Absentee votes in

Eight percent of the all registered voters eligible to cast a ballot in local races voted absentee, which ended Tuesday, said Bettye Calvert, Midland elections administrator. "For a local election, its a high percentage of voters," Ms. Calvert said. Of the 48,054 eligible voters, 3,861 opted to vote absentee. The turnout was considerably larger than the tax rollback election for the hospital in January, where 2,859 people voted absentee, and the October school bond election that attracted 2,086 people to vote absentee, Ms. Calvert said. Voting will continue this Saturday with polls open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Turtles lay eggs

CORPUS CHRISTI — To the Kemp's ridley sea turtle, laying 107 eggs this week was a natural act. But to conservationists trying to preserve the endangered species, it was a sign that efforts to establish a new nesting ground could be succeeding. Tourists at the Padre Island National Seashore south of Corpus Christi spotted the turtle laying the eggs in a sand dune Monday and alerted National Park Service officials. It is believed to be the first time a Kemp's ridley has laid eggs on a Texas beach since 1988. Park officials said additional nesting ridleys they hope to find could indicate the success of a 10-year project launched to provide an alternative nesting ground. "We're dropping everything in hopes it's the start of something," said Donna Shaver, a natural resources management specialist for the Park Service. But researchers remain cautious.

Bush, Burns meet

WASHINGTON — President Bush invited the nation's most famous nonagenarian to the White House on Tuesday, welcoming George Burns to the Oval Office. Bush and the 95-year-old actor "shook hands and exchanged pleasantries," in a five-minute meeting, said Bush's press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater. Fitzwater said Burns was in the capital to perform at a Chamber of Commerce event, and wanted to meet the president.

Fed cuts 2 key rates

AP/Martha P. Hernandez

■ Move drops discount, federal funds rates.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Trying to end the recession, the Federal Reserve cut interest rates Tuesday, noting as it acted that the latest data showed the economy to be still quite weak.

In an early-morning announcement, the Federal Reserve said it had lowered the discount rate, the rate it charges on loans to banks, to 5½ percent from 6 percent.

A few hours later, the central bank pushed down the important federal funds rate, which is what banks charge each other on loans, to 5¾ percent from 6 percent.

Both rates affect what banks pay for deposits and other funds, and what they can then charge when they lend out this money for things like mortgages, home equity loans, car loans and construction financing.

With their cost of funds lower, banks were under pressure to reduce their prime lending rate, now at 9 percent, but no major bank moved immediately. This rate is the benchmark for many commercial and other loans.

The move came after Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady had failed to persuade Germany and the other major industrial nations to lower their interest rates to help give the American economy a lift. The timing suggested to some economists that the Federal Reserve had acted Tuesday at least partly in response to the Bush administration's call for lower rates.

Employers, insurers try to cut costs of coverage

By Louis Uchitelle
N.Y. Times News Service

World War II had begun. The nation was mobilizing. With millions of young men in uniform, civilian workers were in short supply and the War Labor Board, to avoid inflation, put a ceiling on wages.

So the trade unions proposed "hidden" raises. Money earmarked for raises would pay for health insurance instead. And the board gave its approval.

Thus was born, accidentally, the job-linked health insurance system that dominates medical care in the United States today, providing coverage for nearly 150 million people.

Businesses soon became enthusiastic supporters, viewing company health plans as a recruiting lure and a "comfort factor" for employees. And the unions saw health care as a rich benefit to be won for members in collective bargaining.

For a time, for most companies and most workers, the system worked well — although, since it was voluntary, many

Lee High School students cast their votes for a new spirit logo Tuesday morning. Lee Freshman High School students will cast their votes for one of five symbols this morning.

The winning logo will be announced to students in both schools this afternoon.

Principal Jack Fryar said the spirit logos were videotaped and those tapes were viewed by students in their classrooms. Students voted on symbols by a show of hands and teachers tallied the votes.

The videotape will be used at the freshman school today. "We chose to go with the videotape because we couldn't reproduce the color on a ballot," Fryar

Refugees flood back to Zakho

■ Influx produced by sense of safety provided by patrols of American, British and Dutch marines.

N.Y. Times News Service

ZAKHO, Iraq — Thousands of Kurdish refugees came pouring out of the mountains Tuesday, the vast majority of them rolling right past the new tent city built for them by the United States in a wheat field here and heading for their old homes in this city and surrounding villages.

"The floodgates are open," said Maj. Carl Fisher, an Army civil affairs specialist known as the "mayor" of the tent city for his planning of the refugee center.

The roads here, empty until a few days ago, were filled all day with processions of cars, carts, tractors, dump trucks and minibuses, all piled high with refugees and their posssessions.

The influx was produced by the sense of safety provided by the highly visible patrols on Zakho's streets by American, British and Dutch marines, the removal of most Iraqi government security forces and the lifting of roadblocks by Kurdish nationalist guerrillas in the hills. American officials were gratified.

"It's really great to see how people feel safe," said Dayton Maxwell, the

By Bill Carter
N.Y. Times News Service

When ABC announced next fall's schedule for Saturday morning children's programming, Jennie Trias, the network's vice president for children's programs, had some bad news for girls: their favorite Saturday morning show, "The New Kids on the Block," the cartoon adventures of the rock band with an enormous preteen-age following, would be gone.

"Only girls were watching the show," Ms. Trias said. "And you have to have boys watching a show for it to succeed."

Next season, the landscape of Saturday morning will not simply be dominated by programs featuring male characters; it will be an exclusive male preserve.

ABC's sole series with a lead female character, "Little Rosey," featuring a child character based on the comedy star Roseanne Barr, is also being canceled.

Children's television is, most network programmers say, a boy's world. And they aren't fighting it anymore.

After having tried to create female characters that boys would watch, one of the few concessions the networks are now making in response to the absence of leading female characters is to give the male characters attributes considered to be "female."

"It is well known that boys will watch a male lead and not a female lead," Ms. Trias said. "But girls are willing to watch a male lead."

The top program in children's television this season is "Teen-Age Mutant Ninja Turtles" on CBS. It is also, by no coincidence, the highest-ranking show among boys.

The most noticeable development in children's programming for the fall season is the production of animated programs based on characters from real life or introduced by real people. The headline characters have one chief thing in

Typhoon kills more than 1,000; millions homeless

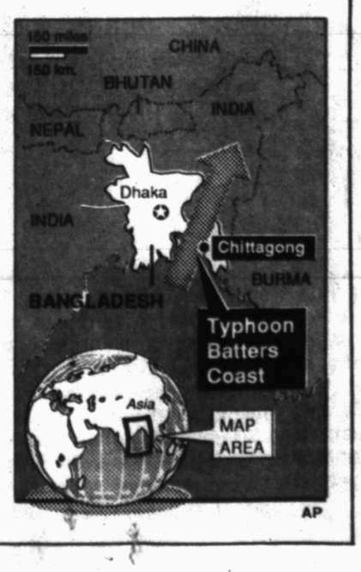

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A powerful typhoon battered densely populated Bangladesh for more than eight hours Tuesday, killing at least 1,000 people and leaving millions homeless. Five thousand fishermen were reported missing.

State-run television said at least 800 people were killed in the coastal districts of Cox's Bazaar, Noakhali and Bhola when 20-foot waves whipped up by 145 mph winds swept ashore.

The storm out of the Bay of Bengal left more than 250 other people dead on low-lying coastal islands and in the port of Chittagong, the federal Relief Ministry reported. There was no word from several remote islands that are home to thousands of people due to severed communications.

Prime Minister Khaleda Zia called an emergency meeting of her Cabinet to discuss relief measures. She said the typhoon had caused damage worth $1 billion and appealed for international

Bush seeks fast-track negotiating authority

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, seeking a free hand in trade negotiations with Mexico, will assure Congress he will hold separate talks on environmental protection and help U.S. workers hurt by a free-trade pact, administration officials said Tuesday.

The president will promise to embrace a program to provide training and other help to those who might lose their jobs if U.S. firms shift jobs to Mexico, these officials said.

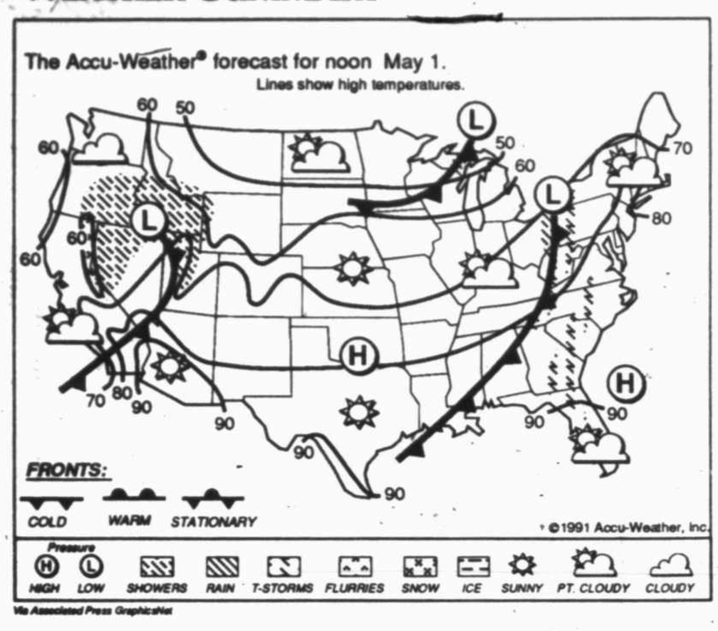

In addition, he will promise a full environmental impact study of what a free-trade agreement means before negotiating it, and will promise to appoint representatives of environmental organizations to advisory committees in the U.S. Trade Representative's office, the officials said.

These officials discussed the president's plans for trade statements Wednesday on condition that they not be identified.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Sunny skies to turn cloudy

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies in the morning with increasing cloudiness by late afternoon with a high in the mid-80s and southeast winds 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will have increasing cloudiness with a low in the mid-50s.

Thursday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s and a 30 percent chance of showers or thunderstorms.

After an overnight low of 47, Tuesday's high was 88 compared with the record high for April 30 of 96 in 1948. The record low for today's date was 34 set in 1970.

STATE

Most of Texas was sunny, dry and warm Tuesday while under the influence of high pressure.

However, a cold front was invading the state from the northwest, causing gusty winds in the Panhandle and North Texas.

Winds were generally from the south at 10 to 20 mph with gusts over 30 mph in West Texas and up to around 25 mph in central sections.

High cirrus clouds streaked the sunny sky, allowing temperatures to warm into the 80s ahead of the front. Readings reached only into the 60s behind the system.

Forecasters expected increasing cloudiness with the approaching low pressure and cold front, but temperatures were to remain mostly warm Wednesday with highs in the 70s in the Northwest to 90s in the Lower Valley and Big Bend of Southwest Texas. Haze and fog were expected along the lower Gulf coast.

NATION

Rainy, stormy weather spread across much of the Southeast again Tuesday, with similar weather developing in the Northeast. Heavy spring snow snarled traffic and broke power lines in Colorado.

Showers and thunderstorms associated with an upper-level weather system crossing the Southeast spread over the central Gulf Coast region and along the coast of Georgia and the Carolinas.

Strong thunderstorms developed over southern Georgia and northern Florida.

The weather began to clear over Louisiana and Mississippi but flooding is expected to continue for days after some places got as much as 20 inches of rain since Friday.

Thunderstorms with a potential for severe weather also developed along and ahead of a warm front curving through western Pennsylvania, northern Virginia and southern Maryland.

And showers prevailed across eastern New York state and much of New England.

A Pacific storm that produced heavy snow in parts of Utah and Colorado hit eastern Colorado.

The heaviest snowfall was centered in the metropolitan Denver and Boulder area, where commuters awoke to find 5 to 8 inches of thick, slushy snow. There was an unofficial report of 16 inches at Evergreen, in the foothills southwest of Denver, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Fryar said all five logos were basically a variation on a theme. One logo was of the word "Lee" with the bottom line of the letter "l" extending out underneath the ee's.

"The other four logos all used the same basic design but had different backgrounds," Fryar said.

The logos were supplied by students in a design contest. The student who designed the winning logo will receive a $100 cash award.

The vote for a new logo — which came about as the result of a compromise developed by an advisory committee — will replace the Rebel flag as the school's official spirit symbol. The Rebel flag will be retained in a historical context, however.

"The new spirit symbol will be used by school groups as an official symbol," Fryar said. "We are anxious to finalize this so that it can be marketed and sold at fundraisers."

LFHS Principal George Cooper said students in the freshman school will vote on the symbols during the 10 a.m. advisory period today.

RATES: Despite pressure, no major bank moves

(From 1A)

"All signs point to the Fed trying to bail out the Brady position after the unsuccessful meeting of the Group of Seven industrial nations on Sunday," said David Jones, chief economist at Aubrey G. Lanston, a Wall Street investment firm. "This is arm-twisting by the administration, successfully."

But the Federal Reserve offered a much different explanation.

The announcement accompanying the discount rate cut said the Fed had acted because data released in the last few days, including some figures published Tuesday, showed "continued weakness in economic activity."

Industrial production and factory orders have declined, spending for new machinery and other equipment has fallen more than expected, employment costs have edged down and consumer confidence — a measure of the willingness of Americans to spend — fell in April.

"I am reasonably confident that the economy will turn up," said Lyle Gramley, chief economist at the Mortgage Bankers Association and a former Federal Reserve governor, reflecting a view widely held not only in the Bush administration and the Federal Reserve, but also among private economists.

"Still," he said, "you have to make day-to-day adjustments, and the latest numbers are softer than I and many others would have expected."

The credit markets did seem to agree that the economy is quite weak. Interest rates on bonds moved lower.

The Federal Reserve's action — praised by the president and officials in his administration — did not come without opposition among its policy makers.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve, and the four other sitting governors control the discount rate, and they voted 4-1 to lower it by half a percentage point, the third such reduction since last December.

Although it is the least important of the two rates, since banks borrow very little directly from the Fed, changes in the discount rate serve as a very public signal of the central bank's latest concerns about the economy.

The negative vote came from Wayne Angell, a governor who has said that he believes a recovery is imminent.

COVERAGE: The system is deeply entrenched small companies never participated.

Now, as medical costs climb and companies and insurers seek ways to limit their obligations, the insurance system is in turmoil and new questions are being raised about its economic and social costs.

"Corporate America thought that health care was a cost they would not see, and for many years this was the case" said Eli Ginzberg, a Columbia University economist. "As health care expanded, companies passed on the expenses in higher prices for their products. Now they can't pass them on very easily and they are alarmed."

Arguing that health costs are putting them at a competitive disadvantage, a few big companies like Chrysler Corp. and Caterpillar Inc. have even suggested that national health insurance might be a less expensive and more efficient alternative. Many economists say that if the country were starting from scratch, they would not choose to tie health insurance to employment.

But the system is deeply entrenched and seems likely to survive, if only because a majority of the nation's largest companies still want it to.

"Companies take a lot of pride in being able to offer health benefits; it is something they have done traditionally and some of them have made big investments in systems that try to manage costs," said Sharon Canner, director of employee benefits for the National Association of Manufacturers. "It would be very hard to just dump out job-based health care."

Most of the proposals for change now being debated attempt to build on the system rather than scrap it, seeking ways to counter its adverse impacts on the economy and people.

Among other problems, the current system depresses take-home pay; gives large companies an advantage over small ones, which have to pay higher premiums for health insurance; provides some workers with better health care than others, and leaves tens of millions of Americans, some of them jobholders and some unemployed, with no insurance at all.

Intensifying all of these effects, economists note, is the rapid rise in health care costs. They charge that the job-linked insurance system, as it has been run in the past, has intensifed that inflation.

Employers, insurance companies and government are all now experimenting with ways to slow the rising costs, in effect attempting to place ceilings on what Americans spend for health care.

Among U.S. companies, the push for change is led mostly by big, long-established manufacturing companies, like Bethlehem Steel Corp., Chrysler, Caterpillar and others. They say soaring health expenses make them uncompetitive in world markets, or soon will once they run out of ways to offset rising bills.

TYPHOON: 5,000 fishermen reported missing

help.

Relief officials said about 3 million people in this poor country bordered by India and Burma were evacuated from flimsy mud and straw homes in the path of the storm before the typhoon struck.

About 80 percent of the huts were blown away, the Relief Ministry official said.

"The deaths would have been on a much larger scale" if the residents had not been shifted to shelters, he said.

Many were moved to concrete buildings on higher ground that were converted to shelters after a storm packing 138 mph winds struck the same area in 1970, leaving nearly a half-million people dead.

United News of Bangladesh said at least 5,000 fishermen aboard 500 trawlers were unaccounted for. It said their boats were at sea when the typhoon struck the southeastern coast where about 7 million people reside in 2,000 villages.

The typhoon battered 14 coastal districts, uprooting trees, telephone lines and electricity poles, a Relief Ministry official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Most information on the disaster came via radios operated by the Red Crescent, the Muslim equivalent of the Red Cross.

"Thousands of people are injured and crops and houses over a 300-mile radius are damaged," said a Red Crescent official in Dhaka, who also asked not to be identified by name.

The Red Crescent mobilized 21,000 volunteers for relief work, a television report said. The army has was deployed to help, it said.

Almost always, disasters such as these that hit Bangladesh with numbing regularity leave a trail of disease brought on by malnutrition and a shortage of clean drinking water.

(From 1A)

State Department disaster relief specialist supervising the operation.

But it appeared that most of those arriving Tuesday were residents of Zakho, which is just one of nearly a score of Kurdish cities in Iraq, and the only one not controlled by the government of President Saddam Hussein.

None of the Kurds returning to the Zakho area Tuesday were continuing on to Iraqi government-controlled areas of Kurdistan.

But reports from other parts of the region suggested that some Kurds were placing faith in a peace agreement reached last week by Saddam and the leaders of four major Kurdish organizations.

United Nations officials reported that 10,000 to 11,000 Kurds were streaming back into Erbil every day, many of them in convoys of Iraqi government trucks arriving from refugee camps in Iran. At Sulaimaniya, close to the Iranian border, the figure is put at 8,000 a day.

Nobody knows exactly how many Kurds fled their homes, but estimates range up to 2.5 million.

But even as the tide of returning refugees began, American military officers running the relief effort warned that they had only a month to complete the even more complicated logistic task of bringing people down from the more remote peaks in eastern Turkey before summer heat made them uninhabitable.

"I'm very encouraged," said Lt. Gen. John Shalikashvili, the commander of the allied troops here. "This clearly signals that people have confidence. We've got to bring everyone out of these camps as fast as we can. We've got to get them out of here before the summer heat."

Shalikashvili made his remarks after a brief flag-raising ceremony at the United Nations encampment established.

At the same time, six big trucks of food, medicine and other relief supplies bearing the United Nations emblem arrived from Baghdad, the first in a series of relief convoys the United Nations will bring in to stock the new humanitarian center it is opening here for returning Kurdish refugees.

The chief United Nations official in Iraq, Bernt Bernander of Sweden, said the arrival of the organization's relief convoy "marks the beginning of what we hope will be an effective U.N. presence here to induce displaced people to come down from the mountains and return home."

BUSH: President seeks authority from Congress

(From 1A)

Bush was to present "complete action plans" on both labor and the environment in a response Wednesday to concerns raised by congressional leaders.

Officials discussed the president's plans on condition that they not be identified.

Bush is seeking a congressional green light to negotiate an amendment-proof trade deal with Mexico. But lawmakers are under pressure from labor unions, environmentalists and some affected industries who fear loss of U.S. jobs and further damage to the environment in Mexico if that country is able to step up economic growth.

Unless Congress gives Bush "fast-track" negotiating authority, the lawmakers will have the power to change any agreement the administration reaches with Mexico. Under those circumstances, free-trade advocates fear, Congress will respond to special economic interests.

"We're going to win. We're not taking anything for granted," Bush said in a photo session before one of two meetings with Republican and Democratic Congress members to talk about prospects for congressional approval of the fast-track authority.

Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., said after meeting with Bush that the President had assured them he would announce on Wednesday a way to address their worries about environmental protection and labor issues.

"He certainly indicated that they are going to be responsive to the concerns about the environment," said Kolbe, a fast-track supporter.

Kolbe said environmental matters should be considered in "parallel but separate tracks, not inside the trade agreement."

Bush said many members of Congress are still undecided on his request for renewal of fast-track authority to enter negotiations with Mexico.

This procedure, used by Congress and the administration for many years, sends trade agreements to Congess for a yes or no vote without amendments. It was last used to negotiate a free-trade agreement with Canada that took effect in 1988.

common: they are all well-known males, from the rap singer M.C. Hammer to the child movie star Macaulay Culkin, to the sports stars Wayne Gretzky and Bo Jackson.

"Children's television has always been male dominated," said David F. Poltrack, the senior CBS vice president for research.

Network executives say the fact that male characters dominate children's shows is based on pragmatic business judgments and has nothing to do with sexism on the part of network programmers.

Three of the four chief children's programmers — at ABC, CBS, NBC and Fox Broadcasting — are women. "You have to put together a schedule based on who is going to watch," Ms. Trias said.

Boys have all the advantages over girls when the programmers decide which shows to pick. For one thing, boys outnumber girls in the most important Saturday morning demographic group, made up of ages 2 to 11.

Denise Walcott, an associate director of research for ABC, pointed out that the "population split is about 51 percent boy" and the Saturday morning television audience is 53 percent male.

"In order to rank near the top on Saturday morning, a show would have to appeal to boys," Ms. Walcott said.

Though at other times of the day shows can often succeed when aimed at limited audiences, the children's programmers said, aiming a show at only girls would not work on Saturday morning because the audience is just not big enough.

"In order to win on Saturday morning, you have to have both sexes," Ms. Trias said.

Poltrack said researchers had been aware for some time that "the play world of boys is much more television-oriented than the play world of girls."

"Boys are more into sports, which are also video-related," Poltrack said. "Look at your Saturday morning programming. If it isn't cartoons, it's wrestling and kung fu movies. Girls are more likely to find something else to do on Saturday morning: go out, go shopping with their mothers to the mall."

But a fair question would be: which came first, the inclination to watch television or the programming primarily directed at boys?

Network executives said the reluctance to accept female characters was so ingrained in boys that it was difficult to resist.

Judy Price, the CBS vice president for children's programs, said CBS had used focus groups of children to help make judgments about children's shows and characters.

"We had to segregate the groups by both age and sex," Ms. Price said. "The older kids didn't want to be seen liking the things the younger kids liked, and the boys certainly didn't want to be seen liking the things the girls like."

"Barbie is the most popular character for young girls probably of all time, but she would never succeed as a Saturday morning show," she added. "The boys would refuse to watch her."

Ms. Trias said ABC employed a child psychiatrist who had suggested that "boys between 6 and 11 go through a period of time when they want to separate from their mothers."

"Any time the boys see a female in charge, they reject it," Ms. Trias said. "They still want their mothers to tuck them in at night, of course, but they do have this desire for separation."

Ms. Price said: "The daddies have something to do with it, too. They instill a certain expectation in boys. The boys resist being associated with girls. There's peer pressure not to be considered a sissy."

Tsongas becomes first to take '92 presidential plunge

MANCHESTER, N.H. (NYT) — Former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts began a long-shot campaign for the presidency Tuesday with a scornful indictment of "Washington mediocrity" and a plea for "a different path" toward economic and political renewal.

Tsongas

With a quietly reflective speech here and in his hometown of Lowell, Mass., Tsongas became the first official candidate of the 1992 presidential campaign.

"Today I begin a journey of purpose," he told an outdoor rally in Lowell, where hundreds of local supporters listened stoically through a driving rain. "I ask you to come with me."

Tsongas (the name is pronounced SONG-guss) enters a race for the Democratic presidential nomination that seems frozen by the war in the Persian Gulf, the remarkable popularity of President Bush and the fear among many Democrats that Bush is all but unbeatable.

Democrats from the Rev. Jesse Jackson to Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee have been considering a race, but only Tsongas, who left the Senate six years ago because he had cancer, has taken the plunge.

The 50-year-old Massachusetts Democrat, who underwent a successful bone marrow transplant five years ago, seemed untroubled Tuesday by the conventional wisdom, which holds that his chances for the nomination are slim.

Indeed, he offered his candidacy as an antidote to politics-as-usual, seeming to play to the same restless mood among voters that showed up in numerous public opinion polls and some elections last year.

He talked of returning to "the values of our ancestors" and of recognizing the nation's responsibility to future generations by refusing to burden them with a spoiled environment and a bloated federal debt.

"In the Apache tongue the word for grandfather and grandson is the same," said Tsongas, surrounded by his wife and three daughters. "They understood linkage. They understood honor. They understood mutual obligation.

"In Washington there is no such wisdom. It is all here and now. It is all polling data. The vision extends only to the next election."

This failure of political leadership, Tsongas said, has left the nation drifting, falling far short of its destiny.

"We were never meant to be the world's greatest debtor nation," he said. "We were never meant to have American workers rank ninth in the world in wages. We were never meant to have dysfunctional schools or imploding cities or racial disharmony or an evironment at risk."

In contrast to the made-for-television messages of most political speeches, Tsongas' announcement speech had an almost mystical tone.

Tsongas supports a carefully targeted cut in the tax on capital gains to encourage investment. He backs nuclear power as a means of easing the nation's dependence on fossil fuels.

Foley pushes probe of Reagan campaign, hostage link

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Several senior members of the House of Representatives, encouraged by Speaker Thomas S. Foley, are beginning to explore informally charges that the 1980 Reagan-Bush campaign staff dealt with Iran to make sure 52 American hostages were not released until after the election.

Foley was asked at a news conference about a recent article on the Op-Ed page of The New York Times by Gary Sick, a professor and former National Security Council official, describing his research into a possible deal designed to keep President Carter from scoring an electoral coup with a release of the hostages before Election Day. Foley said, "I think we need to explore the allegations."

"I think they are very serious allegations, and, if there is significant evidence that this took place, I think it should be even more formally examined," he said. "I think at the moment we need to explore informally whether there is justification for a more established review."

Sick, an adjunct professor of Middle East politics at Columbia University, is to meet on Thursday with several members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, including Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, the Indiana Democrat who chairs its subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East.

The cautious nature of the congressional interest was described by Rep. Bob Torricelli, D-N.J., who said the legal and political consequences of the charges were so broad that members "wanted to have some confidence before proceeding" and would in any case move very cautiously.

Sick's article, which appeared on April 15, summarized information he had developed concerning a purported deal in which Iran would receive arms in exchange for delaying any release of hostages.

Sick said several sources described to him meetings in July 1980 in Madrid between a top Iranian cleric and William J. Casey, Reagan's campaign chairman, who later became director of central intelligence. Other sources, Sick said, told him the deal was consummated in meetings in Paris from Oct. 15 to 20, 1980.

Sick did not commit himself absolutely to the accounts. "In the absence of hard documentary evidence, the possibility of an elaborate disinformation campaign cannot be excluded," he wrote.

Sick expressed even more uncertainty about the charge that George Bush, then the vice presidential candidate, attended at least one of the meetings in Paris. "I have not made up my mind about this allegation," he wrote.

'Swat team' to study Medicaid

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The White House on Tuesday appointed what officials called a "budgetary swat team" to find out why Medicaid costs are expected to rise more than $15 billion over the next fiscal year and why the government failed to foresee the huge increase before this.

The Medicaid program, which pays for the medical care of the poor, is now expected to cost the federal government $65 billion in the 1992 fiscal year, up from about $49 billion in the current year. That is the largest percentage increase in any major federal program. The states are expected to pay another $50 billion, or more, in 1992.

"Medicaid is severely straining most state budgets as well as federal resources," the White House budget director, Richard G. Darman, said in a joint statement with the secretary of health and human services, Dr. Louis W. Sullivan.

"If we are to continue to assure health care for the less fortunate, we must improve our ability to account for these costs, understand the reasons for their growth and plan accordingly."

The federal government relies on estimates for entitlement programs like Medicaid when its draws up its budget because it takes as long as two years to receive the actual bills. Darman said the estimates on the costs for Medicaid in the 1992 fiscal year grew by 30 percent from January 1990 to March of this year.

"We need better data and better estimating," Darman said. "The system cannot tolerate budget shocks of the magnitude Medicaid has been providing."

The creation of the team worries health experts, who fear that it is the beginning of an attempt to cut back on services to the needy.

No radiation released in Maine nuke plant fire

WASHINGTON (NYT) — A nuclear power plant in Maine was crippled by explosions and a fire Monday night, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said Tuesday, but it said no radiation was released into the air.

The commission and officials of the Maine Yankee nuclear power plant in Wiscasset said the flames, heat and firefighting efforts did no damage to the reactor or other nuclear parts of the plant. Automatic firefighting equipment in the nuclear part was not even needed, they said.

The fire began at 6:32 p.m. EDT in the non-nuclear part of the plant, plant officials and the commission said. Its cause has not been determined, but employees told federal investigators they heard what appeared to be explosions before the fire broke out near the plant's main electrical transformer and beneath the turbine generator.

The fire occurred 100 feet to 200 feet from the containment building that encases the plant's nuclear reactor within a 4½-foot-thick wall of concrete reinforced with steel.

Plant officials said the fire burned for four hours and was fed by hydrogen used to cool the generator. It was hot enough to cause the main electrical transformer to buckle, rupturing seals, and allowing thousands of gallons of lubricating oil to spill into a catchment area outside the plant. At least 200 gallons of oil leaked into the Back River, plant officials said.

No one was injured, plant officials said.

Richard H. Wessman, project director in the Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, stressed that although the fire appeared to be severe such accidents have occurred before in nuclear and conventionally powered electrical generating plants.

The automatic shutdown system, as intended, shut down the reactor without incident immediately after the fire broke out, he said.

At a news conference, Maine Yankee's president, Charles Frizzle, also said the fire could have happened at any power plant.

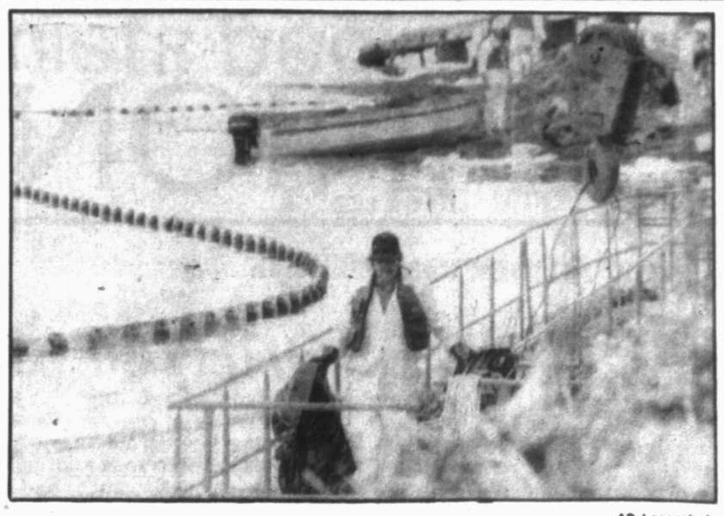

"I don't want to downgrade the seriousness of the event," Frizzle said, "but it's not a nuclear event. From my perspective, this should not reflect negatively on the use of nuclear power. It has nothing to do with nuclear power."

The accident occurred during a politically sensitive period for the American nuclear power industry. On Thursday, the regulatory commission is to rule on a staff recommendation to restart a reactor at Browns Ferry, a troubled nuclear plant near Athens, Ala., that has been shut for safety reasons since March 1985.

John Moulton, a spokesman for the Tennessee Valley Authority in Knoxville, Tenn., the plant's owner, said the accident in Maine should not effect the decision to restart Browns Ferry.

Next week, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee is scheduled to vote on a measure that would streamline the licensing procedures for nuclear power plants.

The changes, proposed by the committee's chairman, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., would make licensing a one-step process and eliminate almost every stage that enables the public to make comments.

Cruise missiles history with INF treaty action

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — As of Wednesday, the Air Force's ground-launched cruise missiles will be but a brief footnote in history.

The last of the 543 missiles, less than eight years old and capable of carrying nuclear warheads about 1,500 miles, will have been destroyed under the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty between the Soviet Union and the United States.

Since the treaty took effect in June 1988, all but one of 403 Army Pershing missiles and 21 of 1,846 Soviet ground-launched missiles in six classes also have been eliminated.

The remainder will be destroyed by fire, crushing or explosives within the next few weeks under the eyes of the opposite country's inspection teams.

Soviet inspectors, headed by Gen. Vladimir Medvedev, director of the Soviet Nuclear Risk Reduction Center, arrived Monday for the 17th time at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base, where all the Air Force ground-launched cruise missiles have been destroyed.

The latest visit, Medvedev said, "has a peculiar feature since now, there'll be no nuclear cruise missiles in the world of this type."

Under terms of the treaty, in effect for 10 more years, each country can conduct up to 15 short-notice inspections in each of the first five years and 10 in each of the last five years.

Maj. Gen. Robert W. Parker, director of the U.S. On-Site Inspection Agency, said that "starting the final chapter in eliminating an entire class of weapon systems" is a historical first.

And Medvedev, speaking through an interpreter, said: "We are sincerely satisfied with the process we are observing now, because it will greatly contribute to the cause of the disarmament ... I think it's quite normal and useful for the development of mankind."

"We haven't seen any major problems during the elimination process and we hope to follow the same road of success during these activities," Medvedev said.

The treaty allows reuse of each 21-foot cruise missile's navigation system, jet engine, rocket launch booster and nuclear warhead. Col. Bruce Rianda, commander of the Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Center, said those parts can be used in the Navy's Tomahawk cruise missiles, which were used in the Persian Gulf War.

Americans to get shuttle glimpse

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Americans who rarely get to see a space shuttle overhead will be able to view Discovery as it passes over much of the United States on a "Star Wars" research mission.

The shuttle's orbital path usually does not take it north of Texas or Florida. But Discovery's rare 57-degree inclination — the angle of a ship's orbit to the equator — sends it as far north as the Aleutian Islands and Newfoundland. The high inclination was required for mission observations.

Discovery will resemble a tiny, swiftly moving star and be visible to the naked eye.

The high inclination also provides a treat for Discovery's seven astronauts. They will pass over three-quarters of the world's land mass during the flight, giving them daylight views of seldom seen parts of the planet.

Discovery will fly over Texas cities, including Austin, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio during its journey 161 miles above Earth. The shuttle is scheduled to land Monday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

In Dallas, which is on a similar latitude to Midland, the shuttle will be visible for two minutes Friday at 6:03 a.m., local time, appearing 15 degrees above the southwest horizon and moving to 81 degrees above the south-southeast horizon before disappearing.

It will also be visible for two minutes Saturday at 5:57 a.m., local time, appearing 15 degrees above the west-southwest horizon and moving to 43 degrees above the north-northwest horizon before disappearing.

Make your voice heard at the polls

Even with the 10,000 Midland County voters who Elections Administrator Bettye Calvert had speculated would have cast ballots by the end of the early voting period Tuesday, thousands more will be able to mark their ballots Saturday. They should.

The issues on the ballots in the city, hospital district and school district elections to a large extent represent at the grassroots level what this state and nation are all about. The political representatives being chosen in these elections will help to shape the future of medical care, education and basic city services in Midland. The people who vote will determine the course of the future.

Among the most important issues on the ballots are the two proposals on the Midland Independent School District ballot which call for (1) the expenditure of $13.4 million which would fund everything contained in an all-or-nothing bond proposal defeated by voters last year except a new junior high school; and (2) the expenditure of $10.8 million to build a new junior high school on a site in west Midland.

The items contained in both proposals are needed to relieve overcrowding in the schools as well as bring school facilities up to date.

Voting for these proposals will help ensure that all Midland's school children have the opportunity to receive a good education. We recommend voters approve both.

After meetings with all the candidates for elective office, the Reporter-Telegram recently published its recommendations on each contested race and each issue. We repeat those recommendations now for the benefit of readers:

MIDLAND INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT
Bond Proposition 1 — For.
Bond Proposition 2 — For.
Trustee, District 3 — Jack Hightower.
Trustee, District 6 — Gary Willis.

CITY OF MIDLAND
Council, District 1 — James F. Devenport.
Council, District 2 — Jose A. "Beau" Zertuche.

We all pay taxes; think before voting

The people of Midland are being deceived by an ad run in the Sunday, April 28, edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. The ad is a "half-truth" about senior citizens' tax burden in the upcoming school bond election.

According to Midland Central Appraisal District (MCAD), to qualify for a tax freeze on school taxes you must be 65 years of age or older, own your home, and reside in the same on Jan. 1 of any given year in order to apply and qual ify for such a freeze.

However, if the truth be told, no one is exempt from a tax increase. Every business in Midland, whether it be a motel, office building, restaurant, dry cleaner or grocery, et cetera, will feel the bite of a tax increase. Even senior citizens who reside in rental property will possibly see an increase in their rent. You know who pays for a tax increase. We all do!

So think before you vote and vote for only what is needed. If it is not needed vote it down, but vote.

Bill Bosworth
Midland

Failure of candidate to vote explained

In his letter Sunday, April 28, Bill Larkin stated that the voters deserve to know why Jean Pittman failed to vote in the January hospital tax referendum.

I am familiar enough with the facts and circumstances surrounding this situation to know that Jean and her husband spent virtually night and day at the hospital for nearly three weeks in January while her father-in-law was critically ill. Mr. Pittman passed away on Friday afternoon, Jan. 18, the day before the referendum on Saturday, Jan. 19.

While I am certain that under other circumstances Jean would have voted in the election, I know that on election day both Jean and her husband were understandably occupied with emotions concerning a family death and making funeral arrangements.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, May 1, the 121st day of 1991. There are 244 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Fifty years ago, on May 1, 1941, the motion picture "Citizen Kane," directed by and starring Orson Welles, premiered in New York. Hailed as one of the greatest achievements of cinema, "Citizen Kane" recounts, through flashbacks, the life of a recently deceased newspaper publisher as a reporter tries to solve the mystery of the publisher's dying word: "Rosebud."

On this date:

In 1963, James W. Whittaker of Redmond, Wash., became the first American to conquer Mount Everest as he and a Sherpa guide reached the summit.

JACK ANDERSON

Fed up, senator becomes lobbyist

WASHINGTON — When Sen. James McClure retired from Congress this year, he did not throw away his Washington experience and head for the trout streams of his native Idaho.

Anderson

The three-term Republican said he had become disillusioned with "wet-finger politics" — gutless lawmakers who vote with the shifting breezes. But apparently his dismay with Washington politics did not stop him from wanting to take advantage of it as a high-priced lobbyist.

Few people are more marketable than the former senior Republican on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee who is also well-Connnected in the administration as a longtime friend of President Bush.

With that resume, McClure recruited his two top aides from his days in the Senate and created a consulting firm — McClure, Gerard and Neuenschwander Inc. Their first clients were General Atomics and L.B. Industries, two energy-related businesses that could use some of McClure's clout in Washington.

McClure is prohibited by Senate rules from directly lobbying the Senate for his first year out of the club, but General Atomics still felt his firm was worth a retainer of $10,000 a month.

The firm is not McClure's only endeavor these days. His Senate committee used to oversee the management of a needy U.S. commonwealth in the South Pacific — the Northern Marianas. McClure has now hooked up with a proposed foundation that would funnel development money to the islands.

The Northern Marianas, 1,500 miles southeast of Japan, fell under U.S. supervision after World War II. Since then, the United States has supplemented the tiny nation's annual budget and tried to help manage its affairs. During the 1980s, the population tripled to 46,000 people and the Marianas became a tourist haven, a little Hawaii for Japanese jetsetters.

The sewer, water and power facilities on the islands have not kept pace with the boom and the island government is in a bind. It can't afford to borrow more money and the State Department won't let the Marianas take cash from Japan or any other foreign government.

So supporters of the islands came up with the notion of a Marianas Improvement Foundation, which would work like a development bank, using the investment capital of private people (primarily Japanese), as well as the sale of bonds. The foundation board would include three Japanese, three Americans and three Marianas residents.

McClure apparently is slated to be the foundation's managing director, or possibly the chairman of the board of trustees. His former staff director on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, Frank Cushing, is considered a likely candidate to run the foundation.

The proposed foundation is making some in the government of the Northern Marianas nervous. They like the idea of development money coming in to the islands, but they're not sure they want it sifted through Americans in Washington. And they were stunned by the proposed operating budget in the foundation's Washington office — $600,000 a year. "We don't want this to be a retirment firm for (Capitol) Hill people," one Marianas official told our associate Jim Lynch. Some of the deep-pocket Japanese investors have also expressed reservations about routing their money through Washington.

McClure laughed at the rumors leaking out of the Marianas that his salary would be $150,000 a year. He claimed he doesn't know what his salary will be yet and said the rumored figure was "far too high." He is involved, he said, because he wants to help the Marianas get money.

McClure has been a busy guy since he retired, but he may get busier. His name has surfaced repeatedly on the short list of candidates to replace Energy Secretary James Watkins, whose days are numbered in the Cabinet. It might be some time before McClure has time to cast off the politics of Washington which he finds so distasteful.

Brotherhood deserves a chance at Saddam

The question I am asked more than any other is, why don't we just blow away Saddam Hussein and be done with it? I must admit that I think about it every waking moment, and watching Hussein go up in smoke is one of my fondest dreams.

Buchwald

Long ago and far away, when the Bay of Pigs missed being our finest hour, the CIA contracted with the Mafia to have Castro killed. The Mafia tried everything, including poisoning Castro's cigars, but they didn't succeed.

Today, there are many in the United States who feel that just because the brotherhood failed once doesn't mean we shouldn't give them a second chance.

I went to see my friend Lucky Rico to ask if he thought that the mob might be interested in doing one of their celebrated hit jobs on the infamous Saddam.

He said, "It's not easy. The main reason why it's so difficult to kill Hussein is that every man in Iraq looks exactly like him. If you watch the evening news, the Iraqi males sport the same mustache and wear the same black beret. It's no accident. Saddam knows that if we tried to get him, we'd have to wipe out all the look-alikes in his country."

"I don't approve of assassination," I told Lucky. "At the same time, it seems a shame that Saddam is still breathing in and out after the grief he's caused. What would you do if you had the contract?"

"We're not certain that we want the job. The Mafia has always believed that dictators should be strung up by their own people — the way Mussolini was. On the other hand, if there was enough money involved, we might have a whack at it. I guess the easiest thing to do is get Hussein when he's having a shave in the barbershop. Then you don't have to worry about a moving target. If that didn't work, I'd plant cyanide in his mustache cup."

"And if those attempts failed?"

"As you know, Hussein is a very snappy dresser. I would intercept a package sent by his tailor from Italy, and sew a plastic explosive in the zipper of his trousers. Then when he unzipped them to go to bed — POOF — and the emperor would have no clothes."

"If you can do it, we'll pay for it," I said.

"Of course," he continued, "there's nothing wrong with taking Saddam out to a good Italian restaurant in Baghdad and holding his head under the minestrone for five minutes."

"I thought I saw that in 'The Godfather.' "

"When we take a contract on someone we want the client to be happy."

"What about an accident? Could you arrange for Hussein to be kicked in the head by one of the camels he stole from the Kurds?"

"Yes, but Saddam is too wily to get close to a camel he doesn't know. It might be better to run over him in a Russian tank while he was giving one of his cousins a medal."

"Would you kiss Saddam before you eliminated him?"

"I'm not sure. Twenty-eight years ago my father kissed Castro and it didn't do any good."

WILLIAM SAFIRE

Answers to decline of the East are needed

WASHINGTON — In the aftermath of victory in the Persian Gulf war, we made three clearly discernible blunders.

1. We deceived ourselves by putting our fear of Iraq's national dismemberment ahead of the natural pressure toward ethnic autonomy.

Safire

2. We were wholly unprepared for the cruelty of a crumbling regime toward its own people, and for the Kurds' willingness to face catastrophic deprivation in exodus rather than the predations of the ruling elite.

3. We foolishly allowed ourselves to become prisoners of our stated policy (to drive Iraqi forces from Kuwait) and thereby became powerless to pursue our real policy (to rid the world of Saddam Hussein's regime).

Let's recognize those mistakes not to point fingers, though that can be fun, but to pave the way to answering this question: How can we apply those costly lessons of postwar Iraq to avoid worse mistakes in the aftermath of victory in the cold war? If we fail to read the gulf lessons, all three post-victory mistakes will be repeated on a global scale.

Mr. Gorbachev and Mr. Yeltsin may lock each other in desperate embrace, but the central regime in Moscow is losing its legitimacy as completely, though not as suddenly, as the regime in Baghdad did. The Soviet Union is a zombie nation, an empire of the unwilling, no longer held together by an idea, or an identity, or sense of purpose; it has defeated itself as completely as Iraq did by inviting its aerial destruction.

Economic collapse looms; even the men said to be in charge in the Kremlin admit that. An exodus of the fearful and the hungry is a likelihood; the rush of a million Jews allowed to leave is an indicator of the tens of millions of other Soviets who will be drawn toward an inhospitable Europe.

Political disintegration is a work in progress. The Baltic states are of right independent; other parts of the internal empire are determined to go; Russia and its remaining neighbor republics are lurching toward a looser union.

The first lesson of Iraq to apply to the Soviet implosion is this: Stop treating the union of republics as more important than the welfare of the constituent peoples. Order and stability are not always found in the status quo; on the contrary, when the tectonic plates underlying nation-states begin to move, we heighten the pressure by failing to recognize new realities.

The second lesson has to do with our duty to intervene when a state's central leaders order their army to kill the people. We do not have the ability to intervene militarily in the self-defeated Soviet Union (or in China) as we do in defeated Iraq, but we now know we have the obligation to apply all the economic and diplomatic pressure we can bring to bear.

The third lesson: We must not do in the ongoing Soviet collapse what we did in the sudden Iraqi collapse — become captives of our stated goals to the detriment of our national purpose.

In assembling a great convoy, even a superpower must go as slowly as the slowest necessary ship; that's what we did in the gulf, limiting our stated goal far short of our real, well-known and avowedly unstated purpose. But when the stated goal has been reached and the purpose is in view, we should not become crabbed by our own rhetoric; we should pursue our purpose more publicly.

Our stated goal in the Soviet Union is stability and orderly change, but our officially unstatable purpose is to encourage the speediest move toward market salvation and the most sweeping devolution of political power.

Thus are morality and practicality, once antithetical, now intertwined. History is just beginning; the last standing superpower cannot escape involvement in the consequences of its success and its adversary's failure. As we have seen in the microcosm of Iraq, when we pretend otherwise, we put ourselves to shame.

Nationalists, unionists begin talks on Ulster's future

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (NYT) — The first significant political talks in strife-torn Northern Ireland in 15 years got under way here Tuesday with a wide gulf separating Roman Catholic nationalists and Protestant unionists and with unionists deeply divided themselves.

The main issues separating the nationalists, who want a united Ireland, and the unionists, who want the province to remain British, are the same ones that have undermined all other attempts at reconciliation in the last two decades: the power of the Catholic minority in a regional government and relations between the province and the Republic of Ireland.

The province, which has about 900,000 Protestants and 600,000 Catholics, has been largely ruled from London since 1972.

Since it has refused to renounce violence, Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Irish Republican Army, has been excluded from the talks.

Peter Brooke, the British secretary of state for Northern Ireland who is chairman of the talks, began the closed proceedings Tuesday by holding separate discussions on the agenda and procedure with the Social Democratic and Labor Party, the nationalist party led by John Hume that represents the majority of Ulster's Catholics, and with the Alliance Party, a small liberal party of Catholics and Protestants.

While wanting to preserve the union with Britain, the Alliance, which is led by John Alderdice, is not fanatical about it and will generally support the Social Democratic and Labor Party in the talks.

Brooke is to hold similar sessions this week with the Ulster Unionists and the smaller Democratic Unionist Party. They represent most of the province's Protestants.

Round-table talks, which will be held in a conference room near the long unused regional parliament chambers in the suburb of Stormont, are to begin next week, also behind closed doors, and are to last up to 10 weeks.

Hume and three other senior SDLP officials were the first to arrive Tuesday morning at the Parliament Buildings, a massive Greek classical stone structure that sits on a hill, overlooking an area of small towns and farms.

In this land of high emotions, it would have seemed odd if there were no demonstration to mar the beginning of the talks.

And Cedric Wilson, a Democratic Unionist and former mayor of nearby Castlereagh, ensured that this day was no different than any other in the last two decades of strife that have racked this province. "Ulster is British! That is the message for you. No surrender to Dublin rule!" he shouted at Hume, who was unruffled.

"We are very patient people," Hume told reporters. "It is a beginning and we hope it will be successful," he said of the talks.

In an interview last week, he said he was "more hopeful than optimistic" that the talks would result in an agreement, making him one of Ulster's more upbeat politicians.

If the four parties make substantial progress toward agreeing on a form of regional government — and Brooke will be the arbiter of "substantial progress" — the Irish government will join the talks.

Thousands of Koreans hit streets

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tens of thousands of students and workers demonstrated nationwide Tuesday for a second straight day, protesting the fatal police beating of a student and demanding President Roh Tae-woo's ouster.

The escalating unrest posed what may be the strongest challenge yet to Roh's rule. Opposition parties said the demonstrations could intensify if the president balks at political and economic reforms.

In front-page headlines, Korean-language newspapers pointed to increasing strife as dissidents, students and radical workers joined forces. Dissidents said in the coming month they would step up their campaign to oust Roh, contending his administration has lost the confidence of the people.

In Seoul on Monday, more than 30,000 students staged the largest anti-government protest by students this year. The national news agency Yonhap said about 40,000 people took part in protests around the country on Tuesday.

About 2,000 students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks in the southern industrial city of Masan, it said. Protesters ignored leaflets dropped by a police helicopter urging them to stay home.

About 15,000 workers and students rallied at Seoul's Yonsei University Tuesday night, many chanting "Overthrow Roh Tae-woo!"

An alliance of radical workers, Chonnohyop, said 100,000 people would boycott their jobs Wednesday.

In Kwangju, a southern city that is an opposition hotbed, about 10,000 students pushed and shoved riot police in nighttime street protests around the hospital where a young woman protester was in critical condition from self-inflicted burns.

The woman, Park Seung-hee, 20, set herself ablaze at an anti-government rally on Monday to protest last week's beating death of student Kang Kyung-dae in Seoul. The death has galvanized the protesters.

Ship begins cleanup of Kuwait waters

SHUAIBA PORT, Kuwait (AP) — In the first cleanup of oil-fouled Kuwaiti coastal waters since the war's end, the Norwegian ship Al-Waasit is taking on more than 1,000 barrels of oil daily.

But while the week-old oil-skimming operation has been successful, at least 500 barrels a day are still leaking into the Persian Gulf from five different sites in Kuwait, the ship's captain, John Andersen, said Tuesday.

More than 3 million barrels were spilled into the gulf during the Persian Gulf War, creating one of the worst slicks ever. Iraqi sabotage caused much of the damage, but the allied bombing campaign also contributed.

Andersen said there is no need to leave the dock yet because the tides bring so much oil, which is four inches thick in some places.

Also, only a narrow channel into the harbor has been cleared of Iraqi mines and it is too dangerous to venture out.

A small barge with an oil-skimming conveyer belt traverses the harbor to take on the crude, which is brought back to the Al-Waasit for storage.

The Al-Waasit has been collecting just over 1,000 barrels a day and its 10,000-barrel storage containers are almost full, Andersen said.

A Norwegian supertanker is coming from Dubai within days to take the oil from the Al-Waasit, the captain said.

Prior to the Al-Waasit's arrival, there was no cleanup effort in Kuwaiti waters, though the war ended two months ago.

Capt. Ali Haider, who is running the port of Shuabia, said he desperately wants more workers to restore the port, which is littered with debris from war-damaged buildings and the abandoned sandbag encampments of Iraqi soldiers.

With so much of the port destroyed, help will have to come from abroad, Haider said.

"We have very detailed contingency plans (for oil spills)," said Haider. "But all our equipment was stolen. The best plans in the world wouldn't do us any good."

A worker with Norpol, a Norwegian company that cleans up oil spills, directs a pump into a container on a small barge-like boat the skims oil in Suuaiba Port, Kuwait, Tuesday.

Environmentalists have complained that the Kuwaiti government has made the ecology a low priority despite the overwhelming damage to the land, water and air from the oil spill and the oil well fires.

Georgia quake wipes mountain village 'off map'

KUTAISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Rescuers on Tuesday dug through a mountain village that one official said was "wiped off the map," hoping to find survivors among dozens of people buried alive in an earthquake.

Monday's quake in Soviet Georgia killed at least 80 people, injured 500, destroyed 40 schools and six hospitals, and left 80,000 homeless, said Georgian Prime Minister Tengiz Sigua.

By Tuesday night, rescuers were holding out little hope of finding survivors in collapsed homes and buildings in the towns and villages of north-central Georgia.

Sigua said after a helicopter tour that he expected the death toll to rise. He described flying over the village of Khakhieti, destroyed when a mountainside collapsed and buried 40 people alive.

"It was awful," Sigua said in an interview with The Associated Press in Kutaisi, about 36 miles west of Khakhieti. "Simply put, it's a nightmare."

"This village was wiped off the map," he said.

In the town of Sachkhere, a regional center, hundreds of homes were destroyed and makeshift tarpaulin tents were erected in a soccer field for 60 families. All electricity was knocked out.

One person was pulled alive from a wrecked building in the town Monday, and a group of rescuers arrived from Moscow to look for more survivors Tuesday night.

City official Alexander Cherbakov said they needn't have bothered. Noting that survivors were found for days in the rubble of the 1988 earthquake in neighboring Armenia, he said: "Armenia was different ... There were no hills there." Mountains of rock crushed homes in the Georgian towns, minimizing chances for survival.

The injured were being ferried out to hospitals elsewhere in the mountainous republic, while officials were shipping in busloads of water, food and tents for the homeless.

About 80 percent of the housing was destroyed in the affected area, where about 250,000 people live, Sigua said.

Wednesday — the Soviet holiday of May Day — was declared a day of mourning in Georgia. Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev sent his condolences to relatives of the victims and he authorized his government to assist the stricken region.

Offers of aid have been received from Israel, France and Japan, Sigua said.

The American Red Cross in Washington said the League of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies sent an assessment team to Georgia and that the Armenian Red Cross also sent a 27-member rescue team.

The earthquake struck at 12:13 p.m. Monday among sparsely populated villages and towns and measured 7.1 on the Richter scale. Its epicenter was near 11,363-foot Mount Samertskhie and Ambrolauri, a town 90 miles northwest of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi.

Sigua said it was fortunate that the quake occurred at midday, when schoolchildren were at recess.

"We were very, very lucky, because all the children were outside," he said. "Otherwise, the disaster would be 20 to 30 times worse."

Rescuers managed to save 30 miners trapped in the Barital barium mine high in the Caucasus Mountains near the quake's epicenter, said Georgia's deputy health minister, Merab Ketashvili.

Aftershocks continued throughout Monday and early Tuesday.

Police soon will work overtime to keep Midlanders restrained.

But the crackdown, which will not cost any local tax money, is geared to save lives rather than supress them.

Armed with a $15,000 federal grant, which the Midland City Council formally accepted Monday, police will launch a seatbelt awareness campaign in June.

The money, provided by the federal transportation department and funneled through the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, solely will cover officer overtime costs.

Lt. Clint Lovejoy of the Midland Police Department said officers involved in the four-month campaign, which ends in September, will prowl the streets hunting for unrestrained motorists.

The prey likely will receive a citation for not wearing seatbelts or having an unrestrained child in the vehicle, Lovejoy said. Each violations is a Class C misdemeanor carrying a fine of up to $200.

The seatbelt patrol could strike at any time or place in the city, Lovejoy said.

The goal, he said, is 70 percent compliance by September's end. The percentage is based on a study of occupants in 250 vehicles at locations selected for the survey, Lovejoy said.

"We're at about 67 or 68 percent compliance rate now," he said. "The federal government is trying to raise the level to 70 percent nationwide. We also want to cut down on injuries and fatalities in accidents."

Local figures on injuries caused by not wearing seatbelts were unavailable.

Statewide, 1,762, or 52 percent, of the 3,361 who died in traffic accidents in 1989 were not wearing seatbelts, Texas Department of Public Safety figures show.

Midland Police Department figures show that from January through March of this year police wrote 200 tickets for seatbelt violations and 50 for unrestrained children. There were 600 citations for a lack of seatbelts and 150 for unrestrained children from September through December last year.

State law requires front-seat riders to wear seatbelts. Children up to 2 years old must ride in a special strap-down seat. Those ages 2 through 4 must wear seatbelts, regardless of where they sit in a vehicle, while those older than 4 follow the same seatbelt rules as adults.

A state-funded seatbelt awareness program has been ongoing in Odessa since December after the city received a $25,000 grant to operate the program.

Lt. Victor Crumrine of the Odessa Police Department said the crackdown in his city will last until Sept. 30, with a goal of 70 percent compliance by then.

Odessa officers have put 423 overtime hours into the campaign, and the results already are showing, Crumrine said.

A March 16, 1990, survey showed that 52 percent of Odessa motorists complied with state seatbelt laws.

Wanted: Photos of Tall City skyline

■ Midland Chamber of Commerce sponsoring photography contest in conjunction with the Celebration of the Arts.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

People don't call Midland the "Tall City" for nothing.

"We have a rather impressive skyline that juts out of the prairie. It impresses a lot of people and to us, it's our signature," said Bruce Partain of the Midland Chamber of Commerce.

Friday evening the trademark skyline will be aglow as the lights in most downtown buildings will be left on from 7 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. in conjunction with a photography contest and Celebration of the Arts.

"We want to be able to promote the city and to be able to do that we need good photographs and want the community to participate in that," Partain said.

"I'd like people to be creative about it. It doesn't have to be the ordinary shot, although the ordinary shot may win. The skyline has to be in the photograph — that's the only criteria," Partain said.

Joining local photography buffs will be Randy Hahn, a Dallas photographer, who will come to Midland with reportedly the world's largest movable camera, Partain said.

The camera — Hahn's invention — measures eight-feet long, four-feet high and four-feet deep with an 1,800 millimeter lens.

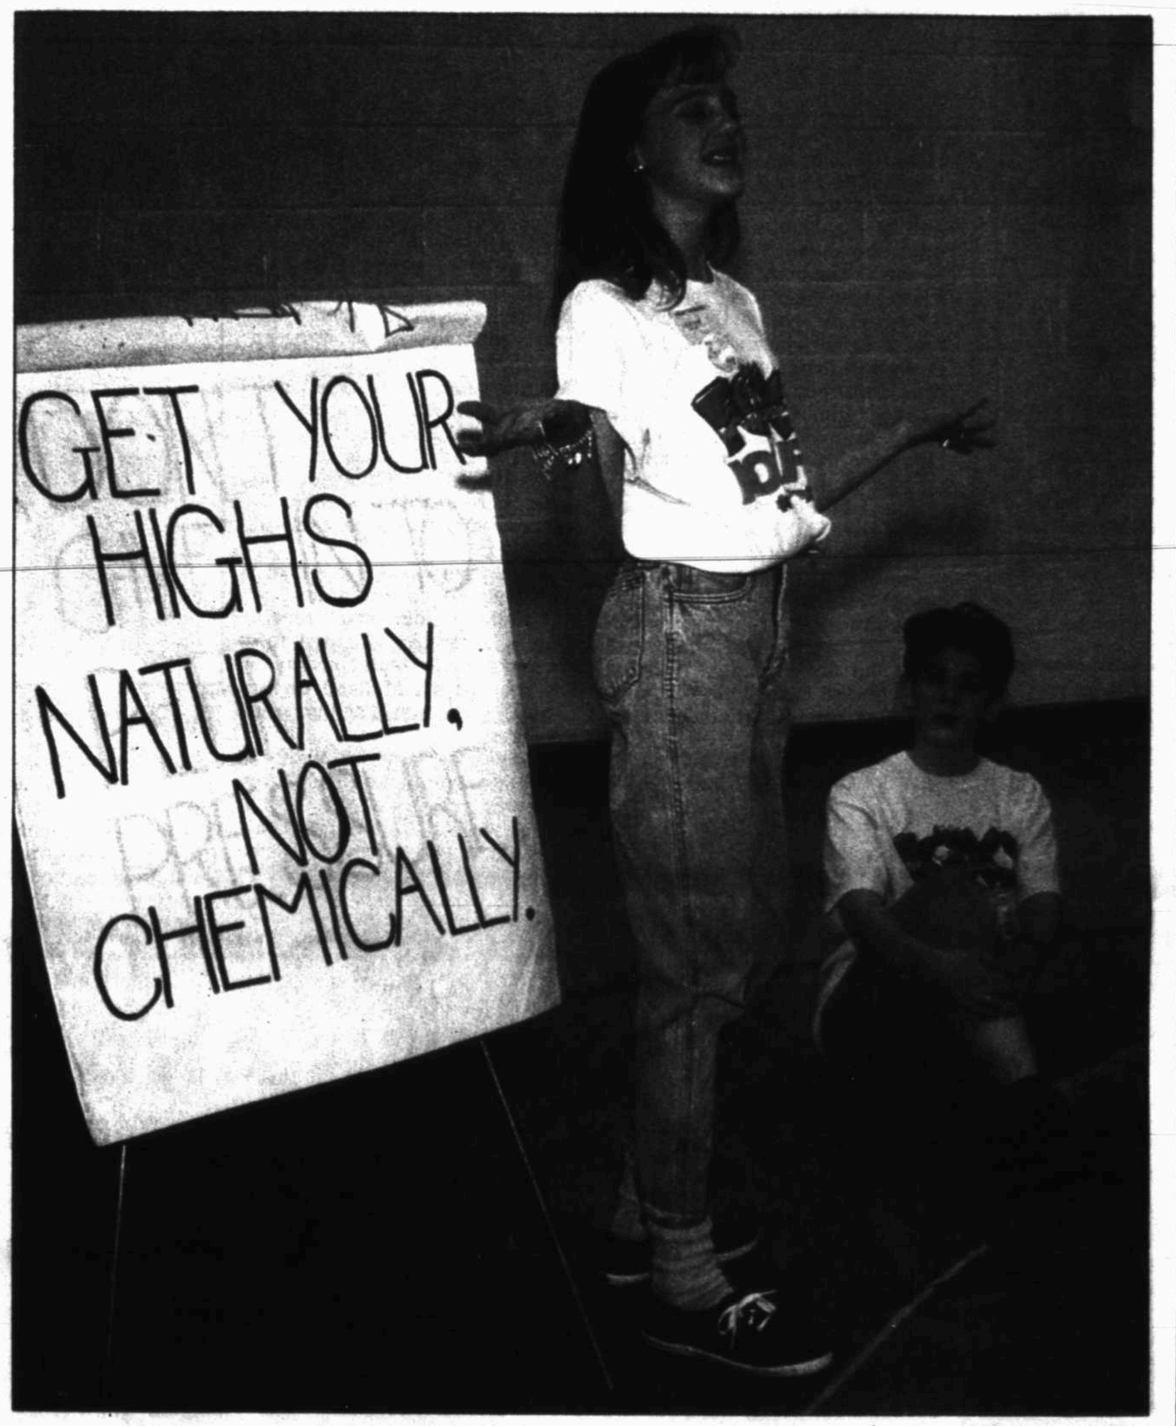

The giant camera uses 10 by 72 inch film that enables printing large photographs that maintain fine details.

Partain said the Chamber of Commerce was honored Hahn was coming to Midland and added that local photographers should not be put off.

The contest is open to everyone. The first place winner will receive $200; second place, $100; and third place, $50.

■ Joshua Brodnex is being tried on charges of attempted murder and aggravated assault in shooting of David Posey last October.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Three witnesses in 238th District Court identified Joshua Matthew Brodnex on Monday as the man who shot David Posey last October.

Posey, 31, suffered gunshot wounds to the neck, shoulder and face, a Midland surgeon testified Tuesday. Dr. Roberta Case said Posey spent more than a month in Memorial Hospital and Medical Center following the Oct. 27, 1990, shooting.

Police arrested Brodnex, 26, the day of the shooting on the strength of witness accounts. He faces attempted murder and aggravated assault charges, to which he pleaded innocent Monday.

Brodnex's trial entered its second day Tuesday before Judge John Hyde and a seven-man, five-woman jury.

During Tuesday's testimony, Posey's wife Barbara said she was with Posey when the shooting occurred and that Brodnex pulled the trigger.

"I'm certain it was him because I know him when I see him," Mrs. Posey said.

She said she had pursued an extramarital relationship with Brodnex while her husband was serving time in prison on a burglary conviction. A conflict between the two men developed when Posey returned from prison in 1990, she said, and Brodnex assaulted Posey on two occasions before the shooting.

The Poseys were returning from playing cards at a friend's home around 2 a.m. when the final attack occurred, Mrs. Posey said.

"We was walking toward the front door," of Posey's mother's house at 405 W. Nobles Ave., Mrs. Posey said. "I seen him (Posey) grab his arm and he hollered and fell to the ground."

Mrs. Posey, who added that she heard a shot before Posey fell, said she turned around and saw Brodnex standing behind her with a rifle

More than $100,000 raised for Rankin boy

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

RANKIN — A "tremendous outpouring of the human spirit" over concern for 6-year-old Trace Gipson became evident as more than $118,000 was raised for the ailing boy's medical expenses.

"It's just amazing," said Wally Johnson.

Johnson, president of the town's only bank and treasurer of "A Hand Up for Rankin" which is coordinating the fund-raising campaign for the local youngster, noted that the $100,000 mark was reached less than a month after the Trace Gipson fund-raising campaign got underway.

The funds came from such events as car washes, bingo and volleyball games, steer- and goat-roping events, barbecue cookouts, dances, golf tournaments, and other games, pure donations and, most recently, the $100-a-plate "Crystal on the Fifty" dinner featuring West Texas author Elmer Kelton, whose Western novels include the popular "The Time It Never Rained" and "The Good Old Boys."

Saturday night's benefit on the football field here raised $28,000, Johnson said. "It was unbelievably successful."

Trace Gipson, the son of Randy and Vickie Gipson, is suffering from leukemia and is awaiting a life-sustaining bone-marrow transplant. The marrow is to be taken from the boy's 3-year-old sister, Trista, this month at Fort Worth's Cook Children's Hospital.

But before the operation, he is returning to Rankin expressly to visit his friends and his favorite dog, Jaws, noted Dean Nicholson, a Rankin businessman who is president of A Hand Up for Rankin.

"The compassion of the people in West Texas is just great," he said.

"We believe that there was divine intervention" on the boy's behalf, Nicholson said. "God caused the money to come in as fast as it did."

And funds still pouring in to help pay for the boy's medical expenses that could go as high as $300,000, Nicholson said.

Upcoming Gipson benefits include:

■ Friday: garage sale in the Midkiff Community Center.

■ Saturday: golf tournament on the Western Gas Processors plant grounds near Midkiff.

■ Saturday: blue-grass and Western music jamboree in the Iraan High School Cafeteria at 7:30 p.m.

■ May 7: King and His Court, four-man fast-pitch softball exhibition, at 7 p.m. at Angel Stadium in Midland.

■ May 9: Jody Nix and the Texas Cowboys playing at 8 p.m. in the Dub Day Rodeo Arena just outside of Rankin.

■ May 17: The gospel-singing The Crystal River Group in the Monahans Civic Center.

■ May 18: Evening dinner and dance sponsored by the Monahans Volunteer Fire Department in Monahans.

■ May 24, 25, 26: Softball tournament in Rankin beginning at 6 p.m. on May 24 and all day Saturday, May 25, and Sunday afternoon on May 26.

EL PASO (AP) — An artist who captured some of the bloodiest scenes of World War II with his sketches for Time-Life magazine is helping coordinate a Persian Gulf victory exhibit for El Paso.

Tom Lea and several prominent El Paso painters are contributing to the exhibit that will be unveiled June 3 during the Worldwide Air Defense Commanders' Conference at Fort Bliss. The Army already has accepted the paintings for permanent display at Fort Bliss.

"I hope it comes out so the people at Fort Bliss and the community really enjoy it," said Lea. One of his best known sketches is the face of a hollow-eyed GI with a battle scene raging behind him.

Murals by Lea grace buildings in Washington, Dallas, St. Louis, San Antonio and El Paso.

Among other artists who have committed to the project are Marta Arat, Earline Barnes, Jose Cisneros, Cheryl Derrick, Connie Dillman, Bill Herring, Jan Herring, Bill Kolliker, Bill Rakocy, Susan Schwartz, Mel Snodgrass and Bassel Wolfe.

House expected to OK unemployment benefits bill

■ Parents who are fired for caring for sick children could collect.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — People who are fired because they miss work to take care of sick children or who quit because employers won't give them enough time off to provide care would be able to draw unemployment benefits if a bill by Rep. Curtis Soileau, D-Lumberton, becomes law.

The House, which approved Soileau's bill Tuesday on second reading by a 72-66 vote, is expected to approve the measure in a routine vote today. The bill then would go to the Senate.

Currently, people who are fired for cause or who quit their jobs are disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits, unless they leave because of their own illness, injury, disability or pregnancy. Workers who are laid off by a company for financial reasons are eligible for unemployment benefits.

"We hold parents criminally liable for neglecting the health care of their children," Soileau said, "and at the same time we put them in dire risk of losing their jobs if they choose to stay home and take care of their sick children."

Soileau said the unemployment claims would not be charged back to the employer. Claims for such exemptions are paid from a general account that is funded by all Texas employers. A Texas Employment Commission formula based on the number of employees who claim unemployment compensation determines the amount of taxes each employer must pay.

Soileau said when workers have to leave their jobs because of circumstances beyond their control, neither the worker nor the employer should be penalized.

The Texas Association of Business, however, has charged that the bill is a form of a "family leave act" that changes the philosophy behind unemployment insurance. Employers now assume responsibility only for their employees, op-before she panicked and ran away.

Rolandus Swann, a 16-year-old friend of the Posey family who was in the Nobles Street house when the shooting occurred, said he ran to the front door when he heard shots from the front yard.

He said he got to the door in time to see Brodnex standing over Posey and firing a rifle at Posey's head from point-blank range.

"I seen him shoot him one more time," said Swann, who testified that he heard two shots before he arrived at the door.

Swann said he ran out the door and yelled at Brodnex before Brodnex "took off running."

Another witness, George Woodberry, testified that he was driving away after dropping the Poseys off in front of the house when he saw Brodnex "walking fast" toward the couple with a rifle slung over his shoulder.

"I didn't know what to do," Woodberry told prosecutor Ralph Petty. "I just yelled 'No!' Seconds after I yelled ... he took aim at David and he shot him."

Woodberry said he drove away at the urging of his girlfriend, who was in the car along with her young child.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Tom Morgan, Woodberry said he didn't see Brodnex shoot Posey again. However, he testified he saw Brodnex run up to the fallen Posey and point the gun at his head.

According to testimony Monday, police were unable to recover the weapon, believed to be a .22-caliber rifle.

Testimony in Brodnex's trial is scheduled to continue today.

Brodnex, whom court records show is a parolee with past forgery and sexual assault convictions, has been in the Midland County Central Detention Facility since his arrest.

If convicted, he faces up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine for attempted murder, a second-degree felony. If convicted of aggravated assault, a third-degree felony, he faces a maximum of 10 years in prison and a fine up to $5,000.

"If we deny these people their job and we deny them unemployment benefits, we leave them no alternative but to become wards of the state, to go file for food stamps or to get other kinds of state assistance to make it," Soileau said. "Employees should not be penalized because they are taking care of a sick child, and that is what we do currently under the law."

MPD: Crackdown to last 3 months

(From 1B)

A state campaign to increase compliance was launched later that year, and the number improved to 62 percent by last July 30. That campaign included road signs asking motorists to comply with the law.

A survey conducted in March, three months after the seatbelt crackdown campaign was launched, showed a 73 percent compliance rate.

However, recent figures for both Midland and Odessa fall slightly the below state average of 74 percent, Texas Department of Public safety figures show.

Senate OKs bill expanding optometrists' duties

AUSTIN (AP) — The "turf war" between ophthalmologists and optometrists spilled over Tuesday into the Senate, which approved a bill expanding what optometrists can do under the law.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, said optometrists know more about the eye than many physicians but are restricted in what they can do.

His bill would authorize optometrists to treat eye disorders, including administering topical steroids as they have been allowed to do in 22 other states without any reported problems, he said.

Optometrists, who currently are authorized to prescribe glasses to correct defects in vision, are well trained because they must undergo a four-year program that includes one year of clinical work, Glasgow said.

Ophthalmologists are medical doctors who specialize in treatment of eye diseases.

"I've never seen turf fighting any worse in my life — it's nothing other than a turf fight from the ophthalmologists that don't want the optometrists to do anything," Glasgow said.

He said not every town in his largely rural district has an ophthalmologist, and he can't see why people should have to drive 180 miles to see an ophthalmologist for pinkeye when they could be treated by a local optometrist.

Glasgow's bill was brought up on a 23-8 vote and was sent to the House on voice vote.

"All I'm trying to do is to assure that my people, in the rural areas of Texas, have somebody that can treat their eyes," he said.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House a bill instructing the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board to revise its funding formulas to reward colleges where freshman and sophomore courses are taught by tenured faculty, rather than teaching assistants.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the state has been sending the "wrong signal" to colleges, "because we tell them the more graduate programs you have the more money we'll give you," and senior faculty concentrate on research.

"What this bill is calculated to do is to try to give emphasis and reward for quality," Parker said.

In other action Tuesday, the Senate passed to the governor a House-approved bill that would allow the adjutant general to design and have manufactured medals, awards, decorations and ribbons without having to come back to the Legislature for permission.

The Senate approved and returned to the House a bill that would continue the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission, which was created in 1971, under a nine-member commission. The bill would ease the burden of proof for new car buyers under the so-ealled Lemon Law, which offers recourse for customers who purchase motor vehicles that cannot be repaired.

Senate bills approved and sent to the House would:

- Abolish the Texas Housing Agency and the Texas Department of Community Affairs and merge the two agencies into a new Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, said the merger would "end the abuses of the Texas Housing Agency and will for the first time establish a real housing policy for this state."

A nine-member board appointed by governor would oversee the new department, he said.

- Reorganize the Texas State Technical Institute as the Texas State Technical College System.
- Regulate property tax consultants.
- Authorize school officials to inspect law enforcement files of juveniles.

Workers injured when aircraft fuel ignites

HOUSTON (AP) — Two aircraft ground crew workers working on a NASA aircraft at Ellington Field were injured Tuesday when engine fuel ignited during a test of the aircraft, the space agency said.

Jeffrey Lightfoot and Joseph Bezner, employees of Northrup Worldwide Aircraft Services Inc., were taken to Humana Hospital-Clear Lake.

The men were releasing fuel from the engine of the aircraft when a spark ignited the fuel. The fire was extinguished quickly by other workers and there was insignificant damage to the plane, NASA spokeswoman Barbara Schwartz said.

Lightfoot was admitted for a fractured heel suffered when he jumped from a ladder. Bezner was treated for burns on his hand and released from the hospital.

FORMULA FOR THE FUTURE

Vision + Planning + Effort = Success

I see Midland as a city on the grow, with plenty of good jobs for anyone who wants to work. This won't happen overnight, but with planning, strong leadership, and efficient, business-like management of our city's resources, it will happen in time.

A first class city deserves a first class airport. I believe expanding airport facilities, attracting new airlines, and extending control tower operations to 24 hours a day crucial to improving our economic future.

We need strong leadership to hasten an economic turn-around, leadership with vision. I would deeply appreciate your vote on May 4th.

"My heat pump's so efficient it saves money. And it's a clean system. I like what it means for the environment." —Elta Chandler, Park Board Member

Elta Chandler cools and heats her home with a heat pump because it saves money and energy. And since it's electric, it's "wonderfully clean."

A heat pump uses the energy in the air to keep her home comfortable all year. Even on cold winter days there's heat in the air. A heat pump captures that heat and uses it.

And it costs less to operate than a gas furnace. It's so efficient that for each unit of energy it uses, it creates two to three units of heat.

In the summer a heat pump becomes a high-efficiency air conditioner, capturing the heat inside the home and removing it.

For more information, call a heat pump dealer or TU Electric. It's your chance to save more than money.

Deaf school board member resigns after protests

AUSTIN (AP) — A 12-year member of the governing board of the Texas School for the Deaf resigned Monday, following more than a week of protests by students who said she had offended them.

Gayle Lindsey, of Austin, announced her resignation in a letter to Gov. Ann Richards Monday afternoon, following an afternoon of protests at the state Capitol by more than 100 students from the deaf school.

The students, who come to the residential campus from across the state, have held marches and boycotted classes since a letter Ms. Lindsey wrote to Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, was distributed last week.

The letter criticized legislation requested by a coalition of deaf-rights groups that would require a majority of the school board to be hearing impaired.

Ms. Lindsey is not hearing-impaired. She has a 25-year-old daughter, a 1987 graduate of the school, who is profoundly deaf.

Currently, three board members must be hearing-impaired, three must be parents of deaf children, and three must have professional associations with the deaf.

Ms. Lindsey argued in the letter that the list of "qualified and competent deaf people" to serve on the board "will be exhausted in a very short period of time."

Richards' reappointment of Ms. Lindsey to the nine-member board was confirmed by the Senate on Thursday.

In announcing her resignation to Richards, Ms. Lindsey wrote: "The controversy surrounding my reappointment is interfering with the education of the Texas School for the Deaf students, a situation that I find abhorrent; I refuse to participate in such a process."

The governor said Tuesday that Lindsey had served on the board "with distinction."

"Above all else, she has devoted her life to serving the deaf community and has worked selflessly on their behalf," Richards said.

"Her resignation today is further evidence of that selflessness."

■ Insurance bill OK'd

AUSTIN — The Texas House tentatively approved a bill to prohibit lenders from indirectly requiring the purchase of insurance from a particular source as a condition for financing a vehicle sale.

Current law already prohibits auto dealers and banks from forcing buyers to purchase insurance from a particular source.

But supporters of the bill said some lenders indirectly let automobile dealers know purchasers must buy credit or liability insurance from a particular source. For example, they may require the dealer to use a contract that includes that insurance.

Rep. Jim Tallas, R-Sugar Land, said Tuesday his bill had nothing to do with allegations that hundreds of people were illegally forced to buy insurance policies to secure car loans from Republican former gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams' bank.

■ Measles diagnosed

LUBBOCK — Health officials at Texas Tech University are scurrying to have students immunized against measles after at least six students have been diagnosed with the highly-contagious disease.

"All students, even those who live off-campus, should get the vaccination because by now they have all been sitting in classes with students who have the measles and don't know it yet," Dr. Cheryl Tyler, director of Tech's Student Health Services, said Tuesday.

A measles, mumps and rebeola immunization campaign was waged by campus health officials after four of the six diagnosed students were hospitalized with red measles, which causes a severe rash, a fever and upper respiratory infection.

Those infected with measles are often contagious five to seven days before the rash shows up.

The Dean of Students Office has sent notices to classes attended by the diagnosed students and has been arranging for them to receive incompletes in their classes, school officials said.

■ Queen resolution OK'd

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Senate on Tuesday adopted a resolution scheduling a joint legislative session for May 20 in honor of Queen Elizabeth II. The Texas House had already approved the resolution.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, the Duke of Edinburgh, will make a state visit to Washington, D.C., in May, then travel to Florida and four Texas cities, including Austin on May 20.

■ Hobby donates papers

AUSTIN — Former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby has transferred his official records and personal campaign files to the Texas State Library.

The records date from 1973 to 1991, when Hobby was in office, and include correspondence with constituents, as well as local, state and federal officials.

Church held liable for lightning strike

LONGVIEW (AP) — Being struck by lightning may be classified an act of God, but a church has been found responsible for a bolt that struck its former secretary in 1988.

A jury found the lightning protection system at the Macedonia Baptist Church was installed improperly when former secretary Nora Nelda Gibson was struck by lightning after Sunday evening services.

The church was ordered to pay $106,000 in damages to Mrs. Gibson and her husband, Milton. They had sought $500,000.

Mrs. Gibson said she was struck while walking outside the building by a bolt that hit the church steeple and traveled down a lightning rod near the doorway where she was standing.

The flash "entered my right foot and went out my head," Mrs. Gibson testified.

The former part-time secretary was hospitalized for several days. Since the lightning strike, she has suffered seizures, headaches and other physical problems, she said.

Governor's chef focuses on fresh

By Kitty Crider

AUSTIN (AP) — It's 9 on a weekday morning in the Governor's Mansion kitchen. Chef Sarah Bishop is packing four box lunches for the governor and staff to take on a business trip to San Antonio.

Bishop rechecks the contents: roulades of ham, goat cheese and asparagus; tricolor pasta salad with balsamic vinegar dressing; fruit; and, for dessert, macadamia chocolate chip cookies. Everything looks good; she thinks the governor will like the menu.

The noon meal taken care of, Bishop pours a cup of coffee and pauses to chat with a reporter at the kitchen table. Gov. Ann Richards rushes through the kitchen on the way to the car, slowing down long enough to hand Bishop the March issue of Bon Appetit magazine. Page 70 is marked with a note:"Sarah, great-sounding dinner, particularly the snapper...A."

Bishop accepts the article with enthusiasm. It's the first menu suggestion she's received from the governor. In the few months Richards has been in office, the governor has been so busy there has been little time for culinary communication, Bishop says. And there is no spouse in this administration to consult with about menus.

"All I knew was she liked everything," Bishop says.

WITH THAT food freedom, Bishop has planned the menus with the veteran assistance of mansion administrator Anne DeBois, who keeps a file of guests and menus, and caterer Megan Bowman, who works part time in the kitchen. "We look at the functions for the week and work back from there," Bishop said.

"Most of the input I get from the governor is when she likes things. She comes in and tells us the food was good..."

Bishop said she had planned to leave when outgoing Gov. and Mrs. Bill Clements did. But she decided to apply for a job with the new governor. She couldn't resist the new challenge. The Richards administration has brought a change in menus from traditional to trendy.

The Clementses favored continental meals such as lamb or beef tenderloin, usually with a sauce, rice, potatoes, wheat rolls and ice cream. They ate at set hours and entertained more at dinner than lunch.

With the Richards administration, mealtimes and menus are less structured. The governor is not much of a breakfast person, so Bishop sends muffins — blueberry-carrot, apple, banana bran — to the office with her.

Because the governor is a recovering alcoholic, Bishop no longer cooks with alcohol, often using vinegar and lemon juice instead for sauce reductions.

Fresh is the focus of the menus. DeBois says, "We've never opened a can in this mansion or served a frozen vegetable except spinach, or produce from the mansion garden that we've frozen ourselves." Mansion administrator for the past eight years, DeBois keeps track of the estimated $3,000 monthly food-and-beverage entertaining budget, which comes from private funding.

The mansion garden is one of their assets. "It's wonderful," says Bishop. "Last year we had a great tomato crop. We made three huge batches of tomato sauce for the freezer."

Bishop has been in the mansion kitchen since 1986, when she began as a part-time prep cook for parties under the late chef Larry Adams. She's never been to chef's school.

"I'm an artist," explains Bishop, 30. Reared in Houston, she came to Austin a dozen years ago to study at the University of Texas, where she received a degree in fine arts.

Now food is her medium, and it's one she took to quickly. "I have such a feel for food that I know when it's going to work," says Bishop, who picked up hands-on experience working under Adams. She also gained culinary knowledge from chef Raymond Tatum, while running the pantry Jeffrey's Restaurant.

"I, like Raymond, do not use recipes. I'm of the dump-and-pour school of cooking," she says.

For Bishop, there was one hesitation to being mansion chef:"The Bohemian, or artist side of me, is reluctant to commit to 40 hours a week."

So she signed on for 20 hours, which has increased to 30-plus. Days may begin at 7 a.m. or end at 10 p.m., but most of the time she tries to get out of the kitchen by mid-afternoon.

BISHOP DOES NOT do all the cooking alone. She relies on Bowman, a local caterer, for help with everything from creative menu collaborations to parties and dinners.

One of their greatest challenges is that the numbers change constantly for meals and events at the mansion, sometimes several times in one day.

As a buffer, Bishop and Bowman cook a few extra portions for the staff. If unexpected guests show up, the staff eats sandwiches.

Because Bishop and Bowman cook by experience and taste, there are few specific recipes for mansion dishes. But here are two they shared:

BLUEBERRY CARROT PICNIC CAKE

2 to 2½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
4 eggs
1 cup corn oil
5 medium carrots, peeled and grated on medium food-processor grater
2 cups blueberries, fresh (if frozen, rinse off, drain, and dredge with flour before adding)
1 cup pine nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour a 10-cup Bundt pan or 3 disposable foil loaf pans. Mix first five ingredients in a medium bowl. Combine sugars in a large bowl. Add eggs one at a time to sugars, whisking until smooth. Whisk in oil. Stir in carrots and pine nuts. Add dry ingredients and fold just until blended. Fold in blueberries lightly. Do not overmix. Batter will be thick.

Spoon batter into prepared pan. Bake about 1 hour, until cake begins to pull away from sides of pan and tester inserted in center comes out clean. Cool cake in pan on rack 20 minutes. Invert onto plate. Cool completely. Can be prepared a day ahead. Store tightly covered or wrapped in plastic. Can be served garnished with a dollop of whipped cream and fresh berries.

CHICKEN CHERMOULA

2 to 3 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts
2 teaspoon comino seeds, pan roasted
1 bunch cilantro
1 medium serrano or other chile pepper
4 cloves garlic
1-inch piece fresh ginger, peeled
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon paprika
2 teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon sugar
½ cup olive oil

Blend all ingredients except chicken and oil in food processor. Add oil to spice blend to make a marinade. Place chicken breasts in a glass dish and spread with marinade. (If desired, chicken breasts can be pounded for even thickness before marinating.) Cover, refrigerate and marinate chicken for four hours. Grill until done.

To serve, sprinkle grilled chicken with a garnish of ¼ to ½ cup pitted, chopped green olives, thinly sliced lemon and slivered or scissored fresh mint. Serves 6 to 8. Serve with rice pilaf.

New·burgers leaner

By Linda Anderson

Have you noticed how so many of the fast food businesses have been adding lower-calorie and/or heart-healthy items to their menus? In addition to its specialty, fried chicken, Grandy's offers roast chicken; Burger King has a chicken sandwich on a whole-grain-type bun; fried is no longer the only kind of fish available at Long John Silver's; and all the fast-food places offer salads.

Anderson

Now McDonald's, the granddaddy of all fast food hamburger places, has introduced its McLean burger, which is supposed to be "healthier" than other burgers. The meat used is supposed to be "lean beef patties."

OK, I'll bite — which is exactly what I did when I checked out a McLean burger for taste, price and advertising accuracy. The kids, of course, got regular kids' meals (they can't resist those little toys that come with the food), so I got to do this taste-test all by myself.

McLean burgers are priced at $1.95 (or $2.05 for McLean with cheese. I actually conducted two taste tests, and tried one of each.) They come equiped with lettuce, tomatoes, onions, pickles, mustard and ketchup.

In advertising McLean, McDonald's claims the new burgers are healthier because they are "91 percent fat free" and "contain only 9 percent fat before cooking," according to information displayed in the restaurant. One of the management-types said a McLean burger is supposed to contain "320 calories without cheese." I guess a cheese slice would add another 60 to 100 calories, but I didn't get any nutrition information for the cheese.

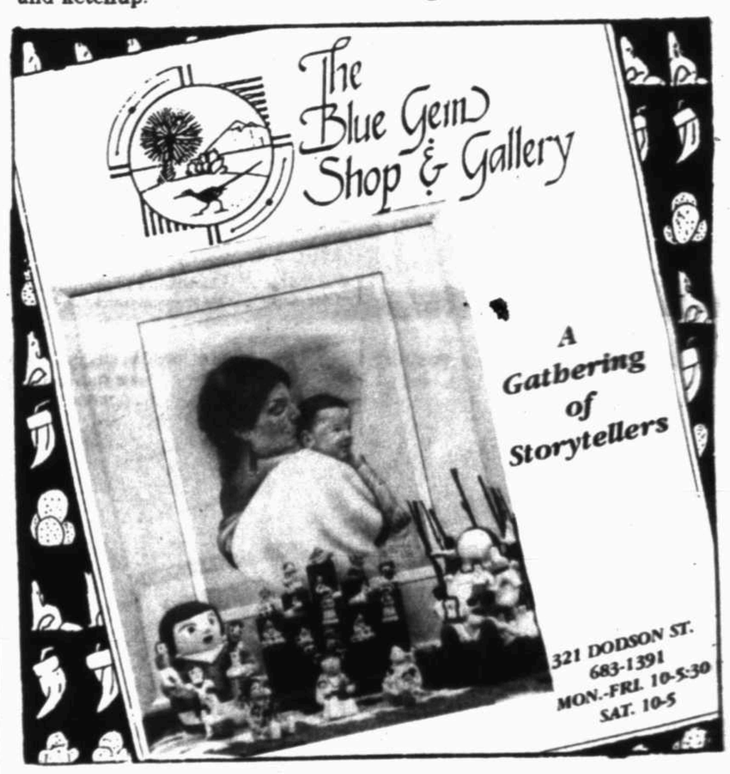

And I have to admit that in the taste-test, I was pleasantly surprised. I was expecting one of those itty-bitty "where's the beef" meat patties. Instead I got a regular-sized piece of hamburger (when I ordered the burger, I was told that the patty was "3.75 ounces" of meat) that actually hung off the bun a little bit and really tasted like hamburger. It didn't seem to be as greasy as regular hamburger meat — another pleasant surprise.

McLean also comes complete with all those things hamburgers should come with — lettuce, tomatoes, pickles, etc. — that its annoying to get charged extra for.

All in all, I guess I have to say that I'll probably order McLean burgers again. It looked like a burger, tasted like a burger and satisfied like a burger. And without all the guilt. Not a bad combination.

DEAR ABBY

Mother's Day honors belong to childless women too

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Hooray! I can write and don't have to sign my name — or else I'd be snubbed and called a heartless traitor in my small town — about the Mother's Day custom that frequently causes much pain. Certainly, mothers should be honored as well as fathers on their special day. But what about childless women?

Van Buren

Some churches ceremoniously present a flower to the oldest mother, the youngest mother, the mother with the most children, etc. However, there are among us many noble women — schoolteachers, nurses, or perhaps just friends or neighbors — who, through circumstances beyond our control, have never experienced motherhood.

How about the woman who conceived accidentally, but gave her baby the right to live and be adopted? And the mother who, due to accident or poor health, lost every child she conceived? Where are the flowers for them? — NAMELESS AND HURTING

DEAR HURTING: You are right. There are many women who have never experienced motherhood, but nevertheless have made significant contributions to the lives of others: the eldest sister who never married because it was her lot to raise her siblings, and who was then called upon to look after her aging parents or an ailing relative. And, of course, all the mothers and would-be mothers you mentioned.

For those women who will not receive a flower or any public recognition on Mother's Day because they are childless, or because their child is dead — or simply "elsewhere" — an orchid to you!

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the school bus driver who got no respect: I am enclosing something you may get a kick out of. I did. And so did my fellow school bus driver. Please withhold my name. — ATLANTA

A BUS DRIVER'S PRAYER

Please, Lord, watch over me this day. Please help me remember to watch all five mirrors, two dozen windows, eight gauges, six warning lights, six dozen faces, three lanes of traffic, and to keep a third eye open for wobbling bicycles and daydreaming pedestrians, especially teen-agers wearing headsets who are off in another world!

Please, Lord, help me to hear all train whistles, truck and automobile horns, police sirens and the two-way radio.

Please, Lord, give me a hand for the gear lever, the steering wheel, the route book, the radio microphone and the turn-signal lever.

And, Lord, please grant me the self-control to keep my hands away from Johnny's neck! And one more thing, dear Lord, please don't let Mary be sick all over the bus.

And finally, Lord, please watch over us all so that we can do it all again next year. Amen.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to be married in the spring. I am 31 years old and my future husband is 30. We both have successful careers and are responsible adults. After much thought and discussion, we decided to live together after we became engaged.

The problem is my mother. She strongly disapproves of our living together for religious reasons. She has taken no interest in our wedding plans — in fact, she hardly speaks to us. She says she will attend our wedding, but I am worried that she may show her disapproval at our wedding. Abby, this should be a happy occasion, but I feel she is ruining it for us.

I respect her beliefs, but as an adult I'm quite capable of making my own decisions. I am fully aware that I am accountable for my actions. How can I make peace with my mother and still lead my own life? — BRIDE-TO-BE

DEAR BRIDE-TO-BE: I can relate to where your mother is coming from because she and I were brought up in the same school of morality. However, her obvious uninterest in your wedding plans, plus her "hardly speaking" to you and your fiance, is her way of punishing you, which is childish and mean-spirited.

Have a private talk with her and let her know that you are aware of how she feels, but it would be so much more pleasant for all concerned if she could find it in her heart to be a little more tolerant and a little less condemning. Perhaps given the opportunity to talk it out and verbalize her anger and disapproval privately, she'll no longer feel the need to give you the cold, silent treatment in public.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the pack rat really popped my cork! I am also a pack rat, and I'm lucky I'm not married to the kind of woman who would throw out the newspaper while I was still reading it. We have been married for 34 years, and I greatly enjoy some of my hoardings, but if my wife were to throw away any of my things without my permission, I would retaliate with a "general housecleaning" in her clothes closet! — MERRITT ISLAND PACK RAT

Avoid high prices, try sparkling wines

Associated Press

French champagne will cost more at the pump next year, but California sparkling wines of French descent make a surprisingly agreeable alternative.

The difference between California sparkling wines today and 10 years ago, according to an article in the current issue of Esquire, is like night and day.

The price for French bubbly is going up because last year the grape growers of the region overturned a 30-year agreement with the prosperous champagne houses and hiked their prices 20 percent.

Over the past few years, however, the grand marques — names such as Mumm, Roederer, Moet & Chandon, Piper-Heidsieck, Taittinger and Deutz — have been setting up shop in California and their efforts are beginning to pay off.

They are producing solid, well-made, occasionally remarkable sparkling wines in the soon-to-be-vacated $12 to $20 range.

The French have a lot to offer — exacting standards, generations of expertise in this most difficult of winemaking processes and, of course, a lofty philosophy.

"We would not try to make a copy of champagne," said Christian Roguenant, winemaker at Maison Deutz in Santa Barbara County. "Our wines are much fruitier, lighter, at times more elegant, but with less body and complexity — and I don't see that as a problem."

Only a Frenchman would wave away champagne with such studied nonchalance — but he has a point.

"What we do best is grow grapes," Greg Fowler, winemaker at Mumm in Napa Valley, said. "So we try to push the fruit forward.

"In Champagne, you get the methode champenoise first and then the fruit underneath; here it's the other way around."

Accordingly, Mumm's pale salmon Blanc de Noirs serves up fistfuls of fruit in a medium-bodied sparkling wine, a kind of dependable sidekick to Domaine Chandon's pale peach Blanc de Noirs, which delivers a good, yeasty aromatic blast and a tart, appley flavor.

The game of catch-up with Champagne begins to look serious with Maison Deutz, a boutique-sized producer whose well-balanced Brut Cuvee comes on like gangbusters with a yeasty nose, followed by aftershocks of deep toast and freshly ground coffee — a complete breakfast in one nasal attack.

Even Deutz must bow before the superlative rose of Michael Tribaut. His sparkler manages to be suavely unpretentious, ingratiating but not pushy, tightly knit but not double-knit.

To the usual California fruitiness, Tribaut brings a supple texture that rolls seductively over the tongue, as well as an un-Californian depth and complexity.

The future looks bright.

"Our learning curve has been tremendous," Mumm's Fowler said. "If you compare the difference between California sparkling wines today and 10 years ago, it's like night and day. Now you're seeing some consistency."

Additional luster will come when heavyweights Laurent-Perrier and Pommery roll out their first bottlings in the next few years.

It's only fair, Patrick Hurley wrote in Esquire. We've given the French Jerry Lewis, Mickey Mantle and Euro Disneyland. The time has come for a little payback.

Pairing food, wine is not difficult task

NEW YORK (AP) — Does pairing wine with food sound like a task best left to French chefs?

"Food and wine have been paired since Biblical times, and with a little experience anyone can select a wine that showcases all or part of a meal," says Bruce Rector, chief winemaker for Glen Ellen Winery in Glen Ellen, Calif.

His advice for your next dinner party: "Use what tastes good to you." He suggests selecting several types of wines to complement different parts of the meal, from the salad through the dessert. Some points to consider, according to Rector:

■ Is there a balance between the wine and food?

■ Does the wine bring out the food's flavor or mask it?

■ Do the flavors complement one another?

"Try a wine that enhances the flavors of food, not overwhelms them," Rector says. He suggests the following guide:

LIGHT SEAFOOD: chardonnay, sauvignon blanc, semillon, pinot blanc, brut champagne.

CHEESES, mild: champagne, sauvignon blanc, chardonnay, white zinfandel, pinot blanc, semillon. Cheeses, medium: pinot noir, gamay beaujolais, chardonnay, Napa gamay. Sharp or strong cheeses: cabernet sauvignon, zinfandel, merlot, California port.

Through our many years of experience we have learned that West Texans are particular about their ice cream flavor preferences and preparation. Therefore, each Gandy's ice cream flavor is carefully selected, prepared and tested before it is sold. That's why generation after generation of West Texans have preferred the rich taste, creamy texture and variety of flavors found in Gandy's ice cream.

Moms define home cooking

Nurturing, affectionate qualities are associated with mom's fare

HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — When people reflect on the nurturing and affectionate qualities of their mothers, cooking often comes to mind.

In fact, mothers are really the ones who define home cookery. For the most part, their culinary creations are not fancy, but tend to rely on basic ingredients.

Mothers generally develop a knowledge of cooking fundamentals and an appreciation for appropriate seasoning, which they combine to produce flavorful and wholesome meals. This approach to cooking produces good, simple food.

Chef Thomas Kief, an instructor at the Culinary Institute of America, says, "Mother's Day always brings me back to when I was very young, a time when my mother was such an integral part of my life."

"My mother was my first cooking teacher, mostly by example, although I doubt if she knows how closely I was watching or how much I remember. To this day, specific cooking aromas put me right back in her kitchen," he says.

Although Kief's cooking style is quite different from his mother's, Kief says he shares his mother's practice of using fresh, high-quality ingredients.

"Where she often looked to our garden for fresh vegetables, I deal with local purveyors for seasonal produce," he says.

Surprise Mom on Mother's Day with a home-cooked meal featuring Kief's recipe for Cottage Ham with Spring Beans and New Potatoes, Dill-Horseradish Sauce and Corn Bread.

Kief says the recipe is a variation of a recipe his mother "uses to this day, and it remains a favorite of mine."

Cottage ham is a pork shoulder that is cured, smoked and cooked. It is also sold as smoked shoulder butt or English bacon. This cut of meat is full of flavor, inexpensive, and best when purchased from small butchers who still cure and smoke their own products, Kief says.

Kief says fresh kale, mustard or collard greens may be substituted for the string beans. A little fresh corn cut from the cob may also be added at the end of the cooking process.

The slow simmering method for preparing this one-pot meal is essential to release the flavors of the ham, vegetables and herbs into a delicious stock.

COTTAGE HAM WITH STRING BEANS AND NEW POTATOES

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
½ cup minced celery
½ cup minced onions
½ teaspoon dried savory
2 bay leaves
½ teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon black pepper
1 cottage ham, about 2 pounds
1 pound fresh string beans, ends trimmed and washed
10 to 12 small red-skinned new potatoes, cut in half if large, and washed
Dill-Horseradish Sauce (recipe follows)
Corn bread (recipe follows)

In a 6-quart pot, heat oil and add minced celery and onions. Cover and cook without browning over low heat for 2 to 3 minutes. Add the dried savory, bay leaves, thyme, pepper and cottage ham.

Fill pot with enough water to cover three-fourths of the meat. Cover and simmer slowly for 1 to 1½ hours or until the meat is tender. Test the meat for doneness by inserting a fork into it. When the fork pulls out with little or no resistance, the meat is done. Add string beans and potatoes and simmer covered for 10 to 15 minutes or until the potatoes and beans are tender. Taste the broth and season with salt and pepper if necessary. Remove the meat and place it on a cutting board. Cut into ⅛-inch slices.

Divide the potatoes and string beans among four soup bowls. Lay 2 to 3 slices of the meat on top of the vegetables and spoon about ½ cup of the broth over the meat. Top the meat with a tablespoon of Dill-Horseradish Sauce and serve with hot corn bread and butter.

Note: Kale or other greens may be substituted for the green beans, but they will require a little longer cooking time. Reheat leftovers on a slow simmer in a microwave oven.

DILL-HORSERADISH SAUCE

1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons fresh minced dill
1 tablespoon fresh minced chives
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
Juice of ½ lemon
4 to 5 drops hot sauce

Combine all ingredients and mix well.

Note: The amount of horseradish and Dijon mustard can be adjusted to suit taste. Fresh peeled and grated horseradish can also be used.

CORN BREAD

¾ cup stone-ground yellow cornmeal
1¼ cups unbleached white flour
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
5 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
1 large egg
3 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted

Sift together cornmeal, flour, sugar, salt and baking powder into a mixing bowl. In a separate bowl, beat the milk and the egg together; reserve. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Add the liquid ingredients including melted butter to the dry ingredients and mix well.

Pour batter into a buttered 9-inch straight-sided pie pan and bake in a 375-degree oven for about 30 minutes. The corn bread is done when a toothpick inserted in the middle comes out clean. The top of the corn bread should be golden brown.

Makes 8 servings.

Enchiladas are quick, easy dish

NEW YORK (AP) — Chile Con Queso Enchiladas require only a handful of ingredients and bake in the oven in about 20 minutes.

CHILE CON QUESO ENCHILADAS

10 corn tortillas
Vegetable oil
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 medium tomatoes, peeled, seeded and finely chopped
3 cups (12 ounces) shredded taco cheese, Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese
1 8- or 10-ounce jar enchilada sauce

Fry tortillas one at a time in hot oil until softened, about 3 to 5 seconds. Drain tortillas thoroughly on paper towels.

Spoon 1 teaspoon onion and 1 heaping teaspoon tomato down the center of each tortilla; top with about 2 tablespoons cheese. Roll up each tortilla. Place seam side down in lightly greased 13x9-inch baking dish. Spoon enchilada sauce over tortillas; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes. Makes 5 servings.

Corporate, Banking & Business

Q. What is an incorporator and how may a person or entity incur liability through his, her or its action as an incorporator?

A. An incorporator is a person or entity who joins with others to form, or singlehandedly forms a corporation and who actually signs the Articles of Incorporation for the corporation. In Texas, any natural person at least 18 years of age, or any partnership, corporation, association, trust or estate, whether organized or domiciled in Texas, may act as an incorporator of a corporation by signing the Articles of Incorporation and delivering them to the Secretary of State for filing.

An incorporator or the principals may incur liability for acts taken under the corporation's name before the filing of the Articles of Incorporation or before at least $1,000 is received by the corporation as consideration for the issuance of corporate shares.

Family Law

Q. A court order was sent to my ex-spouse's employer to hold child support out of his wages and send to me through the court. The employer does not send the child support every other week at payday, but whenever they get around to it. How can I get the child support from the employer on a regular basis?

A. Texas Family Code, Sec. 14.43 states that an employer who has received an order for withholding for child support can be held liable to the child support recipient for any amounts not paid in compliance with the order, as well as a reasonable attorney's fees and court costs. In addition, an employer who knowingly violates the order can be fined $50 for each violation. If the non-compliance continues, you may wish to contact an attorney to seek enforcement of the order.

Estate Planning And Probate

Q. What does an executor of a wil do? How should I select my executor?

A. An executor of a will does eveything from probating the will to dividing and distributing property in accordance with what the will states. The executor will be responsible for filing an Inventory, Appraisement, and List of Claims with the court. He will also be responsible for filing any estate tax returns that are necessary.

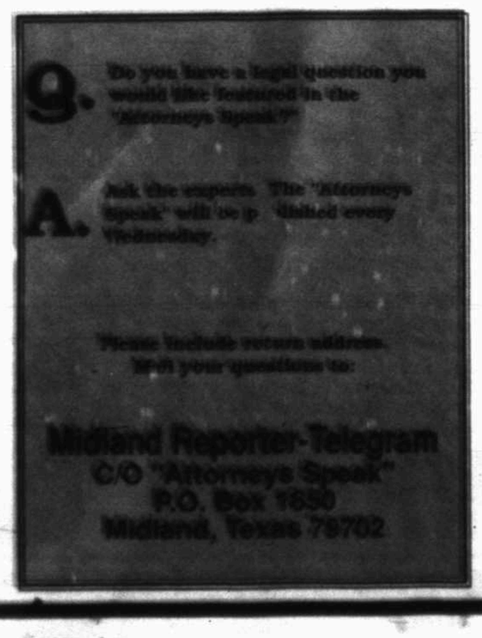

Select your executor and successor executor very carefully because they will be the persons who carry out the wishes set forth in your will. They should be people you trust, people who are likely to outlive you, and people who have enough knowledge of your estate to enable them to carry out your wishes.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Michigan State basketball player Parish Hickman pleaded innocent Tuesday to federal drug charges.

Hickman was formally arraigned in U.S. District Court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine, possession with intent to distribute and attempting to distribute following a federal grand jury indictment. Each of the three counts carry a penalty of 5-40 years in prison and up to a $2 million fine.

Angels do it again

Midland battles back for second-straight win

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Angel starting pitcher Clemente Acosta had reason to grimace after the Missions scored five runs in the first two innings, but he could smile after Midland rallied for the win.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

In what has already been described as one of the longest home runs ever hit at Angels Stadium, center fielder Tim Salmon led Midland to its second straight come-from-behind win over San Antonio, 10-7.

Salmon, who fouled off three pitches and had a 3-2 count on him with two on and two outs in the bottom of the ninth, blasted his second home run of the year over the Marlboro Man's head. The shot was his seventh of the season, which allowed the California native to reclaim a share of the Texas League home run lead.

One Angel scurried into the locker room after the contest, turned to Midland manager Don Long and said, "That's the longest home run I've seen in my career."

"I can't even describe it," he said. "I'm just in awe. It was a great way to end it."

For the second consecutive night, the Angels came from out of nowhere for the win. Monday night, Midland was down 6-0 before scoring eight in the fourth and eventually winning 10-9.

Tuesday night, the Angels were down 7-1 before a four-run seventh put the Angels to within reach.

"What we've done the last couple of nights is really amazing," Angels manager Don Long said, "but we've got to start playing better earlier.

"But I've got to give them credit, we've hung in there the last two nights."

Salmon's home run to seal the victory would not have carried with it the importance it did had it not been for a couple of his teammates. Namely, Mark Howie and Daryl Sconiers.

Nelson returns to swing of things

Associated Press

IRVING — Byron Nelson can swing a golf club again, but he won't be doing it at the tournament that bears his name.

"Oh, no, I'm going to work up gradually," said Nelson, 79. "I'm not going to all of a sudden jump out there and start playing."

Nelson's first full swing of a golf club since undergoing hip surgery last July sent the ball about 110 yards down the middle of the fairway. Nelson's shot with an 8-iron came Monday at the TPC Four Seasons at Las Colinas.

"It was better than I ever thought it was possible to do," said Nelson. "That's the first I've hit anything except a little bitty chip shot in 11 months. So the fact that I didn't whiff anything was good."

The layoff was frustrating, Nelson said. It meant he could not serve as an honorary start or play in the par-3 tournament at the Masters.

Nelson couldn't hit any golf balls, something that was discouraging to a man who won 54 tournaments, including 11 straight in 1945.

"It's not automatic," Nelson said. "I'm surprised, really. I didn't expect to hit any of those 8-irons that good. The fact I didn't hit them fat or top them was good. They didn't have the kick to them that you might expect, but I was real pleased with them."

Lee opts against spring on gridiron

■ The Rebels will gain an extra week of workouts and an additional scrimmage next August if they skip training now.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Lee football team, in search of a ninth consecutive trip to the state playoffs, has opted not to have spring training this year.

The Rebels will get an extra week and an extra scrimmage game prior to the start of the football season next August.

"We've always had spring training and believe in spring training, but there are a lot of reasons why we won't do it this year," head Lee football coach Earl Miller said.

"The last two seasons we haven't played well in the first two or three games and we feel like in-service requirements by the school for the coaches gives us a lack of time to get the kids ready for the season.

"We will get an extra week of two-a-day workouts this way and the extra scrimmage. I've worked out a scrimmage with San Antonio Clark, which is one of the best teams in San Antonio, for Saturday, Aug. 24, at 10 a.m. in Sonora. Then we will scrimmage Lubbock Monterey in Midland on Friday Aug. 30."

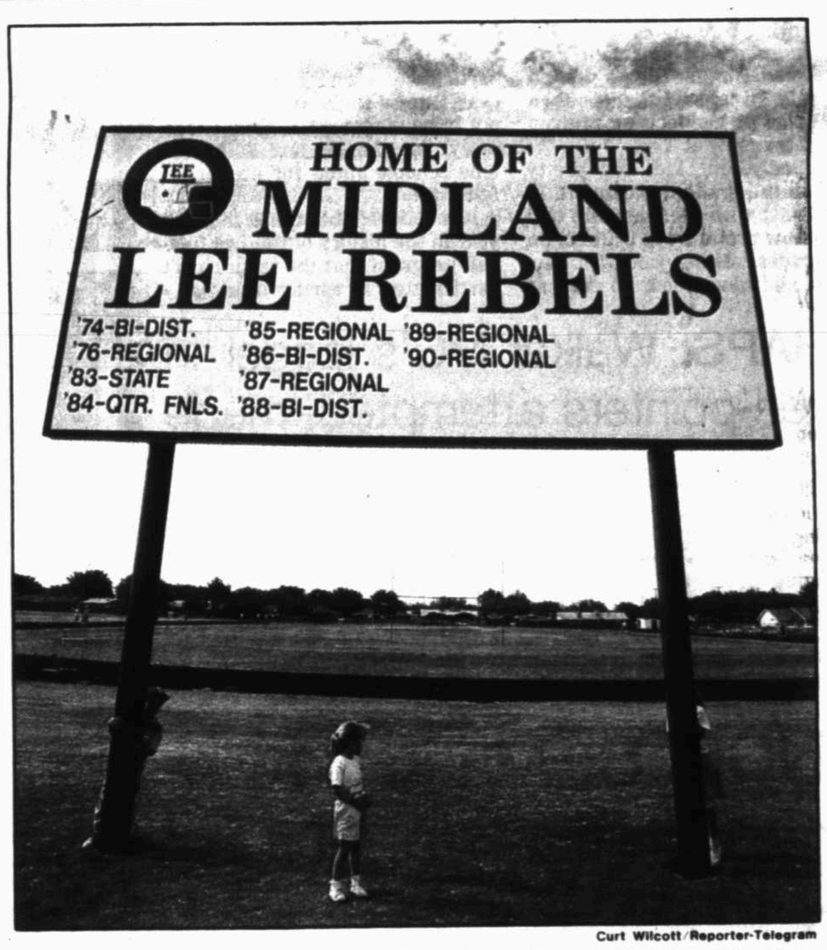

Miller also said that a major concern this spring was the current injury situation.

"We're not even tough enough to get through our own off-season program," Miller deadpanned. "We've got so many kids hurt, including our two quarterbacks. It's pretty hard to have spring training when you don't have a quarterback to work with."

Quarterback hopefuls Jimmy Patton, a defensive back last year, hurt his arm in baseball and can't throw while Brian Martin has stress fractures in both legs due to running track.

But the list doesn't stop there. Center K.C. Jones (knee), guard Dewayne King (ankle/knee), defensive end Anthony Olivas (wrist), linebacker Jayme Farmer (hand), center Jason Willis (hand), running back Robert Fitts (back), running back Max Stuart (ankle), offensive tackle Doug Rook (neck), linebacker Michael Duarte

Two Chaps commit to Division I

Walker

Witherspoon

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College sophomores Eric Walker and Eugene Witherspoon, two starters off the 1990-91 Chaparral team announced Tuesday that they have committed to attend major universities to complete their collegiate basketball careers.

Walker, a native of Arcola, Tex., and the brother of MC assistant basketball coach George Walker, will attend Creighton University.

Witherspoon, of Winstonville, Miss., will attend the University of Chicago at Illinois.

Walker, the off guard on last season's 17-13 MC team, was the team's second leading scorer, with an average of 13.7 points per game. Walker led the team in three-pointers made and attempted (47-of-138), and was the highest percentage three-point shooter among those who attempted an average of more than one per game. Walker was also third on the team in rebounds. Walker also led the team in free throw percentage (78.7) and field goal percentage (59.4).

Walker was recruited by then-Creighton assistant coach Rick Johnson, who recently became head coach after Tony Barone accepted the same position at Texas A&M.

Creighton, located in Omaha, Neb., has won the Missouri Valley Conference two of the last three years, participated in the NCAA tournament in 1989 and 1991, and the NIT in 1990.

Creighton set a school record with 24 wins last season.

California Angels fire GM

Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Port, who was unable to assemble a pennant winner in six seasons as general manager of the California Angels, was fired Tuesday.

Port, who had worked for the Angels since 1977, was replaced by assistant GM Dan O'Brien. Since the end of last season, O'Brien has taken over increased responsibility for the day-to-day operations of the team.

Despite lavish spending on free agents, the Angels finished with a sub-.500 record three times during Port's tenure. Last season, they finished fourth in the American League West with an 80-82 record.

The Angels are 9-10 this season, but have lost six of their last seven. Team president Richard Brown said Port was fired because of "philosophical differences," not the Angels' disappointing start.

"We would have done this even had we been 15-4 or 19-0," Brown said.

Brown said the move was the result of his ongoing evaluation of the front office.

"When I took over six months ago, I said then that I'd have to evaluate the staff," he said. "We're already planning for next year and beyond and it was the sensible thing to do to have the people aboard now to help us in those plans."

Port said he wasn't bitter about the firing.

"I will always treasure the time spent with the California Angels," he said. "I truly hope that in the near future, Gene Autry gains his much-deserved World Series and I will be one of the first to congratulate him."

Port, 45, may have been hurt by his bitter contract negotiations with several top players who will soon be eligible for free agency.

First baseman Wally Joyner and pitcher Kirk McCaskill are eligible for free agency after this season. Chuck Finley, the ace of the pitching staff, could become a free agent after next season.

O'Brien, 62, has spent 36 years in baseball. He was hired as an assistant to Port in 1989.

Son of Alydar hopes to strike some Derby gold

AP Racing Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Call it horse sense.

Trainer Nick Zito just knew he had to keep a 2-year-old named Strike the Gold, who was going to be sold away from him.

"I don't want to lose this horse," Zito told co-owner B. Giles Brophy after being informed last summer the colt was to be sold in January by Calumet Farm, another owner.

At the time, the son of Alydar had not even raced.

On Saturday, Strike the Gold will start in the Kentucky Derby as a leading contender based on his upset of Fly So Free in the Blue Grass Stakes.

In September, Brophy and two friends put together a package deal with J.T. Lundy, then president of Calumet, and bought Strike the Gold, five yearling fillies and a yearling colt.

Two the fillies are by Seattle Slew, the 1977 Triple Crown champion, and two are by Alydar. The other is by Danzig out of the champion racemare Davona Dale. The yearling colt is by Alydar.

Strike the Gold got to the races on Oct. 11 when he finished ninth in a six-furlong maiden event at Belmont Park. In his next start, he finished fifth in a maiden race at Aqueduct, then concluded his 2-year-old campaign with a victory. He won a maiden race by 8½ lengths at Aqueduct on Nov. 15, the day Alydar died.

While Strike the Gold's performance did not strike up any public enthusiasm, Zito thought he had a Derby horse because of "the way he was working, his sire and his breeding.

"He looked like his father."

Alydar won several major stakes in his career and became a top sire, but he is best remembered for finishing second to Affirmed in the 1978 Triple Crown races.

Strike the Gold finished third in a seven-furlong allowance on Jan. 26 at Gulstream Park, then finished second in another allowance on Feb. 23 at Gulfstream — beaten 1¾ lengths by Cahill Road, who won the Wood Memorial but is out of the Derby with a leg injury.

On March 16, Strike the Gold, who was eighth after three-quarters of a mile, closed to finish second one length behind Fly So Free in the Florida Derby.

"The champ (2-year-old champion Fly So Free) reached back, but if he keeps reaching back too many times with this horse, sooner or later we'll catch up to him," Zito said at the time.

Strike the Gold caught and passed Fly So Free in the Blue Grass, beating him by three lengths.

"He's peaking just right," said Zito, whose Thirty Six Red finished ninth in last year's Derby.

Fly So Free remains a top contender. Two others are Hansel, the Jim Beam winner, and Best Pal, the gelding who was California Horse of the Year as a 2-year-old and who was second to Dinard in the Santa Anita Derby.

Others expected to be entered are Alydavid, Another Review, Corporate Report, Forty Something, Green Alligator, Happy Jazz Band, Lost Mountain, Mane Minister, Paulrus, Quintana and Wilder Than Ever.

NL expansion vote delayed until mid-June

NEW YORK (AP) — The National League expansion committee will not make its recommendation to owners until the quarterly meetings on June 12 and a discussion and vote will follow immediately, NL president Bill White said Tuesday.

"There will be other discussions, but I think they'll be able to do whatever they have to do that day," White said.

Information has not yet been disseminated outside the NL expansion committee and at least one owner has questioned whether a decision can be reached the day of the recommendation. NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney cautioned that the plans are subject to change.

Six cities are competing for the teams, which cost $95 million each — Buffalo, N.Y.; Denver; Miami; Orlando, Fla; St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington. The expansion teams, which must be approved by nine of the 12 NL teams and by eight of the 14 American League teams, will begin play in 1993.

"Something this important, I can't see us walking into the meeting, hearing the report and taking a vote twenty minutes later," San Francisco Giants chairman Bob Lurie was quoted as saying in Tuesday's editions of the Rocky Mountain News. "You've got to give it some study, and I personally don't think that can be done in an hour or so. I need to do more than just look at it and vote. We're not going to rubber stamp it."

REBELS: Miller proud of team's academic success

(From 1D)

(knee), defensive back Allen Chase (wrist) and defensive back Jake Krautsch (wrist) are all out of action with assorted injuries.

"That looks like a hospital directory, doesn't it?" Miller said. "It's just one of those years when we've had a lot of people hurt and most of them have nothing to do with football."

One of the big reasons across the state for a 5A school not to have spring training is because of large numbers of kids failing to make grades under the no pass-no play rule. Miller says that is only a small part of his decision to drop spring training at Lee.

"Actually, our kids did pretty good in the grade department. In fact, I met with the team and told them how proud I was of them on the grades," Miller said. "However, we did have about 40 percent in the freshman class that didn't make their grades. You usually lose a big number of those who don't go through spring training, and by waiting, we may be able to save a few of those youngsters."

Miller also cited some other reasons, including the baseball team making the playoffs and coaches tied up in both track and baseball.

"We can work around all that, but it is a factor," Miller said.

This decision leaves only Midland High and Odessa Permian as the only District 4-5A schools to participate in spring training this year. Odessa High opted this week not to have spring training. Previously, San Angelo and both Abilene schools opted for an earlier fall start.

It is believed that this is the first year in the history of the Lee football program that the team hasn't participated in spring training.

ing last season for the Chaps, averaging 7.6 through 29 games. He was also the third leading scorer, averaging 12.4 ppg.

The 6-7 sophomore said UIC's head coach, Bob Hallberg, has recruited him since his freshman season at MC. Witherspoon said Illinois-Chicago has shown an interest in him mainly due to his rebounding ability.

Illinois-Chicago, 15-15 overall, finished eighth in the Mid-Continent Conference last season.

cluding three in the Midland seventh. After San Antonio pitcher Jody Treadwell was lifted from the game, reliever Cam Bibedorf came on and allowed a no-out single to Kevin Davis to load the bases.

Bibedorf briefly found his control, striking out Kevin Flora and Marcus Lawton on six straight pitches. Howie then drove an 0-2 pitch to right field for a three-run double and the Angels trailed 7-5.

Sconiers, who had struck out twice, and was 0-for-4 entering the ninth, finally found something worth his trouble for the evening, singling in Lawton to tie the game at 7-7; the hit also moved Howie — who represented the winning run — to third.

Salmon then drove a Jose Tapia fastball over the left-centerfield wall for the game winner.

Angel relievers Doug Robertson, Sherm Corbett and Mark Zappelli combined to allow no runs on just two hits over the final three innings.

Only one of the seven Mission runs was earned, while six were scored with two outs.

Mitchell withdraws appeal of suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin Mitchell of the San Francisco Giants changed his mind Wednesday and withdrew the withdrawal of his appeal of a two-game suspension he received for charging the mound in a game on April 10.

Mitchell, the NL leader with seven home runs, was fined and suspended by league president Bill White for charging San Diego pitcher Bruce Hurst after he was brushed back and then hit in the foot by a pitch.

Villenueva, Cubs bombard Houston

Associated Press

NL

CHICAGO — Hector Villenueva drove in a career-high four runs with a three-run homer, a double and a single Tuesday night as Mike Bielecki and the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 10-3.

Vinllanueva's first home run of the season capped a four-run third inning. He came off the disabled list three days ago after sustaining a fracture in his left hand.

Bielecki (4-1) won his third start of the season and allowed six hits in the six innings. His other two decisions came in relief.

The Cubs scored a pair in the first. Jerome Walton singled to extend his hitting streak to nine games and Ryne Sandberg walked. The runners advanced as Grace grounded to first. Walton scored on a sacrifice fly by Bell and Sandberg scored on a double by Dawson.

Karl Rhodes hit his first home run in the Houston second and the Astros added a pair in the fourth. Jeff Bagwell walked and scored on a triple by Luis Gonzalez who scored on a sacrifice fly by Casey Candaele.

The Cubs scored a pair in the seventh. Sandberg walked, went to second on a balk and scored on a double by Grace. Villanueva singled Grace home.

Reds 4, Pirates 3

CINCINNATI — Hal Morris and Mariano Duncan homered off struggling Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek and Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh in the first meeting of defending National League division champions.

The Reds and Pirates are both in first place this season. Cincinnati won last year's playoff in six games.

Duncan's first homer off Drabek (1-4) snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth and sent the Pirates to only their second loss in 10 games.

Tom Browning (3-1) allowed four hits, including solo homers by Andy Van Slyke and Jose Lind, in 7⅔ innings. Rob Dibble struck out the last four batters for his fifth save.

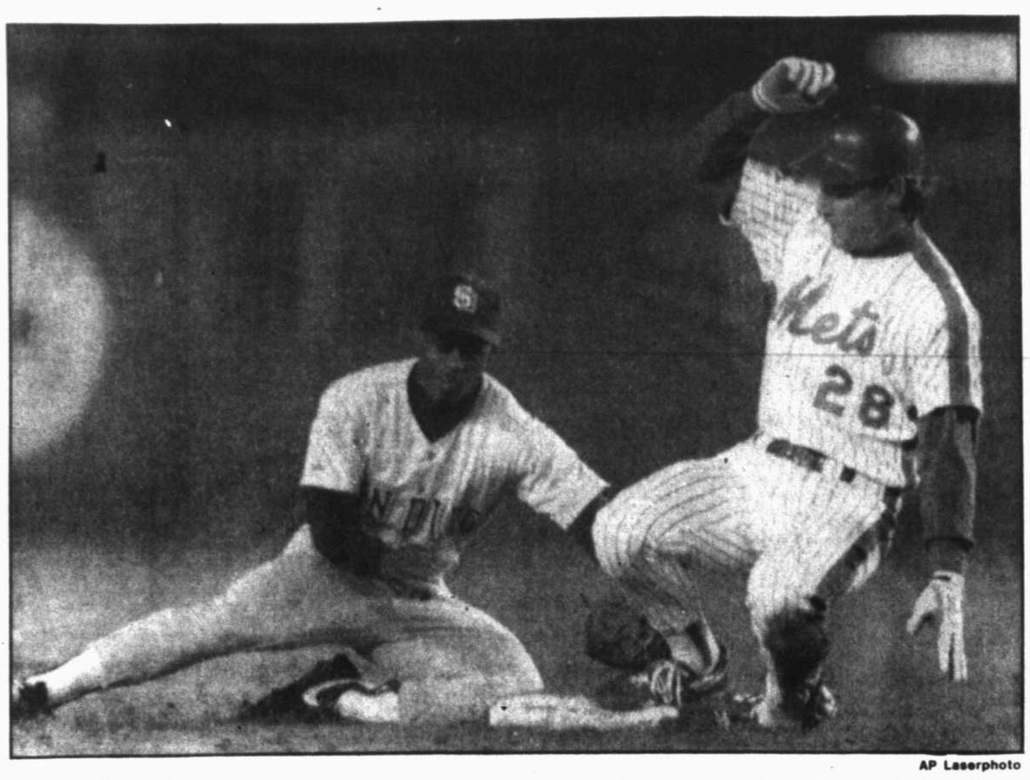

Expos 1, Dodgers 0

MONTREAL — Delino DeShields led off the ninth inning with a home run for Montreal's second hit of the game, leading Dennis Martinez and the Expos past the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mike Morgan (2-2) had given up only a first-inning single by Tim Wallach before DeShields connected on the first pitch. DeShields' second home run of the season went to center field.

Martinez (3-2) pitched a four-hitter in his first complete game of the season. He struck out seven and walked one.

Morgan struck out five and walked two. He gave up a single and walked two in the first inning, but settled down quickly and retired 15 straight batters.

Cardinals 5, Braves 3

ST. LOUIS — Pinch hitter Milt Thompson's two-run single snapped a seventh-inning tie and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated Atlanta for their second consecutive come-from-behind victory.

With two outs and runners on second and third, Thompson singled up the middle off reliever Mike Stanton. Thompson is 3-for-5 with four walks as a pinch hitter this season.

The Cardinals trailed 3-0 after two innings, but rallied to tie it with two runs in the fourth and Pedro Guerrero's RBI single in the sixth.

Phillies 11, Giants 9

PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk homered, drove in four runs and tied Mike Schmidt's team record of 20 RBIs in April as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants.

The Phillies trailed 9-3 before Dale Murphy and Ricky Jordan hit consecutive home runs off Bud Black in the fifth inning. Charlie Hayes' two-run homer capped a six-run rally in the sixth.

No room in budget for new stadium

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Senate resumed its attack Tuesday on proposals to build a new stadium for the Detroit Tigers with public money.

On a vote of 19-14, the chamber adopted an amendment to prohibit spending any public money on the stadium or any new sports facility in the state. The bill, an appropriations measure for several departments, then passed the Senate on a vote of 20-14. It now goes to the House.

"We'll do it with every bill" where such a budget ban is needed, said Sen. John Kelly, an opponent of a new stadium."There's no way they can end run us on this. We're trying to close off all the options except renovation."

The effort began last week with the passage of a bill to fund transporation programs, barring the use of money to improve access to a new stadium. The latest bill involves several departments which might be involved in a stadium construction effort.

"If we want to keep the Tigers in Detroit, we will restore the stadium," Sen. Phil Arthurhultz said. "Detroit should not lose the Tigers. The symbolism of keeping the Tigers in Detroit is important."

The bill approved Tuesday contains about $413 million for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Sierra's two homers lead Ranger attack

Associated Press

AL

ARLINGTON — Ruben Sierra hit two homers, including a three-run seventh-inning shot to break a 4-4 tie, leading the Texas Rangers to an 8-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Tuesday night.

Sierra, who had a two-run homer in the first, drove in five runs to tie a career high. With two out in the seventh, Sierra ripped a 2-1 pitch off Blue Jays' reliever Jim Acker (0-1) into the right field stands.

Sierra's fourth homer of the season drove in Jeff Huson and Rafael Palmeiro, both of whom had singled, and made a winner of reliever Rich Gossage (2-0). Sierra hit two homers in a game for the seventh time in his career.

Gossage worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the seventh to preserve a 4-4 tie, getting John Olerud to ground out to second to end the threat. Rangers second baseman Julio Franco made a diving stop, scrambled to his feet and threw out Olerud.

Rookie Mark Whiten had a career-high four RBI, including a sixth-inning two-run single to send the Blue Jays in front 4-3.

Juan Gonzalez's one-out single in the sixth drove in Franco with the tying run for Texas.

Sierra got the Rangers off to a 2-0 first-inning lead, hitting his third homer of the season after Palmeiro's two-out single.

Texas went up 3-0 in the third on Palmeiro's sacrifice fly but Toronto cut the lead to 3-2 in the fourth on Whiten's two-out two-run double.

Mariners 6, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE — Dave Valle hit his second homer in two days and the Seattle Mariners scored three unearned runs to beat Baltimore.

The Mariners have now won two straight after opening the season with six losses, then winning eight straight before losing five in a row. Their current streak began Monday night in Baltimore, where they have now won 20 of 28 games since Sept. 1, 1987.

Erik Hanson (2-1) gave up six hits, walked four and hit a batter in 5⅓ innings, but he was effective when it counted. Russ Swan pitched the final 3 2-3 innings to get his second save.

Dwight Evans hit his first homer of the year and 380th of his career for Baltimore, which lost for the seventh time in nine games.

Red Sox 7, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Carlos Quintana hit his first home run since last July 30, a two-out, three-run shot in the eighth inning, lifting Boston over Minnesota and snapping the Twins' five-game winning streak.

Boston is 9-2 since April 19. Minnesota lost for only the second time in nine games. The Twins (9-11) last had a .500 April in their World Series year, 1987.

Despite allowing Dan Gladden's seventh-inning go-ahead double, Jeff Gray (1-1) won in relief of Matt Young, who is still looking for his first victory after coming to Boston as a free agent. Ex-Twin Jeff Reardon pitched the final 1⅓ innings for his eighth save.

Steve Bedrosian (2-1) lost for the first time since arriving in Minnesota in an offseason trade with San Francisco. He entered the game after Mike Greenwell led off the eighth with a double off of Larry Casian.

Brewers 8, White Sox 2

MILWAUKEE — Dante Bichette and Franklin Stubbs homered and Jim Gantner had four hits as Milwaukee beat Chicago.

Billy Spiers added three hits to the 13-hit Milwaukee attack in support of Chris Bosio (3-2).

Bosio was in trouble in each of the first four innings and gave up a bases-loaded sacrifice fly to Matt Merullo in the third. Bosio lasted five innings, giving up five hits.

The White Sox, who had beaten the Brewers in 20 of 24 games the last two seasons, stranded eight runners in the first four innings and had 13 for the game.

Injured fan forgives Reds' relief ace; league may not

CINCINNATI (AP) — The grade-school teacher injured by Rob Dibble's latest outburst is in a forgiving mood, but there was no indication Tuesday whether the National League would be so accommodating.

The Cincinnati Reds reliever could be punished by NL president Bill White for hurling a baseball into the stands after a poor outing Sunday in a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The ball hit first-grade teacher Meg Porter on the elbow. The injury has forced Porter, 27, to get medical treatment and miss two days of work.

Her laywer said Tuesday that Porter and her husband, Richard, expect compensation for the medical bills and the missed work. But they don't hold a grudge.

"She has a medical bill and a couple of days off work," lawyer Don Moore said. "I don't think they have any great animosity towards Rob Dibble.

"Maybe the most important thing is, it's not a huge matter. Mrs. Porter is upset and hurt, but her injury is relatively minor."

Dibble will have to wait to see whether the Reds and White consider it a minor matter.

NL spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Tuesday that White was reviewing the incident. A player can be fined or suspended for injuring a fan by purposely throwing into the stands.

Players are prohibited from tossing balls in the stands under any circumstances, she said.

Dibble has refused to discuss his outburst, the latest in a long series of actions that have repeatedly gotten him fined and suspended.

Rockets bow out in three

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Byron Scott hit a jumper with 16.9 seconds to play and Magic Johnson had 24 of his 38 points in the second half, leading the Los Angeles Lakers to a 94-90 victory Tuesday night and a sweep of the Houston Rockets.

The Rockets called a timeout after Scott's 18-footer from the baseline gave the Lakers a 92-90 lead. The Rockets missed a chance to tie when they could not get the ball inbounded and it went over to the Lakers. With Los Angeles leading by the final margin, Hakeem Olajuwon missed a 3-point attempt with 8.6 seconds to go.

Olajuwon had 21 points and 17 rebounds, and Otis Thorpe added 21 points, including 17 in the first half. James Worthy scored 22 points for the Lakers, who won the first two games at home.

Thorpe scored 11 points in the first quarter and had 17 by halftime, leading the Rockets to a 46-39 lead at the break. But Johnson's 16 third-quarter points gave the Lakers a 66-65 lead after three periods.

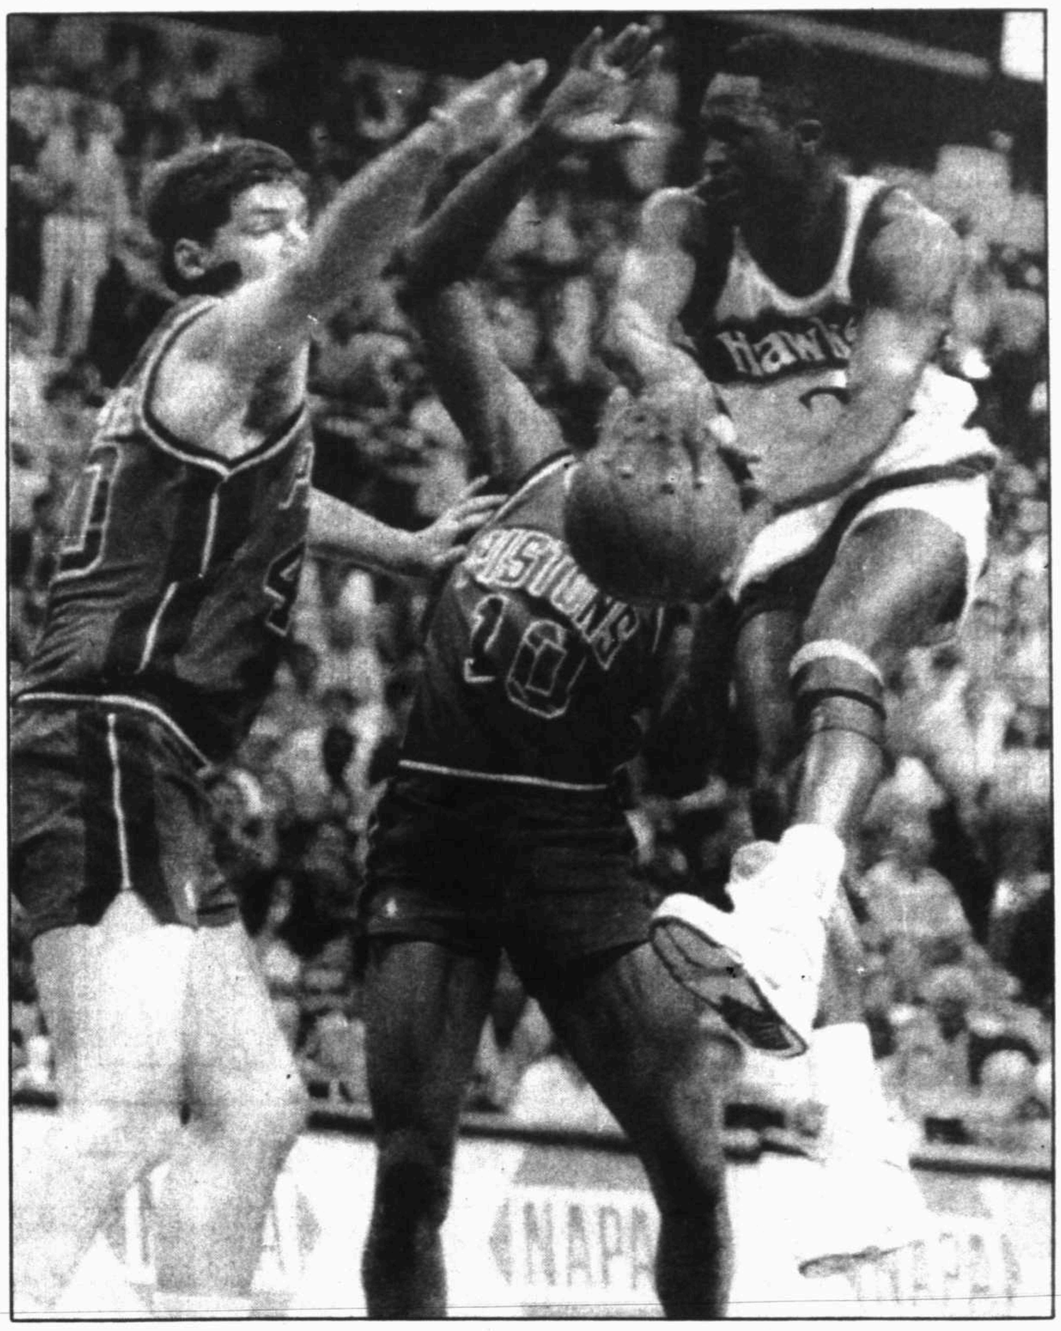

The Lakers outscored the Rockets 16-8 to start the third quarter and held a 55-54 lead with 6:51 to go in the period following a three-point play by Johnson.

Bulls 103, Knicks 94

NEW YORK — Chicago completed a 3-0 playoff sweep of the New York Knicks as Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 33 points during a 29-11 second-half spurt.

The Bulls, with their 10th consecutive win over the Knicks and seventh straight this season, advanced to the second round of the Eastern Conference playoffs against the Philadelphia 76ers, who swept the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Knicks, who led by as many as 12 points in the first half but by only one at halftime, had a 60-57 advantage when John Paxson started an 8-0 Chicago run with a jumper. A layup by Jordan gave the Bulls the lead for good, 61-60, with 9:01 left in the third quarter.

NBA Playoffs

Pistons 103, Hawks 91

ATLANTA — Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas sparked Detroit's comeback from a 17-point second-quarter deficit and led the Pistons to a victory and a 2-1 lead in their opening-round playoff series with Atlanta.

The Pistons, seeking a third consecutive NBA title, can wrap up the best-of-5 series with a victory on Thursday night. A fifth game, if necessary, would be Sunday at The Palace in Auburn Hills, Mich.

76ers 121, Bucks 100

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley, leaping off a left knee encased in a brace, had 30 points and 12 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers beat Milwaukee to sweep their first-round playoff series.

The 76ers, who surprised the Bucks by winning both games in Milwaukee before retrurning to the Spectrum, advanced to a best-of-7 second-round series against the Chicago Bulls. Chicago advanced with a 103-94 victory for a sweep of the New York Knicks.

Middleweight champ's wife and manager accosted in California

AGOURA HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The wife and press manager of middleweight boxing champion Michael Nunn were accosted at Nunn's home Tuesday by two men who tied them up and ransacked the house, police said.

Nunn, 28, was at his training camp in Florida when the incident occurred around 11 a.m. PDT, said Deputy Rich Erickson of the Sheriff's Information Bureau.

Neither Nunn's wife, Loritha Boyce, 25, nor his publicist, Eric Murphy, 30, were harmed by the men, who were dressed as delivery men and had guns, Erickson said.

Murphy was in an upstairs bedroom when he heard Boyce screaming and rushed downstairs to investigate, Erickson said. The men tied both Boyce and Murphy up and left them on the living room floor before ransacking the house, Erickson added.

After the men fled in an automobile, Boyce and Murphy were able to free themselves and call police. Patrol deputies from the sheriff's Malibu station, along with a helicopter crew, searched the area but were unable to find the men or their getaway car, Erickson said.

Cooper expected to name new baseball coach

Associated Press

ABILENE — School board members will be asked in two weeks to approve the hiring of Lee Driggers, now with the Pittsburgh Pirates organization, as head baseball coach of Abilene Cooper High School.

Driggers replaces Andy Malone, who resigned April 2 after being suspended March 12 for the use of profanity to his players.

Randy Allen, head football coach and athletic coordinator at Cooper, announced Monday that he recommended Driggers be hired, effective next season. Abilene superintendent Charles Hundley has approved the recommendation.

Malone's Cooper teams won six district championships and appeared in the playoffs seven consecutive seasons prior to this year, including state championships in 1987 and '88. His record at Cooper was 220-52.

The 40-year-old Driggers, a native of Orlando, Fla., pitched two seasons in the Los Angeles Dodgers organization.

He compiled a 112-37 overall high school record in five seasons at Fort Bend Willowridge and Brenham, where he won two Class 4A state championships.

Driggers started the baseball program at Tarleton State in 1988, posting a 37-22 record in the Texans' first season.

He then accepted the NCAA Division I job at Hardin-Simmons University in 1989, but opted to resign after his initial season to accept a managerial position in the Pittsburgh Pirates organization.

Driggers managed the Pirates' Class A team in Augusta, Ga., last year, and will report in June to Welland, Ontario, Canada, where he will pilot the Pirates' Class A team in the New York-Penn League.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Look forward to new financial gains. Enrolling in fall classes is a practical approach to increasing your earning power. You will make real headway in solving a domestic dilemma by November. Spending the winter holidays in a completely new setting could bring romance back into your life. Keep your New Year's resolutions in 1992 and your self-confidence will soar!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: singers Judy Collins and Rita Coolidge, actor Glenn Ford, writer Joseph Heller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Careful attention to detail reduces the chance of making costly errors. Work done at home will suffer fewer interruptions than that done in the office. Make certain to meet all your deadlines.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay in the background until ready to make a major announcement. It is time to improve communication between yourself and difficult associates. A new ally helps you decide when to make your move.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take the time you need to do a great job, even if a friend or co-worker tries to rush you. Your thoroughness will pay off. Put a new plan on the back burner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Listen to your mate's advice if you want your savings to grow faster. Keep long-term objectives in mind when considering your employment situation. Balance logic with intuitive hunches.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your encouragement means a lot to someone down in the dumps. Show how much you care. A thoughtless remark could cause hurt feelings. A peaceful home atmosphere is welcome after an emotional showdown.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An important relationship may demand a financial investment. The key to greater career success is better planning and attention to detail. Work harder to nurture a close relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The emphasis today is on returning items you have borrowed. Be careful not to lend something that is not yours to give. Your financial situation is about to improve. You feel romantic again.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Talk with experts before signing an agreement. You could have some doubts about an important personal relationship. Try to resolve them before making a further commitment. Compromise promotes harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A prominent person will respond best to a straightforward approach. A career move could cause a family upheaval. Soothe loved ones by sharing confidences and discussing alternatives.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A friendship enters the big time. You find the right showcase for your unique talents. VIPs are impressed. The business contacts you cultivate today could bring wonderful benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be willing to commute out of town; you will benefit greatly from developing long-distance contacts. Take your time when considering changes in your domestic arrangements.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Greater teamwork is possible if you take the initiative. A banker or financial partner has good tidings to share. Home shopping is great as long as you do not go overboard.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are energetic, quick-witted and brave. Although these Taureans are a whiz at mathematics, they will probably regard bookkeeping as boring. Creative enterprises will not only make them happy but prosperous. They have a knack for figuring out what the public wants to buy next. Since these youngsters are more interested in the intellectual than the physical, they tend to lead rather sedentary lives. Wise parents will encourage them to get a little exercise every day.

SHOW AND TELL

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

	NORTH ♠ A J 5 ♡ 7 ◇ K Q 8 6 5 ♣ Q J 4 2
WEST ♠ 7 ♡ A K Q 10 9 ◇ J 10 7 4 ♣ 10 9 6		EAST ♠ 4 ♡ J 8 6 4 3 2 ◇ A 9 ♣ 8 7 5 3
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 10 9 8 6 3 2 ♡ 5 ◇ 3 2 ♣ A K

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	4 ♡	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

Signaling is a delicate art. At trick one, the opening leader's partner usually first indicates attitude—a high card shows approval of the suit, low suggests that the leader search for greener pastures. Very few experts show count at the first trick except against high-level contracts, where it might be essential to know whether a second round of the suit will live. When dummy shows up with a singleton in the suit led, or where it is clear that declarer cannot hold more than one card in the suit, third hand has the rare opportunity for a suit-preference signal. A high card in the suit led suggests a switch to the higher of the other two plain suits; the lowest calls for the lower. Any middle card asks for a continuation.

Just how important that can be is illustrated by this hand. West took advantage of the vulnerability to make a light opening bid. North doubled (an action we endorse, despite the fact that a fourth spade would have been preferred), and East upped the ante with his distributional holding. As a result South, with probably the best hand at the table in terms of playing strength, had to act with the auction already in the stratosphere and no good bid available (four no trump would be a takeout for the minors, not ace-asking). So South elected to blast into six spades. In a way, North was too strong—had the king-queen of diamonds been the ace, the slam would have been virtually laydown.

The crux of the hand came at the very first trick. West led the king of hearts and East had to convince partner to shift to a diamond—anything else would have been fatal to the defense. With the singleton heart in dummy, there was no problem—East dropped the jack under the king, a clear request for a diamond shift rather than a club. West duly obliged, and the defenders had their two tricks in the bag. Down one.

"I want to fill the supermarkets with great healthy food and close down the slaughterhouses," Mrs. McCartney said at a London news conference.

Although Mrs. McCartney is American, several of the dishes are British favorites, including ploughman's pie, which is a cheese pie, and pasties, which are small, deep-fried, filled pies. Lasagna and beefless burgers also are on the menu.

The former Beatle and his wife became vegetarians 20 years ago after sitting down to a Sunday lunch of roast lamb at their Scottish farm and looking out of the window to see lambs frolicking outside. They brought up their four children as vegetarians.

REGGIO EMILIA, Italy — Luciano Pavarotti celebrated 30 years as an opera singer at a sold-out concert in the theater where he made his debut.

American soprano Shirley Verrett was among the singers who attended the gala Monday night in this city in Pavarotti's native region of central Italy.

ISLESBORO, Maine — It took him over 10 years, but Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell now has visited every public school in his home state.

He went island-hopping Monday to three of Maine's smallest high schools. He has spoken at graduation ceremonies or student assemblies at all 118 public high schools as well as 19 private ones. He began his school visits within months of his appointment to the Senate in 1980 to succeed Edmund S. Muskie.

"There's no limit to how high or how far you can go if you put your hearts and minds to it," he told students who filled the bleachers at Vinalhaven. "If you have the talent and the initiative, you should be able to go as high and as far as you can."

At a meeting with the elementary grades at North Haven, the Democrat was asked questions about his life as a senator.

Third-grader Ryan Marves then plunged into more personal matters, asking Mitchell, "Do you have a wife?"

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — Red Skelton's portrait of a crying clown, painted by the entertainer for his dying son more than three decades ago, has been recovered by police.

The painting "Bright Eyes," signed by Skelton, was stolen from the Pagliacci Gallery in May 1990. Gallery owner Bob Lennon said he was selling the 1958 work for a Chicago man whose identity wasn't disclosed.

"We're thrilled. We thought it was gone forever. I called Mr. Skelton today to tell him it was recovered. He remembered the painting quite well," Lennon said Monday.

The oil painting of a crying clown was created for Richard Skelton, who was 9 when he died of leukemia.

Campbell Conference teams beat the odds to final

Associated Press

NHL Playoffs

The Campbell Conference had four 100-point teams during the regular season, but none are left in the playoffs. While the two division champs from the Wales Conference both made it to the conference finals, the Campbell matchup features Minnesota, fourth in the Norris Division, against Edmonton, third in the Smythe.

WALES CONFERENCE
Boston Bruins (44-24-12) vs. Pittsburgh Penguins (41-33-6)

SEASON SERIES—Tied 1-1-1 (Bruins 1-0-1 at Boston; Penguins 1-0-0 at Pittsburgh. Teams haven't played since splitting a home-and-home series in early February).

BRUINS OUTLOOK—The Bruins' game plan is simple: Andy Moog plays superbly in goal, Ray Bourque, Cam Neely and Craig Janney score a lot and everyone else checks a lot. They must keep Mario Lemieux from getting breakaways and have to get production from their other lines to keep the Penguins from ganging up on Neely and Janney. Moog, who has played every minute in the first two rounds, can't run out of gas.

PENGUINS OUTLOOK—Getting a few days off was vital for the Penguins, whose defense is all banged up. Paul Coffey (broken jaw) isn't expected to play, but Ulf Samuelsson and Peter Taglianetti should be back. Penguins beat Washington with defense, not offense, limiting the Capitals to three goals in the last three games.

CAMPBELL CONFERENCE
Edmonton Oilers (37-37-6) vs. Minnesota North Stars (27-39-14)

SEASON SERIES—North Stars 2-0-1 (2-0-0 at Minnesota; 0-0-1 at Edmonton; all games played between Feb. 20 and March 6)

PLAYOFF HISTORY—Oilers 1-0; swept North Stars in 1984 Campbell finals, outscoring them 22-10.

HOW THEY GOT HERE—Oilers upset Calgary and Los Angeles to win the Smythe Division; North Stars ousted Chicago and St. Louis to capture its first Norris Division title since 1984.

Wimbledon purse climbs to record $6.8 million heights

Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — The total purse for the Wimbledon tennis championships will be a record $6.8 million, but it won't be equally distributed among the men and women, Wimbledon officials said Tuesday.

While the total payout is a five percent increase over last year, Wimbledon officials rejected demands by women's tennis players and officials for equal pay.

The breakdown of prize money for the June 24-July 7 event has the men receiving $3.7 million and the women $3.1 million. The men's champion will receive $408,000, while the women's champion gets $367,000.

The Women's Tennis Association recently demanded equal prize money at all Grand Slam tournaments as a condition for its acceptance of a women's Grand Slam Cup — similar to the men's year-end event that began in 1990.

Of the four Grand Slam events, only the U.S. and Australian Opens offer the same prize money to men and women. Wimbledon and the French Open still pay more to the men.

"We will continue our constant plea for equal prize money," said Ana Leaird, director of public relations for the WTA. "We feel we're entitled to it. This is not what we want, because it's not equal prize money. We're just going to keep hammering away until we get it."

Wimbledon chairman John Curry said the WTA's request was unacceptable.

"We are aware of their desire," Curry said Tuesday at a news conference. "We think we are very fair and reasonable. Every year we sit down and think about it. It's not a decision taken lightly."

Prices fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices fell Tuesday on a combination of technical market influences, erroneous speculation and the possibility that Iraq may soon start selling its crude again.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in June settled at $20.96 per barrel, down 30 cents.

Many participants may have wrongly predicted that the American Petroleum Institute was going to report that the nation's supply of gasoline had risen last week, said Ed Kevelson, an oil trader at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Instead, the API reported after the market was closed that the gasoline stockpile had fallen to 204.2 million barrels for the week ended Friday, down from 204.9 million a week earlier and 221.0 million a year earlier.

Stocks rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks closed higher Tuesday after the Federal Reserve announced a long-awaited cut in interest rates, but a new round of grim economic news dampened a market rally.

Dollar tumbles

Gold prices staged a strong advance. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $355.90 a troy ounce, up $3.80 from Monday.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 137.42 Japanese yen from 137.83 yen on Friday.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.7235 from $1.6765.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday's rates, included: 1.7067 German marks, down from 1.7510; 1.4410 Swiss francs, down from 1.4730; 5.7760 French francs, down from 5.9100; 1,262.50 Italian lire, down from 1,294.00; and 1.1529 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1533.

On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $3.969 a troy ounce, up from $3.915 on Monday.

FDIC votes another increase

Deposit insurance goes to 23 cents per $100 effective July 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp voted unanimously Tuesday to raise the deposit insurance premium paid by banks for the third time in a year and a half.

The premium will increase to 23 cents per $100 of deposits annually, effective July 1. It has been 19.5 cents since Jan. 1. It was 12 cents during 1990 and 8.3 cents before that.

The latest increase, which was proposed by the board on March 6, will generate $870 million a year. The agency, which insures deposits at 12,300 commercial banks and 500 savings banks, plans to borrow $10 billion to shore up its dwindling fund and use the revenue from the latest premium increase to repay it.

The 182 bankers who flooded the agency with comments had opposed the increase by better than a 2-to-1 margin, but FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman said the hike was "one important element in our plan to maintain a strong deposit insurance system at no cost to the American taxpayer."

Earlier, he repeated a warning to the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions that the fund backing more than $2 trillion in deposits could run out of money between Sept. 30 and the end of the year.

Less than 3½ years ago, the fund stood at $18.3 billion. But 800 bank failures over the past four years have diminished it to $8.4 billion at the end of 1990, according to the FDIC.

The General Accounting Office, however, said last week that the funds' condition is even worse, anywhere between $2 billion and $5 billion less.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the financial institutions subcommittee, said his panel will begin writing legislation next Tuesday to authorize the FDIC to borrow up to $25 billion from the Treasury.

Annunzio and Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the full committee, want to swiftly replenish the FDIC and postpone action on the Bush administration's plan to broadly restructure the banking system.

But Seidman and other regulators appearing Tuesday told legislators they should try to enact the broader reforms and replenishment in one package or miss what Seidman called a "golden opportunity" to pass measures that have been ensnarled for years by competing interests.

With the latest premium increase, the FDIC will be taking $5.7 billion out of the banking system, nearly triple the $2.1 billion it would be collecting under the pre-1990 rate.

Banks have basically two ways to deal with the increase: absorbing all or some of it through reduced profits and diminished dividends to shareholders or passing it on to customers in the form of higher loan rates, lower deposit rates and increased fees.

Bankers argued that such a heavy blow reduces their capacity to make new loans, worsening the credit crunch afflicting some regions, particularly New England.

An FDIC staff study, however, said that was not clear. But it acknowledged that profits would be crimped, estimating that 63 banks would be pushed from profitability into losing money and that 2,767 banks will see their profits reduced by 10 percent or more.

The blow will be cushioned by the fact that the reduced profits would lower banks' state and federal income tax bills by nearly $300 million, it said.

Big Three report loss for quarter

AP Laserphoto

A sea of new autos wait their turn to be loaded onto car carriers at the General Motors Assembly Plant in Hamtramck, Mich., Tuesday. General Motors Corp. announced it lost $1.2 billion for the first-quarter of 1991, slightly less than the experts predicted. Ford Motor Co. posted a record quarterly loss of $884.4 million. The two reports ushered in what promises to be the worst financial quarter in automotive history.

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors and Ford, two of the nation's mightiest industrial corporations, reported a combined first-quarter loss exceeding $2 billion Tuesday, the most graphic evidence yet of how the spreading recession has devastated sales of new cars.

Neither automaker forecast a turnaround anytime soon.

The General Motors Corp. lost $1.2 billion, excluding two one-time gains, and Ford Motor Co. lost $884.4 million during the three-month period, the worst quarterly performance in that automaker's history.

Chrysler Corp., weakest of the Big Three, reports first-quarter results Wednesday. Combined Big Three first-quarter losses could exceed $2.5 billion, an industry record for any quarter.

Industry executives said they believed any comeback is likely to be slow, throwing into question whether any of the automakers will show a profit for 1991.

"For the full year, with this sort of start in the first quarter, it will be very difficult to achieve a profit," said David McCammon, Ford vice president and treasurer.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel said in assessing the results: "This is a time of extraordinary demands on our business, and General Motors faces the toughest and most competitive North American automotive market in the corporation's history."

In past quarters, GM and Ford profits overseas, mostly in Europe and South America, have compensated for the poor performance of their North American automotive businesses. But that didn't happen in the latest results, a reflection of economic downturns abroad.

Ford, for example, lost $208 million in overseas automobile operations, vs. earnings of $155 million last year. Most of the weakness was in Britain, where new car and truck sales have slumped even more than in the United States.

Along with lost production and lost profits a company suffers when it shuts down a plant are supplemental unemployment benefits paid to temporarily idled employees.

McCammon said that in the first quarter, Ford operated plants at 63 percent of capacity. In the second quarter, he said, the company planned 91 percent capacity utilization, yet it didn't expect to make a profit.

By contrast, the company operated at nearly 100 percent capacity during much of the 1980s, when it became one of the world's most profitable automakers.

Ford said its Financial Services Group earned a record $271 million, up 42 percent from a year ago. On Monday, General Motors Acceptance Corp. said it made $306 million, up 3.3 percent, during the first quarter.

Still, the financial operations profits did little to help companies that rely basically on manufacturing to make money.

GM's first-quarter loss equaled $1.94 a share of common stock. During the first quarter of last year, GM earned $710 million. Ford's loss, equal to $1.88 a share, contrasted with $506.2 million earned a year earlier.

GM's revenue for the quarter dropped 3 percent to $29.2 billion this year from $30.1 billion last year. Ford's revenues fell 9.7 percent to $21.3 billion from $23.6 billion during the first quarter of 1990.

The last time any one of the Big Three reported a quarterly profit was in the third quarter of last year.

Despite the results, Wall Street evidently thinks the worst may be over for Ford and GM. Ford rose 62½ cents a share to $32.50 on the New York Stock Exchange. GM rose $1.75 a share to $35.75. Some analysts also were optimistic.

"Both companies will be back in the black by the fourth quarter," said John Kirnan of the Wall Street brokerage Kidder Peabody & Co. "People sense that this is as bad as it gets."

The Bush administration, anxious about a prolonged recession, has been pressuring the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates, which theoretically will make loans cheaper and encourage consumers to buy major items, such as cars.

The Fed moved Tuesday to lower interest rates a bit, but McCammon at Ford said he didn't think that was enough. Rising unemployment, slumping housing starts and lower benefit payments by employers are depressing consumer attitudes about buying expensive goods, he argued.

"This all spirals," he said. "This is a classical economic situation that you don't pull out of easily. It will take a lot more than an interest rate cut to pull the country out of this."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

ANALYSIS

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks advanced today after the Federal Reserve announced a long-awaited cut in interest rates, but a new round of grim economic news dampened a market rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 13.12 to 2,890.10 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

The broader market showed a retreat from morning gains. Declining issues led advances by a narrow margin, with 793 down, 731 up, and 502 unchanged. Volume on the Big Board was active at 146.64 million shares.

The Federal Reserve cut the discount rate, effective immediately, one-half point to 5½ percent from 6 percent. The discount rate is the interest the Fed charges on loans to banks and other depository institutions.

Economists and traders, along with President Bush, had strongly encouraged the cut to spur investment and pull the economy out a deep slump. Without lower rates, stock strategists feared the four-month stock rally would stall.

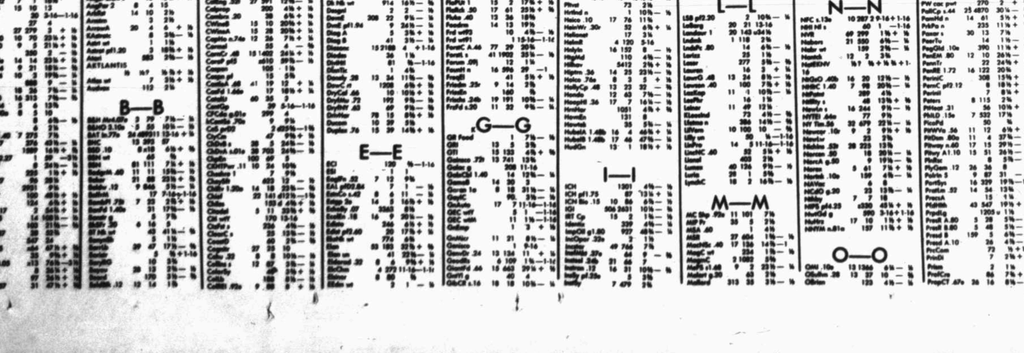

That perception has been one of the key reasons behind the 127-point fall of the Dow Jones average since April 17.

The Fed's announcement came as the stubborn recession shows few signs of retreating. New factory orders fell 2.8 percent in March, the Commerce Department reported today, and the closely watched survey of Chicago purchasing managers fell to 42.1 percent in April compared with 45.9 percent in March.

General Motors Corp. reported a $1.2 billion loss, or $1.94 per share, for the first quarter after deduction of special gains. The loss was lower than expectations, and GM's stock rose 1⅜ to 35⅝.

Ford Motor Co. posted a record quarterly loss of $884.4 million, but the loss didn't exceed expectations. Ford's stock rose ½ to 32¾. IBM fell 2¼ at 102¾ after its chairman on Monday offered a gloomy outlook for the year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Complain about broker not closing account

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am having trouble closing my brokerage account. More than two weeks ago, I asked the broker to sell all the stocks in the account and send me a check. He sold the stocks, but I have not received the check. I wrote and telephoned him. He said the check was in the mail.

Doyle

One week ago, he bought 14,778 shares of a money market mutual fund for my account — without even checking with me. I am afraid he will put the rest of my money into something else of his choice.

Is there anything I can do to get what is owed to me?

A. Start by sending the broker a letter by certified mail, return receipt requested. In it, tell the broker you want the total balance in your account — pronto.

The money for the stocks already sold, as well as any other cash in the account, should reach you in a hurry — no more than a couple of days. That old "in the mail" dodge doesn't wash.

Also tell him to redeem the money market fund shares and send you a check. That can be accomplished the day the broker receives your letter. Along with most such funds, the one you named has a per share value of $1, which never changes. So you have $14,778 there, plus dividends, which are declared daily.

Add a paragraph to your letter stating, in no uncertain terms, you will complain to the National Association of Securities Dealers, 1735 K Street, N.W., Washington DC, 20016, if your instructions are not carried out.

Q. On the advice of a broker with whom we had become friendly, my husband and I invested $10,000 in a limited partnership, which lost most of its value. He did give us a prospectus, but we did not read it. We wouldn't understand the language anyway. We put our faith in the broker and lost.

You advise readers who have disputes with brokers to go before arbitration panels. I did that, at a NASD panel. My husband being ill, I went alone. The broker showed up with an attorney representing him and his firm.

About a week later, we received a letter from the NASD arbitration office that there was nothing they could do for us. I have tried to put this to rest for two years. However, I feel there is more I should have done. Is there any other advice you can give us?

A. Nothing that will help recover any of your money. At this late stage, I can only point out what you should have done.

Perhaps other than trusting the broker, your first big mistake was one of omission by not reading that prospectus, which is a disclosure document. By putting some time and effort into studying the prospectus, you would have learned about the risks involved and the costs. The latter, including brokerage commissions, can be substantial.

This column has consistently cautioned investors to "read the prospectus" and, if necessary, have it explained by neutral experts, such as accountants.

You made another serious error by going before an arbitration panel without legal counsel. There, brokers always have lawyers in tow. You also needed one, who specializes in securities arbitration, to have any hope of winning your case.

The only advice I can give you now is to put this unfortunate experience out of your mind. And, if you ever invest again, don't repeat your previous mistakes.

Q. After retiring eight years ago, I became involved with a broker and subsequently wound up with more than $100,000 invested in energy and real estate limited partnerships. The energy units have been so-so; the real estate units have been disasters.

What is the address of the American Arbitration Association, so I can find out if my situation qualifies for arbitration?

A. The association's headquarters is at 140 West 51 Street, New York, NY 10020. Many investors prefer to take their disputes with brokers before AAA panels, on the belief they get better shakes there than at arbitration panels sponsored by the securities industry.

New computer chip transmits by light

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. today announced the development of a computer chip that uses light instead of electrons and wire to transmit information, an advance that could dramatically increase the speed of computers.

"The copper used in ordinary wires and in the wiring 'traces' of computer circuit boards has a number of fundamental physical limitations," said James Yuan, a Texas Instruments researcher who led the research team.

Texas Instruments calls the chip an optoelectronic integrated circuit, or OEIC.

Its high-speed optical connections can be packed on a circuit board more densely than the copper wires and traces that carry signals from chips now and they use less power. Space and power reductions typically result in lower costs for computers.

The chip's logic circuitry was fabricated in silicon, the most widely used semiconductor metal, another factor in its low cost, the company said.

"The copper used in ordinary wires and in the wiring 'traces' of computer circuit boards has a number of fundamental physical limitations."

— James Yuan, Texas Instruments

But the chip's light-emitting structures use gallium arsenide, a more expensive semiconductor material.

The manufacturing process merging silicon and gallium arsenside has been tried but needs further development, Yuan said. He estimates the OEIC could be commonly used in the next five to 10 years.

Pickens' campaign leaves Japan, Inc. unscathed

TOKYO (AP) — With another cast of characters, Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens' crusade to win a say in the business of a Japanese auto parts maker might have made a difference.

The Texas financier's pleas for greater shareholders' rights and for more open ways of doing business were legitimate, analysts say, but his own background as a pioneer of hostile takeover tactics in the United States and his swashbuckling media campaign against Japan Inc. doomed his cause.

"I know American business leaders have been frustrated, but that doesn't mean Pickens' ways will work here. Japanese companies will spend any amount of money and effort to avoid conflict," says Masatake Takahashi, an analyst of Japan-U.S. affairs.

Pickens said Monday he would give up his 42.4 million shares in Koito Manufacturing Co., selling it back to Kitaro Watanabe, a Tokyo Japanese investor who sold him the shares in 1989.

"We've given up on ever getting on the board of Koito," Pickens said.

In a written statement released in Tokyo, Koito guardedly said it welcomed the news. After two years of hurling accusations across the Pacific, the confrontation ended with no clear winner.

Koito still contends that Watanabe actually controlled Pickens' shares. It says the Texan was a front for "greenmail" — an attempt to have Koito buy back shares at above-market prices to avoid a takeover.

The allegation, denied by Pickens, weakened his case as a champion of shareholders' rights.

Pickens charged that he had a genuine interest in Koito and was entitled to board representation as the company's largest stockholder. He claimed that as a subordinate supplier, Koito allowed Toyota to control it.

"I've learned from my experience that Japan's entire economy is rigged," he declared in a letter to The Associated Press on Monday. "The Japanese are doing business with a different set of rules than Americans."

Pickens sought to politicize his struggle by taking his cause to the media and to the U.S. Congress, where he testified that his problems illustrate the barriers Americans face trying to do business in Japan.

His complaints won him international attention, but they handicapped his battle inside Japan.

"He could have developed a successful strategy, but he would have to do it the Japanese way. You can't come in with your boots on, shouting. You need a more low-key approach," says an expert in mergers and acquisitions, who requested anonymity.

"You need to have something to offer the other side as a mutual benefit," he says.

Pickens' demands for more rights as a shareholder illustrates basic differences in the business cultures of the two countries.

Unlike in the United States, where takeovers often mean pink slips, in Japan shareholders rights' are considered less important than the welfare of employees.

"His requests were not unreasonable. Japanese shareholders do have few rights," says James Vestal, an economist at Keio University in Tokyo.

"But the case is colored by the parties involved, and Pickens chose a very difficult target in Toyota. It's hard to find a more conservative company to tangle with," Vestal said.

The strong Japanese emphasis on relationships also worked against Pickens, who challenged the system as an outsider.

"It's very difficult to just come in off the street, with no acquaintances, and expect to get anywhere," says Minoru Taniguchi of Yasuda Trust and Banking Co.'s global strategy group.

"To succeed in Japan, you have to take the time to cultivate a business relationship," Taniguchi said.

Telecommunications revolution promising and threatening

Hearst News Service

ST. LOUIS – From the windows on the 41st floor of Southwestern Bell Corp.'s headquarters here, the view of the skyline and the meandering Mississippi is marred by a hodgepodge of what look like large snare drums tilted sideways atop most of the surrounding office towers.

These microwave antennas send local telephone traffic from business customers directly to long-distance carriers such as AT&T, MCI and U.S. Sprint, bypassing Southwestern Bell's phone lines.

Some experts say the competition holds the promise of exciting new phone services for consumers – and for much higher bills for basic phone service.

Competition for local telephone service may reshape the U.S. telecommunications industry. Some experts predict the next decade will bring the deregulation of the seven regional "Baby Bells" that were formed after the breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in 1984.

Small alternative telephone access firms, using networks of underground fiber-optic cables, are siphoning off commercial customers who want to bypass the phone company to connect long-distance calls.

New providers of wireless pocket phone systems, an extension of today's cellular phones, have been licensed by the Federal Communications Commission to conduct experiments in several cities.

On top of it all, long-distance carriers and cable television firms are trying to grab pieces of the local communications market. And government is grappling with how to regulate the century-old local phone monopolies.

In Houston, the battle pits one regulated utility – Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. – against another – Houston Lighting & Power Co. The electric company leases fiber-optic lines beneath Houston streets to two alternative access phone firms that are competing with Southwestern Bell.

Today, most residential and business phone users still have just one place to go for phone service: the local phone company.

Alternative local carriers are serving only big metropolitan business centers like downtown Houston, where about three dozen big office buildings are hooked up to their networks.

These alternative carriers don't route a local call through a switch network like Bell does. They just deliver it from Point A –say, a customer's office – to Point B – most likely a long-distance carrier that will then handle the call.

While these alternative firms' annual revenues have grown to a combined $100 million nationally in just a few years, their business represents a minuscule portion of the combined $90 billion annual revenues for the regional Bells and the more than 1,000 other local phone companies across the country.

Most analysts say it will be a long time, if ever, before competition reaches the vast majority of residential phone users.

However, the issue is of vital concern for average telephone customers. That's because they may be the ones who will foot the bill if the local phone companies continue to lose top-paying business customers.

Business users pay the majority of the cost of service for everyone – in effect, subsidizing residential customers. Southwestern Bell estimates it costs $32.92 a month to bring residential phone service to an average customer in Texas, nearly triple the basic rate charge of $11.05.

Price competition threatens the system of rate subsidies designed to keep basic phone costs down, allowing low-income people to participate in the economy and to have access to emergency services.

Southwestern Bell says rates are set so urban service subsidizes rural, business subsidizes residential and long-distance subsidizes local services.

Local phone companies argue that the higher rates for business customers set by state and federal regulators are encouraging big, lucrative customers to flock to largely unregulated competitors.

Bell executives say they want to enter the new competitive world but are hampered by regulation.

"We don't think that it is fair when they aren't in the (universal) telephone business and we are, and they are picking off the cream," Southwestern Bell Chairman Ed Whitacre said in a recent interview.

The Public Utility Commission of Texas, which regulates state phone rates, has been grappling for a year on the question of whether to regulate new alternative local access carriers. The fight is getting ugly.

Southwestern Bell has demanded that the utility commission license alternative carriers as full-fledged local telephone companies. This would require them to provide universal service to all customers in their operating areas, which is impossible given these carriers' limited networks.

Until the new rules are developed, Bell wants the utility commission to shut these companies down.

Royce Holland, president of Metropolitan Fiber System, one of two alternative carriers operating in downtown Houston, said federal interstate long-distance rules won't allow the Public Utility Commission to shut them down.

The PUC first will have to decide what kind of telephone network Texans want – plain old telephone service, called POTS in the industry, for some and high capacity fiber-optic service for others? Or a state-of-the-art system serving everyone? And if it decides on high-tech, who will pay to update the system, which today is mostly copper wire to homes?

Mobil unit gets option on Stonebridge Ranch

N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — The land development unit of Mobil Corp. said Tuesday that it had signed an option to acquire the vast Stonebridge Ranch property north of Dallas from the government. Terms were not disclosed.

The sale would conclude a two-year effort by the government to sell the 6,230-acre development of expensive homes, lakes and golf courses 43 miles outside Dallas.

Most of the financing for Stonebridge, between $300 million and $330 million from 1983 to 1988, was advanced by Gibraltar Savings. The savings institution became insolvent three years ago and is now part of First Gibraltar, the state's largest savings and loan.

First Gibraltar's troubled loans, including the Stonebridge Ranch agreements, were retained by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. as part of the government's deal to sell Gibraltar Savings with four other insolvent institutions in 1988.

A Japanese executive, Yukio Kitano, agreed last June to buy Stonebridge for $61 million, but was unable to raise the money after Japan's financial and real estate markets turned down.

The Stonebridge deal could cost taxpayers $300 million. The FDIC said it expected the closing to take place by summer.

Mobil's land development unit, based in Reston, Va., owns and develops properties in Florida, California, Colorado, Arizona, Virginia and Texas.

Survivors of failed escape attempts come forward

EDITOR'S NOTE — Before the Berlin Wall came down, at least 197 people were killed trying to escape from East Germany into West Germany. No longer fearing communist reprisals, many of the survivors of failed escape attempts are coming forward with disturbing stories of the killings. Here are some of them.

By Terrence Petty
Associated Press writer

HOHEGEISS, Germany — A soft silence fills the piney air of Germany's Harz Mountains, sweetened by a sparrow's cheery chirrups. But to Marlit Schubert, this bucolic setting is a place of eternal sorrow.

Her first husband, Helmut Kleinert, was killed here by communist border guards nearly 28 years ago, hunted down like a terrified hare as he and Marlit tried to flee from East Germany into Hohegeiss, West Germany.

Marlit was just 22 years old at the time, and three months pregnant. She and Helmut wanted to be free.

"Why did he have to give up his life? We weren't criminals," says 50-year-old Marlit, who was captured during the 1963 escape attempt. "It's something I can't understand to this day."

At least 197 people died on the now-vanished frontier or at the Berlin Wall — some mutilated by East German land mines, some mowed down by sinister trip-wire weapons, most shot by communist border guards.

To the outside world, the killings became an outrageous symbol of East Germany and its totalitarian regime.

East Germany exists no more. But for survivors of the border killings and relatives of those who died, the suffering has never ceased.

No longer fearing communist reprisals, many of those survivors have been coming forward with disturbing testaments which they hope will help ensure justice is finally served.

The predawn shooting occurred on Oct. 18, 1965 at border fortifications separating East Germany from West Berlin. The two men decided in a bar they'd had enough of their repressive homeland.

Krause wipes his reddened eyes with the back of a hand as he recounts the incident:

"We were only about three meters (yards) from the fence, and then were spotted by the troops," says the gravel-voiced Krause, sitting in a shabby chair in his humble flat in Gueterfelde, an East German village just south of Berlin.

"Flares went up. Somebody shouted 'hands up!' Bullets flew at us from everywhere," hitting Krause in the stomach and in the foot.

More shots were fired, hitting Kittel.

"Walter Kittel fell against me. Blood came from his nose and from his mouth, and then I blacked out," Krause recalls.

"I was revived in somebody's garden. He lay next to me, and a border guard said, 'He's dead.'"

Kittel's body was quickly cremated, Krause says, and his parents were given the ashes and a death certificate saying he had died of heart failure.

Krause spent 11 months in a prison hospital and then another 19 months in jail. Communist officials made him sign a paper vowing he would never talk about the border shooting, threatening him with a stiffer prison sentence.

"I kept silent," says the 46-year-old Krause, who finally went public with his story less than a year ago.

He currently works at a home for the elderly, shoveling coal into the institution's furnace.

Marlit Schubert is also haunted by the past, and the nightmarish summer day her first husband was killed.

On Aug. 1, 1963, Helmut and Marlit Kleinert rode a motorbike from Quedlinburg, East Germany, to the border, leaving their 2-year-old daughter, Antje, with Helmut's parents.

Reaching their destination, a spot across from Hohegeiss, a quaint mountain resort, the Kleinerts set out on foot across the deadly no man's land that once existed along the frontier.

A border guard ordered "Halt!" and the Kleinerts threw themselves to the ground. Helmut sprang up again. But Marlit couldn't move; an East German soldier was clutching her by the foot.

One of the guards fired as Helmut fled, wounding him in the thigh. He crawled into some brush to shield himself. But the border guards had no mercy. One of them sprayed the brush with machine-gun fire.

"They could have easily just pulled him" out of the bushes instead of shooting him, Marlit said at her current home near Hanover.

Marlit never saw Helmut alive again.

Marlit received a relatively light sentence for the escape attempt: 10 months' probation. But the state had killed her husband, making her a widowed mother with no chance of getting ahead because of the failed escape attempt.

Marlit remarried six years later. She says her second husband deserves a lot of credit for helping her deal with the psychological fallout of that horrible August day, rearing Olaf and Antje like they were his own.

Five months after the historic opening of the border, Marlit and her second husband moved last April to Springe, a Hanover suburb, in former West Germany.

Olaf works at a Hanover brewery. Antje, who lives next door to her mother and stepfather, is a 29-year-old kindergarten teacher.

East Germany's relatively short history was littered with border tragedies.

Chris Gueffroy, age 20, was the last victim of the infamous "shoot-to-kill" orders issued to East German guards. He was gunned down at the Berlin Wall on Feb. 5, 1989, a scant nine months before the Wall fell.

A number of people were killed by self-firing SM-70 weapons that spewed a flurry of murderous steel projectiles at anyone who set off the trip wire.

Other victims were killed by border land mines, or while trying to swim or row to freedom in Berlin, across the Elbe River and even over the North Sea.

More deaths could be uncovered in years to come.

In November 1986, 25-year-old Michael Bittner disappeared from his East Berlin home. Not until after East Germany was dissolved did his mother — Irmgard — learn he had been killed in an escape attempt and his body secretly cremated. For five years she had futiley tried to locate her son.

Hans-Juergen Grasemann, assistant head of the Salzgitter Central Registration Office, says the agency recently uncovered a 1979 border death that had also been hushed up. The 15-year-old youth was killed in the Harz Mountains, Grasemann says.

The Salzgitter office was created by the West German government in 1961, after the Berlin Wall went up, to gather information about the border killings.

East German guards were sometimes brazenly open about the killings, other times more covert.

Fechter's agonizing death was watched by throngs of horrified people, including his mother who had heard the shots from her nearby East Berlin home. Communist guards refused to help Fechter after they shot him, or to let Margarethe Fechter go to her dying son.

"I ran to the Berlin Wall and heard a faint voice saying: 'Why isn't anyone helping me?'. The border police were smirking. They just let him die," Mrs. Fechter tearfully recalled in an interview last year.

Fechter lay in the wall's death strip for 55 minutes, his pleas growing ever weaker, and finally died from a loss of blood. East German border troops carried his body away.

Preliminary investigations have already begun in many of the deaths, but prospects for criminal trials could become snarled in a web of legal complexities.

The biggest question to be answered is: Who was legally responsible?

Border guards who did the shooting will have to be tracked down. And like Nazi war criminals after World War II, they would undoubtedly argue they were merely following orders.

In interviews with officials from the Salzgitter agency, a number of former East German guards — who had not been involved in border shootings — said there was fear among their ranks about severe prison sentences if they refused to shoot at fugitives.

Some border guards also said that even though they didn't like the idea of shooting would-be fugitives, that was part of their duty if nothing else worked.

Other former communist border soldiers have said they viewed fugitives as enemies of the state.

Law helps milk crates remain at the dairy

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — For years, the public has used milk crates for everything from bicycle baskets to speaker stands.

But a law enacted 18 months ago in Texas has helped take the crates out of family storage rooms and student dormitories and back to the dairy.

"It's just made a heckuva difference," said Noble Anderson, vice president of Bell Dairy Products Inc., in Lubbock. "We got behind that law harder than anyone else because it seemed everyone was using our milk crates except us.

"I know they make nice dorm decor as book shelves and speaker stands, but it costs us a fortune."

Opportunistic home decorators and students have long made a habit of swiping crates from dairy and grocery store loading docks.

At first, people took them for storage purposes. But as the recycling wave took off, some culprits began making off with the crates to be melted down and used for plastic toys and furniture.

"It got to the point where dairies had to be buying 30,000, 40,000 new milk cases every month," said Glenn Brown, president of the Dairy Products Institute of Texas in Austin. "And we couldn't go up (in price) on the milk" to recoup the losses.

Dairies across the state pushed for a law, enacted in the fall of 1989, which imposes a $300 fine on anyone caught with a number of containers, including milk crates, egg baskets, laundry carts and shopping carts.

"We weren't out to get the old grandma with one case," Brown said. "But some people were getting them by the hundreds."

Anderson said he once saw a picture of a fence made out of crates surrounding someone's house.

The Texas dairy industry put messages on the side of milk cartons asking the public to return the cases and warning them of the fine.

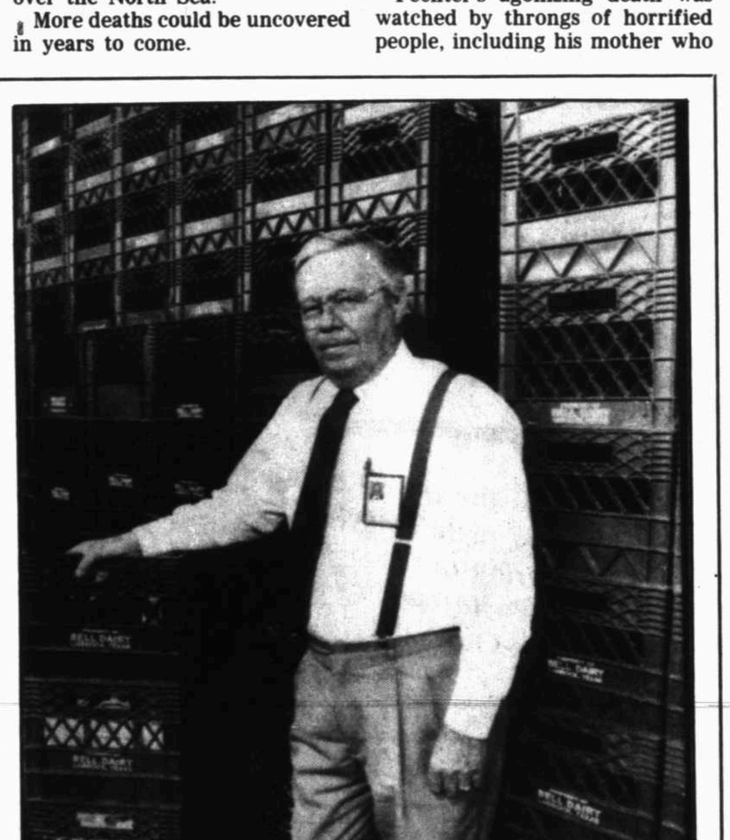

And less than two years later, the law has saved dairies more than $1 million, Brown said.

Bell Dairy's crate costs have been cut by more than two-thirds, Anderson said.

"We spent $75,000 in 1987 on milk cases. And we spent about $19,000 in 1990. I would say it's had an effect," he said.

Each case costs about $3.50 to replace.

The law may have even caused sales to rise at stores that sell commercial milk cases, officials said.

Soldier's family plans traditional Cheyenne tribal homecoming

By Jan Burton
Associated Press writer

NORMAN, Okla. — Late this month or early in June, Ed Wilson's son is expected to return to this country after a tour of duty in Saudi Arabia.

Marine Cpl. Dana Wilson was deployed to the Mideast from Camp Le June in North Carolina just before Christmas. First he went through the miseries of lost contact with his family, which includes his wife, Cheryl, and son, Derek, 1, who are waiting for him in Jacksonville, N.C. It was close to a month before he got any mail or word from home.

Then, "when things got ugly," as Wilson puts it, Dana was with an engineer platoon that went deep into Kuwait.

"They had some frightening moments," the father relates.

Obviously, joy was indescribable when the war came to an end, even though it didn't signify an immediate return home for Dana, a veteran of almost six years in the Marines.

Back in his home state, however, many detailed plans are being made for what once was called a Victory Ceremony and now is known as the Soldier's Ceremony.

"It is a very old custom," says Wilson. "A tradition that families did for warriors on their return home from whatever the activity against other tribes, U.S. soldiers, settlers. But it really goes further back than that, because it originally was geared around tribal wars or territorial conflicts."

"They generally call it a 'homecoming.'"

The one being planned for Dana will be similar to the homecoming Wilson and his brothers received when they returned from their military service.

Wilson recalls being spit upon in an airport in California when he came back from Vietnam, but he notes with pride "that did not happen to Native American Vietnam veterans within their tribes ... we were treated with honor."

Wilson says the ceremony being planned for his son is a contemporary version of the rites that have been passed down through generations, but "it still has the same meaning and impact."

He also emphasizes that "the same type of homecoming/victory dance can and does apply to women in the modern service."

Friends and family for miles around and from other states will be invited to the celebration. Wilson expects approximately 200 to 250 will attend.

The songs and dances of the Soldier's Ceremony are special, says Wilson, because "they are not real common at least the older songs aren't. We are trying to retain them."

The festivities will take place in Thomas, Okla., at the home of Wilson's aunt and uncle, Dave and Nellie Hamilton. "As long as I can remember, celebrations have been at this location," he says.

"It has historical meaning for our family.(END QUOTE)

Wilson's mother, Mary, also lives in Thomas and "will be a big part of this thing," he says with pride.

The specific date for the celebration depends on the military, of course, but, says Wilson, "we will choose a weekend. It will begin on a Saturday evening and include the Native American church ceremony, with prayers and songs from midnight to dawn.

"That ceremony has its own songs and there will be an altar and a fire," he says.

There will be an authentic camp crier to announce events and call people by their Indian names to receive the gifts.

Artist makes extraterrestrial worlds from junk

CHICAGO (AP) — Artist Vincent Jo-Nes creates extraterrestrial landscapes out of down-to-earth junk.

The engineer turned to commercial art about six years ago and translated his passion for recycling garbage into a junk-art museum exhibit.

Jo-Nes sticks mainly to extraterrestrial landscapes, using curling irons, disposable razors, broken electronic equipment and other junk he picks up at industry fire sales.

"I look at a vacuum cleaner and say, 'Hey, if I take off the bag and the cord, it looks like the main part of a spaceship,'" he said Monday.

The sculpture sells at Boy Scout conventions and science fiction fairs, Jo-Nes said. His clients include astronauts, science fiction writers and "Star Trek" television and film producer Gene Roddenberry.

Chicago's Museum of Science and Industry put some of the art on display as an example of a creative use for garbage.

Jo-Nes said he started working with junk when an old girlfriend kept asking for a vacation to an Italian villa. Low on cash, he ventured into a trash container and modeled a villa from a shoebox.

The model has 36 buttons. When pressed, a light will blink or a robot will turn.

Early in 1912, Picasso began including newspaper clippings and bits of debris in his paintings. Ever since, everyday objects have found their way into paintings and sculptures, said Bruce Guenter, chief curator at the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago.

But major museums and art schools have shied away from junk-molded art, he said.

"A lot of it is schmaltz, the kind of things you'd find in a stationery store, not an art museum," Guenter said.

Many artists are lured to working with junk by the low cost of raw materials, said Carl Hammer, owner of a Chicago art gallery that sells such art.

"I love his stuff," said Chicago attorney Frank Speh, who owns several sculptures created by Jo-Nes. "You just look at it and say, 'Wow! Gee Whiz!'"

MAY 01 91

NOW May Just Be The Best Time To Buy A New Car, Truck or Van!

HERE'S WHY:

You AUTO Buy Now

DEALER INVENTORIES ARE HIGH

Dealers anticipated better sales earlier this year, and inventories are much higher than expected. When dealers say they are overstocked and have to move cars out, it isn't hype.

FINANCE RATES ARE FAVORABLE

The Permian Basin is getting stronger every day. The Midland Auto Dealers are wanting to make it even better by offering better selections and better prices. And since interest rates have been coming down, you'll find financing rates in your favor.

DEALER COSTS

TRADE-IN ALLOWANCES ARE GOOD

Dealers want clean, quality trade-ins to keep for their used car inventory. Consequently your current car is worth more as a trade-in than in recent times.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!
