Two found guilty in King case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two Los Angeles police officers were found guilty Saturday of federal civil rights violations in the videotaped beating of black motorist Rodney King that shocked the nation. Two others were acquitted.

Sgt. Stacey Koon and Officer Laurence Powell were convicted while Officer Theodore Briseno and former officer Timothy Wind were acquitted.

Koon, the supervisor at the March 1991 beating scene, was convicted of allowing King's civil rights to be violated. Powell, who delivered the most baton blows on the videotape, was convicted of violating those rights.

The jury reached its verdict Friday afternoon after 40 hours of deliberations. The judge sealed the verdict overnight.

A state jury a year ago took 32 hours to acquit the same four officers of most assault charges, deadlocking on one; that decision prompted three days of deadly rioting.

City police mobilized all their officers this morning in anticipation of the decision. About 600 National Guard troops were standing by in armories.

In churches in the South Central neighborhood, hard-hit by last spring's rioting, ministers and parishioners prayed through the night.

The two convicted face up to 10 years in prison and $250,000 in fines. Sentencing was set for Aug. 4.

Judge John G. Davies thanked the jurors, saying, "I want to let you know the great appreciation the court and the system has for the services and for the efforts each of you have put into this case." Jurors have been sequestered since late February.

The case sparked racial tensions because King is black and the officers white. The federal jury had

Oryx will resign as plant operator

Oryx Energy Company Friday afternoon announced its intent to resign as operator of two gas processing plants in Scurry County.

Certified letters were mailed Friday afternoon notifying interest owners of Oryx's intent to cease management of the Snyder Gas Plant and the Diamond M plant.

Oryx's interest in the two plants have been on the market since October, 1991, when the Dallas-based company announced a company-wide restructuring program designed to cut costs by $100 million per year.

In addition to the work force reduction, Oryx said it hoped to raise approximately $400 million through sale of certain assets which included all its gas processing plants.

Several buyers have inspected the two Snyder-area plants, but no transactions have been completed. It was reported that one possible sale negotiation was ended on Thursday.

According to informed sources, the operating agreement concerning the Snyder Gas Plant requires 60-days notice before the resignation is official. The Diamond M Plant requires 120-day notice.

The two plants employ a total of approximately 65 persons. When Oryx announced its intent to sell its interest, Orxy said it owned about 11.75 percent interest in the Snyder Gas Plant and about 35 percent in the Diamond M plant after the purchase of BHP's interest in 1989. Also for sale is Oryx's 27.1 perecent interest in the SACROC unit.

Oryx employees were notified of the decision just before noon Friday. The employment future of the gas plant employees was unknown.

Pace picks up at WTC Rodeo here

Roughstock riders held on but new leaders jumped to the front in most of the timed events during Friday's performance of the Western Texas College NIRA Rodeo.

Western Texas cowboy Thad Little led a full assault in the steer wrestling, which saw Thursday's best time pushed to fourth place.

Little put his steer down in 4.1 seconds while Brad Stewart of Howard College clocked a 4.4 and Justin Peevey of Western Texas notched a 4.5. Thursday night leader Cody Ohl of Vernon slipped to fourth with his 5.1.

The rodeo continues in Scurry County Coliseum with finals at 8 p.m. Saturday. A WTC Exes Rodeo will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $4 for adults and $3 for students at the door.

Light turnout for early voting

The school funding amendments and U.S. Senate elections drew the most attention from voters during the first week of early balloting, completed Friday.

According to the county clerk's office, 107 people had cast ballots in person by 5 p.m. Friday. Four others had been received through the mail and 14 mail ballots were still out.

Early voting in the May 1 school funding amendments and U.S. Senate elections, as well as school board and city council elections, continues through April 27.

The funding amendments, voted on separately, are Proposition 1, equalizing school finance; Proposition 2, funding for future state mandates; and Proposition 3, financing for school facilities.

The clerk's office, located in the courthouse, is open from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday for those wishing to cast ballots for or against the three school funding amendments as well as their choice for U.S. Senator.

Thirty-three ballots have been cast at City Hall for Snyder residents voting in the mayoral and city council elections. Voting is conducted from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Three men are seeking two at-large places on the Snyder City Council. They are Ron Shaw, Dayton Robertson and Brady Bynum.

Running unopposed are Paul Zeck for mayor and I.E. Martin for District 4 councilman.

Voters residing in District 4 have three ballots; those residing outside of District 4 will complete only two ballots.

There are three separate ballots in the Snyder public schools board of trustees race. Voting takes place from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at the school administration building on 37th Street.

Wildflower Day slated at museum

The public is invited to celebrate Wildflower Day this Sunday, hosted by Scurry County Museum and Western Texas College.

The museum will open at 1 p.m. Refreshments will be served in the lobby.

Visitors can view exhibits which have been prepared by elementary school students from Pre-K through fifth grade.

A museum exhibit featuring wood carvings of birds loaned by Charles McCaleb is also on display.

Wildflower Day is an annual event, celebrating its ninth year. The theme of this year's Wildflower Day is "The Interaction of Birds and Wildflowers."

At 2 p.m., WTC biology instructor Sue Freemyer will show a film titled "Identifying Backyard Birds."

The wildflower trail has been marked on the WTC prairie by Britt Canada, chairman of the Wildflower Day committee. Twenty-five flowers have been identified on a trail that can be easily walked in 20 to 30 minutes. Maps of the trail are available in the museum.

The two southernmost sections of the prairie are designated as Wildflower Management Areas and are mowed only twice each year, generally in June and October. This allows the flowers to

The path will be updated weekly through April as some flowers fade and others begin to bloom.

County to consider rural trash pick-up

Scurry County commissioners are expected to consider going out for proposals for rural trash collection, advertise for bids concerning county roads, and approve an in-house audit when they meet in regular session at 10 a.m. Monday.

The court is expected to go out for proposals for franchise trash pick-up in rural areas, according to Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr.

At their March 8 meeting, commissioners agreed to work on bid specifications for trash collection for rural areas and have them ready on or before April 19.

Gray said going out for a franchise, instead of bids, would allow entities to present to the court specifications on how a contract would be handled. The court could then select the best proposal.

The city and county have been working under an intergovernmental contract since 1984. Under this contract, the city provides trash service outside the city limits, as well as other services. The city notified the county last August that it would terminate the contract Sept. 10 of this year.

Also on the agenda is a request for the court to advertise for bids for asphalt to be used for paving and sealcoating county roads.

Recycling containers to be put out Monday

Recycling collection facilities will be in place at various locations in Snyder beginning Monday, local officials said.

Collections will be at 30th Street and College Avenue in Varsity Square; just east of the intersection of Avenue E and Coliseum Drive on the north side of the street; and at Towle Park. The containers will be red, white and blue.

The facilities are sponsored by the executive board of the Extension Service Council, the Environmental Concerns Committee, and the City of Snyder.

The containers will be emptied each Wednesday.

Plastic items must have a recycling number on the bottom and should be rinsed and caps removed before taking them to a collection facility. Tin and aluminum cans must be rinsed and any lids or tabs removed.

Accepted will be newspaper and office paper products, tin, aluminum and plastics. If possible, collect papers in a plastic garbage bag. Paper that is wet can't be recycled.

Plastics include the following:

—Pete 1: juice bottles, corn oil bottles, large soda bottles.

—HDPE 2: laundry detergent bottles, milk containers.

—V 3: liquid dish soap bottles, plastic food wraps, olive oil bottles.

—LDPE 4: plastic bags, wrappers and grocery bags.

—PP 5: deli containers, cosmetic bottles.

—PS 6: Dixie party cups, foam cups, egg cartons.

The 72nd Texas Legislature has set a goal that by 1994 the state will have reduced the garbage going to landfills by 40 percent. West Central Texas Council of Governments has set a reduction goal of 25 percent for this area.

The SDN Column — By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Out of the mouths of babes come words parents never should have said."

There's plenty to fret about, but there's also plenty to be glad about.

It sometimes takes a person who's been around to remind us all that things could be a whole lot worse. One of Snyder's true ladies, Frances Sizemore, mailed us an article which reminds that attitude is important.

Frances and her late husband, Paul, were true civic workhorses in Snyder. Her outlook remains progressive and positive.

The article came from Nantucket Island, Mass. The writer told about thinking all the horrible thoughts while trudging through the blizzard... "my inner adult reminding how old I was. I got good at finding drifts to sink my knees in."

He then told about coming across some children laughing and playing in the snow. They had long forgotten the chill, making the best of the situation. Those without store-bought sleds were doing quite well using cafeteria trays as make-shift sleds to make trips down the hill.

The writer, observing an unused sled, asked if he could make a few runs with it. "Sure, mister," said one of the youngsters.

He was soon off. "Like children around me, my cheeks had turned red too. I was warm with sudden recognition. No matter what the temperature, new life was welling up from within. For me, spring had begun."

Speaking of outlook or attitude, we're reminded of what Will Rogers once said:

"There is nothing as easy as denouncing. It don't take much to see that something is wrong, but it does take some eyesight to see what will put it right again."

Himmler's speech about Jews on file

WASHINGTON (AP) — A [illegible] of the Holocaust — [illegible] Heinrich Himmler that refers to "the extermination of the Jewish race" — went on display Friday at the National Archives.

The documents, including handwritten notes by Himmler, are among the best evidence that exists to rebut claims that the Holocaust is a myth, archives experts say.

"[illegible] give them their authenticity," said Robert Wolfe, a supervisory archivist for captured German records. "He was supposed to destroy them. Like a lot of bosses, he didn't obey his own rules."

The documents, moved out of Berlin to what Himmler hoped would be a safe hiding place, were [illegible] World War II from a salt mine near Salzburg, Austria.

Himmler's speech on Oct. 4, 1943, in Posen, Poland, to more than 100 German secret police generals makes it clear an American display case is the last place the Nazi leader would have expected to see his words reproduced.

"I also want to talk to you, quite frankly, on a very grave matter," Himmler said during a two-hour speech. "Among ourselves it should be mentioned quite frankly, and yet we will never speak of it publicly."

"I mean the clearing out of the Jew, the extermination of the Jewish race," he said. "This is a page of glory in our history which has never been written and is never to be written."

Himmler, who oversaw Adolf [illegible] ish question," committed suicide after his arrest by British troops in 1945.

The National Archives exhibit, on display through May 16, is a small preview of the material available to the public beginning April 26 at the new United States Holocaust Memorial Museum here.

The National Archives exhibit has three items — a page each of Himmler's handwritten notes, a typed transcript from the speech and an official translation made for the Nuremberg war crimes trials.

The German word Himmler uses that is translated as "extermination" is "Ausrottung."

Wolfe, the archivist expert, said a more precise translation would be "extirpation" or "tearing up by the roots."

[illegible] notes, Himmler used a euphemism — "Judenevakuierung" or "evacuation of the Jews."

But archives officials said "extermination" is the word he actually spoke — preserved on an audio tape recording in the archives.

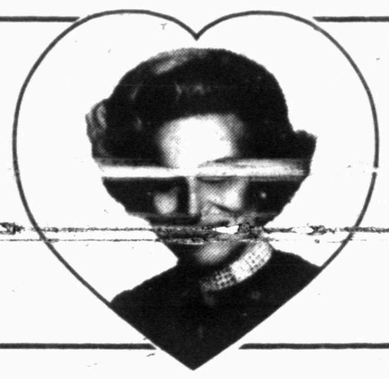
Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate



Owner Sees Something Fishy In Aquarium's Colorful Stock

DEAR ABBY: This is a doozy! I have recently started a fish aquarium, and with the new fish I purchased (at a store in my hometown), along came some disappointing news. Although the fish are healthy, I have found out the fish are actually called "painted glass fish" because of the color, not "glass fish" as I was led to believe.

Painted, you ask? Yes, these are fish that have been injected with a dye to colorize their body. Abby, I was not aware that this was done to fish and, after finding out, I contacted the store. I spoke to a saleslady who was very rude to me. I called back five minutes later, still irritated — but calm — only to be talked to like an idiot by the owner.

At one time, I respected this man highly, and stress "one time." Do these people think they are God's gift to the colorful fish world? I have also found out that this dye will wear off anywhere from one week to approximately 18 months. Disappointing? Yes. Isn't it the same as buying a white dog who has been dyed black, the color wearing off, and me being left with a white dog instead of the black one I selected?

Abby, the owner told me I should have asked first! Maybe he should have said something first for those of us customers who don't know everything, as they and their clerks do. I am a new fish owner, and I certainly was not aware of this practice.

Wouldn't it be better for their business (not to mention their reputation) to simply put up a sign that reads: "Some of the fish have been injected with dye to colorize their bodies"? It seems to me, Abby, that it is wrong and rude of some owners and clerks to withhold information that simply might not be known to some of us "not-so-aware" customers.

LET THE BUYER BEWARE
IN KENOSHA, WIS.

DEAR BUYER BEWARE: I checked with the Aquarium Stock Co. in Los Angeles and was told that fish can, indeed, be dyed — and the dye lasts from three to five months. (The person I spoke to did not know whether the procedure was painful for the fish; however, it's the same procedure originally used to tag fish for migration.) Fish can be reinjected with dye after they lose their color.

The Aquarium Stock Co. said it refuses to carry dyed fish because it's too easy for a salesclerk to forget to tell the customer that the fish he is buying has been dyed.

The store owner about whom you wrote misrepresented his product — and then to cover up his error, he blamed you, the customer, by saying you should have asked about it first. How could you have asked? Most people are not aware that fish are dyed — or that they are capable of being dyed.

DEAR ABBY: Since you enjoy limericks, here's one I wrote to illustrate what it's like to be friends with a frustrated poet:

Pity the poet's friends —
Their misery never ends.
Bombarded by the curses
Of their friend's awful verses
To oblivion the poet they send.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me what to do about this problem. I've got a husband who never takes a bath. He sleeps in his underwear, then wears it the next day and sleeps in it again. I can't even get him to put it in the laundry!

Also, he refuses to sleep alone. He's in his 80s. Should I get rid of him?

DISTURBED IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR DISTURBED: That depends on how you plan to "get rid" of him. Some older people avoid bathing because they're afraid of falling. Others suffer a diminished sense of smell. Your husband should see his physician for a thorough checkup.

In the meantime, under the circumstances, you have the right to refuse to sleep with him until he bathes and changes his underwear.

DEAR ABBY: I accidentally sold something that belonged to my husband at our garage sale. It was a set of four copper pots — in pretty bad shape.

I called the person who bought them and explained that I had made a mistake. I asked if she would mind if I gave her check back in return for the pots. Without a moment's hesitation, she refused. I even offered her twice as much as she had paid for them. She still said no.

Abby, do you think I was being unreasonable to expect her to return the pots? They were not valuable — except to my husband.

LUCIA F. IN TEXAS

DEAR LUCIA: You were not being unreasonable to expect her to return the pots — especially at twice the amount she had paid for them — but she was under no obligation to sell them back to you at any price.

I know how you must have felt having sold something that belonged to your husband. When my husband was in the service during World War II, I gave his golf clubs away because he hadn't used them in a while. Big mistake. Shame on me.

DEAR ABBY: Mrs. Dow should not be upset about her last name. My last name is Kwasniewski.

I'm 17 years old, and when I get new teachers, substitutes, see doctors, or meet new people, I always hear a new version of the way they spell or pronounce it.

I take it all with humor and correct them. My friends who have given up on pronouncing it call me whatever they think is easier. ("Kwazzy" seems to be a favorite; it's easier than Kwasniewski.)

I'm proud of my unique Polish name.

KIM KWASNIEWSKI
IN GARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR KIM: Meet another reader who has trouble with his name:

DEAR ABBY: In today's San Gabriel Valley Daily Tribune (Covina, Calif.), I got a real kick out of the "name game."

People just don't listen today. My last name is Black. What could be more simple? Yet I am called Blick, Bloke, Blake, Brick. On the telephone, I make it easy for them and say, "My name is Gerald Black." Then I spell it, "B-L-A-C-K ... you know — the opposite of white." Then they get it.

GERALD A. BLACK,
POMONA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Every time people insist they're right, I recall a story I read somewhere about a husband who insisted his wife was becoming hard of hearing, and planned to prove it.

While working in the back yard one day, he stood a distance behind her and said, "Martha, can you hear me?" No response. Moving closer, he repeated, "Martha, can you hear me?" Still no response. He moved closer still and said, "Now can you hear me?"

She replied, "For the third time, yes!"

Arlington removes computer game

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A computer game depicting slaves who try to escape from white owners has been ordered removed from computers in Arlington elementary schools.

Parents had complained that the game is racially offensive. The program was even recalled by the manufacturer in mid-January after parents at school districts nationwide demanded that the game be discontinued.

Arlington school officials said computer lab managers were immediately told to remove the software. However, parents said children at some schools continued to have access to the game as recently as last week.

A reminder was sent April 8 after parents complained, and a third notice was sent Monday.

Officials at the 15 other Tarrant County school districts said the program is not being used in their systems.

The game is titled "Freedom!" and produced by Minnesota Educational Computing Corp. It is set in the 1830s in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

Players, as enslaved blacks, attempt to escape and reach freedom in the North. Along the way, the slaves try to elude the white patrollers and dogs, which are chasing them.

If caught, the player is told: "You have been recaptured, whipped and returned to your master."

Parents of two elementary pupils who were upset by the simulation game say the format and the images portrayed are racially offensive.

Houston woman gets jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston woman who was recently laid off from her job as a restaurant cook has become Texas' latest lotto winner and picked up the first installment of her $8 million jackpot.

"It was just unreal," Willie Mae Smith, 36, said as she recounted matching the winning numbers printed in a Houston newspaper against her lotto ticket. "I started crying. I was in shock."

The numbers from Wednesday's drawing were 1, 5, 13, 24, 35 and 36. Ms. Smith, who has purchased about five of the $1 tickets every week since the drawings began in November, said she usually carefully considers which numbers to choose.

"But Wednesday, I said, 'I'm going to pick some crazy numbers,'" she said in a statement, and randomly selected five sets of figures, including the winning combination. Ms. Smith didn't watch the televised lotto drawing Wednesday night but checked the newspaper the next day.

Lottery officials late Thursday gave her the first installment of her winnings, $406,721. Every April 15 for the next 19 years, the mother of two will get another $401,000.

Ms. Smith said she will use the money to move her grandmother, mother and her own family out of their apartments and into homes of their own.

The Houston store that sold the winning ticket, Nick T's Food Market, gets a bonus of $80,257, an amount equal to 1 percent of the jackpot.

Since the Texas Lottery began with the sale of scratch-off tickets last May through the end of March, the game has yielded $522.5 million for the state's general revenue fund, said state Comptroller John Sharp. Current projections call for the lottery to raise another $172.5 million before the budget period ends Aug. 31.

The original lottery revenue estimate from start-up through Aug. 31 was $461 million.

Eddie Arcaro rode 21 Kentucky Derby starters and won five times.

Lawsuit dropped

DALLAS (AP) — A man who accused televangelist Robert Tilton of duping his cancer-stricken wife has agreed to drop a $50 million lawsuit against the Word of Faith preacher.

William E. Harrison of Commerce said he couldn't talk about the sudden resolution of his case, reached Thursday afternoon after a court-ordered mediation session. But he issued a statement saying the case was being dropped.

Court records show the deal came after Harrison's victory in a pretrial matter and less than two weeks before the lawsuit was set for trial.

Tilton's church, the Word of Faith World Outreach Center in the Dallas suburb of Farmers Branch, referred calls to Tulsa, Okla., attorney J.C. Joyce, who refused comment on the settlement.

Harrison, 58, filed his suit last April, several months after a report by ABC's PrimeTime Live assailed Tilton's ministry.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

April 18, 1993

It's important in the year ahead that you elevate your sights and set loftier objectives for yourself than you did in the previous year. Possibilities for success are enhanced if you are focused and motivated.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be an effective force to contend with today if you operate in a manner that doesn't call too much attention to yourself. Be the power behind the throne. Aries, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for Aries' Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Impressions you'll make upon others today are likely to be both favorable and lasting. However, you might not be present in order to hear all the nice things being said about you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your probabilities for success can be substantially enhanced today if you try to include others in what you hope to achieve for yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have a unique ability today to buoy up the sagging spirits of friends who need a boost. If a pal does something that warrants a compliment, lay it on with gusto.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Owing to an extraordinary set of circumstances, there could be sudden shifts in conditions today that might work out to your ultimate benefit. It's up to you to capitalize on them.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) More could be accomplished today if you work with partners or a team, rather than on your own. There is a possibility that you may be involved in two or more such arrangements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Co-workers might coast a bit today, but your focus is likely to be fixed on fulfilling your ambitious objectives. They may gain nothing, while you could do something substantial.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your skills as a promoter or entrepreneur could be operating at full force today. Don't hold back little dramatic touches when making your presentations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do not be apprehensive about the outcome of events today, especially those that are of a commercial nature. Trends are running in your favor and you should do just fine.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Decisions you make today should work out well for all concerned, because your judgments are likely to be predicated upon what is best for everybody.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Obstacles that have thwarted your progress where your financial interests are concerned could be alleviated or even eliminated today, making your route to the treasure trove easier.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your peers might talk about their intentions today, but you're the type of person who may say very little, yet gets things done. Let others follow your example instead of you following theirs.

April 19, 1993

You could be luckier in the year ahead due to endeavors you originate, without trying to make something worthwhile from things others start. Use your originality.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's bad enough if you neglect your own responsibilities today, but don't compound matters by failing to do certain activities that affect others. Major changes are ahead for Aries in the coming year. Send for Aries' Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You could paint yourself in a corner today if you are relying upon others to take care of matters that you should handle on your own. Self-reliance is essential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Subdue tendencies today that could lead to anti-social behavior. Also, make sure that your desire for easy outs doesn't take precedence over good judgment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Objectives you establish for yourself today might not be as easily achieved as you initially had anticipated. Success will have a demanding price tag.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be hopeful regarding the impact of your plans today, but don't be childishly optimistic. Unrealistic expectations could prove to be disappointing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Treat others thoughtfully today, but keep your generosity within reasonable bounds. There is a chance you might give away something which you'll later wish you hadn't.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Important decisions shouldn't be based upon wishful thinking today. Take time to study the adverse aspects that could result if things go wrong.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Associating with productive people is a must today, especially if you hope to achieve something noteworthy. Ineffective co-workers could hamper your industriousness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Sometimes it's who we know, and not what we know, that opens the right doors for us. However, in order to be an achiever today, you must rely upon your own merits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) People who have your interests at heart today might counsel you against doing something that you feel inclined to attempt. Unfortunately, this might be a time when the sideliners are right.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're pretty good at grasping the essence of ideas today, but cursory knowledge might not be enough to get you by. Prepare yourself as thoroughly as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep tabs on people with whom you're closely associated today, because there is a chance their carelessness might come out of your pocket.

Prairie chicken nears extinction

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — The prairie's regal chicken, a colorful bird once abundant on the coastal prairies from Louisiana to the Nueces River in South Texas, could be extinct by the end of this decade, wildlife officials say.

A Texas Parks and Wildlife Department census completed last week found 444 of the birds in existence, down from 456 last year and 492 in 1991, said Terry Rossignol of the Attwater's Prairie Chicken National Refuge near Columbus.

Experts say the birds could be gone sooner if the decline continues at its current pace.

"If the trend continues as it has, the prospect of these birds becoming extinct in the wilds by the year 2000 is very possible," Rossignol said. "Things aren't going too good in the way of population."

Rossignol blames the decline on flooding last year that forced the chickens to high ground, where they were killed by predators.

Most of the prairie chickens, which look like a cross between common chickens and quail, live in Refugio County. The population there has increased from 330 in 1992 to 358 this year.

The number of chickens in Colorado and Austin counties, which have the second- and third-highest populations of the birds, decreased by more than 50 percent from two years ago. Their numbers dropped from 70 to 34 in Colorado County and 64 to 26 in Austin County.

South Texas farmers are being warned not to disturb the chickens' habitat or spray chemicals that could harm them.

Financial Focus

After 12 years of a Republican administration, our nation has voted to change course. Where will it lead?

While pundits debate about our future, the economy goes on. In fact, our leaders have always voiced opinions and made predictions about the destiny of this nation.

Take, for example, the national debt. Before Ronald Reagan was president, he said he could not understand "how the Democrats can run those $1,000-a-plate dinners at such a profit and run the government at such a loss.

Even the founders of our country couldn't agree on the national debt. In 1781, Alexander Hamilton said, "A national debt, if it is not excessive, will be to us a national blessing." Forty years later, Andrew Jackson argues, "I am one of those who do not believe that the national debt is a national blessing but rather a curse to a republic, in as much as it is calculated to raise around the administration a moneyed aristocracy dangerous to the liberties of this country.

Excessive debt is the result of uncontrolled spending without matching revenues. Calvin Coolidge reminded us that those revenues can come only from the economy and that "the business of America is business."

After the national debt, two other areas the Clinton administration promises to target are unemployment and youth. Thomas Edison offered a solution that combined the two--"What young people should do to avoid temptation: Get a job and work at it so hard that temptation would not exist."

Henry Ford, a man whose industry changed the world's work habits, agreed. "There will never be a system invented which will do away with the necessity of work." George Ade, another advocate of labor, spoke of "a people so primitive that they did not know how to get money except by working for it." Noel Coward lightly referred to work as "more fun than fun." George Saud was more philosophical: "Work is not man's punishment, it is his reward and his strength, his glory and his pleasure."

Regardless of personal philosophy or political affiliation, most people agree that a strong work ethic is the basis of a strong economy. In our capitalistic economy, jobs are created by industry. To survive, industry must produce sufficient goods to pay the bills and to earn a reasonable profit for investors. Coolidge believed that "civilization and profits go hand in hand." Samuel Gompers went a step further: "The worst crime against working people is a company which fails to operate at a profit."

Today's problems are not new nor will the solutions be unique. More recent history will likely prove that despite all the economic changes and Henny Penny's warnings, the sky isn't falling after all.

April 15 is gone.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I believe I have narcolepsy and am interested in any information you can provide.

DEAR READER: Narcolepsy is a rare neurological syndrome of unknown cause that is marked by recurring attacks of sleep, which often occur at inappropriate times, such as while driving. The sleep attacks are frequently associated with sudden weakness and vivid visual illusions, resembling dreams.

Patients with narcolepsy are otherwise normal, except that they may sleep poorly at night. After awakening from a narcoleptic sleep attack, they may feel refreshed, only to fall sound asleep [illegible] easily be awakened from these attacks, which may appear infrequently or many times in a single day. The diagnosis is established by the characteristic pattern of inappropriate sleep.

Stimulant drugs, such as amphetamine and methylphenidate, when given during the day, usually reduce or eliminate the sleep attacks. In my opinion, patients with narcolepsy should be diagnosed and treated by neurologists.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Sleep-Wake Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Can you provide information on cellulitis?

DEAR READER: Cellulitis, a spreading and diffuse infection, usually affects the skin, but has the potential to spread to underlying tissues. There are no boils or pimples associated with this painful affliction, which is commonly caused by streptococcus bacteria.

Cellulitis may follow rather trivial skin trauma, such as mild dermatitis, and is more likely to occur in areas where circulation to the skin is reduced, such as over the legs and in areas of [illegible]. Pain, fever, chills and headache accompany the infection.

Antibiotics are the preferred treatment. Although complications from cellulitis are rare, abscesses may occasionally appear, requiring surgical drainage.

Candy, pies, cakes, cookies and snack foods, such as soda, traditionally have contained sugar. This substance, an important source of calories, may add unnecessary weight and has been indicted as a cause of dental cavities.

In the past few years, artificial sweeteners — which contain few calories and, therefore, do not contribute to weight gain — have achieved widespread popularity. However, as artificial sweeteners are added to more foods, the public has expressed concern that these compounds may cause health problems.

Saccharine, the first widely used [illegible] substitute, is 300 times sweeter than cane sugar. It has a long history of safety. Nevertheless, in 1977 the Food and Drug Administration proposed that it be banned because of studies showing that rodents fed enormous quantities of saccharine developed bladder cancers.

For a human to receive a corresponding amount, he would have to consume more than 800 cans of diet soda a day. Following a public outcry, the FDA postponed the ban, pending further tests. Subsequently, studies of thousands of people confirmed that saccharine is safe for human consumption at ordinary levels; the cancer connection was not confirmed.

Allergies to this sugar substitute are extremely rare. Saccharine is marketed under the trade name Sweet 'n Low.

Aspartame is the most extensively tested sugar substitute. Marketed as Equal and NutraSweet, its safety is [illegible] — even for pregnant women and children. Aspartame, which is 200 times sweeter than sugar, contains two amino acids (aspartic acid and phenylalanine), which are also present in proteins, such as grains and dairy foods. Thus, aspartame is metabolized by the body in the same manner as protein. It is virtually calorie free.

The FDA accepts rather high levels of aspartame consumption: the equivalent of 20 cans of diet soda a day. However, scientific tests have shown no toxicity in animals who consume 40 times this amount for long periods. Aspartame is a prevalent substance; it is added to hundreds of edibles.

There are two caveats to the use of this sugar substitute: PKU and allergies.

Phenylketanuria is a rare genetic disease in which people — especially children — cannot metabolize phenylalanine, one of the amino acids in aspartame (and protein). In susceptible individuals, the ingestion of phenylalanine causes nerve damage, mental retardation, seizures, hyperactivity and severe behavioral changes. Consequently, people with PKU must assiduously avoid foods containing aspartame, as well as natural, high-protein foods, including milk. (Substitutes, such as Lofenalac, are available.)

Some people are allergic to aspartame. When they consume the substance, they experience headaches, dizziness, exhaustion, mood changes, or seizures. The cause of this hypersensitivity is unknown, but victims often are allergic also to strawberries or peanuts. Patients with such allergies must be careful to avoid "trigger" foods, and they must be careful to read labels so that they don't inadvertently consume aspartame.

The question of whether the use of sugar substitutes helps people lose weight is unresolved. True, reducing sugar intake is beneficial, but most overweight persons consume excess calories in the form of other carbohydrates and fat. Therefore, having a diet drink with an order of French fries and a burger is not an appropriate way to reduce calories.

Moreover, strenuously active people need carbohydrates (and sugar) to help refuel exercised muscles. Thus, thirst is better quenched with juices and high-sugar colas than with diet drinks, which have no nutritional value.

Because sugar is converted in the mouth to an acid that causes cavities, sugar-substitutes are better for dental health.

Diet foods and low-calorie drinks are not associated with health hazards for the average consumer. Nonetheless, we most be clear about the reasons to use them. Moderation is the key.

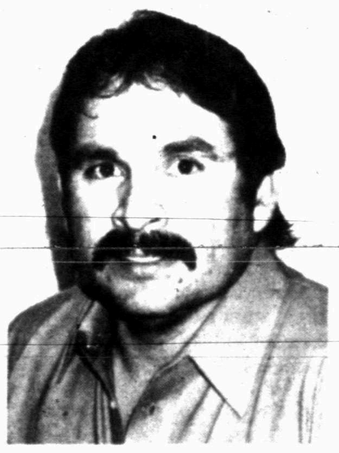
Snyder Independent School District Board

In an effort to provide Scurry County voters as much information as possible about the various contested city council and school board races in the May 1 elections, Snyder Daily News has asked candidates to complete a brief biographical sketch, along with their answers to four questions. Below is information provided by the candidates seeking Places 1, 4 and 5 on the Snyder ISD Board of Trustees.

Place 1



Name: Joe G. Hernandez
Age: 41
Occupation: Repairman/Mechanic, Oryx Energy Co.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church.
Prior council or board experience: None.

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

The financial stability of our school is of most importance. Revise our budget and see what angles we need to take to maintain the teacher's salaries.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

Our childrens' education is our number one priority, but equally important is a good staff, extra curricular activities and our educational programs. In order to insure these in our school system we need to do whatever it takes.

3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

Keep a good relationship with the community. But most importantly, a good, quality education for our children.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

To establish educational goals, make revisions on our school budget as necessary, and establish good community relations.

Name: Harold Glenn Clarady
Age: 41
Occupation: Co-owner of G&G Glass.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: Active Member of St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, Little League coach.
Prior council or board experience: Three years with Snyder ISD, May of 1990 to present.

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

The most pressing problem facing our school district is the uncertainty of school funding. The solution would be for legislators to pass a plan that would sufficiently finance all school districts permanently.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

This is a difficult decision but faced with raising taxes or limiting services, I would choose raising taxes. As a small business owner and home owner, I know how difficult it would be to pay more taxes. Providing the best education for all children in our district would be the most important issue and cutting programs and staff would not allow this to be possible.

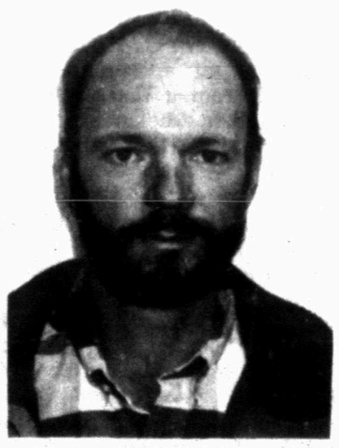
3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

The specific goal that I would like to see accomplished within the district is to cut the current dropout rate.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

The role of a school board member is to help set policies that govern the operation of the school district and to serve as a representative for the community in setting these policies.

Place 4



Name: Mark McCormick
Age: 36
Occupation: Secretary Treasurer, McCormick Marketing, Inc.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: Member of East Side Church of Christ, appointed to the Board of County Development in 1992.
Prior council or board experience:

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

Funding has been the answer to this question the last several years and remains a concern. The uncertainty of state funding from one year to the next makes budget processes and planning difficult on a local level. The ability to financially adapt quickly once we know the state's position will be key in the coming year.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

Everyone wants to stabilize increasing tax rates from all areas of local taxing entities. I like the political idea of any raise in taxes being met with a corresponding cut in expenditures. Economic realities might conflict with this idea, but I think it should be considered. Also, operating at top efficiency is an ongoing process. We must continually look for ways to maximize our return on tax dollars. The ultimate return on investment is our children's education.

3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

To develop a sense of pride and unity by all those involved in the education process. Find ways to involve parents in the development of our children's education.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

A school board member serves as a liason between three groups of people; teachers and administrators, parents and students, and the taxpayers. A board member must assimilate information, input and ideas from all three groups for effective decision making.

Name: Billy Bob McMullan
Age: 66
Occupation: retired teacher and stock farmer.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: Methodist Church member, Scurry County Historical Commission, Scurry County Jr. Livestock Association, VFW, American Legion, Vocational Abriculture Teachers Association.
Prior council or board experience: Six years Snyder ISD board of trustees.

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

School funding. We have to wait on the legislature and then look at our own alternatives.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

We always have a "wish list." I would rather do away with a wish list and freeze taxes.

3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

All students be able to pass the exit-level test.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

A. Establish and set policies for the school district; B. Hire the superintendent; C. Act as representatives for or of the community. Be reasonably responsible to taxpayers and be responsive to the community and its values it wants in its schools.

Place 5

Name: Ann Walton
Age: 59
Occupation: Secretary, First Baptist Church.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: First Baptist Church, SISD board member.
Prior council or board experience: Five years on Snyder ISD board of trustees.

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

Funding is the most pressing problem facing our school district today. I feel the solution to the problem is: A. For the state to put more money into education; B. If the state mandates programs for the local school districts they also need to provide the funds to carry out the mandates.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

Before I would raise taxes or cut programs I would want to study every line item in our budget, look closely at our federal programs and evaluate all programs. There are several areas where we can make cuts before raising taxes or cutting programs.

3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

I would like to see every student receive a diploma from Snyder High School.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

The role of a school board member is primarily that of setting policy! They hire the superintendent, establish educational goals for the district, adopt the budget and set tax rates.

Name: Janet Russell Stribling
Age: 40
Occupation: self employed bookkeeper.
Civic, fraternal, church or other affiliations: Parent Council, Fluvanna Volunteer Fire Dept., 4-H Leader, former Cub Scout Leader, Fluvanna Ball Club.
Prior council or board experience:

1. What do you consider the most pressing problem facing your school district today? Outline the solution to this need.

Funding is our most pressing problem, as with most school districts. After May 1, the voters will have decided in part what funds will be available. The local school districts will have to maintain quality education with those funds. We must also restore pride and confidence in our school system and place the needs of the children first.

2. If you are required to make a decision to either raise taxes or limit services, which would you choose? Or, do you have an idea to bridge the problem?

I would hope to balance both with prudent use of taxpayers' money to fund existing programs. If necessary to cut programs, each department would be considered carefully with input from personnel from each department.

3. State any specific goals you would like to see accomplished within the school district.

We must restore communication between the board, administrators, teachers and parents to build a safe, orderly disciplined atmosphere for learning. We must distribute the funds for the most benefit for all students.

4. Define briefly the role of a school board member.

Aside from the official duties outlined in the book, I believe the board member should make the most efficient use of the resources from educators, taxpayers, students and parents to build a solid and broad educational foundation for all children.

Police make single arrest

Snyder police made one arrest, filed a report for theft and worked two traffic accidents Friday.

Officers received a 911 call at 10:15 p.m. in reference to a subject banging on the door at the Noah Project, but refusing to identify himself. The man, 28, fled the scene but was arrested moments later and charged with public intoxication and criminal trespass.

At 8:05 a.m., police worked a mishap in the 3000 block of Denison. Involved was a 1988 Chevrolet pickup driven by Sherry Autry of Colorado City which struck a parked, unoccupied 1985 Chevrolet pickup owned by Jeffery Lowrance of 3004 Denison.

Police worked a second accident at 8:08 a.m. in the 2500 block of College Avenue. Involved were a 1992 Chevrolet driven by Charles Hardy of Rt. 3, a 1992 Chevrolet pickup driven by J.D. Goswick of 3205 Irving and a 1980 Chevrolet driven by Gerardo Luna of 1901 Ave. M.

James Wesson contacted police at 11:28 a.m. Friday in reference to someone taking some fishing equipment from his boat. A report for Class B theft was filed.

In one other report, a woman came to the police department at 3:50 p.m. to complain that some juveniles were harassing her daughter. A complaint for disorderly conduct-language was filed.

Shot put, discus crowns won by Snyder Tigers

PLAINVIEW — Snyder High School came up with twin shot put crowns in the District 2-4A track and field meet which began Friday and was to conclude Saturday with running events.

Snyder discus thrower Vicky Green also garnered a district title with a toss of 109-0, to outdistance Levelland's runnerup by two and one-half feet.

Kristi McClure and Todd Iglehart captured the shot put first place medals. McClure's heave was 38-91/2, her best effort of the season.

Iglehart also bested his top throw of the year — 50-5 at the Andrews Relays — with an impressive district meet toss of 51-5.

At the end of Friday, Snyder girls were in second place with 361/2 points, trailing host Plainview who had 41 points. Frenship was close behind at 36 while Levelland had 281/2, Estacado posted nine and Lamesa picked up four team points.

In girls competition, Snyder's Green was also fourth in the shot put with an effort of 35-8. In the high jump, Snyder's Annie Ragland was third with a leap of 5-0 while Jina Miller posted an effort of 4-8 to tie for sixth place.

Iglehart was also sixth in the discus competition with a toss of 128.8. That competition was won by Frenship's Noyola with a throw of 136.11 Going into Saturday's finals, Snyder was in fourth place in team standings with 11 points.

UH accusers backing off

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston linebacker Jeff Tait softened his statements Friday after earlier saying that coach John Jenkins spliced pornographic clips into practice films and extended practices beyond legal limits.

Tim Woods, another former player who leveled similar allegations against Jenkins, said he would make no further comment because he was frightened by an incident Thursday night.

"I'm just afraid now," Woods told KRIV-TV of Houston. "I don't want to be hurt by anybody. I just don't want to be involved. I don't want to comment on what happened I just don't want to be involved."

Mavericks win 9th victory to escape record book haunt

DALLAS (AP) — No matter what happens in the Dallas Mavericks' last five games, they won't be in the futility section of the NBA record book all alone.

The Mavs won their ninth game of the season Friday night with a 99-86 victory over the Denver Nuggets and have five chances to escape the losing noose owned by the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers, who won just nine games in the sorriest NBA season on record.

Dallas' last five games to escape the tag as the losingest team in NBA history include:

Playing host to Sacramento on Saturday night, entertaining the Los Angeles Clippers on Tuesday night, traveling to Denver on Wednesday, returning to Reunion Arena on Friday to play the Minnesota Timberwolves and traveling to Houston for the final game of the season against the Houston Rockets.

After the Mavs knocked off Denver on Friday night, guard Derek Harper put one finger in the air and shouted "one more."

Harper said, "We don't want to tie it (the 76ers record). We don't want to have anything to do with that record. I have no doubt we can win one more game."

Forward Randy White all but predicted Dallas will beat Sacramento.

"We plan to end all the talk tomorrow night," he said. "We want to put all this behind us."

It has been a "lost" season for the Mavs in more ways than one.

Coach Richie Adubato was fired and sent packing because of the Mavs' slow start and assistant Gar Heard spent the rest of the year trying to make do with a youth-oriented lineup.

"We're learning how to finish games and we want to get this thing off our backs," Heard said. "We don't want to be in the record books. We want Philadelphia to have it all."

March was a big month for the Mavs. They finally signed holdout rookie first round draft pick Jim Jackson, who had starred at Ohio State, and found a new coach the same day when they signed Quinn Buckner to a six-year deal.

They also won three games. The biggest victory came with a 102-96 victory over Shaquille O'Neal at Orlando on March 17 to snap a club-record 19-game losing streak.

Dallas also beat Philadelphia on March 19 to break a club-record 29-game road losing streak.

Buckner, a broadcaster for NBC, will take over next year but made several trips to Dallas to scout the players he will be coaching next year.

Buckner liked what he saw in Jackson, who went on a streak where he was in double figures 15 of 16 games.

Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus both went 17 consecutive years with at least one PGA Tour victory.

WTC golfers play at Midland event

The Western Texas College golf team will find out soon whether its efforts to improve have been successful.

The Westerners will compete in the Sunday through Tuesday Texas State Junior College Championship at Green Tree Country Club in Midland.

Following their last outing, a fourth-place finish at The Western Junior College Athletic Conference Tournament in Hobbs, N.M., coach Milton Ham said his team needed to get better.

"We played better than we have been," said Ham, "but we still need to improve. What we need to do, and what we'll work real hard to do, is to improve three or four shots per person per round. That'll probably get us out of regionals and back to nationals."

Defending national champion Midland College, along with WJCAC teams Odessa College, New Mexico JC and New Mexico Military Institute will also have teams at Midland.

The Westerners' regular season will end next week when they compete in the NJCAA Region 5 Tournament at Sugar Tree Country Club in Weatherford.

A second consecutive berth at the national tourney will hinge on good performances by the WTC linksters at the season's final outings.

"We're in fourth place in the conference right now," the coach said. "It's real important for us to stay consistent so we can have a shot at nationals."

Western Texas hosts junior rodeo

For the second straight week, Scurry County Coliseum will play host to rodeo action.

The Western Texas College AJRA and Open Junior Rodeo will be held at the county coliseum April 24 and 25.

Events will include barrel racing, pole bending, breakaway roping, goat tying, ribbon roping, team roping, steer riding, bull riding, saddle bronc riding, bareback riding and steer wrestling.

Performances are slated for 1 p.m. each day. Admission is $4 for adults and $3 for students.

Western Texas College will produce the rodeo.

Astros keep finding ways to notch wins

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros have been finding ways to win games so far this season.

On Friday night it was Jeff Bagwell's three-run triple off knuckleballer Charlie Hough that spurred a 9-3 victory over the Florida Marlins.

"You have to be patient and wait until the last instant and not commit yourself too early," Astros manager Art Howe said.

Bagwell had a double and triple and Greg Swindell got his first victory in the Astrodome in five career starts on a night when he wasn't at his best. He also contributed two hits and drove in a run in his own behalf.

It was the first home victory for Houston, which is 5-1 on the road this season.

"I learned a lesson not to get over anxious," Swindell said. "I just went through my regular pregame ritual and told myself that it was just another game."

Swindell struck out four batters over 7 2-3 innings and allowed 11 hits before Eric Bell came on to get the final four outs.

Two-out singles by Swindell, Craig Biggio and Steve Finley loaded the bases for Bagwell in the fourth inning. His triple to the right-field corner gave Houston a 5-1 lead off Charlie Hough (2-1).

The Astros had a season-high 15 hits and the nine runs tied their best output.

Bagwell has hit safely in eight of nine games. Anthony got three hits and drove in two runs, equaling his career high for the sixth time.

"We were very patient with Charlie," Anthony said. "He made a few mistakes and we just put the ball in play."

Ken Caminiti extended his hitting streak to nine games with a two-run double in the eighth.

Hough, attempting to open the season 3-0 for the first time since becoming a starter in 1981, finished out the fourth when Anthony grounded out. Hough allowed nine hits, walked one and struck out three.

All of Houston's runs came after there were two outs.

"I don't like to lose any of them, no matter the record," Hough said. "I've pitched worse and won, but that's tough against a team that hits as well as they do.

"It was a good start for me. Maybe I can get it going against them the next time."

Rain, Yankee homers soak 1st place Texas Rangers, 5-3

NEW YORK (AP) — In a game delayed by rain for more than 2½ hours, Jim Leyritz, Randy Velarde and Pat Kelly hit solo home runs and the New York Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 5-3 Friday night.

It was the Rangers' first game since Nolan Ryan pitched in a rainstorm Wednesday night in Texas and aggravated a knee injury. He will be out up to five weeks with torn cartilage.

Play was stopped by rain for 91 minutes in the top of the fifth inning. There was another delay of 69 minutes in the bottom of the fifth. About 1,000 fans were left when the game ended at 12:57 a.m. EDT.

Reliever Rich Monteleone (1-1) was credited with the victory after pitching three innings around the second rain delay. He gave up a solo home run in the sixth inning to Dean Palmer, his fifth of the season.

John Habyan pitched two scoreless innings for his first save.

Leyritz and Velarde hit consecutive home runs in the second inning off Craig Lefferts (1-2). Danny Tartabull had an RBI single in the third. After the game resumed in the bottom of the fifth, Kelly homered.

Scott Kamieniecki started for the Yankees in place of Melido Perez, who has been sidelined with a strained left hip flexor. Perez is expected to make his 1993 debut on Sunday.

Ivan Rodriguez had an RBI grounder for Texas in the second and Jose Canseco's RBI forceout tied it at 2 in the third.

Weiskopf, Snead tied in Seniors

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino gave himself a lesson. Ray Floyd gave himself a talking to. And Tom Weiskopf gave himself a chance.

"I knew I had to play well to try to get back in it," Weiskopf said Friday.

And the former British Open champion responded to the self-imposed challenge with an 8-under-par 64 that, he said, was "as good as I've ever played in my life."

It was good enough to give him a 137 total and a tie for the lead with J.C. Snead at the halfway point of the PGA Seniors Championship.

Snead had a second-round 69 on the PGA National Golf Club course that was softened and eased by morning showers.

"It was perfect for scoring," Weiskopf said.

The once-tempermental man who scored 15 regular PGA Tour victories and won his first start among the over-50 set against a limited field early this year, took full advantage of the situation.

Weiskopf, whose ailing left knee nearly forced him out of the tournament, made seven birdies and an eagle, played the back nine in 31 and said it could have been better.

"After that, it could have been anything," he said. "I didn't miss another green and never had it outside of 20 feet."

He capped a back-nine 31 with a 10-footer on the 17th and had a shorter putt for an eagle on the last. He missed it, but tapped in for a birdie.

Despite those heroics, such old playmates as Trevino, Floyd and Jack Nicklaus stayed within reach.

Trevino, the defending titleholder, said he "gave myself a lesson" and moved the ball back in his stance in order to correct a swing problem caused by the brace he wears on his left thumb.

It resulted in a 68 that included eight birdies and four bogeys and put him in a group with Nicklaus at 140, only three back.

Floyd said he "gave myself a 15-minute talking to" and improved 10 shots, from 77 to 67, over his first-round effort and was five back.

Langer looks for repeat

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Bernhard Langer doesn't need anyone else to remind him of his last victory in the Heritage Classic. He's handling that job himself.

When Langer won the Heritage in 1985, it followed a victory in the Masters. Take a guess what happened at Augusta last week, and you'll know why Langer's vividly recalling that time.

"I'm trying to remind me every day of that," said Langer, who showed off the pin-splitting accuracy he used to sweep to his second Masters title last week, shooting a 65 and sharing the Heritage lead with David Edwards and David Frost. "I'm trying to get in the right spirit and the right mood. It brings back good memories and maybe I can repeat."

He certainly can if he continues to play like he did Friday, getting seven birdies and a bogey for a 36-hole total of 134.

"I had stretches last week when I played just as good, but the first nine holes were pretty special," said Langer, who had three straight birdies and four overall to finish his front side at 31.

Frost had a pair of bogeys on the front nine, but came in with a 32 for his second straight 67. Edwards also had a 32 on his final nine, and grabbed a share of the lead with a 66.

"It's a great course and it's fun to play," said Edwards, who had birdies on three of his final four holes. "It suits my game."

Frost's round was blunted early with bogeys on No. 6 and No. 8, but he made a 30-foot putt on the 10th hole to start his recovery. A 5-foot putt on No. 18 moved him into the lead.

IJHS makes strong show

Ira athletes made a strong showing at the District 15A Junior High track and field meet Friday in Jayton.

The girls took fourth place with 74 points while the boys placed fifth with 62 points.

Ira girls won several first places, including the 400 meter relay and the 1600 meter relay. Melissa Brasuel, Rena Bly, Kasey Calley and Stacy Taylor combined for a 57.28-second run in the 400 relay. The same foursome clocked a quick 4:55.06 in the 1600 relay.

Brasuel also placed first in the 400 meters with a time of 67.18.

Others placing included Bly, second in the 300 hurdles with a 59.88; Carrie Cox, third in the 800 meters with a 3:06.14; Jessica Williams, fourth in the 800 meters with a 3:09.25; and Stacy Taylor, fourth in the 200 meters with a 31.98.

Todd Collom helped lead the boys with a first-place 5-0 in the high jump and a winning time of 21.9 in the 110 hurdles. He also placed fourth in the triple jump with a leap of 31-11.

Adam Davis took second in the discus with a throw of 109-7½ and fifth in the shot with a 35-4½ heave.

Eddie Brasuel was third in the 1600 run in a time of 5:53.84. Teammate Max Perez ran the 1600 in 6:07.03 for fourth place and was fifth in the 800 with a 2:42.88.

"All the kids gave a great effort. They did an outstanding job," said Tim Mebane, who coaches the group along with Mike Cook and Lynn Cauley.

"MEET THE CREEPS" — LaTrisha Lee, Laura Stansell and Ryan Landes portray a scene from "Meet the Creeps," a play to be performed at 7:30 p.m. on April 22, 23 and 24 in the Snyder Junior High School auditorium. SJHS sets 'Creeps' next week

Snyder Junior High School presents "Meet the Creeps," a new Tim Kelly play produced by Pioneer Drama Service. Janeen Patterson, SJHS drama instructor, is director.

"Meet the Creeps" is in the tradition of the Addams Family, mixed with the Munsters, and touched with arsenic and old lace. These, blended with giggle-filled shenanigans, "will give you the creeps," says Herb Aiken, in charge of publicity.

According to cast members, the characters are a wild and crazy bunch. Sinbad, head of the bunch, is played by Ryan Landes, and his de-lovely wife, Tarantula, is played by LaTrisha Lee. Starling Shields plays Sally, their niece, and a gorgeous maid, Lullaby Jones, is played by Mary Higby. The butler, resembling a billy goat, is played by Troy Allen and Emily Zeck plays Flora Limetree, a society dragon who hates them all.

Robert Nitche is Prince Unravel, who arrives as a house guest. A weird boarder, Mortimer Weird, played by Jack Hedges, falls in love with Nana, played by Melanie Gibson.

Other play participants include Kenneth Darlin, a talking clock, and Laura Stansell who plays a lively ghostly portrait. Theresa Crosby is the telephone operator who lives inside the walls of the house. Two fun loving local boys are Matt and Scooter, played by Chris Riggins and Scott Love, respectively.

Three performances, in SJHS auditorium, are set for April 22, 23 and 24 and will begin at 7:30 p.m. Advance tickets are $3 and admission at the door will be $4. During intermission, a consession will be open for snacks. Tickets are available at the SJHS office or from students participating in the play.

"Let's Talk."

By Dennis Gloyna, External Affairs Manager

Southwestern Bell Telephone of Texas

Last week, the Texas Telephone Association (TTA) made public a commitment to invest more than $1.4 billion in Texas. This would be over and above the normal construction budgets of TTA companies.

A commitment of this magnitude ought to make big news in Texas. Right? Well, chances are, you haven't read much about the $1.4 billion offer, even though big-city newspaper publishers have known about it for months.

Makes you wonder what gives? And perhaps more importantly, what do these newspaper publishers have to do with blocking a commitment that could bring jobs and technological improvements to Texas?

Texans deserve to know why they've been kept in the dark about an effort by big-city newspaper publishers to kill one of the biggest economic boosts Texas has ever seen.

Here's the background so you can decide yourself.

Telephone companies in Texas, including mine, are seeking changes in the way they are regulated. The TTA does not support total deregulation. For example, continued Public Utility Commission (PUC) of Texas regulation of basic local telephone service is essential.

The rate you pay telephone companies for local service is low today, and must continue to remain affordable. The TTA proposes to freeze these low basic local rates for four years.

So, where's the catch?

Telephone companies in Texas are seeking the flexibility to compete in areas where competition already exists. We want the financial incentives to invest in advanced telecommunications technologies; like Distance Learning which links teachers with distant classrooms over the phone lines; and Telemedicine which allows health care professionals to video conference with patients and educators to share medical expertise. Services like these are examples of how telecommunications stands ready to improve the quality of life for all Texans.

Enter the "Big-City" Publishers.

For some five months now, the newspaper industry, led by publishers of papers owned by out-of-state media conglomerates, have raised false concerns about the TTA proposal. They called it a deregulation proposal. It's not. They said telephone company profits are financing foreign investments. That's not true. The newspaper bosses are wrong to make such ludicrous, unfounded accusations.

In an attempt to appease the newspaper moguls, state leaders called for meetings between the telephone and newspaper industries to settle their differences. A reasonable idea.

But, we've been trying to get representatives of these publishers to sit down and talk since November. They refused to do so until just recently and have done little more than drag their feet.

Their strategy? It's been reported in their own words. A paid newspaper industry lobbyist is quoted one day saying his group would continue to seek a compromise with telephone companies. Then, speaking before the Texas Daily Newspaper Association the same lobbyist is quoted saying: "We need to slam these guys. Let's take these guys out." So much for the publishers' motives.

Why are they fighting progress?

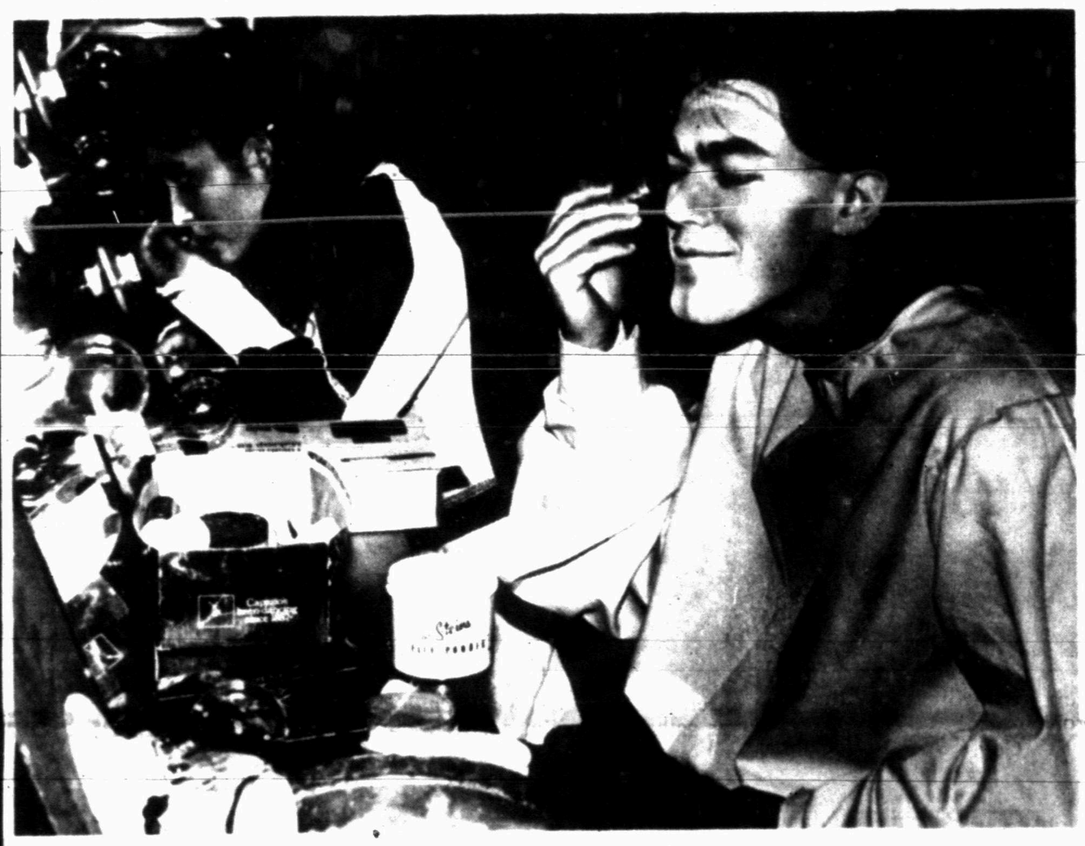
Money. The newspaper bosses have used a massive lobbying effort and scare campaign to protect their own self-interests. They see any change in telephone regulation as a direct threat (although unfounded) to their classified advertising profits. As long as they can stall the talks, they can continue to keep any competitive threat at bay.

The publishers would have you believe this is a complicated issue between two large interests that needs to be studied for another two years. Let me simplify the debate, since they won't.

Phone companies are ready to invest $1.4 billion in a fiber optic system that will bring jobs and new business to Texas. Sure, that will help grow our business, but don't forget, we're also willing to freeze basic phone rates to ensure that our local customers are protected.

The TTA group has negotiated in good faith. TTA representatives attended every meeting held, and tried to work [illegible] reasonable. We said "yes" to rate freezes and even to local network competition.

The newspaper publishers, on the other hand, did little more than to delay any progress serious talks could have produced. They offer no vision for Texas. Let's hope their message to Texans wasn't spoken by their paid lobbyist when he said, "Let's take these guys out." H-m-m-m.



AND THE SHOW GOES ON — Randy Hamon and Rita Moreno put on their makeup before they step on stage in Western Texas College's rendition of "Measure by Measure," written by William Shakspeare. Performances began Thursday and will continue this weekend with one held Saturday at 8 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. Sunday. (SDN Staff Photo)

Bush departs, after visit with U.S. troops

KUWAIT (AP) — After paying tribute to U.S. and Kuwaiti soldiers, George Bush got a royal sendoff Friday to cap a three-day visit in which he was lauded as a hero for his role in the Persian Gulf War.

Big signs along the former president's motorcade route read "Salam Alaikum, Ya Azeem," Arabic for "Peace Be On You, Oh Great One."

The departure ceremony, like much of the visit, was televised live nationwide.

"The visit has been a milestone in the history of Kuwait, about which we will keep telling our sons and our grandsons time after time," said the announcer on Kuwait Television. "We await his next visit."

Bush's last stops before Kuwait's emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, saw him off at the airport were at camps of U.S. and Kuwaiti soldiers. Some 1,500 American troops are in Kuwait under a 10-year defense pact negotiated by the oil-rich emirate after the 1991 war.

Casually dressed in a white shirt and gray pants, Bush addressed the American soldiers from a stage covered with camouflage netting at their base in Doha, about 12 miles north of Kuwait.

Bush told the soldiers they "have the respect of the entire world."

In a photo session with troops, he said he was "very happy the Texas Rangers are doing well." Bush's son, George, is managing partner of the major-league baseball team.

OBEDIENT FAITH
By Homer Anderson

Salvation is by God's grace, or unmerited favor, and is made possible by the sacrificial death of Christ on the cross. Paul made it clear that "by grace you have been saved through faith" (Ephesians 2:8). This makes it very important for us to understand what faith means. Since James explains that "faith without works is useless" by proclaiming that "the demons also believe and shudder" (James 2:19-20), it becomes obvious that saving faith is something in addition to the mental acceptance of the existence of God and of Christ. W.E. Vine said, "The main elements in faith in its relation to the invisible God...are (1) a firm conviction, producing a full acknowledgement of God's revelation or truth, 2 Thess. 2:11-12; (2) a personal surrender to Him, John 1:12; (3) a conduct inspired by such surrender, 2 Cor. 5:7" (An Expository Dictionary of New Testament Words, Vol. 2, page 71). The theme of the book of Romans is "salvation by faith." The same phrase occurs in both the opening and closing sentences of the book, "the obedience of faith" (Romans 1:5, 16:26). Grace is God's part and faith is our part. Faith in order to be saving faith, includes within itself the surrender and obedience which God asks of us.

Day of jury's verdict the same for Peggy Railey, her mother

DALLAS (AP) — For Margaret "Peggy" Railey, victim of a near-fatal choking and her mother, Friday was life as usual at a Tyler nursing home — even as word came that Margaret "Peggy" Railey's husband was acquitted in her attack.

Bill Arnold, attorney for Mrs. Railey, said her parents were very disappointed that a San Antonio jury found Walker Railey innocent of attempted murder in the 1987 attack.

Billie Joe Nicolai was at Clairmont Nursing Home caring for her 34-year-old daughter, who lies in a persistent vegetative state, when Mrs. Nicolai received word of the verdict.

"They are down," Arnold told a news conference at his downtown Dallas law office. But Billie Joe, that's where I talked to her — at the nursing home — doing her daily job, day after day."

Mrs. Railey requires constant supervision, with her medical bills reaching up to $40,000 annually since she was attacked on April 21, 1987, and left for dead.

"But Billie Joe Nicolai is tough. She has to be, because she's got as a mother, she's got to take care of her baby," said Arnold.

"And Peggy Railey is in diapers. She is her baby. And she's got to continue to take care of her."

Arnold said Mrs. Nicolai and Peggy's brother, Ted, were concerned that jurors may not have had all necessary evidence before decision.

"Billie Joe told me today that she could not let this break her down," the attorney said. "She's got to be strong and continue to take care of Peggy in her own prison on a day-to-day basis and take it one day at a time."

Arnold said Railey's avowed concern for his wife's condition was puzzling.

"I want to ask him if he's so concerned about her condition, how come he has not visited her one time in the last five years?" the attorney asked. "Why three years ago did he sue her for divorce and why did he not pay one cent for her medical expenses?"

Arnold, calling the defense team "five high-priced lawyers" who are "the best that money can buy," said Railey was subpoenaed to answer those questions and others at a June 3 deposition in [illegible] civil case brought by Mrs. [illegible] parents.

In the 1988 civil lawsuit accusing Railey of a malicious attempt to strangle his wife, a judge found him liable and ordered him to pay an $18 million judgment. But Railey contended he didn't have the money to pay.

Asked how much the ex-minister's defense may have cost, Arnold said, "I have no idea but I'm going to find out."

Arnold said he was scheduled to take Railey's deposition on June 3 at Arnold's law office as part of post-judgment discovery in the civil case.

"I took his deposition in 1988, and he didn't have anything," he said. "This is now to find out, 'Well, if you don't have anything, how did you do San Antonio?"

Arnold has issued Railey interrogatories, or written questions, which he must answer under oath on his finances.

Lawmakers increase penalties despite overcrowded prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Despite overcrowded prisons and county jails, lawmakers continue to toughen penalties and create new categories of crimes.

Ironically, this tough-on-crime approach has been cited by many criminal justice experts as helping fuel a system in which inmates serve a fraction of their sentences and dangerous criminals get released on parole to make room for more inmates.

But many in the Legislature say a criminal justice reform package that will be considered by the Senate next week represents a major step toward resolving this problem.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock has thrown his political weight behind the plan to revise the state penal code, set up a system of regional prisons for 20,000 nonviolent offenders, and increase drug and alcohol treatment programs.

"This will do more to assure the long-term safety of all Texans than any piece of legislation proposed over the past two decades," Bullock said.

"For the first time, we have made a distinction between violent and nonviolent offenders, and tailored the punishment and facility to fit the crime," he said.

But even as lawmakers prepare to debate the $700 million proposal, they are passing legislation to fill up those lockups.

Bills are sailing through the Legislature to increase penalties for gang-related crimes, and for drug offenses near places where children gather. New crimes have been put on the books, such as an anti-stalking law that was signed by Gov. Ann Richards.

In addition, new categories of state workers could be made into peace officers, such as a team of Texas Health Department food inspectors.

Reaction to Rodney King beating verdict generally favorable

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson wept and cheered, a young man in South Central jumped for joy and policemen watched with grim faces as two policemen were found guilty Saturday of violating Rodney King's civil rights.

King's attorney, Milton Grimes, expressed regret that two other officers involved in the videotaped beating of King were acquitted by a federal jury.

"It's a good verdict," said Jackson, who had tears on his face as he watched the verdicts.

mick is opposing incumbent Billy Bob McMullan. And in Place 5, incumbent Ann Walton will be challenged by Janet Stribling.

As of Friday afternoon, 53 people had cast ballots in the three races. A breakdown by Place was unavailable.

Eight men are running for two at-large places on the Hermleigh school board. They are James Rinehart, Andres Rodriguez Jr., [illegible], Randy Davis, Jr. Roemisch, Jimmy "Chip" Roemisch Jr., Brian Blair and Nelson Eckert. "Chip" Roemisch and Blair are the incumbents.

Early voting takes place in the Hermleigh business office from 8 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. weekdays.

Ira school board has one contested race. Lance Autry and Eddie Nettles are contesting for Place 3. Incumbents Darryl Calley, for Place 1, and Kirby Sterling, for Place 2, are unopposed.

Early voting in the Ira ISD races is held weekdays at the Ira administration office from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Ballot totals from Hermleigh and Ira were unavailable Friday afternoon.

Trial

nine whites, two blacks, and one Hispanic; the state jury in suburban Simi Valley had 10 whites, one Asian, and one Hispanic.

Saturday's proceedings took just 15 minutes.

The trial's finale culminated a wrenching test for the American judicial system.

Many feared the riots that followed the officers' state acquittals a year ago had so tainted public opinion that a fair jury couldn't be picked. Mayor Tom Bradley denounced those acquittals, and then-President Bush encouraged U.S. Justice Department action.

Saturday's ruling also was a verdict on the value of videotaped evidence in a criminal case — whether the camera's eye is as convincing as witness testimony.

And it was a milestone in a two-year ordeal for the nation's second-largest city. In addition to last year's riots, the March 3, 1991, beating led to reform of the Los Angeles Police Department and the retirement of its chief, and contributed to decisions by Bradley and other officials not to seek re-election.

In state court, the policemen were charged with assault, and assault under color of authority. In the federal trial, the officers faced the more complex charge of violating King's civil rights.

Federal prosecutors had to show bad intent on the defendants' parts.

But Davies said prosecutors didn't have to prove that the four white officers had a racial motivation in beating the black motorist.

lot of attention, no event drew more notice than the goat tying, where Lorissa Edmondson's best of 8.6 on Thursday fell all the way to fifth. Jennifer Lee of West Texas State University and Shawnda Autrey of Eastern New Mexico flashed 8.3-second runs to share the lead. Schelli Walls and Mitzi Mayes of Tarleton share third place with a pair of 8.5s.

Cheyann Lambert of West Texas State clocked a 2.8-second run in the breakaway roping to move into a tie with Texas Tech's Lari Dee Guy for first place. WTC's Shawnda Davidson is holding down third with her 3.2 time.

Tarleton's Jamie Bean posted a new best in the barrels with her 14.09-second run. She bumped WTC's Davidson to second place. Davidson turned a 14.43 Thursday.

Trey Wardlaw of Texas Tech joined Vernon's Ohl at the top of the calf roping event. Wardlaw posted an 8.9 Friday to match Ohl's run the previous night.

WTC's Jason Runfola moved into second in the saddle bronc riding with a 75. He trails Fletcher Tigner, also of WTC, who scored a 76 on Thursday. Tigner's outstanding score of 80 in the bull riding also held up through the second round.

Turtle Powell and Kirt Jones, Tarleton State cowboys, set a new pace in the team roping of 5.3 seconds.

There was no change in the bareback, however, where Troy Thomson and Eric Mouton, both from WTC, share first place with a pair of 75s.

County court meets Monday

County Auditor Eddie McHaney will present the court with an [illegible] audit of four departments.

"Everything looks good. I do routine audits once a year on every department in the county that collects money," McHaney said.

This quarter, McHaney audited the health unit, library, coliseum and airport.

Other agenda items include discussion with representatives for a newly formed 13-year-old baseball league concerning scheduling of games and concession stand, and approval of the 1992 outside audit.

Commissioners held a workshop Thursday in Lubbock, at the office of Mason, Warner & Co., the company that did the county's annual audit.

Gray said everything seemed to be in order and he felt the audit would be approved.

Routine items include line item transfers, approval of minutes and payment of bills and review of reports of committees and boards.

SO investigates suspicious person

Sheriff's deputies were advised of a suspicious person Friday.

Jim Palmer of Roby Highway reported a suspicious person at his residence on Thursday. He said his cleaning lady told him she heard a noise while she was upstairs. When she went downstairs she found a large man there. The man said he was there to exterminate bugs.

The lady said she would need to check with the owners first but the man said "no we don't have time. I've got to get the job done." Then the subject left.

Deputies are investigating.

HISTORIC SODA FOUNTAIN — Jackson Brewster, left, and James Browning spent all day Thursday removing the soda fountain from Stinson Drug. The historic fountain was purchased by the Ritz Theatre at the Stinson Drug store auction April 5. Through a fund-raising drive the theatre raised more than $7,500 and was able to purchase all three pieces, which include the fountain, back bar and front counter. The pieces date back to the 1910s. Beard Van Lines of Snyder, owned by Brewster and his wife Cindy, are donating the moving and storage costs of the fountain. (SDN Staff Photo)

New insurance scam reported

HOUSTON (AP) — State officials are warning consumers to beware of salespeople claiming to be Internal Revenue Service agents who prey on people by selling them health insurance paid for by a tax break for low-income workers.

The Texas Department of Insurance issued the warning Thursday about agents claiming they're selling government-endorsed insurance.

"We are investigating at least three agents and one company for alleged scams using the earned income tax credit as a sales pitch," Georgia Flint, Texas insurance commissioner, said. "People who say they are from the IRS and want to sell you an insurance policy are liars — pure and simple."

The earned income credit is a tax break for low-income workers with children that can pay a hefty refund.

Officials of the Texas Department of Insurance said they're still investigating the alleged scams and are not sure how extensive they are, said Dana Palmer, department spokesman.

Cosmetology department at college slates contest

Would-be hair stylists now have the opportunity to show their skills and, if deemed the best, a chance to earn one fourth of the expenses required to enroll in the one-year cosmetology program offered at Western Texas College.

The "opportunity" is offered by the WTC Cosmetology Department, which is sponsoring a hair styling contest May 10 on the campus. The winner of that event will receive tuition and fees for the first three months of instruction in cosmetology at the college. Contestants have until May 5 to enter.

Sponsors stress no formal training is required to be a contestant.

The event may be completed on either a live model or a mannequin, which must be provided by the contestants. They are asked to bring their own supplies also.

A competition committee will judge the finished styles. Judging will be on a "visual basis" and the overall form is up to the contestant. Contest sponsors note the hair may be any length or texture.

According to cosmetology instructor Judy Border, "Hair must be styled in a manner to be appreciated by the majority of the consuming public, regardless of age."

She noted the model's hair may be "roller set, from iron curl set or hot roller set," adding these things may be "in combination of rollers, pincurls and shapings."

No hairpieces or wigs may be used as part of the style, however.

For information call Mrs. Border at 573-8511, ext. 263.

Trial suspended indefinitely

MOSCOW (AP) — The trial of the alleged masterminds of the August 1991 coup was suspended indefinitely Saturday because one of the 12 defendants is ill.

The presiding judge, Maj. Gen. Anatoly Ukolov, said the court would decide when to resume the trial after it received a medical report on Alexander Tizyakov, 67, who was rushed from the courtroom with heart trouble shortly after the trial began Wednesday.

Tizyakov had headed an association of state factories in what was then the Soviet Union and was a member of the self-proclaimed "State Committee for the State of Emergency" that seized power from Mikhail Gorbachev Aug. 18-21, 1991.

The other defendants include some of the most powerful men of the old regime: former KGB chief Vladimir Kryuchkov, Defense Minister Dmitry Yazov, Soviet parliament leader Anatoly Lukyanov, and Vice President Gennady Yanayev.

Commodities distribution set Wednesday

Commodity distribution this month will be Wednesday, April 21, from 9 until 11:30 a.m and from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Center, 2603 Avenue M. There will be no makeup day and all participants are asked to enter through the north door and to bring paper sacks or boxes to transport commodities.

May Day quilts to be displayed

Surplus commodities will be distributed to eligible Scurry County residents Wednesday through the Senior Center. Hours for distribution are 9-11:30 a.m. and 1-3 p.m. Guidelines for eligibility are posted in the center and volunteers there can help applicants compete the forms.

Quilts which will be sold in the May 1 auction as part of the center's May Day will be on display in local businesses this week. May Day is the center's major fundraiser each year, and all proceeds go to the center's operating fund. Tickets for the May Day barbecue are $5 each and are to be purchased in advance at the center or from senior citizens.

Mary Farris has been named acting president of the Senior Center's Advisory Council following the resignation of Ruth West. Mrs. West has become the district director for the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) and due to the amount of traveling that position requires she resigned from the council.

Skip Bo will be the feature of the center's Game Day on Monday, with games beginning at 9:30 a.m. A Nine Ball tournament will also begin Monday.

The local AARP chapter will meet in the center at 1 p.m. Monday. Persons interested in joining are invited to attend the meeting. The Golden K Kiwanis Club will meet at noon Tuesday and prospective new members are also invited to meet with them.

Hoss Clayton and his band will perform in the center at 11 a.m. Tuesday. The Sunshine Choir will go to Snyder Oaks Care Center for a program at 10 a.m. Friday.

The Friday Sing Along in the center's dining room will begin at 11:30 a.m.

Certificates have been prepared for senior citizens who gave volunteer time during the 1992-93 year and these can be picked up in the Senior Center office. Senior citizens who would like to give volunteer time are invited to inquire for details.

Persons 55 and older can qualify for discounts on certain types of car insurance by completing the 55 Alive driving course to be offered at the Senior Center on April 22 and 23.

Classes will meet from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1-2 p.m. both days. The fee of $8 per person is to be paid at 8:45 a.m. on April 22. Class members must attend all sessions to receive the certificate of completion required for insurance discounts.

Class size is limited so persons wishing to enroll in the class are to get their name on the list by calling the Senior Center at 573-4035. The center is located at 2603 Avenue M.

Wind downs theater

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Bobby Vinton brought the house down. Or rather the wind brought down a theater he was building in this Ozarks tourist town.

The 1,537-seat Bobby Vinton Blue Velvet Theatre was to open in July, with Vinton singing at two shows a day.

Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

This story could almost be a classic tale of love at first sight — except for one thing. The major players in this real-life drama are four humans, all long-time residents of Scurry County, and a handful of some of the most affectionate and delightful four-legged creatures ever to roam this earth.

It all began a little more than a year ago in Cleburne with a first-time visit to a llama show and sale.

Greg and Jamie Kimzey of Hermleigh, who are part-owners of an ostrich and emu farm, were looking for something "fun to do." Jamie's parents, James and Neva Harbin of Snyder, were intereste ! in something for their retirement years.

The Kimzeys are partners with Greg's parents, Dub and Ruth Kimzey, also of Hermleigh, in the K and K Ostrich and Emu Farm. They jointly own about 80 birds. Greg, who retired from ESP last year, now works full-time at the farm.

The younger Kimzeys also are part-owners, along with Jamie's parents, of the My-T-Fine Llama Farm, which is currently located on the Harbin place outside the city limits. They have recently purchased 40 acres in Hermleigh which will become the new home of the llamas.

At Cleburne, the four only intended to "look." Almost before they knew it, they had purchased their first llama. In time, they added a few more. It's not that they are compulsive shoppers, it's just that they cannot seem to resist these very friendly animals which love to be around people. Giving "sugars" is one of their trademarks.

That's how they purchased their first llama on Feb. 13, 1992. They aquired Gracie, a pregnant female, in the same fashion a few months ago. From the first moment she hung her head over James' shoulder, he said he could not say "no."

Neither couple knew very much about llamas at that time, but they have learned a great deal during the past year.

"It's been a learning experience for us," Neva said. Perhaps, never more so than when Miss Carlotta gave birth to Carly's Camella last month. Since it was their first experience with a llama's birth, none of the four knew what to expect. It was especially nerve-wracking for Neva, who was momentarily home alone just prior to the big event.

Neva didn't know then that llamas give birth rather easily and that it usually takes 45 minutes or less. The Kimzeys were en route from Hermleigh and their veterinarian in Colorado City was also on his way. As it turned out, Greg had to help the newborn llama or "cria" enter into this world because it was stuck. Within 30 minutes, mother and baby were doing fine.

The newborn must have bonded with Greg, at least temporarily, because they said it tried crawling after him for a while, while he was in the pen.

Since mothers are normally bred back two to four weeks after giving birth, both she and the newborn were at Dripping Springs at the time of this interview.

They worried at first about breeding her back so quickly, but Jamie said they were told that's what would happen if she were in the wild. "Besides if we wait to breed her back, it might not take," she added.

A long gestation period — 350 days — and a single birth also encourages frequent pregnancies.

With plans underway to move the llamas to Hermleigh, they said one advantage, besides more space, is the caliche and rock surface which will help the llamas keep their hooves trimmed. The animals detest having the vet do it, they added.

Currently, the Kimzeys and Harbins have five llamas. A sixth was recently sold at an exotic animal sale. Parting with the llama was an emotional experience for them. Neva said she sat in the

What's the difference between a parent who hits his child and a parent who doesn't?

About ten seconds.

Ten seconds. Not much to ask of yourself, if it keeps you from striking out at your child. So, the next time you feel things getting out of hand, don't hit. Count. To ten...or to twenty...or whatever it takes for you to realize that hurting your child isn't the answer. We can help, too: For a free booklet, write to "Good Discipline," P. O. The lowest play gets highest praise

We admire the underdog. We hope that David will topple Goliath, that the fox will outrun the hounds. Similarly, in bridge it is great when the play of a low card is more successful than that of a higher one.

Look at today's deal. South wasn't sure what to bid over East's one-spade opening. But he felt he would have some play for four hearts. And his direct leap had the advantage of making life tough for the opponents.

West led the spade six, which South knew to be a singleton. Counting his tricks, South saw four spades, five or six hearts and one diamond. There were no problems; all was plain sailing. He called for the spade 10. But East defended well. Judging the position correctly, he played not his queen but the two.

Beginning to feel uncomfortable, South continued with four rounds of trumps. West won the last and switched to the diamond 10. Declarer knew he was finished. Whatever he did, he had to lose four tricks: one spade, one heart and two clubs. He didn't have the necessary dummy entries to pick up the spades.

Let us return to the first trick. Suppose that instead of playing the "automatic" spade 10, South calls for dummy's seven. What can East do? It cannot benefit him to duck, so he covers with the nine. South wins with the king and plays four rounds of hearts. West switches to a diamond, but after winning with dummy's ace, South has no trouble finessing in spades through East. Declarer ends with 10 tricks: four spades, five hearts and one diamond.

Make your lowest cards count.

Married in church

Theresa Annette Martin and Terry Ray Stephens, both of Snyder, exchanged marriage vows at 3 p.m. on March 13 in the East Side Church of Christ. Darnell Boyd of Lometa, uncle of the groom, performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Jerry and Suzette Martin of Snyder and Milton Stephens of Snyder, and the late Pat Stephens.

Nuptial vows were promised before an altar decorated with two 15-arch candelabras, graced with greenery. Mauve bows decorated pews in the center aisle. Candles were lighted by Christopher Lynn Sonnier of Houma, La., cousin of the bride, and Todd Stephens of Virginia, the groom's brother.

Choir members, Bill and Sue Lyon, Joe and Peggy Martin, Rick Martin, Gary Martin, Terry and Paula Bowden, Scott Reynolds, Sterling Cave, Roland and Fran Bowden, Joellen King, Tyson Cromeens, Stephanie Fambro, Ken and Kathy Spoor, Marci Dennis and Sue Parham, sang "So In Love," "Follow Me," and "There Is Love." The tape, "I Will Be Here," by Steven C. Chapman, was played along with "A Whole New World — Aladdin's Theme Song."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white, defined with pearls and sequins. Her long train displayed pearls and sequins. Her fingertip veil attached a small headband.

She carried a bouquet made of mauve and white fresh flowers cascading with lace and white ribbon. Touches of baby's breath and greenery completed the bouquet.

For something old, the bride wore her mother's diamond earrings; something new was her wedding dress; something borrowed was her veil; and something blue was her garter. She wore a diamond necklace given to her by a special friend, Cathy Reed.

Maid of honor was Michelle Martin of Snyder, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Angee Crawford of Lubbock and Angie Burleson of San Angelo. Their gowns were blue and mauve floral and they carried bouquets of matching fresh flowers gathered with baby's breath and ribbon.

Natasha Marie Sonnier was flower girl and Brittany Suzette Sonnier was ring bearer, both are of Houma, La., and cousins of the bride. Justin Nikon of Hobbs, N.M., cousin of the groom, was ring bearer.

John Wright of Lubbock served as best man. Groomsmen were Mark Stansell and Justin House, both of Snyder. They were attired in black tuxedos with white cummerbunds and ties. The groom wore a fulldress black tux with a white vest.

Ushers were Rickey Thompson, brother-in-law of the groom; Tracy Nixon, cousin of the groom; Christopher Sonnier, cousin of the bride; and Todd Stephens, brother of the groom.

Tara Greene of Snyder attended the registry table decorated with a Precious Moments figurine.

Following the ceremony, a reception honored the couple in the multipurpose building near the church. Twenty-four mauve bows decorated the serpentine table covered with a white lace cloth. The five-layered, heart-shaped cakes stacked into a curve and were iced in white with mauve accents, was accompanied by a flowing fountain of punch. The cake top was the same one used on the bride's parents wedding cake. The table was centered with four tall mauve candles.

Serving were Kristi Prather of College Station, Dayla Church of Lubbock and Jeannie Tomlinson of Snyder.

The groom's cakes consisted of one chocolate and four cheesecakes. Silver and brass appointments and greenery adorned the table.

Tobi Thompson of Snyder, the groom's sister, and Denita Bynum of Franklin, the groom's cousin, served at the table.

Following Mr. and Mrs. Stephens' honeymoon to Ruidoso, N.M., they are at home in Snyder where the groom is employed with Ben Wilson Auto Supply. He is a Snyder High School graduate and plans to attend Lubbock Christian University this fall. The bride, also a SHS graduate, is employed at Preferred Risk Insurance and plans to attend Texas Tech this fall. The couple attends Western Texas College.

"Tales Out of School," by Joseph Fernandez.

Chancellor Joseph A. Fernandez was a high school dropout and a former gang leader in Spanish Harlem. He became the superintendent of the floundering Miami public school system, which he transformed into a mold-breaking, chance-taking, award-winning, and much-copied educational institution.

This is his compelling story of how he got where he is and what he sees as the cures for America's ailing schools. He has been a teacher, a principal, and an administrator for 30 years, so his assessments are candid and based on fact.

Miss Wilson, Hodges pledge vows

Amy Lynnette Wilson became the bride of William Glenn Hodges, both of Snyder, in double-ring rites at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 27 in St. Elizabeth Catholic Church. Father Williams Costigan, pastor of the church, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Wilson of Snyder are parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Rick Freeman of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hodges of Burleson are parents of the groom.

The couple's vows were pledged before an altar frontal made of pure white woven textured fabric, with each side appliqued in shimmering gold fabric representing the bride and groom.

The center of the frontal was decorated with a gold corded cross on which shimmering gold double wedding rings were appliqued. This symbolizes the unity of the bride and groom in the eyes of the Lord. This area was created by Rachel James of Snyder.

A large floral arrangement of silk candlelight antique roses and forest green accents was placed in front of the altar. The kneeling bench was draped with cascading candlelight, baby roses and forest green velvet bows, made by the groom's mother.

Altar servers were David Garcia, John Gutierrez, Joe Martinez and Nathan Seib, all of Snyder. They are all students of the bride's catechism class at the church. Paul Seib coordinated the altar servers and also served as Eucharistic Minister. Shirley Scifres of Snyder read the liturgy that was chosen especially by the bride.

Stefany and Kristin Hull of Lubbock, cousins of the groom, handed out programs and Brandi Herrley, daughter of Kyle and Amy Herrley of Snyder, handed out scrolls inscribed with a Bible verse. The wedding was videotaped by Carlton Parkerson of Lubbock, uncle of the groom.

Corsages and boutonnieres were presented by Amy Herrley, a special friend of the bride.

Pianist Karomy Drum of Fluvanna, niece of the bride, played selections as guests were seated. "Evergreen" was played as parents were seated. The bride and her father entered to the traditional "Wedding March." After the marriage vows, a piano selection, "Canon in D," was played. Following communion, "The Wedding Song" was sung by Theresa Phillips.

The bride's gown was a candlelight antique satin with a Chantilly lace over-satin princess bodice, embroidered with pearls and iridescent sequins. Queen Elizabeth sleeves were accented with candlelight satin and trimmed with satin bows. The back of the dress was cut in a low V with a large satin bow falling into the train. The bridal attire was completed with satin pumps in which held pennies in the birth years of the bride and groom. A crown headpiece of tulle and baby roses with details of draped roses and seed pearls was worn.

MR. and MRS. WILLIAM GLENN HODGES

In keeping with tradition, the bride wore her late grandmother's gold ring for something old; her bridal gown was something new; something borrowed was her mother's pearl and diamond earrings; and some blue was her garter.

She carried a cascading bouquet of silk candlelight antique roses and seed pearls accented with ribbon of candlelight and forest green.

Maid of honor was Donna Rowell of Lubbock and bridesmaids were Valerie Drum of Fluvanna and Alisa Cain of Snyder, both sisters of the bride.

The attendants dresses were knee-length, semi-fitted dresses of forest green iridescent taffeta, featuring puffed sleeves. They carried long-stemmed silk candlelight antique roses with forest green accents and ribbon.

Vanessa Freeman of Snyder, sister of the groom, was flower girl. Her mid-calf length dress with a full skirt was made of forest green iridescent taffeta.

Zachary Cain of Snyder, nephew of the bride, and Kelby Drum of Fluvanna, her niece, were ring bearers. Zachary wore a black tuxedo accented with a forest green tie and cummerbund. Kelby's dress matched Miss Freeman's.

Best man was Bart Morton of Lubbock and groomsmen were Heith Hodges, brother of the groom, and Billy Nix, both of Snyder. Ushers were Max Drum of Fluvanna and David Cain of Snyder, both brothers-in-law of the bride.

The groom was attired in a black tuxedo featuring tails and was accented with a white bow tie and vest. Attendants wore black tuxes with forest green bow ties and cummerbunds.

As Mr. and Mrs. Hodges left the altar area, the bride presented the mothers with long-stemmed, antique white roses.

Stacy Botts of Snyder registered guests at a table covered with a forest green cloth and a cream overlay. It held the bridal book and a plume pen.

A reception and dance were held in the church's Parish Center. The bride's table, covered with a forest green taffeta cloth with an antique white lace overlay, was centered with a floral arrangement of candlelight silk antique roses with forest green accents.

An engraved porcelain bride, a gift from the bride's parents, was placed in front of the arrangement. A sterling silver punch bowl and cups were placed at one end of the table and at the other end was the cake.

The three-tiered, white heart-shaped, wedding cake was decorated with creamy frosting. Roses of icing in forest green and white, the bride's chosen colors, were arranged on a bed of matching green leaves between the middle and top tiers, and topped with the traditional bride and groom cake top.

The three tiers were separated by white pillars in a stair-step design. Each layer was decorated with delicate loops of forest green, and vertical shells, ruffles, and Fleur de Lis in white. The wedding cake was made by Patty McKinney of Snyder.

Serving at the bride's table were Tammy Miller of Lockney, Dana Miller of Lubbock, both cousins of the bride, and Stacy Botts of Snyder.

Covered with a matching green cloth with an antique white overlay, the [illegible] table was centered with a silver candelabrum with green candles. A two-tiered German chocolate cake, decorated with kiwi fruit and grapes, was served by Betty Wilson of Lamesa and Retha Hull of Lubbock, aunts of the groom. His mother made and designed the cake.

At the dance following the reception, the "Silver Spur Band" of Snyder provided music. The groom is a band member along with Kyle Herrley, Gaylon Hudson and Jayson Steelman, all of Snyder.

The couple's honeymoon trip was in Marriot Cypress Harbour Resort in Orlando, Fla.

The couple is at home in Snyder where the groom is employed at Jim's Welding Works and the bride is employed as bookkeeper for Trans-Tex Tool & Rental Service, Inc.

The groom is a 1990 graduate of Snyder High School and attended Angelo State University and Western Texas College. The bride is a 1986 graduate of Snyder High School and 1989 graduate of WTC.

Views on children's dreams

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (AP) Children's dreams can be a way of gaining insight into a child's emotional development, according to Stephen Catalano, a Boston College social worker.

"In the past, there was a tendency to relegate dream content to the area of psychoanalysis, to view dreams merely as representing repressed drives or wishes," Catalano said. "But since then, we've come to realize that dreams are much more mundane and reflective than we previously thought, and that we can learn as much from ordinary dreams as nightmares."

For example, children may be confronting normal developmental issues that can be vexing or upsetting. It is more than likely that these issues are played out in a child's dream, he said, and it is possible to identify them.

In a Boston College press release, Catalano said dream content analysis can be particularly useful among adolescents because many teens are reluctant to discuss personal matters with adults, whether their emotional development is normal or not.

In one study, Catalano compared the dreams of two groups of 14-to 16-year olds. One group had a history of normal behavior, and their dreams had common themes relating to adolescent behavior: peer support, concern about social norms and the struggle to fashion an identity separate from one's parents.

The other group had been experiencing emotional disorders, he said, and their dream content revealed more confusing, inconsistent and bizarre themes indicating delayed development.

Catalano is an adjunct assistant professor in the Graduate School of Social Work at Boston College. He is the author of "Children's Dreams in Clinical Practice" (Plenum Publishing, New York City), written primarily for therapists working with troubled or disturbed children.

4th graders try saving collection

HENDERSON, Ky. (AP) — Fourth-graders at Cairo Elementary School put a lot of heart and a lot of work into a minimuseum to try to help save the million-dollar John James Audubon art collection.

Since 1938, Audubon's descendants have leased the collection to the nearby Audubon Memorial Museum. One of the descendants died last year, and other heirs said they probably would have to sell the collection to cover inheritance taxes. When last appraised in 1984, the collection was valued at nearly $2.5 million.

Twenty-two fourth-graders spent nearly a month collecting books and pictures about Audubon to be displayed for one week in the school library. They agreed to collect a 50-cent admission from adults, 25 cents from children, plus whatever donations they could raise.

Students drew charts to highlight exhibits, collected abandoned bird's nests, colored eggs to match wild-bird eggs and learned what to say while acting as tour guides.

Ten-year-old Joshua Turner dressed in buckskin to portray Audubon. He worked at an easel with pencils and crayons, drawing and coloring bird pictures. The exhibit also included a hand-operated filmstrip about birds' feet, beaks and wings.

The minimuseum attracted students, parents and grandparents, and collected about $350. The money will go to Friends of Audubon, which is attempting to keep the painter's works at the Audubon Memorial Museum.

Jackson reunion

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The often squabbling Jacksons — Michael included — are said to be planning a reunion show in December.

The Jackson Family Invitational Music Benefit and Awards will be held in December, said Thomas D. Carver, president of the Casino Association of New Jersey, a sponsor of the event. The Press, quoting an unidentified association source, reported Wednesday that Michael Jackson would take part.

pickup and cried after the sale.

Jamie said she and Greg consider their llamas as "more of a hobby," but that the farm will be more of a business for her parents whenever her father retires from the McCormick Super Station where he has worked for the past 45 years.

Jamie, who has been the assistant manager at Walls Industries, Inc. for the past six years, also plans to work full-time at the farm someday.

When shopping around for another animal to purchase last year, they said they rejected buffalos — which Neva wanted — because they are "too mean;" zebras because "they aren't very smart and never get used to people;" and kangaroos because they are "too stressed out to raise;" before settling on llamas. It's a decision they have never regretted.

"Llamas all have different personalities and that's what makes them so special to us," they said.

"Llamas are so smart that you just have to show them something three times and they learn it," Greg said.

Llamas do not require much care compared to other animals. They are good-natured and do not scare easily. A three-sided shed will protect them from the elements. Almost anything can be used to fence them in except for barbed wire or electric fences. Llamas' coats are very thick but they could still hurt themselves if they came into contact with barbed wire.

They will eat hay, rosebushes, weeds and leaves. The thorns on rosebushes don't bother them. The Harbins and Kimzeys also feed their llamas a special feed mix, but it isn't necessary, they said.

Jamie said, "Four llamas can be raised in the same space as one cow."

Llamas display anger by spitting on each other, and, once in a while, if thoroughly provoked, they'll spit at a human.

They communicate by humming. When they give their "alarm" they "sound like mules braying." Gambit has been nicknamed "Cry Baby" because he hums all the time, they said.

Llamas get along with most other animals but for some reason they don't like dogs and may attack them. Llamas are used successfully by sheepherders because they bond with sheep and will kill coyotes to protect them.

Llamas interact well with people and seem to have a special affinity for the elderly, children, the handicapped and special people. They are used in therapy and public relations work because they have such good personalities.

Llamas can be trained to lie down and many travel very well in vans. Since llamas are very clean they will only void outdoors. For long trips, the Kimzeys and Harbins learned to put some hay and grass inside with the llamas or else they will not eliminate.

Llamas are priced from a mere $300 to $168,000. Some are imported from other countries, but a llama market is growing in the U.S. and Texas.

Imported llamas tend to have thicker wool and hair and, for some reason, hair grows faster on llamas in the east than elsewhere in the U.S.

Grooming a full-grown llama can be quite a chore, as it usually takes about eight hours. However, that is one of the many things that owners have to do if they want to exhibit them.

Llamas do not eat a lot and they are so clean that their living area only needs to be cleaned up once a month.

Llamas don't require a lot of vaccinations, but they do have to be wormed every three months.

State conventions are also held for llamas. The animals are so popular that some people attend shows even though they do not have any llamas of their own.

Llamas are becoming more popular all the time. They make very good pack-animals. In Oregon, some are used as caddies on golf courses.

4-H members in South Texas are also raising them. Llama shows are also included at all the major stock shows, they said.

Llamas tend to run and jump like deer, sometimes appearing to be bouncing. The Kimzeys and Harbins described them as "graceful, proud, loveable, forgiving [illegible] relaxing to watch."

They said, "Llamas give love unconditionally and can make a bad day better."

Llamas aren't loud and they don't have a bad odor. That's another reason why they like them so much.

Since llamas get bored very easily, the Kimzeys and Harbins vary their feeding time or else they won't eat. They also feed them separately because some tend to eat more than their share.

Playdays for llamas are also popular. The Kimzeys and Harbins are thinking about entering a playday in the near future. They may also show their llamas at this year's Scurry County Fair.

Last summer, they made sand pits for the llamas. Llamas cool from the belly up. Last summer's heat was so hard on the thick-haired animals that Jamie said they set up outdoor fans and wetted them down.

They did not shear them then, but this summer they plan to do so. Shearing does not hurt them, but it does take a long time for their hair to grow back, Jamie said.

"We have encountered many very friendly people who have helped us a lot," Jamie said.

Introducing the llamas to the other animals on the Harbin place was no easy task. Their shetland pony went to the back of the pen when they brought their first llama [illegible] scared at first.

While the Harbins and Kimzeys were building pens, the llamas always came to watch. They especially seemed to like the drilling.

During the past year, the llamas have drawn lots of interest. School children have visited them on the Harbin place.

Passersby often stop. And so [illegible] Carly Camerra's pending birth, that they said they put the announcement of her birth in the newspaper to let people know.

Greg currently serves as president of the Texas Emu Association and Jamie is the secretary-treasurer.

MORE LLAMAS — During the past year, Neva Harbin, first photo, along with her husband, James, and daughter and son-in-law, Greg and Jamie Kimzey, (not pictured) have learned a great deal about llamas. They are so docile and lovable that they can be used for a variety of things, including working on golf courses and with children and elderly people. Gracie, shown in the second photo, is pregnant and a new addition to the My-T-Fine Llama Farm. In photo three, Sassy quietly eats her dinner, oblivious to the humans in her pen. (SDN Staff Photos)

Llamas belong in camel family

Editor's Note: Jamie Kimzey compiled the following information on llamas. More information is available from the South Central Llama Association in Orange, Tex. 77631-0609.

Llamas are members of the camel (camelid) family. They and their relatives are no strangers to North America. The camel family originated in the central plains of North America and spent their first 40 million years right here in our own backyard!

Then, some 3 million years ago, camels migrated to Asia and Africa, while llama-like animals dispersed to South America.

Just 10,000-12,000 years ago, llamas were being domesticated, placing them among the oldest domestic animals in the world. In the latter 1800s and the early 1900s, llamas were re-introduced to their original North American homeland.

Today, there are some 50,000 llamas in the United States and Canada.

Generally females are more expensive than males. Llamas are by far the easiest to care for of any domestic livestock and are an investment the entire family will enjoy.

Mature llamas range in weight from 250-500 pounds. Full body size is reached by the fourth year, and, while there are no obvious differences between the sexes, males tend to be slightly larger.

Llamas are long-lived animals with a normal life span of 15-20 years. Like cattle, sheep, and deer, llamas are multi-stomached ruminants that chew their cud. They have a hard upper gum (no upper teeth in front), grinding upper and lower molars in back, and an ingenious upper lip for grasping forage.

Adult males develop large, sharp upper and lower canines (fangs) for fighting. These are generally removed to prevent injuries to males pastured together or to females being bred. Llamas are two-toed animals that have a broad, leathery pad on the bottom and curved nails in front. The small, oblong, bare patches on the side of each rear leg are metatarsal scent glands, suspected to be associated with the production of alarm pheromones. An additional scent gland is located between the toes. Llamas are easy to transport and require no specialized equipment. They can even be trained to quite easily ride in a van. They usually lie down once the vehicle starts moving.

Llamas are comparatively easy to care for, with a minimum of veterinary assistance required.

Llamas have a dignified, aristocratic manner about them. Because of their natural curosity, they have a delightful habit of coming close to sniff strangers.

Llamas are typically docile around children. They are gentle and don't spook easily, and rarely bite or kick unless provoked.

Llamas are highly social animals and need the companionship of another llama or other grazing livestock.

Llamas communicate their moods with a series of tail, body and ear postures, and vocalizations.

Humming is a common manner of communications between llamas, and indicates a variety of moods from contentedness to concern. They also have a shrill, rhythmic alarm call emitted at the sight of a strange animals or a frightening situation.

Spitting, usually related to food disputes, is seldom directed at people unless a llama has been mishandled or become dependent on people through bottle feeding as a baby.

Bottle-fed males can become dangerous as adults because they lack a normal fear of people and regard them as competitors.

Llamas are remarkably clean, and even large herds are quite odorless. They share communal dung piles which are a convenience to the owner when it comes to clean pens.

Females are fertile at around 4 to 6 months of age but should not be bred until they are 14-24 months, depending on size and development.

Males may be fertile at 7 to 9 months but aren't fully dependable breeders until three years old.

Gestation averages 350 days and a single offspring is produced; twinning is rare. The average weight of a normal newborn llama is 25-30 pounds but can range from 18-40 pounds.

Llamas are induced ovulators so the owner can schedule when they want birthing. Birthing normally occurs during the daytime hours of 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Newborn llamas are called "crias" and are usually born within 10-45 minutes of onset. Females are normally bred back two to four weeks after giving birth.

Llamas can be used for many things.

Breeding, packing, wool production, comparison animals and sheep guarding head the list of common llama uses. Because they are easy to train, llamas are popular attractions in parades, shows, fairs and community events, and are fun to take on school, hospital or nursing home visits.

Depending on maturity, weight and condition, a llama will tote 50-120 pound packs 10-20 miles a day. Males are most commonly used for packing as the females are used primarily for breeding and building up the herd.

Llama wool production is a multi-million dollar industry in South America and is appealing to spinners and weavers here.

Llamas have soft fine wool, for protection against cold and insulation from heat, which can be made into beautiful garments and blankets.

Their docile nature makes llamas extremely easy to train to accept a halter, lead, kush (lie down), carry a pack, load in and out of a vehicle, pull a cart or carry a lightweight rider.

With just a few repetitions they will pick up and retain any of their skills. Llamas, with minimum training are easy to handle when you are trimming nails, brushing or shearing, or when health problems necessitate touching time in sensitive places.

Kids promote healthy eating habits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kids Against Junk Food is urging youngsters across the United States to join a letter-writing campaign to reduce "junk-food" advertising on television. Kids Against Junk Food is a national organization for children ages 5 to 18 that promotes kids' healthy eating habits. KAJF is a project of the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a nonprofit, consumer advocacy organization that focuses on nutrition and food safety.

A sample letter to the presidents of five major television networks (ABC-TV, CBS-TV, NBC-TV, Fox TV and Nickelodeon) says, "I am trying to eat healthful foods, but that's hard when TV ads constantly urge me to eat so many foods that are fatty, sugary and salty. Please help kids like me develop good eating habits so we can be healthy now and when we are grown-up."

Children who want to join KAJF should send information about themselves, their eating habits and their ideas for improving children's diets to: Kids Against Junk Food, 1875 Connecticut Ave., Suite 300, Washington, D.C., 20009-5728.

Noah Project-W. plans barbecue

Noah Project-West board of directors met recently in the board room at Cogdell Memorial Hospital to plan barbecue meals to be served in the museum at Western Texas College prior to the Ritz productions set for May 14 and 21, and discuss other coming events. Doris Beaver will head up the committee for the meal.

A pot-luck dinner to honor volunteers will be held on April 23 in the home of board president Joann Snider. Volunteer Recognition Week is April 18-24.

Under consideration for future fundraisers include a July 4 duck race and Miss White Buffalo Days contest. More information on these events is expected from the chamber of commerce at a later date.

Claudia Fields, Noah coordinator, announced that Bill Bates, will be the featured speaker at an April 26 silent auction, benefiting the Noah Projectne. The Dallas Cowboy's program will include his road to the Cowboys and 1992 Super Bowl highlights.

At 6 p.m. a reception and autograph signing will be held for children and students at the Abilene Civic Center. The auction and dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are available for $25 per person. Reservations may be made by calling the Noah Project of Abilene at (915)676-7107.

During the month of March, Fields reported the local shelter aiding victims of family violence had aided five adults and eight children. Hotline calls from or about victims of family violence totaled nine, including six nonresident victims. Eighteen volunteers worked a total of 548.5 hours.

Marshall Bryant was welcomed as a new member. Others attending were Gussie Gray, Sally Rios, Ricky Fritz, Father William Costigan, Tommie Mills, Rosalinda Tovar, Jim Tully and staff member Mary Beckham.

Polly's Pointers By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — I recently bought a beautiful white sheepskin, nicely tanned, in Norway, and I intended to sit on it. But some of the animal odor remove the odor. Can you help me? — RONALD

DEAR RONALD — [illegible] outside first. Put it in a breezy, sunny place for several hours and see if this lessens the odor at all. If so, continue to air until it meets your own sniff test.

Many sheepskins are washable. You should have been told this when you bought it. If this is the case with yours, try washing it in cool water with a couple of cups of vinegar added to the water. Vinegar is very useful in removing animal odors of all kinds.

If you're not sure whether your sheepskin is washable or not, your best bet would be to take it to a professional dry cleaner with experience in cleaning furs. The dry cleaner might be able to remove the odor or advise you on the safest way to do so yourself. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To clean the lint screen of your clothes dryer in a second, just rub across it with the used fabric-softener sheet. — P.M.L.

DEAR POLLY — I have found that baby wipes are excellent cleaners for household blinds. Not only does the wipe whisk the dust away, but it leaves a brilliant shine on the blinds.

DEAR POLLY — Using a plastic garbage bag with a paint tray slipped inside it helps to clean up the mess while painting. Instead of getting your tray dirty, you pour the paint right on the bag. When cleanup time comes, just throw away the bag. You'll have a clean paint tray. — DEE

Polly's newsletter, "Eliminating Household Odors," offers dozens of ways to freshen up all over the house. Tips include removing paint odors, cooking odors and mildew odors, plus directions for making your own air fresheners. DEAR READERS — Pet food is a big business. Just look at the amount of space consumed by pet food in your local supermarket. But how do you choose the food that's right for your pet? Here are some tips from pet nutritionist Dr. Elizabeth Hodgkins.

• Don't fall for the suggestion that dogs and cats should take after their wild ancestors, eating meat and fish respectively. Dogs, unlike cats, are not strict carnivores (meat eaters). An all-meat diet can provide excessive protein that can encourage certain diseases in dogs. Cats that are fed an all-fish diet can become victims of vitamin E deficiency, thiamine deficiency and other nutritional diseases.

• Check the list of ingredients in a pet food. Generally speaking, an animal protein source should be one of the first two ingredients in a canned dog food, and one of the first three in a dry formula. Food for adult dogs and cats should have at least one cereal grain and one source of calcium. Maintenance foods for cats should also carry an ash content of less than 6 percent to help avoid feline urinary-tract disease.

[illegible] the ingredients of a pet food. They are only the vehicles for nutrients. It is the nutrient profile, not the ingredients, that determines the healthfulness of a food. Your veterinarian can help you with information on the nutritional analysis of various foods.

Your vet also can recommend foods for optimum nutrition for your pet's present age and physical condition. — POLLY

RECIPE OF THE WEEK — Here are some delicious toppings for making baked potatoes flavorful without adding a lot of butter.

Confetti Topping — Combine 1 cup low-fat cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento, 1/8 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon celery powder. Chill for an hour before serving to allow flavors to blend.

Creamy Blue Cheese Topping — Combine 3 tablespoons low-calorie blue cheese dressing, 1 8-ounce carton low-fat yogurt and 1/2 teaspoon onion powder. Chill for 1 hour before serving to allow flavors to blend.

More potato toppers — Toasted sesame seeds; poppy seeds; stewed tomatoes and grated cheese; cottage cheese and lemon juice whipped in a blender to make mock sour cream; chopped onion with coarsely grated black pepper; or chive-spiked yogurt.

Potatoes are healthful, delicious and versatile. My newsletter, "Potatoes, Potatoes, Potatoes," offers a variety of ways to prepare them for snacks, sidedishes, complete meals and, yes, even dessert. (Potato fudge, anyone?) Send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for each copy to POLLY'S POINTERS, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 93863, Cleveland, OH 44101-5863. — POLLY

Child Abuse: What you probably don't know

Buffalo Reef

By Bill McClellan

A quick, one question test.

Last year there were how many [illegible] County?

Would you think 10? Maybe 50? One hundred?

"Most people who are not a relative or not directly involved don't even realize it happens," says Linda Sparks, child protective services specialist with the Children's Protective Services in Snyder.

Linda and her co-workers conducted 133 investigations last year and identified 61 cases of child abuse with 176 confirmed victims. If that doesn't sound particularly shocking, consider that the number of confirmed victims per 1,000 is 26.9 percent.

"First and foremost, we try to keep families together in a safe way."

"One in four children suffers from some type of abuse," says Linda. "When you drive down the street and know that in every fourth house some child is being abused, that's sad; that's scary."

April is Child Abuse Awareness Month. Linda and those who work with her would like you to understand that child abuse is real. It doesn't just happen in New York or Dallas or Houston. It occurs, all too often, in Scurry County.

They'd like you to report child abuse. And they'd like you to have a better understanding of what Children's Protective Services is, and what it does.

"There is a lack of understanding. People think we're the bad guys, we're the welfare. People think we're going to go in and remove their kids," says Linda. "Actually, most of the time we don't. First and foremost, we try to keep families together in a safe way. If the child is in danger of being abused further, we remove the child."

The CPS program's aim is to prevent further harm to children while still preserving the family unit. If that isn't possible, CPS petitions the court to remove the children and place them temporarily with substitute families or caregivers.

Currently, 43 children from Scurry County are in CPS conservatorship. That's from a child population of 6,550, or 6.6 per 1,000.

If CPS and the family cannot resolve the problems to allow the children to live at home safely, CPS may recommend to the court that the parent/child relationship be terminated and the children be placed with other permanent families or caregivers.

There are five caseworkers for Scurry, Mitchell, Fisher, Kent, Stonewall and Jones counties, including three in the Snyder office — Linda, Jenny Gibson and Sherry Pilgrim. They are supervised by Leonard Glasgow, who also works out of the Snyder office.

The agency is required by state law to conduct civil investigations of reports of suspected child abuse or neglect.

The reports come by telephone or personal contact.

"We attempt to get as much information as possible," says Linda. "People reporting child abuse can remain anonomyous, but it helps if CPS can get a name and phone number."

The caseworker will make a determination based on the law, the past history of the family, if possible, and experience.

Of course, many reports of child abuse are unfounded. Others may indicate situations that are not the best for the child's growth or development, but do not actually involve child abuse or neglect as defined by the law. CPS doesn't investigate or provide services for these situations, but may refer them to volunteer or community resources.

After assessing the information, the caseworker makes contact with the supervisor, who ultimately decides whether to investigate.

These reports are classified as Priority I or II, depending on the severity and urgency of the situation.

A Priority 1 investigation is begun immediately or within 24 hours. A Priority 2 investigation begins within 10 days, by law, but is usually conducted much sooner.

When CPS investigates, they normally notify law enforcement.

"That way we don't put the kid through two interviews, two photo sessions and the like," explains Linda.

When a need for protective services has been identified and it is determined that the children's safety can be maintained in their own homes, family planning is developed with the goal of preventing further abuse or neglect.

In a situation where children must be temporarily placed in foster care to ensure their safety, services are also provided to the parents to enable the return of children as soon as it is safe. When it appears that the children will be safe without CPS supervision, cases are closed.

According to statistics, mothers make up the greatest percentage of alleged perpetrators in confirmed reports. This reflects the reality that most single-parent families are headed by women. And, even in two-parent families, women are usually the primary caregivers.

Therefore, women are more vulnerable to stresses that can lead to child abuse or neglect. In sexual abuse cases, only 11.1 percent of the alleged perpetrators are women.

Physical abuse is the most prominent type of abuse caseworkers see. But they also have to deal with victims of emotional abuse, physical and medical neglect, sexual abuse and abandonment.

Witnessing that kind of pain and suffering on a regular basis is tough.

"You have to be able to leave the job when you go home," says Linda. "If you do totally, you aren't human. If you don't, you can't cope. It's a hard line to draw. You have to genuinely like kids.

"And you have to try to understand the perpetrators. Most of the people who are child abusers are grown up child abuse victims. That doesn't excuse them; they are adults and they make choices. But it helps you understand it a little more.

"So I feel sorry for the perpetrators this much," she says, holding up her thumb and index finger, "but my main concern, my priority, is with the child."

If you suspect child abuse, contact the Texas Department of Protective and Regulatory Services at 573-1161 and speak with a caseworker. If you call after hours, you may leave a message, or you may call the Child Abuse Hot Line at 1-800-252-5400.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I wanted to express my thanks to the chamber of commerce, the WTC faculty, the WTC students and others involved in making the chamber banquet so enjoyable. I never realized there were so many talented people at WTC. I thoroughly enjoyed the content and variety of the program.

I want to especially thank those who made it possible for me to receive the teacher award given by the Council for Educational Excellence. There are many excellent teachers in the Snyder school system. I feel very honored to be selected to receive this award.

I would also like to thank the faculty of Snyder Junior High for their help and cooperation. It makes the job much easier and so many goals more attainable.

I want to thank my students, both present and past, for being willing to work so hard to learn the math. It has been a pleasure to see them succeed and to play a small part in that success.

I would also like to thank Snyder Independent School District for giving me a chance to fulfill a childhood dream — to help make the world a better place. I can think of no better way to do this than by investing in the future. And no better way to invest in the future than the education and moral growth of the youth.

I especially want to thank my mother, Mary Abbott, for being the best example possible, both as a parent and a fellow teacher.

Sincerely,
Theresa Vest

Dear Editor:

We taught in the Hermleigh School System for 23 years. We retired in 1990, but we still actively support the school and its activities.

We and many other people in the community are proud of how well the students have done academically and athletically, as well as in UIL events, REA public speaking contests, Duke University Talent Identification Program, soil and water conservation contests, and livestock show participation.

We feel all phases of school are important to have a well-rounded student.

Cardinal Pride is still alive!

Sincerely, yours,
[illegible]

Dear Editor,

I am a concerned parent who has listened and heard people sing praises to the man accussed of improper behavior towards students in his class until I am sick at my stomach. We have heard so many people come to his defense and I feel it is time to come forward to the defense of the children!

I do not know these children or their families personally, but as a mother I do know that I would not do anything differently if my child were to approach me with a matter of this nature.

I am not trying to pass guilt or innocence on this man or these families. It took a great deal of courage for these children to go to their parents and tell them that this man whom they loved and respected as their teacher and their friend had done things to them that made them feel uncomfortable. Maybe these families are not so dysfunctional after all.

When families are able to openly discuss problems that they encounter, that shows these children trust their parents to protect them. I pray that my child would be brave and would trust me and know that her father and I would protect her with all that we are and all that we have. If a child cannot trust his mother and father, then who?

To be confronted by his child with this situation would be one of any parent's worst nightmares. These parents had a moral obligation to their children to turn it over to the proper authorities.

The fact is, the matter has warranted an indictment. Let's leave it to the legal system to decide the guilt or innocence of those involved.

The conduct of people who would publicly humiliate these children and their families by demeaning their character is abhorrent. It is time to clear our heads and realize that all parties involved need our support and our prayers. Tragedy knows all our addresses.

Sincerely,
Becky Hicks

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

If you drop by to visit me these days without giving me fair warning, I'll kill you. I mean that.

I've been demon-possessed, lately, burning up computer keys in a driven attempt to complete a novel I started a year ago. They all take about a year to research and do properly, but the heavy stuff comes at the end, nearly always in the spring. Yesterday I wrote four chapters, which amounts to around fifty pages; say, 12,000 words. I did it over a twelve-hour period while my kids orbited around outside the door like distant little planets.

The central theme of the book is survival. I wanted to develop a powerful love story, drop in intriguing and frightening plot twists, and set it against a magnificent backdrop (the Davis Mountains), in order to examine the question: What does it take to survive the very worst thing that can happen to you?

During the course of my research, I read hundreds of accounts of POWs, Holocaust survivors, victims of violent crime and airplane crashes and shipwrecks. (And I interviewed a couple of survivors.) I wanted to know why one person, gravely injured, survives a tragic event while the guy next to him, maybe not nearly so injured or sick, dies.

And I don't buy into the pat phrase, "There but for the grace of God, go I." What kind of merciful, compassionate God allows a tornado to skip one house and demolish the home of five children next door, orphaning them or killing them in the process?

No. The way I see it, God set up the natural laws that govern things like weather and earthquake fault lines. It's not His fault if your house happens to sit right on the line, or if the funnel cloud skips three houses to land on yours.

Let's face it: sometimes it just all boils down to luck. The plane behind you is the one who's engine fell off in flight. You lucked out. God didn't pick you out of a lineup of 300 people and say, "This one's special. I think I'll let that plane over there crash instead."

So. Okay. Let's say your plane does crash-land on a mountain top and you were lucky enough to be one of the ones who lived through it. How do you survive the ordeal of staying alive?

The answer, when I finally found it, was so simple as to be almost unbelievable.

You decide.

That's it. You decide, I am going to live. And then, you engage in mortal combat with the enemy, doing whatever you have to to stay alive. If the guy next to you dies, and it's thirty degrees below zero, you take his clothes off and put them on your own body. He doesn't need them anymore and you do.

This power of decision is a splended, awesome thing, a gift from God Himself. It applies in every single situation. The doctors say you are going to die? They may be right. Then again, they may not have confronted the power of the human soul in combat with death. You decide, I want to live, no matter what it takes. [illegible] get you in the end, but maybe you will have bought yourself four or five more years. That is your victory.

My books deals, principally, with survival of violent crime and survival of love within marriage. These last chapters have kept me awake many long hours. It's not easy doing battle with death, even if it is all inside your head with a fictional character. You're still dealing with it, and it's exhausting and triumphant.

Cooking, housework, laundry ... they all take a distant backseat against such a panorama. So I wouldn't drop in if I were you. I might be a little ... testy.

Clintons owe $4,085 in last-minute tax filing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like millions of other Americans, Bill and Hillary Clinton waited until the last minute to file their income tax return, including a check for $4,085.

"Took a pretty good lick," President Clinton said Thursday, joining the 117 million couples and individuals who will file for the 1992 tax year. The Clintons filed their returns Thursday, the last day.

The first couple reported an adjusted gross income of $290,697, up from $219,155 in 1991. Mrs. Clinton earned $203,172 from her law practice in 1992. Her husband earned $34,527 as governor of Arkansas.

They sent a $4,085 check to the Internal Revenue Service on Thursday to make up the difference between what they owed and the $66,143 they had paid through the course of the year.

The Clintons claimed $39,190 in itemized deductions last year, including $19,452 in donations to charities.

The charitable donations amount to 6.5 percent of their total income, which was $297,177.

They donated $10,220 to churches, $1,500 to the Arkansas Children's Hospital, $2,000 to the National Center on Education and the Economy, a non-profit think tank headed by Clinton's husband's health care task force.

The federal tax returns, which were released by the White House, show that the Clintons paid $70,228 in federal income taxes, $4,085 in self-employment taxes, $1,876 in state taxes, $1,000 in Medicare taxes, and $1,000 in Social Security taxes.

Clinton's alma mater, Yale Law School, received a $600 donation, and Mrs. Clinton's alma mater, Wellesley College, got $500.

Vice President Al Gore and his wife, Tipper, also released their tax returns. They reported $623,243 in 1992 income, including $461,529 in royalties from Gore's best-selling book, "Earth in the Balance: Ecology and the Human Spirit."

The Gores paid $166,979 in federal taxes, and claimed $61,876 in deductions. The largest deduction was for charity, including a $50,000 donation to the Uni-

American Bar associations.

The Clinton's $71,542 income increase from 1991 to 1992 is due to higher profits from Mrs. Clinton's partnership in the Rose Law Firm of Little Rock, Ark., and capital gains of $16,336. Most of the capital gains — $13,199 — come from the sale of her interest in the law firm's building.

The remainder of their income was from interest, dividends, partnership income, capital gains and Mrs. Clinton's directors fees and honoraria.

Buttafuoco pleads innocent

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — The TV movies were made a little too soon — the Amy Fisher saga isn't over yet.

Joey Buttafuoco, 37, was charged with rape and sodomy Thursday for allegedly having sex with Fisher in July 1991, a month before the high school student's 17th birthday. Seventeen is the age of consent in New York.

Buttafuoco, owner of a Long Island auto body shop, winked at his wife, Mary Jo, as he entered the courtroom, and she mouthed the words "I love you." He pleaded innocent, was freed without bail and left arm-in-arm with his wife.

He could get up to 73 years in prison if convicted on all 19 counts.

Fisher, now 18, is serving five to 15 years in prison after pleading guilty to assault for shooting Mrs. Buttafuoco in the head in 1992 in a case that was dramatized in three network movies. The so-called Long Island Lolita had claimed she and Buttafuoco were having an affair. He denied having sex with her.

Mrs. Buttafuoco, whose face is partially paralyzed from the shooting, said Thursday that her husband "is not guilty of anything. Amy Fisher is a liar and a psychopath."

Fisher, who testified against Buttafuoco before a grand jury, heard the news of Buttafuoco's indictment on a jail-house television Wednesday night.

$300,000 bond set for folk healer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Prosecutors can keep a tight lid on their evidence now that bond has been set for a 71-year-old folk healer accused of helping hire a teen-ager's killer, her lawyer says.

Attorney Ed Cyganiewicz said Maria Martinez de Sanchez is unlikely to post the $300,000 bond as quickly as her co-defendant, Dora Garcia Cisneros, the mother of the victim's ex-sweetheart.

Cameron County District Attorney Luis Saenz agreed on Thursday to allow Mrs. Martinez the same as he had Monday for Mrs. Cisneros, who is the wife of Brownsville surgeon David Cisneros.

Had the state tried to keep the women in custody without bond, prosecutors would have had to present their evidence at a bond hearing, Cyganiewicz said.

"I guess strategically it's a good move for the prosecution," he said.

Saenz and Sheriff Alex Perez have not made public the evidence and alleged motive in the case.

The women were charged with capital murder last week in the shooting death of Joey Fischer, 18, who had dated Mrs. Cisneros' daughter, Cristina.

Fischer was gunned down in front of his Rancho Viejo home on March 3. Cameron County sheriff's investigators, who allege that Mrs. Cisneros and Mrs. Martinez hired the hitman, are searching for two other suspects.

Mrs. Cisneros was released shortly after bond was approved Monday. Her attorney has maintained her innocence, saying Fischer and Cristina Cisneros had broke up several months ago without hard feelings.

Cyganiewicz said his client — a "curandera," or folk healer — didn't have the resources of Mrs. Cisneros. Curanderas are believed by their customers to have powers to cure ailments and, in some cases, cast or remove hexes.

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards is urging legislators to approve a pay raise for teachers, but some say there just isn't enough money to fund the proposal.

Both the House and Senate have adopted a state budget, and neither spending blueprint has allocated money for a teacher salary increase.

However, Richards told members of the House Appropriations Committee Thursday that she believed the necessary funds could be found when a House-Senate conference committee meets on the budget.

"I know it is not easy for me or anyone else to come and tell you that you need to do something that costs more money. But in this case you do," Richards said.

Texas ranks 35th in the nation in public school teacher salaries, with the average teacher's base salary at $27,557, according to the Texas Education Agency.

Richards urged support of a bill by state Rep. Christine Hernandez, D-San Antonio, that calls for a $1,200 per year pay raise for teachers.

But the $167 million needed for the raise does not exist, according to Appropriations Chairman Rob Junell.

"I think we said consistently it would be very difficult to fund a teacher pay raise this session," said Junell, D-San Angelo.

Ms. Hernandez's bill was sent to a subcommittee for further work.

FASTER THAN A SPEEDING BULLET

The Texas Senate has approved a bill that would force developers of a proposed "bullet train" to designate their preferred route by the end of the year. The measure would also abolish the Texas High-Speed Rail Authority, which oversees development of the bullet train. It has been sent to the House for consideration.

HINDERING HUNTING

A bill aimed at outlawing "canned hunts," the practice of setting up the killing of wild animals that have been kept in captivity, has won Senate approval. The measure by Sen. Mike Moncrief, D-Fort Worth, would restrict the ownership of certain wild animals, strengthen enforcement, and regulate licensing and inspection of wild animal facilities. Under current Texas law, canned hunts are legal unless the animal involved is listed as federally endangered or threatened.

CONFIMATION QUANDRY

Gov. Ann Richards' nominee for state public insurance counsel says she believes she will be confirmed by the full Senate, after the appointment was stalled for a month. Amy Johnson went back before the Senate Nominations Committee for a second time to answer additional questions about her job. The committee voted 5-0 to recommend confirmation.

AIRPORT EXPANSION

The Texas House has tentatively approved a bill that would clear the way for a major expansion of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, despite objections from several affected cities. The bill would allow the DFW board to control development of airport land in Grapevine, Euless, Irving and Coppell.

AND

A no-new-taxes, $67.5 billion state budget proposal to fund state government over the next two years has won final House approval. The measure is now expected to go to a legislative conference committee to hammer out differences between the House and Senate version, which is $2.2 billion higher.

QUOTE OF THE DAY

"This proposed legislation is throwing acid on the armor of cities." — Rep. Will Hartnett, R-Dallas, on a measure to allow expansion of DFW airport.

Girl's mother facing murder charge

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman [illegible] missing faces charges of murder and child [illegible] fessing her role in the girl's murder, authorities said.

Kimberly Harris, 23, was jailed late Thursday after giving a statement incriminating herself in the disappearance of her daughter [illegible], who would have been 2 next week, Houston police Sgt. [illegible] said.

Ms. Harris was being held without bond in Harris County Jail on charges of murder and abandonment of a child, according to police spokesman Alvin Wright.

The child's body was found in a bayou Wednesday morning. Williamson said Ms. Harris threw the [illegible] steep banks.

The girl's body had no obvious wounds. Autopsy results had not been released Thursday, but investigators said they believe the child drowned.

Ms. Harris phoned police Monday night and said her daughter had been grabbed from her crib at the home where they lived with the suspect's mother, Bobbie Harris.

The grandmother told police her daughter put the child in bed about 9:30 p.m., then ran to the store for about 10 minutes and returned to find the baby gone.

Williamson said there were discrepancies in Kimberly Harris' story from the beginning. Investigators' suspicions increased Wednesday when she reported happening upon her daughter's blanket in high brush on the bayou's banks about three miles from their home.

Police later found the child's body nearby, face down in the water, dressed in red pants and a white shirt.

Investigators then searched for the mother before learning she had been at a nearby business where she once worked, watching dive team members retrieve her daughter's body.

Ms. Harris was brought in for police questioning and later told reporters she "passed two (lie detector) tests." FBI Agent Bob Tucker, whose office assisted in the case, acknowledged Ms. Harris was given a polygraph exam but he declined to comment on the results.

Williamson said Ms. Harris gave reasons for her actions in her daughter's death, but he would not elaborate. Houston homicide detective Brad Rudolph later said, "It was basically a case of a distraught single parent" who didn't think she could handle her responsibilities.

Records show Ms. Harris was on probation for felony credit card abuse and misdemeanor theft at the time of her arrest.

Full truth about American POWs remains elusive issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — On April 1, 1973, Capt. Robert T. White was released by his Viet Cong captors after three years' detention in Vietnam's Mekong Delta. He was the last American POW from the Indochina War to be set free. There were no more.

Or were there?

Remarkably, more than 20 years later, the fate of Americans unaccounted for from that war and doubts that the full truth has been told continue to haunt the national psyche. In contrast, questions about the 78,750 missing from World War II faded quickly; and it was the same for the 8,200 missing in Korea.

Vietnam, however, is another story.

The impression that authorities in Hanoi have never come clean about the 1,654 unaccounted for Americans was reinforced this week with a report that Hanoi reneged on a promise to the Nixon administration by refusing to set free 600 or more POWs in the spring of 1973.

That suggestion is contained in a document uncovered in Moscow by Stephen J. Morris, a researcher for the Harvard Center for International Affairs. It purportedly was written in September 1972 by Gen. Tran Van Quang, deputy chief of staff of the North Vietnamese Army.

The immediate reaction among knowledgeable officials was to question the reliability of the numbers. How could there have been more than 600 POWs unaccounted for when the Pentagon says there were only 92 so-called discrepancy cases — Americans last seen alive at the time of capture but who never came home? Besides, how was it that no returned POW ever alleged that he left a compatriot behind?

The issue is perhaps more sensitive for President Clinton than it was for his six predecessors who had to deal with the POW problem. After all, Clinton avoided military service during the Vietnam war and has been attempting to overcome his reputation among some that he is indifferent to military concerns.

The hardiness of the issue is also partly due to continuing reports of live sightings, movies depicting heroic rescue operations and tantalizing revelations. It also is based on mistrust on the part of families of the missing Americans for both the Vietnamese and U.S. governments.

Justice Dept. chips in to pay overtime

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has approved $625,312 to help pay overtime for Texas Department of Public Safety and McClennan County Sheriff's Office personnel directly involved in a standoff with a religious cult.

The announcement was made Friday by Sen. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, who added that the Texas officers "have been valiant and steadfast in their duties there."

Authorities have been in a standoff with cult leader David Koresh and scores of his followers since a Feb. 28 raid by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms erupted into a gunfight that left four agents dead and 16 wounded.

Koresh, who has said six cultists died, remains holed up with 78 followers and 17 children inside a heavily armed compound east of Waco.

Koresh said this week that he's prepared to end his standoff with lawmen but first wants to write a manuscript that deciphers the Book of Revelation's seven seals. No one quite seems to know how long that will take.

"I commend them for their fortitude in this situation, which I deeply hope will come to a close quickly and peacefully," Krueger said.
