

New Tax Law Became Effective Midnight Monday; Few Articles Overlooked by Busy Collector

Postage Rates to Be Increased

Even Your Club Dues Are Taxed, As Well as Complimentary Tickets to "Anything."

Upon the stroke of midnight last Monday the major machinery of the new tax bill was thrown into gear, to operate continuously to and including June 30, 1934, says an Associated Press report from Washington.

The government's program for raising more than half of the additional tax burden of $1,118,500,000 will be launched through a new manufacturers excise levy, stamp taxes and miscellaneous others. From these the treasury hopes to realize $654,000,000 during the coming fiscal year.

Apparently few purchasing agents throughout the land will be spared by the new imposts. The list of taxable articles includes a cross section of more or less essentials, such as matches, gasoline, electricity for domestic and commercial use, automobiles and tires, candy, soft drinks, toilet preparations and a host of others. From these manufacturers' excise taxes the government expects $487,000,000 next year.

Under the miscellaneous imposts coming more than 50 cents, telegraph and cable communications, and a tax on admissions—designed to raise $64,500,000.

The stamp taxes on security issues, securities transfers, conveyances, checks and the like, are calculated to provide further revenues of $132,500,000.

The tax on admissions is applicable at the rate of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of charges above 40 cents. Admissions not only to theaters, but to any "place" are affected. The tax must be collected from the persons paying the admissions, and persons, except employees, admitted free or at reduced rates, must pay the tax.

No Athletic Exemptions

Certain exemptions are made in favor of religious, educational or charitable organizations, except at wrestling or boxing exhibitions. The regulations made public Sunday provide no exemption for college athletic games or for those operated by the government.

Dues and initiation fees to any social, athletic or sporting club or organization are taxable at the rate of 10 per cent if the dues of an active resident annual member are in excess of $25 per year, and if initiation fees amount to more than $10. Exemptions from the provisions are amounts paid to a fraternal society, order or association operating under the lodge system, or to any local fraternal organization among the schools and colleges.

Life membership costs are not taxable, but the holder is required to pay a tax equivalent to that paid by annual members for dues or membership fees other than assessments.

Increased postage, which is expected to help slash the postoffice department's deficit, is not to go into effect until next month.

After the members had eaten, they played a march for Mr. and Mrs. Judevine, and then proceeded to the Chamber of Commerce building to play some short selections before the benefit bridge party given to aid the charity fund.

A large crowd turned out for the band concert on the square, and the band, under the direction of Mr. Pogue, gave one of the best concerts of its career. The program consisted of several marches, popular tunes, and a medley, "Songs of the Old Folks," and "Texarkana," by Holmes.

Mr. Stewart will place his son-in-law, Cleo Pike, as manager of the laundry.

Fattens Prize Winning Calf

Nelson Ainsworth of Milnesand already has made a splendid start in feeding out a white-faced calf for next year's exhibition. The past spring he won fifth place at the South Plains Fat Stock show at Lubbock in competition with about 150 other calves.

With the experience gained last year, together with the fact that he started developing this year's calf from the time it was born, he should be able to make an even better showing next spring.

Hoover-Curtis Renominated

At the Republican national convention at Chicago last week Herbert Hoover was renominated for President and Curtis for vice president.

From press reports, the convention was rather a tame affair, and sidestepped the prohibition issue.

John Russell Has Farm for Rabbits

John Russell, cocklebur king of the Southwest (take off your hat when you speak of it), has started another line that will rival even his famous cocklebur crop. This summer John is feeding out a large bunch of jackrabbits. Just how much he is feeding, no one seems to know.

He has a way of estimating the number, however. He counts his rows of corn and multiplies by their length in yards. Every two weeks, he multiplies this number by two, thus keeping up with the increase.

He now is furnishing all the surrounding country with fat rabbits and says that within another month his crop will have spread all over Roosevelt county.

Sunday evening sixty of his pets were playing in the road as the News editor attempted to go past in the auto. If the steering gear hadn't been in good shape, several jackrabbits now would be mourned by their families. As it was, the editor's arm held out and he dodged every one of Russell's "sheep" except the one that jumped on the running board and rode there until the car reached his beargrass, about a mile down the road.

PAINTING ON DISPLAY

Wind Storm Does Damage

Many Trees and Roofs Are Damaged and Billboards Blown Down

The windstorm which struck Portales about 3 o'clock Monday afternoon caused damage in different parts of the city. Many trees were blown down, and broken branches were scattered over the court house lawn as a result of the hard wind.

The sheet iron awning in front of Dr. Keller's office and the one adjoining belonging to Dr. I. D. Johnson were blown down on to the sidewalk.

Considerable damage was reported in the Hiway and Garrison communities. Farmers in that section believed their crops were totally ruined.

Several sheets of iron were loosened from the roof and sides of the Portales Canning company warehouse, while along the Elida highway several signs belonging to local merchants were blown down.

Foster Price Dies Beneath a Train

Leaves Note at Childress, Tex., to Father and Brother Asking Forgiveness—Jobless, Discouraged.

Foster Price of Portales, about 29 years of age, was killed by a north-bound Fort Worth & Denver railroad freight train near Childress, Tex., a press dispatch from that city reports.

Mit Price of Portales, uncle of the victim, stated that Foster had traveled extensively in the last few years. He had been all over North America and to Europe twice. His father had received a letter from the deceased, mailed in Colorado only a few days ago, saying he would be home shortly.

Foster is survived by his father, T. H. Price, and younger brother, Kermit Price, of Wichita Falls, Tex. He was unmarried.

Trainmen said Price dived beneath a car after the locomotive and three cars had passed.

Letters on his body, addressed to his mother and father and a brother, asked forgiveness.

The man had been fed by citizens near the scene, and claimed to be out of work and penniless.

Farmers!—Beware of Grasshoppers

Farmers are warned to be on the outlook for grasshopper damage in their crops. There are now many grasshoppers on pasture lands and, if dry weather sets in, they are likely to go into the crops.

Already some damage to crops is reported from Milnesand.

When they first start into the crops, prompt action should be taken to poison them. If a strip along the edge of the field is poisoned, grasshoppers can usually be stopped before they spread over the field. It is important to start in time.

The following formula is effective in poisoning grasshoppers:

Bran 50 pounds.
White arsenic or Paris Green, 2 pounds.
Molasses 1 gallon.

Allyn acetate (banana oil) 1 1/2 cts.
Enough water to make the mixture crumbly (about eight gallons).
(Three) dozen lemons, chopped finely can be substituted for the banana oil.

This poison bran should be mixed with a shovel and should be handled only with gloves on the hands. It should be treated with respect for it is POISON. Arsenic of lead should not be used.

The poison bran mash should be broadcast thinly over the ground either early in the morning or late in the afternoon.

There is also a prepared grasshopper poison on the market ready for mixing with water and bran, that is effective and is easy to use.

Rev. R. F. Davis, pastor of the First Methodist church here, left Monday morning on the train for Hagerman, N. M., where he is spending the week as an instructor in a training school sponsored by the Methodist church. He will return in time to preach Sunday morning.

Mr. Baker of Baker Products Co. to Be in City Monday and Tuesday

Receipt Is Used to Get Money

The First National bank has had a supply of new commercial form receipts printed, to be used in getting money from the bank.

Latest advices are that the use of this form does not carry the 2-cent tax.

The receipt is to acknowledge money drawn from the account of the depositor. It is printed on blue paper, so as to distinguish it from the regular checks, which are on white paper.

Under the new revenue bill which became effective at 12 o'clock Monday night, a 2-cent tax is levied on all checks, drafts or orders for the payment of money drawn on any banking institution. Counter checks are exempt.

Under regulations of the internal revenue department, the check tax will be deducted from the depositor's balance at the close of each day's business and the deduction will show on the balance sheet. The banks are held responsible for the tax by the government.

Mrs. M. W. Fields and Rheba Murl Goldsmith Badly Injured

Sunday afternoon, the Ford car in which five persons were riding was struck by the east bound Santa Fe train on the crossing just west of the depot. The persons in the automobile were Mrs. M. W. Fields, Miss Nanny Fields, Doris Grace Fields, Rheba Murl Goldsmith and Pauline Goldsmith. Miss Nanny Fields was driving the car. All the occupants of the car were cut and bruised, and Mrs. M. W. Fields, who was riding in the front seat on the side which the train struck, suffered a broken leg and several broken ribs. The door next to her was mashed in, catching her between the driver's seat, Rheba Murl Goldsmith also was seriously injured. Mrs. Fields and Rheba Murl Goldsmith were taken to the Baptist hospital in Elida.

The car was caved in on the entire right side, and the left front wheel broken off.

Several years ago Mr. Fields was injured when the truck in which he was riding was struck by a train at a crossing below Portales.

At the crossing where the accident of last Sunday occurred, the vision of the tracks is obscured to some extent by the shade trees at the section house.

Walter Franse, who was standing near the ticket office, said that the automobile was not going over fifteen or twenty miles per hour. He stated that he heard the whistle of the engine blow, and saw the train hit the car.

According to Mr. Franse, the train struck just as the front wheels of the car were on the center of the crossing. He also stated the car was pushed along for about twenty feet, then it seemed to roll off on its own power across the switch track, where the front wheel collapsed and after jumping both tracks, the car stopped.

Mrs. R. B. Martian, wife of the section hand, also saw the accident. She stated she heard the whistle blow and watched both the car and the train until they hit. Mrs. Martian was the first to reach the injured persons. She stated that Nanny Fields said she neither saw the train nor heard the whistle. Mrs. Martian also stated that the car was going slow.

"Dad" Cooley, engineer on the train, stated when interviewed by a News reporter, that he did not see the car approaching and that he distinctly remembers blowing the whistle.

L. B. Baker, who was placed in charge of the wreck by Sheriff Jer-nigan, stated that the Fields family was coming to town to mail a letter. Their clock was slow and they did not expect the train to be coming for some time. They were going toward Iowa when the accident happened.

J. T. Miller, Santa Fe claim inspector and adjuster, was viewing the crossing and wreck Monday morning.

Latest reports from the Baptist hospital state that Mrs. Fields is doing nicely under the doctors' treatment. The doctors report that she has a broken leg and injuries on the right side of her chest.

Rheba Murl Goldsmith has injuries to the head which, while painful, are not serious.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Burkett came in from the Dora community last Monday and spent a portion of the day in the county seat, shopping and attending to business.

DISGUSTING POLITICAL BUNK

On Wednesday night of last week, speakers from the Republican convention platform at Chicago, "pointed with pride" the achievements of the Hoover administration.

"They told that they had saved the farmers, the laborers, preventing a panic, and that they had saved the nation."

This is the rankiest political bunk that we have ever heard. Nothing constructive was offered to rehabilitate the nation.

"They pointed with pride" while over 10,000,000 unemployed were clamoring for a chance to earn their living.

"They pointed with pride" to the wonderful aid they had given the farmers, while farm prices were below the cost of production and thousands of farmers over the nation were facing the probability of losing their farms for lack of means to pay taxes and interest.

Unless some relief is given before Christmas, they will have the opportunity to "point with pride" at armies of desperate citizens raiding the food stores of the nation.

They probably will "point with pride" at the rape of the nation's oil wealth by Andy Mellon.

Bunk—the rankiest kind of bunk—yet many of the American people will stand for it, until they are driven to the wall.

AUTOMATIC RELIEF

Were congress to adopt a measure of relief similar to that outlined by this paper on June 2, the unemployed, the farmers and the business men automatically would obtain relief.

No relief can come until the great army of unemployed are put back to work and enabled to earn a living.

The Red Cross and other charitable organizations mean well, but such relief constitutes a vicious system.

It is creating a nation of beggars, and it will not be long till this army swallows up the nation.

One great statesman said, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute."

We are now in a state of war against poverty, and until some statesman with the power to lead the nation back to a sound financial basis appears, we are in danger of being thrown into an internal revolution.

Such a revolution would cost in money more than the sum needed to put the unemployed to work, besides the great loss of lives and property.

O, for a Moses to lead us out of the wilderness!

PROPER CARE OF EGGS

At this season of the year more bad eggs come on the market. These eggs are candied and the producer suffers the loss.

Care should be taken to gather the eggs one or more times a day, as the sun affects the quality of the eggs and renders them unfit for food.

Gather your eggs one or more times a day, and keep in a cool place until they can be delivered to market.

Shut up the broody hens and do not allow them to remain on the nest, spoiling the eggs.

The egg market of the future will depend upon the quality of the eggs.

Keep your eggs in first class condition and you will receive a better price.

CIVIC BODIES CAN BRING ABOUT RELIEF

All agree that some form of relief for labor and farmers must be brought about.

This result can be speeded up by every Chamber of Commerce and other civic organization in the nation adopting some form of relief that will put the unemployed back to work, giving the farmers an outlet for their products, and thereby relieving business, large and small.

The News can see no better plan than that of the federal government issuing bonds sufficient for such a program, using army engineers and officers to lay out and direct the work.

This public work should be of a permanent nature, and should not be let out to contractors.

Labor should receive the greatest possible benefit, and all overhead should be cut to the minimum.

Whenever labor goes back to work, the farmer will receive a fair price for his products, the merchant will be able to sell his wares, and the manufacturer will have to speed up production.

The party which adopts such a plan will act wisely, and thereby perpetuate itself in power so long as it has the interest of the common herd at heart.

TRUTH ABOUT REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

(From Albuquerque Journal)

The Journal made some comment the other day about the dry and wet fight absorbing all the attention at the Republican national convention when there were more important things to be considered.

Take a quiet look at this "dramatic" convention story from a staff writer of the Kansas City Star and get his impression of the big gathering:

"This isn't a national presidential nominating convention. It's a convention to keep the dry and wet fight about the prohibition amendment from absorbing all the attention at the Republican national convention when there were more important things to be considered."

There are the accredited representatives of the dominant party of the nation gathered from every state and territory in the Union. They are meeting in a time with millions unemployed in one of the moments of greatest national crisis. They are gathered in a city that has felt the shock of depression probably worse than any other spot in America—a city ruined financially, shell-shocked by unemployment, where one has only to pass some of the municipal lodging or feeding houses to see thousands living about economic derelicts because they can't get jobs. And yet, all the delegates are talking about how to deal with prohibition.

Political reporters lead on his convention story is a better editorial than could be written about the convention. It boldly presents the truth about the convention.

TOP LOOK LISTEN

Especially where poor visibility of the track does not enable you to look up and down the track, it pays to come to a full stop and make an inspection before crossing.

The greater number of accidents on railways crossings are caused by carelessness in not taking care to see whether a train is approaching.

It always pays to stop, look and listen.

LONG TERM CONTRACT FOR ARLISS INGENUE LEAD

Bette Davis, George Arliss's ingenue lead in his latest Warner Bros. Picture "The Man Who Played God," which comes to the Portales Theatre next July 5 and 6, has been rewarded with a long term contract as a result of her portrayal of the ingenue role in the picture.

Miss Davis has been in "pictures" but one year, coming to the screen from a brief experience on the New York stage, where she appeared with Richard Bennett, father of Constance, Joan and Barbara and one of the country's foremost actors. Upon her arrival in Hollywood, Miss Davis became a bit player. Her small part, however, was acted so excellently that she was singled out by George Arliss to play an important role in "The Man Who Played God."

Arliss' faith in the dramatic abilities of the blonde and beautiful Bette was justified, and Warner Bros. accordingly presented her with the long term contract, which assures future appearances in important roles.

"The Man Who Played God" also includes in its cast such well-known stage and screen performers as Violet Heming, Ivan Simpson, Louise Closser Hale, Donald Cook, Oscar Apfel, Andre Luguet and others. John Adolfi directed this picture, which has already been chosen by many metropolitan critics as one of the "ten best" of 1932.

VAUGHAN OFFERS PLAN TO PAY BONUS NOW AND SAVE FEDERAL MONEY

Roswell N. M., June 14—A substitute bonus bill designed to save the federal government a billion dollars and more likely to pass the senate and President Hoover was suggested Tuesday night by Daniel Vaughan, former department commander of the American Legion, in a telegram to Senator Cutting.

The plan calls for the payment of the original face value of the certificates plus accrued interest to date instead of to 1945, as provided in the Patman bill. Vaughan said the average face value of the certificates was $500 and the interest accrued to 1932 would average $140, while to 1945 the interest would be $400. Thus the payment of four million certificates he roughly estimated would be $2,560,000,000 instead of $3,600,000,000.

Farm Relief Plan Will Relieve Agriculturists

KANSAS CITY PAPER HOUSE

KANSAS CITY, MO.
June 16th, 1932

Mr. J. G. Greaves
Portales, New Mexico.
Dear Mr. Greaves:

Your letter with the attached clipping of your editorial was received a few days ago while the writer was away. We have taken a great deal of pleasure in reading this, and believe you have some very good, constructive ideas. Whether you can get anywhere with them at this time is a question.

The writer has always felt there should be a national highway across this country from coast to coast and one from the gulf to Canada—not an ordinary slab but a real highway. Your idea of construction is very good. The writer's recollection is that it goes back to the time President Roosevelt put over the Panama Canal on a similar plan, using the army officers for engineers and furnish supply camps, doctors, etc. The big problem then before they could get started was to get rid of the mosquitoes. Here we would have to get rid of a few Bolsheviks.

Very truly yours,
Kansas City Paper House,
H. D. Thompson, V-pres.

Mr. J. G. Greaves,
Portales Valley News,
Portales, New Mexico.

My Dear Mr. Greaves:

Upon my return to the office today I find your valued favor of June 11th containing a clipping from your most estimable paper of June 2nd.

This plan of yours strikes a very responsive cord in my heart and supplies me with some ideas that I have been trying to get through my cranium for some time. The only thing now that I am trying to decide is my own mind is whether it should be done the way you suggest or whether this money should be loaned out through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to self-liquidating industries and agriculture, thereby offering employment to the hordes of unemployed that you mention in your article. Under your plan, the government would receive back its money by the increasing of the ability to pay future taxes. Under the other plan, the government would receive back its money direct from the people to whom it is loaned and would also receive a nominal interest, say of from three to five per cent.

The plan that I suggested would only be operative in the event that the government would amend the Reconstruction Finance act entitling the farmer and business man to deal direct with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, receiving the benefits of the small interest and eliminating the wide spread of from three to five per cent between our local banks and co-operatively association and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. If this can be done and the borrower have advantage of this small interest, it appears to me that from a taxation standpoint, the country would be better off to borrow this money than it would be to use it in non-liquidating work such as the strengthening of the Mississippi Channel and public highways for the simple reason that all of the money that the government puts out and does not get back from the sources to which it is put, then the tax payer eventually has to meet the bill.

I am sure glad to know that your mind is working along this line and I wish you would take the idea that I have recited to you above and in some manner merge it with your idea and let us have another article on it. I shall continue to study this plan of yours but in the meantime, I would like to have your views on the above idea.

Assuring you of my appreciation of your interest, I beg to remain Sincerely,
Albert T. Woods,

Farm Relief

Colonel Woods we sure thank you for your criticism on our reconstruction editorial of June 2.

Your suggestions are good as far as they go. The farmers and business men need financial aid, but lending cheap them money without supplying them with customers for their merchandise will not solve the problem. How are they going to repay the loan?

Put labor to work, and they will buy with their earnings, automatically relieving the farmers, the merchant, the banker and the manufacturer.

The two programs used in would be a great solution for the present economic crisis.—Editor.

FARM & HOME WEEK OF INTEREST TO STOCKMEN

Livestock men over the state will be especially interested in the fact that the extension service has made arrangements to have Dr. C. W. McCampbell, head of the animal husbandry department, Kansas Agricultural college, appear on the program for Farm and Home week, to be held at State College, July 25 to 29. Dr. McCampbell will give a series of lectures on beef cattle problems, dealing especially with feeding problems.

Dr. McCampbell is one of the outstanding authorities on beef cattle feeding in the United States, having probably done more toward making comparisons of the relative value of the various grain sorghums to that of corn, than any other investigator.

All stockmen or farmers who are intending to feed cattle should plan to visit State College during Farm and Home week, as they will be repaid many times if they do not.

TO OUR FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS

Under the new Federal revenue act which goes into effect June 21, 1932, all banks are required to make a charge of 2 cents on each check written and paid by the bank. This 2 cents will be charged to your account at the time the check is paid, or in a total amount at the end of the month based on the number of checks you have given during the month. The charge slip covering same will be included in your statement and will be returned with your cancelled checks.

We will appreciate the co-operation of our patrons and their help in taking care of this Federal tax. However, if each and every person will exercise a little forethought and write one check for approximately the amount of money they anticipate needing for the day, or even week, you can reduce this additional charge to a minimum.

The hazard of loss by a person from fire in the home, or robbery, is too great for anyone to try to evade the payment of this small levy by carrying the money on their person or keeping it in their home.

Our bank will not receive one cent for this additional responsibility and additional work required to collect this tax, as the entire amount goes to the government.

The farmers and ranchers are suffering for the want of rain. One week's absence of rain has made the crops and grasslands very dry. Our residents are now looking forward to a change in the weather, as the weather forecast is for rain, change in weather, full moon. We wish them luck.

The attendance at Sunday school was quite small. We urge everyone to come next Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harp entertained a host of neighbors and friends with a forty-two party Friday night. Mrs. Plummer of Portales and Mr. Robertson of Pep were the champion players. Waverly Oil a wage earner from '96 to 1932, and there is a vast difference in the price of wages today as compared with the wages paid up to 1917. As an example, we will quote some wages that we personally experienced during our life-time, and not hesitatingly, we will say that in the lines we have followed through our years we drew the average or above the average wage at all times for our work.

In '98 we worked for our board and clothes, and it was very little clothes that we got, and the board was not par excellent, consisting of sow-belly and cornbread, principally.

From 1901 to 1903 we worked for $7.50 per month and our board; in 1904 and 1905 we had attained the wage scale of $1.50 per day for master printer and worked from 5 o'clock the morning until 9 or 10 o'clock at night sticking type, with no extra for overtime.

In 1903-1907 we ran a newspaper and several months our total first of the month collections did not exceed $50 or $60. In the latter part of 1907 we began railroading at a wage for brakeman of $2.85 for an eleven-hour day, and 20c per hour overtime, and, as the overtime figured less than the day scale, the railroad made it a point to see that we ran from thirty-six to sixty hours a trip without laying up for rest.

In 1908 to 1912 we again ran a newspaper, and $200 per month was big business, and if we had enough left after paying office expenses to pay our board and sufficient clothes to cover our body, we were lucky.

From 1912 to 1917 our wages had grown gradually from $12 per week to $18 per week, and while we were working in cities during this time we were paid $4 per day.

Then the inflation of everything began in 1917, and shortly after we were drawing $45 to $50 per week for straight eight-hour days and time and a half for overtime.

Of course this was nice while it lasted, and put a great lot of big ideas into our head, but we should have known and every other man should have known that this could not last and at the end of the pavement the road would be rough.

In these years mentioned in the wage scale, conditions were in keeping. We can remember when cotton sold for 3 1/2c per pound; wheat, 30c per bushel; eggs, six dozen for 25c; milk, 5c per quart or 15c per gallon; beef, $8.00 per pound, and the butcher had to weigh his hand to make a profit out of a cow. Groceries were as cheap as they are now.

And we have watched the price grow as the wage scale and prices of raw material advanced, until they skyrocketed and we paid 50c a pound for choice meat, $2 a bucket for lard, $3.50 per sack for flour, etc., with eggs 60c a dozen; butter 60c a pound, and other things in proportion.

We have lived at the low wages and low prices and we have lived at the high wages and high prices, and today we cannot tell that we were any better off in high priced times than we were in low priced times, or vice versa. In hard times we managed to live, get three squares a day, and wear clothes in keeping with the times; in high priced times we made lots of money, poured soap into our tubs, wore fine clothes, tore up our health, paid hospital bills for operations (occasionally probably by our mode of living), rode in fine automobiles, bought fine furniture, built nice homes and buildings, and favored every move put on foot of a progressive nature in order to keep the high priced times before, but they "went" just the same.

By being a fool during the high priced time, it is rather hard now to go back to conditions that are really better than they were before the high priced times came on.

That is the only and only thing that is the matter with the country today, as we see it—the people are not willing to accept the conditions and meet them. They are looking for a Santa Claus, a disruption, war, revolution, or a miracle that will bring about a quick change which will put money in their pockets and enable them to buy new automobiles, spend more time at the picture show, the ice cream parlor, or some other pleasure-seeking place.

The Bible says that man shall earn his living by the sweat of his brow, and the Lord has placed upon this earth the thousands of ways and the many means by which man can earn his living, and it is now up to man to use them.

The Lord intended that man should have plenty of time in which to earn his living, and plenty of time to rest, so He divided the time into day and night, making the days longer than the night during the growing seasons, so that man would have more light to work by—but man, who cares nothing about the plan the Lord fixed for him, wants shorter hours, more riotous living, and more money, and in trying to get this kind of conditions, they generally play the devil and get into trouble.

There is not a farmer in the country who cannot make a good living at home, and be independent as far as living is concerned, but he does not desire to raise a living, he plants and raises his crops for the market—not home consumption.

There are very few town people who only attempt to make a living—they want the luxuries of life, and let their living go unnoticed in order to get luxuries, until necessity forces them to consider where the next meal is coming from.

Look to your own affairs and put them in supreme condition. If you owe, and that is troubling you, cast aside the worry until you can arrange to take care of the same living expense. If you owe cannot get the will to work anyway, whether he wants to or not—for the things you owe for will be worthless to him if he takes them away from you, and then he will be worse off.

The one thing that must happen to make things all right and make the people better contented than they have been since 1914, is to take stock and realize that the stars and high prices are over, and that we must vote intelligently for men who will cut our taxation to a minimum on bacon and beans instead of on awe and fancies, and that a dollar today is worth as much as $5 has been for the last several years.

Within a few months there will be no more said or thought about the depression, and the country will be on a normal, stable basis and everyone will be living well, and will be a darn sight better off physically, morally and intellectually.—State Line Tribune.

World All Set for Revival of Trade

All Nations of World Now Have a Sufficient Supply on Hand, Except Possibly Germany.

Bankers say that with the possible exception of Germany every leading nation now has a sufficient supply of gold bullion to enter into a revived world trade when that revival comes.

Since mid-September, 1931, the United States has returned over $1,000,000,000 of gold to Europe, that had been placed in safekeeping here. The eleven principal European nations have increased their holdings of gold by about the same amount.

Allowing for minor adjustments, and an exception in Germany's case, each nation now has its full supply of gold tucked away in the vaults of its central bank. There remains only a meager smattering of foreign balances—mostly British—in this country which can be recalled.

MITTIE ELIZABETH COLTER

Together with her husband, A. M. Colter, and her children, she moved to Roosevelt county to make a new home in the west.

She was interested in the activities of her children and ever kept that love of home bright and fervent.

Her funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the Mt. Zion church and interment was made in that cemetery, with Wheeler-Johnson in charge.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Colter leaves five children. They are Mrs. J. D. Edwards, Mrs. W. T. Harrison, Mrs. G. E. McKinley, Carl Colter and Robert Colter.

MEDUSA'S HEAD

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In concern over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of his wealthy friend, Crandell White, Aaron Glaesner engages Motherwell, private investigator, to find her. A note from the missing woman warns her husband not to call in the police, saying she hoped to come back.

CHAPTER II.—Mrs. White is younger than her husband and his devotion has been the talk of New York. Her leaving him is unexplainable. She is known to have with her a remarkable jewel, the "Medusa's Head," but her maid, Coggeshall, thinks she had little else of value. Glaesner and Motherwell consider the idea of kidnapping, but there has been no demand for ransom.

CHAPTER III.—It is found that Mrs. White has all her jewelry with her. Coggeshall talks mysteriously of her mistress being "worried," but insists she knows nothing of her whereabouts.

NOW CONTINUE THE STORY

Motherwell sighed. "Oh, well, all right," he said. Then his face lightened. "Hasn't he got an assistant or something?" he asked hopefully, "couldn't I see him?"

"You mean Doctor Schaffner?" "Dark," said Motherwell suggestively, "with a beard. . . ."

"Lord, no! This one's sandy-haired and a little moustache. He's working with him now. A lot of people want him, too. I'll tell you. Schaffner's got a dinner date at Brucca's—know that Italian place? You might catch him there. Try it, anyhow."

"Thanks, I will," said Motherwell. He went slowly down the stairs. "Now, why did Coggeshall lie about that paperweight?" he asked softly of the taxicab he sat in. "Did she come for it? Then why not ask for it, outright. Or was she looking for the Medusa? Or did she throw the Medusa away, herself? Nonsense: the woman who stole it threw it away. And kept the rest, of course. She didn't dare keep it—knew it would be identified. Because Coggeshall is shielding her madam—she'd keep the Medusa, if anything. Didn't even ask for her—unless madam called herself 'Mrs. Gray.' But if Coggeshall knew that name, then she knew the whole plan from the beginning, and lied all along. Besides, that woman in the cab wasn't young. Did they foot her on the jewels, and give her only the Medusa?"

"Well, here's the paperweight and there's where she went, anyway. Now let's look up Old Pretzels."

Sitting an hour later in his club in front of a chop and a baked apple he was called to the telephone booth and surprised to find himself talking to Mr. Glaesner himself. No, he had not gone to his old friend, who had begged him to stay in New York. The doctor was with him, and a nurse. Had Mr. Motherwell any further ideas as to the business they had been discussing?

Mr. Motherwell had, and would send Mr. Wells around to see him shortly.

And soon the young man with his bag and shell-rimmed spectacles was in the library of Mr. Glaesner's city house, and the torn box was on Mr. Glaesner's knees, and the Medusa in his olive hand.

"You know, you're rather extraordinary, Motherwell!" said the jeweler.

"Only lucky, sir," the young man answered frankly, "really! A child would have followed up that ad in the Herald. The rest just broke my way."

"I was told that things often broke your way," said Mr. Glaesner. "It seems they do. Who is this Wentzel?"

"Perfectly all right, sir, as far as I can find. He's a Swiss. Alsatian. Stands very high. He's a member of the Chemical Engineers club and has lectured at Columbia. Has a laboratory in Jersey. They've got his whole record."

"You're sure she went there?" "Here's the only thing Coggeshall tied up, sir. The paper fits absolutely. I think she wrote it there."

"And left this for Coggeshall?" "Probably. Only she seemed to want a message, not a package. Didn't even take it."

"You think she was 'Mrs. Gray'?" Motherwell shrugged. "Maybe. But who is the older woman? She's the one we want, sir. She didn't get enough pay, you see. And she was alone. Mrs. White was with some one—some one who was hurrying her."

"And telling her what to say, you think?" "Absolutely, sir. And making her go."

"You still stick to that, don't you?" "Yes, sir, I do."

"And yet, Motherwell, what was the hurry? The jewels were all out of the way, before; a very quiet, plain dress was arranged; a taxicab was called, not to use her own car. What is there sudden in all that?"

"Something turned up," said Motherwell.

"Or somebody," said the jeweler. Motherwell turned on him impatiently.

"There you are, sir!" he cried, "there you are! You see, you're not this all clear in your mind—I know you can't help it, but you have. And you can't really think, you see. You've got a complete picture."

"What do you mean?" the older man asked shortly.

Motherwell sighed impatiently. "See here," he said. "Here's a girl. Married at what—twenty-two—twenty-one? That's near enough. All accounted for since then, and, perhaps, from when she got to Paris. Perhaps before. But a lot can happen to a girl before she's twenty-one. Suppose it's happened, happened and forgotten."

"Now, here she is, happy and secure. Brilliantly secure. Everything going her way. And then—the old story. It turns up. Or, of course, it turns up. A lover? Perhaps. A husband? Maybe. Maybe she thought he was dead. Maybe in prison. Oh, yes—it happens, you know!"

"Now, in that case, it's blackmail, or it's just plain principle—principle and conscience—or it's sheer funk. Of course, everything she has she'll give up. But maybe that's not enough. Maybe he just wants her. And there's no bribe at all."

The jeweler's mobile face stopped him. "I tell you, yes!" the young man cried, "men are that way about women! It's happened! Anyway, she went. And didn't want to. Because she hoped to come back. That is, according to you, she wants to eat her cake and have it, too! And all you want to know, now, is how much he'll take? Isn't that so?"

Glaesner threw up his hands. "I'm afraid it is," he said softly. "I'm afraid it is! And can you see any other picture, you extraordinary boy?"

"I can't see any picture at all," said Motherwell slowly, "none at all. There's one, the obvious one. And of course it may be the actual one. You think Coggeshall knows all about it. Now, I don't. I think she knows something, a little, a lead, a clue. But she's afraid to tell it. Why? I think she had no idea that her mistress had gone. I think she hasn't any idea where she has gone, but believes she can find something out from Wentzel. I believe if she knew, she'd tell me."

Mr. Glaesner shook his head. "Well," he said heavily, "my head is too old a head to make a new picture, perhaps. But Clelia would never have parted willingly with this," and he stared, half bitterly, half delightedly, at the frozen smile on the wonderful lips encircled by the tiny tossing serpents. "Whoever took that from her, took the thing she loved the best, Motherwell."

He sighed. "I'll put this away," he added and opened the box. Lifting out of the heavy, opalescent half-globe of onyx, he shook it free from the tissue wrappings.

"I gave her that last Christmas," he said. "See, the frame has slipped."

He gathered up a handful of paper from the bottom of the box and stared questioningly at the young man.

"What's this?" he asked and shook it free.

A dark blue flashed from the paper, and as something slipped from his hand he seized another roll of it and shook it out. A three-strand pearl necklace fell on his lap.

"What?" cried Motherwell, and falling on the rest they unrolled them: cool emerald and bleeding ruby, and lace work of platinum and spray of icy diamonds.

"Good heavens above!" cried Motherwell, "they're all here!"

The great jeweler stared at him, pearls in his limp hand, a collar of rubies flaming on his trouser leg.

"And I left them in the check-room at the club!" the young man gasped.

"And she left them in a half-wrapped pasteboard box, on an office table!" said Mr. Glaesner slowly. "Poor Crandell! My poor old boy!"

CHAPTER V

AT TWENTY minutes after six, a slim young man on a side-car motorcycle chugged up to the front entrance of Brucca's, parked his machine around the corner, and hailed a lounging, lanky boy to watch it for him.

"No nonsense, now," he said, "no fussing with her, mind! And give me the horn five times if he, or anybody like him, gets out ahead of me."

"Yes, sir. I'll look after it all right, sir. Thank you, sir."

The young man strolled into the restaurant and peered about among the tables.

Disatisfied, apparently, he returned to the street, and lounged about near the entrance. At six twenty-five, a stocky little German-American with a sandy moustache hurried in, and the cyclist entered a moment after.

"Anybody for Hunter, yet?" he asked the head waiter.

"No, sir, would you want a table?"

"If Doctor Schaffner is wanted, I am in the corner," the sandy moustache interrupted. "Schaffner—don't forget."

The cyclist, refusing several tables in the center of the room, ended by sitting next to the sandy moustache, his back turned squarely on him. Slipping out of his heavy coat, he pulled a newspaper from his pocket and began to read.

"If anybody's for Hunter, I'm here," he said loudly. "I'll order when my friend comes."

Doctor Schaffner drummed impatiently on the table, and ordered cigarettes.

After a little he dashed out to the entrance again, returning triumphantly with a tall, dark man.

"You see," he explained as they seated themselves, "I have so little time. Have you any good news for me. Could you get any?"

"It's my belief, doctor, there's not a grim in the country—not a centigram," the dark man replied.

"I wired to Pittsburgh, and they referred me to Baltimore, but—nothing doing. You might as well ask for radium."

"Ach! Radium! I can get all the radium I want!" fumed the little man. "What a country! What a country!"

He played with the menu.

"Bring me some ham and eggs," the cyclist commanded loudly, "I can't wait any longer."

The two lowered their voices and the cyclist shifted his shoulders slightly but gained little by it.

"He's nearly crazy—it's incomprehensible—incomprehensible—the German's voice emerged in bursts. "After all these years—to have come on so suddenly—no warning—not a hint!"

The other murmured unalteredly.

"It's not the money—we would give it all back—my G-d, Henkike, she keeps offering."

Again the murmur.

"It's the reputation! His reputation! What a settled income, even, to that—for him! And the awkwardness—du liebe, see what she threatens! And she means it, too. Of course, death, that is all very well. That is easy. But where does it leave us?"

The dark man talked for some time.

"And so I say!" the doctor cried. "So I tell him. These things cannot be done! Simply not. He is as crazy as she is. I am sorry—it is awful. But—there are limits to human power, Henkike. It will have to be explained. It will have to come some time, I suppose? After all—a person's death is his own affair. But if we are not careful, it will be ours!"

Silence, and hasty eating.

"You couldn't possibly get White—even now?" the dark man asked. Sandy moustache cackled into irrepressible nervous laughter.

Rehabilitation of Silver Seen As Need for Recovery

Los Angeles, June 23.—A statement that economic recovery is willing to do to rehabilitate the value of silver was made Wednesday at the American institute of banking convention by J. G. Ridland, secretary-treasurer of the Imperial Bank of India, who has completed an eight month tour of the world.

Ridland, an unexpected guest at the convention, said abandonment of the gold standard by England hinges upon what the United States and other countries has strangled American's foreign trade. He said the difference added fifty per cent to the cost of United States products in India.

"Suppose the price of silver was raised," Ridland continued. "It would immediately increase the wealth of all countries on the silver standard and tend to make it possible for them to purchase American made goods. I believe silver should be linked with gold in some way to stabilize the value of the dollar."

Ridland and other bankers agreed the United States would never desert the gold standard, declaring it to be the most equitable for the world.

The gold fever swept over the little community of Elizabethtown in Colfax county, in the northern part of this state, says an Associated Press report, with the finding of gold nuggets on the site of an old building along Main street.

"Elizabethtown," as the little town, famous in the early seventies, is now known, owes its latest boom to Joe Herburger and Carl Kaiser, who were tearing down an old saloon. The nuggets were found after the floor of the building had been removed and an inspection was made to find any coins that might have slipped through holes in the floor during the early days.

Instead of finding coins, they found several nuggets and immediately began panning the dirt. Ore, said to be rich in content, was found, and assays show it to be worth $3 to $4 a ton.

Now all the residents of the old town are panning gold, as the owner of the land where the strike was made is not known. A small washing plant is being set up on the stream near the town and old-timers are recalling memories of grand days in the life of the town.

H. D. O. Hammond, assistant secretary of the Roswell Building & Loan association, was in Portales Saturday, looking after the business of the company with Coe Howard, the field representative.

Beautify Your Home! Help Make Your City Most Attractive in State

Cash Prizes for 1st, 2nd and 3rd

Final Judging Will Be Made on Aug. 19.—Farm Residents May Enter the Contest.

On Tuesday night the committee on the Yard and Garden contest met at the Portales Valley News office and completed arrangements for this contest.

The committee, consisting of J. O. Greaves, chairman; Mrs. M. E. Jones, Mrs. Jim Warnick, Mrs. Lacy Armstrong, Mrs. E. L. Wright, from the Women's club; Mrs. Esther Cleveland, from the Business and Professional Women's association; and J. H. Bond, representing the city of Portales.

It was decided to hold the contest according to the rules of the American Yard and Garden association, entry blanks and score cards of this association being used for registering entries and judging the contest.

Three cash prizes will be given for the most attractive yard and flower garden. First prize, $10 in cash; second prize, $5 in cash; third prize, $2.50 in cash.

Owing to the economic conditions there will not be as many prizes offered as last year, but the winner of first prize will receive a beautiful lithograph certificate of award.

This year the contest will not be confined to the city limits, but those in the outlying districts adjacent to Portales also may enter. There are many beautiful lawns on farm homes around Portales, and this enables them to enter this event.

Business men also may supplement these prizes with merchandise offers if they so desire. If for any reason the committee fails to see you for your entry, either fill out the form in the News or call at the News office and register.

Additional prizes will be given for the most attractive community park.

Rules of Contest: The name of this contest shall be Portales Valley Yard and Garden contest.

The purpose of this contest is to improve and beautify the home grounds of this community through the proper planting of trees, shrubs, and flowers, to encourage better kept yards and to clean up alleys and streets, to the end that a healthier environment may be provided for our growing children and better surroundings for all of our citizens.

Entries will be received from June 22 to July 25, and prizes will be awarded Aug. 19.

Classes of entries will be as follows: (1) Those who do all their own work; (2) those who hire some of their work done; (3) those who keep an expert gardener. Names of judges will not be announced until prizes are awarded. Entries should be sent to J. O. Greaves, chairman, Yard and Garden Contest committee.

CANAPES Canapes of red caviar are now the stylish cocktail tidbit in London. The difference between black and red caviar, in case you haven't heard, is that sturgeon eggs make black caviar, while red caviar is from salmon. The red is cheaper, and some people prefer its flavor; it's less oily.

Spread it, for canapes, on thin slices of rye bread. Add a squeeze of lemon juice at the last moment before serving.

Little cream cheese balls rolled in black caviar make an attractive accompaniment to red caviar canapes. The cream cheese should have a few drops of Worcestershire sauce in it. Place each ball on a tiny cracker.

ENCYCLOPEDIA HAS 23,000,000 WORDS, 250 TONS OF TYPE

An exhibition of bookbindings is now being held in Chicago. Among the sets of books included is the Encyclopedia Britannica, which is printed in that city. Some facts about this encyclopedia that are not generally known are that the text, exclusive of the index, contains 23,000,000 words, the type weighed 250 tons, the value of the metal used in making the type was $50,000. Over 20,000 pages had been set before a single page was printed. It required more than 102 car loads of paper to print the 23,000,000 press impressions, and the skins of more than 20,000 goats were needed for the leather bindings.

In cheap knives some of the ordinary processes may be omitted and the consequent inferiority will not be noticed until the knife is used.

Stainless steel knives are made of entirely different material from ordinary steel knives and though they are labor-saving, are not so sharp. Unless sharpened with expert care they are easily spoiled in appearance as well as in usefulness.

CHARLES MELVIN CARBETT

The little 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Carbett passed away Tuesday morning after an illness extending over a period of time.

The little fellow was operated upon for appendicitis, but his system was so poisoned with the effects of the disease that he never was able to fully recover from the operation.

The child was born at Darius, N. M., Sept. 15, 1927. Funeral services were held at the Blanco cemetery, south of Taban, Tuesday afternoon, with Rev. C. A. Lort, in charge of the ceremonies. Interment rites were conducted by Wheeler-Johnson, morticians.

The N. Y. P. S. subject for study Sunday evening is, "Loyalty to Christ: Daniel." The leader, Miss Ella Lewis, has arranged an interesting and instructive program on loyalty. These regular evening programs are arranged for and put on by young people, but many old people attend and seem to derive much benefit from them. Both old and young are welcome to hear these spiritual programs put on by the N. Y. P. S.

The pastor will be back in the pulpit next Sunday after a two weeks' absence at the general assembly and no doubt will have some very inspiring messages to offer the public. If you are not attending services elsewhere you are urged to come and hear the old-time gospel preached.—Alfred Minyard, president.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

J. C. Johnson, Minister
Sunday morning Bible school will begin at 9:45 o'clock. Last Sunday's attendance showed a marked increase over previous attendance records, and it is hoped that all who are not attending some other Sunday school will come and find a place in one of our classes. We have classes for all ages.

The minister, at 11 a. m., will preach on the subject, "If Harder Times Should Come." This discourse will be based on a text from the prophecy of Jeremiah.

At 7:45 p. m. the pastor will preach the third of a series of sermons on "The Plafgorm of the Kingdom of God." This sermon will be on the subject of "A Unique Way of Interpreting the Moral Law." Regardless of the fact that the sermon is one of a series, there is nothing in it which depends on the previous sermons. Visitors are invited to come and worship with those who attend regularly.

The public is cordially invited to all worship services.

Wednesday evenings the regular meetings of the choir will be held. The choir, newly organized, is adding much to the impressiveness of the worship.

Tuesday, June 28, the Presbyterian auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. C. J. Sparks.

LONGS HOMEMAKERS CLUB

The members of the Homemakers club of the Longs community met on Tuesday of last week, June 14, in the home of Mrs. Etheridge.

The women were invited for an all day gathering and twenty women were present for the occasion. Five of these were visitors.

Each member took one dish of food, which provided the noonday meal. In the afternoon the time was spent quilting, and the workers completed two quilts, which will be presented the orphan's home.

On Tuesday of next week the members will go to the home of Mrs. U. S. Fraze for another all day meeting.

A program of work has been outlined which will keep the women occupied during the afternoon, and the work of the club accentuated.

We Ask Your Assistance and Co-Operation

All eggs when laid (except one occasionally laid with a blood clot that will soon spoil) are good eggs; but eggs soon spoil if not given some attention, even though they are gathered twice daily and kept in a dark, cool, somewhat damp place, and sold often. If possible, sell eggs every day. Once a week during the balance of the summer is not often enough to sell eggs and have them fresh and in good salable condition. If your eggs are a week old when you sell them, then it is a rather week (and many times longer) before they are eaten, so many of them rot. Therefore many dissatisfied people and many losses may be saved if you are more careful in caring for your eggs and sell them more often.

Keep all the guinea eggs, the duck eggs; all the bantam and peewee eggs; all the real dirty eggs, and all of the rotten eggs, as none of them are salable and must be discarded somewhere along the line at somebody's loss.

One of the easiest ways to have better eggs (though they will go bad sometimes) is to swap the rooster and have infertile eggs. Infertile eggs reasonably well cared for will carry on much better and go longer and do better and sell better than fertile eggs will, so make that the first step for better eggs. No merchant likes to discard any eggs you bring to him, but, as a matter of self preservation, he is forced to do so if the eggs are not merchantable.

MIDWAY

There was a smaller attendance at Sunday school than usual. Bro. Bates was not present to fill his appointment. Bro. Dewey Hayes of Bluff came intending to preach, but arrived too late.

Mrs. Morris, who lately has moved into our community, attended Sunday school last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Singleton of Bluff visited Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Williams last Monday.

A host of friends gathered at the home of Herbert Bryant last Friday evening. After several hours of games and merrymaking, the crowd was served with ice cream and cake. Everyone present reported an enjoyable time.

SOAK THE LAWNS IN HOT WEATHER

Lack of moisture is more frequently the reason for poor lawns, shrubs and flowers than any other cause, says H. C. Stewart of the New Mexico State college. Especially is this true at this time of the year. The humidity of the atmosphere being low, the sun's rays direct and hot, the plants must transpire or absorb much moisture in order not to burn. Drying winds are also the cause of plants losing moisture rapidly.

A light sprinkling in the summer is worse than nothing. It will tend to drag the roots to the surface, and grass, shrubs or flowers will often suffer more than if they had not been sprinkled at all. Use enough water to soak the lawn down to a depth of six to ten inches.

It is generally advisable to flood rather than sprinkle, for most of the water will then soak into the soil and less will be lost by evaporation. Only the surface of the flooding comes in contact with the evaporating elements, while in sprinkling the exposure is much greater. Remember, no amount of fertilizing is going to help if the soil is dry. The most economical use of water calls for application in the evening or late afternoon. Sprinkling or flooding can be done in the earlier part of the day provided the application is heavy enough to soak the ground.

For large lawns the most satisfactory method of sprinkling is with the automatic sprinkler or by means of perforated pipes well placed about the lawn.

In many parts of the country, lawn clippings are not removed in order that they may serve as a mulch and, finally decomposing, add to the organic contents of the soil. This practice may be followed in New Mexico where the lawn is clipped at least weekly or oftener.

It is also advisable to remove the shrubs and flowers. This mulch may consist of decomposed leaves, lawn clippings or barnyard manure. It increases the fertility of the soil as well as conserves the moisture.

PUBLIC WARNED AGAINST CIVIL SERVICE "COACHING" SCHOOLS

Washington, D. C.—June 22, 1932.—The following statement is made by the United States Civil Service Commission:

The commission warns the public against paying money for "coaching" courses in preparation for Federal civil service examinations. Schools which sell such courses under present conditions accept money under false pretenses. A purveyor of civil service courses is under indictment in Iowa for false representation. It is expected that other such cases of prosecution will follow.

Comparatively few appointments are being made in the Federal civil service. Vacancies which must be filled are filled by the transfer of those in the service or the reinstatement of those who have been in the service, wherever practicable.

It is seldom necessary to announce an examination. In most cases large registers of eligibles exist as a result of examinations held during the past year. When an examination is announced, the applicants are usually hundreds of times in excess of the need.

Money paid for civil service coaching at this time might almost be thrown to the four winds.

J. J. Phillips and his daughter, Mrs. Jones Brown Smith, drove to Lubbock over the week end. Mr. Phillips will attend to some business matters while in the Texas city.

Mrs. C. J. Wheeler and Miss Lillie Clarkson have left for their home in Los Angeles, Cal., after a ten days' visit here in the home of their relatives, Clarkson Burke and Mrs. Harry Carter.

Mrs. Brown appointed Mrs. E. C. Murrell, Mrs. R. F. Davis, Mrs. J. M. Bradley and Mrs. E. N. Wheeler as a reception committee to greet the friends this afternoon. The decoration of the room has been under the direction of Mrs. A. C. Youngblood, Mrs. L. S. Kirby, Mrs. Joe Machen and Mrs. J. W. King. The members of the refreshment committee are Mrs. W. H. HOMEMAKERS CLUB

The women enjoyed an all day meeting of the Portales Home Makers club on Wednesday of last week in the home of Mrs. J. A. Padry. Each of the women took one dish of food for the midday meal and the afternoon was spent working on a quilt.

FRIENDS HONORED

Miss Lucille Kiker was hostess to a number of friends Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Machen, honoring the Messrs. Sybil and Imogene Machen, who have recently moved to Portales.

Bridge was the diversion of the evening.

The rooms were fragrant with pink and white roses.

When serving time arrived the tables were centered with vases of pink rosebuds.

A salad course was served to the following guests: Sybil and Imogene Machen, Knight Edward Kerner, of Portales; Mary May Harrison, Beatrice Sanford, Woodrow Ratliff, Earl Flagg and Arthur Harvey, all of Canyon.

Tables were arranged in the living room and here the friends were invited to spend the afternoon at auction bridge.

The punch table was pretty with roses and fern. In the midst of the flowers was the punch bowl, and during the afternooniced fruit juices were served.

Mrs. Yancey is a Gold Star mother who made the trip to France last year, and she was invited to give an account of her trip abroad. This was extremely interesting to everyone, but especially to Mrs. A. B. Foreman, who is also a Gold Star mother, with her son in Flanders' fields. Mrs. Foreman's ill health prevented her making the trip abroad.

After the close of the program, the friends surprised Mrs. C. A. Lorts with a miscellaneous shower.

Jars of lovely gifts were brought into the room and presented to the honoree. The majority of these were wrapped in white paper and tied with pink ribbons. Pink and white were the accented colors used in the arrangement of the plate lunch, served after the gifts all had been admired. Bowls of pretty flowers were placed about the room.

Says Europe Needs United States Aid

Premier Ramsay MacDonald Addressing the House of Commons and Debates

Europe cannot act alone, but must have the help of the United States in solving the world's economic troubles. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain asserted, says the Associated Press in a dispatch from Lausanne, Switzerland, as the delegates of thirteen nations opened a conference on reparations and war debts in that city.

"This is a time for bold proposals," he said. "The United States has encouraged us to believe it will co-operate in some of the wider problems and join us in devising a policy for the encouragement of trade and the enrichment of nations."

His address, after his election as chairman of the conference, was the only one of major importance in a session which lasted a little more than an hour. The continuing economic crisis, he said, is the worst with which the world has ever been afflicted. It amounts to a "world catastrophe."

"The world looks on this conference not only in need, but in impatience," he said. "My appeal to you is to fear nothing but weakness. To issue bold proposals which by their very character will command the support of the whole world."

"In these times there is no Italy no Germany, no America, no Britain, apart from the rest of the nations. There is nothing smaller than a world, nothing less than a system which is crumbling around our feet. None of us can stay out of the miseries which are gathering about us."

LOST MINE MAY HAVE TREASURE OF SLAIN MAN

Hot Springs, N. M.,—Interest in the mystery which surrounds the lost mine 18 miles north of the Pankey strike has been renewed by prospectors here in their search for gold. Early settlers, who tell the story, have never solved the disappearance of an old miner in that territory in 1880.

According to the story, the miner came to town frequently and always had a full "poke" and was known to have had a mine in the hills. The location of this mine was not generally known until just a few months ago.

It has been conceded the miner was killed by the Indians. But the prospectors who discovered a tunnel 150 feet deep into a hill answering the description of the miner's find, could not find any trace of the camp where he lived. The only trace was a hole dug out in the bank nearby where boulders weighing over a ton or more covered a hole and prevented further investigation.

No trace of ore could be found in or near the tunnel, and no explanation has ever been offered why the miner worked the drift by hand, carrying water for three miles.

The mystery remains unsolved but prospectors in this vicinity are hopeful that some day they will find the gold which the old miner always displayed.

GALLUP RULING MAY FIX LAW FOR BEST STATE

Gallup, N. M., June 23.—District Judge M. A. Otero, Jr. of Santa Fe, will soon be called upon to decide if curb pumps may remain on the streets of Gallup—a decision which may fix the law for the rest of New Mexico.

The case calls for a decision on whether gasoline curb pumps are nuisances in themselves or whether the town board has the right to decide the question. No ruling on the law has ever been made by a New Mexico court so far as local attorneys can determine.

Testimony in Gallup's curb pump case, in court since last September 23, on a mandamus action to force the town to remove the sidewalk pumps, was completed here last week, and is being forwarded to Otero for his decision. A dozen curb pump owners are affected by the suit.

On one side in the case are ranged the owners of Gallup's first automobile shops and gasoline stations and on the other the proprietors of the modern filling stations with wide cement driveways and pumps located on their own property.

Peiping, June 15th.—The United States legation requested Chinese military authorities today to furnish protection and safe escort to 18 American missionaries, who are evacuating Kaichow for safety's sake.

The missionaries, most of them Methodists, are leaving their posts in the extreme south of Hopei province, which has been occupied by Chinese rebel troops.
