MISD board directs Baressi, his staff to study both cluster plans, develop new one for court

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. and his staff have been charged with doing what no force yet has been able to accomplish.

After discussion Tuesday night on both plans submitted for a change in the current system of desegregation of Midland Independent School District, board members directed Baressi and his staff to study both plans in detail and develop a plan to present in court that will be satisfactory to both sides — those appointed by the board and those appointed by the original intervenors in the 1976 lawsuit that led to forced desegregation in Midland schools.

MISD board members met to discuss both plans in a late Tuesday board meeting. During discussions at the meeting, representatives of both sides were antagonistic and could not identify common ground.

In an emotional presentation to the board, original intervenor Alma Marshall said, "Why don't we just go to court and let the chips fall where they may ... because this is a waste of time and energy."

Board-appointed member Dan Leonard voiced displeasure over repeated derogatory statements aimed at his group.

Board members discussed several concerns with both plans, including the issue of continuity regarding the annual ■ Trustees invite Schonhorst to explain repayment schedule in wake of concerns voiced by group in opposition of issue.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Dallas accountant Mel Schonhorst met with Midland Independent School District's board of trustees late Tuesday and explained the detailed calculations regarding the 25-year payoff of the proposed $110 million bond.

Schonhorst was invited to Midland to explain the debt repayment schedule in the wake of concerns voiced by the group Citizens for Fiscal Responsibility, which has come out in opposition of the bond and has questioned why it was scheduled for a 25-year payout, rather than 20 years as other MISD bonds have been.

Schonhorst, who has worked on hundreds of bond issues for more than 150 school districts, said that in the past, bonds were smaller and the higher interest rates at the time made the 20-year payoff more attractive.

He said, however, many schools throughout the state that passed large bonds for facilities' improvement and expansion are extending payments to 30 years or 35 years, with some being paid out on even longer schedules.

MISD also had been criticized for "back loading," that is, paying only interest in the short term and not paying off on the principal. These statements, however, were made before Tuesday's explanation of the debt repayment schedule, said Richard Bowdon, a member of the opposition group.

The bond is scheduled to be sold in three phases. In the first phase, $50 million is to be sold immediately and the funds stored in interest-bearing accounts

Robert Francis, vice-chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, speaks to the media at a command post set up about eight miles from the ValueJet crash site. Behind Francis is a wreath placed near the L-67 Canal by a former airlines pilot during the night.

ValuJet crash

WASHINGTON — ValuJet was not authorized to carry a cargo load of the oxygen generators that have come under suspicion in last Saturday's deadly crash in the Everglades, the Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday. While the generators are standard equipment on many planes, they are considered hazardous material when carried as cargo, FAA officials said. "They are hazardous materials. ... ValuJet is not an authorized 'hazmat' carrier," said one official. He and the others spoke at a briefing under ground rules in which their names could not be used. Page 10A

Wednesday's high of 103 broke the previous record of 102 that was set in 1988. Temperatures in or near the 100s are exepected to continue through the weekend, according to a forecaster with the National Weather Service. Page 4A

Energy of the future

The energy bill of the future will look a lot different than it does today, says a top natural gas executive. "In the future one customer could be buying his gas from Shell, while his next door neighbor could be buying his from Enron. The entire energy marketing industry is in the process of radical change," says James W. Hinds, Senior Vice President of Distribution Operations for Lone Star Gas. Hinds was in Midland with Senator Teel Bivens to speak to the Republican Senate Club and explain the public policy ramifications of the merger between Lone Star and TU Electric last April. Page 5C

Dole announces he'll resign seat in Senate, stuns GOP colleagues

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an extraordinary, emotional gamble, Bob Dole said Wednesday he was quitting the Senate after 27 years to challenge President Clinton full time, "with nothing to fall back on but the judgment of the people."

Stunning the White House and most of his Republican colleagues, Dole said he had decided that "as the campaign begins in earnest, it is my obligation — to the Senate and to the people of America — to leave behind all the trappings of power, all comfort, all security."

Choking back tears, the 72-year-old Dole said: "The very least a presidential candidate owes America is his full attention, everything he can give, everything he has. And that is what America shall receive from me."

Dole said he would resign his Senate seat and the powerful post of majority leader by June 11. "I will then stand before you without office or authority, a private citizen, a Kansan, an American, just a man," he said.

Republicans welcomed the news that Dole would no longer be distracted by day-to-day Senate duties and a Democratic minority that has thwarted Dole's effort to use his Senate perch to draw contrasts with Clinton.

The White House and Democratic allies rushed to frame Dole's decision as an act of desperation by a candidate trailing Clinton by as much as 20 points in some polls. And they said it was proof

State legislators and officials were treated to dinner Wednesday night at the Conferderate Air Force hangar.

More than 500 people, including local leaders and business people, attended the Midland/Odessa Legislative Appreciation Dinner.

"We are inviting all Odessans and Midlanders to join our state legislators in hosting Texas Senate and House committee chairs and statewide elected officials," Grant Billingsley, co-chairman of the event said. "We are promoting our shared interest and thanking those who assist us."

Representatives from all segments of the business community were there, Judge Jeff Norwood said.

"The local community is here not only to express thanks for all the positive things they've done for the local business community and for West Texas, but to discuss important issues," Norwood said.

Bank's survey finds economic confidence high among businesses in Permian Basin

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

Area businesses continue to grow more confident about economic conditions in the Permian Basin, according to a survey released Wednesday by Norwest Bank Texas, Midland N.A.

The Spring 1996 Midland Business and Economic Pulse Survey, conducted for Norwest by Midland College's Business and Economic Development Center, found that 71 percent of the 434 businesses responding expect business conditions to be better or much better for their companies during the next six months. Only 5 percent believed conditions would be worse or much worse, and 24 percent expected no change in conditions.

Norwest President Wayne Merritt said the results were astounding.

"Releasing the last survey, I didn't think the findings could get any better. I was wrong," he said.

The results compare to the fall 1995 finding that about 63 percent of respondents believed conditions would be better or much better for their companies in the next six months.

The 1996 survey also found that 74 percent of respondents believed conditions for Midland would be better or much better, while 22 per-

Bosnian Serb leader sacks moderate 'premier'

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic sacked a moderate rival favored by the international community, in a defiant challenge Wednesday to attempts to sideline him and try him for war crimes.

The firing magnified the deep rift between Bosnian Serb hard-liners such as Karadzic, who oppose the gradual reintegration of Bosnia, and moderates such as rival Rajko Kasagic, who support compromise and negotiation.

Kasagic was appointed by Karadzic just months ago as "premier" of the self-styled Bosnian Serb state known as Republika Srpska. His more conciliatory approach has made him an increasingly sought-after contact for officials from the United Nations, NATO and other organizations helping to implement the Bosnian peace agreement.

Their strategy is to isolate Karadzic, who as an indicted war crimes suspect cannot stand for Bosnian elections this year even though he has indicated he wants to.

The NATO peace force has refrained from arresting Karadzic and the Bosnian Serb military leader Gen. Ratko Mladic, also indicted for war crimes by an international tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

Peacekeepers have instructions to detain them if they come across them. Western officials say Bosnia's peace agreement has little chance of succeeding until Karadzic and Mladic are removed from power. But other analysts worry that if peacekeepers go after the two men, that would only unite Serbs against the international community.

Kasagic, based in Banja Luka in the northwest, had no immediate reaction to Karadzic's power play. But international officials were enraged.

"We see this is an outrageous coup and putsch against the Dayton peace process," said Colum Murphy, spokesman for Carl Bildt, the top international civilian official in Bosnia.

"We have been working with the forces of moderation and openness and healing, and we are more than distressed to see these forces under assault yet again," he said.

He said Bildt was seeking an early meeting with Kasagic "if we can find him."

Karadzic, the "president" of the Bosnian Serb "state" that is to govern half of Bosnia, said Kasagic was being fired "to protect the constitutional order and prevent further deepening of the crisis in the functioning of the government."

But relations between the two men have unraveled over Kasagic's refusal to obey Karadzic's will.

Kasagic said in a recent interview that Karadzic should not run in elections expected in late summer or early fall because the peace agreement bans suspected war criminals from power.

WEATHER WATCH

Forecast calls for high in 100s

Staff Report

Wednesday's high of 103 broke the previous record of 102 that was set in 1988. Temperatures in or near the 100s are exepected to continue through the weekend, according to a forecaster with the National Weather Service.

A high pressure ridge coupled with the dryness of the area is causing the high temperatures and inhibiting any weather patterns to move in, the forecaster said.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny skies and hot with a high between 100 and 105 and winds from the south to southwest at 10-20 mph.

Tonight's forecast calls for clear skies with a low between 65 and 70.

Friday is expected to be sunny and hot with a high between 100 and 105.

Wednesday's low was 68, compared to the record low of 40, set in 1967.

STATE

Most of Texas was sunny, hot and windy Wednesday with record high temperatures in the west.

Winds were 20 to 30 miles an hour from the south in West Texas and 15 to 25 in the south and east.

Most high temperatures reached the 80s and 90s, with readings over 100 in West Texas. At 3 p.m., readings ranged from 81 degrees at Beaumont-Port Arthur to 105 at Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock.

Records tumbled in Amarillo, Lubbock and Midland.

Amarillo's 101 degrees eclipsed the 1963 record of 98 degrees; Lubbock's 103 shattered the 1978 record of 99 degrees; and Midland's 103 degrees was one degree warmer than the record for the date set in 1988.

The North Texas forecast is for today to be partly cloudy and mostly clear in the west. Highs will be 87 to 96. Partly cloudy tonight with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the west. Lows will be 68 to 71.

South Texas is to be mostly cloudy and windy with highs in the 80s and 90s. Lows in the 70s.

Forecasters said West Texas will have mostly sunny, hot days and clear nights through Friday. Highs will range from the upper 80s in the mountains to near 110 in the Big Bend lowlands. Lows mainly in the 60s.

NATION

Thunderstorms poured locally heavy rain on the Ohio Valley on Wednesday, with more storms scattered across the upper Midwest. Temperatures hit record highs aboye 100 in Texas.

An estimated 1 to 3 inches of rain fell during the morning over parts of southeastern Indiana, southwestern Ohio and northern Kentucky, a region already saturated by heavy rain last week.

Flood warnings were posted in parts of Indiana and Ohio, and flash flood watches were issued in several counties in Kentucky.

By afternoon, the heaviest rainfall in the Ohio Valley had moved into southern Ohio and northeastern Kentucky.

Those storms were expected to move into the Northeast overnight and today.

Strong thunderstorms spread across sections of the northern Plains during the morning, then weakened as they moved across Minnesota in the afternoon.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered across central and northern Iowa, mostly with light rain.

In the West, a strong low-pressure system sitting off the Pacific Northwest spread rain into Oregon and northern California, with showers and a few thunderstorms extending eastward into the Idaho Panhandle and western Montana.

Other light showers dampened parts of southern Idaho and extreme northeastern Nevada.

Elsewhere, showers and a few thunderstorms moved into eastern sections of the Carolinas during the afternoon with mostly light rain.

Other showers extended across parts of northern Florida and a few thunderstorms developed over the state's southern tip.

Hot air settled across western Texas, heating Lubbock to an early afternoon record high of 103 and tying the record of 102 at Midland, the National Weather Service said. In the Texas Panhandle, Amarillo hit 100, the city's earliest century-reading on record.

Elsewhere around the Lower 48 states, Wednesday's lowest reading was 22 at Clayton, Maine. The lowest wind chill was 22 at Rutland, Vt.

2-year-old suffocates when his drawstring gets caught in slide

BOSTON (NYT) — A 2 1/2-year-old boy playing with friends from his day-care center suffocated at a playground Wednesday when the drawstring on the collar of his windbreaker got caught on the slide platform and strangled him as he tried to go down, police said.

Tre'Vaughn Matthews was in cardiac arrest by the time adults freed him from the slide at Almont Parkin the city's Mattapan section, police said. Two adult supervisors and a team of paramedics tried to revive him, but he never regained consciousness and was pronounced dead at Boston City Hospital.

The boy's death, which visibly shook many parents who take their children to the city-owned playground, was similar to a small but troubling number of cases nationwide involving drawstrings and playground equipment over the past decade, the US Consumer Product Safety Commission said.

The accident raised questions about the safety of the equipment in the playground, slated to be replaced as early as this fall, and about the supervision offered by family day-care providers.

Matthews attended a day-care center run by Tonita Davis out of her house, abutting the park. She was one of four adults watching 12 to 14 children in the playground when the accident occurred at about 11 a.m., said Lt. Robert E. O'Toole, Boston Police Department spokesman.

O'Toole said police were still trying to determine where the adults were in relation to the children at the time of the tragedy. Davis' daughter, Lauren Williams, 27, said her mother was talking to other adults on nearby benches when Matthews became entangled on the slide.

Police could not say for sure how the string, which they said was knotted at the end, became caught, but they believed it fell into a hole built into the top of the slide and got stuck. Officials faulted the slide's design, not disrepair. The slide's platform contains small holes to allow rain to drain.

• MISD's student enrollment has increased from 17,000 to over 23,000 in the last 10 years, and program offerings have expanded. MISD must be able to address not only the age and size of its physical facilities, but also the complexity of adapting the older buildings to today's sophisticated instructional program needs.

BOND: Accountant explains repayment of debt

until being spent to upgrade and repair facilities. This $50 million would be the only part of the bond sold for two years and would be accompanied by an immediate 13-cent increase in property taxes.

About $30 million in additional bonds are scheduled to be sold in 1998. There should not be an increase in taxes at that time because retiring debt service on old bonds will cancel out the need for more revenue for the new debt service, MISD officials have said.

The remaining $30 million in bonds will be sold in the 1999-2000 school year, with an additional seven-cent tax increase at that time, school officials have said.

Schonhorst presented figures showing that the debt would not be back loaded; rather, in the first two years, the principal on the $50 million would be paid off at a rate of about $1.4 million in 1997 and $2.08 million in 1998.

In two years, when $30 million is added to the debt, repayment on the principal itself would be only $555,000 in 1998, but would jump to $3.8 million in 2000.

In the year 2001 and beyond, with all of the $110 million in bonds sold, debt repayment on the principal would be from $2 million to $2.8 million until 2006, when payment on the principal would jump to more than $3 million and would continue to grow by more than $1 million every five years as interest is paid off.

Payments on new debt, including the interest, would be $4.7 million in 1997, $4.9 million in 1998, $5.6 million in 1999 and $8.5 million in 2000.

Total debt service, including existing debt, was $4.46 million for 1996. But if the bond passes, this annual figure would jump to $9.2 million in 1997. In 1998 and '99 it would be $9.3 million and $9.5 million respectively, staying about the same because some of the existing debt would retire as $30 million in additional bonds were sold.

In 2000, the total debt service on all bond debt would be more than $12 million each year for the next 11 years until all pre-existing debt is retired and total annual debt repayment drops to $8.6 million in 2012.

The calculations were made with very conservative estimates of future interest rates and property values, Schonhorst said.

"We're comfortable that the tax rates quoted will be maximum tax rates," Schonhorst told board members.

"I don't feel at all uncomfortable that you will be able to live within this commitment," he said.

student registration in the board-appointed plan. Original intervenor Dr. Viola Coleman pointed out that they spent more time discussing this plan than the one submitted by the intervenors.

"The audience read it as an annual fruit basket turnover, and there would not be any continuity," Baressi said, speaking of a recent community meeting to discuss both plans.

Baressi said he had no plans and would start from scratch.

"When the majority of the board voted for us not to do anything — we didn't do anything. I have no backup plan that I can take off the shelf and dust off."

Baressi and his staff will review the matter for several weeks before returning to the board.

"I am personally committed to desegregation," Baressi said. "I would like for that to be as voluntary as possible," he added.

DOLE: Resignation announcement stuns GOP, Clinton that Dole's initial strategy of using the Senate as a campaign platform had failed miserably.

"I guess he found the choice was between campaigning and governing and he chose campaigning," said Clinton deputy campaign manager Ann Lewis.

Clinton called his political team to the White House when word of Dole's plans leaked. In an interview with USA Today, Clinton said he told his troops: "We just have to stay on track."

Yet for the first time in months, there was an obvious sense of nervousness and uncertainty in the Clinton camp. Several White House advisers privately conceded Dole was likely to benefit, at least in the short term.

If Dole begins to narrow Clinton's lead, White House aides said, it could force the president to adopt a busier travel schedule than now planned.

Dole's decision will close the curtain on a remarkable congressional career dating back to 1961, when he began the first of four House terms. Dole was elected to the Senate in 1968 and is the longest-serving Senate Republican leader in history, holding that post since 1984.

In that job, he served as a loyal lieutenant to GOP Presidents Reagan and Bush — even when he disagreed with them — and has been a constant thorn in Clinton's side since the Democrat took office three years ago.

Kansas GOP Gov. Bill Graves will appoint a successor; freshman GOP Rep. Sam Brownback immediately said he was interested.

Dole's stepping down immediately threw the Republican caucus into turmoil over a successor. Majority Whip Trent Lott was considered the favorite but faced a challenge from his senior Mississippi colleague, Sen. Thad Cochran, one of the Dole loyalists Lott leapfrogged when he won the the whip post in 1995.

Senators in both parties voiced hope that Dole's departure would reduce partisan tensions in the Senate, where virtually every piece of legislation has been clouded by presidential politics. Indeed, Clinton sent Dole a note asking for help passing bipartisan health-care reform legislation.

Yet there was no immediate indication Dole's departure alone would end the logjam over GOP proposals to cut gas taxes or Democratic efforts to raise the minimum wage. Clinton's note also mentioned the budget and welfare reform, two issues ensnarled in presidential politics.

If nothing else, strategists in both parties suggested Dole's move could help him shake off the negative public view of House Speaker Newt Gingrich, though not all who raised this point cast it in a favorable light.

"Dole's association with Gingrich and the House Republicans was apparently so harmful to the majority leader's presidential efforts that he felt compelled to jump off the ship and battle the high seas on his own," said Texas Rep. Martin Frost, head of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

But on a day carefully orchestrated to boost GOP morale, Dole invited Gingrich and his House leadership team to stand at his side as he made his announcement at the Hart Senate office building, with the giant Capitol dome looming out the window over Dole's shoulder.

"My time to leave this office has come," Dole said. "I will seek the presidency with nothing to fall back on but the judgment of the people, and nowhere to go but the White House or home."

Dole acknowledged his deficit in the polls but, recalling his hard-scrabble upbringing and recovery from grave World War II wounds, said: "I have absolute confidence in the victory that to some may seem so unattainable."

Aides said other campaign initiatives would soon follow, including a fresh round of Republican Party television ads and a new Dole economic plan certain to include a call for tax cuts.

Before his announcement, Dole delivered the news privately to his Senate staff, sobbing as he thanked them for their support, and later to House and Senate GOP colleagues.

He also made a round of phone calls, speaking to Clinton, former Presidents Ford and Bush, Nancy Reagan and his predecessor as Senate GOP leader, former Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker. Dole also spoke by phone with Texas billionaire Ross Perot, who hasn't ruled out running for president again under the banner of his new Reform Party.

In GOP circles, there was hope Dole's decision would help him shake spring funk that has some Republicans worried the GOP might not only lose the White House but its congressional majorities as well.

"This is good news for Senator Dole, good news for the Republican Party and good news for the country," said Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour. Barbour and two senior campaign aides said Dole informed them two weeks ago he had decided that resigning was his best hope of rejuvenating the campaign.

"Frankly, it was a bolder move than I would have counseled," said Gingrich.

The new effort begins today, with a quick trip to Chicago for a campaign rally. Dole also is campaigning in North Carolina and Florida this weekend, and aides were working to fill his June schedule.

Democrats questioned how Dole would pay for all his travel, noting that his campaign is bumping up against the primary spending limit. But Barbour said most of the trips would include GOP fundraisers, allowing the party to pick up most of the tab.

SURVEY: Most businesses feel good about future

cent saw no change, and only 4 percent expected conditions to worsen.

Asked about the Texas economy, 68 percent expect conditions to be better or much better, while 28 percent expect no change, and 4 percent see conditions worsening.

There is less optimism about the national economy, according to survey results. Only 37 percent of those responding expect conditions to improve, while 48 percent see no change, and 15 percent expect conditions to worsen or get much worse.

Merritt said that 58 percent of the responding businesses expect profits to improve, and 32 percent plan to increase capital spending and investment. Twenty-four percent expect to hire additional employees.

"This is a terrific indicator of optimism in this city," Merritt said. "If profits are up, you expect businesses to spend more on people, equipment and physical plants."

He attributed the heightened optimism to an increase in the number of independent businesses.

"A lot of these people once worked for major oil companies and are now going out on their own. A number of them remain in the oil and gas industry; many others have gone into other fields."

Another factor is Midland's retail boom that has helped expand the local economic base.

"I know there has been skepticism, especially on the parts of those criticizing the new air terminal, but if you look up and down the loop, there are real buildings with real people working and shopping in them," Merritt said.

The results of the survey can and will be used in different ways, he said. The Midland Chamber of Commerce, for instance, can use it in its efforts to recruit new businesses to Midland. The results can demonstrate a willingness to invest by local businesses, he said.

Would-be entrepreneurs can draw encouragement from the results. And local businesses can use the results in every-day decisions.

"Every day, businesses are having to decide to spend money or to hire people. As businesses look at these results, it becomes easier to make investments if they think other businesses are doing the same thing."

THANKS: Cities treat state legislators, officials to dinner

(From 1A)

the area's importance to the state and to the country and commended the work of MOTRAN and the oil and gas industry.

"The area is important, especially the oil and gas industry," Charles Matthews, railroad commissioner, said.

The arrangement of the dinner was easy and advantageous for local leaders.

"It was very easy to plan. Working with Midland has become old hat and takes minimal effort," Mike George, president of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce said.

Bringing the two cities together gives the area a louder voice when it comes to drafting state laws, George said.

"When the two cities get together, that's over 240,000 people, which has a tremedous effect when we go to Austin. When we ban together, it's difficult for legislators to ignore us."

Because of the combined work of Midland and Odessa and the state Legislature, Texas has created more jobs than all other states combined, Sen. John T. Monford said.

"The Texas Legislature is ranked No. 1 for business activity and expansion," Monford said.

Russian forces claim successful attack on rebel depot in Chechnya

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Russian forces destroyed a large rebel ammunition depot in southern Chechnya on Wednesday, killing 25 separatist fighters in the air and artillery attack, a commander said.

Vladimir Shamanov, commander of Defense Ministry units in Chechnya, said the depot belonged to a top rebel commander who a day earlier had threatened to kill President Boris Yeltsin if he came to the republic.

Shamanov's claims, reported by the Interfax news agency, could not be independently confirmed.

He also told Interfax that food supplies and uniforms made in the United States and France were seized outside the village of Kharsenoi. Shamanov gave no explanation.

Federal troops shelled rebel positions in Bamut and Stary Achkoi in the southwest on Wednesday, Interfax said.

Chechen rebels also continued their stinging raids on Russian troops on Wednesday. Rebels shelled Russian forces 21 times since Tuesday, including 11 times in the capital, military officials said.

Gunmen killed three Russian servicemen at a market in the capital Grozny on Wednesday, Interfax said. It was not clear whether the unidentified gunmen were rebels.

Yeltsin, running for re-election on June 16, has been under intense pressure to end the 17-month-old war that has killed more than 30,000 people, most of them civilians.

The president has made a firm decision to visit Chechnya despite strong opposition from aides who believe it would be too dangerous, said Sergei Filatov, a top campaign staff member.

"I believe there are no security guarantees or political conditions for the president's visit in Chechnya," Russia's interior minister, Anatoly Kulikov, told the Interfax news agency.

Kulikov said the visit should be postponed until the "situation in Chechnya changes for the better."

Alexander Lebed, a retired general who is running for president, also advised Yeltsin not to visit the mostly Muslim republic. Rebels would likely succeed in killing him and it "would give Shamil Basayev a chance to become a national hero of the whole Muslim world for the rest of his life," Lebed told a news conference in Novosibirsk on Wednesday.

Basayev, who has the reputation of being Chechnya's most daring guerrilla, said Tuesday that Yeltsin's visit would be a "spit in the face of our people."

"We will try to meet him well, so that he never leaves this place," he said.

Refugee ship captain says, 'I have gone through hell'

TAKORADI, Ghana (AP) — He spent 10 days roaming the West African coast, trying to find a port for his rusty freighter and refuge for more than 1,500 Liberians he packed on board against his better judgment.

The Nigerian captain said it wasn't his fault if the trip was miserable, because African peacekeepers pressured him to help carry the flood of people desperate to get out of the Liberian capital Monrovia.

"I have gone through hell," said Roland Pudie. "The most uncomfortable and worst experience of the decade."

That experience aboard what one U.N. official dubbed the "voyage of the damned" came to an end Tuesday, when Ghana finally bowed to international pressure to let the refugees onto its shores.

On Wednesday, thousands more Liberians were jamming the port of Monrovia, though most appeared to be demanding food at the seaside warehouses of the U.N. World Food Program. Food prices have skyrocketed, with staples such as rice and oil now three times more expensive than 10 days ago.

Peter Sebok, the owner of a shipping company at the port, said sea captains were not taking any more refugees from Liberia, torn by 6 1/2 years of civil war that has killed about 150,000 people.

Renewed fighting between rival factions has destroyed the capital over the past five weeks, including fierce clashes Tuesday with rocket-propelled grenades and mortars around the diplomatic district.

Wednesday was quieter in Monrovia, with sporadic gunfire and isolated street battles with combatants using small arms in and around the Mamba Point district, which includes the U.S. Embassy.

In Takoradi, a port in western Ghana, the 1,849 refugees that packed the Bulk Challenge for its 10-day sojourn made ready for new lives.

An earlier report of 3,000 to 4,000 refugees crammed on the cargo ship proved to be untrue. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said those on board included 1,559 Liberians, 133 Ghanaians, 131 Nigerians and 26 Nigerian peacekeepers.

The World Food Program said it had moved some 10 tons of food from Ghana's capital Accra to Takoradi, enough to feed the refugees for four months.

On arrival, the refugees told harrowing tales of crewmen who sold donated aid food packets at inflated prices to near-starving people trapped on board. Dysentery and pneumonia hit many of the refugees; at least two of them died.

But both Pudie and Tom Ipaye, the agent on board who chartered the ship, said Tuesday night that the reports were exaggerated.

Ipaye said the ship was originally destined to pick up cargo from Freetown, the capital of neighboring Sierra Leone.

"I had no business to convey human beings ... as you can see, it is a cargo ship," Ipaye said.

Russian political victory formula: Third Force

By Candice Hughes
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The formula for victory in Russia's political math depends on the Third Force, a magical sum both elusive and potent. Many believe it could decide Boris Yeltsin's fate.

If the force is with him, Yeltsin says he'll prevail in his quest for a second term. Without, he could fall to Communist challenger Gennady Zyuganov.

Says sociologist Yevgeny Andrushchenko: "What happens in this election largely depends on the behavior of the Third Force."

The Third Force refers to a troika of candidates in the June 16 presidential election: Grigory Yavlinsky, the arrogant, ambitious young reformer; Svyatoslav Fyodorov, the millionaire surgeon-businessman; and Alexander Lebed, the gravel-voiced ex-general and super-patriot.

The three candidates have different — and sometimes competing — philosophies and attract different supporters. So far, their efforts to establish a formal alliance have failed.

Yet, in a tight race between Yeltsin and Zyuganov, they could hold the margin of victory. Whichever way the Third Forcers throw their support, many say, so goes the presidency. And as potential kingmakers, they're the hottest dates in town.

All three have been summoned to the Kremlin to meet with the president. Journalists hang on their every word. They are so popular, in fact, that the election's odd man out, former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said he'd like to join the Third Force.

The nickname goes back to earlier in the campaign, when Yavlinsky, Lebed and Fyodorov discussed fielding a joint candidate who would give pro-democracy, pro-reform voters an alternative to Yeltsin. The idea foundered on ego: None of them want to drop out of the race.

Yeltsin was quick to take advantage of their warring ambitions, ardently courting all three in a strategy clearly designed to divide and conquer. Their response has been coy.

Rumors of horse trading have dominated the headlines this week: Did Yeltsin offer Lebed the Defense Ministry? Has he tempted Yavlinsky with the powers of prime minister? What might lure the fiercely independent Fyodorov?

Either emboldened by back-room deals or goaded by his overwhelming desire for such key endorsements, Yeltsin has several times claimed he had Yavlinsky and Lebed in the bag. Both consistently deny it; all three say they've made no deals.

"No one tried to buy me," Fyodorov told reporters Wednesday after meeting with Yeltsin.

Political analysts and pollsters differ on the strength of the Third Force. Some put it at about 20 percent of the electorate, others as high as 30 to 35 percent of the vote.

They also warn that Third Force supporters won't vote in a bloc, even if the three leaders urge them to. "Neither Yavlinsky nor Lebed nor Fyodorov can dictate to his voters," said Grigory Pashkov, head of the Mnenie polling agency.

Yuri Levada, head of the VTSIOM polling organization, agreed, saying that the segment of the Third Force vote Yeltsin might get could boost the president's showing by about 10 percent.

Mnenie analyst Igor Klyamkin says Yavlinsky's voters are liberals, Lebed's tend to be nationalists, and Fyodorov's are socialists or social democrats.

Shell draws heat at annual meeting

LONDON (AP) — Demonstraters beat African drums and waved banners reading "Get the Shell out of Nigeria" to protest oil exploration in the West African nation during a meeting Wednesday of Royal Dutch Shell shareholders.

The protesters included ethnic Ogonis, who have long fought Shell on their tribal lands in Nigeria, and British labor unionists.

The Anglo-Dutch oil giant is enjoying higher oil prices, but its image has been hurt by the dispute over its operations in Nigeria, where it is the biggest foreign oil operator. Critics argue that Shell does not enforce the same environmental standards in Nigeria as in the United States and Europe.

"Why apply different standards to the Ogoni people?" said one protester, Barry Kumbe.

The Ogonis managed to effectively kicked Shell off their tribal lands in southeastern Nigeria three years ago by sabotaging oil wells and attacking Shell workers.

The shareholders' meeting was the oil giant's first since the Nigerian military regime hanged playwright Ken Saro-Wiwa and eight other Ogoni activists.

Bangladesh tornado survivors marvel over their narrow brush with death

CHATDAH, Bangladesh (AP) — The 2-year-old girl sat on her dead mother's lap, a miracle of life amid the wreckage of her village and her family.

Seven dead relatives lay nearby, many of their bodies torn apart by tree limbs and shreds of tin roof that were turned into lethal projectiles Monday by the worst tornado in decades.

"It all depends on Allah," said Ershad Ali Khan, the village school teacher who found the tiny survivor amid the devastation. "If he wants to keep someone alive, he finds the way."

Across the plains of northern Bangladesh, where the tornado leveled 80 villages and killed at least 508 people, many of the survivors fell to their knees Wednesday and thanked Allah for the miracles that narrowly saved them while so many perished.

More than 500 people remained missing Wednesday in this predominantly Muslim nation bordering India and 33,000 were injured by the twister, which packed 125-mph winds that toppled buildings and wiped away entire villages in 30 minutes of devastation.

Under the flattened public school in the nearby village of Mirikpur, villagers used their bare hands and shovels to dig out 85 bodies of children and migrant workers who had taken shelter there.

But despite the dozens buried under the wreckage of the single-story, 12-classroom building, villagers marveled Wednesday at how many of its 500 students had escaped.

The school normally closes at 5 p.m., but on Monday students were dismissed early because many teachers had to travel to another school to oversee standardized tests.

The tornado struck the area just before 5 p.m.

Within moments, children playing nearby and farmers working in rice fields ran for shelter to the school — the only public building in the village of tin-roofed wooden houses. Minutes later, the tornado struck and destroyed it.

"Instead of protecting them, the building became a death trap," said Haji Motaleb, a village elder.

"It's a big tragedy. We feel terrible," said Madhav Chandra Sannyal, whose house was located next to the school. "But we just can't believe how lucky so many of the students were."

All 14 members of Sannyal's family were injured, including seven hospitalized with critical head injuries. But he thanked Allah that they had survived, along with the family's three goats.

"When I saw the storm coming, I let my goats free and they ran out of danger," said Sannyal, who broke a wrist in the storm.

Not far away, Abdul Alim was harvesting rice on his small field when he saw the spiraling twister approaching.

"I heard the roar of winds and saw something like a fireball on the northwestern side of the sky," he said. "I jumped into an irrigation canal and escaped the demon's path."

Moments later, he said, hailstones twice the size of Ping-Pong balls struck the entire area.

On Wednesday, the government rushed army relief and medical teams to the disaster area.

Thousands of injured were refused treatment at local hospitals because of an acute shortage of blood, bandages and medicine. So hundreds of trucks were used to carry the injured to hospitals in other towns, said government officials.

Many students stopped commuters along nearby highways to collect donations. Other survivors held mass prayers in fields.

Tornadoes are common in the tropical delta of Bangladesh during April to June, leading up to the annual monsoon in July.

In 1989, a tornado in northwestern Bangladesh killed about 500 people. But they usually kill far fewer people than the floods and cyclones — or hurricanes — that often strike Bangladesh after crashing ashore from the Bay of Bengal.

At least 130,000 people died when a cyclone pounded the southern coast in 1991, causing more than $2 billion worth of damage.

Witness testifies of freelance thugs at Serb-run prison

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — A Bosnian Muslim testified Wednesday that freelance Serb thugs took sadistic pleasure in brutalizing prisoners, carving a cross into the forehead of one Muslim inmate.

Isak Gasi was held at Luka prison camp after rebel Serbs took the nearby northeastern Bosnia town of Brcko in spring 1992. He was the fourth witness to testify in the war crimes trial of Bosnian Serb Dusan Tadic.

Tadic, a 40-year-old former bar owner accused of murdering and torturing non-Serbs in northwest Bosnia in 1992, is not charged with crimes at Brcko or Luka.

But for his alleged offenses to be classified as crimes against humanity, prosecutors who are trying Tadic must prove that similar offenses were being committed across Bosnia at the same time.

The three-judge panel in the juryless trial is led by Judge Gabrielle Kirk McDonald of Texas.

Gasi's testimony appeared aimed at proving that thugs drawn from Serb paramilitary groups were brought into Serb-run camps to murder and torture inmates.

He said that paramilitary troops led by Zeljko Raznatovic, better known as Arkan, were among the Serbs who visited Luka. Arkan's units have been blamed for some of the worst atrocities in Croatia and Bosnia.

One man in a camouflaged uniform "grabbed a man by the neck and incised a cross in his forehead with a knife," Gasi said.

Gasi, a former international rowing competitor, twirled a pen nervously in his right hand as he described seeing Serbs carrying out summary executions in the streets of Brcko.

On his first day at Luka, Gasi said he was beaten and had a pistol forced into his mouth. A paramilitary soldier pulled the trigger, but the gun was not loaded.

Helicopters rescue American, Aussie on Mount Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — An American and an Australian returned to Katmandu by helicopter on Wednesday as other climbers who were caught by a sudden blizzard on Mount Everest struggled to make their way down.

Army helicopters rescued Charlotte Fox of Aspen, Colo., and Michael Groom of Australia in what were the last evacuations of the day. The two left Katmandu's airport with representatives from their embassies without commenting publicly.

Eight climbers died on the mountain after a fierce storm struck the 29,028-foot-high summit on Friday, freezing experienced alpinists and newcomers alike with waist-high snow and 70-mph winds.

The dead included a three-man team from India, and an Indian mountaineering expert claimed Wednesday that two of them might have survived had a Japanese team stopped its climb to save them.

The Japanese base camp said its climbers did not see any Indians on the way up.

Bill Collyns Day — a fitting tribute

Today marks the occasion for recognition of one of this city's most dedicated and tireless civic boosters — William H. "Bill" Collyns.

In setting the observance, a proclamation signed by Mayor Bobby Burns stated, "Bill Collyns has played a major role throughout his professional careers, both as a business advocate and a newspaper editor, in the development of his beloved 'Tall City,' an interest he continues to exhibit even to this day."

Truer words were never written in an official mayoral proclamation.

While family and church always were major factors in Bill Collyns' life, his dedication to Midland was equally strong.

As a Chamber of Commerce manager before being named editor of The Reporter-Telegram and during the long years in which he headed the editorial and news side of the newspaper, Collyns' loyalty to Midland never wavered. On the contrary, it went far beyond the city's borders. Midland County and its people and welfare were equally important. So was West Texas. In fact, his service to the entire region has been recognized through the years with a number of honors and awards bestowed by prestigious organizations.

Here at home, his lifetime of service spanned too many groups to be listed here although they are detailed, in part, in the proclamation itself. But it can honestly be said that there probably was no effort during the past 50 to 60 years directed at Midland's welfare in which Bill Collyns did not at least participate and, more often than not, play a major role.

Elsewhere in this edition is a story quoting many of Collyns' closest and longest associates and their perceptions of this outstanding civic booster.

We join them and many, many other Midlanders and West Texans in saluting the honoree today on Bill Collyns Day for his sixty years of continuous community service.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, May 16, the 137th day of 1996. There are 229 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 16, 1868, the U.S. Senate failed by one vote to convict President Andrew Johnson as it took its first ballot on one of 11 articles of impeachment against him.

On this date:

In 1763, the English lexicographer, author and wit Samuel Johnson first met his future biographer, James Boswell.

In 1770, Marie Antoinette, age 14, married the future King Louis XVI of France, who was 15.

In 1866, Congress authorized minting of the 5-cent piece.

In 1920, Joan of Arc was canonized in Rome.

In 1929, the first Academy Awards were presented during a banquet at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The movie "Wings" won best production while Emil Jannings and Janet Gaynor were named best actor and best actress.

In 1946, 50 years ago, the musical "Annie Get Your Gun," featuring songs by Irving Berlin and starring Ethel Merman, opened on Broadway.

In 1948, the body of CBS News correspondent George Polk was found in Solonika Bay in Greece, a week after he'd disappeared.

GEORGE WILL

Paternalism underlies Rhode Island ruling

WASHINGTON — Perhaps in 1956 Rhode Island, which began as an outpost of Protestants too turbulent to get along in other colonies, was still smarting from Cotton Mather calling it "the sewer of New England." When in 1956 the state banned price advertising of alcoholic beverages, perhaps it really was worried, as a nanny should be, about the morals and livers of Rhode Islanders. Only cynics, meaning students of government and human nature, suspect that the ban was imposed at the behest of owners of small liquor stores, to protect them from the competition of larger stores that can afford to spend more on advertising.

Will

In any case, on Monday the Supreme Court unanimously struck the 40-year-old fetters from Rhode Island's liquor dealers, holding that the ban on price advertising violates the First Amendment. This pleases conservatives who believe that granting less protection to commercial speech than to political or artistic speech is part of a dangerous derogation of economic liberty and property rights. But the decision should disturb conservatives who believe judges should strive to be deferential to legislative judgments, even some dotty ones.

This case began when a liquor store ran a newspaper advertisement that did not state the prices of beverages but did place the word "WOW" next to pictures of vodka and rum bottles. Reasoning that this implied bargain prices, the state fined the store $400.

Rhode Island argues that banning price advertising inhibits competition, thereby raising the prices of alcoholic beverages, thereby reducing consumption, thereby promoting virtue. That is, some ignorance is good for us.

Well, not ignorance, exactly. Prices can be displayed in liquor stores if the information is not visible from the street. So the ban on price advertising does not enforce ignorance, it increases what economists call "transaction costs." Customers must expend more time and energy — visiting various stores — for price comparisons they cannot make by reading advertisements.

(Did Rhode Island's legislators consider the possibility that comparison shoppers traipsing from store to store may work up fearful thirsts, so the ban on price advertising may militate against its objective, which is temperance? Rhode Island ranks high among the states in per capita alcohol consumption, above many of the 39 states that allow price advertising.)

Under the 21st Amendment, which repealed the 18th and Prohibition, any state has the power to ban alcoholic beverages. So why does not Rhode Island have the power to ban information (even truthful, nonmisleading information) about a commodity it could proscribe?

Because, says the Supreme Court, the 21st Amendment does not limit the sweep of the First Amendment. And 20 years ago the court held that a "consumer's interest in the free flow of commercial information ... may be as keen as, if not keener by far than, his interest in the day's most urgent political debate."

(Some Americans may be more interested in learning about a beer bargain than about politicians' views on gas prices? Indeed.)

Writing for the court, Justice Stevens washes away Rhode Island's law with a torrent of adjectives and adverbs. The state, he says, has not successfully managed its "heavy burden" of showing that the ban on price advertising will "directly" and "to a material degree" promote temperance by "significantly" reducing alcohol consumption. Stevens even speculates that alcoholics may respond to higher prices by reducing purchases of other things. Do tell.

In a robust concurrence, Justice Thomas says that when government's asserted interest "is to keep legal users of a product or service ignorant in order to manipulate their choices in the marketplace," that interest no more justifies regulation of "commercial" speech than of any other kind.

Some conservatives have another view. It is that the First Amendment is part of a political document, the point of which is self-government. Hence the Amendment, properly construed, gives special protection to political speech. It may well be sensible policy generally to refrain from restricting truthful communication about legal products, but the Amendment does not require that policy. And it is paternalistic of the court to protect the people of Rhode Island from paternalistic laws they can petition their legislators to repeal.

Of course cynics suspect that the paternalism is a pretense, a way of rationalizing protection for an interest group. They note that the Rhode Island Liquor Stores Association, representing small retailers, joined the state's defense of the ban on price advertising, arguing that without the ban, the association's members "would be obliged to participate in the advertising arena." For a description of cynics, recur to the first paragraph.

Teens' attitudes explain high cost of education

The price of a college education is rising at the same rate as the cost of gasoline. My theory on this is that many, but not all, students have nothing but disdain for the schools in the state where they live.

Buchwald

This dawned on me when I sat with a group of high school students discussing their college plans.

Dogears said that he hoped to go to the University of Virginia even though he lived in Maryland.

Mary, with purple hair, said that she was doing just the opposite. She was going to attend school in Maryland despite the fact that she lived in Virginia.

"That'll cost you a bundle," I told her. "If you're from out of state, they take you for all you've got."

Dogears said, "Everyone says that Virginia has better schools than Maryland."

"Who's everyone?"

"All the kids in Maryland. My friends say that anybody who goes to his own state school should have his head examined."

Mary said, "That's the same thing the kids in Virginia say about our schools. Our universities have become snake pits."

Big Bear said, "I firmly believe that when you attend college you should go as far away from home as you possibly can. You'll never break the umbilical cord if you are within a 100-mile radius of your parents."

"What do your folks have to say about the fact that it will cost them a fortune for you not to be near them?" I asked.

Fatfingers said, "Not much as long as I'm happy. I live in Pennsylvania, but the whole country knows that it doesn't have an accredited school worth anything. I want to go to the University of San Diego."

"That's no bargain for an out-of-state student," I reminded him.

"But at least they teach you something about 'black holes' in the universe," he said.

Mary said, "It doesn't make sense. If you live in Virginia, you're a nobody when everyone you went to high school with is having a great time in another state."

Big John said, "My father attended college in Georgia and lived at home. He has carried that burden all his life."

Fatfingers announced, "I wouldn't even go to college if I had to live at home. I hate my three younger brothers."

I enjoyed the gabfest and learned a lot. I discovered that no student respects his own state's educational system, and most kids won't speak to their parents unless they promise to pay for them to study as far away from home as possible.

'Yes' vote for bond is investment for future

The citizens of Midland recently showed their optimistic spirit and faith in the future by approving the building of a new air terminal. As a community, we pride ourselves in being people who care deeply for those in need.

On June 1, we again will have the opportunity to say we care and believe in the future of Midland by voting for the proposed school bond issue. As the parent of two Midland graduates, a teacher with Midland Independent School District (MISD) for 11 years and (yes!) a concerned taxpayer, I urge my fellow citizens to look at the facts. If you visit any of the 27 (out of 35) buildings in our district, you will find facilities more than 30 years old (most with the original heating systems, among other problems), facilities that are inadequate to meet current program needs and overcrowding.

Please vote yes for our children's future — and our own. That's the kind of investment (not "tax") I want to make.

Kathleen Anderson
Midland

Voters should weigh all issues in election

Our children are our future. I am writing as a taxpayer, mother, grandmother and teacher. I am disappointed that the Reporter-Telegram appears to be against the proposed school bond election. This perception comes from the recent headlines and stories in the paper. We need the bond issue to pass in order to: (1) Renovate the remaining elementary schools; (2) build or upgrade facilities to meet state and federal requirements; (3) free up operating funds.

The administrators and teachers of the district work constantly to give each student the best education available. Teachers have been told that if we want the bond to pass then we need to work to rally the votes, but at no time have we been threatened. We, as teachers, are educated people who can think for ourselves. We are in the trenches every day working with the children to prepare them for the future. There is no "backup plan" but simply the necessary raising of taxes to keep on with business as usual. By raising taxes for the selling of bonds, we get $110 million worth for our money.

Without the bond, we get higher taxes with only the barest needs met. It will take the district at least 13 years to complete renovation of the listed elementary schools. The rising costs of materials alone means that more taxpayer money will be expended over the course of the next 13 years. Passing the bond will free up the money in the operating budget that is now set aside for the yearly renovation of one elementary school.

Passage of the bond will allow Midland Independent School District (MISD) to receive an additional $2.5 million from the state each of the next two years as a reward for improving our tax base for facilities. This money can be used in a variety of ways to benefit all children. If the bond fails, our taxes must be raised just to maintain. Education costs money no matter which side of the issue you are on. Be smart and weigh all the facts. Vote yes in the school bond election and for the future of our children. Our children are worth it. Support a better tomorrow.

Our children deserve freedom of choice

I attended the school board meeting Tuesday night, May 7, and once again left feeling angry and frustrated.

Friends, I would like to remind Midland Independent School District (MISD) that this is a free society, founded with certain basic principals such as freedom of speech, freedom to worship as you please and freedom of choice (among others). Freedom of choice? Hmmm ... you think the school system may have forgotten? I do believe we have that right. So shouldn't we have the right to say where our children go to school? If not, it seems kind of communistic to me.

I do not feel Mrs. Alma Marshall cares as much about your children as she does about having it her way — which is her way or no way! I have several minority friends who are in favor of neighborhood schools, but do not want to speak out. Sounds like a little intimidation to me.

Freedom of choice. It's the American way. We want it. We deserve it. If we don't get it, let's go to court and fight for it.

Our children deserve it.

Residents should cast vote for future

Bricks and mortar do not make a school. However, it is very difficult indeed to maintain a quality atmosphere conducive to good learning if the physical surroundings are subpar. For a long time Midland Independent School District (MISD) has delivered educational services at an annual per-student rate of almost $1,000 less than the state average. Now that rate has resulted in deficiencies in buildings and programs. Midland is now at a crossroads and the upcoming bond election not only will direct the course of education for some 22,000-plus students, it will define the community's commitment to quality education as well.

School expenses, like so many other programs that deal with children, are frequently decried as frivolous and nonessential. Often politicians and citizens alike wring their hands and bemoan the state of education in general, and simply pay lip service to wanting quality education. Quality education, programs and buildings cost money. Surely Midland cannot say that an airport is our future and our children are not.

Whether or not people have children in school should have very little to do with their support of the bond issue. Schools build future citizens. It is the mission of the schools to produce the most productive and effective citizenry possible; it is the obligation of the entire community to support that mission through positive actions. Midland is in danger of becoming second-rate in its education system. This is not because of a lack of effort on the part of the education community but because of the lack of support on the part of some very local and out-of-touch opponents with extremely narrow and pessimistic outlooks.

It is in all of the best interests to equip the students of today to be the most productive and educated leaders of tomorrow. In this race for the future of our children, there is no prize for second place. Please vote for the future. Don't count on someone else to do it for you.

ValuJet wasn't authorized to carry canisters in cargo hold, FAA says

WASHINGTON (AP) — ValuJet was not authorized to carry a cargo load of the oxygen generators that have come under suspicion in last Saturday's deadly crash in the Everglades, the Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday.

While the generators are standard equipment on many planes, they are considered hazardous items when carried as cargo, an FAA official said: "They are hazardous materials."

"ValuJet is not an authorized 'hazmat' carrier," said the official. He later stressed that the FAA has not concluded that the airline was carrying dangerous materials. But the presence of the generators has been reported by the National Transportation Safety Board.

The FAA official and the others spoke at a briefing under ground rules in which their names could not be used.

The generators, eight-inch long stainless steel containers that produce oxygen in emergencies through a chemical reaction can get hotter than 400 degrees Fahrenheit while in use.

The vice chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, Robert Francis, has said that the DC-9 passenger airliner was carrying more than 50 of the generators back to its Atlanta headquarters as cargo at the time of the accident.

Just moments before the accident the crew reported smoke in the cockpit and cabin.

The FAA official at Wednesday's briefing declined to speculate on the possible cause of the accident and would only discuss regulations pertaining to carrying hazardous items.

A fire blamed on an oxygen generator destroyed an American Trans Air DC-10 in Chicago in 1986. There were no injuries in that accident, which occurred while the plane was being serviced.

A wreath sits by a canal at the staging area about five miles from the ValuJet crash site.

The disclosure about the cargo prohibition came just hours after the FAA announced it was expanding what already was described as an intensive safety review of ValuJet, adding a check of every plane's maintenance history and putting inspectors aboard all planes at least once a week.

Maintenance histories will be reexamined to make sure they meet all FAA requirements for older aircraft, Administrator David R. Hinson said.

The ValuJet airliner that crashed in Florida was built in 1969. As aircraft grow older the government requires more frequent and more detailed inspections, and parts that are known to deteriorate with time must be replaced.

"Every ValuJet aircraft that fails to meet every requirement will be taken out of service" until the requirements are met, Hinson said at a morning briefing.

Meanwhile, the Defense Department temporarily dropped ValuJet from its list of commercial carriers for official Pentagon travel.

That means no department personnel will be booked on the airline's flights for at least the next 30 days. They are not prohibited from using ValuJet for personal travel. ValuJet also is barred from bidding on Pentagon air passenger contracts such as charter flights, officials said.

Capt. Michael Doubleday, a Pentagon spokesman, said the action was taken because of ValuJet's "relatively high number of accidents and incidents" during the past two years. He said two incidents, which he did not detail, had occurred since a January survey by a Pentagon review board that led to the department's decision to approve ValuJet as a carrier.

On Sunday the FAA announced it was beginning a 30-day intensive investigation of the airline's operations.

■ More national news/6B

Including the new moves, Associate Administrator Anthony J. Broderick said the agency's analysis of ValuJet will include:

■ Reviewing all reports of mechanical problems in the past 12 months to make sure corrective action was taken.

■ Inspecting ValuJet aircraft in the morning after they have undergone overnight maintenance to make sure the work was done properly.

■ Assigning inspectors to fly aboard each ValuJet aircraft at least weekly.

■ Reinspecting all ValuJet line maintenance facilities away from main hubs.

■ Top-to-bottom inspecting of all aircraft owned by ValuJet that are undergoing heavy maintenance work.

"People are going to see a lot more inspectors on the airplanes than they normally would," Broderick said.

ValuJet President Lewis Jordan, after discussions with Transportation Secretary Federico Pena, has decided to hire an "airline safety czar" for his staff and will establish an inspection schedule by Friday.

Top bull riders to compete in annual rodeo

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The annual Bud Light Bull Riding Cup Series will return to the Ector County Coliseum 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Fewer than 100 cowboys are invited into the Professional Bull Riders Association, and the top 45 are expected to compete in Odessa.

The Odessa event is part of a 16-city competition.

Last week's stop was in Birmingham, Ala., where Jerome Davis — an Odessa College graduate — stole the show by becoming the first cowboy to win three championship buckles this year. Davis was one of only three cowboys to make eight seconds on all three bulls.

"When you're in competition as tough as this, it's difficult to win just one championship," Davis said. "I just had to worry about riding my bulls and being a cowboy. That's my job."

Davis moved into fourth place in the BLCS overall standings after winning the $25,000 prize.

Australian champion Troy Dunn has moved into first place in the BLCS standings with 3,292 points. Dunn has won more than $47,000 from the BLCS tour, riding more than 82 percent of the bulls for the full eight seconds. Dunn finished fourth in last week's Birmingham competition.

Another cowboy climbing the ladder in the BLCS Tour standings is New Mexico's Owen Washburn. To date, Washburn has gone for eight seconds on more than 77 percent of the bulls he has ridden on the BLCS Tour. He has moved into second place in Law officials honor fallen officers

Annual memorial service pays tribute to those who lost their lives in line of duty.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Law enforcement officers who have lost their lives while serving the public were honored at an annual memorial service at Centennial Plaza Wednesday morning.

During the ceremony, Police Chaplain K.C. Blackketter spoke of the dedication of law enforcement officers to make a difference. Like followers of Jesus — many who died for doing so — law enforcement officers also risk their lives to make a difference, he said.

"Is it worth dying for? That's the wrong question to ask," Blackketter said.

"For you involved in law enforcement, the question is not 'Is it worth dying for?' but is 'It is worth living for?' " he said. "There are hundreds of thousands of people who have said yes."

Continuing the mission of making a difference is a way for law enforcement officers to honor those who lost their lives in the line of duty, Blackketter said.

Officers in Texas and locally were remembered in a roll call during Wednesday's ceremony.

Last year in Texas, seven peace officers were killed on the job. They were: Fabian Dominquez, San Antonio Police Department; Wilburn Agy, Liberty County Sheriff Department; Drew A. Bolin, Austin Police Department; James R. Allman, Dallas County Sheriff Department; Michael McInnis, San Antonio Police Department; and Dawn Brickson, Houston Police Department.

Two officers have died in Midland County — both in 1961 — while serving the public.

In April of that year, Police Officer Brian Scoggins, 32, died from injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident while performing a funeral escort. That November, Police Lt. Gordon Smith, 41, died after being shot in the chest by a man wanted for questioning in the strangulation of a woman.

And this year, two local officers who died of illness were remembered: Midland Police Sgt. W.O. "Preacher" Roberts and Department of Public Safety Trooper Tony Mata.

The memorial service also included a proclamation read by Mayor Bobby Burns; posting of colors by officers with the Police Department, the MISD police, the Sheriff's Office and the Second in four-phase construction on loop is complete, ready for traffic

From Staff Reports

Traffic is flowing on the newest section of Loop 250, according to a Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) official in Midland.

The completed project is the second in a four-phase construction that will fashion a four-lane loop connecting Business Interstate 20 and State Highway 349 around the west-northwest side of Midland.

"This week, the contractor put the finishing touches on the section from just north of State Highway 158 through the Wadley and Tremont intersections," said Mike Chetty, the TxDOT engineer in charge of the project. "It is ready for traffic."

The newly completed section of Loop 250 enables motorists to use the main lanes to travel from south to the State Highway 158 intersection to north of Midkiff Drive between Midkiff Road and Garfield Street. Use of the main lanes of Loop 250 rather than the frontage roads will relieve congestion at both the Wadley and Tremont intersections.

Other construction also is under way at two other locations on the loop — from Business Interstate 20 to connect the existing four-lane highway, and from west of Garfield Street to east of A Street. Both projects are several months from completion.

After idea, most precious quality in do-it-yourself task is work

Todd

There is glory in doing it yourself.

It may not be the most convenient way to go, but certainly it is the most rewarding. And, best of all, it bespeaks of accountability and goodness and creativity.

Living testimony of the worth of the doing-it-yourself penchant is making good things for the dinner table from scratch. It is bound to be good and tasty to the palate.

And is there not bountiful pride and a measure of humility in the restoration process? If you have ever restored a piece of furniture, such as your grandparents' old wooden icebox or a dinner table, desk, radio, chifforobe or — pray for patience — house, then you know and appreciate the pitfalls and the learning process and the magnificent dedicated work.

And if you have ever built anything, say from a balsa-wood model airplane to an experimental fly-it-yourself aircraft, then you know the wonders of the creative process.

If you have ever designed and constructed an outfit or painted a picture or written an essay or sculpted a statue, then you know the innate rewards of doing it yourself.

Now, there are mundane chores that test and challenge the creative process: scraping, sanding and painting the house; sprucing up the flower bed and vegetable garden, playing the old piano or blowing the horn, and taking care of home assignments, such as homework for the student, professor, and scholar-at-large — anyone on a learning quest.

Even more mundane are what some folks might call primitive or basic chores reserved for an earlier time and another place: churning cream to produce butter, canning fruits and vegetables, drying foods, chopping firewood, making a quilt, hooking up the team of mules or horses for work or a ride into town, or, if your automobile is antique enough or so featured, cranking up the engine with a hand crank.

There is much joy and, oftentimes, arduous work

Tejano radio broadcasts reflect cultural blend

By Vilma Maldonaldo
The Monitor (McAllen)

McALLEN — Like the food and music popular along the border, the language here mixes elements of Mexico and Texas.

The result is a bilingual patter that surfaces in casual conversation, and more and more often airs in formal situations and on radio and television newscasts.

At KIWW 96-FM radio, news director Brenda Lee Huerta switches easily between Spanish and English.

"Perhaps it will never be totally accepted, but I feel that in order to de-stigmatize our use of both languages, doing bilingual news here in the Valley is acceptable and desirable," Huerta said.

Although friends, family members and coworkers in the Rio Grande Valley often interchange languages, "co-switching" in the news is relatively new.

As in most areas, it takes time to make bilingualism acceptable. But today, Tejano radio is mostly bilingual, even on what traditionally has been purely Spanish language radio and television.

"It's a little more appealing for the Mexican-American audience because we co-switch," said Joe Morales, corporate image voice for Tichenor Media Systems, which owns KIWW, KGBT and KQXX, where Huerta works. "It's easier to understand and it's home for Mexican-Americans."

Some might say the natural blend of the two languages is as much a part of the Valley's rich culture as enchiladas and fajitas. Speaking both English and Spanish fluently is part of the area's identity.

"I learned to read before anything else and in Spanish," said Huerta, a native of Lubbock who earned an undergraduate degree in communications and a master's degree in business administration from Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos. "The way I do the bilingual news is the way people speak in the Valley. And, as long as we keep it correct, mixing English with Spanish is OK."

Co-switching also makes good financial sense, some say.

"I can think of no job or career that at some point does not require or is not enhanced by our ability to speak both," Huerta said. "In fact, many employers, 'en todo ramo de empleo' (in all branches), suggest that someone be bilingual to provide services to the consumer, remembering that Hispanos are predicted to become the majority minority in the near future."

Huerta said her ability to speak and write both languages has boosted her career and helped her keep in touch with her culture.

"You need your roots, and you need to know your English and Spanish to move into a new era," Huerta said. "To be able to communicate in two languages adds pride and a sense of identity for the Valley."

Not everyone agrees with the haphazard mix of languages.

"The Dean of Deejays," Tina Compean, of KIRT-1580 AM, said she believes each language should be spoken correctly, either all English or all Spanish.

"We have adopted the mixture of the languages because we do not know our native language well," Compean said. "I see it as degenerating our language, because Spanish is a beautiful idiom. I love my language, and if someone is going to use it, do it properly."

She said journalists and television and radio commentators are supposed to be the communicators for the community, and as such should set an example for all generations.

"When we realize how important it is to speak both languages properly," Compean said, "then we will grow as a people and have more opportunities."

To a certain extent, Huerta agrees — she objects to misspoken Spanish or English — if both are going to be spoken.

"Let's do it right and say the words and the syntax correctly," said Huerta, who has worked for three years as news director with Tejano radio station KIWW 96FM. In that time, she has received numerous honors for reporting on issues affecting Hispanics and the Valley.

Chris Wegmann, general manager of Q Pasa 99.5 FM, said his station has not had enough demand to do the news in Spanish.

"According to Tejano radio research, we found that it is the second, third and fourth generations who are assimilated to the English way of doing things," Wegmann said. "It is the first generation that prefers the news in Spanish..."

Dr. Lino Garcia Jr., assistant vice president for academic affairs for international studies and programs at the University of Texas-Pan American, believes co-switching illustrates a mutual respect.

"When two cultures get together, inevitably they are going to get married and their languages are going to become one," Garcia said. "This means we accept and respect each others' cultures. It means we accept each others' lives, and we are not fighting like in other countries."

Garcia said bilingualism is as normal now as it was when the Greeks and Arabs blended their languages. Some of that hybrid contributed to Spanish as we now know it.

"What we are seeing in the Valley are two cultures melting into one, yet each preserving its characteristics and accepting its differences in lifestyle," Garcia said. "We have much to teach the rest of the world in human behavior and our activities."

Seeking is the journey.

D-FW unveils technological leap for air traffic controllers

FORT WORTH (AP) — A touch screen air traffic system, with digital communications so quiet controllers sometimes think their headsets are disconnected, was unveiled Wednesday to cover the nation's second busiest airport.

Called a 40-year leap in technology, the Federal Aviation Administration's North Texas segment of a $1.4 billion voice switching and control system (VSCS) is designed to work with new radar and computers that would replace those blamed for misdirected flights, near-misses and other problems.

Clyde M. Dehart Jr., regional FAA administrator, said the system installed at the Fort Worth Air Route Traffic Control Center for North Texas since Jan. 18 took the place of communications equipment "the size of a fairly large town."

"We have accomplished a very major change in the way the air traffic controllers communicate with the pilots and with themselves," said Peter Challan, FAA acting deputy director of air traffic systems development. "We've had a system here in the FAA that is 1950s technology with hard wired relays — it's a very manually intensive system."

A communications breakdown among controllers earlier this year reportedly allowed a passenger jet at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport to take off even though two other planes had experienced severe wind shear less than three minutes earlier.

Controllers also have had to repeat garbled transmissions. One training officer said controllers have had to repeat take-off and landing clearance information to pilots. Several more problems have been linked to outdated computers.

"Communications is the backbone of the system the FAA uses to effect separation in airspace," said Challan, based in Washington.

He said the Fort Worth center's VSCS, the sixth commissioned by the FAA, is designed to work with an improved processor for radar displays — to be operational this summer — and upgrades of the displays themselves within two years.

The FAA has been working for more than a decade to upgrade the nation's air traffic control system with new computers and radar systems.

The VSCS, designed and built by Melbourne, Fla.-based Harris Corp., includes everything from headsets to handsets with controls linked to some 2,000 computers.

The investigation of ValuJet Flight 592's weekend crash in the Everglades kept FAA Administrator David Hinson in Washington and away from his scheduled appearance at the Fort Worth VSCS commissioning.

Dehart said the FAA will hire 280 inspectors this year and more in 1997 to help identify airplane problems.

Last month, government inspectors and cloaked whistleblowers told Congress that poorly trained airplane inspectors and a mismanaged computer system are endangering the safety of air travel.

Raymond J. Friesen, a Harris engineer, said replacement of the communications equipment included some of the center's oldest computer gear and replaced analog lines with clearer digital ones.

"The circuits are so quiet that they sometimes think their headsets have gone bad," he said.

"It is a huge improvement, with less static and fewer read-back problems," said Fernando Ospina, an FAA air traffic control training officer. "There's a lot less of the pilot asking to repeat the entire clearance because it was not received properly."

Officials: 'Date-rape pill' is cheap, available

AUSTIN (AP) — The sedative known as the date-rape pill is widely and cheaply available to young people in Texas despite the federal government's ban on importing it, officials said Wednesday.

"I predict that before the end of this year, you will see a death in Texas due to a Rohypnol overdose or because of its use with other sedative agents," said Marv Shepherd, director of the Center for Pharmacoeconomic Studies at the University of Texas' College of Pharmacy.

The March 5 import ban came after reports that the sleeping aid, which is 10 times stronger than Valium, was being used to spike the drinks of women who then were raped.

The drug also is misused to enhance the effect of other drugs and alcoholic beverages. Its effect on coordination at higher doses may be similar to alcohol intoxication and lead to memory impairment, officials said.

Rohypnol, manufactured overseas, isn't marketed in this country. But before the ban, travelers to the United States could bring in a three-month supply of the sleeping aid for personal use. It's approved for use in 64 countries.

High school and college students have been eager buyers of the drug, said John Moseman of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's Houston office, comparing it to the Quaaludes popular in the 1970s and 1980s.

"It's sort of a party drug, and that's why you find it in the clubs. You mix it with alcohol and it mellows you out," he said.

Just Tuesday, a man was arrested in Houston with 10,000 Rohypnol tablets, Moseman said. The pills can range in price from about 70 cents to $5 each, depending on how many are purchased at a time, he said.

"It's a cheap drug ... a lunch-money drug," Moseman said.

'I predict that before the end of this year, you will see a death in Texas due to a Rohypnol overdose or because of its use with other sedative agents.'

—Mary Shepherd director of Center for Pharmacoeconomic Studies
at UT's College of Pharmacy

Officials with drug manufacturer Hoffman-La Roche say they've taken action to discourage Rohypnol's illegal use, including efforts to educate parents and a reduction in the number of distributors in Mexico. They said they continue to work with federal and state officials and support strict law enforcement.

The import ban "has stopped a lot of ... younger people from going across to the farmacia (Mexican pharmacy), picking it up and bringing it back across. You can't do that any more," Moseman said.

But that doesn't mean they aren't getting the drug.

"Now they're going to smuggle it," Moseman said. "I would say it's readily available. I would say that there's a demand for it. And the indication there is that there is an increase."

Jane Maxwell of the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse said the drug has been reported all over the state, in rural as well as urban areas.

The agency is still compiling results from a survey of public school students, Ms. Maxwell said. But she said "there's no question" that its use is increasing and spreading.

As a sign of the drug's popularity, Ms. Maxwell displayed a T-shirt with the words Rohypnol and Roche printed on it.

"When it gets to the T-shirt stage, you've got a problem," she said.

Shepherd, who has studied the importation of Rohypnol, found more than 1.4 million tablets were declared at one bridge crossing at Laredo and brought into the United States between July 1994 and June 1995.

"I have anecdotal evidence that the ban on the drug has not decreased the supply, nor has it raised the price of the drug on the University of Texas campus," Shepherd said in a letter to Texas Health Commissioner David Smith. "I believe that through the summer Rohypnol abuse will continue to grow."

State lawmakers plan to introduce two-day stay bill for new mothers

AUSTIN (AP) — Two state legislators said Wednesday they will introduce a bill next year designed to prevent early release of mothers and newborns from hospitals.

With health insurance coverage increasingly focusing on containing costs, there is reason to be concerned about early discharges, said Rep. Patricia Gray, D-Galveston.

"It is a growing problem," the lawmaker said.

"When we're talking about newborns who can't talk for themselves, it's become a line-in-the-sand issue" with many consumers, she added.

The bill, which is being readied for the 1997 Legislature, says a mother, in consultation with an attending physician, must be offered a minimum 48-hour hospital stay following a normal vaginal delivery and 96 hours following a caesarean section.

"The proposed legislation puts the mother and her infant first rather than allowing cost to be the governing factor for their discharge from the hospital," Ms. Gray said.

"The decision about what is best for the mother and child ought to be made by the mother and her attending physician, not by an ... actuary who consults with a computer," she said.

She noted that there are about 300,000 babies born in Texas each year and said that many times, complications arising shortly after birth can go easily undetected.

"As a mother of two boys, I know firsthand the importance of ensuring that the health of both mother and baby are protected. The proposed legislation provides that needed protection for mothers and babies in Texas," said Rep. Sherri Greenberg, D-Austin, who also plans to sponsor the bill.

A dozen states have passed laws to prevent early discharges, and 17 more are considering bills, Ms. Gray said.

The Texas bill would apply to health insurance companies, health maintenance organizations and group hospital service corporations.

Dr. Donald Gessler, president-elect of the Texas HMO Association, said HMOs "believe that decisions about when it is safe for a mother and baby to go home from the hospital should be made for each mother and her baby by physicians, not on a cookie-cutter basis by health plans or legislators."

"We look forward to reviewing this legislation and to working with the sponsors to ensure that the final bill does not jeopardize the treatment decisions of physicians or mandate patient practices," he said.

Kyle Womack, left, presents Bill Collyns his life membership to the Chamber of Commerce at the chamber's annual meeting on October 3, 1995.

Bill Collyns Day

There are two kinds of energy in West Texas: the kind produced from the ground and the Bill Collyns kind.

Collyns has spent his energy on Midland. Through his years at the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Reporter-Telegram he has worked tirelessly for Midland and for the city's future. His lifetime achievements, awards and honors reflect his lifetime of dedication to this city.

He has seen Midland grow from a 1935 ranching town of 5,000 people to a progressive city of nearly 100,000. To say that Collyns — instrumental in building the basin's transportation infrastructure — merely watched the transformation would be a gross understatement.

The people who know Collyns best refer to him as Mr. Midland, Mr. West Texas and Mr. Permian Basin. They've watched this down-to-earth person rise to the highly respectable place he holds in their hearts today. And today they just wanted to thank him. Today, proclaimed "Bill Collyns Day" by Mayor Bobby Burns, is a simple thank you from his acquaintances, co-workers, lunch pals and neighbors, all of whom Collyns considers friends.

Also, the Reporter-Telegram will honor him May 23 with the 1996 Energy Award for his outstanding service and dedication to the Permian Basin oil industry.

His friends say that when Midland was smaller it seemed that Bill Collyns knew everybody. The city may have grown considerably, but today — on this day dedicated to him — everybody will know Bill Collyns.

Midlanders attribute much of city's success to one man's vision

By Ellen Hopkins

Midland had no skyline when Bill Collyns arrived in 1935, but there was a skyline in his vision of Midland's future. It was a vision backed up by his incredible energy. In the years since, Midland has fulfilled Collyns' hopes. He has seen the city through hard times and prosperity, and never lost sight of his vision.

The vision would have something to do with oil even though Midland was the ranching headquarters of West Texas when Collyns moved here. He transferred in from McCamey with Humble Oil and Refining (now Exxon) where he had worked since 1927 and where he had been instrumental in forming the McCamey Chamber of Commerce. It's also where he met and married his wife, Alice.

"The wedding was held in the high school auditorium because they had so many people to invite and no place else was big enough," recalled Erlene Thomas, who was the flower girl.

Crowded conditions were also an obstacle in Midland. When Humble announced the transfer in 1935, ranchers, retailers and professionals sponsored a cooperative effort to bring housing from Humble's McCamey Camp to Midland. They bought and moved houses, and either rented or sold the homes at cost to the 100 transferring families. It was an effort that would signal other companies to follow suit and it became a turning point in the city's history.

Collyns was among the movers who helped relocate the houses to Midland. The Chamber of Commerce became the nerve center for luring other oil companies to town, and Collyns joined the chamber as manager in 1936. All efforts in coordinating the required housing and office space for each transferring company were handled through the chamber and within five years all the major oil companies and many independents had offices in Midland.

DURING THOSE exciting times Midland's slogan became "The most ambitious city between the oceans."

The ranching community and its financial structure blended with the oilmen and their banking needs.

Men like Jno. P. Butler helped finance new ventures and the melding of the two cultures doubled Midland's population from 5,000 in 1935 to 10,000 in 1940.

With the tremendous growth spurt under way, Collyns decided it was time to bring in the major airlines.

"I remember Bill went to Hobbs to recruit Continental Airlines," said Spencer Blocker, longtime friend and weekly lunch pal of Collyns.

"Percentage-wise he's done more for Midland than any single person."

Blocker said Collyns left the chamber for military duty during World War II and the local board members did his chamber work for him while he was gone.

Jim Allison, then-owner of the Reporter-Telegram, was one who helped fill in for Collyns during those two years.

Continental Airlines came to Midland after the war ended and in 1946 Collyns went to work for Allison as editor of the Reporter-Telegram, a job he held for 33 years.

As a native West Texan born in San Angelo in 1908, Collyns had been interested in the newspaper business ever since he threw papers as a boy.

"Bill was editor and I was manager of the Chamber of Commerce for 15 years," Delbert Downing said. "I followed him in that office and he came through four or five times a week. We had coffee in the Scharbauer Hotel coffee shop where the chamber office was located." Downing said whenever they heard of a company considering a move to town, they'd make contact and turn on the influence.

"Bill was very likeable and had a tremendously wide acquaintance in town," said Downing, who also saw Collyns at weekly Rotary meetings.

"He seemed to know everybody. Of course, the city wasn't as big then as it is now, but the city has grown in part due to Bill's efforts. He always put Midland in a good light."

DOWNING SAID Collyns deserves a lot of credit for helping the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and other such local organizations.

"If they were having a horseshoe pitching contest or some type of fund-raiser, he'd always find space in the paper to announce it," he said.

Joe Salman remembers those early days at the paper and the changes they saw — from pencils to typewriters to computers.

"We worked together at the Reporter-Telegram for about 30 years, and for the last 15 to 20 years his office and mine were adjacent," said Salman, who during his tenure at the paper was oil editor, city editor and worked in the sports department.

"Bill has always been the No.1 most civic-minded person," Salman said. "Nobody on earth is more civic-minded than Bill."

Collyns' civic activities included joining the Midland Downtown Lions Club back in the 1930s and serving as president from 1938-39.

Bill Collyns is pictured here with his wife Alice. Collyns had a vision in 1935 for Midland's future and he backed his vision up with incredible energy.

"He seems to attend every meeting every Wednesday and once had 22 years of perfect attendance," said Victor Horn, fellow Lions Club member. "Bill has always been an active Lion and a staunch backer, and he's one of the greeters at our annual Pancake Jamboree. I think of him as Midland's top booster."

Ray Gwyn, a Lions Club member for 55 years, remembered that Collyns used to emcee the Lions Club meetings in the early days and that he has been an integral part of the club's many projects.

"One of the first things we did was put in a wading pool at Cloverdale Park, and one of the more recent projects was the Fire Truck Museum that was dedicated to the city in 1985," Gwyn said. "Bill had a lot to do with getting public subscription for the museum."

HE SAID they've taken bus trips to the Texas Lions Camp at Kerrville where handicapped and diabetic youngsters are welcomed, and that Collyns has recently been instrumental in the renovating of the Hodge Theater into the future home of the Pancake Jamborees.

"Bill has always been at the meetings and backed everything the club did, but he's also a big supporter of the Presbyterian church," Gwyn said. "Every time one of the Lions would say something about the Baptist church, Bill would say something about the Presbyterian church. He's a staunch supporter."

Mabel Franz, church member, said Collyns joined First Presbyterian Church in 1936 and helped form the Men's Organization.

"He was president of that organization in 1949 and also a member of the Old Boys' Sunday School class that started in the 1940s," Ms. Franz said.

She said Collyns was a trustee of the church and is an ordained elder — a lifetime position.

"Bill is one of the most dedicated men I've known," she said. "I came here in 1955 and he and Alice were some of the first people I met. They are both much loved by the congregation and greatly respected."

Ms. Franz said that while Collyns was editor of the Reporter-Telegram, he diligently kept a file about First Presbyterian Church and whatever happened there went into the paper.

"He has always been a good promoter for First Presbyterian and a faithful, strong member," she said.

Ted Battles, former sports editor of the Reporter-Telegram said, "Bill has always been a promoter of Midland and of First Presbyterian Church. Whenever he introduced me to someone he was quick to tell them I was a Presbyterian."

BATTLES REMEMBERED a trip Collyns took in 1937 with some of the staff including then-sports editor Jess "Ironhead" Rogers. They were to have a meeting at Carlsbad Caverns.

"Bill has always been an ambassador of Midland, so when they headed out Bill decided it would be a good idea to check out all the small towns in southeast New Mexico," Battles said. "They drove to Hobbs, Lovington, Roswell, Artesia, Carlsbad, and then on to the caverns where they had the meeting. Most of the roads were not paved back then, but they did it in one day."

On the return trip, Battles said they drove to Pecos, where the car broke down, and on to Monahans where it broke down again. They ended up taking a taxi home.

Battles said he remembers another time when a young Texas Tech student wanted to work for the paper so much that he was willing to work for free.

"We thought that was a pretty good deal so when payday came Arthur Mayhew went home with nothing," Battles recalled. "Bill soon got a call from an irate mother and Arthur was a paid employee after that.

"He went on to graduate, did real well and later became editor of a paper in Westchester, Pa."

Battles said he remembers Collyns was always a good boss who never interfered with the work they were doing.

"If we ever made a mistake we felt worse about disappointing Bill than we did about the mistake," Battles said.

After Battles had been at the paper for a while, he said Collyns suggested that he try news reporting. Realizing it was more responsibility and pressure, Battles decided to stay in sports.

"I guess Bill wanted me to go to work," he said.

Leroy Stewart and Collyns have known each other for 47 years and worked together at the Reporter-Telegram for 27 of those years.

"I WORKED in the circulation department from 1951 to '69 and then was circulation manager from 1969 to '76," Stewart said.

"When the Blue Star first opened, the department heads at the paper used to eat there and sometimes I was invited," he said. "When I was made manager in '69, Bill said I was no longer invited to come, I was just supposed to show up.

"He and I still meet there on Saturdays. The east dining room is closed at noon on Saturdays, but it's open to us."

Stewart said he meets Collyns and three others for lunch on Tuesdays. The five of them are known as the "Corned Beef and Cabbage Club."

"I've been meeting with this group for about 10 years," Stewart said. "Bill told me about them meeting for lunch and he said, 'We're not going to invite you; you're just supposed to show up.'"

They take turns — Thane Akins, Winston Barclay, Blocker, Collyns and Stewart — and each selects the restaurant of his choice.

"I think it's known as the Corned Beef and Cabbage Club because Furr's Cafeteria served that one day a week," recalled Barclay, who retired from West Texas Electric Service Co., later known as Texas Electric and then Texas Utility.

"Bill and I worked closely during the early 1960s with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce. And our paths crossed many times on community committees and economic development issues."

Barclay said he and Collyns went on several chamber trips together to Austin and Washington regarding legislative issues such as water legislation that would affect the West Texas area.

He said through his work with the Chamber of Commerce and Reporter-Telegram, Collyns had the opportunity to meet many people from all over the country. As a result he's often asked for his advice.

"ALL PEOPLE are the same to Bill — Washington political figures or Midland people," he said.

Congressman George Mahon was a good friend of Collyns. Barclay said that whenever Mahon came to this area he and Collyns and their wives would go eat at the Blue Star.

"It was such a ritual that they didn't even need to order," he said. "Joe Chung — he opened it in the 1950s — would tell them he'd take care of them and he would."

Barclay said Collyns likes frequenting favorite restaurants with favorite friends. And he has so many friends and has seen so many changes in Midland since 1935 that he is often asked to speak at events and to introduce people at gatherings.

"Whenever Bill introduces anybody at a program he ends it with ... and he's a great windmill man,'" Blocker said. "He talks about them and then always ends with that line."

Blocker, who has been getting together for lunch with Collyns a couple of times a week since 1970, said there is no greater ambassador for Midland, First Presbyterian Church and the Jaycees than Bill Collyns.

Barclay agrees.

"If it was a progressive thing for Midland, Bill was personally involved in the middle of it and a positive supporter," Barclay said. "Anything from a college to a road project, just pick out any major project and Bill was supporting it for Midland. Bill is always a fine gentleman and I'm flattered to be a friend."

The Collyns' daughter, Lorraine Harris, said the gentlemanly aspect came natural to her father. And he always looked the part.

"He always wears his Stetson along with a shirt and tie" said Ms. Harris, who lives in Plano. "He's always worn straw in the summer and felt in the winter.

"Daddy always thought that it's all a pleasure," Ms. Harris said. "Everything is done with a positive attitude. He never looked on any of his work begrudgingly; it was an incredible pleasure for him."

His friends agree and marvel at his willingness to do favors for people.

"He doesn't know how to say 'No' and continues in retirement to do things for people," Barclay said. "I've always admired that about him."

LESTER VAN Pelt Jr. with the Abell-Hanger Foundation, is another admirer of Collyns' dedication to the city and to fellow Midlanders.

"I've known Bill Collyns since 1959, and I could write a book on him," Van Pelt said.

Together they've worked on Lions Club projects, Crime Stoppers and the Midland County grand jury, to name a few.

"It has been my honor and privilege to know, work and confer on various civic undertakings with Bill," Van Pelt said. "Bill's desire to do his best in all endeavors never ceases to amaze me, and his reputation for excellence is known far and wide. He is one heck of a windmill man!"

Bill Collyns ... a windmill man with a vision for Midland. If one looks closely, a reflection of the city's success is still seen in his eyes.

Dole's gambit: brilliant stroke or desperate effort to overtake rival?

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

■ News analysis

WASHINGTON — For decades, Bob Dole has been the consummate Senate insider. Now, he's forsaking all that in a daring move to try to jolt his lagging campaign. It could be a clever stroke — or a desperate last hurrah.

Or maybe a touch of each. As Dole loyalists and critics alike were quick to point out, it gets people's attention.

"It's a smart bold move which is slightly desperate. Sometimes it's healthy and useful to be slightly desperate," said Bill Kristol, a conservative activist and magazine publisher who has been one of Dole's chief tormentors within the Republican party.

Kristol, like most Republicans, applauded Dole's step. Democrats ridiculed it. "I guess he found the choice was between campaigning and governing and he chose campaigning," said Ann Lewis, Clinton's deputy campaign manager.

The 72-year-old lawmaker's decision to quit his cherished Senate outright and focus on "things that are real" caught the Washington establishment — from which he seeks to retreat — by surprise.

"It was, frankly, a bolder move than I would have counseled," said Republican House Speaker Newt Gingrich.

Yet, politics is often driven by unexpected bold strokes. That is Dole's essential gamble: it buys him a fresh start and new look from Americans.

If he fails to capitalize on it, then the gamble may be lost.

"Bob Dole has shaken the groundless over-confidence of the Clinton White House," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a key Dole adviser.

That enthusiasm reverberated as national and state party officials who had grown despondent over Dole's sinking poll figures cheered. "Clearly, now he's unleashed," said Connecticut state GOP chairman Christopher DePino.

The most immediate plus for Dole is that the decision — which takes effect on or before June 11 — disengages him from the day-to-day battles in the Senate that have tied him in knots since he clinched the GOP nomination nearly two months ago.

"Instead of it being 48 against one — Bill Clinton and 47 Democrat senators fighting him every day — the focus will be on him versus Clinton," said veteran GOP strategist Charles Black.

That he is now working without a safety net should play well with Americans, who like such gestures of personal courage, suggested Republican pollster Neil Newhouse. "Voters are now going to ask themselves, 'Who is Bob Dole?' And his campaign is going to have to answer that."

But the risks for Dole are numerous — although when you're 20 points down, the long pass is sometimes worth the gamble.

Just as Republican speeches and press releases brimmed with the adjectives "bold" and "courageous," Democrats greeted Dole's decision with variations on the theme of "desperation."

"It's kind of a desperate move by a desperate man who realizes he's in serious difficulty," said Democratic consultant Frank Greer.

"It underscores the failure of yet another set of Dole strategies," said Democratic pollster Mark Mellman.

And Vice President Al Gore unkindly suggested it would lead to "a better chance at breaking the deadlock" in the Congress.

Another down side: Dole is all but out of campaign funds. He loses the free Senate platform from which to advance his campaign. The Republican National Committee is expected to try to take up the slack — but Democrats are sure to cry election-law violations if the RNC exceeds its proscribed party-building role in helping Dole.

Still, on balance, the move "helps him immensely," suggested political scientist James Thurber of American University. "He can get away from the budget battle, from controversial votes on issues like abortion that are going to come up in the Senate. It allows him to move away from the more extreme wing of the party ... and away from being in those photo ops with Newt Gingrich all the time."

That Gingrich loomed large, just over Dole's left shoulder at the resignation speech, shows how difficult complete disengagement may be.

In his emotional farewell, Dole said he was giving up the trappings of power and heading out to do battle against Clinton as "just a man."

"But I'll be the same man," he said.

Call a whiz kid if you want to learn computers

By Carolyn Thompson
Associated Press

BOSTON — When Paul Bradley went kicking and screaming into the computer age, he did what a lot of people have done lately when they've found themselves unable to get from the "on" button to online.

He called one of the experts: a kid.

"He's riveted. He's really in tune with the computer," Bradley, 58, said of his tutor, 18-year-old Jeffrey Vogel. "It's part of his being. These young, uncluttered minds."

Adults who went to school during the age of slide rules and adding machines are learning computers from kids nowadays.

After all, who better than someone who's been playing games and doing homework on a computer since he was old enough to guide a mouse? Teen-age tutors are also less expensive than adult instructors. And maybe less intimidating, too.

"I think adults tend to be more willing to talk to youngsters," said Michael Zabinski, founder of the National Computer Camp. "An adult may be in more need of patience. They may not be as quick to grasp."

Like Vogel, many of the teen-age tutors are largely self-taught computer whizzes who get hired through word of mouth.

Other youngsters offer their expertise in more formal settings. Beachwood High School in suburban Cleveland, for example, has an Elder Class Program, in which retirees learn about computers from high school and middle school kids.

"A lot of people didn't grow up in the computer age and they need some elementary instruction about it," said Vogel, a North Andover High School senior. "It's not their best skill or whatever. I understand."

Vogel's help has enabled Bradley, a stone salesman who prefers a lamp and a good book to a computer, to bypass all those daunting inches-thick computer manuals with subsections on "configuration utility messages" and "diskette-based diagnostics."

"I told Jeffrey that where I want to start is on page one. Assume I have no knowledge," Bradley said.

Sixteen-year-old Spencer Joyner has been able to earn $10 to $60 an hour for his computer expertise. He has done everything from helping people get their home computers up and running to setting up an entire network for a company.

"Sometimes I get ahead of myself," the Andover High sophomore said of his home tutorials. "I go all the way back to square three but they're still at square one. Sometimes I overestimate people, but most people start to pick things up really quickly."

Seventeen-year-old Andrew Gale said people who call on him for help have problems "that I would see as really simple because I've seen it a thousand times: installing new software, hooking up a modem."

Bishop excommunicates some Catholics for group involvement

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — As of Wednesday, a former priest and nun and perhaps hundreds of other Roman Catholics in the Lincoln Diocese can consider themselves excommunicated.

Bishop Fabian Bruskewitz ordered Catholics to quit 12 proscribed groups, including Planned Parenthood, Call to Action and Catholics for a Free Choice, by Wednesday or face the spiritual equivalent of the death penalty.

Bruskewitz, who announced the order in the diocese newspaper in March, is the first U.S. bishop in recent church history to threaten mass excommunication.

Under excommunication, Catholics may attend Mass but are forbidden to receive Holy Communion or other sacraments, such as marriage in the church.

The bishop won't formally record who is excommunicated or notify them individually, and has said he has no way of knowing if someone is heeding the ban on receiving the sacraments. That will be left to the person's conscience, he said.

John Krejci, the former priest, and his wife, Jean, a former nun, said they will defy the order.

"We will be receiving communion. We don't intend to change our style," Krejci said. The couple belong to Call to Action, a group that wants the church to discuss allowing women and married men to become priests — issues that Pope John Paul II has said are closed.

Another Call to Action member, Jim McShane, said he wouldn't quit the group, but he refused to say whether he would defy the bishop and still take the sacraments. "I think he's shot his cannon and he's waiting for us to fall down," McShane said.

The Lincoln Diocese has about 85,000 members. It is considered a conservative diocese; it does not allow girls to serve at the altar.

Accountant says Clinton told him to back off

WASHINGTON (AP) — As he prepared to invest in Whitewater, Bill Clinton told his personal accountant "to back off" and stop raising objections to a tax-reduction proposal for the real estate venture, the accountant told a Senate panel Wednesday.

Whitewater Committee Republicans focused on the tax proposal — which was never implemented — in an attempt to show that Clinton knew much more about the Whitewater investment than he has acknowledged.

Accountant Gaines Norton described a meeting he had with Clinton and his soon-to-be Whitewater partner, James McDougal, in 1978 about handling taxes on land in northern Arkansas. The property became the Clintons' Whitewater deal.

Norton questioned whether tax deductions would be possible under the arrangement Clinton and McDougal were contemplating — financing the purchase 100 percent with bank loans while handling the transaction through a separate corporation.

According to Norton, "Mr. Clinton asked me to step outside," where Clinton told Norton that McDougal was the lead partner in the transaction and "I was to back off and leave the issue alone."

Senate Democrats quickly pointed out that the Whitewater transaction was never handled under the proposed arrangement.

The day's testimony prompted White House spokesman Mark Fabiani to say that "on the one-year anniversary of these hearings, it is only fitting that we are bogged down" in issues that are nearly two decades old.

No. 1 tobacco maker proposes federal ban on vending machine sales

NEW YORK (AP) — Philip Morris USA, the nation's No. 1 tobacco company, offered to support a ban on cigarette vending machines and curbs on advertising Tuesday if the FDA backs off any attempt to regulate cigarettes.

The White House reacted coolly. The proposal "falls a little bit short" of President Clinton's demands, spokesman Mike McCurry said without elaborating. But he allowed that Philip Morris "is clearly trying to become a good corporate citizen."

Philip Morris, the maker of Marlboros and other cigarettes, said it would support a ban on permanent brand-name advertising in virtually all sports stadiums and the use of corporate logos and characters on nontobacco items.

It also would seek to ban all outdoor advertising of tobacco products within 1,000 feet of a school or a playground.

"This federal legislative approach will make it impossible for anyone to legally obtain any tobacco product ... without a face-to-face transaction where proof of age can be checked," said Steve Parrish, a Philip Morris USA spokesman.

However, the tobacco company said that in return, the Food and Drug Administration would have to be precluded from regulating tobacco products.

The FDA is considering whether to regulate tobacco as a drug, and the Justice Department also is investigating whether Philip Morris and other tobacco executives lied to Congress and the FDA when they denied manipulating nicotine content to hook smokers.

Beyond that, the tobacco industry is facing a torrent of litigation over smoking-related illnesses. A growing number of states are suing to recover the cost of Medicaid treatment for smokers.

Philip Morris was joined in its proposal by United States Tobacco Co., which makes chewing tobacco. Other leading cigarette companies did not participate in the announcement at a New York news conference, and Parrish said he did not know how they stood on the proposal.

A comsumer reaches for his favorite brand. Philip Morris is offering to back a vending sale ban.

U.S. prepares to put sanctions on China over copyright piracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an increasingly bitter fight with China over copyright piracy, the Clinton administration targeted $3 billion in Chinese clothing and consumer electronic goods for punitive tariffs Wednesday. They would be the largest trade-sanctions package in U.S. history.

The Chinese responded immediately with a sanctions list of their own, and the possibility of a full-fledged trade war threatened to aggravate already serious strains between the two governments.

The range of items on the U.S. target list encompasses silk blouses and cotton underwear, cellular telephones, fax machines and bicycles, swimwear, coffee makers and cigar boxes.

Announcing the U.S. list, acting U.S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky insisted the administration had no choice but to apply economic pressure in light of China's failure to honor a 1995 agreement to halt widespread piracy of American computer programs, films and music.

"We do not take the move toward retaliation lightly," she told a crowded news conference. "But when other countries do not live up to their trade agreements with the United States, we will take action."

Minutes after the announcement, the Chinese announced a list of proposed economic sanctions that would target a whole range of American farm products: cotton, frozen beef, chicken, vegetable oils.

In addition, they said they would suspend imports of American movies, television programs and music and stop processing applications from U.S. chemical, pharmaceutical and other companies seeking to set up joint ventures in China.

The threat and counterthreat represented a replay of last year's battle that resulted in $1.08 billion in U.S. sanctions being averted at the last minute when the Chinese promised to wage an intensive crackdown on more than 30 factories producing millions of pirated products.

This time, both sides appeared at least initially to be staking out hard positions.

No heresy trial for Episcopal bishop who ordained non-celebate gay

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Averting the first heresy trial of an Episcopal bishop since the 1920s, a church court ruled Wednesday that church doctrine does not explicitly bar the ordination of practicing homosexuals.

The now-retired Bishop Walter Righter was charged with heresy for ordaining the Rev. Barry Stopfel as a deacon in 1990 even though he knew Stopfel was involved in a long-term gay relationship. Stopfel has since become a priest and is rector of a church in Maplewood, N.J.

Like many retired bishops, Righter, 72, still performs confirmations, sermons and other priestly duties. Had he been tried and found guilty of being a heretic, he would not have been allowed to continue.

In its ruling Wednesday, the panel of eight bishops declared that a 1979 resolution against the ordination of non-celibate gays is nonbinding.

Before the ruling, the Episcopal Church allowed only the ordination of married heterosexuals, celibate single heterosexuals and celibate homosexuals. The ruling did not say whether the church now condones the ordination of gays.

"We are not giving an opinion on the morality of same-gender relationships. We are deciding the narrower issue on whether or not a bishop is restrained" from ordaining active homosexuals, said Bishop C. Cabell Tennis, a panel member and bishop of Delaware.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

The heat was back across the Permian Basin on Wednesday. The temperature reached 103 degrees, beating the old record for the day of 102 set in 1988. It also was about 10 degrees above normal. A summer-like pattern is in place and won't change until the weekend. This means more record heat is in the forecast, with triple-digit readings a good bet through Saturday.

Marine music man

Once more, with spirit, 'Hail to the Chief'

WASHINGTON (AP) — One day, John Bourgeois was at work at his regular job site, playing the French horn with the United States Marine Band for the visiting crown prince of Japan.

Thirty-four years later, Bourgeois was back in the White House — as he had been hundreds and hundreds of times in the interlude — this time directing the band. He looked up and saw the same guest, who by now was Japan's emperor.

Bandmaster Bourgeois had gone full circle.

Now the band leader, who can't count the times he has led "Hail to the Chief," is preparing to retire in July as the 25th leader of the oldest professional musical organization in America. It's the United States Marine Band, whose chief military mission is making music for presidents and their guests.

Or, as one of the band members put it: "The White House is our main gig."

Bourgeois, 61, who rose from private to colonel, has led his musicians through joyful and solemn times. He took them by boat to Liberty Island for the rededication of the Statue of Liberty — the band had also played at its original dedication in 1886 — and he led them on a tour of the old Soviet Union, playing the tunes of John Philip Sousa under the portrait of Vladimir Lenin.

And under his baton the band put sound to a nation's sorrow when it played at the funeral of John F. Kennedy at the request of his widow.

Bourgeois, pronounced boor-ZWHA', repeats with pride what he heard President Bush tell his successor, Bill Clinton: "The best thing about being president is the Marine Band." Every president has loved the band; Thomas Jefferson gave it its title, "The President's Own."

Hundreds of times a year, and often on short notice, the band plays at the White House, welcoming a potentate, accompanying a soloist from Las Vegas or a star of ballet, or playing music to dance by.

Sometimes its tunes accompany history, as when Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rabin made peace on the White House lawn and the band played on.

It is more of a concert band than a marching unit, even though John Philip Sousa, its 17th and most famous conductor, composed the spirited marches that still give a rush to high school football teams across America.

Bourgeois has led the 147 musicians, including 40 women, for 17 years. Son of an Louisiana oilman, he is the progeny of two famous Cajun names — a Bourgeois married to a Boudreau. He is also a gourmet Cajun cook, famous for his wicked jambalaya.

In an interview in the Marine Barracks on Capitol Hill, where a battlefield-sized desktop bears his collection of toy soldier bandsmen (some of whose directors are modeled after him), Bourgeois recalled making music under nine presidents:

—The time Leonard Bernstein, dressed in a cape, was in the White House audience. Bourgeois spotted him, summoned him, handed him the baton with a single word — "maestro" — and stood by while the premier musician of his day conducted the band in the ballet music from "Aida."

—The time in 1978 when the band played the Romanian national anthem for the arrival of communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, only to learn that the anthem had been changed.

The Marines were embarrassed but blameless, Bourgeois says. To guard against just that sort of faux pas, the band drum major had sung the anthem's melody over the telephone to someone in the Romanian Embassy. What the embassy didn't know was that Bucharest had adopted a new anthem several months earlier.

—And another incident in the Carter administration, this one a tender one:

The band was setting up for a performance and off to the side daughter Amy Carter and her violin class were practicing "The Gavotte" from Bach's "French Suite No. 3." It is a piece the Marine orchestra plays as dignitaries and the president enter the White House on state occasions.

Softly, suddenly, spontaneously, the Marines' strings joined in. The girls and the professionals finished the piece together.

The president was touched, Bourgeois said. Among presidents, he said, Carter was "the best listener."

Bourgeois got to know all his presidents, and has a good word for each. He remembered an occasion when Ronald Reagan was leaving office. Bourgeois had heard that Reagan once played the harmonica. So he presented him with one.

Reagan hesitated, and Bourgeois worried. He thought he may have made a mistake. Then the president put it to his lips and out came the "Red River Valley." It may have been rusty, but it was music to Bourgeois' ears.

Some statistics printed in Wednesday's edition of the Reporter-Telegram concerning the Midland Christian softball all-state players were incorrect.

Lacy Moore, selected to the TAPPS Class A All-State team, hit .486 on the season and had 44 RBIs for the Lady Mustangs.

Mindi Sheppard, another of the six Midland Christian girls named to the team, hit .398 this season with 29 RBIs.

Nashville payment

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — City officials are prepared to swallow a $25 million NFL relocation fee even though Nashville won't get the Houston Oilers for another two years.

Nashville lawyer Byron Trauger, who helped negotiate the $292 million package to bring the team to town, said no legal action is expected to try to reduce the fee.

A $30 million contingency fee was built into the package and would cover the relocation fee along with stadium cost overruns. The city would pay $20 million with Oilers owner K.S. "Bud" Adams paying the remaining $5 million.

Officials have now obligated themselves to paying that fee after a special meeting Tuesday morning in which the Metro Sports Authority approved the final lease to move the team to Nashville.

Adams signed the lease, which binds the Oilers to the city for 30 years.

The fee reimburses the other 29 NFL owners for revenue losses. With the Oilers relocation, league revenues would go up, meaning the league salary cap would rise also.

Whalers stay

HARTFORD, Conn. — The Hartford Whalers said today they will remain in Connecticut for the next two years, but will leave after that if the team's economic situation doesn't improve.

"If the economic performance does not improve in two years, the franchise will be gone," owner Peter Karmanos said.

Karmanos said the team hasn't struck a deal with the state to ease financial losses. The Whalers could stay longer if an agreement is reached, he said.

Fore! Travelers tee off for 17 again

■ Arkansas left fielder Chris Fick drives in seven runs as the Travelers score 17 runs for the second straight night and pound the Angels 17-5.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Chris Fick might have become a minor league rotisserie fan's ultimate acquisition.

The Arkansas Traveler left fielder hit his first cycle (a single, double, triple and home run in the same game), went 5-for-6, and had seven RBIs in the Travelers' 17-5 blowout win of the Midland Angels Wednesday night at Christensen Stadium.

"This is the best game I have had in my life," said Fick, whose cycle was his first-ever at any level. "This is the best you can do. I have seen it on TV, but to do it is a great feeling."

Fick, who has three home runs and 12 RBI in the five game series against Midland (19-21), had an RBI double in the first, a double in the second that drove in two, and three RBIs in the third with a home run to right center. After a single in the top of the fifth and a RBI on a fielder's choice in the top of the sixth,

LUBBOCK — Matt Howe went 4-for-5 with three runs scored and an RBI as Texas Christian defeated Baylor 12-5 Wednesday in the opening round win of the Southwest Conference tournament.

It was the first time the Horned Frogs (34-31) have ever won a first-round game in the double-elimination tournament. Their reward is a second-round game Friday against regular-season champion Texas (36-20), which had a first-round bye.

TCU, seeded fifth, will face the Longhorns with a fresh bullpen as Flint Wallace (10-5) threw a complete game Wednesday. He allowed 12 hits, walked one and struck out seven.

The Horned Frogs scored four runs off Baylor's Kip Wells (5-6) in the second inning, erasing a 2-1 deficit, and they knocked out Wells during another four-run rally in the sixth, which put TCU up 11-3.

The fourth-seeded Bears (31-27) were led by shortstop Scott Morrison's three hits.

Baylor next plays in an elimination game Friday. The Bears' opponent will be the winner of Thursday's elimination

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SONS: THE BENAVIDEZ TRADITION

The name game

■ Lee second baseman Nick Benavidez is proving he's more than just the coach's son: he's a player, too.

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

LEE BASEBALL

Throughout his 18-year life, Nick Benavidez has had to live with a moniker which, for most, has been likened to the baseball kiss of death: The coach's son.

Benavidez, the Midland Lee baseball team's starting second baseman, has had to fight through not only occasional spells of bad play like all other ball players do, but the constant scrutiny and second-guessing from fans and opponents which go along with the tag of coach's son.

"Playing for my dad is hard sometimes, but you've just got to go out there and prove to everyone that you're not on the team just because you're dad is the coach," said Benavidez, who has played baseball in the city of Midland since he was five years old. "You want to take on the criticism and prove them wrong, but whatever you do, there will still be some doubters."

This is Benavidez's second season on the varsity team, but the 5-foot-7, 150-pound Midland native has been around the program a lot longer than that. During his freshman year he videotaped the Rebels' games for dad to help give Lee one more weapon against its opponents. He also knows his dad's coaching style so well he can almost act as an extra coach on the field.

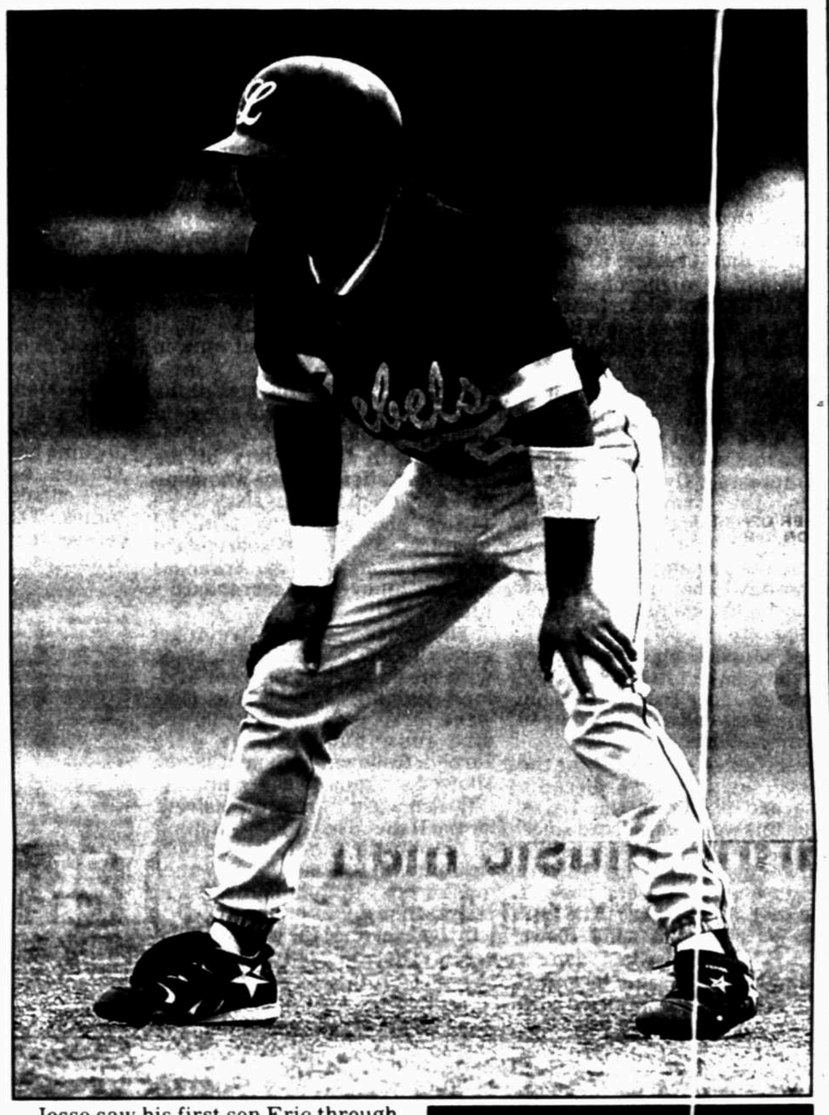
"I've been watching him coach for so long, since about the 8th- or 9th-grade, that I almost know what he's going to call," Benavidez said. "I make sure I know where I'm going to be when the ball is hit, and if I know what coach is going to do, then I can help put people out on the field in the right places."

When both Benavidez's are on the field, its strictly business. Nick knows when he trots onto Ernie Johnson Field for practice or a game, Coach Benavidez is waiting for him, not his dad Jesse.

"When we're on the field I call him coach because that's what he is and that's what he's doing," Nick said. "He's out there to do his job and you've got to respect his position. He's the coach so I'm going to call him coach."

After practice, both try and leave the game on the field, but sometimes its hard to do that.

"When we get home, if he has something to say about my hitting or whatever, then I'll listen to him," Nick said. "He's one of role models along with my brother Eric (a sophomore on the Lubbock Christian University team and former Rebel). I'm glad he's my coach."



Jesse saw his first son Eric through the Rebel program and is now about the send Nick on to college ball. He's tried to treat both of them as players first and sons second, and sometimes the pressure to make sure they don't get preferential treatment turns against him.

"When you have to coach your own sons you tend to be a little harder on them than the other players, but its been great having both of them on the team," said Jesse, who is in his sixth year as head coach of the Rebel base-

TERRY WILLIAMSON

The Iceman won't cometh to Basin...at least not now

The puck won't stop in Odessa this year.

At least, that was the word from Western Professional Hockey League vice president Bob Destocki this week when he told a gathering of Texas sports editors that the "Midland-Odessa franchise is a year away from reality."

Williamson

According to Destocki, however, Odessa is still a major interest for the newly formed WPHL, which will begin play in October with at least six teams, and maybe seven.

The WPHL is trying to work out some type of agreement to use Odessa's Ector County Coliseum with Midland Angels owners Miles Prentice and Bob Richmond being considered as owners of the WPHL franchise.

Destocki says that Austin, Waco, Amarillo, El Paso and Albuquerque, N.M., and a team in the tri-city area of Killeen, Temple and Belton will form the opening league effort, starting in October with the season running through March.

Also, San Angelo could still be added to that list before the season starts, giving the league seven teams. San Angelo may be close to putting a team on ice and already have over 600 season tickets sold in the last couple of weeks.

But Destocki also said that he would like to have teams in Midland-Odessa and Lubbock by next season. He also said the league had an interest in Abilene, but that the Key City was not being considered for a franchise at this time.

Of course, the major problem for the Ector County facility is the fact that there is no capability for ice. It's a little hard to play hockey without ice. Still, Destocki said that they put ice in the Belton arena (Bell County Civic Center) for around $200,000. So, that is the immediate hang-up as the parties decide how the ice will be paid for. Of course there is another small problem in that beer is not sold at the Ector County site, a fact that doesn't sit well with prospective owners who are concerned with the bottom line.

Destocki said that the league will have a salary cap and compares the league to Double-A baseball. The players will be recruited from the remaining pool of players who don't stay with the NHL, the Triple-A level American Hockey League or the International Hockey League. In short, it will be a developmental league with some cast-off veterans. The league requires each team to have 17 players under the salary cap and three marquee players (three to five years pro experience). The marquee players will be with the club in a year-round role with a personal service contract of some sort.

Destocki says an average salary will be around $350 a week plus housing and meal money.

The league opener will be Oct. 19 and run to March. Mid-March is the playoffs and over by mid-April. The league has a 64-game schedule (32 home games). A team could play as many as 77 games if the playoffs go the full route.

Ticket prices with each league team will vary from a high ticket of $12 to a low of around $5.

Destocki says that a team would need to average around 4,000 per contest to survive.

That seems highly ambitious for the Midland-Odessa area. The Midland Angels have never averaged 4,000 per contest in all the years they have been here. Granted, the WPHL will have only 32 home games instead of the 70 or so of the Angels. But factor in that the league starts in the height of the District 4-5A football race and you don't get a great starting place, and then you hit the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons where it's a proven fact that nothing draws particularly well in the Basin.

Also, no one seems to know just what kind of hockey interest there is in the Basin. It is known that there is a climb in interest, but you are only guessing when it comes to knowing if there is enough fans out there who will support an effort of this size.

If the WPHL does come to Odessa in Oct., 1997, it will come in as a gamble. Averaging 4,000 per contest during football, basketball, soccer, swimming, golf, softball and baseball seasons is a factor the Midland Angels never had to overcome. And the Angels don't draw really well, except weekends, until after school is out.

This could be an interesting step in the ever-expanding sports mushroom. There is a limit to how much an area can — or will — support. Is there room for hockey? We may get a chance to find out.

Rammel rams in three, United win

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Steve Rammel scored three goals Wednesday night to lead the D.C. United to a 5-2 victory over the Columbus Crew in Major League Soccer.

The teams met before a crowd of 7,422, the lowest attendance so far this season at RFK Stadium.

Rammel scored in the 28th, 48th and 57th minutes, while Diaz Arce scored in the 67th and 70th minutes.

Brian McBride connected for Columbus in the 76th minute, while Adrian Paz scored in the 85th minute.

The United is 2-6 for the season, third in the Eastern Conference. Columbus is 3-4 and is second in the conference.

Easy schedule key to Galaxy start

By Tom Timmerman
Los Angeles Daily News

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Galaxy, with its 5-0 start, has certainly been the talk of the young Major League Soccer season.

But what a lot of people are talking about is how the schedule has worked to the team's benefit.

The Galaxy has played three of its five games at home and against only three teams — Washington, New York/New Jersey and San Jose — which are among the losingest in the league. The Galaxy has played no midweek games, giving it a week between matches to prepare and rest. Also, the team is one of only a few not to have played without some of its best players early in the season.

"The schedule is very good for us at the moment," said coach Lothar Osiander. "It's good for us for two weeks, then it gets tough."

The Galaxy has two more home games, against Kansas City on Sunday and Columbus on May 26, before heading out on its first extended road trip of the year — to Tampa Bay, New England and New York/New Jersey. The New England game, on June 6, will be the first midweek game for both teams.

And what benefits the Galaxy now will catch up with it late in the season. In one stretch in July and August, the team plays six of nine games on the road.

"We have a heavy schedule in August or September," Osiander said. "Hopefully by then we'll find some cohesion for when we play some close games."

"New York's played five, we've played five," pointed out forward Harut Karapetyan, refuting the claim the Galaxy has benefited from its light schedule. "They've lost three games and won two in shootouts. I don't think the schedule works in your favor. It's how you prepare. I don't think the schedule makes any difference."

The team also has gotten some breaks. It could have been tied by San Jose on April 28 had Eric Wynalda's free kick in the final minutes been a few inches to the right, and the decisive goal against New York/New Jersey bounced in off a defender.

"Everyone says we've been lucky to win five games," said midfielder Jorge Salcedo. "The thing is, we create so many chances. If you look at it another way, you could say we've been unlucky. Once we start putting shots away, we could be winning 5-, 6-1."

Salcedo pointed to another reason for the Galaxy's success. It has gotten four of its 11 goals from its UCLA contingent: two from Salcedo and one each from Cobi Jones and Gregg Vanney.

ANGELS: Fick cycle paces Travelers

(From 1C)

Fick went up against Mike Holtz looking to swing the bat. The result was him making a little noise even if he didn't realize it.

"I thought he might come with a curve and he went with a fastball," said Fick, whose seven RBI are also a career high. "I just swung at it."

Fick, who will keep the ball he hit for a triple to remember the night, highlighted the power production that would make TU Electric impressed. Over the last two nights, the Travelers (17-19) scored 34 runs and had 52 runs in the five-game set, winning three. The 20 hits Tuesday night and 17 Wednesday either tied or set new season highs against the Angels this season.

That happens when all but two Travelers have hits. Like KCRS radio announcer Bob Hards said, the Travelers will have to dragged away from Christensen.

"Everybody has been hitting the ball well," said Fick, who became the second player in the Texas League this week and second since 1990 to hit for the cycle (Jackson's Russ Johnson was the other). "This is a great hitters park. I would love to play here. The ball jumps out and the wind blows here."

In all, the Travelers, which never trailed, had five players with multiple hits. Fick had five, Dee Dalton and Jeff Murphy had three and Tony Diggs and Jeff Berblinger had two each. Those five also score multiple runs. That pleased Arkansas manager Rick Mahler as much as the pitching did. Mesquite native Sean Lowe, 2-1, had a solid performance for the Travelers as did the four relievers who came to fill in.

"The last two nights we swung the bat well," Mahler said. "That is a week's worth of great work in two days.

"The key for us (the rest of the way) is the pitching. We are solid throughout the staff."

Now with the solidity of the Travelers offense, there was some bad play from the Angels.

How bad were the Midland Angels? Well, the scoreboard couldn't even keep up. Arkansas had one hit over the scoreboard's limit of 19.

Those hits went with five Angel errors which had as much to do with the damage as the poor Midland pitching. Jon DeClue (1-2) went three innings and allowed nine runs, but only two were earned. Reliever Anthony Chavez allowed six runs on seven hits.

It also wasn't great offensively for the Halos. The Angels did jump on Lowe in the first for three runs on four hits. They could only muster one run and four hits the rest of the way and didn't record a fly ball out until the bottom of the eight. That showed the control that Arkansas had.

Midland is 3 1/2 games out of first place in the Texas League West while Arkansas is three games out in the East.

After Wednesday's game at Christensen Stadium hundreds of women participated in the Diamond Dig.

If the Angels' pitching and fielding do not improve, the those women might as well have not only dug up that diamond but started on the Angels' first-half grave.

WEDNESDAY ANGELIC: The Angels played the last few innings of the game without manager Mario Mendoza who was ejected after arguing balls and strikes...The Angels went 4-6 in the 10-game homestand and fell below .500 for the season...The Angels were outscored 34-7 in the last two games...The Angels have a day off before traveling to Tulsa and Arkansas.

SWC: TCU, Rice and Tech win openers game between the other two Wednesday losers.

(From 1C)

Rice 9, Texas A&M 7

Jeff Venghaus hit an RBI double to center, then scored on a double steal in the eighth inning to ruin a Texas A&M comeback in the Owls' 9-7 first-round win.

The Owls (36-21) appeared headed to an easy triumph until A&M (36-20) erased a 7-2 lead with a five-run seventh inning, highlighted by two-run homers from Brian Benefield and Jeff Bailey.

Rice's rally secured its first-ever opening round victory in the SWC tournament in seven tries.

The Owls also maintained their mastery over A&M with their fifth straight victory in their season series.

On Thursday, Rice will play Texas Tech. The Aggies will play the Houston.

Despite giving up the game-tying homer, Rice reliever Matt Anderson improved to 8-3 with the win. Matt Blank (6-5) absorbed the loss.

Texas Tech 11, Houston 5

Clint Bryant drove in three runs and Jimmy Frush pitched a complete game in Texas Tech's victory over Houston.

Texas Tech (45-11), the tournament's second seed, fell behind quickly 4-0. But by the end of the second inning, a two-run Bryant double and a two-run David Lindstrom homer had helped the Red Raiders to an 8-4 lead.

Houston (29-27), one of just two teams to have beaten the Red Raiders at home during the regular season, never rebounded.

Frush, the league's most dominating pitcher this season, improved to 10-4 with the win. Houston reliever John Box fell to 5-4 with the loss.

The Red Raiders play Rice in each team's second game Thursday, while Houston will play Texas A&M in the tournament's first elimination game.

NICK: Senior follows brother on team

ball program. "Nick has handled it real well. He's gone out there and proved he can play. I'm going to miss him next year."

Nick has been looking at a number of colleges to play baseball for next season, and following in his father's and brother's footsteps at LCU is not out of question.

Knee surgery for an injury on the field in summer league play four years ago and a broken arm contributed to Nick running an 8.5-second 60-yard dash, but after two years on the varsity team, he's running a 6.8 in the 60, and feels like he can even get better.

"I've been talking to Wayland Baptist and some of the Abilene Schools, but what I'd really like to do is red-shirt at LCU," Nick said. "I think that if I could sit out a year and work on my speed I could be a really good ball player."

Nick never wanted to play unless he earned his position, and the steady-fielding second baseman has done just that this season. After making an error in a game — and he made only six in the regular season — you can see Nick taking ground balls, trying to shore up any weaknesses in his game.

He finished the regular season with a .313 average (.333 in district games), four doubles, three triples and even turned the hit by pitch into an offensive weapon for the Rebels.

"I'm not going to bail out on a curve ball inside and look dumb when it breaks back over the plate," said Nick, who has been hit 17 times this season in 34 games. "I just stand in there and wait for my pitch and if I get hit, I get hit."

Nick has turned up his game another level since the Rebels got into the playoffs.

He has three doubles and a triple which was nearly a home run in Lee's playoff sweeps of Plainview and El Paso Irvin.

"There was a guy up in the stands from Irvin who kept yelling 'it's the coach's son'," Nick said. "And that's when I went out and hit the triple off the wall."

Nick Benavidez has turned a baseball negative into a positive for the Rebels.

Donnie Brian fights out of Chris Brian's Martial Arts and Fitness Center.

Telecable will record it and it should be televised in the future.

Burkett shoots below his age

For the second time, Bob Burkett went out and did what many other golfers can only dream of. The 78-year-old Midlander shot below his age with a 77 at Midland Country Club.

Burkett, who shot his age when he was 70 had the round on May 10 and it was witnessed by Don Haden. The (37-40) round on the par-72 course consisted of no birdies. For Haden it was just another day at the course.

"I don't get really excited," Haden said. "It is a good feeling that I can still play. It was a lot of fun. I expect to do it when I am 100."

Lee pair sign

Keith Sawyer and Israel Boyd, two key members of the Midland Lee boys basketball team last season, have signed letters-of-intent to play college basketball next year.

Sawyer, who was the team's second leafding scorer at 12.3 points per game, has decided to stay close to home and and will play for Odessa College in the WJCAC next year.

He scored a season-high 22 points in a Dec. 12 win over Coppell.

Boyd, who averaged 8.8 points a game for the Rebels last year, will venture out across the state and play for Cisco Junior College. His season high of 19 points came in a Jan. 12 win over Odessa Permian.

The pair were key components of a Lee team which finished in second place in District 4-5A with a 9-3 league mark.

Texas-Louisiana league ready for third season, now on solid ground

By Jamie Aron
AP Sports Writer

The Texas-Louisiana League has had plenty of bumps and bruises in its first two seasons as an independent minor league, everything from huge brawls to losing a franchise because of the devaluation of the Mexican peso.

But as the league prepares to begin its third season Thursday, things seem to finally be on solid ground.

"There's no doubt we've turned a corner," Jack Lazorko, the league's vice president of baseball operations, said Wednesday. "The last couple of months, we've started to show a profit."

Lazorko said the biggest growth has been of the league's reputation.

"It's unbelievable where we've gone from the beginning in November 1993 to where we are now," Lazorko said.

With eight teams last year, the league drew more than 800,000 fans. Corpus Christi and Mobile, Ala., have lost their teams, reducing the league to six teams this season. Previously vacated cities include Laredo, San Antonio and Pueblo, Colo.

The returning teams include the defending champion in Lubbock; two-time runner-up Alexandria, La.; Amarillo; Abilene; Tyler; and the Rio Grande Valley.

The league's goal is basically to serve as a farm team for farm teams.

Minor league clubs needing to fill a hole can pluck a player who may have been lost in the shuffle of another organization or they can take a shot at a former big leaguer who has rehabilitated his career.

Lazorko estimates that about 80 players have signed big-league contracts, although he admits that many of those came during last year's strike. Still, it shows that people are paying attention to the independent organization.

This season's crop of former big-leaguers trying to bounce back includes pitchers Al Osuna, Todd Burns, Ken Patterson and Doug Piatt.

All managers also are ex-big leaguers, most of whom are trying to break back into baseball as coaches. Many of last year's succeeded, leaving only Greg Minton of Lubbock and Stan Cliburn of Alexandria as returning managers this year. Minton's team beat Cliburn's for last year's title.

This year's new managers are Jim Nettles, Graig's brother, in Amarillo; Phil Stephenson, brother of Wichita State coach Gene, in Abilene; Dave Hilton, who has been with the Atlanta Braves the last three years, in Tyler; and John Pacella in the Rio Grande Valley.

This season has yet to begin and one player already has gone to the California Angels. Former Boston Red Sox player Jeff McNeely was signed Tuesday after playing in a few exhibition games with Tyler.

The league will play a 100-game schedule through Labor Day. The winners of each half-season plus the teams with the next two best overall records will reach the post-season.

Political commentator George Will is the league's commissioner, and Lazorko insists it's not a gimmick. Lazorko said he wouldn't hesitate getting Will's advice before handing out suspensions or fines, or dealing with other problems that may arise.

Lazorko also said Will is planning to visit each league city at least once this year. The only trip that's set is July 10 in Alexandria for the league's all-star game.

Rookie of the Year voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Voting results for the NBA Rookie of the Year as selected by a national panel of sportswriters and broadcasters:

Arvydas Sabonis, Portland 17
Joe Smith, Golden State 15
Michael Finley, Phoenix 2
Jerry Stackhouse, Philadelphia 2
Kevin Garnett, Minnesota 1

Stoudamire awarded NBA Rookie of Year

Associated Press

TORONTO — Fans at the SkyDome booed when the Toronto Raptors picked Damon Stoudamire in the first round of last June's NBA draft. However, he turned the boos into cheers with a stellar rookie season.

Stoudamire, who averaged 19 points, 9.3 assists and four rebounds for the expansion Raptors, won the league's Rookie of the Year award Wednesday in a landslide vote.

"Damon has given us a lot of joy and he's brought a lot to this franchise, a lot to this city," said Raptors general manager Isiah Thomas, who congratulated Stoudamire with a kiss.

"He really put us on the map in terms of an expansion team, in terms of credibility and respectability."

Stoudamire received 76 of a possible 113 votes from a panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Portland's Arvydas Sabonis, runner-up for the league's Sixth Man award Tuesday, was second in the rookie voting with 17. Golden State's Joe Smith was third with 15.

"This is a great honor," said Stoudamire, a 5-foot-11 point guard from the University of Arizona. "It's something I worked very hard for."

Stoudamire led all first-year players in assists and steals, set a rookie record with 133 3-pointers, and was MVP of the rookie game during All-Star weekend. He twice scored more than 30 points in a game and recorded the only triple-double in Raptors' history with 20 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists against Seattle on Nov. 21.

"It's very meaningful for me that a lot of voters saw the importance of me to this team," said Stoudamire.

Stoudamire, the seventh pick in last year's draft, is the lowest selection since Mark Jackson to win the rookie award. Jackson, a No. 18 pick in the first round, was the league's top rookie in 1987-88 for the New York Knicks.

The Raptors posted a 21-61 record in their first season, winning six more games than the league's other new entry in Vancouver.

Magic brush off Hawks, head to Eastern finals

By Fred Goodall
AP Sports Writer

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal made sure the Orlando Magic didn't squander another opportunity to close out the Atlanta Hawks.

The all-star center bounced back from a subpar performance that may have been related to chest pains, scoring 27 points and grabbing 16 rebounds Wednesday night in a 96-88 victory that sends Orlando into the Eastern Conference finals against the Chicago Bulls.

The Magic eliminated the Bulls and an ineffective Michael Jordan in six games in the conference semifinals a year ago before going on to their first appearance in the NBA Finals.

" Of course, they are a great team and we just want to go out and play hard," O'Neal said.

The Hawks avoided a sweep by winning Game 4 in Atlanta and stayed close for three quarters this time before fading down the stretch. Nick Anderson and Dennis Scott hit 3-pointers in a 14-3 spurt that enabled the Magic to open a 96-83 lead with two minutes to go.

O'Neal was 11-for-14 from field, but still struggled from the foul line, making 5 of 15 free throws.

The Magic revealed that O'Neal, who missed 10 of 17 shots from the field and 12 of 17 free throws Monday night, complained of feeling tightness in his chest at halftime of Game 4.

A team physican examined the 7-foot-1, 325-pound center before he played in the second half of the 104-99 loss, then O'Neal visited a cardiologist on Tuesday. All tests were negative, Magic spokesman Joel Glass said.

"I went to the doctor and he said it was only stress," O'Neal said.

Anfernee Hardaway had 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Magic. Grant Long led the Hawks with 24 points. Steve Smith was held to 16 on 6-for-19 shooting after scoring 35 in Atlanta's only victory in the series.

"My thoughts are to just play hard and make everything for them tough the entire day and make them work, because they will make you work for everything," Hardaway said of playing the Bulls, beginning Sunday afternoon.

After scoring 44 points in the opening quarter of Game 4, the Hawks were held to 20 this time. Still, the Magic had trouble building the comfortable lead that seemed to crush Atlanta's spirit in the first three games of the series.

Anderson finished with 16 points and Horace Grant had 10 for Orlando. Stacey Augmon scored 17 and Laettner had 11 for Atlanta.

Cotton back on Suns bench

■ After taking over for the fired Paul Westphal last season, Cotton Fitzsimmons has decided to remain Phoenix's coach.

By Walter Berry
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX — Cotton Fitzsimmons announced today that he will return to coach the Phoenix Suns for another season.

"I love to coach, but I don't plan to do this forever and ever," said Fitzsimmons, 65. "There's no timetable, but I hope this will be the last team I coach. I hope I can get the Suns turned around and then somebody can take over and coach this team for a long, long time."

Fitzsimmons, whose 832 career victories in 20 seasons ranks seventh in NBA history, came out of the front office to take over for the fired Paul Westphal on Jan. 16.

Phoenix, off to its worst start since 1987-88 at 14-19, wound up 41-41. It was the first time the Suns failed to win at least 50 games since 1988-89.

San Antonio then beat Phoenix in four games in the first round of the playoffs and the second-guessing began about whether Fitzsimmons would return.

But Fitzsimmons said he and team president Jerry Colangelo decided months ago that he could remain coach if he wanted to.

"Physically, I feel great and I'm pumped about coaching. The juices flow when you're doing what you want to do," Fitzsimmons said at a news conference. "I didn't like taking over for Paul. But I will enjoy being this team's coach from day one of training camp.

"We need to be better defensively, be more agile, get a better running game and improve our outside shooting. We also need to ger tougher. We're soft sometimes even when we foul. We have to get fires in our bellies."

With the Suns more than $12 million over the 1996-97 salary cap, Fitzsimmons said the team "is out of the free-agent market for a few years" and likely will make few major moves this summer.

"I think we'll do with what we have and retool it slightly," he said. "I'm not afraid to go to war with who's here now. But I'm not going to paint you a pretty picture with us winning 62 games."

Prices inch up

NEW YORK — Energy prices turned mixed in the futures market Wednesday amid reports that a tentative agreement had been reached to resume limited Iraqi oil sales.

In quiet trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the June contract for crude oil settled up 6 cents at $21.48 a barrel.

Traders said the tentative Iraqi deal had no major impact on prices.

On Wednesday, a senior diplomat said negotiators from the United Nations and Iraq had reached a tentative deal to let Iraq resume oil sales, but were still waiting to hear whether President Saddam Hussein would accept the terms.

In other trading on the New York Merc Wednesday, natural gas for delivery next month closed at $2.299 per 1,000 cubic feet, up 0.026 cent.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar soared against the yen Wednesday as Japanese financial officials made clear they were not going to raise interest rates anytime soon.

But the dollar dipped against the German mark and finished mixed overall against major currencies in a day of otherwise lackluster trading.

In New York, the dollar traded at 106.96 yen, up from 105.88 Tuesday. The dollar traded at 1.5335 marks, just down from 1.5340.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Tuesday: 1.2530 Swiss francs, up from 1.2505; 5.1895 French francs, down from 5.1951; 1,553 Italian lire, down from 1,556; and 1.3677 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3684.

The British pound traded at $1.5125, down from $1.5140.

Stock rally fizzles

NEW YORK — A stock market rally fizzled into a mixed showing Wednesday as the bond market lost some steam and investors secured some profits.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose just 0.73 point to 5,625.44 after posting a gain of almost 50 points earlier in the session.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a slim margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 447.70 million shares.

The NYSE composite index rose 0.12 to 356.64, the index's third consecutive record close. But the S&P 500 fell 0.18 to 665.42, ending a two-day string of new highs.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 0.93 to 1,233.56; the Russell 2000 rose 0.65 to 358.11; and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 0.23 to 600.55, ending a two-day string of record highs.

Executives discuss future of utilities

■ Energy marketing undergoing radical changes, Lone Star Gas executive tells group.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The energy bill of the future will look a lot different than it does today, says a top natural gas executive.

"In the future one customer could be buying his gas from Shell, while his next door neighbor could be buying his from Enron. The entire energy marketing industry is in the process of radical change," says James W. Hinds, Senior Vice President of Distribution Operations for Lone Star Gas.

Hinds was in Midland with Senator Teel Bivens to address the Republican Senate Club and explain the public policy ramifications of the merger between Lone Star and TU Electric last April. If the $1.7 billion merger is approved, all of Lone Star Corp., except for Lone Star Exploration, will become a wholly owned subsidiary of TU Electric.

The natural gas executive said the merger was driven in part by a need to achieve economies of scale and expand the customer base, but the deep-seated reason behind the merger was the rapidly changing energy markets, and more particularly the deregulation of the electric and natural gas industries.

Hinds noted that in 1980, Lone Star transported 100 percent of the gas in its pipelines for its own account, acting as gas purchaser and transporter for its own customers. In 1984 the door was opened to allow electrical utilities to transport natural gas in its pipelines, and the amount of gas transported for others climbed to 26 percent. However, in 1995, through intense and free marketing, that number has now risen to 72 percent transported gas.

"In the near future every significant user will one day contract for his own natural gas. In the longer term, it may get down to each customer contracting for his own gas. In some states homeowner groups are already contracting for their gas. That's how intense competition will become in this new energy market. Natural gas and electricity will be bought much like you buy Sprint, MCI and AT&T today."

The near term market, says Hinds, will result in an unsettling transition in the electric market, a focus on energy prices, intensified marketing, an unbundling of services and more products for sale by utilities.

The long term market will be characterized by more and more mergers of gas and electric utilities, a combination of talents in the two market segments, more flexible rates and the selling of energy by the package instead of by the kilowatt or Mcf. "Computerized energy management systems for the home and business could become common place. They would monitor the entire facility and report problems in heating and cooling and automatically adjust temperatures."

In a deregulated market, Hinds said utility companies may be by-passed one day, with customers going directly to the supplier of their choice. That could leave some utilities with the unrealistic burden of having to pay off long term debt in a deregulated market, after taking on the debt in a regulated market.

He also noted that natural gas fuel cells that could make every home or business its own electric generating facility were a technology on the horizon.

"The whole question of electric generation will be the big legislative issue of the future for Texas," said Sen. Teel Bivens.

Program teaches management skills

■ Oil firm develops program based on bestselling book, will help train MISD staff.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Changing attitudes not only improves businesses, it can improve Midland public schools as well. That is the assumption of a local business alliance which has developed a training program for the staff of Midland Independent School District.

Coastal Management Corporation (CMC) of Midland is helping to develop a program based on the concepts introduced in the national bestseller "The 7 Habits of Highly Effective People" by Stephen R. Covey. The book teaches people to make decisions based on principles — such as integrity, honesty and fairness.

In 1991, Coastal Management took over operations of a large West Texas oil and gas property. At the time, more than 900 pumping wells were experiencing excessive failure rates, according to Bruce Lowe, CMC vice president of operations. CMC decided to involve company personnel in problem solving, to create winning situations among service companies, and to improve overall asset value by lowering costs and increasing revenue.

CMC formed alliances with companies involved in the processes of well maintenance, drilling/completion and supplies. Lowe said significant improvements were made, but after several years, improvements seemed to plateau.

"That's when we determined Covey's models were the best available to create positive change and improvement at all levels within the alliance," Lowe said, noting more than half of the Fortune 500 companies in American are currently using this training.

Pride Petroleum Services, the business partner with Emerson Elementary School, has trained seven staff members on campus with the program. Emerson Principal Mary Smith said the program is "life changing." The company paid $500 per staff member for training and Emerson paid for substitutes from the campus budget.

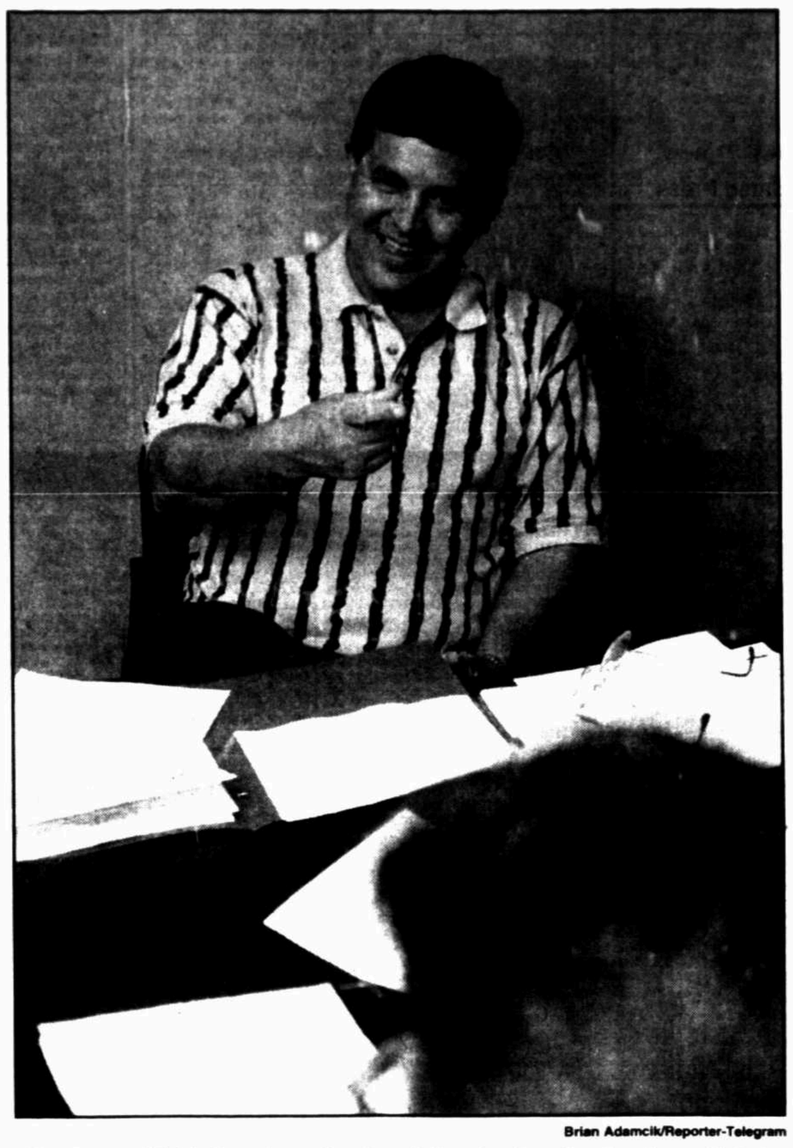
"Staff members who have been trained are excited about the training and are using the habits in working with parents, students, peers, and for their own self-development," Ms. Smith said.

The Seven Habits program has been hailed as one which improves relationships, efficiency and effectiveness. It also has been cited as a character builder.

"Building a character of total integrity and living the life of service that creates such unity isn't easy ... But it's possible," Covey states in his book. "It begins with the desire to center our lives on correct principles, to break out of the paradigms created by other centers and the comfort zones of unworthy habits."

"This is nothing new," said Mike Allen, training coordinator of Pride Petroleum Services and member of the business alliance. "The '7 Habits' just gives us a methodology to use what we've been taught all of our lives."

Lowe said Covey's concept of Principle Centered Leadership "focuses on timeless principles, paradigms and processes that have enabled effective people to achieve lasting and meaningful contributions."



Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Mike Allen of Pride Petroleum Services talks about professional growth training for MISD with fellow business alliance member Bruce Lowe of Coastal Management. A course based on Stephen Covey's "Seven Habits of Highly Effective People" will be offered to the district.

MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said he is sold on the value of the Covey concept of conflict resolution.

"There are federal judges who feel like the program offers strong conflict resolution," Allen said.

"Given the polarization and stress of our school board, and possible changes coming up due to unitary status, this can be valuable," Baressi said. He said the program, which teaches resolution so that no one comes out a loser, is an asset. "Rather than having a winner or loser or compromise with the cluster system (redesign), the board could come up with an alternative solution."

"The seven habits give us a methodology, rules to play by," Lowe said.

Allen said the success of Covey's concepts have been "very evident" in the business world. "It's amazing what has happened among companies in the (CMC-formed) alliance. It's almost as if we have become one entity with a shared vision."

"The business alliance believes that, if results that have been achieved using Covey content within the alliance can be reproduced within MISD and ECISD, vital improvements can be achieved resulting in improved effectiveness within the school district's administrative organization, improved synergy between the community and the school districts and, most importantly, a better education for our children."

The Seven Habits are: be proactive (producing tangible results rather than reacting negatively), begin with the end in mind (identify values before setting goals), put first things first, think "win-win," seek first to understand ... then be understood, synergize (learn to value different opinions and viewpoints resulting in higher quality decisions), and sharpen the saw (learn the importance of maintaining balance and perspective).

Seven Habits training sessions will begin for 60 MISD personnel May 29. As an investment to the community (with some costs paid by MISD), the alliance will offer training for the MISD school board, executive directors, directors, the superintendent and all campus principals. The school approved the training.

Government says factory output flat in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Factory output jumped in April but only because of the reopening of auto plants that had been shut down by a strike.

Another report, meanwhile, suggested that inventories were becoming lean enough that many businesses would have to meet demand with new orders and increased production rather than from stocks already on shelves and backlots.

Output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities shot up 0.9 percent last month, rebounding from March's 0.5 percent decline, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday. It was the second advance in industrial production in three months.

But the growth included a 19.2 percent surge in motor vehicles following the end of the 18-day strike in March that virtually shut down General Motors Corp. assembly plants. Excluding autos, production was unchanged from March.

Still, the recent data "continue to indicate moderate improvement in the manufacturing sector," said economist Marilyn Schaja of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. in New York.

David Orr, an economist at First Union Corp. in Charlotte, N.C., agreed.

Averaging the non-auto production for March and April produced a 1.8 percent annual growth rate, "which is fair to middlin'," he said. "Manufacturing definitely has a better tone to it."

The report also suggested little inflation pressures. It said the nation's industries were operating at 83 percent of capability in March, up from 82.5 percent a month earlier but still low enough to avoid shortages that would produce higher prices.

At the same time, the Commerce Department reported that business inventories declined 0.3 percent in March, the first drop since stockpiles fell 0.4 percent last December.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Individual stocks don't spread risk like mutual funds

By Bill Doyle

Q: I wanted to buy individual stocks, but the broker I went to tried to discourage me from doing so. He said it is better to buy shares of a mutual fund and that getting your own stocks "isn't worth it."

I would still like to purchase my own stocks, if it is worth it. Is it?

Doyle

A: It is, for some people — sometimes; it isn't for other people — other times. You really pose a rhetorical question, the answer to which depends on how each stock purchase works out.

It stands to reason that it's "worth it" when a stock you have bought moves up in market value. There's really no other way to measure your investment picks.

When you purchase an individual stock, you become part owner of a specific company. Your investment results are tied to that company's future financial results. If the company prospers, its earnings, dividends and stock price will increase.

But individual stock ownership does not provide diversification through spreading of risk. Even the best companies stumble from time to time.

You can diversify by owning stocks of a number of different companies. However, that can be a bother. Diversification comes easier by purchasing shares of a mutual fund.

By definition, a mutual fund is a "managed investment company." That means it holds stocks of many different companies in its portfolio, which it "manages" by frequent buying and selling.

When you invest in a mutual fund, you have diversification through professional management. You're less likely to have a big winner, as you might with an individual stock. But your risk of loss is greatly reduced.

In general, I go along with that broker's recommendation of mutual funds instead of individual stocks. Take a look at true no-load mutual funds, which allow you to save costs by avoiding all dealings with brokers.

Q: I'm told that, when buying individual stocks, you must buy at least 100 shares of every company you buy into. Is that true?

A: No. You can purchase anywhere from one share to as many shares as your checkbook will allow of any publicly traded stock.

However, because most stocks are traded in "round lots" of 100 shares, it sometimes is more expensive to buy or sell "odd lots" of from one to 99 shares.

Depending on how your brokerage firm executes your order, you might have to pay an odd-lot differential of either 12.5 cents or 25 cents per share on transactions involving fewer than 100 shares.

So, when placing an order to buy or sell in an odd lot, it makes sense to ask your broker exactly how your transaction will be handled — and what charges will be involved.

Q: I had an account with an out-of-state brokerage firm for a few months. The broker there made a number of stock transactions against my will, and the last was the worst of all.

I stand to lose more than $10,000 as a result of the broker's actions. Do I have the right to sue him and his firm for this misconduct and unauthorized actions?

A: Probably not. The agreement you signed when you opened the brokerage account almost certainly specified that any dispute you have with the broker and his firm will be settled by arbitration.

That precludes suing and leaves arbitration as your only course of action. Arbitration panels run by the National Association of Securities Dealers and various stock exchanges stand ready to hear your case.

Take heart. That's not as bad as it might seem. The NASD's arbitration unit, 33 Whitehall St., New York, NY 10020-4000, gets high marks for being evenhanded.

If you can back up your claim about the broker making unauthorized transactions in your account, by all means go to arbitration.

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
Tkr: The stock's ticker symbol.
How to use: The ticker symbol can help you get information about a company. Two important uses: Most services that provide stock quotes over the phone require the ticker symbol. Second, stock brokers and analysts can recognize stocks more easily with a ticker symbol.
Generally, ticker symbols resemble the company name although some – BUD for Anheuser Busch Cos. and FON for Sprint Corp. – are more related to what a company does. Tickers on the New York and Amex usually don't exceed three letters. On Nasdaq, they go up to five letters.
The names you see in this paper are abbreviations of the company name supplied by The Associated Press. Companies can help determine what their abbreviation will be. Overall, AP tries to use an abbreviation that will most closely match the full company name.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

Cityline 560-2400

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources, all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update, which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your career soars to new heights. An investment you make now will start to pay off in August. Domestic changes will have a positive effect on your emotional well-being. Be receptive to new ideas and alliances. Family ties grow stronger during the winter holidays. You should have no trouble keeping a romantic relationship on an even keel. A job offer you receive early in 1997 will sound very tempting. Think twice before changing course.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actor Pierce Brosnan, tennis star Gabriela Sabatini, superstar Janet Jackson, gymnast Olga Korbut.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be willing to take risks and the brass ring could be yours. Secret plans have a delightful impact. Good financial news will hasten a career decision.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business matters enjoy favorable influences. Collaboration is the key to lasting financial security. Say "yes" to a new assignment; it will give you a chance to shine.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone's change of heart works to your advantage. Your talents will fill the bill. Make certain your mate or partner is aware of what you need. Find new ways to relax with your loved ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Financial aid comes from out of the blue. There could be strings attached, however. Romance is in the air. Give your heart — you may get one back in return! New alliances look highly promising.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): High-tech concepts help you forge a new agreement. Your popularity is on the rise. Turn down invitations diplomatically. Remember, celebrity can be short-lived!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Others are relying heavily on your leadership. Perseverance and discretion will keep you on track. Rushing to meet a deadline may deplete your energies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A brainstorming session with close friends results in inspired ideas. Put them in writing before they evaporate. Loved ones are highly supportive. Your timing is perfect.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let a hunch tempt you to take foolish risks. A cool head will help you choose the right course. Protect joint funds by heeding experts' advice. Postpone shopping; you need to build savings!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Optimism reigns following a heart-to-heart chat with your mate. Short business trips could put you on to an exciting job offer. A move may sound better than it really is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your reluctance to borrow money could work against you today. With the right backing, a great idea can be turned into a bonanza. A parent's revelations could spark a domestic breakthrough. Everyone understands each other better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Turn the page on a new chapter in your career. Use joint funds to brighten your surroundings. A far-sighted financial strategy will ensure gains. A business associate may be the love of your life!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make certain your ideas have real substance. This is no time to take unnecessary risks. Assess a tense situation before acting. Logic helps you deal with a ruptured love affair.

The cards had been breaking normally in games at the club, and as a result Tommy had been experiencing a negative cash flow. The dreary weeks were relieved by moments such as this, when Tommy's rare talent at becoming a master when the trumps were stacked against him came shining through.

Only a glutton for punishment would make a preemptive jump on the East cards — small wonder West pushed to the five-level on a distributional giant. Had East known Tommy better, the futility of the double might have been obvious. But West had opened the bidding and East expected to make at least one trump trick, so ...

West led the king of diamonds, then shifted to a low heart when East started an echo with the jack, won in dummy with the ace. The queen of trumps was led, covered by the king and taken with the ace as West followed. A heart trick was conceded, and the heart continuation was ruffed in dummy. The seven of trumps was covered with the eight and won in the closed hand. When West showed out, the distribution became an open book.

A club to dummy provided the entry for a diamond ruff in the closed hand, and three rounds of clubs, ending on the table, produced the desired ending. Tommy was poised with J 5 of spades over East's 9 4 and a diamond from the board completed the coup, allowing declarer to score both trumps at the end and 11 tricks in all.

Melanie Griffith, Antonio Banderas exchange wedding vows in London

LONDON — Melanie Griffith and Antonio Banderas have married, a spokeswoman for the two actors said Wednesday.

Antonio Banderas and Melanie Griffith, seen in this file photo, were married in London Wednesday.

Robin Baum, a Los Angeles publicist for Griffith and Banderas, confirmed Wednesday that the couple got married in London, but said she couldn't provide details.

Banderas and Griffith are expecting a baby in September, the newspaper said.

The Sun reported that Banderas was divorced from actress Ana Arana last month. It said they split after Banderas fell for Griffith, his co-star on the set of the movie "Two Much."

Banderas, 35, recently has been making a movie of the musical "Evita" with Madonna in Budapest.

Griffith, 38, who starred in the 1988 movie "Working Girl," has two children — a son from a marriage to actor Steven Bauer and a daughter from one of her two marriages to Don Johnson. She and Johnson, who starred in the TV series "Miami Vice," divorced for the second time in January.

DAVIS, Calif. — Playwright Edward Albee says the title of his "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" wasn't creative genius, just good memory.

"I saw it scrawled in soap on a mirror in a saloon 10 years before I wrote the play ... and I remembered it all that time," said Albee, who lectured Monday at the University of California at Davis.

As for the 1966 movie adaption, Albee complained that it was shot in black and white, an aspect of the film generally praised.

"I wrote it in color," Albee said of the 1962 play, which depicts a bickering college professor and his wife.

Albee also said he was disappointed that the lead roles were given to Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. He said he had been promised Bette Davis and James Mason.

LOS ANGELES — Lawmakers hummed the familiar theme song to "Mission Impossible" as the star of the spy-thriller series, Peter Graves, took the podium at City Hall.

But he was not there Tuesday to talk about anything as glamorous as espionage, or even the film remake starring Tom Cruise.

Graves wanted to talk about leaf blowers.

"Leaf blowers are bad," Graves told council members considering a ban on the gas-powered gardening tools in residential areas.

"They call them leaf blowers, because, indeed, they do blow leaves around and around and around. But they also blow other things around," the 70-year-old actor said, mentioning fungus. "Are we going to put masks on our kids? In some areas of the world, plants, flowers and trees, and their arrangements together, have deep religious and philosophical meanings."

The council apparently agreed. The pro-ban vote was 9 to 4.

NEW YORK — Another flap is taking shape over the Tony Awards, with Broadway producer David Merrick charging that his "State Fair" score is being treated unfairly.

The score for "State Fair" was one of four nominated for best original score earlier this month. But Merrick said he was told that 11 of 15 songs wouldn't be considered for the award because they were lifted from a movie or other productions.

He said he might take legal action.

Merrick noted that other Broadway scores, namely "Beauty and the Beast," have borrowed from movies without having songs disqualified from Tony competition.

Tony spokesman Keith Sherman said the rules have been amended since "Beauty" was a contender in 1994. "We think they've been fairly treated, and we think this is a closed issue," Sherman said.

Last week, Julie Andrews turned down a Tony nomination for best actress in a musical to protest the snubbing of her show, "Victor, Victoria!," in every other category.

Royals end losing skid with 3-1 win over Texas

Associated Press

AL Roundup

ARLINGTON — Chris Haney pitched 7 2-3 shutout innings Wednesday night and the Kansas City Royals ended a four-game losing streak, downing the Texas Rangers 3-1.

Texas lost for the third time in 12 games.

Haney (2-4) gave up eight hits, walked none and struck out four. He improved to 4-0 lifetime against the Rangers.

Roger Pavlik (5-1) fell short in his bid to match the best start of a season by a Texas starting pitcher. Jeff Russell opened the 1988 season at 6-0.

Pavlik pitched his second complete game of the season, allowing eight hits, walking none and striking out eight.

Rusty Greer homered in the ninth off Royals reliever Jeff Montgomery, who got his ninth save.

Haney pitched out of several jams. In the seventh, he stranded runners at second and third when he got Kevin Elster to hit an inning-ending fly ball.

The Royals took a 1-0 lead on consecutive third-inning singles by Michael Tucker, Craig Pauquette and Bip Roberts.

Kansas City made it 2-0 in the fourth on Mike Macfarlane's single, scoring Joe Vitiello, who led off with a double.

The Royals added an unearned run in the fifth for a 3-0 lead. Roberts, who had three hits, led off with a double and eventually scored when Vitiello's grounder got through the legs of third baseman Dean Palmer.

Indians 5, Tigers 2

CLEVELAND — Dennis Martinez moved past Whitey Ford into a tie for 48th place on the career victory list, pitching Cleveland past Detroit.

Martinez (6-2) matched Waite Hoyt and Clark Griffith with his 237th lifetime win.

Martinez allowed six hits and one walk in seven innings. Julian Tavarez and Jose Mesa each pitched one scoreless inning, with Mesa striking out the side for his 15th save.

Albert Belle extended his hitting streak to a career-high 16 games with an RBI single in the first.

Orioles, Athletics rained out

OAKLAND — Wednesday's game between Baltimore and Oakland was postponed by rain.

No makeup date has been announced.

Twins 2, Blue Jays 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Frank Rodriguez pitched a six-hitter for the first complete game of his career, and Minnesota ended their four-game losing streak.

Rodriguez (3-4) had lost three straight decisions since April 19. He struck out four and walked two.

Rodriguez pitched the second complete game of the season for the Twins. Rich Robertson went eight innings in a loss May 3.

Pat Hentgen (4-3) gave up seven hits in eight innings. He lost to the Twins for the first time in six career decisions.

Red Sox 17, Angels 6

BOSTON — Mo Vaughn hit two of Boston's four homers, driving in four runs and leading the Red Sox to a win over California.

Mike Stanley also had four RBIs for the Red Sox, who scored in each of the first seven innings. Boston had its highest-scoring game since getting 22 runs on April 12, 1994.

Jamie Moyer (4-1) earned the win with two innings of scoreless relief when Tom Gordon left after four innings with a 10-5 lead.

Mariners 10, Yankees 5

NEW YORK — A night after being no-hit by Dwight Gooden, Seattle matched a season high with 19 hits and roughed up Jimmy Key in beating New York.

Edgar Martinez doubled twice and drove in four runs, Jay Buhner homered and Ken Griffey Jr. had two hits.

Seattle trailed 4-0 after two innings. Martinez hit an RBI double during a five-run fourth inning that put the Mariners ahead 6-4 and added a two-run double in the sixth.

Five-run third lifts Astros by Cubs

NL Roundup

CHICAGO — Derek Bell hit a two-run double and Sean Berry followed with a two-run homer to highlight a five-run third as the Astros beat the Cubs 7-5 on Wednesday.

Bell, who entered the game batting .211 (8-for-38) on Houston's current road trip, went 3-for-5 including two doubles to pace a 15-hit attack off Cubs starter Frank Castillo (1-5). Todd Jones pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Phillies 7, Giants 6, 10 innings

PHILADELPHIA — Todd Zeile led off the bottom of the 10th with his second home run of the game to give Philadelphia a come-from-behind win over San Francisco.

The Phillies had tied the score at 6-6 on Kevin Stocker's two-run triple in the eighth inning against Rod Beck (0-1), who previously had nine saves in nine opportunities. Ricky Bottalico (2-1) retired all six batters he faced for the win.

Cardinals 6, Marlins 0

MIAMI — St. Louis' Todd Stottlemyre ended Florida's nine-game winning streak, striking out 13 and pitching a four-hitter for his first National League shutout.

The Marlins squandered a chance to reach .500 for the first time in 1996. Their winning streak was a franchise record and the longest in the majors this season.

Pirates 3, Braves 0

ATLANTA — The Braves lost outfielder David Justice to a dislocated shoulder, then watched Pittsburgh stop a six-game losing streak.

Jeff King, in a 3-for-33 slump, hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning as Atlanta was shut out for this fifth time this season.

Sculptor Etsuro Sotoo points to some carvings in the stones of the Sagrada Familia cathedral in Barcelona, Spain. Sotoo is one of two sculptors working on the cathedral, one of the longest-running and most bizarre construction projects of modern time.

Monument to Perseverance

Barcelona's exotic cathedral project is a monument to perseverance

By Andrew Selsky

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Seventy years after the death of the man who designed the Sagrada Familia cathedral, his most famous work still lacks a roof.

Not to worry. Those carrying forward one of the most exotic construction projects of modern times say that — with luck and a lot of money — the cathedral will be completed in only another half-century, more or less.

Its spires topped by plant-like shapes or covered with glazed ceramics and looking like giant lollipops, the Sagrada Familia (Holy Family) cathedral is a monument to fantastic dreams and perseverance.

Designed by architect Antoni Gaudi, famed for incorporating nature's designs into his work, the cathedral dominates the Barcelona skyline, and the lives of a mystical Japanese sculptor and an architect whose father literally picked up the pieces of the project in 1936.

Gaudi, who died in 1926 after being struck by a trolley, never expected the cathedral to be completed in his lifetime. Begun in 1882, only one facade was finished when he died.

The project, along with Gaudi's charts and scale models, was handed over to another architect.

But in 1936, as civil war engulfed Spain, an anti-clerical mob stormed into the Sagrada Familia, burned the design plans and smashed plaster models of the project.

Architect Lluis Bonet helped remove the shards and painstakingly reconstructed the models. Today, they are used as a guide for converting Gaudi's dream into reality. It is being built around his remains — the architect is entombed in the cathedral.

Bonet's son, Jordi Bonet, is now overseeing the project.

"It's an extraordinary job," he said. "When I was offered it, I had doubts because it's such a challenge."

The project, which in 1995 cost $3.2 million, is financed by private donations and visitor entrance fees.

Sculptures are perched on the cathedral. Some show Christ's crucifixion with distorted and nightmarish faces.

Some critics say that Gaudi wouldn't have wanted the sculptures, and that work on the cathedral should never have proceeded after the destruction of the design plans.

"I would leave it exactly as Gaudi left it ... as a testimony of something that could have been, but was not," said Antoni de Moragas, a Barcelona architect who believes Gaudi's followers are misinterpreting what he intended.

But Etsuro Sotoo, one of two sculptors on the project, says he is able to think as Gaudi did after long study of the architect's works, and senses Gaudi's presence as he chisels into a block of granite.

"Gaudi always accompanies me," said Sotoo, a native of Fukuoka, Japan. "Of course he is dead. But for me, a rock is like a time machine. Through the rock I can ask Gaudi questions and he answers me. The rock itself answers me."

The half-completed Sagrada Familia is, along with St. John the Divine Cathedral in New York, one of the longest-running construction projects under way in the world today.

As an endless procession of tourists chattering in Japanese, Italian and other languages strolled through the cathedral on a recent sunny day, a yellow crane hoisted building materials to workers on scaffolding high in the air.

They were working on a roof over the nave — a major stage in the project that is expected to be completed within two years.

Alvin Botting, a tourist from Barkway, England, was amazed that so much money and effort were being poured into pursuing one man's fancy without any hope of making money off it.

"This place has no value in a practical sense, but it is fantastic," he said. "It's probably one of the most exciting projects going on in the world today."

The work is being speeded up by technology. A computer-guided saw can chisel a granite column in one-sixth the time it would take by hand.

Still, the cathedral probably won't be completed in Bonet's and Sotoo's lifetimes.

Others will have to inherit the task of turning a grandiose dream into reality.

Fort Davis seeks summer volunteers for special demonstrations, programs

Staff Reports

Again this summer, Fort Davis National Historic Site is seeking volunteers to keep open and interpret a number of refurnished buildings and participate in special demonstrations and programs.

Each year, during June, July and August, volunteers play a major role in bringing the history of Fort Davis to life for thousands of visitors. Volunteering can be a most enjoyable and rewarding experience. It is an excellent way to meet people, as well as to learn more about the history of the area and to share it with others.

Volunteers are needed to work in the enlisted men's barracks, commanding officer's quarters, and officer's kitchen and servant's quarters. In addition, "new recruits" are being enlisted for small arms demonstrations, as members of the artillery crew and "1884" baseball team, and for cavalry demonstrations.

Depending on the activity, volunteers may be asked to work four hours per week, however, schedules are flexible and can be arranged to allow for planned vacations, appointments, etc. All new volunteers will be properly outfitted in the civilian or military dress of the 1880s and will receive both class room and on-site training.

Training for new and returning "living history" volunteers is scheduled for next Tuesday through Friday May 21 through May 24. Participants are asked to attend as many sessions as possible, however, if one is unable to attend, individual training sessions will be conducted. For more information, contact the Fort Davis National Historic Site at (915) 426-3224.

Denim Festival set for Labor Day weekend

Staff Reports

LITTLEFIELD — Country music star Waylon Jennings, born and raised in Littlefield, will headline the legendary lineup of country music entertainers Sept. 2 during Denim Festival Labor Day weekend.

Joining Jennings for the two big back-to-back concerts will be the late Buddy Holly's band, The Crickets. The proceeds from this concert go toward the Waylon Jennings Museum in Littlefield.

The Crickets will perform the magic of all of Holly's greatest hits with musical reminders of the 50s include "Peggy Sue," "That'll Be the Day" and 'Every Day.'

The Crickets are revered as one of the great early influences on the rock and roll movement. Paul McCartney has remarked that there would have been no Beatles if there had been no Crickets.

Denim Festival gets underway noon Aug. 31 with an antique tractor show and pull, an arts and crafts fair, a shotgun wizard presentation and a variety of musical entertainment from Dallas, Fort Worth and other West Texas areas. There will be a street dance on the festival grounds, beginning at 8 p.m. that day featuring River Wind, a band from Lubbock.

The Arts & Crafts Fair will be open noon-6 p.m. Aug. 31-Sept.2 at the Ag Center, where the Sew It With Denim Style Show will be hosted. Olympic skeet champion John Satterwhite of the National Rifle Association will display his shotgun skills Sept. 1-2.

Children of all ages can participate in the National Pedal Tractor Pull, followed by several performances from crowd favorites Hermann & Sons Cloggers.

Barbecue will be on the menu when cooks gather for Waylon's West Texas IBCA sanctioned Barbecue Cook-Off which lasts from 7 a.m.-6 p.m. Top prizes go to the best cooks and for the best showmanship. Visitors can sample the best of the West.

There will be a gospel concert 7 p.m. Sept. 1. The Fannie Mae Horseshoe Club will host a horseshoe tournament 1 p.m. the same day.

Labor Day will begin at 10 a.m. with the annual parade.

Entertainment is scheduled to be nonstop all weekend, with other activities including a children's carnival, a kite display and strolling entertainers.

Hungry visitors can check out the food court, which will have such items as hamburgers, sandwiches and tacos, along with plenty to drink on the menu.

Admission to Denim Festival is $10 for adults and $5 for children under 12 and over 2 years of age, and is good for all three days.

Park opens window on ancient Indian way of life

By Cecile S. Holmes
Hearst News Service

SASKATOON, Saskatchewan — It is only a three-paragraph blip in one travel guide, but Wanuskewin Heritage Park opens a window to a way of life thousands of years old.

Here the "First Peoples" came for centuries. To renew. To learn. To dance rituals. To hold sweat lodges. To tell stories so that those who came after them would remember and be strong. Their legacy is preserved in a 290-acre park testifying to American Indian strength and dignity.

Canada's First Peoples, as the descendants of these ancient American Indians named them, were hunter-gatherers who called this beguiling land of sloping barren plains and occasional wooded oases home. The park devoted to their history and future nestles along the west bank of the South Saskatchewan River several miles north of Saskatoon, a bustling city of 200,000 in Canada's plains north of Montana.

The name Wanuskewin (Wah-nus-KAY-win) derives from a Cree Indian word meaning "seeking peace of mind." Wanuskewin was a central site for the First Peoples. There was — and is — a quiet magic to this valley with its panoramic view and ambience of peace.

This cooperative effort of American Indians, government, educational institutions, private donors and industry is preserving, rediscovering and revitalizing the culture, art and history of Canadian tribes.

Wanuskewin is a museum, a school, a philanthropy and an archaeological dig. As a travel destination, it can be a quick trip into Indian history and culture, or a mesmerizing voyage through another way of life.

Wanuskewin Heritage Park officially came into being in 1989 via an act of the Saskatchewan Legislature. The park opened to visitors in 1992.

Just as pivotal to Wanuskewin's establishment was its potential as a learning and teaching center. That avenue opened after University of Saskatchewan archaeologist Ernie Walker studied the area's archaeological prospects in the early 1980s. He identified 21 significant sites, including 19 that are prehistoric.

In the park's printed guide, Walker says the large number of prehistoric sites is "ample evidence that this relatively small tributary creek valley attracted human occupation for thousands of years."

Park interpretive guide Lamar Swindler, a full-blooded Cree, senses that history when he escorts visitors through the park's hilly trails or wanders the paths alone.

"I'm a traditionalist," he says. "I say we are part of the land, and we must honor it and cherish it."

There is much to cherish.

Entering by car down a wide dirt road, you revel in the landscape's stark simplicity. Walking toward the visitor center, you feel as though you've joined an ancient bison hunt. You pass through a series of stone cairns that mark where the buffalo "drive lanes" would have been.

In the center's lobby, six buffalo figures respond to the call of a shaman. Sculpted from stone, the shaman grasps the head of a buffalo in his powerful hands. He knits his face in concentration as he summons the beasts, which were sacred to Indians and essential to their survival.

In the visitors' center, newcomers are urged to leave preconceptions behind.

"When you come to Wanuskewin, come with an open mind and an open heart," bids the educational film shown at the park. "We have much to learn from Mother Earth. She is mother to us all."

American Indian reverence for life and the land is woven into the park's exhibits, teaching events and archaeological work. Ancient camp sites are still used by people eager to relearn old ways.

At various times with staff assistance, visitors can tan hides, load a travois pulled by dogs, help build a tepee, or maybe even bake a bannock, a flat, oatmeal-like cake. There are children's games; audiovisual, computer-activated and interactive displays; hands-on exhibits; and a 500-seat amphitheater where Indian artists re-create the dances, stories and music of their cultures.

Outside, four trails take you through the grounds.

Each color-coded trail explores a different aspect of the park. One focuses on the everyday lives of the First Peoples. Another is built around what one can learn through the science of archaeology. Stops along the trails at archaeological sites explore discoveries testifying to Wanuskewin's significance to Indian civilization and spirituality.

Among them are tepee rings, indicating ancient individual dwellings at Wanuskewin; the medicine wheel, one of 100 scattered across Canada's northern plans; and a 1,500-year-old buffalo jump, a ledge where stampeding bison plunged to their deaths. Both the circle and the medicine wheel remain important American Indian symbols.

Whichever trail you choose, bask in the comforting quiet of Wanuskewin.

You may have a deep sense that others have walked before you and others will follow.

Take a brisk walk for exercise or a slower stroll to truly understand Wanuskewin.

More than 100 bird species and 35 mammal species have been identified at the park. Plant life flourishes, but visitors are admonished to stay on the trails, put litter in marked containers and refrain from picking flowers or plants.

The park is alive with bright color in the warmer months. But even in late fall, wildlife flourishes. Around one corner, a woodpecker's determined tapping draws your ear. Nearby, poplar and balsam trees attract your eye. Their inner bark was used to cure frostbite.

Listen. Learn. Remember. You are welcomed, but be reminded that the ground you travel is sacred. As is all the Earth.

When you go to Wanuskewin:

DEAR ABBY

President Garfield's judge was man in mirror

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I had a copy of President James A. Garfield's "Rules for Living" but have been unable to locate it for several months.

Van Buren

It seems that one of President Garfield's friends gave him a list of rules for moral living, which Garfield carried in his wallet for the rest of his life. These rules have been published in various periodicals.

I would appreciate it if you could locate a copy of these "rules for living" and print them in your column. I'm sure that many people would benefit from reading them again, and possibly for the first time.

I'm signing my name, but if you print this, please omit my name and sign this ... A MOMENT IN HISTORY

DEAR MOMENT: I have not seen the rules for living that you mention, but I came across a profound piece of philosophy attributed to President James Garfield. It is from a book I own titled "Facts About the Presidents" by Joseph Nathan Kane:

GARFIELD JUDGES GARFIELD

"I do not care what others say and think about me. But there is one man's opinion which I very much value, and that is the opinion of James Garfield. Others I need not think about. I can get away from them, but I have to be with him all the time. He is with me when I rise up and when I lie down; when I eat and talk; when I go out and come in. It makes a great difference whether he thinks well of me or not."

DEAR ABBY: What is proper etiquette when video-recording in someone else's home? My mother frequently visits my brother and his wife in another city with her trusty videocamera in tow. My brother and their toddler are always shot in their best light, but somehow she always manages to catch and film my sister-in-law first thing in the morning as she makes her bleary-eyed way to the bathroom. Mom especially likes shooting the dirty dishes or piles of laundry.

I've asked Mom why she didn't put down the camera and help with the chores, or at least film the great feast that led to the dirty dishes, but it does no good.

My mother makes no secret of her dislike for my brother's wife and uses her electronic demon to exact some demented pleasure. Is there a noncombative way of saying, "Leave the damn thing at home"? — NOT EVEN A STATE, PLEASE

DEAR NOT EVEN: The best way to deal with this is for your brother to firmly tell your mother that she is welcome to visit — on the condition that she leave her camcorder at home.

DEAR READERS: Mark Twain was a silent participant at a dinner party in Hartford, Conn., one evening. When he was chided afterward for not saying anything, he replied that his host had talked so incessantly as to leave little opportunity for any conversation.

"It reminds me of the man who was reproached by a friend, who said, 'I think it's a shame that you have not spoken to your wife for 15 years. How do you justify it?'

"The husband replied, 'I didn't want to interrupt her.'"

DEAR ABBY: I am a funeral director in Minneapolis and take part in many processions to cemeteries. It seems that most people are not too concerned about funeral processions. They dart in and out of cars and join the mourners in order to run through red lights.

This letter, however, is to show my appreciation to a couple of individuals who remain fixed in my mind. To the man who pulled over, stopped his car and took off his hat, placing it on his chest — thank you! You didn't know the family or the young man who had died. You didn't know the 3-year-old daughter who didn't understand all that was going on around her, but you gave her, and other family and friends, a moment of your time.

Thank you, too, to the teen-ager who was hanging out with his friends on the corner as we passed. When you removed your cap and bowed your head, you showed respect and consideration.

Simple acts of kindness like these don't go unnoticed, and they mean so much.

Funeral processions shouldn't be regarded as nuisances that make you late. Take that moment and reflect on your own life, and give that family the same respect you would want for yours. — DANIEL C. ANDERSON, MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR MR. ANDERSON: Thank you for a wonderful letter. But taking a moment to be considerate should not be limited to special circumstances. Simple courtesies extended to neighbors, co-workers and strangers improve the quality of life for everyone.

DEAR ABBY: For months I have searched your column for advice about a problem that has somehow taken over my life. This may seem nutty, but it's true. I am a 21-year-old female in college who is very much involved with a 37-year-old married man. I'll call him Frank.

I have been seeing him for a year now. Everything is wonderful between us and he says that he is in love with me, but he does not want to hurt his children — ages 7 and 9. He promises that if the day ever comes, he will make up for all of our sneaking around and lying.

I am unable to date anyone else because my mind is always on him, therefore I remain faithful. I love him.

Please, any advice you can give me will be greatly appreciated. — WAITING FOR FRANK

DEAR WAITING FOR FRANK: You have already wasted a year with a married man who will not leave his children and has no qualms about cheating on his wife. Is that what you want for a husband?

Frank may be a good salesman, but unless you want to waste more time buying what he's selling, stop listening to his pitch. Make up your mind what you want and go after it. But forget about Frank. Frank is a time-waster. And nothing is more precious than time.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NOTHING TO LIVE FOR IN ATLANTA: Live one day at a time. No one ever collapsed under the burdens of a single day; it's when the burdens of tomorrow are added to it that it becomes unbearable.
