Crisis over Falkland Islands continues

British war fleet nearing islands

By The Associated Press

The British war fleet neared the Falkland Islands today, and its commander warned the Argentines that time is running out. Most British papers predicted an attack on the islands "within days."

"South Georgia was the appetizer," said Rear Adm. John Woodward aboard the Royal Navy carrier Hermes. "Now this is the heavy punch coming up behind.... This is the run-up to the big match which, in my view, should be a walkover."

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said British government sources indicated British commando teams would be landed on the Falklands for reconnaissance missions by Wednesday. But British military experts told The Associated Press they did not expect a major landing for at least two weeks, until the 1,500 Royal Marines aboard the British task force are reinforced by some 3,000 commandos and paratroopers en route to the South Atlantic aboard backup ships.

The British Defense Ministry denied a report in the Times of London that a commando team had already landed in the Falklands to pick a landing site for an invasion.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons Britain's recapture of South Georgia Island Sunday "in no way alters" her desire for a peaceful settlement with Argentina. But she warned repeatedly that "time is very short" and said in a television interview Monday night: "It's obvious you simply cannot go on sitting there forever."

British defense analysts said the war fleet's next step probably would be an air blockade around the Falklands archipelago, 250 miles off the Argentine coast, to cut off supplies and reinforcements to the estimated 9,000 troops Argentina put ashore there after seizing the British colony on April 2.

"That will probably mean clashes between the Argentine air force and the fighters aboard the task force's two aircraft carriers," said one military think tank specialist who asked not to be identified.

British submarines have been enforcing a sea blockade around the Falklands since April 11.

In Washington, Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez asked the Organization of American States to demand that Britain withdraw its fleet from the South Atlantic, while Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said the withdrawal of Argentine troops from the Falklands in accordance with the U.N. Security Council resolution adopted April 3 is "the surest guide to a peaceful settlement."

The OAS meeting gave Costa Mendez a prolonged standing ovation, in which Haig did not join, but did not even applaud the American secretary of state.

Costa Mendez had been expected to ask the OAS for sanctions against Britain, but apparently he feared too many of the nations would not go that far. Two more days of speechmaking were scheduled, and then the large Latin-American majority in the organization was expected to endorse the lesser Argentine demand.

Costa Mendez said Sunday night that Argentina was suspending peace negotiations with Britain because of the British attack on South Georgia, but U.S. officials said Haig is still hopeful a diplomatic solution can be arranged. President Reagan in a speech Monday said the U.S. mediation effort would continue because "the search for peace is the surest way to preserve all that we cherish."

Argentina's ruling military junta claimed early today that its forces on South Georgia were continuing to fight and said the British announcement that Argentine troops there had surrendered were "absolutely false." The British Defense Ministry denied the Argentine claim and also a report by the Argentine news agency DYN, quoting "Argentine naval sources," that Argentine commandos shot down a British helicopter in the fighting on South Georgia Sunday.

Haig says U.S. will take sides

By JOHN P. WALLACH

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig has laid it on the line to Argentina — the U.S. will end its good faith effort to be neutral in the Falklands dispute and openly side with Britain if Argentina pushes for military support as a meeting of the Organization of American States (OAS) continues today.

However, if Argentina soft-pedals its call for action under the Rio treaty, and pushes instead for a largely smybolic show of support, Haig will be ready to resume his efforts at shuttle diplomacy to end the crisis, flying to Buenos Aires as early as today or Wednesday to seek a new compromise formula.

Haig delivered the stern warning to Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa-Mendez in a telephone conversation late Sunday after the Argentine diplomat kept Haig waiting for more than two hours at the State Department and then decided to boycott the planned meeting with the top U.S. policy-maker.

Haig's message appeared to have had an effect. Argentina's ambassador to the OAS Raul Quijano said his nation was seeking "basically solidarity" rather than military aid or economic sanctions against Britain from its Latin American allies.

Senior U.S. officials said that although support from only 14 of the 21 nations represented in the OAS is needed for Argentina to win a diplomatic victory, many Latin countries are reluctant, on the basis of lobbying by the United States, to give Argentina military aid.

That combined with the Haig warning will result, officials here believe, in a show of support for Argentina but with no action being taken under Article Three of the Rio Treaty, which requires all hemisphere nations, including the United States, to provide military support to the victim of aggression.

Since these nations also do not want to back Argentina's clear aggression against the Falklands, U.S. officials said they are much more likely to provide symbolic support rather than actual arms aid. Haig has no scheduled meeting today with Costa-Mendez but undoubtedly will see him at the OAS.

Sources close to Haig said Sunday that the U.S. has backed Britain to a much greater extent than has publicly been disclosed. They said such support was not limited to providing intelligence for the 40-vessel British armada on the whereabouts of Argentine troop movements.

The officials said that the U.S. has backed Britain's two key demands in the negotiations — that there be a "restoration of British administration" in an interim period following the withdrawal of Argentine troops and that the 1,800 Falkland islanders be consulted on their future.

The latter, Britain's demand for some form of self-determination for the mostly British subjects living on the islands, has been the major stumbling block to an agreement because it does not provide any guarantee that Argentina ultimately will gain sovereignty over what it calls the Malvina Islands.

Britain also has been informed that if the Haig mission ends in failure, or open warfare breaks out on the Falklands themselves, the Reagan administration will side with the government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, providing "a good deal more than logistical support," officials here said.

They refused to spell out whether that means the U.S. is considering any troop involvement in support of a British attack against the Falklands. Officials however seem concerned that a failure by Haig will damage his personal standing even though Reagan has given Haig strong backing.

Of more immediate concern is the impact that an American failure will have on its diplomacy in other parts of the world, particularly the Middle East.

Korean policeman's 'rampage' ends with 58 dead, 36 injured

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A survivor of a policeman's drunken rampage that left 58 dead said today the officer was "jumping around like a madman, firing.

"I was so frightened and could not get to my house. I fled into a nearby paddy until all became quiet near dawn, then returned home," said the survivor, 45-year-old farmer Chun Yong-sup.

Some people died in their homes or shops during the rampage which began after the officer argued with his wife Monday in a village 200 miles south of Seoul. Others were killed when they ran into the streets alarmed by the sound of shooting and explosions. The officer killed himself with a grenade.

"The patrolman came to my house leading a student," Shin We-do, a 52-year-old shopkeeper, told reporters. "He asked for a soft drink. I gave him one. He had only one gulp and fired a shot at the student, killing the boy there.

"Then he fired shots at my wife and two of my children. They all died on the spot. Running out of the house, I was shot at and hit in the legs."

After word of the massacre reached Seoul, Home Minister Suh Chung-hwa rushed to the scene in a police plane, and later offered his resignation to assume responsibility for the action.

The policeman, Woo Kum-kon, 27, exploded a hand grenade and killed himself in a farmhouse after eight hours of attacks in Uiryong, 200 miles south of Seoul, and five neighboring hamlets. The suicide blast reportedly killed three members of the farm family.

The massacre occurred in a remote mountainous section, and early reports of the death toll ranged from 53 to 79. But the government today said an investigative team of police and Home Ministry officials visited the scene of the slaughter and counted 58 dead.

Officials said the provincial police director for the area was suspended and four policemen were arrested. Three were assigned to the substation the killer was assigned to, and the fourth was a regional police officer, officials said.

The police reported 36 others were wounded, some critically. Because of a lack of medical facilities in the mountainous area, the wounded were taken to hospitals more than 30 miles away. Appeals for donors to give blood were broadcast and emergency blood supplies rushed to the area.

The Korean Broadcasting System gave this account of the policeman's rampage:

Woo, a member of the Uiryong police force, began drinking heavily Monday after an argument with his 25-year-old wife and stole two carbines, 180 rounds of ammunition and seven hand grenades from the police armory. The arsenal was unguarded because all police officers on duty were attending a neighborhood association meeting.

Woo shot his first victim on the street in front of the Kungyu police substation, where he was assigned, then entered a post office where he killed a telephone operator and three other employees.

He ran through a shopping area, indiscriminately firing the carbines and exploding at least two grenades, and then moved through five neighboring villages on foot, firing the carbines and exploding grenades.

The police organized a manhunt with the help of military personnel shortly before midnight but did not catch up with their quarry before he ended his life in a farmhouse two and a half miles from the police station where his rampage started.

Four rounds of ammunition and one grenade were found in the farmhouse.

Commissioners take action on bonds

Midland County commissioners have laid their mulling to rest and are now doing.

That was evident Monday, when the commissioners and County Judge Bill Ahders hired the law firm Bullock, Scott & Neisig to handle the county's proposed $8 million-plus in tax-exempt revenue bonds to finance at "no cost to the taxpayers" the four-story plus basement downtown Midland County Public Library.

The action came Monday afternoon following the Commissioners' Court executive session and prompted the court openly to consider seeking revenue bonds to build a multi-story courthouse annex on county property off Baird Street and between Illinois and Texas avenues.

The commissioners did not decide on a proposed date for beginning construction of the library, which The First National Bank of Midland has pledged to help the county realize. Ground work for the library is to begin this summer.

THE COURT considered other measures in trying to cope with the growth of the county during the influx of people to Midland County in this Sun Belt,petroleum-boom era:

—Virtually guaranteed to strengthen law-enforcement and patrol in the county's burgeoning residential sections of the county.

—Reviewed proposed ordinances to govern the layout of county roads, streets and lots in manners similar to those of the city of Midland.

—Let bids on a proposed 12,000-square-foot, $300,000 pre-fabrication building on a triangular county-owned plot, former site of the County Barn, at Front Avenue and Pecos..B and Washington streets, for temporary housing of the county's Tax Assessor-Collector Office and the Elections Administrator-Voter Registrar Office. Currently, the offices of Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield's office and Deputy Voter Registrar Janeice Builta's are in the basement of the Midland County Courthouse.

—Held in abeyance Sheriff Dallas Smith's request to pay 18 deputies $20,444 in overtime, mostly from the first quarter of 1982.

—Gave consideration to instituting an experimental work-release program for county prisoners serving sentences for such misdemeanor offenses as theft, assault, criminal trespass and criminal mischief, and driving while intoxicated (DWI).

—And pondered and argued over where to relocate the existing county museum, which now is in the basement of the two-story, 1957-built library at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

The Midland bond attorneys will be seeking to sell $8 million in tax-exempt revenue bonds to finance construction of the library and will be getting a 1 percent fee — approximately $80,000 — for their role.

Two seek right to challenge incumbent

election 82

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a four-part series examining the candidates and issues in Saturday's primary elections.

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The three candidates for commissioner of Midland County's Precinct 2 view themselves as political conservatives who are concerned about the welfare of the people and want to effect sound government.

The two Republican Party contenders, Carma Durham, 43, and C. Wallace "Wally" Craig, 58, are in a race in Saturday's primary elections to win the right to challenge the 56-year-old incumbent, Democrat Charlie Welch, in the Nov. 2 general election. Welch is unopposed for the Democratic Party's nomination for commissioner.

Welch, a cotton farmer who sold out his water-well drilling business a few years ago to devote his time to county government, has been a commissioner since 1968.

"I believe that my experience as a commissioner and background in the business field make me the best qualified person seeking the position," says Welch.

Craig, a real-estate broker who was a trustee in the Midland Independent School District for six years, says that he possesses "enough understanding" of people and government, has sufficient compassion and concern for the citizenry, and has "enough background and judgment to help come up with solutions to problems."

MRS. DURHAM, a housewife and grandmother, says that she can take the time and has the concern and prudence to be an effective commissioner.

"It takes sound judgment to be on

San Jose residents file suit charging water poisoning

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Sixteen San Jose residents — four of them children with birth defects — have filed suit against Fairchild Camera and Instrument Co., alleging they were harmed by poisons that seeped into their water supply.

The suit, filed Monday in Santa Clara County Superior Court, seeks unspecified compensatory and punitive damages from Fairchild and the Great Oaks Water District.

This winter, several south San Jose residents alleged that chemical seepage caused a series of miscarriages, a stillbirth and other health problems in their neighborhood.

Jimmy Chagra arrives at a San Antonio area jail to face charges he hired a man to kill U.S. District Judge John H. Wood in 1979. Chagra, a former high-stakes gambler and convicted drug trafficker, is awaiting formal arraignment.

Arraignment set in Wood case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — All five people charged in the slaying of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. were in area jails today awaiting their scheduled arraignment Wednesday.

Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, the convicted narcotics trafficker accused of paying for Wood's slaying, was the last to arrive and was sent to the Federal Correctional Institute at Bastrop on Monday in lieu of $1.1 million in bonds.

Chagra, 38, of El Paso; his attorney brother Joseph Chagra, 35; his wife, Elizabeth Chagra, 28; convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson, 43, and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, 41, are scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. before U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor.

The Chagra brothers are being held in Bastrop, Elizabeth Chagra and the two Harrelsons are being held at the Bexar County Jail.

Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson are charged the murder of Wood, the three Chagras and Harrelson are charged with conspiracy to murder the judge and the Chagras, Harrelson and Mrs. Harrelson are accused of obstructing justice in the investigation.

The indictment accuses Jimmy Chagra of paying Harrelson about $250,000 to kill Wood here on May 29, 1979. Wood was scheduled to preside at Jimmy Chagra's narcotics-related criminal enterprise trial at the time of the shooting.

Jimmy Chagra, serving a 30-year sentence without parole for continued criminal enterprise, was brought from the maximum security federal penitentiary at Marion, Ill..

He made a brief appearance before O'Connor Monday to have his bonds set at $1.1 million while he awaits trial. O'Connor already was considering motions to lower the $1.6 million bond for Joe Chagra and the $1.1 million bond for Mrs. Chagra.

"Do I have to go through these proceedings without an attorney, your honor?" he immediately asked O'Connor.

O'Connor said one reason for the appearance was to determine if he had an attorney, or whether one should be appointed.

"As far as I know, Oscar Goodman is still my attorney," the graying, mustachioed defendant said.

However, Chagra said Goodman had been involved in some negotiations with U.S. District Judge William Sessions and he had not been allowed to contact Goodman to determine whether the Las Vegas, Nev., attorney would represent him.

An FBI agent testified here last week that a witness claimed Jimmy Chagra, Joe Chagra and Goodman attempted to bribe him during Jimmy Chagra's 1979 Austin trial. Sessions presided at the trial after Wood was killed.

Chagra promised to let O'Connor know as soon as he can find out if Goodman will represent him.

"I don't think I could do anything, your honor, until I consult with an attorney of some kind. Put me in a cell with my brother and I'll talk to him and get his advice."

Clements to call session on tax repeal

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements Monday said he will call a special session to begin May 24 for the Legislature to abolish the state ad valorem tax used to finance construction as some 17 public senior college and universities.

Following a meeting of the state's three top officials, Clements, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Bill Clayton announced that they are in agreement that the special session should be held before a lawsuit to restore the tax goest to trial in June.

"We are unanimously of the opinion that we should have a special session begin May 24," Clements said, adding that it is "terribly important" that the issue be submitted to the voters as a constitutional amendment in November.

Until 1978, the property tax was used to finance construction at state colleges and unversities outside the Permanent University Fund.

However, 1979 the Legislature virtually eliminated the tax by reducing the assessment rate to 0.0001 percent.

Midwestern University, one of the schools that formerly received funds from the tax, has challenged the Legislature's action as unconstitutional. That suit is to go to trial June 2.

Clements originally said he would not call a special session to repeal the tax until after the lawsuit was settled, but apparently changed his mind after the attorney general's office indicated they would seek a continuance in the case.

Such a delay would "close the window" of time in which the Legislature could act on the repeal and get the matter on the November ballot.

"We felt, under those conditions, that we need to proceed as quickly as possible," Clements said.

The session will be open only to consideration of the tax repeal, forgiving back taxes that would be owed if the Midwestern suit prevails and providing some "contingent" funding for the non-PUF schools.

Clayton said such an appropriation probably would be about $100 million.

The property tax raised some $53 million in 1978, the last year it was collected, but Clements said nearly $1 billion would be owed if the tax was restored.

Clements said he will not open the special session to any other issues. A permanent solution to funding construction at the affected schools would be left for the 1983 Legislature to consider.

Clements, who predicted that the Legislature could approve the tax repeal in two days, said the action would make the Midwestern suit moot.

The governor added that the May session will allow lawmakers who are campaigning for re-election to act of the property tax repeal and get back to their campaigns before the June 5 runoff election.

Houston Housing Authority board members fire director

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Housing Authority, which failed to record $1.3 million in checks during a three-year span when it also entered checks worth $2.5 million into its books twice, has fired its executive director.

Commissioners of the agency, which provides subsidized housing in 11 projects, cited sloppy bookkeeping and poor management Monday as they fired William R. McClellan.

Board members said they had a "lack of confidence" in McClellan's ability to administer the agency efficiently.

McClellan, 48, blamed "philosophical" differences with federal officials for his firing.

Officials of the regional Housing and Urban Development office complained last summer that the Houston agency's records were in a "shambles" and could not be audited.

Independent auditors, working because of an HUD request, found that in the three years ending Dec. 31, 1980, the authority issued $1.3 million in checks that were never recorded. The audit also found that checks worth $2.5 million were entered twice.

Board Chairman J.L. Phillips also resigned Monday, but said his move had nothing to do with McClellan's firing. He said he had finished the second year of his two-year term.

Copyright stories in the Houston Chronicle said the agency had lost vital documents when it moved its headquarters in 1981 from the Allen Parkway Village housing project to an office in River Oaks, Houston's richest neighborhood.

The paper also reported the authority had failed to reconcile its general cash fund since 1976.

Elbert Winn, deputy area manager for HUD, said his office had recommended McClellan be fired but said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire was probably "the person most responsible" for the dismissal.

Odessa officer hospitalized

ODESSA — A police officer was hospitalized and an Odessa man was arrested after he allegedly assaulted the officer following a traffic violation early this morning.

Police said Officer Luther Hawley was in stable condition at Medical Center Hospital, where he was taken after being overpowered by a 21-year-old man in the 4900 block of East University Avenue about 2:15 a.m.

Hawley stopped the man for a traffic violation and a fight ensued, according to police, who said back-up officers quickly subdued the man and took him to the hospital for treatment. While awaiting treatment, he allegedly kicked officer Rick Morris in the groin. Morris was at the hospital on another case.

The suspect was booked on two assault charges, including assault on a peace officer — a felony. Formal charges are expected to be filed sometime today.

New Jersey man may be connected to New York City rooftop murders

NEW YORK (AP) — A .22-caliber cartridge found in the garage of a New Jersey man was fired from the same gun used in the rooftop murders of three CBS television techinicians and a federal witness in a fraud case, according to a police ballistics test.

The police laboratory finding arrived at Monday was termed "very significant" by police sources because "it puts the gun used in the murders right in his home garage."

The garage belongs to Donald J. Bowers, 46, of Keansburg, N.J., who was arrested last week near Frankfort, Ky., on a fugitive warrant unrelated to the April 12 homicides on the rooftop of a West Side riverfront parking lot.

The murder weapon has not been found.

Earlier police tests had indicated that a cartridge found in Bowers' van had been fired from the same gun used in the four killings. The casing also matched one found in the car of a friend and former co-worker of the federal witness, Margaret Barbera.

the Commissioners' Court," she says. "It just takes time to learn what's going on in the county and to pick up on things."

Mrs. Durham says that she is amicable.

"I'm the easiest person to get along with," she asserts, "unless you make me mad. "And I'm a person that says what they think."

Mrs. Durham hasn't formulated an out-and-out political platform, but she is outspoken on some issues.

"I'm very much opposed to taxes, increasing taxes."

Mrs. Durham, who lives in the Greenwood community and is married to a contract welder, Glen Durham, concedes that she isn't all that aware of what goes on in county government but notes that she is an able student of government and is willing to learn.

"I don't know that much about what's going on up there right now, but we need some changes," she says, "and I feel like I'm the one to make those changes."

ONE CHANGE, WHICH, she notes, was long in coming, was preventing the effluent from Midland's municipal waste water from running down Midland Draw and otherwise contaminating the underground water zones.

"I just feel like it should have been cleared up a long time ago. I know it's a sore spot for some people, and it ought to be a sore spot for everybody," Mrs. Durham says. "It's no good for the county."

Should she beat out Craig for the GOP nomination for commissioner, Mrs. Durham says she would be able to make full-time work out of the job.

"I feel like the people need a full-time, working, interested and responsible representative," the candidate says."I don't feel that a person who has outside interests, outside jobs, can (effectively) represent the people."

She referred to a comment made by her opponent in the Republican primary election when he initially announced his candidacy. "When Craig came out and said he wanted the seat," she says, "I said I wanted to stand up and represent the people."

CRAIG CITES his business-government background and judgmental abilities as his forte for county commissioner of Precinct 2, which takes in northeast Midland and a central section of the city and much of the eastern half of the county.

"Anybody, including a county commissioner, school board member or city councilman, who expects to make judgments better be privy to the entire information," Craig says. And the GOP candidate thereby thought it best not to voice opinions on county issues, from the handling of effluent to the proposed building of a library and expansion of the courthouse, until he is fully apprised of circumstances and conditions.

However, he notes that people have a tendency to judge "without the facts, and I'm as guilty as anyone.

"One shouldn't be expected to and shouldn't make firm statements (on any issue) without benefit" of the facts and shouldn't "categorically say 'I have the answers to this or that' " without first knowing the wherewithals.

"A person can hardly make in-depth decisions" without knowledge of the circumstances and ramifications. "He might guess right." Craig says that he possesses "honesty, integrity and a reasonable amount of sound judgment."

FURTHERMORE, HE assures that he will carry out the commissioner's job.

"I can spend all the time it takes on the job," he pledges, "and will do the best of my ability with or without pay." His years (1970-76) on the Midland school board were freely given — without monetary reward. "I would do the same thing on the County Commissioners' Court. It happens to have a paycheck ($22,755 in 1982) attached."

Craig gave assurances that his decision to run for the post was his alone and that no one — not even his wife, Carol — got him to run for any reason, including the ousting of his friend, Welch.

"I was not asked by anyone, and I'll say that categorically, to run for county commissioner.

"I want everybody's support, but I don't want anybody to think I'm running on behalf of anyone, because I'm not."

Craig explains that he is campaigning for the post because he's involved in the community, and "I'm interested in government in one form or another."

WELCH, WHO now holds what Craig and Durham seek, says that he "still opposes raising taxes that the voters don't approve.

"Taxes ought to be low enough that everybody who wants to own a house can own one...and shouldn't have to suffer a hardship" just to pay taxes.

Also, Welch said that he is "very concerned about the quality of water in Midland.

"We can no longer afford the 'luxury' of contamination of water from any source — municipal, industrial or otherwise," says the commissioner. Welch said that he "sold out" his water-well drilling business a few years ago. "I had to choose between the water-well business or the county, and I chose the county business. I represent the citizens."

Like Craig, Welch is a member of the Midland County Tax Appraisal board of directors.

Welch, who helps administrate the county's $8.6 million 1982 budget, noted the county's "fantastic" library-building project, which is to be built "without cost to the taxpayers." The county plans to construct an $8-million-plus downtown library with tax-exempt revenue bonds and to pay off the bonds by leasing surplus library space to The First National Bank of Midland.

"And I hope we can do the same thing with the annex," he says.

Throughout his years as commissioner, Welch says that his "No. 1 promise" has been to "represent every citizens of Midland County. I try hard to do that — to work as hard as I can for every citizen of Midland County.

"I sure have the time required to do this job, so I can devote my time to the public's business," says Welch.

"That's my promise: to work hard for all the people of Midland."

Wednesday: District clerk race.

Mengden tells own pros, main opponent's cons

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Walter Mengden

Making a last-week swing through the state before the May 1 Republican Primary, U.S. senatorial candidate Walter Mengden continued his attacks against chief opponent Jim Collins in a press conference this morning at Midland Air Terminal.

Mengden told news media he believes he will win the Republican nomination — and garner at least 54 percent of the vote in doing so — because "Republicans see the big difference between Collins and myself."

In a prepared statement, Mengden said Collins:.

—"Has proposed an oil tax increase to raise more money for Congress to spend, and which would cost the consumers 14 cents more per gallon of gas. I am strongly opposed to any tax increases.

—"Voted for huge increases in foreign aid. I oppose any increase in foreign aid at a time of budget cuts at home.

—"Voted against the sale of AWACs to Saudia Arabia that will protect the oil fields from Soviet-influenced invasion. I would have supported it."

Mengden said the most vital issue at hand, however, is effectiveness.

"I have been effective and Collins has not," he claimed. "I have passed 91 pieces of conservative legislation in 10 years in the Texas Senate. Collins has never passed a single bill in his 16 years in the U.S. House of Representatives. He hasn't even gotten a bill to the floor of the House."

Mengden then looked past the primary and attacked the record of incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, comparing it to Collins'.

Bentsen's record, he said, suffers from "the same thing as Jim Collins' — he has done nothing to alleviate the problems of the nation," he said, explaining that the gravest issues facing America are high interest rates, unemployment and the national debt, which he referred to as "a millstone, an albatross hanging around the neck of this country."

To wipe out the national debt, Mengden is advocating sale of government-held lands which compose one-third of the continental United States in 100-acre plots at an average rate of $100 per acre. Excluded, he said, would be land "in use," such as national parks, national forests, national monuments, and designated wilderness areas.

When asked why the nation had been reluctant to part with such lands in the past, Mengden said that "the wrong people have been elected."

Texas newspapers pick Armstrong as favorite

By The Associated Press

Texas newspapers endorsing candidates in the statewide races of the May 1 primary seem to like Democratic gubernatorial candidate Bob Armstrong, while Max Sherman gets the nod in the crowded attorney general's race.

Armstrong, currently state land commissioner, received endorsements from at least 13 daily newspapers, including the Dallas Times Herald, the Austin American-Statesman, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, the El Paso Times, Temple Daily Telegram, San Angelo Standard-Times, Kerrville Times and Longview News-Journal.

"While the other two contenders (Attorney General Mark White and Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple) have been slugging it out...in personal attacks, Armstrong has been conducting a campaign of ideas and issues," the Caller-Times wrote.

Temple was the choice of the San Antonio Express-News, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and Lufkin Daily News, among others.

"Buddy Temple has the record that merits your vote," said the Lufkin News, which is in Temple's back yard. "It is a plus that Temple is a native of Diboll, one of our own..."

The Houston Chronicle and the Edinburg Daily Review were among those choosing White.

The Amarillo Globe-News did not endorse anyone in the governor's races, saying it was "terribly unenthusiastic" about the candidates in both parties.

Sherman, a former state senator from the Panhandle, was endorsed by most papers in that region and also in Temple, El Paso, Fort Worth, Bryan, San Angelo, Dallas, and Wichita Falls.

"In the four-man race for the Democratic nomination for state attorney general, our first choice is Max Sherman," said the Standard-Times.

John Hannah was selected by the Edinburg Daily Review, the Longview News, the Austin American-Statesman and Lufkin in that race.

"John Hannah is running a poor man's race, and understandably so. Like a lot of us, a poor man is what he's always been," wrote the Lufkin newspaper.

U.S. Rep. Jim Mattox of Dallas was endorsed by the Caller-Times, the San Antonio Express News, and the San Antonio Light.

In the race for U.S. Senate, Democratic incumbent Lloyd Bentsen has won overwhelming editorial support, while U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas has been the preferred Republican.

State Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland was the San Angelo Standard-Times' first choice and Gary Mauro was the second choice for land commissioner. Snelson claimed at least 14 newspaper endorsements and Mauro, five.

In the state treasurer's race, incumbent Democrat Warren G. Harding got the nod from the Standard-Times, although it noted that "two indictments on minor offenses involving campaign practices have placed Harding in a dubious position." Harding was also the choice of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

"Normally one does not endorse a person who is under felony indictment," wrote the Star-Telegram. "But the nature and circumstances of Harding's indictment are questionable and should be ignored by voters. Harding shows he deserves a chance for re-election."

County Commissioners take action on revenue bonds

porate about 28,000 square feet on each floor; the first two floors are to house the library, while the basement and the third and fourth floors are to be leased to The First National Bank.

"The third and fourth (floors) will be money-makers," noted Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. "They'll pay for the building." The bank reportedly plans to rent the top two floors for offices and basement for a computer bank, while it is building its own tower on its proposed Eagle Plaza.

By agreeing to let the bank be tenant and effectively guiding that revenue toward paying off the indebtedness, the county will bypass any general-obligations bonds, avoiding a bond issue and a tax hike for taxpayers.

Commissioners tentatively agreed to hire Amarillo interior designer Earl Herring at a $30,000 fee to design the library's interior but were reluctant to accept Herring's lawyers' proposal for a $50-an-hour fee for a graphic artist. "It seems to me we're giving him an open-ended check book," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

Midland County Attorney Scott Henderson said that the interior-designer's attorneys were "wishy-washy in drawing up the contract."

"Let's take all of the wishes and washes out," proposed Commissioner Charlie Welch.

Jack Wood & Associates, an architectural-master planning firm, is the architect for the library and the Plaza's development, but the county has hired Hoyt Galvin, a library consultant out of Charlotte, N.C., to draw up the library's general scheme.

"I think Galvin dictates just about everything," surmised Henderson. "It's his name that comes up in every other sentence (on the proposal)."

THE COMMISSIONERS also objected to the proposal that Library Director John Deats be the arbitrator on deciding which library appointments and other items are to be bidded upon or bought outright. The commissioners seemed to detect that they were being bypassed in some phases of library planning.

"I think we ought to be reviewing plans instead of someone else," said Davis.

The commissioners also considered seeking out, via advertisements in The Wall Street Journal, means similar to the library financing to build a 15- to 18-story annex and thereby eliminate general obligation bonds and effectively get into the landlord business.

"We have a viable vehicle to consummate this program...if you (the court) find a player or a big tenant," said Wright.

"How would you like to have a hotel as a tenant?" suggested Davis, who also noted that "We've got the bull by the tail — the land and the tax-exempt bonds."

Davis exhorted fellow Commissioners Win Brown and Wright "to get on the ball" in getting the annex proposals set up.

The commissioners seemed in agreement on building the library and proposing the annex, but couldn't — or didn't — get together on the fate of the 50-year-old county museum.

Welch noted that the "museum is totally lacking in those (library) plans" and pointed to the logo on the present library building: "Midland County Public Library & Museum."

"IT (MUSEUM) has been in the library for 50 years (since the construction of the courthouse in 1929-30 when the library was in the courthouse) and don't think it ought to be excluded. It ought to be greatly enhanced."

However, Brown proposed that the community would be better served and the county museum's artifacts would be better enhanced if they were incorporated in the proposed expansion of the Museum of the Southwest.

"And this is for the betterment of the community," speculated Brown. "If we would supply some money, this (museum) would be second to none."

Welch objected. Most of the county museum artifacts and records would "wind up in boxes."

Brown said that the Museum of the Southwest approach is a "cheap way out."

Retorted Welch: "And that's all it is."

Brown suggested that the county museum wasn't as popular as Welch had implied it was. "There's hardly anybody that goes through that museum there (in the basement of the library)," said Brown.

Welch, who contested that remark, said that there's a "trail worn" to museum. Brown said that well-worn trail also leads to stacks of city directories over the decades.

SHERIFF SMITH, whose $1.4 million budget for the year seems to hold no surpluses, requested the $20,444 overtime pay for 18 of his authorized force of 45 deputies. But the commissioners seemed unsure if they should pay the overtime based on each deputy's wages during overtime period or at the current rate.

Some deputies each requested between 300 and 400 hours in overtime pay. "That's a tremendous amount of incentive" to entice deputies to work for at least a year, noted Wright. One of the sheriff's policies is not to pay any officer overtime pay until he has worked at least a year.

Smith, who said he didn't "like the uncomfortable feeling of coming up here today," said that "theoretically we still don't pay overtime."

The sheriff and the commissioners, particularly Davis, cited the need for more rural patrol in an effort to reduce vandalism, burglaries and other crimes, including the misdemeanor offenses of speeding and disobeying traffic signs, in the county. Smith proposed increasing his patrol force by about 50 percent — from 11 to 16 officers.

Davis noted that it is "unreasonable to expect" 24-hour patrol, but that "There's just something psychological about it that helps us all."

The commissioners considered the sheriff's proposal for a work-program for county prisoners, who would clean up ditches and clean out culverts under supervision of a guard.

The sheriff said he would have willing workers for the detail work.

"After they have been in jail for a few weeks, they'll want to work."

Stroke claims Wilson, Benny's 'straight man'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Don Wilson, the rotund baritone who played straight man to Jack Benny's jibes for 32 years on radio and television, is dead of a stroke at age 81.

Wilson's wife of 32 years, the former Louise Corbet, said she found her husband unconscious in their Cathedral City home after she returned from visiting a friend at Eisenhower Medical Center. Paramedics took Wilson to the medical center and he was pronounced dead Sunday evening.

"It was a massive stroke," Mrs. Wilson said Monday.

The couple had lived in Palm Springs about 15 years, she said, hosting TV talk shows together and raising championship poodles.

Mrs. Wilson has arranged for him to be cremated and his ashes scattered at an undisclosed location.

Wilson joined the Jack Benny radio show as announcer in 1934 after working as an NBC sports announcer. Benny soon made him a featured character.

His wife also became a regular along with Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Dennis Day, Phil Harris, Mary Livingston, Artie "Mr. Kitzel" Auerbach, Mel Blanc, Bea Benaderet, Verna Felton and Frank Nelson.

"I've written a book about it called 'From Piggly Wiggly to Jack Benny,'" Mrs. Wilson said. "He (Wilson) started out in Denver, his home town, as a baritone in a trio. They were sponsored by a chain of grocery stores called the Piggly Wiggly stores. He went to San Francisco in 1927 and sang on radio there.

A Benny associate and producer, Irving Fein, called Wilson "a great foil for Jack. He was the hearty announcer who tried to get the commercial on the air and Jack would try to thwart him."

In Palm Springs, Wilson hosted "Town Talk," a celebrity interview show on KMIR-TV from 1968-75. For six months in 1975 the couple hosted "The Don and Lois Wilson Show" on competing station KPLM-TV (now KESQ-TV).

The Jack Benny show began on radio in 1932 and transferred to television in 1950. The show ended in 1965. Benny died in 1974.

No funeral is planned. Mrs. Wilson said she is her husband's only survivor.

Cody's body lying in state in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — The body of Cardinal John Cody has been brought "home" to Holy Name Cathedral, where thousands of Roman Catholics will pay their last respects to the prelate before he is buried.

"The cathedral is, in a special way, the cardinal's home," the Rev. Timothy J. Lyne, rector of the cathedral, said at a Mass Monday night. "We felt that rather than spending the night in a funeral parlor, he should be brought home. And we welcome him."

Cody, since 1965 the leader of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese, died Sunday at the age of 74.

Official mourning was to begin today. His body will lie in state for public viewing through two days of Masses, and burial is scheduled for Thursday at Mount Carmel Cemetery in suburban Hillside.

Elementary and secondary Catholic schools in Chicago will be closed Thursday out of respect for the prelate, church officials said.

Monday night's Mass was held so that close friends of Cody and those who worked in the archdiocese could pay their respects, although it was open to the public and news media.

The casket was carried into the cathedral by seven men who were to have been ordained as priests by the prelate in May. It was followed by Helen Dolan Wilson of St. Louis, Cody's lifelong friend and step-cousin. Accompanying Mrs. Wilson were her daughter, Rita Porter, and her granddaughter, Pamela Porter.

For the past seven months, Cody had been the target of a federal investigation by a grand jury into allegations that he diverted up to $1 million in tax-exempt church funds to Mrs. Wilson. Both Cody and Mrs. Wilson denied wrongdoing.

In his final message to Chicago Catholics, Cody said he had forgiven his enemies who had caused him "personal hurt," but warned "God will not so forgive" those who had opposed him unless they change their ways.

On Monday, Mrs. Wilson's attorney, Leonard Ring, circulated a letter his client had written asking the Chicago Sun-Times staff keep away from the funeral services. The newspaper first reported the federal investigation and has carried many stories about archdiocesan finances.

Sun-Times Editor Ralph Otwell said members of his staff would attend the Cody funeral. "To do less than that would be a disservice to our readers," he said.

About 150 people, including Mayor Jane Byrne, attended the Monday evening service, after which the cathedral was cleared of all but the prelate's family.

The Very Rev. John Richard Keating was selected as "acting ordinary" of the archdiocese until Pope John Paul II selects a successor.

Keating, 48, a caretaker elected in secret by a board of 13 "consultors," currently serves as archdiocesan chancellor, one of the church's top administrative posts here.

The importance of the 2.5 million-member archdiocese — the nation's largest and wealthiest — as well as the controversies that surrounded Cody make the choice of a successor a crucial decision for the pope, according to church observers.

"Nothing is comparable to the appointment in Chicago," said Thomas Fox, editor of the National Catholic Reporter, a liberal Catholic weekly based in Kansas City, Mo.

"The kind of person who is appointed in Chicago will say as much about the way Pope John Paul sees this nation and the needs of its people as any single act to date," Fox said in an interview.

Archbishop Pio Laghi, apostolic delegate to the United States, will be the principal celebrant of the funeral Mass Thursday at Holy Name Cathedral, Lyne said. Cardinal Timothy Manning of Los Angeles has indicated he will attend the funeral, and several other U.S. prelates also are expected to be present, Lyne said.

Multiple Sclerosis vaccine possible, research indicates

NEW YORK (AP) — A vaccine to protect against multiple sclerosis could be one eventual outcome of the discovery of a virus associated with the disease, scientists say.

Doctors at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston who found the virus cautioned that more work remains before they know whether the virus causes multiple sclerosis.

If that turns out to be the case, it should be possible to develop a vaccine that would prevent spread of the disease, said Dr. Joseph Melnick, the leader of the Baylor research team.

In a report in the current issue of The Lancet, the British medical journal, Melnick said the virus has also been found in patients with two other diseases of the central nervous system.

Melnick and colleague Edward Seidel said they have spent 2½ years verifying their results, because many previous reports similar to theirs have not held up under scrutiny by other scientists.

A quarter of a million Americans have multiple sclerosis, and it strikes some 10,000 others every year, according to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

It attacks the brain and central nervous system, damaging the myelin sheath, a white insulating material that surrounds nerve cells and shields their electrical signals. The term "sclerosis" means hardening, and refers to the firm scar tissue that appears following damage to the myelin sheath.

Three important races

While there will be more judicial races on Saturday's ballots, probably none are more important but more likely to confuse voters than the three races to determine the Democratic nominees for the Supreme Court of Texas. There are two Democratic Party candidates in each race, but since only Place 1 features a Republican contender, voters actually will be selecting the justices who will sit in Places 2 and 3.

The Place 1 candidates are John M. Barron and Ted Robertson. Judge Robertson is the obvious choice in this race, having practiced law for 20 years and served as a probate, district and appellate jurist. Barron was the judge, if you'll recall, who was sitting as a "visiting" judge in the T. Cullen and Priscilla Davis divorce trial in Fort Worth and was accused of holding private meetings with Davis and his then-girlfriend Karen Master in Barron's hotel room and, separately, with Priscilla Davis in his chambers and the former couple's Fort Worth mansion.

Barron's conduct in the trial was, to say the least, a subject for concern at that time. But his opponent for the seat, Judge Robertson, is a jurist worthy of note, having drawn 53 percent of the votes of lawyers for the Place 1 race in the State Bar poll.

Complicating matters even more is the race for Place 2 between Bill Kilgarlin and the incumbent James G. Denton. Judge Denton is a 12-year veteran of the Supreme Court while Kilgarlin is a 49-year-old district judge from Houston.

Judge Denton's experience should not be lost. His conservative voice has been an influential force on the court and he should be re-elected to protect the interests of all Texans. In the recent State Bar poll, Judge Denton drew 72 percent of the lawyers' votes to Kilgarlin's 28 percent.

The Place 3 race is an interesting one, pitting Charles W. Barrow, the appointed incumbent, against Woodrow Wilson Bean of El Paso. Barrow, who lost his race to Don Yarbrough in 1976, was appointed to the Supreme Court by then-Gov. Dolph Briscoe after Yarbrough resigned from the bench under fire. Barrow won outright in 1978.

Bean may be best remembered for his claim in the 1960s that he believed the income tax was "illegal and immoral" and that he had not filed returns for several years. Later he paid $40,000 in back taxes and penalties and was assessed a five-year suspended sentence, losing his law license temporarily. In 1963, Bean was found guilty by a district court of failing to provide adequate counsel to a Mexican-American indigent in a murder trial. A federal appeals court opinion later upheld the decision and two-year law license suspension.

Judge Barrow, who some fear will be confused with Barron in the Place 1 race because of the name similarity, is a widely acclaimed jurist, having drawn 90 percent of the votes of lawyers in the recent State Bar poll. Judge Barrow should certainly be re-elected.

The Supreme Court positions are so important to Texans these races should not be taken lightly this election or any other election. Voters should remember to choose Ted Robertson in the Place 1 race, James G. Denton in the Place 2 race and Charles W. Barrow in Place 3.

The spice of life

A number of quotable quotations spiced the lives of newspaper readers in recent days.

In the Michigan House of Representatives, a less than attentive legislator voted on a bill before the house, then turned to the presiding officer and said: "Mr. Speaker, what bill did we just pass?"

In the Wall Street Journal's daily cartoon, "Pepper . . . and Salt," a general was depicted briefing a group of fellow generals on the various reasons people are opposed to war. He concluded his remarks as follows:

"And last, but not least, the environmentalists are against war, as they feel it would destroy the Siberian Tundra."

In Washington, President Reagan was ruminating on the reasons "silent Calvin Coolidge", whose portrait is prominently displayed in the White House, was one of his favorite chief executives. The 40th president noted that the 30th president kept the government small, reduced taxes, and presided over a period of economic growth. Mr. Reagan's cheerful conclusion was:

"If he did that by doing nothing, well, maybe that's the answer for the federal government."

Another View:

No time for politics

Negotiations to come up with an alternative to the president's deficit-ridden 1983 budget have proven bumpier than anyone expected. Reports about the administration's willingness to compromise alternate with reports that the White House will not budge on its defense or tax program. Only weeks before the legal deadline for Congress to produce a budget resolution, Republicans are still holding out against any significant reduction in the business and personal income tax cuts enacted last year, and Democrats against any reduction in cost-of-living increases for entitlement programs like Social Security.

All sides know that the deficit will not be reduced to even remotely manageable proprortions without major cuts in all these areas — in defense, tax-cut and entitlement programs. Everyone understands that the minor tax increases that are easiest to concede — like the income tax surcharge for rich people — would be of very little help. All seem to expect that eventually the across-the-board tax-cut program and entitlement cost-of-living increases will have to be shaved in tandem, and to acknowledge that the nation simply cannot afford President Reagan's defense budget. Yet Washington is still playing chicken with a deficit that will reach $180 billion in 1983 if nothing is done — each side daring the other to change course first, all courting imminent disaster.

In an election year, all have much to lose by acting otherwise. The White House, having staked the economic health of the nation on its defense and tax programs, cannot afford to admit mistakes in them. Congressional Republicans, having done nothing for the bulk of their middle-class constituents except produce a tax cut and having proposed no other strategy for pulling the country out of recession, will go to the polls empty-handed if the tax cut is eliminated or reduced. The Democrats, whose own favorite high-spending, anti-recession tools are unworkable with deficits of this size, will not be able to distinguish themselves from Republicans and Republican economic failures unless they can do something to ensure that the deficit isn't reduced on the backs of the poor and the elderly.

The country, of course, has muddled through such election-year stalemates in the past. But this year, the price of inaction would virtually be intolerable. If the federal banking system continues its tight money policies, deficits of the size we are now courting will keep interest rates devastatingly high — forestalling recovery from the recession, aggravating unemployment, driving more and more small businesses and farms into bankruptcy, and increasing the inflationary risks when the economy moves forward again.

It may be too much to hope for in an election year, but the situation calls for statesmanship and compromise, not politics and rigidity. Without significant concessions on all sides, no one will win.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Haig assistant playing diplomatic hardball

WASHINGTON — Behind every international crisis, there are diplomats who spend as much effort maneuvering against each other as they do trying to solve the crisis. It presents the opportunity to play a starring role and climb ever higher on the ladder of power.

Jack Anderson

Take the case of Lawrence Eagleburger, undersecretary of state for political affairs. In the diplomatic pecking order, he's regarded as No. 3.

But when two international crises — the Falkland Islands and the Middle East — erupted simultaneously, Eagleburger saw a chance to elbow aside the No. 2 man, Deputy Secretary Walter Stoessel, and become a superstar himself. Here was the situation:

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, the undisputed Numero Uno, took personal charge of the hotter of the two crises, the Falkland Islands dispute. In the style of his old mentor, Henry Kissinger, Haig began shuttling between London and Buenos Aires to prevent a shooting war.

Obviously, Haig wasn't available for any shuttling around the Middle East. Who should be sent, Stoessel or Eagleburger? No. 2 or No. 3? Opportunity was knocking.

Stoessel is a 62-year-old career diplomat of the old school, a professional with wide experience in East-West affairs, including a stint as U.S. ambassador in Moscow. Calm and unflappable, he is not known for overweening personal ambition.

Eagleburger, on the other hand, is forceful, flamboyant and ambitious. Like Haig, Eagleburger learned his bureaucratic infighting from Kissinger at the National Security Council and State Department during the Nixon-Ford years.

At 51, Eagleburger evidently still has high hopes of achieving superstar status, but may feel the years crowding in on him. After all, his old boss, Kissinger, was secretary of state and a Nobel Prize winner by the time he was 50.

At any rate, Eagleburger sent a cable to his old colleague Haig, recommending Stoessel for the Middle East crisis shuttle. Then he called the White House plane to undercut his own cable. He spoke with an aide to Haig, Alvin Adams. My reporters Dale Van Atta and Jeff Nesbit have transcribed the conversation from a tape recording.

After a brief preliminary, Eagleburger gets to the real reason for his call.

"Uh, listen, I want to make one point," he says. "In one of the cables you will be getting, you will find Mr. Stoessel's name. I have put that in the cable because I'm a nice fellow, but I feel very strongly, very strongly that if he's going to buy — if (Haig) is going to buy the proposal at all — it would be better if my name were there, because I'm nastier. Do you understand?"

Adams hadn't heard the transmission, so Eagleburger repeated it all.

"I frankly think it ought to be my name, not his, because I will be nastier." He added: "You won't understand what I'm talking about until you read the cable. But when you do, would you make the point to the secretary that I would prefer the other name?"

Despite his elaborate scheming — a cable (which Stoessel would see) followed by a contradictory phone call (which Stoessel wouldn't know about) — Eagleburger failed to win the high-profile assignment he obviously wanted. Haig sent Stoessel to the Middle East instead.

In the Byzantine world of Foggy Bottom politics, even No. 1 apparently has to watch out for ambitious underlings. It takes one, as they say, to know one.

Footnote: A State Department spokesman said that Eagleburger had no comment.

UNION VS. HATCH — Utah Republicans are up in arms over a recent letter sent out by the state AFL-CIO vehemently attacking Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who is running for re-election this year. Hatch worked his way through law school as a metal lath worker, and has boasted of his membership in the AFL-CIO. But the union's leaders regard him as an opponent of labor.

The letter, written by Eddie Mayne of the Utah AFL-CIO, accuses Hatch of trying to shoot down the eight-hour day, the federal labor safety agency and the Davis-Bacon Act, which requires federal contractors to pay union-scale wages. It says that "polls show Orrin Hatch is vulnerable," and makes no secret of its hope that he'll be defeated in the fall.

The Utah GOP is contemplating a formal complaint to the Federal Election Commission, questioning the legality of spending and soliciting union funds on a partisan political attack. The Republicans claim there are six federal statutes that the letter may violate.

Mayne has challenged the Republicans to file charges, and says the letter has raised less than $20,000 so far. He says the money will be used for "voter education," promotion of the AFL-CIO's image and a non-partisan get-out-the-vote effort.

UNDER THE DOME — Julian Barber, an aide to Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., was aghast to find that windows in his new quarters in the Dirksen Office Building are locked shut as an energy conservation measure. Nonsense, cried Barber, it's just "to keep me from jumping out" when the bureaucrats in Washington get on his nerves.

INSIDE REPORT:

Koch advisers eyeing '84 presidential race

WASHINGTON — New York City mayor Ed Koch's closest political advisers are deadly serious in planning ahead for a presidential effort in 1984 if he is elected governor of New York this year.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Media consultant David Garth, mastermind of Koch's political fortunes since his first election as mayor in 1977, makes no bones about this ambition in private conversation. What's more, national Democratic strategists think Koch as governor would have a fighting chance in 1984. According to conversations among his associates, Koch would forego the early primaries — a tactic made possible by new rules providing for a large bloc of uncommitted delegates.

A footnote: While a heavy favorite for the governorship, Koch still faces a three-way race that always leaves room for doubt. Democratic lieutenant governor Mario Cuomo is nearly assured of the Liberal Party nomination and probably would run on a separate party line even if denied it.

BARRY BACKLASH

A fund-raising letter for Planned Parenthood written by Sen. Barry Goldwater has angered Reaganite Republicans for putting Goldwater's conservative reputation, however faded, behind an organization that opposes many of President Reagan's economic and social programs.

In his three-and-a-half-page letter, the 1964 Republican presidential nominee said he first became a Planned Parenthood supporter 15 years ago. He praised its work on the pro-abortion front and its battle against the drive by conservatives to restrict the authority of the Supreme Court.

Planned Parenthood led the attack against Reagan's block-grants program, and has attacked the administration's new policy of notifying parents of teenagers who get government-subsidized advice on how to enjoy sex without risking pregnancy. The letter by Goldwater, who noted that he has parted company with some of "my usual political allies" in recent months, will be used in Planned Parenthood's major fund-raising drive among conservatives.

THE DEMOCRATIC NO-MAN

The Democratic "no" in highly-secret bipartisan negotiations on the budget has been sounded not by the tax and budget specialists but by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's agent in the talks: veteran Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

Bolling, a liberal stalwart in the House for 34 years who is retiring, has insisted that any budget package must cut into the third year of President Reagan's tax cut. Budget Committee chairman James Jones and Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski have been considerably more flexible (though this may merely reflect the nice cop-tough cop routine).

Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on Ways and Means, has retorted in the talks that cutting off the third year only hurts blue-collar workers. But Bolling has refused to budge.

WHY INMAN IS OUT

The resignation of Adm. Bobby Inman as No. 2 man in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) resulted in large part from the success of his boss, CIA Director William J. Casey, in keeping him away from President Reagan and from internal operations of the National Security Council staff.

Inman, who said he was quitting because at age 51 it was time to move on to a new career, had been the most persistent critic of early, tougher drafts of the administration's new CIA charter. His anti-charter moves were made discreetly in closed-door testimony on Capitol Hill. Inman, siding with congressional liberals, worried that the CIA was getting too much power under the new charter, a position that infuriated the White House.

But the larger reason for his resignation was his feeling of being shut out of intimate policy talks at the White House, where Casey seldom allowed him to roam. Inman backers told us Casey feared that the admiral's expertise as a long-time intelligence official would make Casey look bad. Other CIA officials fingered Inman as the "deep throat" of New York Times intelligence exposes.

THREE-WAY CONNECTICUT

The overwhelming belief among Connecticut politicians of all stripes is that Sen. Lowell Weicker will drop out as a Republican candidate well before the Sept. 7 primary and run as an independent.

That explains Weicker's increasingly tougher rhetoric against President Reagan. Although he remains a slight favorite to beat Prescott Bush Jr. (the vice president's older brother) in the July 23-24 convention, Bush is now expected to win the Sept. 7 primary.

The president's own political operatives, who have no love for Weicker, believe the liberal senator would finish a poor third behind Bush and Democratic representative Toby Moffett in a three-way race. Politicians on the scene do not agree. They say that Weicker, first elected to the Senate as a Republican in a three-way race in 1970, could repeat this feat as an independent.

CHARLEY REESE

Business compromising U.S. policy

If you want to make self-government a reality rather than an illusion, then find a sponsor and push through a piece of legislation that would bar big business from setting U.S. foreign policy.

Charley Reese

Any corporation or its subsidiary which receives economic benefits, directly or indirectly, from any nation receiving U.S. foreign aid, U.S. loans, or grants and loans from international organizations subsidized by the U.S., should be barred from lobbying either the Congress or the Executive Branch on matters involving U.S. foreign policy. Also excluded from lobbying should be those corporations involved in the sale of arms to foreign governments. Because they are clever folks, the law must also bar any organization to which these organizations contribute funds and any foundation the principle assets of which are stocks in these corporations.

Now, why should we seek such legislation? Because big corporations do in fact strongly influence, if not dictate, U.S. foreign policy and usually based simply on their own economic interests, not on moral principles or on the interests of the American people. Lane Kirkland, the leader of the AFL-CIO and a dedicated anti-communist, calls these businesses "...the soft underbelly of freedom."

Simply defined, foreign policy consists of the relationships between the United States and other sovereign nations. The most obvious purpose of a foreign policy should be to further the interests of the United States by maintaining the peace, by strengthening those nations which share our principles, and by weakening or at least not helping those nations which declare their hostility to us and our values.

Big business, however, often thwarts those goals. President Reagan promised tough reprisals after the destruction of the democratic movement in Poland, but they have not materialized. On the contrary, the U.S. has acted to prevent Poland from going into default on its loans by paying the interest to private banks with tax dollars. Here, the bankers thwarted U.S. foreign policy and bent it to suit their own selfish financial interests. The price we as a nation pay is to prove to the rest of the world that our word remains unreliable and that we are unwilling to seriously oppose tyranny.

The president wanted to repeal a congressional amendment which forbids the U.S. from aiding anti-communist guerrillas in Angola, and Gulf Oil Corporation lobbied against him. His imperial majesty, David Rockefeller, just announced that he sees nothing wrong with communism in Africa, as indeed why should he when he sees nothing wrong with communism anywhere.

It was the bankers who lobbied through the Panama Canal Treaty which we will yet regret; it is the multinational oil companies which dictate our disastrous Middle East non-policy whereby two presidents have threatened to involve us in a nuclear war to defend the indefensible Persian Gulf even though the United States buys less than 10 percent of its oil from that area.

The business of business is business. The business of the United States government is to protect the lives and rights of 230 million Americans. But the economy and military machine of the principal threat to those lives and rights is being propped up and strengthened by technology, goods, and credit from American businesses.

As hawkish and pro-American and anti-communist as I am, I will not send my sons to fight Russians well-fed on American grain, well-armed with American technology. This wealthy corporate aristocracy which cynically manipulates public opinion and twists the U.S. government to suit its own selfish, narrow goals can send its sons to protect its interests.

Laissez-faire should work in two directions. Government should not interfere in private enterprise, but private enterprise should not interfere in government. If we American people don't rebel, then we are going to lose our freedom and quite possibly our lives because of the machinations of a relatively small group of extremely rich and extremely greedy people who care not one whit for life or liberty but only for the pursuit of a dollar.

PBPA to lobby against proposed tax changes in Washington

By LESLIE HAINES
Energy-Business Writer

Two members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association are in Washington, D.C., this week to lobby Congress against proposed tax changes that are supposed to help balance the federal budget, but would do so at the expense of the American petroleum industry.

Robert Schumacher, Midland, and Rex Fuller, Lubbock, are working in cooperation with representatives of 30 independent petroleum groups, headed by the Independent Petroleum Association of America, based in Washington.

These men and women are "primarily calling on the opposition, that is, people who are offering bills that will be harmful to the industry and to the nation, in our view," according to Ed Thompson, president of the PBPA.

An "attack" is being made on several industry accounting procedures that help independents' cash flow, Thompson said. Specifically, Congressional leaders from both parties have proposed tax changes that would tamper with the percentage depletion allowance and expensed intangible drilling costs.

The oil industry lobbyists intend to meet with Congressmen who, by their previous voting record, indicate they will probably support some of these tax changes. They will also confer with members of the Texas and New Mexico House and Senate delegations, Thompson said.

An IPAA news release dated April 19 warned, "New federal tax proposals designed to reduce federal budget deficits may include provisions that would 'crater' U.S. oil and gas exploration...

"America's independent producers will not stand quietly on the sidelines while Congress tries to conjure up coalition tax gimmicks that would again reduce the domestic petroleum industry to an economic basket case."

The Administration is proposing a corporate minimum tax (CMT) in which all existing preference items would be included, plus the expensed intangible drilling costs without an oil and gas income offset, and percentage depletion in excess of cost depletion.

Senate finance chairman Robert Dole has proposed broadening this tax to include individuals as well as corporations. Elimination of the oil and gas income offset and extension of the minimum tax on IDC to corporations is possible even if the CMT itself is rejected, according to the IPAA.

In addition, there is a move afoot to do away with the windfall profits tax improvements enacted in 1981, create a tax on imported crude oil of $3 to $5 per barrel, and impose a BTU tax on all energy, either at the wellhead or in the form of a consumption tax, the IPAA said.

Groundwork for these bills is being laid in Congressional energy committees now, Thompson said. The oil and gas lobbyists want to make themselves heard this week in an effort to forestall more damage to an industry already weakened by the recession, high interest rates and the lower price of oil.

IPAA members will be in Washibgton through at least Wednesday enlisting support from members of Congress and the Administration.

"We are in full accord with the current efforts to balance the federal budget," said IPAA chairman Kye Trout, Jr., of Bismarck, North Dakota. "But I cannot see why the domestic petroleum industry must once again be forced to walk the plank on taxes as some are suggesting. A greater tax load now could disrupt our industry for decades."

U.S. buys first Iranian oil since crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has bought — indirectly — its first Iranian oil since the hostage crisis, says a spokesman for the U.S. Defense Fuel Supply Center.

Thomas Gelli said the price was right - $29.51 a barrel compared to $34 being asked by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The 1.8 million barrel, $51.1 million purchase is to go into the U.S. strategic stockpile.

Gelli said the purchase was made through Gatoil International Inc. of Geneva, Switzerland, with the contract specifying that the oil came from Iran. He said he knew nothing further about the company, except that it had sold the center two other spot shipments since December — both from the Suez area.

"I think you can take it that it's the first oil from Iran we've bought since the crisis," he said.

Iran was a major source of oil shipments to the United States before the downfall of the shah.

Chinese microsurgeon explains techniques

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Chinese medicine to some extent is behind the Western Civilization because of the communication gap during the Cultural Revolution in China during the 1960s and 1970s.

Despite the lack of modern equipment and supplies during this period, Dr. Yu Guo-Zhong developed a highly skilled microsurgical technique, making some of his needed equipment himself.

Internationally, physicians claim Dr. Yu's techinque is unequaled.

Part of a four-month tour in the U.S. brought the renowned researcher and lecturer to the Midland-Odessa area where Dr. Yu is sharing his expertise with area physicians.

Microsurgery is used by plastic, ear, nose and throat and eye surgeons. The operation field is often confined to structures 1/100th of an inch in diameter.

It can be used in reconstructing limbs or transplanting small organs, which involves connecting tiny blood vessels.

Dr. Sylvan Bartlett, an Odessa plastic surgeon, helped bring Dr. Yu to the Permian Basin.

"I believe tha we are especially fortunate to have Dr. Yu available to the Permian Basin medical community," Bartlett said. "His expertise in the field and his research in reconstructive and microsurgery is both extensive and highly regarded by his colleagues throughout the world."

Dr. Yu's speciality involves joining extremely tiny lymph vessels, approximately .03 of a millimeter in diameter, to similarly sized veins. This technique, created by Dr. Yu, is used for elephantiasis, a condition whereby the leg becomes extremely swollen from drainage of lymph fluid.

But, Dr. Yu said, he has performed microsurgery in different areas.

Bartlett explained that, while American physicians will treat a patient with medication, the Chinese will "go to the heart of the matter" and perform surgery.

For example, Dr. Yu sucessfully transplanted an ovary from one woman to another as part of an operation for a benign uterine tumor.

Bartlett said in the U.S. this condition would have been treated with hormones.

Dr. Yu said microsurgery, which requires the steadiest of hands, can take as long as 10 hours. In Canton, China, where he is from, Dr. Yu noted that usually there are two medical teams performing the surgery, one team for the donor and one for the recipient, which cuts down on operating time.

"The surgeon is very happy — sometimes three teams," Dr. Yu said.

He explained a very normal slight movement is increased 20 times under the microscope, so the hands must be very disciplined. The suture he works with is finer than a human hair and can hardly be seen with the naked eye.

Bartlett noted the human brain and hands have more capacity than realized to perform such surgery under a microscope.

The instruments are filed down to a very fine, polished point. Dr. Yu said one slip or slight movement could damage the delicate vessels.

In China, physicians practice the technique on a silicone tube a number of times, then on an isolated human vessel. Dr. Yu said next they perfect the technique using a rabbit and finally a human.

"After training we will know if the technique is good or bad. It takes much discipline and many years to do microsurgery," he said.

Dr. Yu will be in the Permian Basin through Saturday. He will be the keynote speaker during an informal symposium at Medical Center Hospital's main auditorium Wednesday.

On Friday, he will speak to the medical community at 3 p.m. in the community room at Odessa College.

When he leaves Texas, Dr. Yu will lecture at the International Society of Reconstructive Microsurgery in Oklahoma City, Okla.

The noted surgeon is a graduate of the Zhong Shan Medical College in Canton, China, and received his post-graduate training in plastic surgery at the First Teaching Hospital of Peking Medical College and Peking Plastic Surgery Hospital.

Conservatives don't want private schools hassled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative activists say they support tuition tax credits, but they want President Reagan's bill to include provisions to prevent the Internal Revenue Service from harassing private schools.

"If the administration presents the right kind of bill, we will rally behind it," Paul Weyrich, president of a New Right group called the Coalitions for America, said in a statement. "If not, tuition tax credits could be defeated as soundly as they were the last time they were proposed."

Weyrich and other leaders of conservative groups were holding a news conference today to endorse the idea of giving tax breaks to parents of private school children and to voice their concern about what form Reagan's bill will take.

The president told the National Catholic Educational Association in Chicago on April 15 that he will send Congress a bill later this spring that would give parents whose children are enrolled in private schools tax breaks of up to $500 per child by 1985.

Reagan said his bill will include a provision to bar the tax credit to parents whose children attend a school that discriminates.

Ronald S. Godwin, vice president of the Moral Majority, said he supports Reagan's plan "to include some type of anti-discriminatory enforcement powers which will help prevent abuse.

"But at the same time, it must be made certain that there is some type of provision which will prevent harassment of schools by the IRS or any other governmental agency when they are in fact not guilty of being discriminatory," Godwin said.

Mother Goose comes to life

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-foot-high castle, surrounded by more than a hundred characters from childhood nursery rhymes, offers children a look at storybook favorites in Rock City, atop Lookout Mountain.

Man-made Mother Goose Village, added in 1964 as part of the natural-rock-formation tourist attraction, includes such three-dimensional figures as the Three Blind Mice, Little Bo Peep, Little Miss Muffet and the cow that jumped over the moon.

AT WIT'S END

Visiting America

By ERMA BOMBECK

The tourists are coming! The tourists are coming!

This year, for the first time, the number of foreign visitors to the United States exceeds the number of Americans traveling abroad.

For those of you who have traveled extensively, I beg you to have compassion for these pilgrims who climb off the plane having consumed 18 hard rolls and a plastic chicken.

Those brave adventurers who balance a 35-pound camera around their neck and a tote bag filled with jelly beans which their travel agent told them the natives would accept in exchange for the privilege of taking their picture.

Those gypsy nomads who cringe every time they have to flash their passport. (If they look like their picture, they're too sick to travel.)

Those truth seekers who have studied the history, economics, politics, and power structure of America through satellite television and know two words: Matt Dillon.

Already, I could cry for them.

Some bus tour will tell them the No. 1 not-to-be-missed historic site is in White Sands, N.M., where the space shuttle, Columbia, recently landed. It has a few rattlesnakes, land mines and porta-potties, but you'll never forgive yourself if you go home without seeing it.

Another tour guide will charge them $40 a head to ride a mechanical bull in Texas and experience a "typical American evening out." They will be served barbecued ribs at a long table by a waiter who speaks only Spanish.

The itinerary will undoubtedly include a tour of a plastic factory where a showroom will have a prominent sign, "WE SHIP ANYWHERE," a trip through a bowery where they can see an American derelict, and a visit to the cave where Jesse James and his gang were reported to have hidden out. (Please use flash and set your cameras at 160th of a second.)

They will load up on "American" food: tacos, pizza, egg rolls and Polish sausage, and buy a cowboy hat they don't have the nerve to wear home.

The high point will be Disneyland, where they will pay $8 for a 52-year-old mouse on a T-shirt and meet other tourists in line waiting for rides.

They will go home convinced they have "seen America."

What a shame. All you tourists, and you all know who you are, can take my picture by five genuine American garbage cans for a bag of jelly beans. How about it?

DEAR ABBY

Looking for love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the guy who says he's 24, decent and can't find a nice girl. Well, I'm 35, decent, and I've been looking for a nice girl longer than he has. I could tell you stories about past dates you wouldn't believe.

I've been stood up on dates more times than I can count. I took a girl out to a nice restaurant, wined her and dined her, then she excused herself to go "powder her nose" and never came back. I met a gal at a party once and she gave me a phony address and a phony telephone number.

I'm 6 foot 6, average-looking, Italian and Catholic.

I tried a dating service and was sent a hooker. I've gone to church socials, tall clubs and discos. No luck. I swore off singles bars forever because all the "single" women I've met there were either separated, engaged or out cheating on their husbands.

I'm polite and love to dance. I'm not a drinker, I don't take drugs and I'm not gay. I have a good job and I'm ambitious. All I want is a woman who's reasonably attractive, intelligent and sincere. So where are all the decent women hiding? — SQUARE AND FRUSTRATED

DEAR SQUARE: You sound too good to be true. If you love to dance, join a SQUARE-dancing club. You'll meet attractive, wholesome, lively men and women, and singles are welcome.

DEAR ABBY: I am physically unable to father a child, and my wife and I are considering artificial insemination. Our question: Are there pictures of the donors on file at the sperm bank? We would prefer that the biological father of our child have the same physical features that I possess. Or is that too much to ask for? — TALL, DARK AND BROWN-EYED

DEAR TALL: Inquiries from the laboratories I researched disclosed that although pictures of the donors are not available, facts concerning their physical characteristics are. This includes race, blood type, hair color, eye color, physique, complexion, etc. Medical and family background are also included, as well as information disclosing the donor's I.Q., education, and musical, artistic and athletic abilities.

DEAR ABBY: I am retired, have a good income and am in good health. I play golf every day, have a roof over my head and have a supermarket to shop for food without having to farm and raise it myself.

I have an electric stove to cook my food, and a washer and dryer to do my laundry instead of a washboard and tub. I have nice clothes and shoes on my feet and don't have to go barefoot as I did when I was a child. I have a nice bathroom and don't have to go outside in the cold as I did when I was a child. I bathe in a bathtub with plenty of hot water whenever I feel like it instead of in a washtub behind a pot-bellied stove on Saturday night as I did when I was a child.

I am not locked up in a prison or a mental hospital as some people are. I am free to go where I want. I have a television set and stereo that kings could not enjoy years ago.

I have a car for transportation instead of a horse and buggy. I was married for 22 years to a woman who was as beautiful as a movie star. I went through World War II without a scratch. Talk about heaven. America is heaven! — THINKING OUT LOUD

DEAR THINKING: Thanks for giving us all something to think about.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Cheer up a shut-in today

DEAR HELOISE:

Just a few ideas for gifts for helping shut-ins, or those unable to provide their own transportation.

For shut-ins, buy them a variety of greeting cards (not necessarily the boxed kind, but novelty cards from the card shop). Include a book of stamps if you can.

How about making arrangements with the local utility company to pay a month's electric or telephone bill?

If the person is able, take them out shopping for a few hours. Just strolling through a mall and window-shopping can be a real treat.

Just don't promise them something you can't fulfill.

One sweet lady asked me to take her to a local hamburger chain for lunch. Her family always took her to a fancy restaurant and she didn't want to hurt their feelings, but to go to this particular hamburger place was something she really wanted to do.

You never know what little pleasure may cheer someone unable to do for themselves. Make a special effort today to visit our heritage. — G.A. Arthur

We all need affection, as well as to be remembered. Thanks for sharing a way to make a day brighter for someone who is in the same position we'll all be in someday, if we live that long.

My grandmother always said, "Flowers are for the living — the dead will not know." — Heloise

SHOE SACKS

Dear Heloise: Got a grease mechanic in the family?

Next time he needs to traipse through the house, instead of making him remove those grimy shoes, hand him a couple of paper grocery sacks, or bread wrappers, to slip over his shoes.

He can be in and back out again without a trace. — Terry

MINI ARRANGEMENT

Dear Heloise: Save those margarine tubs with the pretty flower designs on them to make small flower arrangements to take to hospital patients and nursing home residents.

Peppermint sticks and lollipops may be placed in among the flowers for a child. — Madeline Francis

NEIGHBORING HAND

Dear Heloise: I was convalescing from surgery at home for several weeks. Each morning, one of my neighbors left two or three different newspapers or magazines in my mail slot.

It was such a welcome gesture of kindness, as it helped me pass the time. — V. Prince

MAILING COINS

Dear Heloise: When sending coins by mail, here's a good way to keep them in place instead of sliding around in the envelope:

Save those large stamps you received in advertisements for magazine subscriptions, nature clubs, etc. Place the coin in the proper spot on the order form and stick the large stamp over the coin. It'll stay put until it reaches its destination.

Just a tip though, when placing that coin, make sure it rests in the bottom of the envelope, not in the top where it might get caught in the post office stamp cancelling machine or the letter opening machine at the mail order house. — Adelle

THIS COLUMN is written for you... the homemaker. If you have a hint or a problem write to Heloise in care of this newspaper. Because of the tremendous volume of mail, Heloise is unable to answer individual letters. She will, however, answer your questions in her column whenever possible.

Papier-mache easy to make

By ELLEN APPEL
Copley News Service

A papier-mache head is wonderfully decorative, easy to make and the perfect way to show off necklaces or hats.

According to Grace Berne Rose, author of "The Illustrated Encyclopedia of Crafts ..." many old-time movies were shot indoors with rocks, boulders and whole mountains constructed of papier-mache. In her book, published by Doubleday, Rose presents papier-mache instructions along with countless ideas for crafts using wood, metal, leather, glass, textiles and nearly every other material you can name.

MATERIALS: Old newspapers, white glue, armature materials, large shallow bowl or dishpan, cardboard box, sandpaper or file, paint and burshes, varnish (optional).

ARMATURE: 1. Make a rough armature from plastic containers, chicken wire, plastic foam, or other materials. 2. If desired, make an armature from crumpled newspapers as follows: Dip newspapers into glue mixture and allow to harden overnight. 3. Set armature into cardboard box.

PAPERS: 1. Tear single sheets of newspaper in half. 2. Tear into strips about one-inch wide. 3. Tear, rather than cut, all strips. Straight, cut edges leave ridges in papier-mache. Torn, jagged edges blend into one another.

GLUE: 1. Pour glue into a shallow bowl or dishpan. 2. Dilute glue to half-strength. A thin, flowing consistency, like light cream, is ideal. If glue mixture is too thick, the resulting piece will be heavy, but not strong. 3. Stir mixture often as you work.

COVERING THE ARMATURE: 1. Dip strips, one at a time, into the glue mixture. 2. Apply strips to armature, one at a time, overlapping the edges. Cover armature completely with a single layer of paper. (Hint: Criss-cross strips haphazardly to avoid lines of demarkation.) 3. Add five layers of paper over the armature.

SURFACE TEXTURE: 1. Soak papers in glue mixture until they become pulpy and start to disintegrate. 2. Take small blobs of paper, squeeze out moisture, and apply to surface like clay. 3. Add pulp as needed to cover surface with texture. 4. Add pulp to form facial features. 5. Model details with stick or pencil.

FINISHING: 1. Allow piece to dry for several days. 2. Carefully smooth surface with sandpaper or file. 3. Paint or varnish as desired.

Glaucoma can be prevented

By MAR[illegible] IAN J. MEYERS
Hearst Feature Service

Dr. Allan E. Kolker has had patients who could easily read an eye chart — once its location on the wall was pointed out. He has treated men and women whose eyesight had slowly dimmed without their realizing it, so that by the time they came to him their vision was almost gone.

Kolker, an opthalmologist and director of the Glaucoma Center at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, has seen glaucoma rob a lot of people of their sight — some completely. And, he said, the most tragic part of the condition is that it was probably preventable in 90 percent of the cases.

"Glaucoma represents the single leading cause of irreversible blindness in the United States and accounts for over 60,000 blind people," explained Kolker, who is promoting awareness of the disease for the American Academy of Opthalmology.

In most cases, blindness occurs gradually, often continuing 10 years before it takes its final toll, Kolker said. Because the disease is usually painless and attacks peripheral vision first, it is not unusual for people with 20-20 (perfect) vision to have an advanced case of the disease without noticing that their side vision is disappearing.

Heredity is one of the most important factors in determining risk, with those whose relatives have glaucoma five to 10 times more likely to develop the disease. People who are diabetic, over 35 years old or have cardiovascular illness also are more susceptaible. Blacks are four times more likely than whites to have glaucoma and should be examined yearly after they reach 35 or 40, Kolker added.

More information about glaucoma can be obtained by writing: Glaucoma, P.O. Box 346, West Point, Pa., 19486.

Hinckley trial jury selection starts

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. is getting his first look at the prospective jurors who will be asked to decide whether he was insane when he shot President Reagan nearly 13 months ago and thus not legally responsible for his actions.

Ninety prospective jurors received notices to report to U.S. District Court today where jury selection will begin in an ornate, 200-seat ceremonial courtroom decorated by judges' portraits on the walls.

Security measures for the start of the trial, as tight as for a presidential appearance, included two metal detectors and a portable X-ray machine in the corridor outside the courtroom. Bomb-sniffing police dogs and gun-toting law enforcement officers will be stationed inside and outside the grey, stone building.

Hinckley, the 26-year-old son of a wealthy Colorado oil executive, is being tried for the March 30, 1981 shootings of Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and Washington policeman Thomas Delahanty.

A 13-count indictment charges him with attempting to kill the president; assault on a federal officer; use of a firearm during commission of a federal offense; assault with intent to kill while armed; assault with a dangerous weapon; assault on a police officer and carrying a pistol without a license.

Hinckley has admitted committing the crimes, which could bring him life imprisonment, but contends he is innocent by reason of insanity.

The tight security has not escaped the attention of Hinckley, a one-time drifter.

"The measures they go to in order to protect me are simply staggering," Hinckley wrote in response to a news magazine's written questions. "I feel like the president myself with my own retinue of bodyguards. We both wear bullet-proof vests now."

Twenty-four hours before the scheduled start of the trial, authorities installed the security equipment and began enforcing some of the stringent measures that will be in effect for the case, expected to last at least a month.

Everyone entering the building, including courthouse employees, was required to walk through a metal detector at one of two entrances and have his or her belongngs searched. Normally, employees, news reporters and others with special identification can avoid the screening process.

Armed law enforcement officers from different agencies were stationed throughout the courthouse.

Hinckley was brought to the building Sunday to spend his final pre-trial hours in the cell where he will spend most of his nights, according to Justice Department spokesman John Russell.

The 17-by-15-foot cell is the same facility he has used in his previous courthouse appearances.

A cot on wheels has been installed and recessed ceiling lights have replaced fluorescent fixtures that could be broken into jagged pieces.

Wire mesh has been attached to the bars on the outside of the cell, partly to prevent Hinckley from jamming the lock — as he did in his cell at Fort Meade, Md. after trying to hang himself.

The prison room has a toilet, a sink with buttons instead of spigot handles, a 17-foot bench and a leather chair with foam showing through — all under a ceiling with graffiti.

"Slick and Deedee" and "Slick and Francine," the writing says.

Sirhan denies threat to kill Ted Kennedy

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Robert F. Kennedy's convicted assassin, fighting to keep his 1984 parole date, exclaimed "God forbid!" at an assertion that he had spoken of murdering Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Sirhan B. Sirhan "should not be paroled in 1984 nor at any foreseeable time in the future," Deputy District Attorney Larry Trapp said Monday as a hearing opened on a petition to rescind the Sept. 1, 1984, parole date.

"Newly discovered facts combine to reflect a man who feels much the same today as he did in 1968," Trapp said, "a man who continues to see violence as a solution for world problems."

The hearing, held behind the walls of Soledad prison, was to continue today and could last two weeks.

SIRHAN, 38, WAS sentenced to death and spent time on Death Row at San Quentin Prison, but the death penalty was ruled unconstitutional in 1972 and his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. He became eligible for parole in 1975 and was granted a release date of 1986. With credit for good behavior, the date was moved up to 1984.

Former parole board member James H. Hoover has said he set the date for release in the belief he "had no choice" under guidelines then in force for setting determinate sentences.

An allegation that Sirhan threatened to kill Edward Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, was first told to authorities by Lawrence Eugene Wilson, a convict who recently was found to have forged a letter to the parole board urging his own release.

Trapp acknowledged to the three-member panel of the Community Release Board hearing Sirhan's case that some evidence he plans to present has "lost some of its persuasiveness" due to revelations challenging the credibility of witesses.

Trapp said public examination of statements by prison imates about Sirhan, an immigrant from Palestine, had damaged their usefulness.

Sirhan shot Robert Kennedy in a pantry of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, after he won the California Democratic presidential primary. Sirhan fired several shots, killing the New York senator and wounding five other people.

Trapp told the board Monday that Sirhan, as a "political assassin," should be treated differently than other murderers.

But Sirhan's attorney, Luke McKissack, said the law does not provide special punishment for political assassins and urged the board to treat Sirhan as it would any other life term prisoner.

"SIRHAN FEELS HE cannot get a fair hearing in this election year, 1982," McKissack said. "Sirhan is a despised person and he killed a very popular person."

Trapp contended the 1975 board that set Sirhan's parole date had incomplete information.

Trapp said Sirhan told an interviewer last year that he killed Kennedy "for my country...I am really obsessed with the restoration of Palestinian rights...Anwar Sadat (the since-assassinated Egyptian president) is a traitor to the Arabs, he should be dealt with."

McKissack said many of Trapp's observations were "incorrect or taken out of context."

Cop suing county cops

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Signal Hill police officer investigated in the jail cell death of a college football player is suing Los Angeles police and the county district attorney's office for allegedly violating his rights.

Officer Jerry Lee Brown, the arresting officer in the controversial case of dead athlete Ron Settles, is seeking $16 million through the suit filed in U.S. District Court Monday.

Named as defendants are District Attorney John Van de Kamp, who is accused of "using Brown" in his campaign for state attorney general; Police Chief Daryl Gates; Gate's chief spokesman; Cmdr. William Booth, and Deputy District Attorney Gilbert Garcetti, who led the investigation into Settles' death in a Signal Hill jail cell last June 2.

Settles, 21, was stopped for speeding and arrested after police said they found traces of cocaine in his car. After he died by hanging, police admitted they had beaten him because he fought but insisted he committed suicide.

A coroner's inquest ruled 5-4 that Settles died "at the hands of another," but after Garcetti's seven-month investigation, Van de Kamp decided there wasn't enough evidence to prosecute any police from the suburb 15 miles south of Los Angeles.

Dear Charlie:

A select field of 56 pairs competed in the NatWest Trophy, held in Manchester, England. In effect, there were three separate events. In the Invitation event, Paul Chemla and I finished second to Los Agelenos Billy Eisenberg and Eddie Kantar.

This hand was highly amusing, although I didn't think so at the time. Paul and I had a misunderstanding in the auction. His pass of five clubs was supposed to show one ace. When East doubled seven spades, I presumed that he wanted a heart lead because he was void in the suit. So I corrected to seven no trump. After a club lead, that did not prove to be a felicitous contract. As a matter of fact, I ended up down eight!

Eddie Kantar got to the reasonable contract of six spades. West led his singleton heart and the defenders took the first three tricks.

The Swedish international pair of P.O. Sundelin and Jorgen Lindqvist also came a cropper, except in this case they were sitting East-West. G.C.H. Fox of London reached six spades against them and was doubled. What seemed like an excellent result in store for them became a tragedy when West led the ten of clubs. Declarer won the ace, cashed the ace of spades to reveal the break, cashed the ace of diamonds and then crossed to the table with a club ruff. On dummy's three high diamonds he pitched his three heart losers, so the defenders made only their trump trick.

As you can see, there was a wide range of scores here. I went minus 2300 on the board, Fox went plus 1660. Ah well, these days happen!

Sincerely,
Omar

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Scleroderma rare skin disease

Dear Dr. Solomon: I heard someone on a radio talk show speak about scleroderma. Is this a rare disease? I don't think I ever heard it mentioned before. Can you describe what it is? — Mrs. D.Y., Madison, WI

Dear Mrs. Y.: Scleroderma is a relatively rare disease with an estimated 300,000 cases in the United States. However, this figure may be low since many cases are probably not diagnosed correctly.

Scleroderma literally means hard skin, and the disease can be either localized or systemic. If it is localized, the patient experiences cosmetic and mobility difficulties. If it is systemic, the disease may affect the esophagus, heart, lungs, intestines, and kidneys; the systemic disease may therefore be life-threatening.

What is not known about scleroderma is its cause and a cure, but research in both areas is under way. Until the cause and cure are found, the aim of treatment is to make the patient as comfortable as possible.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I tend towards having high blood prdessure. Can you give me some hints in controlling it? — D.S., Easton, Pa.

Dear D.S.: Certain changes in lifestyle should make it easier to control your blood pressure as well as keep yourself in top physical condition:

1. Keep your weight under control.
2. Reduce your salt intake.
3. Stop smoking.
4. East less animal fat and cholesterol.
5. Exercise regularly.
6. Reduce exposure to stress.

Combined with these, it is very important to have regular check-ups to keep an eye on your blood pressure as well as your overall health.

Dear Dr. Solomon: When I went to my doctor for my yearly physical, the nurse took a blood test. She stuck my finger so that it bled, and then she put two tubes next to the blood. The blood filled the tubes. Please tell me what is wrong with me that caused my doctor to perform such a test? — Hal, L.A.

Dear Hal: Probably nothing at all is wrong with you, but your doctor is the one who would go over all test results with you. The test you have described is called the hematocrit. It is a blood test routinely given at physical exams to determine the presence of anemia. In men, a hematocrit below 40-42 percent is abnormally low, while for women, the lower limit of a normal range is 37 percent.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My five-year-old granddaughter suffers from asthma. Sometimes, the attacks are quite bad. For the past several months, she has been having frequent attacks at night. Is there something that we can give to her so that she can get a good night's sleep? — C.S., L.A.

Dear C.S.: Don't give your granddaughter any medication unless it is prescribed by her doctor. He knows what she can handle, the amount, and the strength of dosage. You might discuss with him the value of an antihistamine. Dr. H.G.J. Herxheimer in London reports that if taken two hours before bedtime, the antispasmatic and sedative actions of the antihistamine work together and allow the asthmatic patient to have a restful sleep.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Crews prepare for fair's opening

By TOM EBLEN

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The 1982 World's Fair, its grand opening less than a week away, is coming together in a fast-paced symphony of saws, hammers, drills and cranes.

Construction crews are working around the clock to ready the 72-acre site for President Reagan and the nearly 100,000 VIPs, journalists and tourists expected to attend opening ceremonies Saturday.

An Army parachute team, hot-air balloonists, marching bands and fireworks are to entertain crowds waiting to see exhibits from 23 nations, four states and more than 50 corporations and organizations.

Exposition officials have told local residents to stay home and watch the festivities on television. "That day is going to be utter chaos," one World's Fair official said privately.

Officials say Panama's exhibit is the only one which will not be ready for opening day. Because of a "communications problem," which fair spokesmen did not explain, the Central American nation has yet to hire a contractor to finish its 6,000-square-foot exhibit.

But Charles Smith, the energy-theme exposition's 37-year-old master architect, is confident that everything else will be finished on time.

"There are a lot of details to be completed ... light bulbs to be screwed in, paint to go down, a little bit of asphalt to lay," Smith says. "But we will be ready for May 1."

Smith and his assistants are making daily inspection tours, scrutinizing paint jobs, flipping light switches, checking amusement rides and making test calls on the solar-powered public telephones.

Delegations of foreign workers are putting the final touches on their nation's exhibits, which for weeks have been arriving in crates on a seemingly endless stream of delivery trucks.

While carpenters finish the inside of China's 20,000-square-foot exhibit, 29 Chinese workers in blue uniforms and white gloves are preparing displays of porcelain, art objects and artifacts that were trucked in after a two-week voyage across the Pacific.

The most valuable pieces of China's exhibit — including stones from the Great Wall and six figures from the Xian terra-cotta army — are to be flown to Knoxville this week.

Egyptian cultural officials have sent a $30-million exhibit of artifacts, many of which have never before left Egypt. The 60-piece collection includes a 2,600-year-old bronze mummy case and an ancient Coptic Bible.

At Peru's pavilion, workers are preparing an exhibit of gold-encrusted relics from the South American nation's gold museum. As part of a research project, American and Peruvian scientists plan to unravel a 3,000-year-old Incan mummy at the exhibit during the exposition.

"How much of that will be done in public, I don't know," says World's Fair President S.H. Roberts Jr. "Probably as much as the public can stand."

The $20.8-million United States Pavilion, a six-story, wedge-shaped structure, is being filled with talking computers, energy technology exhibits and newsreels from past world's fairs. A theater with a screen 65 feet tall and 90 feet wide will show a half-hour film about American energy resources and technology.

The 266-foot Sunsphere tower, the fair's theme structure, is finished and the restaurant inside its five-story golden glass sphere is open for business.

Several shuttle parts to undergo repair

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Several slightly damaged pieces of equipment on the space shuttle Columbia have been discovered by technicians and will have to be replaced before its next mission, a NASA status report says.

The report, released Monday, said Kennedy Space Center engineers recently discovered a cracked turbine in a fuel pump for one of three engines on the spacecraft. The engine will be disassembled and sent to California for repair at Rockwell International, said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A second fuel pump is already in California being tested and space center workers have replaced the seal in the fuel pump for one of the other engines.

The report said 10 attitude-control thrusters used in space will also be replaced after engineers discovered gypsum dust in the thrusters.

"There are a lot of details to be completed... light bulbs to be screwed in, paint to go down, a little bit of asphalt to lay. But we will be ready.

General has nothing up his sleeve

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — When the day comes for Fort Carson's 20,500 troops to roll up their sleeves, they'll be ready.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hudachek, the base commander, is leaving nothing to chance on that front. He has approved a "sleeves up" posture for camouflaged combat fatigues, beginning May 3.

He outlined how to do that in a recent edition of the base's weekly newspaper:

"Step one — Pull the cuff of the sleeve all the way up to the armpit so that the sleeve is folded on itself with the inside showing.

"Step two — Make two folds up toward the armpit.

"Step three — Fold the cuff down over the folds you just made. The buttons and cuff flap should be showing."

This official method will ensure that sleeves can be unrolled quickly and keep the camouglage pattern exposed at all times.

Students set record with musical chairs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — More than 4,500 college students proved that breaking a world record — not once but twice — can be child's play.

The 4,514 players Sunday in the World's Largest Musical Chairs Game broke the previous mark recorded in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The standing record also was set on the campus oval of Ohio State University. That record was with 4,378 participants April 27, 1980.

Scott Ritter, 18, a business major, was the last person to keep a seat Sunday. He won a 6-foot trophy with a chair on top and a pizza a week for a year.

Student players turned out with Frisbees and beach towels to warm up for the event under sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s. Soundspeakers played taped rock music.

As the rescheduled game time drew near, organizers counted heads and decided to waive the $1 entry fee for bystanders. The crowd began chanting and coaxing observers, including a few adults, into seats.

Proceeds from the event, sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Government Association, will benefit the Franklin County Branch of the Heart Association. Marks estimated this year's proceeds would be $3,000 to $5,000, after $6,000 in expenses.

Lee students to speak at national meet

Two students qualified for national competition when the Lee High School Speech, Debate and Drama Team won high honors at the West Texas National Forensic League's district qualifying meet at Abilene Christian University last weekend.

Kenneth B. Jonsson, son of JoAnn Jonsson of No. 15 Winchester Court, and Christina Ewing, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ray Ewing of 3329 W. Wadley No. 69, qualified for the national meet to be held in San Francisco, Calif., in June.

Jonsson was elected Most Outstanding Representative in the Student Congress House of Representatives and Miss Ewing was elected Most Outstanding Senator in the Student Congress Senate.

Also placing in the tournament were Miss Ewing, second place, and Tracy King, fourth place, in women's extemporaneous speaking; Jimmy Moseley, fourth place in men's extemporaneous speaking; and Valeri Hochman, third place in humorous interpretation. Katie Burns was elected "superior" representative in the Novice Student Congress.

Other students selected to attend the competition were Scarlett Moss, Dana Tompkins, Paige Pendleton, Kevin Duke, Chuck Camarillo, Matt Mabe, Faith Mowry, Lail Grant, Phil Daskevich, Josh Jones and Karen Miller.

Jonsson and Miss Ewing are available to speak on the issues and learning experiences of Student Congress. Contact speech coach C.D. Ewing at LHS, 694-2551, for speaking dates.

According to Maridell Fryar, coordinator of fine arts, travel to the national competition is not a budgeted item and any contribution to help these two students attend the tournament would be greatly appreciated. Persons wishing to make a donation may call Mrs. Fryar at the Midland Independent School District administration building, 682-8611.

Joan Kennedy considering several television offers

Kennedy

NEW YORK (AP) -- One year after her separation from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Joan Kennedy says she is considering several television offers, or may return to school for her doctorate.

"Who knows?" Mrs. Kennedy said with a laugh Monday as she spoke to reporters at a cocktail party for fashion designer and fellow Bostonian Alfred Fiandaca.

Mrs. Kennedy was surrounded by well-wishers who complimented her on her appearance and wanted to know if she was down to a size 6.

"Not quite," she replied, adding that she keeps in shape by jogging on Cape Cod, where she plans to spend the summer with her three children.

She wore a white and palomino crepe de chine suit created for her by Fiandaca as she attended the show of the designer's fall collection at the swank Sherry-Netherlands Hotel on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue.

"I'm a Boston girl. He's a Boston boy. I wish him well," she said.

She said she still doesn't feel single. Her 14-year-old son Patrick has been living with her, and when asked if she felt like a single parent, she shook her head and answered, "No."

Mrs. Kennedy, 45, received her master's degree last June from Lesley College.

Kassorla

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who claims a sex manual by Dr. Irene Kassorla was based on his own amorous relationship with the psychologist has lost his bid to immediately block sales or promotion of the book.

Superior Court Judge Dickran Tevrizian Jr. denied a request Monday by lawyers for Herbert Margolis for a preliminary injunction against the book, "Nice Girls Do...."

Margolis, a producer and former Penthouse magazine editor, has filed suit seeking general damages of at least $8 million and punitive damages of $102 million.

Miss Kassorla has filed a countersuit, charging slander, intentional infliction of emotional distress and interference with future profits. She says the book is culled from her years as a sex therapist, and not from her relationship with Margolis.

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Barbara Schantz, the woman police officer suspended without pay for posing nude in Playboy magazine, has filed a $1 million suit against the city of Springfield for suspending her.

Nude shots of the 25-year-old Ms. Schantz appeared in Playboy's May issue, setting off an internal police inquiry in the southwestern Ohio city that resulted in the suspension Friday.

Scientists developing tests for diseases

DALLAS (AP) — Scientists say they may have found a way to diagnose two dreaded illnesses — Huntington's disease and manic depression — before their symptoms appear.

Until now, doctors have waited for overt symptoms before beginning treatment. In the case of Huntington's disease, the researchers' discovery could allow parents to know they have it before bearing children.

Both diseases are inherited and both bring devastating–symptoms which affect both the patients and their families.

Huntington's disease is an inherited degenerative nerve disorder considered incurable. Victims may not know they carry the disease until they have children. And their children have a 50-50 chance of getting it.

Scientists also believe that manic depression is inherited, although it isn't known how it is transmitted. The violent swings of mood it brings — from unfounded euphoria to deep gloom — lead one of six sufferers to suicide.

A research team at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School thinks the illnesses may leave "genetic markers" — distinct and recognizable flaws — in skin cells and red and white blood cells.

The scientists study the surfaces of the living cells. Doctors then can use light and magnetism to observe and record cell membrane functions.

Researchers have found that the motion and activities of cell surfaces in victims of Huntington's disease or manic depression differ from those in healthy people.

So diagnosis could become as simple as a blood test.

The scientists say they hope their discoveries lead to early diagnoses of manic depression, so that the "episodes that can permanently affect the direction of a person's life could be avoided," said Southwestern psychiatrist Dr. Michael Schlesser.

As for Huntington's disease, the scientists say they hope their research will reveal ways to help victims.

In the past, researchers studied the brain after the victim died, but "all the clues causing the disease had been destroyed," said Dr. Jay Pettegrew, a pediatric neurologist at Southwestern.

Early signs of the illness include jerky, "dancing" movements called chorea, severe personality changes and progressive loss of intellect. The symptoms usually surface when the victim is in his mid-30s.

"When the disease progresses, some (patients) literally have to be tied in bed or else they fling themselves out of bed with these movements, breaking bones," said Pettegrew.

Most Huntington's victims die of pneumonia after years of suffering. Pettigrew said. Their families, in the meantime, suffer as well.

"The children are always living under a cloud, wondering if they will suffer the same fate," he said. "Imagine half your life with these fears, having the fears become reality, and knowing you have passed this dreadful disease on to your children. This is what it is like to live under the cloud of Huntington's disease."

In recent tests of the new technique, the Southwestern research team easily detected 20 manic depressives from a group of 40 people, and had similar successor spotting Huntington's disease patients. And the team found that about half of the 23 relatives of Huntington's victims also had the disorder.

If they do have it, symptoms should begin appearing in 10 to 20 years.

"We still aren't sure whether they will come down with the disease," Pettegrew said. "We will have to wait and follow these individuals to see if I was right or wrong."

Cubs beat Sox for 3rd in row

AMARILLO—Amarillo's Gold Sox can't wait to get out of town. After Monday's 4-2 loss to the Midland Cubs, the San Diego Padres' farmhands show just three wins in 13 home games.

As for Midland, that 0-for-5 season opening series in San Antonio is just a vague memory. With Monday's win, Midland made it three in a row here and seven of their last 10. Against Amarillo, Midland is a healthy 6-2.

Jon Perlman, with relief help from Kenneth Pryce, gained his second win of the season, scattering 10 hits over the first six innings. Pryce finished with three innings of one-hit ball for his second save.

Carmelo Martinez hit his fifth homer of the season for Midland while Brian Greer continued on his fence-busting binge with his ninth homer of the season.

Midland took a 1-0 lead in the first when Henry Cotto singled, stole second, moved to third on an infield out and scored on Joe Carter's grounder to third.

After Amarillo tied it in the third on Mike Martin's rbi single to center, Midland pushed over a couple of runs in the fifth when Mike Kelley walked and Martinez powered his second homer in two nights over the left field fence.

Greer's homer was a two-out solo job in the bottom of the fifth that reduced Midland's lead to 3-2.

The Cubs added insurance in the seventh on a walk to Martinez and a run-producing double by Mike Diaz.

A threat of rain hung over today's game, but Doug Welenc, 2-1, will pitch for Midland against Steve Stone, 1-0, in the fourth game of the series.

After the series here, Midland moves to El Paso for a five-game stand before returning to Midland next Tuesday against San Antonio.

Money 'rains' on Hoch in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It bothered Scott Hoch not at all that the weather-plagued, USF&G-New Orleans Open golf tournament limped to a close a day late and $100,000 short.

"I never knew I liked rain so much," Hoch said after he'd nursed home a two-stroke victory Monday in the event that lost two days to rain and floods, had various delays and interruptions and finally was cut from the scheduled 72 holes to 54. With the tournament trimmed from four rounds to three, the purse also was reduced, from the announced $400,000 to $300,000.

Scott Hoch expresses relief as his caddy Walter Montgomery celebrates after his final putt to win the New Orleans Open Monday afternoon. Hoch scored his first tournament win and collcted a check for $54,000.

"I'd like to think I could have won at 72 (holes)," Hoch said, "but I'm glad it ended when it did.

"I'm no masochist. I don't want to have to go out there and prove myself again over another 18 holes."

Tom Watson wasn't quite so sure.

Watson, who fired a 5-under-par 67 in a bid that fell a little short, said he wished "we had another round.

"It is disappointing in a way. But I didn't play very well over the first couple of rounds and the other guys played better. I thought I'd have to shoot a 65 to have a chance and I came up a couple of shots short of my mark.

"I'd prefer to play 72 holes. I always do. But it just happened that this was a 54-hole tournament and I came up short."

Hoch won it, the second victory of his three-year PGA Tour career, with a closing 70 and a 206 total, 10 shots under par on the twice-flooded Lakewood Country Club course.

The triumph, secured when Australian Bob Shearer 3-putted the 17th hole and dropped two back with one hole to go, was worth $54,000 to Hoch, more than he'd won in either of his two previous seasons as a touring pro. It pushed his winnings to $126,176 for the season.

Watson, who had won this event the two previous seasons, and Shearer, a winner a week ago in Tallahassee, tied for second at 208. Shearer had a closing 71 and once had the lead before he drove into mud, rough and trash and took a double bogey-6 on the seventh hole.

That misfortune let Hoch regain the top spot and he held it the rest of the way despite some erratic play over the back nine.

Iselin trains Derby hopefull like boxer

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jimmy Iselin talks like a trainer getting ready to send his fighter after the heavyweight championship. In a way, he is.

But Iselin's charge is not a boxer named Rocky. He's a colt named Royal Roberto, and Iselin is a horse trainer, although he once mapaged fighters — most notably Buster Mathis.

And the "heavyweight championship" for the colt and the man is Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

"He hasn't had a workout since Florida," said Iselin on a recent morning in the Churchill Downs stable area. "Muhammad Ali once told me one fight is worth 150 rounds of sparring.

"Horses get hurt in workouts," So do fighters, an example being Gerry Cooney, who suffered a shoulder injury while sparring, causing his World Boxing Council heavyweight title bid against Larry Holmes to be moved from May 15 to June 11.

But they don't postpone horse races because of injury. The stomach problem that is forcing Derby favorite Timely Writer to miss the race is just tough luck.

So Royal Roberto has "fought" his way into Derby trim, rather than train up to the race.

His last workout was March 26 when he breezed a half mile in 51 seconds at Gulfstream Park.

The stretch-running colt, who races in the Key West Stable colors of Mitchell Wolfson, finished fourth in the Florida Derby April 3. He then came to Kentucky and ran second by a half length to Linkage in the seven-furlong Forerunner Purse at Keeneland and third, 1¼ lengths and a neck behind Listcapade and Start Gallant in the one-mile Derby Trial Saturday at Churchill Downs.

Royal Roberto, who won the 1 1-8-mile Everglades at Hialeah Feb. 13, was eighth after the first half mile of both the Forerunner and the Derby Trial, then closed with a rush.

After the Trial, jockey Miguel Rivera said, " ... my horse responded real good, and he was coming at the end. He wants to go further, really."

Iselin was delighted.

"I didn't expect him to be in the chase in either race," said the trainer, who feels the two races served their preparatory purposes, even though they didn't suit the colt's stretch-running style, a style Iselin is not about to tamper with.

"I tried to make something out of Mathis that he wasn't," Iselin said of the huge fighter who was a top amateur but seemed to lack the dispostion to be a top pro. "He was a kind man.

"I'm trying not to do that with Roberto."

Iselin, son of the late Phil Iselin, former president of Monmouth Park and owner of the New York Jets football team, began training horses with a public stable in 1976.

"Sooner or later I knew I'd have to get into horses," he said.

Iselin, who managed several fighters, got into pro boxing after the 1964 Olympics and stayed with it until 1972.

After the 1964 Games, Iselin signed Mathis to a contract. Mathis had beaten Joe Frazier in the Olympic Trials, but then got hurt and Frazier went on to win an Olympic gold medal.

At the news conference to announce the signing of Mathis, Iselin got a call from Frazier. "Joe called and said, 'why don't you sign me?"

Lendl takes WCT title over McEnroe

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Ivan Lendl kept his spell over John McEnroe Monday night.

Defending champion McEnroe, the world's No. 1 ranked player, fell to his nemesis for the fourth straight time. Lendl, the No. 2 ranked player, earned $150,000 in the World Championshipof Tennis Finals 6-2, 3-6, 6-3 and6-3.

Lendl said "John and I will have many more matches and I hope the greatest one we play will be here. I have enjoyed being on the WCT Tour".

A subdued McEnroe said "Lendl played better than I did and deserved to win tonight."

It was only the sixth time they have met with McEnroe winning the first two.

Lendl, 22, who has won 78 of his last 80 matches, boosted his earnings to over $900,000 on the WCT Tour this year. He gunned 13 aces past McEnroe with his rifle serve.

The beginning of the end came for McEnroe in the third game of the fourth set, a jewel of give-and-take that went to deuce eight times before Lendl broke service with a backhand winner. McEnroe never recovered and went on to lose 6-3.

McEnroe, 23, failed in his bid to become the first player to win the WCT Finals three times but not before he tried every trick he knew.

McEnroe, troubled by an erratic first serve, tried to rattle Lendl with a dose of gamesmanship in the first set.

Picking on linesman Mickey Martin after a call, McEnroe told referee Zeno Pfau he wouldn't play until Martin was removed.

McEnroe told Pfau: "He (Martin) made a mistake."

Pfau diplomatically placed Martin in another position.

McEnroe played on but not without taking extra time to towel off, making Lendl wait and taking issue with a fan in a courtside seat.

Lendl broke McEnroe in the third and seventh games with brilliant backhand winners to win 6-2.

The third set point ended with McEnroe crashing into the a row of yellow carnations at the southeast end of the court. He got a big ovation from the fans but still lost 6-3.

Texas' Sims first to go in 'one-man NFL draft'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Sims, a 265-pound defensive tackle from the University of Texas, was chosen by the New England Patriots today, as they had announced previously, as the National Football League began its two-day draft of college talent.

The only question about the 6-foot-5½ Sims in what has been termed a lean year for potential pro talent was an injury to his leg and ankle suffered last November which kept him out of Texas' last two regular-season games, along with the Cotton Bowl.

Some scouts have called this year's crop a "one-man draft," and Sims is the man they were referring to. Hailing from the tiny community of Kosse, Texas, Sims possesses a great combination of speed, strength and agility and won the Lombardi Award as the nation's premier lineman in 1981.

The type of player who can dominate the line of scrimmage, Sims made 81 solo tackles last year, assisted on 29 others, had 10 sacks, pressured passer 32 times, broke up four passes and forced six fumbles.

Even before NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had formally announced the Patriots' selection, Sims was being escorted to the podium, where he posed with the commissioner for photographers. Rozelle held a New England jersey with Sims' name and No.77, the number he wore in college.

"I'm happy to get this over with," Sims said of the waiting. "I'm happy to be a Patriot and look out next year, the rest of you fellows."

Then, Sims, trailed by a phalanx of newsmen and photographers, left the room for a brief news conference before flying to New England.

The selection of Sims opened the first of 12 rounds. The 28 NFL teams have 15 minutes to make their selections in eagh of the first two rounds and five minutes in each round thereafter.

While Sims was occupying the attention of most people in the Grand Ballroom at the New York Sheraton Hotel, the Baltimore Colts were pondering their first-round pick. The Colts, also 2-14, were the only team to beat New England — twice, in the first and last games of the season.

With 6:08 of their 15 minutes remaining, the Colts selected Johnie Cooks, an imposing 240-pound linebacker from Mississippi State. Cooks has tremendous range and can play inside or outside linebacker. He had 24 quarterback sacks in his career.

The third selection belonged to New Orleans, but the Saints had exercised that pick last year when, in a special supplemental draft, they selected quarterback Dave Wilson, whose eligibility at Illinois had run out. The school lost a court battle to get another year for Wilson.

That brought up the Cleveland Browns, who took another linebacker, Chip Banks, a 230-pounder from the University of Southern California, who led the Trojans in tackles his junior and senior years. He made 137 tackles last fall, deflected six passes and recovered two fumblzs.

As soon as the Browns' selection was announced, Rozelle dropped the first bombshell of the draft, announcing that the Colts had signed discontented quarterback Bert Jones and promptly traded him to Los Angeles for the Rams' own first- and second-round picks this year.

With their newly acquired first-round pick, the Colts then chose quarterback Art Schlichter of Ohio State.

Jackson takes TL lead

Dan Murphy's bases-loaded single drove in the winning run in the bottom of the 10th inning as the Tulsa Drillers edged the Arkansas Travelers, 2-1.

In other Texas League action Monday night, Jackson swept a doubleheader from Shreveport with two extra inning victories, 4-3 and 3-2 to take a half game lead in the Texas League Eastern division.

Tulsa had loaded the bases on two walks by Arkansas pitcher Ricky Norton, who was replaced by Jeff Keener, who walked the third batter to load the bases and set the stage for Murphy's game winner.

Tom Henke was the winning pitcher. Horton was the loser.

Billy Beane singled home Rick Poe with the winning run in the 11th inning as the Jackson Mets beat the Shreveport Captains, 4-3, in the first game of their doubleheader.

Darryl Strawberry had a solo homer for Jackson and Bob Cummings had a solo homer for Shreveport.

John Semprini, 1-0, was the winning Mets hurler. The loser was Phill Hinrichs, 1-1.

Ron Reynolds drove home the winning run with a single in the eighth inning as Jackson completed the doubleheader sweep with a 3-2 victory.

USC administrators aware of Goux's dealings

By MAL FLORENCE
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — A source close to USC said Saturday that members of the athletic department and some university administrators were aware that assistant coach Marv Goux sold tickets for football players. He also said that Goux wasn't the only coach on the staff who sold players' tickets over a period of several years.

The NCAA placed USC on probation for three years Friday with two years of direct penalties, prohibiting the school from appearing in bowl games in the 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years and on television in 1983 and 1984. The other part of the penalty prevents Goux from recruiting for two years and freezes his salary during that period.

IT IS believed that sanctions against USC were based mainly on Goux's ticket-selling activities.

"Does somebody think that Marv Goux is some evil sorcerer who devised this whole plan by himself?" the source said. "If they do, they're very naive. Everybody was aware of what was going on. Marv was a line officer following orders. This just happened to be his off-the-field duty.

"Marv wasn't the only guy selling tickets. There wasn't a coach on the (USC) staff who didn't help a few alums by buying tickets through the players."

The NCAA in its official statement said that an assistant coach (Goux wasn't named in the report) "during a period of 1971-1979 deliberately violated NCAA rules by selling complimentary tickets for varsity football team members at prices in excess of their face value in order to provide large sums of cash to team members who chose to participate in this arrangement."

The source, who is knowledgeable about USC's football program, was amused that the NCAA happened to select this time period. He said that ticket scalping at USC and other schools has been going on for decades.

The NCAA said players received as much as $2,000 in one year for their tickets.

THE SOURCE said only four or five of the most popular or accomplished players ever received a substantial amount of money for tickets.

"They would buy tickets from freshman players at a modest price and then would sell what they said were their tickets to eight different guys," he said. "Everybody wants to buy a ticket from a star player."

The players are allowed four complimentary tickets and it was once permissible under NCAA rules to sell them at face value. Now, however, the NCAA has ruled that tickets can't be sold "at, below or above face value."

In its report the NCAA said that 16 unnamed individuals (presumably boosters) who bought the complimentary tickets shall be barred from helping USC recruit during the probationary period. How the NCAA arrived at the figure 16 is unknown. There are more than 1,000 members of the Cardinal and Gold, USC's exclusive athletic support group.

"The NCAA probably reasoned that the names of 16 were enough for evidence," the source said.

IT WAS learned that the NCAA wanted USC to permanently disassociate Goux from the athletic department, meaning no coaching, recruiting or fund-raising.

But USC got a concession from the NCAA prior to its appeal hearing before the NCAA Council in St. Louis last Thursday.

It was important, Goux's friends say, for him to retain his coaching duties.

"The NCAA didn't really have a choice," a legal source said. "They probably knew that if USC had taken the NCAA to court on the Goux matter, the school and Goux would have won."

However, USC did not win on the other two counts — the ban on bowl and TV appearances — and it is possible the school still will initiate court proceedings against the NCAA. If so, President James H. Zumberge will make such an announcement at a press conference Monday afternoon on campus.

USC administrators conferred on campus Saturday but were not available for comment.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Lezcano, Cruz cited

BASEBALL

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixto Lezcano of the San Diego Padres was named Player of the Week in the National League Monday after hitting .571 with 12 hits in 21 at-bats.

Lezcano had nine runs batted in and two game-winning RBI during the week as the Padres won five straight games to extend their winning streak to 10. He hit two triples, two homers and scored eight runs, while extending his string of games with at least one RBI to eight.

NEW YORK (AP) — Todd Cruz of the Seattle Maroiners was named Player of the Week in the American League after hitting .458 with 11 hits in 24 at-bats.

Cruz had three game-winning runs batted in during the week among his total of five RBI. Cruz also hit three triples and two homers. Both homers were game-winners, giving the Mariners one-run victories on both occasions.

HORSE RACING

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Arkansas Derby winner Hostage injured a foot during a workout and trainer Mike Freeman said the colt will miss the Kentucky Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs.

There was a report that the colt might have suffered a cracked sesamoid in his right front leg. Freeman did not confirm that report, but said further details would be given later.

Ryan posts first victory, Bosox win seven straight

By The Associated Press

Struggling Nolan Ryan finally won his first game of the season for Houston and the hot Boston Red Sox rolled to their seventh straight in Monday night's baseball action.

Ryan pitched a four-hitter to help the Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 in National League play. The Red Sox, meanwhile, took a twi-night doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox, 3-2 and 5-0, in the American.

In the only other game Monday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates tripped the Atlanta Braves 6-4.

Ray Knight had a home run, double and single and three RBI to help Ryan win his first game in five decisions. The Astros' right-hander, who started the night with a 7.97 earned run average, struck out five and walked two.

Jose Cruz also belted a two-run homer as the Cardinals absorbed their second straight loss following 12 straight victories.

After Tony Scott singled for his first of three hits in the Houston first, Knight slugged his second homer of the year. The blast came off John Martin, 2-2. Two innings later, after Knight doubled, Cruz hit his first homer of the season with two out off Martin.

Jim Rice singled home Wade Boggs from second base in the eighth inning to lead Boston's victory over Chicago in the first game of their doubleheader.

Boggs led off the Red Sox eighth with a single, the first hit of his major-league career, and was sacrificed to second by Jerry Remy before Rice hit an 0-1 pitch from Richard Dotson, 1-2.

Rice's second single of the game broke a 2-2 tie and handed the win to Luis Aponte, 2-0, who came on in relief of Bruce Hurst in the bottom of the seventh.

Right-hander Chuck Rainey scattered five hits and Rick Miller keyed the Boston attack with three singles as the Red Sox beat the White Sox in the nightcap.

It was Rainey's first complete game of the season. Rainey struck out five and walked two, allowing no Chicago runner to reach second after Tony Bernazard made the base in the third inning.

Bill Madlock's two-run homer in the eighth inning broke a 4-4 tie and capped a three-run rally that lifted Pittsburgh over Atlanta.

Moore keeps junior middleweight title

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Davey Moore of New York retained his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title Monday, knocking out South Africa's Charlie Weir in the fifth round.

In his first title defense, the American champion knocked Weir down twice in the second round, again in the third and twice more in the fourth. He finished off the South African with his first connecting punch of the fifth round — a right cross that put the challenger down for the count.

Weir, the WBA's fourth-ranked challenger, started the fight well, scoring half a dozen times in the first round with straight lefts, while Moore failed to find his mark.

But the fight shifted early in the second round. After taking a left and a solid right from Weir, Moore landed a right cross that sent the South African to his knee for a mandatory eight-count. The South African got up and promptly was knocked down for a second eight-count. Moore continued the attack with a series of left-right combinations, and Weir was forced to clinch to last out the round.

The fight had to be postponed two days from its original Saturday scheduling because of rain.

0-3 Ray Burris off to best start ever

You'd never know it to look at his record, but Ray Burris is off to his best start ever.

The one-time Midland Cub, whose potential has never been fulfilled, is surrendering runs at the rate of a shade more than one a game. It's the kind of start that, with any kind of luck, would have made him a 20-game winner back in his most productive years with the Chicago Cubs.

That was always the main complaint with Ray. It would take him half a season to find himself and then he'd stage the kind of finish that would leave Cub fans drooling in anticipation of next year.

WELL, THIS year he's experiencing the kind of start Windy City fans always wished for the big, raw-boned Oklahoman, yet, what does he have to show for it, an 0-3 record.

Burris lost to the Phillies, and ex-Cub teammate Mike Krukow, 1-0 in his first start. Then he took it on the chin 2-1 his next time out and over the weekend he lost 1-0 to the Mets.

This could have been that long anticipated 20-game season that first the Cubs, then the Mets, then the Yankees, then the Mets again, and finally the Expos envisioned for him.

THERE WASN'T much doubt that Burris had major league talent right from the start when he reported to the rookie league at Bradenton, Fla., fresh off the campus of Southwestern Oklahoma State back in 1972.

The late Fred Martin, then Chicago's roving pitching coach, the same one who saved Bruce Sutter's career by teaching him the dreaded split-fingered fastball, took one look at Burris and recommended he be sent to Midland.

In 14 games, Burris was 7-5 with Midland. The Cubs were in their maiden season in the Texas League and for much of the year were abused by Memphis' Dave Schneck and San Antonio's Gorman Thomas. Schneck compiled such impressive statistics against Midland pitching he was elevated to the parent Mets, but failed to duplicate his TL performance in the National League. Thomas, of course, took longer to reach the big top, but has become one of the American League's most feared sluggers.

But with the arrival of Burris, the Cubs gained respectability, winning 29 of their last 41.

TICKETED for the American Association, Burris was so impressive the following spring, he not only earned a berth on the Chicago roster, but was voted outstanding rookie in spring camp.

Employed in relief for parts of two seasons, Ray finally arrived in 1974 with a 15-10 record, most of the victories coming late. In 1975, he was 15-13 and in 1976 14-16.

The Cubs began to lose faith in Ray's promise in 1977, a suffering 7-13 year and the following season he began to bounce around the majors...from the Cubs to Mets, to Yankees, back to the Mets. His journeys began to sound like a rundown or a long-winded double play. The Mets finally granted him his free agency after the 1980 season. In three seasons, Burris had been a cummulative 8-18.

Montreal signed him and in the strike-shortened season he responded with a 9-7 record, throwing a one-hitter late in the season to help the Expos reach the playoffs for the first time ever. His 3.04 ERA was his best in the major leagues while his 17 innings in two championship series games against the Dodgers represents the most innings ever by a pitcher in the National League showdown series.

At a time when it looked like Ray had wandered into a box canyon, career wise, there's renewed hope and enthusiasm that perhaps, just perhaps, the best is yet to come.

Two Immigration and Naturalization Service officials, left and right, escort two workers — allegedly illegal aliens — from a northwest Chicago bakery Monday. The workers' place of employment was among several in nine cities nationwide raided Monday in "Operation Jobs," a plan designed to remove illegal aliens making more than the minimum wage from jobs and ultimately replace them with unemployed Americans.

Raids' purpose putting Americans in jobs now held by illegal aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration officials say "Operation Jobs," a series of raids on workplaces in nine major cities, is off to a good start toward its goal of catching and deporting thousands of illegal aliens in well-paying positions.

A task force of 400 agents launched the raids Monday morning. By day's end, officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service said initial reports indicated as many as 1,000 aliens had been caught. Final figures were not immediately available.

The ultimate goal of the program is to put unemployed Americans in the jobs now held by the illegal aliens. INS officials say it differs from normal enforcement work because the agency has carefully selected workplaces where it expects to find aliens making well over the federal minimum wage.

"We're not after busboys and janitors," said Joseph F. Salgado, INS's director of enforcement.

The raids already have drawn criticism from Hispanic groups. Arnold Torres of the League of United Latin-American Citizens said last week that the raids would help perpetuate the "lie" that illegal aliens are responsible for high U.S. unemployment because they take jobs from American citizens.

"We're watching them very closely this week. If they violate the due process rights of these people, we may sue them," Torres said Monday.

The INS allowed reporters to accompany agents in Chicago to observe a raid at Newlywed Foods, a bakery. Agents covered all the doors to the factory as the day shift workers were leaving and the night shift entering.

They stopped workers who, as one agent said, appeared to be Hispanic. Some had proper identification. Others had either no identification or counterfeit cards. About a dozen were arrested. Two said they were earning $5.13 per hour.

The INS agents said they had caught 45 illegal aliens making as much as $8 per hour in an earlier raid on Terracotta Industries in Chicago.

But spokesman Vern Jervis said it was too soon to tell whether the raids would succeed in placing unemployed Americans in the jobs that had been held by aliens. The INS is hoping that local employment officials and labor unions will help do that.

In addition to Chicago, the special raids occurred in Detroit, Newark, New York, Denver, Houston, Dallas, Los Angeles and San Francisco, Jervis said. The cities were selected because they have high unemployment rates and high concentrations of alien workers.

Salgado said the aliens arrested would be given the choice of leaving the country voluntarily or being held in custody pending deportation hearings before immigration judges.

Acid rain part of clean air talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Connecticut congressman, making a last-ditch effort to get acid rain controls included in the Clean Air Act, says utilities have overestimated the cost of the proposal.

Rep. Toby Moffett released a study Monday concluding that new restrictions on power plants emitting sulfur dioxide — believed to be the culprit in the formation of acid rain — would increase electric bills only 2.4 percent to 4.6 percent after adjustment for inflation.

Moffett said the analysis by the research division of the Library of Congress "demonstrates that the costs of cleaning up the acid rain problem have been completely overblown by utilities who are responsible for massive environmental damage."

The utility and coal industries have made sharply different assessments, predicting that electric bills could increase for some consumers by up to 106 percent should the strictest of the sulfur dioxide control measures be approved.

The study done for Moffett was released as the House Energy and Commerce Committee moved toward final action on reauthorization of the Clean Air Act. The law's budgetary authorization technically expired last September, but its legal requirements remain in effect until a new authorization is passed.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., the committee's chairman and a co-sponsor of an industry-backed bill, has said he hopes to complete action on Clean Air amendments this week, sending the measure to the House floor.

Lobbyists and congressional staff members say that schedule probably is optimistic given the number of controversial issues still facing the panel, including auto emission controls, an economic battle of Eastern versus Western coal, control of toxic air pollutants — and the issue of acid rain.

The committee voted 27-5 last week to accelerate federal research into acid rain, but not to impose any new controls. That vote was criticized by Moffett as "an illusion of action."

Two senators seen as rights keys

WASHINGTON (AP) — A close committee vote over extending key provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act is focusing on two members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, one of them a former Alabama judge and the other a veteran Republican from Kansas.

"It's going to be very close," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said Monday of a committee voted planned today. Thurmond is chairman of the judiciary panel.

Although Congress has been considering the extension for a year, enforcement provisions of the act expire in August. Liberals led by Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Charles C. Mathias Jr, R-Md., reportedly are fearful that time might run out before the Senate can act.

The committee was to vote today on proposals to renew certain parts of the statute, generally rated as the most successful of the civil rights laws enacted during the 1960s.

Sources said Monday that the two key votes will be cast by Sens. Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Howell Heflin, D-Ala., a former member of the Alabama Supreme Court. Their specific positions are unknown and civil rights groups believe they have eight of 10 votes needed for passage of a version they are supporting.

President Reagan, Attorney General William French Smith and many Senate conservatives are urging a 10-year voting rights extension which critics say would make it extremely difficult to prove states and local governments deliberately sought to weaken the voting power of blacks and other minorities.

Last year, the House approved an extension of the law under which civil rights lawyers would have to demonstrate only that the effect or results of actions by state and local officials were discriminatory. Sixty-four members of the Senate have indicated support for the version approved by the House.
