State hospital to expand staff

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Big Spring State Hospital plans to hire 47 more mental health workers by Aug. 31 to bring the hospital into compliance with a class-action lawsuit settlement.

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, which runs the Big Spring facility, announced Monday it is hiring 307 new workers for its eight mental hospitals to comply with court-ordered staff-to-patient ratios.

Dr. Gary Miller, agency director, said the agency is meeting the terms of the agreement in most major areas and can comply with the 1981 agreement in other areas within the next two years.

He made the statement just before filing the department's proposal for compliance with Judge Barefoot Sanders' U.S. District Court in Dallas. Sanders found the agency in violation last month of his order to bolster care in the mental institutions.

The agency also hopes to have the judge approve placement of more than 25 percent of its hospital residents in long-term care units that could be run by private operations or the agency. Mental patients who are chronically ill would be moved to those units.

Kent Johnson, agency attorney, said he did not have the number of patients by hospital that could be moved under the proposal. He said the patients could be placed in long-term care facilities over the next two years, possibly beginning as early as Sept. 1.

Miller said the coordinator of a review panel appointed by Sanders reacted favorably to the proposal.

JOHNNY LOU AVERY introduces U.S. Rep. CHARLES STENHOLM at Salvation Army breakfast.

Rep. Stenholm delivers at breakfast boost

They dug their spades in, loosened a bit of earth and officially broke ground for construction of a new Big Spring Salvation Army Community Center at 5th and San Antonio.

The celebration capped a four-month fund raising drive headed by volunteers who netted $442,700 from personal donations and $400,000 from grants.

Dorothy Garrett, G.C. Broughton, Myra Robinson and D.A. Brazel joined U.S. Rep.

Charles Stenholm in this morning's celebration that concluded with a groundbreaking ceremony at the proposed building's site.

Earlier, at a breakfast held in the First United Methodist Church, Johnnie Lou Avery told an audience of approximately 150 persons that the new chapel of the community center is to be named Dorothy Garrett Chapel.

"This is a victory celebration that shows Big Spring can do anything it puts its mind to," Avery said.

Avery said the need for a new center resulted from an advisory board study conducted in 1980. The study revealed that a "glaring deficiency" existed in the area of space, Avery said.

She said a long-range planning committee was established to meet the demands of more space, and "that's where the vision began."

Other Big Spring people recognized for their contribution in the fund drive included Dave Spillman of Bill McDaniels Groundbreaking page 2-A

New prison studied

By KEELY COGHAN
Staff Writer

Big Spring is under consideration as the site for a new medium-security prison, according to a regional director for the U.S. Bureau of Prisons.

Regional prison system director J.D. Williams of Dallas, in town today for a "Community Appreciation Day" at the Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, confirmed that the city was being considered as a possible site for the new prison.

"It's been discussed," Williams said before he and Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, answered questions in a news conference.

The current prison camp is a minimum-security facility. "There have been no decisions made as yet," Williams said. Further documentation and information is being referred to Bureau of Prisons Director Norman Carlson in Washington, D.C., and the bureau's executive staff, Williams said.

Williams met Monday with civic leaders who told him they favored the new prison being located here.

"In most cases, we're not welcome," Williams said during the news conference. "We're seen as necessary but not welcome."

"I get the feeling every time I visit Big Spring that we're an integral part of the community. It lends itself to aid the inmates, and that's our purpose, to aid inmates in returning to society."

"The city has welcomed us and is actively pursuing this. I will take this back to Director Carlson," Williams said.

Stenholm, when asked whether he supported a medium-security prison in Big Spring, hedged.

Corpus gets battleship port

State's sales job credited with winning battleship

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy's coveted homeport for the USS Wisconsin will be placed in Corpus Christi, Texas, U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced today.

"I am advised that Corpus Christi has been selected as the homeport for the battleship USS Wisconsin. This is really good news for Texas. It culminates a long, hard cooperative effort by the people of Corpus Christi and their local, state and federal representatives," Bentsen said.

Corpus Christi was one of six cities considered as finalists for the prize, which comes with $100 million worth of construction, 7,500 sailors, 3,000 civilian jobs and an annual payroll of $50 million.

The other cities were Pensacola, Fla.; Houston-Galveston; Lake

Charles, La.; Pasagoula, Miss.; and Mobile, Ala.

"I have been informed that some of the vessels in the battleship's surface action group will be assigned to Gulf Coast ports other than Corpus Christi," said Bentsen, D-Texas.

"This is a tremendous economic shot in the arm for Corpus Christi and all of South Texas," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said today.

Houston-Galveston reportedly was nixed from consideration last week because of problems in reaching solid ground to set a foundation at Galveston's Fort Point and because of the site's distance from deep water.

The factor that tipped the scales to Corpus Christi, Gramm said, "was the willingness of its own citizens to vote a bond issue to raise their own taxes to put $25 million into helping build the base."

Gramm estimated the annual economic impact of the port at $130 million and said it will generate $9 million in local and state taxes.

Lloyd Neal, project chairman of the South Texas Homeporting Task Force, said Monday that Corpus Christi had a good proposal because its Ingleside Point would not require dredging.

Corpus Christi residents in April approved a $25 million bond issue to offset costs, and the state committed $25 million to attract the Navy, he pointed out.

The city also has been host of a naval air station for more than 40 years.

Poetic justice

Chicano writer has purged his anger in vitriolic verse

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Guillermo Perez was an angry young poet. Out of the crucible of his impoverished childhood in Laredo, his experience in Vietnam and the emerging Chicano consciousness of the late '60s and early '70s came statements in his poetry like, "Kill the gringo."

Perez, who is now a junior high school English teacher and the father of two young boys, is still a poet. But he is not such an angry one now. Compassion and understanding have become guiding values in his life and poetry.

And instead of writing exclusively about the barrio experience, Perez now also writes about emotions common to everyone, whether they are Chicano, black or white.

Several recent poems deal with the longing people have for meaningful connections with others. One uses the imagery of a butterfly flitting about and being ignored to convey this emotion. Another uses the image of "unfinished picnics which we never began."

Perez says he is ashamed of the profanity and anger in his earlier work, but he also recognizes its value to him.

"My earlier poetry was nationalistic, even racist, but it was a beginning for me. It made me reach an internal peace," he said in an interview in his Tom Browne Junior High classroom.

He is also philosophical about the hopes Chicano poets had and the reality of what they accomplished.

"One of the objectives of the Chicano literature movement that grew in the '60s and '70s was to force white America to know the barrio," said Perez.

"I don't think we were very effective," he continued. "We restricted ourselves too much."

GILLERMO PEREZ of Corpus Christi has softened his poetic messages.

Nonetheless, Perez grew to know himself and what was important to him through his writing.

"All my experiences added to what I am today — an educator, a poet and a better human being. Today my most powerful feelings in life are toward my family, my students and other human beings."

Perez recently had two of his poems published in Imagine, an international Chicano poetry journal, that is edited by Tino Villanueva, a native of San Marcos who now teaches at Wellesley College in Massachusetts, and Luis Urrea, who teaches writing at Harvard University.

There is little, if any, of the militancy of earlier Chicano poetry journals in Imagine. Its aims are to reach a bilingual literary audience, not to instruct and inform an Anglo audience.

Robinson and Brazel were both presented plaques for their efforts to generate funds.

Salvation Army Maj. Ted Morris said the new center would "be more involved in the preventive" stages of social problems.

Avery said local architects Donald Bailey and John Gary had been hired to design the new center.

Stenholm, in his address to the audience at the groundbreaking ceremony, spoke about his recent involvement with the defense authorization bill, his appearance at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene to commemorate the arrival of the B-1B bomber and America's need to present a positive image to the rest of the world.

"It's difficult for us to understand how other nations hold the U.S. as Satan. How often do we consider our government as an enemy instead of a friend? How much better an image would we portray if we were giving this image to the world?" Stenholm said.

About the groundbreaking ceremony, Stenholm said, "only in America could things like this happen... what better way to meet needs of a community than what you are doing today."

ing area want it, I'll do everything in my power to help them," he said.

"I have friends in the community who want the facility and friends who don't want it. In politics, I try to side with my friends," Stenholm quipped.

The community's decision to have a medium-security prison, however, will be "tougher" than the decision made to allow the current facility at the old Webb Air Force Base site, Stenholm said.

Speaking about the current prison camp, Williams said it would not be expanded. Although the number of inmates in the camp has increased 50 percent during the last year to a population of more than 500, the bureau sees 600 inmates as the limit of the facility, he said.

He said, however, that there were several plans to spruce up the appearance of the camp. The Government Services Administration agreed Monday that three "unsightly" buildings inherited from the Air Force could be torn down.

And the Bureau of Prisons was making a request for $1.3 million in the 1987 budget for a combination industrial-educational building, he said during a speech to community leaders.

"I am extremely pleased" with the Big Spring camp, Williams said after the speech. "I've been regional director four years. I've seen nothing but improvements since I took over.

Poison jerky recalled

SANTA FE, N.M. — A company has agreed to recall its beef jerky after it was linked to 14 cases of salmonella poisoning in north-central New Mexico since mid-May, state environmental authorities said.

Salmonella bacteria were present in eight samples of the La Tiendita brand of carne seca, or dried beef, and inspectors visited the plant in Alcala on Monday, said Environmental Improvement Division Deputy Director Neil Weber.

Winds, heat fuel fires

SAN DIEGO — An outbreak of fires that has destroyed or damaged nearly 100 houses cracked today across more than 56,000 acres of Arizona and California, spurred by triple-digit temperatures, tinder-dry brush and erratic winds.

"Arson was blamed Monday for the worst residential fire in San Diego history and was suspected in a Palo Alto blaze that burned 10 to 15 houses and briefly stranded 50 schoolchildren. Thousands of people were evacuated Sunday from Normal Heights in San Diego, where a fast-moving fire destroyed 64 houses and damaged 20 others, leaving 150 people homeless and doing $8.5 million damage, authorities said.

Docs on surgery strike

ALBANY, N.Y. — Doctors seeking greater malpractice insurance reform are declining in ever-increasing numbers to perform surgery, forcing hospitals to lay off workers and limit services.

In an eight-county area of western New York, medical officials made provisions Monday to transport severe surgical cases to neighboring states and Canada. In Syracuse, just eight of 40 orthopedic surgeons were operating Monday.

WASHINGTON — New construction spending rose 1.5 percent in May for its second straight monthly advance, the Commerce Department said, adding to other recent signals that indicated a rebound in economic growth.

But the Conference Board said its measure of help-wanted advertising in major U.S. newspapers was unchanged in May.

Changing of the guard

Gromyko named president; Politburo rival ousted

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei Gromyko, the Soviet Union's foreign minister for the past 28 years, was elected president today at a national Parliament session after being nominated by Communist Party chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

Georgia party chief Eduard Shevardnadze, 57, a new full member of the Politburo who has a reputation for being tough on corruption, was named to replace Gromyko, 75, in the Foreign Ministry post.

Gromyko's election was a major departure from the recent Kremlin practice of having the party leader also hold the title of chief of state.

There had been rumors in Moscow that Gromyko might be named president, but most Western observers discounted them.

There was speculation after the announcement that the naming of Gromyko amounted to a graceful exit of a well-respected member of the Kremlin "old guard" as the Moscow leadership swings to a new generation.

However, it also showed that Gorbachev, who has made domestic economic issues his prime concern, is now ready to take control of the field of foreign policy, although Gromyko as president is still expected to be a major figure on the international scene.

Gorbachev was elected to the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, which would allow him to represent the Soviet Union at international gatherings in Gromyko's place.

The Supreme Soviet is described officially as the highest governing body but in practice has only nominal powers. As party general secretary Gorbachev retains supreme power.

Gorbachev, 54, nominated

GROMYKO

Gromyko at a session which capped two days of major leadership changes, including the ouster of one-time power contender Grigory V. Romanov from the ruling Politburo.

The official report of Monday's session of the party Central Committee said the Politburo removed Romanov, 62, for "health reasons" at his own request, but it was clear that he had been ousted.

Shevardnadze, 57, was elevated from alternate to voting status on the Politburo at the Monday session.

Gromyko did not become a full member of the Politburo until 1973, 16 years after he took over the Foreign Ministry portfolio.

In Washington, U.S. State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said the government had no immediate comment on Gromyko's election.

Gromyko was unanimously elected by the 1,500 deputies to the Supreme Soviet following Gorbachev's brief nominating speech.

Gorbachev said the party Central Committee had decided in its Monday meeting that Gromyko should be nominated.

"The name of Andrei Andreiyeovich Gromyko is well-known both in our country and elsewhere as an eminent political activist, one of the oldest members of the party, who makes a great contribution to our foreign policy," Gorbachev said. "His great experience and knowledge is combined with principled and purposeful application to the fulfillment of our policy."

Gorbachev noted that the posts of general secretary and chairman of the presidium — or the presidency — were linked in 1977.

"In the conditions of that time, the uniting of such posts was justified," he said. "Changes in legislation occurred and control improved on managing bodies."

Gorbachev nominated Konstantin Chernenko as president last year. Chernenko had been party leader since February 1984 following the death of Yuri V. Andropov. At that time, Gorbachev said the party had decided it was in the country's interest to have the party general secretary also be the national president.

Turks kill Kurd rebels

ANKARA, Turkey — Four suspected Kurdish guerrillas were killed in shootouts with Turkish security forces in southeastern Turkey, and 13 others were arrested, the state radio reported.

The radio on Monday quoted a martial law command announcement as saying three Kurds died in a shootout with Turkish soldiers in a mountainous region near the southeastern province of Siirt.

Police injured in riot

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Rock-throwing students injured 24 policemen, five of them seriously, in disturbances around the capital on the first day of a 48-hour national strike, authorities said.

The students were demonstrating in support of the National Council of Organized Workers, the country's largest labor group known as Conato, which called a nationwide work stoppage starting Monday morning to protest proposed reforms in Panama's labor code.

ROSEAU, Dominica — Prime Minister Mary Eugenia Charles, who emphasized her opponents' leftist leanings while they criticized her close ties to the United States, easily won re-election on the Caribbean island of Dominica.

Hostages head home to welcome

By The Associated Press
Yellow ribbons, balloons, sirens and parties were ready as towns across America waited today to welcome the 39 former hostages from hijacked TWA Flight 847, free men after 17 days in the hands of Moslem extremists.

Officials in Richmond, Mo., planned to sound sirens to summon residents to line the streets whenever TWA Capt. John Testrake arrives, his daughter, Debbie Barnes, said Monday.

"If he comes in at 2 a.m., we will still have the streets lined with people," said Mayor Ed LaBarr. "Everyone here is so honored with the way he represented the United States."

Allan Conwell's relatives in Houston, Texas, said they expect the man who was the hostages' spokesman during the ordeal is probably tired of being in the spotlight.

"But I don't think he realizes the impact he and the others really had in the United States," said Conwell's sister, Carmela Little. "I don't think he's aware just how great a part they played."

The 39 men were freed Sunday, 17 days after the jet was hijacked. They went to Syria and then to West Germany, where they were resting, receiving check-ups and greeting family and friends. When and how the former hostages would arrive in the United States was unclear.

Some of the released hostages were scheduled to return to Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Washington, D.C., about 3 p.m. EDT today aboard a TWA jet, but others were expected to fly to New York.

Many of the former hostages called relatives from Germany on Monday.

Flight 847's co-pilot, Philip Maresca, called home to Baldwin, N.Y., and said he was in good health, said his mother, Ruth. "Phil is the quiet type. He will probably just want a small family dinner and maybe a day at the beach."

There was a party planned for five former hostages who are stationed with the Navy's Underwater Construction Team One in Virginia.

Beirut teachers paying in blood

Amidst the rubble and anarchy of Beirut, the American University remains as one of the last bastions of education. Over the past decade, its administrators and teachers have been harassed, kidnapped and murdered. Its students have become increasingly anti-American. And the shaded, tree-lined campus has been shelled and pockmarked by gunfire.

But university administrators plan to keep the school going. They say the war will not deter them from their work.

American University was chartered in 1863, and has been a center of Western learning and technology for the entire Middle East. Its hospital has been a haven for the sick and wounded.

American University was founded and flourished when the United States and the West had rooted ties to Lebanon and the Middle East. But the growing hatred of Western nations in the region has forced change. A decade ago, there were more than 450 American teachers at the university. Today there are 25.

Last year, the university's president, Malcolm H. Kerr, was shot to death on the campus. The pro-Iranian terrorist group, Jihad Islami, took credit for his murder. Kerr loved Beirut and the Middle East. He was born there. Kerr stayed to teach, even though he knew he was in constant danger. But he said that "if you want to do something important, you take risks."

The administrators and teachers at American University believe their work can make a difference in a living hell. Sadly, they have paid a high price for it.

One commitment leads to another

When Congress voted for "humane" aid for Nicaragua I thought the White House would finally be satisfied.

"Well, you got your money. Does that mean we don't have to go to war there anymore?" I questioned an aide.

"What makes you ask that?" Hawk said.

"The Administration said if Congress did not vote aid to the contras, we would wind up sending in troops. Since they did vote the money the President asked for, is it safe to assume we can stop worrying about an American invasion?"

"I wouldn't assume anything when it comes to our policy in Nicaragua. This was a good first step for the Congress, but the people on the Hill are going to have to follow up with something a lot more substantial if they want to show their good faith."

"For goodness' sake, man, Congress gave you $28 million. That's everything the President asked for."

"You can't even mine a harbor for $28 million. The sole reason we're accepting the money is that it is a step in the right direction. Although we can only spend it for blankets, trucks and ambulances, it's a commitment. Once the United States makes a commitment, it's awfully hard for it to get out of the commitment, without making another commitment, and so on, ad infinitum."

"Darn it, Hawk, the Administration said nothing about another commitment after we made this one. You wouldn't have even received $28 million if President Ortega hadn't gone to Moscow."

"You're making too much of the money," Hawk said. "What the Administration got out of this was not a small aid package, but a symbolic gesture from the Congress that the President is free to do what he wants in Central America."

"I'm not sure that was Congress' intention. Didn't the President agree to find a diplomatic solution to the problem?"

"Yes, he did," Hawk said. "And we have $2 million set aside to try to find peace."

"Two for peace and 26 million for war?"

"That's about right. Remember, though, the $26 million is going for humane aid. We're not permitted under the act to give them any weapons."

"I'm glad you brought that up. If we're only supplying non-military aid to the contras, who is supplying them with arms, guns and rockets?"

"Private medical foundations," Hawk said.

"It sounds like the CIA to me."

"The CIA cannot give the contras arms. It would violate the law."

"So?"

"Can we talk about something else?"

"Sure. What is our foreign policy in Central America, besides giving humanitarian aid to the contras?"

"Our policy is to make Ortega think twice the next time he wants to take a trip to Russia."

"I'm for that, but I still have a sneaky feeling that despite all the talk by the Administration, the real policy is to hit the beaches in Nicaragua."

"If we did go in, and I'm not saying we ever will, it would be like rolling off a log."

"Then despite the fact Congress passed the aid bill, you haven't ruled out the option."

"No President would ever rule out the option of going to war in Nicaragua."

"Promise me one thing. You won't let the Marines invade Nicaragua until you use up the $28 million."

"That was spent long ago to buy insect repellent," Hawk said. "We're now preparing a supplementary bill of $100 million for tent pegs for our freedom fighters."

"How can you be so certain you'll get it?"

"We will if we persuade Ortega to take another trip to the Soviet Union. If he doesn't want to fly commercial, we'll give him Air Force One."

"I'm not sure that was Congress' intention. Didn't the President agree to find a diplomatic solution to the problem?"

Dear Abby

Teens owe their talents, energy

DEAR ABBY: When I read your column about whether the parents were guilty of child abuse for making their sons, 9 and 11 years old, walk to school and back after they were kicked off the school bus for bad conduct, I was reminded of this column (enclosed). I've had it for many years and still think it hits the spot.

I raised eight children, and they all walked to and from school every day. It never hurt any of them. Please run it again. It's as good now as it was when I first read it at least 15 years ago.

MRS. J. GALLAGHER, PHOENIX

DEAR MRS. GALLAGHER: So do I. And here it is:

"Always we hear the plaintive cry of the teenager: What can we do? Where can we go? The answer is, Go home!

"Hang the storm windows, paint the woodwork. Rake the leaves, mow the lawn, shovel the walk. Wash the car, learn to cook, scrub some floors. Repair the sink, build a boat, get a job.

"Help the minister, priest or rabbi, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick, assist the poor, study your lessons. And then when you are through — and not too tired — read a book.

"Your parents do not owe you entertainment. Your city or village does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. You owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and your talents so that no one will be at war or in poverty or sick or lonely again.

"In plain, simple words, grow up: quit being a crybaby. Get out of your dream world and develop a backbone, not a wishbone, and start acting like an adult.

"You're supposed to be mature enough to accept some of the responsibility your parents have carried for years. They have nursed, protected, helped, appealed, begged, excused, tolerated and denied themselves needed comforts so that you could have every benefit. This they have done gladly, for you are their dearest treasure. But now, you have no right to expect them to bow to every whim and fancy just because selfish ego, instead of common sense, dominates your personality, thinking and requests.

"In heaven's name, grow up and go home!"

DORIS BURVILLE, OLYMPIA, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: You frequently tell a correspondent, "Your letter made my day!"

Well, Abby, listen to this. After miles of avoiding tailgating trucks and speeders hurrying to resort areas, I slowed down as I drove through the small town of Shafter, Calif., where apparently some kind of doings was in progress.

Crossing with the green light were about 25 teenagers pushing wheelchairs containing senior citizens, apparently from some nursing home.

I called out, "You young people are doing a marvelous job!" Abby, they answered me in sign language!

Believe me, that made my day!

DR. VELMA RITTER, TAFT, CALIF.

DEAR DR. RITTER: Thanks for two important messages: (1) There are plenty of terrific teenagers around; (2) regardless of our limitations, everybody can do something for somebody.

DEAR ABBY: Spruce gum is scarcer than hen's teeth. Please let your readers know that we are trying to get someone interested in spruce gum production because our supplier has retired.

I hope that the College of Forest Resources at the University of Maine at Orono will take up the challenge and become the world's only spruce gum producer. (Maine has about 7 million acres of spruce trees.)

Sorry we can't supply your readers now.

Dr. Donohue

Bacteria causes child's knee infection

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can a 3-year-old child contract hemophilus from drinking water from a well that is contaminated with fecal bacteria? My daughter developed an infection in her knee that required surgery. This happened about a month after we moved into a house with a contaminated well. — K.W.H.

Hemophilus is not one of the bacteria that lives in feces, so it is doubtful that the well caused her illness. Hemophilus is transmitted via airborne droplets from someone who is carrying the germ in the throat or upper airways.

Most older people have protection against the organism, but younger ones are susceptible to infection. In them the hemophilus germ can cause bronchitis or more serious infection, as the one in your child's knee. It gets to the joint by way of blood circulation. I hope that by now your child has made a full recovery and that you have done something about the well.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have "common" migraine headaches, not the kind that have the aura, which I am told is the "classic" type migraine. For curiosity's sake, what are some of the signs of the aura mentioned? For those who have the warning sign, how long does the aura last? — E.K.

The aura of classic migraine consists of symptoms caused by the sudden constriction of the head arteries. Besides vision disturbance there may be a dizziness or numbness in the area, related to the sudden loss of blood. The aura of migraine usually occurs from 10 to 20 minutes prior to the actual headache.

About 15 percent of migraine falls into the "classic" category.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: About 25 years ago when my late father had a heart attack, I recall the lengthy hospital stay — more than two months, I think. Then there was an almost interminable process of return to activity for him. He lived another 15 years and eventually died of non-heart-related illness.

My point is that very recently I suffered a similar heart attack, apparently of about the same severity as my father's. Now less than a month later I am just about fully recovered, am back at work, apparently not much worse for the wear. I was only hospitalized for a few days. How come? What's the big difference today? — H.S.

The big difference is better knowledge, better medicine and better diagnosis.

First, we used to think it took all that hospital time for the scar on the heart (caused by the infarction) to heal. Now we know healing occurs quite rapidly. Second, we have many new drugs to control the action of the damaged heart and allow it to get the rest it needs after an attack. Third, we have better diagnostic methods to identify those patients most likely to have post-infarction trouble.

All these factors have produced sharply declining hospital bed occupancy for heart attack patients since your father's day. You can imagine the tremendous economic savings that have come from the drop from the previous average of several weeks' hospitalization to what it is today — an average of seven to 10 days.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

More women are entrepreneurs today

NEW YORK (AP) — More and more women are becoming entrepreneurs.

Today, according to the Census Bureau, more than 6 percent of all businesses are owned by women, a small but growing percentage, reports Feeling Great magazine.

While many succeed, some of them fail, generally because of under-financing, says Adrienne Kivelson, associate director of the New York State Governor's Office — Division of Women.

"Women, as a class, do not have a long business history so they sometimes have trouble getting credit," Kivelson says. "That kind of thing is usually based on history. You can't get a job until you have experience, and you can't get experience until you have a job."

"In the same manner, women going into business can have difficulty getting loans."

Exxon penalized $2 billion for oil sale overcharges

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a new $2 billion decision against the Exxon Corp., the government has collected or received judgments totaling more than $4 billion for overpricing by the oil industry during the energy shortages of the 1970s.

A special federal court ruled Monday that the world's largest company overcharged its customers by $895.5 million for crude oil from its Hawkins Field in east Texas from 1975 until 1981.

But the Temporary Emergency Court of Appeals agreed with the Reagan administration that "it would be impossible to identify the ultimate victims of Exxon's overcharges due to the pervasive system of price controls in the petroleum industry."

The court, therefore, ordered Exxon to pay the $895.5 million plus more than $1 billion in accrued interest to a special Treasury escrow account. Money from that account should be distributed to the 50 states for energy conservation programs, the court said, upholding a lower court ruling.

Rep. John Dingell of Michigan, chairman of the House Energy Committee, and other Democrats in Congress have opposed the administration's attempts to use the refunds rather than tax revenues for energy conservation programs.

Both attorneys for Exxon and the government said they believe the judgment is the largest ever against a single defendant.

"I've never heard of a larger one," said Larry P. Ellsworth, deputy chief counsel for the Department of Energy's Economic Regulatory Administration and the chief government attorney in the case.

"Based on our understanding of the decision, we are extremely disappointed," said S.J. Reso, executive vice president for the multinational corporation's Exxon Co., USA subsidiary.

Attorneys for Exxon said the company also will likely be suing some of its minority partners, which owned one-third of the production from Hawkins Fields, to recover some of the judgment.

Those minority partners include other oil giants such as Texaco, Amoco, Sun, Mobil and Conoco plus about 2,200 royalty owners.

The Energy Department contended in its case against Exxon that the company wrongly interpreted regulations under the 1973 Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act to price an excessive share of the production from its 10,000-acre Hawkins Field near Tyler, Texas, as "new" rather than "old" oil.

The 1973 law set up a two-tier pricing system for domestic production in response to the Arab oil embargo that sent international oil prices from $5 to $13 a barrel. Under the myriad regulations, production from a particular field above the 1972 level was allowed to command a higher price.

The saga of a bull rider

"It's a dangerous sport. When you've got a little guy like me matched against a 1,900-pound bull, the bull has the definite advantage. I think to be a good rider it takes a lot of courage and a lot of mental attitude."

Have you ever stopped and thought about what type of man rides bulls for a profession? The above quote comes from Charles Sampson, world-renowned bull rider who now lives in Dallas. I got a chance to visit with Sampson and his wife Marilyn last week while Sampson was competing in the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo.

CHARLES SAMPSON

Looking at the 5-4, 128-pound Sampson, one would think the least likely place for him is on top of a twisting, turning animal that weighs almost a ton. Add to that the fact that a man from Watts in Los Angeles is currently one of the top bull riders in the world and you've got an exciting new twist to the field of rodeo.

But the 28-year-old cowboy handles everything in stride. How else could he resume his career after an almost-fatal accident at the Washington Presidential Rodeo in 1983? A bull stepped on his face, breaking 32 bones and requiring major surgery.

Mrs. Sampson admits the accident left her emotionally distraught, even more than her husband. "When they called me they said he was hurt but I didn't know how bad," she said. "When I got to the hospital he looked almost dead to me."

"He couldn't even talk to me so he had to write me a note. The note said 'I didn't want you to see me like this.'"

Sampson viewed the accident as another obstacle standing in his way to making it back to the top. You see, the year before he had won his first world bull riding championship. "When it happened I thought, why me? because I was riding so good and was at the highlight of my life," admitted Sampson.

"I had to dig deep inside. I figured the good Lord gave me the ability to ride, so he'll give me the ability to come back and try one more time." Sampson has been on the upswing ever since. After recovering from the injury he finished sixth in the Pro Rodeo Cowboys Association money earnings. Last season he finished second and this year he is currently seventh.

Sampson says the key to being successful on the PRCA tour is to set goals and stay healthy. "I've been fairly healthy with the exception of '83. I always have goals so that I can have something to look forward to when I'm getting on that bull. My long term goal is to make it to the National Finals seven times."

If he achieves this he will become only the second black man to do so. Myrtis Dightman, still a part-time cowboy from Houston, accomplished it, and Sampson has patterned himself after the veteran cowboy.

When Sampson first entered the circuit in '78 the main talk about him was the color of his skin. He says that he is tired of carrying that label. After all, this is a man who won the World Championship in '82 and has won over $300,000 in the PRCA. "When I first came up that's all you heard, Charles Sampson, the black cowboy."

"Those people really don't know me. Because if they did they would just look at me as one of the top riders on the circuit."

The Sampsons have a new addition to the family, 9-month-old Larry Charles, better known as L.C. There will be no pressure on little L.C. to be a cowboy, said Mrs. Sampson. "L.C. can be anything he wants to be. He can't help but be around rodeoing with Chuckie around, but he can do whatever he wants." Then she added with a smile, "Maybe he and his dad will be the first black father-son team roping combination. Team roping is less dangerous than bull riding," she said, explaining her preference for the event.

When he's not rodeoing Sampson goes to various places putting on the Charles Sampson Bull Riding School, work he intends to devote his life to when he quits the circuit. He purchased land in Arizona and plans on opening up his school there.

"That way when I get tired of riding I can always turn to my bull riding school."

Spoken like a man who loves his profession.

Martina, McEnroe keep winning

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe and Martina Navratilova, the defending men's and women's champions, swept in to the quarterfinals of the Wimbledon tennis championships Tuesday.

But in one of the biggest upsets of tournament, fourth-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria was ousted by Molly Van Nostrand, a little-known qualifier from Bright Waters, N.Y.

McEnroe beat West German qualifier Andreas Maurer 6-0, 6-4, 6-2 but still said he needed to play better, while Navratilova took 55 minutes to down Rene Uys of South Africa 6-2, 6-2 in an uninspiring match in the sun.

Van Nostrand, a 20-year-old right-hander, scored a sensational 7-5, 6-2 upset victory to join Navratilova in the last eight of the women's event.

It was an emotional-charged victory for the American, whose brother John, also a professional tennis player, was tragically killed in an automobile accident in Mexico last year.

Van Nostrand's parents were at court-side.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — In Monday's action, as seeds continued to crash out, Chris Evert Lloyd reflected on the pros and cons of her comfortable progress through the tournament.

"I have not struggled yet, which I can look at in a bad way and a good way," she said after a 52-minute, 6-2, 6-1 third-round win over Australian qualifier Jenny Byrne.

"I need a couple of close matches. I'd like to get into a 4-all situation and feel the pressure a little bit," said Lloyd, the co-top seed and the only seed left in the top quarter of the women's draw.

Lloyd, who has dropped only seven games in her first three matches, was due to continue her bid for the Grand Slam today by taking on fellow American Anne Smith in a fourth-round match on Center Court.

Seventeen of the 32 seeds have been eliminated with just over half the tournament completed and McEnroe, aiming to become the first American to win the men's singles title three straight years, tried to explain why.

One of the upsets occurred Monday on Center Court where France's Yannick Noah, the No. 11 seed, went out in four sets to Vijay Amritraj of India, who is playing in his 14th Wimbledon.

Noah said that because the Wimbledon seedings, like those for other major tournaments, are principally based on world computer rankings and no longer according to players' grass court ability, there were bound to be upsets.

Three qualifiers — Maurer, Chile's Ricardo Acuna and American Robert Seguso — remained in the men's draw, all in McEnroe's half. One, at least, was certain to reach the quarterfinals since Acuna, conqueror of sixth-seeded Pat Cash, was due to play Seguso on an outside court today.

Four seeds, two men and two women, were eliminated in Monday's action.

Along with Noah, seventh-seeded Joakim Nystrom of Sweden lost a five-set thriller to West Germany's hard-serving teenager Boris Becker. Becker won 9-7 in the fifth set after twice breaking his opponent's serve to save the match.

In the women's event, Elizabeth Smylie of Australia shocked third-seeded Hana Mandlikova 6-1, 7-6 in the biggest upset so far, while French teenager Pascale Paradis upset Wendy Turnbull, the No. 14 seed and a two-time mixed doubles titlist, 2-6, 7-5, 6-1.

Also advancing into the men's fourth round were fifth-seeded

JOHN MCENROE of the United States is shown here on his way to defeating West German Andreas Maurer in three sets at Wimbledon play today. McEnroe advances to the quarterfinals.

Oilers finally ink Rozier

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers are gambling a four-year, $2.25 million contract that running back Mike Rozier will be more successful in his second attempt at playing back-to-back football seasons.

The Oilers ended a year-long pursuit of Rozier Monday by signing the former Nebraska All-American only days after he completed his United States Football League career with the Jacksonville Bulls.

Rozier, the No. 2 rusher in the USFL, now has barely three weeks to prepare for his first National Football League season with the Oilers, who open camp July 19 at San Angelo, Texas.

He intends to be ready. "It won't be as hard as coming out of college with an ankle injury and besides, I didn't run the ball that much this year," Rozier said. "I didn't get banged up that much."

Rozier moved from Heisman Trophy winner at Nebraska into the camp of the Pittsburgh Steelers and hobbled to only 782 yards rushing in a disappointing rookie year.

He rallied at Jacksonville this season to finish with 1,361 yards, second to New Jersey's Herschel Walker.

Another reason Rozier expects more success with the Oilers is their young and talented offense line.

"All running backs look for big guys like the Oilers have to block for them," Rozier said. "I came out of this season healthy, not like when I went to Pittsburgh."

Rozier won the Heisman Trophy in 1983 after rushing for 4,780 yards over three seasons with the Cornhuskers.

The Oilers first became interested in Rozier prior to the start of training camp a year ago but broke off negotiations Aug. 29.

San Diego spoils Ryan's hope, 6-5

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Nolan Ryan and Bruce Bochy go back a few years. Once a battery on the Houston Astros, the two don't see quite so much of each other anymore.

But Ryan probably won't forget Monday night's meeting. One swing of Bochy's bat deposited a Ryan pitch into the left field stands to lift the San Diego Padres to a 6-5 victory over the Astros.

Bochy's heroics capped San Diego's comeback in which it scored single runs in the eighth, ninth and 10th innings.

"I gave him a pitch he could hit out of the ballpark," said Ryan, who would have given way to a reliever had there been an 11th inning. "It wasn't where it was supposed to be."

Bochy was inserted in the game as a defensive replacement for starting catcher Terry Kennedy after San Diego Manager Dick Williams used a pinch runner for Kennedy late in the game.

Williams said Bochy had predicted a game-winning homer to his bullpen mates early in the game.

"I didn't say it like that," Bochy said. "I told LaMarr (Hoyt) to hold them and we'll battle back. You know how you talk in the bullpen. It was more tongue-in-cheek than anything. I wasn't even in the game, so you can't predict that."

Bochy said his familiarity with Ryan didn't provide much of an edge. Bochy caught Ryan from 1978 to 1980 in Houston. Ryan, 46, struck out seven Padres to bring him to within 10 of 4,000 in his career.

"I played there three years so I know he's a power pitcher and he's going to go after you in that spot," he said. "But as a catcher you see him from a different angle. This was only the second time I've faced Nolan in a game."

The Padres trailed 5-4 going into the ninth inning, but loaded the bases with none out off Ryan and tied the game on pinch-hitter Kurt Bevacqua's sacrifice fly.

Hoyt gave up 11 hits in the seven innings he worked, six of them in the first two innings when the Astros jumped to a 4-0 lead. Rich Gossage, 2-1, picked up the win in relief.

Three of the Padres' hits off Ryan came in the bottom of the second when the Padres scored three runs to cut the Astros' margin to 4-3.

Craig Reynolds, who had three hits, singled to start the Astros' first and was balked to second. Dennis Walling followed with his fourth home run of the year to make it 2-0.

In the Astros' second, Glenn Davis doubled and went to third on a single by Mark Bailey. After Ryan sacrificed Bailey to second, Bill Doran followed with a sacrifice fly and Reynolds then hit a run-scoring single to give Houston a 4-0 lead.

Ryan walked Graig Nettles with one out in the bottom of the second and Carmelo Martinez belted a two-run to cut Houston's lead to 4-2.

NL Roundup

The Pittsburgh Pirates got a fine pitching performance from Rick Reuschel and John Candelaria and some timely hitting from Marvell Wynne to beat New York 1-0 Monday night and hand the slumping Mets their sixth straight loss.

"I've exhausted what changes we can do," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "It's not one or two guys struggling, it's the whole team."

The struggling Mets were only able to manage six hits off the combined efforts of Reuschel, 6-1, and Candelaria, while extending their losing streak to the longest of the season.

"That's some job he did with just one day's rest," Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said of the 36-year-old Reuschel, who pitched one inning and got the victory in a 15-inning triumph Saturday night.

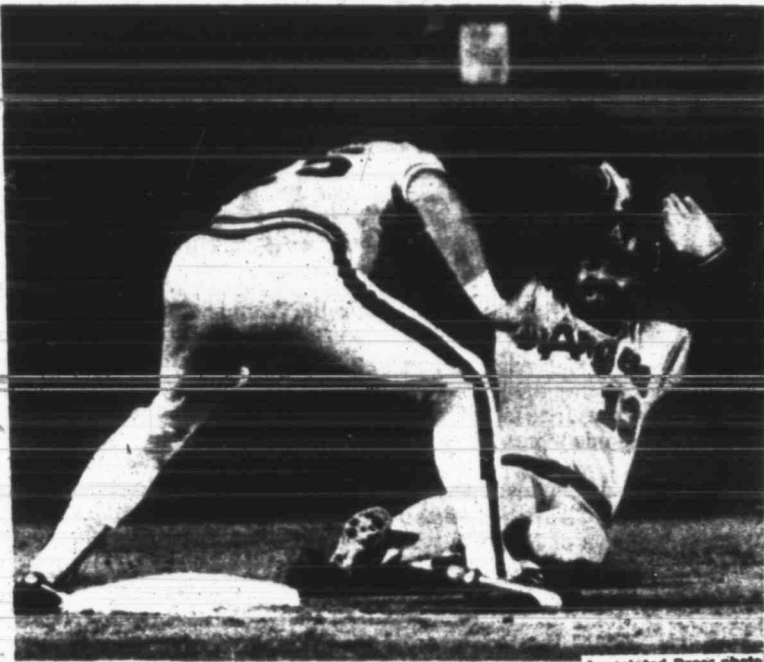

Wynne, meanwhile, knocked in the game's only run with an RBI double in the second inning off Sid Fernandez, 2-5.

Expos 3, Cardinals 2
Andre Dawson's 10th-inning single scored Jim Wohlford from third and lifted Montreal over St. Louis. The victory moved the Expos within a half-game of the Eastern Division-leading Cardinals.

Braves 4, Giants 1
Dale Murphy hit his 19th homer and rookie Zane Smith allowed just three hits in 7 2-3 innings to lead Atlanta over San Francisco. Murphy's homer, a two-run shot off loser Mike Krukow in the third inning, gave the Braves a 2-0 lead and enabled him to tie Pedro Guerrero of Los Angeles and Oakland's Dave Kingman for the major-league lead.

Cubs 3, Phillies 1
Ray Fontenot scattered seven hits in seven innings and catcher Steve Lake squeezed home the winning run with a sixth-inning bunt as Chicago beat Philadelphia. Fontenot, 3-3, struck out four and walked two before giving way to Lee Smith, who pitched the last two innings for his 17th save.

Dodgers 8, Reds 1
Orel Hershiser fired a four-hitter and Greg Brock hit a three-run homer to lead Los Angeles over Cincinnati. Hershiser struck out six and walked two while pitching his fifth complete game of the season.

RUPPERT JONES of the California Angels slides into third and the tag waiting in the glove of Texas Ranger third baseman BUDDY BELL in the fourth inning Monday night at Arlington, Texas. The Rangers won the game 10-5.

Dodgers suspend Howe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reliever Steve Howe of the Los Angeles Dodgers had been showing signs of being frustrated, but his problems didn't appear so bad that he would become "incapable of handling his assignment."

The Dodgers, however, came to that decision Monday and placed the left-hander on baseball's restricted list.

The move came after Howe and his attorney Jim Hawkins met with Dodger officials for less than an hour Monday afternoon to discuss the pitcher's mysterious absence from the Dodgers' game Sunday.

After Monday's meeting, Dodger Executive Vice President Fred Claire said in a prepared statement:

"Steve's account of his actions shows that he is incapable of handling his assignment as a member of the Dodger team. In view of this, we must focus our attention on our obligations to the members of the Dodger team and to our fans and act in the best interest of all concerned."

Hawkins advised the Dodgers that Howe submitted to a urinalysis test for drugs Monday afternoon and that the test proved negative.

"This shows that this matter is wholly unrelated to Steve's previous drug use," Hawkins said in the statement released by the Dodgers.

The latest episode in Howe's troubled career, which saw him suspended for the 1984 season for drug abuse, caught his manager by surprise.

"We noticed it in a couple of games where he didn't do well," Manager Tom Lasorda said of Howe's frustration. "I had to talk to him a couple of times and his attitude was really down. He was down. I had him in the office, he was crying and he was really down. I didn't know that he would let it affect him like this."

Howe, 27, had yielded three-run home runs in each of his last two appearances. After he gave up a homer to Steve Garvey in Wednesday's 10-4 loss to the San Diego Padres, he reportedly broke into tears in the Dodgers' clubhouse after the game.

Lasorda said he tried to console his pitcher but to little avail.

"Well, I was trying to simply encourage him and tell him that those things happen, and don't get down on yourself because you've got a lot of ability and forget about it. That tomorrow is another day," the manager said. "We spent a lot of time together that night."

Howe first went unaccounted for Saturday. He was at Dodger Stadium for an afternoon game, but failed to show up that night for a Boy Scout function he had helped organize.

He still was missing Sunday, as the Dodgers beat the Atlanta Braves 4-3 in an afternoon contest. Hawkins and Howe's wife, Cyndy, apparently didn't know his whereabouts, either. Howe then turned up early Monday morning.

During Monday's meeting, Howe gave the Dodgers a report regarding his absence from Sunday's game. At the request of Hawkins and Howe, the Dodgers declined to comment on the details of the report.

After the meeting, the Dodgers announced that they had called up left-handed pitcher Dennis Powell from their Albuquerque, N.M., affiliate to fill the roster spot vacated by Howe.

Howe had arrived three hours late for a game the previous Sunday, explaining he was stranded at home because his wife accidentally left with his car keys. He was fined $300 for the tardiness.

On the mound, Howe is 1-1 with three saves and a 4.91 earned run average this year after undergoing elbow surgery in the off-season.

Rangers upend California, 10-5

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — When pitcher Glenn Cook was called up to the Texas Rangers from the team's Class AAA Oklahoma City farm club, he got his first major-league start, picked up his first major-league victory and headed back to Oklahoma City for the birth of his first child.

Cook's baby has been born. But with that exception, the 25-year-old right-hander felt almost as good in his second start Monday night as he picked up his second victory, this time a 10-5 triumph against the California Angels.

"I was still a little nervous out there tonight," said Cook. "I made a few mistakes and this is the bigs, so when you make mistakes you usually get penalized. But we scored enough runs so it didn't matter."

Ranger Pete O'Brien backed the rookie pitcher while pulling out of a batting slump, hitting a home run and two doubles and driving in five runs.

"When I first got here I talked with him (O'Brien)," said Ranger Manager Bobby Valentine. "There wasn't a lot of concern on his part about his slump so I didn't have a lot of concern. He has showed the way he is capable of hitting the baseball in the last few weeks."

Cook pitched six innings, giving up all five California runs on 10 hits, including Ruppert Jones' three-run homer in the sixth. Dave Rozema went 2 23 innings before Dave Schmidt came on with the bases loaded and threw a double-play ball to Juan Beniquez for his second save.

Loser Jim Slaton, 4-7, lasted only two innings, giving up seven runs, five of them unearned, on five hits and two walks.

The loss is the fifth consecutive for Slaton and the seventh of his last eight.

"Slaton warmed up good," said Angels Manager Gene Mauch. "Tonight he had a better curve ball than in any of his starts this year. The Rangers got ahead early and didn't let us back in the game."

The Angels took a 2-0 lead in the first on a run-scoring single by Rod Carew and Doug DeCinces' sacrifice fly.

"After the first inning it might have been easy for him (Cook) to pack it in," said Valentine. "But he stayed with it and came right back at them."

The Rangers tied the score in the bottom of the first when Buddy Bell hit a two-out single and O'Brien followed with his ninth home run of the season.

Texas scored five unearned runs to take a 7-2 lead in the second. Larry Parrish reached base on a fielding error by third baseman DeCinces and one out later Glenn Brummer singled.

After the second out, Oddibe McDowell walked to load the bases and Wayne Tolleson hit a two-run single.

18-19-21, after which they lost 27 of their next 34.

"We were just worried about winning one in a row for quite a while," said George Vukovich, whose three-run homer was the big hit. "Maybe we can put a few more wins together, get a little momentum and make for a respectable season."

Mariners 3, White Sox 1
Seattle's Frank Wills and Chicago's Floyd Bannister were locked in a scoreless pitching duel until the eighth inning when, with one out, Ivan Calderon singled, Gorman Thomas walked and Cowens hit his eighth home run of the season. The White Sox, who stumbled to their sixth straight defeat and 10th in the last 11 games, scored in the bottom of the eighth on Rudy Law's RBI single that chased Wills.

Cowens' homer not only enabled the Mariners to win but lifted them past the White Sox into fourth place in the AL West.

"We've always been for real," Cowens said. "We're out there trying to win like everybody else."

A's 4, Royals 3

Dusty Baker belted a three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning off Kansas City relief ace Dan Quisenberry for a 4-2 lead and Jay Howell notched his 17th save after allowing a run in the bottom of the ninth. Baker, who drove in Oakland's first run with a third-inning grounder, lashed a 2-1 pitch deep into the left-field bullpen for his 10th home run of the season after Rob Piccolo opened the Oakland ninth with an infield single off starter Danny Jackson, who then fielded Alfredo Griffin's bunt and threw too late to second.

"In batting practice I couldn't come close to hitting the ball out. This is a big, big park," Baker said after his first game in Royals Stadium. "I was trying to use the (artificial) turf, to tell you the truth, but instead I hit a home run."

Yankees 4, Blue Jays 1
Don Mattingly hit a tie-breaking home run with two out in the eighth inning off Doyle Alexander and Joe Cowley and Dave Righetti combined on a three-hitter. Alexander has given up 19 home runs this season, tops in the AL.

New York added two insurance runs in the ninth on Ron Hassey's double, singles by Willie Randolph and Mike Pagliarulo — who had an RBI double in the fifth — and an error by second, baseman Damaso Garcia.

Tigers 7, Orioles 1

Darrell Evans clouted a two-run homer in the second inning and Kirk Gibson and Larry Herndon added solo shots in the third and fourth, respectively, off Scott McGregor, who became the 17th Baltimore starter to fail to survive the fourth inning. Detroit got seven-hit pitching from Randy O'Neal and Willie Hernandez.

The loss was Baltimore's third in as many games against the Tigers this season and gave the Orioles a dismal 2-13 record against East Division contenders Detroit, New York and Boston.

Brewers 5, Red Sox 1
Cecil Cooper hit two doubles, including a two-run shot in the first inning, and Pete Vuckovich and Bob Gibson combined on a five-hitter as Milwaukee won its third game in a row and handed the Red Sox their third consecutive setback and 10th in the last 13 games.

Baltimore ends Generals season, 20-17

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Generals have a history of making all the wrong moves with Garcia Lane of the Baltimore Stars. The opening round of the United States Football League playoffs was no exception.

Lane set a playoff record by returning one punt 91 yards for a touchdown. And he set up another touchdown with another long punt return as the defending champion Stars edged New Jersey 20-17, eliminating the Generals from the playoffs for the second straight year.

Baltimore, 11-7-1, will now meet the Stallions, 14-5, in Birmingham on Sunday in the semifinals. New Jersey ended its season at 11-8, losing its final three games.

"I have always taken it on myself to give it that little extra when we play New Jersey," said Lane. "They drafted me and they had my rights, but they traded me to the Stars for a good player, Lawrence Taylor."

The trade gave the Generals the rights to Taylor of the New York Giants of the National Football League. New Jersey eventually signed Taylor to a future contract, but the player bought his way out of the deal.

It's probably a deal the Generals wished they never made.

Last year, Baltimore eliminated New Jersey from the playoffs 28-7, and Lane returned a punt 70 yards for a touchdown in that game.

"If you remember the playoff game last year, the big play was the punt return," said Stars Coach Jim Mora. "It was deja vu, I loved it."

Mora said the Stars had been close to breaking punts all season, and they did something which he would not specify against New Jersey to break Lane on Monday night.

Lane said the big difference was a simple as left and right.

In two regular-season games this season, the Stars ran their punt to the left against the Generals, but ran it right in the playoff game.

"The last time we played them we ran exclusively to the left," Lane said. "This game we ran it to the right and there was beautiful wall when I hit the corner."

Lane's touchdown return with 8:30 left in the first quarter gave Baltimore a 7-0 lead. His 35-yard punt return about seven minutes later set up Chuck Fusina's four-yard quarterback draw for a touchdown.

David Trout missed the extra point, leaving Baltimore with a 13-0 advantage.

"We just gave it away early with the two big punt returns in the first quarter," said Generals Coach Walt Michaels.

Michaels made a gutsy decision on Saturday, deciding to start Ron Reeves at quarterback instead of Doug Flutie, who has been sidelined since June 1 with a broken collarbone.

Doctors had given Flutie the okay to play earlier this week, but Michaels did not.

"I would have loved to have played, but that decision was made in my best interests," said Flutie. "Today I question it but down the line I'm sure it was the right move."

Reeves got the Generals back in the game late in the second quarter, driving them 74 yards in nine plays, with Walker diving over from the one and landing on his head.

Walker was not injured on the play, but gained only 66 yards on 25 carries in the game, marking only the fifth time in 19 games this season he failed to gain at least 100 yards.

Baltimore increased its margin to 20-7 with 29 seconds left in the opening half on a five-yard touchdown pass from Fusina to Scott Fitzkee. It capped a nine-play, 79-yard march that was kept alive by an offside penalty against the Generals on fourth down.

New Jersey closed the gap to 20-17 during a three-minute span late in the third and early in the fourth quarter keyed by interceptions by Kerry Justin and Kyle Borland.

They set up a 40-yard field goal by Roger Ruzek and a 3-yard touchdown run by Maurice Carthon.

A crowd of 26,982 people attended the game, the Generals' poorest home showing this year.

PUBLIC NOTICE

CITY OF BIG SPRING
PUBLIC WORKS DIVISION
PUBLIC NOTICE

IN COMPLIANCE WITH THE MAXIMUM
CONTAMINATE LEVELS FOR TRIHALOMETHANES

The City of Big Spring is required under the Safe Drinking Water Act to reduce the maximum contaminate levels for Trihalomethanes below the 100 micrograms per liter limit. In order to comply with this public law the City of Big Spring will convert to the use of Chloramines as a disinfectant in the treatment processes and to maintain a residual throughout the distribution system. The combination of chlorine with ammonia does not allow the chlorine to alternately combine with the naturally occurring organic acids to form Trihalomethanes. Thus, the system will be able to be in compliance with the maximum contaminate levels for Trihalomethanes.

The change from the previous routine of water treatment to the use of Chloramines at the treatment plant can cause serious problems to persons dependent on dialysis machines then Carbon Filters are not employed to prepare for the dialysis. A condition known as Hemolytic anemia can occur. Therefore, the general public is hereby placed on notice that on July 15, 1985, the water treatment with process within the City of Big Spring water system will convert to the use of Chloramines as a disinfectant. Dialysis patients may be affected by this change, therefore, it is imperative that the pre-treatment scheme used for dialysis units provides some means such as charcoal filters for the removal of the chlorinating (disinfecting) agent. In addition, the use of Chloramines for disinfecting the potable water system will require different pre-treatment prior to being utilized in aquariums and other uses where the disinfectant agent would prove a hazard to the proposed use. Anyone having any questions with respect to this process, are urged to contact the Director of Public Works or the Big Spring Health Department.

Ruling allows professionals to compete in track and field

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — World record-holding hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah, who quit track to join the San Francisco 49ers, says a ruling that allows him to run again will usher in a wide-open era for track and field.

Nehemiah isn't sure he'll be part of that era, despite his apparent victory in an expensive three-year legal battle with the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

"I've waited three years for this ruling, and now I've got mixed emotions about what I'll do," Nehemiah said.

"It's a final and binding ruling that allows me to go back to track right now if I want," he said. "The question for me now is whether to play football and run track together or give up one for the other."

Regardless of whether Nehemiah returns to track, he believes the ruling last week by an IAAF arbitration panel opens the door for all football players to compete in track and field. Eventually, he said, pros from many sports may be able to compete in international meets and the Olympics.

The National Football League has several track and field standouts, including Michael Carter and Jeff Stover of the 49ers, Willie Gault of the Chicago Bears, Ron Brown of the Los Angeles Rams, and Mark Duper of the Miami Dolphins.

"This is a landmark decision similar to the historic (Curt) Flood ruling concerning free agency in baseball," said Nehemiah's attorney, Ron Stanko.

However, a spokesman for The Athletics Congress, governing body of track and field in the United States, said he understood the IAAF council must still approve the ruling.

A three-man panel of the IAAF, world sanctioning group for track and field, decided June 25 in Nehemiah's favor on his challenge of IAAF Rule 53 (v), according to Ollan Cassell, IAAF's executive director.

The rule states that the IAAF Council can declare eligible an athlete who competes as a professional in one sport, providing the practice of that sport is of no direct help for any track and field event.

The arbitration panel of attorneys from Finland, Jamaica and Senegal concluded that football does not aid a track and field athlete. That ruling now goes before the IAAF Council at its meetings in Athens, Greece, July 12-14.

"There is nothing preliminary about this ruling," said Stanko. "The decision is immediately binding and final. The council will review it, but cannot overrule it. The only possible reversal of this thing is when the full IAAF Congress meets in 1986, and that's unlikely to happen."

Nehemiah, 26, lost his track eligibility when he joined the 49ers. He is now entering the option year of an $800,000 four-year contract as a wide receiver for the Super Bowl champions.

If he were to return to track and run as fast as he once did, Nehemiah thinks he could quadruple his football salary, citing the $700,000 that Carl Lewis reportedly made last year.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 3, 1985

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is excellent for pleasing those who have any authority or influence over your affairs and to make as favorable an impression as possible in public.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Bigwigs will compliment you if you handle your outside duties very efficiently now. Work until late to get much accomplished.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) If you try a new tack where a long-time activity is concerned, you get far better results. Avoid a jealous co-worker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Talk over your practical affairs with a close tie for assistance. You have hard work to do, but leave it for the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some special thought for a cold partner will soon thaw him, or her out, and you come to a better understanding.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Put a little more color and verve into your work and gain greater benefits from it. Don't dwell on that affair at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how to get more enjoyment from amusements you like in the near future. Make sure your car is in good working order.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan how to get your home beautified in some way or another and have more harmony and comfort there.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show associates how much you value them now and gain their further cooperation. Avoid being too opinionated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Improve the value of your property by adding something new and efficient-running. Make your own repairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are highly magnetic today and can gain a personal aim with relative ease. Avoid a friend who is out of sorts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Doing something nice for a bigwig or one who is a shut-in can bring you fine rewards now. Be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You can gain a valuable favor from an older friend, but show equal gratitude in some way. Avoid a somewhat shady new contact.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will want to gain the public favor necessary that can be helpful in career work, so be sure to give a fine education and your progeny can become quite successful very early in life. Teach to save for old age.
