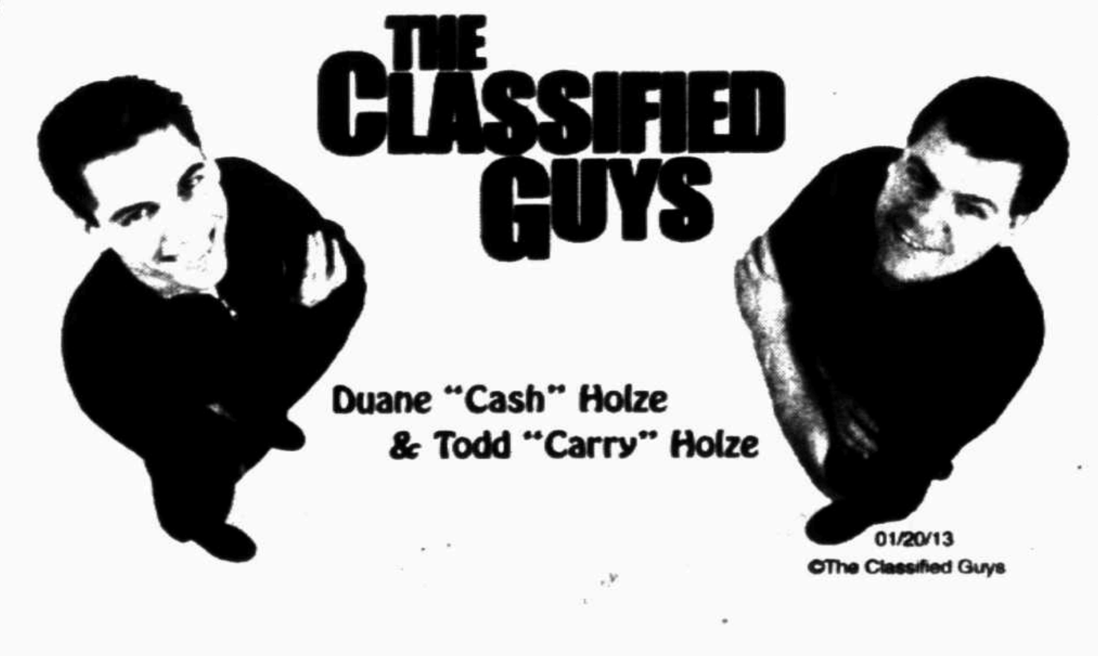
Ask the Guys



Dear Classified Guys,
I need your help. My four-year-old came to me the other day and asked for a clown at his upcoming birthday party. I told him it was a possibility, but when he walked away I realized I don't know anything about hiring a clown. How do I know a good clown from a bad one? Do I interview him, try him out ahead of time or ask if he can juggle? The closest thing I know to a clown is my Uncle Jimmy who gets a red nose after a long night out. How do I find a clown that's entertaining and will make a good party? Can you give me a lesson in clowning 101?

Cash: You've come to the right guys! We like to think of clowning around not as a job, but more of a lifestyle.

Carry: Actually, being a clown is serious business. Most people conjure up the image of a big red nose, big shoes and bright colored clothes. But the truth is, every clown is different and each one has their own style based on personality and talent.

Cash: And we do mean talent. If you think juggling five balls while riding a unicycle is difficult, just try coordinating clown shoes with the right tie. That's talent!

Carry: For your party, you'll need a clown that is prepared to do age-appropriate humor and magic that all the kids can understand.

Cash: The rest depends on the type of party you are hosting. For instance, if you have a large group of kids, you may want a strolling clown who will travel from table to table. He could make balloon animals or help to face paint the children. This arrangement lends itself to events requiring long periods of entertainment.

Carry: If it's a smaller party, you can hire a clown who will entertain the entire group of children for only an hour or so.

Cash: Once you have planned your style of party, you're ready to interview a few clowns, besides us that is. Explain your party arrangement and ask each candidate to tell you about the entertainment they can provide for your event.

Carry: As with hiring any service, be sure to check their references to make sure they act professionally. Although remember, at your party, they are expected to "clown around."

Fast Facts

Tipped Over

While a gratuity is not required, some people like to tip a party entertainer such as a clown. But how much is appropriate? It's recommended that you tip the same as you would a waiter or waitress in a restaurant, typically 10% to 20%. As with any service, you can adjust your tip amount based on how pleased you were with their performance. But remember, someone has to pay for all the quarters pulled from behind the children's ears.

Spooked

Does your child scream when they meet Santa at the mall or stare at their shoes when they meet the Easter Bunny? Then meeting a clown could be a scary experience for them as well. If your child takes time to warm up to people, the best thing to do is greet the clown as you would any other friend. Your child will most likely follow your lead. Stay within view or reach of your child to give them a sense of comfort. Before you know it, everyone will be clowning around.

Reader Humor

New in Town

As a clown, I know most of the other clowns who perform at kid's parties. In fact, we always joke around when our agents book two or more of us at one event. At the last kid's party, one of the clowns was a new guy on the circuit so I went up to introduce myself.

He told me that one of the other clowns had stopped by to say hello. But instead of shaking hands, he shot water at him from a flower on his lapel.

"What did he do that for?" I asked him surprisingly.

I got a good laugh when he replied, "He told me it was Professional Courtesy."

(Thanks Ron L.)

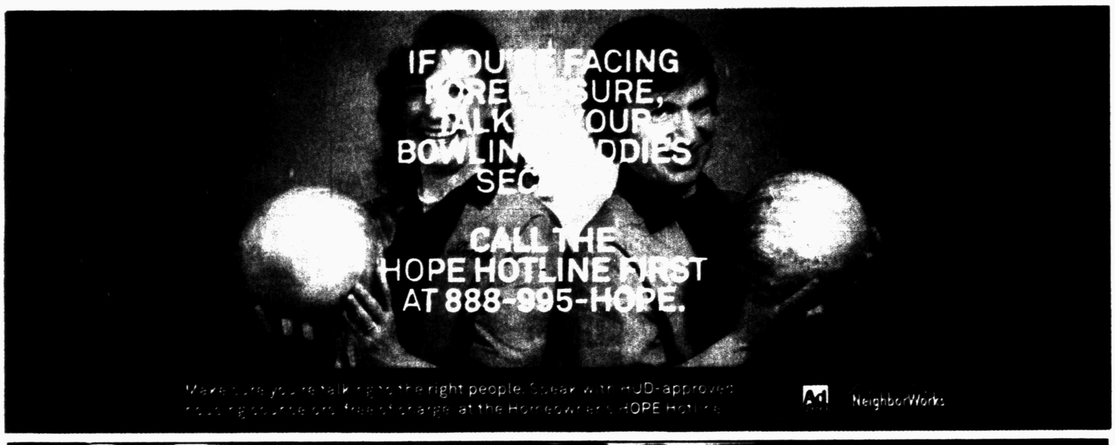
The "KEY" to your Real Estate needs!



YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD'S BEEN REZONED OR HADN'T YOU HEARD?

When local governments make decisions they are required to publish a newspaper notice to let you know. But that could change.

Local governmental entities across the state want to bury their public notices on little seen, rarely visited government websites.

What you don't know will affect you personally!

If it is not in the newspaper, you won't know about it.
