City finds a way to save big $$$$$$$$

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

Pampa city management has found a way to reduce proposed city tax rate and service fee increases, without cutting the proposed city budget, according to a report at a budget - study session Friday in city hall.

The budget for fiscal 1982 - 83, which begins October 1, is still proposed at about $7,348,279.

But the planned tax increase of four cents per $100 valuation has been chopped down to 1.9 cents per $100.

And a planned seven percent increase for water, sewer and garbage collection fees has been reduced to include an increase in the cost of water only.

Wofford said the charge for water will be increased from $6 for the first 3,000 gallons to $6.65 for the first 3,000 gallons.

The city manager previously said the water rate increase is needed to pay for Pampa's share of the cost of cleaning out the holding reservior foPampa and Borger water supplies earlier his year.

Pampa's share of the cost was estimated at $70,000.

City commissioners agreed to the reductions submitted by City Manager Mack Wofford, but no formal action will be taken on the proposals until next Tuesday.

The newly reduced tax rate hike of 1.9 cents per $100 will raise taxes on a $30,000 home here about $5.70 per year.

When Wofford first submitted what he called "Alternative III" for reducing the city budget earlir this month, the proposal called for reducin a planned pay raise for city employees from 7.5 to six percent, a total savings of $51,023.

That budget alternative also proposed a $50,000 reduction in the street maintenance program and proposed removing a $30,000 purchase for a new backhoe.

The alternative proposed total reductions in the city budget of $129,000, when it was first submitted by Wofford to commissioners.

But "Alternative III" became another alternative when it was studied by commissioners at the meeting Friday — the alternative now proposes no reductions at all in city spending next year.

How the city can keep spending the same, while at the same time reducing the proposed tax and service charge increases, is a result of shuffling revenues in the budget.

The city will take some of its Washington money, or federal revenue sharing funds, and divert them into general operations.

The city previously expected to spend $267,000 of the federal revenue sharing funds on replacing 17,000 feet of two - inch city water lines.

By only replacing 8,000 feet, $140,000 of the federal money can be diverted to other expenditures, according to the city manager.

The end result will be that city employees will get their full 7.5 percent pay raise, the water department gets its $30,000 backhoe, the street maintenance program will receive its total $250,000 allocation, and the city tax rate and service increases will be reduced.

But the city will replace fewer two - inch water lines than planned next year.

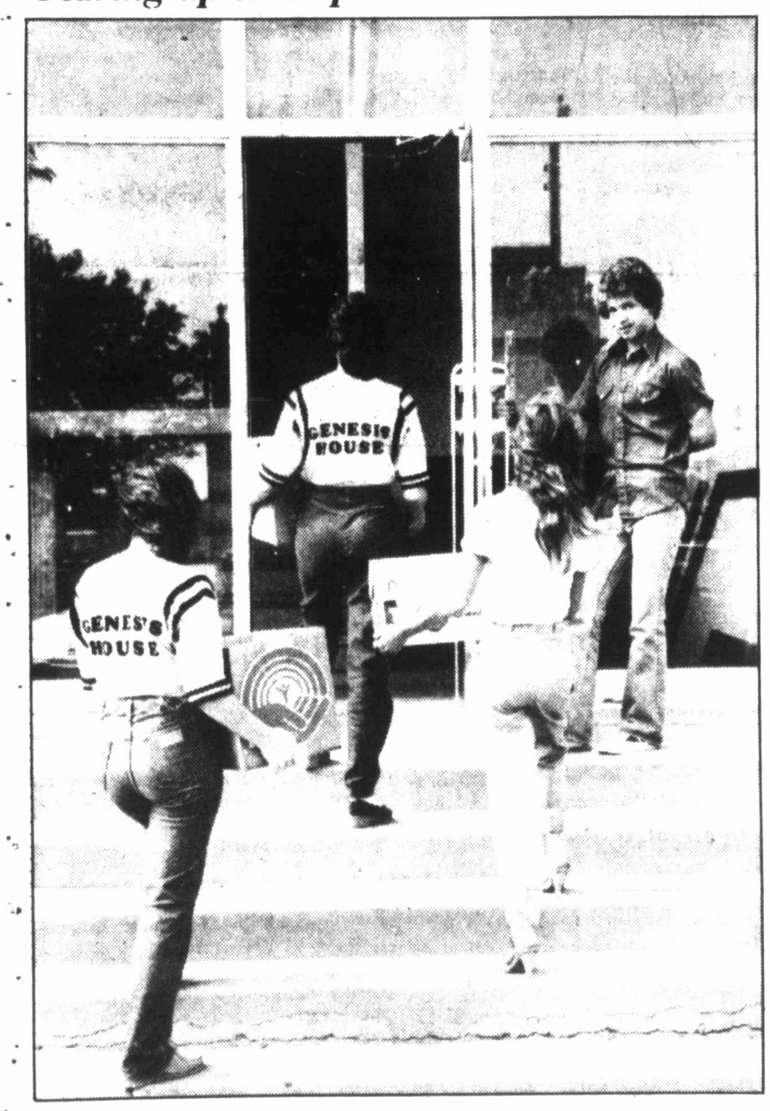

After the funding changes, the total city spending for next year remains about the same as first proposed, according to Wofford, a record budget.

The city spending plan for the next fiscal year represents a $1,115,163 increase over actual, audited spending in just two years.

The city commissioners are expected to give their first official approval to the city tax rate and budget during the meeting next Tuesday.

A second reading by commissioners is required for official adoption of the tax rate and budget.

Pampa paves the way for better city streets

By DAVID CHRISTENSON
Staff Writer

While seal coating operations begin on Pampa streets in this year's maintenance work, Pampa city officials are considering a bigger effort to keep the streets on the level.

The city commission decided Friday to preserve a $50,000 increase in street maintenance funding for the 1982 - 1983 fiscal year (see story above).

That increase would boost the money available for contfacted street repairs from about $200,000 this year to $250,000 next year.

And City Engineer Dave Pullen said Friday he hopes to develop a long - term plan of funding for the streets during the next fiscal year.

Earlier this month, city commissioners were handed three alternatives by City Manager Mack Wofford to even up the city budget.

Two of these alternatives involved cuts in street repair funds.

Alternative I specified a $50,000 cut in such funding from the proposed budget, plus a cut of $145,000 from capital expenditures for the street department.

Alternative II would have cut out the street maintenance program altogether.

Alternative III also would have cut the $50,000 increase.

"It appears they've decided not to reduce the budget in that area," Pullen said.

But, he said, "from the ideas of the commission there, it seems they're interested in doing a program much like we're doing this year, interested in just saving the streets we can save."

Pullen said the commission does not seem to want any major reconstruction of streets written into next year's budget, and that some streets here would require such an effort.

That's why he hopes to develop plans for projected capital funding over five and 18 year periods.

These plans would cover maintenance for streets and sewer lines in the city, he said, in a "logical and constructive way."

"That takes some planning," he said. Priorities for streets, sewers or sidewalks would have to be established, then planners would have to choose which areas of the city would receive the attention, then "come up with the right budget numbers."

But Pullen thinks that "combination of short term and long - term funding" would help a situation that year - by - year budgets aren't handling.

He said at a recent public hearing a woman asked when the city would repair the street she lived on — North Frost.

Unfortunately, that section of street is concrete, and the concrete and brick streets that need work in Pampa will just have to wait, according to Pullen.

Unlike asphalt, which can be patched up with seal coating or bituminous overlay, concrete requires "major renovation," he said.

For example, much of North Somerville Street is concrete - surfaced, and although one of the city's priority projects this year will renovate the asphalt section of that street, the concrete portion will retain its bumps.

Somerville was chosen for this year's work because of its status as a "main carrier" of traffic, Pullen said last month before the street work began.

Routine patching work and preparation was performed recently in preparation for the seal coating project which began at 10 a.m. Friday.

Seal coating is an operation for rejuvenating top layers of asphalt on streets, sealing moisture out and putting elastic properties back in.

Lewis Construction Co., awarded the work on a low bid, will be working on streets "generally in the east central section of Pampa" in coming weeks, Pullen said.

That area is bounded by the Santa Fe railroad tracks, Hobart Street, Harvester Street and the city limits.

"There are two major seal - coating areas that are going to be a problem for us," Pullen said, "Harvester, in front of the high school, and Duncan Street from the high school to Central Park."

These areas will be worked "probably late in the day, or on Saturday and Sunday, to inconvenience people as little as possible.

Pullen said people traveling through the area of work should be on the lookout for street barricades, and try to choose alternative routes.

"We don't generally tie up traffic for too long a time," Pullen said.

To date, the whole seal - coating operation has used up about $50,000 of the $250,000 of street funding. Pullen said the amount of work will be adjusted to fit the budget.

When the seal - coating is done, possibly next week, crews will begin a bituminous concrete overlay on North Somerville Street.

Lanes of that street will be torn up and totally refurbished, "probably beginning the week of the 20th," Pullen said.

All of the big street repairs planned for this year should be completed "by the first of October, unless we get some heavy weather somewhere along the line," Pullen said.

Along with possible rain, a problem street crews will face is parked cars.

"Technically, we can't tow them away," Pullen said. "As it is, we're just asking folks to move their vehicles."

"Most folks are real cooperative in that regard, and real glad to see some maintenance being done on the streets."

He said the crews may run into some people too stubborn to park elsewhere while they're seal coating the streets, though.

"We'll just seal - coat around them, I guess," Pullen said.

Two arraigned Friday

Pampa city police were kept busy late last week with the arrest of a burglary suspect and arraignment of a forgery suspect from Colorado.

Roy D. Britt, 19, of 1052 Neel Rd. was arrested Friday on a burglary warrant by Detective Sergeant Lynn A. Brown.

He is charged with the Thursday night burglary of the Ray Romack residence at 1024 Neel Rd.

A liter of Royal Crown whiskey and a videogame system was stolen in that break - in. Both were recovered.

Bond for Britt was set at $15,000 by Justice of the Peace Margie Prestidge.

A 16 - year - old boy was also detained by Detective Ron Howell Friday. The juvenile is suspected of involvement in the Romack burglary, and his case has been referred to the juvenile probation department for disposition.

Also on Friday, Scott Tracy Butler, 21, of 466 Glenview, Colorado Springs, Colo., was bonded at $10,000 by Judge Prestidge on a felony charge of forgery.

Butler was picked up on a traffic violation in the last week of August by a Hemphill County officer outside Canadian.

When Chief Deputy A.J. Burlson checked Butler's record, he found a warrant charging him with forging a check at the Ideal Food Store on 300 E. Brown in Pampa.

Butler allegedly wrote and attempted to cash a $300 check belonging to a Canadian resident.

After he waived extradition, he was held in Hemphill County jail until his transfer here Thursday by Pampa Detective Oren Potter.

A Hemphill County deputy said Butler was also suspected of a burglary in that county, but that investigation was dropped.

Coming soon: Six ways to change Constitution

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — One of the best kept political secrets is that Texans will have a chance Nov. 2 to make six changes in the state constitution while they are balloting for governor and U.S. senator.

Only one of the proposals — No. 2 — has attracted enough public interest to cause an organization booster group to try to get it passed.

Proposition No. 2 would remove the present $80 million ceiling on the amount of state aid that can be matched with federal money for Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or AFDC.

Proposition No. 1 affects every taxpayer in the state. It simply repeals the state property tax. Although the repeal proposal was the main reason for a special session of the Legislature in May, there has been little said about it recently, and no organization is pushing it in the November election.

"I guess everybody thinks it will pass because it repeals taxes," said one official.

Three of the proposed constitutional amendments were passed by the regular session of the 1981 Legislature and the other three in the special May session.

Should the six proposals pass in November, that would make a total of 253 changes voted in the constitution since it was adopted in 1876.

Five of seven other constitution amendments approved by the 1981 regular session were approved by voters in November 1981.

"I think chances are excellent for passage of the welfare amendment," said Phil Strickland, head of Citizens Concerned About Children, which claims the support of the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker.

"Because of inflation, cutbacks in federal assistance and population increases, Texas is fast approaching the present ($80 million) ceiling," says Strickland, who also is director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission.

"Unless Amendment No. 2 is adopted, the average $34 per month benefit, which ranks Texas 49th among the states, will be cut or truly needy children will be dropped from the program and denied assistance." The proposed amendment removes the present ceiling on the amount of state aid to dependent children and their caretakers and sets a new ceiling of $160 million for the 1982-83 period and 1 percent of the state budget after that.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby estimated the next Legislature will need about $100 mallion for matching funds.

Arguments against the amendment come from those who think welfare spending should be reduced instead of raising the ceiling on assistance grants.

The proposal to repeal the state property tax is part of a long, bitter fight over financing of construction at state colleges not in the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. In these two systems, construction is paid by income from the Permanent University Fund, which has been built up mostly from oil and gas leases on state-owned lands.

In 1956 the Legislature authorized a state levy of 10 cents per $100 valuation to help 17 state colleges outside the two systems, and it was approved by voters. The tax was challenged in court, and in 1980 the Legislature reduced it to .0001 percent, which made it unprofitable to collect. However, in 1982, Midwestern University of Wichita Falls went to court claiming the Legislature had no right to change a tax rate that was set by popular vote in the constitution.

The proposed constitution change on the Nov. 2 ballot would repeal the 10 cents tax, still in the constitution, and would authorize the Legislature to make general revenue appropriations to the 17 colleges for building funds.

The special legislative session in May also approved a bill, effective only if voters change the constitution, to approriate about $151 million to the 17 colleges for building purposes.

Although no organization is pushing approval of the amendment, Gov. Bill Clements mentions it frequently in his campaign speeches.

"There's no such thing as too much tax relief in my opinion," he says.

The other proposed constitution changes on the ballot include:

— No. 3, exempting agricultural machinery and equipment from ad valorem taxes. This would expand the present exemption of "implements of husbandry" owned by individuals to include partnerships and corporations.

— No. 4, limiting terms for members of governing boards of certain water districts and other special districts to four years. Currently most are limited to two years.

- No. 5, abolishing the office of county treasurer in Tarrant and Bee counties and shifting the duties to the county auditor, if voters approve.

— No. 6, increasing the maximum interest rate allowed on state general obligation bonds to 12 percent annually. The current limit is 6 percent, and bonds have been increasingly difficult to sell.

Kiwanians install officers in a laugh-ridden Pampa banquet

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

The three area Kiwanis Clubs held their annual officers' installation banquet Thursday night at the Sportsman's Club here.

Brian Vining will serve as Kiwanis Club of Pampa president; Cecil Newman was named Top O' Texas Kiwalis Club president; and David Rife was selected Golden K Kiwanis Club president.

The annual banquet brings the three clubs together each year for the joint ceremony and meal.

A packed house of Kiwanians and their wives suffered through a round of bad jokes during the two - hour meeting, with former Lt. Governor of the Texas and Oklahoma District, Ab Conway, the main offender.

Despite good - natured boos and some hissing from the audience, Conway kept the ceremony rolling and tortured his fellow Kiwanians with a few amplified entries such as the following:

"I have discontinued long after - dinner speechs, because of my sore throat. Some of you fellows have threatened to cut it, anyway."

But Conway refused to stop there and continued with the story of the wife who was asked, "Do you ever wake up grumpy?"

"Sometimes I do, but sometimes I let him sleep," Conway said the woman replied.

Rolling now, the Kiwanian continued, despite an audience that was growing more hostile by the minute.

Conway told the story of Steve Vaughn, incoming second vice president of the Kiwanis Club of Pampa.

According to Conway, it seems Vaughn's wife asked him:

"Steve, if I died, would you get remarried?"

"Well, I guess so," Vaughn reportedly replied.

"Would she wear my clothes?" his wife allegedly asked.

"Well, I suppose she would," the Kiwanian told her, according to an unreliable source.

"Would she wear my jewelry?" Mrs. Vaughn asked, according to Conway.

"Yes, I guess she would," Conway said her husband answered.

"Would she use my golf clubs?" she asked.

"No...she's left - handed," Vaughn assured her, according to the M.C., whose physical well - being was by then in jeopardy.

Luckily for the crowd, the food was much better than the jokes. Members of the three clubs and their guests dined on barbecue beef, beans, cole slaw, apricots, pickles, bread and iced tea.

It was a good - natured affair, but fortunately for the members, the joking stopped when goals for the service clubs were outlined by Conway, 1981 - 82 Lt. Governor Herb Schroeder and new 1982 - 83 Lt. Governor John Gattis.

The group was told the service clubs are particulary important "during our current economic situation."

Emphasis for the next year will be community service, with special efforts toward "retarded children and the elderly."

Other officers sworn in for 1982 - 83 by Gattis include:

Kiwanis Club of Pampa

Brian Vining, president; Bill Balcom, immediate past president; Dan Snider, first vice president; Steve Vaughn, second vice president; Malcom Denson, secretary; Howard Weatherly, treasurer; Jeff Anderson, Louis Haydon, Jack Nichols, Steve Vaughn, John Gattis, Bob Asire and Ron Easley, board of directors.

Top O' Texas Kiwanis Club

Cecil Newman, president; Eugene Turner, immediate past president; Foy Barrett, vice president; Ronnie Parker, secretary and treasurer; Ab Conway, Bob Conway, Earl Davis, Sam Motley, Bob Muns and Eugene Turner, board of directors.

Letter writing class is on Monday

The seminar on writing a good business letter, sponsored by the Pampa Chamber of Commerce, will be from 7 to 10 p.m., Monday at the Clarendon College Pampa Center.

W.H. Butterfield, an expert on letter writing will lead the seminar.

The seminar is open to the public at a cost of $40 for chamber members and $50 for non - members.

Anyone who wants to attend the seminar should register before 5 p.m., Monday at the chamber office in downtown Pampa.

Butterfield has contributed to the section on letter writing in the World Book Encyclopedia. The expert has also written 16 books and numerous magazine articles on the subject.

He is the former chairman of the Department of Business Communication at the University of Oklahoma.

Some of Butterfield's conclusions:

"30 percent of the average business letter consists of needless words. One of every 20 letters is written to correct an error or omission in previous correspondence. Three letters out of four contain trite, 'horse - and - buggy' phrases that waste the reader's time and kill his interest."

"Sometimes the reader is influenced even more by the tone of a letter than by its contents. A friendly, human tone wins cooperation and good will. A blunt tone irritates him. A mechanical tone bores him," Butterfield says.

"How you say it is just as important as what you say in your business letters," Butterfield adds.

Chamber of Commerce Manager Floyd Sackett said, "We feel sure this seminar will be helpful to business and professional people."

Groups ask to kill Bell rate hike

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Public Utility Commission staff and two customer groups have filed an unprecedented motion asking the agency to dismiss Southwestern Bell's request for a $471.5 million rate increase.

Commission examiner Jacqueline S. Holmes, who is presiding over a hearing dealing with the rate request, gave Bell until Monday to file a written response. Ms. Holmes said she would hear oral arguments Tuesday before acting.

PUC attorney Sara Cristol criticized Bell, saying the company had made it impossible for the agency to determine how much Bell paid its parent company, American Telephone & Telegraph.

Bell wants to pass those charges along to its 4.5 million Texas customers.

The utility defends the payments as necessary contributions to AT&T's research, legal, technological and financial assistance.

But opponents contend some of the projects — such as AT&T's antitrust fight with the federal government, a new Manhattan office building and portraits of company executives — should not be subsidized through customers' rates.

Ms. Cristol said Friday that Bell and AT&T's request for information on such charges has been "misleading" and asked that the entire rate case, or at least the $63 million license-contract payments, be thrown out.

Storm 'Chris' does little damage to east Texas and leaves quickly

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Tropical Storm Chris, which had residents of far Southeast Texas on guard for over 12 hours following warnings of heavy rains and howling winds, passed across the Beaumont-Port Arthur area Saturday with no serious damage, authorities said.

By early afternoon, the storm's center had moved into southwest Louisiana, where residents were cautioned to be on guard against downpours and strong winds.

Officials had begun emergency preparations along the southeast Texas coast and in Louisiana as Chris moved closer to shore, whipping up high tides with its 50 mph winds.

But a hurricane watch posted Friday afternoon along the upper Texas coast was canceled early Saturday, and three hours later, gale warnings were dropped for areas west of Port Arthur to Freeport.

The heaviest storm activity to hit Texas was reported at Sabine Pass, located near the coast at the state's far southeast tip. Texas 87 was closed due to flooding in low-lying areas and electricity was knocked out, police said.

Three people aboard a leaky crew boat were rescued shortly before 9 a.m. Saturday and radioing they were in danger of sinking, the Coast Guard said.

The 85-foot Trinity Shoal reported it was taking on water and sinking about five miles east of Sabine Pass at 4 a.m., according to Petty Officer Gary Starks.

A vessel was sent out to rescue the men, but had to return because of bad weather. The men were later rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter out of Houston, Starks said.

The storm was expected to move towards the north at 10 mph today and gradually weaken, forecasters said.

Authorities in Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange said there were no reports of serious damage following moderate rains and gusty winds.

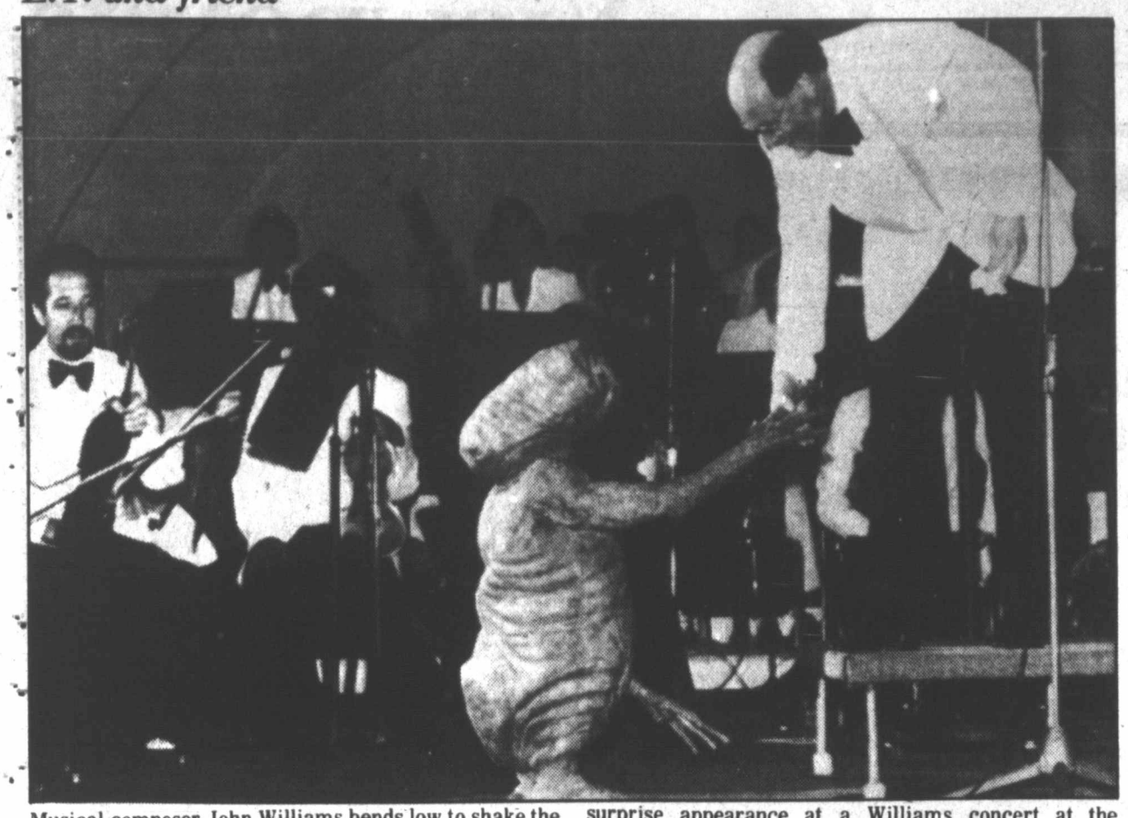

Galveston also reported early morning rains, but no damage.

At 8 a.m., a Galveston County sheriff's officer, who declined to be identified, said, "it's not even raining now."

About 6,500 residents of southern Cameron Parish in Louisiana were ordered evacated Friday as the advancing storm, the third named tropical low-pressure system of the season in the Atlantic, drove high tides along the Gulf of Mexico coast.

But the residents began returning home Saturday as the storm weakened during its move across southwestern Louisiana.

Board upholds firing of teacher

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education on Saturday upheld the firing of a Vidor teacher who was accused of striking a fourth grader and raising a knot on his head.

The board also upheld the one-year suspension of a Humble high school student after a police officer allegedly found marijuana in his car, and rejected a former Houston teacher's attempt to collect $7,810 in unused sick leave.

In the case of the student, who was suspended in September 1981 just after school started, the parents argued that the punishment was too severe.

State board member Mary Ann Leveridge of East Bernard voted to uphold the suspension but said, "The punishment is extremely severe considering the good record the child had."

"It disturbs me," she added, "that we never hear a case until after the sentence is carried out. We don't seem to be able to hear student rights' cases timely."

State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum denied the student's appeal on June 8, and the board upheld his decision Saturday 19-2.

Board member Wayne Windle of El Paso also said the penalty was "way too severe."

Windle was reminded that the suspension was local school board policy, and he responded, "Yeah, but I don't like that policy."

State board chairman Joe Kelly Butler of Houston said the local board's policy was not on trial, and Windle said, "I'm sending them a message, Mr. Chairman."

Board member Volly Bastine Jr. of Houston, who voted with Windle against Bynum's decision, said the police officer who said he found marijuana did not even testify before the local board.

"This was a grave procedural error that was fatal to the ruling," Bastine said.

With no discussion or dissents, the board voted to uphold the firing of Josephine McDaniel, a 15-year Vidor teacher who was terminated in April 1978.

Charges included that she had kept fourth graders in class during recess, blew a whistle to keep her students quiet despite orders not to do so, struck a child on the back of the head and caused one child with an apparent bladder defect to wet his pants by refusing to allow him to go to the bathroom.

The teacher contended she was discharged for exercising her rights of free speech in criticizing the principal before teachers and students in the school cafeteria. She also said her dismissal "constituted arbitrary and capricious action" on the part of the Vidor school district.

Bynum said the teacher's comments were directed against the principal "in an elementary school where mutual confidence and cooperation are essential" and "would have a disruptive effect and escalate the already existing dissension, to the detriment of the entire school."

Still poppin' tops at 120

MELVIN, Texas (AP) — Nicholas Ramirez turned 120 Friday, but family members say his health is good and he still drinks an occasional beer.

Ramirez, who settled in this Central Texas community in 1919, was born Sept. 10, 1862, in Leon, Guanasuato, Mexico.

He worked as a transient in the fields of McCulloch County until he was 100 years old, and then retired to remain at home and tend his gardens.

EEOC found guilty of sex, race bias

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission, which enforces federal anti-discrimination laws, discriminated against white men when the agency favored women and minorities in its staff promotions.

Dale H. Jurgens, a senior trial attorney for the EEOC in Dallas, filed a class-action lawsuit in 1976 claiming that the commission gave unlawful preference to women and minorities.

Judge Patrick Higginbotham, who heard the case as a state judge but has since been named to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, agreed with Jurgens Friday.

"The EEOC's attempt to 'create a model of EEO excellence for other employers, federal, state, local and private' ... unnecessarily trammeled the interest of platiffs and violates Title VII" of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Higginbotham said. Title VII prohibits employers from using race, sex, or national origin as a basis for personnel decisions.

Higginbotham found in his 49-page opinion that "the EEOC considered sex in its employment decisions and did so in a way that disadvantaged males."

An EEOC spokesman said Friday the agency would not comment because it had not received the judge's ruling.

Jurgens filed the lawsuit i 11976 after he was rejected for the job of regional compliance coordinator in Dallas, and the job went to a women he believed was less qualified.

"I'm not against the concept of affirmative action at all," Jurgens said. "I'm in favor of it. But there's a time and a place for it. The wrong place for it is where an employer has no history of discrimination and turns around and favors minorities andn females at the expense of white males."

Jurgens, who has worked for the commission in Kansas City, Denver and Dallas, said, "I'm real, real pleased with the decision."

Texas industry hit hard by the current slump in oil drilling

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

Two years ago, Lufkin Industries couldn't keep up with the demand for its oil well pump — the steel sawhorse-like apparatus for which the East TEXAAS FIRM IS THE INVENTOR AND WORLD'S LARGEST MANUFACTURER.

Things had gone bad in the Pineywoods building products business, but oil prices were soaring. Lufkin's business was never better.

International Paper Co. in Nacogdoches and Temple-EasTex Inc. in Diboll were cutting back and Lufkin Industries snapped up the newly laid-off workers, happy to take the $5.47-an-hour foundry jobs.

"We were hiring everybody that walked by," recalls a longtime company spokeswoman, Virginia Allen.

But then the oil boom of 1980 and 1981 went bust in 1982.

Drilling fell off by nearly half. By the spring oil companies canceled orders for Lufkin pumps and over the summer the company cut back by nearly 90 percent.

Early in the year, Lufkin shipped a record 1,100 units a month. "That's the most we had ever done," Miss Allen said.

In August 150 were shipped. "That's down, wouldn't you say?"

Since May, Lufkin Industries has dismissed nearly a third of its peak work force of about 4,000 people in layoffs announced on an almost weekly basis, Miss Allen said.

Among those laid off were the 1,100 workers Lufkin hired since 1980.

The story repeats itself in energy-related industries across East Texas, at Houston and Dallas and out west to Abilene, San Angelo, Midland and Odessa.

Layoff after layoff. Thousands in all. The slowdown in worldwide drilling, blamed on high borrowing costs and declining energy prices, reverberated through Texas industries all summer, pushing the state's unemployment rate over 7 percent.

Lone Star Steel, a sprawling steel mill 120 miles north of Lufkin, suspended most of its operations altogether in August, idling 3,700 workers, when buyers disappeared for Lone Star drilling pipe. Other area businesses were forced to cut backtoo.

"It's a pyramid effect," said Jerry Biscoe, Texas Employment Commission public information officer.

"We had a downturn in the oil industry so Lone Star Steel shuts down. It keeps going and going and going."

In Dallas, Dresser Industries dismissed 400 workers. The Western Co. of North America laid off another 270 in Fort Worth.

The list goes on: Newcorp Supply Inc. of Abilene, 1,000; NDT Industries of Midland, 100; Pengo Industiees Inc. of Fort Worth, 400; Pool Well Servicing Co. of San Angelo, 130.

The slump may have hit hardest in Houston, the heart of the nation's — perhaps the world's — oil supply industry.

Hughes Tool Co., one of the world's largest makers of drill bits, dismissed 1,000 workers in August and scheduled another 540 layoffs in September.

National Supply Co., an equipment and supply division of energy giant Armco Inc., laid off a third of its 3,300-member Texas work force in Houston and Gainesville.

The Richmond Tank Car Co., its weekly production down by nearly 75 percent, suspended production of new cars this month, bringing its number of layoffs to 1,400.

Still more workers lost jobs as their companies went out of business altogether, some of them up-start, cash-poor firms that sprang up during the boom and couldn't ride out the slump, officials said.

By July 15, 90 energy-related firms filed for bankruptcy in Houston federal court.

"We've had significant layoffs every week for the past two weeks," said Joel Terry, Houston district director for the Texas Employment Commission. "The situation is not good at all."

Until March, the TEC office had been averaging fewer than 6,000 unemployment compensation claims per month, but that figure quadrupled by mid-summer.

A record 23,000 claims were filed in July, three-fourths from workers dismissed in oil-related industries, said Terry, who estimates that as many as half the 125,000 unemployed workers in Houston were laid off from oil-related jobs.

"When it hit us, it hit us fast and hard," he said. "And it hasn't seemed to level off. If you'd told me a year ago this would have happened I wouldn't have believed you."

The slump seemed to catch almost everyone in the industry by surprise, too.

The number of drilling rigs in operation nationwide has dropped 44 percent from the record 4,430 set last December, catching oilfield suppliers holding millions of dollars in inventory, officials say.

Some like Lone Star Steel were stuck, as Texas Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent said, with "umpteen million feet of pipe on hand when the market went dead."

The downturn began in March when the dropping oil prices and escalating interest rates began discouraging producers.

Miss Allen remembers May 7 as what she calls Lufkin's D-Day. "That's when people began calling and canceling their orders."

Lufkin's customers "overbought pumping units," Miss Allen said. "There were thousands of pumping units sitting in yards all over the country."

The story is similar at Hughes Tool.

"Last year was the best year of drilling in the U.S.," said company spokesman Bob Core. "We were in the enviable position of not being able to make enough drill bits. The first two layoffs (of 1,000 workers) concerned people hired to make up the slack last year."

State and government officials will only reluctantly guess when the state's energy-related industries pull out of the slump and jobs open up again for the idled workers.

"There's not anything that I can see that indicates that we're on a upswing," said the TEC's Biscoe. "Those related industries definitely will not come back until something happens to the oil industry."

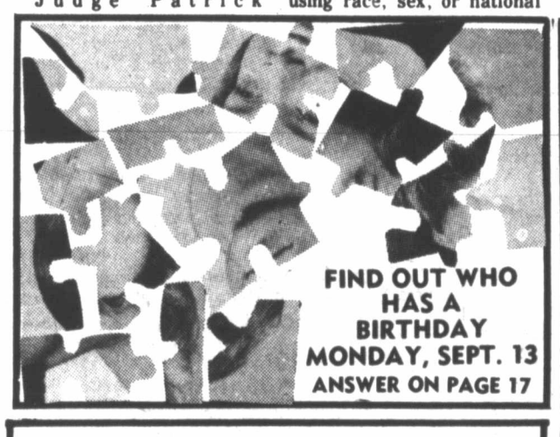

Thomas Plaut, a research economist at the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research, predicts that energy-related industries will not start rehiring their laid-off workers for another year — and then only if interest rates fall and oil prices rise.

"I think we've seen the worst of the layoffs," Plaut said. "There are some signs now that the decline in drilling has halted, but I think it will take that long before inventories start declining."

Lufkin officials are unsure how many more employees will be dismissed before the pumping unit business improves, possibly by the end of this year, Miss Allen said. But the 80-year-old company fully expects to recover, she said.

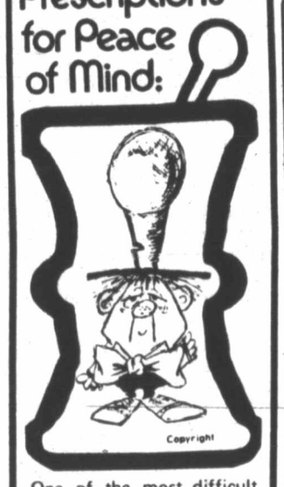

"We've lived through this before," she said.

"We know it (business) is coming back. It's just when. They haven't come up with a substitute for oil, yet."

Many candidates for budget cutting

Members of Congress are not yet ready to face the idea that a balanced budget could imply reductions in federal spending. The current budget is eloquent testimony to the reluctance of Congress to cut spending. It is even now planning to raise taxes again, though plenty of waste remanins.

Are there candidates for cuts? With the help of Washington watchdog Donals Lambro, we can cite several:

In the Department of Housing and Urban Development, nearly $4 billion is consumed by the Community Development Block Grant and Urban Development Action Grant programs. These involve undertakings that are more appropriate for local government, if indeed they should be areas for involvement of any government activity.

Through revenue sharing, the federal government will hand out $4.5 billion to 39,000 government jurisdictions regardless of need. Does Houston, whose local government has a steady surplus, need $21 million from the rest of us? Does Beverly Hills need $600,000? Does Palm Springs need $300,000?

Two - thirds to three - fourths of the Commerce Department's $10 billion budget consists of direct or indirect subsidies to business. They can be phased out, starting now, without unduly hurting companies that have figured the aid into their investment plans.

The $1 billion spent on the Bureau of Indian Affiars is, for the most part, a replication of existing social programs. It could be eliminated without harm.

The Maritime Administration is slated to spend $500 million this year to subsidize big American shipping companies.

Amtrak is slated to get $600 million to provide some middle class American with cut - rate fares courtesy of the taxpayers.

Almost all American farms now have electricity, and the original programs called for the Rural Electrification Administration to be phased out years ago. But REA is scheduled to get $41.6 million this year.

The Economic Research Service provides "free" commodity and market analysis reports to agri - business. That's free as in $40.5 million.

The Synthetic Fuels Corp. may spend $20 billion to subsidize large corporations in the next year. Surely this item is expendable.

A recent Cato Institute study indicates that $258 billion defense budget authorized for fiscal 1983 will be spent for the defense of Europe. That commitment, along with a tendency to purchase impractical, "gold - plated" weapons systems and the cozy relationships with defense contractors, deserves reconsideration.

Finally, there are the "uncontrollables." Social Security, food stamps, farm price supports, unemployment benefits, Medicaid, Medicare and other "entitlements." Many of these, particularly those benefiting people well above poverty, have built - in escalators that have yet to slow down.

Is there hope for a blanced budget? Perhaps there will be when a majority of Americans come to understnad that, in the words of HUD assistant secretary E.S. Sava, "Taxes are taken from powerless middle - class groups." When the individuals finally let the politicians know that they've had enough, there may be hope for reduced spending and a balanced budget.

It is a shame that we hear so much about the need to raise taxes to balance the budget when so much lard still remains in spending.

Back on the streets

The story of William Archie Fain's upcoming parole is one with no clear villian — except for Fain himself, of course — but it epitomizes the frustration and powerlessness felt by past and potential victims of violent crime.

Fain's name, though not widely recognized in Southern California, is notorious in Stanislaus County, much as Rodney Alcala's or Edward Allaway's are here because of their infamous crimes. In 1967, Fain killed a high - school athlete from Oaldale, Mark Ulrich, during a convenience - store holdup and raped a woman and two teen - age girls.

The community there was offended, then, when Jerry Brown's Board of Prison Terms in 1981 set Pain's parole for this year. City councils, three boards of supervisors and the state Legislature passed resolutions decrying the decision, and 62,500 signatures were submitted in opposition. The same sort of reaction in the mid - 1970s had won recision of an earlier Fain parole date. In response to this latest "extraordinary public outcry," the prison board last February again rescinded the release order for the 36 - year - old inmate.

Last week, however, a Marin County judge ruled, over the opposition of Attorney General George Deukmejian, that Fain's parole must go forward Sept. 7.

"Unlike the Roman circus, where the roar of the crowd would determine the life ot death of the gladiator, our community cannot survive without rules," wrote Superior Court Judge Richard H. Breiner. "...Those rules must apply fairly to all, without delegating to the crowd the power to apply, or refuse to apply, those rules based on popular sentiment."

The Ulrich boy's family, which spearheaded the petition drive, was decimated. "There's no justice," his mother said.

We cannot dispute the principle advanced by Judge Breiner, appointed to his post by Brown in 1977. One of the highest callings of a judicial system is to protect individuals from the overreach of the majority. And prisoners have rights, too. (Fain, by the way, claims a religious conversion and is described as a model inmate.)

As we have noted on other occasions, however, the very process of justice that safeguards the minority is faced today with a threat of his own making. There is an epidemic of violent crime inour society spawning pervasive fear and anger which will ar some point destroy the institutions we've been taught to rely on. Yet, the judges and lawmakers who establish the original sentences and the parole boards charged with carrying them out seem too often to ve oblivioyus to this concern and unwilling to take public safety into adequate account at the appropriate time.

The people, having failed to deal with the problem when selecting a governor and legislators (the crime issue gets drowned out by others at election time), are left to rage at the treatment of individual defendants or cases. Petitions, recalls, vigilantes — all are responses that raise fears of mob justice. But what is there left to do?

Barring an appellate court reversal, William Archie Fain's parole will go through. The rest of us are not due our freedom — from danger — as soon.

He's a big fan of Ron and Bonzo

By JEFF LANGLEY
Staff Writer

While many Pampans attended the Chautauqua festival or other Labor Day activities, many used the extra time off to simply lie around the house, napping or watching the tube.

I was in the latter category, and along about 1 Monday afternoon, I chanced to switch the dial to an old black - and - white movie on Atlanta station WTBS.

Lo and behold, there on the set, as a much younger man practicing his former vocation as a Hollywood movie actor, was the President of the United States.

Acting in this particular movie alongside the current head of the richest and most powerful country in the world was a particular species of animal, reportedly second in intelligence only to the animals playing to the cameras with him.

I speak of the chimpanzee — the co - star in Monday's showing of the Ronald Reagan classic "Bedtime for Bonzo."

I'm sure this particular movie, which had the President playing second banana to a hairy primate, is one which Reagan now wishes had been delegated to the cutting room floor.

I understand original posters of Reagan and Bonzo, which promoted the movie at theaters when it was released, are today worth thousands.

It's probably Reagan supporters buying them up for a quick trip to the fireplace, driving up the price.

Maybe at the next big presidential news conference reporters will ask our president about chimp rights or chimp discrimination, the appointment of chimps to federal office, or the association of cabinet officers with alleged members of the chimp underworld, or foreign relations with African members of the chimp third world.

It is food for thought.

Anyway, the movie itself is quite entertaining — especially for the kids. My young ones laughed themselves silly at the antics of Bonzo, the president and his friends. (Some people are laughing today at the President and his present crowd of associates.)

The movie was brought to us Monday by Spam and Dial soap, among others.

Reagan plays Peter Boyd, a college psychology professor who conducts an experiment into the workings of the mind of a chimp.

Reagan's experiment wants to find out how the chimp reacts when he is raised as a human; hence, our president becomes Bonzo's "pappa" and "Jane," the research assistant the professor hires to watch Bonzo while he teaches class during the day, becomes "mamma."

The chimp eventually gets the professor in hot water with just about everybody, including the college administration, Reagan's girl (he eventually dumps her and marries the research assistant at the movie's end), and finally the cops.

The trouble usually starts when Bonzo runs away and leaves the confines of his home, while Reagan takes off to locate the missing chimp.

The various searches for Bonzo have Reagal up a tree, breaking into a jewelry store and running down the highway during a frantic search.

Without a hitch, the 40th President of the United States delivered the following lines during his searches for the missing Bonzo:

"That a boy, Bonzo. Are you glad to see me? Let's go home."

"You get down, or I'll tan your hide."

"Where is mamma?" Where's mamma?"

"Gee whiz, jewelry!"

"Put back — pleas put back in there. Bonzo, not mamma's — please put back."

Other lines delivered by Reagan in the movie during his exchanges with the chimp and the other actors could be used again by the President today in his new job.

Once again, the President could use the lines:

"He certainly likes your gift." (to Japanese businessmen about former National Security Advisor Richard Allen)

"You old duffer — this is supposed to be a happy occasion." (to retiring California Senator H.I. Hayakawa)

"You're not supposed to get that attached to animals." (to members of the Sierra Club on the proposal to lease out federal lands to development)

"You've got the wrong idea — I did hire her because of Bonzo" and "I intend to give her two month's salary before I let her go." (on Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor)

"Wait a minute. Are you trying to tell me she's in love with me." (to an aide during Indira Ghandi's recent state visit)

"Jane, Jane, please, I want to talk to you!" (to ex - wife Jane Wyman about discussing their divorce with the press)

"Okay, out with it. You've been acting like a second - year medical student at his first postmortem." (to CIA Director William Casey during a briefing on the crisis in Lebanon)

"This time, I'm taking the bus back to Hartford." (to a secret service organizer about his plans for a presidential vacation)

"There's one way we might get him to do it — bananas." (to a presidential lobbyist on how to swing the vote of a convicted Abscam congressman)

"I'm going to make him eat humble pie." (about Jimmy Carter to his campaign chairman the night of the election)

"We do this every morning before I leave for class." (to a reporter about his daily naps)

"Oh, what's the use. Even if Bonzo gave a lecture on Darwinism, he wouldn't do me any good now." (to a campaign aide about weakening support from the Rev. Jerry Falwell)

"I've told you repeatedly I don't know how he got in." and "You stay there and be good — it's the back seat for you, young fellow." and "All right, take him with you, but hurry." and finally "You've done enough for one day." (to Budget Director David Stockman and others about Stockman's blabbings to the press)

"He's ready to blow out those candles." (to a military advisor about Menachem Begin's plans to throw a surprise birthday party for Yassir Arafat, where the candles are blown out by a 105mm howitzer.)

"He found his way here the first time by accident." (to Ed Meese on the resignation of Alexander Haig)

A thank you

The "Afternoon Coffee Club" would like to express our appreciation to the people responsible for the very attractive flower garden in front of the post office. It is a pleasure to see such a well - cared for property and it is obvious that alot of care and hard work has gone into making it such a delightful area. In these days when too many people think they don't have time to "Stop and smell the Roses", it is nice to know that someone has created such a bright spot in our city to be enjoyed by anyone and everyone that is in the area. We say thanks to those that made this possible.

More patrols

In the past 6 years of taking and picking up our child at Austin School, I do not recall ever seeing police monitoring traffic on Beech St. behind the school. I have seen teenagers chasing others cars at speeds at least double the school zone speed as well as mothers hurrying to get their children to school (or having gotten theirs to school, speeding off without regard for others.) We definitely need more police patrols in this area as well as on Duncan St. I am sure this is true of other school areas as well.

It only takes an instant to hit or kill a child with your speeding car, but you will have all the time in the world to remember and never time to forget.

Cutting remarks

Very, very cute, Pampa News, your cutting remarks on Sunday's front page, "Well, the band did well anyway (sic)"

Apparently you and Amarillo's Putt Powell are competing to see who can downgrade Pampa's young men, coaches, and athletic program the most. In my opinion you, the great voice of Pampa, are leading this rotten race. With a new coaching staff who are truly interested in our young men's health, welfare, and good citizenship, as well as winning football games, you have really given them a fine welcome.

From the young men who have practiced hard, played hard, the injured ones, and the citizens of Pampa who stand behind and back all our young people, I feel sure we all want to tell you that an unthoughtful statement as you put in last Sunday's paper was a very low blow.

Why not try to get your head on straight and let's all work to support and encourage all our young people. Winning or losing is not the only thing it is all about. We are proud of Pampa's "Pride of Pampa" band, but if for some reason they don't come home with a first place, I hope you won't have a wise crack for them also.

When we have worked hard and tried our best, we should be able to hold our heads high - win or lose - and not be downridden by some thoughtless hometown reporter.

Poor taste

As parents of Harvester football players, we found the top heading of Sunday's paper, "Well, at least the band did well in Hereford (sic)," in very poor taste.

We all agree the band was great and the flag girls are wonderful this year, but that certainly doesn't mean the Harvester football team "didn't do well."

These boys have worked very hard for weeks. Their work outs have consisted of 5 to 6 days a week, 2 to 3 work outs a day, and 2 work outs on Labor Day. The Pampa High School football team and our great new coaches are trying to build a tradition of pride and spirit in our football program. This is something Pampa hasn't had in a long time. Coach Kendall, our head coach, is trying very hard to instill this feeling in our boys.

We think the parents and the people of Pampa are going to do all they can to support our football team this year, and the years the come. We only wish we could have that same support from our hometown newspaper rather than reading demoralizing headlines.

(Ed. note - Wow! It appears the attempt this thoughtless hometown editor made to try and take some of the sting out of a valiant effort that became a 34-6 defeat certainly didn't work.

No slight or slur was intended on the young men involved in either coaching or playing football, and I sincerely apologize to any and all Harvesters of all ages who felt the page one "tease" I wrote to get people to read about the hometown team was in poor taste.

For the record, we had one irate reader who felt the blurb was printed as an attempt to slight the band!

Hurray for the Harvesters, from a man who used to play ball for a team that always lost, and can still remember the pain. And by the way, the head actually read "Well...the band did real well at Hereford."

If you want one of Preston K. Thompson's products, you'll just have to wait. He's working on two now, and he has orders for three more.

And he can only turn out two a month in his home workshop, even at full-time hours.

That's because Thompson's products are handmade acoustic guitars — works of craftsmanship that are built very carefully, and made to sound as good as they look.

Most people who buy guitars buy them from factories, and although they do the job all right, Thompson said "there's just no comparison to a handmade guitar."

That's why he gets from $895 to $1,125 for each instrument, depending on the expense of the materials he uses.

A guitar built from scratch by one craftsman, like Thompson, has an individual sound, and a better sound.

He told the story of two guitar builders he knew who shared a shop, and attempted to build identical instruments. They used the same tools and machinery, identical techniques and the same type of materials cut to the same specifications.

When the two guitars were finished, they sounded different. Each had the "signature" sound that its maker put into it, a recognizable, individual sound.

"So maybe it's your personality," Thompson said, "maybe it's the way you hold your chisel, maybe it's how hard you sandpaper, I don't know... But your own guitars do have a characteristic sound."

His own sound is "an older sound," he said, much like the handbuilt guitars of the 1940s, "a very responsive tone, I guess you could call it."

"I like to think of it as having more tone. You hear what you're supposed to hear."

He said he strives for the sound of a vintage Martin guitar, one built at that prestigious factory in the World War II or pre-World War II days.

Even the Martin guitars of today are not built by one man, but by a series of specialists.

And the most popular types, from Japan, are basically mass-produced efforts.

Those instruments have a mushier sound because of heavier materials, and they certainly don't look as good, according to Thompson.

The finishing process is one of the most painstaking processes to perform on a guitar, and some of the factory models "look like they've been dipped in plastic," Thompson said.

That not only makes for a mediocre-looking guitar, but also kills a lot of the tone, he said.

Thompson has been putting his own sound into the instruments in his home workshop at 2331 Navajo Street since last September.

He's definitely a Pampan now, but that theoretically won't keep him from selling his wares nationwide.

Guitar builders, or "luthiers," are often located in a "slightly out-of-the-way" places like Pampa, he said.

Acoustic guitar playing "never died out," he said, and there is still a market for acoustic music. Professional acoustic players "depend on the people who build them and repair them quite a bit," he said.

Thompson began his love affair with the guitar as a player in high school and college. While attending Austin College in Sherman, Texas, he began designing and building his own.

He liked the work enough to try it as a vocation. Researching schools of guitar building, he found one that he liked — the School of Guitar Research and Design in South Strafford, Vermont.

Thompson moved to Boulder, Colo. to work and save money for that school, and attended in 1979 for about a year of training.

On the way back to Texas, he stopped in Nashville, and was later offered a job in instrument repair there.

He finally quit the "big-time music scene" there to come back to Texas. That scene "has its good side but it also has its bad side," he said.

With his wife Karen, he lived in San Antonio for some time while she finished her master's degree at Trinity College and he taught at Texas Military Institute.

When Karen got a job at Celanese as a chemist, the couple moved to Pampa, and Thompson "started to do what I've been wanting to do for a long time."

Thompson has done some substitute teaching at Pampa High School — he's two-thirds of the way through a master's degree, with history and political science specialties — "but my heart is really into instrument building," he said.

Instrumental man

He can build any of three styles of guitar bodies: the small body, the "dreadnought" (a large guitar, used primarily for bluegrass playing) and a style "in-between."

All of them start as flat pieces of raw wood, mahogany, rosewood or spruce. All are "exotic" types of wood, and must be ordered by mail from specialized suppliers.

The mahogany comes from Honduras in Central America. It's not as good as rosewood, Thompson said, and "it doesn't have the visual appeal, but it's a fine tone wood."

Rosewood, used for the back and sides, used to come from Brazil, but limits on exports from that country forced many builders to go to East Indian rosewood, Thompson said.

"The quality has gone downhill," he said.

The back and sides are made to reflect the sound, and the top to vibrate with the sound. The denser the wood in the back and sides, the better.

Spruce or cedar is used for the sounding board, the top of the guitar. These are light woods, that almost flex with the tones from the strings.

These materials cost anywhere from 200 to 300 dollars per guitar, he said. They're special cuts, without knots, with straight, even grain, and chosen for "tap tone."

A tap with a finger on one of the sounding board pieces will produce an "almost bell-like" sound, as he demonstrated.

When Thompson gets the wood, he thins it down in accordance with his plans for the instrument. He can vary the wood thickness for a soft, "boomy" or lighter sound.

The side and back pieces are cut to size, then actually boiled for about an hour and a half until it's pliable enough to conform to the familiar guitar shape.

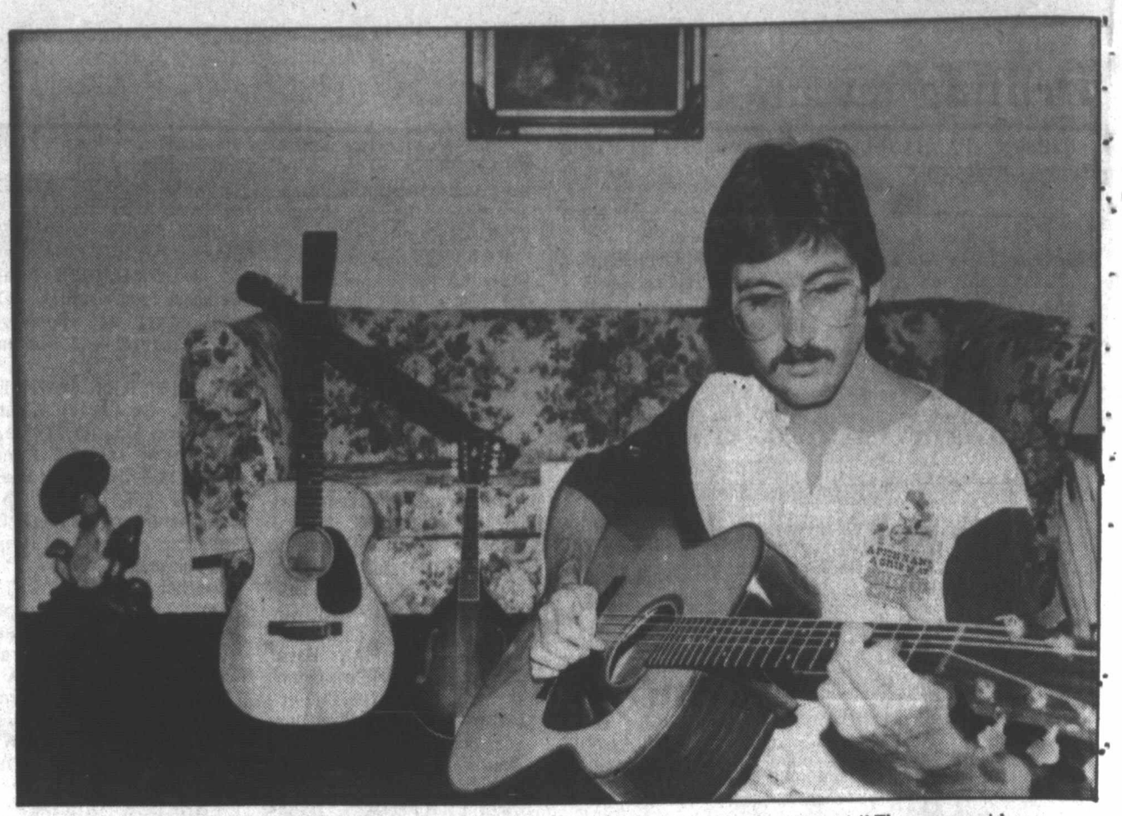

They're then put into molds and left to dry. "As dry as it is in Pampa, usually," Thompson said, "it's a really favorable place to build guitars."

When the wood is dry after three or four days, it is fitted together, and blocks are fitted onto the front and back ends.

"One of the most critical of all points" comes when the neck is fitted onto the body with a dovetail joint. That fit must be "very tight and efficient," he said.

Thompson then cuts the sound hole, and inlays his homemade rosette pattern around it using strips of "purfling" (decorative strips of wood). The rosette is one of the personal touches a builder can put visibly into the design.

Another careful step is in the bracing of the back, sides and top with strips of wood. In this operation, Thompson said, he "voices" the guitar top with tapping and tuning fork to test the sound.

By manipulating the placement and thickness of the bracing wood, he can manipulate the sound produced in the guitar.

A thin, pliable "kerfed lining," using strips of thin wood around the outside joints of the instrument, seals the wood, and "they're pretty, too," Thompson said.

The "saddle," holding the bottom end of the strings, is constructed to make tuning consistent for each string anywhere in its range.

The neck of the guitar is built separately, and Thompson uses a "new wonder material," graphite epoxy, to reinforce the neck and keep it straight through years of use.

A strip of graphite epoxy, he said, is "three times stronger than steel for its weight," which is useful in stopping "slow creep," a gradual warp the neck suffers from constant pull of steel strings.

At last comes the "long and tedious part" of finishing the wood.

Thompson first coats it with pastewood filler to fill the grain, then sanding sealer to seal the wood and give the lacquer more adherence.

Then he applies six or seven double coats of lacquer to the back and sides of the guitar and three or four double coats to the top.

Too little finish will not protect the guitar enough, but too much will ruin the sound.

"It's just one of those things where you just have to judge," Thompson said.

In some cases, moisture will get under a coat of lacquer and cause "blushing," or a cloudy look to the finish.

"When that happens, you have to scrape it down and start all over again," he said.

Thompson has an advantage in the finishing work, he said, because the Vermont school taught "not only how to build a guitar in the finest traditional way, but also how to turn out a professional-looking instrument," Thompson said.

"A good hand-made guitar just shouldn't look hand-made."

Throughout the whole process, Thompson said he must remain alert and interested — "I really need to be on the ball... one slip of your chisel and you can mess it up."

There comes the time when he must say goodbye to one guitar and go on to the next. "But I really like it," he said, "as soon as I finish one instrument I can't wait to start another."

Thompson agreed he used a lot of self-discipline and patience in his work. His father, he said, was a self-employed photographer, and some of his influence rubbed off.

"I guess that was a goal I set for myself, too, to be my own boss."

In Pampa, however, "I'm waiting for people around here to start taking me seriously." He said he told one woman what he does for a living, and "just this blank stare comes over her face, and she says 'Oh.'"

Part of that reaction may be the predominance of band and electric music in the Panhandle area.

Thompson is a fan of folk music, which is based on acoustic instrumentals, and "maybe just hasn't been introduced enough in this area."

When he taught at Pampa High School and told students about his other work, a lot of the kids assumed he built electric guitars, he said.

A comeback for acoustic music, perhaps with a big acoustic "hit" song, "would be a good thing for all of us," Thompson said.

But although he misses the folk scene, he enjoys living in Pampa, and enjoys the opportunity he has here.

"I feel so fortunate making a living doing something I love," he said.

Record corn crop still expected

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crop watchers say prospects for record corn production this fall have not diminished in the month since the Agriculture Department made its initial forecast.

The department's Crop Reporting Board was scheduled to issue an updated production estimate later today. It also will include revised output figures for soybeans, cotton, wheat and other crops.

A month ago, based on indications as of Aug. 1, the department estimated the corn crop at 8.32 billion bushels, up 1.4 percent from the previous high of 8.2 billion harvested in 1981.

The soybean harvest, also indicated last month for the first time by USDA, was estimated at 2.29 billion bushels, up 13 percent from last year's 2.03 billion bushels. The previous record was 2.27 billion bushels in 1979.

Although there has been some fear of killing frosts in northern parts of the Corn Belt, no significant damage has been reported so far. The fears stem from the lateness of much of the crop, particularly in the western Corn Belt where farmers were delayed by cold, wet weather during spring planting.

The National Farmers Union said in its current newsletter that the department's production report today probably "will be boosted a bit higher" than the estimates issued last month.

Earlier this week, Conrad Leslie, a private crop forecaster based in Chicago, estimated 1982 corn output at 8.37 billion bushels, up nearly 1 percent from USDA's forecast in August. Leslie also put soybean production at 2.33 billion bushels, up almost 2 percent from the department's August estimate.

Meanwhile, a weekly weather and crop bulletin issued by the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said corn "remained in good to excellent condition in parts of the Corn Belt and Southeast, and fair to mostly good" shape in the remainder of the country.

Rain helped the crop in the eastern Corn Belt but "more is needed," the report said. Heavy rains in parts of Missouri and Kentucky caused local flooding and damaged some fields.

FIELD DAY AT HALFWAY

Research aimed at helping High Plains farmers make better management decisions about their crops will be demonstrated Tuesday, Sept. 14 at the 73rd annual field day at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) at Lubbock and Halfway.

The Texas A&M University High Plains Research Facility at Halfway, 14 miles west of Plainview on Highway 70, is the host this year. The annual program alternates between the two facilities, in cooperation with the High Plains Research Foundation.

Five major displays are planned on the tours of the research sites at Halfway. These stops illustrate research being conducted in weed research, cotton breeding and variety testing, and cotton bollworm control; explain work on new management strategies, including on - farm computer application; and display a new multi - function irrigation system which will apply both water and chemicals through a dual nozzle system.

Also featured on the tour will be research on sorghum improvement, mite control, soil fertility, grain sorghum performance, and soybean evaluation. Farm machinery, irrigation equipment and other farm implements will be on display by area manufacturers and suppliers.

Tours will begin at 1 p.m. and end at 5 p.m.

The field day is a cooperative presentation of TAES, the High Plains Research Foundation, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the Agricultural Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Professional staffs of these agencies will be on hadn to answer questions and discuss problems with agricultural producers, home owners and gardeners.

CALLS FOR ASSISTANCE

We get a lot of phone calls and office visits for assistance. Many times we are out of the office or tied up with someone else when you may call. I make a sincere effort to return phone calls when the numbers have been left with our secretary. However, sometimes I have difficulty in ever finding anyone at the phone number. After I try calling a number several times over a period of two to three days, many times I give up and quit trying to call.

If you do have to leave your name and phone number, call back in two or three days if I have not reached you. I want to help everyone with their problems but at times, I just get snowed under and it takes a few days to dig out. Please call me back if I have not contacted you in what seems a reasonable time — I may be trying and just miss catching anyone near the telephone.

IRIS — TIME TO DIVIDE AND REPLANT

How long has it been since you divided your iris? If it's been over two to three years, perhaps you'd better do it now, since September is the ideal time to plant or to divide and replant iris - the common man's orchid.

Before digging rhizomes, cut leaves back to about one - third their full height. Dig under a clump of rhizomes, and lift out the whole cluimp at once. When dividing and replanting, use only the strong, healthy rhizomes for planting.

Cut rhizomes into sections, containing one to three buds. Each division must have at least one growing point (or fan of leaves), a few inches of healthy rhizome, and a number of well - developed roots.

Discard diseased and stunted plants. Disinfect pruning shears if you accidentally cut into a diseased rhizome using a solution of one part household bleach to nine parts water.

On the other hand, if you don't have iris and would like to have some, most garden centers or nurserymen have them for sale now.

Plant iris in a sunny, well - drained area with good circulation around the plants to prevent diseases. If the soil is poorly drained, consider using raised beds, since iris will rot in poorly drained soils.

Prepare the soil by spading it to a depth of eight to 12 inches. Incorporate high phosphorus fertilizer into the upper six to ten inches of the soil, using one to two pounds of 10 - 20 - 10 or similar analysis per 100 square feet of bed area. If ample nitrogen is present in the soil, apply only superphosphate at the rate of one - half pound per 100 square feet of bed area. Also add two to four inches of organic matter over the soil surface and till in.

To obtain a good display of iris color, use at least three rhizomes of the same variety in a triange or pattern. Point each fan of leaves away from other plants within the group. Plant rhizomes about 18 inches apart unless you want to provide masses of flowers the year after planting. In this event, space plants eight to ten inches apart.

In heavier soil, plant rihzomes by forming a mound of soil parallel with the ground surface. Carefully place the rhizome on top of the mound with the roots spreading outward. Do not wad roots together. Press the rhizome into the soil mound until it is below the soil level, then finish filling the hole so the roots are covered and the rhizome is just barely showing. Mulch around new plantings to protect them from freezing weather.

After planting, water the bed thoroughly to settle the soil around the roots.

Wildfires a danger in late, dry summer

Wildfires and range fires are an increasingdanger during the late summer, the Texas Forest Service's Fire Control Department points out, as vegetation across much of the state becomes drier.

The range fire that burned 400 acres of grassland north of McLean Friday was one of a growing number of damaging blazes, both on the prairie lands and in the East Texas timber region.

Pat Ebarb of the Fire Control Department said recently in College Station, "We are not yet to the point of crisis or issuing any sortoof moratorium on burning, but we do need to give the people of Texas a good old - fashioned warning to use caution with all kinds of fires and trash and leaf burning."

With no rain forecast in the near future, the situation can be expected to continue hazardour, Ebarb said.

The fire Friday, which required action from five city fire departments to subdue, reportedly spread from a trash - burning barrel.

In East Texas, Ebarb reports, there have been only two days since late June when no wildfires were reported. The total number of fires for August was 227, with 1,630 acres burned.

So far during the year, nearly 1,100 fires have burned some 16,000 acres. If dry conditions continue, the total for 1982 could equal last year's 2,100 fires and 27,000 acres.

During 1977, 1978 and 1980, more than 40,000 acres of East Texas timberland was burned each year.

Ebarb gave a special caution for this time of year, "when folks start back to school and smell fall in the air. They begin to get anxious to get rid of trash and leaves that have been collecting," so everyone should be extremely careful with burning trash," he said.

Texas Forest Service records show that debris fires allowed to get out of control are by far the most frequent cause of forest wildfires.

BE A SUPER SNACKER!

Fall, 1982 is BE A SUPER SNACKER! time in Texas. Snacking is a part of our lifestyle. Unplanned snacking, however, can lead to health problems such as obesity and tooth decay.,

To avoid potential problems, select snack foods carefully and make them "super snacks." "Super snacking" doesn't require special foods.

Old standbys such as carrots, celery, and apples are excellent choices, but so are other foods. For variety, try fresh pineapple, unbuttered popcorn, chese, vegetable juice or frozen yogurt.

The best way to approach snacking is to plan for the in - between meal times. Recognizing when you snack can help you avoid snacking on empity calorie foods.

If you know that you will eat betgween meansl, you can be sure to have nutritious "super snacks" available.

Harvesters blanked by Clovis

By L.D. STRATE
Pampa News Sports Editor

Pampa had a few strokes of good luck Friday night, but it was all used up in the first quarter.

Clovis, N.M. took charge of the lucky charm for the next three quarters to post a 23-0 decision over the Harvesters in schoolboy football action at Harvester Stadium.

Pampa High head coach John Kendall placed the blame on mental mistakes rather than luck, good or bad.

"We made a lot of mental mistakes," Kendall said.

"Our offense would move the ball and then we'd have a breakdown."

Clovis turned three Pampa turnovers into three scores to hand the Harvesters their second setback in as many games. Clovis, the defending Class 4A New Mexico champions, is now 2-0 for the season.

The Wildcats scored their first tally early in the second quarter when Robert Grimes skirted left end from 20 yards out. The TD was set up when Pampa punter Devin Cross couldn't handle a low snap and had to fall on the ball on the Harvester 43. Four plays later, Grimes scored. Tim Hartley booted the PAT.

On their next possession, the Wildcats drove 59 yards to the Pampa nine-yard line in eight plays, but had to settle for a 27-yard field goal by Hartley when Wade Barker nailed Grimes for a two-yard loss on a third-down play.

Clovis scored a pair of quick TDs in the fourth quarter to seal the Harvesters' fate.

Steve Ferguson interceped a pass by Pampa quarterback Randy Skaggs to set the Wildcats up on the Harvester 44. On the very next play, Grimes found Dramine Bunton open downfield on a halfback option pass. Hartley's PAT made it 17-0.

Less than two minutes later Clovis was on the scoreboard again. The Harvesters were forced into a punting situation on their own 37 when a bad snap sailed over Cross' head and was covered by Clovis' Chip Smith on the Pampa one. Royce Standefer plunged over from the one to make it 23-0.

Everything was going Pampa's way the first quarter when Clovis fumbled the ball away on its first two possessions, both inside the Clovis 25. However, the Harvesters couldn't take advantage of the two scoring opportunities when fourth-down plays failed to net the necessary yardage.

Pampa had the edge in first downs, 15-8, and total offense, 202-180, but Clovis made the most of its scoring opportunities.

"The Clovis coach told me after the game that we had them beat in the stats, but we caused our misfortune," Kendall said. "Our kids were trying though. That's what I liked."

Quarterback Doug Hubby led Clovis' rushing attack with 51 yards in eight carries while Grimes accounted for 42 yards on 12 steps.

Tailback Harold Ellison led Pampa with 69 yards on 17 carries.

Pampa was most effective through the air with Skaggs completing eight of 26 passes for 80 yards. Gregg Mitchell and Dennis Kuempel caught three passes each for 35 and 25 yards respectively.

Pampa's defense held Clovis to 32 yards rushing the second half after giving up 98 yards the first half.

"Our defensive ends (Brad Voyles and Randy Parsley) did a good job," Kendall said. "We switched Cliff Baker to linebacker and he did a super job for us."

Lane Howard and Darryl Caldwell recovered fumbles for the Harvesters.

Pampa has open date this week before traveling to Perryton on Friday, Sept. 24 to meet the Rangers.

Pampa tailback Harold Ellison finds running room through a swarm of Clovis defenders during gridiron action Friday night in Harvester Stadium. Pampa fell, 23-0, to the New Mexico team. McCullough leads Boston Classic

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — Mike McCullough, a former Ohio amateur champion and barely a survivor in 10 years on the PGA golf tour, fired a 5-under-par 66 Saturday for a one-stroke lead after 54 holes in the $300,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

McCullough, 37, who shot a 64 in the second round, had a three-round score of 202, 11 under par.

Veteran George Archer bogeyed his final two holes for a 69 and a 203 total.

Peter Jacobsen, who started the day three strokes behind Archer and Bob Gilder, moved up with a 66, tying Archer at 203.

Archer, bidding for his first victory since 1976, played steady golf, collecting four birdies without a bogey, before wilting in the heat.

Archer, winner of nearly $1.25 million in nearly 20 years on the tour, saved par with a 15-foot putt on the 16th green. But he slipped into a tie with McCullough, his playing partner, as he drove into the trees and took a bogey on the 17th hole. He completed the round with another bogey as he hit into the back bunker.

McCullough, who has won more than $300,000 on the tour while managing only two minor victories on the "second tour," started with a bogey on his second hole. He settled down quickly and birdied the fourth, fifth and sixth holes. Then he went 11-under for the tournament with birdies on the 11th, 12th and 13th greens.

He got down in par the rest of the way to assume the lead as Archer faded.

Gilder, playing with Archer and McCullough, had trouble ut struggled to a 70 for 204. He was tied by Brad Bryant, who had a 64, one off the course record set by Rik Massengale in 1977.

Bill Buttner, a former North Carolina star from nearby Plymouth, moved into contention wtih a 66 for 205. John Cook also fired a 66 for 206.

Ex-Cowboy overcomes drug problem

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Buddy Dial took a little pinch out of his can of Kodiak chewing tobacco and hailed another landmark day.

"Three years ago today I got off Demerol," he said, matter-of-factly.

He has other anniversaries of which he is proud...the day he got off Darvon...the day he got off Percodan...the day he...

You get the picture. He was a drug addict. He used to gobble as many as 50 a day.

"I needed them like people do peanuts," said Dial. "It got to where my heart was beating so fast I couldn't walk out the front door to get the newspaper without almost passing out."

For 15 years, Dial, the Rice All-American, the Pittsburgh Pro Bowl performer, the Dallas Cowboy, the football idol, was chemically dependent on drugs.

"I tried alcohol and that made me sick, and it wasn't fast enough," Dial said. "I never even drank a beer until I was 35.

"At Pittsburgh (quarterback) Bobby Layne used to go crazy because I wouldn't have a drink with him. Finally, he gave up and told me 'If you ever do (have a drink) it had better be with ole Bobby.'"

Dial took pills to ease back problems when he was in the National Football League, then couldn't leave them alone when he retired.

Even though he became a successful businessman he still popped pills for the pain. The drugs eventually dug him a deep hole.

"I made a lot of money but I blew it," he said. "I wasn't ready to be helped."

His marriage which produced four children ended in divorce in 1977.

His businesses crashed.

"I still owe money to some individuals," he said. "I even had to sell my watch once to move."

Dial began to drift into seclusion, finding solace at his parents' home in Tomball, Texas.

Former Cowboy teammates Mike Gaechter and Lee Roy Jordan tracked him down.

"I had heard he died," said Gaechter. "But I found him, alive, just barely."

Dial was suffering from kidney trauma and had withered to 152 pounds. He had already undergone kidney surgery twice.

They convinced him he needed to go to Sacramento, Calif., for treatment and came up with the money from the Dallas chapter of the NFL Alumni Association.

With a combination of physical therapy and some hypnosis under the direction of Dr. David Axelrad, Dial's comeback has begun.

He has joined with Gaechter, Jordan and Houston businessman Tom Fatjo Jr., to establish the National Foundation for Pain Research.

"Our message is that you can cope with the constant agony of pain without having to resort to narcotics," said Dial. "That's the real purpose of my telling my story, not to attract attention to myself ... it's not real comfortable ... I have more fun talking football than talking about the drug situation I had."

Dial also is a prime mover in the National Fitness Classic which will be held at The Houstonian, a hotel-health resort, in October.

Lefors did have more total offense (197-90) than the visitors.

"Our kids have had some bad breaks, but they're not going to give up," Palmer added.

The game left both clubs 1-1 for the year.

Florida downs USC

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Spencer Jackson made a sensational fourth-down catch of Wayne Peace's 1-yard touchdown pass and James Jones' 22-yard run with 37 seconds left in the first half capped a 97-yard drive Saturday as 11th-ranked Florida defeated No. 10 Southern California 17-9.

It was the opening game for Southern Cal and the second consecutive victory over a Top Twenty team for Florida, which beat Miami 17-14 a week earlier.

Jackson's diving grab came with 4:52 left in the second period. Peace lobbed the ball over the head of cornerback Darrel Hopper and Jackson came down just inside the left boundary of the end zone before he slid out of bounds. The touchdown spoiled a goal-line stand by Southern Cal after Florida failed on three previous cracks following a first down at the 2.

The Gators then stunned the Trojans with a 97-yard strike in six plays after David Pryor's 49-yard punt was downed at the Florida 3.

Chiefs to open with balanced offense

By MIKE EMBRY
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Chiefs have decided to return to those thrilling days of yesteryear when a balanced passing and rushing attack carried the team to its greatest victories.

Although the Chiefs aren't talking Super Bowl, they do plan to open up an offense that has been run-oriented the past several seasons. They'll try out the passing game Sunday when they go to Buffalo in the National Football League opener for both teams.

Elsewhere during the first weekend of the season, it's Houston at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, Chicago at Detroit, St.Louis at New Orleans, Cleveland at Seattle, Washington at Philadelphia, the Los Angeles Rams vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Atlanta at the New York Giants, Miami at the New York Jets, New England at Baltimore, San Diego at Denver and the Los Angeles Raiders at San Francisco.

On Monday night, it's Pittsburgh at Dallas.

A players' strike, threatened during the week, is not likely since Seattle players decided Friday night against a walkout over the team's release of Seahawks player representative Sam McCullum earlier this week.

Whether the Chiefs can develop a Lenny Dawson-to-Otis Taylor combination that carried them to the 1970 Super Bowl title remains to be seen. But the emergence of wide receivers Carlos Carson and Anthony Hancock in preseason is a step in the right direction.

"In the past, we'd throw seven or eight times in the first half and 20 times in the second half when we had to," said quarterback Bill Kinney. "That's our stereotype. This year we're going to be much more effective throwing the ball."

Carson, a third-year player from Louisiana State, caught 19 passes for 358 yards and three touchdowns and Hancock, the Chief's top draft choice this year, had 10 receptions for 154 yards.

The question facing New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips is not whether the Saints will throw the ball, but rather, who will throw it. The choice facing the Saints coach is Archie Manning and Kenny Stabler, and he's not saying who will start.

Dodgers within one-half game of lead

HOUSTON (AP) — The fortunes of the Houston Astros and the Los Angeles Dodgers, combatants in last year's divisional series, have diverged greatly this season, and Dodgers skipper Tom Lasorda knows at least one reason.

Los Angeles pulled to within a half game of the National League West lead Saturday with a 5-3 defeat of the fifth-place Astros.

"To me, pennants are won or lost in the bullpen," Lasorda said. "I really like our bullpen. After the first month of the season, they've been doing a real good job."

While the Astros bullpen has been hampered by the loss of Joe Sambito and other injuries, Lasorda has obtained pleasant results from people like Steve Howe, who earned his 13th save Saturday.

The Dodgers were able to close the gap on Atlanta, which lost 4-3 to Cincinnati.

"I hope experience will be a factor," Lasorda said. "We have been there before."

Pitcher Jerry Reuss and Howe combined to limit Houston to seven hits, while Dusty Baker knocked in a pair of runs with his 23rd home run of the season.

Baker teed off on loser Vern Ruhle, 7-13, in the first inning with his 23rd homer, giving Los Angeles a 2-0 lead.

Houston tied the score on Terry Puhl's RBI single in the third on Bill Doran's run-scoring single in the fourth, but the Dodgers went ahead to stay in the fifth.

Bill Russell was hit by a pitch to open the inning and scored on Steve Yeager's triple. Reuss doubled to make it 4-2 and, one out later, he scored when Ken Landreaux greeted reliever Bob Knepper with a bloop double.

Ray Knight knocked in Houston's final run in the seventh with a single.

Miami, Fla. blows out Houston

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly riddled the Houston secondary for 208 yards passing and tailback Mark Rush scored three touchdowns Saturday as 19th ranked Miami, Fla., blew past the Cougars, 31-12, in a regionally televised college football game.

Kelly, a senor from East Brady, Pa. who is being touted as a Heisman Trophy candidate, hit 16 of 27 passes to run his career yardage total to 5,021 as the Hurricanes, 17-14 losers to 11th ranked Florida a week ago, evened their record at 1-1.

It was the season opener for Bill Yeoman's Houston team, which has now dropped five of the last six games in this series which stands at 7-7.

Rush, a 215-pound senior with a propensity for diving over defensive lineman, caught a 16-yard touchdown pass from Kelly early in the first quarter and scored twice on 2-yard runs on which he dived over the Houston defensive front.

Kelly hit 3 of 4 passes as the Hurricane drove 70 yards in six plays afr the opening kickoff to take a 7-0 lead on the 16-yard scoring pass to Rush.

The Miami quarterback opened the drive with a 8-yaard completion to tight end Glenn Dennison and then teamed with Rush on a 47-yard pass play which set up the touchdown.

Rush's first touchdown run covered the final two yards of a 7-play, 73-yard march that hiked Miami's advantage to 14-0 with 2:58 left in the first quarter. Kelly, who hit 6 of 9 passes for 152 yards in the opening period, set up the score with a 43-yard completion to wide receiver Keith Cleveland on the preceeding play.

Houston quarterback Audrey McMillian, playing for the first time since suffering a shoulder separation against Miami a year ago, engineered a 10-play, 80-yard touchdown drive as the Cougars got on the scoreboard with 10:20 left in the second period.

Washington rolls by UTEP, 55-0

SEATTLE (AP) — Quarterback Steve Pelluer passed for 256 yards and two touchdowns and Chuck Nelson booted four field goals Saturday as No. 2-ranked Washington opened its football season by thrashing Texas-El Paso 55-0.

The two-time defending Pacific-10 Conference champion Huskies made it two shutouts in a row. Washington blanked Iowa 28-0 in the 1982 Rose Bowl for the first shutout in Pasadena, Calif., in 28 years.

With virtually everyone back from last season, the Huskies simply had too much manpower for UTEP, a school that went 6-51 on the football field from 1977-81.

Led by the sharp-throwing Pelluer, a junior, the Huskies registered more than 500 yards in total offense on a drizzly, overcast day. Pelluer, who was taken out of the game late in the third quarter, completed 17 of 29 passes.

Pelluer had a 13-yard scoring pass to Anthony Allen in the first quarter and a 28-yard touchdown throw to Paul Skansi in the second period as the Huskies led 27-0 at halftime before a crowd of 45,839 in Husky Stadium.

The Miners from the Western Athletic Conference coughed up six turnovers, two of them interceptions by starting quarterback Kevin Ward. Linebacker Ken Driscoll recovered two Texas-El Paso fumbles.

Nelson became Washington's all-time field goal career record holder by kicking three-pointers of 32, 31, 33 and 24 yards. That gave him 38 for his Huskies' career, three more than Steve Robbins' old school mark set from 1974-1977.

Oilers meet Bengals in NFL opener

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals aren't fooling anybody with their 1-3 preseason record, says Houston Oiler Coach Ed Biles. He considers the defending American Football Conference champions "the class of the Central Division" and the odds-on favorite over injury-wracked Houston in their National Football League opener Sunday.

"The thing about Cincinnati ... they were able, because of the position they were in, to use the preseason for exactly what it is," Biles said. "They didn't play their regulars very much; they gave their backup people an awful lot of time to play.

"When their regulars played together, they were a devastating football team. Look at the scores of the quarters when they played their good people and you'll get an indication of the kind of football team they are."

The Bengals had more players in camp than in previous years, and the regulars didn't play extensively until the last game, a 28-21 victory over the Washington Redskins.

Although Cincinnati was outscored 115-98 in the preseason, Coach Forrest Gregg said his team's progress was comparable to preseason a year ago and should not be compared with the 1981 regular season, when the Bengals were 12-4.

"That's comparing two different phases of the game," Gregg said. "The only thing we did this year, moreso than last year, we had more people on our squad and played more people.

"We went back and looked at our statistics for last preseason, and I think we are ahead offensively; defensively, we are a little bit different — but we have the same people in there and should have basically the same defense we have had the last two years."

Quarterback Ken Anderson, the NFL's most valuable player last year, has been throwing well and has, arguably, the best group of receivers in the AFC — Cris Collinsworth, Isaac Curtis, Dan Ross, David Verser, M.L. Harris and Steve Kreider

"There's no question that Cincinnati is the class of this division," Biles said. "They're heads and shoulders above everybody else."

Houston was 2-2 in the preseason, but Biles said injuries and player moves have left the Oilers with many question marks.

"There's no question we're in a rebuilding situation — so is everybody in this division, with the exception of Cincinnati," Biles said. "It would take a lot of good circumstances to happen for us to be in the playoffs this year.

"I'm not sure we don't consider ourselves a playoff-caliber team, but it's certainly going to take a right set of circumstances for us to be involved in that."

With Ken Stabler again retired, Gifford Nielsen is solidly the Oilers' No.1 quarterback. Biles said Houston will try again to diversify its attack rather than rely solely on Earl Campbell.

Alabama crushes Georgia Tech, 45-7

ATLANTA (AP) — Jesse Bendross dashed 58 yards on an end around and Walter Lewis raced 41 yards for second-quarter touchdowns as fourth-ranked Alabama crushed Georgia Tech 45-7 in college football Saturday.

Alabama scored on its first five possessions as the Crimson Tide launched the season in impressive fashion in a light drizzle, avenging a 24-21 upset loss to Tech a year ago.

It gave Paul "Bear" Bryant, the all-time leader in coaching victories, his 316th career triumph on his 69th birthday at the start of his 38th season.

The Tide cashed in two pass interceptions and a fumble recovery for first-half touchdowns and amassed 317 yards in offense by intermission.

Nebraska rolls by Iowa, 42-7

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Turner Gill threw two touchdown passes and directed two other scoring marches, sparking No. 3 Nebraska to a 42-7 victory over Iowa on Saturday in a college football season opener.

The crowd of 76,013, Nebraska's 119th straight sellout, saw the Cornhuskers score on three of their first four possessions and bolt to a 28-0 halftime lead in avenging a 10-7 loss to Iowa in last year's opener.

Gill, coming off a leg injury that sidelined him in the Orange Bowl, fired a 41-yard touchdown pass to Irving Fryar in the first quarter and hit Todd Brown on a 7-yard scoring pass in the fourth period. The junior quarterback also directed the Cornhuskers on first-half scoring marches of 80 and 84 yards.

Fullback Doug Wilkening scored from the 3 to cap the 80-yard drive and Roger Craig scored on a 6-yard run to climax the other long march.

Jeff Smith dashed 80 yards for Nebraska's final touchdown, and the Cornhuskers' defense, which bottled up Iowa in the first half, got the other touchdown when end Wade Praeuner recovered a bad center snap in the end zone.

Gill finished with nine completions in 16 attempts for 144 yards.

Iowa, which did not get a first down until the final play of the first half, got its offense untracked early in the fourth quarter. No. 2 quarterback Tom Grogan scored on a 4-yard run with 7:53 left in the game to cap an 89-yard, 14-play drive.

Texas A&I wins over Nevada, 42-34

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Darrell Green scored on a 71-yard punt return with 3 minutes left that broke open an offensive struggle and gave Texas A&I a 42-34 victory over the University of Nevada Saturday afternoon.

The Javelinas took a 14-0 lead on a 1-yard scoring run by quarterback Mark James and a 10-yard pass from James to flanker Joe Hayes. Nevada quarterback Marshall Sperbeck hit Alphonso Williams for a 10-yard touchdown that got the Wolfpack on the board but the Javelinas struck on a 50-yard pass play from James to split end Steve Fuller.

A 4-yard scoring pass from Sperbeck to Williams brought Nevada to within seven and a Tony Zendejas 29-yard field goal cut the Texas A&I lead to 21-17 at halftime.

The two teams compiled 958 total yards, 500 by Texas A&I and 458 by Nevada.

Lloyd wins title

Lloyd captures U.S. Open Tennis title

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd, displaying patience from the baseline and capitalizing on her opponent's errors, won her sixth U.S. Open Tennis singles championship Saturday, trouncing Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-1.

It was the second time in three years the two had met in the final of America's premiere tennis tournament, and the second time Lloyd has prevailed.

Earlier, second-seeded Jimmy Connors defeated Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3 to advance into the men's final, which will be held Sunday on the hard courts at Louis Armstrong Stadium. Connors will meet the winner of the other semifinal, which pitted defending champion John McEnroe against third-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia.

Lloyd, who had to go three sets to top Mandlikova in the final here two years ago, only had to keep the ball in play on Sunday as her 20-year-old opponent made numerous errors and several crucial double faults.

The 27-year-old Lloyd took home the $90,000 first-place prize and became the third woman in history to capture the U.S. title six times. Only Molla Mallory, who won eight times between 1915 and 1926, and Helen Wills Moody, who captured seven crowns between 1923 and 1931, have won more.

The vitory kept alive Lloyd's streak of winning at least one Grand Slam singles title each year since 1974, and increased her record to 66 match victories.

Mandlikova collected $45,000 for her runnerup finish.

Lloyd struggled constantly to hold serve, but always came up with the big points when she needed them. She never lost serve, although three times Mandlikova battled to deuce.

The young Czech right-hander, on the other hand, alternated brilliant shots with unforced errors, losing her serve in the second set in the second and sixth games.

Mandlikova, who plays an all-court game, chose to stay at the baseline for the most part and trade groundstrokes with Lloyd, considered by many to have the best groundstrokes in tennis.

It was Lloyd who had the first struggle to hold serve, staving off one break point in the fourth game. But hold she did, then broke the Czech right-hander in the seventh game at love.

Mandlikova came right back in the eighth game, reaching break point three times before Lloyd finally held for a 5-3 advantage. The game went to deuce five times.

Lloyd then closed out the 33-minute set by breaking Mandlikova in the ninth game when the Czech netted a backhand volley.

Connors, a three-time winner and the only person to win on all three surfaces the Open has been contested on — grass, clay and hard court — came out blazing in the opening set, breaking Vilas in the fourth and sixth games, the fourth at love.

Vilas, who lost to Mats Wilander of Sweden in the finals of the French Open earlier this year and beat Connors for the U.S. Open title in 1977, when it was on clay, came back to capture the second set before wallowing in a sea of double faults and unforced errors.

The Argentine, ranked fourth in the world, double faulted at 15-40 to lose serve in the sixth game, then double faulted at set point in the eighth game of the third set.

The match's momentum appeared to shift on the final point of the fifth game of the third set. Connors, serving at 40-love, hit a forehand volley that hit near or on the sideline.

Razorbacks shut out Hurricanes, 38-0

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Pint-sized Derek Holloway caught a 67-yard touchdown pass and made big plays to set up two other scores as 13th-ranked Arkansas defeated Tulsa 38-0 in a non-conference game Saturday.

Holloway's TD catch came on a deep pass from strong arm Brad Taylor and made it 14-0 in the middle of the second quarter. Minutes later, the 5-foot-8, 169-pound senior returned a punt 29 yards to midfield and Arkansas made it 21-0 six plays later.

Then, late in the third quarter, Holloway made a spectacular falling catch at the 6-yard line to set up a 23-yard field goal by Ernie Villarreal — his third of the game.

The Billy Ray Smith-led defense did the rest.

Tulsa, which made 507 yards in a season-opening win over Air Force last week, managed three first downs in the first half against Arkansas. Two of those came on the Hurricane's first possession.

In fact, Tulsa had 60 yards total offense in the first half. Meanwhile, Arkansas made 313 yards and 14 first downs in the first two quarters. On those seven possessions, the Razorbacks scored two touchdowns, two field goals, missed a field goal, had a pass intercepted and punted.

The effectiveness of Holloway was even more surprising in light of the fact that Gary Anderson, moved from running back to wide receiver, did not play because of an ear infection. Anderson and Holloway are Arkansas' two fastest receivers.

The game was the season opener for the Razorbacks.

Oklahoma State opens with 27-6 victory

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State running back Ernest Anderson ravaged the North Texas State defense for 220 yards on 26 carries, leading the Cowboys to a 27-6 season opener victory in college football action Saturday.

The Cowboys threatened to turn the game into a rout, but seven turnovers by the offensive unit thwarted scoring drives and set up the Eagles' only touchdown.

Oklahoma State quarterback Adam Hinds engineered all four scoring drives, although he played just two quarters. Reserve Ike Jackson took Hinds' place in the second and fourth periods.

Anderson, whose status as a starter was not assured until late in the fall practice season, took the game's opening handoff and waltzed 76 yards untouched for the game's first score. Larry Roach's extra point made it 7-0 with just 16 seconds elapsed.

After a North Texas punt, Anderson and second-string running back Shawn Jones quickly went to work on the outsized North Texas defensive line, grinding out 29 yards in seven carries, and flanker Terry Young hauled in a pair of passes from Hinds, moving the ball to the 1-yard line.

Two plays later, Hinds found Anderson unguarded rolling out of the backfield and flipped him a short pass for a 13-0 lead.

Hinds came on in the third quarter to toss touchdown passes to James Evans and John Chesley to put the game out of reach.

West Virginia upsets Sooners

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — It was his first game in a West Virginia football jersey and Jeff Hostetler had a case of the jitters. After all, he was facing No. 9 Oklahoma.

"Everybody was nervous starting out," Hostetler said after the Mountaineers upset the Sooners 41-27 Saturday.

"We dropped passes, overthrew, missed assignments. Then we calmed down and started to play."

And play he did.

Hostetler, a junior who transferred two seasons ago from Penn State, threw for four touchdowns and 321 yards for one of the biggest surprises of the young 1982 college football season.

"For a guy who had never taken a snap for the University of West Virginia, and then to come out and do what he did today — well, I just don't have the right words to describe it," said Mountaineer Coach Don Nehlen.

Buckeyes beat Baylor

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — 14th-ranked Ohio State blew a 14-point lead Saturday, then rallied to beat Baylor 21-14 on sophomore quarterback Mike Tomczak's 1-yard scoring sneak in the fourth quarter.

The Buckeyes, opening their season before 88,622, the second-largest crowd in Ohio Stadium history and its 84th consecutive sellout, handed Baylor its first loss of the season. The Bears had opened with a 21-17 defeat of North Texas State last week.

Tomczak, making his first college start as Art Schlichter's replacement, led Ohio State on a 37-yard, nine-play drive that was set up on Garcia Lane's 18-yard punt return.

The Buckeyes, returning to their famous ground game, used all rushing plays to score the winning touchdown. Tomczak carried the final yard with 9:52 left.

Ohio State's running backs, particularly fullback Vaughn Broadnax and tailback Tim Spencer, enjoyed big days.

Broadnax, a 252-pound junior, scored twice on runs of 3 and 4 yards to provide Ohio State a 14-0 lead in the first 17½ minutes. Broadnax rushed for 101 yards, his top day as a collegiate.

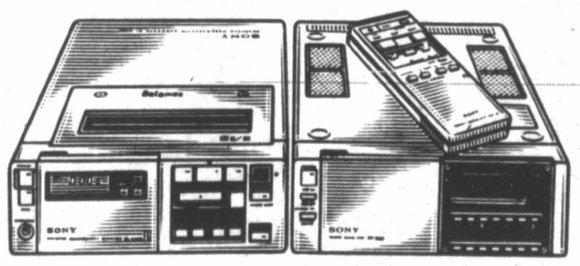

Spencer, a 212-pound senior, rolled up 147 yards in 30 rushes and became the school's sixth all-time career rusher.

Baylor, a 12-point underdog, tied the score at 14-14 late in the third quarter on fullback Robert Williams' 11-yard run.

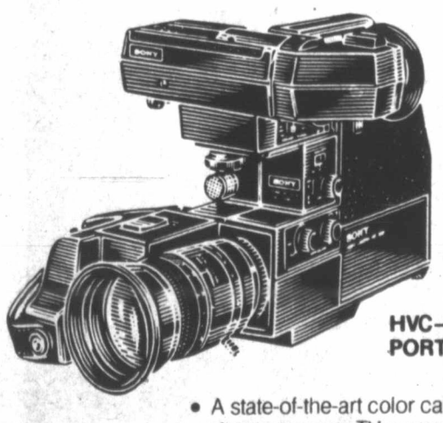

Baylor's first touchdown came on quarterback Mike Brannon's 23-yard pass to tailback Alfred Anderson late in the first half.

Today's Safeway. Where you get a little bit more.

Taking their normal stance along the drag are Pam Jenning, Steve Angel and Catheline Steele.

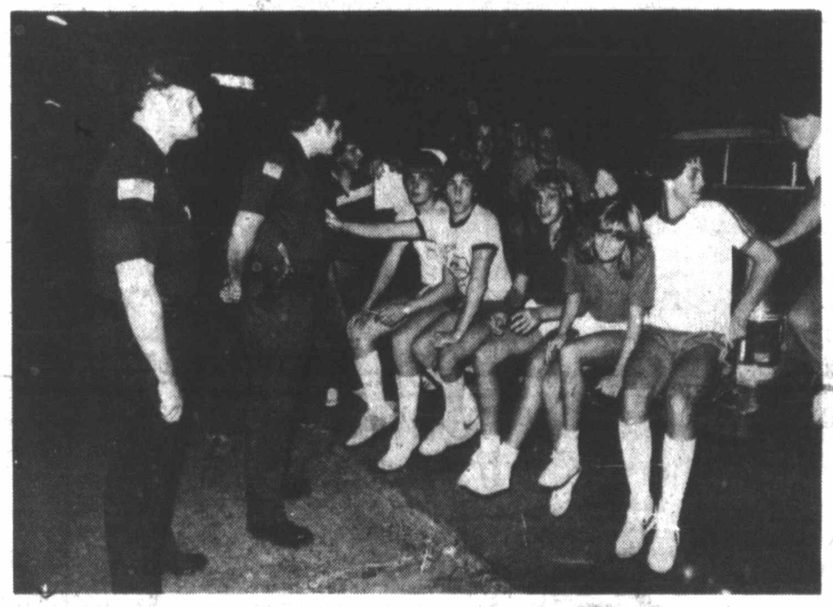

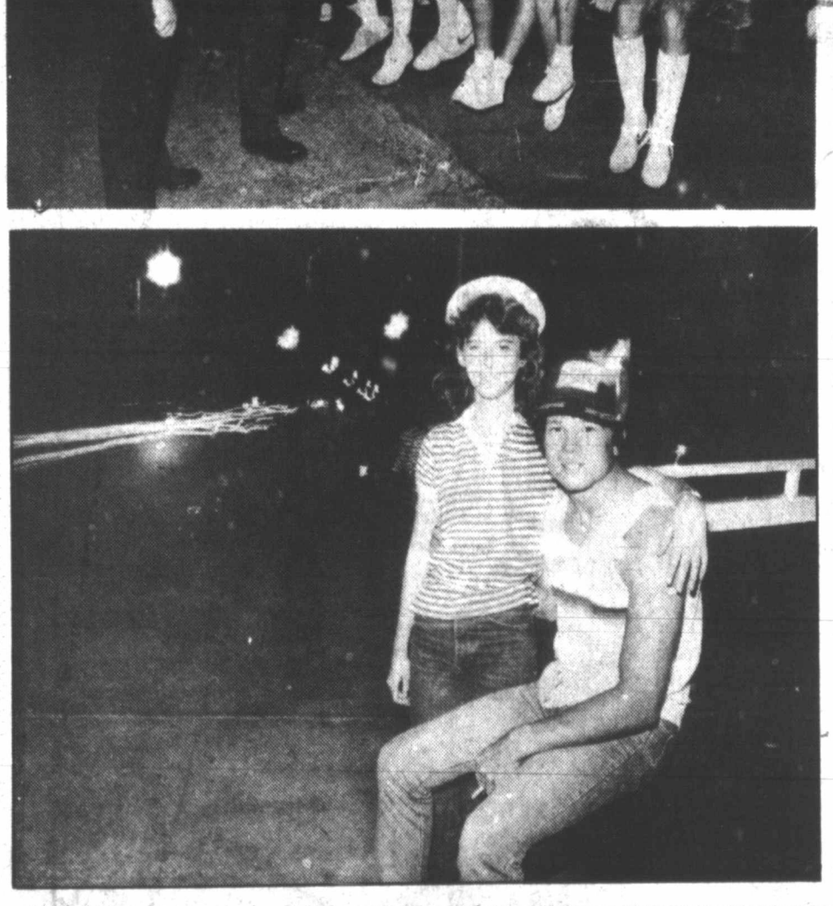

Showing her enthusiasm for the Saturday night entertainment is Terri McCord.

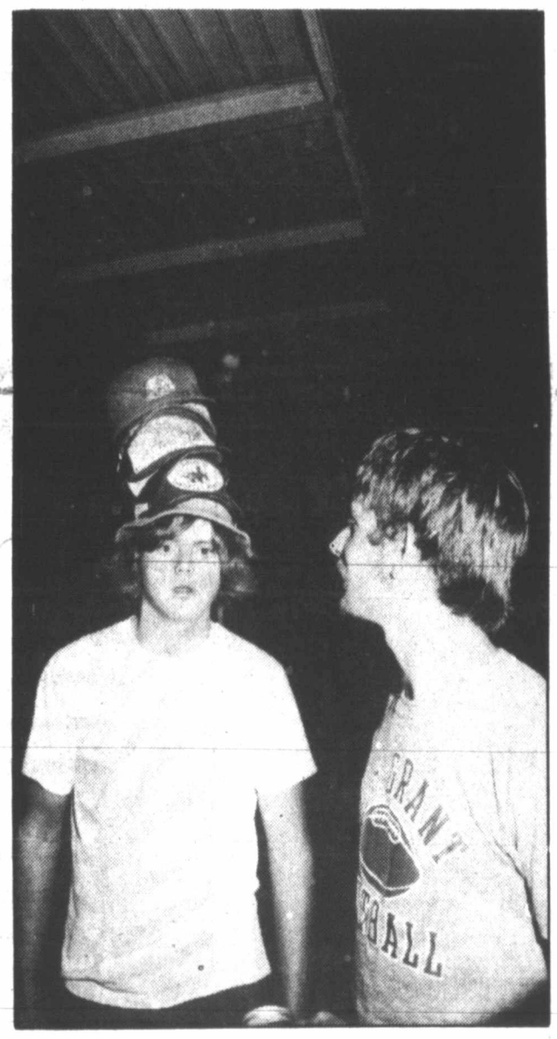

By David Christenson Photos by Bruce Lee Smith

"Everybody's there."
"What else is there to do?"
"We just come out here to have a good time"

THE DRAG

Everybody's on the Drag on the weekend. Top left, Pampa Police Officers, left, Dusty Golobay and Steve Chance check - out the kids lined along the drag. Photo right, Steve Organ tops off the night with a few caps. Bottom photo, Brad Mathis and female companion chauffeur an unidentified kissing couple along the main artery of Pampa. Photo left, Anita Byars and Skip Matson often meet on the Drag "just to have a good time".

They lounge on the trunks of parked cars, in pickup beds, astride motorcycles.

Or they drive, a seemingly endless rectangular merry - go - round: Francis to Cuyler to Foster to Hobart to the whole thing over again.

Most of them are normal, local kids, with nothing more sinister on their minds than looking for something to do.

It's called the drag.

Aimless activity, you say?

"Yeah, well..." said one kid.

"Everybody here has seen all the movies. Some of them three times," said another.

"It's the cheapest thing to do."

"If you don't have a date, you go to Amarillo, or you go to the drag."

"There's nothing else to do."

"What else is there to do?"

To Pampa police officers who patrol it on the 3 - 11 p.m. shift, it's a drag, all right: a mile of potential trouble.

The crowds on the drag get big sometimes, and police are wary of crowds, from experience.

To the young people who hang out there, it's another story:

"We just come out here to have a good time."

"It's a social place."

Every town of any size has something like it, a place to go, to hang out and meet friends.

In many cities, indoor shopping malls have taken over the function of the drags — spots where teenagers and college students can get away from home for a while, do a little showing off and role - playing.

In Pampa, the downtown street tradition hangs on.

Here, the drag begins at the Ideal Food Store on West Francis Street, goes east in a parade of honking horns and revving engines through the dark residential area, past the Senior Citizens' Center, to the corner of Francis and Cuyler Streets.

Take the quick right turn (squealing tires are mandatory), drive down to Foster Street, turn west again.

Past the Chuckwagon Supper Club, Red's Lounge, the car wash, all points of interest. Take another right on Hobart Street, drive two blocks, past the Burger King and Pizza Hut.

Another right, and you've gone full circle. You've done the drag.

Pampa police officer Steve Chance has been working this beat and the surrounding area for 18 months, on the shift ending at 11 p.m.

"It used to be just Foster Street, then Francis picked up a lot of traffic," he said. "There's more mileage put on these two streets than any two streets in Pampa."

The kids say there was some talk last year about changing the location of the drag — moving it from the antique brick streets to four - lane Hobart Street, so all the spectators would park at Coronado Center.

It didn't happen.

"It's a tradition down here," one explained.

"The biggest problem is M.I.P.'s," said Chance as he tooled his patrol car down Foster Street.

M.I.P.'s?

"Minor in possession," he said.

That's possession of alchohol.

"But it's hard to do when there's 600 kids out here. It's hard to catch them. You have to see them in possession to get them."

Police pay attention, too. You can tell by the talk on the drag:

"The cops, they won't leave us alone..."

"They're not very friendly. They think they're bad; they go around and bother everybody.

"How come they all come out at the same time?"

As Chance's patrol car rolls, there's a knot of young - looking people sitting on a pickup at the west end of Foster. They all stared as it went by.

"Most of these businesses have 'no parking' signs posted," Chance said, pointing at the group.

A song from Rod Stewart's latest is going full blast on a car stereo. Chance stops to check them out, but there's no trouble.

It's about 9:30 on a Saturday night. "Things should start picking up around now," Chance said.

Somebody in a car on Hobart Street lets out a scream.

Chance takes the turn at the west end, moves around to the Pizza Hut parking lot. He stops, tells two boys to move their pickup — they're parked in a restricted lot.

They're cooperative.

He drives past the most crowded area of the drag, the parking area on the north side of the Ideal Food Store.

"It's not too bad until he closes. It's when he closes that things get real bad," Chance said.

There's a crowd there — about 30 people, some nearly spilling out into the street. A group of teenage girls are step - kicking in chorus line formation to the loud music.

"One of these kids is going to get run over," Chance said. "The biggest problem is catching them. The biggest fear is finding one of them run over when you come down the street."

This is the center of all activity on the drag, the place everybody checks out as they drive by, usually to find the elusive parking spot, where dozens of folks are found, usually on the back of pickups. It's part of the tradition to gather here.

The denizens of this area disagree with Chance's assessment of the danger. They're not worried about traffic, and they cite the nearby intersection for support.

"Man, nobody goes fast enough down this street to get somebody splattered."

"We've had motorcycles knocked down. No pedestrian accidents."

"There's as much hotrodding up at the school as there is here."

Chance said he worries for their benefit, however. "Sometimes it's hard to make them understand that you actually care about them."

Pockets of activity down the street: in parking lots every three blocks or so, people sitting around on tailgates.

The Pampa Senior Citizens' Center has attracted a few drinkers. They look older than the Ideal crowd.

Chance said these are probably working men, not high - schoolers.

Sometimes the age and occupation groups mingle. "That's how these kids get into trouble," Chance said.

"Kids can get anything they want out here. Beer, drugs, anything they want."

Ask the kids by the Ideal store about drugs, and they have mixed opinions.

"There ain't no drugs on the drag."

"No drugs here. The drugs are down on that end..." he points east... "and on the other side."

A few admit that some of them use drugs, particularly marijuana — "There's a few, there's a few everywhere" — and that the opportunity is there, at least on some parts of the street — "We've had people try to sell them to us."

"For me," explains one young working man, "it's few and far between. It's gotta be."

"Nobody on the drag smokes. It's the opes floating over the drag that you have to watch," one laughs.

"These heads, they give the town a bad name," says one.

"Too many weirdos," says another.

"I'm a juvenile, but I'm not a delinquent," says a girl.

"We've got a nice clean crowd here," says one young man, waving his hand toward the crowd around the parking lot.

Chance agrees. "Most of these are pretty nice kids."

But when he catches them drinking, although he does not always take them to jail, he gets tough.

Dear Abby

Pen Pals still in vogue

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR READERS: A few years ago a soldier stationed in Korea wrote to tell me what a heartbreaking sight it was to see so many servicemen hurry to mail call day after day and walk away empty-handed with tears in their eyes.

I urged readers who wanted pen pals to write to: Operation Dear Abby, c/o Commander: U.S. Forces, Korea, APO San Francisco 96301.

It was a huge success. I learned that within two months, 20,000 letters had arrived, and the morale of the men had never been higher!

Well, friends, the offer still goes. I've cleared it with Public Affairs Officer Col. Richard G. Hyde, who assures me that the servicemembers in Korea would welcome pen pals. So, make someone happy, and write a letter to a lonely soldier today. And remember, there are lonely women in our armed forces, too. Use the above address, and let me know if anything rewarding develops.

ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman in my early 30s with two children, ages 4 and 8. I am recently divorced and am now living with my ex-husband's father. (I'll call him Ralph.) When I say I am "living with him," I don't mean just sharing expenses either. To put it bluntly, we are sleeping together.

My question: Should my children call him Grandpa, Dad or Ralph? And how much should I explain to them about this situation?

Ralph thinks we should be open and honest with them, but I feel we should shelter them since they just went through the trauma of divorce.

IN DISTRESS IN INDIANA

DEAR IN: If your children have always called Ralph "Grandpa," they would probably be more comfortable calling him Grandpa for now.

Your children are undoubtedly much more aware of the situation than you think, so any attempts to "shelter" them would be useless. I vote with Ralph.

CONFIDENTIAL TO T.M.: You know you're getting old when a lady you've never met before is seated next to you at a dinner party and she asks which is your good ear.

Diabetes Association to study emergencies

Diabetic Emergencies will be the feature topic Tuesday when Coronado Community Hospital host the area chapter of American Diabetes Association, according to Evelyn Richardson, president.

The guest speaker Tuesday will be Denise Cox, director of Inservice and Patient Education for Coronado Community Hospital. The meeting at 7 p.m. will be in the hospital cafeteria and is open to the general public.

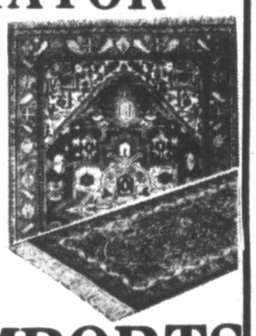

Two films to be shown include "Diabetic Emergencies and Insulin Injections", according to Ms. Cox.

"Diabetes affects about five percent of the population," Ms. Richardson said, "however, with early detection and treatment, it can be controlled."

She explained that diabetes occurs when the body does not produce enough insulin, the hormone necessary for the body to covert sugar to energy.

The American Diabetes Association Chapter last month featured another Coronado Community Hospital professional, when Dawn Hasebroock, Director of Dietary Services addressed the key questions of dietary control and food group substitutions so essential for diabetics to control their daily food intake.

Peeking at Pampa

Janice Rucker and rodeoing to together like Mom and apple pie. She is very busy promoting the High School rodeo which will be held in Pampa on Sept. 18 and 19. Janice's father, the late George Dillman, started her off with barrell racing and horses at a very tender age and her young daughter is following in Mom's footsteps. If you attneded the first night of our Top O' Texas rodeo you will remember the tiny blonde that carried the American Flag. This tiny 10 year old girl rides her horse, Fiddler, like a professional. She has an unusual name, Keziah, pronounced Ka - sha. This was an old family name that her great aunt, Lillian McNutt, gave her. Many of you will remember Lillian, now living in Houston, as the former dental assistant for many years to Drs. H. H. and L. M. Hicks.

Friends have been saying their goodbyes this week to Addie Lee Hopkins who is moving to Lubbock to be near her daughters, Ginger and Martha. Addie Lee moved to Pampa in 1930 as the new bride of James. A. Hopkins and lived at their ranch south of Pampa until 1949 when they moved into town.

There are so many things happening since the fall months have arrived. Mary Ann Boehmisch and Juanita Brower are often seen together lately as they are heading up the October 46th Annual Dioceson Convention of Catholic Women. Pampa is fortunate to be hosting over 300 lovely women from the district. Dona Cornutt already working hard to see that the annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet and Reception will be perfect his year. Bill Gainer from Austin will be the speaker this year, Bill Talley will present his Show Choir and everyone is asking "Who will be the Citizen of the Year?

If you want something special be sure and buy a copy of 1902 - 1982 Gray County Heritage Cookbook. More mouth watering recipes in this. Darlene Birkes along with others are to be commended for putting this book together. What a great thing for wedding and Christmas gifts....

Margie Gray excited over her anniversary gift.. a cabin at Angel Fire from husband Jack....New yards on Evergreen Street...so fresh with such beautiful yards. Bob and Marian Fugate with a new home on Chestnut ... working on a new yard. Dr. J. L. Chase excited when he talks about working with his beautiful roses. Everyone with an overflow of squash. How many different sizes, shapes and varities does this crazy vegetable produce. Apparently there were not enough squash bugs to go around this year.

Peggy Palmitier is already working on the Arts & Crafts Festival coming up for Pampa.

Everyone is talking about the great Labor Day Chautauqua event. This was truly the best family turnout events in Pampa history. Congratulations to Lee Cornelison and many others of the Pampa Fine Arts for their efforts on behalf of Pampa Families.

Joan Braxton is enjoying her mother, Charlene Crawford from Arlington, Texas. Mrs. Crawford attended the wedding of her grandson, Jimmy Braxton to Lillie Martin at the First Methodist Church last night.

Lois Strate...big and beautiful. She and L.D. will become parents for the first time this week...they hope.

Glenda Martin always has a smile for everyone. She works at Citizens Bank in the loan department.

Maxine Ethridge is recovering from knee surgery at her daughters home, Jan Green, in Fort Worth. Maxine was on a Eruopean tour and fell in Paris. Hope that the tour was finished.

Travis Jr. and Elaine have returned from their Santa Fe Vacation. They were present for Mary Jane Rose Johnson's opera performance.

Recent newcomer (in the last year or two) to Pampa are the delighfully personable Schnurrs, Pat and Sally. Pat's in business with John Ferguson and both couples are building homes across the road from the golf course.

Many Pampan puzzled for a long time about those houses, some speculating that they might be ultra - modern underground homes. But now everybody know they are going to be traditional and spacious.

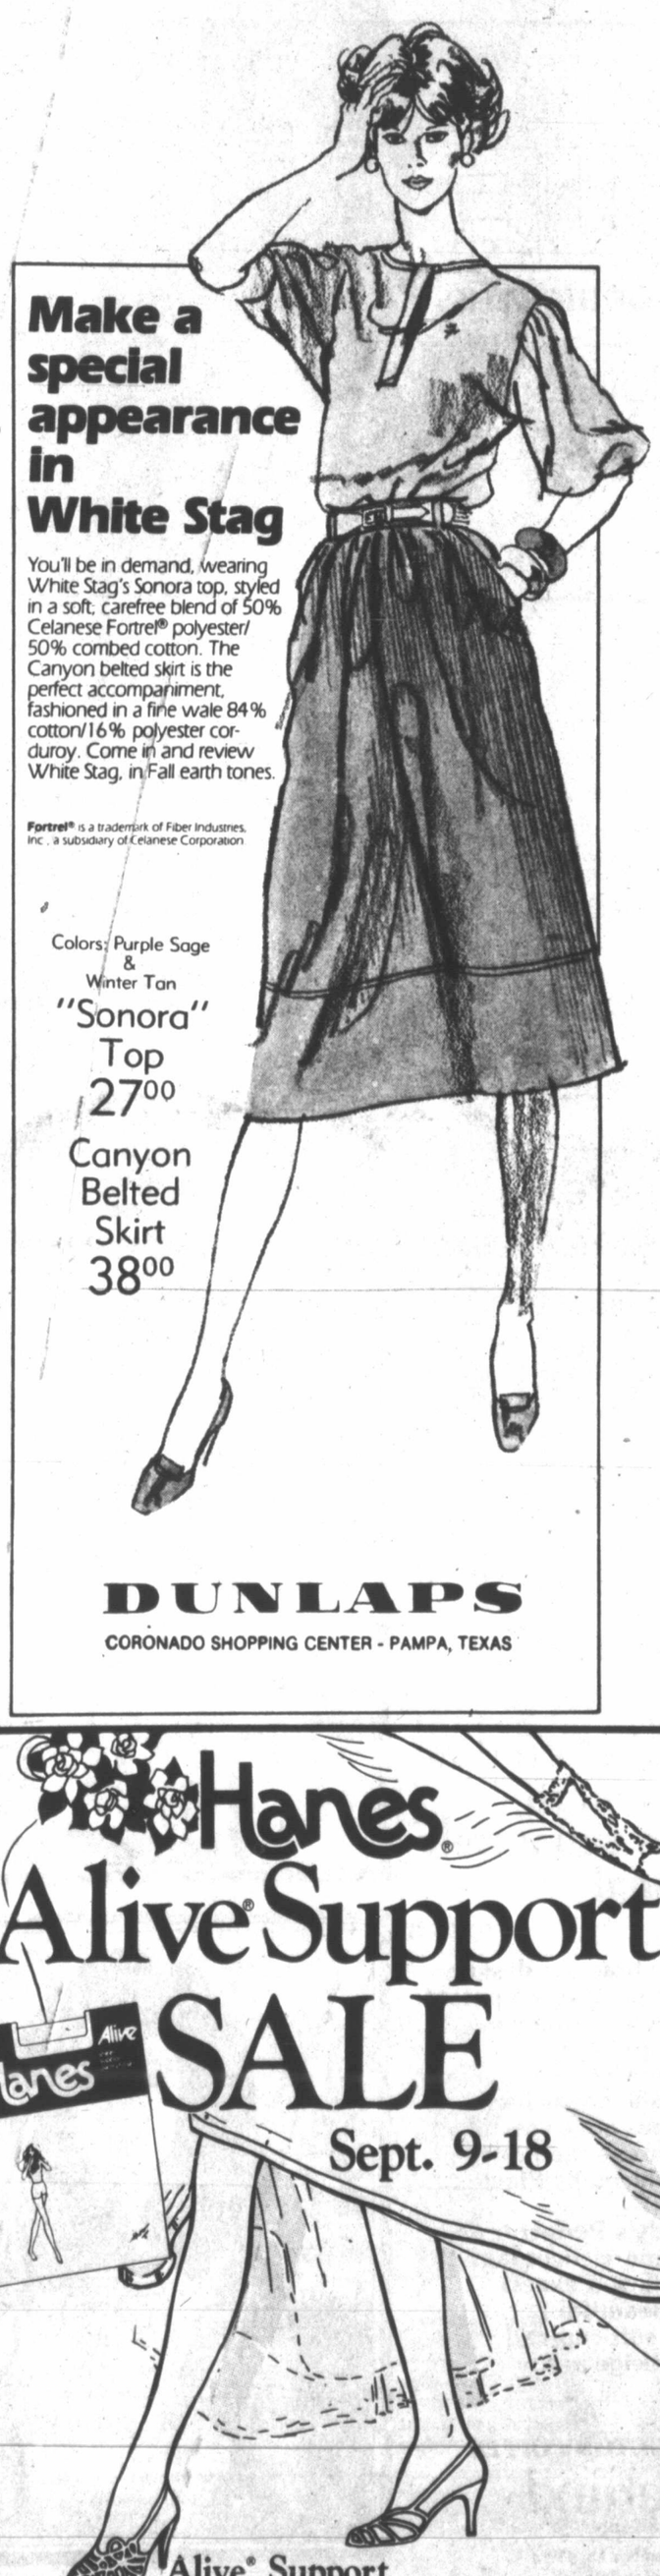

Pat and Sally came here from Iowa, where Pat was graduated from the University. They have three children — Andy who is three; Molly in first grade and Jennifer in fifth grade. They are living in a mobile home while their house is being built. Pat is an attractive brunette, outgoing and a jewel of a lady. The three Schnurr children have a special love for horses and recently purchased two of them from Marjie Ekleberry.

Marjie, twelve - year - old daughter of Doris and Chuck Ekleberry, is devoted to her horses, giving them more tender care than most animals enjoy. A few weeks ago she showed High Society Man in the Amarillo Quarter Horse Show and was point winner in the 18 years and under category. She won a blanket for the showing and placed first in showmanship and English bridle path hack, second in stake race, third in pole bending, English equitation and halter, and fourth in Western Pleasure, trail and barrels. What more could a twelve - year - old and her handsome horse win?

One of our lovely ladies in Pampa is Catherine (Kay to her friends) Monahan. She's a sister of Maxine Rose, you know. She's always so gracious, so friendly, so worthy of her many friends.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY SHARON BROCK!!

Pampa Police Officer Steve Chance stops to administer first aid to a youth who suffered a surface wound while socializing on "The Drag". (Staff Photo by Bruce Lee Smith)

"I get paid to enforce the law," he explains. "The law says if you're under 19 you don't drink."

He's had his eye on a group sitting in the back of a pickup on Francis Street for a couple of rounds now.

He sees a very young - looking girl holding a beer can.

"All right, sweetheart," he says, swings his car into a U - turn and stops by their pickup.

He was right, she was drinking. He takes the can away.

"How old are you?" he asks.

"Eighteen."

"What's the drinking age in Texas?"

"Nineteen."

He informs her that she could be arrested as a minor in possession, and that he's just going to give her a warning this time.

"But if I catch you drinking again, I'm going to take you to the station, and call your parents to get you out. Do you want your parents to have to come down and get you out of jail?"

"No."

He pours the beer out, arm extended, crushes the can and throws it. He talks to her male friend about supplying alcohol to minors. He gets back in the car and moves on.

"After you talked to those kids, I thought she was going to cry," our photographer says.

"So did I," says Chance.

He said the policemen who work the drag have good relationships with the people there — "most of the kids out here know us by our names," he said.

The kids agree, pretty much.

"Some of them's all right," one kid said. "Some of them's a pain in the..."

"I've never had the privilege of meeting any of the officers of the law," another said in a drunken slur.

But Chance's attitude toward the kids doesn't affect his attitude toward the law. "I don't get emotionally involved in anything I do," he said. "You can't, or you won't make the right decision."

"I personally take no pleasure in putting a juvenile in jail."

Chance makes the round a few more times, then stops at a car wash. About 10 youngsters are hanging around three pickup trucks.

He's out of the car in a flash. "What's going down, men, what's going down? I seen you with a beer can, where's it at?"

The stop is not productive, although Chance gives first - aid to a woman who cut her hand somehow.

Back in the car, he laughs. "Nobody's drinking beer, but there's two beers half - full in the back of that truck."

Later, he sees officer Oren Potter with lights flashing on a side - street and pulls over. Potter is standing by two despondent youngsters who are pouring beer after beer into the gutter.

"What you got, Orin?" Chance asks.

Potter comes over to the car, holds up two fingers triumphantly: "two twelve-packs," he says.

It's not all illegal. There are adults drinking beer on the drag, too.

They just don't want to go into the bars here.

Pampa bars and clubs, they say, are either too expensive for them or too risky.

"They need to have a little hangout in Pampa."

"That doesn't cost anything to get in."

"Where you can leave anytime you want."

What the town needs, they say, is "a good bar."

"Clean."

"With a good environment."

"And a good bouncer," one laughs.

"There's no place to go."

So they park with their stereos or their beer coolers. They get drunk, or stay sober and watch the drunks. Sometimes they blow off some adolescent energy in a fist fight. Or try to pick up girls (or boys). Or they come down after Sunday evening church services to find their friends.

"Most of us come down Friday or Saturday to see what everybody's doing the next day."

"If you don't know where somebody is, you'll find him here, and if you don't find him here, somebody will know where he is."

Or they ride around in a circle.

There's a boy driving the drag in a white pickup, around and around, all night. He doesn't stop.

He looks sort of lonesome. Nobody on the street knows who he is.

He's got several dozen yellow and blue courtesy lights glowing all over his pickup.

"That's the Christmas Tree," one kid says.

The drag theorized he might be from Lefors. "There's a lot of people here from Lefors tonight."

Like any young crowd, the dragsters can get pretty mean to outsiders, though.

"One time," a college man said, musing over his beer bottle, "a 'lowrider' drove through here... I didn't know the crowd had it in them. They were yelling at him, and cussing at him, and even threw some beer bottles at him..."

Chance said there are a lot of traffic problems on the street. Pedestrians in the roadway, speeding, improper turns and sloppy lane changing.

The kids always drive the direction opposite to the police cars. Once, Chance said, he and officer Mark King lined up their cars side by side and drove around the drag under the speed limit.

They only made one round before the traffic changed direction. When they changed to get back into the new flow, the traffic changed again.

Chance laughed. "Every one of those kids was kidding us about it. But they didn't speed, so it worked."

They're not very careful about littering. After a hard night on the drag, the parking lots and gutters are scattered with trash.

They use 'em up and toss 'em on the street. The sidewalks there are ashtrays, litter baskets, spittoons — and occasionally vomitoons.

At 1 a.m., when public drinking becomes illegal, they generally clear off and go home, and that's it.

"Sometimes I wish the parents would just come down here and look," Chance said.

Next weekend, it will start all over again.

Astro-Graph
by bernice bede osol

Your social world should be an extremely active one in the year ahead. However, you must not let it take precedence over your business affairs, nor should you bring pals into your commercial field.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Friends will find you a charming companion today, with one exception: You might not be too willing to share what you have with them. Predictions of what's in store for you in the seasons following your birthday and where to look for your luck and opportunities are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Good things could happen for you today in spite of yourself. Situations which you view negatively may actually turn out to be the opposite.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) In involvements with friends today, focus on the nice aspects of their personalities rather than on their flaws which, unfortunately, you'll be able to accurately spot.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'd be wise today not to discuss career matters with persons who are in no position to assist you. Talk only to those who can further your aims.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're a very good arbitrator today and your skills as an adjuster may be called for when two companions are unable to find a middle ground.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Tasks or chores which confront you today won't prove as difficult as you envision them to be. Do less thinking and more performing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Things could develop favorably today, and enable you to rectify a situation which thus far has not proven to be to your advantage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) One of your greatest assets today is your ability to see matters in their proper perspective. You'll not let small annoyances get blown out of proportion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Friends will find you a very charming and fun companion today. Not only do you know how to enjoy yourself, you can help lift their spirits as well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Because you are able to make the most of what you have today, your possibilities for personal gain look good even when the pickings are slim.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Although you may be reluctant to interfere, you may find it necessary today to step in and offer advice to someone who is having trouble finding the answers.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you're involved in a situation today where you feel you are not getting a fiar share of the returns, renegotiate the matter so that it balances out.

Former columnist is now 'talk of the town'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Thomas Meehan once worked for New Yorker magazine, writing its "Talk of the Town" column. Then he wrote the book for his first Broadway musical, "Annie," about America's most famous cartoon waif.

Then he and the show became the talk of the town.

In short order, Meehan won his first Tony Award, got rich and achieved almost every writer's dream — his own saloon, in this case a bar and restaurant here called the Gardenia Club.

"It's got an overhead fan. Every now and then I fantasize that it's Rick's Place," he says, referring to the smoke-filled joint Humphrey Bogart ran in "Casablanca."

He hasn't had much time lately to lurk in his saloon. He's been at home, writing the book for a new musical, inspired both by troubles over a movie and the belief that if at first you succeed, by all means try, try again.

"Annie II" is the new work-in-progress, a sequel to the musical that since its 1977 premiere has grossed nearly $200 million from Broadway and road companies, plus $9.5 million from the show's movie sale.

For this second effort, he's teamed up again with his Tony-winning "Annie" mates, lyricist-director Martin Charnin and composer Charles Strouse. He says it picks right up where the original left off.

"The first scene is really the last scene of the original, which ends on Christmas morning in 1933," he says. "We start with Mrs. Hannigan" — evil, larcenous, boozy orphan-tender by trade — "who has just gotten arrested. She comes out shouting bloody murder, vowing revenge."

Then, he said, it follows Little Orphan Annie, her dog Sandy, and all the others up to the fall of 1934, ending on Oct. 28, which by sheer concidence "is my daughter's birthday."

Sequels to big-hit films now seem the rule, not the exception. But you rarely find any on Broadway. The last specimen, in 1981, was "Bring Back Birdie," a 20-years-later postscript to "Bye Bye Birdie."

That second effort died fast. Same thing could happen to the "Annie" sequel. But what if it proves as big a hit as the original? Might there be an "Annie III," an "Annie IV," and ultimately an "Annie Goes on Social Security"?

Meehan laughs. "I don't think so," he says. "This might be it as far as I'm concerned. I'm not even sure this is a good idea, let me tell you right at the top. We're taking enormous risks, with critics and everybody else.

Unlike the original "Annie," which took 16 months to create and another four to get to Broadway, "Annie II" may come to town by October 1983, according to Meehan.

Burt Reynolds lives up to funny image

By Dick Kleiner

AUSTIN, Texas (NEA) — Nine hundred and ninety-nine people out of a thousand would be happy to be Burt Reynolds. But the thousandth is Burt Reynolds and he wants to be something more.

Not that he is unhappy with his life or with who he is — "I think I'm a pretty good actor now and I guess I'm the best Burt Reynolds around" — but he hungers to direct. He believes he is a better director than an actor, and that's his future.

"Someday," he says, "I'll be able to let my stomach go — and just be a director."

As is his style, he turns most things into jokes. It is almost impossible for him to be serious for any length of time, even about something as close to his heart and soul as his wish to be a major director.

"I really do want to direct," he says. "Actually, Tom Selleck has my old face now, so I think I would like to direct him."

He has directed some, of course — "Gator," "The End" and the recent "Sharky's Machine" — but all three of those films had Reynolds as star as well as director. He says he wants to direct a film he is not acting in.

"I've had some offers," he says. "(Steven) Spielberg offered me something. But it wasn't something I wanted to do. I'll wait for a really good one."

While he's waiting, he has pretty much his choice of acting roles. As one of the heftiest of box-office draws, he can pick and choose the parts he wants to do. With some limitations, of course. And those limitations can be difficult for him.

Because he has done so many comedies, and because those comedies have done so well at the box office, the big Hollywood wheeler/dealers want him to stick to comedy. He understands their thinking, much as he wishes it weren't so.

"The public just won't accept me in straight action films any more," he says. "Look at 'Sharky's Machine.' It was a good film, a real good film, but the public didn't want to see it. If I ever do that kind of movie again, I'm going to have to add some humor to it."

The peculiar thing about all this is that he had his first major success in a serious film — "Deliverance."

" 'Deliverance,' " he says, "was the film that was my own personal deliverance out of kaka. Until 'Deliverance,' I made junk."

But then he began doing funny things — both on and off screen — and the public loved him. Still does. Witness the success of his current release, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," in which he co-stars with Dolly Parton.

"Dolly," Reynolds says, "is such an upbeat, positive person that she thinks Hitler was a great painter."

He is very enthusiastic about the film he did after the Parton film. It is called "Best Friends," and he has another great blonde as his co-star — Goldie Hawn.

"I think," Reynolds says, "that 'Best Friends' is the best movie I have ever made. It had a great script, it was directed by a great director — Norman Jewison — and Goldie is absolutely wonderful to work with."

So, mostly, things are good with Reynolds these days. But there are always clouds hanging around over everybody's parade, and Reynolds is no exception. People always like to take pot shots at celebrities, and Reynolds is a first-string celebrity.

Recently, a man named Larry King — he wrote the original version of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" — has been sniping at him, for reasons Reynolds professes not to know.

"I don't think he wanted me to play the lead in the movie," he says. "I think he wanted Rip Torn."

But Reynolds says that he lets all the nasty words thrown at him roll off his back.

New TV hero

"When times are hard heroes are back in fashion," says Bruce Boxleitner, seen here with a close working partner on the set of the new TV series "Bring 'Em Back Alive." Boxleitner stars as Frank Buck, the legendary adventurer and wild animal collector. "I love it," he says. "I get to play Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper, John Wayne and Humphrey Bogart all at once." (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

'Bring 'Em Back Alive'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The other day I was on the jungle set in a dugout wrestling bad guys and fake crocodiles," says Bruce Boxleitner.

"I love it. I get to play Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Gary Cooper, John Wayne, and Humphrey Bogart all at once."

Boxleitner, moustachioed, his hair parted in the middle, wearing a pith helmet, jodphurs and knee-high leather boots, stars as the adventurer and wild animal collector Frank Buck in CBS's "Bring 'Em Back Alive."

It's set in 1939 Singapore, where the real-life Buck had his headquarters, hung out at the famous Raffles Hotel, and caroused with his closest friend, "H.H." (for His Highness), the sultan of Jahore.

Buck captured wild tigers, wrestled a king cobra, and once knocked out a giant orangutan with a single punch. In the 1920s and '30s he was a leading supplier of wild animals to zoos and circuses. Like Buffalo Bill, he had a wonderful sense of self-promotion and a flair for the romantic. He created the legend of Frank "Bring 'Em Back Alive" Buck through a series of books and movies, as well as by numerous newspaper and magazine articles.

As exciting as his real life was, this series puts him at the center of action as the British colony of Singapore becomes a hot bed of intrigue, German and Japanese spies, war jitters, and criminal masterminds just prior to World War II.

"When times are hard, heroes are back in fashion," says Boxleitner. "And I'm in the business of selling heroes this year. This is a campy show about a larger-than-life hero.

"This show's a blend of 'Ramar of the Jungle' and 'Casablanca.' Lots of spies, jewel thieves and smugglers. It's no heavy deal. It's not 'Hill Street Blues.' It's just a lot of fun. I think the time is right for it. I think people are getting tired of that other stuff on television. Even the prime-time soap operas are wearing down."

Another humorous 1930s adventure is making its debut on television this fall in the wake of the success of "Raiders of the Lost Ark." Stephen Collins stars as Jake Cutter, a soldier of fortune in ABC's "The Gold Monkey."

"Bring 'Em Back Alive" is such pure TV hokum that the public might think everything in it is phony. But there was a real sultan of Jahore, Buck did call him H.H. and they were best friends.

H.H. is played by Ron O'Neal and Clyde Kasatsu is Buck's friend and assistant, Ali, another character from real life.

Buck was born in Gainesville, Texas, in 1884 and went on his first safari in 1911. In the next 25 years he collected 25,000 animals and birds, including two rare white rhinos and the largest king cobra ever taken. He died in 1950.

How Elia Kazan views his success

By David Handler

NEW YORK (NEA) — Don't call him the greatest stage and film director of his generation, at least not to his face.

"There is no such thing," says Elia Kazan, the hard-nosed, opinionated and very gifted director of such plays as "A Streetcar Named Desire" and "Death of a Salesman," and films like "On the Waterfront," "East of Eden" and "A Face in the Crowd."

"I'm not the greatest anything, and I don't want to be. My books are what I do now. I want to write my books. That's all I want."

An astonishingly vigorous 72, Kazan is in the midst of his second career — novelist. He started at age 55 and has just published his sixth, "The Anatolian" (Knopf).

It is a continuation of his first novel, "America, America," which he made into a movie. It is the story of a young Greek immigrant who tries to find a place for himself and his family in New York City, 1909. As it happens, that place is in the rug trade.

"It's about my uncles and aunts, my people," says Kazan, who was himself born in Istanbul. "It's about what happened when they got here to America with their European idea of family. I grew up with them. I was a little kid in the corner getting a load of it. I remember the smells, the sights, the squabbles. You write what you know."

His uncle, Kazan says, conquered the New York rug trade and went back to Athens a wealthy merchant — only to be crushed by the Depression. "I saw the whole family go up and come down. My uncle ended up being some guy on the street giving tips on horses. I supported him."

From his immigrant family, Kazan says he inherited an insatiable hunger to succeed. He did. Now he sees a different America than the one he conquered. A passive one.

"I was driven," he says. "I struggled. I worked hard every day. I still do. People today don't work as hard as we did. The new immigrants have come to expect less.

"Maybe there's no way into American society now. Maybe it's full. I don't know. I just don't feel them pressing like we did. I hate to say it, but maybe people have come to depend on the welfare state."

And Kazan sees a different sense of family. "I think parents are delinquent now," he says. "They don't convey goals or self-respect. They have none themselves. They just sit there passively in front of the TV set, taking what's given to them. They don't do anything. They watch ballgames."

He sees this passivity reflected in the two arenas he once stood atop — Broadway and Hollywood. He has no stomach for either one of them anymore. Steers clear.

"I lost interest in the plays people were writing," he says. "The theater's changed. When I was in the theater, we thought the world could be changed. We spoke for the underprivileged. We would move humanity forward. There was hope. Today, there's no sense of things getting better through the effort of man. You wonder what kind of world we're raising our kids in."

Hollywood? "The standards have degenerated," he says. "I don't go see those kid films. I don't give a damn about special effects. They're for the 15-year-olds who want to sit together and not be frightened by the facts of life, not ask 'Who am I?' or 'What do I want to be?'

"I'm out of sympathy. I always started with a story. Budd and I (Schulberg, his collaborator on "On the Waterfront" and "A Face in the Crowd") worked four years on a script about Puerto Rico. Nobody would give us the money to make it.

"That's why I write books. Each one is an excercise in self-revelation. I enjoy them. I've always thought that one of the very few great things a man could do with his life is write novels."

Unfortunately, Kazan's novels have not been quite as well-received by critics as his plays and movies. He knows that. He doesn't care.

"You don't like it, OK. I don't need to be praised anymore. I live in the country. I feel good. I have a nice wife. All I want is to live to be 100."

Lorna Luft sings about her rainbows

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Generally, when a newspaperman interviews a Hollywood actor, he is supplied with a "bio" of that person — a canned biography from the actor's publicity people, listing all the vital statistics, high points, facts and fancies.

I have before me the bio of Lorna Luft, issued by her management — Hooker Enterprises Inc., which is run by Jake Hooker, who also happens to be Lorna's husband. It is a three-page affair, full of all the usual data, but there is one notable oversight. Nowhere does it mention that Lorna is Judy Garland's daughter.

Obviously, the young, blonde singer-actress wants to play down that relationship. And yet, when you talk to her, she is not reluctant to discuss her mother. The bio is obviously another matter to her; she apparently is saying in it that she is Miss Luft, who wants to rise or fall on the strength of who she is, not who her mother was.

Miss Luft is a young lady of talent. You realize that if you see her as one of the stars of the new Paramount Picture, "Grease 2." It has not been well-received by either the critics or the public, but Lorna is still pleased with it.

"I think it is better than the original 'Grease,' " she says. Then she adds: "I didn't care for the first one particularly."

For Lorna, the urge to perform and carry on the family tradition struck her suddenly, when she was 13. Before then, she says, she had no particular passion — "Oh, I wanted to be a nurse for about 20 minutes, until I saw some blood."

But when she was 13, the lightning bolt blasted her and she never recovered.

"I told my mother that day that I wanted to get into show business," Lorna says. "Her reaction was, 'Oh, no!' She knew how tough it was. She knew what she'd been through."

And Lorna knew what she was getting into. She had seen it from the inside. But she says that growing up with show biz all around you makes it seem like the norm. It was never strange to her, always familiar, always comfortable.

"To me," she says, "having photographers and press around and all that hoopla was never upsetting, because it was normal. It was the only kind of life I knew. So, even now, I never think twice about it."

She says one of the few bits of advice her mother gave her was that she should always be nice to reporters. (She is.) She says she cannot understand performers who get mad at the press and the photographers and scream and punch and kick.

"If anybody wants to take my picture," she says, "I am very grateful. Of course, I am talking about the legitimate press."

She does get upset at things written about her, and about her mother and sister (Liza Minnelli), that are untrue.

"I hate Mel Torme," she says, "for writing that book about my mother."

(Torme wrote "The Other Side of the Rainbow," which Miss Luft feels is full of distortions and untruths.)

"We collaborated with Gerold Frank on his biography of my mother," she says. "But Anne Edwards' book was another story. She never even knew my mother! Why would she write such a book?"

She and Hooker — "Look at me, I'm a Hooker!" — live in New York. She prefers New York. She doesn't like cars or driving.

"To me," she says, "the nicest words in the English language are 'taxi' and 'room service.' "

Miss Luft says she prefers the older generation of stars to today's crop. She still considers Cary Grant the sexiest man to have appeared on screen.

"Robert Redford is a very nice man," she says, "but that's about all. And Burt Reynolds — OK, he's another nice man, but I even dated him and he's nowhere near Cary Grant in my book."

Send Your Opinion To Austin

WHY WE'RE BACK IN AUSTIN

AUSTIN — Once again, poor planning has forced a special session of the Legislature. This time, we are in Austin because the Texas Unemployment Compensation Trust Fund, which pays unemployment benefits, is broke.

There are several reasons this fund is out of money. One is the high unemnployment rate in this state. True, others are worse off than we, but for Texas, the high jobless rate is very high.

The other reasons relate to the fund itself. The fund has not been well - planned in the past few years.

Texas employers pay taxes on the first $6,000 of each of their employees' wages. This money goes into the now - broke fund. Whenever the fund's assets drop below $225 million, the tax on this $6,000 is increased by 0.10 percent for each five million dollar deficit.

In other words, most employers normally pay six dollars a year for each employee. When the assets in the fund drop to $220 million, each employer pays his normal six dollars plus another six dollars. If the fund gets down to $215 million, each employer pays his normal six dollars plus an extra $12, and so on.

The fund is so low that employers might have to pay $150 a year for each employee, instead of the usual six dollars. This will be a harmful blow to the business community in Texas, to the tune of $1.216 billion.

The reason we are in this situation is poor planning. The fund has not changed its level of funding since 1957. It does not take an economist to see that the dollar is not worth what it was in 1957, and that the floor of $225 million and a ceiling of $325 million are inadequate. Salaries are larger now and so are benefits. We have a larger work force and more unemployment. The fund needs to be larger so it will have a cushion for economic slumps. This cushion would prevent having a massive tax increase every time we had a dip in employment.

The fund only taxes the first $6,000 in income. This makes the tax highly regressive; it hits poor people the hardest. Even though the employer pays the tax, the money ultimately comes from the employee. The way the tax is set up now, a person who makes $6,000 a year pays just as much as someone who makes $600,000 a year. Of course any increase in this tax base should be small, if the base is to be increased at all.

Poor planning caused this special session. It is too early to tell now whether this session will end in a "quick fix" or a permanent solution to the unemployment benefit crisis. It is a complicated system, which needs careful study to change. Whether this session will bring the opportunity for such study and considered change remains to be seen. We hope it will.

We want to hear your opinion of the unemployment fund's problems. Please write Seantor Bil Sarpalius, P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas 78711.
