Education fight continues

■ Negotiations are continuing on school finance reform — an issue that remains unsettled despite three special legislative sessions.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Key lawmakers and the governor's office will continue negotiations this morning to break the school finance impasse that has divided legislative and executive branches through three special sessions.

"We will know something by 11 (a.m.) whether we're going to carry on further or whether its time to draw the lines," Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur and Senate co-chairman of a joint conference committee, said Thursday evening.

Said Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice and House committee co-chairman: "At least we're talking — finally."

Parker and Ms. Glossbrenner were meeting with Gov. Bill Clements' chief of staff, Mike Toomey, Thursday afternoon prior to the first scheduled gathering of conferees.

The conference committee's charge is to draft compromise school finance legislation based on bills each house approved earlier in the session, but the meeting was postponed until noon today to accomodate discussions with Toomey.

Parker said the issues contested between House and Senate members "can be resolved in about 20 minutes."

Ms. Glossbrenner was hopeful the impass with Clements could be broken by the end of the weekend.

Parker characterized the talks with Toomey as "fairly focused." He said they include "basic disagreements" on the ultimate effects of the House and Senate bills, an indication Clements wants further give on issues dealing with school district de-regulation and efficiency.

Other contested issues are the amount of additional money the state will contribute to school districts and how that money will be raised.

Clements also would like a greater say in the appointment of the commissioner of education than the bill passed by either house would give him.

The governor has endorsed a school finance plan that calls for about $250 million in new state education aid next school year — money he proposes finding within the existing state budget.

In a special legislative session that ended May 1, lawmakers in both houses endorsed $555 million in new state education spending next year.

They also endorsed budget cuts to pay for some of their plan, but the remainder would have needed a half-cent sales tax hike, so Clements scuttled the whole package with a veto of the tax measure.

Boy missing

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — The disappearance of a 6-year-old Clovis boy has galvanized this eastern New Mexico community, where thousands of people helped in a search that went door-to-door.

"We're not assuming anything about this case," Clovis Police Chief Caleb Chandler said Thursday. "But the possibility that foul play is involved becomes greater with the passage of time."

The search for Matthew Roberts has involved as many as 8,000 people, various law enforcement agencies, a helicopter and bloodhounds, Chandler said. Clovis' population is about 35,000.

Oil spill

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Divers blamed a damaged connection to an Exxon pipeline for a leak that dumped more than 37,000 gallons of oil into the Gulf of Mexico, Texaco Inc. said Thursday.

The out-of-service Exxon pipeline was connected to the Eugene Island Pipeline operated by Texaco, said Texaco spokesman Max Hebert.

"We are working with them closely to understand if that was what it was and get a look at the piece of equipment," said Jim Branch, production manager in New Orleans for Exxon USA's offshore production division.

Divers were installing a plate to block off the Exxon line so the one-inch valve could be brought back to the surface and tested, Branch and Hebert said.

Davis ill

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Sammy Davis Jr., battling throat cancer, now weighs about 60 pounds and has been reduced to a fetal position, a source close to the entertainer disclosed Thursday.

While publicist Susan Reynolds would say only that Davis was "resting" and "there has been no change," friends reported the song-and-dance man obviously has been losing his battle with cancer since he was released from a hospital eight weeks ago.

Celebrities who have worked with Davis for four decades go to see him and come away "heartsick," some in tears, a source close to the family, who requested anonymity, told The Associated Press.

Davis, 64, is hardly able to utter a word because of a tracheotomy performed in connection with his throat cancer, the source said.

Davis was released from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on March 13 to recuperate at home.

Pre-summit tax talk heats up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats reacted angrily Thursday to a suggestion by Chief of Staff John Sununu that White House negotiators would reject all tax-increase proposals at next week's "no preconditions" budget summit.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater disavowed Sununu's remarks, saying they did not reflect Bush's views, but the chief of staff was defended by Vice President Dan Quayle.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley said any more such incidents could "threaten the success of these talks," which are deemed of major importance in the face of growing federal deficit problems.

"What John Sununu was saying was that the president doesn't want to raise taxes," Quayle said in an interview with Cable Network News. "Sununu was just simply reflecting what the president's instincts are, what his stated policies are."

For his part, Sununu said, in a brief comment, "The point is that the position is as it always has been: that 'no preconditions' means no preconditions. There is nothing that has to be in the agreement and nothing excluded from the agreement."

Democrats reacted sharply to published accounts quoting a "senior administration official," later identified as Sununu, saying that Bush would stand fast to his previous "no new taxes" pledge during budget negotiations.

The comments appeared to directly contradict earlier administration assurances that there were "no preconditions" to the high-level talks, to get under way Tuesday.

Sununu's assertion "raises the potential it's all a political trap," said House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

Fitzwater told reporters the official was not speaking for the president in making such remarks.

President Bush relayed the same message to Foley by telephone, assuring him that nothing was off the bargaining table at the budget summit, Fitzwater said.

However, Congress' top Democrats held a news conference to denounce Sununu's remarks.

"It is a question of trust, of whether or not agreements are to be honored, of whether or not the administration is prepared to negotiate in good faith on this important matter," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, reading a statement bearing the names of 11

New senior center, paving among suggested projects

■ City Council members have begun reviewing proposed projects for funding with Community Development Block Grant monies.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

A southeast Midland senior citizens center and street paving are proposed projects vying for pole position to receive a piece of Midland's $837,040 Community Development Block Grant pie this year.

Midland city councilmen earlier this week reviewed preliminary plans on 15 proposed projects in the running for the federal dollars. CDBG money must be used to benefit residents in low and moderate income areas, which in Midland fall mostly in east and southeast neighborhoods.

The federal government in March awarded Midland $736,000 in CDBG money to be used during the 1990-91 fiscal year. The city last year received $789,000, about 6.7 percent more than this year's allotment, not including about $101,000 in leftover funding.

Applicants have requested a total $1.1 million this year for their projects.

Sylvester Cantu, city planner, said Midland received fewer dollars this year because the federal government cut CDBG funds, while more cities have entered the program this year.

Councilman Jose Cuevas said Thursday that about $500,000 of CDBG money could be used to pave, curb and gutter dirt roads. The city has about 15 miles of unpaved roads, most of which fall in the targeted CDBG areas.

"In the last couple of years the people who have gone to CDBG hearings have complained that their streets are not getting paved," Cuevas said. "I think they need to know we're committed to streets first."

Cuevas said other top CDBG considerations include a $55,159 request by the Midland Community and Senior Services for meals at a proposed southeast Midland senior citizens center.

Councilman in April tentatively approved seeking $378,000 in certificates of obligation to build the center in Washington Park, located south of East Highway 80 off East Indiana Avenue.

However, Cuevas said he does not support a Community and Senior Services request for $35,000 to buy equipment for the senior center. Money for senior center equipment purchases should come out of the city's general revenue account, he said.

Community and Senior Services has also asked for $4,000 to feed senior citizens at the Casa De Amigos' center for the elderly.

Cuevas said not all applicants will receive CDBG funding because it is better to spend a lot of the money on a handful of projects rather than spread the dollars thinly among a number of applicants.

"If you give several entities $5,000 here or $20,000 there, you're just throwing away your money," he said. "The people can see a difference when you put a lot of money into several projects."

Councilman Bill Williams also gave street improvements and the senior citizens center top CDBG billing.

"I'd like to upgrade streets every chance we get," Williams said. "Street paving affects that community forever. There's a lot of unpaved streets over there."

CDBG applicants must submit detailed plans of their projects by June 15. City councilmen will begin reviewing the plans starting July 10.

Baltic states sign new agreements

MOSCOW (AP) — The three separatist Baltic republics strengthened their solidarity Thursday, implementing an agricultural agreement that allows them to bypass Moscow and weighing a plan to coordinate their government policies.

Estonia proposed reviving a Council of Baltic States that was created in 1934 when the republics were independent. It would include the president, prime minister and foreign ministers of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, said Valle Feldman, a spokesman for the Estonian Foreign Ministry.

Estonian President Arnold Ruutel invited Presidents Vytautas Landsbergis of Lithuania and Anatoly Gorbunov of Latvia to sign an agreement with him in Tallinn on Saturday. They did not respond immediately.

The three governments also implemented an agreement for the direct exchange of agricultural supplies and products, bypassing the central Soviet ministries and trade organizations that usually handle such transactions, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Last month, the republics signed a package of agreements to integrate their economies, and the deals are being implemented in stages.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev opposes immediate independence for the Baltic republics, which were forcibly annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940.

The proposed Council of Baltic States would further integrate the republics politically but would not constitute a confederation, said Leivi Sher, spokesman for Estonia's Supreme Council, or parliament. It could make non-binding recommendations on the three governments.

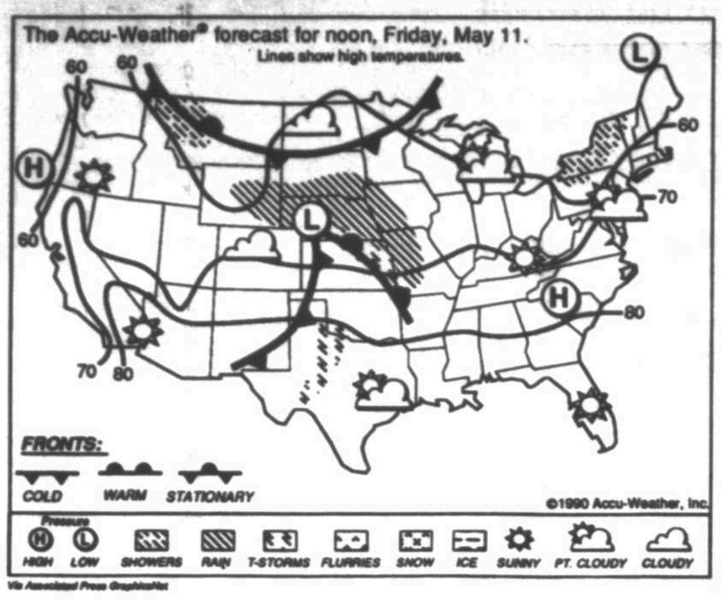

"So far, it's just an Estonian proposal," he said, adding that the parliament's executive committee approved the measure.

It was unclear whether Latvia and Lithuania would agree to the proposal. Lithuanian spokesmen said no agreement was likely before the return to Vilnius next week of Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene. She was in Paris as part of a tour of Western capitals.

Mrs. Prunskiene told reporters in Paris that Lithuanian officials want to negotiate their independence with Moscow according to a formula proposed by French President Francois Mitterrand and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. They suggested that Lithuania temporarily suspend laws implementing the declaration of independence enacted March 11.

Warm weekend should follow

Staff Report

Early morning cloudiness and a chance of showers should give way to a bright and warm weekend, according to the National Weather Service.

The forecasters at Midland International Airport are calling for partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of thundershowers by this afternoon.

Winds from the south-southeast, are expected to be from 15-25 mph and gusty.

Skies should be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 50s overnight.

Saturday skies should continue partly cloudy with a high near 90.

Thursday's high only managed 74, compared to the record of 99 set in 1963. The overnight low was 49. The record low for this date was set in 1946, when the mercury dipped to 42.

STATE

Southeast Texas residents battled high water Thursday as the National Weather Service issued another round of river flood warnings, but sunny skies covered northern and western regions of the state.

A chance of rain was forecast for the Panhandle and Southern Plains on Friday, the weather service said.

Continued flood warnings were issued for the rain-swollen Trinity River, which inundated hundreds of homes in Dallas and Fort Worth earlier this month after record thunderstorms.

The river crested Wednesday night near Crockett, where it was at 48.7 feet and was expected to fall slowly to below flood stage at 45 feet and a 35-foot bankfull level.

The Trinity's level was 46.3 feet near Trinidad and 49 feet near Long Lake, with flood stages of 28 and 35 feet, respectively. The river was expected to fall to near 44 feet at Trinidad and 47 feet at Long Lake on Saturday.

Cloudy skies kept afternoon temperatures in the 60s in Northwest Texas and 80s in the deep south.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SESSION: Issues considered seperately

(From 1A)

This session, lawmakers were planning to send Clements just the education package for approval or disapproval, with consideration of taxes to come after the governor's decision.

They also have continued trying to find more budget cuts.

Earlier Thursday, House members acting on proposals from Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, added $42 million to the $140 million in budget cuts that the Senate approved earlier this session.

No Republican representives offered additional ideas for cuts in debate that lasted about an hour Thursday. Stiles called the lack of GOP interest unfair, since many of the same members have refused to vote for a tax bill.

"Democrats are supposed to be the people who always raise taxes. Well, now we're the people who always cut things, too," said Stiles. "If there were some more (cuts) there, where are the amendments? I'm ready to vote for them," he said.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland and chairman of the House Republican Caucus, said the lack of GOP interest in cuts stems from the members' disenchantment with the education bill the House passed.

Republican members failed to see the sense of voting for cuts "to fund something they weren't for," said Craddick.

Still, the state budget should be pruned even further, said Craddick, "but I think we need to see what we're going to have for a school bill before we do that."

The additional cuts approved Thursday included a 0.25 percent across-the-board reduction in agency budgets for travel, vehicles, furnishings, equipment, computers and recording material.

House members decided that the cuts would not take effect if federal matching grants are endangered, while the entire $182 million would occur only if Clements signs the education biill.

A joint conference committee will work out differences between the House and Senate budget cutting bills.

House members appointed to the committee include Stiles and Reps. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield; Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Chisti, Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, and Clyde Alexander, D-Athens.

The Senate Finance Committee on Thursday heard details of a proposed $76 million in fee increases that could help contibute additional money to education.

However, Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, said the budget cuts and fee increases together would not produce enough money to reach $555 million.

A sales tax hike of at least a quarter cent would be needed to make up the rest, he said, mentioning also increases in liquor or cigarette taxes as possibilities.

Boy sought door-to-door in Clovis

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — The disappearance of a 6-year-old Clovis boy has galvanized this eastern New Mexico community, where thousands of people helped in a search that went door-to-door.

"We're not assuming anything about this case," Clovis Police Chief Caleb Chandler said Thursday. "But the possibility that foul play is involved becomes greater with the passage of time."

The search for Matthew Roberts has involved as many as 8,000 people, various law enforcement agencies, a helicopter and bloodhounds, Chandler said. Clovis' population is about 35,000.

"We have no idea what happened to Matthew Roberts at this time," Chandler said.

"There were some reported sightings of Matthew from Tuesday afternoon that we have not ruled out, but none of them have been confirmed as of today," he said.

Matthew, who was adopted by Geoffrey and Debbie Roberts, was last seen near his home around 2:50 p.m. Tuesday. He was reported missing at 3:50 p.m.

Mrs. Roberts left Matthew, who had been kept home from school with chicken pox, with his grandmother while she went to a nearby store, police said.

Matthew apparently tried to follow his mother without her knowledge and ran out of the home before his grandmother could stop him, police said.

Crime Stoppers collected $8,288 as of 2:45 p.m. Thursday. The organization is using the money as a reward for information leading to Matthew's return.

"A little girl came by here yesterday," Chandler said. "She had an Easter basket she had taken around her neighborhood, collecting money. She brought it here and said she wanted to give it to help find Matthew."

The youth's biological mother in Amarillo, Texas, was questioned, and the FBI was asked to question the child's biological father in Roswell, Chandler said.

There is no apparent connection between the disappearance and the biological parents, Chandler said.

Bloodhounds from the Penitentiary of New Mexico near Santa Fe and from a private company in Albuquerque were brought in to track Matthew, but they lost his trail in Clovis, Chandler said.

Traffic jams, landfills reach world's highest mountain

By Binaya Guruacharya
Associated Press Writer

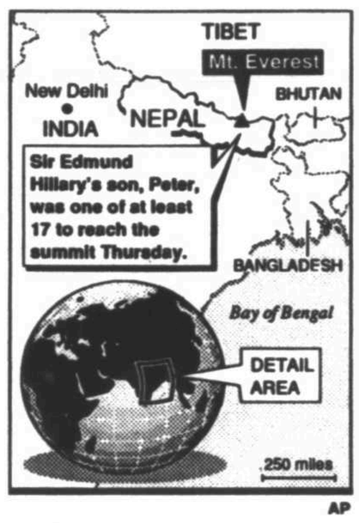

KATMANDU, Nepal — Traffic jams and landfills have come to Mount Everest, the roof of the world.

A growing number of nature lovers, and the flags, clothes and oxygen tanks they leave behind, are turning parts of the majestic mountain into a garbage dump. And a crowded one at that.

A long line of climbers snaked near Everest's peak Thursday, vying for elbow room on the top. Americans, New Zealanders, Swiss, Soviets, Chinese and Australians queued up to reach the 29,028-foot summit.

One was the son of Sir Edmund Hillary, the first person to reach the summit. Hillary has expressed concern about damage to the fragile ecology of the Himalayas.

At least 17 people reached the crowded summit over the course of the day. Some came within minutes of each other. One group came from the north side, but the others hiked from the southeast, taking the traditional route made famous by Hillary, the New Zealander who first conquered Everest with his Nepalese guide, Tenzing Norgay, on May 29, 1953.

AP

Fortunately, Thursday's climbers did not all reach the summit at once. Everest's pointy peak has room for only about 10 hikers — backpacks and oxygen gear included.

It has been one of the mountain's busiest seasons.

A Japanese team of three even tried to fly over Everest, in the first attempt to buzz the peak in a hot air balloon. They crashed Wednesday and one man suffered leg injuries.

In late April, the Nepalese Tourist Administration said more than 100 people were climbing the mountain from the Nepalese side. Add to that a group of 30 climbers from a "peace group" of Soviets, Chinese and Americans, who attacked the mountain from Tibet.

This mountainous traffic jam raises questions about the effects such hikes have on the ecology of Everest and the pristine Himalayas. The mountain range, famed for its breathtaking views, pure air and fertile valleys, is being ravaged by deforestation.

Population increases in the Himalayan valleys have led farmers to cut down local forests for fuel and housing. Maneka Gandhi, India's minister of state for environment, warns that deforestation will have disastrous results far beyond the highlands. Already, it contributes to flooding in Bangladesh and erosion in the Indian plains.

Everest itself has been turned into a dump in some places — littered with mountaineers' used oxygen tanks, metal food containers, flags and clothes.

CDBG: Detailed plans due by June 15

(From 1A)

A public hearing on the council's selections is slated for July 24, with final approval scheduled for Aug. 14.

"The councilmen by July 24 will pretty much have made up their minds on which programs to fund," Cantu said. "But you can always make some last-minute changes for it."

Other plans under consideration are:

■ a $13,426 playground for Goode Beginning Child Care, 1321 S. Goode St. Center officials are requesting the fund.

■ a $45,000 park along Fairgrounds Road. The city's parks and recreation department submitted the idea.

■ a $100,000 grant for the Homeownership Incentive Program being requested by the Midland Economic Development Council. The HIP program helps people become homeowners by paying for house closing costs and down payments.

■ a $75,000 plan by the Midland Housing Reinvestment Corp. to help fund Neighborhood Housing Services.

■ the city's request for $115,000 to finance the Homeowner Housing Rehabilitation Program, which helps upgrade houses whose residents have low or moderate incomes.

■ a $28,600 request by Casa de Amigos and Christmas in April representatives for an emergency home repair program.

■ a $250,000 grant requested by the Midland Economic Development Council for a revolving loan fund program. The program helps new, expanding or even floundering businesses get on track.

■ a request by the city's code enforcement department for $60,000 to demolish dilapidated houses and clear weedy lots.

■ a Midland Police Department request for $30,877 to fund a project to become more visible in low income neighborhoods. Police would set up an office where neighborhood residents could come in, air their safety needs or even just get to know the police officers.

■ a $175,000 request by the Love Christian Child Care Academy to build a day care facility at 311 E. Illinois Ave.

■ a city planning department request for $137,185 to pay for overseeing CDBG programs.

■ a request by the city finance deparment for $10,000 to use if any of the selected CDBG projects runs over budget.

Cantu said there are fewer applicants than last year. "Some organizations that made requests last year didn't come in this year."

TAXES: Democrats decry 'double-talk'

(From 1A)

Democratic congressional leaders.

Foley, D-Wash., said, "We view this incident as an extremely serious one, because it could, if repeated, threaten the success of these talks."

Bush's reaction to the report of Sununu's comments "was that there are no preconditions. He wanted me to reiterate that toyou today," Fitzwater told reporters.

Bush proposed the summit last Sunday to deal with a budget deficit that administration and other analysts say could be about to explode. Officials blame rising interest rates, lower-than-expected revenues to the Treasury and a higher-than-expected cost of the savings and loan bailout.

White House officials say that without action the federal deficit for fiscal 1991 could be up to $100 billion higher than the $64 billion shortfall allowed by law, causing huge automatic cuts in programs throughout the government.

The official later identified as Sununu was quoted in The Washington Post as saying: "We're allowing them (Democrats) to bring their good arguments for taxes to the table. ... They were not persuasive last time and they are likely not to be persuasive again."

"But if they want to come to the table and say they put (tax increases) there, it is their prerogative to put them on the table, and it's our prerogative to say no. And I emphasize the no."

ORU to purchase PTL Network

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Oral Roberts University has agreed to pay $6 million in cash for the PTL satellite network once headed by Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker, but the ministry's court-appointed trustee said Thursday the deal is not final.

The trustee, Columbia attorney Dennis Shedd, said he is still hoping to sell the network and other PTL assets as a package before the contract with Oral Roberts is approved by a U.S. bankruptcy judge.

Shedd said he signed the pact with the Tulsa, Okla.-based university founded by evangelist Oral Roberts because he wants to force action by buyers interested in acquiring the entire PTL complex.

He added, however, that he did not yet have such an offer although "there are four or five groups that are seriously looking at" the whole package. Shedd declined to identify them.

"I do have a firm deal with Oral Roberts University. However, in the contract, I expressly reserved the right to sell all the assets until the point of approval of the sale of just the network," Shedd said in a telephone interview.

The complex includes the satellite network, the 500-acre Heritage USA Christian retreat in Fort Mill and 1,700 acres of undeveloped land in upstate South Carolina.

Shedd said he made the deal "because I have a cash offer and I think it makes good business sense to sell this asset. This asset is essentially deteriorating. ... Plus, it also works into the broader scheme to sell the whole property."

Shedd filed legal papers in Columbia Thursday asking U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Thurmond Bishop to approve the sale to Roberts on May 31 — in effect the deadline for prospective bidders to submit offers for the entire package.

The actual contract signing, which was done by fax machine and air express service between Tulsa and Columbia, was completed Wednesday and included a $1 million down payment.

Pilgrims die in crash, enroute to see pope

TUXTLA GUTIERREZ, Mexico (AP) — A plane carrying pilgrims to see Pope John Paul II crashed Thursday and killed at least 27 of the 38 people on board, including a bishop and some government officials, authorities said.

The crash was near the military airport of the southeastern city of Tuxtla Gutierrez, where the pope is to visit today.

The Rev. Jorge Valenti, secretary to the bishop of Tapachula, Monsignor Luis Miguel Canton Marin, said the bishop died in the crash.

The Dutch-made, propeller-driven F-27 Fokker crashed at about 8:55 a.m., just under two miles from the airport runway, said Miguel Angel Guadarrama, manager of the airline Aviacion de Chiapas, S.A.

He said 38 people were aboard, including the crew. One of the 12 initial survivors later died of injuries, a Red Cross worker said.

"Many of the passengers, in fact most of them, were government officials," Guadarrama said.

The pope, who earlier flew to the northern city of Chihuahua on Thursday, isolated himself en route to his next stop, Monterrey, to pray for the victims.

"We pray that God will console the habitants of Tapachula so they keep the faith," he said.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. The weather appeared to be clear on television footage from the scene, but the area is known for fog.

The badly charred wreck lay scattered in a field, its propellers twisted. Soldiers surrounded it, keeping back onlookers. Despite the security, some looting of luggage occurred.

"Just imagine the scene, it was quite awful," Red Cross volunteer Guillermo Diaz Gorodillo said in a telephone interview. "Luckily, the plane crashed in an open field, surrounded by private homes so that many people rushed out to help the survivors."

Diaz Gordillo said the plane was in flames when he and about 18 other Red Cross volunteers reached the crash site. "Five of them were unscathed, including a mother and her newborn baby. The others were badly injured, and one just died here at the Red Cross," he said.

The plane was on a scheduled run from Tapachula, on the border with Guatemala. Officials said many of the government people were coming for John Paul's visit to Tuxtla Gutierrez, capital of Chiapas state.

Cyclone moves across India, 85 dead

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The worst cyclone to hit India in more than a decade moved inland Thursday, killing at least 85 people and leaving hundreds of homes flattened and more than 90 villages under water.

The storm first began bashing India's southeastern coast with heavy rains and tidal surges Tuesday, and it made landfall Wednesday evening hitting coastal districts along the Bay of Bengal with winds up to 155 mph.

By late Thursday, the storm lay over the inland town of Bhadrachalam, about 105 miles north of the coast. Wind speeds were decreasing as the cyclone's fury weakened, said officials in Hyderabad, the capital of Andrha Pradesh state.

United News of India said winds of 70 to 80 mph would continue for another three days as the storm moved inland.

WORLD in brief

Chemical complex planned on border

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A French company will build a $100 million chemical complex in Mexico along the Texas border, according to newspaper reports Thursday.

The project, announced by Coahuila Gov. Eliseo Mendoza Berrueto, will be a joint venture with French chemical company Rhone-Poulenc, newspapers reported. They said the plant will manufacture fluorocarbons.

Mario Matteucci, the company's manager for Mexican operations, was quoted as saying the fluorocarbon will not harm the ozone layer.

The French company, which registered sales of $140 million last year, operates in Mexico as Industrias Quimicas de Mexico.

The plant will be constructed in Nava, 14 miles south of the border crossing at Eagle Pass, Texas and Piedras Negras, Mexico. It will take 14 months to build the factory.

The fluorite to be processed at the factory will come from mines in Muzquiz, 50 miles west of Nava, the reports said.

East Germans strike

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Tens of thousands of East German workers put down their tools, closed classrooms and blocked borders Thursday to demand protection from the high unemployment that is expected to be the price of German unification.

The protests by teachers, textile workers and farmers were called by unions and lasted only a few hours. They were the latest and largest demonstrations of anxiety by a work force worried about what will happen July 2, when the Germanys are to merge their economies and social institutions.

"We want to prevent the initiation of the monetary union from causing the social deterioration of our work force," Sigrid Jauernig, head of the textile workers union, told the government news agency ADN.

Nuclear cuts possible

KANANASKIS, Alberta (NYT) — NATO defense ministers agreed Thursday that the alliance could safely make further cuts in short-range nuclear weapons in response to the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe in the last year.

After a two-day meeting here in the Canadian Rockies, the ministers issued a communique saying that "we agreed that there is a diminishing need for nuclear systems of the shortest range," given the prospect of early signature of a treaty to reduce conventional forces in Europe.

Also, the ministers said NATO would "reassess the future qualitative and quantitative requirements" for nuclear weapons in Europe, particularly for short-range missiles and nuclear artillery shells.

'Dreams' opens festival

CANNES, France (AP) — Stars from around the world gathered Thursday for the 43rd annual Cannes Film Festival, but the man of the hour was 80-year-old Japanese director Akira Kurosawa.

His new film, "Dreams," provided a dignified and imaginative opening for 12 days of partying, salesmanship and awards-giving in the seaside city.

White House disavows Sununu's comments

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON -- The White House on Thursday was forced by a torrent of Democratic criticism to disavow comments by staff chief John Sununu that seemed to remove possible tax hikes from the bargaining table at President Bush's budget summit with Congress.

The remarks of a "senior White House official," later identified as Sununu, had emphasized the White House's prerogative to reject any tax hike that might be proposed at the budget summit.

Previous White House statements about the talks scheduled to begin Tuesday have stressed the administration's willingness to consider all options of dealing with the growing federal budget deficit.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, at his daily news briefing, said Bush had asked him to publicly reiterate his position that there will be "no preconditions" for the talks and said whoever made the anonymous comments did not speak for the president.

As he disavowed Sununu's statement about taxes, Fitzwater said it was "crazy" to say Bush would veto tax increases as part of a deficit reduction package.

Sununu's remarks were quoted on Page 1 of The Washington Post Thursday and attributed to a "senior White House official ... who is the main link to conservatives" to the effect that if congressional Democrats bring taxes to the negotiating table: "it's our prerogative to say no. And I emphasize the no."

Sununu, interviewed Thursday in his sunny corner White House office, refused to deny he had made the controversial comments Tuesday night on aboard a plane carrying an official delegation headed by Barbara Bush home from inaugural celebrations in Costa Rica.

But it was Vice President Dan Quayle who later ended the charade of anonymity and identified Sununu by telling the Cable News Network, "What John Sununu was saying is the president doesn't want to raise taxes."

Sununu's comments set off a firestorm on Capitol Hill.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and House Speaker Thomas Foley issued a statement saying Sununu's comments are "untrue, unfair and ill-timed" and "directly contradict the president's assurances to us" that there would be no preconditions for the talks and no negotiations through the media.

Foley warned that any more such incidents "threaten the success of these talks."

HUD losses put at $177 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal housing program including projects with golf courses and marinas likely will cost the government $177 million in loan defaults, much of it on developments linked to political favoritism, according to an internal HUD investigation.

In a comprehensive review of the program, Department of Housing and Urban Development auditors said they found fresh evidence of mismanagement at the agency during the Reagan administration and new examples of influence peddling to sway HUD officials to approve risky projects.

The Title X land development program already has cost the government $55 million.

Chamber search will benefit city

Earlier this week the Midland Chamber of Commerce revealed the name of its new president and chief executive officer — Janna R. King. The announcement culminated a year-long search for a new leader for the chamber.

The 35-year-old Minnesota native will bring outstanding credentials to the chamber post, having served as president of the St. Cloud Area Economic Development Partnership which guided the endeavors of 14 public and private entities in a three-county area of her home state.

Chamber officials here are obviously impressed with her experience and strong background in economic development, particularly in light of the fact that she will be directing economic development endeavors in Midland, including the privately funded Forward Midland program.

At the announcement, Ms. King indicated that she will work on a strategic plan which will incorporate expansion of present business, attraction of new business and support for young business. Each area will be important to Midland in coming years.

Clarence Scharbauer III, chairman of Forward Midland, noted that the program had held back on some endeavors while waiting for the right person to be named to the chamber position. He voiced strong support for Ms. King, saying, "I am convinced we have found the right person to lead Forward Midland."

Chamber officials have a right to be pleased that their search for a new president is complete and that Ms. King will bring such extensive experience in economic development to the position. That is particularly important in this region so hard-hit by the effects of the oil price slump and in looking to broaden its industrial base in the future.

We join all Midlanders in welcoming Ms. King to the Tall City and look foward to working with her in the future.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Siskel and Ebert get thumbs up

I went to see the movie "Nuns on the Run" to see what all the flap was about between critics Gene Siskel and Roger Ebert and 20th Century Fox, who put out NOTR. (Movie critics often refer to movies by their initials. There was GWTW "Gone with the Wind," DMD for "Driving Miss Daisy," And TMNT "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," which I haven't seen because that's about the dumbest title for a movie I have ever heard.)

Grizzard

Siskel, the bald one, and Ebert, the fat one, have their own syndicated television show and they said, "Nuns on the Run" was rotten.

So Fox said it wasn't going to offer Siskel and Ebert any screenings anymore. The parties eventually made up, but I still want to defend Siskel and Ebert.

What I like most about them is they don't do like a lot of other movie critics and try to tell me a bunch of stuff I don't understand using terms that are completely baffling to me.

Siskel says, "I really liked this movie. I give it a thumbs up."

Ebert says, "I wouldn't take my dog to see this movie. I give it a thumbs down."

Siskel and Ebert both gave thumbs down to NOTR and even made fun of the Village Voice that said the movie was, "The funniest anticlerical transvestite comedy of the decade."

Ebert said, "This is 1990. How many other anticlerical transvestite comedies have there been in this decade?"

After seeing the movie myself, I agree with Siskel and Ebert. If I were reviewing the movie, I would say, "This is a stupid movie. If you go to see it you're stupid too. I had to go because it's my job."

I know what Fox wanted. They wanted one of those typical glowing reviews that I — and probably a lot of movie fans — never understand.

They wanted something like this:

"This Jonathan Lynn masterpiece is, on one level, a searing and blusteringly funny 'Fellini-esque' British breakthrough throwback farce, while on quite another level, working just as well, a chilling, crackerjack, psychosexual, anticlerical thriller with an undeniable metaphysical resonance."

The movie actually is a tub of lard that's boring, and silly, and I demanded my money back, but the kid working in the ticket booth had zits in his ears and couldn't understand me.

Siskel and Ebert have always seemed like a couple of standup guys to me, and bless their hearts for keeping it simple.

It's like a television weather report. All I really want to know is whether or not it's going to rain.

Anything more, about occluded fronts or high pressure systems over Canada, is lost on me.

What I want to know about a movie is, Is Kim Basinger in it and, if she is, how long before she takes off her clothes? I want to know if it's funny, if it's scary, if it's exciting, and if I will have any earthly idea what it is about, as I most certainly didn't when I saw the worst movie I've ever seen, "Kiss of the Spider Woman."

I give Siskel and Ebert a thumbs up. I give "Nuns on the Run" one digit over.

Lewis Grizzard's column is distributed by Cowles Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, May 11, the 131st day of 1990. There are 234 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 11, 1888, songwriter Irving Berlin was born Israel Baline in Temun, Russia. Berlin wrote some 1,500 songs, including "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," "God Bless America," "There's No Business Like Show Business," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and "Puttin' on the Ritz."

On this date:

In 1647, Peter Stuyvesant arrived in New Amsterdam to become governor.

In 1858, Minnesota became the 32nd state of the Union.

In 1910, Glacier National Park in Montana was established.

In 1943, during World War II, American forces landed on Japanese-held Attu island in the Aleutians. The territory was retaken in three weeks.

JACK ANDERSON

Pentagon's remains ID program faulty

WASHINGTON — Johnnie Parish of Joshua, Texas, lost his brother Frank in the Vietnam War in 1968. But the harshest legacy of the war came last year for Johnnie when he found out that the Army had buried the wrong body in Frank's grave.

Anderson

Lou Ann LaBohn of Washington, D.C., doesn't know who is buried beneath the tombstone that bears the name of her brother Gary, but she's sure it isn't him.

Veronica Shanley of San Diego agreed only a few weeks ago, against her gut feelings, to let the government put her son Michael's name on a tombstone with three other names over a common grave. She went along with the gesture to honor the others in her son's unit, but she believes Michael is still alive.

Some 2,300 Americans are still officially unaccounted for and presumed dead from the Vietnam War. The government has used everything from hard-boiled science to guesswork to analyze bone and teeth returned since the end of the war. So far, 280 of the missing have been accounted for. The process is a nightmare for those who feel their loved ones are still alive.

It is bad enough that Vietnam and its allies kept the remains too long, and in some cases tried to pass off animal bones as soldiers' remains. But America's own accounting process is flawed too. The Pentagon sometimes asks families to accept pieces of bone or teeth and call the case closed.

LaBohn's brother's purported remains were part of a bag of 17 teeth and 145 bone fragments, the longest of which was less than 2 inches. The remains came from a helicopter crash involving nine men. The military doesn't know if any of them got away alive.

With or without the families' consent, the government makes its best guess and then erases the name of that soldier from the list of the missing. That doesn't erase the doubts of the families. Military records show some remains that defy identification, yet they have been given a name and a plot at Arlington National Cemetery.

Dr. Michael Charney, a forensic pathologist from Colorado, is a critic of the Pentagon's ID program. He estimates that 70 percent of the cases he has re-examined relied on circumstantial evidence, not science. And he blames that in part on the rush to close cases at the Army's ID lab in Hawaii.

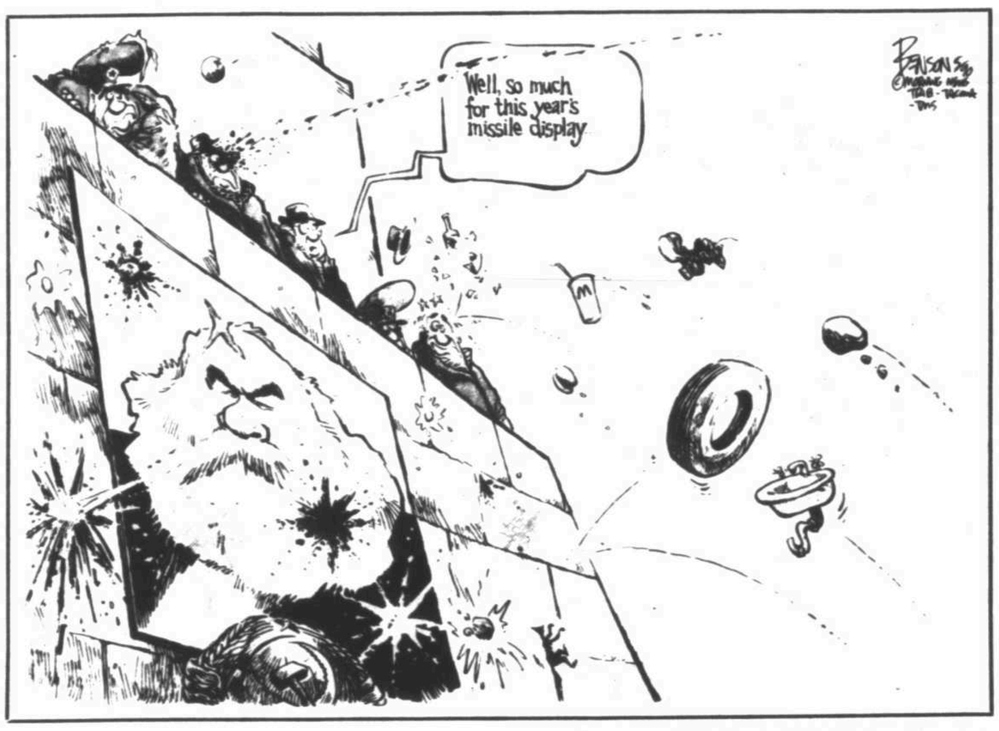

The Army denies that it is in too big of a hurry to do the job right. It defends the group burials as the best way to allow families and comrades to put their loved ones to rest.

But Shanley said she went to an elaborate Army funeral for her son only to pay her respects. "They are hoping I accept some of the remains to be my son's and I don't," she told our associate Dan Njegomir.

LaBohn relented and attended a similar funeral for her brother Gary. "I just got tired," she said. "It's been 21 years. To tell you the truth, I don't think any part of my brother is in that coffin."

Parrish had his doubts back in 1973 when the Army gave his family a coffin of unrecognizable remains and said that they were his brother Frank. Last year, Frank's real body was returned by the Vietnamese with his dental work intact. Now the Army has to figure out who has been buried in his grave for 17 years.

Government, media viewed with cynicism

WASHINGTON — You don't have to be a political genius to have noticed public respect for federal officials declining dramatically the past 20 years.

Even though President Bush is held in high regard personally, the institution of the presidency and the motives behind executive branch actions are viewed with almost as much skepticism as those of Congress.

Means

Both branches, and the press, rank with Americans well below established institutions associated with religion, medicine, the judiciary, the military, science, big business and education.

But it's a free country. Does public cynicism toward our politicians, who very often behave cynically themselves, really matter?

The republic is not likely to fall, despite the fragile nature of democracy, just because many voters don't trust their political leaders and don't bother to go to the polls. But the quality of government does depend upon public expectations and attitudes; if they are low, performance is likely to be low.

We get pretty much what we deserve. That's why there's increasing concern about restoring confidence in government, luring disenchanted voters back into the democratic process and inspiring young men and women once again with the ideals of public service.

This columnist, on the basis of 30 years covering Washington, believes the vast majority of public servants are honest and trying to do what's best for the country. Watergate, the Vietnam war, the Iran-Contra scandal and a rash of corruption during the Reagan administration have understandably undermined official credibility.

Yet polls indicate most people don't want to do away with the federal government, they just want it to deliver essential services more efficiently.

So why can't responsible officials explain what they are doing so that the public understands and supports it? Does the media view politicians with an overly jaundiced eye? Should politicians risk a little more candor?

Think tanks have wrestled with it, government officials agonized over it and a special National Commission on the Public Service (NCPS) studied it. Nothing gets very far.

At a recent symposium dealing with the problem, Joe Laitin, an NCPS consultant and former government official, declared that government and the media are essentially ignorant about how each other works, leading to mutual suspicion and misinterpretation that exacerbates the normal adversarial relationship.

White House adviser C. Gregg Petersmeyer, in charge of promoting volunteerism, contended that public participation has merely shifted from the federal level into community service, which he sees as a more effective way to solve social problems.

This parochial view was disputed by other panelists, who pointed out that some problems are so overwhelming and of such a national nature that no individual or local effort can possibly cope. The drug epidemic and AIDS were cited as examples.

From the media perspective, Judy Woodruff of PBS' McNeil-Leherer Newshour conceded that because news consists of events that are unusual, "not many stories are about honest politicians and crime-free neighborhoods."

New York Times correspondent Michael Oreskes felt that press influence upon the way political actions are perceived is exaggerated.

"The press is most of the time a mirror of public opinion rather than a shaper of it," he said, although agreeing with the concept of a "real breakdown" in communication between press and politician.

CHARLEY REESE

Bush Doctrine is to do and say nothing

We had the Brezhnev Doctrine. That was the old communist game of what's mine is mine and what's yours is up for grabs.

Then we had the Reagan Doctrine. That was that if you wish to fight a communist government or communist insurrection, the U.S. will help if I (Reagan) can convince the State Department and the Congress to go along and if the CIA does not give the assistance to the wrong guy by mistake. And, of course, afterwards I may deny all of it if I remember any of it.

Reese

And now we have the Bush Doctrine. The Bush Doctrine is say nothing, do nothing, and at least that way you won't offend anybody who has a missile, a bank account or a voter's registration card.

After a recent week of threatening strong U.S. reaction to Soviet bullying of Lithuania — both Bush and Secretary of State Jim Baker said it — the reaction finally came. It was no reaction.

I don't know if you caught it on TV when he explained why he was not going to do or say anything, but I did and you could hear in his voice an almost desperate plea for either the Lithuanians or the Soviets to get him off the hook. If only they would work this out, he whined, then he, Bush, wouldn't have to show any leadership.

Well, they aren't and he isn't. They aren't because the Lithuanian people are proud and brave and because the Soviet Union remains an evil empire, even if its civilian sector is in tatters and decay. As a friend of mine just back from Moscow put it, the only change Gorbachev has made in the Soviet Union is that people may now complain without being arrested. The KGB is still there taking notes for future reference.

George Bush isn't going to show any leadership. He's been in office a year and a quarter now and still hasn't gotten all of his appointments made. He has one virtue and one vice: caution.

It's OK to be a frog rooted to a lily pad in a calm pond, but if the pad is floating in white water toward the falls, you'd better be ready to jump when the opportunity comes.

I recognize there is no pressure from the public, the Congress, or the press for Bush to do anything for the Lithuanians. As an American, I'm ashamed there isn't, but it seems clear that we have decayed spiritually. People as a whole, like fat Romans of another era, seemed obsessed with comfort but are reduced to whining, begging, and wishful thinking in trying to preserve it. The petulant hostility toward Lithuania which has begun to show is a dead giveaway. No one hates virtue more than those who have none and know it. The Lithuanians have put the lie to all of us. They have forced us to recognize, at least in the privacy of our thoughts, that the Helsinki Accords is a lie; the Universal Declaration of Human Rights is a lie; the rhetoric about captive nations and self-determination and support for democracy are all lies; and the nearly five decades of U.S. posturing in refusing to recognize the Soviet Union's annexation of Lithuania is also a lie.

They put us to the test and we failed. They never asked us for anything except verbal support, and we didn't even have the guts to give them that. The Russian bear growled hands off, and the Western democracies were reduced to a huddle of petulant hand-wringers. So now we blame the Lithuanians. How dare them disturb our rosy delusions and yuppie comfort by risking their lives for the principles we and our politicians talk about? Didn't they know it was just eyewash? That in the West nobody means anything they say.

Bush and his supporters are wrong to deny that turning our back on Lithuania is another Munich. It is precisely that.

The evil of Munich — where Great Britain handed Czechoslovakia to the Nazis — was not the physical loss of Czechoslovakia, though that was bad. It was the effect it had on the mind and perceptions of Adolf Hitler. Like the British of that era, Bush has sent the wrong message to the Soviet Union: do as you please. One day we will all regret it.

Corps answers flood victims' criticisms

EUFAULA, Okla. (AP) — Lake Eufaula, the reservoir some call a "gentle giant," has turned into a menace as farmers and residents hundreds of miles away in Arkansas battle floods unleashed from the lake because of heavy rains.

But U.S. Army Corps of Engineers officials, criticized about the timing of the release of water from reservoirs, are standing their ground. Were it not for reservoirs like Eufaula on the Arkansas River and Lake Texoma on the Red River, the flooding downstream could have been much worse, they say.

Decisions made by the corps on how fast to release water from the reservoirs it manages can have a crucial effect on who is flooded, and how severely.

In, the main, the reservoirs have done their job, said corps spokesman Ross Adkins.

"Our projects operated as they were designed to. We managed them just exactly as they were designed to operate," he said.

"What we do is capture all the water we can to minimize any damages downstream. When Mother Nature dumps as much rain as we had ...(the reservoirs) took off a heck of a big bump that could have gone downstream. would have been lost," he said.

Thirteen deaths were blamed on the storm, most of them in Texas. Complete damage figures for the region were not yet compiled, but the Red Cross says as many as 600 homes in Oklahoma may have been damaged by the flooding.

A disaster declaration was expanded Thursday.

Mayor faces more charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors widened the criminal case against Mayor Marion Barry on Thursday, obtaining a new indictment that charges him with six additional misdemeanor drug crimes.

The new charges, added to a three-felony, five-misdemeanor indictment returned by the same grand jury in February, allege that Barry "possessed cocaine and crack with other co-conspirators at more than twenty locations, including private residences, hotels, government offices and business establishments and on boats."

Such drug activity took place in the nation's capital and other locations both inside and outside the United States, said the indictment, which did not name any of the people with whom Barry is accused of using drugs.

Barry refused to comment on his legal status, but said his new legal troubles will not affect his ability to govern.

"I'm not looking for votes," Barry said during an appearance at a senior citizen's center. "I'm just being an elected official trying to do my job and trying to make sure the government goes to the people."

R. Kenneth Mundy, Barry's attorney, complained that the charges should not have been lodged so close to the June 4 scheduled start of the mayor's trial, but he predicted that the trial date would not be postponed.

In a statement, U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens spoke of the Barry investigation as "ongoing," and a source familiar with the effort said the grand jury will continue hearing evidence.

The source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said Barry campaign manager Anita Bonds is expected to testify before the panel within the next two weeks.

Barry's mayoral term ends this year.

Bush announces court nominees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush announced judicial appointments Thursday to federal benches in Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, and Mississippi.

The White House said Bush would nominate:

— Paul V. Niemeyer of Baltimore to be U.S. circuit court judge for the U.S. Fourth Circuit court of appeals in Richmond, Va.

— John H. McBryde, of Aledo, Texas, to be U.S. district judge for the northern district of Texas. He would succeed Eldon B. Mahon.

— Charles W. Pickering of Laurel, Miss., to be U.S. district judge for the southern district of Mississippi. He would succeed Walter L. Nixon Jr.

— Frederick P. Stamp Jr. of Wheeling, W.Va., to be U.S. district judge for the northern district of West Virginia. He would succeed William M. Kidd.

New drug law put to test

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal prosecutors said Thursday they will seek the death penalty against two Chicago men in the first use of a 1988 U.S. law allowing execution for those convicted in a drug-related murder.

No civilian has been put to death for a federal crime since Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were electrocuted in 1953 after being convicted of selling atomic secrets to the Soviet Union.

U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh approved the use of the "ultimate sanction" in the case of two men accused of murdering a federal witness to protect their $50,000-a-day drug ring. One of the suspects is still at large.

Under federal drug law enacted in November 1988, drug kingpins and others who kill or order killings while committing drug-related felonies could be executed if convicted. But the constitutionality of that provision is in doubt and it is certain to face court challenges should federal officials attempt to use it.

'Leave' bill OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Thursday to require employers to give workers up to three months unpaid leave for family emergencies, ignoring a threatened veto and opponents who said the bill would help only "yuppie" workers who can afford to forgo paychecks.

The House voted 237-187 to approve the family and medical leave act and send it to the Senate.

The bill is strongly opposed by the Bush administration and faces a contentious and uncertain future in the Senate.

Kilauea acting up

KALAPANA, Hawaii (AP) — Kilauea Volcano came to life again early Thursday after a rest of just a few days, officials said.

A bright red glow in the night sky over the east flank of Kilauea signaled the resumption of the movement of molten rock at the surface in the area, officials said.

Scientists and civil defense officials planned to fly over the rift zone later Thursday to determine the extent of the activity and direction of any new flows.

Soviet circus stuck

MARIETTA, Ga. (NYT) — A 125-member Soviet circus on a two-year goodwill tour of the United States is stranded in Georgia and its animals are stuck in New Jersey because it has run out of money.

The Great Circus Bim Bom, made up of all-star performers from 60 Soviet circuses, was kicked out of a Motel 6 in Marietta this week after circus managers were accused of leaving a string of bad checks from Johnson City, Tenn., to Hershey, Pa.

Circus managers are accused of writing a bad check for $923 at a Johnson City store for, among other items, "20 pounds of bananas; two 50-pound (boxes of) cabbages; six cases of dog food; 20 pounds of cucumbers; and 137 loaves of day-old bread," said Betty Joe Hendrix, manager of the Mary Salads store.

Hack wins contest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The best of the worst writing, prose that went beyond purple into the darker blueness of the literary spectrum, spewed tastelessly forth from the annual Bulwer-Lytton Fiction Contest on Thursday.

Linda Vernon of Newark, Calif., came up with a leaden lead to an imaginary novel that topped some 10,000 other entries worldwide in the contest that honors intentionally bad writing.

The competition takes its name from the infamously inept 19th novelist Edward Bulwer-Lytton.

Her winning sentence, 80 words of mixed metaphors and overdone images, is "an example of a writer getting carried away with figures of speech," said San Jose State University English professor Scott Rice, who originated the contest nine years ago.

If you're reading aloud, take a breath and give it try:

"Dolores breezed along the surface of her life like a flat stone forever skipping along smooth water, rippling reality sporadically but oblivious to it consistently, until she finally lost momentum, sank and, due to an overdose of fluoride as a child which caused her to suffer from chronic apathy, doomed herself to lie forever on the floor of her life as useless as an appendix and as lonely as a five-hundred pound barbell in a steroid-free fitness center."

Oil industry club at crossroads, speaker claims

■ Since 1949, the Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs has fostered risk-taking among secretaries in the oil and gas industry.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

It is perhaps fitting that, as a new decade begins, Association of Desk and Derrick Clubs president Jo Kappelman Rogers has as her theme "Crossroads to a New Decade."

Rogers

Mrs. Rogers was in town Thursday to speak to the Midland chapter of Desk and Derrick Clubs, and told members her theme came from the book "Pathfinders" by Gail Sheehy.

"As an association and as a whole," she said, "we are at a crossroads. We can choose the roads traveled by others, or we can choose our own road, the one we chose 40 years ago."

She reminded members that the organization was founded in 1949 by secretaries employed in the oil and gas industry for the purpose of furthering their education about the industry and building friendships with each other.

She called the founders of the organization risk-takers because they were employed in an industry dominated by men, yet asked that industry to support their efforts.

Mrs. Rogers grew up in McCamey and Wink, and is currently living in Corpus Christi and is employed as an administrative assistant and bookkeeper by Jon C. Spradley and Spradley Energy Inc. She studied business administration at Sul Ross State University, and among her employers have been the U.S. Immigration Service in Alpine and Marfa, and Coastal States Gas Producing Co., where she was administrative assistant to Oscar S. Wyatt Jr., Coastal president and chairman of the board.

A member of Desk and Derrick for 26 years, she has held virtually every office in both the Corpus Christi chapter and in the Association itself. She told the gathering at the Petroleum Club that part of the magic of Desk and Derrick was the diversity of its members.

"What other organization," she asked, "can hold the attention of an 18-year-old just out of high school and new to the oil and gas industry, and yet can offer something to the woman who's been working in it for 30 years?"

Member involvement is the key to the organization's success, she pointed out, adding that the challenges in Desk and Derrick are never-ending.

Along the way, she said, Desk and Derrick has begun to educate its members not only about the industry that employs them, but about how to take risks and have the courage to change things that need changing.

Saying that learning to be a risk-taker is a difficult, ongoing process, she told members that there is nothing wrong in failing, "only in not trying."

As part of the monthly meeting, the local club honored members who received awards during the recent ADDC contest for Region V:

Winning first place awards were Barbara Willingham, best Desk and Derrick article for "Guadalupe Mountains — Here We Come"; Best Non-Industry Program for "The Greenhouse Effect — Causes, Effects and Solutions"; and Mona Deland of Odessa and Jo Johnson of Hobbs won for communications training.

Ann Breeding won second place awards for Best Non-Industry Article, "The Grand Canyon"; and best speech, "The Importance of Order In a Professional Meeting."

Taking third place awards were Dene Thompson, Best Industry Article for 'I Said Tanqueray On the Rocks, You Idiot"; and the Best Industry Program, "An Historical Look at the Oilpatch."

Trinity River floods could last all summer

■ FEMA advisory board member Marilyn Quayle tours flood-stricken North Texas as Dallas officials promise timely repairs to the Rochester Park levee.

Associated Press

DALLAS (AP) — The vice president's wife toured flood-ravaged areas of North Texas Thursday while residents along the Trinity and Red rivers fought rising water farther south in the state.

Marilyn Quayle said after viewing damage at Rochester Park homes in South Dallas that levees holding back Trinity River waters should be extended to protect the neighborhood.

"Every time I go out, I can see if things work, whether they do or not, or if there are things we can do better," she said. "I get different impressions; each kind of disaster is different.

"The coordination between the states and federal government is different because each state is set up differently," she said. "So a great deal of knowledge is gained for me."

Mrs. Quayle met residents, some of whose homes were still under water from last week's flood. After asking them how they were dealing with the flooding, one said "We're still under water."

"You will be in our prayers," she said.

The floods from heavy rains, which have killed 12 people, also caused between $500 million and $700 million in damage to agricultural production in north, northeast, east and central Texas, state officials said.

Mrs. Quayle, a member of the Federal Emergency Management Agency advisory board, announced that FEMA has added nine counties to 16 already named in a May 2 disaster declaration.

Meanwhile, Dallas city officials promised to speed up construction of the Rochester Park levee after some flood victims complained about the city's "historic neglect" of minority neighborhoods, including theirs.

Army backs off plan to poison pigeons

KILLEEN (AP) — Under pressure from the Humane Society and other animal rights groups, Army officials are backing off plans to poison troublesome pigeons, a Fort Hood spokeswoman said.

The poisoning plan was abandoned Wednesday after protests from the Centex Humane Society and other animal rights groups. Instead, a Groesbeck contractor will be paid $4,000 to cage the birds.

"We haven't made the decision to start poisoning yet," said Army spokeswoman Liz Crossan. "We are looking at alternative methods, such as trapping. What we are doing at the moment is basically repairing the damage."

The pigeons roost in maintenance and aircraft hangars, soiling multimillion-dollar helicopters and airplanes.

"Whether you're working on a piece of equipment or working on an aircraft, you don't want exposed parts exposed to pigeon droppings," Ms. Crossan said. "You bring these things inside the hangar for protection, then you have these pigeons dropping on you."

Fort Hood announced plans in mid-April to work with the Texas Animal Damage Control Service in Waco, a division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, to lace corn or other bait with a chemical called DRC-1339, used commercially in a Ralston-Purina bird killer called Starlicide. The base has taken no action since.

"We protested all of this, but we can do a little more with civilians," said Dena Brady, humane society manager. "You can't hardly fight the Army."

Humane Society officials claimed that the chemical was intended for starlings, not pigeons, and that the pigeons suffered lingering, painful deaths.

"We objected to the time it would take for a bird to die," Humane Society treasurer Eva Flynn said.

Richard Jore, an environmental supervisor for the Bell County Health Department, disagreed, saying that although death would take longer, two or three days, the birds would not feel pain until kidney failure killed them.

Salvation Army collecting aid for flood victims

Staff Report

The Midland Salvation Army will be collecting clothing, food and household items for distribution to Texas flood victims this weekend at Midland Park Mall.

Mary Padilla, a Salvation Army secretary, said a collection truck will be in the mall parking lot near Bennigan's restaurant at the Loop 250-Midkiff Road intersection.

The truck will be there from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, she said.

"We really need people to come out and give us anything that they can," Ms. Padilla said. "The flood victims have practically lost everything in their homes because of the floods."

Especially needed are linens, blankets, pots and pans and cleaning supplies, Ms. Padilla said.

She said Salvation Army offices statewide are conducting similar donation drives.

"It's very much needed because people over there are really, really hurting right now," she said.

The Trinity River, engorged with runoff from severe rains in the Dallas area, has flooded river zones the length of the state.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency Thursday raised to 25 the number of Texas counties eligible due to flooding for federal relief funds under a disaster declaration signed May 2 by President Bush.

Twelve people have died in Texas because of the flooding, the Associated Press reports.

Although many people have been able to return to their homes, officials say floodwaters have yet to crest in many areas. The already-flooded San Jacinto County area north of Houston, for example, is not expected to see the worst of the high water until the middle of next week.

First Baptist Church committee's ministry is working

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Prior to January, members of the Benevolence Committee of the First Baptist Church did what they could to help people who were down and out financially.

Now with a new program the committee hopes to keep the financially downtrodden out of the red for good.

On Jan. 15, the committee formed a Job Bank Ministry to help find jobs for the unemployed.

"It's the most terrible feeling being out of work," said Gerry Calhoun, chairman of the benevolence committee.

But, unfortunately, attempting to eliminate this grief isn't always an easy job.

"We're already up to our gums in job applications," Calhoun said.

The program is on the right track, though — 56 people have been placed since the job bank's onset.

"We need employers in Midland to know that we're here," Calhoun said, adding that the job bank doesn't charge placement fees.

Calhoun said that jobs in all fields are needed, "not just those for unskilled workers. We have applicants for just about everything, from temporary (positions) all the way up to professional," he said.

Citing optimism about the future, Calhoun said, "We really feel this is something that can impact the community."

The program does more than find jobs, said Mary Alice Hogue, who helped make the job bank a reality. "It is also to help their spiritual needs at the same time," she said.

"Meaningful work is a basic need," said Ms. Hogue, who added that she is pleased with the response of Midland employers to the program.

At this time the Job Bank Ministry has about 175 applicants in need of employment.

All committee members are volunteers with five volunteers putting in a combined average of 40 hours per week, Hogue said.

The Job Bank Ministry is modeled after a program at Eastside Baptist Church in Marietta, Ga., that has been in place for three years.

Although the benevolence committee members had been considering how to go about resolving the financial troubles of some area residents, no action was taken until Ms. Hogue "happened upon" the program in Georgia.

"When I came back it kept bugging me that we ought to have one," she said.

Kay Bryant, founder and director of the job bank in Georgia, supplied the Midland church with information to help get the program off the ground.

RIVER: Flood feared to be of long duration

(From 1B)

Mrs. Quayle said the federal government would be pleased to help the city extend the levee system but added it wouldn't be proper for her to comment on how local officials have responded to flooding problems since last spring, when earlier heavy rains hit North Texas.

Emergency workers battling some of the worst floods in Texas history in the state's eastern and southern regions said high water could remain for months to come. Hundreds of people were evacuated near Texarkana, where as many as 40 homes were under water.

"One of the things that we're most concerned about is this is not just going to be a high intensity flood, it's going to be a long duration flood," said John Jadrosich, public information officer for the Trinity River Authority of Texas.

The Trinity, engorged with runoff from severe rains in the Dallas area, has flooded river zones the length of the state.

The FEMA announcement adding additional counties to the previous disaster declaration signed by President Bush brings to 25 the number of counties eligible for state and federal aid.

The newly added counties, all in North Texas, are: Bowie, Ellis, Fannin, Grayson, Hood, Johnson, Kaufman, Lamar and Young.

Jadrosich said the already-flooded Lake Livingston area in San Jacinto County, north of Houston, is not expected to see the worst of the high water until the middle of next week.

"We don't want to minimize the danger, particularly to people that are talking about riding it out. This is going to be different from anything they've ever seen before," he said. "It was really bad, and it's all coming downhill."

Jadrosich said the 60 miles or so of the river from the top of the lake to Liberty County will have high flows of water throughout the summer and into the fall, with some low-lying lands flooded through the end of the summer.

"It'll take that long for all that water to get out of it," he said, adding that any rain that falls on the lake or watershed area will just make things worse.

In north and central areas of the state, pockets of people remained unable to return to their homes Thursday as a result of the flooding that has claimed 12 lives in Texas and one in Oklahoma.

Gayle Finch, agricultural extension agent for Henderson County, said officials have been unable to gauge the extent of the damage to farm and ranch lands yet because they still are inaccessible.

"There's probably a conservative estimate 11 (thousand) to 15,000 acres of small range and rye grass that are going to be lost simply because they've been underwater too long. The ranchers are going to lose them. It's probably a lot more," Finch said.

TAES announces new 'no bag it' plan

Did you know that summer garbage generated in residential areas increases by 20 percent to 50 percent due to grass clippings?

Kiker

Grass clippings are a landfill item that is 100 percent recyclable. Clippings take up landfill space, and it costs the city money to collect and transport them.

What can be done about it?

Don't bag it.

'Don't Bag It' is a program the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAES) has established to take care of the problem of what to do with clippings.

By not bagging clippings you can save time, energy and money.

But what about thatch?

Thatch is actually a build-up of lignin, contaning grass tissues, such as stolons, rhizomes, crowns and roots, but not leaves.

Grass clippings are composed of about 25 percent proteins, making it a declicious meal for soil bacteria and fungi, which quickly consume the proteins.

Hard to believe? Well think about it.

Golf courses don't catch their grass clippings and you can see how good their grass looks.

Bagging your grass clippings is not a necessary part of having a nice looking lawn, good management practice is.

Grass clippings contribute plant nutrients and soil-improving organic matter to the soil. On average, clippings contain over 4 percent nitrogen, ½ percent phosphorus, 2 percent potassium and small amounts of other nutrients. As a result of these nutrients not being bagged, but left on your lawn, the nutrient requirements of your lawn will decrease.

For 'Don't Bag It' to work, your mowing frequency will increase to about every five or six days. Use whatever frequency is necessary so as not to cut more than ⅓ of the leaf blade at a mowing. This will keep clippings from laying on top of the lawn and aid a quicker decomposition.

All this may sound like more work but compare it to how long it takes you to mow the lawn when you do bag. It could, in the end, save you time.

The fertilizer ratios recommended with this program are 3-1-2 or 4-1-2. The nitrogen source must be a slow-release nitrogen form, sulfur-coated urea (or ureaformaldehyde) so you have an even supply of nitrogen throughout the course of the season.

Watering you lawn will need to be done with deep irrigation, at least 1 inch of water each irrigation. This will encourage deep rooting and better drought tolerance.

The frequency of irrigations will vary with soil type, air temperature, grass type and wind. The 'Don't Bag It' program guidelines will result in lower water use.

If you are interested TAES is looking for demonstrators who would like to participate in the program for Midland County.

TAES will begin to gather information on the effectiveness of DBI in Midland County this year; however, we can't do it without your help.

To be a demonstrator you need to attend a meeting that will introduce the program and its benefits to the individual gardener and the city. Requirements will be explained, too.

Demonstrators will be instructed on mowing heights and frequencies, watering practices and fertilizer practices.

As a demonstrator you will have a good healthy lawn, less backbending work, more time to do something other than yardwork, and you will have a good feeling about helping your community and environment.

If you are interested in participating in the 'Don't Bag It' program as a demonstrator, call TAES at 687-1351. This and all Texas Agricultural Extension Services programs are available to the public regardless of race, color, sex, national origin, age, handicap or socioeconomic level.

Report updates ag's 'revolution'

By Don Kendall
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON — Some people think the Green Revolution has not lived up to its promise and that the world's pantry will never be able to keep up with growing populations. Others believe the race can be won.

The recent Earth Day festivities noted many of the ailments of the planet, including pollution and depletion of natural resources.

But no widely accepted answers were forthcoming on how well the human race may be eating a few decades from now. Or whether, in fact, millions may not eat.

Lester R. Brown, head of Worldwatch Institute, says starvation is a grim but effective natural solution to the fearful problem of not having enough food for growing populations.

In his annual book, "State of the World" for 1990, Brown said that if we succeed in building a sustainable society, it will be done by 2030, only 40 years from now. If not, he said, environmental deterioration and economic decline will cause social structures to disintegrate.

Brown said world population should be no more than 8 billion if a sustainable society is to be achieved by 2030. That is a billion fewer than the United Nations projects as the actual population by then.

According to Brown, current estimates foresee populations doubling or tripling in Ethiopia, India, Nigeria and "scores of other countries where human numbers" are already outpacing the system.

"Either these societies will move quickly toward smaller families, or rising death rates from hunger and malnutrition will check population growth," he said.

The humane path, Brown said, requires a dramatic drop in birth rates. He said more countries will do as China has done and Thailand is doing — reducing population growth rates in half in a matter of years.

At the other end of the equation is food production, where the biggest development has been the Green Revolution, the dramatic crop increases that began with high-yielding wheat and rice varieties developed in Mexico and Asia starting in the 1950s.

New sources and techniques were also developed for many other crops including corn, sorghum, field beans, peanuts, cassava and potatoes. Use of fertilizer and other chemicals, irrigation, new tillage practices and improved management also have been important to the Green Revolution.

In the Philippines, the International Rice Research Institute says half a billion people, mostly in Asia, are fed by new rice technology.

Analysts Robert E. and Eleanor Huke reported that in a little over 20 years after the introduction of modern rice varieties, the rice areas of 11 Green Revolution countries showed yield increases of 63 percent, compared with only 17 percent for the rest of the world.

The Hukes, in a new book to be released by the institute, said, "One may debate the relationship between food production and population growth, but not the reality that a larger population was eating better in the later 1980s than in the mid-1960s."

Legislation allowing food giveaways OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Agriculture subcommittee late last month approved a foreign trade section of the 1990 farm bill that would allow food giveaways to needy countries.

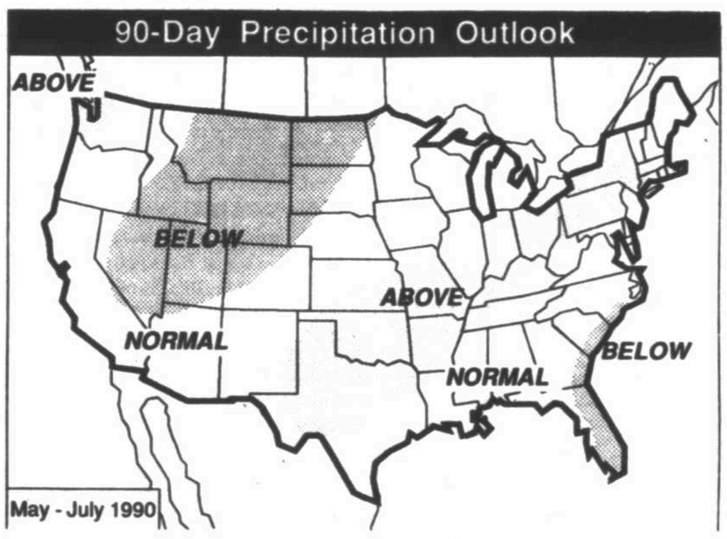

The legislation is similar to the Senate measure on foreign trade approved in committee earlier. The farm bill will set agriculture policy for the next five years.

The major difference between the two bills is the way the food aid programs would be managed within the government, according to a House subcommittee spokeswoman.

Both bills would allow the president to give food to countries whose governments he wants to encourage, such as those in Eastern Europe. Such assistance now must be in the form of a sale.

The Senate bill says the Agriculture Department must spend at least $900 million in fiscal 1991 on the program; the House version requires that $500 million be spent.

The administration does not want any specific dollar amount named.

Farmer thrown into tailspin by flooding

PASTORIA, Ark. (AP) — Hillary Pipkin has been farming all his life, but the flood has convinced him he needs another job. His wheat crop is under water. So are the fields where he planned to plant cotton.

"I'm just hoping we can pay our debts and stay in farming," Pipkin said Thursday, "cause there's not any profit to be made this year."

Pipkin and his brother grow wheat, cotton, soybeans and rice on about 1,000 acres in the community where they grew up, a few miles north of Pine Bluff. Their land, handed down by their father, is divided by the Arkansas River levee. About 250 acres on the river side of the levee are under water.

"You can walk down there and catch a fish if you want to," said Pipkin, pointing to a spot where water swallows the road that used to cut across his wheat field.

Pipkin said about half of his 100-acre winter wheat crop is destroyed.

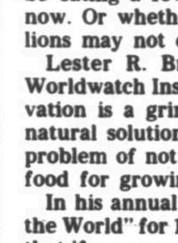

"It's going to hurt the yield, no doubt about that," he said. "I'd say after this we might cut half a crop."

Frank Plafcan of the Jefferson County Extension Service said damage to the winter wheat crop alone in the county could total $1.5 million to $2 million. "I'd say we have about 5,000 acres of wheat that have been affected by the flood," he said.

Excessive rains and flooding have delayed planting of other crops as well, he said, and that could have a significant effect on yields. Only about 25 percent of the county's rice crop is planted, compared with 75 percent by this time in a normal year, he said.

The water began to rise on Friday, and Pipkin moved what equipment he could to higher ground.

"I got my tractor out Saturday and got the front wheels covered up with water trying to get it out of there," he said. "I hope I got it on a hill over there. I'm not able to go look."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

There are many truths in those bridge rubrics, most of them handed down to us from the days of whist. But they are designed for generalities, not specific situations. There are times when they should be observed more in the breach.

North's opening bid was a trifle light, but the hand did contain 2 1/2 defensive tricks and the master suit. Although the opening bid was doubtful, North correctly refused to pass his partner's forcing response and the final contract was reasonable.

Declarer won the opening lead in dummy with the king and led a club. Had East blindly followed the old adage of "second hand low," declarer would have sneaked home by going in with the king. Although that would have lost to the ace, a simple hold-up of the ace of diamonds for one round would have allowed declarer to keep West off lead while setting up the clubs, limiting the defenders to two clubs, one heart and one diamond.

However, East found a stunning defense by shooting up with the queen of clubs! Declarer had no counter. If South played low, East would simply revert to the queen of diamonds and continue the suit to force out declarer's last stopper while West still had the ace of clubs as an entry.

At the table, declarer covered the queen of clubs with the king, losing to West's ace. That defender continued diamonds to force out the ace and all would have been well had East held the jack of clubs to go with the queen. But the knave turned out to be West's entry to the good diamond and the defenders reeled in five tricks—two in each minor and the ace of hearts.

Couple front-page news on first visit to Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana on Thursday ended their first visit to a Warsaw Pact country by viewing Budapest from a boat on the Danube and taking a streetcar ride through the city center.

Diana

The royal couple delighted Hungarians and made front-page news. During a speech Tuesday, Charles was full of praise for Hungary's pioneering role in Eastern Europe's transformation. His wife drew admiration for her charm, her smiles and her elegant clothes.

About 2,000 people crowded a square adjoining the Danube to greet the prince and princess after their streetcar ride. Costumed folk dancers delivered a traditional send-off.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An obsessed fan who allegedly broke into the home of actress Sharon Gless wrote numerous love letters to her for years, Gless testified.

Gless

The Emmy-award winning star of the television show "Cagney and Lacey," said she dismissed the letters because they contained no threats. Miss Gless testified Wednesday at a preliminary hearing for Joni Leigh Penn in San Fernando Municipal Court on a burglary charge.

Police say Penn, 30, was carrying a semi-automatic assault rifle and nearly 500 rounds of ammunition March 30 when she barricaded herself in Gless' home for seven hours. Police say she planned to sexually assault Gless and then commit suicide. She is being held without bail.

In a similar case, a federal judge declined to dismiss charges against a man accused of sending threatening letters to "Remington Steele" TV actress Stephanie Zimbalist.

Michael Lawrence Shields, 42, of Plymouth, Mich., contended his case should be thrown out because he was examined by a prosecution psychiatrist without a court order. The judge instead barred prosecutors from using the psychiatric report.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Columbia Pictures Television has offered a record $32 million to keep writers Ron Leavitt and Michael Moye, who write the comedy series "Married ... With Children," a newspaper reported Thursday.

The writers are considering a three-year contract renewal that includes a significant share of syndication profits from "Married," the Los Angeles Times reported. Their contract with Columbia expires in November.

Columbia produces the show, about the disrespectful family of a shoe salesman, for Fox Broadcasting Co.'s network.

The writers' agent, Cary Cosay of Leading Artists Agency, said Wednesday that no deal had been reached. Gary Lieberthal, chairman of Columbia Pictures, declined to comment.

CHICAGO (NYT) — Pauline Frederick Robbins, better known as Pauline Frederick, a longtime radio and television news analyst of world affairs, died of a heart attack on Wednesday at Lake Forest (Ill.) Hospital while visiting relatives in Lake Forest. She was 84 and lived in Sarasota, Fla.

Miss Frederick achieved eminence when her field was virtually closed to women. She was NBC's correspondent to the United Nations for 21 years, and earlier covered the U.N. for ABC.

After retiring from NBC in 1974, she commented on foreign affairs for National Public Radio.

At all three networks, Miss Frederick had her own news programs, and she reported on political conventions, the U.N. and world affairs.

Miss Frederick made her first network broadcast from Washington in 1939, her first overseas broadcast from Chungking, China, in 1945, and her first network television broadcast from the national political conventions in Philadelphia in 1948.

In 1976, she became the first woman to moderate a presidential debate, between Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter.

She was also the first woman to be elected president of the U.N. Correspondents Association.

Miss Frederick was married to Charles Robbins, a former reporter and managing editor at The Wall Street Journal, who died in August. There are no immediate survivors.

COVINGTON, La. (AP) — Walker Percy, whose deeply humane novels and essays made him a unique voice in American letters, died Thursday at his home on the banks of the Bogue Falaya, across Lake Pontchatrain from New Orleans.

He would have been 75 on Monday.

Percy's first novel, "The Moviegoer," won him the National Book Award in 1962 and set the themes that would occupy him for his entire career: modern malaise in the New South and the tenuous, often outlandishly comic, hope for human connection.

Services will be Saturday at St. Joseph's Abbey near Covington.

Grand jury to investigate WTSU fraternity

CANYON (AP) — Affidavits collected in connection with the suspension of West Texas State University's Phi Delta Theta fraternity chapter for hazing soon will be presented to a grand jury, officials said.

"Hazing is serious," Chris Hodges, a spokeswoman for the Randall County district attorney's office, said Thursday. "I don't think the authorities have seen much of that out here, but it is serious."

Ed Roach, president of WTSU, said Wednesday the Phi Delta Theta chapter would be suspended for one year and placed on probation for two years after being found guilty of hazing a university freshman.

Jason O'Neill, 21, says he and three other fraternity pledges were hit and kicked during an "I Scream Social" April 4 at the Phi Delta Theta lodge in Canyon, located about 15 miles south of Amarillo.

O'Neill, a freshman, checked into the WTSU clinic April 5 with blood in his urine, and doctors later determined he had bruised his only kidney.

O'Neill said one of his former pledge brothers has since left WT.

"We want the fraternity to move forward and take this in a positive way and work to get itself on the right track," Roach said of the sanctions.

"This decision takes into account the seriousness of the violation but allows an opportunity for the fraternity as an organization to learn from its mistakes," he said.

Ms. Hodges said the district attorney's office will collect the affidavits of persons involved with the case and submit them to a grand jury investigation in two weeks.

Don Bode, president of WTSU Phi Delta Theta, made no comment on the sanctions and was not sure whether the fraternity would appeal the decisions.

Phi Delta Theta will be banned from participating in any campus activities, events or use of WTSU facilities or advertising during the suspension.

The national Phi Delta Theta organization mandated that all pledge-training should "cease and desist" and imposed a 30-point list of policy mandates the WTSU chapter must implement or lose its national charter.

'I don't think the authorities have seen much hazing out here, but it is serious.'

Summit panel courting positive image for Houston

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Houston judges may be asked to hold off on trials that could wash the city's dirty laundry in public while the international economic summit is going on here in July.

The Houston summit host committee is "floating" the idea of asking the chief judges of courts at all levels to take such action, according to Vidal Martinez, a vice chairman of the committee and a lawyer.

Noting that several thousand journalists will be in Houston to cover the summit, Martinez said, "We want to put the most positive face on Houston while we have all these impression-makers in town. We don't necessarily need a triple ax murder trial on the front page of the newspaper."

He added: "That's my own opinion, and I can't say it's shared by everybody. The judges may very well decide it's none of our business."

The notion of asking judges to postpone sensational trials came up at a committee meeting attended by about 50 people, Martinez said.

"It's not our business to tell these judges how to run their courtrooms, but people in the meeting concurred we didn't want a bunch of adverse publicity," he said.

So far, no contact has been made with the judges. "I don't know that it will be done," Martinez said. "I will probably bring it up at the vice chairmen's meeting next week."

Treaty Oak's poisoning nets man 9 years

AUSTIN (AP) — The jury which found ex-convict Paul Stedman Cullen guilty of poisoning the historic Treaty Oak in an occult ritual has sentenced him to 9 years in prison and fined him $1,000.

Cullen's attorney, Terry Kirk of Austin, said his client wanted to appeal the sentence. But Kirk said he was "ecstatic" about it.

"I'm pleased, but I'm not really surprised, because this is Austin, my hometown," Kirk said. "This jury balanced the value of the Treaty Oak with the value of a human being."

Cullen showed no emotion and had no comment as he left the courtroom.

Before the jury retired to consider punishment, Kirk had told them no more than 10 years would be fair to his client.

"You have to decide how much a tree is worth," he said.

Kirk said he would not be involved in the appeal, which would go to the 3rd Court of Appeals in Austin.

State District Judge Bob Perkins, who presided over the trial, said people still find "this crime unfathomable in terms of rationale — nobody can figure it out. It makes it that much more of a crime."

Perkins said Cullen would get credit for the jail time, taking about a year off the sentence.

The jury deliberated about five hours before returning the punishment.

Due to a previous burglary conviction, Cullen faced a range of five to 99 years — or life — in prison.

Jury deliberations began after Cullen's father, retired Air Force Col. Paul Cullen Sr. of Lawton, Okla., and sister, Elizabeth Love of Plano, as well as an elderly friend, pleaded for leniency.

"He's been the kindest person, ever," the friend, 88-year-old Cora Pearson, of Elroy, said.

Mrs. Love, who sobbed as she testified to her brother's character, described him as a "kind and compassionate person. I've never known him to harm a living thing except himself."

Cullen, 46, was described by his own defense lawyers as a "loser."

In closing arguments, prosecutors asked the jurors to sentence Cullen to an "appropriate number of years."

Assistant District Attorney LaRu Woody said the poisoning of the tree was a very "strange act, a very bizarre act that makes it perhaps even more frightening" than a violent crime against a person.

She said Cullen had served prison time in Richmond, Va. and Texas and had been convicted of possession of marijuana in California and drunk driving in Texas.

Cullen's other attorney, Richard Jenkins of Dallas, said, "The tree is beautiful but there are other trees. There are a lot more trees in the forest."

The seven-woman, five-man jury convicted Cullen Wednesday night after about 3½ hours of deliberation.

Cullen has been jailed in lieu of $20,000 bond since his arrest in June 1989.

His father insisted his son hadn't harmed the tree. "They convicted an innocent man," said the elder Cullen.

News reports about the case brought international attention to the giant live oak tree, which according to legend was the site of a treaty signing between Stephen F. Austin and Indians.

The tree was poisoned with Velpar, a liquid herbicide, early in 1969. About two-thirds of the tree is now dead, foresters said, but the remaining third is still producing leaves.

Cullen had been living in the back of a 20-foot truck on a farm in Elroy, a small community southeast of Austin, when arrested. His lawyers tried to portray him as a lonely loser who claimed he poisoned the tree to impress a woman.

"That's the key to this entire case," Kirk said. "He wanted her to think that he was somebody."

During the eight-day trial, prosecutors said Cullen poisoned the Treaty Oak as part of an occult ritual. At various times he said he poisoned the tree to protect a woman whom he liked and to "kill" his love for her, prosecutors said.

"He acted intentionally ... he knew exactly what was going to happen. He intended that the tree be damaged or destroyed," Ms. Woody told the jury.

Since the poisoning was discovered last Memorial Day, more than $100,000 has been donated as city foresters and outside experts have taken extraordinary measures to save the tree.

Velpar-contaminated dirt was removed from around its roots, the tree has been doused with spring water and elaborate sun screens were built to shade it.

Prices up

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy futures prices closed mixed Thursday on technical factors and concerns about a job action in the North Sea oil fields.

The contract for June delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, rose 3 cents to close at $19.02 a 42-gallon barrel in New York Mercantile Exchange trading after a 71 cent gain on Wednesday.

Gasoline prices, which rose sharply the previous session, gave up some of their gains. The June contract for unleaded regular gasoline slipped 0.29 cent a gallon to 63.68 cents following a 1.49 cents gain on Wednesday.

Natural gas for June delivery fell to $1.574 per 1,000 cubic feet from $1.576 Wednesday.

Dollar dives

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar fell to two-year lows against the Swiss franc and West German mark Thursday but managed to gain ground against most other foreign currencies.

Gold prices fell after rising overseas.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 156.75 Japanese yen, from 157.03 yen on Wednesday.

In London, the British pound fell to $1.6770, from $1.6785 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with Wednesday's late rates included: 1.6325 West German marks, down from 1.6365; 1.3915 Swiss francs, down from 1.4020; 5.5115 French francs, up from 5.5100; 1,202.75 Italian lire, down from 1,203.25, and 1.1703 Canadian dollars, up from 1.1660.

In precious metals trading, gold bullion for immediate delivery on the New York Commodity Exchange fell $1.80 a troy ounce to $370.10.

Silver prices rose. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $5.088 a troy ounce, up from $4.989 on Wednesday.

Banking reform

Greenspan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on Thursday outlined the central bank's ideas for reforming the nation's financial system, including charging banks with risky investments more for their deposit insurance.

In his first extensive public remarks on deposit insurance reform, Greenspan told a Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago conference that the issue "should be high on our agenda" as Congress and the Bush administration consider permitting banks to expand into securities and insurance.

Chukchi Sea may be next Gulf

■ The icy Chukchi sea between Alaska and the Soviet Union could become the next Gulf of Mexico says a top Interior Dept. spokesman.

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON – The icy and remote Chukchi Sea off the northwest coast of Alaska could be as important a hunting ground for oil as the Gulf of Mexico, according to Minerals Management Service Director Barry Williamson.

Williamson said Wednesday that even though there is little hard data about oil resources in the Chukchi Sea, the federal agency considers it and the Beaufort Sea to the east to be important frontiers.

"I think the most exciting area from an exploration standpoint is the Chukchi Sea. ... It could be another Gulf of Mexico," he said here at the annual Offshore Technology Conference, which attracted about 30,000 people before it ended Thursday.

The Chukchi Sea area already has attracted the interest of big energy companies.

Shell Western Exploration and Production, the first to drill in the area, expects to head back to the Chukchi Sea in about six weeks and begin its second summer of exploration there by mid-July.

Arco and Texaco also have notified the Interior Department that they plan to drill exploratory wells in the Beaufort and Chukchi seas, a spokeswoman for the Minerals Management Service said.

Charlie Kidwell, Shell's manager of Alaskan development engineering, said during an address at the Offshore Technology Conference that the company completed one well in the Klondike prospect last summer and plans to continue work on wells started last year in the Burger and Popcorn prospects this year.

Depending on weather conditions, Shell may also begin drilling in the Crackerjack prospect, he said.

Texaco last week submitted an exploration and oil spill contingency plan to the Minerals Management Service for approval to begin drilling the first of as many as 50 wells in the Chukchi Sea in 1991.

Shell isn't revealing the results of its 12,000-foot Klondike well, and Kidwell wouldn't predict how soon the results of its drilling will be released.

The company needs to find a field containing at least 1 billion barrels of oil to make it economically feasible to develop, Kidwell said, because it is so difficult and expensive to build production facilities in the harsh, icy environment above the Arctic Circle. Development is expected to take about 15 years.

Because of the ice, drilling crews have only a 50- to 90-day summertime window in which they can work, Kidwell said. A drill ship and support vessel must dodge floating ice blocks. Because of a lack of nearby supply facilities, the company must carry most of what it needs when it leaves port, including a 105-by-400-foot spill response barge laden with skim-

Business Expo 90 succeeds

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

Area businesses got a chance to show off their products and services Thursday at "Business Expo 90." At the same time, business owners sharpened their skills while taking part in seminars, met with other business professionals and networked with each other.

Malcolm Outlaw, chairman of the Midland Business Council said: "We had about 65 people attend the international trade workshop this morning; 35 or so attended the seminars and the individual counseling sessions."

Many business owners were happy with the success of the trade show, including Edmond Burrows of Texas Industrial Services: "We've already decided we'll be here next year. The exposure that we've gotten in just the last three or four hours has been worth what we've invested."

Shura Glover, Midland Center director agreed. "Everyone's response has been good. I think it says a lot for the local economy when people want to invest their time and money into new ideas."

The trade show offered something for everyone. New and potential business owners seeking information were directed to seminars like: "Going Into Business and Business Planning," "Funding Your Business With SBA Assistance" and "Individual Consultations With Bankers and Industry Leaders."

The international trade seminar attracted owners interested in hearing new ways to expand. John Adams, a seminar speaker discussing "Why Should I Want To Export?" said: "There were about 85 people that showed up. Out here there's a good cross section of ideas. Areas that are narrowly focused will be hit hard. This area was, but folks are trying desperately to diversify.

"There's nothing that's not exportable," he said. While fear keeps business owners from expanding and exporting, that can be overcome, he added.

Lee Gordon, International business professor, Coastline Community College, who spoke on "How Can I Succeed in a Globally Competitive Market?" said: "I'm going to be working with Midland College in expanding their trade program. In today's environment all businesses face global competition, and worldwide opportunities are not only for large companies, but for small and medium firms as well.

"I was impressed by the sincere interest people have out here in diversifying. Everyone is realistic. They wanted one tangible business proposal."

During Business "Expo 90" the Midland Business Council announced the Small Business Person of the Quarter for the three month period. This quarter's recipient is Jack and Laura Brady, owners of Permian Sign Company.

Pickens tackles Toyota

■ In his continuing battles against the Japanese business system, T. Boone Pickens has now taken on Japan's press, claiming he was denied freedom of speech in a stock battle.

Associated Press

TOKYO — Several of Tokyo's largest newspapers said Thursday they held up ads by Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens, who is battling for control of a Japanese company, but Toyota Motor Corp. denied his claim that it tried to block the ads.

Pickens

The papers said they were considering printing a version of the ads, which claim that collusive business practices force higher prices on consumers, to omit company names.

"There's no freedom of speech in Japan," said Pickens' lawyer, Kanji Ishizumi. "Toyota published an ad in a U.S. paper saying 'shut up' to Pickens. They were able to enjoy freedom of speech in the United States, but Pickens can't do that here."

Pickens issued a statement Wednesday in Texas claiming Toyota and its powerful advertising agency, Dentsu, were trying to block him from publishing the ads.

Since last year, Boone Co., a U.S. investment firm, has held the largest equity stake in Koito Manufacturing Co., a major automobile parts maker closely linked to Toyota, Japan's largest automaker.

Pickens says his unsuccessful battle to gain a seat on Koito's board of directors and to exercise leadership in the company illustrates how investment opportunities are closed to foreigners in Japan.

Pickens' statement read: "Our ads were accepted, but we have now been told that there won't be any space available for several more weeks because Toyota's advertising firm, Dentsu, is buying up all available space."

Beware of high yield mutual fund gimmicks

By Jane Bryant Quinn

Quinn

NEW YORK–Investors in money-market mutual funds tend to shop for yields. The highest paying funds rake in the loot. But sometimes those yields spring from a gimmick, rather than from smarter investing.

Take the two funds that ride near the top of the yield list: Fidelity's Spartan Money Market Fund and Dreyfus' Worldwide Dollar Money Market Fund. Last week, they returned 8.33 and 8.54 percent respectively, compared with an industry average of 7.67 percent, according to The Donoghue Organization.

What's the gimmick? For a period of time, they are waiving their normal management fees–which is great for investors, but strictly temporary.

Dreyfus is charging no fee at all, says president Joseph DiMartino. The no-fee policy will last at least until June 15 or until the fund reaches $7.5 billion in assets (right now, it's worth $7.1 billion), and maybe longer.

When fees are finally imposed, it will be done gradually. But if Worldwide Dollar's 0.70 percent costs were charged to today's investors, the fund's yield would drop to 7.72 percent–just about even with the industry average.

Fidelity is temporarily charging only 0.10 percent, and has just promised not to go over 4.5 percent until 1996. By contrast, the Vanguard fund group, which carries the lowest normal charges, holds its money-fund costs to 0.28 percent.

At Fidelity, there's another little gimmick. You're charged separately for services that other funds normally include in their basic administrative expense. You pay $2 for writing a Spartan check; $5 for transferring money by wire; and $5 when you close your account. Because these costs aren't included in Spartan's general overhead, they don't reduce your reported yield.

Every time you use such a service, however, you reduce your own yield a little bit. Five checks written on a $20,000 Spartan account (the minimum money-market investment) would cost $20 and cut your current yield by 0.1 percent. That's not a big deal, but it takes the fund a step away from complete cost disclosure.

The money funds' fight for an extra 0.10 percent in reported yield is not reassuring. It symbolizes a blinkered competition that could override the industry's basic mission, which is to keep your money safe. So far, no investor has lost a penny in a true money fund–but it's an accident waiting to happen.

The past year has seen at least two near-misses. Integrated Resources defaulted on commercial paper that was being held by some money funds, and paper owed by Mortgage & Realty Trust was threatened. Among the victims: funds carrying the good names of Value Line, Liquid Green, Alliance and T. Rowe Price.

In each case, the sponsor stepped in to absorb the loss. But if it hadn't, the fund's investors would have come up short. If credit stays tight, you'll see more defaults and maybe a fund that "breaks the buck"–that is, lets its net asset value fall below the $1 that investors consider sacred.

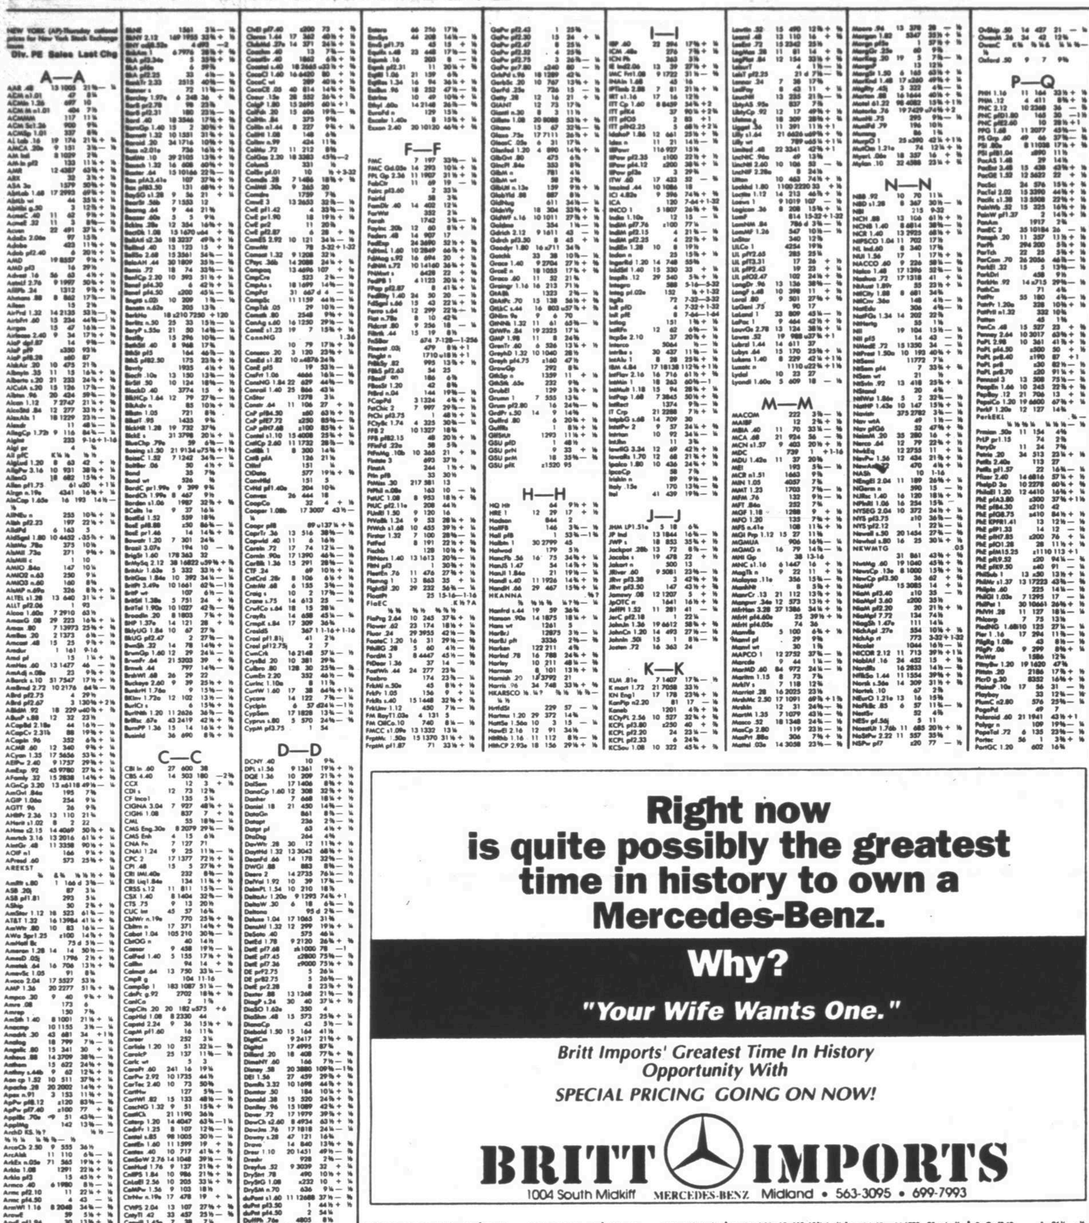

For maximum safety, look for a fund that invests only in Treasury securities (not even in Treasury "repurchase agreements," which are one step away from Treasuries and carry a tiny tad of risk). One such: The Capital Preservation Fund in Palo Alto (current yield: 7.62 percent). Norman Fosback, publisher of the Income & Safety newsletter in Fort Lauderdale, calls it the safest fund in the country.

If you don't mind investing in commercial paper (which is the short-term debt of corporations), Vanguard Prime buys only the highest-grade paper, rated P-1 by Moody's or A-1 by Standard & Poor's. It also buys prime certificates of deposit and government securities. Current yield: 8.04 percent.

ANALYSIS

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled for a small gain Thursday as the government completed a record quarterly financing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had slipped .68 on Wednesday, rose 5.63 to 2,738.51.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 847 up, 601 down and 522 unchanged.

The Treasury's sales of three-year and 10-year notes Tuesday and Wednesday both met with what analysts described as good receptions.

But many observers believed the sternest test of the interest-rate outlook came in Thursday's offering of $10 billion in 30-year notes, which came to a less definitive outcome. The issue sold at an average yield of 8.84 percent, producing no great surprise favoring either the bulls or the bears.

Brokers noted that upward pressure on interest rates has lately been concentrated in the longest-maturity sector of the credit markets.

Another source of uncertainty was the impending report Friday on the producer price index of finished goods for April. The index, a closely watched gauge of inflationary pressures, is expected to show a rise in the 0.1 percent-0.3 percent range.

Gainers among the blue chips included Eastman Kodak, up 1 at 39⅛; General Electric, up ½ at 67¼; Bristol-Myers Squibb, up ⅞ at 59⅝; International Business Machines, up 1⅛ at 112⅝, and American Telephone & Telegraph, up ¾ at 41¼.

On the downside, Philip Morris slipped ⅜ to 43⅝ and Westinghouse Electric was down 2 at 72.

Utility stocks pulled back after rallying in recent days on talk that interest rates might have peaked. Dow Jones's average of 15 utility issues dropped 1.25 to 212.53.

Honeywell gained ⅛ to 95, trading at 52-week highs. The company said it had decided to spin off its defense and marine systems business after failing to find a buyer for those operations.

The Gap Inc. climbed 3⅞ to 67⅝. The company reported a 25 percent jump in same-store sales for April, pacing what analysts described as a good month for apparel sales in general.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 158.46 million shares, up from 152.22 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 196.25 million shares.

Production in North sea looks "bullish"

By Anne Pearson
Hearst News Service

British Energy Minister Peter Morrison says he is "in a particularly bullish frame of mind" over prospects for North Sea oil and gas activity this year.

Companies are expected to spend about $6 billion for new capital investment in the United Kingdom's sector of the North Sea this year, up nearly 50 percent from last year, Morrison said on Tuesday.

So far this year, Morrison has approved seven North Sea projects, and 15 more are in the pipeline, he said. Another 25 to 30 also are awaiting consideration, he said in a speech during the second day of the Offshore Technology Conference at the Astrohall in Houston.

"What that means is the opportunity for the supply industry is as good as one could hope for," Morrison said.

Morrison announced Tuesday that his office has approved two North Sea gas projects. Arco will develop the Pickerill field at a cost of $320 million, and Mobil will build a gas pipeline for export from the Beryl field to St. Fergus, Scotland, at a cost of about $300 million.

Norway's energy minister, Eivind Reiten, said his country also looks forward to brisk development in its sector of the North Sea.

Norway is in the process of licensing 52 blocks for drilling on the Norwegian continental shelf – the largest licensing round ever held. Those blocks should be awarded in December.

"In the North Sea, which is our most mature oil province, we foresee a revitalization of exploration activity, and we believe there still are substantial quantities of petroleum to be found. The announcement of the 13th (licensing) round reflects this view," Reiten said.

Norway expects its oil production to reach an all-time high of around 2 million barrels a day in the 1990s from about 1.7 million barrels a day currently.

The Norwegian energy minister said he is encouraged by the outlook for natural gas. Norway is a major exporter to Europe.

"Norwegian gas sellers have put a lot of effort into analyzing the potential for export of LNG (liquefied natural gas) to the U.S. market," Reiten said, although Norway has not committed to such an export project. "I regard this as an interesting market for Norwegian natural gas."

Several Middle Eastern countries also are planning major oilfield expansions, and the U.S. Commerce Department is hosting a delegation of 29 companies from Saudi Arabia and Abu Dhabi this week at the conference.

Those companies are combing the trade show for equipment that will be needed for oil-field expansion and for joint venture opportunities they can take home.

"Fortunately they're still here to buy, but maybe some day they'll be here as exhibitors," said Don N. DeMarino, deputy assistant secretary of commerce, who is serving as host of some 40 company representatives.

Currently, the Saudis are producing less than 6 million barrels a day, but they are capable of producing 7 million to 8 million barrels.

Carmine D'Aloisio, a U.S. commercial officer based in Saudi Arabia, said representatives of these Arab companies have come to the offshore conference before, but the U.S. government put a formal delegation together for the first time because of the huge sales opportunities those countries offer U.S. suppliers.

"Without question, in the next few years, U.S. oil-field sales to Saudi Arabia are going to skyrocket.

PICKENS: Texan says no freedom of speech in Japan

(From 1C)

Pickens' statement read: "Our ads were accepted, but we have now been told that there won't be any space available for several more weeks because Toyota's advertising firm, Dentsu, is buying up all available space."

The Pickens ad is addressed to consumers, auto parts employees and shareholders of Koito, claiming the Texan's fight "could be a major step toward freeing Japanese consumers from artificially high prices, and returning portions of the profits to the companies' investors."

The ad asks Japanese consumers with any information on "unfair practices" of Toyota, Nissan, Honda or other carmakers to send it to Pickens in Dallas.

"It would never, ever happen — that Dentsu would pressure the media not to carry Pickens' advertisement," said Jim Sakaguchi of Toyota's international affairs department. "We have never discussed this matter with Dentsu."

Dentsu, the world's largest advertising agency, places more than 20 percent of the ads in major newspapers and almost one-third of ads in major magazines.

GULF: Alaskan sea holds promise for oil reserves

(From 1C)

President Bush is expected to issue a directive in a few weeks on which areas should be leased and which should be off-limits for environmental reasons. Williamson said the Minerals Management Service should make its recommendations within two or three months of Bush's decision.

There is tremendous pressure to ban drilling in some areas off California and Florida for environmental reasons, but Williamson would not say which tracts have been ruled out for future drilling.

Under the Bush administration, the Minerals Management Service expects to lease far fewer acres than were leased to oil companies during the Reagan years, Williamson said.

"The reason is, the game has changed in the last two years ... because the public perception has changed about oil and what it's doing. We need to be in tuned to the American people in this administration," Williamson said.

QUINN: Beware high yields

(From 1C)

Both Fidelity Spartan and Dreyfus Worldwide Dollar buy commercial paper with slightly lower grades. Dreyfus gets an extra edge from its dollar-denominated international investments and by buying slightly longer-term securities. The average maturity of its investments (82 days) is almost double the industry average (44 days).

It's unthinkable that Dreyfus or Fidelity would ever let its investors sustain a loss. Still, the premium they place on reported yield represents a step in the wrong direction.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

No risk? Try money market mutual funds

By Bill Doyle

Q. My husband will retire in five years. His pension and our Social Security benefits will be adequate for a comfortable living. Upon retirement, we plan to sell our home, which is free and clear of mortgage and valued at $165,000 to $175,000. We plan to buy a recreation vehicle with other money already saved and do extensive traveling.

We want to put the money from the house sale in a tax-deferred investment. Although we do not feel it will be necessary to have income from that investment, we do want our money available — in a lump sum, as monthly income or both — should we need it. We do not want annuities because they have high — often hidden — costs and don't provide the flexibility we want.

What would you recommend to meet our needs?

Doyle

A. With all your needs, you present a tough nut to crack. No one investment will meet all your requirements.

If you are reasonably sure you won't need the money in the years immediately after retirement, you should consider investing part of the proceeds from the house sale in Series EE, U.S. Savings Bonds. "Part" because each of you can put no more than $15,000 into EEs annually.

Interest accrues on EEs and is collected when the bonds are redeemed. Meanwhile, federal income tax on that interest can be deferred. There is no state or local tax on U.S. bonds.

By redeeming some of the bonds each year, you would have ready cash. In order to get full interest, however, you must own EEs for at least five years. Redeem them earlier and you get lower interest.

For your money to be invested with virtually no risk and all or any part of it to be available quickly, I have to point you toward money market mutual funds. All such funds are "no-load," meaning you don't pay commission charges. They do have operating expenses — in most cases less than 1 percent annually — lower than most annuities.

There are two basic types of money market mutual funds — those paying taxable dividends and those paying tax-free dividends. The former's dividends are higher than the latter's. Tax-free investments are suitable only if you are in an income tax bracket of 28 percent or higher.

For you, my recommendation is a combination of EE bonds and taxable money market mutual funds.

Q. My husband and I have heard about mutual funds, but we really don't understand much about them. A friend told us that a firm called Mutual Fund Education Alliance has an audio tape for potential beginning investors explaining mutual funds. Can you tell us anything about this?

A. After listening to that tape while driving to and from the golf course, I'd call it reasonably good. Although a bit self-serving, it does provide accurate information about mutual funds — making it a worthwhile primer for beginners.

That hour-long tape and complementing 48-page booklet can be obtained by sending $10 to MFEA, P.O. Box 11162, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Q. I believe you wrote that only banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions provide insurance on money market accounts. A friend insists his brokerage firm insured customers' accounts, including money market mutual funds, up to $2.5 million. Can you explain?

A. You are mixing apples and oranges — or deposits with securities.

Deposits, including money market deposits accounts, at banks, S&Ls and credit unions have federal deposit insurance of up to $100,000 per depositor per institution. The key word there is "federal."

Securities, including shares of money market mutual funds, at brokerage firms have Securities Investor Protection Corp. coverage of up to $500,000. That does not guarantee against loss. It simply means that, if a brokerage goes bust, customers will get their securities back — up to the limit of SIPC coverage. And many brokerage firms carry private insurance beyond the SIPC limit.

Puhl disabled

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros placed outfielder Terry Puhl on the disabled list and called up Louie Meadows from the club's AAA affiliate in Tucson, a team spokesman said.

Puhl, who has hit .214 with one RBI in 17 games this season, was placed on the 21-disabled list with a strained right shoulder, Astros spokesman Craig Sanders said Thursday.

Meadows, who was hitting .289 with three home runs and one RBI in Tucson, will join the team Friday for a three-game series in Pittsburgh, Sanders said.

The Astros also moved infielder Steve Lombardozzi from the 15-day to 21-day disabled list, Sanders said.

K.C. withdraws

ATLANTA (AP) — Former Boston Celtics coach K.C. Jones has withdrawn from the list of candidates under consideration for the Atlanta Hawks head coaching job, left vacant when Mike Fratello resigned last month.

Hawks general manager Pete Babcock said Thursday he was surprised by Jones' decision.

"He called me late yesterday and said he wanted to withdraw his named from consideration," Babcock said. "No reason. That's all he told me. It was out of the blue."

Jones, now an assistant coach with the Seattle SuperSonics, won two NBA titles with Boston before joining the staff of Seattle coach Bernie Bickerstaff. He had been scheduled to interview with the Hawks Friday.

Another candidate, New Jersey Nets vice president Willis Reed, was interviewed Wednesday, Babcock said.

OHS' Cowan faces tough foes

AUSTIN (AP) — Greenville coach David Gish is more worried about the weather than the competition Lions sprinter Henry Neal will face at the state track meet beginning Friday.

Neal, the defending Class 5A champion in the 100 meters, qualified for state in four events at a regional meet that was compressed into one day.

"We had to run everything on one day because one day was rained out," Gish said. "By the time Henry got to the 200 meters, he told me he was going to coast and he still ran 20.9."

Neal also qualified in the 100 meters, the triple jump and he'll anchor the 400-meter relay.

State titles in Class 4A will be decided Friday at Memorial Stadium and Classes 5A, 3A, 2A and A will perform on Saturday.

Neal, 5-8, 160, is unbeaten in 11 100-meter races this year. He won the 1989 100 meters in 10.3 but was disqualified in the 200 by a false start.

Gish expects competition from Austin's Steven Peterson in the 100 and Fort Bend Willowridge's Mike Miller in the 200.

Odessa High's Dallas Cowan also is a top qualifier in both sprint races with times of 10.28 and 21.4.

"We've got a lot of confidence that Henry can get us three golds and maybe we can battle with Galveston Ball for second in the relay," Gish said.

Willowridge is the strong favorite in the 5A sprint relay with a best time of 40.32 time at regional. Miller ran the anchor leg.

Ball (40.8) and Greenville (40.85) are expected to challenge Willowridge.

Neal leads the state's sprinters into this year's meet with a state best 9.95, and also is the state leader in the 200 with a time of 20.67.

Wichita Falls pole vaulter Jayson Lavender, who set a state meet record of 17 feet 3 inches last year, again is the favorite with a top qualifying vault of 17-0.

Other returning boys' 5A returning champions include Brian Williams, Clear Lake, high jump and John Herpin, LaPorte, 110-meter hurdles.

Williams won the high jump with a leap of 7-0 last year and has qualified at 6-10 this year.

Houston Sterling is attempting to win a record-tying fourth Class 5A girls' title. Fort Worth Trimble won titles in 1976, 1977, 1978 and 1979.

Sterling won the 1989 title in the meet's final event, the 1600-meter relay. The Lady Raiders also won state titles in 1985 and 1986.

Sterling is led by Christine Gray in the 100- and 300-meter hurdles and triple jump; Nicole Hudson in the 200 and LaTonya Edwards in the 400 meters.

Gray is the defending state champion in the 100 hurdles and Edwards won last year's 400 meters.

Gray has the state's best time of 42.76 in the 300 hurdles, a new state meet event for girls.

Other defending 5A champions in the girls' field are Stephanie Fields, Temple, 100 meters; Stevenie Wadsworth, Hurst Bell, shot put; Portia Matthews, San Antonio Southwest, triple jump; Shanteli Grand, Dallas Carter, long jump and Ashley Mulkey, Amarillo Tascosa, high jump.

Midland High's outfielders, rated by some as the best ever: (left to right) Brian Conaway, Will Sowders and Keith Gilbreath.

Outfield could be MHS' best ever

■ Credit for Midland High's 1990 baseball success is in large part due to the Bulldog outfielders — Keith Gilbreath, Will Sowders and Brian Conaway.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

Keith "Opie" Gilbreath practices on The Beach, Brian Conaway exudes a charismatic self-confidence, while Will Sowders goes about his job in a strong, silent sort of way.

It's a mixture of characters that may seem more befitting the antics of a major league bullpen. But these guys are what baseballers call every day players — outfielders.

Gilbreath in right, Sowders at center, and Conaway patrolling left for Midland High; a hustling senior troika that has led some long-time MHS observers to claim they comprise the best outfielding unit in Bulldog history.

Their efforts have helped to land the 'Dogs in a best-of-three bi-district series against Lubbock Monterey after MHS went 18-8 in the regular season and claimed second place in District 4-5A.

"The only teams that had outfields that would even compare to this bunch would be the 1960 district champions and the 1973 state champions we had," said Doc Dodson, who has been the MHS trainer for 31 years.

"These guys don't know what the word quit means. They get after it and they enjoy playing the game. That's obvious because they play so well together."

"That's a pretty big statement. There have been some pretty good outfielders come out of this school," Gilbreath replied when told of Dodson's assessment.

"But as a whole, I guess we probably are the best," he went on to admit.

"They have done very well. They had some problems early, but they solved that by the time district play rolled around. They're the best unit I've had here," said Bulldog coach Tim Whalen, who began coaching at MHS in 1980.

The early problems Whalen referred to stem from the fact that all three lettered in other sports for MHS.

Conaway and Sowders were both starters for the Bulldog football team, and both suffered injuries on the gridiron. Playing wide receiver, Conaway suffered a broken thumb that he said is now completely healed, while fullback Sowders' affliction was more serious.

A knee injury downed Sowders even before 4-5A grid action began, and he will eventually need to have surgery to repair the ligament dam-

Bruins don't care who they face

■ Boston's opponent in the NHL championship series will set up either a 1988 rematch or the first all-American final in nine years.

Stanley Cup

BOSTON (AP) — The NHL championship series will be a rematch of the 1988 pairing or the first all-American Stanley Cup final in nine years. The Boston Bruins don't seem to care which.

Either way, they'll be in it.

"Whichever team we play is going to be very tough to beat," Boston's Ray Bourque said. "But we're playing good hockey right now, and we feel very good about ourselves, whoever we're playing."

The Bruins reached the title round with a 3-2 victory Wednesday night over the Capitals at Washington that completed a four-game sweep of the Wales Conference final. Coach Mike Milbury gave his players two days off before the next practice, scheduled for Saturday.

Boston will be at home for the first two games of the best of-7 final. It will start Tuesday night if the Campbell Conference final between Chicago and Edmonton ends with Saturday's sixth game. If a seventh game is needed Monday night, the final will begin next Friday night.

Since winning their fifth and last Cup in 1972, the Bruins have lost in four appearances in the championship series. But this season they loom as favorites after having the NHL's best record and top defense in the regular season and allowing Washington but three goals in the last 10 periods.

The last time two United States-based teams met in the finals was 1981, when the New York Islanders beat Minnesota in five games.

"In terms of the all-U.S. thing, I think there are some benefits that the league might derive out of that," Boston general manager Harry Sinden said Thursday. "There would be a lot more benefit to the National Hockey League in the United States if one U.S. team is involved than none. If Winnipeg was playing Vancouver, I don't think it would help."

The Bruins reached the title series in 1988 for the first time in 10 years but were swept in four games by Edmonton.

"There is no revenge motive with Edmonton at all that I can sense," Sinden said. "What there is is a hunger to win the Stanley Cup."

Only 12 Bruins remain from the 1988 team. Key players such as Brian Propp, Dave Poulin and Dave Christian, all playing on the top two lines, were acquired this season.

Those deals — Propp for a second-round draft choice, Poulin for Ken Linseman and Christian for Bobby Joyce — have made Sinden look like a genius. He sees that praise as a mixed blessing.

"I would be less than candid if I said there weren't a lot of people saying some nice things. I also know that it's tough to live up to," Sinden said. "This business can humble you pretty quickly."

One of his best trades was one that nearly didn't happen.

Sinden had been trying to acquire a goaltender. But on the night of March 6, 1988, Edmonton general manager and coach Glen Sather called to say he was accepting an offer from Pittsburgh for that goalie.

"I was very disappointed," Sinden said.

But the next morning, Sather called again.

"He said Pittsburgh called. They want out of the deal. He said, 'Do you still want it?' I said, 'Count me in.'"

So Sinden sent young and then unproven goalie Bill Ranford and forward Geoff Courtnall to the Oilers. Ranford has had an excellent playoffs this season.

The Bruins got Andy Moog, and he's been better. He's started 12 straight games, is 9-1 in the last 10 and has a 1.92 goals-against average in the playoffs.

"We lucked out on that deal," Sinden said.

Luck has had little to do with Moog's success in the playoffs. He's made some spectacular saves, and his solid defensemen who quickly sweep away rebounds limit scoring opportunities.

"All of us are very happy but extremely unsatisfied. We still have four more wins to go," Moog said.

Moore to apply for NFL draft

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse University record-setting receiver Rob Moore says now that he has his degree, he will apply for an National Football League supplemental draft this summer.

Moore, who announced his intentions last month to forgo his final year of eligibility at Syracuse and turn professional, told the Syracuse Post-Standard that he would submit a petition for the supplemental draft soon.

NFL Director of Public Relations Jim Heffernan said Thursday that the league office had not yet heard from Moore, who has until June 15 to submit his application.

A supplemental draft, if needed, will be held in late June or early July.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound Moore has set school records for most yards receiving, 2,122, and touchdowns, 22, in a career.

Moore was regarded as a likely first-round draft selection if he had made himself available for last month's draft.

Spurs rebound for win

Robinson leads San Antonio with 28 points

Associated Press

David Robinson, living up to the promise that made him Rookie of the Year, scored 28 points, had six dunks and blocked eight shots Thursday night, carrying the San Antonio Spurs to a 121-98 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers and cutting their lead to 2-1 in the NBA playoffs.

The two teams meet in Game 4 of the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinal Saturday at HemisFair Arena.

It was Portland's first loss in six playoff games and snapped a nine-game winning streak going back to the regular season.

The Spurs outscored Portland 16-3 to start the fourth quarter, including a 12-0 run that put the Blazers away. Rod Strickland's basket with 7:22 left gave San Antonio a 102-76 lead.

Robinson scored 10 points in the fourth-quarter surge that led to an eventual rout. Terry Cummings scored 19 points and Sean Elliott added 17 for the winners.

Terry Porter and Buck Williams each had 18 points for Portland. Williams didn't have a point in the fourth quarter.

San Antonio coach Larry Brown cleared the Spurs bench with 3:53 to play as they won their 37th home game in 44 outings this year.

The Spurs, humiliated in two road losses and encouraged by a standing room only sellout crowd of 15,910 fans in HemisFair Arena, charged to a 61-45 halftime lead.

Robinson, criticized for not being aggressive in the two losses at Portland, scored 17 points in the first half as the Spurs led by as many as 17 points.

Robinson had four resounding dunks to inflame the crowd and rattle the Blazers.

It was the first time that the Blazers missed center Kevin Duckworth, who broke a bone in his right hand in the final game of the first-round series against Dallas.

Portland reserve center Wayne Cooper played only nine minutes in the first half before back spasms forced him to the bench for the rest of the game.

The Spurs got seven points off turnovers from the jittery Blazers in the first period as they posted a 27-22 lead. San Antonio extended the margin to 61-44 before Williams, who had 16 first-half points, hit a free throw just before intermission.

The Blazers won the first two games of the series in Portland 107-94 and 122-112.

NBA Playoffs

Pistons 104, Knicks 97

Isiah Thomas sank three of his five 3-point baskets down the stretch as the Detroit Pistons beat the New York Knicks 104-97 for their 12th straight playoff win and a 2-0 lead in their NBA playoff series.

The defending champions need just one more win to match the Los Angeles Lakers (1988-89) for most consecutive NBA playoff wins.

Thomas finished with 23 points and James Edwards scored 32, his best-ever in playoff action, for Detroit.

Gerald Wilkins, held to 1-of-13 shooting in the Pistons' 112-77 rout in the first game, led the Knicks with 24 points. Charles Oakley had 22 and Patrick Ewing 20 for New York.

It was the fifth consecutive 1990 playoff game the Pistons held the opposition under 100 points. Over the last two seasons, Detroit has held playoff opponents to less than 100 in 20 of 22 games.

The series now shifts to Madison Square Garden for games Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

The game was tied 92-92 with 6:36 remaining, but Thomas hit two 3-pointers and Joe Dumars sank a free throw to put Detroit ahead 99-94 with 4:27 left. Thomas hit another 3-pointer with 1:03 remaining for a nine-point lead.

Lakers 124, Suns 100

James Worthy scored 23 of his 27 points in the first half as the Los Angeles Lakers rebounded from a narrow loss to overpower the Phoenix Suns and even their NBA playoff series at one game apiece.

The Lakers, who before Tuesday night had beaten the Suns 21 straight times at the Forum dating back to 1984, were never in jeopardy in Game 2 as they led 33-20 after one quarter, 63-48 at halftime and 97-73 after three periods.

After losing the opener 104-102, the Lakers went ahead to stay early in Game 2. Jeff Hornacek scored the Suns' first six points to give them a 6-4 lead before the Lakers scored seven straight to go on top for good.

The best-of-7 Western Conference semifinal series now moves to Phoenix for the third and fourth games Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Phoenix center Mark West, who had 24 points, 16 rebounds and seven blocked shots in Game 1, didn't score until making a foul shot with 2:41 left before halftime, cutting the Lakers' lead to 13 points. West finished with just nine points and five rebounds.

Magic Johnson had 21 points and 14 assists for the Lakers. Orlando Woolridge also had 21 points and Byron Scott added 18 for Los Angeles.

Hornacek led the Suns with 18 points and Tim Perry scored 17.

Sixer GM Nash tenders resignation

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia 76ers general manager John Nash resigned Thursday to "pursue other opportunities," but club owner Harold Katz has refused to accept the resignation in hopes he will change his mind.

The 43-year-old Nash, who became the Sixers' general manager in June 1986, said he told Katz of his intention after the last regular-season game.

"He expressed his surprise and disappointment at this development, and at his request I agreed not to make a public announcement that might cause reason for distraction during our playoff drive," Nash said.

Nash said he regretted that his resignation had become public while the 76ers remain in the playoffs. The Sixers defeated Cleveland in the first round of the NBA playoffs and trail Chicago 2-0 in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

"I think he wants to stay. I want him back," Katz said.

Oilers within one game of NHL finals

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Jari Kurri's record-tying playoff goal late in the second period carried the Edmonton Oilers to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks Thursday night and one game away from the Stanley Cup finals.

The Oilers can wrap up the best-of-7 Campbell Conference series with a victory in Game 6 on Saturday night in Chicago. Awaiting the winner in the NHL championship series are the Boston Bruins, the Wales Conference winners who recently completed a four-game sweep of the Washington Capitals.

Kurri, a battle-tested veteran with four Stanley Cup rings, broke a 3-3 tie with a power-play goal at 18:29 of the second period after the Blackhawks had rallied to tie on goals by Trent Yawney and Denis Savard.

Kurri, taking a pass from Mark Messier, onetimed the puck past Chicago goalie Jacques Cloutier, making his first start in the playoffs. That was Kurri's 89th goal, tying former teammate Wayne Gretzky on the all-time playoff list.

Kurri, who played on the same line with Gretzky for the better part of his 10 years in Edmonton, got a standing ovation from the crowd at the Northlands Coliseum.

The Oilers took a 1-0 lead at 2:08 of the first period on a goal by Randy Gregg, who beat Cloutier between the pads from in front after taking a nice setup pass from Joe Murphy.

Craig Simpson made it 2-0 when he tipped in a shot from inside the blue line by Reijo Ruotsalainen at 12:25 while the Oilers were on the power play. The goal was Simpson's 11th of the playoffs.

Steve Konroyd cut the Oilers' lead to 2-1 when he redirected a pass by Steve Larmer into the lower left circle at 14:14.

But the Oilers responded with another goal of their own only 18 seconds later when Adam Graves hit a wraparound shot that bounced off the post into the net.

The Oilers, awarded four power-play opportunities in the first period, thoroughly dominated the Blackhawks in the first 20 minutes.

BULLDOGS: Everybody contributed to success

From 1D

age — after baseball season is over.

The 5-8 Gilbreath was an honorable mention all-district basketball player after averaging 8.9 points and shooting 25 three-point goals in 4-5A play.

The combination of the football injuries and Gilbreath (along with second baseman Scott Melzer) staying in basketball until the 'Dogs were eliminated in a district playoff meant the outfield would need time to gel.

By the time the annual Tournament of Champions at Angels Stadium was played March 1-3, the trio had come into its own.

"My injury healed real early, so it really hasn't been much of a factor. And I don't think Will's had slowed him down," Conaway said.

"Oh, it has slowed me down some," Sowders argued. "But I'm going to wait because they said if they operated I wouldn't be able to do anything for nearly a year."

After being forced to practice at Zachery Field, where deep right field is nothing but dirt (thus The Beach) and the remainder of the outfield has a slow surface, each one of the outfielders exhibited exceptional range and chased down almost sure-fire hits in a 4-3 win over Monterey.

"They had a big part in that win. I tend to say they play a little bit over their abilities defensively, but they're all good at the plate and run the bases well," Whalen said.

Angels Stadium was MHS' home field in regular season play, and all three said it played an important role in their success.

"The surface is a lot faster and it's easier to run on," said Gilbreath, who batted .286 in district and as lead-off hitter got on base nearly 70 percent of the time, according to Whalen.

"Surface wise you can't beat Angels Stadium, but it's a little larger than Zachery," Conaway added.

Sowders and Conaway also contributed to the 'Dogs' offensive attack. From the No. 5 spot in the order Sowders batting .250 with three doubles and a pair of triples in 4-5A play, while No. 8 hitter Conaway added a .273 average with two doubles.

"Everybody on this team had contributed. If I have an 0-for-4 day, then Brian comes up and goes 3-for-4 or a Jason Stone will go 3-for-4," Gilbreath said.

And even though all three have collegiate potential, their main focus is on Monterey. The Plainsmen defeated MHS 7-5 Tuesday to take a 1-0 lead in the series, forcing the 'Dogs into a must-win situation in two games Saturday (beginning at 2 p.m. at Lubbock's Lowrey Field).

Even in defeat, though, the outfield performed well, with Sowders maybe making the defensive play of the day. After he missed a diving catch that fell out of his glove, he stood up and pegged Monterey's Greg Cushman for a force out at third base.

"They're going to be tough. They have played only two seven inning games in their district," Sowders said of the Plainsmen before the series began.

"We still have to get past Monterey, but if we can beat them I think we can go pretty far in the playoffs," Gilbreath said.

"But right now we're focusing completely on Monterey," added Conaway, completing the same thought that is in each Bulldog mind.

Couples takes only sub-par round in opener of Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Fred Couples was quick to admit that "a lot of luck was involved" in a wind-blown 69 in Thursday's first round of the Memorial tournament.

His was the only subpar round of the wet, cold day, one when the average score for the gathering of tour professionals looked more like those from the early foursomes at the local course on the weekend.

The 108-man invitational field finished with an average score of 78.9, almost seven full shots over par.

"I can't explain how hard it was out there," Couples said after his journey through winds which gusted to 40 mph and caused a wind-chill factor in the 30s. For extra effects some rain squalls and occasional hail were added.

Jack Nicklaus, the host, founder and two-time winner of this event and the man who designed the Muirfield Village Golf Club, took a stab at an explanation.

"I don't think I've ever seen it so difficult to play golf in Ohio," Nicklaus said.

Greg Norman was tied for second at 73 with Hale Irwin, Lanny Wadkins, Corey Pavin, Don Pooley, Peter Persons and Jay Delsing.

Payne Stewart, who scored his second victory of the season last week in Texas, had a 74.

Mark Calcavecchia, the tour's leading money-winner for the year and the current British Open champion, shot 88, 16 over par and 19 behind the leader.

"I have only two things to say. WD," Calcavecchia said.

Nicklaus had a 78 and said he played very well. Except for two holes, where he made par, Nicklaus said "I struck the ball as well as I ever have for 18 holes. It was just a very difficult day to play golf."

Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open winner and two-time PGA champion, shot 82. Jeff Sluman played the front in 46 and picked up. Robert Gamez, a two-time winner this season, had an 81. Two-time U.S. Open champ Curtis Strange shot 80, 43 on the back.

Norman, wearing a stocking cap and layers of sweaters and rain gear, said he walked away from the course "with what I call a Nicklaus headache. He makes you work your butt off."

He referred to the course design, which requires most second shots to be carried to the green. With hazards in front of many greens, a pitch-and-run approach — the desirable shot under these conditions — is not possible.

"It was British Open weather," Norman said. "But we don't play the British Open on a course like this."

The wind was the principal problem.

"It was strong," Nicklaus said, "but the problem was that it was swirling through the trees. You never knew what it was going to do to the ball."

Norman concurred.

"I don't think I've seen it this gusty since Turnberry (the British Open) in '86," he said. "You were at the mercy of the gods as to where the gusts took you."

As an example, he talked about his adventures on the 14th hole.

"I had a 5-footer for birdie, and a wind gust took it 12 feet to the right of the hole," he said, and repeated, as if he could not believe it: "A 5-footer and it ends up 12 feet right."

Nichols hopes to click in seniors event

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Bobby Nichols would love nothing more than to have what happened to him at last year's Southwestern Bell Classic happen again this year.

Nichols came into the 1989 tournament playing poorly. Then his game clicked for the weekend and he came away with his first Senior PGA Tour championship by beating Orville Moody in a playoff.

Nichols again is struggling as he heads into today's first round of the $450,000 tournament at Quail Creek Golf and Country Club. After opening the year with a second-place finish at the MONY Tournament of Champions, Nichols has finished no better than 14th.

He has won more than $58,000, but that's only 25th on the earnings list. He doesn't rank among the top 10 in any of the Tour's statistical categories.

"I've never been able to predict how I'm going to play," Nichols said this week. "You put some numbers on the board, and if they're not very good, you're not playing well.

"I don't know from one day to the next with this game. I never have been able to figure it out."

One thing Nichols knows for sure is that confidence is crucial, and right now his is flagging a bit. He went through some droughts during 26 years on the regular Tour, but admits his current slump "probably has been the worst."

"Your confidence comes and goes and your game comes and goes depending on if the ball goes in the hole," he said. "All I know is the scores haven't been very good.

"When you start scoring bad, it goes through your whole game. When your confidence goes, then everything goes, from tee box to green. ...

"I'm not complaining, it's just frustrating. But it still beats the heck out of working."

The trick, Nichols said, is to somehow start playing well again without tinkering too much with the mechanics. It's tough to do.

"I think I've explored all areas I know of," he said. "I'm just going to try to get the ball in the hole."

Ironically, Nichols is hoping for a turnaround in his game on a course he says does not suit his game. The 6,708-yard layout requires a solid game off the tee.

Winds prevent much practice at Indy oval

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The weather was the big winner Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway as most teams kept their cars parked rather than risk a wind-blown trip around the 2½-mile oval.

The temperature reached only into the upper 40s and wind gusted up to 30 mph for much of the day.

Activity was also halted for a portion of the practice period by light rain and the track then closed 50 minutes early because of rain.

Only 11 drivers practiced and only 74 laps were completed. Jim Crawford of Scotland did most of the work, with 21 laps in his Buick-powered Lola backup car, and he had the day's fastest lap at 208.686 mph. Tero Palmroth of Finland was the only other driver over 200, reaching 203.009 in his back-up Lola-Cosworth.

Brazil's Raul Boesel was next in a Lola-Judd at 196.627, Belgium's Didier Theys hit 191.245 in a Penske-Buick and Randy Lewis reached 188.501 in a 1988 Penske PC17 with a Buick engine.

Dominic Dobson was the first driver out Thursday and called it a day after completing just three laps.

"We just wanted to do a couple of laps to make sure everything was OK," said Dobson, whose fastest lap was 174.118. "We didn't go at speed because it is too windy out there and we didn't figure to really learn anything. A strong gust could catch the car coming off a turn and we could lose a week, or a car, or the driver.

"I wouldn't want to lose a week, the car and certainly not the driver."

Other drivers who practiced were Danny Sullivan, Roberto Guerrero, Geoff Brabham, rookie Mike Groff and Rocky Moran.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Auto Club rejected an unofficial appeal by a group of car-owners and drivers with pre-1990 cars that would have allowed them to remove an aerodynamic device they say is making their cars unpredictable at high speed.

The request was made Wednesday after Johnny Rutherford, a three-time Indy 500 winner, became the fifth driver in a 1989 or older car to crash since practice opened Saturday. Rutherford suffered a concussion.

Martina survives another round among teens

ROME (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova, surviving another three-set struggle Thursday, joined Jennifer Capriati and the rest of the teen brigade in the quarterfinals of the Italian Open.

Still bothered by a pulled hamstring, the 33-year-old Navratilova managed to defeat Italy's Sandra Cecchini 6-4, 3-6, 6-3. The 14-year-old Capriati also needed three sets before beating Italy's Laura Golarsa 6-3, 6-7 (10-8), 6-2.

Two other seeded teenagers, 16-year-old Monica Seles and 19-year-old defending champion Gabriela Sabatini also reach the quarters. Seles beat Mercedes Paz 6-1, 6-1 and the fourth-seeded Sabatini eliminated Regina Rajchrtova 6-0, 6-1.

In the torunament's first surprise, third-seeded Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario was beaten by Canada's Helen Kelesi, 6-4, 7-5. Others reaching the quarters were No. 5 Manuela Maleeva and No. 13 Caterina Lindqvist.

The 33-year-old Navratilova, who needed three sets Wednesday to beat Australia's Rachel McQuillan, found herself in trouble again against Cecchini.

Playing in front of her home fans on the Foro Italico center court, the 14th-seeded Italian captured the second set by changing the rhythm with slices and drop shots.

Cecchini broke Navratilova in the first game of the third set and held serve for a 2-0 lead. But the American left-hander cut down on her mistakes, took control of the net and lost only eight more points the rest of the way.

Navratilova, who wore a bandage around her left thigh, said the hamstring injury bothered her on some points.

Daniel overwhelmed by success

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — Less than a year after wondering if she would ever win again, Beth Daniel is the hottest player on the LPGA Tour.

"It's kind of like, 'Don't stick me with a pin right now.' I didn't expect this. It's a little bit overwhelming to me," said Daniel, who leads a field of 144 into Friday's first round of the Crestar Classic.

Daniel was the tour's top rookie in 1979 and its player of the year in 1980. She won 14 tournaments through 1985, but over the next three-plus seasons, No. 15 eluded her.

"It gets to you if you care about it at all, and I cared — a lot," she said.

In the middle of a frustrating string of second-place finishes, Daniel was out for 13 weeks in 1988 with mononucleosis.

"It's real hard," she said. "On one hand, you worry about whether that day will ever come again, but on the other, hey, if I can finish second eight times in two years, I can certainly win."

That day came last August. She led from the start en route to a four-shot victory at the Greater Washington Open.

It was the beginning of a stretch in which Daniel won four of the final six events on the LPGA's 1989 domestic schedule. Her season scoring average of 70.38 set an all-time record, and she became the second player in LPGA history to surpass $500,000 in yearly winnings.

Daniel opened 1990 with a 14th-place finish at the Jamaica Classic. In seven tour events since then, she has won twice and finished no worse than eighth.

Her seven top-10 finishes in eight events lead the tour, and her winnings of $202,884 are second to the $231,087 of Pat Bradley, also a two-time winner in 1990.

Daniel skipped last week's LPGA stop in Nashville, Tenn., to play in a Japanese tournament. She won.

"I don't know how long I can keep this up," she said, "but it sure is a nice change of pace."

Although she finished second at the 1989 Crestar Classic, Daniel made no bones about the fact she was not a big fan of Greenbrier Country Club, a new course where the tournament was held for the first time.

She said Greenbrier's flat, 6,275-yard, par-72 layout promoted "dink golf," where players are restricted to hitting short tee shots to small target areas to set up their approaches.

Daniel, who has been practicing at Greenbrier since arriving earlier this week, broke into a grin when asked how one year of aging has affected the course.

"Nothing's changed from last year. It's the same golf course," she said.

"The golf course just doesn't suit my game," Daniel said. "I feel like the driver is the best club in my bag, and I just can't hit it here that much, especially on the back nine. I just have to keep it in the bag."

Bradley is taking the week off, but the entrants include Ayako Okamoto, the winner last Sunday at Nashville.

Also in the field is two-time defending champion Juli Inkster, who is playing in her fourth tournament since giving birth to a daughter in February. Inkster is trying to become the first LPGA player in two decades to win the same tournament three years in a row.

Champs take early lead

AUSTIN (AP) — Three returning Class 5A state golf champions successfully defended their titles Thursday during the first round of competition at the Morris Williams and Jimmy Clay golf courses.

Justin Leonard of Lake Highlands, last year's individual medalist, birdied two of the four par-5 holes on the 6,636-yard course. He finished at a 1-under-par 71 to tie El Paso Hanks' Luis Delgadillo for the lead going into the final round.

Leonard, who will play for the University of Texas next year, said he needs a few more birdies to ensure another title.

"I need to birdie at least three of the par fives," Leonard said. "I birdied two of them today, but I had a bogey on one. I hit the ball good. I just didn't make enough birdies."

Plano seniors Joey Tomaselli and Robby Yarbrough led the Wildcats, the defending team champions, to the team lead after the first day. Tomaselli, who finished eighth in medalist competition last year, turned in a 3-over par and Yarbrough, third last year, was one stroke behind.

Plano finished the day at 311, five strokes in front of second-place McAllen. Conroe is third at 317, followed by Odessa Permian (318), Richland (320), Clear Lake and Aldine Eisenhower (321) and Austin Westlake (327).

Kori Johns of Round Rock Westwood turned in a 2-over par 74 at Jimmy Clay to lead the Lady Warriors to a first round tie with Lewisville Marcus. Westwood was the Class 5A girls champion last year and Marcus was the runner-up.

Marcus held a three-stroke lead going into the back nine, but ran into trouble on the 15th hole.

"I would say out of all five of our girls, we gave away 10 strokes on the 15th," Marcus coach Karen Gravley said. "We had two triple bogeys, a double bogey and a bogey."

The par-4 hole is placement oriented, featuring a tree in the middle of the fairway and a sand trap to the right of the green. The area is heavily wooded.

"It's a basic layup off the tee," Gravley said. "The girls just overplayed it. Sometimes power is not always good."

Despite the trouble, Marcus sophomore Kelly Kemper recorded a 75, staying within one stroke of Johns and San Angelo Central's Lisa Balch. Gravley said the stage is set for a "proper finish."

"We played Westwood two times this year and it was decided by two strokes each time — both in our favor," she said. "It's kind of poetic justice that the state title is going to come down to one last round of golf."

Klein, which defeated Westwood at regionals, is third at 320. Sugarland Dulles is fourth after posting a 341. San Antonio Lee is fifth at 346, followed by Central (350), Corpus Christi Carroll (365) and Baytown Sterling (383).

While the 5A title holders opened strong, College Station A&M Consolidated golfer Alan Bratton had no such luck in the boys Class 4A competition at Lloyd Morrison.

Bratton, the 1989 champion, turned in a 3-over par to fall five strokes behind Bryan Maxey of Pine Tree. Maxey's score was the best of the day in any classification.

Wisconsin grants Pryor boxing license

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor, insisting that less than perfect vision in his left eye will not hinder his ability to box, brought out some evidence Thursday.

"Can I see?" Pryor asked sparring partner Terry Ford.

"Yes, you can see," Ford replied to the surprise of no one at a sparsely attended news conference.

"When you get hit, you can see. I hit you with some bombs and you see. When he gets hit, it's not because he can't see, it's because his head is there," Ford said.

Al Moreland, Pryor's trainer, said he was disturbed by reports that Pryor should not be allowed in the ring because of his impaired vision.

Pryor, who also has a history of drug and personal problems, underwent surgery to remove a cataract and repair a detached retina in January 1988 and has been denied permission to box in Nevada, New York and California.

On Monday Wisconsin granted Pryor permission to fight.

Clippers denied talks with Wilkens

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Clippers were denied permission to discuss their vacant head coaching job with Cleveland Cavaliers coach Lenny Wilkens, a spokesman for the Clippers said Thursday.

Wilkens just completed his fourth season as the Cavaliers' head coach and has one year remaining on his contract. The Cavaliers were beaten 3-2 in their best-of-5 first-round NBA playoff series with the Philadelphia 76ers

Bo's three-run shot lifts KC over Rangers

Associated Press

AL

Bo Jackson's three-run homer off the right-field foul pole highlighted a six-run eighth inning that lifted the Kansas City Royals to a 6-2 victory over the Texas Rangers on Thursday night.

Kevin Brown (5-1) had a six-hit shutout after seven innings, but left with the bases loaded and none out in the eighth after a walk to Bob Boone and singles by Terry Shumpert and Kevin Seitzer.

Kurt Stillwell, who entered the game with a league-leading .360 average, greeted left-hander Kenny Rogers with a sacrifice fly and Gerald Perry followed with a game-tying RBI single.

Gary Mielke, a right-hander, was brought in to pitch to Jackson, who hit his first pitch off the foul pole for only his second home run of the season.

George Brett followed with a triple and Jim Eisenreich drove in the final run with a single to center off Mike Jeffcoat.

Jeff Montgomery (3-1) got the victory with 2 2-3 hitless innings after relieving starter Tom Gordon with one out in the seventh. Gordon allowed six hits and two runs in 6 1-3 innings.

The Rangers took the lead in the second inning when Julio Franco scored on Gordon's bases-loaded wild pitch. Franco singled to left, Pete Incaviglia beat out an infielder hit and Scott Coolbaugh walked to load the bases. Gordon then threw the first to Gary Pettis in the dirt and past Bob Boone, allowing Franco to score.

The Rangers added a run in the fifth when Jeff Huson led off with a double, his fifth in the past eight games, went to third on a passed ball by Boone and scored on Rafael Palmeiro's single up the middle against a drawn-in infield.

Palmeiro was in an 0-for-12 slump going into the game, but walked on four pitches in both the first and third innings before his RBI single in the fifth.

Brown was trying to become only the second Texas pitcher to win his first six decisions. He entered the game with a 4.15 ERA but was unbeaten largely because the Rangers had averaged nine runs in his five starts.

Brown walked two and had no strikeouts, but got 15 ground-ball outs. The Royals had five hits in the first three innings, but Brown twice escaped jams thanks to double-play grounders.

Twins 3, Indians 2

Gary Gaetti's two-run double capped a three-run sixth inning that gave Minnesota a 3-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians, the Twins' seventh victory in eight games.

Roy Smith (1-3) allowed six hits, including Cory Snyder's two-run homer in the fifth, in 6 2-3 innings. Gary Wayne got the final out in the seventh and Rick Aguilera pitched two scoreless innings for his seventh save, allowing one hit with three strikeouts.

Smith struck out four and did not walk a batter. He was helped by catcher Brian Harper, who threw out all three Cleveland runners who attempted to steal. Harper has thrown out eight of the last 10 opposition runners attempting to steal.

The Indians took the lead in the fifth on Keith Hernandez's two-out single and Snyder's fourth homer of the season, a drive over the left-field fence.

Loser Greg Swindell took a 2-0 lead into the bottom of the sixth, but Greg Gagne led off with a triple and scored on Dan Gladden's infield single. One out later Kirby Puckett walked and Gaetti scored both runners with a double down the left-field line.

Swindell (2-3) pitched his first complete game of the season, allowing seven hits. He walked two and struck out three.

Smith, who had not gone past the fifth inning in his first six starts and entered the game with a 5.79 earned run average, retired 13 of the first 14 batters he faced. Mitch Webster's first-inning single was the only damage through four innings, and Webster was caught stealing by Harper.

Swindell, who entered the game with a 4.91 ERA, retired the first seven batters before Shane Mack and Gagne hit consecutive singles.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 5

Cecil Fielder had three hits, including his major league-leading 13th home run, and drove in three runs as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 10-5.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead in the first on Mookie Wilson's solo homer and George Bell's RBI double, but Fielder led off the bottom of the second with a home run off Todd Stottlemyre (4-3), whose personal four-game winning streak ended.

Mariners 5, Angels 2

Dave Valle's two-run single keyed a four-run fourth inning and Brian Holman pitched eight strong innings as the Seattle Mariners downed the slumping California Angels 5-2.

Valle's single broke a 2-2 tie as the Mariners handed the Angels their seventh loss in eight games and dropped them 11 games behind first-place Oakland in the AL West.

Holman (5-2) gave up two runs on three hits in the first inning, then shut down the Angels until Mike Schooler came on to pitch the ninth for his ninth save.

Sheffield claims police abusive

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers infielder Gary Sheffield says that verbally abusive police officers put a gun to his head in a confrontation last March in which New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden tried to intervene.

It was reminiscent of an incident more than three years ago involving the same two players that brought Tampa and its police force harsh scrutiny.

Police confirm they thought they were stopping a man suspected of dealing cocaine, but they won't say who they stopped outside a popular nightspot March 14.

Sheffield said police stopped him and a friend, and Gooden, who was driving behind them, tried to intervene. Sheffield is Gooden's nephew.

"I said, 'I'm Gary Sheffield and I'm a professional ballplayer.' They said, 'I don't care who you are, you're driving a dope dealer's car,' and they threw me up against the car."

Sheffield and his friend Chuck Jones said they filed complaints with the Tampa department's internal affairs bureau. Police Thursday cited confidentiality laws and refused to say whether a complaint had been filed.

"My complaint was, 'I've been harassed too much, and my life was in danger,'" Sheffield told the St. Petersburg Times for an article published Thursday.

Deputy Police Chief Tom DePolis refused to say whether the confrontation was related to his decision last week to abruptly disband a night squad of officers that patrolled west Tampa. Nor would he say whether Sheffield and Gooden were involved.

Sheffield said officers blocked his four-door black Mercedes-Benz as he tried to drive away from Grace's Place bar.

"They told me to stop the car," Sheffield said. "They had guns to my head. And they had guns to Chuck Jones' head. And they were cursing."

"They were saying something about this drug dealer's car."

Police eventually let them go, they said.

A crowd outside Grace's Place also witnessed the incident.

"They came out with their revolvers," said bartender Marvin Striggles. "It looked like they were going to fire on the car."

Gooden, who left the bar just after Sheffield and Jones, came running up, and an off-duty officer working at the bar tried to calm him down, Striggles said.

"But cops were screaming and yelling at him. He was just standing there," Striggles said.

Gooden did not return a call left Thursday with the New York Mets. His agent, Jim Neader in St. Petersburg, said Gooden did not plan to comment on the incident.

In December 1986, Sheffield and Gooden had a confrontation with police when they were stopped for a traffic infraction and wound up in a brawl with nearly two dozen officers. Gooden was charged with resisting arrest and battery on a police officer.

Gooden, who claimed the arrest was racially motivated, pleaded no contest and was placed on probation. He later moved from Tampa to nearby St. Petersburg.

Reds end Bucs' winning streak

Associated Press

NL

Joe Oliver hit a three-run homer and Paul O'Neill also drove in three runs during a tie-breaking eight-run eighth inning as the Cincinnati Reds won a battle of the bullpens, beating Pittsburgh 10-4 Thursday night to end the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

Chris Sabo also homered and Pittsburgh's bullpen, which had a 1.55 ERA entering the game, squandered a 2-1 lead.

The Reds improved to 13-3 on the road and raised their National League West lead to seven games over Los Angeles. The East-leading Pirates lost for the fourth time in 19 games and lead Montreal by 2½.

With the score tied 2-2 in the eighth, Barry Larkin greeted reliever Ted Power (0-1), previously unscored upon in 13 innings, with a double and Todd Benzinger tripled. O'Neill's sacrifice fly made it 4-2 ahead of singles by Mariano Duncan and Billy Hatcher.

Oliver then hit his third home run of the season to left and winner Norm Charlton (1-0) beat out an infield hit to chase Power, who is 0-4 in four career apperances against the Reds. The former Red allowed six runs and six hits in one-third of an inning to balloon his ERA from 0.00 to 3.38.

After Charlton's hit, Bob Kipper made his first appearance of the season following elbow surgery. After retiring Sabo on a groundout, Herm Winningham singled, a walk to Larkin loaded the bases and an error by shortstop Jay Bell on Benzinger's grounder allowed Charlton to score the sixth run of the inning. O'Neill two-run single capped the inning.

The Pirates scored twice in the bottom of the eighth on Barry Bonds' RBI single and second baseman Duncan's throwing error. Charlton pitched two innings and Randy Myers pitched the ninth for Cincinnati.

Sabo's homer in the fifth inning, his sixth of the season and the only run allowed by Pittsburgh starter Randy Kramer in five innings, made it 1-1. The Pirates retook the lead on Bobby Bonilla's league-leading eighth homer of the season off Jose Rijo with two out in the sixth. Rijo gave up two runs and five hits in six innings.

The Reds tied it again in the seventh on pinch-hitter Luis Quinones' sacrifice fly off rookie reliever Scott Ruskin following singles by Duncan and Hatcher and Oliver's sacrifice.

Padres 9, Cardinals 1

Garry Templeton and Bip Roberts hit two-run homers, and Roberto Alomar had four hits as the San Diego Padres beat the slumping St. Louis Cardinals 9-1.

Templeton's home run, his first of the season, capped a five-run San Diego fourth inning. Bip Roberts hit his fourth homer in the ninth for San Diego's final two runs.

Expos 8 Dodgers 2

Dennis Martinez scattered eight hits and Tim Raines drove in three runs as the Montreal Expos beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-2.

It was Montreal's fifth straight victory and sixth in the last seven games. The Dodgers, who fell to 1-5 on their current nine-game East Coast road trip, lost their fourth in a row.

Martinez (3-2) struck out five, and walked none, beating Los Angeles for the first time in five lifetime decisions.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the second when Mike Scioscia homered following a single by Hubie Brooks.

The Expos countered with three runs in the third. After striking out five straight hitters, Dodgers starter Ramon Martinez (2-2) issued a one-out walk to Delino Deshields, who went to third on Dave Martinez's single.

FAMILY MATTERS

Mother upset about daughter's separation

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: My daughter is almost 32 years old and lives in (city). Her sister came back from visiting her and told me that her husband had moved out almost six months ago. He found a woman at work that he fell in love with and wanted some space to think all this over. I was shocked. I never even knew that anything was wrong. I have talked to my daughter about once a month and I just can't believe that she didn't tell me about all this.

May

My other daughter said that (her sister) was very upset and was just sitting around crying all the time. She said that her children were having to take care of themselves and that the house was a mess. I need to know what I should do quick! I don't want to butt in, but I want to help. I am worried about what might happen. What should I do? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: I think you should consider calling your daughter at once and sharing your concerns. She seems to be very depressed and in need of immediate help. If possible, go visit her. She may be ashamed of what has happened and unable to cope right now.

I encourage you to be as empathetic as possible. Don't offer advice, just listen. Encourage your daughter to seek professional help — her priest, pastor, a counselor, etc. Be supportive and as non-judgmental as possible.

DEAR FAMILY: We have just returned from spending spring break with our daughter and her family. I am just beside myself. I am so mad at my son-in-law for the way that he treats my daughter, my grandchildren, and us I could scream. We paid for all of us to go to a very fancy resort for a week. It didn't cost him a thing.

During that week he slept late every morning (I'm talking noon or later), didn't join any of the planned activities for the day, spent most of the time by himself, and went to the bars alone at night. During the entire week I don't think he spent more than just a few minutes with his two daughters. When my daughter said something to him (in a joking manner) about not participating with the rest of us, he pushed his chair back, yelled at her about not controlling his life, and stormed off.

I guess I got mad then too, and I told my daughter that I just couldn't understand how she could tolerate a husband like him. Well, she got all upset and left the table too. My husband and I spent the rest of the day trying to make things OK for our granddaughters. My husband agrees with me, but says that I just shouldn't say anything.

I didn't say anything the rest of the "vacation," but I was fuming inside. Why would my daughter put up with that kind of treatment? I didn't raise her that way. What can I do or say that won't create another scene? I don't think that I can be around him and keep quiet. MAD

DEAR MAD: The simple answer to "why" she accepts his treatment is that she chooses to. I believe we teach people how to treat us. Your son-in-law has taught your daughter that his behavior is acceptable to her! And he has taught her that when she tries question that acceptance, she faces significant consequences.

For a more complex answer, look at his behavior for possible alcohol addiction, and her behavior as supporting his possible addiction by accepting it. Alcohol is so potentially destructive, that this issue needs to be addressed as soon as possible. In these situations, no one says anything and the destruction continues.

I encourage you to get educated about what might be going on. Melody Beattie's book, "Codependent No More," is a good place to start. I encourage you to be supportive, but not intrusive, of your daughter. She needs your help and your heart. By the same token, it is perfectly acceptable behavior for you to avoid being around your son-in-law. We have to learn to not put ourselves in situations that are destructive to us.

Campaigns have negative aspects

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Negative campaigning is not a recent invention, says William Riker.

Riker, a University of Rochester political scientist, says that perhaps the first important national issue before American voters was ratification of the Constitution.

Arguments by both sides were powerfully negative: Anti-federalist doomsayers warned that the Constitution would ravage American liberty and the states. Federalists were equally combative, insisting the Articles of Confederation had plunged the country into a terrible crisis that could only be overcome b adopting the Constitution.

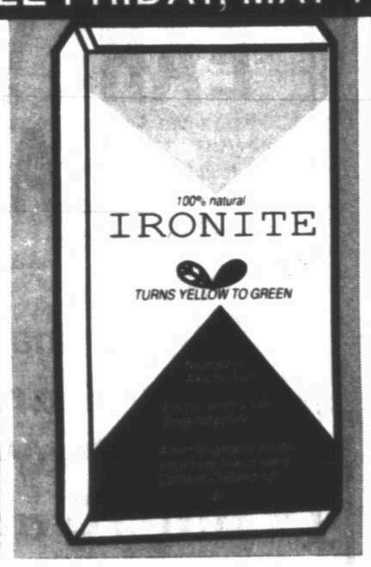

Apparently, both sides seized upon the negative as the most direct way to make their point, says Riker, adding, "Negative campaigning just comes naturally."

DEAR ABBY

Doctors speak in foreign tongues

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: So many physicians today seem to be of foreign extraction. I have no problem with that, if one can understand them. However, my gynecologist's new partner is Asian, and I often leave his office wondering what he has told me.

Van Buren

I shudder to think that one day I might need surgery. How can the operating nurses understand the surgeon's orders when the surgeon's incomprehensible speech is further muffled by a surgical face mask?

Since these physicians (and other professionals who deal with the public) apparently intend to stay in the United States, would they please consider some diction lessons? They all seem to be taking golf, tennis, music and computer lessons. And skiing lessons are a family "must" for them, so please ask them to consider some kind of speech lessons. — BEWILDERED PATIENT

DEAR PATIENT: Please be a little more patient. Those foreign-born physicians must be exceptionally bright and motivated to pass our boards. If you have difficulty understanding what the doctor has told you, ask him or her to please repeat it. Be gentle and generous. You cannot know how rough a road the doctor had to travel to get from there to here.

DEAR ABBY: Please let me know what doctors say about a grown man tickling girls who are 10 and 11 years old. The girls scream hysterically and try to get free, but he holds them and tickles them all the more. He happens to be a relative.

I am very much concerned for the girls even though others say the girls enjoy it because they laugh and scream. — CONCERNED AUNT

DEAR CONCERNED: Doctors say that excessive tickling stimulates children inappropriately, and instead of experiencing pleasure, they experience pain.

Tell this "playful" relative to keep his hands off the girls. And remind him that in ancient times, tickling was used as a method of torture.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

Infant mortality rate includes premature births

NEW YORK (AP) — Of the more than 4 million babies born in the United States each year, some 400,000 die in the first year, according to the National Commission to Prevent Infant Mortality.

Ten percent of the births, an estimated 400,000, are premature, says the National Center for Health Statistics.

To prevent crime in Tucson, police use sensitive, highly sophisticated surveillance equipment: Tim, Rose, Gert, Anthony, Yvonne, and Ramon.

Citizen participation is critical to police effectiveness. Do you care about your neighborhood enough to help protect it?

The Case of The Tucson Tip-off.

In a particular neighborhood in Tucson, Arizona, folks were having a real problem with burglaries and break-ins.

They started talking to each other about what they could do. They got fed up. About 400 people went to the police for advice. They learned about surveillance. They got to know their beat officers. Citizens and police became partners in crime prevention. In just three weeks, 17 arrests were made and burglaries went down 30%.

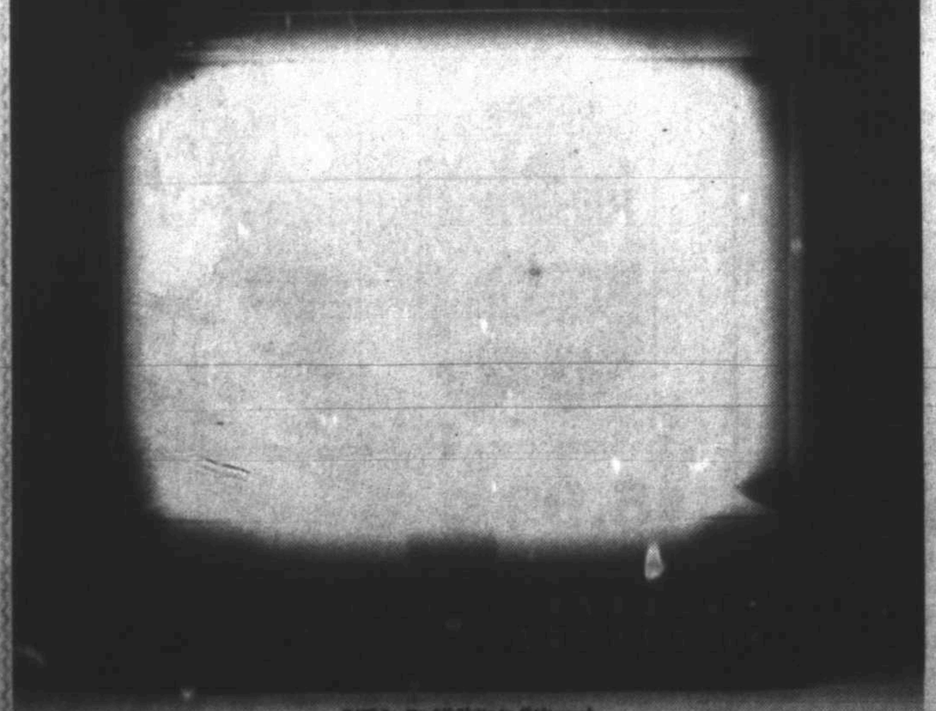

And Tucson is only one case where people successfully worked to beat crime. To find out more, write: The McGruff Files, 1 Prevention Way, Washington, D.C. 20539-0001. You can make a difference. You can help...

Soviets, U.S. begin research exchange

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The graying of America will be mirrored in other countries, including the Soviet Union, which has sent three scientists to Northwestern University to collaborate on research into the aging process.

"The pressing issues are how best to deal with the medical needs of the elderly ... without bankrupting the country, and how to maintain their dignity and humanity while we provide them with what they need," said Dr. James R. Webster Jr., director of the Center on Aging at Northwestern's McGaw Medical Center.

The Soviets will stay in Chicago for collaboration on projects lasting one to three months, and researchers from Northwestern, which initiated the idea for the program, will travel to Kiev later this year for like endeavors.

Source: Aging America AP/Martha P. Hernandez

THE VISITS are part of an agreement between Northwestern's Center on Aging and the Soviets' Institute of Gerontology of the Academy of Medical Sciences, the equivalent of the U.S. National Institute on Aging.

"Chicago is one of the birthplaces of gerontology, and Kiev is the most important city in the Soviet Union for that study," said Celia Berdes, associate director of the Center on Aging.

As an exchange participant, she will look at the Soviets' system of elderly care.

ACCORDING TO Webster, one major difference between U.S. and Soviet elderly care is that the United States generally emphasizes high-tech medical approaches.

U.S. stroke victims, for example, typically undergo computer-enhanced X-rays and studies of electrical impulses in the brain, while the Soviets tend to direct resources to rehabilitiation, he said.

"They would probably have more intensive and prolonged therapy for the restoration of function — more emphasis on getting them back into their homes," Webster said.

Not surprisingly, the Soviet researchers who have come to Chicago will be trying to learn some of America's high-tech methods, he said.

Nataliya Bachinskaya, a neurologist, will work for three months with John D.E. Gabrieli, assistant professor of psychology, on how thinking processes change in people who have had strokes and related ailments.

"We're also interested in how we can improve the functional activity of the brains of old persons," Ms. Bachinskaya said.

Yuri Jaroshenko, an internist, will work for one month with Arthur Atkinson, director of pharmacology, and Richard Davison, chief of cardiology, on a study of how heart drugs work in the elderly.

Yuri Rushkevich, a physiologist, will work for one month with John Disterhoft, associate professor of cell biology and anatomy, in a study of learning in aged animals.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Controlling stress makes life more enjoyable

By Steve Edwards

Stress is a normal part of life, but how we handle stress differs. Abnormal degrees of anxiety may have some recognizable symptoms.

First, a person's behavior and reactions may be very different from how he has behaved in the past.

Edwards

Second, extreme anxiety, anger, depression, frustration or confusion may signal that a person is facing an abnormal amount of stress.

In some cases, extreme stress can be very serious. In rare cases, the sufferer may talk about suicide, buy a gun or collect sleeping pills. In this case, seek professional advice immediately.

In many cases, a stressful event can be reversed or decreased by understanding its causes.

Stress can affect those whose careers have reached a plateau and whose business goals cannot be reached. Stress can affect a homemaker who feels that life has passed her by.

Many times, stress is triggered by the realization that retirement is approaching.

To overcome stress, learn how to relax and cope with situations. Find peace within yourself.

Here are some suggestions:

■ Take an interest in other people and activities around you. Make an effort to acquire new friends and new interests.

■ Learn to relax. If you take life too seriously you are the one who will suffer most.

■ Get your problems out in the open. Find a sympathetic listener, talk out your problems. Discussing your problems with someone you trust may give you a new perspective on the situation.

■ Develop a hobby in order to express yourself and your interests. If you already have a hobby, cultivate it.

■ Face one problem at a time. Don't be bogged down with more than one worry at a time. Concentrate on the problem at hand. The stress of one problem is not as severe as that associated with more than one problem.

■ Face reality. Learn to accept your life and make the best of things you cannot change.

■ Adjust your attitude. The easiest way for you to solve your problems is by your attitude. A positive attitude creates positive results, while a negative attitude produces negative results.

■ Cultivate healthful living, to eliminate many of the problems associated with stress. Regular physical exams and continuing good health habits will eliminate many of the aches and pains associated with stress.

People under stress usually become more preoccupied, less alert and less able use their knowledge or skills. They may be more prone to serious illness. Recognize stressful events and use your experience to control or minimize the damage to your body from excessive stress. Accept the things that can't be changed and you'll find that life becomes easier and more enjoyable.

FAA reassigns security chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top Federal Aviation Administration security official has been removed and will be given a new job, an FAA spokesman said Thursday, as a presidential panel prepared a report said to be critical of FAA security operations.

Raymond Salazar, whose resignation was demanded by relatives of Pan Am Flight 103 victims, will leave next month to direct an FAA management center in Florida, said spokesman Fred Farrar.

FAA Administrator James Busey said there was no connection between what he said was Salazar's decision and the planned release Tuesday of a report on aviation terrorism.

'Blue' SNL guest prompts boycott by repulsed pair

NEW YORK (AP) — So this guy, Andrew Dice Clay, stand-up comedian, right? His jokes are filthy, his mouth is foul, and some cast members of this week's "Saturday Night Live" are refusing to work with him. Dice, is this an attitude, or what?

The Dice Man ain't Pee-wee Herman in a leather jacket, folks. Dice is an X-rated Fonzie, the archetypal corner wiseguy, a lewd, sexist makeout artist for whom "broad" is a term of endearment and whose views on human sexuality verge on the anatomically incorrect.

Dice's comedy is deep, deep blue. His critics say his jokes are at best crude, and at worst angry, sexually violent, homophobic and bigoted.

Last year, MTV banned Clay for life after he delivered a monologue laced with lewd poetry and references to fat women and sex during the network's televised Music Video Awards show.

Clay and his defenders say the comedian is only "acting" Dice, that his humor mocks the Dice Man's attitudes and has enough truth in it to attract an audience of men and women who love him.

Clay, 32, born Andrew Clay Silverstein in Brooklyn, was a struggling actor-impressionist when he donned the studded jacket and combed up the ducktail. The Dice Man was born.

A successful comedy album and an HBO comedy special followed, and his first starring role in a feature film, "The Adventures of Ford Fairlane," opens this summer.

"I talk about what people do, think or say behind closed doors," Clay told Playboy magazine in a January interview. "As I tell the crowds, 'I don't write this material. You write it for me.'"

The current controversy began when Nora Dunn, a cast member on "Saturday Night Live" since the '85-86 season, refused to perform on this week's show because she considers Clay's comedy degrading and repulsive.

"In my heart, I know I don't want to work with him," Dunn said.

Clay told "Entertainment Tonight" that Dunn was being silly. "I've seen her play from hookers to just, like, street tramps. I wouldn't look at that and go, 'If that's really her, I wouldn't do the show.'"

Pop singer Sinead O'Conner, whose "Nothing Compares 2 U" is No. 2 on the charts, also bowed off the show after her publicist was alerted by the National Organization for Women and the singer reviewed tapes of Clay's act.

She was replaced Thursday by Spanic Boys, a blue-grass rock and roll band from Milwaukee making their television network debut, NBC said.

"It would be nonsensical of 'Saturday Night Live' to expect a woman to perform songs about a woman's experience after a monologue by Andrew Dice Clay," the singer said in a statement.

"We're not saying that he should be silenced," said Francoise Jacobsohn, a spokeswoman for NOW's "media reform" committee. "We're saying that he's giving a view that is harmful to women."

She said hate crimes are on the rise in this country. "We have to make the connection between comics that are sexist and homophobic, and hate crimes," she said. "We have to let people know that this kind of humor is not OK."

Efforts to interview Clay about the controversy were unsuccessful. "He has no statement," said Clay publicist Susan Dubow. "He's not doing interviews. He's rehearsing for 'Saturday Night Live.'"

He also backed out of a scheduled taping Thursday of "The Joan Rivers Show" scheduled for Friday broadcast. Rivers' spokeswoman Linda Lipman said Clay's representatives gave no reason for the no-show, other than "a lot of hemming and hawing." Rivers was not amused.

Other comics are also a little dicey about Clay.

George Carlin, who made a comedy breakthrough by speaking the seven little words you can't say on television, is worried that Clay's humor targets the wrong people.

"Andrew Clay is picking on underdogs: Gays, women and immigrants," Carlin said in a statement. "His audiences share his beliefs, so they cheer him on. But Andrew ought to remember that he is Jewish and the same people who hate gays, women and immigrants probably have Jews somewhere on their list as well."

No one is confusing Clay with Lenny Bruce, or other comics who grew famous for their skilled handling of adult themes and social issues.
