Fourth candidate adds name Friday for at-large seats

A ...te for the Snyder school board came forward Friday after...oon--Ken Branam, pastor of First Baptist Church here.

Branam announced as an at-large candidate, bringing the list of those seeking these three seats on the board to four.

Also announced as at-large candidates are incumbent trustee J.D. Hinton, 57, a retired architect; Ruben Martinez, 37, owner of a well-servicing firm here; and Billy Bob McMullan, 60, who retired as Snyder High School ag instructor in 1986 after 33 years with the system.

Also announced for the District 1 board seat is Vernon James Clay, 40, an operator for Warren Petroleum.

Branam, 38, of 2607 34th St., has been pastor at First Baptist Church the past seven years.

More recently, he has been a vocal opponent of select aspects of the district's sex education curriculum, which is slated to be introduced in health classes at three grade levels this spring.

As of Friday, no candidates had come forward to represent District 4 of the city, comprised of areas served by Snyder ISD outside the city limits as well as the city residential developments located south of Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

The deadline to file for the five school board positions is next Fri-

101 business groups support prison

Support for the chamber's effort to secure a state of Texas prison in Snyder continued to grow following a month-long public information campaign.

The effort to locate a 1,000-bed regional detention center in Snyder is being conducted by the chamber's Industrial Economic Development Committee chaired by the Rev. Miller Robinson.

As of Friday, a total of 62 group resolutions have been obtained. In addition, 101 business and employee groups have responded with resolutions of support, bringing the total to 163.

The 101 business and employee group responses are a result of a letter mailed to chamber of commerce members last week by Chamber President Elizabeth Potts.

Jack Denman, chairman of the public information campaign, said he continues to be impressed with the wide-range of support for the project.

Roy Baze, coordinator of the project, said Friday that public support continues to swell and estimated support in excess of the 95 percent range.

"Our public information effort has been built on solid information. We have attempted to be informative, constructive and straight-forward," Baze said.

The chamber committee views the chamber project as a means to reverse the downward economic spiral being felt in the county in the past year.

Should a 1,000-bed facility be built, the estimated annual payroll would be $6 million. In addition, it is estimated that the facility would purchase $3.5 to $4 million per year locally in goods in services.

Also, leaders have projected that the proposed prison would interface as revenue producers for two existing institutions in

Judge downplays federal judgeship

District Judge Gene Dulaney has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the federal judgeship based in Lubbock, but he stressed Friday he has taken no steps to seek the post.

Dulaney, the Republican who won the 132nd District Court seat here in November of 1985, commented, "I was elected to this job. I'm happy with it and don't contemplate leaving it."

Dulaney's name has surfaced along with four or five other Republican attorneys and judges in the area served by the federal court.

The post has come vacant as U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock has assumed senior judge status, which entitles him to sit in on cases at his choosing.

Since his change in status, effective Jan. 1, U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas has assumed the administative duties of the court.

A successor to Woodward is expected to be named by President Ronald Reagan by late spring or early summer.

While the appointment of a federal judge is made by the president, the traditional selection route is for the U.S. senator of the affected district to make the nomination.

Dulaney speculated friends of his in the party had mentioned his name as a candidate to U.S. Senator Phil Gramm, a Republican from Bryan-College Station.

"I've not applied for it and I'm not pushing it," Dulaney said Friday.

The judge's seat is for the U.S. District Court, Northern District of Texas, Lubbock Division.

It serves a wide area of West Texas to include Lubbock, San Angelo and Abilene.

Woodward has served as one of eight U.S. district judges serving the Northern District. Others, in addition to Sanders, are Eldon B. Mahon of Fort Worth; Robert W. Porter of Dallas; David O. Belew Jr. of Fort Worth; Mary Lou Robinson of Amarillo; Jerry Buchmeyer of Dallas; and A. Joe Fish of Dallas.

Four federal judicial districts serve the State of Texas.

City to begin absentee vote

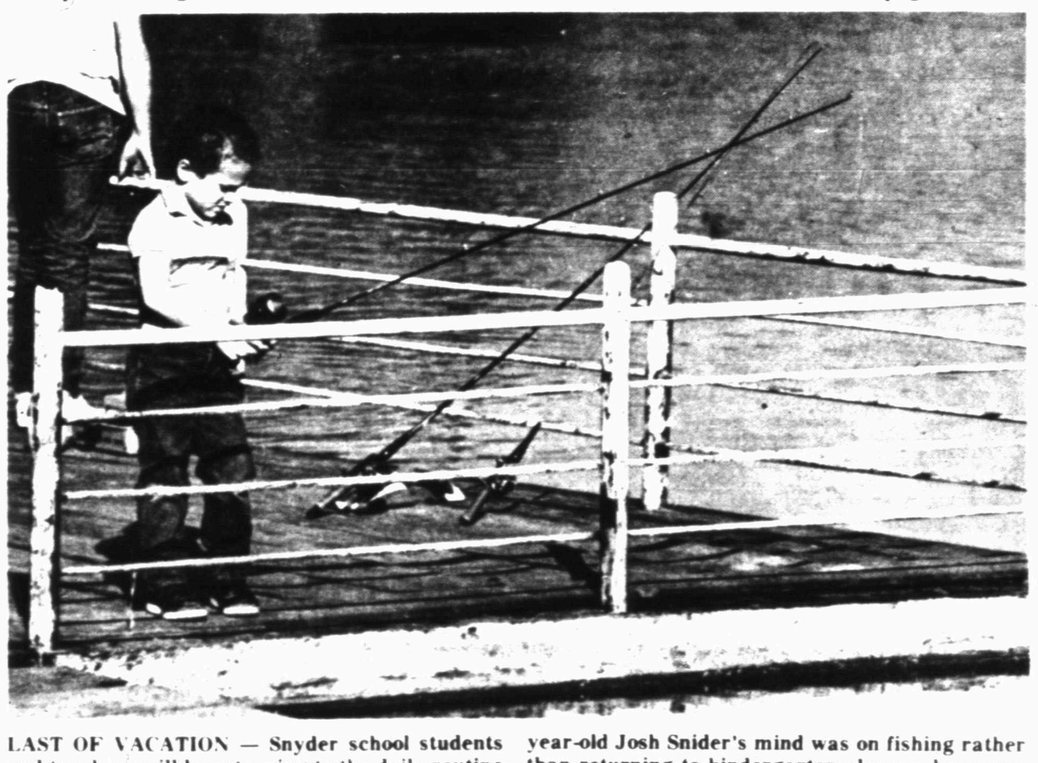

Monday will mark the beginning of absentee balloting for the Snyder city council election slated April 4.

These votes may be cast at city hall during normal business hours through March 31.

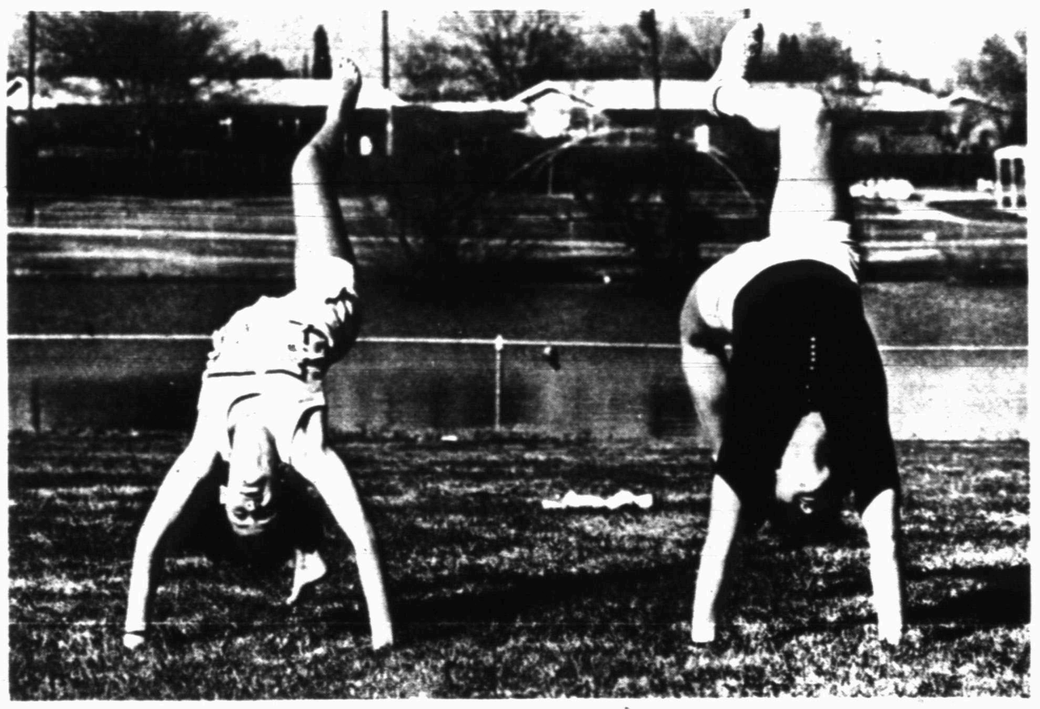

At-large seats on the council, to include two councilmen and the mayor's post, will be decided.

For mayor, incumbent Councilman Troy Williamson will be unopposed.

Candidates for the two councilman posts include, in the order they will appear on the ballot, Jim Tully, H.D. (David) Hines, the incumbent, Evelyn J. Malone, Paul Zeck and John Johnson.

LAST OF VACATION — Snyder school students and teachers will be returning to the daily routine of classes and homework Monday following a week's vacation for spring break. FLIPPING OVER BREAK — Kelly Myers and Becky Gandy spent part of their spring break "flipping" over the joys of being out of school. But, come Monday, they will join students and teachers returning to the classroom here. (SDN Staff Photo)

WTSB bank board votes officer slate

Officers for West Texas State Bank were re-elected last week by a vote of the WTSB board of directors.

The board conducted its annual meeting Thursday and the announcement regarding officers was made Friday.

H.W. Cargile and Martin Brooks were named senior chairman of the board and chairman of the board respectively.

Bill Parker was also named bank president and chief executive officer; and John Greene was again named executive vice president.

In addition, senior vice presidents were named to include Dale Stuard and Mark Estes. The bank's list of vice presidents includes Robert Pendleton, Charles Henderson, Syble Bley, Don Head and, in in-active status, Bill Eiland. Derwin Thompson was named as vice president and cashier.

Assistant vice presidents renamed were Evelyn McCommon, Barbara McGee and Shirley Miller.

In addition, assistant cashiers renamed were Eddie Atkinson, Bobby Beard, Betty Lou Fleming, Rosemary Kohl, Joyce Pace, Reece Orsburn, Shawn Ragland and Dale Williamson.

BCD-coliseum change is new court proposal

Seeking to draw additional business to the Scurry County Coliseum, county commissioners Monday will discuss consolidation of the facility with the Board of County Development (BCD).

"We hope to place responsibility with the people who use it," said County Judge Bobby Goodwin. "We hope they will be able to get it used more and generate more revenue."

If commissioners approve the action, the five-member BCD board — which includes Morris Light, Dale Stuard, Arel (Red) Faver, Jack Smartt and Jack Denman — will become responsible for coliseum management.

In other action Monday, court members are to review the juvenile department budget.

Monday's regular session is set for 10 a.m. in the courthouse.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

Conscience is that still, small voice that sometimes is too loud for comfort."

Snyder will miss Jerry McWilliams.

Owner of Burgess-McWilliams Pharmacy on College Ave., McWilliams, 45, died Wednesday from head injuries suffered last Saturday after apparently being kicked by a horse.

We knew Jerry less than a fourth of his life, but he made a positive impression on us and on others he met. During the more than 10 years we've known him we've had the opportunity to observe him both at a distance and first-hand.

Jerry was one of the first businessmen we met in Snyder, and he gave us a warm and sincere welcome. It was about that time that Jerry served as president of the Snyder Lions Club and it was there that we learned to appreciate his attitude of patience.

McWilliams' profession meant that he was often confined to long hours inside his business--but we observed that he carefully maintained the delicate balance of a demanding business and a successful family life.

When Trey and Mike were younger, we have vivid memories of driving past their home on El Paso Street and seeing Jerry and the boys play catch and shoot goals in the front yard.

Athletics were a big part of life in the McWilliams family. Jerry did his part as pee wee football coach, in little dribblers and in youth baseball. McWilliams was an active member of the Snyder High booster club and served as president. McWilliams and wife, Paula, have traveled untold miles to cheer on Tiger teams.

In addition to his family, McWilliams also found time to serve his community. Like many business owners, Snyder was good to McWilliams, but he also paid his community dues.

He provided sound thinking and leadership as a member of the Snyder city council. We served with him on the chamber board and the Snyder school board, and again he was a progressive anchor in the decision-making process.

McWilliams made his mark on Snyder, and the community is better off that he passed our way...but he'll be missed.

Ask Us

Q — Is it legal to allow voters to register to vote until March 13 for the Snyder school election when the deadline for the city council election was March 6?

A — The law in Texas is that voters must register at least 30 days prior to any scheduled election. A federal judge may waive this requirement, and this was done in the school ballot to allow more time for voter registration.

SS visit set

U.S. Social Security representatives which visit the Senior Citizens Center will be in Snyder Tuesday.

The SS visits, once conducted twice monthly, have now been cut back to once per month and Tuesday's visit will be the only one scheduled in March. The next visit will be April 14.

Country Pizza

The Country Donut shop, 318 East Highway, is now under new management and, effective Monday, will become Country Pizza and Donuts.

Taking over the business is Mohammad Ilyas, former owner of Shakey's Pizza here.

He said in addition to doughnuts and other pastries, a pizza takeout business will be added. There is no charge for delivery and the number to call is 573-1131, the former number for Shakey's.

Hours of operation will be from 6 a.m. until midnight.

Fish fry set

The annual Golden K Kiwanis Club fish fry is due this Sunday.

It will be from 11 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. at the Western Texas College cafeteria. Admission will be $5 for all you can eat. Children under 6 will be admitted free.

Ira one-act

The Ira ISD theater arts class will present its one-act play Monday at 8 p.m. in the new gym.

This year's production is entitled "Tartuffe" taken from Moliere's 17th Century comedy about a hypocritical holy man who has tricked a prominent French family.

Prior to the play, there will be a short PTA business meeting with a Texas life membership program to be presented.

Textbook ban appeals slated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge's ruling banning 44 textbooks from Alabama public schools stems from a growing nationwide effort by the Far Right to "restrict the freedom to learn," a Washington-based constitutional liberties group contends.

People for the American Way, a non-partisan group claiming 250,000 members, said in a report Friday that the ruling by U.S. District Judge W. Brevard Hand is only the latest of 44 incidents in 30 states since 1982 in which school materials have been attacked for promoting secular humanism as a religion.

The report, released during a news conference to announce plans for appealing Hand's ruling, said 15 of the attacks on school materials or courses have come during the current school year in 12 different states.

John Buchanan, a former Republican congressman from Alabama who is chairman of People for the American Way, said his home state is only one battleground in the "witchhunt against secular humanism."

"All across the land, educators have heard this cry raised against ... anything that helps a child learn how to think, how to exercise judgment, how to use that child's imagination," he said.

In the Alabama case, Hand ruled March 4 that the 44 home economics, social studies and history books violate the U.S. Constitution's separation of church and state because they advance the ideas of humanism as a religion.

The Alabama Board of Education voted 5-4 Thursday to appeal the ruling. The board's attorneys have asked Hand to allow the banned textbooks to remain in the classroom for the final 10 weeks of the current school year.

Waco utility seeks way out of project

WACO, Texas (AP) — A Waco utility has asked the Nuclear Regulatory Commission for permission to pull out of the Comanche Peak nuclear project and to order a refund of the $223 million the utility has spent.

After asking earlier this week to drop out of the project, Brazos Electric Power Cooperative Inc. wants the NRC to order TU Electric Co. of Dallas to refund $223 million the Waco utility has spent on the $7.5 billion nuclear project.

NRC officials say the requests took them by surprise.

"I really don't understand it," said Frank Ingram, an NRC spokesman. "To the best of my knowledge, the NRC has never ordered one utility to buy out another utility's interest."

Ingram also said it was unclear whether the NRC actually had the authority to carry out Brazos Electric's request.

But Brazos Electric officials maintain the NRC does have the authority to rule on the requests.

"Our attorneys researched it and believe this is within the realm of the authority of the NRC," said Frank Bushnell, a spokeman for Brazos Electric.

Dick Ramsey of TU Electric said his firm had not seen Brazos Electric's petition to the NRC.

"But I don't think it's any surprise they have an interest in getting out of the project," Ramsey said.

TU Electric filed a suit in state court in Dallas May 1986 that charged Brazos Electric with breach of contract. TU Electric has asked the court to rule that Brazos Electric is obligated to continue to pay its 3.8 percent share of the nuclear plant's cost.

Archbishop to tell pope about Hispanics in U. S.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Archbishop Patrick Flores said Friday he will tell Pope John Paul II about Hispanics in the United States when he meets with the pontiff next week in Rome.

Flores and 17 other U.S. bishops will meet with the pope, who will tour 10 U.S. cities, including San Antonio, next September.

The bishops will leave for Vatican City on Sunday and will meet with the pope and his staff between Tuesday and Sunday, Mar. 22, Flores said.

The bishops will give the staff written background on the different cities and talk about the people who will greet the pope.

Flores, the first Hispanic to be named a bishop in the United States, will talk about Hispanics, about the social work of the church and about the development of seminarians.

"I will give him a historical perspective of the first Hispanics in this area ... and what has happened along the years," he said. "We're trying to bring out the fact that Hispanics no longer are limited to a geographical area.

"We are pointing to the problems of drug abuse, problems of alcohol, the problems of violence that are affecting the Hispanic community, as well as affecting members of other communities of the United States," he said.

The bishops also will have a dinner meeting with the pontiff and will celebrate three Masses with him.

Flores said meeting the pope before he tours the United States will be historic.

Bishops usually provide only written background on the areas the pope was scheduled to visit.

"This is the first time they have attempted to do it it this way," Flores said.

"We don't know to what extent this would be better, but we thought we could do the two things: prepare the material and go there personally for this dialogue. I think it will be much better," Flores said.

Inmates get personal TVs in cells as part of court order

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — The Texas prison system, unable to comply with a court order that demands more recreation rooms at two prisons, instead will be putting private televisions in prison cells in a project costing $123,000.

"It's part of the court agreement where we won't have to give the inmates additional recreation rooms," prison spokesman Charles Brown said Thursday. "It is like a trade-off."

"It's a heck of a lot cheaper," added F. Scott McCown, an assistant Texas attorney general.

Under a contract with a Houston electronics firm, Electrotex, the Department of Corrections is buying 1,650 televisions — 12-inch black-and-white sets costing $74.75 each.

The project last year was nixed by state officials as too controversial. However, officials now say the televisions are being put in because it was impossible to build new recreation rooms at the two prisons — the Walls Unit in Huntsville and the Ramsey I Unit in Brazoria County.

Inmates who will get the sets live in cellblocks where they have no access to indoor recreation rooms which have wall-mounted color televisions.

Electrotex President Donald Simon said the sets are highly durable and tamper-proof and have no speakers or antennas.

Instead, they have jacks for headphones inmates may plug into. The sets are hooked to a special satellite dish.

Even after 22 years, pain still lingers following old slaying

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — After 22 years, the pain lingered from the night in 1964 when Albert Branscum fired three shots into his wife, then put the barrel of a newly bought pistol beneath his right jaw and pulled the trigger two more times.

A jury deliberated an hour Friday before convicting Branscum, 56, of murder with malice aforethought in the shooting death of his 29-year-old wife, Glenna.

The jury then deliberated three hours before sentencing Branscum to five years in prison — the lightest sentence possible short of probation. He could have been sentenced up to life in prison.

Branscum was never prosecuted on the original murder charge because his suicide attempt caused brain damage and local officials said the wound left him a "mental vegetable" and incompetent to stand trial.

But after two decades in which Branscum had all but been forgotten, his wife's brother asked authorities the status of the case. An officer drove to Konawa, Okla., where Branscum was taken two decades ago to rehabilitate, and found a man who was running a salvage operation and, though still injured, able to drive his own wrecker.

Branscum, who testified that his wife had just left him and was about to file for divorce before the shooting in their Pampa home, showed no emotion as the sentence was handed down, but his children wept openly.

Branscum did weep when he took the stand Thursday and defense attorney John Mann of Amarillo showed him a photograph of his wife.

"I loved her so much. I worshipped the ground she walked on. It was just like heaven. It couldn't be any better if you'd wanted it to," he said. "It just came to a point where there was no way to go, nowhere to turn. I just couldn't except it (Glenna leaving)."

Mann of Amarillo called 11 witnesses to the stand in the punishment phase, most residents of Konawa, where Branscum lived for the past 20 years. All testified that Branscum had been a law-abiding citizen of the community.

Seminole County, Okla., Undersheriff Roy Dulen told the court he has known the defendant for 40 years and said Branscum has never been arrested or in trouble in the county.

From all appearances on the witness stand, Branscum still grieved for the woman for whom he had professed so much love more than two decades ago.

He had married the former Glenna Faye Hollon in a civil ceremony at the Gray County Courthouse in 1960 after a brief courtshop.

It was the third marriage for each. they had six children between them. Soon after they were married, they had two sons. But, according to testimony, problems soon set in. Branscum, sometimes working 90 to 120 hours a week as an oil field truck driver, was seldom home.

Glenna Branscum, the testimony showed, would sometimes leave the children alone while her husband was at work. Sometimes it was for only a couple of hours, sometimes for a couple of days.

"It was wonderful, but it got to a stage when I come home, I never knew what I'd find," Branscum testified.

Mann asked, "Any idea why she left?"

Branscum shrugged. "She just wanted a life of her own. She just liked nightlife better than she liked family life."

Uranium mill reported safe

TILDEN, Texas (AP) — Chevron U.S.A., which wants to open a uranium mill in south McMullen County, said there is no basis for fears by environmentalists and local ranchers that their groundwater will be contaminated by acid and radioactive wastes.

Jay Reynolds, manager of Chevron's uranium mill at Panna Maria, 60 miles to the northeast in Karnes County, said Chevron is not polluting groundwater near the existing plant. The Panna Maria plant has never drawn a citation by regulators for serious violations, Reynolds added.

South Texas rancher Jeff Sibley is leading a fight to prevent the opening of a uranium mine on an 800-acre site near this McMullen County town 70 miles south of San Antonio.

Sibley said during a Texas Railroad Commission hearing Thursday that he fears acid and radioactive wastes might leak into groundwater. Sibley oversees thousands of acres of ranchland his family owns in McMullen, Atascosa and Duval counties.

"We feel like this land is our heritage and that's why we want to protect it," Sibley said.

Chevron has asked the Railroad Commission for permission to take over a license issued in 1982 to Anaconda Copper Co. to operate a uranium mine near Tilden.

Anaconda's original permit called for the company to mine, mill the ore and dispose of the waste all on one site. Chevron wants to mine uranium in McMullen County, then ship it to its Panna Maria mill.

Sibley hopes to delay the opening of the McMullen County mine until the Texas Department of Health has completed a water sample study there.

The railroad commission regulates the strip mine and the Texas Department of Health regulates mills and related waste dumps; they make licensing decisions separately.

Reynolds argued that the mine would stimulate the economy by providing more jobs.

He questioned Sibley's complaints.

"With those kinds of arguments, you never would have developed the United States," he said. "You never would have built railroads. ... There's a trade-off on everything you do."

Ore from the mine would be shipped to a mill in Panna Maria, 60 miles away.

Environmental groups have joined Sibley in trying to slow the storing of radioactive wastes in South Texas. They are calling for more accountability by state and federal agencies that oversee uranium mines and mills.

About 30 ranchers also turned out Thursday for the hearing, which was called on Chevron's request.

Sibley and other ranchers also are fighting to slow the dumping of radioactive waste at other South Texas sites.

Before the Chevron mill and "tailings" pond that stores mill waste was opened at Panna Maria in 1979, Reynolds said, the pond's natural clay lining was tested by private engineers and state regulatory agencies to make sure acid would not seep through.

"We've never been cited for any serious violation in any form or shape," Reynolds insisted, although inspectors have made suggestions and comments on minor "housekeeping" matters within the plant, located in Karnes County.

Reynolds said Chevron's plan to haul ore from the McMullen County site would produce less than 2 million tons of waste that would be dumped in the 30-foot-deep tailings pond at Panna Maria.

Ranchers waging war on radioactive waste dump

TILDEN, Texas (AP) — A group of ranchers is battling Chevron Inc. and the state in an effort to thwart a uranium mining operation that would dump radioactive leftovers into a waste site.

Chevron Inc. has asked the Railroad Commission for permission to take over a license issued in 1982 to Anaconda Copper Co. to operate an 800-acre uranium strip mine in South McMullen County.

Although Chevron has not specified its plans to the commission, the company plans to haul uranium ore to its Panna Maria mill in Karnes County and dump the remaining waste in its adjacent disposal pits.

But area ranchers believe that the Panna Maria dump site is leaking toxics into a sand aquifer and poisoning the water supply.

About 30 ranchers turned out Thursday at this town about 70 miles south of San Antonio for a public hearing on Chevron's request.

Jeff Sibley, a third-generation McMullen County rancher and president of the Texas Energy Alliance, said allowing Chevron to haul more ore to Panna Maria would create more problems.

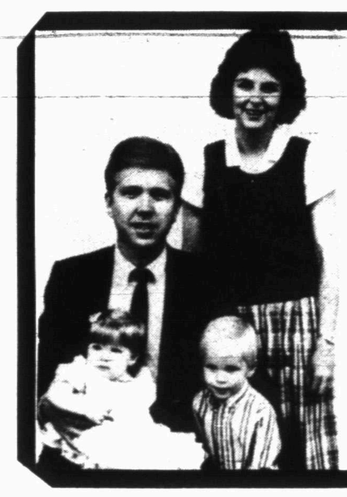

"We feel like this land is our heritage and that's why we want to protect it," Sibley said.

Sibley oversees thousands of acres of ranchland his family owns in McMullen, Atascosa and Duval counties.

He said numerous state agencies involved in the licensing procedure have added to the problem.

The railroad commission regulates the strip mine and the Texas Department of Health regulates mills and related waste dumps and they make licensing decisions separately.

Tunnel opened to save toads

HAMBLEDEN, England (AP) — On a misty morning in the Thames River valley, Lord Skelmersdale stood in a muddy field with a toad in his hand Friday to open Britain's first specially built toad tunnel.

The 10-inch diameter tunnel, which runs 20 yards under a busy country road, will save the nocturnal creatures from being crushed by cars as they make their way from the woods to spawn in a nearby lake.

"I'm delighted to open something that is the very first. It's a unique occasion," said Skelmersdale, parliamentary under-secretary of state for the environment.

He applauded the Fauna and Flora Preservation Society for "getting this project under the ground" outside Hambleden village, 35 miles west of London.

At one point, the minister suddenly passed the toad to someone else and wiped his hand on the grass.

"It wet his hand — they usually do when you hold them," explained Tom Langton, the society's toadmaster.

Langton brought a pet toad from London for the ceremony, because Hambleden toads are hibernating in the woods. When the weather warms up later this month, they will make their way to the lake, road or no road.

"They move only at night when there's no moon and hundreds of them are killed. It's awful to see," said Ann Cook, a villager.

Langton said it was estimated that 20 tons of toads are killed each year on Britain's roads.

Local Poker Run begins March 22

The second annual Harley Owners Group Charity Poker Run will begin at noon Sunday, March 22, at Winston Park, east 37th off College Avenue. Events will run throughout the afternoon.

Registration for the run will be $5. Proceeds will be donated to local charities. Drawings, field events and awards ceremony will follow the run. Concessions will be provided.

This event is sponsored by the Snyder chapter of the Harley Owners Group which is an international non-profit organization sponsored by Harley Davidson Motor Co.

Local merchants contributing prizes are Bob's True Value Hardware, Clark Lumber, D&D Auto, Chapman's Chevron, Hastings Books and Records, Key Bros., L&L, Pro Parts, Red Faver's Fina, Southern Electric, and Wilson Motors.

Other merchants donating prizes are H. D. Shop in Big Spring; Kent's H. D. in Abilene; Graves H. D. in Lubbock; Best H. D. in Ft. Worth and B&M Cycle in Snyder.

All motorcycles are welcome.

Bridge announcement premature

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An announcement that the U.S. State Department had issued a permit for a new $6 million eight-lane international bridge was "premature" and no such permit has been granted, officials said Friday.

The announcement was in a press release by U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm, and was confirmed Thursday by El Paso Mayor Jonathan Rogers.

Rogers had said a 15-member delegation of State Department and Mexican federal officials would meet in El Paso Friday "to dot the i's and cross the t's" on the projected bridge construction.

But on Friday, Nestor Valencia, director of the city's planning department, said the announcement "may have been a little premature."

The delegation, which met in El Paso Friday, is on a fact-finding trip inspecting all bridges over the Rio Grande and other international crossings along the U.S.-Mexico border, said Perry Shankle, country director of Mexican affairs with the State Department.

Shankle said the delegation inspected the two-lane Zaragosa Bridge, which city officials are seeking to replace, along with the other three bridges connecting El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

Calls to Gramm's office in Washington were unanswered and Rogers was not available for comment on the mix-up.

El Paso wants to replace the Zaragosa Bridge with a wider one to relieve traffic congestion.

Speaker of House accused of playing favorites in crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright has paid close attention to the crisis facing the savings and loan industry in Texas and across the nation, ruffling some feathers in the process, congressional officials said Friday.

In a recent development, the Fort Worth Democrat asked Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., to draft a bill that would provide an injection of money into the ailing Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. along with instructions for more flexible regulation by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The FSLIC currently has reserves of $1.9 billion to cover insured deposits of $890 billion in the nation's 3,000 S&Ls. It also has pending requests for more than $2 billion in loans to troubled thrifts.

Texas alone has 66 institutions that have negative net worth, according to the bank board.

Since Annunzio is the second ranking Democrat on the Banking Committee's subcommittee on regulation of institutions, by going to him rather than Chairman Fernand St. Germain, D-R.I., Wright bypassed normal channels.

"The speaker called St. Germain and said, 'We've got a problem,' and St. Germain told him to get lost," said Curtis Prins, an aide to Annunzio.

"Then the speaker asked Annunzio to come up with a bill and he came up with one in six hours. When the speaker asks you for help you do it."

St. Germain was out of town and unavailable for comment Friday, and his chief aide on the Banking Committee, Jake Lewis, had no comment on the speaker's role in S&L legislation.

Wright was not immediately available for comment Friday. His office's response has been only that the speaker has always acted to further what he feels is the best interest of the entire S&L industry.

Prins said Annunzio and Wright never discussed helping out Texas S&Ls, but rather that Wright views the problem as a national one which should be addressed by the Democratic House leadership.

"We've got an S&L problem that's not only in Texas," Prins said. "Everybody's talking about Texas, but we've also got a problem in other parts of the country."

Meanwhile, two columns written by syndicated writer Jack Anderson quoted from "confidential reports" he says were provided to the Banking Committee from the bank board that take the speaker to task for attempting to shield two Texas S&Ls.

U.S. Army made 'partner'

AUSTIN (AP) — A University of Texas research facility will have a much better chance at receiving federal funding now that the U.S. Army has taken it on as a partner, two Texas congressmen said Friday.

The Center for Electromechanics at Balcones Research Center was designated a Center for Excellence by the U.S. Army, U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and U.S. Rep. J.J. "Jake" Pickle announced Friday.

The designation is a commitment to long-term funding and a partnership between the United States Army and the University of Texas, Gramm said during a news conference at the research facility.

"It will be the vehicle for a continued growth in our research. It's an indication of how important that research is to the defense of our nation."

The designation stems from the center's work in developing an electromagnetic railgun which would electrically fire a projectile, said John Gully, deputy director of the center. A projectile fired by the gun would travel 25 times faster than a projectile fired from a conventional gun, which fires through a chemical explosion, Gully said.

The center is developing the gun for use by the Army as a tactical weapon, he said.

Directors plan March 21 meeting

Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers Association District Two will meet Saturday, March 21, at the Mertzon Community Center in Mertzon. Meeting registration will begin at 10 a.m., with the business portion of the meeting getting underway at 10:30 a.m. The noon meal will be hosted by Irion County TS&GRA directors and West Texas Wool and Mohair Company.

The program will include TS&GRA officers on the immigration law and H-2 program, an update on imports and marketing, a report from the Dues Task Force, and a review of current and proposed state and national legislation by State Senator Bill Sims.

Directors to serve the district for the coming year will be elected at the close of the meeting. Frank Beaver of Snyder is currently serving as a director.

NCAA Tournament roundup...

Kansas slaps Cougars, 66-55

ATLANTA (AP) - Freshman Kevin Pritchard nullifed Houston's excellent first-half defense on All-American Danny Manning and sparked No. 20 Kansas to a 66-55 triumph over the Cougars in the first round of the NCAA Southeast Regional basketball tournament.

"Pritchard was the story," Houston Coach Pat Foster said. "We did not do a good job of mactching up with him."

With Houston's huge front line holding Manning to only four points in the first 20 minutes, Pritchard took control, scoring 15 points in a 26-9 burst over the final 11 minutes that gave the Jayhawks a 34-21 halftime lead.

Pritchard didn't begin his deadly shooting until the 10:37 mark after Coach Larry Brown had pulled him from the game briefly with instructions to "calm down and keep taking your shot."

"I was jumpy," Pritchard said of his start.

"Today was the best I've shot," Pritchard said. "They were denying Danny the ball, so I had a lot to do with it in the first half."

The victory sends the Jayhawks into Sunday's second-round action against Southwest Missouri State, a 65-60 winner over No. 13 Clemson.

"It was a good feeling knowing Danny had only four points and we were up by 13 at the half," Pritchard said.

Foster said his Cougars "got rattled. We came apart at the seams in two stretches. Going in, we felt we would have to play zone and slow the game down."

Pritchard gave Kansas a 12-12 tie with his first basket, a 14-footer in the lane 10:37 before halftime.

The 26-9 run began a half-minute earlier when Cedric Hunter scored from the lane.

Pritchard, averaging only 9.7 points per game, scored 11 points over the final five minutes of the half and finished the game with 17 points.

Kansas, 24-10, led 34-21 at halftime and Houston, 18-12, was never able to get closer than seven in the second half, the last time with 13:05 left at 42-35 on a basket by Greg Anderson.

Manning, who had only three shots in the first half, finished with 12 points, 11 under his average. Hunter also scored 12 and Chris Piper 10.

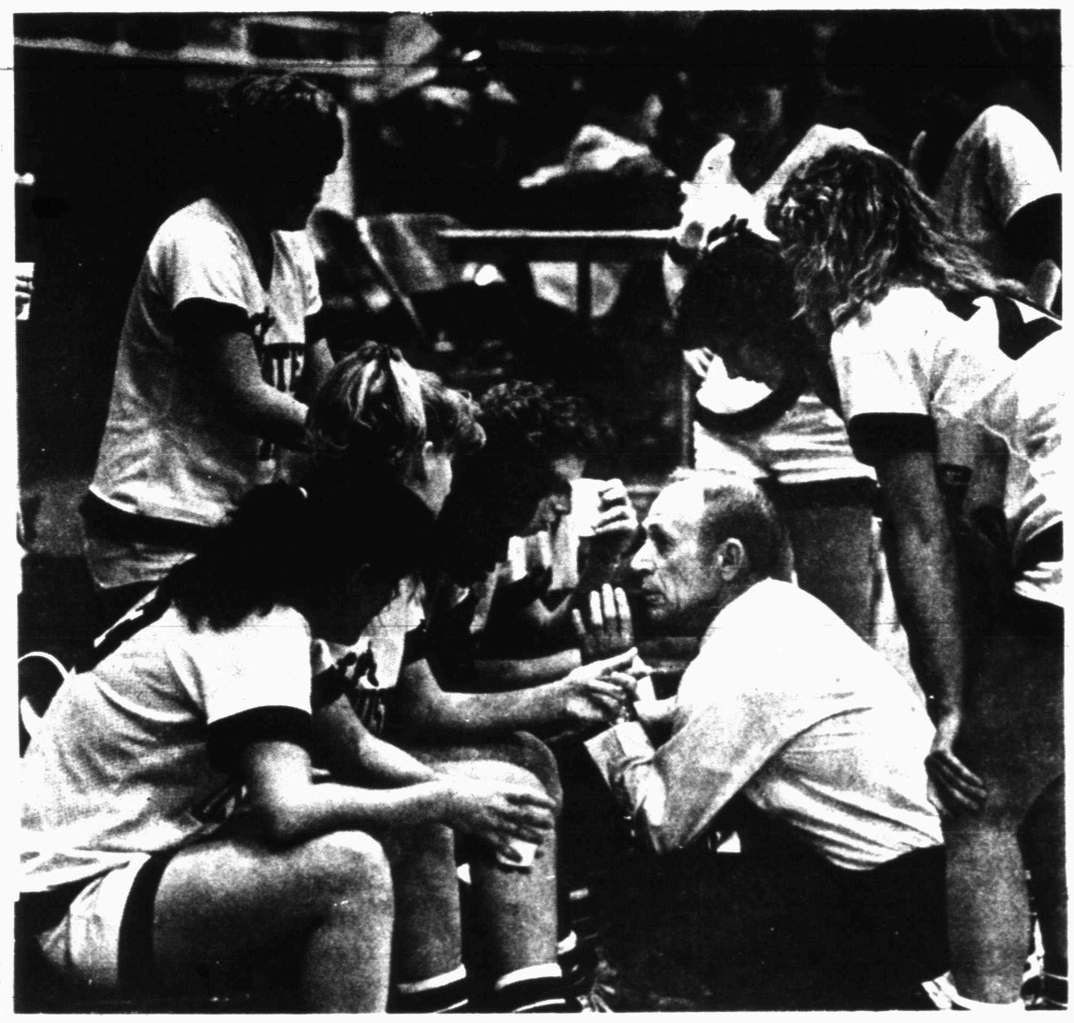

Rickie Winslow scored 21 to lead Houston, which got into the tournament when UCLA beat Washington in the Pac 10 tournament final last Sunday. Anderson scored 18.

In the Midwest Regional, St. John's nipped Wichita State 57-55, No. 8 Temple downed Southern University 75-56 and Louisiana State tripped Georgia Tech 85-79.

In the Southeast Regional in Atlanta, Southwest Missouri State upset No. 13 Clemson 65-60, No. 20 Kansas beat Houston 66-55, No. 4 Georgetown blasted Bucknell 75-53 and Ohio State ripped Kentucky 91-77.

In the East at Syracuse, No. 7 Purdue defeated Northwestern 104-95, Florida downed North Carolina State 82-70, Western Kentucky nipped West Virginia 64-62 and homestanding Syracuse held off Georgia Southern 79-73.

In the West Regional at Tucson, Ariz., sixth-ranked Iowa crushed Santa Clara 99-76, Texas-El Paso scored a 98-91 overtime victory over Arizona, No. 12 Pittsburgh trounced Marist 93-68 and Oklahoma tamed Tulsa 74-69.

STRATEGY SESSION – Coach Kelly Chadwick takes his Western Texas College Dusters to the March 16-21 Women's NJCAA National Tournament in Senatobia, Miss. this week. The Dusters, 29-3 and ranked fifth in the nation, play a second-round game at 4 p.m. Tuesday. See related article below. (SDN Staff Photo by Noble Young)

Coach Chadwick hopes lengthy delay won't hurt Duster's chances Tuesday

By BILL McCLELLAN
SDN Sports Editor

Kelly Chadwick has been to the Women's NJCAA National Tournament before. He knows what to expect, and he knows that his Western Texas College team is facing an uphill battle.

He likes WTC's chances, but is concerned that time, rather than an opponent, may make it tougher on his team.

"We'll have had 12 days off from the time we played in regionals until the time we play in the national tournament. That always hurts a team," said Chadwick, whose Dusters take the Howard Coliseum floor in Senatobia, Miss. for a second-round game at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

They play either Lees-McRae or Shelby State, which meet at 11 a.m. Monday in a first-round contest.

"I really wish we didn't have this bye," said the coach. "When we get there the other team will have already played a game and they'll have gotten rid of the tournament jitters.

"But there is another way to look at it. We'll be there Monday and we'll see them play. They won't get to see us play. And, maybe by watching some games and being there we'll get some jitters out that way," said Chadwick.

It could be an advantage, not having to play in the first round.

Play Dunbar Saturday evening...

Tigers edge Levelland to book title match

Coach Albert Lewis' Tigers were set to play Lubbock Dunbar in Saturday's championship game of the Snyder Baseball Tournament, but it didn't look like it for a while.

The Tigers dropped a five-run lead in the fourth inning, made it up again, then almost booted another five-run lead again before edging Levelland here Friday night, 11-10.

"Whew. I didn't think we were going to make it for a while there," said Lewis, after Levelland's four-run rally in the bottom of the seventh came up a point short.

"Both teams battled back well. They've got some great athletes and tremendous speed," noted the coach.

Snyder did a respectable job on the basepaths, too. In fact, the Tigers scored five of their last six runs on passed balls or wild pitches as Levelland suffered through control problems on the mound.

The Tigers trailed 6-5 in the top of the sixth before Brad Gartman and Van Echols singled to give Snyder momentum. Next-up Scott Lanier walked, and the Lobos swapped starting pitcher Tim Prado for Andrew Ochoa.

Snyder didn't put the ball in play again in the inning, yet managed five runs - all on missed connections between pitcher and catcher. Gartman tied the score on a passed ball and David Martinez walked to restack the bags. That scenario kept repeating itself as Ochoa missed the mark and Echols ran in; then Kenneth Pickering walked. Ochoa finally retured the side, but not until Snyder had taken a 10-6 advantage.

The Tigers got insurance - and they would need it - in the seventh inning. Pinch runner Troy Burton scored what would eventually be the winning run on a sacrifice fly by Lee Fletcher. Burton had come into the game for Lanier, who walked aboard.

Walks were almost the death of the Tigers, too, though. Pickering, Snyder's third pitcher in the game, opened the bottom of the seventh by walking Teddy Latham and Ronnie Mata. Levelland loaded the bases when Dane Dewbre singled to left field.

It became an 11-7 game as Pickering issued a base-on-balls to Jay Fortner, forcing Latham home. The big right-hander was able to strike out Jeff James, and grabbed a second out when he picked up Michael Shepherd's slow roller and flipped it to Fletcher to force out Mata coming home.

The fireworks weren't over, however. Robbie Velardez kept the Lobos in the game with a well-hit double that brought in three runs. Prado came to the plate representing the winning score, but he hit the ball sharply to Gartman and the short stop made a perfect throw to first base for the final out.

"We're just glad to be in the championship game," said Lewis. "We showed a lot of character by coming back and then holding them off. But they showed character, too, by almost coming back on us again."

Snyder had taken a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Echols reached on a fielder's choice, stole second, took third on a routine ground out, and scored on a wild pitch.

Four more Tiger runs came in the third stanza. Echols made his way around again as he singled, advanced when Lanier walked, and scored on a David Martinez basehit. Pickering followed with a three-run shot that cleared the left field fence.

Levelland tallied in the bottom of the third for four runs, including a one on a leadoff home run by Mata off Snyder starter Skip Coward. Three more singles and a walk brought Coach Lewis out to the mound and he called for Albert Rodriquez, who pitched until Pickering replaced him at the start of the sixth inning.

Gartman, Echols and David Martinez all accounted for two hits apiece for Snyder, which collected nine in the game.

Snyder 11, Levelland 10

Snyder	1 0 4	0 0 5	1	11	9	3
Levelland	0 0 4	2 0 0	4	10	10	0

Snyder: Coward, Rodriquez, Pickering and Fletcher. Levelland: Prado, Ochoa, Rodriquez and Velardez.

WP: Rodriquez. LP: Prado. HR: Pickering, Mata. Dbl: Velardez.

Levelland managed 10, led by Dewbre's three-for-four effort.

In other tournament games Friday, Pecos stopped Lamesa 6-2 and Dunbar clipped Lubbock High 11-7 in eight innings.

Softball meeting slated March 23

Entry fees for the Snyder Men's Softball League are due at the next league meeting, March 23 at 7 p.m. in the Texas Electric Reddy Room.

Fees are $275 per team.

No other teams will be accepted after March 23.

Razorbacks overcome huge deficit to defeat Arkansas State University

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) - Junior guard Allie Freeman was on the Arkansas bench with the Razorbacks down four and 1:39 showing on the clock when he spotted Rose Richardson, wife of the Razorbacks' head coach.

"She looked like she was real nervous," Freeman said. "I said, 'Hey Mom, it's going to be OK.'"

Freeman was right.

The Razorbacks, down 21 midway through the second half, caught Arkansas State University inside the final minute and beat the Indians 67-64 in overtime Friday night in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

"I'm a believer that it's never over until it's over," Freeman said.

He was one of the few of the 9,218 who believed Arkansas could still win when Reggie Gordon made a 15-footer from the baseline to put ASU up 51-30 with 10:43 remaining.

Three freshmen got the job done for Arkansas down the stretch.

Ron Huery, who took only one shot in the first half, made five field goals in the final seven minutes and Cannon Whitby, who celebrated his 20th birthday Friday, made back-to-back 3-pointers during the rally. Whitby's two baskets whittled a 15-point lead to nine with 5:54 left. It was still 11 with 4:02 remaining when Huery hit a 3-pointer that made it 58-50. Whitby's two free throws and a layup by Mike Ratliff after a steal cut the margin to four. Rhon Johnson made the front end of a one-and-one but missed the second and Huery nailed a 3-pointer. Johnson missed the front end of a one-and-one and Huery's 19-footer tied it at 59 with 59 seconds left.

Mario Credit, another freshman, made three of his six field goals in overtime to give the Razorbacks their first lead of the night at 61-59.

"They're just babies. I love theses babies. They're gonna get big one day," Coach Nolan Richardson said.

Arkansas, 19-13, faces Nebraska in Lincoln on Tuesday in the second round. Arkansas State finishes 21-13.

DUSTERS VIE TUESDAY

"If we can win and keep winning that bye could really help. If you get in the finals and you've had a bye and the other team has played since the first round then it's to your advantage. You've got to have a lot of depth to play that many games in a row," he pointed out.

Chadwick knows almost nothing about either Lees-McRae or Shelby State, but he rarely scouts a team anyway.

"Scouting is real popular with major college coaches, I know," said Chadwick. "But it's hard to tell just how good a team really is. Not many teams play the kind of defense we do and you can't tell that much about a team when you see them play against a different defense. One girl may look real good against one team but not against another. By scouting, you can sometimes overreact. You try to stop one player and you turn another one loose."

The Dusters will try to overcome the 12-day layoff by playing deliberate ball in their first game.

"I think it is real important for us to set the tempo of the game early. When we work the ball we are going to get a real good shot because we have so many good shooters," he said. "We want to use the clock and make the (opposing) defense work. It takes tremendous discipline for a team to play intense defense for 22 to 24 seconds. Most teams can't do it. I think we can do it when we're on defense because we run a 30-second drill in workouts and the girls know exactly how long 30 seconds is."

Chadwick's approach to the tournament is simple, but it has been effective all year.

"We're going to do what we're going to do and we're going to try to do it better than what they do. That's my philosophy. I know we are capable of playing good basketball. If we're executing, we're hard to stop. And if somebody just is quicker or taller, then that's personnel and there's not much you can do about that," he said.

Dribblers play in March 21 tilts

Snyder Boys Little Dribbler Basketball League will hold its All-Star Games Saturday, March 21, in the high school gym.

Admission to the games will be $2 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets are available from all Little Dribbler players and will be sold at the gate.

The Minor League game will tip off at 6 p.m. and will be followed at 7 p.m. by the Major League game.

Tigers vault to 16th at San Angelo event

SAN ANGELO -- Snyder's Tigers, sitting in 20th place after 18 holes, climbed to finish at 16th in the San Angelo Golf Classic here Friday.

The Tigers shot a first-round score of 367 at Bentwood Country Club but turned in a 350 over the final 18 holes at San Angelo Country Club for a total 717.

Midland Lee ran away with the tournament crown, shooting a 627 over the two days. Bobby Gee of Lee took medalist honors with a 150.

Andrews carded a 635 to come away with second place. The Mustangs were led by Mark Burgen's 151. In third was San Angelo Central No. 1 with a 644, followed by Hereford with a 654.

Twenty-two teams completed the 36-hole tournament, including San Angelo Lake View which finished 15th with a 711; Fort Stockton, 19th with a 728; and Big Spring, 20th with a 730.

Individually for the Tigers, Mike Trull shot rounds of 83-89 for a 172. Wade Hatter, who turned in a 92 on Thursday, trimmed 10 strokes off his score for an 82 over the final 18 holes and came home with a 174. Ken Meckley shot 95-89 for a 184 and Marc McQueen, shaving a 97 down to a 90, had a 187 total.

Next action for Snyder will be March 21 when the Tigers open District 2-4A play in Lamesa.

Soviet officials are to stand trial

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet official said Friday that those reponsible for the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster will go on trial soon.

Andranik Petrosyants, chairman of the State Committee for the Utilization of Atomic Energy, told a news conference he did not know how many people are being prosecuted, what the charges are or when the proceedings would begin.

"All I can say is that it will be soon and it will be in Kiev," he said.

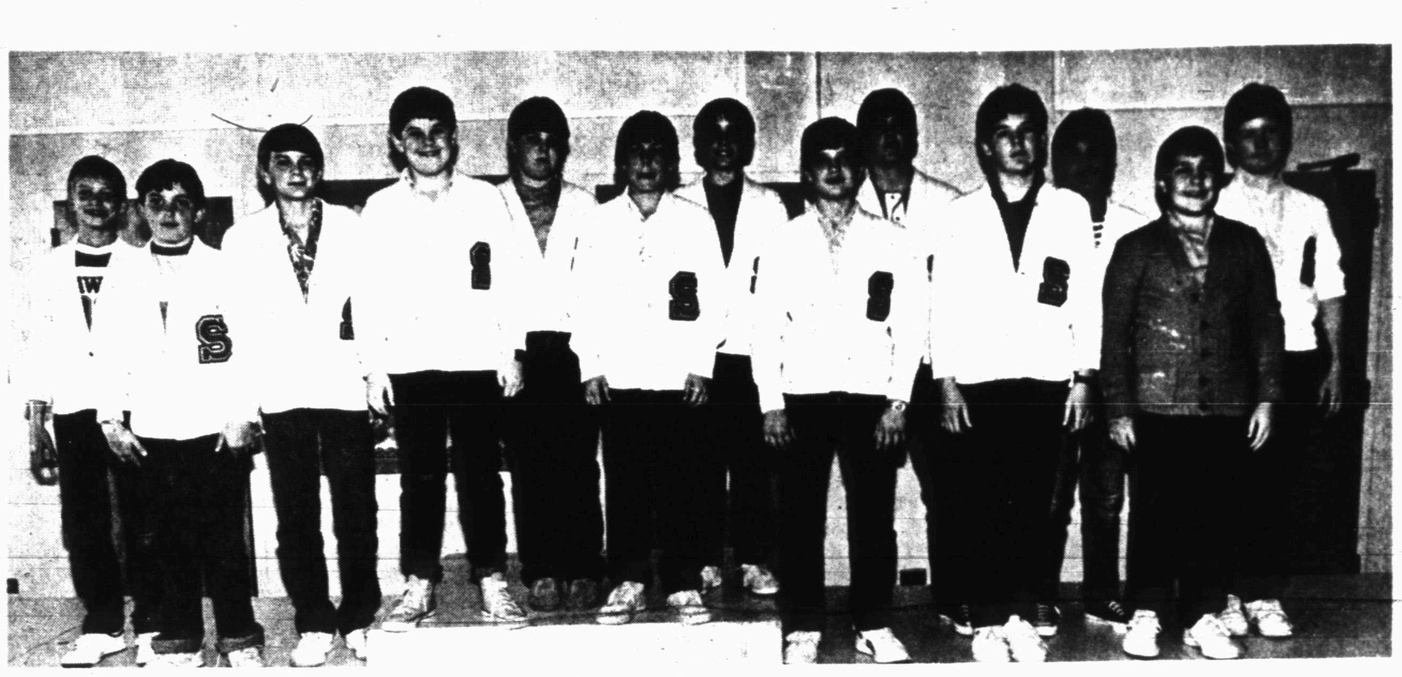

The world's worst nuclear accident destroyed the No. 4 reactor at Chernobyl on April 26. Two workers were killed on the spot and at least 29 other people died from radiation-related illnesses. Hundreds of victims were hospitalized after being exposed to harmful levels of radiation.

Soviet newspapers have reported that at least six senior plant officials, including the director, were fired after the accident. Petrosyants declined to say whether any of these officials would be prosecuted, but he repeated official statements that blamed the accident entirely on human error.

His news conference was held to discuss the visit of 11 American nuclear energy experts who toured the Chernobyl facility and other nuclear plants and training institutes. The Americans arrived on Feb. 27.

Delegation chief Fredrich Bernthal, a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the visit was aimed at expanding cooperation on nuclear safety.

Bernthal said his group had only a brief tour of the Chernobyl station, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

Proposal to abolish boards draws fire

AUSTIN (AP) — A leader of the Texas House declared himself "a little disturbed" by an Austin legislator's bills that would abolish the boards of 10 state universities and place the schools under the direction of two newly created nine-man regional boards

The legislation proposed Friday by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, "ain't going nowhere," said Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, the speaker protem of the House.

He expressed dismay that Ms. Delco included the proposal among an avalanche of last-minute bills that were filed Friday, the deadline for submitting bills for this session of the Texas Legislature.

The Delco bill would, effective Sept. 1, create a new "University System of the North" and "University System of the South."

Losing their regents and coming under the control of the new northern system would be Midwestern State University, Wichita Falls; East Texas State University, Commerce and Texarkana; North Texas State University, Denton; Texas Woman's University, Denton; and Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine, Fort Worth.

In the southern system would be Corpus Christi State University; Texas A&I, Kingsville; Laredo State University; and Pan American University, Edinburg and Brownsville.

For East Texas State, the bill also would prohibit the offering of freshman or sophomore programs on the Texarkana campus. The bill would restrict the metroplex computer program to those programs approved by the Coordinating Board "and that are non-duplicative of programs offered in the Dallas educational area."

The board would be empowered to establish different rules for the operation of the facilities and programs in each location.

Berlanga said he thought he made it clear to Ms. Delco that there are some delicate negotiations under way on the structuring of higher education in South Texas and that such a bill could cause problems.

"We need a consensus, and we don't have that right now," he said.

Delco is chairwoman of the House Higher Education Committee and a member of the Select Committee on Higher Education. However, Berlanga is vice chairman of the powerful House Calendars Committee, which schedules the flow of legislation to the House floor.

"It may make it out of committee, but it ain't coming out of Calendars," he said.

The Delco bill leaves open the question of where the two systems' headquarters would be located.

Larry Temple of Austin, chairman of the College Coordinating Board, Chairman Larry Temple of Austin said Ms. Delco told him Wednesday of her intention to file the two bills.

Temple saw some merit to her proposal.

Ms. Delco, he said, is not trying to change the basic status of the schools but just saying that it makes more sense to have one governing board over each of the five universities, rather than five boards of regents.

The Delco bill calls for each of the two created systems to be governed by a nine-member board of regents appointed by the governor with confirmation by the Texas Senate. The regents would serve six-year terms with the terms of three expiring on Feb. 1 of every odd-numbered year.

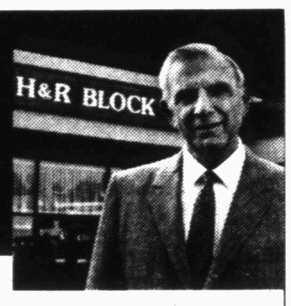

The bill would abolish existing boards of regents of each university. Existing boards would continue to serve only until the first meeting of the new board.

"The present governing system doesn't work and needs to be changed," said Temple, who also served as chairman of the Select Committee on Higher Education.

That committee went on record for putting universities with the same purpose under the same board of regents. That also would have streamlined the governing system in Texas higher education and made it more efficient, Temple said.

"But if people disagree with that idea, we ought to come up with some different kind of system," he said, adding that in that case, "the regional approach has some appeal and merit to it."

Support grows for prison plan

GILMER, Texas (AP) — Poor counties like Upshur may end up going "belly-up" because of budget-wrecking trials such as the one pending against Jerry "Animal" McFadden, worried officials said.

One day after a pre-trial hearing concerning the capital murder case against McFadden last week, Upshur County commissioners were asked for more money to continue with the case. Prosecutors say they need over $1 million to do the job properly.

"We simply don't have the type of money they want," said Commissioner Gaddis Lindsey said. "That's 25 percent of the county's overall budget. We don't have that kind of money and we don't know where we are going to get it."

Commissioners are scheduled to meet in special session Monday to discuss the dilemma, but Lindsey said he doesn't know what solutions will come out of the meeting.

"We set up our budget each year to pay for our county expenses and we are having a tough time just making ends meet," Lindsey said.

"Our revenue has already declined about 25 percent (from decreased oil and gas revenues), and now we have a $1 million trial bill dumped on us. McFadden isn't in our budget. None of these trials are budgeted. You just don't figure stuff like that in at budget time."

ISD vote signup to end Friday

day at 4 p.m. Immediately following that deadline, places will be drawn for the April 4 ballot.

The deadline to register to vote in the election passed Friday.

The April 4 election will implement an interim voting plan approved Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock.

This plan constituted a settlement between the district and plaintiffs filing a voter discrimination lawsuit against Snyder ISD in October of 1985.

Under the agreement, the seven-member board will be comprised of four elected to represent single member districts and three elected at-large.

Two of the current five school board members will remain on the board after the April 4 ballot. Remaining will be Mike Jordan, incumbent board president, and Charlene Light.

They will represent two of the four newly created single member districts based upon their place of residence.

Of the two remaining board members, G.A. Parks Jr. indicated last week he would not be a candidate again; and Allen Grimmett, who lives in the newly created District 4, has not voiced his intent.

Remaining dates related to the April 4 vote include:

—March 20: the last day for candidates to file.

—March 24: the first day for absentee voting.

—March 31: the last day for absentee voting.

—April 4: polls open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. with the election consolidated with the city ballot at city hall.

Friday includes four accidents

Four minor traffic accidents were reported in Snyder Friday.

Involved in the first — at 9:55 a.m. in the 1900 Block of 25th St. — were a 1984 Ford driven by Aloys F. Leugers of Abilene and a 1975 Buick driven by Sheila D. Richardson of 2905 Ave. X.

The second mishap occurred at noon on the parking lot of Everybody's Thriftway.

Involved in it was a 1976 Chevrolet driven by Olen Horn of Snyder which struck a parked 1979 Ford owned by Betty Carrisalez of 605 19th St.

Friday's third mishap occurred in the 3500 Block of College Ave. at 2:54 p.m.

It involved a 1977 Ford driven by James Alfred Simpson of 2113 41st St. and a 1986 Dodge driven by Dennis Gideon Alvarez of Colorado City.

The parking lot of the Plaza Truck Stop at the intersection of Huffman Ave. and U.S. Highway 84 was the scene of the fourth accident just after midnight.

Involved in it were a 1980 Mercury driven by Craig Kent Watkins of 204 35th St. and a 1980 GMC driven by Russell Don Loveall of 129 20th Pl.

No injuries were reported from any of the Friday accidents.

In 1940, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson drew the first number — 158 — in the first peacetime military draft in U.S. history.

Iran-Contra witness received quick American residency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Albert Hakim, who has been granted immunity in the Iran-Contra case, became a permanent U.S. resident nine years ago without going through the normal bureaucratic red tape even though he'd once been deported, records show.

Hakim, an Iranian-born businessman, was granted permanent U.S. residency status on Jan. 22, 1979, on the grounds that he had a job skill that was scarce in the United States, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

Citing privacy regulations, INS spokesman Duke Austin refused to reveal the skill that allowed Hakim to obtain residency, a key hurdle in gaining citizenship. Hakim was naturalized on Dec. 18, 1984.

The regular five-year waiting period for permanent residents to become citizens was shortened to three years because Hakim married a Korean-born American, the records show.

Austin said Hakim's application for permanent residency, which was approved the same day it was considered, did not contain a certification from the Labor Department, which categorizes the jobs.

A government official involved in immigration, speaking on condition he remain anonymous, said it was rare, but not unheard of, for people who are granted residency under the so-called "sixth preference" to avoid obtaining the labor certification.

About 27,000 people are granted permanent residency each year under the special work provision, but the categories change depending on economic conditions.

Hakim, a college dropout, once described himself in court papers as "wheeling" and "dealing."

Twenty-six years before he gained citizenship, Hakim was deported after his student status was revoked. Officials at California Polytechnic State University in San Luis Obispo, Calif., informed the government that Hakim had failed to meet requirements to remain a student.

School officials said Hakim attended the school from 1956 to 1958 but did not receive a degree.

Hakim has been given limited immunity by the special congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra case.

He is believed to have extensive knowledge and records pertaining to the financial arrangements involved in the secret sale of arms to Iran and apparent diversion of profits to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaragua government.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the leading Republican on the committee, said the panel has been in contact with the attorney for Hakim, who has not appeared publicly since the Iran-Contra case began.

Other officials expressed confidence that within the next four to six weeks the committee will have acquired extensive knowlege of the financial arrangements, prompting speculation that congressional investigators expect a cooperative witness once immunity has been provided.

Three bikes said missing

Police are investigating three bicycle theft reports filed Friday.

Dawn Fish of 3110 Ave. U filed the first of those at 10:02 a.m. She reported a 20-inch BMX bike valued at $100 taken from outside her residence.

Janet Sisson of 3766 Dalton Dr. filed the second report at 2:10 p.m.

Reported missing from outside the Sisson residence were two boy's bikes with no value estimated.

In other action Friday, city officers jailed three suspects for soliciting without a permit and one for driving while intoxicated.

Auto burglary probation given

A 23-year-old Snyder man was given three probated prison sentences after entering guilty pleas to three counts of burglary of a vehicle in 132nd District Court last week.

Jay Elston Jones of 2905 Ave. X entered guilty pleas to charges of burglarizing vehicles in August and September of 1986.

He was placed on felony probation for 10 years in each case with those sentences to run concurrently.

Teen suicides linked to New Jersey deaths

ALSIP, Ill. (AP) — Two young women, one holding a rose and a stuffed animal, the other a photo album, were found dead in a garage, victims of the same method of suicide used by four teen-agers in New Jersey, police said Friday.

None of the notes the women left mentioned the suicides a day earlier in New Jersey, but Alsip Police Chief Warner Huston said he thought the two young women "had heard about it, and that the publicity surrounding that incident probably gave them the impetus" to kill themselves.

Nancy Grannan, 19, and Karen Logan, 17, described as best friends, had been neighbors and classmates. Both had dropped out of school and recently quit their jobs, authorities said.

The notes at the scene indicated the women had been depressed, Ms. Grannan over her failed marriage and Ms. Logan over concern that "she had made a mess of her life ... that she had disappointed her parents," Huston said.

"If I told you I was going to kill myself you wouldn't have understood," said a note from Ms. Grannan to her estranged husband, Gary. It was signed "Love always."

The bodies were found Thursday in the front seat of Ms. Grannan's car in the Logan garage, Huston said. Fumes had entered the home and killed two cats and a dog inside.

Karen was holding a stuffed animal and rose, and Nancy was holding a photo album on her lap when their bodies were found, Huston said.

"Nine sealed envelopes to friends and relatives were found on the dashboard of the car and two notes were stuck under the windshield," while a wedding photograph and numerous photo albums were in the backseat, the police chief said.

The four New Jersey teenagers died Wednesday after locking themselves in an idling car in a Bergenfield apartment complex garage, authorities said.

Huston said the young women apparently had been thinking about killing themselves for some time.

Dorothy Fawley, a neighbor, said she noticed Ms. Grannan drive her car into the Logan garage Thursday at about 11 a.m., four hours before the bodies were found.

Voyager 2 sets course for eighth planet

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Voyager 2 space probe fired its thrusters Friday on instruction from scientists 2 billion miles away to change course for its 1989 encounter with Neptune and one of its moons, NASA said.

The adjustment, which increased the spacecraft's speed, alters its course so that it will not be endangered by debris that may be orbiting the solar system's eighth planet.

"This is a major step toward getting ready for our encounter," said Voyager project scientist Ed Stone. "It will be the closest planetary flyby we've had."

Friday's trajectory change, along with minor course corrections later, will bring the durable space probe within 3,100 miles of cloud tops above Neptune's north pole at 9 p.m. on Aug. 24, 1989.

"We'll go over the top of Neptune and down to Triton," Stone said.

Voyager 2 will pass within 25,000 miles of that moon, which may be covered with a cold organic sludge, but will not get close to Nereid, Neptune's other known moon.

The approach to Neptune will be about 20 times closer than the probe's 1986 encounter with Uranus, 30 times closer than its 1981 Saturn flyby and 70 times closer than its nearest approach to Jupiter in 1979, said Stone, a physicist who chairs the physics, math and astronomy division at the California Institute of Technology.

Voyager 2 was launched from Florida on Aug. 20, 1977. It is now 2.08 billion miles from Earth, but its curving path means it has traveled 3.5 billion miles so far.

The trajectory change was made early Friday when computer commands sent to the spacecraft weeks ago automatically ordered a 70-minute firing of the probe's hydrazine thrusters.

"There's no indication it was anything but a perfect maneuver," said Lanny Miller, Voyager flight engineering manager at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which operates the United States' unmanned space exploration program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Scientists once hoped to fly Voyager 2 within 800 miles of Neptune and 5,000 miles of Triton.

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

For one West Elementary school teacher, handwriting is more than simply a way to communicate ideas from one person to another. Carol Reon of 4008 Austin sees each individual's cursive style as a glimpse into their personality.

Her fascination with handwriting analysis began during her years as a student at Snyder High School. Then the editor of the Tiger's Tale, she found a magazine article explaining analysis. "That article was a springboard to my interest in it," she said. "I discovered and read a few more articles within the next 18 months to two years."

Although handwriting analysis was considered a fad at the time, Carol's interest grew. "Then it was considered like fortune telling," she explained.

As handwriting experts became accepted throughout the legal system, analysis also became more respectable. Although most court cases involving handwriting analysis deal only with a comparison of writing samples to determine if an individual wrote a particular manuscript, its acceptance elevated the procedure.

"Experts claim the poorer or more elaborate writing is easier to forge. A more conventional handwriting is less likely to be forged," she explained.

"The main thing you can tell by comparing signatures is if two samples were written by the same person, even if he or she tried to change their writing. Even though they've practiced, it still doesn't flow. It still looks more like art than writing."

The SDN
Sec. B
Sun., Mar. 15, 1987

Carol usually analyzes a piece for the personality traits the writing form will reveal. Although she studied the techniques through books and articles, she believes she "really learned by doing."

Most of her experience was earned by examining over 2,000 samples while a dietetics student at Texas State College for Women (now Texas Women's University) in Denton. Friends sought analysis of writing samples when they discovered her talent. Because she preferred to analyze only samples from persons she did not know, her friends would bring letters or other items written by relatives or other acquaintances. Carol added that she could usually distinguish when a friend tried to slip in a sample of his or her own handwriting.

"After I analyzed whatever they brought me, I would ask them if I was right. And most of the time I was close. But I still can't tell for sure if a sample was written by a man or a woman," she explained.

Handwriting analysis requires more time than Carol can presently devote. "It takes time because you must judge the direction of the line (whether it slants up or down or is written straight across the page), the amount and direction of slant of the letters and the formation of the different letters. Then you judge the signature in relation to the other writing," she said.

Carol explained that a writing sample must be made on a fairly large sheet of unlined paper, such as unlined stationery, with sufficient room remaining at the bottom of the page for the signature. "You don't want the name cramped at the bottom. If, for example, you find a person who regularly signs his signature larger than the rest of his writing, that indicates confidence," she said.

Carol has discovered that the final page of a personal letter will reveal characteristics most clearly. "The person is generally more relaxed by that point."

An analyst looks for several indications of a particular trait before tagging an individual with it. "You must look at the entire page. You cannot look at one thing only, but you must look for other items which verify or cancel out the conclusion," she explained.

"If a person used loops on the stems of his 'd's, for example, that could indicate generosity. But if the same person did not end letters at the end of his words with tails, that would cancel the initial supposition."

Sometimes the writing style a person learns in elementary school can negate a conclusion. For example, some students learn a "d" must be written with a loop, while others learn to simply use a line for the stem.

Carol pointed out that the manner in which an individual crosses a "t" indicates his view of life. "An idealist will most often cross a 't' near the top or even above (the stem). Someone crossing low and with a slant is considered a realist or even bordering on being a pessimist."

A person who breaks the flow of cursive writing (which is characterized by one continous motion to complete a word) in the middle of a word apparently does not concentrate as closely as the individual who maintains the flow.

The Scurry County native noted that although writing styles change and people often will adjust their writing to a change in style, certain letters will remain virtually unchanged.

"If you get an example of (an individual's) older style and newer style, you will probably still find similar strokes," she explained.

Carol, now nearing retirement age, has retained handwriting samples from her days as a kindergartener. "We were taught cursive from the beginning instead of printing first. Basically my handwriting is about the same as it was even that young."

Because she teaches cursive to her third graders each year and must keep abreast of changes in style, she claims her handwriting would be more difficult for an expert to analyze. "I have made three different 'r's and changed 'p's and 't's due to changes in writing styles over the years."

Handwriting experts believe personality traits develop in a child's writing at about the fifth grade. "They become more consistent by high school," Carol explained. "You shouldn't analyze (the writing of a student) younger than fifth grade and you should also examine writing of friends or classmates of the child to detect fads." One year, students popularized using a small circle rather than a dot over an "i". An elaborate tail at the end of the final word in a sentence and to end a signature was also a writing fad at one time.

She emphasized that she does not train her students to disguise their writing. Instead she instructs them to develop the clearest penmanship they can. "I explain to my third graders that they should try to develop good handwriting before fifth grade because it is more difficult after that. It is possible to change style and to make handwriting more legible even as an adult," she said.

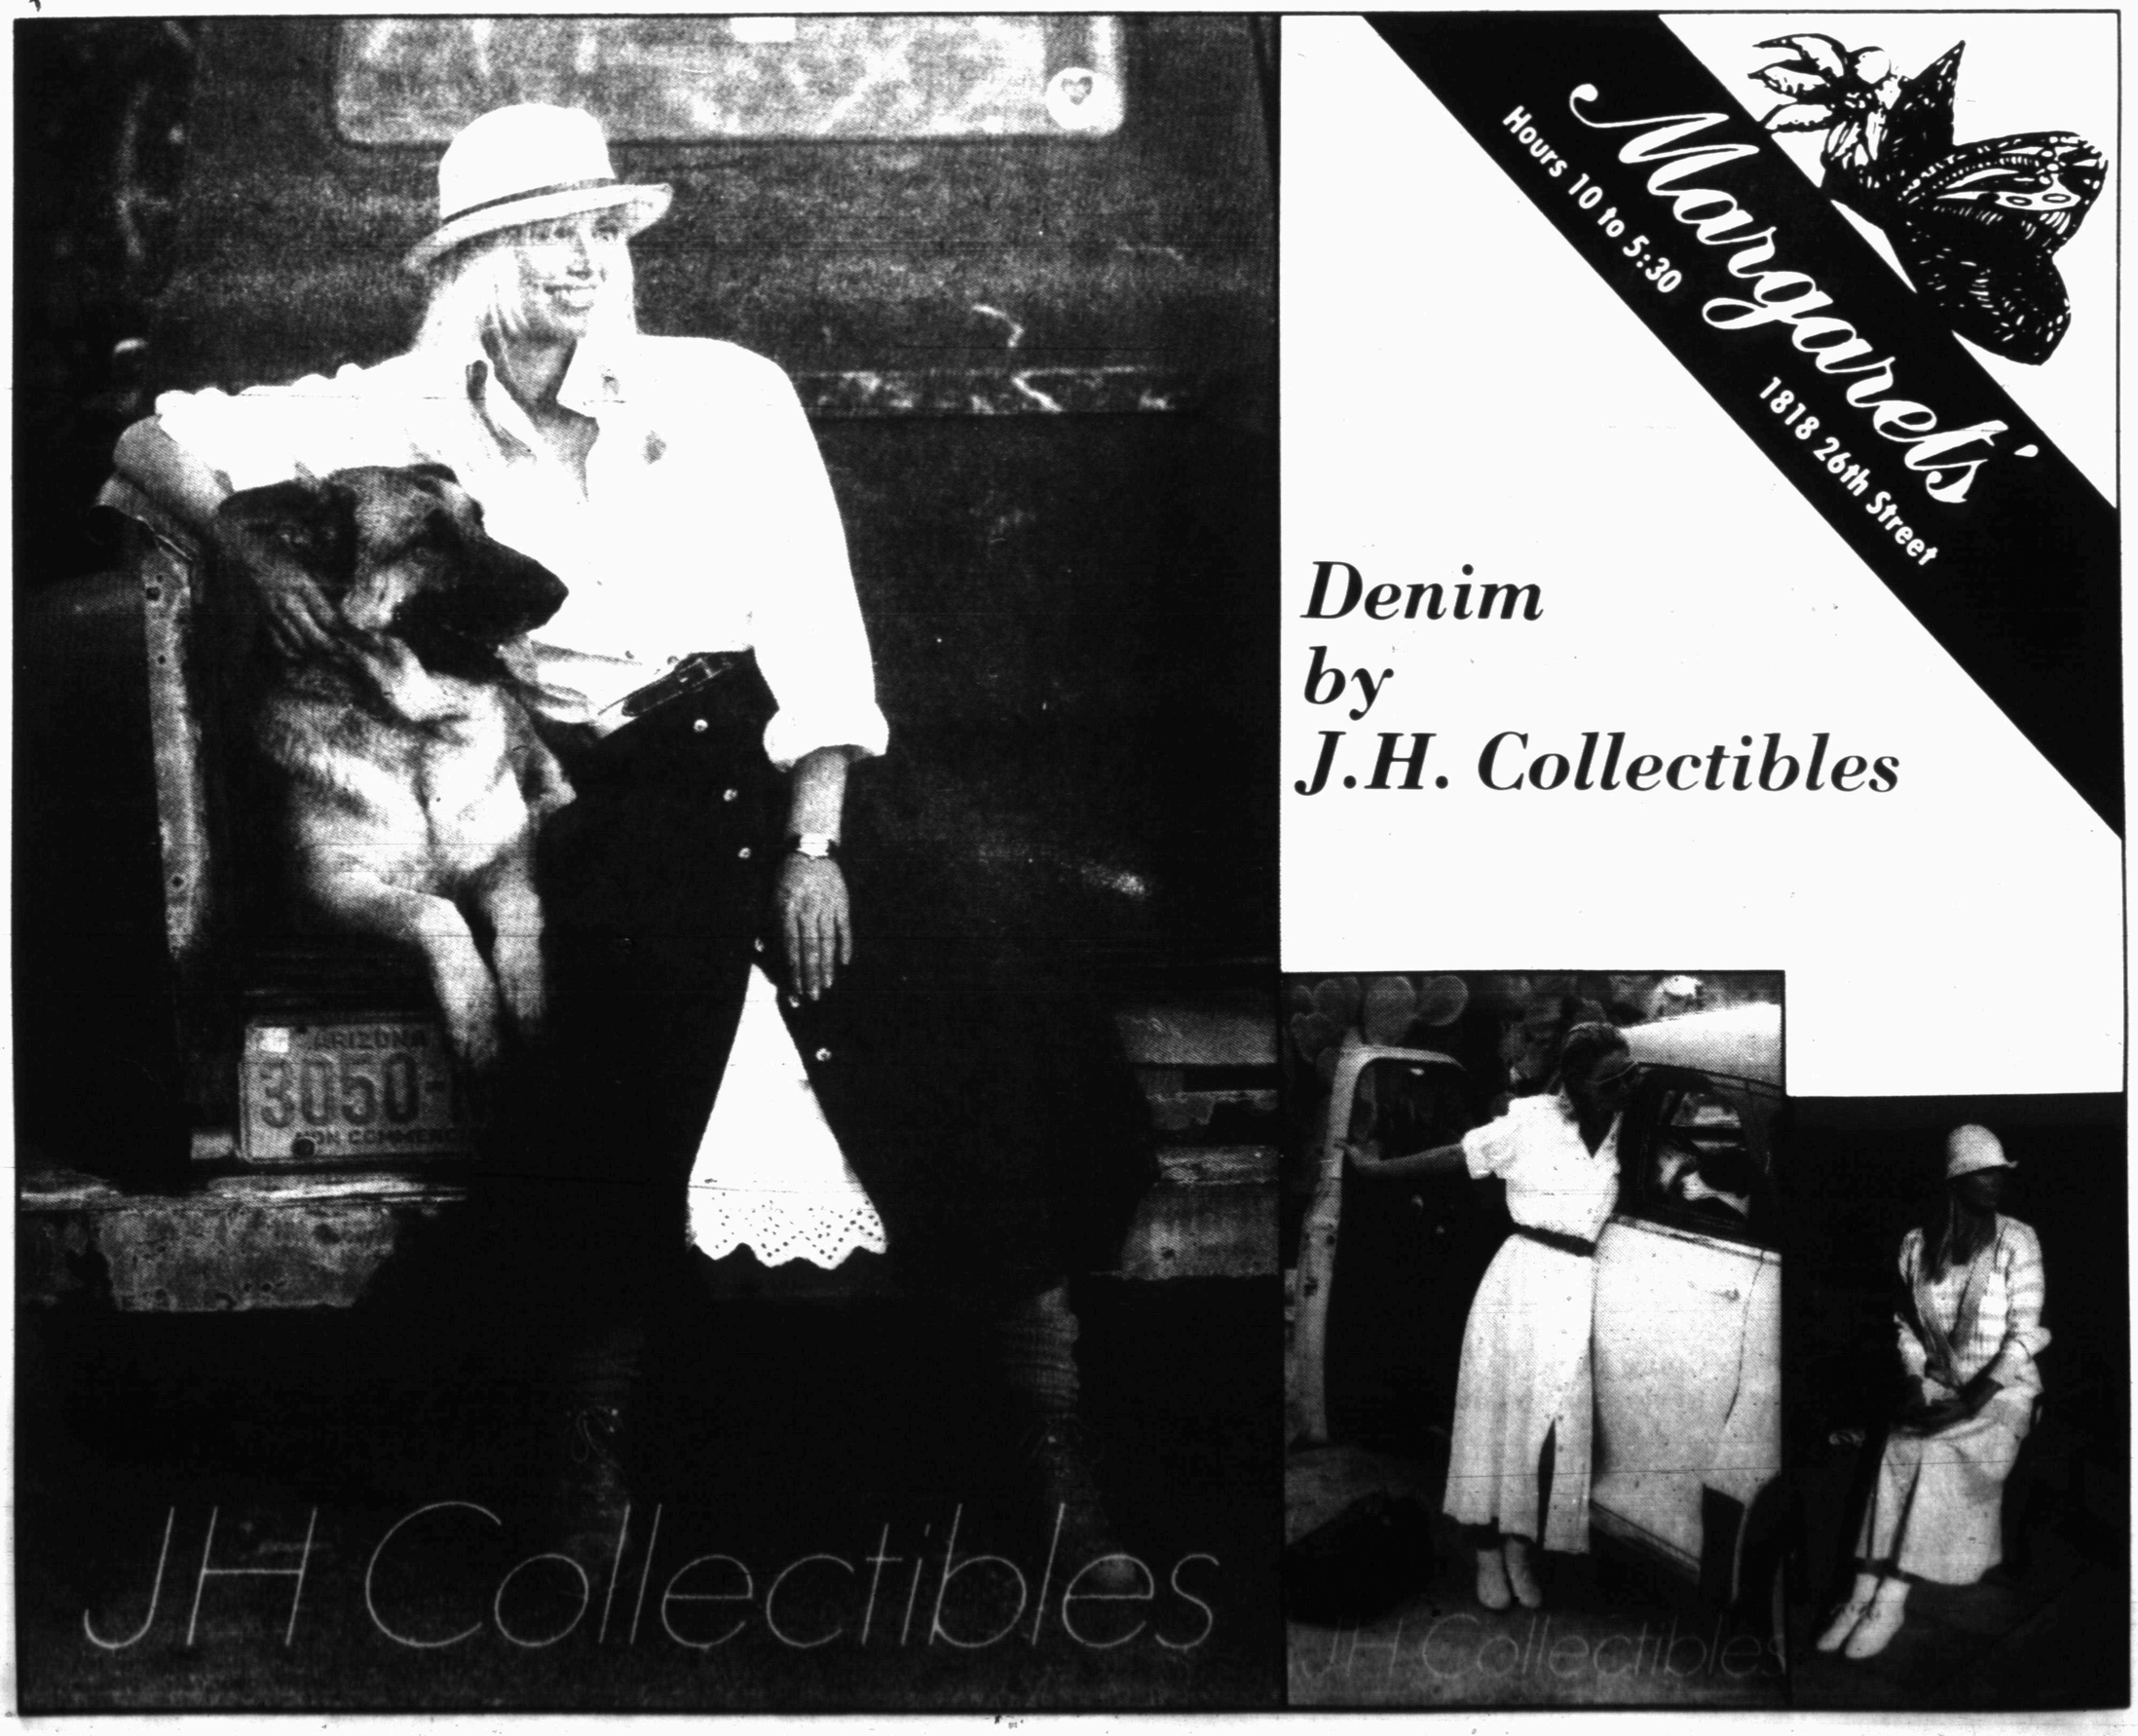

Carol still insists she will not analyze the writing of friends and acquaintances. "I would be afraid I would misinterpret it or find something I would not want to discuss," she explained. "I do it just for fun."

A few times, she has found examples which indicated the individual needed some type of counseling. "Most of our per-

Blind skydiver takes the plunge

EDITOR'S NOTE — He onced hiked from New Jersey to Maine along the Appalachian Trail and he has ridden across Iowa on a tandem bicycle. Now he's jumping out of airplanes. So what? This skydiver is blind.

By MARY ESCH
Associated Press Writer

DUANESBURG, N.Y. (AP) — The cornfields and woodlands spread in an intricate patchwork to the hazy horizon, but Mike Conway can't appreciate the view.

As he stands at the open door of a plane 12,000 feet above the Schohari Valley, Conway hears the roar of the wind and feels its bluster, but he sees only blackness — and he hurls himself into it with an exultant "Yahoo!"

Skydiving is risky business for anyone, but for a blind person there are unique problems — such as knowing when you're about to hit the ground. Conway, however, is not one to shy away from a challenge.

Six years ago, when he was 22, Conway started to lose his sight to a complication of diabetes. A three-month series of laser and microsurgical operations failed to repair his retinas and he was left totally blind.

"It was tough," he said in a recent interview. "I had to relearn the simplest things, like pouring liquid into a glass. I had always been very independent and suddenly I had to ask for help from people."

Conway, who lives in Garden City South on Long Island, had to abandon his education in fire science and his boyhood dream of being a firefighter. Now he's working on a master's degree in sociology at Adelphi University, with plans to teach.

Slouched on a raggedy couch in the clubhouse of the Albany Skydiving Center, the blue-eyed, rusty-haired, bearded Conway talked about how he refused to let his handicap stop him from doing what he always had done — hiking, bicycling, rock-climbing — or trying something he always dreamed of: skydiving.

He says he quickly lost patience with rehabilitation counselors whose paperwork and protocol slowed him down. Two months after he lost his sight, Conway got a friend to cut him a makeshift cane from a length of electrical conduit pipe so he could teach himself to tap around town.

He thought he was doing fine until one day he asked a man to walk him across a busy intersection. The man took his elbow, walked across with him, thanked him and walked away with the telltale tick of a blindman's cane. Conway realized with horror that the man had thought he was offering assistance rather than asking for it. It was a classic case of the blind leading the blind.

Eventually, he got a guide dog. "Tessie allowed me far greater freedom and mobility than the cane," he says. "So I started thinking about taking a hike, maybe 10 days."

The 10-day hike turned into a 100-day trek, from New Jersey to Maine, along the Appalachian Trail in the summer of 1983. Conway, Tessie, and a sighted friend, Noel Seminario, raised about $30,000 for the Guide Dog Foundation of Smithtown through hike sponsors.

Last summer, Conway rode across Iowa on a tandem bicycle. He's planning an eight-day tandem bike tour of Holland for visually impaired riders next spring.

"And next summer," he says, "I plan to do a jump-a-thon to raise money for the Guide Dog Foundation; maybe call it a Dive for Dogs."

When he decided two years ago to try skydiving, Conway met his first obstacle in trying to find someone willing to give lessons to a blind man. He was turned down at seven places before Bob Rollins, owner of Albany Skydiving in rural Duanesburg, said he would let him try.

Jump masters Mike Clark and Ted Langenbahn started him with tandem jumps, in which the student is buckled to the instructor's harness, and static-line dives, in which the parachute is deployed by a line to the airplane. A blind teenager had earlier made novice jumps like that at Albany Skydiving.

But after a few jumps, Conway wanted to try accelerated free-falls, a more advanced skydiving technique that had never, to Rollins' knowlege, been tried by a blind person.

"My jump masters said they'd train me, but they said they would never be able to fully release their hold on me," says Conway, who must always jump with a partner. After five dives, however, Conway was doing so well the jump masters did take their hands away.

Because the roar of the wind drowns out voices, and Conway can't see the usual hand signals, the instructors developed tactual signals. "Two firm squeezes anywhere on my body means pull the ripcord," Conway says. "I also have an audible altimeter in my helmet that chirps if I haven't released the chute by the time I get to 4,000 feet."

With 22 jumps behind him, he's learned the feel of correct form during free-fall. "When you're stable, you feel the wind just evenly sliding around you." He has advanced to freefall backflips and sequential formations with four to six divers.

"Landing is one of the scariest parts of the dive for me, since I can't see the ground," Conway says. "I've tried to sense it through facial vision; when I'm walking, I can feel things through differences in pressure, wind, sound. But it doesn't work for landings."

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED — Alvin and Glenda Botts announce the engagement of their daughter, Beverly Ann, to Vernon Scott Groat, nephew of Mike and Anne Brown, all of Snyder. The ceremony will take place April 4 at 7 p.m. at Bible Way Fellowship. (Private Photo)

This is a strange deal. First, West's one-spade overcall was unusual since he had the perfect requirements for a takeout double. Next, East's raise, based on six points and a flat hand, was aggressive, but his excellent spades probably justified it. South was not wrong for trying three diamonds, but did North really need to jump to four hearts on just J-8? Still, the contract should always make. The strangest thing about the deal is that declarer went down.

East won the spade ace. If East now plays a trump, West will take the ace and play another. Declarer will have no play for his contract unless he finds the queen of clubs onside with that suit splitting. Since that is the case, he will make an overtrick. Instead, East continued with the spade queen. Declarer ruffed, played A-K of diamonds and ruffed a diamond, and ruffed another spade. A fourth diamond was ruffed, on which East shed a club, and South played a club to his ace. Now if he simply cashed the club king, he would have 10 tricks. Instead, inexplicably, declarer played his heart king. West grabbed his ace and played his last spade, allowing East to shed his last club, and declarer was in the soup.

Although this is not a classic cross-ruff, the basic principle does apply. When you are planning a crossruff, it is important to cash your high side-suit tricks first, before either opponent can sluff in those suits. Since South knew he was going to run out of trumps, he had to play two high clubs early in the deal, before East threw any away.

Small-scale farmers in Latin America make a contribution to production far in excess of the proportion of the land resources they control, according to the Inter-American Bank. Among other reasons, larger farms tend to have a greater proportion of land devoted to pasture or woodland, or simply left idle.

Couple united in marriage

DRIPPING SPRINGS — Melony Ann Chandler of Mason and Kyle Rodney Sikes of Big Spring were united in marriage Feb. 14 at First Baptist Church of Dripping Springs. Don Duvall, pastor of Shiner United Methodist Church, performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Tony Chandler of Dripping Springs and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sikes of Snyder.

Vows were repeated before candelabra draped with English ivy and accented with red bows. The altar held an arrangement of long-stemmed red roses and baby's breath. Red bows decorated the pews.

Dr. Charles Church of Snyder provided piano accompaniment for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of bridal taffeta fashioned by her mother. The fitted bodice was overlaid in hand-appliqued lace embellished with pearls and iridescent sequins. The scoop neckline finished with bows on the shoulders. The long sleeves came to points at the hand.

A V waist attached to an ankle-length gathered skirt of layers of organza and chiffon. Just below the waist, a bow and bustle accented the back.

The fingertip veil of tulle fastened to a head piece of white and blush silk roses accented with iridescent beads and pearls. It was also created by the bride's mother.

The bride carried a bouquet of magnolia blossoms, blush rosebuds, tulle, pink and white satin streamers with love knots and was completed with a large white iridescent bow.

Jennifer Timmons of Bellaire was maid of honor with bridesmaids Andra Moore of San Marcos and Molly Koehn of Austin. Each attendant was attired in a tea-length gown of red taffeta. The fitted bodice was accented with a scoop neckline ending in a V in back. Puff sleeves gathered above the elbow. A V-shaped waistline attached to a gathered skirt finished with a sash in the back. A long-stemmed red rose with a white iridescent ribbon completed the ensemble.

Bill Sikes of Snyder, father of the groom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Dray Sikes of Flint, brother of the groom, and Dr. Joe Dale Chitwood of Canyon.

Ushers were Justin Chandler of Dripping Springs, brother of the bride, and Michael Light of Henly, cousin of the bride.

Karlette Hey of Mason registered the guests.

Children passing out rice bags at the reception were Lacey and Misty Chitwood of Canyon, Jennifer and Justin Delano of Silverton and Mindy and William Beaty of Mason.

A reception and dance was held in the Oldham Cummings VFW Hall of Wimberly.

The bride's table was covered in pink gathered around the sides with a white lace overlay. The table held the traditional cake, her grandmother's crystal punch bowl, red and white mints and the bride's throw-away bouquet.

The four-tiered bridal cake was white with strawberry filling. Red hearts and light pink roses decorated the cake. The top layer was heart-shaped decorated with a cupid.

MR. AND MRS. KYLE RODNEY SIKES

Servers were Laura Cullin of Austin, Mae Collier Hert of Spicewood and Paige Crisp of Dripping Springs.

The groom's tablecloth gathered at the sides. The table held a heart-shaped tray with heart-shaped chocolates, teddy bears dressed as bride and groom, a silver coffee service, the bride's bouquet and groom's cake.

The cake was created in chocolate with chocolate icing with the Texas Tech double T raised in red. Chocolate icing swirls completed the border.

Servers were Patricia Beaty and Kim Lewis, both of Mason.

After a honeymoon trip to Cancun, Mexico, the couple will reside in Big Spring.

The bride earned her bachelors degree in range management from Southwest Texas State University in 1983. She is presently employed as a range conservationist with the USDA Soil Conservation Service.

The groom is a 1976 graduate of Snyder High School and received his bachelors degree from Texas Tech University in agricultural engineering. He is employed as a civil engineer with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Dual-powered buses for Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A transportation system that will utilize an underground downtown tunnel has prompted Seattle to order more than 200 dual-powered buses for the city's transit system, reports American Metal Market.

The publication says that dual-powered vehicles have seldom been seen in the United States since the 1930s and 1940s when a public service operator in New Jersey ran some 500 gas-electric powered vehicles.

Scheduled for delivery between 1988 and 1990, the 60-footlong buses will need to navigate a 1.5-mile downtown tunnel requiring overhead electric cables.

Once outside the tunnel the buses will be run on suburban routes by diesel power, since stringing overhead electric wires to the suburbs would be prohibitively expensive. The buses are part of an overall $500 million downtown-to-surburban transit system.

Even outside the U.S., few dual-powered systems are in operation. About 60 are in service in Nancy, France, and a few others scattered around other European cities.

Mannequins do 'freeze' job

By DAWN MORVILLE
Decatur Herald & Review

FORSYTH, Ill. (AP) — They stand as still as fiberglass mannequins. Then you see them blink.

If they look lifelike, that's because they are alive.

When shoppers pass by, "I think they think we're real (mannequins)," 14-year-old Jennifer Meyer said.

Rudi Pyle, 14, agreed. "At first they do, and then they look closer and see you blink."

They and two other Decatur girls were working as "freeze models" in front of the Ups 'n Downs clothing store in Hickory Point Mall. The store has 30 models who pose on weekends.

Some people are scared when they see the "mannequins" move, said Karissa Koyak, 13.

"Some people have to come up and touch you to make sure, and then they feel like fools," added Laura Suckow, 13.

Do the models feel like fools?

"Sometimes," Laura admitted, "when they say some really weird comment to make you laugh."

The girls agreed that keeping a straight face was one of the more difficult parts of the job.

Karissa says when she sees people she knows, "I get red." But Rudi says she just smiles "so they know I'm not stuck up or anything."

Instead of payment, the models get a 20 percent discount on clothing they buy in the store on the days they work.

Some, interested in being professional models, value the experience. Others just see it as a way to pass the time and enjoy shoppers' reactions.

"It's sort of something for them to do for fun," said Dawn Lazell, assistant store manager, who coordinates the program.

The girls choose poses that resemble the non-living mannequins seen in storefront displays. They alternate sitting and standing so their feet don't get too tired. Their positions change about every 15 minutes during the two-hour period they work, Rudi said.

The girls are not allowed to chew gum or start conversations among themselves or with shoppers — though Laura admits they do whisper to each other sometimes.

Lazell said the freeze model idea was the company's and was a first for the mall. But it is seen frequently in bigger cities such as Chicago and St. Louis to promote clothing, store manager Paula Jones said.

The models can be seen from 1 to 3 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday wearing clothing — usually new merchandise, price tags and all — chosen by store employees. The girls provide their own shoes, socks and earrings.

"I started because I want to be a model when I get older so I thought this would be a good opportunity to practice."

Once banned, hula survives

HONOLULU (AP) — The dancers sway to the rhythm of banging sticks and a chant that tells the story of a king who ruled these islands a century ago, the "Merrie Monarch" who gave new life to the hula.

Performing beneath a green banyan tree, the troupe celebrates the life of King David Kalakaua, who is widely credited with reviving the sensuous dance from puritanical oblivion in the late 19th century.

"We owe a lot to him for this art form," says hula instructor John Topolinski, a part-Hawaiian who trained the group. "He said, 'This is our dance, a Hawaiian dance.'"

The performance was part of a recent afternoon-long hula exhibition at the Iolani Palace where Hawaiian royalty lived before the islands were annexed to the United States.

Once banned by Calvinist missionaries, later exploited and often distorted, the hula has endured in many forms, ranging from the sublime to the trivial.

For centuries a means of passing along historical, mythical and genealogical information in a culture with no written language, early chants told of a god-filled firmament and epic tales as complex as those of classical Rome and Greece.

Later hulas, especially those during Kalakaua's time, incorporated new styles and instruments brought to Hawaii by waves of immigrants.

In this century, the hula was seen through Hollywood's eyes as the dance of a sybaritic paradise.

The hula is believed to have arrived in Hawaii along with her first immigrants, who traveled here aboard outrigger canoes from the South Pacific about 600 A.D.

In the decades following the arrival in 1778 of Capt. James Cook, the English explorer, Hawaiians became increasingly involved in commerce with the West, particularly in the growing sandalwood trade. Interest in the hula waned.

When the Hawaiian King Kamehameha I died in 1819, he was succeeded by his favorite wife, Ka'ahumanu, who ruled along with Kamehameha's son, Liholiho. The two came under the influence of missionaries who considered the swaying dance indecent.

Ka'ahumanu later converted to Christianity and outlawed the "lewd and lascivious hula." Practitioners went underground.

After Ka'ahumanu died in 1832, bans against the hula were rescinded.

LEARN TO DEAL WITH STRESS OF PARENTING PRESCHOOLER

A sequence of ordinary little events — like spilled juice, thrown toys, an overflowing sink and ringing phone — can quickly lead to a screaming child and distressed parent.

Stress is something that parents of young children can't avoid; it's the reaction to stress that counts.

Parents should be aware of the symptoms that signal stress pile-up and potential danger.

Some people react by developing physical symptoms such as headaches, dizziness, appetite loss or an increase in eating. Other parents become aggressive, which can lead to child abuse.

Even when parents don't develop physical symptoms, they may cry, become fatigued, sad, angry, very irritable or feel depressed and guilty. It's not unusual for a parent experiencing stress to feel helpless and doubt his or her worth as a parent.

Lack of adequate sleep often contributes to parents' stress. Sleep requirements vary from person to person, but it's easy for any parent to lose sleep because of a young child's erratic sleep schedule.

It's best to develop some ways of dealing with stressful events as they occur, so the stress doesn't pile up. Suggestions for stress relievers:

—After putting the child in a safe place, such as his crib or room, step away until you feel you're again in control. You may want to count to ten, sit down and rest or close your eyes for a few minutes.

—Share your frustration with your spouse or telephone a friend and talk briefly about how you feel. Sharing your inner feelings is not a sign of weakness, it's good therapy when you're upset.

—Work off your anger by doing something very physical. Instead of hitting the child, pound a mattress, scrub the floor or dig in the garden.

—Give in once in a while. If the child resists picking up his toys, for example, let the toys stay where they are temporarily.

Avoid trying to be the superhuman parent who has a perfect child. In that case you can actually cause much of your own stress.

YOUNG PEOPLE NEED 4-H

4-H, the youth program of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, is aimed at developing youth through the involvement of parents and other adults who organize and conduct learning experiences in a community setting.

The United States has about 55 million young people between the ages of 5 and 24, but only one out of three of these now belong to or have belonged to any character-building organization.

4-H is not just for the farm youngster — it's for everyone. No matter what your child's interests or hobbies, 4-H has a wide range of activities and projects available to meet those interests. These might include photography, gardening, gun safety, energy conservation or housing plus the more familiar livestock, cooking and sewing projects.

4-H is an activity which parents and children can share, and this is what makes 4-H so special. 4-H is one of only a few organizations which promote the parent-child relationship.

Other advantages can be gained from becoming a 4-H member. 4-H provides an opportunity for leadership developed by working with and helping younger members on various projects while learning from older members. Also, 4-H presents an opportunity to serve others in the community. 4-H has a strong commitment to service, which should be emphasized when children are young.

To learn more about joining the 4-H family, contact the county extension office at 573-5423.

Computers sell furniture

TOKYO (AP) — A department store in Tokyo's Ginza — in contrast to its clothing, books, art and other merchandise sections — has no items on display in its furniture department, reports MIS Week.

Instead, furniture is sold by means of a personal computer and optical disk system that prints three-dimensional images in color on a computer screen, according to the management information services publication.

The images show customers how furniture they select from a video library would look in various interior settings.

The store's system has 5,000 items of furniture in 3,300 frames of an optical disk. Instore consultants first interview customers to determine their tastes in furniture styling, their preferred lifestyle and the intended place of use.

When the consultant punches in the customer's wishes, out come optical images of furniture and a list of accompanying information — furniture names, manufacturer, wholesaler, size, price, available colors and delivery.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most people are familiar with contemporary acronyms — pronounceable formations of initials and phrases that form words of a sort.

Well-known acronyms are scuba (Self-contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) and NASA (National Aeronautics and Space Administration).

Not so well known are ADCOMSUBORDCOMPHIBSPAC and COMSERFORSOPACSUBCOM. The first stands for Administrative Command, Amphibious Forces, Pacific Fleet Subordinate Command. The latter stands for Commander, Service Force, South Pacific Subordinate Command.

APPROACHING MARRIAGE — Janie Miller of Snyder wishes to announce the engagement and approaching marriage of her daughter, Dedra Crawford, to Steven Hines, son of Betty Burleson of Hermleigh. They will exchange vows in the chapel of First Baptist Church on May 16. (Ted Bigham Photography)

FEATURED THIS WEEK

PRESCRIPTION FOR DISASTER By Joseph J. Trento

The full and, until this book, untold story of why the space shuttle Challenger blew up begins with the earliest days of manned spaceflight. Trento takes up into the heart of NASA and seven administrations to show how an agency that once stood for the best in the American spirit as well as science and technology was forced to "make a deal with the devil" to survive. Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson had fought to keep space primarily an arena for civilian exploration and development. But during the Nixon years a series of political, not scientific decisions meant that NASA began to lose the battle against military dominance, one it had been fighting since its inception. The compelling and tragic story of the rise and fall of our space program names names and marshals engrossing detail. This and so much more, makes up the complex and often horrifying account of a national tragedy.

Christian women to hold monthly lunch

TERRISU SIMS
...quilting made easy...

"Quilting Made Easy" by Terrisu Sims will be the special feature at the Wednesday luncheon of the Snyder Christian Women's Club to be held from 11:15 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at the Snyder Country Club.

Terrisu recently opened Memories Made Quilt Shop on the square and will be demonstrating new techniques for quick and easy quilting and other craft ideas for spring.

A former Snyder resident, Terrisu indicated that she returned here after an 11-year stay in Lubbock due to the high level of interest in quilting as a hobby in our area.

Susan Scott, local mother and homemaker, will be the featured soloist for the event. She and her husband, Larry, coach for the Snyder High School Tigers, have three small children.

Guest speaker for the luncheon is Jane Sparks of Hobbs, N.M. Jane has spoken and conducted workshops for a number of years in the New Mexico and West Texas areas.

Reservations for the luncheon and free nursery may be made by calling Doris at 573-6602 or Lisa at 573-1292. The cost of the meal is $5.50 and a beverage is $1.

Snyder CWC is not affiliated with any single denomination and all women in the community are invited to attend.

Handwriting study reveals various personality traits sonalities are everyday, traditional, run-of-the-mill. But occasionally I will run across something different.

"Back in college during World War II, one girl brought in a sample of writing. It was small and square, written straight up and down (no slant) indicating almost no normal affection. Square letters mean the individual is very determined. It turned out to be a sample from a boy in the Hitler youth group in Germany. He had been visiting in this country," she recalled.

She added that most handwriting analysis conducted by computer in malls or at fairs is too generalized and does not provide indepth analysis. "Three of us had it done once. I couldn't really decide what they did do. The analysis we got could have fit nine out of 12 people. I can't remember that anything was specific."

Born to a teacher (her mother came to Snyder 71 years ago to teach), Carol obtained a master's degree in education from TWU and has completed additional studies at Texas Tech University.

Throughout her tenure with Snyder ISD, she has taught primarily second and third grade — first at Central for one year, then at East and the past 20 terms at West. She plans to retire following the 1988-89 school year.

"I would like to teach illiterate adults after retirement. Since I'm trained as a dietician, I may become involved with Meals on Wheels," she said.

As for her interest in handwriting, she may pursue it more actively again with retirement. "If I get into it more intensely ever again, I will study in more depth."

Fillies avoid vitamins

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Children are not the only youngsters who refuse to take their vitamins.

Colts and fillies tend to separate specially formulated nutritional feed supplements from the rest of their daily rations, leaving the essential vitamins and minerals on their plates, says Doyle Meadows, vice president of Lookout Mountain Ranch.

Meadows says he solved the problem with his quarter horses by switching to a feed supplement based on a dried yeast protein.

"The horses are attracted by the supplement's aroma and taste," Meadows says. "With a steady diet of grain, alfalfa hay and the feed supplement, we're succeeding in meeting the nutritional needs of all our young horses."

"He who thinks himself wise ... is a great fool," according to Voltaire, French author-philosopher.

Boss praises his workers

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It took awhile, but Jerry Trickel finally gave in to a persistent wife and son.

He agreed to hire mentally handicapped workers at the family owned die-casting business.

"I told them there wasn't a snowball's chance it would work," Trickel said. "Now I'm glad to take credit for it."

Indeed, he has become a major booster for hiring the mentally handicapped, calling it one of his smartest business moves.

He calls the two workers, E.J. Bacy III and Sharon Sawyer, "a real joy." Their productivity and reliability have convinced Trickel that hiring more mentally handicapped workers would be a good idea.

Trickel's attitude brings a satisfied smile from Catherine Neman, who heads the jobs program of the Association for Retarded Citizens, a national non-profit group based in nearby Arlington. The group has placed 2,000 mentally handicapped workers nationwide.

Ms. Neman said Marriott Corp. and McDonald's Corp. are setting the pace in hiring the mentally handicapped. Marriott, for instance, has more than 1,000 mentally handicapped employees, she said.

The association places workers at about 1,500 different job sites annually, most of them with smaller companies like Trickel's die-casting operation.

After 20 years in business, the association is "starting to see some of the benefits of our work," Ms. Neman said.

The mentally handicapped are better educated today, attending schools when in years past they stayed at home or were institutionalized, she said.

Sharon Sawyer, 30, was given the job of inserting tiny springs in window locks. It is tedious work, but tailor made for Ms. Sawyer and Bacy.

"They do 60 percent more than the other people were able to do," said Trickel, explaining that other employees thought the job was beneath them.

"We couldn't get the production out," he said. "We would get maybe 2,000 to 2,500 per eight-hour shift."

World sugar prices are up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the world price of sugar has risen sharply, it still is far below what American consumers must pay as a result of quotas and other devices that restrict imports, a report by the Agriculture Department shows.

In 1986, the world price of raw sugar averaged 6.05 cents a pound, a 50 percent increase from its 4-cent level of 1985, the report said Thursday.

"Prices have strengthened further to about eight cents a pound in mid-March," the report said. "Much of the increase is a result of the trade's perception of a tightening in the global demand-supply balance in 1987, and the uncertain production and trade outlook in Brazil, Cuba and the Soviet Union."

Despite the recent increase, the price of raw sugar on the international market is still well below the most recent 10-year average of 10.4 cents per pound, the report said. In 1981, global sugar prices averaged almost 17 cents per pound.

Meanwhile, raw sugar imported into New York has been going for a spot price of about 21.8 cents per pound this month, the highest in over two years, the report said. But U.S. import quotas, domestic sugar supports and import duties have kept the New York price fairly stable.

In 1981, for example, the New York price of sugar averaged more than 19.7 cents per pound, rising to 19.9 cents in 1982, and to more than 22 cents, on the average, in 1983, according to USDA figures. The New York spot price dropped to about 21.7 cents in 1984 and to 20.3 cents in 1985. It rose to an average of almost 21 cents last year.

Consumer advocates and many members of Congress have criticized the U.S. quota system and price supports as protectionist barriers that keep cheaper foreign sugar from American retail shelves.

Ellen Haas, executive director of Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, says the sugar program translates into a $3 billion annual subsidy for U.S. sugar interests through higher prices paid by consumers.

"Unlike other farm programs, the sugar program forces consumers to bear the total burden of ensuring profits for producers," says Ms. Haas, whose non-profit consumer group advocates a legislative overhaul of the program.

World prices began to move slightly higher in mid-December after the United States announced a 41 percent cut in the 1987 import quota to just over 1 million tons from 1.72 million tons in 1986.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, who announced the quota reduction, said domestic producers have been boosting output as a result of higher government supports.

The report said U.S. sugar production in the fiscal year that began last Oct. 1 is forecast at a decade high of 6.5 million tons, raw value, up 150,000 tons from the department's forecast in December and 8 percent above last year.

Beet sugar production was forecast at 3.35 million tons, up 11 percent from 1985-86, and cane sugar output was indicated at 3.15 million tons, a 3.8 percent increase.

To the question, "What did you do over spring break?" we replied, "Minded our own business, thank you."

Grrrrrrrrr! What else can you say about a holiday which, by circumstances of employment, left most of us on the wrong side of the shop window--nose to the glass and still half-an-inch away from the goodies?

Because a whole bunch of news comes from the public schools and college, we always feel particularly deserted over spring vacation.

The administrators, teachers and students whose activities we depend on were let loose to have fun. The rest of us, on the other hand, remained behind, sorrowful and full of self-pity.

Once again, it seems, life's pleasures are a re-routed bus line running on an unannounced schedule.

If spring break gives us the blues, it is afterward which is doubly hard. That's when all of those brown shoulders start showing up, making us realize that instead of at the beach, we spent our time encouraging osteoporosis by hunching over a layout table.

And it makes us realize again that every missed opportunity makes it harder to jump into spring.

Put another way, no one starts a tan in the middle of July.

The popular image of spring is of a season which encourages you to once again take up things set aside. The tennis racket in the back of the closet, those walking shoes you ordered from the catalogue store, the roto-tiller whose's shiny paint is gathering dust in the garage.

But, we see it likewise as a season for decision.

Winter time is an easy excuse to stay inside and isolated. This isolation places a shell around most folks--not unlike that of the cocoon.

To again take to the out-of-doors means breaking through that shell.

If you can't succeed in doing this during the breezy and sunlight-filled days of spring, you'll never accomplish it by early July, when the heat withers any outdoor enthusiasm like the winter blast chills it.

It is acceptable to bare pale shoulders, pink knees and frail, white feet in March or April. But in July, such characteristics will only bring you scorn from your tanned brethren--those cats who have absorbed so much oil since spring that their epidermal areas shine like polished oak.

No one says you have to compete with the hot dogs down at the marina. But, at least it's nice to have a little color.

We remember one husband saying that if it weren't for shopping, his wife would never go outside.

Using this example as an extreme, we've come to believe the pleasures of spring and the pleasures of summer which follow are like the pleasures of life. You can put them off only so long before you lose your chance at them.

Spring break is that annual first opportunity. And nothing sticks in the craw like a missed opportunity.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

What is it, I wonder, about the first shining days of spring that make us lazy, yet simultaneously stir us to action? On the one hand, we long to stretch out on a soft cushion of green grass, close our eyes to the warmth of the sun, and snooze. On the other hand, we yearn to dig, and mow, and groom the shaggy earth, neaten it up for long summer days. We think about maybe starting up a jogging program, something to make our blood pound and remind us that we are alive. Yet we can't seem to make up our minds. Like Scarlett, we'll think about it tomorrow.

Farmers are eager to be back at the plow, cowboys begin working horses grown fat and furry through winter's cold night. For a while, anyway. Some of the time is spent lounging in the saddle house doorway, thinking about all the things that need to be done. Tomorrow.

Kids play in stops and starts, running crazily through the soft spring air in short sleeves, then suddenly moping about, complaining that there is nothing to do. They start projects they will never finish, make plans for summer, and miss their friends one hour after school is out.

This Saturday was a typical stop-and-start early spring day for us. Although my profession requires me to read a great deal, as many as four or five books a week for research or study, I still feel guilty, reading on a day like Saturday, when the sun is flirtatious and the breeze alluring. My husband, bone-tired from a long work week, feels guilty trying to nap. That's the way of it, in early spring.

So we trek outside, I to my roses and he to his projects. I've waited too late to prune them but do it anyway, in a desultory, careless fashion, whacking away at them, knowing they will flourish no matter what I do to them. (I know this because our sheep, Bobbie Jo, once got into the front yard and ate most of the rose bushes. They bloomed more beautifully that year than any other time. I wonder if maybe I should let her do it again this year.)

The children twitter around like little birds, happy to have us outdoors. A bike-riding lesson is proposed for the little one, who reluctantly agrees, and off we go, up and down the road, taking turns running along behind her, shouting encouragement, cringing when she up-ends herself in the middle of a big tumbleweed. (Town kids don't know how easy they have it, learning to ride a bike on real pavement, with no tumbleweeds in the way.)

She tires and so do we, so we lie and tell her how great she's doing and wearily put away the bike until the next lesson, flopping onto shaggy green clumps of grass near the barn to rest. The inevitable football appears, and with it, the inevitable competition between brother and sister and dog. Yes, dog. Our dog wants the ball more than the kids and will risk his life to get it.

During a lull in the game, my daughter and I take turns braiding each other's long hair. Her's comes loose and catches the sun in crinkly gold strands and I smile at her. She is, of course, the most beautiful child in the world, with the possible exception of her bronzed and handsome brother.

I stretch out in the grass with a cat on my tummy. Long, green grass always smells cool. Why is that? The children shriek and the dog barks and my husband mumbles over his tools and a bike. The sky arches clear blue overhead; surely no other state but Texas can offer such a pure and vivid blue to ponder.

It's grown late, and the setting sun is directly in our faces. Time for chores like feeding animals and families, time to rouse ourselves to action. Some things, after all, must be done.

It doesn't seem that we have accomplished anything on this soft almost-spring day in March. Except maybe being together, and enjoying the cool smell of the grass.

The settlement agreed to this week in the voter discrimination lawsuit involving the Snyder school district contains a provision which could see the board switch from a 4-3 to a 5-2 ratio regarding single member district and at-large seats.

It was reported Sunday the stipulation hinges on a separate court case now pending before the Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

The efforts of three Snyder ISD staffers on state-level educational committees have given local officials some voice in implementing state-wide educational reform, it was reported Sunday.

Those serving to these state advisory groups include Mary Inez Brownlee, Ollie Peek and Dr. Tom Scannicchio.

MONDAY

Some $3.9 million in disaster relief payments are being received by Scurry County producers and land owners due to adverse weather conditions which affected the 1986 harvest, it was reported Tuesday.

Last week, locals began receiving these disaster payments in the form of commodity certificates.

The general guideline of a 25 percent reduction continues to hold true for Snyder sales tax figures with the recent reporting period, it was reported Tuesday.

Both the year-to-date figure for Snyder and the monthly report--reflecting sales made here during January--showed a 25 percent decline when compared to the same period in 1986.

For the year-to-date, the total now stands at $174,624, compared to $233,238 last year. The monthly report is $40,534 this past January compared to $55,589 during '86.

Cast assignments for Snyder High School's one-act play entry, "Hamlet," were announced by Jerry Worsham, director, Tuesday.

Brad Vincent will take the lead as Hamlet.

Bill Parker, newly named president of West Texas State Bank, told the annual gathering of bank stockholders Tuesday the institution is "sound, solvent and viable."

Parker, who was named president of the bank last Nov. 19, told the group that WTSB now has $85 million in total assets, enough to "support us and another bank."

Snyder Kiwanis Club members were far and away the winners Tuesday at a civic club competition conducted to boost donors at the regular Scurry County blood drive.

The club registered 67 percent of its membership to win a traveling trophy. Tuesday's drive included 188 individuals registering with 172 blood pints drawn.

WEDNESDAY
March 11

A final hurdle was cleared early Wednesday morning for the April 4 Snyder school board election and potential candidates for that ballot were encouraged to begin signing up immediately.

The deadline to file for five school board positions will be March 20, a Friday.

Wednesday morning, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock gave a final go-ahead for the ballot by indicating he would sign documents approving the interim election now slated April 4.

Snyder pharmacist Jerry McWilliams succumbed Wednesday to head injuries suffered last Saturday. Services were scheduled for him Saturday.

McWilliams, 45, died at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

FRIDAY
March 13

As of noon Friday, a fourth candidate had announced for the Snyder school board, retired Snyder school teacher Billy Bob McMullan.

McMullan announced for an at-large position on the board. He became the third candidate seeking one of three posts which will be elected by all district voters.

Incumbent board member J.D. Hinton and local business owner Ruben Martinez have announced as at-large candidates also and Vernon James Clay has filed to represent District 1.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to say a few words in answer to Mrs. Richard Stuart's letter.

There is no need for anyone to be nervous about a minimum security prison unit being built here. The persons in such units are not violent criminals. Many simply "made a mistake" and definitely do not deserve to be housed with hardened or violent criminals.

Building a prison in El Paso would not benefit Scurry County taxpayers or business community, nor would it be beneficial to the majority of West Texas inmates' families who have to travel so far to visit their loved ones who are incarcerated.

To the editor,

In answer to the letter last week from Mrs. Richard Stuart of Fisher County, I'd like to say, "There are some nervous people here in Scurry County, too."

In regard to the prison question now before us, I think it is ironic that our neighbors seem to be more concerned than the local citizenry.

Mrs. Stuart's comment is the second I've heard from someone out of Scurry County. Recently, while in Lubbock, I struck up a conversation with a nice young woman from Lamesa. After learning of mutual friends, the conversation turned to the economy. I told her what was happening in Snyder — that the Industrial Foundation was very excited about the possibility of a prison facility for our community. She was aghast and said, "Oh no, I hope not!"

Being surprised, I asked why that would bother her.

"We are too close," she said.

There will be ample opportunities around you in the year ahead, but you must develop them properly. Be sure to see through to a satisfactory conclusion anything you begin.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today try to steer clear of an acquaintance who tends to take you for granted. The harder you try to please him or her, the less satisfying you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep pace with your duties and responsibilities at this time. If you fall behind, it will be difficult to catch up. Set specific goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you're not the showboat type, but today you might try to upstage your pals in order to be the center of attention. Don't step out of character.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you dislike may offer you advice today which you might reject just to prove him or her wrong. The suggestions shouldn't be treated capriciously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A heavy-handed associate might treat you in an unfriendly fashion today. If you try to retaliate, it will only make a bad situation worse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to make do with what you have today. However, if you are compelled to borrow something that another prizes, treat it as respectfully as if it were your own.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Indecisiveness is not numbered among your basic characteristics, but today you may have a problem making up your mind and sticking to your decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) People who are willing to be of assistance today, can't be expected to do everything for you. In fact, they may walk away if you fail to fend for yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're a very reliable person, but some of your friends may lack this quality today. Don't build your hopes on false premises assuming they're as dependable as you are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Depending a little too heavily upon chance and luck to carry you through isn't a wise policy today. They're not allies you can count on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When conversing with others today, if a pal tells a tall tale, don't try to top him or her. Your friend might get away with a snow job, but you won't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Move cautiously in your commercial affairs today. If you get careless and make miscalculations, they could turn out to be more costly than usual.

Your Birthday

Monday, March 16, 1987

Joint ventures look promising for you in the year ahead, especially if you associate yourself with someone with whom you have strong emotional bonds. You'll each protect the other's interest.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best to limit your business dealings today to people you've either dealt with previously or know by reputation to be ethical. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't agree to do something today that's not to your advantage just to appease a sensitive associate's feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be a trifle slow getting started today, and you're not apt to be productive unless you're working on something creative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Gauge your audience carefully today, and don't come on too strong about recent good fortune if one of your listeners appears envious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take time to put things back in their proper place around the house today, or you may go looking for something you need and find it has mysteriously disappeared.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before passing on information you are told today, be certain your informant has all the facts straight, or you're the one who'll look foolish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do some comparison shopping before making costly purchases today, or you might be talked into paying more for things than they are actually worth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When dealing with others today, flattery will not serve a useful purpose. If you feel a need to compliment anyone, be sure he or she is deserving.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Listen with your logic, not your emotions today. If your feelings dominate your thinking, you might be hurt over something where no ill will was intended.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If there is something expensive you want but can't afford at present, wait until you have the funds instead of running up new bills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Needless anxiety could impede your progress today. Don't carelessly leave the phone off the hook and then start worrying when no calls come through.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your initial impressions might not be wholly reliable today. Wait until you have sifted through all the facts before making major decisions.

SMU group named

DALLAS (AP) — United Methodist bishops, "appalled" at the pay-for-players scandal at Southern Methodist University, have begun their own probe into the events that led to the harshest NCAA penalty ever levied against a school's football program.

The bishops met for the first time Thursday to investigate whether current members of the SMU Board of Governors were involved in continuing improper payments to student-athletes.

Louis Schowengerdt, chairman of the executive committee of the church's South Central Jurisdiction, will head the Bishops' Committee. He was appointed by John Russell, president of the United Methodist College of Bishops, at the board's request.

"As United Methodists, we are appalled that SMU has continued to violate the rules of the NCAA," Russell said on presenting the charge to Schowengerdt. "I am greatly concerned corrective action promised the Board of Governors and Board of Trustees was never accomplished."

The NCAA Infractions Committee placed SMU on three years' probation for recruiting violations in 1985, then last month imposed a one-year "death penalty" on the university's football program for continued payments to student-athletes since then.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association canceled the school's 1987 football program and imposed other sanctions that are certain to cripple the SMU football program for several more years.

"We have no subpoena powers and we are not trying to conduct a lawsuit," Schowengerdt said. "We are looking for the truth so we can rebuild a relationship between a great university and a fine church."

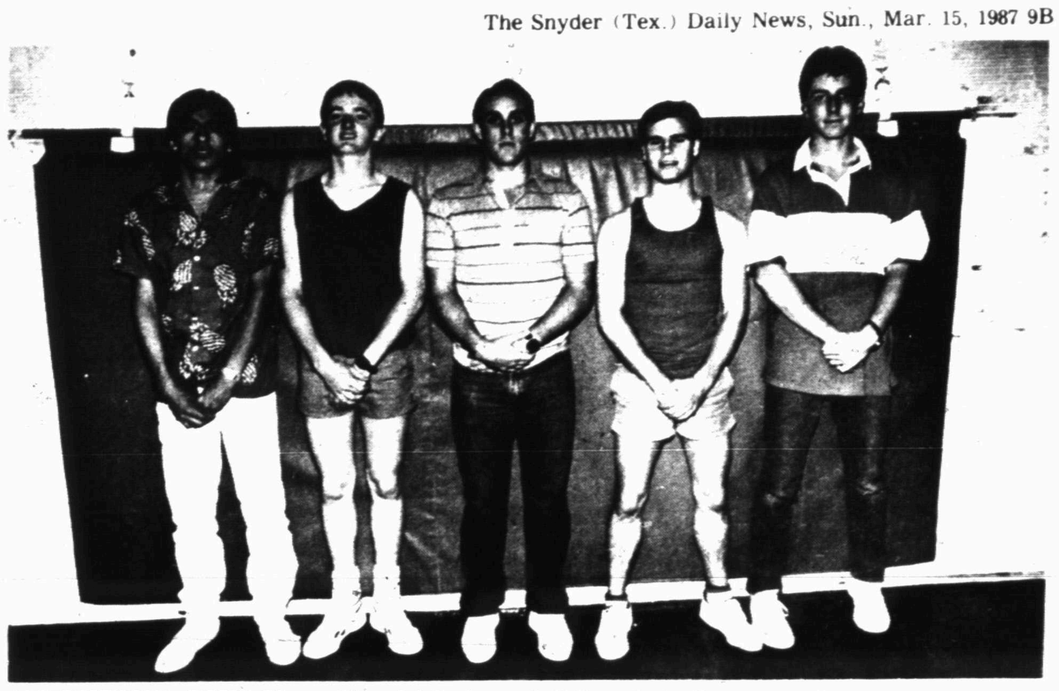

Russell charged the bishops to consider taking sworn depositions from all current board members if necessary to get to the heart of the matter.

He also encouraged them to interview Gov. Bill Clements and former board member Robert H. Stewart III, and ask them to disclose names of SMU officials who participated in any decision to make or continue payments.

Clements, who resigned as chairman of SMU's board before taking office in January, said last week that he and several other board members learned of illicit payments to players in 1984 and decided to phase the payment out.

The governor apologized Tuesday for not stopping the payments immediately.

In addition, Russell suggested that they interview anyone else knowing about payments to athletes, including John McElhaney, SMU's counsel during earlier NCAA investigations.

Illinois governor calls for supercollider cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — States should spend more time seeking congressional approval for a proposed $4.4 billion superconducting supercollider and less fighting over its location, says the governor of one contender for the project.

"While there is enthusiasm running high in 20 states, we want those 20 states working together in back of an effort that puts the Congress squarely behind the SSC," said Gov. James R. Thompson of Illinois.

The supercollider, described as the world's largest and costliest scientific instrument, is expected to create thousands of construction jobs and long-term employment for 2,500 scientists and technicians.

Because of its economic benefits, states vying for the right to house the giant atom-smasher have been jockeying for favored position both at home and on Capitol Hill.

But Thompson said his own state's congressional delegation promised during a meeting Thursday to set aside self-interest for the moment so they can accomplish a more immediate goal: funding for the project.

President Reagan sought congressional approval for the nuclear particle accelerator earlier this year, but the House and Senate have not acted on the request.

"This is a very difficult question, given the cost and the federal deficit," Thompson said. "There will be considerable competition for these dollars from other areas of scientific research."

The accelerator, a racetrack-shaped tube about 52 miles long, would whip proton beams together with such force that the collision would create subatomic particles that can be detected and analyzed, giving scientist insight into the nature of matter itself.

Illinois is considered a front-runner for the project because its Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory at Batavia houses one of the largest existing atom-smashers, an instrument which served as the scale model for the supercollider.

"We think, on the merits, Illinois ought to ultimately be selected," Thompson said. "But we think it's very important at this stage for people to take their name badges off their chests and not to focus on site selection."

The Department of Energy has set a timetable calling for final selection of the project site in January 1989.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, whose home state also is regarded as a top candidate, recently suggested DOE officials favored Illinois by recommending that each state submit only one proposal in the site-selection process.

However, Thompson said the Texas Democrat's criticism was without basis.

Comptroller Bob Bullock doubts legality of deficit

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says he doubts the legality of the Legislature leaving a $1 billion deficit on Aug. 31, as some legislative leaders advise.

Bullock said he is asking Attorney General Jim Mattox for a legal opinion on the subject.

"Right now, I'm afraid there are some people who believe ... the books do not have to balance on Aug. 31. I'm inclined to believe they do," Bullock told the Austin American-Statesman.

Bullock said if he is right that means the Legislature has to pass an emergency tax bill to raise $1 billion in revenue or make $1 billion in budget cuts.

"They've got to balance the books, is what I'm saying," Bullock said. "A lot of people say 'no' that's not right as long as they pay for the (the deficit) sometime in 1988-89, but to me that stretches the imagination, not to mention the law."

Bullock said he asked Mattox if the comptroller can certify a 1988-89 appropriations bill if the state lacks sufficient revenue to eliminate the current deficit by midnight Aug. 31, the end of fiscal 1987.

Bullock must certify there is enough revenue in sight to cover the 1988-89 appropriations bill before it becomes effective as scheduled on Sept. 1.

"I think the governor might have to have an emergency tax bill," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, when asked what would happen if Bullock is right.

To the question, "What did you do over spring break?" we replied, "Minded our own business, thank you."

Grrrrrrrrr! What else can you say about a holiday which, by circumstances of employment, left most of us on the wrong side of the shop window--nose to the glass and still half-an-inch away from the goodies?

Because a whole bunch of news comes from the public schools and college, we always feel particularly deserted over spring vacation.

The administrators, teachers and students whose activities we depend on were let loose to have fun. The rest of us, on the other hand, remained behind, sorrowful and full of self-pity.

Once again, it seems, life's pleasures are a re-routed bus line running on an unannounced schedule.

If spring break gives us the blues, it is afterward which is doubly hard. That's when all of those brown shoulders start showing up, making us realize that instead of at the beach, we spent our time encouraging osteoporosis by hunching over a layout table.

And it makes us realize again that every missed opportunity makes it harder to jump into spring.

Put another way, no one starts a tan in the middle of July.

The popular image of spring is of a season which encourages you to once again take up things set aside. The tennis racket in the back of the closet, those walking shoes you ordered from the catalogue store, the roto-tiller whose's shiny paint is gathering dust in the garage.

But, we see it likewise as a season for decision.

Winter time is an easy excuse to stay inside and isolated. This isolation places a shell around most folks--not unlike that of the cocoon.

To again take to the out-of-doors means breaking through that shell.

If you can't succeed in doing this during the breezy and sunlight-filled days of spring, you'll never accomplish it by early July, when the heat withers any outdoor enthusiasm like the winter blast chills it.

It is acceptable to bare pale shoulders, pink knees and frail, white feet in March or April. But in July, such characteristics will only bring you scorn from your tanned brethren--those cats who have absorbed so much oil since spring that their epidermal areas shine like polished oak.

No one says you have to compete with the hot dogs down at the marina. But, at least it's nice to have a little color.

We remember one husband saying that if it weren't for shopping, his wife would never go outside.

Using this example as an extreme, we've come to believe the pleasures of spring and the pleasures of summer which follow are like the pleasures of life. You can put them off only so long before you lose your chance at them.

Spring break is that annual first opportunity. And nothing sticks in the craw like a missed opportunity.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

What is it, I wonder, about the first shining days of spring that make us lazy, yet simultaneously stir us to action? On the one hand, we long to stretch out on a soft cushion of green grass, close our eyes to the warmth of the sun, and snooze. On the other hand, we yearn to dig, and mow, and groom the shaggy earth, neaten it up for long summer days. We think about maybe starting up a jogging program, something to make our blood pound and remind us that we are alive. Yet we can't seem to make up our minds. Like Scarlett, we'll think about it tomorrow.

Farmers are eager to be back at the plow, cowboys begin working horses grown fat and furry through winter's cold night. For a while, anyway. Some of the time is spent lounging in the saddle house doorway, thinking about all the things that need to be done. Tomorrow.

Kids play in stops and starts, running crazily through the soft spring air in short sleeves, then suddenly moping about, complaining that there is nothing to do. They start projects they will never finish, make plans for summer, and miss their friends one hour after school is out.

This Saturday was a typical stop-and-start early spring day for us. Although my profession requires me to read a great deal, as many as four or five books a week for research or study, I still feel guilty, reading on a day like Saturday, when the sun is flirtatious and the breeze alluring. My husband, bone-tired from a long work week, feels guilty trying to nap. That's the way of it, in early spring.

So we trek outside, I to my roses and he to his projects. I've waited too late to prune them but do it anyway, in a desultory, careless fashion, whacking away at them, knowing they will flourish no matter what I do to them. (I know this because our sheep, Bobbie Jo, once got into the front yard and ate most of the rose bushes. They bloomed more beautifully that year than any other time. I wonder if maybe I should let her do it again this year.)

The children twitter around like little birds, happy to have us outdoors. A bike-riding lesson is proposed for the little one, who reluctantly agrees, and off we go, up and down the road, taking turns running along behind her, shouting encouragement, cringing when she up-ends herself in the middle of a big tumbleweed. (Town kids don't know how easy they have it, learning to ride a bike on real pavement, with no tumbleweeds in the way.)

She tires and so do we, so we lie and tell her how great she's doing and wearily put away the bike until the next lesson, flopping onto shaggy green clumps of grass near the barn to rest. The inevitable football appears, and with it, the inevitable competition between brother and sister and dog. Yes, dog. Our dog wants the ball more than the kids and will risk his life to get it.

During a lull in the game, my daughter and I take turns braiding each other's long hair. Her's comes loose and catches the sun in crinkly gold strands and I smile at her. She is, of course, the most beautiful child in the world, with the possible exception of her bronzed and handsome brother.

I stretch out in the grass with a cat on my tummy. Long, green grass always smells cool. Why is that? The children shriek and the dog barks and my husband mumbles over his tools and a bike. The sky arches clear blue overhead; surely no other state but Texas can offer such a pure and vivid blue to ponder.

It's grown late, and the setting sun is directly in our faces. Time for chores like feeding animals and families, time to rouse ourselves to action. Some things, after all, must be done.

It doesn't seem that we have accomplished anything on this soft almost-spring day in March. Except maybe being together, and enjoying the cool smell of the grass.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
March 8

The settlement agreed to this week in the voter discrimination lawsuit involving the Snyder school district contains a provision which could see the board switch from a 4-3 to a 5-2 ratio regarding single member district and at-large seats.

It was reported Sunday the stipulation hinges on a separate court case now pending before the Fifth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

The efforts of three Snyder ISD staffers on state-level educational committees have given local officials some voice in implementing state-wide educational reform, it was reported Sunday.

Those serving to these state advisory groups include Mary Inez Brownlee, Ollie Peek and Dr. Tom Scannicchio.

MONDAY
March 9

Senior Citizens Center Director Jerry Baird discussed possible expansion of center facilities with county commissioners during their regular session Monday.

Snyder businessman Jerry McWilliams, who has served stints as both a city council member and school board trustee, was said in stable but serious condition Monday after apparently being kicked in the face by a horse around 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

TUESDAY
March 10

Some $3.9 million in disaster relief payments are being received by Scurry County producers and land owners due to adverse weather conditions which affected the 1986 harvest, it was reported Tuesday.

Last week, locals began receiving these disaster payments in the form of commodity certificates.

The general guideline of a 25 percent reduction continues to hold true for Snyder sales tax-figures with the recent reporting period, it was reported Tuesday.

Both the year-to-date figure for Snyder and the monthly report--reflecting sales made here during January--showed a 25 percent decline when compared to the same period in 1986.

For the year-to-date, the total now stands at $174,624, compared to $233,238 last year. The monthly report is $40,534 this past January compared to $55,589 during '86.

Cast assignments for Snyder High School's one-act play entry, "Hamlet," were announced by Jerry Worsham, director, Tuesday.

Brad Vincent will take the lead as Hamlet.

Bill Parker, newly named president of West Texas State Bank, told the annual gathering of bank stockholders Tuesday the institution is "sound, solvent and viable."

Parker, who was named president of the bank last Nov. 19, told the group that WTSB now has $85 million in total assets, enough to "support us and another bank."

Snyder Kiwanis Club members were far and away the winners Tuesday at a civic club competition conducted to boost donors at the regular Scurry County blood drive.

The club registered 67 percent of its membership to win a traveling trophy. Tuesday's drive included 188 individuals registering with 172 blood pints drawn.

WEDNESDAY
March 11

A final hurdle was cleared early Wednesday morning for the April 4 Snyder school board election and potential candidates for that ballot were encouraged to begin signing up immediately.

The deadline to file for five school board positions will be March 20, a Friday.

Wednesday morning, U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock gave a final go-ahead for the ballot by indicating he would sign documents approving the interim election now slated April 4.

Snyder pharmacist Jerry McWilliams succumbed Wednesday to head injuries suffered last Saturday. Services were scheduled for him Saturday.

McWilliams, 45, died at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

FRIDAY
March 13

As of noon Friday, a fourth candidate had announced for the Snyder school board, retired Snyder school teacher Billy Bob McMullan.

McMullan announced for an at-large position on the board. He became the third candidate seeking one of three posts which will be elected by all district voters.

Incumbent board member J.D. Hinton and local business owner Ruben Martinez have announced as at-large candidates also and Vernon James Clay has filed to represent District 1.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to say a few words in answer to Mrs. Richard Stuart's letter.

There is no need for anyone to be nervous about a minimum security prison unit being built here. The persons in such units are not violent criminals. Many simply "made a mistake" and definitely do not deserve to be housed with hardened or violent criminals.

Building a prison in El Paso would not benefit Scurry County taxpayers or business community, nor would it be beneficial to the majority of West Texas inmates' families who have to travel so far to visit their loved ones who are incarcerated.

Iris Bowlin

To the editor,

In answer to the letter last week from Mrs. Richard Stuart of Fisher County, I'd like to say, "There are some nervous people here in Scurry County, too."

In regard to the prison question now before us, I think it is ironic that our neighbors seem to be more concerned than the local citizenry.

Mrs. Stuart's comment is the second I've heard from someone out of Scurry County. Recently, while in Lubbock, I struck up a conversation with a nice young woman from Lamesa. After learning of mutual friends, the conversation turned to the economy. I told her what was happening in Snyder — that the Industrial Foundation was very excited about the possibility of a prison facility for our community. She was aghast and said, "Oh no, I hope not!"

Being surprised, I asked why that would bother her.

"We are too close," she said.

In all honesty, I also have to

There will be ample opportunities around you in the year ahead, but you must develop them properly. Be sure to see through to a satisfactory conclusion anything you begin.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Today try to steer clear of an acquaintance who tends to take you for granted. The harder you try to please him or her, the less satisfying you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker set instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Try to keep pace with your duties and responsibilities at this time. If you fall behind, it will be difficult to catch up. Set specific goals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Usually you're not the showboat type, but today you might try to upstage your pals in order to be the center of attention. Don't step out of character.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone you dislike may offer you advice today which you might reject just to prove him or her wrong. The suggestions shouldn't be treated capriciously.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A heavy-handed associate might treat you in an unfriendly fashion today. If you try to retaliate, it will only make a bad situation worse.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try to make do with what you have today. However, if you are compelled to borrow something that another prizes, treat it as respectfully as if it were your own.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Indecisiveness is not numbered among your basic characteristics, but today you may have a problem making up your mind and sticking to your decisions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) People who are willing to be of assistance today can't be expected to do everything for you. In fact, they may walk away if you fail to fend for yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're a very reliable person, but some of your friends may lack this quality today. Don't build your hopes on false premises assuming they're as dependable as you are.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Depending a little too heavily upon chance and luck to carry you through isn't a wise policy today. They're not allies you can count on.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When conversing with others today, if a pal tells a tall tale, don't try to top him or her. Your friend might get away with a snow job, but you won't.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Move cautiously in your commercial affairs today. If you get careless and make miscalculations, they could turn out to be more costly than usual.

Your Birthday

Monday, March 16, 1987

Joint ventures look promising for you in the year ahead, especially if you associate yourself with someone with whom you have strong emotional bonds. You'll each protect the other's interest.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) It's best to limit your business dealings today to people you've either dealt with previously or know by reputation to be ethical. Major changes are ahead for Pisces in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't agree to do something today that's not to your advantage just to appease a sensitive associate's feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could be a trifle slow getting started today, and you're not apt to be productive unless you're working on something creative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Gauge your audience carefully today, and don't come on too strong about recent good fortune if one of your listeners appears envious.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take time to put things back in their proper place around the house today, or you may go looking for something you need and find it has mysteriously disappeared.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Before passing on information you are told today, be certain your informant has all the facts straight, or you're the one who'll look foolish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Do some comparison shopping before making costly purchases today, or you might be talked into paying more for things than they are actually worth.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When dealing with others today, flattery will not serve a useful purpose. If you feel a need to compliment anyone, be sure he or she is deserving.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Listen with your logic, not your emotions today. If your feelings dominate your thinking, you might be hurt over something where no ill will was intended.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If there is something expensive you want but can't afford at present, wait until you have the funds instead of running up new bills.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Needless anxiety could impede your progress today. Don't carelessly leave the phone off the hook and then start worrying when no calls come through.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your initial impressions might not be wholly reliable today. Wait until you have sifted through all the facts before making major decisions.

SMU group named

DALLAS (AP) — United Methodist bishops, "appalled" at the pay-for-players scandal at Southern Methodist University, have begun their own probe into the events that led to the harshest NCAA penalty ever levied against a school's football program.

The bishops met for the first time Thursday to investigate whether current members of the SMU Board of Governors were involved in continuing improper payments to student-athletes.

Louis Schowengerdt, chairman of the executive committee of the church's South Central Jurisdiction, will head the Bishops' Committee. He was appointed by John Russell, president of the United Methodist College of Bishops, at the board's request.

"As United Methodists, we are appalled that SMU has continued to violate the rules of the NCAA," Russell said on presenting the charge to Schowengerdt. "I am greatly concerned corrective action promised the Board of Governors and Board of Trustees was never accomplished."

The NCAA Infractions Committee placed SMU on three years' probation for recruiting violations in 1985, then last month imposed a one-year "death penalty" on the university's football program for continued payments to student-athletes since then.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association canceled the school's 1987 football program and imposed other sanctions that are certain to cripple the SMU football program for several more years.

"We have no subpoena powers and we are not trying to conduct a lawsuit," Schowengerdt said. "We are looking for the truth so we can rebuild a relationship between a great university and a fine church."

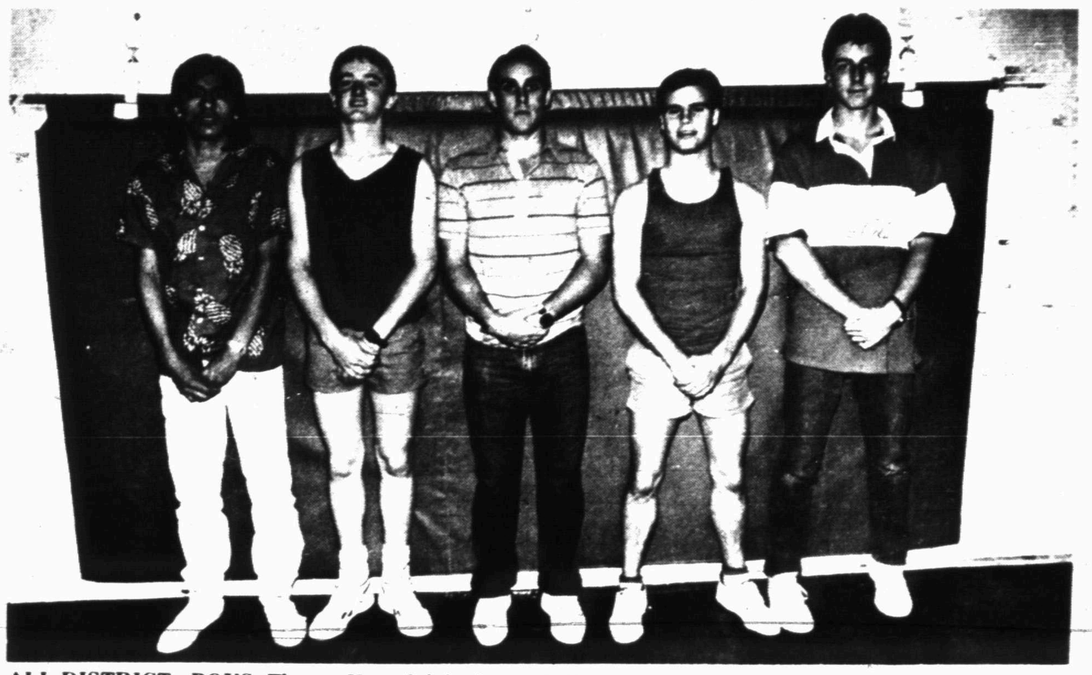

Russell charged the bishops to consider taking sworn depositions from all current board members if necessary to get to the heart of the matter.

He also encouraged them to interview Gov. Bill Clements and former board member Robert H. Stewart III, and ask them to disclose names of SMU officials who participated in any decision to make or continue payments.

Clements, who resigned as chairman of SMU's board before taking office in January, said last week that he and several other board members learned of illicit payments to players in 1984 and decided to phase the payment out.

The governor apologized Tuesday for not stopping the payments immediately.

In addition, Russell suggested that they interview anyone else knowing about payments to athletes, including John McElhaney, SMU's counsel during earlier NCAA investigations.

Illinois governor calls for supercollider cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — States should spend more time seeking congressional approval for a proposed $4.4 billion superconducting supercollider and less fighting over its location, says the governor of one contender for the project.

"While there is enthusiasm running high in 20 states, we want those 20 states working together in back of an effort that puts the Congress squarely behind the SSC," said Gov. James R. Thompson of Illinois.

The supercollider, described as the world's largest and costliest scientific instrument, is expected to create thousands of construction jobs and long-term employment for 2,500 scientists and technicians.

Because of its economic benefits, states vying for the right to house the giant atom-smasher have been jockeying for favored position both at home and on Capitol Hill.

But Thompson said his own state's congressional delegation promised during a meeting Thursday to set aside self-interest for the moment so they can accomplish a more immediate goal: funding for the project.

President Reagan sought congressional approval for the nuclear particle accelerator earlier this year, but the House and Senate have not acted on the request.

"This is a very difficult question, given the cost and the federal deficit," Thompson said. "There will be considerable competition for these dollars from other areas of scientific research."

The accelerator, a racetrack-shaped tube about 52 miles long, would whip proton beams together with such force that the collision would create subatomic particles that can be detected and analyzed, giving scientist insight into the nature of matter itself.

Illinois is considered a front-runner for the project because its Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory at Batavia houses one of the largest existing atom-smashers, an instrument which served as the scale model for the supercollider.

"We think, on the merits, Illinois ought to ultimately be selected," Thompson said. "But we think it's very important at this stage for people to take their name badges off their chests and not to focus on site selection."

The Department of Energy has set a timetable calling for final selection of the project site in January 1989.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, whose home state also is regarded as a top candidate, recently suggested DOE officials favored Illinois by recommending that each state submit only one proposal in the site-selection process.

However, Thompson said the Texas Democrat's criticism was without basis.

Comptroller Bob Bullock doubts legality of deficit

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says he doubts the legality of the Legislature leaving a $1 billion deficit on Aug. 31, as some legislative leaders advise.

Bullock said he is asking Attorney General Jim Mattox for a legal opinion on the subject.

"Right now, I'm afraid there are some people who believe ... the books do not have to balance on Aug. 31. I'm inclined to believe they do," Bullock told the Austin American-Statesman.

Bullock said if he is right that means the Legislature has to pass an emergency tax bill to raise $1 billion in revenue or make $1 billion in budget cuts.

" They've got to balance the books, is what I'm saying, " Bullock said. "A lot of people say 'no' that's not right as long as they pay for the (the deficit) sometime in 1988-89, but to me that stretches the imagination, not to mention the law."

Bullock said he asked Mattox if the comptroller can certify a 1988-89 appropriations bill if the state lacks sufficient revenue to eliminate the current deficit by midnight Aug. 31, the end of fiscal 1987.

Bullock must certify there is enough revenue in sight to cover the 1988-89 appropriations bill before it becomes effective as scheduled on Sept. 1.

"I think the governor might have to have an emergency tax bill," said Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, when asked what would happen if Bullock is right.

Dear Abby

Tenant's Little Secret Is Big Surprise to Landlord

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I own and manage a very nice small apartment building. We've never discriminated against anyone, and have always rented to tenants based on their applications being approved through credit checks, references, etc.

We recently rented an apartment to "Douglas," a nice single man or so we thought, then we noticed a strikingly glamorous woman leaving and entering his apartment with increasing frequency. One night last week we saw this woman beautifully dressed leaving Douglas' apartment, so I went out and asked her where Douglas was. She smiled and in a very husky voice replied, "I am Douglas, but when I'm in this attire you may call me Melanie."

Abby, we certainly don't want this type of person in our building. How can we get him out?

IN SHOCK

DEAR IN: Unless he creates a disturbance, damages your property, falls behind in his rent, or in some way becomes an undesirable tenant, if he has a lease, you cannot legally get him out. "This type" of person isn't harming anyone, so if you've never discriminated against anyone, please don't start now, and give Douglas high marks for honesty.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having problems with my husband of six years and need your opinion. I am 5-foot-5, 110 pounds and I'm considered very pretty. Yet I've been feeling very down because Tony is more interested in his Playboy magazines than in me. I'm lucky if he makes love to me once every six weeks.

I was very jealous of the girls in Playboy, so I had some pictures taken of me by a top professional photographer. There was nothing showing except a little bit of breast underneath a sheer fabric. When I gave Tony those pictures for Christmas, he just put them aside and hasn't looked at them to this day.

Abby, I thought the pictures were lovely. They gave me a totally new image of myself. I felt like a beautiful, sexy woman instead of a rejected, unloved housewife. I did this for both of us. Your opinion?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: There's nothing wrong with fantasizing — but it shouldn't be a substitute for the real thing.

Tony should see his doctor for a thorough examination to determine whether his low sex drive is the result of a hormonal deficiency or some kind of medical problem. If there is nothing physically wrong with him, his next stop should be a marriage counselor with you at his side.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: A 78-year-old gentleman is renting my spare room. He's good-natured and even-tempered, but after living alone for 40 years, he has acquired some habits that are driving me right to the funny farm. He slurps his coffee. I don't mean just a noisy sip; it sounds like he's trying to suck up the ocean. He follows me around with his coffee, and after each slurp, he emits a long, drawn-out gasp. "Ahhhh."

This morning I asked him nicely not to spit in the wastepaper basket. I need the rent, and he's a nice old fellow otherwise.

Anything you can suggest to make me more tolerant will be greatly appreciated. I wouldn't hurt his feelings for the world.

UP THE WALL

DEAR UP: Slurping his coffee is an unconscious habit, and unless you call his attention to it, he will never know that it irritates you. So tell him, nicely. But spitting in the wastebasket is more than an annoyance — it's a health hazard. Be firm about both, but doubly firm about the latter.

DEAR ABBY: I saw this message framed on the wall of a high school counselor's office, and think it deserves a larger audience. If you agree, please pass it along to your readers. If you think high school is boring, wait until you sit around an unemployment office. Sign me...

Solon seeking end to battle

AUSTIN (AP) — A dispute between shrimpers and environmentalists over a fishing device meant to save endangered sea turtles may have to be settled by Congress.

Rep. John Willy, R-Angleton, told a room crowded with shrimping industry workers on Wednesday that he plans to ask Texas lawmakers to pass a resolution asking for Congressional oversight in the debate.

Willy said shrimpers are being unfairly blamed for the decline in the population of sea turtles, namely the endangered Kemp Ridley. He says Turtle Exclusion Devices required on trawlers will hurt the Texas shrimping industry.

"You have enough problems as it is than to put up with the expenses and dangers of these devices," Willy told the group.

Hearings that began this month are being held in coastal cities on proposed federal regulations on the devices.

Willy said he plans to ask the Texas Legislature to pass a resolution asking for Congressional oversight of the debate.

"In my opinion there will be no changes" after this month's hearings, Willy said. "I think the only thing that the shrimpers have is the congressional oversight."

Environmentalists have threatened to file a lawsuit against the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration for failing to enforce the Endangered Species Act. The hearings are a result of the threat.

The environmental groups claim sea turtle populations are dwindling because many get caught in shrimping nets and die.

But Willy and shrimpers say Mexico is responsible for much of the disappearance of sea turtles. The turtle is used for food and turtle eggs are thought to be an aphrodisiac in Mexico, Willy said.

Shrimpers argue that the Turtle Exclusion Devices — TEDs — are expensive and dangerous and not very effective. They contend the devices were tested for efficency off the coast of Florida where the turtle population is much higher.

"The shrimp industry, which is 100 percent united against TEDs — is not against the sea turtles," said C.L. Standley, president of Professional Involvement of Seafood Concerned Enterprises.

"The environmentalists are not our enemies. We share much of the same concerns," Standley added. "But, these TEDs don't do what they are supposed to."

Standley said shrimpers lose some of their catch because of the devices and are a threat to crew members.

"This thing could conceiveably kill more people than save sea turtles," he said.

Giant galaxy may be largest object

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers say a long-overlooked galaxy drifting in the void between the Milky Way and the Andromeda constellation is one of the largest objects in the universe.

Markarian 348, an isolated, average-looking collection of stars and gas that astronomers have glanced at for 20 years, now appears to be the largest known galaxy, a report published today in the journal Science says.

Using a powerful radio telescope to peer past clouds of gas and the glare of background starlight, scientists say they found the galaxy to be a giant spiral of stars swollen with a massive hydrogen cloud to 13 times the size of the Milky Way.

The galaxy, located 300 million light-years from Earth, is an oddly shaped mass of stars and gases which puts out many times the energy of a normal galaxy and a brightness 100 billion times that of the sun, the scientists said.

Astronomers said Markarian 348 is 1.3 million light-years in diameter. This is a giant compared with the Milky Way, in which the Earth's solar system is located. The Milky Way measures about 100,000 light-years in diameter and contains billions of stars.

A light-year is the distance light travels in a vacuum at 186,000 miles per second in a year's time — about 5.9 trillion miles.

Dr. Susan M. Simkin, professor of astronomy at Michigan State University, made the discovery with Dr. Hong-Jun Su of Nanjing, China, formerly a visiting scientist at Michigan State, and Drs. Jacqueline van Gorkom and John Hibbard of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Socorro, N.M.

The galaxy appears to have at least one, and possibly two, long spiraling arms which are tightly wound near the center and branch out at irregular angles.

More interesting than the galaxy's size, the scientists report, is the action of the great cloud of hydrogen that surrounds it. The gas cloud appears to be moving in a tidal fashion under the gravitational influence of a smaller, nearby galaxy, they said.

The galaxy may be so large because of the tidal interaction with the smaller companion, Simkin said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Gravity from the small galaxy appears to make the gas undulate around the core of Markarian 348, much as the moon causes tides in the Earth's oceans, she said. The gas gains momentum from the orbital motion of the smaller galaxy, causing it to spread out.

University students admit illegal calls

DALLAS (AP) — More than 1,000 students at North Texas State University in Denton have admitted illegally using MCI billing codes to make more than $100,000 in phone calls, MCI officials said.

The confessions came after an offer from the long-distance telephone company not to prosecute students who came forward by Feb. 27.

The 1,020 students who admitted making the calls will be billed, and a small number of others who remained silent will be prosecuted, MCI spokesman John Houser said Wednesday.

"We're preparing cases on half a dozen of the most flagrant abusers," said Houser. He said those students either chalked up several hundred dollars worth of calls or were "bragging about having escaped our claws."

Most students began using MCI codes in August, but some started using the codes more than a year ago, Houser said.

"The rumor on campus was that MCI had given a free Watts line to the school," he said. "I can't believe that a lot of students were taken in under that guise, but they were."

Over the past 13 years, nearly 70 people have been killed on California's Imperial Sand Dunes, most in accidents involving recreational vehicles, says National Geographic.

The nucleus of Halley's Comet is the size of Manhattan.

River Walk project to proceed as slated

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Renovations to the River Walk will proceed on schedule this summer despite earlier pleas from merchants that the repairs could hurt their business.

The merchants reversed their position on Thursday, saying that repairing dangerous bridges and crumbling river walls was important.

"The value of human life is much greater than our fears of visitors' impressions or other commercial concerns," said Robert Buchanan, president of the Paseo del Rio Association.

Fred Pfeiffer, general manager of the San Antonio River Authority, told the City Council later Thursday that the construction will not be changed, but that two crews will be hired to expedite the work during the summer, the peak tourist season.

Bids on the six projects estimated to cost between $5 million and $7 million will be awarded in May and construction will begin soon after.

The main channel of the river will be drained for repair work, but the water level will remain constant in an area near most businesses catering to tourists, officials said.

The work is expected to be completed in time for the Christmas River Parade on Nov. 27.

Hearst Corporation buys Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — The Hearst Corp. is making the biggest newspaper purchase in its 100-year history with a $400 million acquisition of the largest daily newspaper in Texas — the Houston Chronicle.

The sale, annnounced Thursday, ends the ownership of the Houston Endowment Inc., a non-profit corporation, which by federal law needed to divest itself of the newspaper by 1989.

"We're very, very confident in your management and you," said Frank Bennack Jr., Hearst president and chief executive officer told the newsroom staff. "This is one of the country's greatest newspapers. It's a great decision."

The newspaper, which publishes morning and afternoon editions, lists its paid circulation as 425,434 daily and 528,153 Sunday. The Dallas Morning News lists its daily circulation as 390,987 and its Sunday circulation as 531,417.

"We're disappointed it had to happen, but you go on," Richard J.V. Johnson, Chronicle president and now publisher, said at a Thursday night news conference.

The Tax Reform Act requires that tax-exempt foundations divest themselves of control of operating companies after May 26, 1989. Attempts to exempt the Chronicle from the law and prevent its sale were unsuccessful.

Johnson described Hearst' proposal as the best offer received and said he was pleased with the sale.

Bennack said the sale involved $300 million in cash and $100 million in notes. Hearst and Chronicle officials would not discuss further details of the transaction.

The acquistion is Hearst's largest newspaper purchase and its second biggest purchase behind last year's $450 million acquisition of Boston television station WCVB, said Bennack, a former publisher at the San Antonio Light, another Hearst-owned newspaper.

Houston Endowment was the charitable trust established by the late Jesse H. Jones and his wife, Mary Gibbs Jones. Jones was a Houston financier and publisher of the Chronicle, which was founded in 1901.

The sale came one week after the Chronicle eliminated 52 full-time positions, including 47 layoffs: five from the newsroom, 12 in advertising, seven in production and 28 in other areas.

Last year, the paper offered voluntary retirement to employees over age 55 with at least 10 years service. A second phase of that program included a cash incentive to any salaried employee who voluntarily resigned.

At the time, Chronicle executives blamed the depressed energy industry for the newspaper's sluggish sales. The programs trimmed the Chronicle payroll by 184 employees, bringing total employment now to 2,000.

No immediate changes in the newspaper's operations were announced Thursday.

"You will continue to operate very much as you do now," Bennack told the newsroom staff.

"We're going to make as few changes as possible throughout the company, including the editorial department," Johnson added.

Bennack said Hearst hoped to close the deal between May 1 and June 1.

In Texas, New York-based Hearst also owns the Light, Beaumont Enterprise, Laredo Morning Times, Midland Reporter-Telegram and the Plainview Daily Herald.

The company was founded 100 years ago this month when on March 4, 1887, Randolph Hearst, became proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner.

At the rival Houston Post, Editor-in-Chief Peter O'Sullivan said he welcomed the purchase. The Post was sold in October 1983 to the Toronto Sun Publishing Co. for $100 million.

"We're not unhappy about it. In fact, we're pleased," he said. "We felt at some time The Post had been put at a disadvantage because it's in a position of competing with a newspaper funded by a giant charity, which doesn't have to answer to the business bottom line. So we're looking forward to spirited and now fair competition."

O'Sullivan, however, said he was surprised by the price.

"It seems extremely high, given that The Post was bought about 3½ years ago in the region of $100 million," he said.

Bruce Thorp, a newspaper industry analyst in Washington with John Morton & Co., described the $400 million sale price as "a pretty full amount" for a competitive paper.

"I think it works out to more than $900 per subscriber, which is more in line with prices we've been seeing for non-competitive markets," Thorp said. "I'm sure Hearst has seen more information about the paper and has a good understanding of the market and obviously feels it can get a good return."

Thorp said Hearst's ability to make money would depend on Houston's sagging economy.

Bennack, however, said he is optimistic about Houston's recovery.

"It's my belief this is one of the nation's greatest cities," he said. "I think the future is bright."

The Chronicle failed to respond to a higher offer from William Dean Singleton, a native Texan who bought the Dallas Times Herald for $110 million last year, said Christopher Shaw, chairman of Henry Ansbacher Inc., a New York investment firm specializing in media purchases.

"A five-mile walk will do more good to an unhappy but otherwise healthy person than all the medicine and psychology in the world," said Dr. Paul Dudley White (physician to U.S. presidents). In emotionally upset people, muscles usually become tense. As little exercise as a 15 minute walk can effect relaxation.

voice some real concerns. I want to know the specific problems associated with having a prison facility located in our county.

I want a clear definition of the type offenses committed by prisoners who will be housed in a minimum and medium security facility. I want to know if the type prison could later be changed, and by whom.

I want to know how often there is an escape from a state and/or private prison. How do the townspeople deal with that? Will expenses for local law enforcement be increased because of this threat? How much?

I want to know the growth rate of a town after it becomes a prison town. Is there ever any other industry attracted to a prison town?

Won't supplies and food for the prison system be purchased by bid, from wholesalers or through the state? How will that benefit local businesses?

I want to know the starting salaries of the guards. I have had answers of $13,000 to $16,000 to $20,000. That's quite a difference, I think.

I believe we need to know more about the problems that come with a prison system. We have heard the monetary benefits. We need to carefully weigh those benefits versus the problems. Only then can we make an honest decision.

Let's not be swept away by the sparkle of dollar signs before our eyes until we learn the cost of the consequences.

In the early days before Snyder became a town, this place was called "Robber's Roost" because of the outlaws who were here. Many people have spent years erasing that image from our history. Do we really want to invite 1,000 outlaws to live here permanently? Do we really want to go from the image of an All American City to that of a Prison Town?

Please think about it. Then let our state senator and state representative know your thoughts.

Combined voting proposal introduced in House, Senate

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats say Republican legislative plans for a joint Democrat-Republican primary in 1988 would merely shift election costs from the state to the counties.

"A unified primary is not a money-saver," the Legislative Democratic Caucus said in a statement Thursday.

The comment came shortly after a news conference by Secretary of State Jack Rains, an appointee of Republican Gov. Bill Clements, endorsing the single primary bill introduced in the Senate and House.

Rains said using a single primary system in 1988 would save the state about $5.5 million, plus doing away with about 6,000 election workers.

"It would be handled like a general election is now," said Rep. Richard Smith, R-Bryan. "The only difference at the primary would be two different ballots."

"It is estimated that the 1988 "Super Tuesday" primary elections would cost $10.6 million to administer under the present law," said Rains, the state's chief election officer. "The cost of Super Tuesday under a single location primary schemes would cost a little more than $5 million."

Karen Gladney, director of the elections division in Rains' office, estimated a turnout of 35 percent of eligible voters on March 8, 1988, when Texas will join about a dozen other states in staging early primaries in an attempt to affect selection of presidential candidates.

Texas also will hold its party nominations for local and state candidates at that time instead of the second Saturday in May.

"Election law recodification and a new Super Tuesday primary already pose a lot of changes for election workers," said a statement from the steering committee of the Legislative Democratic Caucus. "Facing record turnouts in less than a year, confusion from any further election law changes should be avoided."

The Democrats statement said a "unified primary" in every precinct would assist Republican efforts to win courthouse position and rural legislative seats before 1991 redistricting.

The single primary bill by Smith, and Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, would say primary elections in a county must be conducted jointly at the regular polling place for the general election of state and county officers.

The county commissioners court would appoint the presiding election judge from one party and the alternate presiding judge from another party. There would be separate, different-colored, ballots for each party.

Separate election returns would be prepared and canvassed separately.

The bills say the county would provide, without charge, all county-owned voting system equipment.

Dismay from a deep friend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Apprehensions from Israel's backers that Secretary of State George P. Shultz would impose unreasonable pressures on Jerusalem melted away soon after the former Bechtel executive became secretary of state.

He did not demand the kind of concessions that were sought during the Carter administration. U.S. strategic ties to Israel were strengthened. The one time economics professor even helped straighten out the ravaging inflation that threatened Israel perhaps as much as Arab enemies.

So it was with a special poignance that Shultz, describing himself as a "deep friend," registered his disappointment this week over Israeli spying on the United States. Almost simultaneously with his statement to a House appropriations subcommittee, the Israeli Cabinet reversed its hands-off policy and appointed a panel to look more closely into the Jonathan Jay Pollard spy affair.

Shultz, an ex-Marine whose patriotism is easily aroused, said Israel had cooperated with U.S. investigators only "to a degree." He denounced as unwarranted the promotion of two Israelis accused of playing prominent roles in the delivery of thousands of top-secret U.S. documents.

Although Shultz cautioned against upsetting the "fundamental" U.S.-Israeli relationship, he said of the spy operation: "There is no way to hide the distress we feel about it."

Pollard, a former U.S. Navy intelligence analyst and a Jew, may have been influenced by devotion to Israel in participating in the scheme to provide Jerusalem with U.S. material on Arab defenses.

The Pollard case is expected to be discussed next week when about 65 American Jewish leaders travel to Israel to meet with some of the nation's government officials, including Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Richard Cohen, spokesman for the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, an umbrella organization for most U.S. Jewish groups, said Thursday the trip had been scheduled for some time and was not being made in specific reaction to the Pollard affair.

But, he said, "I think they will express concern at signs of U.S. discontent with Israel because of the Pollard case."

American aid to Israel surpasses assistance to any other country. It is now running at $3 billion a year. Budget trimmers in Congress may take a closer look, although Shultz is trying to keep the aid flow constant.

Cannon is split open

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A 450-year-old cannon was split open by Texas A&M University nautical archaeologists who hope the sacrifice will help them better clean and preserve other shipboard pieces.

Searchers recovered the pieces from one of the oldest European shipwrecks in the New World.

A diamond-tipped rock saw was used Wednesday to split the 6-foot swivel gun lengthwise to expose inner corrosion and concretion. The cutting showed how the wrought iron piece was manufactured by European gun masters, said Jody Simmons, a researcher and armaments specialist.

The cannon now will serve as a combined laboratory museum, library and a show-and-tell piece for explaining the research to other scholars and the public, he said.

San Antonio school district bans tobacco

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A school district has voted to ban the use of tobacco in its buildings beginning in September, officials said.

The North East School District trustees voted 4-1 Thursday to ban smoking and other tobacco use and said the district will offer free stop-smoking clinics to employees.

Superintendent Arnold Oates Jr. said he is unaware of any other district comtemplating similar policy.

Smoking will not be permitted in any school or office building, but outside facilities, such as tennis courts and the football stadium, will be exempt, trustees said.

The vote was criticized by some employees.

"Are coffee drinkers going to have to worry about the coffee machine? Are fat people going to have to worry aout the snack machine?" Northern Hills Elementary School teacher Arthur Davis asked.

Trustee Molly Pruitt, who opposed the measure, said it was another blow to teacher morale.

The board banned smoking by students last September and some trustees said that teachers should be role models.

Fuel use act repeal argued before Senate subcommittee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry officials urged senators to repeal sections of the Fuel Use Act of 1978 that bar the use of oil and gas in new power plants, but some lawmakers were a bit skeptical.

"If we repeal the restrictions on natural gas use, where will the gas supplies come from?" asked Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee on regulation.

"Who will ensure adequate supplies for priority users and protect residential consumers from skyrocketing price increases?" he asked at the Thursday hearing.

The Fuel Use Act prohibits the burning of oil and gas in new power plants and bars the building of plants without alternate fuel capacity, rules intended to reduce demand for natural gas at a time when supplies were short.

"This restriction has inhibited market forces by dictating fuel choices for utilities and industrial users," said Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M. "We should now return the choice to marketplace forces."

Gas and electric power industry representatives urged subcommittee members to relax the regulations and allow the energy market to function naturally in light of today's gas surplus and low oil prices.

"What we need is flexibility in the marketplace rather than rigid rules," said Nicholas J. Bush, president of the Natural Gas Supply Association.

Bush described coal as the fuel of the 21st century and said that because of its limited availability, producers understand that it will function only as a transitional fuel in power plants for the next 15 to 20 years.

Even coal industry representatives, who were the direct beneficiaries of the Act, agreed that the market should command what fuel is used in power plants rather than the government.

"We in the coal industry support repeal of the ban on the use of oil or natural gas in new plants," said Chris Farrand, testifying on behalf of the National Coal Association and American Mining Congress. "We believe that the market conditions ought to dictate the choice of fuels."

But Farrand favored an amendment that would require new power plants be designed so that future voluntary conversion to coal use would not be precluded, a view shared by several senators on the subcommittee.

Edwin S. Rothschild, assistant director of the Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition, said that in spite of the current surplus of natural gas, drilling efforts over the last 10 years have failed to replenish production.

"As a result, the United States has less proven natural gas reserves than it did in 1978 when the Fuel Use Act was passed," Rothschild said.

"Congress should immediately investigate the state of the nation's gas reserves to determine whether or not they will be sufficient to support increases in demand as projected by such organizations as the American Gas Association," he said.

The same arguments were brought before the House Energy and Commerce energy and power subcommittee on Wednesday, during which Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, said repeal of the Act would pump $500 million quickly into the sagging economies of producing states such as Texas.

Adolf Hitler launched his first attempt at seizing power in Germany with a coup in Munich Nov. 8, 1923. It was known as the "Beer-Hall Putsch" and it failed. Hitler wound up in prison, serving a sentence for high treason. It was in prison that Hitler wrote his political tract, "Mein Kampf."

Even Latin American countries with large areas of uncultivated land in frontier regions should concentrate on increasing agricultural productivity in areas that are already settled, according to the InterAmerican Development Bank. All but a small fraction of the region's unused land consists of acid soils that most farmers cannot proftably cultivate for more than a few years. Furthermore, most of Latin America's agricultural land reserves are presently forested and their removal could cause environmental problems.

Government still said to play too big a role

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Business leaders are accusing President Miguel de la Madrid's administration of being slow to implement a plan to reduce the government's bloated role in the battered Mexican economy.

They also say a lack of information about the progress of the plan is causing confusion.

The most precise criticism yet came in a report released this week by the Center for Economic Studies of the Private Sector, a research organization created by the country's leading business and industrial organizations.

Among other things, it accused the government of dragging its feet in divesting itself of hundreds of state-owned enterprises, which the de la Madrid administration promised to do four years ago in order to help reduce the huge national budget deficit.

Although there are no reliable statistics, the ballpark figure used by economists is that the government owns or controls about 80 percent of Mexico's economic activity, from industrial monopolies to tiny businesses.

Constitutional provisions stipulate the petroleum, heavy petrochemical, power generating, nuclear, telecommunications and railroad industries should be outright state monopolies.

But over the past 50 years, the government also has been acquiring part or complete ownership in hundreds of businesses, from airlines to nightclubs, hotels, movie theaters chains and studios, and even small laundry chains and tiny tortilla-making factories in remote areas.

It has virtual monopolies on coffee and sugar exports, steel and iron making, commercial aviation, banking and dozens of other activities. The various departments also have majority or minority shares in hundreds more companies, from automobile and truck assembly plants to shipyards.

The Mexico City government, for instance, owns Atlante, the country's most popular soccer team, which it bought at couple of years ago from the Mexican Social Security Institute.

Virtually all of them are money losers.

The enterprises were acquired by the government to keep them from closing down and thus save jobs — one of the main planks of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, which has held power in Mexico since its founding in 1929.

Mexico has a high population growth rate that far exceeds its economic capacity.

Although the growth rate dropped from a record high of 3.4 to 2.1 percent in the past decade, the country still needs to create 1 million new jobs annually — from now until the end of the century — just to provide for youths seeking employment for the first time.

The government traditionally has been the main source of employment.

Government employment, financed by oil-export dollars, soared to an all-time high under the 1976-1982 administration of President Jose Lopez Portillo, when the number of state-owned companies surpassed 2,000.

Mineral oil has drawbacks

DEAR DR GOTT — Three years ago, a proctologist found a small tumor at the edge of my rectal opening. He recommended I do nothing but take a tablespoon of laxative every evening. This helped my constipation, but I'm concerned about the long-term use of the medicine, because it is mostly mineral oil. What do you think?

DEAR READER — If your "tumor" is a growth, it should be removed. If it is simply a swelling such as a hemorrhoidal vein, it can be treated without surgery. Mineral-oil laxatives are not appropriate for long-term use; they can cause laxative-dependency, vitamin deficiency, stomach cramps and (if accidently inhaled) a type of interstitial lung disease called lipoid pneumonia. Try giving up laxatives. Instead, use bran, vegetable fiber and or foods rich in potassium, such as prunes and apricots. And check back with your doctor for a followup.

DEAR DR GOTT — I had a mild myocardial infarction six years ago. My doctor (now retired) suggested that I take an aspirin a day to help prevent another attack. My present doctor recommends at least two buffered aspirin daily, but articles I've read say a baby aspirin is sufficient. How many should I be taking?

DEAR READER — Two adult aspirin a day is probably more than is needed to reduce your blood's tendency to form clots. One baby aspirin a day is sufficient. Many doctors choose a middle ground and recommend one adult aspirin a day for patients who have had strokes or heart attacks.

DEAR DR GOTT — I had a mammogram after the doctor diagnosed some fibrous tissue in my breast. During the next six months, I developed two cysts (which were aspirated) and a nodule (which was surgically removed). Could the mammogram have caused the cysts? I'm 42.

DEAR READER — Fibrous (scar) tissue in the breasts is often lumpy and may be associated with cysts. In fact, this condition is called fibrocystic disease. It's unlikely that the mammogram played any role in the development of your breast problems. In fact, the mammogram was undoubtedly helpful in differentiating your benign breast disease from a more serious variety.

Britain has a better way

After the Los Angeles County Medical Association initiated a computerized service to inform doctors of patients who had filed malpractice suits, California lawyers offered a hot line to let people know how often their doctors had been sued. Because of lack of interest, the physicians' machination has been discontinued. However, the attorneys' hotline has been so successful that extra personnel have been hired to manage the telephones.

In Georgia, some obstetricians recently refused to take care of female lawyers. Medical malpractice rates were soaring and the doctors wanted to express disapproval, as well as to limit their risk of being sued.

A Florida company that notifies patients of their doctors' liability profiles plans to expand its operations into Illinois and New York. In New Jersey, an organization that was originally formed to notify doctors of litigious patients now caters to patients only; physicians and surgeons simply failed to use the agency.

Stories like these are becoming common as doctors and attorneys wrestle with each other — and with the increasing problem of medical malpractice. It's no wonder, then, that legal experts are looking at how other countries handle malpractice litigation. In particular, Britain is at.

Britain has National Health Service, a form of socialized medicine available to all citizens and provided by more than 90 percent of the nation's physicians. U.S. doctors consider NHS to be the antithesis of good medical care — yet British patients seldom complain about the quality of care and almost never file malpractice suits. Malpractice premiums do not exceed $500 a year in England, compared to figures approaching $80,000 in the United States.

The unique status of NHS certainly helps to dampen enthusiasm for litigation. For example, medical care is free, so no one can sue for future medical costs. In addition, there is a formal and unified complaint process available to every British citizen.

When a patient submits a written complaint about a doctor, a local health authority arranges a meeting between the patient and the physician, during which the doctor offers tracting more attention because British doctors are rarely sued — and when they are, the settlements are a fraction of those in the United States' explanations or apologies. The matter is resolved in a majority of cases. If the health administrator and the patient aren't satisfied, the case is referred to a two-physician tribunal. Neither side is permitted to have legal representation, and the patient must agree not to sue. The tribunal's findings are not legally binding, but its recommendations are usually followed. Either the case is dismissed or the doctor is investigated for unethical conduct.

If the patient is still dissatisfied, he or she can ask for a review of the complaint by a regional NHS ombudsman.

If a doctor is found to have been negligent and not to have fulfilled his duty to NHS, he can be disciplined with a fine or by suspension.

Although this formal system takes care of most patients' complaints, some malpractice cases are filed. These are reviewed by professional medical committees that are authorized to offer fair settlements if the patient suffered real damages. Those who decline the settlements and opt for the courtroom have a difficult task. There are no contingency fees (English lawyers consider them unethical); the doctor cannot be found negligent if he exercised "reasonable skill" or made simple "errors of judgment"; many attorneys try to avoid malpractice suits; and British courts have put a cap on informed-consent cases. Punitive damages are rare; pain-and-suffering awards are far lower in England than in the United States.

The British public appears to have a somewhat laissez faire attitude toward life's problems. Rudolf Klein, director of the Centre for the Analysis of Social Policy at the University of Bath, says that "we British don't believe the world can be put totally right. We accept our problems and are rather fatalistic about our capacity to deal with some of them. In contrast, America is a perfectability of man society. The view is that if there's a problem, you can solve it."

We Americans may not be ready for a British invasion of medical ethics in trim red-coated lines. Nonetheless, the English seem to be content for the moment with a malpractice arrangement that is founded on three principles: arbitration, mediation and a national conviction that doctors, being human, are imperfect. If we could adopt some of their civilized beliefs, perhaps we could moderate the eye-gouging, kidney-punching and ear-biting adversarial scheme of malpractice litigation that is favored in this country.

Further study planned

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate committee has taken under consideration almost 50 proposals designed to stem rising prices of liability insurance and the increasing size of awards in personal injury suits.

The Senate Economic Development Committee Thursday completed public testimony of the proposals, which will be assigned to subcommittees for further study on Monday, said chairman Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas.

A similar number of measures are pending in the House.

Most of the bills resulted from a year-long investigation by a joint House-Senate group on the cost and availability of liability insurance.

One of the last witnesses Thursday — Evelyn Ireland, representing the National Association of Independent Insurers — opposed one bill that would create a separate counsel to represent consumers in rate hearings before the State Board of Insurance.

"The state board has demonstrated an unusually high degree of consumer sensibility," she said.

Ms. Ireland said the NAII, along with the Insurance League of Texas, opposed a measure by Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, to create an office of insurance counsel in the Board of Insurance to represent consumers, similar to that in the Public Utility Commission.

"Insurance is a competitive business, not a monopoly like the utilities appearing before PUC," she said. "The state board sets maximum insurance rates but individual companies can deviate from those."

She said the law also says the attorney general can intervene to protect the public in insurance rate cases.
