Storm Diana turns into hurricane

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — Diana blew into a hurricane with 80 mph winds today, lashing Georgia's coast with heavy seas and forcing vacationers to flee resort islands.

School officials canceled classes in some parts of South Carolina and Georgia, and beaches were closed from Florida to North Carolina.

"Only a slight change in course could bring the storm on shore in a few hours," the National Weather Service said.

"Coastal residents in Georgia and South Carolina should be ready for quick action in case the hurricane moves toward the coast unexpectedly," the National Hurricane Center in Miami said in its 9 a.m. report.

Authorities moved to evacuate 1,500 to 1,700 people from Tybee Island, just south of Savannah, said Chatham County Civil Defense director Lou Dotson.

"We're discussing mandatory evacuation of one of our barrier islands and we did evacuate, voluntarily last evening, two nursing homes down there," he said.

"We're asking them (residents) to be prepared, pick up any loose articles in the yard and tape up their windows, put gas in their car, that sort of thing."

A hurricane warning was posted from north of Brunswick to Oregon Inlet, N.C., including Pamlico Sound, the center said. Gale winds extended outward 150 miles to the northeast of the center and 75 miles to the southeast.

At 9 a.m., the storm's eye was near latitude 30.8 north and longitude 80.2 west. It was about 70 miles southeast of St. Simons Island, near Brunswick, or about 80 miles east-northeast of Jacksonville, Fla., and 105 miles south-southeast of Savannah.

■ Effects of Diana — Page 7A

The hurricane was moving northward at 5 mph, slightly offshore but parallel to the coast, pushing high tides and towering waves into oceanfront areas. The National Hurricane Center said a research plane flying over the storm had recorded highest sustained winds of 80 mph. A tropical storm becomes a hurricane when winds reach 75 mph.

"We're trying to help get the folks off St. Simons and Jekyll Island as easily and quietly as possible," said Georgia State Patrol Trooper Robert Phillips. "Troopers are out in the area helping and everything is going OK so far."

A small craft advisory was issued from St. Augustine to Brunswick, and from Virginia Beach, Va., north to Chincoteague, Va.

Tides of 3 to 5 feet above normal were forecast along the coast ahead of the storm and 7 feet above normal if the center moved inland, forecasters said.

"On the projected track, the center will move near and parallel to the coast," the weather service said. "However, any variation to left will bring the center on the coast."

Weather service offices in the Carolinas recommended that boat owners remain in port and suggested that coastal residents check medical supplies and batteries in flashlights and radios. Mobile home owners were warned to tie down their structures.

Street flooding in areas of poor drainage were expected in South Carolina and Florida.

Beaches in Dare County, N.C., were closed to swimmers because of rough waters. And beach erosion was reported along northeast Florida.

Diana kept space shuttle Discovery from returning home to Cape Canaveral on schedule, forcing an overnight stay in Oklahoma. The shuttle continued its piggyback ride home to Florida atop a Boeing 747 today.

Mondale will unveil plan for increasing taxes

Associated Press

Walter F. Mondale, declaring "I will level with you," is revealing his tax-increase plan for cutting the deficit today while President Reagan dismisses higher taxes as "the wrong answer."

The Democratic presidential nominee said his proposal would reduce federal budget deficits, which are approaching $200 billion a year, by two-thirds through a combination of spending cuts and a tax increase.

"Everyone knows that taxes must go up," Monale said Sunday in a radio broadcast. "But who will pay? If you have a president who favors millionaires and big corporations, he'll sock it to families of average income and leave his friends alone. That's Mr. Reagan — but not me.

"I will level with you. I will tell you what I'll cut and who will pay," he added. "I challenge Mr. Reagan to do the same. You have a right to learn his plans — not after the election, but now."

Mondale was in Philadelphia today to unveil his program, while Reagan remained in the White House and was meeting with officials of the National Baptist Convention, which Mondale addressed last week during its meeting in Washington.

■ Separation 'non-issue' — Page 7A, Bush's campaign style and other related stories — Page 5C

Reagan responded to Mondale on the tax issue Sunday during a campaign visit to a Polish-American festival outside Philadelphia, in Doylestown, Pa.

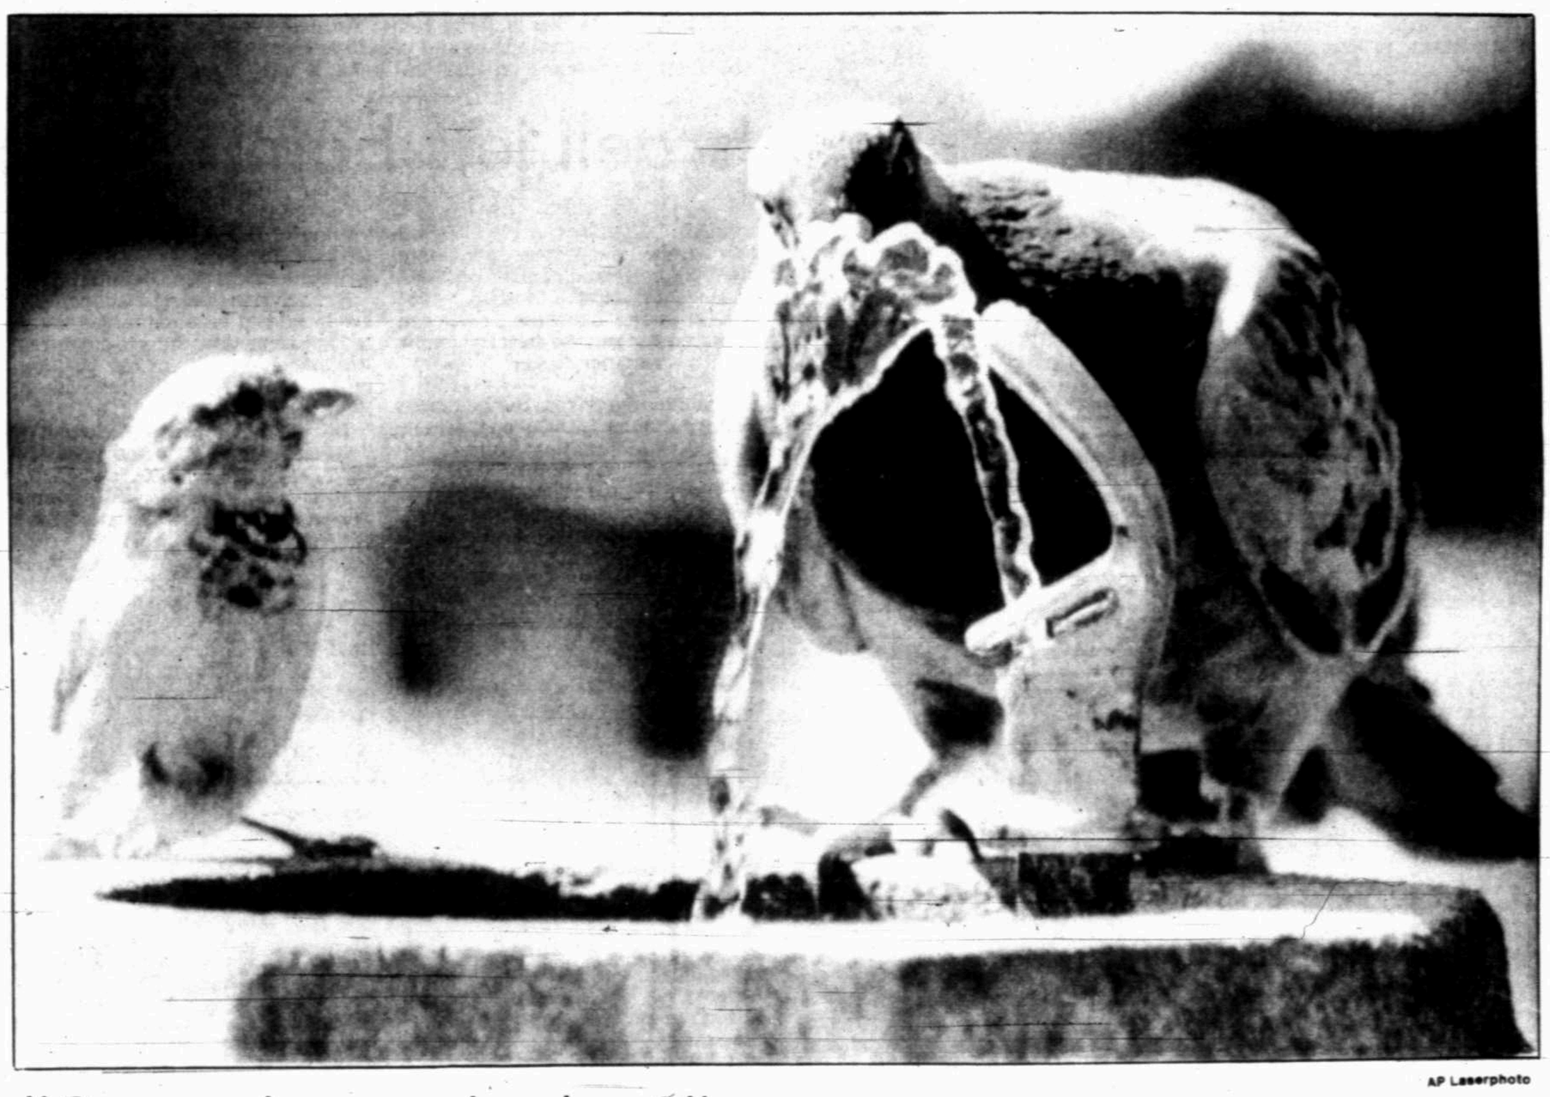

"A certain candidate for national office said the other day that the biggest difference between us is our policies towards people of average means," Reagan said, referring to the former Democratic vice president.

"And he's right," Reagan added. "With our tax program a family of average means today is paying $900 a year less in income taxes than if that candidate's last tax program were still in place.

"Raising taxes is an old answer. Some say it's the only answer. I say it's the wrong answer."

Reagan focused his speech as an appeal to the patriotism of Americans whose ancestors were from Poland, but he spent much of his time responding to Mondale and his running mate.

Congress holds in-depth hearings into child care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shocked by revelations of child abuse in some of America's day care centers, many members of Congress are feeling pressure to ensure better services for the growing number of children with working mothers.

"We pay more attention to regulating racetrack workers, bank employees and real estate brokers," complains Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla. Now it's time to do more to safeguard children, she says.

"Congress is beginning to show the same concern for the kind of child care received by millions of American children — many up to 50 hours each week — as it has for their health and education," says Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families.

"Surely child care has become as important to the development and future well-being of a child as are education and health care. Surely we can play a positive role in this area, as we have in the others," he said.

Miller's panel wound up a series of hearings last week on child care and plans a joint hearing on child abuse with a Ways and Means Committee panel on Sept. 17. The findings will be part of a major report to be released next month before Congress adjourns.

Miller calls it "the most in-depth congressional look at child care in a decade" and says it will contain specific recommendations.

They would include:

— Tax credits for employers who set up on-site day care facilities for the children of their employees.

— Further tax credits for parents to help meet day care expenses.

— An increase in money for Title XX of the Social Services Block Grant, the major direct funding source for day care for low-income families.

— Federal aid to school districts to set up before- and after-school programs for "latchkey" children — pupils who are home alone while their parents work.

— Incentives for the creation of child care research and referral centers so parents will know what options are available in their communities.

The latter two measures have been passed by the House this session but not by the Senate.

Hawkins said legislation she introduced last week would improve the quality of child care and require states to impose higher standards for day care centers.

The bill requires federal standards and licensing procedures for day care centers and providers, mandates state compliance or a loss of

Poll: Nixon shouldn't have public role

Richard Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) — A decade after his resignation and pardon, a majority of Americans are against former President Nixon returning to an official role in government, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Four of five agreed that it was a good thing Nixon resigned rather than fight impeachment in the wake of the Watergate scandal, and a plurality agreed with former President Ford's decision to pardon Nixon.

The 1,451 respondents in the nationwide telephone survey were asked, "Looking back, do you think it was a good thing that President Nixon resigned, or should he have fought impeachment by Congress?" and 81 percent said they thought it was a good thing he resigned rather than fight impeachment.

At the same time, by 48 percent to 39 percent, respondents agreed with the decision by Ford, Nixon's successor, to pardon him. Thirteen percent said they were not sure.

A 57 percent majority said they were against a more active Nixon role in government today — for instance, as a roving ambassador or as a formal adviser to the president. Thirty-five percent said they would like to see Nixon back in some official role, while 8 percent were not sure.

And 44 percent said they have a generally unfavorable opinion of Nixon today, while 38 percent said they have a generally favorable impression of him and 18 percent were not sure.

Nixon was an unindicted co-conspirator in the scandal growing out of the 1972 attempted bugging of the Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate office complex in Washington. Secret tapes subsequently revealed that the Republican president had knowledge of a coverup by his aides, several of whom went to prison for obstruction of justice.

A congressional committee had already taken the first steps toward removing Nixon from office when he resigned on Aug. 9, 1974, citing the damage an impeachment trial could do the country.

A month later — 10 years and one day ago — Ford took the unusual step of issuing a presidential pardon even though no formal criminal charges were pending against Nixon.

Ford said one of the main reasons for the pardon was to preclude any charges against Nixon — something Ford said could slow the nation's "healing" process following the scandal. The pardon, however, was widely criticized and became one of the factors blamed for Ford's loss to Jimmy Carter in 1976.

Nixon retired to his San Clemente, Calif., estate, later moved to Manhattan and now lives in a fashionable New Jersey suburb of New York. Confined to the role of a quiet elder statesman, his advice generally has not been publicly sought by subsequent administrations.

He writes books, travels abroad as a private citizen but often as the guest of foreign governments, delivers occasional speeches and entertains old friends at stag dinners.

In the poll, respondents were also asked how they would have regarded Nixon "had it not been for Watergate," and 36 percent said they would have regarded him as a good president, 46 percent as an average president and 13 percent as a poor president. Five percent were not sure.

Man, boy killed in accident

From Staff Reports

A 38-year-old man and a 6-year-old boy were killed Sunday when their truck was struck by another truck on Interstate 20 near Rankin Highway, according to police.

The 34-year-old Odessa man who was driving the other truck is under guard in Midland Memorial Hospital, where he was taken for observation after complaining of a headache. He was to be charged later today, probably with involuntary manslaughter, police said.

The names of the victims were being withheld until next of kin could be notified.

WEATHER SUMMARY

High temperatures expected to continue in Permian Basin

Temperatures like Sunday's record-breaking high of 101 degrees will continue through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Forecasters predict fair skies tonight and Tuesday with lows near 70 and highs near 102. Winds will be from the south at five to 15 mph.

The new record high which was set Sunday beat the old record of 98 degrees set in 1977. This morning's low of 71 was 20 degrees warmer than the record set in 1935.

STATE

Southerly winds of 10 to 20 mph were reported across Texas again today, and the National Weather Service said a low-pressure trough over West Texas and eastern New Mexico was responsible.

Moisture being pulled up from the Gulf of Mexico formed into low-level clouds, but clear skies dominated most of the state.

Temperatures were generally in the 70s before dawn, although a pocket of warm air in the 80s lingered over sections of North Texas. The temperatures ranged from 57 at Marfa to 81 at Wichita Falls.

But later in the day, the mercury was expected to reach near-record hot temperatures for the date.

NATION

Tropical storm Diana trudged north in the Atlantic off Florida's coast today, carrying 70 mph winds, towering waves and heavy rain, while tropical storm Marie brought moist, cooler air to heat-stricken Southern California.

Diana was east of Jacksonville, Fla., early today and moving slowly north parallel to the coast, the National Weather Servie said. Coastal residents of northeast Florida, Georgia and South Carolina were advised to be ready to evacuate on short notice.

Meanwhile, tropical storm Marie remained well off the West Coast and was weakening early today, although the moist air it ushered inland was expected to carry showers to Southern California later today.

The cool air was welcome relief from triple-digit temperatures that baked Southern California in record heat over the weekend. But much of the East Coast continued to shiver under unseasonably chilly temperatures, with record lows set Sunday with 46 degrees at Knoxville, Tenn., and 47 at Washington, D.C.

Heavy thunderstorms developed today over south-central Iowa, with winds of 65 mph reported near Pella, the weather service said. Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the upper Ohio Valley, the Great Lakes, the Mississippi Valley and the northern and central Plains.

Fair skies prevailed over the Northeast and Pacific Northwest.

Today's forecast called for widely scattered thunderstorms from the Mississippi Valley to the Atlantic Coast, with heavy rain expected over the southern Atlantic Coast states.

A few thunderstorms were expected to move through Southern California into the southern Plateau, with showers developing over the Pacific Northwest. Sunshine was expected over the Plains and the Rockies.

High temperatures were forecast in the 60s and 70s in the northern states; 80s and 90s in the southern two-thirds of the country; and possibly above 100 in a few places in the southern Plains and the desert Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 38 degrees in Butte, Mont., to 90 in Phoenix, Ariz.

Pope: Faith must be bedrock of culture

QUEBEC (AP) — Pope John Paul II, beginning his 12-day pilgrimage to Canada with a strong defense of traditional values, told Roman Catholics they must make faith the bedrock of modern culture.

"Do not accept a divorce between faith and culture," the pope told 250,000 worshipers — including Prime Minister John Turner — at an open-air Mass Sunday in the capital of Quebec province.

To underscore his remarks, the pontiff paid tribute to Quebec's distinctive French-Canadian culture on his first stop today, visiting the Quebec Museum to view a new exhibit of centuries of local religious art.

On the way, he waved from his bubble-top, bulletproof "popemobile" to thin early-morning crowds, among them groups of children waving tiny papal flags.

From the museum, the pope set out on the first full day's schedule of his tour, including a meeting with Indian and Eskimo groups at a shrine on the banks of the St. Lawrence River.

Several thousand native Canadians, representing Eskimos and nine Indian tribes, were scheduled to meet the pope at the sanctuary of St. Anne de Beaupre, dedicated to the patroness of Canada. It has been a pilgrimage site for centuries for Indians converted to Catholicism by French missionaries.

The session is one of three planned meetings with native groups during the pontiff's tour — the first visit by a pope to Canada.

Church officials said the pope specifically asked to meet with native groups, who are struggling to retain their cultural identity and — in some cases — demanding political self-determination.

Information released by the Conference of Canadian Bishops for the papal trip said Canada's native people have the highest rate of infant mortality in the country as well as the highest rates of suicide and unemployment.

Two years ago, John Paul met at the Vatican with four Canadian Indians who asked his help to protect their land rights.

As he opened his Canadian trip Sunday, the pontiff drew enthusiastic crowds to his processions around this historic walled city, many shouting, "Vive le pape!" — Long live the pope.

"I thank God that I had the chance to see him before I die," said Jean-Guy Grancher of Val Belair, Quebec. "But I'd say he's come 25 years too late. Nobody goes to church anymore."

Church officials say about 30 percent of Quebec's Roman Catholics attend church regularly.

At the outdoor Mass, John Paul cited contributions of various ethnic groups to the building of Canadian culture.

French Canada "has taken to itself a distinctive contribution of Amerindians and benefited from the English presence on this continent. It has been enriched by the successive waves of immigrants from all over," he said.

While the pope conducted Mass on a Laval University athletic field, late-afternoon sunshine turned to dusk, punctuated with lighted candles in the throng.

The church in heavily Roman Catholic Quebec has often been credited with enabling a distinct French-speaking culture to survive, despite the English conquest of North America in the 18th century.

But the church's unquestioned dominance over Quebec society, intact throught the 1950s, has "shattered," in the past 25 years, the pope acknowledged.

"It is henceforth open to a variety of currents of thought: it must answer innumerable new questions," John Paul said in his homily, telling his audience to hold fast to their faith.

"In this changing society, dear brothers and sisters, you must learn to articulate your faith, and to live it," he said in fluent French.

"Faith will illuminate culture, it will give it savour, it will enhance it," he said. "If it is this way, the church will continue her mission through you."

"Faith will ask culture what values it promotes, what destiny it offers to life, what place it makes for the poor and the disinherited," John Paul said.

"Such a witness respects freedom of consciences, without thus abandoning them to certain 'imperatives' of modern civilization which claim to serve human advancement but which in fact detract from respect for life."

The choir sang a beloved Quebecois folk song, "Gens du Pays," to John Paul as the ceremony ended, and the pope responded by returning to the microphone and calling out, "Vive l'eglise du Quebec" — Long live yhe Quebec church.

Israeli jets bomb suspected guerrilla targets

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets bombed suspected Palestinian guerrilla targets in central Lebanon today, hours after a Moslem leader said 50 young Lebanese have been prepared for suicide attacks against Israel's occupation forces.

A communique from the Lebanese military command said one person was killed and another wounded in the attack on the central Lebanese mountain town of Bhamdoun on the Beirut-Damascus international highway. The communique also said an ammunition dump was destroyed, but did not say who operated the dump.

The Israeli military command said its pilots reported "accurate hits" on a three-story building in Bhamdoun it said was used as a command post by the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist, pro-Moscow faction of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

But a Syrian-backed dissident PLO group said in a communique issued in Damascus that the pre-dawn raid was staged on "one of our positions in Bhamdoun," 14 miles east of Beirut.

The dissident faction, headed by Col. Saeed Mousa, also known as Abu Mousa, said the commanding officer of the post, Maj. Salem Suleiman Daoud, was killed in the attack and three other guerrillas were wounded.

Sources at the Beirut headquarters of the Druse Progressive Socialist Party, whose militia controls Bhamdoun, earlier said Israeli jets bombed civilian and military targets, causing material damage but no casualties.

It was the 15th Israeli air assault in Lebanon this year.

Israel has said that Palestinian guerrillas operating in central and eastern Lebanon are responsible for attacks against its army in the occupied southern third of the country, althought Shiite Moslem groups have claimed most of the attacks.

Shiite leader Nabih Berri, a leading member of Lebanon's national coalition government, talked at a mass rally Sunday in west Beirut about the 50 young men he said were trained for suicide attacks.

"I challenge Israel to remain in south Lebanon," said Berri, who serves as justice minister and as state minister for the south. "I have begun issuing orders to more than 50 young men like Bilal Fahs."

Fahs, a 20-year-old Shiite Moslem, crashed his bomb-laden Mercedes into an Israeli armored personnel carrier on June 16. Israel said at the time five of its soldiers were wounded. Local reporters and Lebanese police sources said some Israeli soldiers had been killed.

"We shall blow them up and blow ourselves up with them," said Berri, who heads "Amal," or hope, Lebanon's largest Shiite militia, at the rally held to commemorate "martyrs" who died during the September 1983 round of the Lebanese civil war.

Young male and female Shiites, some brandishing AK-47 rifles and some waving their fists, applauded Berri, chanting Islam's battle cry of "Allah akbar" (god is great), and called on all Lebanese to join "the path of martyrdom to liberate south Lebanon."

NIXON

The poll results, however, also reflected Nixon's foreign policy accomplishments, which included re-establishing relations with China. Seventy percent said they regarded Nixon's handling of foreign affairs favorably, while 20 percent said unfavorably and 10 percent were not sure.

On domestic problems, on the other hand, the favorable rating was 49 percent, along with 37 percent unfavorable and 14 percent not sure.

People who had attended college and were in higher income brackets were more likely than other respondents to give Nixon unfavorable ratings; 57 percent of the Democrats said they disapproved of him, while 57 percent of the Republicans said they approved. Independents were about evenly divided.

About 4 in 10 Democrats said they approved of Ford pardoning Nixon, while two-thirds of the Republicans approved. As for a future Nixon role in government, Republicans were about evenly divided while more than 60 percent of the Democrats and independents disapproved.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,451 adults across the country Aug. 1-8. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of additional reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

MONDALE

He said that the so-called economic "misery index," the addition of the unemployment and inflation rates, had been reduced from 20 points under the Carter administration — when Mondale was vice president — to 11.6 now.

"And we will bring it down more, if they'll just stand aside and get out of our way," Reagan said of his opponents.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, was heading South on a three-state swing, while Democratic vice presidential nominee Geraldine Ferraro was headed out for three days of campaigning after drawing more criticism for her abortion stand from New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor.

Ms. Ferraro said she would try to talk with the Catholic Church leader who on Sunday said she had created an incorrect "impression" that Roman Catholic teachings on abortion are flexible.

O'Connor said the "impression has been created (by Ms. Ferraro)...that there are a variety of positions that can be held in consonance with Catholic teachings." And he added, "Anyone who says that this is open to interpretation...is simply not expressing what the Catholic Church teaches."

O'Connor declined to say specifically what comment by Ms. Ferraro he was referring to. Ms. Ferraro has said that while she personally is opposed to abortion, she supports the right of women to make individual judgments on the issue.

Ms. Ferraro responded that she had "never made a statement relative to the church's teaching on abortion."

Ms. Ferraro, who attended the U.S. Open tennis tournament Sunday at Forest Hills in Queens, was heading to Lexington, Ky., with later stops in Indianapolis and Toledo, Ohio.

Bush was heading to Raleigh and Winston-Salem, N.C., the first stops on a three-day trip that also will take him to South Carolina and Georgia — all states where Republican strategists say Reagan is leading.

In an appearance in Detroit on Saturday, Bush largely blamed Congress for budget deficits that nearly tripled under Reagan.

"Everybody knows Congress spends all the money," Bush said. "I don't say they're solely responsible, but they appropriate every single dime, don't they?"

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, meanwhile, leveled criticism at Mondale, saying his proposal for a temporary halt in nuclear weapons testing to set the stage for a summit meeting would risk giving the Soviets a military advantage.

"To stop our own capability to be prepared and deter aggression is just as reprehensible as not being prepared to engage in negotiations for peace," Shultz said on NBC's "Meet the Press" program Sunday.

ACCIDENT

According to police, the accident occurred at about 9:20 p.m., when the truck driven by the Odessa man allegedly ran into the back of the victims' truck.

Another fatal accident occurred on Garfield Street in Midland about 8:30 this morning, when a car hit a parked car and knocked it against a trailer, crushing a man who was standing in-between, according to police. No other information was available at press time.

Classes in Beaufort and Colleton counties in South Carolina were canceled today. Emergency officials set up a 24-hour command post and considered evacuating Hilton Head and Fripp islands.

At least 94 military families near Beaufort were evacuated from their mobile homes, said Gunnery Sgt. Jim Kaufmann of the Parris Island Marine Base.

And officials recommended that Georgia's barrier islands be emptied, while some island businesses taped windows to keep glass from shattering should Diana hurl its punch inland.

"We are going into a voluntary evacuation of low-lying areas and the islands," said Frank May, chief of Civil Defense for Glynn County.

The 75 patients at the Heritage Nursing Home on St. Simons Island, Ga., were evacuated to a hospital and another home on Tybee Island, off Savannah, also was evacuated.

Some of the most popular resorts in Georgia's three "Golden Isles" were abandoned.

"It's just me and security and the night auditor," said Linda Williams, front desk clerk at the Hilton Hotel on Jekyll Island. "The lobby is deserted."

The Coast Guard hauled all boats that could be moved by trailer from its station on St. Simons Island to the city of Brunswick, where they could be used to help evacuate in an emergency.

Ships and submarines from the Charleston, S.C., Naval Base were ordered to ride out the storm at sea "to escape potential damage at pierside," said Cmdr. Dugald Gullies, a base spokesman.

The Navy ordered the evacuation of 91 airplanes from two Jacksonville area bases.

CARE

federal funds for child care programs, requires criminal record checks of day care operators and their employees, and calls for states to maintain 24-hour toll-free telephone numbers for reporting child molestation incidents.

"Child abuse is not new," she said. "But the increasing use of child care centers by working parents provides child molesters with a greater opportunity to abuse our children."

"The lack of protection for our children is shocking," she said.

In its latest budget legislation, the Reagan administration has proposed increasing the child care tax credit to 40 percent of qualifying expenses for families with annual incomes of $10,000 or less. Their credit now is 30 percent.

"While the dependent care tax credit is an excellent universal support for child care, it does not significantly improve the purchasing power of low income families," Mayor Thomas H. Cooke Jr. of East Orange, N.J., told Miller's hearing on behalf of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Diane Ahrens, county commissioner of Ramsey County, Minn., urged Congress to consider making the dependent-care tax credit refundable for families who don't earn enough to pay income taxes.

"Currently, many families who do not earn enough income to pay taxes are unable to benefit from the credit despite the fact that they may have substantial child care costs," she said.

She also called for Senate approval of House-passed legislation that would aid local agencies to establish and operate information and referral centers. Without such services, "families are often unaware of the child care options that are available to them and suitable to their needs," she said.

Unit's gung-ho attitude raises questions on State Guard role

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — The 105th Texas State Guard Battalion have been described as "the best trained battalion in the United States" but are near being discharged for being "just too gung-ho," State Guard officials say.

On their training weekends, the men of the 105th spend their nights on their bellies, crawling up hills in preparation for dawn attacks on unseen enemy forces. The know the feel of an M-16 rifle pressed against their camouflage combat fatigues and military gear.

Col. Maurice Lambert, who oversees five State Guard battalions in North Texas, recently described the 105th as "the best trained battalion in the United States."

But Lambert said the 60-man group of volunteers is hovering a half-step away from dismissal.

State Guard officials said the 105th has become a combat team — a maverick pack of enthusiastic weekend warriors led by a former Green Beret, Robert C. Holloway of Fort Worth.

Brig. Gen. Thomas N. Fuller, who retired last week as the Texas State Guard's deputy commander, said the 105th is "just too gung-ho."

Recruiting brochures for the State Guard depict a soldier poised for action, eyes front, rifle in hand with the slogan boldly asking, "Are You Equal to the Task?" Yet State Guard officials stress that their primary mission is civil defense work, aiding law enforcement in the aftermath of a hurricane or tornado.

"We believe this (combat training) is what we're supposed to be doing," Michael Smith, a company commander in the 105th and a Dallas private detective, told Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

But State Guard officials said the 105th is out of line.

"They're going to have to get in line or get out," said Adjutant General Willie L. Scott, the Austin-based commander of all state military forces, which includes the Texas Army National Guard, the Texas Air National Guard and the Texas State Guard.

'Boll Weevils' unsure of Mondale

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Several Texans in the conservative Democratic "Boll Weevil" group say they're feeling hard pressed to support the Mondale-Ferraro ticket and the Democratic platform.

"I'm very fond of Fritz Mondale, but I do not like the fact that he has gone to the lengths he has with the 'ultra' wing of the party," Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Marlin, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"He is not in the middle of the road where most voters lie," Leath said. "(If) I did a poll in my district, I would find a 2-to-1 split" favoring the Republicans.

Despite endorsements from Gov. Mark White, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and other statewide leaders, the national Democratic standard-bearers apparently can expect little help from Texas conservative congressmen in their uphill battle to carry the state considered critical to the campaign, the newspaper reported.

Walter Mondale and Rep. Geraldine Ferraro are under attack in their predominantly rural districts for their stands on energy, defense and social issues, the Texas Democrats said in interviews.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, the chairman of the Boll Weevils, officially known as the Conservative Democratic Forum, said he will support the ticket but added that Mondale and Ms. Ferraro are "in trouble" in his West Texas district "because of the policies they are advocating."

Ms. Ferraro has come under fire for her support of a natural gas decontrol bill, opposed by Texas energy interests. Seven Texans were among 19 congressmen from oil-producing states who wrote her last month urging her to withdraw her support of the legislation.

She was among more than 200 Northeastern and Midwestern congressmen who petitioned Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill for a floor vote on the measure before Congress adjourns next month.

Texans signing a letter initiated by Rep. Ralph Hall, D-Rockwall, urging that Ms. Ferraro withdraw her support for the controversial deregulation bill, were Rep. Sam Hall, D-Marshall; Stenholm; Leath; Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Lufkin; Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock; and Rep. Tom Vandergriff, D-Arlington.

The letter to Ms. Ferraro, sent after the Democratic National Convention in July, called on her to remove her name from the petition to "project a sense of fairness" on the volatile natural gas issue.

"We also feel that such action on your part would renew enthusiasm for the Democratic ticket in our state," the Boll Weevil congressmen said.

Sam Hall was among several who said they are upset that there has been no response from Ms. Ferraro to the letter.

"I'm a Democrat, but they've got some things that are far and away against the best interests of Texas," Sam Hall said.

STATE IN BRIEF

Testimony begins today

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys for the Houston school district and the NAACP plan to march back into federal court today to begin hearing testimony in the 28-year-old Houston school desegregation case.

Efforts to reach a compromise failed last week and school district attorney Kelly Frels said discussions Sunday dealt only with the witnesses to be called in the case.

School district officials plan to argue the system has not discriminated against students, Frels said.

"We haven't discriminated against any group based on ethnicity or race," Frels said.

Bribery evidence due

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge planned to hear evidence today from attorneys urging the dismissal of a case against a northwest Harris County millionaire and seven other businessmen accused of bribing two Mexican oil company officials.

Two years ago, the U.S. Justice Department predicted the case against oil-field equipment tycoon Donald G. Crawford and other defendants would prove the strength of the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act.

But now the case is bogged down in federal court because of legal complications.

Attorneys planned to present evidence today to U.S. District Judge George E. Cire, who will decide whether to drop an indictment against Crawford on charges he violated the 7-year-old anti-bribery law.

Racial violence increases

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Increased patterns of racial violence and tensions in units of the Texas Department of Corrections will continue, inmates say, despite efforts being made to reform the state's prison system.

George Solomon, a 30-year-old inmate serving his second term in the TDC, said the prisons have become places where doing time is "hell."

"There's no control here any more," Solomon told the Austin American-Statesman.

"People are walking a thin line and can snap at any time at anything," he said. "It's not random violence. There's a reason. But it doesn't take much to get hurt in here. Any time you get in somebody's business — you get in debt over dope or gambling — there's going to be repercussions."

Parole practice 'farce'

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge says parole officers and prison officials are making a farce of the parole process by not enforcing a 1977 law requiring felons who use deadly weapons to serve at least a third of their sentence.

The Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday that the failures result in many former inmates avoiding parole supervision that would otherwise be required.

Both situations violate state laws enacted in a legislative crackdown on crime seven years ago.

Corrections officials say a record-keeping problem results in the laws routinely being overlooked. They say they do not know how many violent criminals have been released prematurely because of the record-keeping problem.

Betty Blum Marcus dies

DALLAS (AP) — Betty Blum Marcus, 61, whose involvement in civic and cultural affairs stretched over four decades, died of cancer Sunday night at her Dallas home.

At her death, she was president of the Dallas Parks and Recreation Board and a member of numerous boards, many of them connected with the arts.

The City of Dallas announced last year that a park surrounding a new symphony hall in the arts district now under construction on the northern edge of downtown Dallas will be named the Betty B. Marcus Park.

She was born March 6, 1923 in New York City. She graduated from the Dalton School and Bennett Junior College. She was a columnist for Mademoiselle Magazine and fashion editor of Harper's Junior Bazaar Magazine before marrying department store executive Edward S. Marcus on Nov. 18, 1946 and moving to Dallas.

Her husband, the son of the founder of the Neiman-Marcus department store chain, was a brother to Stanley Marcus, now the chairman-emeritus of Neiman-Marcus. He preceded her in death.

Arrangements were pending at Sparkman-Hillcrest Funeral Home in Dallas.

Landon celebrates 97th birthday

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — At 97, former Gov. Alf M. Landon is "kind of an inspiration" to Ronald Reagan, the president told him in a birthday telephone call.

Several hundred people attended a birthday celebration Sunday in Landon's home.

"You've reached the status of a folk hero here in our nation. It must be very rewarding to you," Reagan said, noting that he has 24 years to go to match Landon's longevity.

"It just means so much to hear from you," Landon told Reagan in the two-minute call.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — John and Bo Derek say their new film, "Bolero," may be a "silly bit of fluff," but it helps pay for their 32-acre Santa Barbara ranch.

"Oh, if the day ever comes when I can raise money without Bo, then maybe I'll make a different sort of film. But right now, what we're doing is helping pay for the ranch which we love," said Derek, 58, who wrote and directed "Bolero" with his wife as star and producer.

The Cannon Pictures film was released without a rating, presumably because extensive nudity and sex scenes would have earned it an X.

It grossed more than $4 million dollars during its four-day Labor Day weekend debut, but critics scored it as boring and silly.

"The critics don't worry us," Derek said. "But why do they feel the need to attack us? This film isn't meant to be taken seriously."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star George Jones says honkytonk drinking turned into years of alcohol and drug dependency. But he says the wild ways that got him the nickname "no show" Jones for his habit of missing concerts are behind him now.

"I was about as crazy and messed up and wild as you can get. I was doing all kinds of drugs, marijuana, cocaine, booze. You name it and I was doing it," Jones said.

"Changing my life wasn't easy...But now that it's done, it's fantastic," he added in a copyright story in Sunday editions of The Tennessean of Nashville.

"A couple of years ago, I realized it was up to me to put the pieces of my life back together again," said Jones, who is divorced from singer Tammy Wynette. "I did some strong, deep thinking, and I knew it had to change, and I knew I had to do it alone."

Idaho town remembers Knievel's jump

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — It's been 10 years since motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel attempted his Snake River Canyon leap, which outraged some people here but had others savoring an event that put the town on the map.

Throngs gathered on the weekend of Sept. 7-8, 1974, to watch Knievel and his rocket-powered "skycycle" attempt the 4,781-foot leap from the south to the north side of the scenic gorge.

In a matter of minutes, the months of planning, hype and national attention ended in failure. A parachute opened prematurely, and Knievel's machine landed uneventfully near the brown river hundreds of feet below. Knievel's only injury consisted of scratches inflicted on himself as he tried to claw off his face mask.

The event drew a horde of bikers and biking fans to the area, and Knievel claimed he was paid $1.8 million for the attempt.

Local jaycees lost $5,000 when their beer truck was plundered and a Cadillac parked nearby was turned into a pile of junk when it was burned. A landmark cross at the canyon's Shoshone Falls also was torched.

Twin Falls quickly returned to being a bucolic, desert town. For the 45-year-old stuntman, life lately has settled into traveling around in a bus to places like Butte, Mont., where he recently participated in a golf tournament.

He told reporters there he lives in Cleveland and paints, an activity he took up in 1976 after he fractured his pelvis and hands in an attempt to jump over 13 double-decker buses in London.

But the memories remain vivid for many locals, with some saying the town still is reaping benefits.

The Knievel extravaganza continues to bring tourists to the Snake River Canyon, says Charles Sieber, former manager of the motel where the stuntman was headquartered.

"They look off the bridge and do you know what they want to see? Evel Knievel's jump site, that's what," said Sieber.

Sieber remembers Knievel as "a big-hearted buster" who paid his bills and bought drinks for everybody in a crowded bar.

"But nobody ever bought them for him," Sieber said."There was an awful lot of people that used him."

Some people who say the town was used by Knievel charge he attracted riff-raff and left a trail of rubble, not to mention unpaid bills.

Banker Dave Mead, harassed by six motorcyclists during the Knievel era, said he went to bed with a gun for the first time since the Korean War.

An Idaho Power Co. manager who hired extra guards for the Shoshone Falls power plant said some of his workers were fired upon during the hoopla.

Knievel, a pioneer among motorcycle stuntmen who had reputedly broken or fractured 433 bones by 1975, barnstormed 39 cities before the leap, announcing his arrival with dry dive-bombing runs his pilots staged in a leased Lear jet. Meanwhile, features were aired on numerous television programs.

The launch site Knievel used belonged to family of current Police Chief Tim Qualls, a detective at the time, and Knievel recruited a prominent real estate broker, Mike Gray, to act as his spokesman.

"This guy introduced himself and said he was looking for a canyon to jump," Gray said.

Gray said he replied he was the "only expert available on canyons to jump."

Gray remembers that Knievel showed him information about his proposed jump of the Colorado River's Grand Canyon, which was blocked by the Interior Department. After that, it didn't take long to realize Knievel was serious.

The real estate broker ended up acting as Knievel's coordinator in talks with the city and county of Twin Falls.

Gray said Knievel called him every night between 3 a.m. and 4 a.m. to talk about details.

"And I mean every single night," he said.

Now, things are quieter all the way around, and the controversies center around things like sewage treatment just downstream from the Knievel launch site.

Tennessean turns booze into bucks with DWI song

MANCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — The drunken driving arrests of a sheriff and district attorney have been immortalized in song and the playful platter is climbing right up the charts — sort of.

Even though one Manchester radio station has refused to play it, "The Ballad of Sheriff Bobby" has sold more than 2,000 copies in the last month, says Al Clouse, the man who wrote and recorded the song.

"And it hasn't even gotten out of the county yet," Clouse said. "It's just starting to get played outside the county."

The country tune recounts the case of Coffee County Sheriff Bobby McCullough, who served a 10-day jail sentence this summer after losing his appeal of a 1983 conviction for driving while intoxicated. The DWI charge stemmed from a September 1982 traffic accident in Manchester.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q6 ♡Q92 ◇A10762 ♣QJ10
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	1 NT
Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. — Be careful. In the balancing seat, partner could bid one no trump on as few as 11-12 HCP — with 16, he would first double. Still, your hand merits a move toward game, and two no trump is the obvious bid.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡J103 ◇QJ983 ♣K1052
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A. — It might seem that, with only 7 HCP, you should be content to leave well enough alone. However, you have excellent fillers and a fair five-card suit, so we feel that the hand merits an invitational raise to two no trump.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠854 ♡Q853 ◇AJ95 ♣62
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A. — It is unlikely that you have game, but you should rarely pass partner's overcall when you have four-card support and useful side values. Raise to two hearts. That not only makes it harder for the opponents to get back into the auction, but confirmation of a fit could be the key to unlock a game for your side.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A6542 ♡J103 ◇7 ♣A876
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A. — If you bid one spade or raised to two hearts, you need to brush up on your basic bidding. A bid of one spade would not be forcing, and could end the auction when four hearts is a spread. In support of hearts, your hand is almost the equivalent of an opening bid, so it is only a question of whether you should bid four hearts or three. Lack of a fourth heart is the compelling argument against a jump to game. Be content to invite partner to game with a raise to three hearts.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ954 ♡763 ◇94 ♣AK9
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A. — Since you have a balanced minimum, the only sound action is to pass. Don't worry about the fact that you are somewhat short of stoppers in the red suits. A rebid of two spades in this sequence virtually guarantees a six-card suit.

Q.6 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q76 ♡8 ◇AK8763 ♣Q85
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡
2 ◇	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?
A. — Partner surely has nine or ten cards in the minor suits, and he must have at least a couple of hearts. Therefore, he is short in spades and, as a result, your hands should fit very well. We suggest you waste no time and leap straight to five diamonds.

Loving but reserved, you may have difficulty expressing affection. Open up to parents, offspring!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A tough choice could be uppermost in your thoughts. Isolate yourself while you make a hard decision. A Leo has some terrific suggestions -- follow them and you make new financial gains!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Creative teamwork proves very profitable now. Bend the rules a little and you gain new friends. Romance is more rewarding than in the recent past. Keep any diet resolutions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Show your sentimental side to a child. Financial and business transactions should be handled through normal channels. Get in touch with a friend. A platonic relationship could develop into love.

Warn the teens

A recent national survey by the Gallup Organization indicates that a change is taking place rapidly in regard to young people and their use of drugs. The poll found that more young people are turning from use of drugs to use of alcohol.

That isn't particularly surprising since psychologists have told us for years that youngsters will imitate their parents. They see what we are doing and follow suit. Unfortunately in that regard, they can drop one bad habit for another.

We aren't intending to imply that alcohol consumption is a total taboo — for those of legal drinking age. And we aren't naive either; we fully realize that during the "breaking away" years young adults are going to venture down paths they haven't taken before. That's part of growing up.

Only in some instances it can lead suspecting youngsters down some awfully hazardous paths. Some of them don't even offer a way back. And that's just what George Gallup Jr.'s most recent poll shows. According to his sampling, one of eight teens or 12 percent admit to combining alcohol and drug use at the same time.

What's so bad about that? Medical professionals have warned against such a mixing for years because alcohol can interact with particular drugs to cause severe, sometimes fatal, reactions. That means mixing alcohol and other types of drugs is a medical version of Russian roulette.

For the record, Gallup's poll of 416 people between the ages of 13 and 18 was conducted nationwide by telephone and found, among other things, that 59 percent of teens have used alcohol more than once and an additional 17 percent said they have tried alcohol on a single occasion. Twenty-three percent of those polled said they do not drink. That final listing was the smallest percentage that had been recorded in Gallup's surveys.

So, what can we surmise from the pollster's results? Obviously they should not be an outright condemnation of the actions of every teenager. Some do not use drugs or alcohol and their abstinence is commendable.

Not long ago a lot of Americans got concerned about drinking drivers and the hazard they present to society. Through the efforts of a lot of those interested people, pressure is being brought to bear on drunken drivers.

Maybe the same kind of effort is needed to warn our young people of the risk they may be creating for themselves.

Strange bedfellows

It is easy to see why Col. Muammar Khadafy, the terrorist-dictator of Libya, should jubilantly enter into a treaty of union with Morocco. Scorned by all the Western democracies, regarded with suspicion by most of his Arab neighbors and now facing growing resistance within his own country, Khadafy is sorely in need of a friend.

But what has Morocco to gain from an alliance with the ruthless Khadafy beyond possibly some military assistance in its continuing skirmishes with Algeria-backed guerrillas in the former Spanish Sahara?

And why should so cosmopolitan a ruler as King Hassan II of Morocco extend such a courtesy to an upstart like Khadafy who is motivated only by personal greed and ambition?

Reaction to the treaty has been swift in the Western world. The French are greatly concerned over the impact of the alliance on Chad where their troops have faced Libyan forces in a civil conflict. And Spain, which faces Morocco across the 10-mile Strait of Gibraltar, is already considering moves to strengthen its ties to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The deal with Khadafy obviously was a serious mistake for which Morocco eventually must pay a high price in the court of world opinion.

Another View:

The other 'Olympics'

Not to be outdone by the capitalist world, communist nations have just finished staging their own reasonable facsimile of the 1984 Summer Olympic Games — without, of course, calling them that. Although there was little of the commercial hype that attended the official version in Los Angeles, the medal ceremonies, the anthem-playing, the flag-raisings and the meticulous calculation of who set more world records (the communists, by an 18-12 margin) were suspiciously similar at the Moscow festival billed as the Friendship Games. And notwithstanding the lower-key atmosphere at Moscow, the boasting that followed was at least as boorish as anything seen here last month. It was all too reminiscent of the childish taunt that "my daddy can lick your daddy."

Suffice it to say that a lot of splendid athletes performed in both places, and that it's a shame their achievements were at least partially overshadowed by the jingoism and biased comparisons of those non-participants to whom national pride seems to take precedence over individual achievement.

There remains the major question of whether the Soviets, who don't even recognize South Korea as a sovereign nation, will attend the 1988 Games in Seoul, South Korea — assuming, of course, that those Games take place as scheduled. For there's the even larger question of what will happen to the Olympic movement itself, caught as it is in the crossfire of superpower antagonism.

The International Olympic Committee will hold its first-ever extraordinary session in November, probably in the quiet confines of its headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland. That will be soon enough, and the right kind of setting, for confronting the problem of what to do, if anything, about future boycotts — specifically, how to deal, if at all, with boycotters. The prospect is not a bright one, seen from today's perspective. But if time doesn't quite heal all wounds, at least it gives people a chance to think a little more calmly — and, one hopes, a little less chauvinistically — about how to preserve an international phenomenon that, in spite of everything, is richly worth preserving.

BIBLE VERSE

But love your enemies, and do them good, and lend, never despairing. Luke 6:35

JACK ANDERSON

Teachers can lead way to space

WASHINGTON — Today's youth face the most awesome challenge of the ages. They stand on the threshold of space. Their frontier is the universe itself.

Jack Anderson

It is a vast frontier, yet to be explored, and they are the Columbuses and the Magellans of tomorrow. They have whole new worlds to discover.

The way into space is through high technology. Those who would explore new worlds must begin with the world of electronics.

They must master the computer, the extension of the human brain. The nation with the best computer technology will gain an enormous head start in the exploration of space.

As surely as there are planets and stars as far as the eye can see, there are also riches beyond imagination and discoveries beyond comprehension waiting for future astronauts to find. The prospects are breathtaking.

This is the thinking behind the Young Astronauts program, which President Reagan has ordered his subordinates to develop. He knows how fascinated young people are with space. They swarm to movie theaters to watch interplanetary adventure; they play space games on video sets.

The president hopes to lift their gaze from video games and movie screens to the heavens themselves. He wants to stir their imaginations, stimulate their spirit of adventure and prepare them for the greatest of all adventures — the conquest of space.

This is also the reason why Reagan decided to choose a teacher as the public's first representative to ride the space shuttle. The president recognized that teachers must point the way into space if today's children are to master the necessary technology and become tomorrow's space explorers.

How do I know the president had such lofty motives? Who am I to say he didn't select a teacher as the first passenger just to get the teachers' vote in November, as some have charged.

As it happened, I proposed the Young Astronauts program to the White House, and I have been in on the planning from the beginning.

A full year ago, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration formed a task force to consider ways to stimulate young Americans to prepare for the space challenge. Its first meeting was held on Aug. 23, 1983, and one recommendation was to invite a teacher to fly on the space shuttle.

About the same time, I began meeting with NASA officials, including Administrator James Beggs, about the Young Astronauts idea. I presented it to Reagan on Oct. 14, 1983.

Meanwhile, an executive committee was assigned to recommend who should represent the public on future space flights. Its final report, dated April 4, 1984, listed a teacher first.

On June 19, 1984, Reagan authorized the Young Astronauts program. On Aug. 27, he agreed with the recommendation that a teacher should be the first civilian in space, perhaps followed eventually by a young astronaut. Never in the backstage discussions was politics given any precedence.

As a founder of the forthcoming Young Astronaut movement, I was invited to the launching of the Discovery space shuttle. I can tell young space fans that no movie, no videotape can match the real experience.

The sight of the spaceship, clinging like a huge papoose to the monstrous rocket, was inspiring in the morning light. In the full sun, the rays reflected off Discovery's gray tiles, projecting a look of pure whiteness.

Then the monster came to life with a sudden shudder, blew a volcanic cloud out of its tail and, as if in a terrible rage, rose agonizingly off the ground. For several seconds, the tail looked like an inverted volcano blowing out flame. Then it lunged into the sky and disappeared like a retreating blowtorch into the stratosphere.

For the teacher who rides this monster, it should be a trip to remember.

EVANS & NOVAK

Fritz didn't like Tip's advice

WASHINGTON — Although Walter Mondale nursed the hurt in private, he was furious at House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill's unwanted advice via TV and the newspapers to "stop acting like a gentleman and come out fighting" in his uphill presidential campaign.

Rowland Evans

"He was damned sensitive about that," one Mondale insider told us. When a reporter asked his reaction, Mondale spun on his heel and walked away. He failed to understand that over his long Labor Day Cape Cod weekend, O'Neill writhed in fury at the evening television news showing Mondale "getting the hell beat out of him by Reagan," as O'Neill told a friend.

Robert Novak

By last Thursday the mood between Fritz and Tip had warmed. O'Neill went out of his way to blame the nominee's staff for campaign snafus when he introduced Mondale to the House Democratic caucus. Not present was campaign chairman Jim Johnson, who stands in minimum high regard with House Democrats.

DEBATE GAMES

Walter F.Mondale's representatives came away from their first negotiating session on campaign debates with the clear perception of a ploy by James Baker III, White House chief of staff, to avoid a vice-presidential debate.

Baker did not say it in so many words. But his Democratic counterparts believe he will, in time, offer a specific number of total debates, presidential and vice presidential — possibly three but more likely two. Since Mondale's agents will snap at the maximum number of battles with President Reagan, that would leave Vice President George Bush and Rep. Geraldine Ferarro out in the cold.

That fits White House inclinations. The president's men can see little good but much bad coming out of a confrontation between patrician George Bush and the feisty female who is the first woman ever named to a presidential ticket.

PERCY'S NEW FRIEND

A secret supporter of Sen. Charles H. Percy in his Senate race against Rep. Paul Simon is the man who upset Simon in the 1972 Democratic primary for governor: former governor Dan Walker.

Walker remains a Democrat and has not publicly endorsed Percy. But he was present at a seaborne fundraiser for Percy on Lake Michigan Sept. 5 hosted by Walker's Republican wife. During the evening, Walker had nothing good to say about Simon and considerable praise for Percy.

However, Republican politicians don't want Percy talking up Walker's friendliness. He was an unpopular one-term governor, and public remorse over the outcome of the 1972 primary is considered one of Simon's major political assets in the race against Percy.

BAKER'S NEW REALISM

The hint in Sen. Howard Baker's speech to the Republican National Convention in Dallas that running for president in 1988 was not such a great idea for him resulted partly from his feeling that the Republican Party has undergone immense change in the Reagan years.

Insiders now say that the odds are heavily stacked against Baker running, partly because of the Reaganization of his party, partly because he thinks Vice President George Bush will go into 1988 with a commanding lead.

Baker, now sampling law firms with Washington outlets that he might join after leaving the Senate next January, lunched last week with former secretary of state William P. Rogers, senior partner in a big Manhattan firm. But Baker is more likely to choose the famed Houston-based firm of Vinson and Elkins, which played a major role in Lyndon B. Johnson's meteoric political rise in the 1940s.

NOT ME, MR. MEESE

Gov. Jim Thompson of Illinois, widely regarded as a possible selection for attorney general if presidential counselor Edwin Meese's nomination is withdrawn, has informed Meese he has no interest in the job.

The assurance was given when the two men met by chance in Dallas during the Republican Convention. Meese noted he had seen published reports that Thompson was interested in the prestigious Cabinet post for which Meese remains the nominee, pending an independent counsel's report on charges about his finances. The governor replied he had no interest in going to Washington.

Although Thompson has not slammed shut the door in advance to a Justice Department offer, he is unequivocal about another Cabinet spot for which he has been rumored: secretary of labor. Absolutely not, says Thompson.

ANTHONY HARRIGAN

Important election coming

Recalling presidential election campaigns since the end of World War II, I have the distinct impression that this is one of the quieter contests. The struggle between Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale isn't anywhere as fierce as the battle between John Kennedy and Richard Nixon or between Barry Goldwater and Lyndon Johnson.

Anthony Harrigan

The American people seem more subdued than in recent years. They haven't gone into this election season with anger in their hearts, as has been the case in the past.

Perhaps the attitude towards te election, which I believe I detect, is indicative of a general mood of contentment. Radical passions seem to have run their course in America for the time being. Hardly a soul is speaking of radicalizing American society, which was the demand of militants in the early 1970s. While the world remains a dangerous place, the American people haven't yielded to an ideology of fear. The freezeniks failed utterly in their attempt to implant such an ideology in the public mind. On the economic count, the country experienced rough bumps in the late recession, but the recovery has been remarkable. Hope has been restored. Altogether, there is little for extremists to feed upon.

This is not to say that the election outcome is unimportant. On the contrary, the election is very important. The country has the greatest need for steadiness in the next four years. American's defense buildup, commenced after years of neglect, is only started. Lasting national security depends on continued effort. The economy must move from recovery to sustained growth. Major problems must be dealt with intelligently, problems such as massive foreign debt, trade imbalances, excessive public borrowing, and adjustment to technological change.

The American people must be mindful of contemporary solutions for contemporary problems. They must not retreat to the "solutions" of 1932. The country must continue to pull away from a mistaken liberalism which, however well-intentioned, led the nation to miscalculate the situation at home and abroad.

While the American people clearly don't wish to get emotionally worked up about election issues in 1984, one hopes that the electorate has reached sound conclusions as to the issues in the campaign and that it has determined the nation won't return to the redistributionist economics of yesterday and the international policies of giveaway and appeasement.

Thoughtful Americans have a very clear responsibility to turn out on election day and make their votes count. A sad aspect of our national life is that there are still many voters who are herded to the polls like sheep and who don't understand the issues or what is at stake for the country in a presidential election. The herded voter must not be decisive in 1984.

Moreover, a responsible President needs a responsible Congress. Intelligent citizens recognize the peril inherent in a political stalemate wherein a responsible president is confronted with an irresponsible congress. Tragically, many congressmen in recent years have been irresponsible insofar as domestic or foreign issues are concerned, favoring massive new entitlement programs while opposing essential funding for national defense.

A quiet campaign season should not be a season of unconcern or thoughtfulness.

Separation Mondale's 'non-issue'

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says Walter F. Mondale is raising the "non-issue" of church-state separation simply because his Democratic campaign "doesn't have a prayer" of defeating President Reagan.

"It's a farce," the president of the conservative Moral Majority said Sunday as he made back-to-back appearances on the CBS program "Face the Nation" and ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"No one is questioning anyone's religion," Falwell said. "No one wants to establish a Christian state.... We want a nation under God. That's all the president, and every president since Washington, has called for."

The fundamentalist minister said that "Mr. Mondale, for lack of an issue and a point of vulnerability on the president, has created the church-state issue. Mr. Mondale, who doesn't have a prayer — even a voluntary prayer — of being elected, is creating a non-issue."

That remark was a reference to the proposed constitutional amendment to allow voluntary organized prayer in public schools — a proposal supported by President Reagan and by Falwell's Moral Majority but opposed by Mondale.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said on the ABC program that he thought Falwell's assessment of Mondale's election chances went too far.

"I think the Rev. Falwell...would be a little bit more careful about...saying Mr. Mondale doesn't have prayer. That's getting into electioneering," Moynihan said.

Other participants on the two programs were critical of Reagan's campaign-trail comments about politics and religion being inseparable. Reagan said in Dallas on Aug. 23 that "politics and morality are inseparable. And as morality's foundation is religion, religion and politics are necessarily related."

Laurence Tribe, professor of constitutional law at Harvard University, said, "I'm most concerned that he is attempting to co-opt the moral authority of religion, as though we had some assurance that God was a Republican."

"First of all, the president is essentially trying to sanctify public institutions with religious ceremony and religious symbols," Tribe said. "...Secondly, the president is denouncing those who disagree with him on sensitive issues like abortion or school prayer as ungodly, unreligious, intolerant. Third and most important, the president and the current administration are identifying themselves with God's authority."

Rabbi David Saperstein, director of the Religious Action Center of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, accused Reagan of speaking differently to disparate audiences about religion's role in government.

"Before B'nai B'rith (a Jewish service organization), he reaffirms his advocacy of the separation of church and state," Saperstein said. "But when he steps before religious right groups comprised of some people who already have announced they want to create a Christian country, trying to tear down the wall separating church and state, he did not rebuke them, he did not talk about the separation of church and state but rather encourages them and gives them legitimacy and sanction."

The Rev. Thomas Kelly, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Louisville, Ky., said that while "politics and religion are certainly connected in various spheres," the current debate is trivializing the link.

"I see it both as sensationalism and trivialization," Kelly said. "...Some of the comments that have been made by the various candidates attacking one another on religious questions seem to me to be very superficial."

In Buffalo, N.Y., on Sunday, former Sen. George McGovern said, "We need to add an 11th commandment: Thou shalt not use God as a political football."

In a speech to several hundred people at a building trades workers picnic, the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee said: "The Reaganites seem to think that you're not really an American unless the state teaches kids to pray the Reagan way. Let me ask you: Who appointed Ronald Reagan to tell us where and when to pray?"

NATION IN BRIEF

Warnings considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of delay, legislation to strengthen health warnings on cigarette packs is heading for final House action, although its fate in the Senate remains uncertain.

The House today was scheduled to consider a bill that calls for replacement of the current warning with four new, rotating warnings.

It was the first item on the agenda as the House and Senate prepared for a busy week as remaining days in the 1984 session were dwindling, with adjournment set for Oct. 5.

Only four of the 13 appropriations bills needed to fund the federal government for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 have been signed into law. Congress must take care of these items, or lump the money into a catchall emergency spending bill, if it is to avoid a post-election lame-duck session.

Complicating the chore are major deadlocks over defense spending levels and a budget blueprint. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., planned to meet early this week — their second get-together on the subject — to try to seek a compromise that would break the logjam.

Access charge opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer advocacy group is seeking to have the Supreme Court overturn plans by federal regulators to institute "access charges" that would shift more of the cost of telephone service onto local service bills.

A lawyer for the National Association of State Utility Consumer Advocates, Fred Goldberg, said Sunday the organization would file a petition today asking the high court to reivew the proposal.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia last June upheld the authority of the Federal Communications Commission to impose the new charges, but the association of state-employed consumer advocates claims that ruling ignores precedent.

Heat deaths questioned

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Police are awaiting results of autopsies and questioning neighbors and witnesses in an effort to find out why two children died in the back seat of a car, where they had been left for more than 21 hours in temperatures that hit 100 degrees.

Quindell Lewis, 24, the father of the two, was booked into county jail on two complaints of involuntary manslaughter and two counts of child endangerment after the bodies were discovered, police said Sunday.

Kanasha Von Shay Lewis, 1, and Melba Denise Lewis, 2, were found on the floorboards in the back seat of a 1972 Pontiac sedan about 6:20 p.m. Saturday. Witnesses said the girls had been placed in the car about 9 p.m. Friday.

"Apparently, the car was used as a sleeping area," said homicide Lt. Paul Ybarrondo.

Parents' trial to begin

ALBION, Ind. (AP) — A couple whose church shuns conventional medicine in favor of faith healing want a judge to keep statements they made to a county coroner out of their trial in the death of their infant daughter from an untreated illness, lawyers said.

David B. Bergmann, 28, and his wife, Kathleen, 27, of rural Syracuse were scheduled to go on trial today on one count each of reckless homicide and child neglect resulting in death.

The Bergmanns are members of the Faith Assembly, a religious sect that teaches its followers to practice faith healing rather than seek conventional medical treatment, prosecutors say.

Audit reveals no loss

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — National Guard officials say a special audit uncovered no sign that weapons or equipment were diverted from an armory here to a local paramilitary group aiding rebel forces in Nicaragua.

The probe was ordered when it was learned that William Courtney, the armory's full-time civilian supply officer as well as a chief warrant officer in the Guard, was among seven Americans who had gone to Central America in late August as part of the anti-communist paramilitary group called Civilian Military Assistance.

Dana Parker Jr., captain of a Special Forces branch of the Alabama National Guard and a Huntsville police detective, and James Powell III, a Memphis, Tenn., flight instructor, were killed when a helicopter in which they were flying was shot down in Nicaragua Sept. 1.

The specially ordered audit of National Guard materiel found that "All weapons, all equipment are accounted for," Dan Donahue, chief public affairs officer for the National Guard in Washington, said Sunday.

Small quake hits Pacific

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A strong earthquake rumbled under the Pacific Ocean, sending two quick jolts through the San Francisco area but apparently not triggering a tidal wave, authorities said.

The National Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., said the quake that struck at about 8:15 registered 6.4 on the Richter scale. No damage or injuries were reported.

The earthquake was centered about 100 miles west of Cape Mendocino, according to Tom McEvilly, assistant director of the seismographic station at the University of California at Berkeley. Estimates on location of the epicenter could vary up to 50 miles, he said.

Theory gets day in court

ATLANTA (AP) — Physicist William Shockley, who claims blacks as a group are genetically inferior to whites, has a forum in federal court to discuss that theory in a libel suit against a black reporter.

The 74-year-old scientist, who won the Nobel Prize in 1956 for his role in the invention of the transistor, was scheduled to be the first witness as trial resumed today in his $2.5 million libel suit against Cox Enterprises Inc. and Roger Witherspoon, a former reporter for The Atlanta Constitution.

Shockley claims Witherspoon libeled him in an article he wrote about the scientist's theories on race and his proposal for voluntary sterilization of the "genetically disadvantaged."

The article was published in 1980 by the Constitution, one of the newspapers in the Cox group.

New submarine studied

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — The Navy is studying proposals for a radically redesigned nuclear-powered attack submarine that will run faster, deeper and quieter than any ever built by a Western power, according to a published report.

Storm Diana has varied effects

Island dwellers head inland

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

BRUNSWICK, Ga. — Many residents of St. Simons and Jekyll islands moved to the mainland as tropical storm Diana hovered off the Florida coast, but officials noted early today that people were not overly concerned.

"There's very little anxiety," said Civil Defense Director Frank May of Brunswick. "It (the storm) came up suddenly. The people are taking it real slow. If one had been building for three or four days, there might be more concern."

May said 30 percent of the 800 residents of Jekyll Island had moved temporarily to the mainland, but he could give no estimate for St. Simons' 13,000 residents.

People on the two islands were urged to leave Sunday after a hurricane watch was issued as the tropical storm, packing winds of 70 mph, approached the Georgia coast. A tropical storm becomes a hurricane when the winds reach 74 mph.

The main concern among island residents was that tides would be pushed above normal levels Sunday night, flooding the causeways linking the islands to the mainland, said a Glynn County Police Department spokesman who declined to be identified.

"We were only concerned that it would flood the causeways and it did not flood," he said. "Normally on a super high tide we have some minor flooding. That's no big deal."

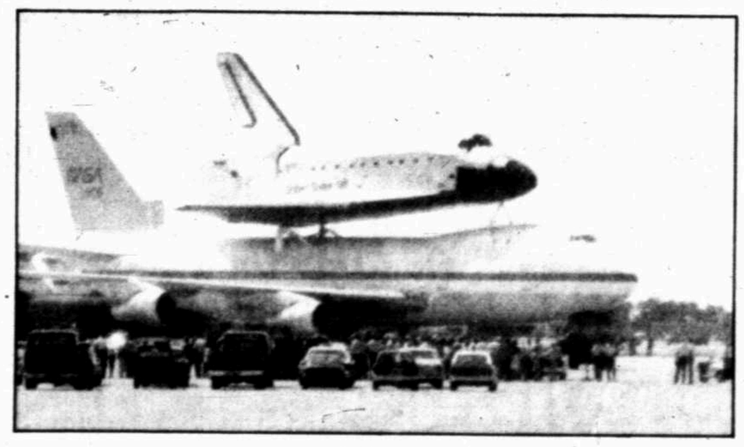

The Red Cross set up emergency shelters Sunday at the Altama Elementary School and at Brunswick High School, and motels in the area were packed with people from the islands.

May said 15 to 20 people spent the night at each of the shelters.

Red Cross spokeswoman Anita Sadowski described people staying at the shelters as mainly newer residents, unaccustomed to the annual hurricane threat.

"The ones who have been here a long time don't budge too easily," she noted.

"We've never had one pop up so suddenly. Usually they develop down in the Carribean and we have a chance to watch them."

Specators gather around Space Shuttle Discovery at its stop in Altus, Okla.

Shuttle stalled in Oklahoma

ALTUS, Okla. (AP) — Space agency officials kept a close eye today on tropical storm Diana to determine whether the space shuttle Discovery can continue on its way to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The shuttle, riding piggyback atop a Boeing 747, made what was supposed to be a brief refueling stop at Altus Air Force Base on Sunday.

But Diana, which was whipping the northern Florida coast with high tides, wall-like waves and 70 mph winds, forced the shuttle to remain at this southwest Oklahoma air base overnight.

If the weather along the Florida coast cooperates, the space shuttle will leave today for the 3½-hour flight to Florida.

Discovery landed at the air base here Sunday as some 40,000 spectators watched.

There were worries that some of the shuttle's exotic fuel was still aboard, and spectators at first were kept 1,000 feet away as a precaution. A special team examined the shuttle and determined there was no danger, however.

Original plans had called for the shuttle to leave Altus Sunday afternoon, arriving at Kennedy Space Center on the central Florida coast at Sunday evening, said Les Reinertson, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Sunshine state weather watchers unsurprised — It's September

MIAMI (AP) — When tropical storm Diana spun to life and threatened to become the first hurricane of the 1984 Atlantic season, weather watchers in the Sunshine State weren't surprised at the timing.

"Florida is most susceptible to hurricanes in September," said Gil Clark, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables.

Four of every five hurricanes that struck Florida this century came ashore during September, records show. And all six of the most powerful and violent storms to hit the state, killing a total of more than 2,200 people, were September storms.

In addition, a third of all North Atlantic storms are born in September.

But hurricane center forecasters say the statistics don't mean impending disaster from Diana.

"We just don't know what will happen," said Neil Frank, director of the hurricane center. "All we can say with certainty is that it has been a quiet hurricane season up to now."

In fact, recent hurricane seasons have been calm. The last hurricane to strike Florida was David, a relatively mild storm that hit the state's northeast coast in September 1979.

But Frank worries that Florida residents have developed a false sense of security.

When David was swirling off the coast of Miami, headed toward the city, Frank advised evacuation of low-lying areas. Only hours before David would have struck, the storm veered north and came ashore in Palm Beach County.

As a result, Frank said many people grumbled about "crying wolf."

Even with radar and satellite equipment, forecasters can predict a hurricane's target only with an accuracy of plus or minus 50 miles within 12 hours of the storm's landfall, he said.

If people heed the warning, thousands could be needlessly evacuated. But if they don't, thousands could die, he said. That's especially true if the approaching storm is a rare Category 4 or Category 5 hurricane, in which gales can top 155 miles, he said.

If a major storm hit Florida's southern coast, the damage would be "awesome," Frank said. "Miami Beach and Key Biscayne will be completely underwater. Waterfront homes will be completely destroyed."

California man killed in freak cliff slide

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A man in his early 20s was killed and his female companion injured when a cliff collapsed atop the beach where they were sunbathing, burying them in rocks and dirt.

The woman, identified as Kristin Calene, 21, of Santa Barbara, was flown by sheriff's helicopter to Goleta Valley Hospital where she was in stable condition with several broken bones, Patterson said.

The dead man's name was withheld pending notification of his family, Patterson said.

Iranian police lieutenant Toufan, right, accompanied by Ferwez, center, and his wife an children, on Sunday surrendered the Iran Air jetliner they hijacked.

Iraq grants five asylum

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq has granted asylum to five opponents of Iran's Islamic regime — a policeman and a family of four — who hijacked an Iran Air jetliner and later released its 118 passengers and crew members unharmed.

It was the third time in two weeks that Iraq, at war with Iran for almost four years, has granted asylum to Iranians who defected by airplane. Iraq granted asylum to a man and woman who seized an Iran Air Airbus on Aug. 28., and to two Iranian air force pilots who flew their F-4 fighter to Iraq Aug. 30.

In August, Iraq encouraged Iranian hijacks by saying it would let any hijacked Iranian jetliner land, and would release any Iranian soldier or civilian who seeks refuge with Iraqi forces.

An Iraqi source said the 66 Iranians freed by the hijackers in Iraq on Sunday would be on a government-sponsored "visit to Iraq for awhile during which they will visit holy (Shiite Moslem) shrines and other places."

After the plane was seized on a domestic flight Saturday, it made refueling stops in Bahrain and Cairo, where 52 passengers were released.

Peres seeks party's OK

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Shimon Peres, weakened by a walkout of his Labor Party's left wing, lobbied today for party approval of his contract with the Likud bloc for a bipartisan government.

The socialist Mapam Party voted 400-7 Sunday night to dismantle its partnership with Labor to protest the coalition agreement and the appointment of ousted Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, a Likud ally of outgoing Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, as commerce and industry minister in the new Cabinet.

However, Labor's central committee, consisting of about 1,000 members, was expected to approve Peres' pact with Shamir today despite widespread dissatisfaction.

Palestinian base attacked

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli air force planes attacked a Palestinian guerrilla base in central Lebanon early Monday, the military command announced.

The base was located near Bhamdoun, which is on the Beirut-Damascus highway. The Israeli pilots reported accurate hits, the command said.

Israeli military sources said the position served as a command post for the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist pro-Moscow branch of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and it consisted of one three-story building.

It was the 15th Israeli air raid on Palestinian targets in Lebanon this year. The last attack was Aug. 28 on what the Israelis reported was a base of the breakaway Abu Moussa faction of the PLO in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Indian army arrests 67

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Army troops with orders to shoot rioters on sight arrested 67 people today as Moslem-Hindu violence continued in the southern city of Hyderabad. Police reported nine deaths, 130 injuries and more than 350 arrests in two days.

In the northern state of Punjab, authorities arrested more than 1,250 farmers, forcing cancellation of an anti-government rally today, United News of India reported. The rally had been called to protest economic policy, but the government claimed militant members of Punjab's Sikh minority might try to exploit the protest.

Rioting and arson, which spread in Hyderabad on Sunday, flared again today, police officers there said by telephone. The officers, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said two shops and a vehicle were set on fire, and two people hospitalized with multiple stab wounds died in a city hospital.

U.S. studies Soviet Union

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. interest in the Soviet Union appears to be growing as more Americans become experts in Soviet affairs. After more than a decade of waning curiosity, enrollment in university courses relating to the Soviet Union is picking up, U.S. educators say.

Extensive media attention to the arms race and two changes of Soviet leadership in the past two years have done much to stimulate public interest in U.S.-Soviet matters, they say.

One indication is a dramatic 26.7 percent increase last year in the number of American college students studying the Russian language, up by 6,399 students to 30,386 since 1980, according to a recently released survey.

Iraq hits 'larger target'

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi jetfighters attacked and hit a "large naval target" south of Iran's main oil loading terminal at Kharg Island today, a military spokesman announced.

Iraq customarily uses the term "naval target" when it attacks oil tankers or other commercial ships doing business with Iran, but it did not identify the target today, and there was no immediate independent report that any ship in the gulf had been hit.

The unidentified military spokesman, reading a military communique on Baghdad Radio, said the target was attacked at 10:45 a.m., and Iraq's planes returned safely to base.

Octopuses attack men

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Two fishermen from the Pacific island nation of Kiribati were recently killed by giant octopuses that held them underwater until they drowned, according to a newspaper report today.

Costa Rican bomber still at large

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — He is slender and muscular, about six feet tall with hooded, blue-grey eyes — a professional assassin with innocent blood on his hands and little threat of capture.

More than three months ago, he exploded a bomb by remote control at a news conference at a rural guerrilla camp in southern Nicaragua, killing four people and injuring 24 others.

Today his identity and whereabouts remain a mystery.

Costa Rican authorities, whose investigation was slow to start and has been marred by errors, admit that their probe has come to a dead end for lack of any solid clues.

The principal target of the attack was Eden Pastora, the anti-Sandinista chieftain known as "Commander Zero," who suffered burns and shrapnel wounds.

Killed were a Nicaraguan rebel and three reporters, including Linda Frazier, 38, a writer for an English-language weekly newspaper in San Jose and the wife of an Associated Press correspondent. Four of the injured were hurt so badly they still remain under medical care.

Although the explosion on May 30 occurred on Nicaraguan soil, Costa Rica undertook the investigation on the assumption the assassination attempt had been plotted within its boundaries.

After the blast, investigators let 48 hours elapse before barring the exit from the country of witnesses and others who might have been involved.

Tony Avirgan, an ABC-TV correspondent injured in the explosion, found himself detained as a prime suspect three days after the blast.

At first he was denied exit from the country to seek medical treatment for a badly mangled hand. He was interrogated in his hospital bed in San Jose for more than five hours before receiving permission to fly to the United States.

Three weeks ago, police showed up at the home of Mark Baillie, a correspondent for the Reuters news agency, with a search warrant naming him as the possible terrorist.

Baillie, who is short, stocky and bears no facial resemblance to the prime suspect, was able to clear himself with a call to the British Embassy, and the police retreated apologetically after a three-hour search of his house.

Authorities agree that the man they really want was posing as a photojournalist and traveling under a stolen passport that identified him as Per Anker Hansen.

The real Per Anker Hansen, a Danish architect, reported his passport missing four years ago and has never been to Central America.

Two days after the explosion, reporters visited the small, cheap hotel in downtown San Jose where the terrorist lived for almost a month before the assassination attempt. They were able to obtain a record of his telephone calls from the switchboard operator.

But it was another three days before Costa Rican investigators got to the hotel, too late to find any fingerprints. They then spent hours trying to find the "suspicious foreigners" — actually newsmen — who had been trying to trace some of the real suspect's calls.

The man known as Hansen had traveled with legitimate journalists to Pastora's camp on the northern bank of the San Juan River, which marks the eastern boundary between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, carrying an aluminum equipment case.

In that case, investigators say, was a bomb made of plastic explosive and metal shrapnel, which he touched off with a hand-held detonator after slipping unobtrusively from the riverside building minutes before Pastora began his news conference.

According to witnesses, he then forced himself into one of the first boats evacuating the wounded and was taken to a regional hospital for treatment of what doctors later said were two minor cuts. He took a taxi to San Jose the next morning. There, he checked out of his hotel and disappeared.

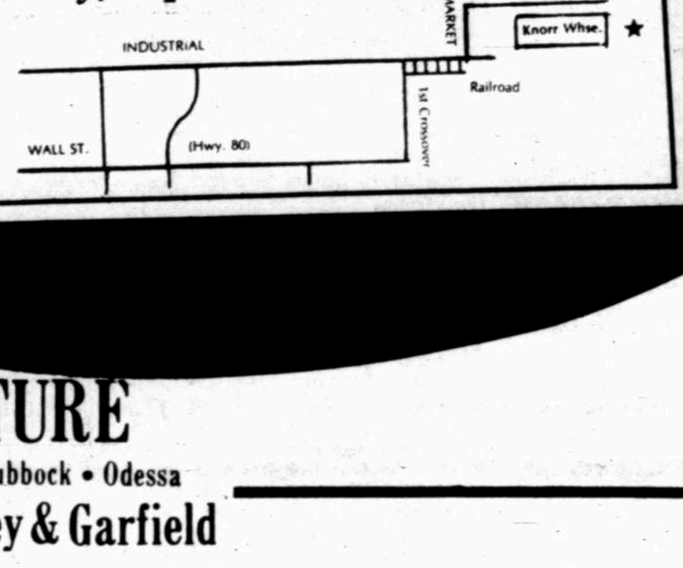

Photographs of the suspect taken before and after the explosion have been distributed to law enforcement agencies worldwide.

'Boom' time over for America's Team

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants were not making any playoff predictions after defeating the Dallas Cowboys to get off to their best National Football League start in 16 seasons.

But they are more confident than before the season began, and the word "playoff" is at least getting into their vocabulary after a 3-12-1 record last season.

Phil Simms fired three scoring strikes and linebacker Andy Headen returned a fumble 81 yards for another touchdown Sunday as the Giants defeated Dallas 28-7 behind a defense that ran down, roped and hogtied new Cowboys quarterback Gary Hogeboom. Is the 'Boom' over in Dallas?

THE VICTORY raised New York to 2-0, their best start since 1968 when they went 4-0.

"We have a lot of players who think we can win," said All Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor, who sacked Hogeboom three times, forcing the fumble that set up Headen's long return and another that derailed a Dallas drive.

"We're not saying there's a new game in town and it's called the New York Giants," added Taylor.

What he was saying is that the Giants are a better team than last year.

In the same vein, Dallas, now 1-1, looked nothing like the team that was 12-4 a year ago.

"They got the turnovers and took advantage of them," said Hogeboom, who completed 21 of 43 attempts for 242 yards, including a 2-yard touchdown toss to Doug Cosbie in the third quarter after New York took a 28-0 lead.

"They had a tough rush, no doubt about," added Hogeboom, who was sacked five times. "Things just weren't going right, but that's life."

THE GIANTS broke the game open late in the first quarter, scoring twice in 75 seconds.

Simms, who fired four touchdowns last week against Philadelphia, marched the Giants 88 yards in four plays, the touchdown coming on a 62-yard scoring pass play to Bryon Williams.

"It was a delay pattern," said Williams, who hauled in the pass around midfield. "Phil threw it and Everson Walls bid on it and failed. And I was off to the races."

So was safety Terry Kinard three plays later, when he stepped in front of a Hogeboom pass at the Dallas 45, intercepted it and returned it to the Cowboy 16.

Simms rolled right on the next play and hit rookie Lionel Manuel on a 16-yard touchdown. It was his first NFL reception.

Dallas took the ensuing kickoff and drove from its 10 to the Giants 6, where they faced a third and 3.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry called for a pass.

GIANTS COACH Bill Parcells responded with a blitz. It worked to perfection when Taylor came through the guard and tackle hole untouched.

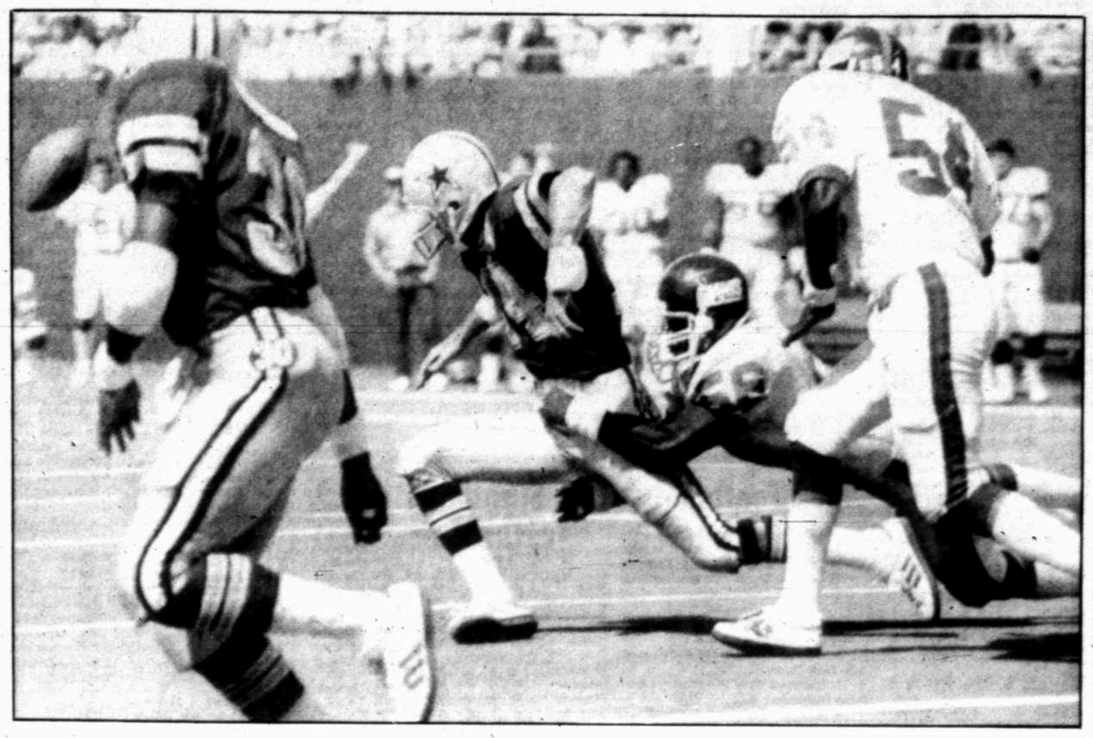

"As soon as I came in I saw he was holding the ball like a loaf of bread and I just punched it out," said Taylor.

The ball bounced a couple of times and Headen scooped it up at the Cowboys 19 and scored untouched to give New York at 21-0 lead.

Landry said he was disappointed with the loss but he did not blame Hogeboom.

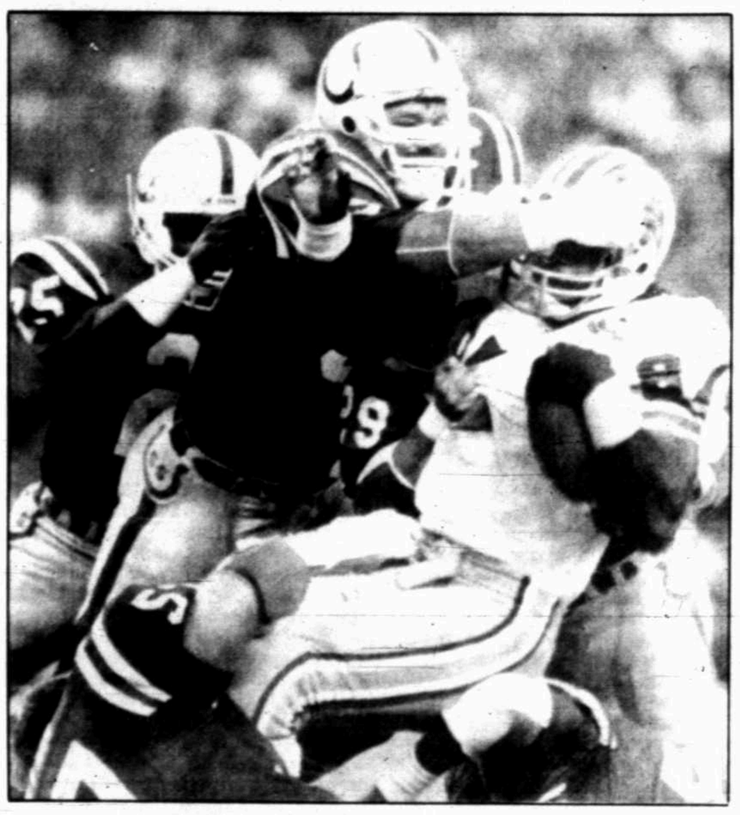

"I never considered taking him out," said Landry. "With a young player you have to stick with them."

"We just didn't look good all week," said Landry. "We were flat in practice and we played flat."

Indianapolis climbs from grave

Houston Oilers dig deeper NFL hole

HOUSTON (AP) — The Indianapolis Colts and Houston Oilers entered Sunday's National Football League game digging furiously to get out of a losing rut but only the Colts made progress.

"Every win is important to teams like us and Houston," Colts Coach Frank Kush said. "You either dig a bigger grave or you dig your way out."

Colts quarterback Mike Pagel fired three touchdown passes and ran for another score to dig the Colts out with a 35-21 victory and the Oilers, well, they're still digging their wheels a bit deeper.

"The key is progress," Kush said. "It's important to be poised and this win is important because we were doing some things well and when you do that, winning will take care of itself."

The Colts, who built their game plan around a strong running game led by Curtis Dickey, found they also could score points through the airways with Pagel targeting Ray Butler for two of his touchdown passes and going to Tracy Porter for a third strike.

Pagel completed 15 of 20 passes for 215 yards which did not compare to Houston's Warren Moon, who his 23 of 43 for 365 yards.

But Pagel will take his three TD shots to zero for the more publicized Moon.

"In the NFL you are going to get beat playing man to man unless you have great corners," Butler said. "Their corners (Steve Brown and Willie Tullis) haven't been in the league that long and we took advantage of it.

"They came up and tried to bump and run. All you have to do is give them a move to freeze them and then run past them."

The Oilers built a 14-7 lead early in the second quarter on touchdown runs of two and 15 yards by Earl Campbell. The Colts' first score was Pagel's one-yard keeper following a 36-yard pass interference call against Brown.

The Colts then zoomed to a 28-14 lead on Dickey's 15-yard run and touchdown passes of 31 and 14 yards from Pagel to Butler.

The Oilers narrowed the gap to 28-21 on Campbell's third touchdown of the day, a one-yard dive in the fourth quarter, before Pagel's third strike, a 33-yarder to Tracy Porter with 5:58 left in the game.

"Pagel kept us off balance all day with his play calling and his execution," Oiler Coach Hugh Campbell said. "He was probably the biggest thorn in our side."

Kush was pleased with the Colts' passing improvement.

"That was the most impressive thing for me," Kush said. "It finally became productive. Last week we dropped a lot of balls. Today, we caught those balls."

The Oilers contributed to their demise with spotty defense, leaving Oiler linebacker Gregg Bingham speechless, almost.

"If you haven't got anthing good to say, you just don't say anthing at all," Bingham said. "It is depressing though. There were breakdowns in different areas. I'll have to see the films to know why. Its a test of everybody's mettle, the players the coaching staff, everybody.

Dickey led all rushers in the game with 84 yards on 22 carries. Campbell had 44 yards on 15 carries.

Oiler wide receiver Tim Smith, who caught 83 passes last season, had 102 yards on six receptions.

Payton 179 steps closer to Brown's rushing mark

Associated Press

For Walter Payton, chasing a record is more fun than actually getting one.

"Going into the game I really didn't think about the record," Payton said. "It means more to chase the record than to have it."

The Chicago Bears runner, who puts together power and speed in a rare combination, did some record-chasing and some record-setting Sunday in a 27-0 National Football League romp over the Denver Broncos.

Payton, in only 20 carries, got 179 yards closer to Jim Brown's all-time NFL rushing record of 12,312 yards and surpassed Brown's mark in a lesser-known category, combined rushing and receiving.

Payton now has 15,517 total yards, bettering Brown's 15,459. Payton is 447 yards behind the career rushing record.

Also ahead of Payton in the rushing yardage derby is Franco Harris, 34, who made his Seattle debut with 46 yards on 14 carries, giving him 11,996 in his 13-year career, 131 ahead of Payton.

The Bears, 2-0, dominated Denver, 1-1, in all aspects of the game, outgaining the Broncos 406-130. Denver turned the ball over four times en route to its first shutout loss in 85 regular-season games, dating back to 1978.

"It was a tremendous win and the victory means more than anything," Payton said. "It's our best start in a long time. When things go right, they go right."

Payton was referring to his 72-yard run, the longest touchdown dash of his 10-year career, which came off the wrong formation.

"Jimbo (Covert) was supposed to pull and didn't," Payton said. "I sliced through and after I hit the outside I kept my balance and took off."

"He continues to amaze me out there," said Chicago Coach Mike Ditka.

Payton, who said his ultimate goal is to gain 15,000 yards rushing, invited Brown to be in attendance should Payton break his record.

"I'll do anything he wants, I'll even foot the bill for him," the Bears' runner added.

Raiders 28, Packers 7

Los Angeles knocked Green Bay quarterback Lynn Dickey out of the game with a bruised back in the first two minutes, then shut down the Packers' passing attack the rest of the game.

Rookie Randy Wright took over for Dickey and the Raiders' secondary, led by cornerbacks Mike Haynes and Lester Hayes, held him to 10 completions on 23 passes for 67 yards and two intereceptions.

James Lofton and John Jefferson, Green Bay's star receivers, caught zero and three passes, respectively.

Jim Plunkett had a touchdown pass and Marcus Allen a 7-yard scoring run to lead the Raiders' offense.

Dolphins 28, Patriots 7

Dan Marino increased his two-game total to seven TD passes as he tossed a pair of scoring strikes to Mark Clayton within a 1:36 span of the third quarter to lead Miami.

The Dolphins, who have won 17 straight games over the Patriots in the Orange Bowl, broke away from a 7-7 halftime tie as Marino hit Clayton on a 38-yard play and connected with him again on a 15-yarder after a Patriots' fumble.

Miami intercepted four passes by Steve Grogan, including two by Glenn Blackwood. Mike Kozlowski returned another interception 26 yards, then lateraled to William Judson, who rambled another 60 yards for a touchdown.

Cardinals 37, Bills 7

Neil Lomax passed for two touchdowns and Ottis Anderson scored twice as St. Louis built a 31-0 lead.

Lomax delivered 4-yard scoring passes to Roy Green and Anderson in the opening 14 minutes and Anderson also scored from the 2 to help the Cardinals build a 24-0 halftime lead.

Stump Mitchell set up two scores with a 39-yard kickoff return and a 39-yard punt return.

Lions 27, Falcons 24

Gary Danielson completed 22 of 31 passes for Detroit and engineered a 51-yard drive in overtime that concluded with Ed Murray's winning 48-yard field goal.

The big play in the drive was Danielson's 30-yard pass to David Lewis down the middle for a first down at the Atlanta 34. A moment later, Murray booted the game-winner 5:06 into the extra period.

Chiefs 27, Bengals 22

Todd Blackledge improved Kansas City's record to 2-0 in his second career start with two touchdown passes, including a 19-yarder to Carlos Carson that gave the Chiefs the lead for good.

With the Bengals ahead 17-14, Blackledge completed six passes on a 75-yard drive, including the toss to Carson.

Blackledge also had a 46-yard scoring pass to Anthony Hancock.

Rams 20, Browns 17

Eric Dickerson carried the load on Los Angeles' final drive that ended with Mike Lansford's 27-yard field goal with 1:25 to play.

Dickerson, who gained 102 yards on 27 carries in the game, got 48 of his yards on six carries in the drive that saw the Rams march 61 yards to the Cleveland 9.

Leroy Irvin had an 81-yard interception run for a touchdown for the Rams.

Eagles 19, Vikings 17

Ron Jaworski threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to tight end John Spagnola with two seconds left to give Philadelphia its narrow victory.

The Eagles drove 59 yards on 11 plays for the winning score, which came after the Vikings appeared to stop Philadelphia's Wilbert Montgomery short of the goal line. But a face-mask penalty gave Jaworski another chance.

Seahawks 31, Chargers 17

Dave Krieg scored touchdowns on 37- and 3-yard runs and added a touchdown pass to Daryl Turner to lead Seattle.

The Seahawks, who trailed 10-0 early in the game, forced eight Chargers' turnovers, including four interceptions passes by Dan Fouts.

Saints 17, Buccaneers 13

Hokie Gajan ran 8 yards for a touchdown with 1:53 left after dashing 51 yards with a swing pass from Richard Todd, giving New Orleans its triumph.

Todd first connected with Tyrone Young for 24 yards before hitting Gajan, who broke out of a pack of defenders and ran to the Tampa Bay 13. He scored two plays later.

'Skins, 49ers face 'crunch' show

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If tonight's game between the Washington Redskins and San Francisco 49ers is as ferocious as last January's clash in the conference championship game, both teams might be in trouble.

This is only their second game of the National Football League's regular season, with 14 to go before the playoffs. After crunching bodies through a long afternoon eight months ago, the Redskins were aching and wheezing. And they won.

The 49ers, supposedly a "finesse" team, delivered and took their hardest hits of the season in that game. They lost by the difference of two penalties and a last-minute field goal, 24-21, but they wore their wounds proudly.

Bill Walsh, the San Francisco coach, expects a similar game this time, and hopes the officials won't call every little bump. He hasn't forgotten the pass interference penalty on Eric Wright and the holding penalty on Ronnie Lott prior to Mark Moseley's winning field goal in the title game.

While complaining again about those "phantom" calls, Walsh indicated that he'd like to see more good, clean, rock 'em-sock 'em football, and fewer flags.

"You can't play defensive football with any reckless abandon because on virtually every close play people are looking for a flag, hoping for one, depending on what side you're on, and officials appear obligated to throw one," Walsh said.

Both teams should be charged up. The 49ers have a bit of revenge on their minds. The Redskins have something to prove to themselves. Ever since that 21-point fourth-quarter blitz by the 49ers last January, the Redskins have been less than intimidating. The Los Angeles Raiders took them apart in the Super Bowl, and the Miami Dolphins did the same last week.

"We are very much concerned right now," says Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, "because we have a long ways to go before we become a good football team. It's hard to evaluate this team in relation to last year's team. We're not good enough to make the plays, either offensively or defensively, and not work hard. This is especially true when we're preparing to play a good team like the 49ers."

Cubs' magic number put on hold at 14

Associated Press

The New York Mets won two of the three games they played against the Chicago Cubs this weekend. It may not have been good enough.

When the series between the top two teams in the National League East began, Chicago had a seven-game lead. When it was over, the losing team in each game was either shut out or held to one run and the Mets were within six games.

That doesn't sound that bad until you realize each team has but 19 games to play.

"They needed a sweep and they didn't get it," Cubs outfielder Keith Moreland said Sunday after the Mets prevailed 5-1 behind Ron Darling and Hubie Brooks.

THE CUBS' magic number holds at 14 because of the loss, but to listen to Chicago Manager Jim Frey you would think it was just the opposite.

"When we started this 11-game road trip," Frey said, "I thought it would be good for us to go six-and-five. We went seven-and-four. We're in a better position than we were 10 days ago."

Ten days from now, the NL East race could well be over if past records hold up.

Next weekend, the Mets will visit Chicago's Wrigley Field for three games. So far this year the Cubs have won all six games played in Chicago, a fact the Mets are well aware of.

"We're going to try real hard not to think about those games," Brooks, who launched a three-run homer in the sixth inning Sunday, said. "We'd rather not play there. But there's no getting around it. We'll have to show up. We don't have any room for error right now. We have our work cut out for us and God only knows what the Cubs can do there."

What the Cubs couldn't do in Shea Stadium Sunday was come up with solid relief for starter Scott Sanderson, who pitched five scoreless innings before being forced to leave with back spasms, a condition that put him on the disabled list for a month earlier in the season.

Baseball

GEORGE FRAZIER, 5-3, started the sixth inning having yielded only one earned run in his last 19 innings over eight appearances. Mookie Wilson tripled on Frazier's first pitch and Keith Hernandez doubled for a 1-0 lead.

Darryl Strawberry struck out but reached first and Hernandez third on a third-strike wild pitch. George Foster chased Frazier with an RBI single and that brought on Warren Brusstar, whom Brooks greeted with a three-run blast to right, his 15th homer of the year.

Darling, 12-6, allowed five hits through eight innings and was lifted in favor of Jesse Orosco after Gary Matthews led off the ninth with his 12th home run of the season.

The Detroit Tigers left Toronto with things in as good a shape as possible for themselves as they swept their three-game series with the Blue Jays with a 7-2 victory Sunday.

The successful weekend trimmed Detroit's magic number to nine and left Toronto 11½ games behind the leaders of the American League East.

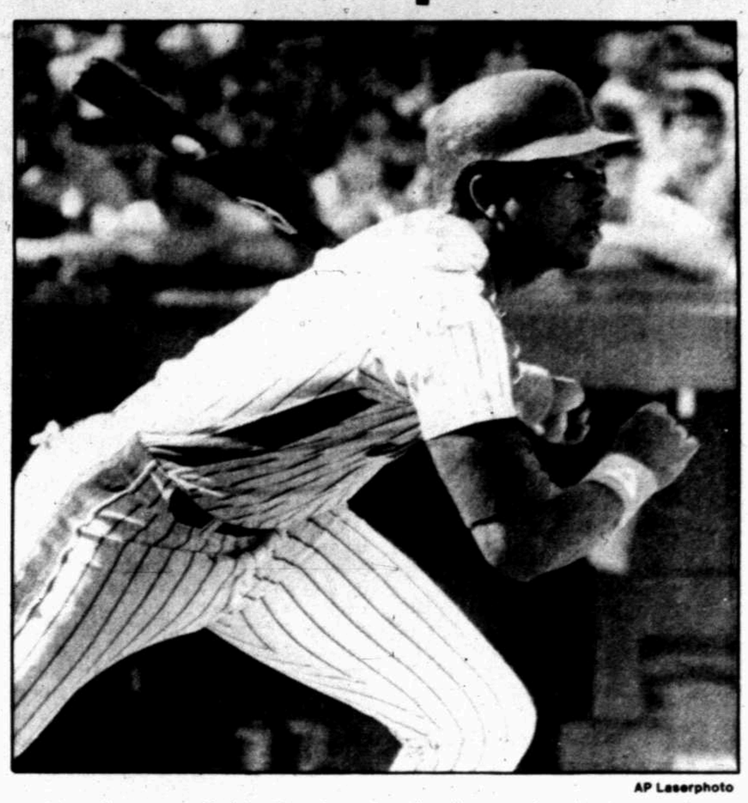

Kirk Gibson hit a 450-foot, three-run homer in the seventh inning and John Grubb added a solo shot in the sixth to back Milt Wilcox, 16-7.

Gibson left the hospital for the series with the Blue Jays as he was suffering from intestinal flu and been fed intravenously in a Detroit hospital just five days before the Toronto series began.

"I wouldn't risk my health, but I knew this was a big series," Gibson said. "It's something I have deep inside of me. I told (Detroit Manager) Sparky (Anderson) I could play and he stuck with me.

"I want to be part of this thing. The hardest part is to close the door."

The door has almost been shut tight on the Blue Jays with the completion of the series and Toronto must now eye the Baltimore Orioles, who are just 2½ games farther back in third place.

Met shortstop Hubie Brooks eyes the fence after hitting a three-run homer against the Chicago Cubs Sunday.

Wilcox, scattered eight hits, striking out five, over the first six innings.

Jim Clancy, 11-14, gave up 11 hits and six runs in six innings for Toronto.

With Detroit ahead 3-2 in the seventh, successive singles by Dave Bergman, Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell made it 4-2 and chased Clancy.

Gibson then jumped on the first pitch off Bryan Clark and blasted a tremendous shot that landed 10 yards deep in the football end zone beyond the right field fence, giving Detroit a 7-2 lead.

"I don't know why I went to Clark, myself," a disgruntled Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said. "I guess I thought he was going to come in and blow the ball by somebody and maybe strike somebody out.

"But, one pitch and the game is over. You don't come in and throw a nothing fastball to Gibson!"

Rance Mulliniks drove in the first Toronto run in the first with a sacrifice fly and Willie Upshaw knocked in the second with his second double of the game in the sixth.

The Tigers scored their first two runs on a single by Lance Parrish in the third inning.

THE SAN Diego Padres increased their lead in the NL West to nine games over the Houston Astros and reduced their magic number to 11. Mark Thurmond and Rich Gossage allowed eight hits as San Diego jumped to an 8-0 lead after two innings. Steve Garvey and Carmelo Martinez each drove in two runs for the Padres as they battered Mike LaCoss, 7-4, who started for the visitors.

In other AL games Sunday, Cleveland beat Oakland 7-5, Baltimore defeated Milwaukee 4-0, Boston swamped New York 10-1, Texas crushed Minnesota 9-3 and Kansas City edged Seattle 6-5. California was at Chicago in a night game.

In the National League, Philadelphia needed 11 innings to down Montreal 6-5, St. Louis edged Pittsburgh 2-1, Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles 5-1 and San Francisco downed Atlanta 6-4.

Chris Bando and former Midland Cub Joe Carter each homered, doubled and singled as the Indians clipped the Oakland A's 7-5.

Oakland's Rick Langford made his first start of the year after spending most of the season on the disabled list because of elbow surgery last summer.

"We know we're going to score runs," Bando said. "We've got these new players — Joe Carter, Mel Hall (acquired from the Chicago Cubs in June). We know we're going to explode. The attitude's good. It's a confident feeling."

Dave Kingman hit his 34th home run for Oakland and raised his RBI total for the season to 113, tops in the major leagues.

Baltimore's Mike Boddicker tossed a seven-hitter for his fourth shutout of the season and became the AL's first 18-game winner. Cal Ripken, Jr. hit his 24th home run of the season to snap an 0-for-14 streak, his longest of the season.

Wade Boggs had four hits, including two RBI-doubles, as the Red Sox routed the Yankees. Boggs, last year's AL batting champion, now has 14 hits in last 18 at-bats. Al Nipper, 9-5, allowed five hits and an unearned run.

Knuckleballer Charlie Hough continued his mastery of the host Minnesota Twins, throwing a nine-hitter and striking out eight to give the Texas Rangersa 9-3 win. Hough has an 8-0 career mark against Minnesota.

He was aided by home runs from Donnie Scott, Gary Ward and Buddy Bell.

Minnesota now must regroup for the series with the Royals.

"We have to play that series for the momentum," Minnesota outfielder Mickey Hatcher said. "The biggest factor will be who comes out (of the series) with a lead. They'll have the momentum."

Ninth-inning sacrifice flies by Don Slaught and Darryl Motley carried the Royals over the Mariners and into first place in the AL West for the first time this season. Seattle had taken a 5-4 lead in the top of the ninth on a throwing error by winning pitcher Mark Huisman, 3-3.

PINCH-HITTER John Russell's 11th-inning sacrifice fly gave the Phillies the victory that snapped a six-game losing streak. Philadelphia scored two runs with two outs in the ninth to tie the score. Mike Schmidt hit his 30th homer of the season for the Phillies.

Danny Cox and Bruce Sutter combined on a seven-hitter to lead the Cardinals. Andy Van Slyke, who hit his sixth home run of the season, scored both runs for St. Louis.

Tom Browning made his major-league debut a successful one as he allowed the Dodgers 10 hits in 8⅓ innings. Browing was a last-minute replacement for Mario Soto, who left the team Saturday to be with his wife who is expecting the couple's first child.

The Giants swept the three-game series from Atlanta but were still mathematically eliminated from NL West pennant contention because of San Diego's victory. San Francisco broke a 4-4 tie in the bottom of the seventh inning as Manny Trillo drove home one run with a sacrifice fly and Bob Brenly knocked in the other with a single. Rob Deer of the Giants hit the first home run of his major-league career.

Gerald Perry hit his fourth homer for the Braves.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Archer swamps field

Associated Press

GOLF

SUTTON, Mass. — Lanky George Archer celebrated his 45th birthday three weeks early Sunday, pulling away from the pack to win the $350,000 Bank of Boston Golf Classic by six strokes.

Archer, helped by an eagle 2 on the 394-yard 13th hole, fired a 6-under par 65 for a 72-hole score of 270, 14-under par at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

The margin of victory was the biggest on the PGA tour this year.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Amy Alcott, playing a near error-free round while her main challengers struggled, shot a 2-under-par 70 Sunday to win the $150,000 Portland PING Championship by three strokes.

The 28-year-old Alcott, who began the day in a four-way tie for first, won for the third time this year and the 20th time in her nine years on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour. She finished the 54-hole event at 4-under-par 212, one of just two golfers who managed to break par through three rounds on the difficult Riverside Golf and Country Club course.

RICHMOND, Va. — Just when Dan Sikes thought he had it won, he almost lost it. And just when all seemed lost, he staggered to victory in the $200,000 United Virginia Bank Senior PGA tournament.

With six holes left Sunday in the 54-hole event at the Hermitage Country Club course, Sikes was 11 under par and coasting, three strokes in front of Lee Elder, his closest pursuer for the $30,000 top prize.

AUTO RACING

ST. PIE, Quebec — Danny Sullivan of Louisville, Ky., ran off to his third victory of the season, and second in three races, as he won the inaugural Molson Indy 300-kilometer event Sunday at Sanair Super Speedway.

The slim, handsome driver became a definite factor in the CART-PPG Indy-car championship chase with the victory.

Sullivan, considered by many a racer of great potential for more than a decade, has competed in relative obscurity until this season — his first full-time try at Indy-car racing.

RICHMOND, Va. — Darrell Waltrip won the NASCAR Wrangler 400 event here Sunday with an average speed of 74.78 m.p.h., defeating Ricky Rudd and Dale Earnhardt, who were both on the same lap.

MONZA, Italy — Veteran Austrian driver Niki Lauda made a decisive step Sunday toward his third world title by winning a tough Italian Formula One Grand Prix — eight years after surviving a near-fatal crash and two years after a controversial comeback into the racing world.

Lauda, a 35-year-old native of Vienna considered one of the most experienced and cold-blooded drivers in Formula One, exploited massive withdrawals of his rivals to drive his powerful McLaren-Tag-Porsche car to victory at the Monza Autodrome.

RUNNING

EUGENE, Ore. — Welsh runner Alley Cole captured the 14th running of the 26.2-mile Nike Marathon with a time of 2 hours, 23 minutes and 24 seconds.

Cole, 31, fell 5 minutes, 11 seconds short of his personal best in Sunday's race. David Odom of Houston was second at 2:26:05, followed by Max White of Eugene at 2:28:52.

Susan Mitchell, 30, of Portland, a member of the Portland Road Runners Track Club, won in the women's division with a time of 2:59:33.

DEAR ABBY

Early education protects children from sexual abuse

DEAR READERS: In recent months, a national disgrace of epidemic proportions has come out of the closet — the sexual abuse of children. It began when the owners and operators of a prestigious day care center were charged with having sexually abused more than 40 children who ranged in age from 2 to 5.

The suspects were charged with, among other things, having posed and photographed the children in sex acts with other children and adults, then selling the pictures and movies to a large porno ring.

It seems incredible that these children had been repeatedly sexually abused over a period of so many years, yet no child told anyone. It was later learned that the children had been threatened that if they told anyone, their parents would be tortured and killed!

As is usually the case, when one can of worms is opened, others follow, and now we discover that children in day care centers in other areas of the country may have also been victimized by sexual abuse.

As a result of the publicity, my office has been deluged with books dealing with the sexual abuse of children. Most were good, many were very good, but in my estimation the one book that topped them all was "No More Secrets for Me" by Oralee Wachter. This plain-speaking little gem is written for children of all ages. Children who are just learning to read will understand it. Children who are too young to read, but are read to by their parents, grandparents, teachers and sitters will understand it.

It handles a very delicate subject with great sensitivity and taste. But more important, it tells children how to protect themselves against being sexually abused.

I telephoned the publishers at Little, Brown and Co. and told them that I thought "No More Secrets for Me" was the best book I had seen on the subject, but $12.95 was too much for the millions of people who should buy it.

I urged them to bring it out in softcover for under $5. It is now available in paperback, and I do not overstate my enthusiasm when I say that no home with a child between the ages of 2 and 14 should be without it.

The introduction to the book begins: "It's not fair, but it happens. Someone you know, or someone you like, or someone in your family touches you, and you don't like it. It doesn't feel good the way hugging and holding hands does. It isn't fun like wrestling. It doesn't feel close and comfortable the way it does when someone you love puts an arm around you.

"If someone touches your body in a way you don't like, you may feel mixed up. You may feel as if you were tricked or forced into it. Or maybe the person makes you promise not to tell anyone and to keep the touching a secret. This book is about taking care of yourself, just in case this ever happens to you or a friend."

"No More Secrets for Me" is now available at your local bookseller for $4.95. If it's not in stock, order it directly from Little, Brown and Co., Distribution Center, 200 West St., Waltham, Mass. 02154. Add 50 cents for postage and handling.

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Columnea leaves travel well, adapt well

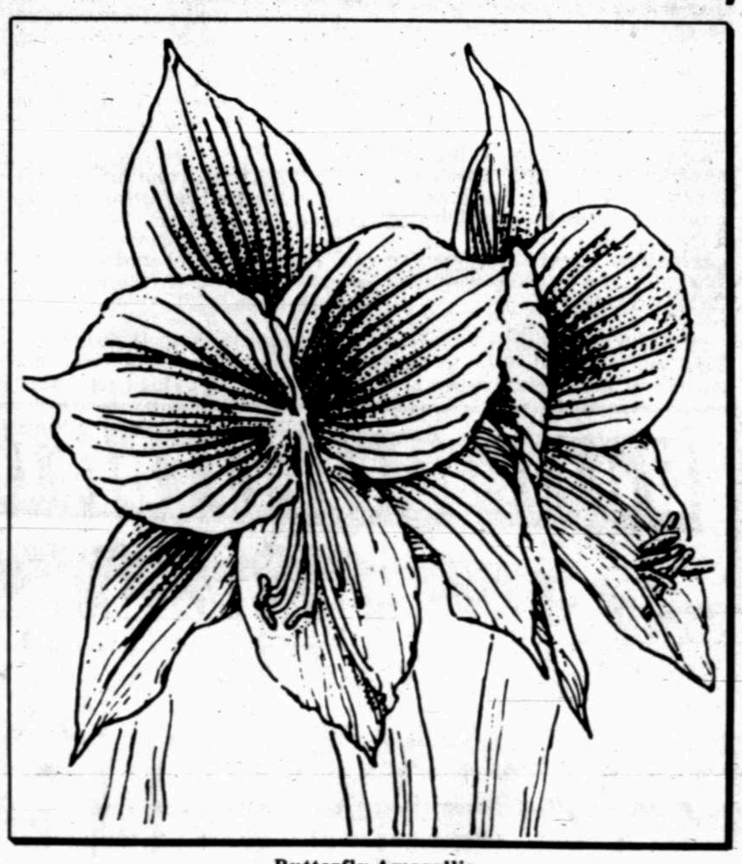

By ELVIN McDONALD

During my recent visit to the Marie Selby Botanical Garden in Sarasota, Fla., I was mightily impressed by the diversity in columneas, a group of shrub or trailing epiphytic gesneriads. They are related to African violets and florist gloxinias but, excepting hairy leaves, bear little resemblance.

A columnea called stavanger or Norse fire plant has been cultivated for several decades and may be found in most American and European houseplant books. It is seasonal blooming, as are most of the more recent species introductions, and primarily of interest to the serious collector and breeder. Some of these have brilliant rose-pink or red leaf tips or margins that glow from beneath when backlighted and serve in nature to attract hummingbirds to pollinate the blossoms.

As house or greenhouse plants, columneas thrive in the same sort of temperatures we maintain for ourselves, namely 70-80 degress by day, with a drop of 10 degrees at night. They also need a pleasantly moist atmosphere — 50 percent or more humidity and direct sun part of the day, such as in an east window.

The trailing columneas are best suited to window, greenhouse or porch culture, but the smaller, more upright or shrubby cultivars, as well as the ever-blooming pink C. linearis, make excellent subjects for a fluorescent-light garden.

Butterfly Amaryllis

Most likely sources for newer columneas are specialty growers. If you aren't accustomed to getting plants by mail, these are excellent travelers that readily adapt to a new home. Two major suppliers are Lauray of Salisbury (Undermountain Rd., Rt. 41, Salisbury, Conn. 06068; catalog $1.50) and Kartuz Greenhouses (1408 Sunset Dr., Vista, Calif. 92083; catalog $1).

While in Florida I also visited the Gesneriad Research Foundation, where Hans Wiehler is devoting his life to sorting out these endlessly fascinating and promising plants. Sun Belt gardeners are just beginning to realize their tremendous potential for outdoors. Wherever winter means killing frost, we always need beautiful new window and light subjects. If you are interested in supporting this work, contact Hans at 1873 Oak St., Sarasota, Fla. 33577, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed long envelope.

Q: What is society garlic?

A: You've asked about Tulbaghia violacea, a South African member of the amaryllis family that is being grown increasingly in mild-climate gardens.

Society garlic has slender leaves in clumps and is nearly ever-blooming in the Sun Belt, producing heads of rosy lavender blossoms on stems about 18 inches tall. Fresh petals may be snipped into a green salad, for their mild flavor of chives or leek. When the sun warms this little amaryllid, however, it gives off a noticeable "onion breath," which you may find objectionable, especially next to an outdoor living area.

As a house plant, tulbaghia responds to amaryllis culture. Details are in my notebook sheets, "What Makes Amaryllis Bloom?" For your set send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Amaryllis" written in the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Elderly population growing at rapid rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A half-century from now, one American in five could be aged 65 and over — and one in 10 may be over age 75 — the Census Bureau reports.

The nation's elderly have doubled in the past three decades to a 1980 total of 25.7 million, the report said, increasing considerably faster than the population in general.

And the improved health care that has allowed more Americans to reach old age also is giving them more years in that age group, a process known as aging of the older population.

This, the study said, will mean not only more people over 65 but a larger share of the population 75 and older in coming years.

The 65 and over age group could climb to 35 million by the turn of the century. Their total could climb as high as 64 million by the year 2030, 21.1 percent of the nation's expected population at that time.

And those 75 and over are likely to reach 9.8 percent of the population 50 years hence, the report said.

This growth in the elderly population "has important implications for the general welfare of the elderly population and for planning for their needs," said the report by Jacob S. Siegel and Maria Davidson of the Census Bureau.

The release of their report comes only two days after another, from a private population study group, which urged government planning to handle large numbers of elderly and the medical and social services they will need in future years.

That Population Reference Bureau study said that prolonging human lives means paying more taxes to care for the aged, and said planning should begin now to deal with the changes that will occur in the population in the future.

In 1950 the Census counted only 12.4 million elderly persons, the new government study pointed out, a segment of the population that grew to 25.7 million in the 1980 national head count.

Throughout recent decades, that group has grown much more rapidly than the population as a whole thanks to improvements in medical care that have extended American life spans.

"We expect death rates to continue to decline," the study said, and if such reductions are sharp the number of elderly could be even higher than the report anticipates.

The Census report said that growth of the elderly will slow a bit after 1990, reflecting the small number of births during the Depression, but it will again climb rapidly when the post-war Baby Boom generation begins to arrive in its ranks.

Simple warm words help ease burden of survivors

Hearst News Service

Finding the right words of sympathy for families mourning the death of a close relative isn't easy, but psychologists say those who choose their words well are helping survivors begin the normal grief recovery process.

"All funerals and the visitations normally preceeding them have one thing in common," says Dr. John S. Stephenson, associate professor of sociology at San Diego State University, who has done research in the field. "People gather together because someone significant to them has died. By coming together in ceremony, family and friends are saying 'we care about each other' despite the ever-present threat of death."

Dr. Ronald Chez of the New Jersey Medical School adds that funerals "allow for the formation of social networks that can provide great support for those who mourn."

Both Stephenson and Chez advise going to the funeral, keeping in mind that what you say is just as important in helping share and lighten the sorrow of the bereaved as your presence.

If you are unsure what to say, the following suggestions, based on the experience of its members, are offered by the National Funeral Directors Asssociation:

Do look the survivors in the eye, shake their hand or touch their arm.

Don't say: "I know how you feel," because chances are you have no idea of the depth of their personal grief.

Do speak warmly, naturally and from your heart. A simple, "I'm sorry," is good. Often, recalling a happy cherished memory about the person who has died helps survivors greatly.

Don't encourage the family to avoid voicing their feelings about their loss or tell them how they ought to feel. Give them the opportunity to speak and act out their feelings.

Do encourage them to face and accept — not deny — the death. A leading British psychologist, Dr. Collin Murray Parkes, says a major element of acute grief "is the denial by survivors that death has occurred.

Remember that the grief and loneliness of the widow, widower and family will go on after the funeral.

Eye tests important

WASHINGTON (AP) — Back-to-school time means books, blackboards and concentrating on reading for youngsters — a time for eyesight problems to crop up.

Either basic vision problems or learning disabilities can result in reading problems, according to the American Optometric Association.

Children who seem clumsy or awkward may simply not realize they have a vision problem. And eye problems may also lead to poor hand-eye coordination.

The upstairs parlor of the Lancaster House can be seen from the stairwell leading down to the foyer.

The Lancaster House foyer, to the right of the front door, leads to the curved stairs which wind up to the mansion's upstairs parlor.

The Lancaster House breakfast nook opens off of the downstairs kitchen (the house has two kitchens). The doorway to the right leads to the dining room.

EDITORS NOTE: The Lancaster House has been closed for some time, however, the Board of Trustees of the Museum of the Southwest allowed representatives from the media into the home after signing personal injury releases. The museum is carrying "no insurance except for liability" because there are problems insuring the house, says the museum's director, Jerry Porter.

Lancaster legacy

After a summer of controversy, the Lancaster House still stands at 1705 W. Indiana Ave. However, its fate has not yet been determined.

The Midland community was notified in a public news release May 30 of the Museum of the Southwest's move into Phase II of its expansion plan which included, for the first time, demolition of the house, guest house and water tower on the Lancaster property. Demolition was set to begin June 15.

At that time, concerned citizens banded together to form the "Save the Lancaster House Committee." This group received a 90-day reprieve from the board days before the scheduled demolition.

The "Save the Lancaster Committee" is expected to return to the executive committee of the museum board at 4 p.m. Wednesday with its written report. This report, along with the executive committee's recommendation, will be presented to the full board at 4 p.m. Sept. 19. Representatives from the "Save the Lancaster House Committee" will also make a presentation.

The museum's director, Jerry Porter, said the board will not make a decision at that time. The decision will come 30 days later. For now, Porter said, "The ball is in the court of the ad hoc Lancaster group."

These recessed mahogany shelves are in the breakfast nook.

The committee is not dribbling in place.

"We have petitioned the county to buy the Lancaster House from the museum," said Harris Kerr, a spokesman for the group. "We think there's a pretty good chance they'll do it." The petition was scheduled to be heard in County Commissioners' Court this morning.

According to Kerr, the museum board members have indicated "the house has no value and (they) are willing to let it be bulldozed if it doesn't cost us." The museum has a local company which has said it will do the demolition for what it will salvage from the buildings.

"If they (board members) don't think it's worth anything, then the county ought to be able to buy it for the land value. We think we have enough pledges that have agreed to let their pledges go to the county to pay the cost of the land.

"They (museum board members) have cash; they've raised funds for their endowment. The county has acquired 7,000 square feet of usable structure, and we've all saved the Lancaster House."

The petition, Kerr said, suggests moving the Midland County Historical Museum and the children's section from the downtown library to the Lancaster House.

"This frees up a lot of new space downtown for the library, and it puts the children in a place where they don't have to bicycle in all that traffic."

When contacted about the petition, Porter said, "That's their business. They can petition anybody they want to."

He disagreed with Kerr's assessment of the property's value.

"The house is of no value; the property is very valuable," Porter said. "Where else is the museum going to expand to?"

As to what decision the board might make, Porter said, "That's between the group and the board. The board controls the title to the property. I wouldn't predict how they would respond to it. It's a novel idea."

The reasons given in June by the 22-member museum board for its decision include the museum's inability to handle the financial obligation.

"Upkeep on the Lancaster buildings represents a continual and substantial drain on our resources," said A.W. Dillard, then president of the board of trustees.

The Turner House and property, which houses the main portion of the Museum of the Southwest, is owned and maintained by the county and the museum has a long-term lease on the property.

The board has been advised by three independent consultants, Dillard said, "That it would not be professionally responsible or even feasible to convert the Lancaster buildings into active and safe museum space...

"They just do not lend themselves to the development of museum support space which we badly need. As a home they were splendid, but as part of a professional museum facility, they are totally inadequate."

Silver loses its luster as pyramid scheme topples

Associated Press

DALLAS — Early investors in Peggy Stines' deal got returns of between 8 and 12 percent. But last spring the checks began arriving late and then not at all.

Now, Mrs. Stines is awaiting trial on federal charges of defrauding at least 400 people out of more than $10 million. Investors have filed numerous lawsuits.

Federal authorities allege the Stines ran a pyramid scheme in which the returns paid to early investors were, in fact, funds from the same or other investors.

Mrs. Stines told the people in her Garland office that she was looking for money to recover silver from scrap film. She said she had contracts to supply General Motors and General Dynamics with industrial grade silver, and plants in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

She promised a monthly return of at least 2 percent — far better than any traditional investment — and actually delivered returns to early investors of between 8 and 12 percent, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

When checks stopped arrving, investors went knocking on her door, but no one answered.

"It's hard to think we could have misjudged somebody so bad," said Harry Dean Wood, a Dallas investor and public relations representative for the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas who invested nearly $200,000 in the venture and another $100,000 on behalf of his wife and children.

"She had really convinced me. She looked me right in the eye and said she could use another $3 million," Wood said.

On Aug. 2, the Securities and Exchange Commission, acting on complaints from investors, charged her with defrauding the investors.

Six days later, a federal grand jury followed up the SEC charges with a 25-count indictment charging Mrs. Stines and her husband, Donald, with essentially the same offenses.

The couple surrendered to authorities Aug. 9 and face trial Nov. 5. They face a maximum prison sentence, if convicted, of 140 years and fines of $52,000.

Stines could not be reached for comment by the Times Herald or the Associated Press. Through her attorney, Mark Elliston, Mrs. Stines declined comment.

According to court documents, the money that was supposed to buy equipment for the silver reclamation actually supported a regal lifestyle for the couple that featured at least nine vehicles, a private plane, 140-acre ranch, 45 Quarter horses and a company with interests in oil and gas leases.

The Stines' assets are frozen in federal receivership now, but they add up to only a small portion of what investors say they poured into the Garland Film Buyers Group.

"We were so damned greedy. After all, you had a chance to double your money," said Ray Cripps, business manager for Salvage Carpet in Dallas, which had $140,000 in an employee profit-sharing plan in the venture.

The collapse of the company also stung the 70-member Big Prater Baptist Church in rural Buchanan County, Virginia. The Rev. Stafford Compton said $10,000 from the church's building fund was invested in the venture.

"It's kind of an embarrassing thing," Compton said.

Doug and Sharon Smith, a young Houston couple, borrowed more than $60,000 over the last year to invest in the Garland Film Buyers Group thinking it would be a good hedge against the medical expences of their 19-month-old daughter, ill with cerebral palsy.

"My husband and I both told her (Mrs. Stines) how much she was doing for our daughter,"

Child support sweep to continue

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A promised crackdown by Attorney General Jim Mattox on parents behind on child-support payments began in Tarrant County over the weekend with 23 arrests and 150 arrest warrants.

Similar roundups can be expected soon in other Texas cities, officials said.

"Texas has a horrendous history for being a sort of haven for parents who don't pay child support. We're trying to change that," Cynthia Alexander of Austin, a spokeswoman for the attorney general, told the Dallas Times Herald.

John Polk, regional director in Fort Worth for Mattox's Child Support Enforcement Division, said delinquent parents were offered an opportunity during August to work out payments with no penalty.

August's Project Pay Up is being followed by September's Project Roundup, Polk said.

Of the 23 Tarrant County arrests, 12 were still in jail Sunday, Polk said, and most owed about $1,000 in child support. They face jail time of up to 180 days.

"Some were booked in and immediately got the money together they owed, some went before a judge and were released, and some of them are still in jail," Polk told the Times Herald. "Some are making arrangements, and some are just sitting."

He said the targets of the first round of warrants are the most serious violators. They are being cited for contempt of court for failing to appear at hearings or for violating probation set at hearings for delinquent child-support payments, Polk said.

"It's a dynamic process. We get new warrants every day," he said.

Arrests for failing to pay child support have been made all along, but not on the scale now planned, Polk said.

"We consistently arrest two or three a week, but we're trying to arrest 50 a week now," Polk said. "We're pushing to arrest as many at one time as we can. The obvious purpose is to draw attention."

Mattox has said failure to pay child support is a form of child abuse.

Two men killed in Quinlan plane crash

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — Two men were killed in the crash of a single-engine plane after it hit a power line and crashed 200 yards from a private landing strip owned by one of the victims.

The plane was traveling south about 10 a.m. Sunday when it clipped the power line, flipped over and landed upside down, said Linda Walker, a dispatcher for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The victims were identified as Charles Edward Holloway, 51, the pilot, and Terry Lee Bishop, 25, both of Dallas.

The landing strip, owned by Holloway, is about 1½ miles off Texas Highway 276, just inside Hunt County about seven miles west of here. Quinlan is about 50 miles northeast of Dallas.

Holloway and Bishop were pronounced dead at the scene and their bodies taken to the Dallas County medical examiner's office, Ms. Walker said.

Officials with the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating the accident, she said.

Permian Basin Fair won't sell beer

Associated Press

ODESSA — Officials of the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition say they will abide by the Ector County clerk's decision and not sell beer in the coliseum and the fairgrounds.

Beer had been sold on the fairgrounds the past two years, but fair board officials said Saturday the board would abide by the county clerk's finding "that under no circumstances would there be beer sold in the coliseum or on the grounds."

Last week, Ector County Judge Jan Fisher said, "It was against established policy of the court" for beer to be sold at coliseum functions open to the general public. She said beer was sold at some other events in the past, but that was a mistake.

The fair officially opens Wednesday, and the Ector County Commissioners Court, which meets Monday, had put the issue on its agenda.

Howard Rockafellow, second vice president of the fair, had pointed out on Friday that beer was sold at the Boomtown Days Festival — also conducted at the Ector County Coliseum — for the last two years.

Coliseum Manager Donald Thorn, on the job since Jan. 1, assumed it was permissible for Boomtown organizers to sell beer this year because it had been done the year before, the judge said.

In March, the fair board had approved a trial year of beer sales to offset continued financial losses.

The beer sales were to have been restricted to a 40-by-80 tent with picket-fence siding.

Life much different now for former 'Our Gang' star

Associated Press

CONROE, Texas — Times have changed dramatically for a former child movie star and today at age 53 Barbara McCollum is leading a suburban life — teaching Hawaiian and Tahitian dancing and sewing for her family.

Mrs. McCollum, who starred in more than 40 full-length movies, endeared Depression-era audiences as Darla in the "Our Gang" series. She won the part when a director spotted her in her father's restaurant wearing the white cowboy boots her Texas grandparents had sent her.

But now Mrs. McCollum is at home in Conroe, a small town 30 miles north of Houston.

"I don't ever slow down," she said. "People say to me sometimes, 'Aren't you bored being at home?', but I don't have time."

Barbara Johnson, as she was known 50 years ago, took her first screen test at Universal Studio after being discovered by director John Stal. In the 1933 movie "Imitation of Life," she won the role of Baby Jane Quigley.

She changed her stage name to Barbara Boone and because she looked like gang member Darla Hood in "Our Gang" she later shared the role with her.

Even today Mrs. McCollum says she tunes in reruns of the show, and although she says she can't tell herself from Darla Hood, her mother can pick out which is which.

A line of children's clothes was named for her after she appeared in the series and she did advertisements for "everything from Oldsmobiles to cornflakes," she said.

She met her future husband Jim at age 17 and after a 12-week courtship, the young couple were married. Now they have three children.

"I met my husband and I wanted a happy, normal life," she recalled. "As a general rule, actors are not too happy."

Mrs. McCollum is preparing for a comeback of sorts. At her upcoming 35th high school reunion, she expects to perform a dance routine. But she said she doesn't like to perform, preferring instead to spend time with her husband.

Because she was so young when the "Our Gang" series was filmed, Mrs. McCollum said she doesn't remember much of it.

"I enjoyed doing all of it. I liked dressing up," she said. "We rode horses. I got to fly and ride in boats. This was during a time when most families — including mine — didn't even have cars."

LANCASTER

Central to the issue is the history behind the Lancaster House.

Given in 1970 as a gift to the museum by Naomi Lancaster and her daughter Mrs. William Penn, the home during Mrs. Lancaster's lifetime was the starting point of many of Midland's cultural organizations, including the Museum of the Southwest, Midland Community Theatre, the Midland Arts Association and the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale.

When Mrs. Lancaster died at the age of 80 in January of 1974, her obituary read:

"She undoubtedly had done more than any other one person in creating, supporting and developing the many and varied cultural aspects of the community. She had a part — usually the lead role — in practically every fine arts endeavor launched here in more than a quarter of a century."

Overcrowded skies could return airline regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — For six years, the word from Washington has been to let airlines compete vigorously without interference.

Now industry executives believe their free-wheeling ways under deregulation are being threatened by a government worried about overcrowded skies.

Ironically, the concern about the return of government control over airline decision-making comes as the Civil Aeronautics Board, which once had the final say about airline routes and pricing, is about to shut its doors.

The new bogeyman, in the eyes of the airline executives, is the Federal Aviation Administration, which for three years has been struggling to regroup its air traffic control operation after 11,400 controllers were fired because of an illegal strike.

"You're about to re-invent regulation and not make it look like regulation," quipped Alan Pollock, who has been chief spokesman at the CAB during the years the agency has rushed out of the airline regulating business.

Since the government told the airlines in 1978 they could do as they wished to compete, the carriers have spent tens of millions of dollars to adjust to the new, often cutthroat business environment.

The controllers strike resulted in some restrictions, but the Reagan administration — as well as virtually everyone in Congress — has stood solidly behind deregulation.

Until recently the controller shortage and resulting restrictions on the airways were acceptable to the industry because business was poor anyway. But this year, tens of thousands of air travelers returned to the skies, business has been brisk and the airlines have been putting on additional flights, usually where and when demand is heaviest.

The result has been a record number of delays, with commercial flights leaving more than 15 minutes behind schedule 80 percent more often this year than in 1983. The FAA has said if the airlines do not solve the problem, it will impose stringent restrictions on flights at six busy airports. Airline officials say a dozen or more other airports are being eyed by the agency for similar treatment.

The airlines and the FAA agree the delays are partly the result of scheduling practices by the carriers, which do not hesitate to bunch dozens of flights at peak travel periods when they know not all can take off on time.

But the airlines contend much of the current delay problem rests with an inadequate air traffic control network. Even when fully rebuilt — which the FAA says will occur when 14,306 controllers are on the job early next year — the system will not have enough employees to handle the traffic allowed by existing airport capacity.

The airlines argue the framers of the Airline Deregulation Act gave them no choice but to compete vigorously in scheduling as well as pricing, and that means head-on competition during times when travelers want to travel most.

"The government should stay out of airline scheduling," declared Paul Ignatius, president of the Air Transport Association, which represents most of the major carriers. He called such interference "a new form of economic regulation."

When an airport becomes overcrowded, some carriers will move elsewhere, industry officials argue. They cite advertising campaigns, for example, by Eastern Airlines and Republic Airlines during the past year touting their connection flights through Kansas City and Minneapolis to avoid delays through busy Chicago.

Many airline officials believe the FAA wants to control scheduling permanently, although FAA Administrator Donald Engen and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole vigorously deny any such intention.

Such restrictions, if made permanent, would dramatically change the airline industry under deregulation, industry officials argue.

Most significantly, said Robert Cohn, an attorney for People Express, a limit on schedules would "freeze out" expanding airlines — such as his Newark-based low-cost carrier — from entering a market.

Texaco refinery workers shaken by job losses at Port Arthur plant

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Port Arthur, a Gulf of Mexico port already struggling with rising unemployment, was shaken last week when the Texaco refinery announced that 1,400 employees will be laid off over the next two months, adding to the growing ranks here of idled oil workers.

Texaco employed 5,000 at its Port Arthur refinery in 1982. In that year and the next, the work force was reduced by 1,600. The company announced last Thursday that there will be more layoffs, with a total 1,400 workers put out of work in a series starting in 60 days and concluding in January. The work force then will be down to 1,600.

Union workers at the refinery have not been told which individuals will lose jobs, but already some already are bitter.

"I spent 16 years out here, and these people could care less about me," said Sandy Turner, a machinist and the father of six.

James Barnes, a machinist and a Texaco employee for nearly 16 years, told the Austin American-Statesman he will probably leave the area.

"A good job is not easy to come by here," said Barnes, who has three children at home.

Dale Netherland and his wife face financial hardship.

"We just bought a new home," said Netherland, an electrician and company employee for 11½ years. "My wife went to work so we could buy a home. She cried most of Thursday at work."

Jim Rhoden's pink slip should come just about the time his first child is born. His wife is expecting Dec. 1.

Rhoden, a draftsman, is among more than 300 non-union employees who were told Friday they would lose their jobs.

"It was sad at my home, too," said Lee Townsend, area manager for Texaco. Townsend was responsible for announcing the layoffs.

Many residents in Port Arthur are wondering how they'll make it through the new layoffs announced by the city's largest employer. Their problem is not temporary. A spokesman for the company said the cut in the work force is permanent.

"We're not promising there won't be future layoffs," said Paul Weeditz, public affairs coordinator for Texaco.

Unemployment hit 17.3 percent in July in Port Arthur, a city of 61,000. In the Port Arthur area, which includes neighboring towns of Nederland, Port Neches, and Groves, the unemployment rate was 12.8 percent. The outlook got much worse Thursday.

No one will be left untouched, said Jim Flowers, executive vice president of the Greater Port Arthur Chamber of Commerce.

"The great Port Arthur economy is going to be on the bottom," Flowers told the Dallas Morning News. "I guess everybody's emotions are running the gamut. This was extremely bad news."

Townsend defended the decision.

The refinery has been operating at 60 percent capacity for several years while carrying a work force based on full operating capacity, Townsend said.

With the layoffs, the refining capacity at the Texaco plant will be reduced from 400,000 barrels a day to 200,000 barrels. Seven operating units will be shut down.

"I try to look at the positive side," said Townsend, who took over the Port Arthur refinery in May. "The positive side is that the refinery did not shut down, as have 90 since 1981."

Among the 90 domestic refineries closed in the last three years were Texaco plants at Lockport, Ill., West Tulsa, Okla., and Casper, Wyo. Despite the closings throughout the industry, refineries are still operating at 20 to 25 percent below capacity, he said.

Townsend said Texaco officials decided to make the Port Arthur refinery "a long-term survivor."

"Certainly, those 1,400 employees involved in the layoff may not appreciate this, and the decision was not an easy one, but it was a necessary decision," Townsend said.

For months, everyone had expected more layoffs, but nothing of the magnitude that was announced Thursday, said Gary Beevers, vice chairman of the worker committee for the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union which, along with two other unions, represent about 75 percent of the workers who face unemployment.

"We have no place for these people to go," Beevers said. "It looks like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow has sunk."

Community leaders said the new round of layoffs points out the necessity for a diversified economy.

The area takes what leaders hope will be a large step in that direction on Tuesday, when Bethlehem Steel will break ground in Port Arthur for one of the largest dry docks in the country. The dock will employ 750 people.

Dollar reaches high; Gold mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar surged to new highs against virtually all major currencies in early European trading today. Gold prices were mixed.

Dealers said the dollar showed no sign of ending a week-long climb sparked by high U.S. interest rates and expectations of an election victory for President Reagan.

The U.S. currency was at an 11½-year high and within a fraction of breaking the three-mark level against the West German mark. It also hit a record against the Italian lira and a seven-year high against the Swiss franc, dropping only fractionally from Friday's 10-year high against the Dutch guilder.

In Frankfurt, the dollar fetched bids of above three marks in early trading today before retreating to 2.9945 marks, up from 2.9710 marks late Friday.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a closing 246.10 yen from Friday's 244.55. Later, in London, it was quoted at 245.73.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday:

–2.4915 Swiss francs, up from 2.4685.

–9.1975 French francs, up from 9.1175.

–3.3509 Dutch guilders, down from 3.3515.

–1,844.25 Italian lire, up from 1,829.25.

–1.3180 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3110.

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.2728, cheaper than Friday's record low price of $1.2737.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $336 a troy ounce and the city's five major bullion dealers later fixed a recommended price of $337.20 per ounce, up from late Friday's closing bid of $335.50.

In Zurich, gold was trading at a bid $336.80, down from $339.75 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell the equivalent of one cent to close at a bid $338.76 compared to Saturday's $338.77.

Deadline draws near in GM, union negotiation

DETROIT (AP) — Less than five days separates General Motors Corp. and the United Auto Workers from their contract expiration deadline, and both sides say progress has been slower than hoped for.

The union has not set a formal strike deadline against the giant automaker. But chief UAW bargainer Donald Ephlin said Sunday that, "as far as I'm concerned, midnight Friday is the end of the agreement."

That's when the labor contract signed in 1982 expires.

During a weekend of long hours and heated exchanges at the bargaining table, UAW President Owen Bieber said that he might not set a strike deadline until "the 11th hour."

"I'm anxious to get it moving at a faster pace so that we're not crushed for time come Friday night," Ephlin said Sunday. "My optimism has dimmed a little bit on the time; not a great deal, but a little bit."

While long hours and overnight sessions have become the norm during UAW contract talks in Detroit, both Ephlin and GM's chief negotiator, Alfred Warren, have said the bargaining was taking longer than expected.

Disagreement has persisted over the UAW's primary demand that at least 300,000 UAW jobs be kept in the United States and out of non-union shops.

The union, with 350,000 workers at GM, is demanding "a tough and comprehensive limitation" on the company's freedom to save money by importing hundreds of thousands of small cars from Japan and South Korea, and to put work out for bids at outside companies.

Yamani visits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani is here on a three-day visit for talks with Mexican leaders on the world oil situation.

Yamani arrived in the capital Sunday morning on a direct private flight from Austrialia accompanied by Dr. Fadhil J. Al-Chalabi, Secretary General of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

A Department of Energy press release said Yamani will hold talks with top Mexican officials, including Energy Secretary Francisco Labistado Ochoa, and will be guest of honor at a dinner Tuesday that President Miguel de la Madrid will host.

Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale watches as his wife, Joan, introduces their dog Digger to reporters gathered outside their Washington home.

Black leaders calling for ouster of Reagan

By FRANK BLANCHARD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — A black Texas congressman says it's up to the black community to defeat President Reagan this fall, but an Alabama leader says white elected officials also must help.

"We've got to save America and nobody else is going to do it but black people," U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston told about 150 black leaders from 10 states meeting Saturday to plan strategy for electing Democratic presidential nominee Walter Mondale.

"I don't care how much or how little we like Walter Mondale," he said.

Reagan's policies are "killing us in every way.... What Ronald Reagan has done to Medicaid and Medicare is taken hundreds of millions of dollars away from poor people. Ronald Reagan is literally responsible for the deaths of hundreds," he said.

But Joe Reed, chairman of Alabama's black political caucus and coordinator of the series of meetings Saturday, said it's going to take more than the solidified efforts of black Democrats.

"Getting rid of Ronald Reagan is everybody's responsibility. We must have the support of white elected officials," Reed said.

Black leaders from at least 10 states attended the strategy sessions, including representatives of Georgia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas, Tennessee and Arkansas.

Most were supporters of Jesse Jackson's failed race for the Democratic nomination, including Anita Bonds of Washington, who served as the Jackson campaign's national field director and now works in the campaign.

Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, a United Nations ambassador during the Carter-Mondale administration, told the group that blacks would suffer most if Reagan wins another term.

George Bush's campaign style quite different from Reagan's

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — On the campaign trail, George Bush does things Ronald Reagan would never do.

Such as:

— March more than a mile in a Labor Day parade exposed to thousands of people who have not been checked for handguns. The vice president regularly shakes hands with crowds at airports; Reagan recently began doing the same thing after avoiding it for most of his presidency.

— Hold news conferences and press interviews everywhere he goes, as many as eight separate appearances a day before reporters. "I hope you'll agree that if you've had any exposure to me it comes close to overexposure," Bush told reporters recently. By contrast, Reagan goes days and weeks at a time without answering reporters' questions and has held only 26 news conferences in the last 44 months.

— Get up early, before dawn, to set out on long campaigns days that sometimes go almost until midnight. Reagan rarely makes public appearances before mid-morning and usually has completed his schedule by early evening.

There are many other differences between Reagan and Bush, some the product of contrasting styles between the two men and others the result of Reagan being the boss and Bush No. 2.

Bush frequently rides in motorcades when Reagan would take a helicopter. The vice president often is driven 30-45 minutes on trips, such as during last Saturday's visit to Detroit, while Reagan usually flies when the distance is that great.

In his speeches, Reagan frequently uses a TelePrompTer which displays a text of his speech on a see-through screen right before his eyes. That allows him to read a speech word-for-word while seeming to look directly at his audience.

In contrast, Bush doesn't like TelePrompTers and has used one only once, to deliver his acceptance speech at last month's Republican convention. In recent campaign appearances, Bush read prepared speeches from notecards, sticking fairly closely to the text with some embellishments.

Compared with Reagan, Bush takes a much harder line against Walter F. Mondale in what Republican campaign officials say is a strategy to let Reagan be "presidential" while the vice president chops away at the Democrats.

In recent appearances, Bush accused Mondale of refusing to admit the Sandinista regime of Nicaragua is Marxist-Leninist, blamed him for the impasse in nuclear arms negotiations and warned that a recession would ensue if Mondale were elected.

When Reagan travels, he is trailed by a large press corps, half a dozen aides from his press office and three or four stenographers and typists who transcribe every presidential remark and rush it to reporters.

"That's a great luxury," says the vice president's press secretary, Peter Teeley. "We would like it but we don't have it.

"We've got a little staff and we don't have a big press corps," Teeley added. "When the president moves, you're moving a small army. We've got a regiment, maybe a platoon."

For the formal Labor Day opening of Bush's campaign, 39 reporters, cameramen and technicians accompanied the vice president. For Reagan's trip the same week, the press contingent numbered 117.

A telephone company representative accompanies the traveling White House and makes sure there are plenty of phones, usually 25-30 in press rooms and eight or more at the back of platforms erected for television cameras at speech sites.

Ferraro says she'll seek clarification

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Geraldine Ferraro, who takes her vice presidential campaign today on a three-day swing seeking blue-collar and ethnic votes, says that despite renewed cr.ticism from a Catholic leader she has "never made a statement relative to the church's teaching on abortion."

Ms. Ferraro said she would try to talk with New York Archbishop John J. O'Connor for clarification of his comments Sunday, when he said the Democratic vice presidential candidate had created an incorrect "impression" that Roman Catholic teachings on abortion are flexible.

O'Connor, whose championing of the anti-abortion cause has stoked the debate over the role of religion in politics, made the comments in a television interview here Sunday after he celebrated Mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

O'Connor said the "impression has been created (by Ms. Ferraro)...that there are a variety of positions that can be held in consonance with Catholic teachings."

"Anyone who says that this is open to interpretation...is simply not expressing what the Catholic Church teaches."

But when asked to specify what Ms. Ferraro has said in regard to the Catholic stand on abortion, the archbishop said he had no time to discuss the matter further.

Ms. Ferraro has said that while she personally is opposed to abortion, she supports the right of women to make individual judgments on the issue.

O'Connor made similar remarks Saturday evening at an anti-abortion convention in Altoona, Pa.

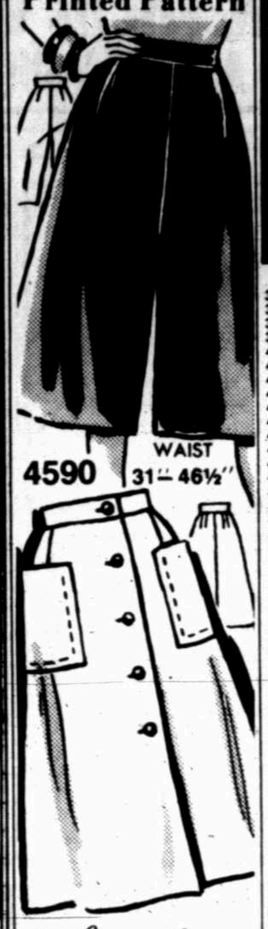

"I will never tell anyone...to vote for her or against her," he said there.

"The only think I know about her is that she has given the world to understand that Catholic teaching is divided on the subject of abortion," he said. "Geraldine Ferraro doesn't have a problem with me. If she has a problem, it's with the pope."
