WOULD YOU REPEAT?

Attorney questioning witness: Is your reason for saying that you didn't see your brother do such a thing because it was your belief that there was no beer in the car? Or are you saying you know he actually didn't throw it? If he somehow miraculously had some passed to him through the window from another passing car, or had it concealed in his jacket and you didn't know about it, would you still say that it didn't happen that he threw beer, or did you simply know that when he got into the car half an hour before that, or whenever it was you got in, that there was no beer in the car? Whether you saw it or you didn't see it, he didn't throw any beer because you know there was no beer. The only reason for you saying that he didn't throw beer was because you believed there was no beer in the car to throw. Or can you actually say you had your

Horn basketballers have quickness

"We've got a chance to be competitive if our shooting improves," Coach Phil Cotham says of his youthful Longhorns basketball squad. "We have some quickness and some athletic ability."

Returning to the fold are a trio of seniors who earned starting roles last fall. Jimmy Ballejo, who owns two letters, is 5'9", and owning one letter are Ron Cates, who is the top rebounder at 6'3", and Todd Hallmark, a good athlete who stands 5'11".

Two other lettermen on the Fighting

Longhorn squad are Javier Bernal, 5'10", and Joel Mitchell, 6'4". Both are seniors.

Rounding out the squad are a senior, one junior and four sophomores, all of whom have junior varsity experience. The senior is 5'10" Albert Martinez and the junior is Jorge Bernal, 5'11". Earning berths on the varsity as sophomores are four talented lads: Justin Means, 6'1"; Joe Luis Guerrero, 5'11"; Wesley Teeter, 6'; and Louis Peralaz, 5'9".

UTILIZE QUICKNESS

Coach Cotham says the current team will operate with a "totally different" attack than last year's squad, which did not have as much quickness. During the 1986-87 campaign, a half-court, slower tempo game plan was utilized.

Due to having a "quicker team" this year, Coach Cotham says his crew will "try to push the ball up the floor," utilizing the quickness.

He lists quickness as one of his crew's strong points. Another is the number of years most of this team has been under Cotham's guidance. He joined the Lockney system as a junior high coach the year this season's seniors were seventh graders and has worked with them as junior high, junior varsity and varsity levels.

"They came in this year remembering from past years" under Coach Cotham. Fundamentally, they are sound.

One of the Longhorns' weaknesses is lack of shooting ability. Considerable time has been devoted in practice to this phase of the game.

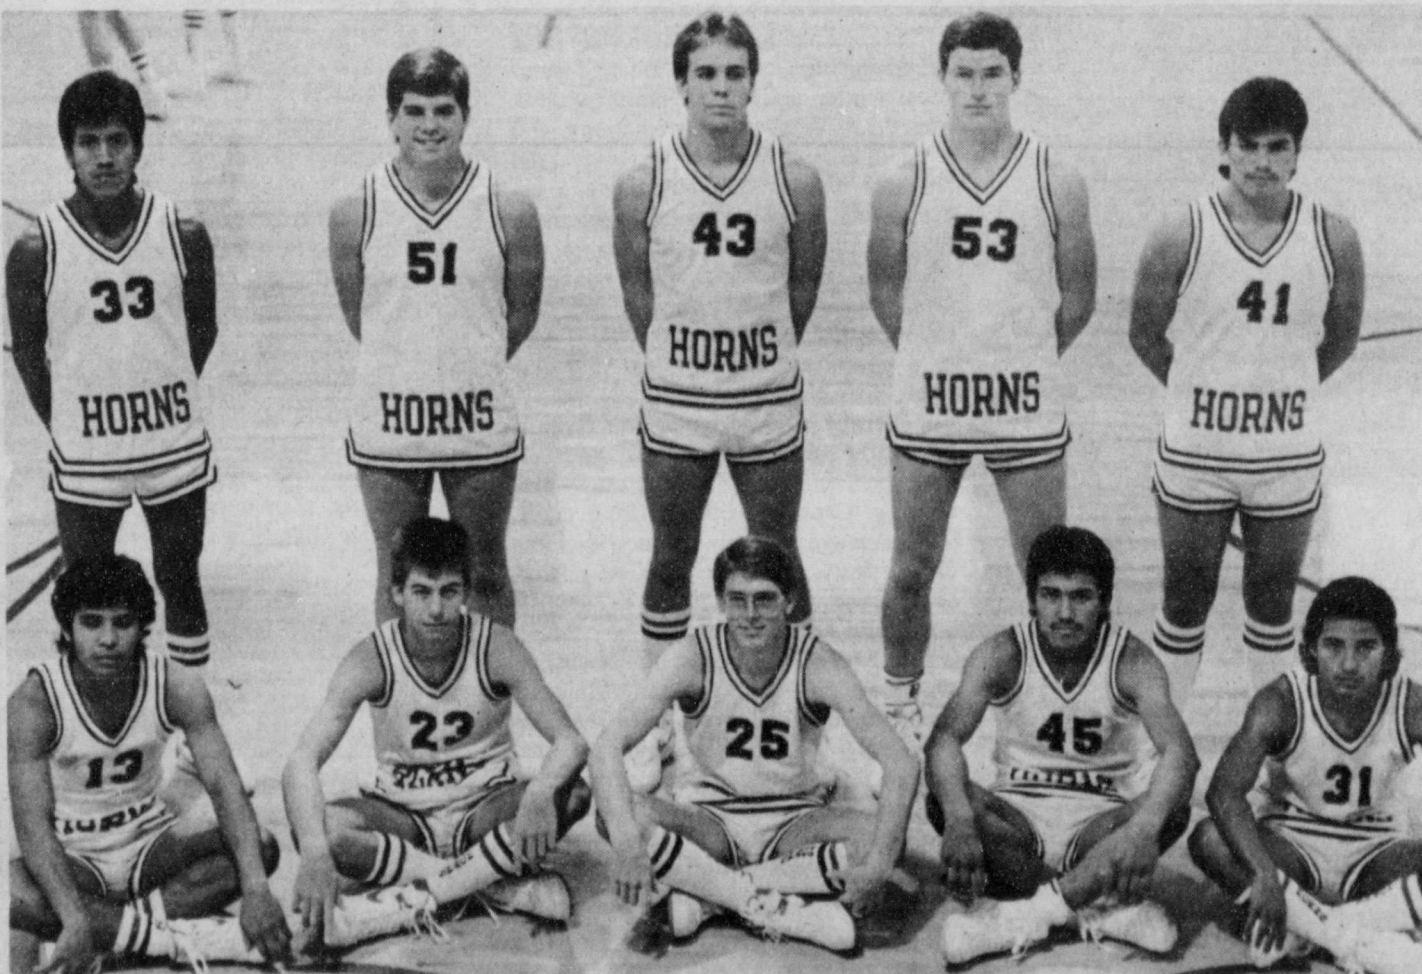

Another weakness, obviously, is "experienced depth. We're pretty young after the first five," Coach Cotham says.

STRONG DISTRICT

"There is nothing easy in this district," he points out.

Olton will again be "tough like they

Sen. Bill Sarpalius to address Lockney FFA

Texas Senator Bill Sarpalius will be the featured guest speaker at the November 30 meeting of the Lockney FFA chapter. Sarpalius is an FFA alumnus and will have an interesting address for those attending. The meeting will be open to FFA members, their parents and several invited special guests.

Bill Sarpalius always has defied the odds, and his career in the Texas Senate has proved no exception.

The road to the senate for Sarpalius began at age 12, when he was taken from his troubled home in Houston and placed in Cal Farley's Boys Ranch in the Texas Panhandle. It was during his seven years at Boys Ranch that Sarpalius developed a deep respect for agriculture and, after graduation in 1967, became Texas State President of Future Farmers of America, traveling constantly on behalf of the agriculture youth organization.

Sarpalius went on to further his education, receiving his associate's degree from Clarendon College in 1970 and his undergraduate degree in agriculture education from Texas Tech University in 1972. He finished his studies in 1978, receiving a Master of Agriculture degree from West Texas State University.

After graduating from Texas Tech, Sarpalius returned to Boys Ranch, where he was a staff member and vocational agricultural teacher for five years. He left the school in 1977 to become district officer manager for then-House Speaker Billy Clayton. Sarpalius made his last career change when he in 1979 entered the agribusiness industry. He currently is employed by Masters Land and Cattle Company of Amarillo.

At the same time, Sarpalius began to take an interest in politics. He decided to run for the Texas Senate in 1980, and shocked the experts by handily winning the election. He was re-elected by a larger margin in 1982 and was unopposed in his 1984 campaign.

Sarpalius' election to the Senate broke new political ground in Texas. He is the first graduate of Boys Ranch to be elected to state office, the first former FFA president to serve in the Texas Senate and, in 1981, was the only freshman senator to chair a committee—the Senate Subcommittee on Agriculture. Besides the subcommittee post, which he has retained, Sarpalius' current committee assignments include positions on the Education, Natural Resources and State Affairs committees.

Sarpalius has been a vigorous senator since his election, passing a measure to help agriculture organizations fund research and development operations and a comprehensive bill toughening Texas' drunk-driving laws. The latter has been credited with saving almost 1,000 lives in the state. More recently, he passed bills raising the legal drinking age in Texas to 21, allowing farmers to more easily purchase their own land and guarantee most Panhandle cities, including Amarillo, a salt-free water supply.

The senator's work has not gone unnoticed. He was named Texas Humanitarian of the Year for his 1983 efforts to stiffen dogfighting penalties. His success story was the subject of a July 4th issue of U.S. News and World Report about how the American dream still lives.

SPS files for cost credit

Southwestern Public Service Company (SPS) has filed with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUCT) for approval to credit its Texas retail customers about $11 million for fuel-cost savings. The "typical" residential customer, based on monthly usage of 600 kilowatt-hours, will receive about a $10 credit.

The proposed refund includes interest at an annual rate of 11.7 percent. Most SPS customers will receive the one-time credit in their December bills. The remaining consumers will receive their refunds in January.

"Several factors made this refund possible," said Sam Hunter, SPS vice president of rates and economic research. "We purchased coal and natural gas, which are major costs in generating electricity, at lower prices. Additionally, the mild summer allowed us to operate only our most efficient power plants, and SPS has continued to improve the efficiency of its generating units."

Hunter pointed out SPS recently was cited as seventh best among the 100 largest investor-owned electric utilities in the United States, in terms of generating efficiency.

DPS tips for safe holidays

Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety, Lubbock, Texas, said, "More people on Texas highways will mean more exposure to accidents this Thanksgiving holiday. Usually alcoholic beverages are consumed in large quantities during the holidays and many intoxicated individuals will attempt to drive a motor vehicle." The Major reminds the motoring public that the intoxicated driver is one of the highest factors on the roadway confronting the Texas motorist.

"Much of this needless highway slaughter could be prevented with the use of a seat belt. It's use is only a habit and probably the best habit anyone can have. Besides being a good habit, it is the law!" Major Cawthon said.

In the past Thanksgivings, people tend to increase their speed to make up lost time. It is a known fact that you can't make up time with excessive speed. In the end, there is always a loser. Be a winner this Thanksgiving and remember, the next mile you drive is the most dangerous mile you will ever drive.

The Texas Department of Public Safety wishes the Texas motorist a good safe and bountiful Thanksgiving, this 1987. Remember, if you leave late, plan on arriving late!

Thanksgiving and diets

[Editor's note: The following article was submitted by Steven D. Belt, M.D., who practices family medicine and nutritional medicine in West Orange, N.J. A Lockney High School graduate, Dr. Belt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Belt.]

It's understandable that dieters usually dread Thanksgiving when people tend to consume more food than on any other day of the year. With food often taking center stage during the holiday season, Thanksgiving in particular can be a difficult day for people on special diets, as well as for their families and friends.

"Diabetes, obesity and high blood pressure are just three of the many health problems that can prohibit people from partaking fully of the holiday bounty," said Steven Belt, M.D. who specializes in family practice and nutrition at East Orange General Hospital.

However, traditional Thanksgiving foods, if properly prepared, need not be off-limits for people with health problems. Turkey, for example, is one of the most nutritious foods available—it is high in protein and low in salt, fat, cholesterol and calories (only 25 calories per ounce).

Fresh vegetables and fruits are also low in calories and earn high marks for vitamins and fiber content. Potatoes contain a moderate number of calories, as long as added fat (butter or sour cream) is kept to a minimum.

For appetizers, try serving raw vegetables with low-fat dip or celery filled with low-fat cottage cheese and chives. Offer dry white wine, fruit juice or mineral water as beverages. When preparing the turkey, baste the bird in its own juices, or add a little wine; do not add butter or bacon fat.

Prepare a simple bread stuffing with little or no butter, to which you can add onions, celery or mushrooms—sautéed in a minimal amount of fat-seasoned with herbs and spices. If you make gravy, skim the fat from the drippings before adding flour or corn starch (lower in calories than flour) and serve the gravy on the side.

"Other nutritious items on your table might include: baked or mashed potatoes; winter squash or yams (without added sugar) mixed with cinnamon and a bit of margarine or honey; steamed fresh vegetables such as carrots, broccoli, green beans or cauliflower; fresh fruit; and a salad with low-calorie dressing. For dessert, offer an apple crisp, apple pie or pumpkin pie prepared with spices and very little sugar, or sweetened with concentrated frozen apple juice," said Dr. Belt.

Generally, choose foods that contain very little salt, sugar and fat, and use only small amounts of these items when cooking. Candied yams, stuffing made with sausage or ham, canned vegetables or fruits, food that is heavily fried or buttered, pickles and olives, sugary bread and heavy desserts.

Don't let food become the focus of Thanksgiving—enjoy the opportunity to spend time with loved ones and to appreciate the true meaning of the holiday. By following these simple recommendations for menu planning, you'll help to make it a healthier holiday for all your guests, not only for those with weight or health problems.

Social Security News

By Terry J. Clements

People in the local area who have children or other dependents they plan to claim on their 1987 federal income tax return should remember that a Social Security number must be shown for each dependent age 5 or over.

If a child or other dependent does not have a number, then one should be applied for without delay. It is easy to apply. All a person has to do is complete an application and provide evidence of date of birth, identity, and U.S. citizenship or lawful alien status. A person 18 or older who has never had a Social Security number must apply in person. A parent applying on behalf of a child must provide evidence of his or her identity.

For a person born in the U.S., a birth certificate can provide evidence of both date of birth and citizenship. For children, school, medical, day care, or similar documents can be used to establish identity.

Only original documents or copies certified by the issuing agency can be used. Photocopies and notarized copies are not acceptable. The documents will be returned.

All it takes to start the application process is a phone call to any Social Security office. You may contact us at 1401-B West 5th Street, or call us at 293-9623. Appointments can be arranged if desired.

WEDNESDAY EVENING December 2

Cotton supply expected to increase next year

With a much smaller acreage reduction in store for 1988 cotton, the supply likely will increase, according to an Extension cotton marketing economist at Texas A&M University.

The 1988 upland cotton program will include a 12.5 percent acreage reduction, a target price of 77 cents per pound and a loan level of 51.8 cents per pound for base quality, average location, says

Dr. Carl G. Anderson, economist-cotton marketing for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"While the target price and loan rates are slightly lower, the acreage reduction program (ARP) is half the 25 percent for the 1987 crop," Anderson says.

If the adjusted world price drops below the loan level, the Plan B marketing loan program will be used, he adds. The world price has been well above the loan level, however, in 1987.

"Should the world price plunge below the loan rate, loan deficiency payments will be made to eligible producers who agree to forego loan eligibility," Anderson says.

Up to 50 percent of any loan deficiency payment may be made in generic commodity certificates on a bale-by-bale basis. There will be no paid land diversion program nor inventory reduction program, he notes.

"The lower acreage reduction program suggests more acreage and more cotton in 1988, provided yields are average or above. Strong consumption for the 1988 crop is becoming more questionable. A potential economic recession in the second half of 1988 may curtail demand," Anderson says.

The likely result, he adds, is more cotton supplies, less usage, larger ending stocks and a weaker market.

Key factors in 1988 price movement are possible changes in estimated ending stocks. A clear signal in the first half of 1988 that U.S. cotton growers are likely to produce enough cotton to exceed market needs may be bearish, Anderson says.

Favorable October weather increased the U.S. crop forecast to 13.9 million bales and expected 1987 ending stocks to above the 4-million-bale mark. A

Farm News

1988 crop larger than usage would increase stocks by the end of that season, Anderson says.

"The likely result is lower prices. Growers should have a 1988 marketing plan prepared that takes into account forward pricing alternatives," he recommends.

When cotton stocks are dropping rapidly, as in 1987, the market tends to overreact during price rallies. Estimates of variable, fixed and total production costs per pound from past records are useful in setting pricing guidelines, Anderson says.

"Plot future prices, learn what causes price changes, update often, watch technical price indicators, spread out sales, avoid setting 'round number' price goals, be careful in pricing near report release dates and avoid fear and wishful thinking," Anderson suggests.

The season's price peak is difficult to recognize," he adds.

Producers lose money on Thanksgiving food

Could farmers lose money on the food they produced for Thanksgiving meals? Yes, in the opinion of State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

In a news release, Hightower said farmers lost more than two cents per serving on the turkey, stuffing, rice and pecan pie that will be served to many Texas families on Thanksgiving Day. Other foodstuffs, such as corn, earned farmers only pennies, he adds.

According to Hightower, an eight-ounce serving of turkey costs the consumer 53 cents. The farmer who raised the turkey lost more than a penny on supplying that eight-ounce serving.

The ag commissioner said a two-ounce slice of pecan pie costs the consumer 63 cents, but the producers who supplied the pecans and the farmers who produced the wheat and sugar together lost half a penny.

Bill Nelson of Amarillo, executive vice president of Texas Wheat Producers Association, agreed with Hightower's assessment.

"In terms of what the farmer receives from the marketplace, he loses money on every bushel of wheat he sells," Nelson said.

He added that government subsidies are paying part of the consumers' costs. "We look at that as a consumer subsidy," he added.

Although a one-pound loaf of bread costs the consumer about 70 cents, the farmer earns only about 3 cents on the raw wheat used to make the bread, Nelson said.

Hightower blamed the farmers' problems on federal policy.

"Last month, Wall Street dropped $500 billion in value in a single jolt heard round the world," Hightower says.

He charged that farm policy has caused American agriculture a $441 billion loss in real value since 1981.

"But the loss has been registered farmer by farmer, one rural community after another," the commissioner said. "We haven't had 20 television cameras in Crosby or Matagorda counties to tell us that the farm economy is running dry."

Hightower estimated that Texas has lost about 43,600 family farms since 1981 and continues to lose farms at a rate of 172 a week.

Farm Bureau roll increases

Floyd County Farm Bureau ended its membership year with a total of 1,004 member families to help push the Texas Farm Bureau's statewide membership total to an all-time high of 334,162, according to Dan Smith of Lockney, president.

"The local organization had a gain of two member families over last year," the local president said.

In the fiscal year ended Oct. 31, the TFB showed a gain of 10,363 member families, marking the 35th consecutive year to gain. Texas continues to be the largest state FB in the nation.

In a letter expressing appreciation for Floyd County Farm Bureau's contribution to the state total, S.M. True, president of the TFB, said membership growth, along with other achievements, "have made this a banner year."

Membership is the "heart of our organization" and is a way to measure the success of Farm Bureau's efforts, True said.

"Please tell your county board of directors and committees how much I appreciate the volunteer leaders in your county and their efforts this year," True wrote.

Proper cotton harvest boosts seed prospect

The 1987 cotton crop is shaping up as one of the best on the High Plains in several years. While enjoying this year's harvest, there are several things cotton farmers can do to improve next year's prospects, says a cotton specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Barring unforeseen weather problems, yields of both lint and seed are expected to be good this year," said Dr. James R. Supak, Extension cotton agronomist. "The favorable seed production outlook is important because much of next year's planting seed will have to come from this year's production."

Cotton textile and apparel imports in September rose to 453.5 million square yard equivalents, up 18.3 percent from a year ago. Imports of all fibers were up 4.1 percent for the month, totaling 1.02 billion square yard equivalents compared with 982 billion a year ago. Figures for the first nine months of 1987 reflect a 12.8 percent climb in cotton textile and apparel imports over the quality of planting seed is affected by several pre-harvest, harvest and post-harvest factors, Supak noted. Producers and seedsmen who will catch seed they produce for planting must be mindful of these factors, he stressed.

The quality and vigor of the seed was determined during the enlargement, filling and maturation phases of plant growth, the Extension specialist said. The best quality planting seed usually comes from fields that were planted early, fruited uniformly, weren't overly stressed for moisture or nutrients, and had 80 percent or more open bolls prior to termination with chemicals or by a freeze, Supak said.

"Frequently, the best yielding fields don't produce the best quality seed," he cautioned. Plants that support large numbers of bolls tend to produce smaller, lighter seed, presumably due to competition for photosynthate.

"Where possible, avoid catching seed from late-planted or non-uniform fields that obviously failed to reach maturity, or from fields prematurely terminated with harvest-aid chemicals," Supak said. Low micronaire values indicate the crop failed to reach an acceptable maturity. "Seed from such crops are more likely to be poorly developed and of low vigor."

As a rule, Supak said, the sooner a field is harvested after reaching maturity and being properly conditioned, the better the yield and quality of both lint and seed. Delayed harvest results in weathering and deterioration of both lint and seed. "Moisture from dew, rain or snow will hasten deterioration of seedcotton on the stalk," Supak stressed.

Proper desiccation prior to harvest is important in preserving cottonseed quality. All plant components—lint, seed, burs, stems—must be dry before harvest. Conditioning time after chemical desiccation or a freeze can vary from 10 days to three weeks, depending on temperatures and humidity. Studies have shown that for proper field storage and ginning, the moisture content of stripped cotton should be 8 to 12 percent.

Sticks and green bolls often add to the moisture content of stripped cotton, the Extension specialist noted. He said the use of strippers equipped with narrow paddles, an inch in width, will help reduce the levels of foreign matter in harvested cotton. Such machines are also more "sensitive" to damp cotton and won't operate efficiently until cotton is properly dried, Supak added.

"Daily harvesting activities should be halted until morning dews completely evaporate," Supak advised. "Cotton is usually dry enough to strip when biting down on the seed results in a sharp, cracking sound."

Proper handling of seedcotton after harvest also is critical in maintaining planting seed quality, Supak said.

Stripped cotton with a moisture content of 12 percent or less can be modulated without incurring loss in lint or seed quality. To be safe, the Extension agronomist said, the internal temperature of modules should be monitored daily for a week or so with a longstem thermometer made for this purpose. If the temperature reaches 110 to 120 degrees Fahrenheit, the module should be sent to the gin as quickly as possible—and the seed to the oil mill, Supak said.

Modules which remain in the field for extended periods should be covered with tarpaulins. Rainfall and melting snow can penetrate deep into unprotected modules and cause overheating internally, Supak cautioned.

Supak said producers and seedsmen can help the ginner and minimize mixing problems by blocking up cotton from seed fields. After ginning, fuzzy seed should be protected with tarps or stored in a weatherproof building.

Producers should give the delinter as much information about the seed as possible, Supak said. "For example, if the seed came from a field that produced low micronaire fiber, let the delinter know what could have caused the problem: thin stand, late watering, or whatever. Possible heating problems during field storage should always be brought to the delinter's attention," Supak added.

The delinter can't improve the inherent quality of the seed, but he can remove a fairly high percentage of immature and damaged seed from the lot. Up to a point, a higher cleanout usually results in better quality planting seed," the Extension specialist said.

Once the seed is delinted and bagged, it should be tested for viability and vigor, Supak said. He recommended use of the Cool-Warm Vigor Index test. "The results of this test can be used as guidelines for establishing seeding rates and possibly planting dates," he said.

This test can be obtained for a nominal fee by submitting one to two pounds of delinted and treated seed to the Texas Department of Agriculture Seed Testing Laboratory. "Each seed lot should be sampled and tested, and be sure to ask for the Cool-Warm Vigor Index test," Supak urged.

The 1987 cotton crop under harvest on the High Plains is shaping up as a record-setter almost certain to be remembered as a "near miracle," according to Donald Johnson, executive vice president of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc.

Barring disastrous weather in the next 30 to 45 days, he says, "we will harvest more cotton with a higher value and better quality than anyone thought possible only six weeks ago. And that's almost unbelievable when you consider the crop's late start last spring, less than optimum heat units through the month of July and almost a month of cloudy, wet weather beginning about the middle of August."

Eschewing a specific per-acre yield estimate himself, Johnson points to the projections of other crop observers, ranging upward from an average of 480 pounds to as high as 550 pounds, with "more than a few" expecting to break the all-time record of 513 pounds.

Using what most consider a conservative 500 pounds per acre and 2.6 million acres for harvest, area production would come in at just over 2.7 million bales, the biggest crop since 1981 and the fourth largest ever.

What's so amazing, Johnson continues, is that when the yield record was set in 1965 almost the entire crop was planted in April or May, while as much as 70 percent of the 1987 crop was planted in June. Moreover, he says about 65 percent of the 1965 crop was on irrigated land, compared to something less than 50 percent under irrigation this year.

Qualitywise, early reports from the Lubbock and Lamesa classing offices show unusually good grades and staples, and most, surprising for a late crop, a high percentage of micronaire readings in the desirable range of 3.5 to 4.9. Average micronaire is running at an exceptional 3.81.

That figure will decline as the harvest progresses into a more representative mix of early and late planted cotton, Johnson concedes, but samples from June planted cotton still point to above average mike readings for the whole crop.

"And that's unheard of for a crop with less than 30 percent planted in the optimum planting period before May 20," he marvels.

Your Co-op Gin. A Good Place to Do Business.

It makes sense to stay involved with your cotton after it leaves the farm. That's why taking your cotton to your co-op gin is a good idea—for a couple of reasons:

First, when you take your cotton to a co-op gin, that gin becomes a part of your business. You have a voice in how it's run and you share in the profits. The more cotton you bring, the more it pays.

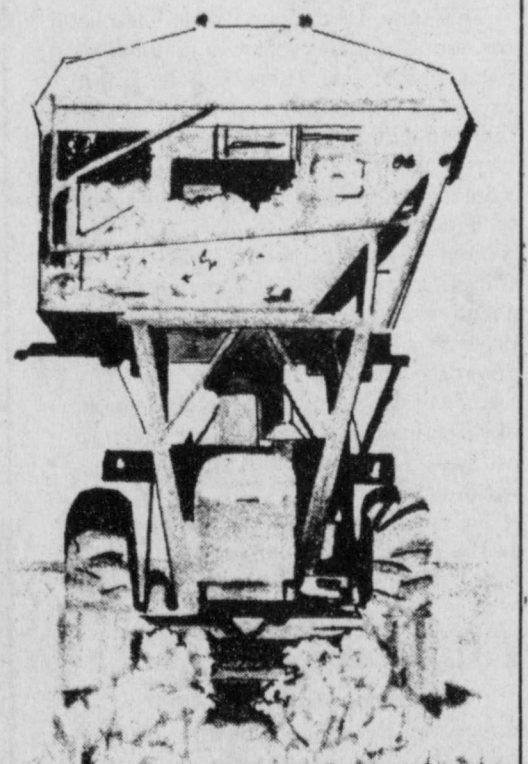

But, even more importantly, when you bring your cotton to your co-op gin you become part of a system that takes your cotton all the way to the market. A system that joins your local co-op gin with other co-op gins to give you a voice in the market. Being a part of that system is important to you now and it's even more important to the future of cotton farming.

Take your cotton to your co-op gin. After all, it's just good business to do business with yourself.

'Outstanding Young Men' honors extended to four

Four community residents or those with local ties have been selected for inclusion in the Outstanding Young Men of America awards program. They are to appear in the 1987 edition of the "Outstanding Young Men of America" publication.

Now in its 25th year, the OYMA program is designed to honor and encourage exceptional young men between the ages of 21 and 36 who have distinguished themselves in many fields of endeavor, such as service to community, professional leadership, academic achievement, business advancement, cultural accomplishments, and civic and political participation.

"Achievements in these areas are the result of dedication, responsibility and a drive for excellence — qualities which deserve to be recognized and remembered," according to OYMA officials.

The men listed, along with fellow Outstanding Young Men throughout North America, were selected after 150,000 nominations were received from political leaders, university and college officials, clergymen, business leaders, as well as from various civic groups and community organizations. Each will be represented by his biographical entry in "this prestigious annual awards publication."

The four are:

- William Michael Beachy of McKeesport, Pa., former pastor of First United Methodist Church in Lockney.

- Steve Alan Cross of Plainview, a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. O.C. Allison. His parents, Marion and Darla Allison Cross, are graduates of Lockney High School.

- Jeffrey Neal Dayley of Aiken.

- Phineas Dee Holmes of Andrews, son of Mr. and Mrs. W.C. Whitlock of Route Q, Lockney. He is associated with Petrolite Corporation-Trerolite Chemical Group in Andrews.

SPECIAL CELEBRATION—Pastor Chon Sepulveda and his wife, Patty would like to invite anyone interested in helping members of the Aposentos Alto Pentecostes with their special Thanksgiving celebration on November 26. On that day, members of the church will be praising the fact that they are not debt free. Church members and anyone who would like to help with the celebration are invited to a lunch at the Lockney Community Center, "to give honor and glory to Jesus Christ" and to extend special thanks to the church members who have made it possible to pay off all debts connected with the church. —Staff photo always are." The Mustangs have advanced to the playoffs the past two seasons.

Abernathy is another talented crew. Cotham expects Olton and Abernathy to be "the teams to beat" in the district chase.

Springlake-Earth returns all five starters from last year, and Hale Center is improved. Hart is a question mark at this point.

Coach Cotham is beginning his second season as head basketball coach for the Longhorns. He is in his sixth year in the Lockney system, which he joined following his graduation from West Texas State University.

The 1986-87 Longhorns compiled a 9-15 record.

Despite having four sophomores on the varsity squad, "we have a pretty good junior varsity team."

Juniors Scott Armstrong and Louis Luna join sophomores Clint Carthel, Michael Monroe, Henry Ruiz, Justin Adams, Steven Salas and Mark Gatica on the JV.

For the first time "since we were in AAA, four years ago," the Longhorns have a freshman squad. It consists of

Horns edge past Buffs

Paced by three players gunning in double figures and 6'4" Ron Cates hauling down 14 rebounds, the Fighting Longhorns basketball squad launched its 1987-88 campaign with a 55-51 victory over Petersburg. The Nov. 17 contest was played in Petersburg.

Coach Phil Cotham's crew jumped into an 18-10 advantage after eight minutes and was in front 30-23 at intermission. Petersburg cut the margin to 38-34 after three periods, but the Longhorns maintained their four point edge at the final buzzer.

Javier Bernal led the Red and White scoring parade with 18, Todd Hallmark netted 17 and Jorge Bernal put in 10. Cates had 7 points to go with his 14 rebounds, and Jimmy Ballejo scored 3.

Senior citizens happenings

The Senior Citizens Center has continued to grow throughout the month of November. There are now 215 members of the organization.

Turnout for the lunches is very good each day and last week for the turkey and dressing lunch there were over 100 people present.

Joy Parnell from Southwestern Public Service will be presenting a Festive Foods demonstration at the center on December 3 at 10:00 a.m. Make plans to attend this free demonstration.

Hostesses for December are Marie Henderson, Wynona Allison, Ina Phillips, Linnie Abbott, and Jody Baccus. Planned events for December include game night on December 3 at 6:30 p.m. Supper that night will be sandwiches, chips, dip, and pie.

Thursday, December 10 has been set for the Christmas party and birthday party combined. There will be a gift exchange that night and there is a $4 limit on gift prices. Men are asked to buy a man's gift and women will buy womens' gifts. The party will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Thursday, December 17 will be the Christmas bake sale. All members are asked to help make this fundraising project a success by baking and donating items for the sale. Also any friends of the Senior Citizens who would like to contribute to the sale are asked to call 652-2111 or 652-2745 and donations will be picked up.

Thursday, December 31 has been set as the date for the Senior New Year's Eve party.

I'm thankful for alot of things. I'm thankful for my country that I live in, I'm also thankful for my church that I go to to worship God, a lot of people in the world do not even have a place to worship God, so there for I am very thankful for that. Another thing I'm thankful for is my school. Like the church, some people in the world do not have a school either. These people will grow up not having a job, or a living, but the thing that I'm most thankful for is my family.
