Carter Hails Pact 'Breakthrough' Leaders Approve Plan

SOLVE TREATY PROBLEMS — President Carter confers with President Anwar Sadat at the Cairo airport today shortly before the announcement that the Egyptian leader had accepted U.S. proposals for a Mideast peace treaty with Israel.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin earlier had approved the plan, but it must be voted on by parliament. (AP Laserphoto)

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Carter ended his six-day Mideast peace mission today claiming a breakthrough for peace, but still short of the treaty he sought between Egypt and Israel.

Carter said Egypt's President Anwar Sadat today accepted U.S. compromise proposals "for resolving the few remaining issues," and that Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed to submit these compromises to his cabinet for consideration "at the earliest opportunity."

Begin, staking his political career on the Carter compromises, said in Israel that if the cabinet did not approve them, "it would be the duty of the government to resign."

"Still we have to deal with certain problems," Begin said in an interview. "But perhaps the weightiest issues are now agreed upon by Israel and Egypt."

In Washington, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said Carter had called him from Air Force One to brief him on the developments.

"It appeared an agreement had been reached for submission to the parliaments of Egypt and Israel. I am pleased and relieved," he said.

Carter announced the latest developments at Cairo airport just before he began the 14½-hour flight back to Washington.

In a last-minute round of personal diplomacy, Carter met today over breakfast with Begin in Jerusalem, then huddled with Sadat for 2½ hours at Cairo airport.

Carter didn't specify the shape of the compromise proposals. The remaining issues were believed to be Israel's desire for Sinai oil, Egypt's desire for liaison officials to supervise Palestinian self-rule in Gaza, and Israel's desire for a quick exchange of ambassadors.

Carter's statement seemed to indicate that all that remains in the way of an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, ending 30 years of hostility between the two nations, is approval of the compromises by the Israeli government.

Ratification by the Egyptian parliament is considered to be a formality.

But even if Begin's cabinet goes along with the latest Carter peace plan, approval by the Israeli Knesset is another question. Begin was heckled there by treaty opponents on Monday after an address by Carter.

"I am convinced that we now have defined all of the main ingredients of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel which will be the cornerstone of a comprehensive peace settlement for the Middle East," Carter said at Cairo airport just before his departure.

The day began with Carter's mission seemingly ending in failure.

U.S. officials described his breakfast meeting with Begin as mainly a courtesy, a farewell to his host. Both men brought their wives.

But meanwhile, Begin's spokesman Dan Patir was strongly opposing the idea that the talks had ended in failure. He said briefings given by a White House spokesman on Monday were "calculated to make the picture look black, for domestic reasons."

The Carter-Begin breakfast in Jerusalem broke up with no report of progress, but Carter soon lifted the gloom with a statement as he departed from Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion airport.

He said "good progress has been made" toward a peace treaty and vowed "we will not fail."

He said progress was made Monday night in a meeting of U.S. and Israeli cabinet officials, and further progress was achieved this morning over breakfast at the King David Hotel.

Begin, also speaking at Ben Gurion airport, said Israel had now gone as far as it could go toward meeting Egypt's terms, and "Now of course, it is the turn of Egypt to give its reply."

Then Carter hopped to Cairo airport, where he huddled for about 2½ hours with Sadat in a VIP lounge.

As their session drew to a close, Egyptian television broadcast a picture of Carter speaking on the telephone. Carter said later he had called Begin from the airport to inform him that Sadat accepted the latest U.S. compromise proposals.

Before today's apparent breakthrough, three issues were said to have remained unresolved, in descending order of difficulty:

—An Egyptian demand to place Egyptian liaison officers in the Gaza Strip as part of the first step in granting Palestinian self-rule. Israeli sources said their negotiators refused to admit such officers at this stage.

—A demand by Israel that Egypt provide See CARTER Page 16

Mall Repair Costs Pared

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Park Service, completing its list of work to repair tractor ruts in walkways, reduced its estimate of damage by protesting farmers to Washington's Mall to about $745,000.

Spokesman George Berkley said Monday the total "really could come down substantially" if farmers contribute grass seed and labor, as expected.

He said the latest reduction from an earlier estimate of $975,000 "principally reflects the reduction in the walkways."

He said work has been completed on filling in and regrading walkways at a cost of $110,000.

Park officials earlier feared the cost of repairing walks would be much higher. A few days after farmers were barricaded on the Mall Feb. 5, officials estimated walkway repair would be about $500,000. After heavy snows melted, they cut the estimate to $330,000.

(Gerald McCathern of Hereford, an American Agriculture spokesman, said today he was told by National Park Service employees who work on the Mall area itself that the damage figure was highly inflated by federal government officials.)

City and Park Service officials were to appear on Capitol Hill before the Senate D.C. Appropriations subcommittee today to discuss who will pick up the tab for police costs and the Mall damage.

The home rule charter for the District of Columbia has a provision that the federal government will pay for costs of demonstrations directed at the federal government.

If Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland has his way, the taxpayers will not have to pay a penny.

On Friday he announced he was contributing $25 for repair of the Mall and called on the nation's farmers and farm organizations to contribute so farmers would not be regarded as a "public burden."

Bergland said he thought replacing two light poles at $12,000 each was excessive and the Park Service reduced its estimates to about $7,300 per pole.

Major costs include an estimated $266,000 for resodding and $147,000 for plans, specifications and supervision.

Other costs include repair of redwood park benches, trash baskets, fire hydrants and $2,000 for rental of 16 comfort stations.

Farmers from Charles County, Md., have offered to donate their labor and farmers from several states have offered to donate grass seed.

"The Maryland farmers are not doing this because they thought we did anything wrong," said Wayne Peterson, an American Agriculture Movement farmer from Holabird, S.D. "They're doing it to be good people."

SPAG Acts To Rotate Panelists

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff
The board of directors of the South Plains Association of Governments voted this morning to limit advisory committee members to two successive terms.

SPAG's committee structure came under fire recently when the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee refused to recommend funding for City of Lubbock projects.

SPAG president Medlin Carpenter of Plainview suggested limiting the terms of committee members in order to get "new blood" in the system.

Calling the committee "the lifeline of SPAG," Carpenter said the board members "need to rotate to get fresh information."

"The committee is the biggest thing in SPAG," he said. "This is not to say we're not getting input, but if you stay on a committee 10 years you don't get the same perspective."

The change approved by the board would require committee members to wait a year to be reappointed if they have served two successive two-year terms.

However, board members voted to allow waiver of the provision by a unanimous vote of the board of directors if a county or city is unable to find a replacement.

The board also approved the 1980 Criminal Justice Plan which recommends projects for federal criminal justice funding.

Lubbock Mayor Dirk West and City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan cast the only dissenting votes, with Councilman Alan Henry, first vice president of SPAG, voting for the plan.

Although no City of Lubbock projects would be funded under the plan, Lubbock County would receive nearly 61 percent of the 1980 funds, primarily for the juvenile detention facility.

Board members voted favorable comment on the city's 1979-80 Community Development block grant application in the amount of $3.8 million and an application for $61,503 in federal funds for the formulation of a master plan for the Lubbock International Airport.

The board also approved Community See SPAG Page 16

Newsmen, Generals Executed In Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Revolutionary firing squads today executed 13 men accused of collaborating with the shah, including two former Iranian government news executives who were the first officials of the old regime put to death for purely political crimes.

The executions brought to 63 the number of known death sentences carried out by the revolutionary courts, which are presided over by turbaned mullahs and Moslem judicial experts.

For the first time since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini led Iranians to victory over the shah's 38-year regime and set up his own government 31 days ago, a Tehran revolutionary court convicted two top civilian aides of the exiled monarch of political complicity.

Mahmoud Jaffarian, French-educated former chief of the national news agency PARS, and national television news director Parviz Nikkhah, were executed early today along with nine other men.

Two police officers were gassed down by revolutionary courts in the provinces.

Jaffarian, 56, said before he was taken in front of the firing squad, "I hope, when I die, my family, my countrymen, will live in freedom."

The Persian-language Kayhan described Jaffarian as "a snake that feasted on people's blood." The paper held Jaffarian responsible for "disinformation" and distortion of news during the last critical days of the shah's regime.

Also executed today were six SAVAK secret police agents, two police officers, a member of Parliament, a general and a lieutenant general.

Until today, all those executed had been convicted by revolutionary courts of mass murder or torture against opponents of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Demonstrations against Khomeini's order that Iranian women wear the traditional veil continued today with a march on the offices of the national television network to protest its failure to broadcast their weeklong protests.

Jaffarian, a Sorbonne-educated writer and broadcaster, became a chief spokesman for the shah's government during the critical months of early 1978, when urban unrest flared in Iranian cities.

Nikkhah was accused by recent newspaper articles of censoring all television and radio contents to the benefit of the shah.

A newspaper report this week said Nikkhah wrote an inflammatory article against Khomeini that sparked the first religious riot in the holy city of Qom in January 1978.

U.S. feminist Kate Millett, who joined the marchers Monday, told a news conference that the women's fight to dress as they please is only a symbol of many other rights deprived women by Islamic revolutionaries.

"It is not just this rag of a cloth," the 45-year-old writer and civil rights leader said in a reference to the veil. "It has just been used as a symbol and it is the smallest part of the whole thing."

"The real issue is civil rights, not just what you wear. It is about abortion. It is about divorce. It is about the whole civil rights package, which should have come with the revolution but did not."

Millett said she was "terrified" when she took part in a 20,000-strong women's march in which a protective screen of male supporters held back Moslem revolutionaries who shouted abuse, waved guns and knives.

But she added, "The women I marched with were the coolest and most experienced marchers I have ever seen. I learned more about how to run a peaceful demonstration than I have ever known in my life."

Hanni Al Hassan, a member of the Palestine Liberation Organization, told demonstrators in Tehran that imperialists are trying to change the geography of the Mideast. He called Sadat a traitor to the Arab cause.

House Working On Tax Relief

AUSTIN (AP) — House members began work today on a bill implementing the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment, including added tax breaks for the elderly and disabled and exemption of two family cars from property taxes.

The bill was laid out late Monday afternoon, but for explanation only.

Debate of the complex measure was expected to last all day and perhaps extend into Wednesday.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, explained the formula for reimbursing school districts all or part of the revenue they would lose because of property tax reductions.

"I appreciated the prayer this morning. The preacher prayed for the faith of little children, and I think that's what you're going to need," Peveto said.

Some school districts would receive more money back in fiscal 1981 than they lost because their appraisals of residential homesteads exceeded the statewide average.

Districts with appraisal levels below the statewide average would receive less than they lost, but with a floor of 90 percent of their total revenue losses.

In all, reimbursement would total $430.2 million over the next two years, according to printouts distributed last week by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Tax Relief Amendment gave all homeowners an automatic exemption of $5,000 of market value from school taxes. The bill added another $10,000 exemption for the disabled and elderly, and freezes property taxes on houses owned by persons 65 and over for their lifetimes.

The bill also provides a formula for taxing agricultural land on its productivity instead of its market value.

Starting in 1980, two cars per family would be exempt from property taxes.

The House stayed in session until almost 6 p.m. Monday to hear the explanation of the bill, and Speaker Bill Clayton warned the representatives to expect longer working hours for the remainder of the session.

"We're drawing near the midpoint of the session and we've got our work cut out for us. The committees have been working hard, and now more of the work is going to be shifting to the floor, so be prepared for it," Clayton said.

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Senate Nominations Committee today cleared the controversial appointment of William B. Edwards for consideration by the Senate but sidestepped making any recommendation on whether the Houston attorney, who has admitted delivering cash to politicians from a Gulf Oil Co. lobbyist, should be approved to serve as a district judge.

Edwards was questioned only briefly by the Senate Nominations Committee today.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, complained he has received numerous calls from judges around the state and lobbyists urging approval of Edwards.

"I can't say I have been unaware of the contacts made in my behalf, but I certainly didn't instigate them," Edwards said.

Edwards, a former longtime attorney for Gulf Oil Co., last week denied knowingly delivering cash to former Gov. Preston Smith for Gulf lobbyist Oscar C. Wild Jr., despite his sworn statement in a 1976 affidavit to the secretary of state acknowledging handing Smith an envelope with an unspecified amount of money in Houston.

Smith also at first denied ever receiving a contribution from Edwards, but later told the Nominations Committee chairman he did receive an envelope containing $300 cash from the Gulf Oil attorney in 1962.

"He was not governor at the time that the contribution was made," said Sen. Peyton McKnight. "I think the misconception, at least on Gov. Smith's part, was that the contribution was made when he was governor."

Committee Clears Edwards' Appointment

Critics said Edwards' testimony before the Senate Nominations Committee conflicted with his statements under oath to state investigators about his role in the multimillion-dollar slush fund scandal uncovered in 1976 in a suit the Securities and Exchange Commission filed against Gulf Oil.

An examination of affidavits locked away in the secretary of state's office, however, revealed Edwards had stated under oath the delivery to Smith was the only time cash was ever given to him, earmarked for a specific recipient.

While Smith last week angrily denied ever receiving money from Gulf or Edwards, a Houston lawmaker said Monday the former governor now had acknowledged receiving money from Edwards.

"There never was a contribution made to me by Gulf Oil Co. when I ran for governor," Smith said last week. "Mr. Edwards never made one penny's contribution to me. He never delivered anything or gave me an envelope. It's just nothing but a pure, black lie."

However, Sen. Jack Hogg said when he contacted the former governor about the incident, Smith admitted receiving an envelope of cash from Edwards during Smith's 1962 campaign for lieutenant governor.

"He said he thought it was $300," the Houston Democrat said. Ogg said Smith indicated he gave the money to his Harris County campaign chairman, Doug Toole.

(The Avalanche-Journal was informed today that Smith is "fishing in the Lake Amistad area" and unavailable for comment on the new developments in the case.)

Edwards last week told the committee that during each election year between 1962 and 1970 Wild gave him $1,000 cash in $10 to $100 bills to contribute to conservative political candidates.

Edwards, who took early retirement from Gulf in 1976 to open a private law practice in Houston, said he assumed the funds came from individual contributions of oil company executives.

"I was just as startled as anyone else to read of the disclosure by my company of an illegal, offshore slush fund used to finance political activities," Edwards told the committee last week.

Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston, said he is concerned at the conflicts in Edwards' testimony before the Senate committee, his statement under oath and at his role in dispersing cash contributions to politicians.

Surgery Scheduled For Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgery will be performed later this week to remove a tumor in the colon of 71-year-old Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell Jr.

It was learned Monday that Powell was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital on Sunday. In a one-paragraph release, Supreme Court spokesman Barrett McGurn said "a polyp in the colon that the doctors think should be removed" was discovered during Powell's yearly physical examination.

"The annual physical otherwise indicated that Mr. Justice Powell is in excellent health," the news release said.

A hospital spokesman said he could not add any more specific information.

McGurn said Powell could be hospitalized for two weeks, and might miss all arguments heard by the court in March.

Ford's Kin Becomes Independent

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Thomas Ford says he doubts his half brother, former President Ford, cares that he no longer is a "died-in-the-wool, pull-one-lever Republican."

"I haven't even discussed it with him," Thomas Ford said in announcing that he was "joining the biggest party in the state — the independents."

"I just don't think the party definitions have any meaning any more," said Ford, audit coordinator for the Michigan Senate. "They are obsolete and archaic."

Ford said his dissatisfaction with party designations grew gradually, reaching its height a few elections ago when he started working for candidates from both major parties.

Carter's Sister Forfeits Bond

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — To avoid "further publicity" about her playing a harmonica in a restaurant, President Carter's sister, Gloria Spann, and her husband forfeited $20 bonds.

According to Judge Lawton LeSueur Jr. of Americus Recorders Court, Walter Spann called him Sunday night to say the Spanns would forfeit their bonds rather than appear in court.

Mrs. Spann, her husband and two others were arrested Feb. 25 at the McWaffle restaurant after Mrs. Spann refused a restaurant employee's request that she stop playing a harmonica.

She was charged with disorderly conduct. Others in the party were charged with failure to leave when officers requested, police said.

The bond forfeiture "means that there will be no further action concerning the incident insofar as placing the charge on their record," the judge said Monday.

'Machine' Now Backs Jane Byrne

CHICAGO (AP) — Jane Byrne won the Democratic nomination for mayor of Chicago in a campaign against patronage abuses and other practices attributed to this city's regular Democrats.

Now, a resolution to support her candidacy with money and campaign workers has been approved by the city's 50 ward committeemen — the backbone of the regular Democratic organization. And, leading the charge to support her was state Sen. Richard Daley, son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Mrs. Byrne beat Mayor Michael Bilandic in the Democratic primary Feb. 27 in a startling win.

When she began her campaign 11 months ago, no one gave her a chance of beating the once-vaunted machine which Daley himself drilled for more than a quarter of a century.

Byrne faces Wallace Johnson, the Republican candidate, in a citywide election for mayor in April.

Daughter Accompanies Fords

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Susan Ford Vance is accompanying her parents on a 10-day tour to the Far East, but her husband of about a month stayed home. Charles Vance had to work.

Former President Ford, wife Betty, and daughter Susan, 21, left Sunday on a tour of Hawaii and Osaka, Kyoto and Tokyo, Japan.

Ford is to meet with U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield and several top Japanese officials, attend a luncheon hosted by the emperor and empress of Japan, and tour several ancient temples.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's Eviction Delayed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Her landlord wants her out of his apartment, but heiress Louise Vanderbilt has been granted a 10-day stay of an eviction order.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who paid her March rent five days behind schedule, was granted the stay by the state Supreme Court.

A Newport Superior Court judge had issued an eviction order for one of the apartments Mrs. Vanderbilt has in the turn-of-the-century house. Her landlord had said he might throw her out today.

"It's a very gross, unbelievable, situation," Mrs. Vanderbilt has said. "I can't move out of my apartment."

Judge Thomas Needham said Monday Mrs. Vanderbilt could stay in one apartment, but had to move out of the other one, usually reserved for guests, within 48 hours.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's lawyer, Richard Sheffield, asked the Supreme Court for a stay of the order. Late Monday, the state's highest court granted the stay.

Ustinov Wins Humor Prize

PARIS (AP) — Actor-author Peter Ustinov, latest winner of the "Noble Prize" from the Paris-based Association for the Promotion of Humor in International Affairs, says there is plenty to laugh at in international affairs these days.

The problem, according to the author of "Dear Me" and other books of wit, is that so few people recognize the humor.

Ustinov follows such earlier winners as columnist Art Buchwald and economist John Kenneth Galbraith.

Ustinov said television had ended the era of great statesmen.

"If television and the invasion of its potential by politicians has had an effect in the West, it has been to eliminate the probability of any more great men exercising their nefarious influence over those with a possibility of choice," Ustinov said.

"Great men there will be, but not on television. ... A lack of evident vices has become more acceptable on this bland television screen than the possession of evident virtues."

Prince Visits Small Town

PERTH, Australia (AP) — If the trend continues, the town of Esperance may become the royal envy of other sleepy south coastal towns in Western Australia.

Esperance, population 6,000, has had two royal visits — the first from Queen Mother Elizabeth in 1966. And on Monday, Prince Charles came calling to the delight of residents of the 110-year-old town.

A large crowd lined the town's main thoroughfare, Andrew Street, as the prince walked along, stopping here and there to chat.

Charles was given a civic reception and met community leaders and other invited guests, most of whom were dressed in period costumes in keeping with Western Australia's 150th anniversary celebrations.

Nothing For Something

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — And now, for those who appreciate the value of nothing: the Nothing Card.

It is honored everywhere, comes with a lifetime guarantee, a portrait of Millard Fillmore and is good for absolutely nothing.

"Take this card and enough cash into any store and you can buy whatever you want," says Bryan Sennett.

Sennett, along with B.J. Clark and Jan Kieser, are founders of the Nothing Co., which is licensed to sell Nothing Cards.

"We're a basic honest American corporation," said Miss Clark. "We have nothing to offer."

Millard Fillmore was a natural for the front, Miss Clark explained. Besides being the only president to accomplish absolutely nothing, she said, "He even ran on the Know-Nothing ticket."

Each card really is something: embossed with the owner's name, a space on the back for the owner's signature and a number that's all your own.

Marine Returning Home After Vanishing In 1965

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Pfc. Robert Garwood, who disappeared from his U.S. Marine unit in Vietnam in 1965, will leave Ho Chi Minh City for his Indiana home Thursday, U.S. sources said today.

But he will have to face accusations that he carried arms against his former fellow GIs during the war.

Garwood, of Greensburg, Ind., is officially listed as a prisoner of the North Vietnamese and stands to collect $150,000 in back pay if he is accepted as such by military authorities.

But military sources said the Marines will first consider leveling legal charges against him on the collaboration accusations.

Garwood, now 32, disappeared when he was 19.

The first step for Garwood is to be Thursday's flight from Ho Chi Minh City — formerly Saigon — to Bangkok, where he will be met by U.S. Embassy and military officials, who are expected to advise him to take a waiting military flight to Marine headquarters in Okinawa, Japan.

U.S. officials said Garwood will be debriefed in Okinawa and later in the United States while officers try to get to the bottom of the collaboration charges.

Garwood was last seen in a Marine uniform Sept. 28, 1965, when he and the jeep he was driving disappeared from Marine headquarters at Da Nang in northern South Vietnam.

Over the years, eyewitnesses testified that a man meeting Garwood's description was seen bearing arms and dressed in a North Vietnamese army uniform on patrols against the Marines.

Military sources said a man of Garwood's description also interrogated several Americans captured during the war. The last time he was seen by other prisoners, military sources said, was in 1969.

Other testimony on file with the Pentagon alleges Garwood turned down a chance of repatriation in 1967.

In 1972, members of a West German medical team captured and held briefly in central Vietnam said they were interrogated by an American who said his name was "Bobby." The Germans later picked out a picture of Garwood as the interrogator, U.S. military sources said.

Last month, Vietnamese Vice Foreign Minister Phan Hien told two U.S. members of Congress visiting Hanoi that Garwood had remained in Vietnam "as a matter of conscience.

In 1968, the Pentagon decided not to award him the automatic pay and rank promotions it gave to virtually all POWs.

Voyager 1 Discovers Volcanoes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Immense volcanoes, the first ever seen erupting on another world, are spitting ash, dust and gas above the orange surface of the moon Io, the latest discovery from Voyager 1's epic encounter with Jupiter.

"It's incredible. We've found five or six (erupting volcanoes) and they're still finding more," planetary geologist Larry Soderblom said Monday. "This surface has to be the most active in the solar system. (The Jovian moon) is continually recycling its innards out onto the surface."

The eruptions — which spew volcanic materials nearly 200 miles above Io's surface — were found Friday as scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory examined thousands of pictures taken by Voyager. The ship sailed past Jupiter and its moons March 5.

Excited scientists worked through the weekend to confirm the discovery.

One picture shows a fountain of volcanic debris rising like an umbrella over the surface. Another shows at least three volcanoes erupting simultaneously.

Long-dead volcanoes exist on Mars, Mercury and Earth's moon, but these are the first active ones seen anywhere but on Earth. And Io's volcanoes are much more powerful and active than Earth's occasional eruptions, scientists said.

Soderblom said rock and dust explodes out of Io's apparently molten interior at speeds up to 2,000 mph, about the velocity of a high-powered rifle bullet.

The discovery "is probably the most exciting thing to come out of the Voyager mission so far," said Bradford Smith, who heads the Voyager photography team.

Connally Confident Of Support

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Republican presidential candidate John Connally, buoyed by a successful campaign swing last week through the East and Midwest, says he can draw "nearly" as much support in any part of the country as he can in his home state of Texas.

"I can run nearly as well in any part of the country as in Texas," the former Democratic governor said Monday night. "I don't give away any part of the country."

The former treasury secretary, who became a Republican in 1973, drew enthusiastic support during the campaign swing, which he admitted exceeded even his fondest expectations.

For the first time, Connally was favored over former California Gov. Ronald Reagan in the race for the 1980 nomination in a poll taken among delegates from 13 Midwest states at the Midwestern GOP Leadership Conference in Indianapolis.

The gathering last weekend had been builed as an early barometer of the 1980 campaign in the Midwest. Other early polls have shown Connally second only to Reagan among active Republican presidential possibilities.

The response, Connally said, was equally excellent in Rochester, N.Y., Arlington, Va., and in northwestern Ohio.

Connally, 62, did acknowledge that Reagan remains ahead of all other GOP candidates at this time, but still expressed confidence he can win the nomination and the general election.

The trip last week came after Connally opened active presidential campaigning with a week-long swing through his home state, which he served as governor from 1963-69.

Connally scoffed at those who feel he won't draw support from old-line Republicans because of his Democratic background.

Shamrock Prepares For Fete

SHAMROCK (UPI) — Irish eyes'll be smilin' the grog flowing freely and a blessed shade of emerald covering this Panhandle town with the arrival of 20,000 revelers during St. Patrick's Day weekend.

There are no more Irishmen in this community of 3,500, of course, than there are in any other West Texas towns of comparable size. But those technicalities haven't deterred the throngs from making their annual pilgrimage here since 1938, and they won't this coming weekend.

For it is here in the red dust of the Texas Panhandle that one of the largest St. Patrick's Day celebrations west of the River Shannon takes place.

A program from the first celebration in 1938 credited Glenn Truax, a Shamrock newcomer, with the idea for the grand St. Patrick's Day celebration.

In 1935, when Truax arrived in the town with the Irish name, he was stunned to find that no celebration was scheduled in honor of the Emerald Isle's patron saint.

"Why it's a natural," Truax lectured the town leaders. "Shamrock could stage an Irish festival on St. Patrick's Day each year that would be the talk of the country."

There are other versions of how it all originated, but the important thing is the festival was held three years later and Mayor Sol Blonstein organized it.

This year's publicity director, former state Representative Phil Cates, reflected recently on the celebration's heritage.

"Only in the Texas Panhandle could a Jewish mayor in a Baptist town put on a Catholic celebration that would become the only thing we're known for in the world."

Actually, Shamrock — which 20 years ago imported its own blarney stone — once was named Exum. Just as there is some disagreement on the origin of the St. Patrick's Day celebration, there is divided opinion on how the second name evolved.

Authorities Plan House Demolition

CHICAGO (AP) — Plans are being drawn by law enforcement authorities for the demolition of John Gacy Jr.'s suburban home, where the bodies of 28 young men have been found.

The meeting will be Thursday at the house where the 28th body was found Friday. Three bodies found in a river also have been linked to Gacy. Only the outside walls and roof of the house still stand, but investigators want to dig around the footings. Authorities also want to dig to a depth of six feet throughout the property to insure that no evidence or remains are missed. Although Gacy told investigators where to find most of the bodies so far recovered, he reportedly did not mention the one found Friday.

Some say postmaster George Nickle renamed the town in the 1890s while pinning for the auld sod.

Others give credit to postmistress Ruth Jones. According to those accounts, the city of Exum folded up and floated down the Red River in 1902. Sometime later, Mrs. Jones moved her old Exum post office to a dugout a few miles away. Admiring the new surroundings, Mrs. Jones is said to have named the town Shamrock.

Somehow all that lore seems unimportant when celebrating time rolls around each year. And it doesn't seem to matter that Shamrock, located 90 miles east of Amarillo, is a dry town, either.

"I have been told there's a nip or two taken on occasion," says this year's general chairman, insurance man Noel Walton.

"We're in a dry county but things give the appearance of being wet that day. At that dance Saturday night we'll have about 1,200. I have suspicioned a nip being taken on that dance floor," Walton said.

This year's festivities will include a parade along U.S. 83, the nation's "longest Main Street," a carnival, two dances, a team roping competition, a Friday night steak banquet for 1,000 persons and the crowning of "Miss Irish Rose."

As in years past, there'll also be a Donegal Shenanigans, a beard judging contest for which many of the men begin preparing weeks in advance.

Local product Bill Mack, a popular Fort Worth disc jockey, and his band, "The Midnight Cowboys," are expected to perform at this year's armory dance.

Cates expects the parade this year to be the longest ever and Walton is awaiting an annual phone call from a Dublin radio station.

With March 17 still several days away, Walton could be found recently in the insurance agency where he works, outfitted in green coat, tie and cap.

Already the streets and town were turning green. The local newspaper editor's beard was dyed green. Emerald-colored mugs were available in the town's restaurants.

A reporter asked Walton if it ever began to wear thin?

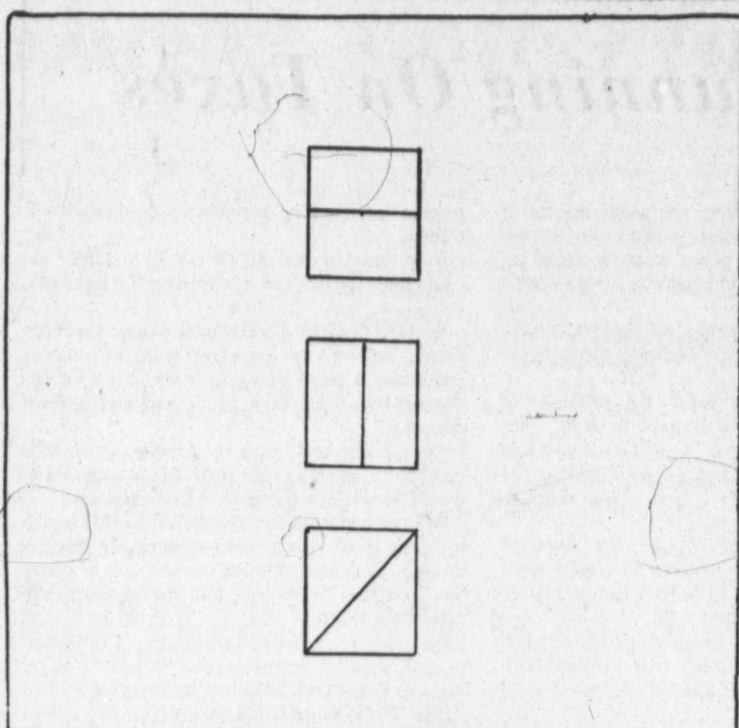

"Most of us are pleased to see the 18th

(of March) roll around," he said. Then, for about two or three weeks after that we don't think about (St. Patrick's Day). But come July or August, we start looking for it again. We're all proud of Shamrock and we have a pretty good time putting it on."

Committee Working To Save College

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Wilson College alumnae say they need "big money fast" to reach their goal of $1.5 million so the 110-year-old school can remain open.

A declining enrollment and financial woes were the determining factors behind a board of trustee vote Saturday to close the women's college permanently on June 30. But the Save Wilson Committee says it will work to save the school. "Of course, you would have to be a miracle worker to come up with that kind of money in one week," said Carolyn Shaffer of Baltimore. "But miracles have happened before."

Reflective Material Lights Up Rooms

By SHARI LEWIS

Some objects give off their own light. Others reflect light (that's when the light rays hit something and "bounce" off). The kind of reflective stuff used on traffic signs and on kids' clothes (to make 'em visible to cars on dark mornings or evenings) is fabulous fun for creating supernatural effects.

It comes in sheets, strips of tape and fabric. The tape sticks to most clean smooth surfaces. It doesn't shine in the dark, because it doesn't give off any light of its own. But if there's a little light shining AT it, it bounces (reflects) that light like crazy.

The reflected light can only be seen by a person who's standing near the light, looking at the object (the light source has to be close to the eyes of the person who is looking at the object).

So if you open a door and the room into which you are going is all dark — and inside are decorations covered with reflective tape — the light from behind you (from the other room) shining into that dark room will make you see whatever is covered with reflective tape.

If a cat's head cutout has reflective stuff on its eyes, you'll see those eyes shining in the dark.

Somebody inside the room would not see the reflective tape, because that person would not be near the light.

Somebody leaving your house, with lights from the porch or door behind them, would see the gleam of the bits of reflective tape dangling from trees or scattered around in the yard.

The 3-M Co. makes lots of reflective products. You can get it at hardware, stationery or sign stores, and as long as there's a teeny bit of light shining on you, you can compete with the glow worm!

Mathematical Equation Used To Detect Obesity

LONDON (UPI) — Dr. J.S. Garrow believes he has a simple mathematical formula that will tell whether you suffer from the obesity that can shorten life.

He prefaced its revelation to the British Nutrition Foundation with a harrowing description of the damage a regular extra piece of cake or dollop of whipped cream can do to the human frame.

The example he used was William Campbell who weighed 740 pounds when he died at the age of 22.

"It can be calculated that this record-breaking obesity implies storage of 1.750,000 calories of extra fat," he said. "But over 22 years this is an average excess of only 218 calories a day."

However, he added reassuringly, there are great differences in metabolism, the rate at which the body burns up fuel, so the chances of fat storage raging out of control as in Campbell's case are very slender, so to speak.

Garrow described what he called "an obesity index." Those whose index is greater than the number 25, he said, can consider themselves obese with all that implies for the future.

"This index is obtained by dividing the weight (in kilograms) by the square of the height (in meters). If the index is between 19 and 25 there is no significant relationship between weight and health. But when it rises above 25 there is a steady decrease in life expectancy and increase in diseases such as diabetes mellitus, degenerative disease of weight-bearing joints such as the back, hips and knees, and disease of the gall bladder."

Take a man who weighs 198 pounds and is 6 feet 6 inches tall. That's two meters in height and 90 kilograms in weight. Two meters squared is four. Four into 90 gives an obesity index of just over 22.

Garrow told his audience of food technologists that there was no need for more instant and expensive "slimmers' meals". A good, cheap 800 calorie a day diet could consist of two pints of milk, 200 mg of ferrous sulphate and one multiple vitamin capsule and cost no more than a daily newspaper.

He said food technologists bear some responsibility for obesity because they make food more attractive and easier to store, prepare and eat — and in the process often change its character so there is no relationship between the nutrition content of the food and its taste or appearance. He cited potato chips flavored with ham or cheese.

He recommended more information on labels for purchasers.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Caught Out Of The Draft

IT'S POSSIBLE that a return to the draft might hasten the establishment of a civilian national service program, but it is by no means guaranteed.

The military has a multitude of friends on Capitol Hill; idealists have relatively few, unfortunately, in this cost-conscious era.

Unquestionably, it is cheaper to finance a conscript army than to provide the levels of pay and benefits needed to attract and maintain an adequate force of volunteers.

Precious few 18-year-olds, however, consider the forced disruption of their own lives a fair exchange for the relatively modest budget savings that could be gained through reviving the draft. And politicians know it.

NONE OF THE armed services met their recruiting goals during the final quarter of 1978, the first time this has happened since the draft was abolished in 1973.

Reserve force levels are deteriorating fast, and Pentagon planners say there is no way they could mobilize a sufficient number of troops fast enough to meet manpower needs if a major war should break out.

The manpower squeeze is likely to get worse in the years ahead as the baby boom generation gives way to the children of the baby bust and fewer 18-year-olds become available for possible service.

One way out of the dilemma is to require all young Americans, women as well as men, to put in at least one year of service to the nation—either in the military or in civilian roles aimed at filling unmet needs, such as caring for the elderly, working in day care centers, or sprucing up national parks.

BY OFFERING educational or training benefits as a reward for military service, but no similar incentives for civilian duty, such a plan presumably could lure enough young people into uniform to meet military needs while still preserving an element of choice.

A sophisticated version of such a plan has been introduced in Congress this session by Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., and 10 of his colleagues from both parties.

The catch is still the cost factor, however. No matter how it is organized, any civilian national service program is going to cost money—a lot of money—and require extensive new administrative machinery. Let's hope Congress isn't in the mood to undertake any new—avoidable—expenditures.

A universal national service program might be good for the country, if you don't mind stretching the point, and good for the young. But we can't preserve our national security with 18-year-old day care worker volunteers.

A return to the draft would be cheaper. And better for us all.

FANTASY ISLAND

John D. Lofton:

If Fleas Bug You, Avoid Dogs

WASHINGTON—I'm sure that a lot of people in this city are shocked, amazed, staggered, stupefied, astounded and downright flabbergasted. Undoubtedly, some have been scandalized, appalled and horrified. A few, perhaps, are still incredulous even as you read these words.

I mean—the nerve of it all! Me? To me the revelation that the Nixon administration actually tried to control public television is strictly a dog-bites-man story, just another example of government being...well, government.

According to hundreds of documents obtained by The New York Times under the Freedom of Information Act, from 1969 to 1974, the Nixon administration attempted to purge public broadcasting of commentators considered hostile to the President and reorganize it so it might serve the administration's political aims. As the Times reports it:

"THE PAPERS confirm suspicions that had been aroused by White House actions during that period that the administration was tampering with the board of directors of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and was using federal appropriations as the device to force a reorganization of the system along lines prescribed by the White House."

In its front-page story, ominously headlined

"Files Show the Nixon White House Tried to Mold Public TV Politically," the Times notes that a recurring phrase used in the internal memoranda, reflecting Nixon's concern with non-commercial programming, was "anti-administration content."

ONE MEMO, dated June 18, 1971, to Nixon from an assistant, Peter Flammang, reads: "Shaping the Corporation. Probably no amount of restructuring will entirely eliminate the tendency of the corporation to support liberal causes."

"On the other hand, this administration does have an opportunity to establish, by legislation or otherwise, structures and counterbalances which will restrain this tendency in future years and which, as a political matter, it will be difficult for other administrations to alter. It is in this direction that we have thus far been proceeding."

Another memo, dated Nov. 7, 1972, from CPB President Henry Loomis to Clay Whitehead, director of the White House Office of Telecommunications Policy, contained the corporation's staff recommendations for the major series to be funded the following season.

A note from Loomis attached to this memo reads: "This is our 'burn before reading' document. No one here knows you have it."

IN 1970, WHEN Nixon aide Daniel Moynihan learned from then-CPB President John Macy that the public TV show "The Advocates" was to feature a White House economist opposing the idea of a guaranteed annual income—a plan proposed by Nixon—Moynihan was furious.

In addition to complaining to Macy, Moynihan fired off a memo to H.R. Haldeman, Nixon's chief of staff, noting:

"We have men on that board. Why aren't they looking out for the President's perfectly legitimate interests? Why are federal funds being spent...to distort the facts of this situation?"

In a "Memorandum for the Record" dated March 27, 1973, Whitehead noted that despite the efforts to control public TV, Nixon was still not satisfied:

"We were advised by the White House that the President still sees serious dangers in the existence of a federally funded broadcasting network."

When asked for his comment on the documents obtained by the Times, Whitehead declared: "It is probably instructive that all this get out."

What "all this" demonstrates is what conservatives have argued for ages—that is, along with federal funding come federal controls, or at least the attempt by the feds to control things.

Sure, federal funding is dangerous. But as the old saying goes: If you don't want fleas, then don't lie down with dogs.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Running On Taxes

IRANIAN WOMEN protesting the Ayatollah Khomeini's order that they wear veils in public were stoned by his revolutionaries.

Well, Khomeini promised to return Iran to 7th Century-style rule. Can he help it if that was the Stone Age?

Gerald Myers' fine Red Raider team got into the NIT only to be humiliated by a debris-throwing crowd at Municipal Coliseum. Bush.

Trying to cure their boss of his fear of horseback riding, his employees plied him with watered-down martinis but he still wouldn't saddle up.

It proved that you can water a drink to leader but you can't make him horse.

My Neighbor Twice Removed says the Austin bureaucrats may be right in saying Gov. Bill Clements is high in saying 25,000 of their jobs should be eliminated: "it might be only 24,999."

THE SAME MAIL brought two—not one, but two—identical blurbs from the Internal Revenue Service promoting taxpayer designation of $1 of their income taxes for use in financing 1980 Presidential campaigns.

"Free copies" of an IRS brochure on "Voluntary Tax Methods to Help Finance Political Campaigns" were trumpeted in the alleged "news release."

If you wonder, as I did, why the IRS should be promoting how tax dollars are used—instead of sticking to its job of collecting them—the answer is that Big Spenders in power want to extend tax financing of political campaigns to Congressional races.

The Democratic leadership in Congress, in fact, hopes to pass just such a till-tapping measure before the Easter recess.

Congressmen already enjoy the privilege of sending self-serving "newsletters" to every voter in their districts. Now they want the taxpayers to help foot the bill for their TV time, newspaper ads, campaign staff, travel and other expenses when they run for re-election.

Unbelievably, Common Cause, the so-called "citizens lobby" which objects to tax-financed newsletters, supports tax-financed campaigns for incumbents and challengers alike.

Using public funds for financing personal political ambitions should be made into a penitentiary offense rather than be "legalized" by act of Congress.

If the trend in postal rates and telephone rates continues, pretty soon it'll be cheaper to call Washington than to write to protest either rate.

Just when the Women's Lib movement is hitting full stride, they're talking about building separate dressing rooms for women's teams in Municipal Coliseum...

Priscilla Davis' lawyers asked upwards of $2.5 million for handling her divorce case against T. Cullen.

Now that lawyers can advertise, methinks she could have found a cheaper price in the want ads.

IF YOU WALK into Hemphill-Wells, Dunlap's, Furr's, Dillard's or any other store in Lubbock and make a large purchase, does that give you the right to help make policy and management decisions?

Anyone who believes in the American economic system—or even in the right to own property, would have to answer "no" to that question.

Even as a stockholder in a publicly held company, your input into actually running the place is limited. You may vote on the election of directors, but they set policy, hire management and delegate authority.

Yet, bills are pending in the Texas Legislature to give students representation on boards of regents at Texas Tech and other universities.

Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, filed a bill to create positions for two voting student members of the Tech board.

Students have no business helping run a university. As a huge constituency, they have a right to be heard and to have their suggestions considered. So do all other citizens who are constituents and/or taxpayers owners of the institutions.

A well-run university will be responsive in balancing needs and resources—just as will be a well-run business—but students shouldn't run the store.

Holmes Alexander:

Saved By Born-Again Diplomacy

WASHINGTON—Down the years I have been by invitation, to a number of Senate prayer breakfasts where God-minded members of the upper chamber at least began—but the talk soon generalizes—on the religious tones that we find in the Declaration of Independence and the Gettysburg Address.

Thus it seems odd that President Carter, who humbly proclaimed himself a "born-again" Christian and whose foreign policy, in a small part at least, calls upon foreign governments to practice "human rights," does not wield greater clout in the upper house where, in point of fact, he has but little.

After reading William Pfaff's cogent piece in the New Yorker a mild wonder strikes me why our evangelist in the White House allowed the CIA and other intelligence agencies to lull him into thinking as if the Shah with all his American-supplied military arsenal could have been thought to have a chance against the spiritual opposition of Islam which was embodied in the 77 years of exiled Khomeini.

WE THUS FAR have no clue that Jimmy Carter, from his advantageous view in the midst of events, ever thought to question the Aesop fable which tells us that sunshine is more effective than howling wind and sleet.

Instead, Carter continued and increased the Shah's attempt to govern by secret police, imperial guards and petrodollars.

The calamity now is front page news, and the indications are that the fanaticism that lurks in all religion as well in monarchical absolutism will have its run in executions and xenophobia.

But simultaneous to the Iran blowup, we have China, whose avowed purpose is westernization. Mexico which chooses industrial self-sufficiency and the residue of the American arms traffic and entangling alliances.

IT STRIKES me that if there ever was the opportunity and incentive to reverse our disastrous policy, it is while Carter still has the unique Presidential option of Jekyll-Hyde switch that would have the authority of history to back it up.

Jimmy can seriously undertake the "born-again" route, or he can persist in a wholly discredited course in which he has demonstrated his worst quality, diplomatic schizophrenia, recently enacted with the dispatch and then the recall of the aircraft carrier Constellation.

I am not so learned as to recite the endless historical examples of the Aesop fable, but they are plentiful.

I recently contacted the Bureau of Indian Affairs in which our dealings with the American Indian were flawed with broken Christian promises and lubricated with spiked and sometimes poisoned whiskey.

"It should be noted," Indian Services Director Syd T. D. Krenzke writes me, "that very few of the treaties were broken...many were changed by mutual agreement between the tribes and the government."

It seems unlikely that any successor of Carter would have better face in gradually withdrawing the aircraft and artillery which the Shah's successors have rejected instead of trying to resell it.

But Carter brings home all arms-cum-promises hucksters like Defense Sec. Harold Brown.

No other President than the born-again Carter has identified himself with religions of the world which, without expecting too much, might be the best of entangling alliances with this Judeo-Christian land.

Sylvia Porter:

Retirement Plan Risks Upheld By High Court

IF YOU ARE among the 40 million U.S. workers covered by private pension plans, be warned: the administrators of your plans need not disclose to you what the odds are that you'll ever collect a cent in pension benefits.

If you are the divorced spouse of a pension plan member, it is unlikely that you have any rights to a portion of your former spouse's pension—no matter how long you were married and no matter how unfair this treatment may seem even at first glance.

Both of the above statements represent severe blows to tens of millions of you, involved in some way with our enormous private pension plan system.

Both are the result of two recent Supreme Court decisions of major importance, which have been generally overlooked by the average worker (although they have been hailed with great joy by big labor, big business and the Labor Department).

TO BACKTRACK and give you the basis for the decisions, the first and most controversial of the Supreme Court cases involved a Teamster truck driver, named John B. Daniel, who had worked for a full 22½ years before retiring with failing eyesight.

But 13 years before his retirement, he had been briefly—and involuntarily—laid off. Thus, when he in confidence applied for his Teamster pension, he was told that he didn't qualify; his plan provided benefits only to those workers who had put in 20 "continuous" years of service.

Daniel sued. He charged he had been misled and that if he had known how slight were his chances of ever collecting a pension, he would have switched to another job with a better plan.

THE DANIEL case raised a novel legal issue, for Daniel's lawyer argued that when a worker joins a pension plan he is agreeing in effect to invest a portion of his wages in return for benefits when he retires.

This investment is basically the same as any other investment and therefore should be covered by the antifraud provisions of federal securities laws. These provisions require that an investor be told the risks in a venture before he commits himself.

Daniel died late in 1978 and this past month, the Supreme Court rejected his argument, declaring that a worker's interest in a plan is not an investment within the meaning of the securities laws.

In the decision, Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell wrote: "Looking at the economic realities, it seems clear that an employee is selling his labor to obtain a livelihood, not making an investment for the future."

PUT ASIDE FOR the moment the fact that, had Daniel's lawyer won, chaos in pension plan systems might have erupted. Forget the tortuous implications of the "securities" connection.

Lightly Speaking...

The boss has a hangup on letters addressed to "Occupant." He writes "Please Forward" on them and drops them in a mail box.

What the highest court decision means to you is that to find out whether or not you'll have a chance to collect a pension, you'll have to dig on your own. Few plans will volunteer the facts.

The blunt explanation: pension plans are risky; relatively few of you will live long enough or work long or continuously enough to draw benefits; if more of you were aware of these facts, you might want your plans altered to give you a better chance of receiving some payout; or you might choose to work for employers with more favorable plans.

The only legacy of Daniel's unsuccessful fight is a bill sponsored by Sens. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., that would make it illegal to misrepresent the terms of a pension plan orally or in writing.

It also would give you, an employee, who had relied on such false statements the right to recover damages.

The second significant decision involved Angela Hisquierdo, a Los Angeles woman who had been divorced from her husband, a railroad mechanic, after 17 years of marriage.

She argued that she should be entitled to a portion of her ex-husband's pension under California's community property law.

A MAJORITY of the Supreme Court said no, basing the decision on a strict reading of the Railroad Retirement Act, which says that, despite state laws, no benefits shall be attached.

The ruling applies only to railroad workers in the eight community property states but it could affect divorced spouses of other federal workers.

This is the heart of a case pending in California's federal appeals court, which is likely to reach the Supreme Court in several years. But as of now, as a divorced spouse, don't count on a share of your ex-mate's pension benefits.

Direct Vote Floor Fight Shaping Up In Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A floor fight is shaping up in the Senate over a proposed constitutional amendment to have the president and vice president elected directly by the people instead of by the electoral college.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., principal sponsor of the measure, said backers will attempt to bring it to a floor vote this week, bypassing the normal routing through the Judiciary Committee.

They argue that committee action isn't necessary, since the Judiciary Committee approved the measure last year and the only reason it didn't reach a floor vote was that the Senate was tied up with other matters.

Opponents, on the other hand, say the Judiciary Committee's membership has changed since last year and the new members should have a chance to consider the proposal.

Should an attempt to send the measure to the Judiciary panel fail, both sponsors and opponents indicate the amendment is likely to be filibustered.

An aide to Bayh said supporters are confident of the necessary 60 votes to cut off a filibuster and believe they are at least close to the two-thirds needed for approval of a constitutional change.

Bayh said in introducing the measure in January that he expected it to pass the Senate and House. The last time it came up in the House, in 1970, it was approved by a margin of more than 4-1, but was filibustered to death in the Senate.

If the proposed amendment does eventually win approval by two-thirds of both the Senate and the House, it would still require ratification by three-fourths of the 50 states.

President Carter has endorsed the constitutional change, saying it would ensure that "the candidate chosen by the voters actually becomes president."

Opponents of the change say it would give too much power to big states.

Under the Constitution, the president and vice president are chosen by electors. Each state gets the same number of electors as it has members of Congress.

If no candidate gets a majority of the electors, the House elects the president.

Under this system, three men have been elected president although they were outpolled in the popular voting.

John Quincy Adams was elected president by the House in 1824 after getting 38 percent of the vote to 43 percent for Andrew Jackson.

Rutherford B. Hayes defeated Samuel J. Tilden by one electoral vote in 1876 although Tilden won 51 percent of the popular vote. Electoral votes in four states were disputed, and a commission created by Congress decided the dispute in favor of Hayes.

In 1888, Grover Cleveland received about 100,000 more popular votes than Benjamin Harrison, but Harrison carried the pivotal states by small margins and was elected with 56 percent of the electoral vote.

Under Bayh's proposal, a presidential candidate and his vice presidential running mate would have to get at least 40 percent of the popular vote to be elected. If no ticket received 40 percent, a runoff would be held. Congress would set the date of the runoff.

Former Carter Worker Denies Prior Charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Amid new charges that Billy Carter falsified financial records, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker has taken the forefront in the push for a special prosecutor to investigate the Carter family peanut business.

But the latest charges no sooner were published than Jimmy Hayes, a Georgia garage mechanic who once worked for the Carters, denied making them.

The Washington Post Sunday quoted Hayes, a former bondsman for the peanut warehouse, as saying he and the president's brother falsified records to hide the lack of collateral on loans from Bert Lance's National Bank of Georgia.

But Hayes told the Atlanta Journal Monday, "There were never any questionable dealings that I knew of."

The FBI, which has just completed a preliminary review of the warehouse's records, promptly dispatched two agents to Bainbridge, Ga., to question Hayes.

Hayes disconnected his home telephone Monday and refused to answer calls from UPI at the car dealership where he works.

He told the Atlanta newspaper that the Post blew his comments out of proportion. But he confirmed that on Billy's instructions he held up a series of $50,000 loan payments to Lance's bank until the Carter family's deficit on its loan agreement totaled $500,000.

According to the Post version, Hayes said the peanuts to be used as collateral for that loan money had long since been sold.

President Carter's 63 percent interest in the peanut warehouse was placed in a blind trust after he took office, but the events Hayes described would have occurred before Carter's election.

Fueled by the disclosures, Baker said in a brief speech in the Senate that appointing a special prosecutor is "the only way the country will be convinced that it is a fair and impartial inquiry."

Baker joined Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., in making a public call to remove the investigation from the supervision of Attorney General Griffin Bell, a close friend of Carter's. Both Baker and Dole are 1980 presidential hopefuls.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd argued that a new Ethics in Government law — designed to create special prosecutors to investigate the highest government officials — would not take effect until April 26. He said appointment of a prosecutor might slow down the investigation.

Subcommittee Investigating Debit Insurance Market

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress is taking a look at an insurance market that preys on low-income and elderly Americans through door-to-door sale of policies that cost far more than the benefits they provide.

The policies in question are known as "debit" insurance. They are usually small — from $500 to $5,000 each — and are sold door-to-door, largely to low-income families. Premiums are due monthly or weekly, usually collected by agents at the policyholder's home.

"Industrial" debit insurance offers death benefits often less than $1,000, with weekly premiums, while "monthly debit ordinary" has a slightly larger face value and monthly premiums.

The industry dates back to 19th century England where these policies were sold to the "industrial" or working class. Before World War II, when the average American had no insurance through Social Security or his job, industrial insurance was the best-selling life insurance in the country.

Even then there were abuses, but witnesses told a Senate judiciary subcommittee Monday the problems are greater now because the industry has shifted its attention to the most vulnerable group in society, the poor.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said a subcommittee investigation shows that debit life insurance is sold almost exclusively to individuals or families with annual incomes between $3,000 and $10,000.

He said the investigation produced allegations of hard-sell techniques that single out the poor and uneducated, offering them large numbers of small policies rather than a single package at a lower cost.

Buyers often are deceived by agents in allowing their policies to lapse before cash values can accumulate, and buying policies with terms, costs and coverage they do not understand.

"Sales tactics like these are not just unethical, they are positively malevolent, and agents who use them and companies that condone their use are worthy of nothing more than contempt," Metzenbaum said.

Michael Pertschuk, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, said there are more than 100 million debit policies in force, concentrated among the low-income quarter of the population. He said each low-income insured family owns on average of seven policies.

"Some people with multiple policies have reported that they skimped on food to pay their premiums," Pertschuk said. "Yet with all their policies, their coverage was well below the national average."

"The basic problem is the high cost of the product," he said. "Many consumers appear to get less insurance protection and savings for their premium dollar from debit insurance than from any other life insurance or savings mechanisms."

Surgeon General Backs FTC Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. surgeon general today backed the Federal Trade Commission in considering the regulation of television advertising aimed at children who consume sugary food.

Dr. Julius B. Richmond said sugar consumption is "unquestionably" a cause of dental cavities, the leading chronic disease of American children.

His testimony at a hearing on the proposed FTC regulation differed with earlier statements by representatives of industries that oppose controls on the estimated $600 million a year in children's TV advertising.

"Tooth decay is a preventable disease.

Dietary modification — specifically reducing the amount and frequency of sugar consumption — is one of the most effective measures an individual can take towards prevention" of cavities, Richmond said in prepared testimony.

He said "appropriate FTC regulation" of the advertising of sugared products aimed at children is consistent with the Public Health Service's efforts to reduce cavities.

He said TV advertising of sugary foods "is among those factors which shape the nutritional habits of young children. I seriously question the wisdom of permitting a steady stream of advertising promoting consumption of sugared foods to children who are too young to make informed judgments about risks to their health."

The regulation officially proposed last year by the FTC would limit television advertising aimed at children. Several alternatives were proposed to do this, the most drastic being a ban on commercials to those deemed too young to understand they were watching an ad. Another alternative would restrict commercials promoting sugary foods.

Dr. Richmond said, "I heartily endorse FTC consideration of these issues. I think we should consider seriously the need for government intervention to protect the very young from unfair commercial exploitation."

His testimony differs with that of Robert W. Harkins, vice president of the Grocery Manufacturers of America, who said last week, "Television does not cause cavities, directly or indirectly. There is absolutely no correlation between the frequency or amount of advertising for any product or product group and the number of cavities experienced by children."

A report on the hearings, to be written by hearing officer Morton Needleman, will be considered by the commissioners before any regulation is issued.

Senator Wants To Cut Bureaucratic Travel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A new federal agency, the Consumer Cooperative Bank, plans to spend an average of $7,000 on travel for each employee next year.

That is just one example of what Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., calls an unwarranted increase in bureaucrats' flying, motoring and railroading across the country to meetings, conferences and seminars that are often unproductive.

Sometimes, he said at a Senate hearing Monday, the trips amount to vacations — such as the 60 conferences in Hawaii to which the Pentagon sent employees in fiscal 1976.

In any event, Sasser said, "there are probably more than 20,000 government bureaucrats in the air at any one time."

He plans to lop $500 million from the requested $7.9 billion in travel expenses for the executive branch, which includes a relatively minuscule $22 million apiece for the legislative and judicial branches.

Sasser cited reports by the General Accounting Office, saying that "17 percent of the individuals who go to conferences, meetings and seminars are not essential to the meetings, not essential to their agency's mission and not essential to the employee's job performance."

He said one of this year's most flagrant offenders is Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who is asking Americans to cut down their own traveling to save fuel, while at the same time asking for an increase of $4 million for his department's travel.

Sasser said 94 percent of government travel is undertaken by just 12 departments or agencies. They are, in alphabetical order, the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Defense, HEW, Interior, Justice, Labor, State, Transportation and Treasury plus the General Services Administration and the Veterans Administration.

The 1980 proposal calls for $3.1 billion in personnel travel and $4.8 billion for moving office materials, federal property and household goods of employees and military personnel who are transferred.

Congressional Budget Office Chief Alice Rivlin testified that government travel costs rose 40 percent between fiscal 1974 and 1978, while the number of actual trips declined by 8 percent — inflation accounting entirely for the difference.

Sasser arrived at the estimate of airborne executives by taking the $380 average cost of a trip by a Congressional Budget Office employee and dividing into the requested $7.9 billion, coming up with about 8 million trips a year, or 22,000 a day.

"This means there are probably more than 20,000 government bureaucrats in the air at any one time," Sasser said, with the rest taking trains or cars. His proposed budget "would still allow 18,000 government employees to be in the air every day."

Haman's Hats Symbolize Purim Feast

NEW YORK (Special) — Today brings the joyous Jewish festival of Purim, celebrating the triumph of Queen Esther over villainous Haman in ancient Persia. The festival is marked by stories, songs, games and parties. But most of all, Purim means "hamantashen" — three-cornered, fruit-filled pastries, named for the very same Haman, and made in the shape of his hat! They appear at every Purim fete and are enjoyed all through the holiday.
For a spectacular Purim party dessert, consider a super size hamantash, with a unique apricot-cheese filling. First, shape the cookie dough crust into triangular hamantash shapes; then combine chopped dried apricots with sour cream, eggs and sugar to make the luscious filling. As the mixture bakes, it sets into a delicate cheese-like custard, studded with tender bits of tart-sweet apricot halves and present the hamantash to your Purim guests — to a round of applause.
Of course you can use the same cookie dough for smaller hamantashen, filled with a delectable combination of dried apricots, honey and almonds. Children love them with cold milk, and they are a delightful accompaniment to afternoon coffee or tea.
It's also part of the generous Purim tradition to present gifts of hamantashen during the holiday. These irresistible apricots hamantashen would be most welcome.

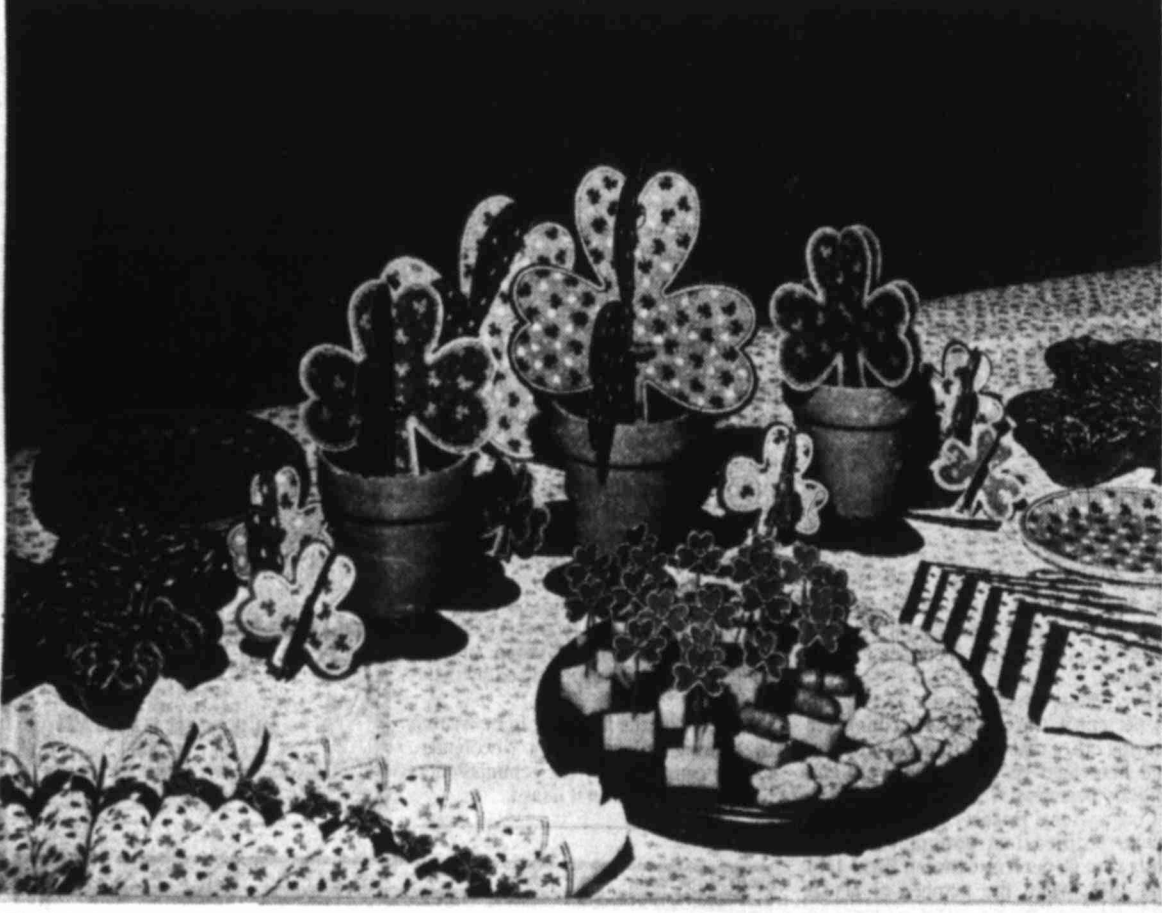

APRICOT CHEESE HAMANTASHAN

- 1/2 cup soft butter
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 1/2 cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. vanilla
Grated peel of 1/2 lemon
Cream together butter and sugar until light. Blend in remaining ingredients. Chill well. Roll out on lightly floured wax paper into a 15-inch diameter circle. Cut out a 12-inch equal-sided triangle; reserve triangle; reserve trimmings. Line a cookie sheet with heavy duty foil. Transfer triangle to cookie sheet. Roll out trimmings to get three strips, each 14-inches by 1 1/4-inch. Set strips up to form sides of triangle; crimping foil to brace edges from outside. Refrigerate until ready to fill.
Filling:
1 1/4 cups dried apricots
3 eggs
1 cup sour cream
2 3 cup sugar
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
2 tbsps. apricot preserves
2 tbsps. water
Chop 1 cup of apricots; set aside. Beat eggs with sour cream, sugar and cinnamon. Stir in chopped apricots. Pour into prepared crust. Bake in 325 degree oven 40-45 minutes. Combine apricot preserves and water in small saucepan; bring to a boil. Add remaining apricots; stir in glaze. Arrange apricots on filling. Cool. Cut in wedges to serve.

APRICOT HANTASHAN

- 2 cups dried apricots, coarsely chopped
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup honey
1/4 cup ground almonds
2 tbsps. sugar
1 tsp. lemon juice
1/4 tsp. cinnamon
Crust as in above recipe
In small saucepan, combine apricots and water. Bring to a boil; lower heat and simmer 10 minutes. Stir in honey, ground almonds, sugar, lemon juice and cinnamon. Beat mixture until smooth. Cool to room temperature. Roll out 1/3 dough on lightly floured surface to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut with a 3 1/2-inch diameter cutter to make cookie rounds. Place a rounded tablespoon apricot filling on center of each round. Fold up sides to make a triangle; pinch ends together leaving an opening in the center. Place on lightly greased cookie sheet. Repeat procedure with remaining dough. (Press scraps of dough together and reroll to make additional cookies). Bake in 350 degree oven for about 20 minutes or until golden brown.

TIME FOR SHAMROCKS — Perky green shamrocks provide table accents for Saturday's St. Patrick's Day party. This set- ting coordinates napkins, tablecloth, flower pots, dishes and party picks — all in the spirit of the wearin' of the green.

Corned Beef Traditional For St. Patrick's Day

NEW YORK (Special) — Food and merriment toast the wearin' of the green at a traditional St. Patrick's Day feast. With shamrocks for good luck, sure everyone can be a little Irish on the saint's day.
If you're looking for a little help in preparing a traditional Irish feast, here are some hints for a dinner for four from the Hallmark Holiday Cookbook.

GLAZED CORNED BEEF

- 3 lbs. corned beef
1 clove garlic
1 bay leaf
4 peppercorns
1/4 cup apple juice
1/3 cup brown sugar
2 tsp. prepared mustard
Place corned beef in a large saucepan and cover with cold water. Add garlic, bay leaf, and peppercorns. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer about 3 hours or until tender.
Remove corned beef from liquid and place fat-side up on a rack in a roasting pan. Score the fat in a diamond pattern.
Prepare the glaze by combining apple juice, brown sugar and mustard in a small saucepan. Stir over low heat until well blended and slightly thickened. Pour glaze over meat. Roast in a preheated 400 degree oven about 30 minutes basting ev-

PARSLEYED NEW POTATOES

- 1 1/2 pounds new potatoes
1/2 tsp. salt
1/4 cups butter
2 tbsps. butter
Scrub potatoes to remove any loose skin. Pare a 1/4-inch strip around the center of each potato to prevent splitting. In a saucepan, bring about 2 inches of water to a boil. Add salt and potatoes. Cover and boil about 20 minutes or until tender. Uncover and quickly boil off remaining water, shaking the pan to dry potatoes. Add butter, in pieces, and parsley, turning potatoes to coat evenly.

SHAMROCK PIE

- Chocolate Shamrocks (below)
1 cup chocolate wafer crumbs
1/2 cup butter, softened
1 pkg. (3 oz.) lime-flavored gelatin
1/2 cup boiling water
1 pt. vanilla or pistachio ice cream, softened
Prepare Chocolate Shamrocks and refrigerate. Combine crumbs and softened butter. Press against bottom and sides of an 8-inch pie plate.
Empty gelatin into a bowl. Add boiling water and stir to dissolve. Stir in ice cream a few spoonfuls at a time, beating ery 10 minutes to glaze.

vigorously as it thickens. Pile mixture into the lined pie plate and chill until serving time. Place Shamrocks on pie.

CHOCOLATE SHAMROCKS

- Melt 4 ounces semisweet chocolate over hot water. Spread evenly on a sheet of waxed paper. Let cool until firm. Press a lightly oiled shamrock-shaped cookie cutter into chocolate (or cut around a shamrock pattern). Leave shamrocks on the waxed paper and refrigerate until ready to use.

Cosmetics Improve Over Years

NEW YORK (Special) — If you're bogged by the vast array of foundations, lipsticks and rouges at the cosmetic counters these days, take heart. Things weren't always so simple.
For centuries, women have been using cosmetics — and not always the safest or most convenient kinds. In the past, for instance, young ladies often applied ceruse — a white lead powder — as a make-up base and complexion whitener. Ceruse ruined skin, and repeated use caused death. But women from Cleopatra's day until the early 19th century swore by it.
A fair complexion was never considered enough, however. Egyptian women pounded an egg into a powder for darkening eyebrows, and ancient Greeks and Romans used rouge and nail polish made from red soil, roots and flower petals. Later, 18th century women put that bloom in their cheeks with concoctions made from basil wood, vinegar and alum.
To keep complexions young-looking, medieval ladies in Europe whipped up a batch of bears' brains, crocodile glands and wolves' blood, while 14th century women used a facial cream of rhubarb, melon seeds and swallows' eggs.
In the 16th century, maidens removed spots and wrinkles with white lead powder and vinegar, and frequently glued on black taffeta and velvet patches to hide facial flaws. While most of the patches were small and simple, larger and more elaborate designs — such as a team of horses trotting across the forehead — weren't uncommon. Then, in the 1700's, European women went one step further. Rather than camouflage flaws, they used a thick white enamel-like substance to paint the whole face!

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1979 by Chicago Tribune
Neither vulnerable. South deals.

Bridge hand diagram showing North and South hands with cards: North (Q5, K83, AJ1094, A84) and South (AK107632, J95, K, J7).

The bidding:
South West North East
1 Pass 2 Pass
2 Pass 2 NT Pass
3 Pass 4 Pass
4 Pass 4 Pass
4 Pass 5 Pass
6 Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♠.

There can be too much science in bridge. In this hand from the Pan American Championships held in Venezuela, the young East-West pair, Ronnie Rubin and Neil Silverman, bid to a reasonable slam. Unfortunately, they described their hands to each other so well that they pinpointed the killing lead.
South started out with only one story to tell. He had a good seven-card spade suit, and his first three bids said so. Since North had promised at least two spades with his no-trump rebid, his bid of four clubs was obviously a cue-bid in support of spades.
That launched a cue-bidding sequence in which both players showed their first- and second-round controls. When South discovered that all suits were controlled, he opted for the spade slam.
Unfortunately for declarer, West had also been paying careful attention to the auction. He heard the heart control bid at his left, and since he was looking at the ace, he knew that North had to be showing the king — it couldn't be a singleton since North's no-trump rebid had promised a balanced hand.

The auction was no sooner over than West had his opening lead ready — a low heart. It was a devilish attack, and in declarer's place we would probably have done exactly what he did — played low from dummy. After all, who underleads an ace against a slam?
East played the queen and was astonished when that held the trick. However, he was not too stunned to forget to return a heart, and West's ace had the hand beaten before declarer could even get started.

Wedding Bands For Men Increasing In Popularity

NEW YORK (AP) — Wedding bands for men, once scoffed at as being "unmanly," are becoming increasingly popular both with the young and with older couples who remarry, a survey by the Jewelry Industry Council shows.
The Rev. Charles Magistro of the Unitarian Universalist Church in Stamford, Conn., reports he is performing more double-ring ceremonies now than ever before.
"It isn't just the young couples who ask for it, the young at heart do too," he says, pointing out that many older couples in their 50s and 60s remarrying ask for double-ring ceremonies.
In the past, men didn't see themselves as obligated as women in marriage," he adds. "That was a sexist view. That old saw about men 'losing their freedom' is not heard today. Women are more secure today, and today's couples enter marriage as a shared responsibility. The ring is a constant statement as to how the couples see themselves in their relationship — sharing equally."
Norman DeLorier of Bramley Jewelers in White Plains, N.Y., says he is selling more wedding rings for men today than ever before.
"Today's men like the idea of a double-ring ceremony. As a matter of fact, I may sell as many as three wedding rings to each couple," DeLorier says.
"First, there is the narrow wedding band women want to wear with their diamond solitaire on special occasions, and a simple, wide-band gold ring for everyday wear. Then there is the band for the men. The men usually choose a simple design: even though we have many matching ring sets, most men prefer to select a plain band."
And what of this new generation of golden banders?

Paul Goodman, 24, of Washington, D.C., a bridegroom of five months who had a double-ring ceremony, put it this way: "I wear the ring because of what it symbolizes — eternity in a relationship. I treasure this ring, and I have never desired to wear any other piece of jewelry or ring."
Martin Metzger, 26, of New Hyde Park, N.Y., married only two weeks, had this to say: "I've always liked jewelry...like my birthstone ring and college ring. My wife and I picked out these rings, and it was like part of the ceremony of getting married — choosing the rings together. All our married friends have double rings."
Greg Giammalvo, 29, of Massapequa, N.Y., who has been married three years, says he and his wife agreed on the double-ring ceremony.
"I thought it was a good idea...I like jewelry. The rings were blessed by the church. I never take mine off. I don't think wearing a wedding ring is unmasculine. I'm proud to wear it. I love my wife."
Edgar R. Daniels, 30, of Levittown, N.Y., surprised his wife when he proposed a double-ring ceremony. "I really had nothing to say about it," Jessica admits. "He felt very strongly about it, and I am pleased he did. He never takes his ring off."
"It's symbolic to me of my love for m-wife, and it's my way of demonstrating it," Daniels says. "It's not an ornament — I wear no other jewelry except a watch."

Do women notice it?
"If they do, they don't comment. And none of my buddies makes any cracks about it. In fact, most of them wear wedding rings. Marriage is, after all, for two people."
Does Daniels' father wear a wedding band?
"No, it was my own idea," he answers with a smile.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in hopes of comforting the many wonderful, loving parents who live in shame because their child has chosen to live with his or her mate without marriage.

My girlfriend (18) and I (21) have lived together now for three years. We share all the responsibility equally — the bills, rent, laundry, dishes — everything.

We help each other, and are each other's best friend. We are together because we love each other, and are very happy.

My parents and hers love us and are quite proud of us. As a matter of fact, they are overjoyed to see us so happy and fulfilled. Now, does that sound so bad?

Rich In Love

Dear Rich: No. It sounds almost too good to be true. A little quick arithmetic shows me that you were 18 and your girlfriend was 15 when you started living together. I can understand parents being overjoyed to see their adult children "happy and fulfilled" — but I'll bet they weren't all that overjoyed three years ago.

DEAR ABBY: My father makes a good living and Mom has never had to work. She has lots of friends and is always doing something for our church.

Now for my problem: Mom shoplifts. I've known it for a long time, but she doesn't know that I know. I've seen her take small cans of stuff in the supermarket, dress patterns, cosmetics — anything she can slip into her purse or pockets. We're not poor, Abby. Mom can buy just about anything she wants. She even steals things she has no use for.

What gets me is how Mom is always lecturing me to be honest and truthful.

What should I do? I'm afraid Mom will get caught and sent to jail and the reputation of our whole family will be ruined. Should I tell my father?

I can't take a chance of getting a letter from you at home, so please answer in the paper, but leave out my city. Thank you.

A Daughter (12)

Dear Daughter: Your mother could be a kleptomaniac — a person who has an uncontrollable urge to steal. Kleptomaniacs

HALL—PARKS

By A-J Correspondent

SNYDER — Tina Louise Hall and Eddie Parks were married Monday in the Colonial Hill Baptist Church. The Rev. Miller Robinson officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Emmitt Hall of Snyder and the late Mr. Hall. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Parks of Fluvanna.

Honor attendants were Laura Tiner and Bubba Dennis.

The bride was graduated from Snyder High School. The bridegroom was graduated from Borden County High School.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will reside in Fluvanna.

can be cured with treatment.

Tell your mother you know about her problem, and urge her to get professional help. If she refuses, and continues stealing, tell your father ... not as a tattletale, but as a loving daughter.

DEAR ABBY: In response to Feeling Guilty: Her story sounds like a carbon copy of my life.

I'm 27, and when I was younger I had an abortion. It was the only thing to do at the time, but I am a good Catholic and I was scared to go to confession.

After seven years of great anxiety, I finally went. The priest never said a word. I'm sure he has heard the same story many times. I was not excommunicated (he didn't even know who I was) but granted absolution.

I wish I had gone sooner.

I am glad you told Feeling Guilty to go to a priest and confess. If she follows your advice, she will feel like a new person.

Relieved Repenter

Are you the lonely face in the crowd? Friends make you a winner, and Abby tells you how to win them in her booklet, "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Companies Negotiating To Import Mexican Gas

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three U.S. companies are reported negotiating to import a billion cubic feet of Mexican natural gas daily at $2.6 million beginning in late 1980.

A foreign market analyst said the firms are Tenneco, El Paso Natural Gas and Texas Eastern. They will pay $2.60 per thousand cubic feet, the same price the Carter administration rejected two years ago, the source said.

"By then, $2.60 will be a bargain," said the analyst, who asked not to be identified by name.

Another source said the contract would not contain two clauses to which Energy

Secretary James Schlesinger objected in previous negotiations. One would have let the price rise according to market conditions, and the other would have required U.S. companies to take a specified amount of gas no matter what the price was.

The contract now being negotiated will provide for a long-term supply at a stable price, the market analyst said.

"Even after the contract is signed, it still has to go to two federal regulatory commissions and might even go to court," he continued. "But President Carter can be expected to cut red tape and accelerate the deal through statute."

"The gas cannot be delivered until the end of 1980 because it will take that long to build and test a pipeline to Monterrey and then to the border. By then, $2.60 will be a bargain."

The United States is now paying $2.16 per thousand cubic feet for Canadian gas and $1.80 for Algerian gas. By late 1980, the source said, "Canada will have had two price revisions, but Mexico's $2.60 price will still be the highest in the world."

He said the cost to Mexico will be about 40 cents for the gas, 10 cents for transportation and 10 more to pay for the pipeline.

"The deal means a $2 profit to Mexico for every thousand cubic feet," he said, adding there is no doubt the Mexican government will approve the contract.

The gas pipeline from the oil fields in southern Mexico has been completed to San Fernando, on the Gulf Coast 120 miles south of Brownsville. President Jose Lopez Portillo is to inaugurate it Sunday, but the line has not been tested.

Lopez Portillo was angered by the Carter administration's rejection of the previous contract between six U.S. gas pipeline companies and Pemex, the national Mexican gas and oil company. He scolded President Carter publicly during the American president's visit last month seeking to revive the gas deal and to get more Mexican oil for the United States.

Mexico is now producing 1.5 million barrels of crude oil daily and exporting 500,000 barrels, 400,000 of it to the United States. It has a production target of 2.25 million barrels by 1980, with half to be exported. Mexican officials have said repeatedly that these targets would not be changed to export more oil to the United States because plans for Mexican industrial development would be adversely affected.

Board Clears Cleveland Bank, Utility

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board has cleared a city bank and a utility of wrongdoing on Cleveland's default last December, and has warned banks holding Cleveland notes against being too lenient, the Cleveland Plain Dealer says.

Quoting an unnamed senior federal bank regulator, the Plain Dealer reported in today's editions that the board found no wrongdoing on the part of the Cleveland Trust Co. and the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co.

Follow-Up

The board's report warned banks against extending further credit to Cleveland, which has been in default since Dec. 15 on $14 million in bank loans, until its financial situation stabilizes, the newspaper said.

Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich, who asked the chairman of a House banking subcommittee on Jan. 22 to request the investigation, said he would comment after he had seen the report.

Meanwhile, City Council President George L. Forbes said he had been able to confirm the preliminary report's findings through contacts in Washington. Forbes said he feared that six city banks holding city loans would go to court to force payment of the $14 million.

Forbes predicted that the city's budget, currently being studied in council hearings, may be amended Wednesday to include an appropriation for the money.

Kucinich said he can pay off the loans with the proceeds from a 50 percent boost in the city income tax. The increase took effect March 1.

The mayor had charged that Cleveland Trust chairman M. Brock Weir insisted that the city sell its Municipal Electric Light System to CEI as a condition for refinancing Cleveland Trust's loans to the city. Kucinich said Weir had offered to arrange a $50 million emergency bond issue if the city would sell Muny Light.

Voters decided by a wide margin in a Feb. 27 referendum to raise the city income tax and keep Muny Light.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader had also asked in January for an investigation of Cleveland Trust and CEI, saying he thought they were engaging in "a kind of institutional extortion."

CEI sent its employees, stockholders and residential customers a letter defending the company on Monday.

The letter, signed by CEI's board chairman and president, repeated the company's denial that it conspired with Cleveland Trust last December.

CEI also insisted Muny Light has never been a check on CEI rates.

A $330 million antitrust lawsuit brought by the city against CEI is pending in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court.

Corps Orders Emergency Action On Dams To Prevent Collapse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army Corps of Engineers has ordered emergency actions taken on 27 private dams to prevent their collapse, new Corps statistics showed today.

The 27 are among 459 dams that have been declared unsafe as a result of the Corps' dam inspection program that began after the Barnes Lake Dam in Toccoa, Ga., collapsed in 1977, killing 39 persons.

To date, the Corps has completed inspections on 2,119 private dams across the country. It hopes to inspect about 9,000 of the nation's 43,500 nonfederal dams by 1981.

The dams classified unsafe are not necessarily in danger of imminent collapse, said Corps spokesman Ed Greene. In many instances, he said, the Corps simply considered a spillway unsafe to handle torrential rains.

The General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, said the Corps inspection program emphasizes the possible need for continued federal involvement in establishing an adequate nationwide dam safety program.

In a study, the GAO said a review of the Corps programs shows many dam owners refuse to correct deficiencies.

In addition, it said many states do not have the legislative authority or money to conduct their own programs.

Pools were lowered or drained on 23 of the 27 dams that required emergency actions, the Corps said. On three others, remedial construction is underway, surveillance has been initiated or the owner notified of the danger. These were, respectively, Barker Dam in Ada county, Idaho; Waltonville Lake Dam in Jefferson County, Ill.; and "No Name — 448 Dam" in St. Charles County, Mo.

Litigation has been initiated on Lakeland Lake Dam in Montgomery County, Texas, the Corps said.

The other dams which required emergency draining were:

Alabama: Lake Springs, Shelby County; Camp Mack Dam No. 1, Talladega.

Georgia: Silver Lake, Dekalb County; Erin Lake, Dekalb; Black Rock Mountain, Rabun; Manley Estates, Madison.

New York: Warwick, Orange County; Jamesville Reservoir, Onondaga; Watervliet Reservoir, Albany; Boyds Corner, Putnam.

Nevada: Squaw Valley, Washoe County.

Missouri: Tarsney Lake, Jackson County; Indian Rock Lake, Franklin County.

Oklahoma: Vettie Cooley Lake, Tulsa County.

West Virginia: Mod Branch Dams Nos. 1 through 5, McDowell County; Four States WS Dam, Marion.

Vermont: Lake Paran, Bennington.

North Carolina: Flat Top Mountain, Buncombe.

New Jersey: Untermyer, Morris.

Hawaii: Waihi, Maui.

Arizona: Tsaile, Apache.

Texas: Kaufman City Lake No. 1, Kaufman County.

Utah: Hobbs Reservoir, Davis County.

Rape-Assault Victim Points Out Assailant

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I looked at my hand and I couldn't see it, just the blood spurting out. I thought I was going to die," said a 15-year-old girl, tearfully pointing to Lawrence Singleton and saying he was the man who raped her, then hacked off her arms with an ax.

"I saw the ax swinging down at my left hand. I started to pull it away but he had hold of my hand," she testified Monday in Superior Court. "He chopped it three times. The blood was spurting all over."

Singleton, of Sparks, Nev., was arrested last October, nine days after the girl was found wandering nude, dazed and bloody with both arms chopped off below the elbows in a rural area near Modesto.

He was charged with attempted murder, mayhem, kidnapping, forcible rape, sodomy and oral copulation in the attack.

"Is the person who did those things to you in this courtroom?" asked Don Stahl, district attorney for Stanislaus County.

"He's right there," she said, raising her right arm and pointing the hook which replaces her severed hand at Singleton.

The girls described how she was tossed over a guard rail, stuffed into a culvert beneath a road and how she pretended to be dead, waiting for her assailant to leave.

The girl told the nine-man, three-woman jury she met Singleton while hitchhiking in Berkeley. He promised to take her to Los Angeles, she testified, but instead she fell asleep and "when I woke up, we were almost in Nevada."

As her parents listened, the girl described how the man she identified as Singleton drove to a canyon area near Interstate 5 where he began beating her and threw her into the back of his pickup truck.

"He grabbed a rope and tied my hands," she cried, dabbing her eyes with a tissue. "Then he turned me over, tore by blouse open."

She detailed how she was sexually assaulted, was forced to drink alcohol until she lost consciousness and later dragged from the truck and attacked with an ax.

"I was aware that I had blood all over me," she said, recalling the hours after she was left to die.

The girl said she slept until sunrise and then wandered back to the road to seek help. Two men in a red sports car saw her, got scared and drove off, after one said, "Let's get the hell out of here," she testified.

Judge Carl Maas Jr. is hearing the case after the trail was shifted to San Diego because of extensive pretrial publicity in northern California.

Flaming House Leads To Suit

CHICAGO (UPI) — Michele Miner, who claims an Allstate Insurance Co. television commercial depicting her home in flames has led to harassment of her and her children, has filed a $2.2 million damage suit against the firm.

The suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court, said permission never was given to Allstate, its advertising agency or a photographer for the advertisement, court records showed Monday.

Because of the commercial, said Mrs. Miner, friends of her two school-age children have "teased, heckled and harassed them."

Mrs. Miner said in the suit crank phone callers have threatened to make the picture in the advertisement become a reality.

Ninth-Graders Try Former President

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — President Harry Truman is on trial in his hometown for deciding to drop atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945. A dozen ninth-graders are on the jury.

Participants in the mock trial are all students — acting out the roles of Truman, Josef Stalin, Dwight Eisenhower and others who figured in the events of World War II.

Stalin and Eisenhower were called by the prosecution. The defense, which is scheduled to open its case today, plans to put the defendant himself on the stand.

At issue is whether Truman made a morally correct decision in authorizing the dropping of atomic bombs on those Japanese cities. He is "charged" with war crimes in the deaths of more than 100,000 Japanese.

Janet Fielder, the social studies teacher who organized the trials after getting the idea from an educational aid packet, says it is meant as a learning experiment. She adds that she expects "some static" from those outside the school.

After a story on the trial was published in a local newspaper, Mrs. Fielder said she began receiving telephone calls from supporters who feared she would be taken before the school board and fired.

School officials could not be reached for comment immediately.

"We as a class have the highest respect for Truman and in no way is this meant to embarrass Truman or the people of Independence," Mrs. Fielder said.

The students have "researched the past, learned about the relationships between the United States and other countries and studied how one person can make a decision that affects many lives," she said Monday.

"It's an interesting way to get away from the books. They've researched this particular topic in detail, and they're really excited about it."

The trial is being held in both Mrs. Fielder's morning class, with 47 students, and her afternoon session, with 27.

The proceedings at Bridger Junior High School moved smoothly Monday with one exception. Stalin was held in contempt of court and had to be removed bodily from the courtroom-classroom.

"Those attorneys were almost throwing fists today — they were very upset with the judge's ruling," said Mrs. Fielder.

Phyllis Sloezen, Truman's 14-year-old defense attorney, said her case would revolve around the testimony of her fellow student playing Truman.

"We're going to prove that it was justified because it saved 250,000 to a million American and Japanese lives," she said. "The Japanese would not have surrendered, so it (the war) would have gone on for a while longer."

Mrs. Fielder said she would not be upset if the jury reached a verdict of guilty.

"I want them to come to that decision on their own," she said. "And I hope everyone will be able to look at both sides."

Son Decided To Testify After Girlfriend Raped

WEST CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — Choking with emotion and glaring at his father — one of three men accused of trying to murder him — Bruce Johnston Jr. says he never saw the hired assassins who killed his girlfriend and pumped eight bullets into his body.

The 20-year-old Johnston testified Monday he decided to talk to police last summer after Robin Miller, the girl-riend, "told me my Dad raped her (and) I was pretty mad."

"That's when I decided to see what kind a deal I could get if I told about them guys," said Johnston who was identified as "Little Bruce" at the preliminary hearing for his father and two uncles.

Bruce Johnston Sr. and his two brothers are charged with murdering members of a burglary ring which they headed and whom they suspected of being informers.

"Who do you mean by them guys?" asked Assistant District Attorney Delores Troiani of Chester County.

"The defendants," he replied, staring directly at his father, who ignored the accusation as he scribbled on a sheet of paper.

Bruce Sr., 39, of Elkton, Md., is accused in six deaths, while his two brothers, David, 31, of Kennett Square, and Norman, 28, of West Grove, are named in five deaths. All three are charged with attempting to kill Little Bruce last Aug. 20.

The hearing, now in its eighth day in a heavily-guarded courtroom, was to determine whether the state has sufficient evidence to hold the three brothers for trial this summer.

Leslie Dale, who said he was hired by Bruce Sr., testified he was offered a contract "to croak Little Bruce," for which he first was offered $5,000, then $8,000 and finally $15,000.

Marvin Never Intended To Share Property

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin, defending himself in a landmark $1.8 million lawsuit, contends he never meant to share his life or property with his former live-in lover, Michelle Triola Marvin.

The 55-year-old Marvin concludes his testimony today as the star witness for the defense and then faces attorney Marvin Michelson's efforts to shake his story.

Miss Marvin, 46, who lived with the film star for six years, claims she should receive half the assets he accumulated during that time — from 1964 to 1970. The assets are estimated at $3.6 million.

A portion of her claim seeks payment for such services as homemaker, companion and personal adviser.

But Marvin, in his testimony Friday, tried to show that Miss Marvin spent little time with him and that when they traveled, homemaking was done by maids and Miss Marvin hardly ever cooked.

The former showgirl, who says she is a gourmet cook, was visibly angered by Marvin's comments. After listening to his testimony, Miss Marvin told reporters bitterly: "I should have slapped his face a long time ago."

Marvin was solemn as he testifies about the affair which ended nine years ago on the beach at Malibu. He spoke of arguments with Miss Marvin, of times that were "tolerable," but never mentioned romance or happy days.

What broke up the love affair? Marvin said he and Miss Marvin argued constantly about his close friendships with stuntmen and crew members on his movies.

"She disapproved of the men I spent my time with and admired," he said.

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall has estimated that testimony and final arguments will conclude March 28.

LCTA Upset By Insurance Cuts

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff
The Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association has termed "disturbing" and "unfortunate" the school board's decision to cut health insurance benefits for local school employees.

Faculty representatives of the association recently passed a resolution criticizing the board for changing the benefits in the middle of the school year. The organization also said Lubbock Independent School District officials did not adequately consult teachers about the cut in fringe benefits.

School trustees in November altered the district-paid insurance plan by requiring school employees to shoulder a bigger share of their medical costs. The change kept the district's insurance premiums from going up — something the board said it could not afford.

The new policy, which took effect Jan. 1, includes an option by which employees may still enjoy the previous, more liberal benefits. To do so, however, workers must kick in $6 a month to supplement the district-paid premium.

When the school board adopted the policy, "I received several calls from teachers who were unhappy. I was unhappy, too — although I sympathize with the situation the board was in," said school counselor Wendell Huddleston, president of the Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association.

The association's faculty representatives passed a resolution criticizing the board — not so much for its decision to change the policy (teachers admitted that "the cost of coverage has escalated dramatically"), but for the way the change was handled.

"In November, many Lubbock Independent School District personnel were somewhat startled to learn that the health insurance benefits were being altered," the teachers' statement read.

"This information was announced by means of a front-page article in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. This, in itself, was unfortunate, for in the past the most reliable information concerning Lubbock Independent School District employees has been distributed by administrative personnel, who could then answer any questions that might arise.

"This lack of communication was disturbing to many."

The resolution went on to note that the district-paid health insurance plan was granted by the school board "in place of a cost-of-living raise two years ago."

Many teachers, Huddleston said, felt that the health insurance benefits were an understood part of their contracts with the school system.

Therefore, they objected to the school board's reducing the benefits midway through the contract year, he added.

The teachers' resolution, which Huddleston has transmitted to the school district administration, asked that:

—"Group health insurance for the employee be included in future contracts, beginning with the 1979-80 school year." By writing benefits into teachers' contracts, the school district could no longer cut such compensation in the middle of an academic term, Huddleston said.

—"Future school board agendas be made available to Lubbock Classroom Teachers Association prior to the school board meeting and then forwarded to faculty representatives." The association presently does get agendas, but not in time to send them to representatives at each school, Huddleston said.

—"In the future, communication of decisions affecting Lubbock Independent School District personnel be made available to LCTA and Lubbock Educators Association officers, and then through appropriate channels to faculty representatives for building distribution."

Many teachers said they were upset by the way the school district informed them of the insurance policy change ("the method...left much to be desired," the LCTA resolution stated).

They said news of the reduction in benefits should have been broken to school employees by principals or teacher representatives, instead of by the news media.

School board President Charles Waters said Monday he believes the teachers are off base in their criticism.

For one thing, Waters said, teachers should have had plenty of advance warning about the cut in health benefits — because LCTA officials served on a committee which recommended the change to the school board.

LCTA members "have not had enough communication from their leaders," Waters said.

When the school board drafted the district's budget for the 1978-79 school year, the board budgeted for the same-sized premium the district paid for health insurance last spring, Waters said.

The insurance policy with Blue Cross/Blue Shield expired Dec. 31, in the middle of the school year, he noted.

"Since we had made the budget during the previous summer, we didn't have enough budgeted for increased premiums. The money simply wasn't there," Waters said.

So the school system's administration formed a committee, "which included classroom teachers," to recommend how to reduce insurance coverage to fit the budgeted premiums, he said.

"We had no choice but to change the coverage. And the change we adopted was the one recommended to us by the insurance study committee," Waters said.

Dollarwise, the school district's contribution toward employees' health insurance is the same as before, he said. "But the rates have gone up, and the amount we are spending doesn't buy as much coverage."

When the district-paid insurance plan was devised in 1976, Blue Cross paid all hospitalization expenses without imposing a deductible or requiring employees to pay a percentage of costs.

On non-hospital medical bills, costs were shared. Employees paid the first $100 for doctor visits, out-patient treatment and services not included in regular hospital rates, plus 20 percent of subsequent charges. The most a worker would be required to pay, including the deductible, was $600.

For 1978, Blue Cross said the rate for that kind of coverage was going to increase from $14.71 per employee a month to $18.09.

Instead, the school board changed the policy by making employees pay a $50 deductible on hospital stays. This held the monthly per-worker premium to $17.60.

Maintaining similar coverage for 1979 would have cost $23.72 a month per employee — and that's where the school board drew the line. The board, at the advice of its study committee, raised the deductible on non-hospital medical expenses from $100 to $200; and had employees pay 20 percent of their hospital expenses on top of their $50 deductible.

The board gave employees the option of keeping their current coverage by paying $6 a month from their own pockets to supplement the district's contribution.

Board Ditches Plan To Close Schools

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The suburban Moon Township school board, which threatened to call off classes for a day to protest hazardous driving conditions caused by potholes, has ditched its plan.

Ronald Deep, superintendent of the 5,000-pupil district, had pledged to close classrooms Monday, saying roadways in the area were too treacherous for bus travel by students. But Deep said he recommended to the board Monday night that it call off its planned protest because the state Department of Transportation had made progress in repairing the roads.

Columnist Accuses Journalists Of Omitting Unfavorable Facts

By RHONA SCHWARTZ

Avalanche-Journal Staff
M. Stanton Evans, whose syndicated column appears in newspapers across the nation, said journalists often omit facts from their stories in order not to adversely affect delicate political situations.

Evans, who spoke to about 150 Lubbock Christian College students and guests Monday afternoon, pointed to coverage of the Panama treaty and relations with Communist China as examples where facts were withheld because the reporter or a government department did not want to stir up unfavorable response.

"Gerald Rivera was sent by ABC to Panama to cover events concerning the signing of the Panama treaty, and in an interview with Playboy magazine he said he had suppressed certain information about the government and the secret police there."

"He said he did so because it would react unfavorably on the treaty signing," and he supported the treaty, Evans said.

Evans said Rivera, in the magazine interview, said he had omitted information on the Panamanian President Omar Torrijos's participation in a heroin smuggling operation for which his brother was indicted in New York.

Evans said he tried to obtain more information about Torrijos from the Drug Enforcement Administration, but said that the files he finally obtained had "all the Torrijos dealings censored. His name was totally blacked out of the story."

The deaths of between 34 and 63 million people, allegedly caused by the Red Chinese government during the last five or six years, also went unreported by the national media, Evans claimed, because of the beginning of renewed diplomatic relations between China and the U.S.

"These facts were never mentioned here," Evans said. "I believe I have the responsibility to bring some of this information out even though it does not fit with prevailing opinion."

"The national tendency is to provide you with good information and black out the bad," he said. "The essential function of the commentator is to bring out this news, if the system is going to function as it is intended."

Evans, whose column appears in The Avalanche-Journal, defined opinions "in the broadest sense as what gives life meaning (and) what makes us different and distinctive."

"Our opinions constitute the substance of individuality and symbolizes our free society," he explained. "In a political context, opinions are necessary to understand what is going on."

To further this understanding, Evans said news such as the SALT talks, President Carter's recent trip to Egypt and even the federal budget can be understood only "if we understand what this political system should be doing."

"To supply that kind of framework is the job of the commentator," he said. "Somebody has got to begin from a certain angle in order to interpret the significance of what is going on (in the world)."

Having been in this business 20 years, Evans said he has been asked what kind of standards should be used in forming opinions.

"We have to have our own context from which to start," he said, adding that compasses in interpreting United States politics are to be found in the Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

Stressing that the American media has more freedom than any other in the world, he acknowledged what, in his opinion, are some of the problems faced by people in the interpretive business.

"A lot of these professionals don't happen to share certain attachments to these freedoms."

El Paso Mayor Requests Investigation

EL PASO (UPI) — A federal investigation will begin "as soon as possible" into allegations of abuse of power by Immigration and Naturalization Service agents. Those claims, the mayor said, may have prompted weekend demonstrations by Mexicans that resulted in the death of a 10-year-old girl.

Mayor Ray Salazar requested the investigation Monday and the head of the INS, Leonel Castillo in Washington, quickly promised to send investigators.

Salazar said the investigation would center on allegations INS agents had abused their power by declaring crossing cards illegal, when they in fact were legal, and by conducting personal and illegal searches of Mexicans.

The mayor said the charges may have spawned the demonstrations and blockading of four bridges between the United States and Mexico.

Castillo said he would send the investigators to El Paso as soon as possible. Salazar said the investigation would prove "whether or not some of the INS officials abused their powers."

No further demonstrations were reported Monday and Charlie Perez, head of the INS at El Paso, reported a considerably less than normal amount of commercial traffic on four bridges connecting El Paso and Juarez.

The bridge demonstrations began Friday when about 150 Mexicans, mostly maids working in El Paso who claimed they had not been paid, were deported on charges of having illegal crossing cards. U.S. authorities later determined only 11 of the crossing cards were illegal.

The two consecutive days of protests during the weekend culminated Saturday when a Mexican mob attacked an El Paso woman who killed a 10-year-old girl by running over her in a car.

An estimated 500 Juarez residents gathered on the Mexican end of the Paseo Del Norte bridge while 75 sympathizers from El Paso joined in protesting the deportations.

The protesters jammed traffic on the bridge most of the day. The girl, Laura Patricia Fabela Chavez of Juarez, was killed when Carmen de Rios of El Paso tried to force her car through the mob. The girl fell under the car and was killed, witnesses said.

Before police arrived, the angered crowd dragged Mrs. Rios from the car and beat her. She was rescued by police who arrested her for negligent homicide. A 9-year-old boy also was injured in the incident.

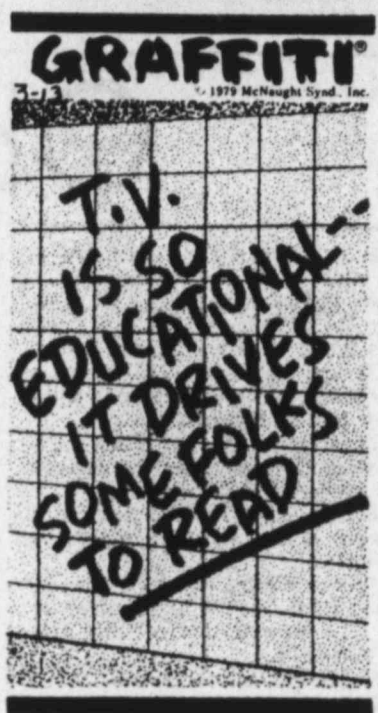

Some Mexicans said they had been subjected to illegal and improper personal searches by immigration officers but INS officials denied improper personal searches were conducted.

Relatives Of Chagra Appeal To Kennedy

DALLAS (AP) — Relatives of slain defense attorney Lee Chagra of El Paso have appealed for help in investigating the shooting death and ensuing federal grand jury probes into racketeering.

The appeal was made to Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and came from former pro football player Roosevelt Grier.

A spokesman for Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said in a telephone interview that Grier called last week to ask the senator's help.

The spokesman said no decision has been made on whether to enter the case. An FBI agent investigating the case said, "Seems to me they're trying to swat a fly with a baseball bat. I can't imagine why they'd want to drag Ted Kennedy into this."

Joe Chagra, an attorney and younger brother of Lee, said the family sought Kennedy's aid through Grier.

"Yeah, I think JoAnne (widow of Lee Chagra) is the one that got it started," Joe Chagra said. "Rosie was a good friend of Lee. Lee used to handle cases for him — poor black kids in California. Lee would represent these kids for free. I think he met Lee in Las Vegas."

"I think what happened is that she asked him (Grier) a long time ago, and he just now got around to it."

Grier is a friend of the Kennedy family and was particularly close to the late Robert Kennedy.

Authorities have arrested three men in connection with Chagra's slaying, but Grier's inquiry to Kennedy came several days after those arrests.

"We feel that there might be two or three other people involved who haven't come up yet," Joe Chagra said. "There's no proof or evidence — just a gut feeling."

Last week, a federal investigator said former New York City Mafia chieftain Joe Bonanno Sr. and reputed New England Mafia leader Raymond Patriarca were under scrutiny by grand juries in Texas and Nevada.

The Mafia angles were sparked at a bond reduction hearing for Jimmy Chagra, another brother, who is awaiting trial on narcotics charges.

Testimony about a Massachusetts businessman named Salvatore Michael Caruana indicated Caruana had been in El Paso to conduct voice stress analysis tests in connection with Lee Chagra's death.

FBI agent Charles Walsh of Boston said he had an informant who linked Caruana with Patriarca.

Crime Prevention Force Cites Lack Of Funds

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

There are many good ideas on how to combat this area's ever-growing crime rate, but still no money to work with.

That was the word at this morning's meeting of the Lubbock County Crime Prevention Task Force.

In their third meeting, task force members discussed designating with a sign or decal businesses and homes of county residents taking part in the program set up by District Attorney John Montford's office to combat crime.

"Operation Identification," where valuable property would be marked and registered with law enforcement agencies in case of theft, also was discussed during the 7 a.m. meeting.

Members, including Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard as head of the task force, even approved a bank to deposit funds when some are received.

Mal Cleland, president of the Lubbock Better Business Bureau and chairman of the force's subcommittee on "business crimes," said he felt sure local businesses and private individuals will show an interest in the crime-stopping program and will donate money.

Blanchard agreed, saying that solidifying the force's objectives is more important now than where the funds will come from.

Cleland said his committee is presently working toward getting businesses to display signs which would let would-be criminals know the business takes regular steps to discover bad checks and internal thefts. Such crimes now cut the profits of the average business by 2 percent, he said.

Subcommittee chairmen said the task force must campaign to get every person receiving checks for purchase of goods and services to require sufficient identification from the check-giver.

Blanchard said this request is often neglected when an employee is rushed, making it difficult for authorities to track down the person writing the "hot check."

Justice Rules Carter Death Self-Inflicted

Rails Justice of the Peace Jim Scott Travis has made a preliminary ruling of "self-infliction" in the shooting death of John Thomas Carter, accused in the Oct. 2, 1978, killings of a Lorenzo man and his wife.

Carter, 34, was found dead Wednesday morning in his Crosby County Jail cell with a single .22-caliber gunshot wound to the right temple.

The defendant in the murder of Valton Vernold Gandy, 73, and his 68-year-old wife, Cora, had been transferred to the Crosbyton facility four days before his body was found in his small cell.

Jury selection in the trial was in its third day when Carter was found dead, and two jurors had been picked.

Travis, who pronounced Carter dead at the scene Wednesday, said he was hesitant in ruling suicide in the case, but admitted his preliminary ruling meant virtually the same thing.

Travis said he would not make a formal ruling in the death until final results are received in an autopsy performed on Carter. Those results may come as late as Friday, he said.

Officials Probe Hit-Run Death

Plainview authorities this morning were continuing their investigation into the hit-and-run death Sunday night of a Plainview High School student. No new developments were reported in the case.

Bret Ashley Farmer, 16, of Plainview was killed while standing next to a parked vehicle and talking to his father. Another vehicle veered off SH 194, struck the youth and sideswiped the parked vehicle, according to Department of Public Safety investigators.

The youth was immediately rushed to Central Plains General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival only five minutes after he was struck.

Authorities said Monday they had located the suspect's vehicle, a Mercury, but no description of the driver was available.

Services for Farmer were held Monday.

National Guard Offers Benefits

AUSTIN (AP) — Eligible men or women without previous military experience can pick up $1,500 cash or $2,000 in education benefits by joining the Texas National Guard, officials said today.

Adjutant General Willie L. Scott said the enlistment incentives will go to non-prior service recruits enlisting for a term of six years.

He said the offer is good statewide for the next three months. After June 15 the offer will be made only for selected National Guard units.

Scott said there are no restrictions on either the unit or the type of military assignment a new recruit must enter.

The sheriff suggested that each business should display a sign letting customers know that proper identification — preferably a driver's license number — will be needed when a check is written. This, he said, will let the buyer know he is not being singled out by the business.

Shallowater Mayor Joe Cox said his subcommittee, "Neighborhood Watch," was presently working to get task force participants to go to homeowners and mark their valuable property, so the items, if stolen, would be registered with law enforcers and possibly recovered.

Cox said Lubbock is made up of 3,412 city blocks and 4,500 housing units — apartments and mobile homes. Each Lubbock elementary school district on the average represents 90 blocks, according to the mayor.

He said his group was attempting to draft 10 PTA members in each district and assign them a nine-block area. Their duty would be to go to each resident in the area with an engraver and ask if they could mark the more costly property.

Hal Hensley, the district attorney's chief administrator, said about 500 engravers would need to be purchased at a total cost of approximately $4,675.

Hensley said pens with ink that only showed under an ultra violet light could be used to mark such items as clothing.

Lloyd Watts, director of the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Office, said his subcommittee dealing with juvenile crimes was pushing for educational programs to be shown in area schools.

Films, showing the consequences of committing criminal offenses, would need to be purchased at a cost of about $900, Watts said.

An additional $1,500 was estimated to be needed to bring criminals incarcerated at the Texas Department of Corrections prison in Huntsville to the Lubbock area to talk to students about the price they were paying for their misdeeds.

Watts said that in 1978 about 25 percent of Lubbock's crimes were committed by juveniles. He suggested that about that same percent of a massive publicity campaign launched by the task force should be directed towards juveniles.

Members also approved a proposal by Cleland that an insurance agent be contacted to find out what protection task force members need against libel and slander suits.

He said the cost of such protection is vital because "we will be touching on some potentially dangerous matters."

The next task force meeting is scheduled for 7 a.m. next Tuesday in the Emergency Operations Center room at City Hall.

Four Prisoners Flee Dawson County Jail

LAMESA (Special) — Four inmates escaped from the Dawson County Jail Monday night, with three of the prisoners remaining at large this morning, Dawson County Sheriff Bill Horton said.

Horton said James Mason, 25, a trusty at the jail, somehow got a key to a tank holding the three other prisoners. The prisoners apparently escaped between 8:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. after the holding tank was unlocked, Mason said.

The escapees were identified as Robert

American Red Cross Gives Girl Award

A Lubbock girl who saved the life of her grandmother about a month ago was given an award Monday for successfully using the Heimlich Maneuver lifesaving technique.

The American Red Cross honored 12-year-old Susie Smyer during a ceremony at Stewart Elementary Monday morning for her cool action in dislodging a piece of meat that her grandmother, Mrs. Lawrence Smyer, was choking on.

The sixth-grader learned the technique in a class and was able to save her grandmother's life months later while visiting for dinner.

Oscar Collazo, a Puerto Rican nationalist, was convicted in 1951 of attempting to assassinate President Harry Truman.

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is forecast for northern Maine, northeast Montana and northwest North Dakota for Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service. Rain is expected in the Pacific Northwest with the skies over the rest of the nation clear. (AP Laserphoto)

Cooler Temperatures, Wind Gusts Expected

Slightly cooler weather and northerly winds will only briefly mar the prospect of spring for the area as a gradual cooling trend was forecast to set in this afternoon.

Winds were expected to turn from west to southwest at 15 to 20 mph to northerly at 15 to 25 mph, ushering in dust and wind warnings for area lakes.

The high today was forecast to reach the upper 60s before arrival of the cool air. A high in the mid-50s is predicted for Wednesday.

Mild weather prevailed throughout the state this morning with predawn readings ranging from the 40s in western sections to the 50s and low 60s in eastern areas.

Lubbock's low this morning was 43 degrees.

Skies were mostly clear in northern sections of the state and partly cloudy in the southern portions.

Most of the state can expect partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures today with scattered showers and thunderstorms expected in southern sections this afternoon and this evening.

The extended forecast for the South Plains calls for a slow warming trend beginning Thursday and lasting into the weekend. Skies will be partly cloudy, with temperatures reaching into the 70s.

A cold front blanketed the northern Great Plains today, producing light snow over the Montana foothills, while winds gusting up to 50 miles per hour battered western North Dakota.

In Williston and Dickinson, N.D., blowing snow lowered visibilities to near zero.

The Illinois River at Peoria in central Illinois rose toward an expected crest today of 28 feet, 10 feet above flood stage.

Intimidation Charge Filed

A Big Spring man is in jail in Abilene in lieu of $100,000 bond after being charged with intimidation of witnesses in a federal tax fraud case.

J.W. Brown, one of more than two dozen mostly Big Spring area residents charged in the case, is accused of telling co-defendants Nathan Baker and Douglas Smith, "If you plead guilty and testify against me, you'll never see the light of day."

The defendants are charged with preparing false income tax returns and fraudulently claiming refunds over a two-year period.

They are scheduled to go on trial in Lubbock March 26.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger McRoberts said Monday that the new charge against Brown would be tried in Abilene because the offense allegedly was committed in Big Spring and in the Abilene federal judicial district.

The primary case is being tried in Lubbock, McRoberts said, because refunds were obtained from tax refund discounters in Snyder and other cities in the Lubbock jurisdiction.

Baker, Smith and eight other defendants so far have pleaded guilty in the case.

A-J Reporter Wins Citation

Jeff South, education writer for The Avalanche-Journal, has won a special citation in the 1978 Charles Stewart Mott Awards Competition for a story about school desegregation in Lubbock.

The 25-year-old reporter will receive a certificate from the Education Writers Association, which sponsored the contest.

South, who has been on the A-J staff three years, was one of seven winners of 59 entries in the category on features in newspapers with a circulation of over 75,000.

South's story was about the Don Dietz family, which supported busing in Louisville, Ky., and advocated a calm acceptance of it in Lubbock.

The article, published Feb. 6, 1978, generated many telephone calls to the Dietz family, who listed the names of supporters and organized them into a group that is working for full integration of Lubbock schools.

South, a New York native, was graduated from the University of Texas at Austin with a journalism degree.

while two other rivers that ran out of their banks last week receded.

One Peoria business along the river's edge was closed Monday when the river reached a depth of 26.2 feet. Officials said a few other businesses and several parking lots near the river's edge also were threatened but still open.

In Rome, about 20 miles upstream from Peoria, several homes were evacuated. Some roads along the river between Rome and Peoria were closed because of flooding.

No injuries were reported.

Meanwhile, flood waters receded along the Kankakee and Iroquois rivers in northeastern Illinois. Both rivers were reported below flood levels Monday, and authorities said most of the 350 families who had evacuated their houses had returned home.

Temperatures well-above freezing in Illinois today were expected to increase runoff from melting the remnants of record winter snows, but a return to below-freezing weather was forecast for tonight into Thursday.

Light rain showers stretched from eastern Kansas into western Missouri. Rain showers also scattered along the coast of California, while a thunderstorm pelted San Bernardino with small hail Monday night.

Snowsqualls swirled through western New York as strong winds and heavy snow moved into the area from the lower Great Lakes.

In the south, the weather was mild with skies clear over the southeastern section.

Temperatures were in the 40s and 50s in the Southwest deserts after peaking in the middle 80s Monday. A lack of cloud cover overnight caused the mercury to fall.

Clear skies moved into New England, where freezing weather continued.

Maine temperatures were in the teens.

The Pacific Northwest had partly cloudy skies with readings in the 40s.

TDNA Leader Attacks Limits

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The American news media must turn to legislation and public opinion to defend themselves against "a concerted attack" from the nation's judiciary, according to the outgoing president of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

"The news media of this country are under a concerted attack by the judiciary, by government bureaucracy at every level, by some special interests and even by some segments of the public," he said.

Richard J.V. Johnson, president of the Houston Chronicle Publishing Co., delivered his remarks Monday during the TDNA annual meeting.

"Attacks on free speech and a free press have been going on as long as our nation has existed," he added. "What is new and important today is the fact that we are no longer on the defense in mid-field. We are far too close to our own goal line."

"All across the country, court decisions are coming down like hailstones on a tin roof," Johnson said, adding that First Amendment freedoms are being eroded through restrictive laws being made in courtrooms.

"Our only recourse is to counter with legislation and public opinion," he said.

If not, the Chronicle executive added, newspapers will be forced toward timidity instead of aggressive reporting.

Johnson pointed out that the TDNA, which includes 89 Texas daily newspapers, is supporting proposed legislation making it more difficult for Texas law enforcement officers to obtain a search warrant.

The measure says any search warrants, including those to search a newspaper office, could no longer be issued by justices of the peace, but only by state district judges, state appeals court justices or Texas Supreme Court justices.

The association is also helping fight a recent state appeals court ruling Johnson said "for all practical purposes, destroys the (Texas) Open Meetings Act." Under the ruling, only those directly affected economically would be allowed to file suit under the open meetings law.

Israeli, Arab Delegates Exchange Allegations

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) Reflecting their pent-up Middle East embitterment, Israeli and Arab delegates accused each other in the U.N. Security Council of terrorism and total disregard for human rights.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Blum charged his Jordanian colleague Hazem Nuseibeh Monday with "using terms of language coming straight out of the Nazi vocabulary and disturbingly reminiscent of the terminology in anti-semitic propaganda."

"He is not a Semite. We are the Semites," retorted Nuseibeh, saying that Arab Palestinians are "an amalgam of the Semites" who had lived in the country for 8,000 years, and whose land had been "usurped."

Referring to President Carter's Middle East trip, Blum said the U.N. Security Council debate that started Friday on Israeli settlements in the West Bank had been "deliberately staged to impede the ongoing peace efforts."

Blum also bitterly denounced the fact that the "terrorist Palestine Liberation Organization" had been granted privileges and observer status in the United Nations.

Nuseibeh charged the Israelis had introduced terrorism in the Middle East, recalling the 1946 bombing of the King David Hotel by the Irgun, a Jewish underground group led by now-Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"Who did that?" Nuseibeh said, looking straight at Blum. "Begin, his master."

The debate opened Friday when Jordan and the PLO presented a long list of grievances against Israel, charging it is gradually taking over the West Bank and Jerusalem and denying the Arab Palestinians' human rights by squeezing them from their ancestral homes.

The Arabs prepared a resolution asking the council to send a five-member investigation commission to the occupied lands and report back by May 1. The resolution has not yet been submitted.

Nuseibeh urged Friday that the council impose a moratorium on further Israeli settlements and take action, including mandatory sanctions, if the Begin government ignores the decision.

His proposal is supported by all 42 Islamic countries in the United Nations, including Iran, whose new government addressed the United Nations for the first time since ouster of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Jamal Shemirani, previously third-ranking diplomat in the Iranian mission, said the world's 800 million Moslems "share a direct and crucial stake in the outcome of this deteriorating and unbearable situation."

The new regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has broken relations with Israel and announced it will not sell oil to the Jewish state. Iran used to be Israel's main oil supplier.

Island Radio Claims Rebels In Control

BRIDGETOWN: Barbados (AP) — Radio reports claimed that the Grenada government of Prime Minister Sir Eric Gairy was overthrown today by a group calling itself the New Revolutionary Government of Grenada.

But Gairy, in New York on United Nations business, denied he had been ousted and said he has asked for American and British help to capture "a small group of communists" making the claim.

"No, no, no, no, I have not been overthrown," Gairy told The Associated Press by telephone from his hotel.

The controversial, eccentric and authoritarian Gairy said he had been in contact with his government and said the rebels are "simply in control of the radio station."

There was no independent confirmation of the rebel claim, broadcast over a station calling itself Radio Free Grenada.

The announcements, interspersed with West Indian calypso and reggae music, said the new regime had taken control of the tiny Caribbean state and assured the estimated 1,000 tourists they were in no danger. Most of the tourists are North Americans.

The broadcast claimed that "the government of the criminal dictator Eric M. Gairy" had been overthrown, and said the army had surrendered and its arms been seized.

The radio reports also claimed that Security Minister Paul Donovan and Finance Minister Norman Desousa, along with police officers and some 100 other men were being held in protective custody.

There was no announcement who the leaders of the reported coup were. However, the reports said it was calm in Grenada and that those arrested were being treated with "humanity and dignity."

The radio said "free and fair elections would be held soon" and ordered police to stay in their barracks and await instructions.

The commander of the revolution, who did not identify himself, ordered all police stations to fly a white flag as a symbol of surrender.

The reports said the new government wanted no bloodshed.

Gairy said the station had been taken over by the island's New Jewel Movement, which he said is communist and has about 1,000 members. Jewel is an acronym for Joint Endeavor for Welfare, Education and Liberation. It was formed in 1972 for the specific purpose of ousting Gairy.

The State Department had a responsibility to help his government, he added, because the uprising had in part been caused by the arrival in the capital of St. Georges Monday of two American agents.

The agents were investigating two Grenada-born U.S. citizens arrested and charged with running arms and ammunition from Washington, D.C. to Grenada.

"I think the New Jewel Movement realized that with the pressure of the U.S. investigators, that the net would be closing in on them," he said.

Grenada is a 133-square-mile island in the eastern Caribbean. It was discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1498 and became independent in February 1974 after more than 200 years of British rule.

Since independence it has become a member of the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

The inter-island airline LIAT, Grenada's only scheduled air link with the outside world, suspended flights to Grenada until the situation clarifies.

"The new government wishes to assure all those concerned that the rights and property of all foreign residents are safe, guaranteed and will be protected. The new government looks forward to continuing friendly relations with all countries," the radio announcement said.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be extra careful who you allow to get into your pocketbook tomorrow. Someone looking out only for his own interest is eyeing you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Again tomorrow a give-and-take attitude must be adopted in order to get along with others. Those you encounter might have many contrary views.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You run the risk of making errors at work tomorrow because your mind is not on what you're doing. Pay extra attention to things you deem important.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) What you hear concerning a friend tomorrow may not be the truth. Someone could be trying to manipulate your thinking. Check the facts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be sure you're right can prove it when dealing with authority figures tomorrow. You won't get away with excuses, alibis or rationalizations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your brain power is operating on low voltage tomorrow so before signing anything, have someone else interpret what you're signing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Examine all merchandise carefully before you buy and recheck the figures to make certain they add up correctly. You're prone to making financial mistakes tomorrow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Normally you always try to see another's point of view and attempt to adjust to it, but this may not be true of you tomorrow.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Disagreeable co-workers could make things uncomfortable for you tomorrow. Don't fight them out of pride; be the bigger person and walk away.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Gossiping is beneath you. Put a stop to the scuttlebutt, no matter how juicy it seems. Remember, there are two sides to every story.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Consider the source before you allow others to undermine your accomplishments or what you are attempting to do. Determine if they're qualified to criticize.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Some valuable information will go over your head tomorrow if you do more talking than listening. Be attentive.

Dog Can Climb Trees, Swing

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — One of the first things you notice about Jerry Gerbracht is the wooden medallion around his neck. It carries a picture of his dog, Jenny. So does his belt buckle, and that's just for openers.

Jenny, you see, is no ordinary dog. Jenny climbs trees, just runs right up the trunk, turns around and runs back down. Nothing to it.

She's also a whirlwind at the local playground — climbing up the ladder to run down the slide, walking along a 2-inch-wide fence and leaping several feet to land on another fence, jumping onto the horse-shaped swings and taking a ride.

A little boy watching all of this couldn't believe his eyes. "Mom, the dog's riding a horse! Watch this, Mom! Watch this!" he yelled.

Jerry says Jenny is part German shepherd and part Siberian husky, but any tool can see she's actually part squirrel and part cat.

Jerry has a dream — make that an obsession. He wants Jenny to be in movies. "My objective is to get Jenny right up there with Lassie, Rin Tin Tin and Ben-ji," he says. "Jerry works with Jenny every day. He has no regular job, but a few people pay him to help train their dogs."

As you enter the tiny, low-rent duplex where the 38-year-old Gerbracht lives, you can't help but notice every wall of his living room filled with photos of Jenny, all framed. There's a big scrapbook titled "Jenny" on a table.

There are a few framed letters, one telling of Jenny's acceptance for Ripley's Believe It or Not column, and a few framed press clippings.

Jerry says on pleasant evenings, he takes Jenny to the park and reads poetry to her.

"I've always said if I ever found a woman who would love me as much as I loved her, I'd put her on a pedestal so high the whole world would know about it," says Jerry, who was married once but is divorced. "And Jenny is the only woman who ever loved me as much as I do her."

Everywhere Jerry goes, he passes out his card. Actually it's Jenny's card. There are four pictures of her doing stunts and her pawprint is on the other side. "Here,

Rumors Surround Art Thefts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Where a $1 million Rembrandt masterpiece hung for 30 years, the M.H. de Young Memorial Museum now displays a portrait of the 17th century painter by an unidentified disciple.

Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Rabbi" and three less valuable paintings were stolen last Christmas Eve by a burglar who pried open a skylight and lowered himself into the museum. Police report their investigation is at a dead end, but the FBI still has an active investigation underway in other cities.

Two days after the San Francisco burglary, the Art Institute of Chicago was victimized by thieves who stole 19th century paintings by Paul Cezanne from a storage room. The value: $3 million.

Chicago police also say they have no suspects or leads in their case. The Art Institute is offering a $100,000 reward for information leading to recovery of the three paintings.

"There are a lot of rumors — that they went out of the state, that they went out of the country. But we haven't been able to substantiate anything yet," said FBI agent Joe Aaron of the San Francisco works. "There's still a lot of work to be done in various places around the country."

"We're just sitting and waiting now — we've exhausted all of our leads," said city burglary inspector Tom Smith.

"Whoever got in there was a pretty good burglar, but not a good art thief," Smith added. "If he knew art, there are many valuable paintings that were left behind."

Smith added, however, that it is possible the burglar may have been a steal-to-order thief, who got exactly what he wanted.

What the thief took was Rembrandt's 31 by 25 1/2-inch painting of a bearded rabbi wearing a red cap and gold chain, plus three other 17th century paintings worth a total of $62,000 — a night river scene by Aert Van der Neer, a harbor scene by Willem Van der Velde and a Rotterdam church interior by Anthonie Delorme. None of the paintings was insured, which is policy for the city-owned museum's $200-million art collection, said de Young information officer Charles Long.

"One person could have done it — easily," Smith said. The inspector added there is no evidence the painting has left the state or the country. But the Paris-based international crime-fighting agency Interpol is aiding in the investigation.

There has been speculation that the paintings may have entered the world of international art thievery, and perhaps were sold to a wealthy art collector who will keep them hidden.

Alan Baer, president of the International Association of Art Security in New York, says some 15,000 art works are stolen in the United States in a year, and less than 2 percent are recovered.

After the San Francisco theft, two guards were suspended for five days for allegedly failing to make their rounds. The museum hired a private consulting firm, SRI International, to recommend new security measures — all of which have been adopted. One of the recommendations was to refuse to talk to the news media about security measures, Long said.

Security is of unusual concern because the famed "Treasurers of Tutankhamun" exhibit, which has drawn overflow crowds at other cities across the United States, will be at the de Young museum June 1-Sept. 30.

Scientists Study Giant Kelp

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists are experimenting with the fastest growing seaweed in the world, hoping their findings may help solve the nation's heating problems.

They are working with a plot of giant kelp planted on an artificial structure four miles off the coast of California. If successful, the research may point the way to creation of a huge supply of natural gas, according to the National Geographic Society.

Researchers say their tests have already proven that anaerobic bacteria will react with harvested kelp in airtight conditions to produce methane, the principal component of natural gas.

The site of the research is a 102-foot-diameter ribbed structure resembling the top of an upturned umbrella about 50 feet below the ocean's surface. This forms the "soil" for a small kelp farm near Newport Beach.

Plunging 1,500 feet into the sea below is a 25-inch-diameter pipe which brings up nutrients such as nitrates and phosphates to fertilize the kelp and maintain growth, National Geographic explains.

Marine biologists from the California Institute of Technology will gather the crops and measure the amount and quality of the kelp during the farm's 24-month experiment. They expect to have a good idea of the project's success in six months to a year.

If results are promising, the next step would be a bigger farm of perhaps 10 acres.

"After that, the sea's the limit," said Dr. Wheeler J. North, a Caltech environmental scientist.

The music of Scotland isn't all bagpipes. In the Shetland Islands, for example, the pipes are seldom heard but there's hardly a house without a fiddle.

DELAY REQUESTED
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Home Loan Bank Board is being asked to delay for 16 days rule changes on high-interest money market certificates. The National Savings and Loan League said Sunday that automatic renewal clauses in current certificates require the associations to give depositors 10 days notice of changes in terms. The new regulations are to go into effect March 15.

Rescheduling Causes TV Turmoil

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI)—It's spring cleaning time on the television schedule with eight shows going off the air — one before it even got on.

ABC has canceled "Makin' It" and put "Welcome Back, Kotter" on what it calls "hiatus" in order to move "Family" onto Friday nights and introduce a new drama series, "Doctors' Private Lives," on Thursday. It's about the personal and professional lives of two heart surgeons. Over at CBS, "Mr. Dugan" was canceled before it began because the production company, Norman Lear's TAT Communications, received very bad vibes from the Black Caucus in Congress.

The show dealt with a black first-term congressman in a format originally designed for Bea Arthur in "Maude," then for John Amos in a show that was to be called "Onward and Upward." Both Miss Arthur and Amos withdrew. An hour-long "Alice" will substitute for the premiere "Dugan" show Sunday.

NBC, the network with the biggest ratings problems, also has the most rejuggling. The network already has canceled

"Little Women." It also has announced new programming that means the shelving of four other shows, at least temporarily. Betting is most of these will never make it back on the air.

"Brothers and Sisters" goes off the schedule after its March 28 episode. "Mrs. Columbo" has her last scheduled air date March 29, "Turnabout" and "Sweepstakes" make their final appearances March 30.

In addition, "Supertrain" gets derailed for repairs but is scheduled to return to the air April 7.

The new NBC shows include: "Harris and Company," a four-part, hour-long series mulling weekly beginning Thursday about a black family recently moved from Detroit to Los Angeles.

"The Duke," starring Robert Conrad as an ex-prize fighter turned detective, opens as a movie April 5, then follows on Fridays, April 13 through May 4.

"Real People" is an hour series produced by "Laugh-In" guru George Schlatter in which reporters and television personalities talk to ordinary and extraordinary people around the country. Air dates run from April 11 through May 2.

"Whodunit?" a half-hour show in which guest stars are asked to solve mysteries based on clues presented in a series of vignettes. Ed McMahon acts as host.

"Highcliff Manor," six comedy half-hours starting April 12 in a spoof of gothic drama.

Susan Anton is the latest to attempt to bring back the variety show with her own hour running weekly April 26 through May 17.

The woman who really knows what to do with her own hour is Barbara Walters, whose latest special airs Tuesday, 9-10 p.m., Central time.

Miss Walters looks particularly pretty, as she talks to three outspoken stars — John Wayne, Carroll O'Connor and Jane Fonda — in interviews that shed an interesting light on her subjects.

John Wayne fans will be heartened to see the "Duke" look so fit, make an eyebrow-raising reference to Marlene Dietrich, and hit a touchingly human note when he talks about seeing his old movies on television and says:

"Well, it's kind of irritating to see I was a good-looking, 40-year-old man and, suddenly, I can look over here and see this 71-year-old."

Stock Mart Reveals

Optimism

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market crept ahead today, cautiously optimistic about the latest developments in President Carter's bid for a Mideast peace agreement.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up .87 to 845.55.

Advances held a 7-5 lead over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Carter, after a meeting with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said he was confident that he has "defined all of the main ingredients of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel." Carter said the United States had made proposals on resolving the remaining issues blocking an Egyptian-Israeli treaty which are being considered by the governments of the two nations.

Before meeting with Sadat, Carter said "substantial" progress had been made toward narrowing the differences between Egypt and Israel during a late-night meeting Monday between U.S. and Israeli officials in Tel Aviv. "We will not fail," Carter vowed.

American Motors led the active list, up 1/4 to 7 1/2.

The NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .06 to 55.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.35 to 169.74.

Big Board volume was 13.09 million shares at noon, compared to 10.27 million shares at the same point in Monday's session.

Other active issues included Texas International, up 1/2 to 12 1/2; Exxon, up 1/4 to 52 1/2; and Allegheny Airlines, up 1/4 to 10 1/4.

J.C. Penney, which reported a sag in fourth-quarter profits, dipped 1/4 to 29 1/4.

Police Union Seeks Fine Reduction

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A state appeals court has taken under consideration a Police Association of New Orleans request to reduce a $800,000 contempt of court fine levied in the aftermath of a 15-day police strike.

Leaders of the union Monday asked the 4th Circuit Court of Appeal to delay payment of the fine and to review the lower court decision to levy it.

Lawyers for the Teamsters-affiliated union asked the appeals court to reduce the fine set by District Judge Richard Garvey last week as punishment for ignoring a back-to-work order.

Although state law recommends a $500 fine for contempt of court charges, Garvey calculated the larger amount by multiplying $500 by the estimated union membership of 1,200.

In the appeal, union lawyers said strikers were informed of the back-to-work orders and therefore the organization should not be held responsible for 1,200 contempt fines.

"(The union) directed individual members of the union, both orally and by written directives, on several occasions to return to work and that the individual police officers' refusal to return to work was clearly established to have the result of each individual police officer's exercise of his or her own will," the union said in its appeal.

In a related post-strike development, city officials denied a report by Detroit Teamsters leaders that striking police officers had offered to patrol Mardi Gras parade routes without pay during the strike.

PANO President Vincent Bruno confirmed Sunday a statement by Detroit union leader Joe Valenti that officers offered their services free-of-charge in order to keep Mardi Gras parades rolling.

They said the city rejected the offer. All parades in the city were canceled because of the strike, sending some to the suburbs and forcing others into motels.

Government Wants Bigger Gas Supply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration strongly urged oil companies today to satisfy increased U.S. demands for unleaded gasoline instead of complaining about the economics of energy.

"It would be an outrage if this industry failed to meet the need for unleaded gasoline," David J. Bardin, administrator of the Economic Regulatory Administration, told a House Commerce investigations subcommittee.

Bardin said a recent rule allowing refineries to pass along to consumers a greater share of the cost of making gasoline should result in increased manufacture of unleaded fuel.

The new rule, issued last week, will add about five cents a gallon to the retail price of gasoline this year. This would be in addition to any other price increases ordered by oil-exporting nations to reflect the political crisis in Iran, which interrupted oil production for several weeks.

Bardin confirmed that the demand for unleaded fuel is outpacing supply and that it is difficult to build new refineries in the United States.

But, he said, "We expect them (refiners) to roll up their sleeves and get the job done."

Meanwhile, the House Commerce subcommittee on energy began hearings on auto fuel economy rules amid charges by consumer advocate Ralph Nader that the auto industry is preparing for a major assault on those standards.

The committee chairman, Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., noted that while the objective of the fuel-economy program is to double the mileage of new automobiles over the 1975-85 decade, "we are concerned that this goal may not be achieved. We want to identify the obstacles and find ways to remove them."

Charles Schultze, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, told the panel it is "undoubtedly true it will be a burden on the auto industry, more on some companies than others."

He specifically mentioned Chrysler and American Motors.

Joan Claybrook, national highway traffic safety administrator, agreed the auto industry would have serious difficulties. But, she said, "a lot of changes are going to have to be made, or people won't be able to afford automobiles and won't have the fuel to power them."

Nader told Dingell in a letter Monday that "in private meetings of attorneys and allied groups in Washington, the auto companies are preparing to launch one of their characteristic 'big lie' campaigns, replete with phony premises and contrived conclusions."

Nader said the auto makers plan to use as "one of their springboards" hearings opening today before a subcommittee headed by Dingell.

Under a 1975 law, automakers are required to make their cars average 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985 as an energy-saving measure.

Dingell, a major supporter of the 1975 law, was not available for comment on Nader's letter. A Dingell aide, who asked that his name not be used, said the auto industry has advocated lessening interim standards for the early 1980s, but, "We haven't heard anything about watering down the 27.5 mile-per-gallon standard."

Meanwhile, three U.S. companies were reported today to be negotiating to import a billion cubic feet of Mexican natural gas daily starting in late 1980 at a price of $2.60 per thousand cubic feet — a price the Carter administration rejected two years ago.

One source in Mexico City, who asked not to be identified, said the contract would not include two clauses which Schlesinger rejected in previous negotiations. One would have allowed the price to rise according to market conditions. The other would have required U.S. purchases of a specified amount of gas, regardless of price.

In New York, the Exxon Corp. said it will not renew contracts to supply crude oil to unaffiliated distributors — third-party sales worldwide which account for 10 percent of Exxon's deliveries. "The plain fact of the matter is that we just don't have the oil," said a company spokesman.

In another development Monday, Barbara Blum, deputy administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told the House Commerce oversight and investigations subcommittee that her agency and the Department of Energy have informally reached agreement on a rule to prohibit price differences between leaded and unleaded gasoline of more than five cents a gallon.

She said the rule, to be issued in June, would be aimed at preventing wholesale "fuel switching" by owners of autos that take unleaded gasoline.

The increasing price gap between regular leaded gasoline and unleaded fuel is drawing motorists into using leaded gas in vehicles requiring unleaded gasoline, she said. This ruins emission-reducing catalytic converters, increasing air pollution, she testified.

MEXICAN INDEPENDENCE
Spain recognized the independence of Mexico in 1863, more than 40 years after Mexicans first defied the rule of the mother country.

Senate Rebuffs China 'Freeze'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate today soundly rejected a proposal that would have frozen President Carter's China policies until China pledged to improve its new relationships with China and Taiwan.

Opponents successfully argued that approval of the proposed amendment by freshmen conservative Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., would have killed the president's decision to recognize the Peking government.

The vote to table, or set aside, the Humphrey amendment was 74 to 21.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said a China bill before the House and Senate already contains adequate protection for the security of Taiwan.

Both the House and Senate were near to completing action on the legislation giving the president authority to go ahead with the new U.S. relationship with Taiwan.

Earlier, the Senate also rejected 54 to 38 another Republican-sponsored proposal which would have given the Senate increased control over Carter's implementation of the new relationships with China and Taiwan.

An amendment by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., would have given the Senate the right to confirm the director of a private institute which is to replace the U.S. embassy on Taiwan and handle future American relations on a non-government basis with the Nationalist Chinese government.

Overall, the legislation would declare that any move by mainland China against Taiwan would be interpreted as a threat to the security of the United States.

The legislation has undergone major revision since Carter sent it to Congress more than two months ago, and now bears a clear congressional imprimatur on the president's China policies.

The measure includes a Taiwan security provision which the president once

Chinese Troops Trying To Hold Border Areas

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Intelligence sources said today Chinese forces were digging in up to a half mile from the former Vietnamese border in an apparent attempt to hold onto some disputed territory.

The sources said Hanoi moved some of its elite army units from Cambodia and southern Vietnam to the battle area and sent a division of troops to northern Laos near the border with China. There were no fresh battle communiques from either side in the 25-day conflict by this evening, but Radio Hanoi said Chinese forces "continued to shell and probe many northern border areas."

Hanoi Radio also said Chinese troops killed 100 children in the town of Bat Xat 155 miles northwest of Hanoi last Feb. 17, the first day of the invasion.

It quoted witnesses as saying the Chinese gathered the children at the marketplace, "then Chinese criminal agents swooped on the children, slashing at their heads and necks with sabres."

"The screams were heard half a mile away," the radio said one little girl was "disembowled and hanged outside the Bassac Restaurant" in town.

China's own propaganda riposte was a 10-minute, black-and-white television film depicting Chinese soldiers helping Vietnamese rice farmers and sadly saying goodbye to their "many friends" made during the invasion.

Radio Hanoi, monitored in Bangkok, reported the apparent Chinese attempts at securing permanent positions and warned this would automatically prolong the fighting, saying Hanoi's regular army "is ready" to do battle.

Hanoi's latest battle communique reported weekend fighting in every one of its six provinces bordering China and said more than 1,700 Chinese troops were killed or wounded in fighting between Friday and Sunday.

Western officials monitoring the battles said Peking's troops were continuing the pullout begun last week but were using heavy shelling and occasional offensive sallies to prevent Hanoi attacks on their rear guard.

Governor Vetoes Ban On Public Smoking

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Smoking may be bad for your health, but making it a crime to smoke at virtually all public meetings is bad public policy, Gov. Joseph Brennan said in using his veto power for the first time.

Under the proposed ban, which the governor vetoed Monday, smokers who kept puffing at public meetings after a warning could have been fined up to $50. Brennan said he may issue an executive order banning smoking at state-level meetings, but felt that imposing the ban on localities was not a good idea. Legislative sponsors said they would try to override the veto.

China 'Freeze'

said was unnecessary. In today's Senate debate, Carter's supporters said giving the Senate authority to confirm the director of the American Institute would give official status to the new U.S. relationship with Taiwan.

"The amendment is inconsistent with normalization (of U.S. ties with China)," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. He said approval of the proposal would "disrupt the delicate set of relationships" the United States will have with Taiwan and Peking.

Church said it would amount to restoring recognition of the Taiwan government.

"We would lift them to official status," Church said. "It could do serious injury."

Church said such a policy would jeopardize U.S. relations with Peking.

On a similar issue Monday, the Senate decided to permit Taiwan to retain ownership of its embassy in Washington.

The New China News Agency said late Monday the returning troops had received a hero's welcome, with Chinese villagers waving flowers and setting off firecrackers along the 7-mile road from the border to the Chinese town of Pingxiang.

The agency said the Peking troops had pulled out of Vietnam at dawn Monday after retreating from Lang Son, the strategic provincial capital 85 miles northeast of Hanoi whose capture by China marked as the high point of the war.

Vietnam said the Chinese had shelled Lang Son, sacked it, blown up the 200-yard bridge in the center of town and killed hundreds of civilians.

Radio Hanoi also continued claims the Chinese were looting as they retreated, saying they stole or killed the cattle and pigs in 53 hamlets they burned down in northwestern Lai Chau province and took 510 tons of newly harvested rice.

The radio reported Vietnam was continuing its military mobilization, exempting only pregnant women and new mothers from two hours a day military training required since shortly after the invasion.

"Every Vietnamese is a soldier," Radio Hanoi said.

Kosygin Expects SALT Approval

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The second U.S.-Soviet SALT agreement will be concluded and signed "quite soon," visiting Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin was quoted as telling Indian leaders here today.

Kosygin made the statement during a 2½-hour meeting with Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai and several members of his Cabinet and top aides, an Indian government spokesman said.

He declined to elaborate on Kosygin's remarks concerning a strategic arms limitation treaty. He told a news conference that Kosygin spoke about eight minutes on the subject.

Earlier, the 75-year-old Soviet premier criticized stepped up U.S. naval activity in the Indian Ocean region, saying: "We by no means approve."

"They (Americans) scatter their warships and aircraft carriers wherever and whenever they want to deal with somebody or restrict or contain somebody," Kosygin told Indian reporters at Bangalore airport in southern India before boarding a plane for New Delhi.

The touring Soviet leader contrasted U.S. naval activity in the Indian Ocean with the policy of the Soviet Union, which he said "is to make the Indian Ocean a zone of peace."

Kosygin cut short by one day his scheduled tour of the Indian provinces to allow more time for direct talks in the capital with Desai, his host. He was believed pressing Desai to join in strong denunciation of the Chinese attack against Vietnam and of U.S. naval activity off southern and western Asia.

Desai's External Affairs Minister, A.B. Vajpayee, voiced "distress" Monday in Parliament over reports that the United States is considering keeping a naval task force in the region stretching from the Indian Ocean to the Arabian sea.

The U.S. carrier Constellation heads a four-ship force that left the Philippines for West Asia last week in what U.S. officials said was an American response to the war in Yemen, a conflict that could threaten Western petroleum supplies.

Reports from the Pentagon said the Soviet Union keeps about 20 warships in the Indian Ocean-Arabian Sea region and maintains a fleet base at Aden, in South Yemen, now accused by U.S. officials of attacking North Yemen with Soviet backing.

Aden is not directly on the Indian Ocean, so Kosygin was able to tell Indian reporters, "We have no bases whatsoever in the Indian Ocean. Any report to the contrary is baseless and slanderous."

India had supported the U.S.-Soviet talks on demilitarizing the Indian Ocean, stalled since the Russians were ousted in 1977 from their bases in Somalia, which does border the Indian Ocean.

Pressed by Indian reporters how Moscow is aiding Vietnam against the invasion by China, Kosygin replied that Moscow stands by its assistance treaty and the question was for Hanoi to answer.

"We will help them in every way," he said, asserting that Vietnam's arms are supplied by the Soviet Union and Hanoi has not requested troops.

Continuing the denunciations of China he has been making on Indian soil, Kosygin described the Chinese as "insolent" in their treatment of Vietnam.

Family Forced To Pitch Tent

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (UPI) — An electrician lured to Central Florida because of its mild climate and booming economy can find no home to rent so he, his wife and their four children have been living in a tent.

"Money is not the problem, say Bob and Jeannie Alexander.

"I never have had this problem anywhere else, and I have never had trouble finding a good home for my children at a price I was willing and able to pay. Look, I'm not poor and I would like a nice home for my family, but I cannot seem to find it," said Alexander, 29.

He landed an electrician's job almost as soon as the Alexanders moved from Maryland a month ago. But real estate agents confirm that his family's plight will be the rule, rather than the exception, in Central Florida in the future.

Numerous construction projects, including Disney World's EPCOT, Orlando's convention center and expansion of the city's airport will flood the area with migratory workers.

"Where are all these workers — maybe 5,000 to 10,000 of them — going to stay?" said Arthur Wilamowski, a member of the Orlando-Winter Park Board of Realtors' executive committee. "People used to build houses to rent them. But now with mortgage rates going up, sometimes the rent that can be charged is less than the mortgage."

Four Nominees Win Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's first four nominees for the 152 new federal judgeships created by Congress last year won unanimous approval of the Senate Judiciary Committee today.

The committee approved by voice vote the nominations of Robert E. Keeton, 59, associate dean of Harvard Law School; John J. McVaugh, 57, a Massachusetts Superior Court judge; David S. Nelson, 55, also a judge of the Massachusetts Superior Court, and Rya Zobel, 46, a Boston lawyer.

If confirmed by the Senate as expected, they will become U.S. District Court judges in Boston.

The committee also approved Carter's nomination of Phyllis Kravitch, 58, of Savannah, Ga., a Georgia Superior Court judge, to be a judge of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals; John G. Penn, 46, of Silver Spring, Md., a District of Columbia Superior Court judge, to be a U.S. District Court judge in Washington, and Abraham Soler, 41, a law professor at Columbia University, to be a U.S. District Court judge in New York.

If confirmed, Miss Kravitch will be one of two women serving as judges of federal appeals courts. The other is Shirley Hufstader of Los Angeles, a member of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Carter has announced he will nominate Patricia Wald, an assistant U.S. attorney general, as a judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington.

The committee also approved the nomination of Gary Louis Butz as U.S. attorney for the Middle District of Florida.

Young Stabbing Victim In Serious Condition

A 19-year-old Lubbock man reported being stabbed three times without provocation Monday afternoon in the 300-block of E. Quinn Street.

Ray M. Gomez, of 2721 1st Place, was in serious condition at West Texas Hospital this morning with stab wounds in his chest and abdomen.

Police have a suspect in the incident.

In an unrelated incident, an 11-year-old girl was stabbed once in the thigh while walking home from Hodges Elementary School Monday afternoon, police reports indicate.

The girl reportedly had seen three boys bullying a friend earlier in the day, and when she made them stop, they told her they would "get even."

She was stabbed once in the thigh by one of the trio. Police said she was treated and released at a hospital.

Her attackers, whose ages ranged from 11 to 12 years, have been referred to the juvenile probation officer.

House burglaries, as usual, were among the crime reports this morning. Beulah G. Pritchard, of 1920 45th St., reported a color television set, watch, radio, clock and stereo worth $910 taken from her home sometime Monday afternoon.

Lillie Mae Henley of 2825 E. 7th St., found Sunday that even padlocks on her doors could not keep out burglars.

Suspects reportedly climbed over a padlocked gate, broke her kitchen window and crawled into the house over the sink.

She said she is missing a fur coat and jewelry worth $800.

The armed robbery of the Taco Bell restaurant at 1308 50th St. Monday night drew not only the usual police investigation, but also Criminal District Attorney John Montford, who said he was there because, "I want to know what's going on."

A bandit, described as very nervous and between 16 and 17 years old, robbed the restaurant of about $230 at about 8:40 p.m.

Assistant manager Gregory Lee Robbins, 22, said he went up to the counter to wait on the young man and the suspect pulled out a small blue steel revolver, saying, "I want as much money as you can give me."

Robbins gave the bandit cash from both the store's registers.

After grabbing the cash, the bandit pointed the pistol at Robbins and told him to walk to the back of the restaurant with his hands up. The bandit then fled the restaurant.

The gunman was described as Mexican-American, short, skinny, with bushy black hair and thick eyebrows. He was said to be wearing blue jeans and a black leather jacket pulled up over his nose.

Sheriff's deputies were seeking a 19-year-old Lubbock County man late Monday in connection with the Monday morning shooting of Michael Wayne Joiner.

Joiner, 22, of Route 9, Lubbock, was in satisfactory condition late Monday in Highland Hospital with a gunshot wound to the right hip he suffered about 10:15 a.m. during an incident at Lubbock Downs.

Joiner told sheriff's deputies that he and the suspect had been talking about some personal problems. The victim said he and the man began arguing when the suspect pulled a pistol and shot him once.

In another incident, sheriff's deputies Monday were investigating the aggravated sexual abuse of a 20-year-old Lubbock County Jail inmate, which reportedly occurred sometime Friday.

Lawyers Seek Divorce Fee

FORT WORTH (AP) — Lawyers for Priscilla Davis — calling her divorce trial with multimillionaire Cullen Davis the most complex they have ever tackled — asked the judge Monday to include a fee of $3.5 million for them in the final agreement.

But District Judge John Barron asked the attorneys, "You know that $3.5 million amounts to $65,000 a month?"

Mrs. Davis' lawyers, Jerry Loftin and Ronald Aultman, who have worked on the case since Mrs. Davis filed for divorce July 30, 1974, rested their case Monday after pleading for their fee.

Loftin, who described himself as "just a poor boy from Poly High School," said he and Aultman are due "approximately $3.5 million" for their work, plus $300,000 more if the case is appealed as high as the Texas Supreme Court.

curled sometime Friday.

The victim told criminal investigator Alton Hobbs that two black males, a 19-year-old and a 25-year-old, had beat him and then raped him in a shower stall.

The victim, who suffered a cut over his eye and bruises over much of his body during the incident, told Hobbs Monday that he had wanted to tell the jailer about the incident earlier but that the two men were watching him.

Police late Monday were looking for a suspect who pulled a pistol on an employee of the Poco Taco restaurant at 120 University Ave. and made off with $44 about 7:25 p.m. Sunday.

Manager Alice Trevino, 25, said a Mexican-American male, between 15 and 17 years old, walked up to the drive-through window, knocked on the glass and told an employee, "This is a stick up."

Reports show when the employee replied, "Is this a joke?" the youth convinced the attendant it wasn't by pulling out a small-caliber pistol. The young bandit, after getting $44 in cash, fled west down a nearby alley.

The gunman reportedly appeared nervous and held his weapon with both hands. The bandit, described as short, had a gray shirt wrapped around his head, revealing only his eyes, nose and mouth. He was clad in white pants and white tennis shoes, according to police.

Hart Attorneys Claim Jury Contaminated

PRYOR, Okla. (UPI) — Attorneys for Gene Leroy Hart, on trial for the sexual slayings of three Girl Scouts, claim prospective jurors have been "contaminated" and the entire panel should be dismissed.

The contamination charges were made after District Judge William J. Whistler excused 18 prospective jurors in a row, many of whom said they already had formed an opinion in the case.

"Some knowledge or information has gotten to them from some source. They've been contaminated," defense attorney Gary Pitchlynn said at the close of Monday's session.

Whistler had hoped to begin testimony Monday in the first-degree murder case against Hart, 35, who was a fugitive from the Mayes County Jail at the time of the slayings. However, only 11 tentative jurors had been chosen by Monday evening.

The girls, Denise Milner, 10; Michele Guse, 9; and Lori Lee Farmer, 8, along with their blood-soaked sleeping bags, were found June 13, 1977, about 50 yards from their Girl Scout camp tent near the northeastern Oklahoma community of Locust Grove. All three had been sexually molested.

Pitchlynn suggested the prospective jurors may have heard or read accounts of other potential jurors being dismissed last week because they said they had formed opinions in the case.

The defense attorneys then filed their latest in a series of requests for a mistrial, but Whistler declined to grant it or dismiss the panel, saying he would study the matter further.

During the seven-hour session Monday, only one of 24 jury candidates was accepted. He ordered the 11 tentative jurors accepted so far, all of whom have been ordered not to discuss the trial or read news reports, to return to court today at 4 p.m.

Earlier Monday, Whistler denied a mistrial motion made by defense attorneys who claimed the prosecution had withheld evidence. Defense attorney Garvin Isaacs said investigative reports the prosecution gave him Saturday should have been turned over earlier. Whistler, however, ruled Monday the documents were irrelevant to the defense case.

FBI Agents Join Search For Suspect In Murders

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — The FBI has joined the search for an Alabama drifter named as a prime suspect in the slayings of six steakhouse employees and three members of an Air Force family from Texas.

A spokesman said the FBI prepared a fugitive warrant Monday for Roger Dale Stafford, 27, of Sheffield, Ala., and five agents were assigned to the case.

Stafford has been charged with first-degree murder in last year's death of Terri M. Horst, 15, and additional charges were being prepared in connection with eight other deaths, authorities said Monday.

Miss Horst was one of six employees of a south Oklahoma City restaurant found shot to death July 16 in a walk-in freezer at the steakhouse. Also slain were Anthony Tew, 17; David Salsman, 15; David Lindsey, 17; Isaac Freeman, 56, and Louis Zacharias, 43.

Stafford also was suspected in the June 22 deaths of Air Force Tech. Sgt. Melvin Lorenz, 38, San Antonio, his wife Linda, 31, and their son Richard, 12. The bodies were found alongside Interstate 35 near Purcell, Okla.

Officers earlier established a link between guns used in the multiple slayings. Police at Corpus Christi Monday questioned a man who matched Stafford's general description and was driving a car with Alabama license plates. Officers later said the man was not Stafford.

Tulsa, Okla., police arrested a man believed to have been associated with Stafford during the period between the two multiple-slayings and placed him in protective custody.

The Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation said its agents had investigated several dozen leads on Stafford's whereabouts.

"We're going to get a lot of these (reports of men resembling Stafford)," said OSBI Agent Arthur Linville.

Supervisor Ted Lemke said the OSBI had 10 agents maintaining surveillance in five states — Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

The state agency and city police announced late Saturday they had solved the cases with the help of a witness and an anonymous telephone call concerning the released composite drawings of suspects.

Police Chief Tom Heggy said Stafford's brother, Harold, 29, also a suspect in the slayings, was killed in a motorcycle crash in Tulsa shortly after the shootings at the Sirloin Steakhouse.

Amarillo Pair Held In Deaths

SAYRE, Okla. (AP) — First-degree murder charges were to be filed today against a man and woman from Amarillo in the execution-style killings of another man and woman from Amarillo, District Attorney Richard Dugger said.

Dugger said the two would be brought here from Amarillo, where they are being held in the city jail.

The district attorney was withholding the names of the Amarillo victims until relatives could make positive identification today.

Authorities "don't have any idea as to the motive" in the killings, Dugger said. He said the man and woman charged and the two people killed "were friends."

They were arrested after the bodies were found by a passing motorist under a concrete culvert along Interstate 40 between Elk City and Sayre at 10:20 a.m. Monday, authorities said.

The slaying victims' hands were bound behind their backs with tape. Their mouths and eyes were also covered with tape. Both victims were barefoot. Authorities believe the slayings occurred late Sunday or early Monday.

STAR WITNESS — South Korean businessman Tongsun Park walks to his car at the Monroe, La., airport Monday after arriving to testify at the bribery trial of former Louisiana congressman Otto Passman. The government contends that Park gave Passman $213,000 in the early 1970s when Passman was a powerful congressman. (AP Laserphoto)

Witness Says Ex-Congressman Unfriendly To Park At First

MONROE, La. (UPI) — A witness in the bribery and tax evasion trial of former Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., today testified the ex-congressman expressed "annoyance and displeasure" with Korean businessman Tongsun Park early in their relationship.

Passman is accused of conspiring to accept $213,000 in bribes from Park and later avoiding income tax on part of the money.

Park, the major figure in the Korean influence-buying scandal that touched a number of congressmen, was scheduled to testify after four minor prosecution witnesses today. He skipped the morning session of the trial.

Michael Adler, who handled Korean affairs for the federal Agency for International Development between 1971 and 1975, was the second witness for the prosecution as the trial entered its second day. He testified Passman was very unfriendly to Park early in their relationship.

Prosecutors want to prove Passman disliked Park at first and began warming up to him only after Park began making campaign contributions.

Passman asked many times during visits to Korea that Park be barred from serving as middle man in sales of Louisiana rice to Korea, Adler said.

"In almost every statement chairman Passman made, he expressed annoyance and displeasure at Mr. Park," Adler said. "He said he wished he didn't have to deal with him. He really didn't want anything to do with him."

Adler did not testify about whether or when the relationship between Park and Passman changed. Passman was annoyed that Park spent lavish amounts of money on congressional campaigns, Adler said.

He quoted Passman as saying Park contributed $50,000 to the gubernatorial campaign by Edwin Edwards, then a Louisiana congressman.

Defense attorneys Monday claimed Park made Passman a scapegoat when the Korean fabricated phony payoff lists to trick his government into believing he was paying off U.S. congressmen while he actually pocketed the money.

It convicted on all nine counts of the two indictments, Passman could face a maximum sentence of 66 years in jail and $110,000 in fines.

In opening statements that took most of the day Monday, defense lawyer Camille Gravel and prosecutor Maurice Silvestre stressed Park's testimony as the key to case. But Gravel urged the nine-man, three-woman jury to question Park's truthfulness.

He said U.S. Customs officials confiscated a list from Park that included the names of congressmen with numbers behind each name, presumably dollar figures. But Gravel said Park claimed he never made the payoffs.

"This is only one of many similar documents that Tongsun Park used to cover up the obligations he had to his superiors, partners and associates in Korea in order to justify his own expenses," Gravel said.

Park told a House subcommittee last year he paid a total of $800,000 to several current and former congressmen, including Passman. He said his total commissions on U.S. rice sales to South Korea was $8.1 million.

Employee Says Security Lax At Facility

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Security was so lax at the Kerr-McGee nuclear facility where Karen Silkwood worked that 40 pounds of missing radioactive plutonium could have even been "thrown over the fence," a former supervisor has testified.

James Smith said work crews searched for the missing substance for weeks, but were unable to find any more than a few grams in the fuel processing plant's piping system.

Smith's testimony came Monday in the second week of testimony in the trial of the $11.5 million damage filed against Kerr-McGee by Miss Silkwood's family. He was scheduled to undergo cross-examination today.

Miss Silkwood, who worked with Smith at the plant, was contaminated with plutonium shortly before her death in a Nov. 13, 1974, traffic accident while she was en route to a meeting with a reporter about alleged plant safety violations.

The lawsuit, which seeks damages for Miss Silkwood's surviving children, alleges Kerr-McGee did not provide sufficient safeguards to protect its employees against the dangers of plutonium.

McGee officials, in a report to the Atomic Energy Commission, admitted they could not account for 40 pounds of plutonium, the substance workers used in manufacturing nuclear reactor fuel rods at the facility near Crescent, Okla.

"I have no idea where the 40 pounds of plutonium is," Smith said Monday. "We spent many thousands of hours cleaning up and flushed the pipes for weeks and weeks and only came up with three grams per hundred liters of solution (pumped through the system)."

The former supervisor, who worked at Kerr-McGee from 1969 to 1975, said there was virtually no security at the plant when he first went to work there.

"It wouldn't have been too difficult to remove the plutonium," he said. "You could have thrown it over the fence."

Smith said an employee "could tell the guard at the back door he was taking production waste out and he (the guard) would not question it."

Yugoslav Railroad Cars Added To Complaint List

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Railroad cars have joined sandless beaches as targets in Yugoslavia's version of grumping communism. The frank, public airing of such complaints makes Yugoslavia different from other Eastern European nations.

At a recent meeting, railroad officials complained that 970 Yugoslav passenger cars were in such a bad shape last year that the lines of other rail-linked countries wouldn't have them in their trains.

Inside the country, Yugoslav railroads failed to come up with 603 passenger cars they were supposed to couple onto transiting international trains.

"Our cars were mostly excluded from international passenger traffic because of faulty installation of electrical heating, because of faulty lighting inside the car, and because brakes were out of order," one official said.

At the same railway meeting, according to official reports, it was disclosed that only 86 foreign passenger cars had faults bad enough to keep them off Yugoslav tracks.

Yugoslavia's economy is built on work-owned companies competing with each other and struggling largely on their own with energy and inflation problems and regional divisions in a country made up of six republics and two autonomous provinces.

Political dissent is sharply discouraged in Yugoslavia, but the economic setup seems to permit more public finger-pointing to go on without hitting sensitive party politics.

The Belgrade daily newspaper Politika told readers recently that one reason coffee had virtually disappeared from shops was that the government had done a bad job of turning coffee-buying over to independent enterprises last year.

Another newspaper article complained that Yugoslavia had to pay back $63,000 to British travellers because the country's tourist industry had promised more sandy beaches and seaview rooms than it could deliver to Britons who came here in 1978.

The level of criticism is tame by Western standards and when the Communist Party itself joins in the process, matters take on a certain seriousness.

The railroad cars took their lumps in a meeting of the Community of Yugoslav Railways, a group linking the handful of railroads that still operate more or less independently in Yugoslavia.

Delegates, as reported in the official press, urged tracking down those responsible and firing them if necessary to put things back in order.

"Do you know what it means to throw out on the border a passenger who holds a properly paid ticket," asked Niola Filipovic, head of the organization.

Tanjug, the state news agency, urged that the railroads, the party, and others to get together and take a long look at where trains were headed in Yugoslavia. "Otherwise," it said, "nothing will remain of the already seriously shaken faith in railroad passenger service."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Weather Service says more than 100 Americans may be killed by tornadoes this year — but apathy is as much to blame for the deaths as the twisters themselves.
The weather service said the United States gets more tornadoes than any other country, but public awareness could reduce the deaths and damages to a minimum.
NWS official Herbert Lieb said he expects some 700 tornadoes during the March-June season, with nearly all states in danger. In 1978, an estimated 788 tornadoes touched 42 states, killing 53 and causing widespread destruction.
"Public apathy ... causes all of us on the federal-state-local level a lot of uneasiness," said Richard Hallgren, head of the National Weather Service. "That apathy could be a killer."
Tornadoes thrive on hot, humid air, Lieb said, and occur most frequently in areas east of the Rocky Mountains. States most vulnerable are Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Florida.

Sycamores End Season On Top

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't unanimous, not everyone believes Indiana State is for real this year — except, of course, those teams who've been unfortunate enough to play them.

The Sycamores, 30-0, retained the No. 1 position in the final Associated Press college basketball poll for the 1978-79 season.

Tuesday, collecting 50 of 54 first-place votes and 1,072 points in balloting by a nationwide committee of sport writers and broadcasters. UCLA was a distant second.

"They've won 30 in a row," Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir said after watching his Gobblers lose to Indiana State 86-69 last Sunday in a second-round NCAA Midwest Regional game. "They're for real."

UCLA, which beat a stubborn Pepperdine 76-71 in a second-round NCAA West Regional game last Sunday, collected two first-place votes and 997 points — 23 more than Michigan State, No. 3 this week. The Spartans, who were ranked fourth last week when they clobbered Southland Conference champion Lamar 95-64 on Sunday in a Midwest Regional game, received the other two first-place votes.

The NCAA playoffs played havoc with the remainder of The AP Top Twenty, as five teams dropped out of the poll and the remainder played a wild game of musical chairs.

Notre Dame, which defeated Tennessee 73-67 in a second-round Midwest Regional game, moved up a notch to No. 4 with 917 points.

Arkansas and up-and-coming DePaul also moved up as North Carolina, No. 3 last week and Duke, No. 6 a week ago, were upset in the NCAA tournament play last week. The Razorbacks, No. 7 last week, jumped to fifth with 779 points, while the Blue Demons, unranked a month ago, climbed from No. 8 to sixth with 732 points.

Louisiana State, with 662 points, edged Syracuse for the No. 7 spot by a scant 5 points.

North Carolina, surprised by Pennsylvania 72-71 last weekend, fell to No. 9 with 594 points while Marquette rounded out the Top 10 with 573 points.

Injury-plagued Duke, the preseason favorite, headed the Second 10 with 484 points. The Blue Devils, who finished second to Kentucky in the NCAA playoffs last year, dropped a 80-78 decision to St. John's but played without starters Kenny Derrard and Bob Bender, both out with injuries.

Hoosiers Top Alcorn State; Aggies Survive Late Scare

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Indiana and Ohio State won twice in the space of about 12 hours, with their second victories coming out of a hat, when they drew byes today into the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

Pairings also were announced in New York for Thursday night's third-round games they will be Old Dominion at Purdue and Alabama at Texas A&M.

The semifinals will be held at Madison Square Garden next Monday night, with Thursday night's winners facing each other and Indiana meeting Ohio State. The final will be in the Garden Wednesday, March 21.

One thing was certain after Monday night's action: The Atlantic Coast Conference is through for the year. A day after highly-ranked North Carolina and Duke were upset in the NCAA tournament, Clemson, Maryland and Virginia were ousted from the NIT.

Thus five of the seven ACC teams entered postseason play, and by midnight Monday, all had been eliminated.

Old Dominion dropped Clemson 61-59 in double overtime. Ohio State topped Maryland 79-72 and Alabama trimmed Virginia 90-88 in NIT action Monday. Meanwhile, Indiana beat Alcorn State 73-69 to hand the mini-power its first loss of the year. Purdue beat Dayton 84-70, and Texas A&M trimmed Nevada-Reno 67-64.

"I'm not going to say the ACC is better or that the Big Ten is better than us," said Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell after the Buckeyes got 23 points from Kelvin Ransey to finish the Terrapins.

"No matter what I say, they're going to continue to say they have the best league in the country and we in the Big Ten will say we're the best," offered Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller.

Ransey, who scored in double figures for the 61st consecutive game, ignored the mild controversy.

Speaking for the players, Ransey said: "We just think mostly that any team in Division I can beat any other team on a given night."

That's the way it turned out Monday.

Alcorn State, which had won 28 straight, fell to Indiana after a staging a late rally. The Hoosiers got 19 points from forward Mike Woodson, but the Braves battled within two points with 20 seconds remaining before two free throws by Indiana's Randy Wittman insured the outcome.

"Despite the loss, we proved our point that we are a good basketball team," said Alcorn Coach Dave Whitney. "We paid our dues this year to receive respect and recognition. We'll be better prepared to come back next year."

They don't have far to go, according to Hoosiers Coach Bobby Knight.

"We had a couple of chances to break it open and they wouldn't let us," said Knight. "You just don't beat a team like that very easily."

Larry Smith scored 18 points for Alcorn's Braves.

Clemson went scoreless for nearly the last 14 minutes of its double overtime loss to Old Dominion. The Tigers took the lead 59-53 with 3:49 left in regulation and controlled the ball for all but two seconds of overtime.

Then Clemson's Larry Nance fouled Bobby Hainthcock, the reserve forward made both his shots, and the Monarchs had their victory.

Tigers Coach Bill Foster, who ordered the slowdown offense which took just one shot in each overtime, was unavailable after the game.

Texas A&M sophomores Vernon Smith and Rynn Wright combined for 20 second-half points to break open a close game for the Aggies. The Wolf Pack trailed 67-57 with a minute left, cut the margin to three with 16 seconds left, but could not score again.

"If the pressure was going to get us, it probably would have by now," said Aggies Coach Shelby Metcalf, who started two juniors, two sophomores and a freshman.

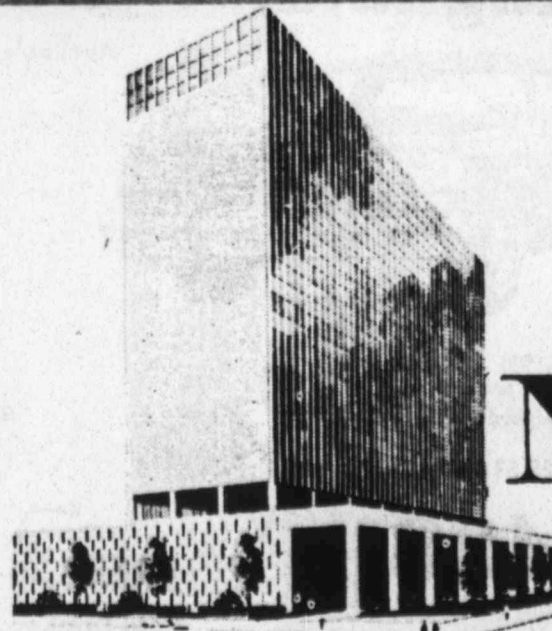

"We might get beat, but it won't be because of the pressure. We've been there."

"We're going to be tough," agreed Smith. "We feel that after the season we've had, we can play with anybody anywhere."

Sixers Leaving Everybody Speechless

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Billy Cunningham stepped outside the visitors' locker room at the Rutgers Athletic Center to face a horde of reporters in the corridor.

Normally, the coach of the Philadelphia 76ers begins this post-game ritual with a three-minute monologue about what his team did — right or wrong, win or lose. Cunningham's words flow faster than the reporters' pens can move across the pages of their notebooks.

But Sunday, after the New Jersey Nets had erased a 9-point deficit in the final 3:52 and scored a pair of baskets in the last nine seconds to win 104-103, handing the Sixers their 12th loss in the last 15 games, it was a different story.

Cunningham looked stunned. His eyes had that far-away glassy glaze that tells you his thoughts are somewhere else. He groped around for some words, any words, then looked down at the floor.

"I'm sorry, gentlemen, I just don't know what to say," he finally offered. After some prodding, he added, "It was strange, no question about that. We had the game won and we let it get away. I don't know what to say."

Recently that has become a familiar feeling for Cunningham, whose team looks anything but ready for the National Basketball Association playoffs which begin in less than a month.

Doug Collins' ankle injury has made obvious a glaring weakness in the Sixers, a team for which anything less than a championship will be considered a disappointment.

Philadelphia, which once boasted an explosive collection of individual scoring talent, now finds itself without enough players who can put the ball in the hole. It's as simple as that.

It all goes back to last summer, when the Sixers' brain trust met to plot the team's future. Philadelphia had been stopped short of the NBA title for the second year despite scorers like Julius Erving, George McGinnis, Collins and Lloyd Free, and owner Fitz Dixon, General Manager Pat Williams and Coach Billy Cunningham agreed that changes had to be made.

McGinnis was dealt to Denver for Bobby Jones, who plays good defense and passes the ball well but is reluctant to shoot. Then Free, the finest long-range bomber in the league, was given away to San Diego for a No. 1 draft choice, which Philadelphia won't get to use until 1984.

The Sixers were sacrificing individual talent in an effort to find that elusive extra called chemistry, which had been so much a part of the championship runs made by Portland and Washington the last two years.

But by leaving themselves with just two proven scorers, Erving and Collins, the Sixers were gambling both would stay healthy throughout the year and be in top shape going into the playoffs. It is a gamble they appear to have lost.

Collins has been out of the lineup since Jan. 20, undergoing ankle surgery in early February. Although he has begun working out, there is no telling when he'll be back with the Sixers or how effective he will be when he gets back.

Erving, meanwhile, is 29 years old; his aching knees and ankles seem to feel much older than that. He can no longer carry a team, the way he did with the Nets in the ABA. He needs help, and without Collins in the lineup there's no one to provide it.

Guards Eric Money and Al Skinner, obtained from New Jersey in an effort to plug the hole left by Collins, are decent ballplayers. But neither is an all-star, the kind of player you want to go to when the game is on the line.

Cunningham has been giving more playing time to musclemen Darryl Dawkins, often using him at the same time as regular center Caldwell Jones, who moves to forward. This lineup provides rebounding strength, but still shows an absence of dependable scorers.

Cunningham was asked following the Nets game if he subscribes to the theory that teams that are going bad will find ways to lose.

"No," he said. Then he paused. "I'm sorry, I'm just not in a talkative mood."

A reporter told Cunningham he appeared stunned.

"I guess so," he replied.

After a couple more brief questions and even briefer answers, Cunningham said, "I just really am not in a good mood to talk about anything," turned and walked away.

Some numbers: Philadelphia is just four games over .500 at 35-31, the fifth best record in the Eastern Conference. New Jersey, which had the worst record in the NBA last season is now only a game and a half behind the Sixers. Washington, the Atlantic Division leader, is 9 1/2 games in front and beyond reach.

The Sixers have lost seven of their last eight games, including five in a row at the end of a 1-7 West Coast road swing.

Henry Bibby is among the most analytical of the 76ers. The veteran guard, who

MVP Bird Tagged 'Great White Hope'

CHICAGO (AP) — Indiana State center Larry Bird, The Associated Press' college basketball Player of the Year, didn't flinch when someone referred to him as pro basketball's "great white hope."

"I'm not a racist," Bird said Tuesday after accepting the Adolph Rupp Trophy, "but there aren't many whites left because there are so many good, great black players. I hope I can hold myself up with them. I know they're waiting for me."

Bird, who has led undefeated Indiana State to the No. 1 ranking in the nation, was a first-round draft choice by the Boston Celtics last June but chose to remain in school.

Bird has until 24 hours before the upcoming National Basketball Association draft to sign with the Celtics or he goes back into the pool and probably will be the No. 1 pick.

"I can't comment on that now," he said. "Right now I have only one thing on my mind (the NCAA tournament). I'm pleased I stayed at Indiana State. I think I can come to terms with Boston. If not and Chicago drafts me, I wouldn't mind and I'd love to play with Artis Gilmore."

"Yes, I think the Boston team is suited to my talents," said Bird. "I don't only score. I can sacrifice myself and get the ball to (Dave) Cowens and (Bob) McAdoo."

Bird thanked his teammates in accepting the Rupp Trophy, which is given annually by the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky in memory of the famed University of Kentucky Coach.

"I know a lot of players out there that are great and I'm happy to be one of them," Bird said at a news conference at which his coach, Bill Hodges, was named College Basketball Coach of the Year.

lost his starting job to rookie Maurice Cheeks in preseason, has been starting in place of Collins and is averaging 30 minutes a game.

He sees some rays of hope shining through the clouds that currently darken Philadelphia's skies.

"We didn't play bad ball on the long road trip and today a lot of good things happened for us," he said after Sunday's loss at New Jersey. "We overplayed our men well, we picked up high, we didn't have trouble with their press, we were moving the ball real well, we got lots of open shots ... a lot of good things happened and hopefully they'll carry over."

"We can't think about Washington, they're way out there. But we have to establish ourselves going into the playoffs. We have to find out what we can do, game by game, and build that way."

They have 16 regular-season games left in which to do it.

Big Springers Outlast Ponies

Big Spring scored in the late innings, then held off Coronado's late bid Monday and escaped with a 12-10 baseball squeaker in the only city baseball contest.

CHS scored once in the seventh inning and had Gene Segrest on third when the game ended with a long fly ball. Segrest had tripled in Robert Ledbetter.

CHS made its biggest noise in the fifth, as it scored 6 times. A triple by Donald Ewing brought in a run, and Segrest, Allen Harp and Kelly Howell had singles in the big inning.

The Mustangs picked up 2 more runs in the sixth, on a single by Segrest, a hit baseman (Jim Wells), and an infield single by Donnie Arterburn.

The Mustangs, now 5-3 for the year, will play at Midland today.

Chaparrals Lose Two

AUSTIN (Special) — The Texas capital is steeped in history, and Monday Lubbock Christian College became a part of that history.

But the Chaparrals, who dropped 14-5 and 14-10 decisions to the University of Texas, would have preferred that the honor had gone elsewhere.

The Lohmors presented coach Cliff Gustafson with victory No. 513 of his 11-year UT career in the opener as they snapped a 5-5 tie with 4 runs in the fifth and 5 runs in the sixth. That allowed Gustafson to pass the legendary Billy Ditch, who compiled 512 wins at Texas from 1911 to 1939.

A 7-run eighth inning rally in the nightcap erased a 10-7 LCC advantage and started Gustafson toward his second 513.

LCC's defense, which had committed only 14 errors in 13 previous games, completely fell apart as the Chaparrals committed six errors in the outfield and were indecisive on fly balls all afternoon.

Also, the Chaps hit into four double plays, including three the first game marking the first time this year they have hit into the twin-killing.

The injury bug also bit again as freshman pitcher Kevin Burke was struck on the left knee by a line drive off the bat of Jim Tjader in the seventh inning of the nightcap and had to be helped from the field.

Ronnie Gardenhire had 6 RBIs in the opener to offset Kenny Toney's solo homer and 2 RBIs by Tim Leslie.

The nightcap was a barnburner throughout as the teams constantly swapped big innings. LCC tallied four times in the fourth on a bases-loaded three base error by centerfielder Burke Burrows and a balk to take a 5-2 lead but the Horns came back with four unearned runs of their own, three on Keith Walker's homer to right.

NFL Safety Move Reported

BOSTON (UPI) — A National Football League committee has recommended strong new safety rules to cut down on the risk of serious injuries such as the one which paralyzed New England Patriots end Darryl Stingley, the Boston Globe reported today.

The Competition Committee, consisting of Don Shula of Miami, Tex Schramm of Dallas, Peter Hadzazy of Cleveland and Paul Brown of Cincinnati, "has decided to legislate most of the big hits out of the game in return for greater safety," the Globe said.

The newspaper said the committee recommended — in a secret report Monday at the NFL meetings in Honolulu — the league outlaw use of the top of the football helmet in tackling and blocking, and ban blocking below the waist on all kickoffs and punt returns.

The Globe also said the committee recommended making every block or tackle that an official determines was "made with the intent to injure," a 15-yard penalty.

The newspaper said the committee voted unanimously for the recommendations. "The kid (Stingley) is paralyzed from the hit and still there wasn't any penalty on the play," said a source close to the committee quoted by the Globe. The recommendations could be voted on by NFL owners as early as Wednesday, the newspaper said.

Local Shooters Compete

Frank Powell of Midland was declared overall champion at Sunday's shoot sponsored by the South Plains Gun Club.

Powell was also the winner in Class A doubles, with a 94 score. Finishing second to him in overall was Lubbock's K.O. Peterson.

The winners:

SINGLES

HANDICAP

Jerry Roach, Lubbock, 96; Randy Hooks, Lubbock, 95.

DOUBLES

Class A — Frank Powell, Midland, 94. Class B — Don Honea, Amarillo, 89. Class C — Tommy Cantrell, Lubbock, 84.

Utah State Coach Quits Unexpectedly

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Utah State University is looking for a new head basketball coach in the wake of Gordon "Dutch" Belnap's unexpected resignation to join a Salt Lake investment firm.

"I'm surprised at Dutch's decision. I'm disappointed because he meant a lot to our program and, as always, parting after a long, outstanding relationship makes one sad," said Ladell Andersen, athletic director, who classified himself as a long-shot for the coaching job.

Belnap's team finished this season 19-11 overall and 9-5 in PCAA competition. He never had a losing season in his six years at USU, in which he compiled a 106-58 record.

He took three teams to post-season playoffs, including the team which lost to Southern California Friday in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

"The decision had to be mine, and mine alone. I wanted to leave on a high note and with excellent feelings toward everyone. I feel I am," Belnap, 46, said Monday.

"I have an excellent opportunity in the financial field that I don't feel I can pass up. I feel lucky to have been head coach at Utah State, but I have decided that coaching is no longer a lifetime occupation," he said. Belnap will become an account executive for Mortgage Guarantee Investment Corp.

Rod Tueller, 41, an assistant coach under Belnap six years, has said he would like to succeed Belnap.

Tueller previously coached Logan High School teams, which placed high in the Class A state tournaments seven of the eight years he coached them.

Belnap often said Tueller was "the brains behind a lot of our pre-game strategy."

Andersen, asked whether he would be interested in returning to coaching, said, "That would be a real longshot. I have never said I was completely through with coaching. ... Right now I just want to talk to a few people and evaluate the whole thing."

Andersen was USU head coach 10 years, compiling a 176-95 record, and coached the Utah Stars of the American Basketball Association before becoming athletic director in 1972.

Area Teams Need Competition

Several area coaches are in need of basketball games next season to pad out their schedules. Interested parties may contact the following coaches.

Mike Cocanougher of Floydada needs varsity boys' and girls' basketball opponents for November 30 and December 21. He can be reached at (806) 983-2340.

Jim Pope of Friona needs varsity and junior varsity boys' opponents from any class for January 15, 1980. Pope's phonenum is (806) 247-3862.

Ken Cleveland of Dimmitt needs a varsity boys' opponent for January 11 and January 15. His number is (806) 647-3105. Any class is acceptable.

Bub Eldredge of McAdoo needs boys' and girls' varsity opponents for November 9, November 13, November 20 and on December 4, 14 and 20.

Ralls officials are needing two girls and two boys teams to fill their basketball tournament bracket for Dec. 6-8. Coaches interested can contact Bob Busby or Mike Motheral at 253-2023.

Plainsmen Play Host

Monterey, fresh from winning the Midland Baseball Tournament, will host Midland-Lee in a nondistrict single game today at Lowrey Field. The game will begin at 4 p.m.

In other action, Dunbar will visit Andrews. Coronado travels to Midland High, the Coronado junior varsity will take on the Estacado varsity and Lubbock High visits Brownfield. All contest are nondistrict affairs and all are slated to start at 4 p.m.

"I'm not sure if the characteristics our team showed in the Midland Tournament will be what we do the rest of the year," said Plainsman coach Bobby Moegle. "I sure hope though it's a sign of things to come."

Monterey will bring a 4-3 mark into the contest. Moegle hopes Kent Potts will be able to keep the Plainsmen on their winning ways.

"Kent is mostly a fastball pitcher," said Moegle. "His record is 2-0."

Potts was named the Most Valuable Player at the Midland tourney and he was also named to the all-tourney team at first base.

Moegle classifies Lee's baseball team as a squad with a some experience that is having a little problem right now scoring runs.

Youth Shows Second Champion

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

Jim Bob Beam, Dawson County 4-H member, led his 1,178-pound crossbred steer to the grand champion title Monday at the 46th annual Southwest Junior Livestock Show at the South Plains Panhandle Fairgrounds.

The winning steer, tops among 92 entries, was champion of the crossbred division.

Beam, an eighth-grader from Lamesa, also exhibited the grand champion steer at the Houston Livestock Show recently and sold that animal for a record $70,000.

Jodie Wheeler, a Bailey County 4-H member, exhibited the reserve grand champion steer. She showed a 1,109-pound crossbred steer that also won the reserve championship in the crossbred division.

In the Angus-Shorthorn class, Scott Robinson of Ackerly had the champion. Robinson is a member of the Sands Future Farmers of America chapter.

Max Riley exhibited the reserve champion in that division. Max is a Hale County 4-H member. Both animals were Angus steers.

Kevin and Kyle Pounds had the champion Hereford. They are members of the Lubbock County 4-H club.

Sandra Mimmis, a Hockley County 4-H member, exhibited the reserve champion Hereford steer.

More than 705 lambs competed for champion honors Monday. Roxanne Airhart, Dawson County 4-H member, showed the champion fine wool while Julie Campbell, also of the Dawson County 4-H club, had the reserve champion fine wool.

In fine wool competition, David

Stuart exhibited the winning lamb. Stuart is a Lubbock County 4-H member. Dawson County 4-H member Elonna Airhart showed the reserve champion fine wool cross.

Winner of the medium wool division was Amy Bailey of the Gaines County 4-H club. Elonna Airhart took the reserve champion honors in this category.

Mark Frampton, Dawson County 4-H member, showed the champion Southdown lamb, while Jeri Clark of the Dimmitt FFA chapter exhibited the reserve champion Southdown.

Barrow judging began Monday night and will continue today. The sale of premium animals is scheduled Wednesday.

Grain Futures
CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean and grain futures declined today on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybean futures fell 4 1/2 to 9 1/2 cents a bushel, partly in reaction to reports that a Brazilian government agency had estimated the soybean crop there at 11.3 to 11.6 million tons, more than the 10 to 11 million tons expected earlier because of drought conditions during January.

Lower silver prices also encouraged general selling in commodities. A report that India had bought 72,000 tons of soybean oil had little effect on prices, analysts said.
