Runs Close Three Miami Banks

BANKS CLOSE FOLLOWING RUMOR SPREAD BY ANONYMOUS LETTERS RUN STARTED ON FOURTH FIRM

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6. (AP)—Seven million dollars in cash will be sent to the First National bank by the federal reserve bank branch in Jacksonville by airplane and train to pay all depositors who wish to withdraw their funds, officials of the local institution announced this afternoon following an orderly run on the bank growing out of the closing of three other local financial institutions this morning.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6. (AP)—A determined run on the First National bank began during the noon hour today following the failure of three other Miami financial institutions to open for business today.

The bank's large lobby accommodated all who sought to gain admittance up to 12:30.

Other large banks reported normal business conditions.

Officers of the First National bank mingled with the crowd in the lobby and could not be reached immediately for a statement. The bank's regular closing time was 2 p. m.

Three Miami banks failed to open for business today. They were the Southern Bank & Trust company, the Citizens Bank and the Bank of Allapattah.

The Southern Bank & Trust company requested Comptroller Amos to assume charge of its affairs pending strengthening of finances, following heavy withdrawals of deposits caused by circulation of annoymous letters predicting its failure.

Mr. Amos ordered the other institutions not to open in the belief that they were not in financial position to withstand large withdrawals which might result from excitement incident to the closing of the Southern Bank & Trust company. Under normal conditions they could operate he said, adding that there had been no sign of a run at either place.

In announcing that the Southern Bank & Trust company had suspended business but would reopen March 15, and that the state comptroller had taken charge at the request of its officials, President J. E. Lummus said in a public statement that "large demands for cash during the last few days had been caused by anonymous letters written to depositors and advising them to quietly get your money out of the Southern bank."

The letters, he said, were signed "Hiram," and bore a cruedly drawn Masonic emblem. They were mailed Saturday, January 28 in Miami, but Mr. Lummus was unable to estimate their number, more accurately than that there were "more than a dozen." Some were sent to persons who were not depositors, he added.

The police are seeking to trace the sender.

The Southern Bank & Trust company is capitalized at $100,000 and on Saturday night had $5,138,112.11 in deposits, while the Allapattah institution had $15,000 capital and deposits estimated at $110,000.

HOME TOWN TALK

Most of us who got up in the small hours to shut the windows last night thought that the rainfall was much more than a seventh of an inch. It sounded like a real downpour. That much rain is just a seventh of an inch better than no rain at all, and will be of benefit to the crops. Not as much benefit, though, as the big snow that we're going to get as soon as spring is over.

Air mail service started today between Fort Worth and South Texas points, Waco, Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Galveston being added to the list of Texas cities now getting such service. Wichita Falls must keep up its efforts to get on a mail route. The existing routes are of no great benefit to this city because of the time that must be lost in getting air mail letters to Fort Worth.

Everett Hughes, well known Wichitan, is seriously thinking of making the race for county tax collector, and in the event he chooses to run will make announcement within a few days. At the same time he will state his views on matters of interest to taxpayers. Among other things, he would like to know why a mule in Wichita county is worth $20 more, for taxation purposes, than the same animal would be in adjoining counties. There are other taxable items, from an acre of land to stocks of merchandise which, Everett asserts, and he has the figures to prove, are assessed at a higher valuation in Wichita county than in almost any other county in Texas. As to whether Everett could do anything to correct the situation, if he should make a succesful race, is another matter; but the Times thinks it

HICKMAN CELL MATE TO TELL OF JAIL TALK

RECIPIENT OF FOX'S NOTE ADMITTING "FIT FAKE" WILL TESTIFY

SPECIAL POLICE GUARD TO PROTECT WITNESS

Court Takes Safeguard Action After Hickman's Threat to Harm His Confidant

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6. (AP)—When Dale Budlong takes the stand in the sanity trial of his fellow jail prisoner, William Edward Hickman, to tell how the latter came to write him a letter revealing Hickman's plan to stage a "laughing, screaming, diving act," in court, a special guard will be provided for him.

Plans for this court guard were announced today by the sheriff's office after disclosing that Hickman, following upon the surprise appearance of that letter in court, had delivered a wild tirade to jailers in which he threatened Budlong. Jail officials at once took special precautions, they said, to guard both Budlong and Hickman in the jail. The move to strengthen the guard over Hickman also was actuated by an anonymous letter which the authorities received in which the writer declared Hickman would be "dead in five days."

Prosecution attorneys said they considered Budlong's testimony, which will deal with circumstances under which he received the letter and conversations he had with Hickman, of importance. The letter itself has been hailed by the state's forces as branding as a "fake" the insanity defense of Hickman to the kidnaping and slaying of little Marian Parker.

Budlong probably will not testify at once, for the move of the defense in calling prosecution witnesses to recount the youth's crime to introduce his confessions, caused the state to reverse its plans. As a result, prosecution alienists, first scheduled to be the last witnesses to be heard, now are being questioned at the opening of state's rebuttal. Other states' witnesses, including acquaintances of Hickman, will follow the experts to the stand.

At the close of Saturday's half day of court, the second of these alienists, Dr. Paul Bowers, still was under cross-examination.

Although District Attorney Asa Keyes and his assistants estimated that their case would be completed within three days, defense counsel predicted that the entire week would be needed for the introduction and cross-examination of the prosecution alienists alone.

The "skin-writing" test to which William Edward Hickman was subjected in court Saturday in his sanity trial growing out of the kidnaping and killing of Marian Parker gave no proof of a diseased condition associated with dementia praecox, Dr. Paul Bowers, state alienist, insisted under cross examination today.

In the test Hickman was stripped

OKLAHOMA BORDER CITY FEELS FORCE 'HI-JINKS' RAIDERS

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 6. (AP)—Eight of the alleged law violators of South Coffeyville, Okla., were languishing in Tulsa county jail pending the filing of charges of liquor law violations against them, probably today.

Many gambling devices, slot machines and trick money wheels, together with 150 quarts of liquor, have been removed from the town due to raids by R. B. Jinks, deputy prohibition administrator, and his "hi-jinks" crew.

The federal officers from the Tulsa office slipped into the Oklahoma town on the Kansas border which has long been noted as a rendezvous for the lawless elenient, late Saturday night and began a thorough cleanup of the village.

After the raid Jinks and several of the officers returned to Tulsa with their prisoners who are Tommy and Fred Hill, Lynn Hicks, Mont Rogers, Jack Rogers, Claude Buchanan, E. P. Doane and A. B. Pence.

A squad of enforcement officers were left at South Coffeyville to see that the gambling dens were not reopened.

Wichita Falls Girl in Hollywood Kidnaped And Released for Kiss

Kidnaped in broad daylight on a Hollywood street, forced to drive her kidnaper around on the streets of Hollywood for several hours, robbed of a valuable diamond ring she was wearing, entertained by her sheik-kidnaper's Italian love-songs, pleaded with to become the kidnaper's accomplice, and finally released for a kiss—that was the thrilling experience a few days ago of a Wichita Falls girl who is now studying in Hollywood.

Miss Gertrude Friedly, a recent graduate of the Wichita Falls High school, and well known here, was kidnaped last week in Hollywood, where she is studying, according to the Los Angeles Evening Herald, for Tuesday, January 31, received here Monday by Miss Friedly's father, T. H. Friedly. Mr. and Mrs. Friedly and their daughter live at 1665 Pearl avenue when in Wichita Falls, but Mrs. Friedley and Miss Friedly have been in Hollywood for several months, according to Mr. Friedly.

The Herald gives the following account of the kidnaping:

"Early yesterday afternoon a man jumped into the automobile of Miss Friedly just as she was pulling away from the curb in front of the Security Trust and Savings bank branch at 7034 Hollywood boulevard.

"Miss Friedly, who is 20 years of age and pretty, had just come from a dancing lesson and was wearing only a bathing suit and a fur coat. She had a valuable diamond ring on her finger, which the bandit took, she told the police.

"Jamming a gun into the girl's side, he forced her to drive him about Hollywood for several hours, according to the story she told the police. He believed at first that Miss Friedly was a bank messenger, but she finally convinced him that he was mistaken.

"Then he entertained her with Italian love songs and finally offered to make her his accomplice, Miss Friedly stated. He drove down to Eighth street and Grand avenue and took her into a cafe, where he gave her a nickel to telephone her mother that she was safe, the girl said.

"Then he forced her back into the machine at the point of a gun, told her he had decided to let her keep the car, she said. With a low bow he kissed her cheek and leaped off the running board, according to Miss Friedly."

After a second kidnaping the same day, the man was arrested by the police and confessed to both kidnapings. It was discovered that the gun he used was only a toy. The diamond ring was given back to Miss Friedly.

Will Rogers News Digest

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Feb. 5.—Well, the alienists in the murder trial again took the comedy honors yesterday. One testified that Hickman was insane because when he tickled the bottom of his feet his big toe turned up instead of down. So take off your shoes and have somebody tickle you and see which way your toes go, north or south. I tried it and mine didn't pay any attention to it, so I guess I am a cross between crazy and sane.

Say did you read what Calvin told the newspapers; said while you are bragging on nations give this one a boost. Yours,

WILL ROGERS.

AIRPLANES TO AID IN RESCUE MEN ON FLOE

Lake Erie Scene of Icy Ride for Fishermen Trapped in Accident on Sunday

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 6. (AP)—While all agencies of the government marine service scoured Lake Erie today for ten fishermen reported adrift on an ice floe, an airplane was held in readiness at the Buffalo airport for a flight over the lake in an attempt to locate the men.

Some doubt was expressed today that the men are missing. Nathaniel Duffy, director of the airport, piloted a plane along the Canadian shore yesterday after he had received reports from two sources that the men had been carried out into the lake, but found no signs of the men on the floes beneath him.

Residents of the Canadian shore, however, felt certain the fishermen were adrift and helpless to aid themselves in near zero weather. The search was pressed on their positive assurances.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 6. (AP)—Captain Paul H. Forner, coast guard commander, today appealed to the New York National Guard and Lieut. Edwin M. Ronne, director of the Buffalo airport, to supply airplanes with which to search for 10 or more fishermen marooned on an ice floe in Lake Erie.

Coast guards patrolling the American and Canadian shores, watched all night in vain for fire signals.

The men were swept up the lake Sunday afternoon by wind after a field of ice on which they were fishing broke away from the main field near Windmill Point, Ontario, a few miles from this city. Observers on shore watched the little group until the hugh ice cake had been blown from sight. Coast guardsmen endeavored to launch boats to go to the rescue, but intervening ice thwarted their efforts.

Observers on shore were unable to determine the exact number of fishermen on the ice pack or the identity of the men, all of whom live in the vicinity of Long Point, Ont. In addition to their bait and fishing tackle, they had with them provisions for one or two meals and wood with which to kindle a fire. Fish, if they had caught any, would serve as an additional food supply. Danger lurked, however, not only in the severe cold, but in the possibility of the big cake of ice on which they floated breaking up or being caught in a jam and turning over. The ice is about six inches thick.

THREE DROWN AS AUTO PLUNGES THROUGH ICE

OAKLAND, Me., Feb. 6 (AP)—Of four persons who essayed a short cut in an automobile across the ice of Lake Messalonskee yesterday three were drowned, all of them women, and the fourth, Brett Morse, 35, of Waterville, driver of the enclosed car in which all were riding, was saved.

Morse escaped from the machine as it sank into 18 feet of water and was pulled out by Harry Ware, husband of one of the women who perished.

The other two victims were Mrs. Eugene W. Strong, and Miss Natalie Cole. All were from Waterville. Ware was riding in a machine which was following that which Morse was driving.

ARBITRATION COMPACT CLOSED BY FORMAL CEREMONY STAGED MONDAY AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (AP) — A new arbitration treaty with France was signed shortly after 11 o'clock today by Robert E. Olds, under secretary of state, for the United States, and Ambassador Paul Claudel for France.

Revisions of peace treaties between the United States and France became an accomplished fact with signature of the pact.

The treaty supersedes the Root arbitration treaty which expires February 27. It will become effective, however, only upon ratification by the legislative bodies of the two governments and the formal exchange of ratification codes.

As is customary, the text of the new treaty will remain confidential until it is made public by the senate committee on foreign relations. In substance, however, its terms already are well known. Including a general declaration in the preamble against resort to war coupled with an expression of hope by the two republics that a day will soon come when all nations will have abandoned war as an instrument of national policy.

The binding commitments of the treaty have to do entirely with arbitration of disputes which it may not be possible to settle by diplomatic means or through the conciliation machinery set up by the Bryan treaty. Under it, the two governments pledge themselves to arbitrate any dispute not arising from purely domestic questions in either country, not affecting the interests of a third nation, and not involving the Monroe doctrine. This represents a marked change from the language of the old Root treaty, which reserved from arbitration matters affecting the vital interests or national honor of each country. To that extent, the new treaty is looked upon both here and in Paris as strengthening the peace preserving machinery between the two countries to a material degree.

Another aspect of the treaty is

BIDS OPENED ON DISMANTLING OF OLD BURK SPAN

Twenty-four bids on proposals to raze the old Burkburnett bridges across the Red river were to be given further consideration Monday afternoon by the county commissioners' court after having been opened during the morning.

The lowest of the bids was that submitted by C. B. Bates, Randlett, Okla., who proposed to dismantle the bridge for $620. The next lowest bid was that of A. T. Postalway, also of Randlett, whose proposal was $1,120.

The bids set new records for the commissioners' court, both in point of number submitted and in the range of amounts proposed for the work.

The highest of the bids proposed to dismantle the structure for $8,500. The sum was nearly 14 times as large as the lowest of the proposals.

Technicalities made it necessary for the court to defer final action on the matter until the afternoon session. Some of the bidders proposed to do the work for a flat sum and others bid on a footage basis. Likewise, some of the bidders failed to make allowance for approximately 200 feet of the bridge which has been washed away. The result was that tabulation was necessary before the exact total amounts of bids could be ascertained.

Still another cause of delay was the fact that some of the bids were accompanied by cashier's checks instead of by certified checks. The particular reason for continuing the matter until after noon was to allow bidders to substitute certified checks for cashier's checks.

Material in the old Burkburnett bridge was purchased by the county when construction was started on the recently completed new bridge. The two structures virtually parallel each other at a distance of about 300 yards apart.

WALSH OPPOSES GIVING STEWART MORE CHANCE

Senate Prosecutor Eager to Get Standard Oil Head Locked Up for His Defiance

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (AP) — George W. Wickersham, former attorney general, has accepted the invitation of the senate Teapot Dome committee to represent it in the habeas corpus proceedings by which Robert W. Stewart, wealthy Chicago oil executive, hopes to relieve himself of senate contempt charges.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, prosecutor for the committee, said today that Mr. Wickersham would be here tomorrow when Stewart's hearing begins before Justice Jennings Bailey in the District of Columbia supreme court.

WASHINGTON, February 6. (AP)—A grand jury in District of Columbia supreme court will be asked this week to indict Robert W. Stewart, Indiana Standard Oil official, for contempt of the senate because of his refusal to give certain information to the senate Teapot Dome investigating committee.

District Attorney Peyton Gordon plans to give the case to the jurors as soon as possible, acting on a certification from the senate that the oil man had refused to testify whether he had any knowledge of Liberty bond transactions of the Continental Trading company of Canada, now under the oil committee's spot light of inquiry.

Two Angles In Case.

Transfer of the case to the courts was voted by the senate when its effort to bring Stewart before it to face a contempt charge was frustrated by the issuance by Justice Jennings Bailey of a restraining order lifting the oil man's arrest by

REESE FULLER FILES APPEAL IN THEFT CASE

AUSTIN, Feb. 6.—An appeal was filed in the court of criminal appeals by Reese Fuller, convicted of misdemeanor theft in Wichita county and fined $50 and sentenced to 30 days in jail. Fuller was sentenced in connection with the theft of an automobile tire valued at $25 from C. W. Frensley and Roy McClure.

ERRORS INVOLVING LARGE SUMS MADE IN RECENT AUDIT COUNTY RECORDS, CHARGES T. R. BOONE

Charges that errors involving large sums were made in the recently completed 10-year audit of county records for years prior to 1927 were made before the county commissioners' court Tuesday afternoon by T. R. Boone, attorney representing the estate of the late A. F. Kerr, who died while serving as district attorney.

Wayne Somerville, county attorney, also told the commission that errors had been made in the auditing of the financial records of his office during the time that he has served in that capacity.

As result of the assertions, the court asked that Clinton E. Smith, head of the auditing firm of Smith, Allred and company, appear before the body. The court then started what promised to be a long discussion of the audit with Boone, Somerville, Smith and E. P. Walsh, county auditor. The 10-year audit was made by Smith, Allred and company under a contract which has caused the payment to the concern by the county of more than $14,000.

Mr. Boone, explaining that the audit showed the estate of Mr. Kerr to owe the county approximately $28,000 from excess fees, some of which date back many years, declared specifically that the audit is in error in two particulars. The audit, he said, does not accurately show amounts of funds paid to Mr. Kerr as district clerk by the state comptroller, and he adds that errors have been made in amounts of salaries paid by Mr. Kerr to clerks. He did not state any specific amount of alleged error in salaries, although he declared it to be "large."

His purpose in appearing before the court, he declared, was to reach some agreement by which the matter can be finally settled.

The commission also ordered that a hearing be held on March 11 on a proposal to create a drainage district in an area of 3500 acres north-

WICHITAN KILLED IN AUTO WRECK STANTON TWO OTHERS INJURED

STANTON, Feb. 6.—George Nichols, about 40, lost his life, two others injured in an automobile wreck three miles west of Stanton at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Mrs. James Pulos and her six-year-old daughter, Mary, were injured, but possibly not fatally. Her husband, James Pulos, and Harry, 11, received no injuries.

They were all from Wichita Falls, Texas, and were on their way to El Paso. Mr. Nichols, driving at a speed of 30 miles, attempted to save a dog which was chained to the running board and lost control of his roadster in which they were all riding. They were all brought to Stanton, where medical aid was administered. Nichols died within a few minutes after the doctor got to him.

George Nichols was formerly owner of the Liberty cafe, 719 Ohio avenue, and was a member of the Knights of Pythias lodge here.

James Pulos, who escaped with minor injuries in the accident, was proprietor of the Manhattan cafe until a few weeks ago when he sold the business.

No information regarding funeral arrangements for Mr. Nichols has been received by friends here.

THREE INJURED IN RIOTING AT PENNSYLVANIA MINE FOLLOWING ATTEMPT TO DISPERSE PICKETS

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 6. (AP)—Two coal and iron policemen were shot and a woman was injured during a mine strike riot at Phillipsburg, near California, Pa., today.

The coal and iron men, J. D. Buttermore and F. P. Byrne, employed under state commissions at the Crescent mine by the Pittsburgh Coal company were struck by the charge from a shot gun. They were not dangerously wounded.

According to the police, several hundred men and women acting as union pickets, appeared at the mine and tried to persuade the non-union miners not to go to work. The coal and iron police attempted to disperse the pickets, it was said, and during the brush between the officers and members of the crowd, a shotgun was fired, wounding the policemen. State troopers quickly were summoned. The troopers restored order. An unidentified woman member of the crowd suffered a crushed foot when a trooper's horse stepped on her.

The union pickets had concentrated for several days last week at the Daisytown mine of the Vesta Coal company, but today they turned their attention to the Phillipsburg workings.

May Call Troops to Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 6. (AP)—Possibility of national guard troops eventually being sent into the Belmont county coal fields as a result of alleged communistic activities loomed today following serious disturbances last night at the Florence mine near St. Clairsville.

After a conference with Adjutant General Henderson today, Governor Donahey said:

"This is government of law and the law must be obeyed. Violence must not take place. If violence continues troops will be forthcoming no difference whether the miners or the operators are to blame."

Federal Judge Benson W. Hough said today that at a conference of mine union officials and operators with him last Saturday, both sides had disavowed responsibility for the disturbances which have been go-

STEWART TO FACE GRAND JURY PROBE

the senate. Thus Stewart may have to defend himself almost simultaneously in two actions designed to hold him subject to a contempt sentence of from one to twelve months in jail.

Counsel for the senate will oppose the restraining order at the hearing before Justice Bailey on Tuesday. Should the senate's power of arrest be upheld, Stewart still might for a time escape the senate's jurisdiction, however, by appealing in turn to the District of Columbia court of appeals and the supreme court of the United States.

Walsh Wants Punishment.

If Stewart eventually is returned to face the senate, it is the intention of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, prosecutor of the oil inquiry and prime mover of the arrest of the oil man, to request that sentence for contempt be fixed, rather than give the witness further opportunity to testify.

With the Stewart episode now out of its immediate field, the oil committee turned today to other witnesses who were hoped to give clues to disposition made of the Continental company's $3,000,000 profits. It called H. L. Phillips of Tulsa, president of the Sinclair Crude Oil Refining company, and J. R. McMann and S. S. Gano, directors of that company. Sheldon Clark, vice president of the concern and one of Harry F. Sinclair's close associates, also is under subpoena.

Seek Oil Baron's Son.

Another figure in the Teapot Dome story whose whereabouts are being looked into by the committee is Wayne O'Neil, son of J. E. O'Neil, former chairman of the board of the Prairie Oil and Gas company and now in Europe where he has refused to answer summons to testify in the Sinclair-Fall conspiracy trial. The younger O'Neil enters the story as the man who transferred $800,000 in Liberty bonds owned by his father to the Prairie company, at the elder man's order, and the committee may wish to learn what he knows of other transactions.

As a side issue, Senator Walsh has written to Secretary Mellon inquiring whether the government ever collected income taxes on the bond deals and whether he could suggest legislation by which the bonds, if traced, could be taxed.

SENATE QUIZZERS QUESTION OTHER OIL DEAL OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (AP)—Turning over to George W. Wickersham, as special counsel, its fight against Robert W. Stewart, who defied its authority to question him, the senate oil committee today went about its business of trying to uncover the disposition of the $3,000,000 in profits made by the Continental Trading company, of Canada, part of which found their way to Albert B. Fall.

Sheldon Clarke, of Chicago, vice president of the Sinclair Refining company, the first witness, told the committee that he knew nothing of the Continental company or the disposition of its bonds.

"Is your company the owner of any bonds in question?" asked Senator Walsh.

"I could not tell you offhand," Clarke said, "but I think not."

H. L. Phillips of Tulsa, Okla., president of the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company, was next called. Asked about the whereabouts of G. S. Tabor Jr., president of the Sinclair company at the time it, Phillips replied.

"I've told you all I know about it," Phillips replied.

that company bought one-half of 33,333,333 barrels of oil from the Continental company, Phillips said he is now in Pittsburgh. The oil was bought for $1.50 a barrel, on the guarantee of Harry F. Sinclair and Stewart, and was immediately resold to Stewart and Sinclair companies for $1.75.

Oil Barons at Meeting.

Describing the meeting of the directors of the Sinclair Crude Oil at which the contract with the Continental was approved, Phillips said that both Stewart and Sinclair were present. Stewart represented the Standard Oil of Indiana, which owns one-half of the Sinclair Crude stock, and Sinclair represented the Sinclair consolidated, which owns the other half.

Phillips testified that he, as a director of the Sinclair Crude, ratified the Continental contract with little or no investigation. He could not recall whether the board had before it the supplemental contract by which the companies purchasing the oil from the Continental—The Sinclair Crude and the Prairie Oil and Gas company—guaranteed to the late A. E. Humphreys that the Continental would fulfill its agreement to purchase and pay for the 33,333,333 barrels of oil.

"Well, let us get to something you may know something about," the committee prosecutor suggested, as he asked about the purchase by the Sinclair Crude and the Prairie oil of the Continental contract for $400,000 when it still had a potential value of $5,000,000.

Conferred With Osler.

The witness said that before the purchase he had a conference in New York City with H. S. Osler of Toronto, president of the Continental company who obtained the consent of the Prairie Gas company to the agreement.

"How was the $400,000 price arrived at?" Walsh asked.

"I don't know," Phillips replied, agreeding however, that it was "an extraordinary transaction."

Knows Nothing of Bonds

"What if anything, do you know about the disposition of the bonds by the Continental Trading company?" Walsh asked.

"I know nothing about them."

"Have you ever been told anything about them?"

"I have not."

Senator Bratton, Democrat, New Mexico, asked why Phillips did not consult the Prairie Oil company at the time he telegraphed Osler to meet him in New York about the sale of the Continental contract.

"I don't know," Phillips replied.

"We have some information that Mr. James O'Neil (James E. O'Neil, former president of the Prairie Oil and Gas company) got $800,000 of the Continental bonds and turned them back to his company," Senator Walsh said, "Have you felt that there is something coming to your company?"

"I just learned of that and I've had no opportunity to make any inquiry."

Walsh Urges Patriotism

"It was not particularly surprising to you, was it?"

"I would say it was very surprising."

"The committee considers this deal most unusual in character and fraught with suspicion at every turn," Senator Walsh told Phillips, "Is there any explanation you can offer of the way you describe it and the way we seem to feel about it?"

Phillips replied that he could not say anything about that.

"The committee feels there is an obligation on the part of every citizen to help it fathom this transaction," Walsh continued. "I'm astonished you people do not feel some patriotic duty in the matter."

"I've told you all I know about it," Phillips replied.

HICKMAN'S CELL MATE TO TESTIFY

to his waist and a large letter "H" marked with the alienist's thumb nail on the prisoner's chest and back. The prolonged presence of the red marks were indications of dermatographia, a skin disease often present with dementia praecox, the defense contended.

Dr. Bowers asserted, however, the marks were diffused and not present in the degree necessary to prove the presence of the disease.

Jerome Walsh, defense attorney quired Dr. Bowers concerning the pay he was receiving from the state. The witness denied that the amount yet had been stipulated, or that he ever charged more than a nominal fee for his time in trials.

Dr. Herman Schorr of Los Angeles physician and surgeon in the department of mental and nervous diseases of a leading Los Angeles hospital, was the next state witness.

"I would say that he was sane," Dr. Schorr testified, when asked his opinion of the mental condition of the defendant. He testified he had examined the prisoner mentally and physically on several occasions, observed his actions and reactions daily in the courtroom and inquired thoroughly into the family history, as means of arriving at his conclusion.

A suspicion that the youth was employing falsehood in his claim to "divine guidance" in the killing of Marian Parker, Dr. Schorr testified, was aroused soon after he began questioning the youth. He said the suspicion and then conviction of the youth's falsity was aroused by observing his faith expressions. When answering questions about which Hickman had no reason to lie, the witness said, such as facts and dates of Greek and American history his face bore an "honest, natural" look. On the other hand when asked about his "divine guidance" Hickman's face paled a shade, his lips tightened, his eyes steadied and all indicated an attitude of being on guard, Dr. Schorr said.

The witness was not cross examined by the defense.

Dr. Victor Parkin of the Los Angeles county insanity commission testified for the state that from examination and observation of the prisoner in "my opinion he was sane at the time of the crime and now."

As an asserted proof that Hickman knew the deed was a crime Dr. Parkin cited the instance of police visiting Hickman's apartment while he was there in bed the morning after the crime. Parkin related that Hickman said he offered to help the officers "find the fiend who did it" and that Hickman in describing this action, referred to the murder as "the crime."

A statement by William Edward Hickman that he killed Marian Parker as a "matter of self protection" was quoted in the youth's sanity trial here today by Dr. Victor Parkin, state alienist, to show that the defendant was sane and could distinguish between right and wrong.

Dr. Parkin also testified Hickman had declared he killed the school girl after kidnaping her because he "feared she was losing confidence in me," and that he had "no feeling in cutting her up because I saw it had to be done and just did it."

The witness said that Hickman admitted turning the girl's torso over to the father for $1500 was a "terrible thing to do, wasn't it?" the witness cited this as an example of Hickman's knowledge of right from wrong.

Questioned as to when he got the idea of claiming "divine guidance" Dr. Parkin testified the killer about three weeks ago said it "first came to me yesterday." The witness mention this as proof of Hickman not having thought of claiming such a delusion until long after his arrest.

Dr. A. L. Skoog of Kansas City, chief defense alienist, today sat at the counsel table beside the defense attorneys. The latter frequently conferred with him.

By mid-forenoon the courtroom was filled to capacity. In spite of the tedious medical phraseology of alienists' testimony, which was scheduled for the entire day, about half the spectators were of the fair sex, who listened attentively.

"Constitutional-psychopathic inferior," was the type of case on which the defense grilled Dr. Parkin. He asserted this was a condition common to criminals and depraved persons.

Asked about an insane person whom he had ordered committed to an asylum, as a "constitutional-psychopathic inferior" case, the witness asserted this was one that had also developed "psychosis," a degree of insanity, and that his official report on the case in question so stated.

The defense drew from the witness an admission that Hickman's family history constituted a "predisposition" to insanity but with the qualification that insanity did not necessarily follow. At the questioning of Prosecuting Attorney Murray the witness testified that if, as the defense alienists had testified previously, Hickman had shown dementia praecox at the age of 12, definite insanity would have shown itself before he was 18.

The witness admitted for the defense that he did not agree with the state alienist, Dr. Cecil Reynolds, on this subject of epileptic fits. Reynolds testified last week that the term meant nothing to him as that the true name was convulsions. Parkin testified he recognized existence of "epileptic fits."

Dr. Frank Mikels of Hollywood, brain and nerve specialist formerly of the New Jersey insane asylum at Morris Plains, N. J., followed on the stats for the state. He declared he found the defendant "was not and is not insane."

ARBITRATION PACT SIGNED BY FRANCE

that it interlocks with the Bryan pact under which disputes of any character, without exception, must be submitted to conciliation for a period of at least 12 months before either power may resort to war or warlike preparations.

The new treaty represents the first change made in the Root treaties since they were negotiated. It is the purpose of the Washington government to model all existing arbitration treaties with other powers as they approach expiration, using the Franco-American covenant as a guide. In most cases it is expected that exactly the same language will be employed to standardize American peace undertakings, although in some instances a variation to include specific conciliation machinery where no paralleling Bryan treaty now exists will be necessary.

Signature of the treaty leaves the Briand-Kellogg conversations over a pact renouncing war unchanged with no present indications as to what the outcome may be. The Washington government was unwilling to make a treaty of this character with France exclusively, or to accept the French theory that only wars of aggression should be renounced and denounced.

The Paris government, because of other commitments, found itself unable to accept the Kellogg counter-proposal for a sweeping unqualified and renunciation of war to be incorporated in a six-power treaty to be negotiated under Franco-American leadership.

THREE INJURED IN MINE RIOTING

ing on about the Florence mine for several days, and attributed the agitation to communists. Adjutant General Henderson said his reports from Lieutenant Colonel Don L. Caldwell bore out this contention.

Governor Donahey in commenting on the situation, also declared that the national guard could and would be used if necessary to maintain order as well as feed the children of miners' families.

Colonel Caldwell's report to the adjutant general was that last night a crowd of about 200 men were brought into the Florence mine district by automobiles and trucks, led by four men unknown to him and that they "carried on a campaign," of terror for about three hours, beginning about 10 o'clock.

The crowd was said to have marched up and down the roads hurling stones and clubs into the houses of non-union miners occupying company houses. One of the miners whose home was thus attacked, according to Colonel Caldwell, fired a shotgun into the crowd and it was necessary for officers to arrest him in order to prevent him from being seized by the crowd. He was locked up.

Many windows in the non-union miners' homes were broken, the report said, and women and children were moved to a safe distance on mine company property. Judge Hough said twenty deputy United States marshals now are on duty in that territory.

Both Governor Donahey and Adjutant General Henderson made it plain that they would not order out troops unless the disturbances are renewed.

east of Wichita Falls. A petition asking that the district be created explained that residents of the section desire to issue bonds to dig a badly needed drainage ditch. It was emphasized that should such a bond election be called, the entire expense will be borne by property holders, and that if bonds are issued, the entire cost will fall only on those owning property in the district.

LINDBERGH LANDS HAITI CAPITAL ON LEG OF CUBA TRIP

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Feb. 6. (AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at Port Au Prince from Santo Domingo, Dominican republic at 1:40 p. m. today.

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Feb. 6. (AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, now nearing the end of his good will flight to the Pan-American conference at Havana, took off for Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, at 11 a. m., local time.

HAITI, WHERE VOODOO ART LIVES, WILL SEE AVIATOR

SANTO DOMINGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Haiti, where Toussaint L'Ouverture led slaves to freedom, was the goal of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today.

The route to Port-Au-Prince, 160 miles by airline from here, led entirely across land, unless Lindbergh in his flight should venture across the inland waters of Lakes Enriquillo and Lake Saumatre. The path of the Lone Eagle was over a country teeming with bird life, wild duck, flamingo, herons and other shore birds.

The route passed over mountains and deep forests where voodooism was brought from Africa and practiced for many years. It led over a land where negro slaves by their own efforts freed themselves and set up a republic of which Port-Au-Prince is the capital.

Haiti is the second country to be visited by Colonel Lindbergh in his good will tour where American Marines are present. In Nicaragua, he found them engaged in an active campaign against the rebel General Augustino Sandino. In Haiti they are engaged in maintaining order until the new republic is considered capable of exercising in full its rights of sovereignty.

Before leaving Santo Domingo, Lindbergh paid tribute to another great adventurer, Christopher Columbus, placing a wreath on his monument.

Then the Dominican republic in turn paid honor to the flyer who has followed in the footsteps of Columbus, blazing new trails. A great military parade was held in his honor and Colonel Lindbergh reviewed it to the cheering of a large crowd.

Evan E. Young, American minister, gave him a luncheon which President Vasquez and other high officials attended. W. E. Pulliam receiver general of customs gave a reception in Lindbergh's honor, which the president again attended.

FORTUNE INVOLVED IN LITIGATION OVER OIL SCHOOL TAXES

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Feb. 6. (AP)—The Reagan county independent school district has filed an answer in federal court here to the suit of the Big Lake Oil company over collection of taxes for the school district and asks 10 per cent penalty for non-payment and six per cent interest on the amount alleged due until paid.

The school district also denies the Big Lake company's contention that a 75 cent tax rate on the $100 valuation is invalid and excessive.

The Humble Pipe Line company with renditions of $315,500 and the Humble Oil and Refining company with renditions of $261,750 in the Reagan county school district have intervened, while the Kay County Gas company, the Mariand Pipe Line company and the Reagan County Purchasing company have asked leave to intervene.

HOUSTON DEMO MEET FUND NEAR $100,000

HOUSTON, Texas, Feb. 6. (AP)—R. M. Farrar, Houston banker, vice chairman and treasurer of the Houston committee in charge of raising funds for entertainment of the Democratic national convention here next June, announced today that the convention fund "is right at $100,000."

All except about $2000, he said, was contributed in Houston. Meanwhile, he added, the drive for the fund which is expected to total $200,000 has not yet actively begun.

Home Town Talk

would be helpful if the voters had an opportunity to discuss such matters. It can do no harm.

Wichita Falls will oppose the cancellation of the Wichita Valley's daylight trains between here and Abilene, and probably the other communities affected will join this city in protesting. When such matters reach the railroad commission, that body pays more attention to facts than it does to protests. If the railroad can show that the patronage of the trains is insufficient to pay operating expenses, it will almost certainly be allowed to cancel the trains. If it can't show that, permission will be denied. We hope that a way can be found to keep the trains running, but it is difficult to see how a railroad can be asked to maintain a service that is used by so few folks.

Evidently, this city is not going to land either of the state Democratic conventions this year without a struggle. Fort Worth, Dallas, Brownsville and Amarillo are also bidding for these meetings. Fort Worth and Dallas have had state conventions in former years. Wichita Falls is a much more convenient meeting place than Amarillo or Brownsville. There is plenty of argument on our side, but wire-pulling will be worth more than argument, in such a contest.

Pandem to Give Brown Holdings A Thorough Test

The Pandem Oil company of this city is making preparations to give the Brown county holdings a thorough development, and in the last few days started drilling on four tests while another is rigging up. Among these are the Curry Nos. 3, 4 and 5, each drilling below 500 feet. On the Pandem Hutton tract No. 2 is drilling at 840 feet, No. 3 is spudded and No. 4 rigging up. No. 1 Thomason is moving in rig.

In the same pool Mel Richards of Wichita Falls is drilling No. 2 Curry at a depth of 650 feet. His No. 1 completed last week, is producing 200 barrels daily.

To the south of the Pandem company holdings the Syndicate Oil company is drilling two tests, one on the Curry and the other on the Hutton farm, both wells drilling at 450 feet.

Taylor and associates' No. 1 Lewis to the west of the Syndicate tests, has reached 1040 feet.

This pool, which was opened up by the Pandem company sometime ago by the bringing in of a 700-barreler on the Hutton farm, has, since this completion, added three others with outputs varying from 100 to 500 barrels each.

SEVEN CASES MEASLES ARE QUARANTINED HERE DURING THE PAST WEEK

Seven cases of measles and three cases of smallpox were quarantined by officials of the Wichita Falls city health department during the week ending Saturday, February 4, according to the regular weekly report Monday of Dr. H. D. Fillmore, city physician.

Four cases of chicken pox and one case of scarlet fever were also quarantined. Sixteen deaths were reported to the department during the past week.

ARGUMENTS HEARD IN LA. ELECTION CONTEST

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 6. (AP)—Argument was being heard today before Judge W. Carruth Jones of the 19th judicial district court here in the suit brought by Eugene F. Lyons, state auditor, to compel a run-off between himself and L. N. Baynard who was high man in the recent primary.

Lyons contends that inasmuch as no candidate for governor received a majority of the votes cast, he is entitled to a second primary with Baynard on February 28, the date of the second primary for local offices.

CHARGE FOLLOWS RAID ON LOCAL BILLIARD 'CLUB'

The first of what was said would be several complaints growing out of alleged operation of pool tables for profit was filed by Wayne Somerville, county attorney, in the county court-at-law Monday. At least two other similar complaints were to be filed during the afternoon, he said, and a third complaint charges operation of a slot machine.

The law, the official said, permits the use of billiard tables in clubs when the membership fee entitles members to use of such facilities without further charge. The complaints, he said, grew out of charges that "cue charges" were made for use of tables.

Nineteen Cases Set for Feb. 13 In County Court

Trials of 13 defendants accused of misdemeanors have been set for call on Monday, February 13, in the county court at law, according to announcement Monday of John Q. Humphrey, assistant county attorney.

That date, Mr. Humphrey said, also will mark the beginning of the operation of a new plan in the handling of law violation cases in the court. In the past, he said, the plan has been followed of devoting one entire week of each four exclusively to criminal cases. In the future, criminal cases will be called on Monday and Tuesday of each of three weeks during the month. The fourth week will be devoted exclusively by the court to civil matters.

File New Charge As Man Is Tried On Old Complaint

Roscoe Arbuckle satisfied the law on one charge here Monday morning only to find himself faced by another, according to Wayne Somerville, county attorney.

While Arbuckle was being tried and found guilty in the county court at law on a charge of receiving and concealing stolen property under the value of $50, and while Judge C. M. McFarland of that court was warning that "I shall be more severe if you ever are brought into this court again," the second complaint was being filed.

In that complaint he is charged with aggravated assault on the accusation that he had struck an antagonist with a heavy instrument during a fight. Arbuckle denied that accusation.

The penalty imposed by Judge McFarland on the receiving and concealing charge was a fine of $25, a day in jail and costs, amounting to about $25 more.

NEGRO ACCUSED OF TAKING CAR FROM MAN HERE

Johnny Welborn, a negro, arrested Sunday night by Warren Belcher, deputy sheriff, was formally charged Monday with theft over $50 for the alleged taking of an automobile belonging to J. C. Straus, local oil man.

The car, a Hudson, had been found abandoned in the "flats," Mr. Belcher said. The arrest of Welborn and the charge filed later resulted, according to Sam E. Spence, assistant district attorney, from statements of other persons that they had seen Welborn driving the machine.

Gone Is the Vile Taste of Fish Oil As Science Discovers New Source Valuable Vitamines in Liver Fats

LONDON, Feb. 6. (AP)—A discovery which is claimed makes available a new food factor was announced today. Results of the study of vitamin D and vitamin A were made public in the annual report of the British Medical Research council.

Vitamin A, which was formerly confused with vitamin D, is stated to be quite distinct from it. Cod liver oil up to now had been regarded as the substance richest in this Vitamin, but research has shown, the report says, that liver fats of cattle and sheep yield ten times as much of vitamin as cod liver oil. It is contented that the discovery of this makes available a new food factor of immense value and also that these fats are entirely free from the unpleasant flavor of fish oils.

Vitamin D, a mysterious and vital factor essential to health and until lately obtained only as a product of living substance, is now stated to be producible by the action of ultra violet rays upon a chemical substance called sterol. It is claimed that thus this vitamin is obtainable cheap and in a form called ergosterol can be added to foods, greatly improving their nutritive qualities.

18 REBELS SLAIN WHEN FEDERAL UNITS ATTACK

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 6. (AP)—Dispatches from Irapuato, state of Guanajuato, today said 18 rebels had been killed when federal forces and police repulsed an attack on Salamanca.

The attack upon the town was launched yesterday morning. Lieutenant Colonel Aleman Vasquez, who was in command of the federal troops, was wounded.

GIANT NAVY CRAFT TAXES CAPACITY OF PANAMA CANAL LOCK

COLON, Panama, Feb. 6. (AP)—Having climbed a narrow flight of three steps from the Atlantic ocean the giant aircraft carrier Saratoga today rode at anchor in Gatun Lake 85 feet above sea level. Because of the great width of the ship it was considered that its voyage through the Gatun locks was the most difficult operation ever tried in the canal.

The anti-aircraft standard, part of the superstructure on the port side of the ship, peeled several feet of concrete from the top of the lock wall in passing through the middle and upper chambers. The concrete was peeled to a depth of three inches. This damage was considered slight and there was no damage to the Saratoga.

The Saratoga is 106 feet across at its widest point and the locks but 110 feet wide. The three locks through which the ship passed are 1,000 feet long and the Saratoga 888.

So carefully was the maneuvering of the great ship done that it required five hours for the trip of six miles from Colon to Gatun lake. Three thousand persons gathered along the locks to watch the Saratoga pass through.

Three more lock chambers of the same dimensions lie between the ship and the Pacific, one at Pedro Miguel lowering it to 55 feet above sealevel and two at Morsfloves before the level of the Pacific is reached. Because of the heavy traffic in the canal, the Saratoga will not attempt this passage until tomorrow.

HAIG BURIAL SERVICE WILL BE HELD TUESDAY

EDINBURGH, Feb. 6. (AP)—Throngs of Earl Haig's fellow Scots took advantage today of their last opportunity to pay him tribute as his body continued to lie in state in St. Giles cathedral. It was estimated that 15,000 persons will have paid the late field marshal homage before the coffin is taken tomorrow, to Dryburgh Abbey, Haig's last resting place.

CAMPFIRE SPARKS

The Camp Fire Girls council met at the Floral Heights Cook Shop Saturday noon. The tables were artistically decorated with hearts and kewpies. Edith McClure, president of the council, presided, bringing the business before the group. Plans were discussed for making "Flickers" the best it has ever been. Discussion of the birthday honor was held, with ideas for each girl to win the honor. Each group will be given a chance to put an exhibit in the cases at the local headquarters. The next meeting of the council will be held at local headquarters.

The Wihetonga group met at their club rooms on Lamar Friday afternoon. Each girl made a wood block of her birthday moon. A valentine party was planned for February 17, at the home of the guardian, Mrs. Anna Barnhill, 1902 Holliday. The group will hold a joint hike with the Pokkam group Saturday, February 18. The group recently held a hike near the community golf grounds, when each girl passed the test for building three kinds of fires with one match to each fire.

The Pokkam group had a party at the home of their guardian, Mrs. Anna Barnhill Friday evening. The valentine idea was carried out in the games and refreshments. Those attending were Lucile Hibbs, Marguerite McBee, Juanita Zimmerman, Aprilla Moore, Nina Reed and John Kauffman, who assisted in the games.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6. (AP)—The Examiner says Helen Patterson, musical comedy star, has become engaged to Kenneth Harlan, motion picture actor, after a "love-at-first-sight meeting" in Los Angeles about two months ago.

Harlan, who recently was divorced from Marie Prevost of the films, will not be entitled to remarry until next November, when the decree becomes effective.

'BRIDELESS GROOM' STARTS OFF ALONE ON HONEYMOON TRIP

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Franklin S. Hardinge, 61-year-old furnace manufacturer whose plans to marry Miss Ann Livingston, 30, were broken abruptly a week ago, has started on a "brideless honeymoon."

Hardinge, according to Edward de Bolt, his lawyer, sailed Saturday from New York, bound for the West Indies in a bridal suite that had been engaged before the abandonment of the nuptial plans.

Miss Livingston was reported still under a physician's care today. She suffered a collapse when announcement was made that the wedding would not take place. The rift between the two was explained by Miss Livingston as being due to her refusal to sign away dower rights to Mr. Hardinge's fortune in return for $100,000, payable at his death.

DIVINITY STUDENT HELD AFTER SERIES THEFTS IN SCHOOL

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—A breach of the decalogue he taught is the charge against Clarence C. Uhl, 22-year-old divinity school graduate, held in the Evanston jail today.

With his arrest police said had been solved robberies over a period of several years at the Garrett Bible Institute on the campus of Northwestern university. Officers who raided his rooms said they found articles and objects ranging from a gold tooth, pots, pans and aluminum ware to typewriters and cheap watches.

Uhl, although no longer a student at the institute, having been grduated two years ago with a degree of bachelor of divinity, maintained a small tool shop in the basement of the building. A coal bin near the tool shop was partly filled with a variety of loot, police said.

There appeared to have been no effort made to dispose of the stolen articles, some of which were of no value. Uhl said he had planned to return them this week.

18 Boats to Carry King "Tut" Across River Styx Found in Pharaoh's Tomb Which Also Yields Other New Finds

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 6. (AP)—Eighteen boats intended to carry King Tut-ankh-amen to heaven have been found in his tomb.

These and other discoveries in the third and fourth chambers are described in a report, just made public, of Howard Carter who is in charge of the work of exploring the tomb.

The flotilla is a reminder of the ancient custom of providing the dead with means of transport to the other world thus making them independent of the services of Charon. (Charon in Greek mythology was a marose old man whose duty it was to ferry the souls of the deceased over the Styx. The encyclopedia britannica says "as ferryman of the dead he is not mentioned in Homer or Hesold and in this character is probably of Egyptian origin").

Another discovery in the third chamber, where the boats were, was a number of beautifully carved figures of human beings. These were to serve as substitutes for King Tut-ankh-amen in case Osiris, ruler of the dead, should impose tasks of penitence upon his new subject which would not be befitting to the dignity of one who was a king upon the earth.

The report also describes the canopic jar of carved alabaster containing the Egyptian ruler's viscera, and an elaborate canopic chest enclosing the jar. The chest, also of alabaster is guarded at each corner by a lifelike statutte of the Tutelary goddess.

Inside the chest, four receptacles, each containing a reproduction of the great gold coffin of the king, were found. The king's head, finely sculptured in alabaster, was on each cover.

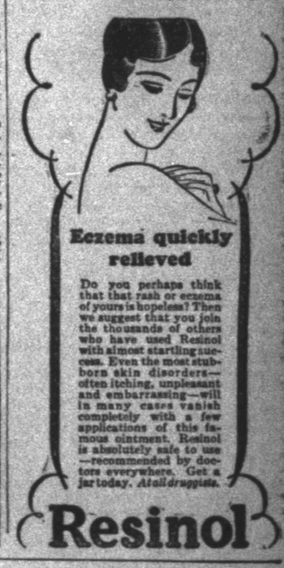

What were supposed to be heirlooms were in another nest of coffins. One of them contained a gold statuette of Amen-Hotep, a predecessor of King Tut-ankh-amen, and a lock of hair of Queen Tyi.

The fourth chamber was found by Carter to be in extreme disorder, evidently due to robbers seeking gold. Apparently intended for the storage of oils, wines and foodstuffs for the use of the king in the lands beyond the grave, it also contained an overflow of funeral paraphernalia.

The contents of this chamber are still to be thoroughly examined. In the meantime work on the tomb has been suspended and it is now open to the public.

Teeth Sparkle Like Precious Jewels
When dingy Film is removed new way
(FREE 10-day Test Will Prove It)

IN hundreds of thousands of cases it is discovered that teeth thought naturally "off color" are actually dazzling white. A film coat makes them gray and dull. When you remove it the new way teeth take on a brilliance that amazes. Gums grow firm and pink.

A simple test proves the great truth of this discovery. A test that stars of the stage and screen have made by scores. It has taught them their most important beauty aid.

A new way in tooth and gum care removes the dingy film that clouds your teeth. A film that absorbs discolorations.

Just run your tongue across your teeth. And you will feel that film. It is the great enemy of pretty teeth and healthy gums.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It forms a breeding place for germs. And germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and other serious troubles.

Ordinary brushing fails in successfully fighting film. And under film are the clear, whiter teeth you envy.

Now modern science has perfected an effective film combatant, called Pepsodent. It acts to curdle film, then to remove it. It firms and protects gums; beautifies teeth quickly.

Fort Worth Authorities "Up Tree" As "Mystery Woman" Keeps Secret True Identity on Her Deathbed

FORT WORTH, Feb. 6. (AP)—Efforts were being made today to identify a comely woman of 32, who died at a local hospital here yesterday a victim of pneumonia. Records at the hospital gave her name as Mrs. Rosa Kelly of Dallas, but she also gave the name of Mrs. Woods on other occasions.

A glass optic substituted for her right eye marred the beauty of a well formed face.

She had an auburn hair tinged with gray and she appeared somewhat older than the age she gave. She weighed 145 pounds and was five feet five inches tall. All her clothing was better than average in both material and tailoring. She possessed a suit case and bag filled with silken lingerie and dresses for all occasions.

She was a practical nurse and may have been a graduate nurse refusing to show her credentials in fear of revealing her identity, but her knowledge of nursing impressed attendants at her bedside. It was the advertisement of a local physician which brought her to Fort Worth from Dallas. She was given a position but resigned it in a few days without apparent cause and no offer of a reason.

She left her position in Dallas under similar circumstances. Questioned as to her past by Mrs. Fannie Murray, matron of the cottage, the woman steadfastly refused to reveal her identity. She insisted that she had no relatives.

"Everybody has some one," Mrs. Murray said to her, but it only brought the response "I am an exception."

In answer to the persistent questions of physicians and nurses at the hospital she said she had a half brother by the name of J. W. Bard, at Texarkana, but no such person can be located there.

A policy of the American National Insurance company was the only other paper among her possessions. It had been sold to her by A. E. Perryman, Dallas. There was no money found in her possession and no jewelry or trinkets.

The medicine box gave the name of a Dallas druggist and indicated that it contained the prescription of Dr. Robinson for Mrs. Woods and had been filled on December 9 as No. 714-557. The druggist communicated with by telephone referred to his files and learned that the physician is Dr. Lee Robinson.

VARE LABELS VOTE FRAUD ACCUSATIONS BY WILSON UNTRUE

SENATOR-ELECT DENOUNCES CHARGES OF VOTE FRAUD AS "COWARDLY"

SENATE READY TO OPEN PENNSYLVANIA RECOUNT

Force of 30 Tabulators Hired to Begin Retabulation of Vote In Pennsylvania Race

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (AP)—Charges of a conspiracy made against him by William S. Wilson, democrat, in the contest over the Pennsylvania election in 1926, were declared today by William S. Vare, Republican senator - elect to be "wholly false, wilfully made and without the slightest foundation in truth or in fact."

"It is a cowardly attack without any justification," Mr. Vare declared in his answer filed today with the senate elections committee.

"It is a wanton assault upon me and made solely for the purpose of securing a recount to which the complainant was therefore not entitled, and the oath attached thereto averring the truth thereof is a wilfully false declaration, not based on any information as to my conduct thereabout, for such information does not exist and this complainant well knows."

As Vare filed his answer the subcommittee of the elections committee was organizing to start later in the day the recount in the six counties contested by Wilson.

Count Supervision Resigns

It was announced that Leon D. Ripley, who had been chosen as supervisor of the recount, had resigned, but Chairman Waterman of the subcommittee said that work nevertheless would be begun this afternoon on the ballots in Allegheny county.

A dozen large wooden tables were set up in the large marble caucus room of the senate office building and a force of about 30 men and women were ready to tackle the counting. The special campaign funds committee will be represented by counsel throughout the recount.

Answering the Wilson charges that he conspired with the officers of the Republican city committee of Philadelphia and the Republican committee of Allegehny county Vare said he had resigned from the Philadelphia committee prior to the primary election of 1926. While he knew officials of the committee, he said he did not discuss "with any of them the conduct of the said election as that was provided by law."

Wilson named John G. Armstrong as chairman of the Allegheny county committee but Vare said he knew no such person, although he did know Joseph G. Armstrong of Pittsburgh. He denied "any association or communication directly or indirectly with him touching said election.

Vare Denies Plot

"I further aver," Vare answered, "that I have never conspired or conferred with, advised or even suggested or intimated to any person or persons in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania or elsewhere to do or to commit any unlawful act touching the conduct of either the primary or general elections of 1926, or of any other elections and I therefore aver without qualification or restrictions that the charge in the second amended complaint of conspiracy affecting me is wholly false."

TEACHERS GUARDED ON WAY TO SCHOOL BY STATE TROOPER

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 6. (AP)—The Broughton school was reopened today in that mining town under the watchful eye of two state troopers and a deputy sheriff. The school was closed last week when bullets alleged to have been fired by non-union miners, struck the building while pupils were inside.

Teachers were escorted to the building by the state police. The pupils gathered in the school yard as usual, and at 9 o'clock entered the structure. Plans of Sheriff Robert H. Braun of Allegheny county, to guard the school house with a machine gun, failed to materialize.

The troops were fully armed and when questioned about the machine gun, they said it was decided the weapon would not be needed.

FORT WORTH OFFICERS SEEK NEGRO PROWLER

FORT WORTH, Feb. 6. (AP)—Residents here are ready to meet with shotguns and pistols a negro who terrorized that neighborhood early Sunday morning by entering two houses and being chased away by W. H. Brown, who came out of his house in night clothing when he awakened to find the hands of a negro at his throat. Brown failed to catch the negro intruder and went to the fire station. Firemen and police searched the neighborhood and afterward the firemen took Brown to his home. Several residents assisted police and firemen in searching that vicinity.

A few minutes after the Brown home was entered, Clarence Clair heard some one on the lower floor of his home but the prowler fled as Clair went down the stairs to investigate.

HE DRESSED HELEN OF TROY

Max Rée

Hollywood, Cal.—Max Rée, costume director for First National Pictures, who designed the costumes for the film "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," supervises a vast wardrobe with hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of lovely clothes and fabrics for sets.

He recently told of his methods in keeping fine fabrics looking new during the hard wear of making a picture.

"Everything from silk to cheesecloth is worn at some time or other in our pictures," he said. "Repeated experiments have been made to keep these vast wardrobes in perfect condition. Nothing is so effective as Lux. I have ordered our wardrobe departments to use Lux to cleanse fine materials because it actually prolongs their life."

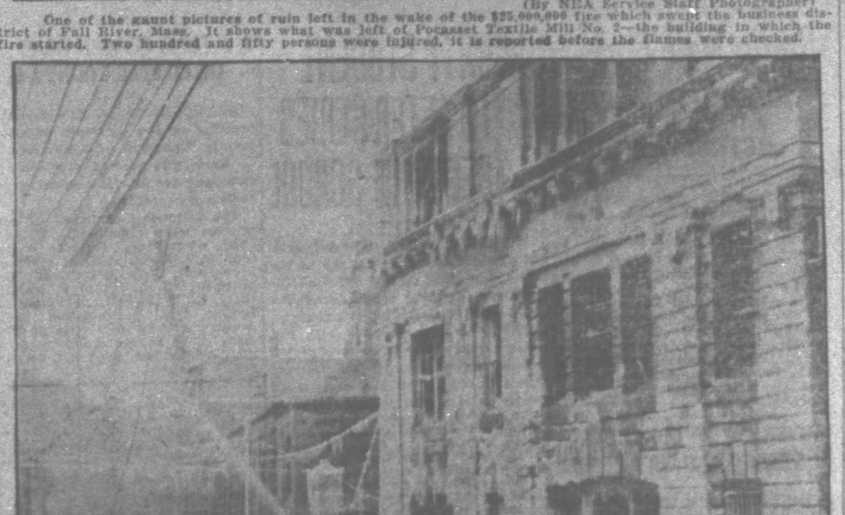

Every other great motion picture studio in Hollywood also uses Lux to get double wear from fabrics—sheer ones and sturdier ones, too. They buy it in the familiar blue packages found in millions of homes all over the country, used by millions of women in cleansing their own fine things, to get extra wear.

FALL RIVER'S $25,000,000 FIRE RUINS

One of the gaunt pictures of ruin left in the wake of the $25,000,000 fire which swept the business district of Fall River, Mass. It shows what was left of Pocasset Textile Mill No. 2—the building in which the fire started. Two hundred and fifty persons were injured, it is reported before the flames were checked.

GIRL'S DISDAIN FOR LOVE OF MAN ENDS IN DEATH OF TRIO

SLEEPY EYE, Minn., Feb. 6. (AP)—Unrequitted love for a 13-year-old girl prompted James Jensen, 32 years old, to kill her and her father and then commit suicide, a coroner's jury decided here today.

When the girl, Lillian Allen, rebuffed his advances Jensen went to her home Friday night, shot her and her father, Chris Allen, 70 years old, and returned to his own home and then shot himself.

It was not until late Saturday that the triple slaying was discovered, and at the coroner's inquest relatives and friends of the three told of Jensen's affection for the girl and her disdain.

SAN ANTONIO BOYS FIND PARENTS SHOT TO DEATH IN HOME

SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 6. (AP)—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Alston were found in their home here early this morning, each with a bullet through the head after their two young sons had finally mustered courage to call nearby neighbors.

The boys were sleeping when they were awakened about 2 o'clock in the morning by two pistol shots. Fearing burglars they lay quietly in bed for two hours, but at last ran to the house of a neighbor. The neighbor found Mrs. Alston's body in bed. Apparently she had been shot in her sleep.

Alston's body was found near the door, a .45 caliber pistol in his hand.

COMANCHES ELECT ALBERT ATTOCHNIE TRIBAL DELEGATE

LAWTON, Feb. 6.—At a tribal meeting held at the Fort Sill Indian school Saturday, Albert Attochnie, well known Comanche leader, was unanimously elected delegate to represent the tribe in matters to be taken up with the federal government. He will leave this week for Washington.

Attochnie will negotiate with the Indian department in an effort to secure a special $50 per capita payment. He will also take up the matter of claims against the government under three treaties, those of 1865, 1867 and 1895. The Indians contend that a vast area of land extending from the Kansas border to New Mexico was taken from them and for which they received no compensation.

PANTOMIME OF STORY OF GOOD SAMARITAN IS PRESENTED C. E. MEET

A violin solo by Miss Thelma Norvell, accompanied by Miss Mildred Anderson at the piano, and a pantomime of the story of the Good Samaritan featured the meeting of the First Presbyterian Christian Endeavor society Sunday evening.

Characters in the pantomime were: The Jew, Hal Wilson; the priest, George Brown; the Levite, Shirley Donnell; the Good Samaritan, Marvin Robertson, and the thieves, Claude Harris and Alexander Cameron. Melba Ruth Sieblik read the scripture. Miss Faye Humphries sang a solo, "Help Somebody Today," accompanied at the piano by Miss Eleanor Pitman.

"Doing Good" was the subject for discussion for the evening. Dr. Mat F. Grafton gave an interesting talk on the topic "From Jerusalem to Jericho." He told of the many dangers to the traveler on the road to Jericho. The thieves still hide and attack the traveler as in Bible times. Doctor Grafton related that on his trip the party did not attempt to travel the route until after the sun had come up because of the danger of being robbed. The old Good Samaritan Inn which had stood for many years and had been a haven to the weary traveler was destroyed by the Germans during the recent world war, he stated.

During the evening the following officers were elected to serve during the three months beginning in March: President, Shirley Donnell; vice president, Larcy Robertson; secretary, Virginia Crittendon; treasurer, Aldis King.

Bradford has been conducting a rooming house here for the past several months and who known as Clyde Stanford. Police arrested him upon a tip that he was wanted in California on a homicide charge but the California authorities have nothing to hold him on. An inquiry at Fort Worth, however, developed that the man was wanted there and in several other Texas cities.

Texas University Needs $8,000,000 To Supply Urgent Building Needs Less Than $400,000 Now Available

By J. W. CALHOUN
Comptroller University of Texas

What does the university need in the way of buildings and what would be the cost of supplying the need? What are the building resources of the university? A fairly accurate answer to these questions would indicate what the prospects of meeting the building needs of the institution would seem to be.

In attempting to set down a statement of the needs of the university and the cost of meeting them one is at the disadvantage caused by the fact that he cannot know definitely what is needed without exhaustive consultation with the departments and activities concerned and cannot know accurately the cost without having in hand plans and specifications or, better still, bids. Still one is not wholly in the dark. He can see what amount of building is devoted to a given department in a university supplied with buildings and can tell from building experience here about what the cost will be.

In the list that follows the order in which the buildings are listed should not be taken as the order in which they are likely to be built. No order has been set except that the board of regents has approved the library extension and the chemistry building as the first two on the list and have made some commitments respecting aid in the case of the ex-student three-building project. The amount set down is in most cases a minimum amount and while the amounts may vary considerably between individual buildings, the total is probably a fair minimum statement of the actual needs.

If this list seems surprisingly long, one has only to consider that at present shacks cover the east and north sides of the campus. They are numbered from C to Z and there are some that have names instead of letters. In addition to those on the north and east, there are two enormous ones on Guadalupe street as well as the great duplex one that houses home economics.

List of Buildings Needed

Partial list of buildings needed for the proper conduct of the University of Texas and to put it in a position comparable to that of the better state universities:

Enlargement of library, $600,000.
Chemistry building, $800,000.
Mechanical engineering building, (including shops which must be moved from their present site to enable the chemistry building to be erected.) $250,000.
Student union, women's gymnasium, auditorium gymnasium (university 60 per cent estimated cost), $600,000.
Home economics building $350,000.
Business administration building, $300,000.
Physics building, $500,000.
School of education (demonstration school), $500,000.
Geology building, $200,000.
Electrical engineering building, $350,000.
Anthropology building, including museum, $400,000.
Service building, (carpenter's shops, etc), $200,000.
Fine arts building, including museum, $400,000.
Administration building, $350,000.
Women's activity building, $300,000.
Aeronautics building, $250,000.
Pharmacy building, $150,000.
Steam tunnel, $150,000.
Outdoor theater, $200,000.
Development of grounds, bridges, etc., $200,000.
Men's dormitories, $1,000,000.

This gives a rather staggering total of more than $8,000,000. And these are only the present needs and any university official can add to them without a moment's hesitation. Omitting all dormitories and any development of the grounds still leaves a void that $7,000,000 will be required to fill. So much for the needs.

Resources of University

What of the resources? The university has securities at the present moment to the value of something slightly under eight millions. Not a cent of this can be spent for buildings or for any other purpose. Since this money must be invested in United States bonds, the income at present price of these bonds is very slightly in excess of three per cent.

With the present endowment this will give an income of a little less than $250,000 a year. The grass leases pay something less than this. This means that the university building fund is about $450,000 a year. Since there is no repair fund available, about $60,000 of this must be spent in keeping existing buildings in repair and the purchasing of equipment of a permanent nature. This reduces the amount available for new construction to less than $400,000.

It is a matter of simple arithmetic to see that to provide $8,000,000 at this rate will take 20 years, and to get even $6,000,000 will require 15 years. Of course, we hope the permanent fund will be increased and thus result in an increase of the building fund. But we may be sure that its increase will not be enough for the university to catch up with its building needs — for these will grow too—in 20 years. Instead of being in possession of more money than it knows what to do with, the university needs and needs badly, more money than the prospects indicate that it will have during the lifetime of those of us who have reached middle age.

The Constant Flame

By Winifred Van Duzer Author of "THE GOOD BAD GIRL," "GOLDEN ROADS," "THRILL HUNTERS" and Other Popular Serials (Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

What Has Happened So Far

Emily Day, daughter of very poor parents, has a great yearning to make a success. She finds it impossible to mingle with the socially elect of the little town where she lives owing to her poverty and the fact that her father is a factory worker. She loses her heart to Kent Rossiter, a rich young man, who is supposed to be engaged to Marilee Grainger. One moonlight night at a party, Kent kisses Emily and calls her beautiful. He goes away to study law, but she never forgets him. Meanwhile, Marty Nolan, whose father keeps a "speak-easy," tells her he too is going to be a lawyer and that some day he intends to marry her. She gets a job with Mrs. Frances Halden, a wealthy interior decorator, who tells her the only aristocracy is that of work. Mrs. Halden introduces her to Kingdon Coles, a dramatic critic, who proposes to her in vain. Meanwhile, Kitten, Emily's younger sister, is wildly seeking for thrills. She meets Ted Lanier on the sly. Stella Brent, a school girl friend of Emily's finds herself deserted by Skeetz Bradley, reckless son of a rich family. Kitten goes on a wild party with Ted without letting her sister know.

Emily gets a raise. Kitten climbs in a window late at night to elude her sister.

Great preparations were made for Avis Rossiter's marriage. Emily read about them in the paper.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER XXII

Great preparations were being made for Avis Rossiter's marriage.

Emily read of them in the society column day after day, fascinated by the pageantry of the affair which would unite in holy matrimony the scion of a fashionable and wealthy New York family, a Dirk Van Alstyne, and the girl who had wished to become the bride of Marty Nolan at a casual night wedding down Jersey way.

Now it was that a long list of illustrious guests had arrived and were visiting at the Rossiters' or the Graingers' or had engaged whole floors at the Lyall Inn.

She read all the names—some were very imposing with titles before them and residences mentioned in Paris or Nice or Rome—and wondered if Avis were happy and if she remembered sometimes how she had come down like a princess from her high estate to offer herself to a Nolan. And how the Nolan had sneered.

Old questions tumbled about her. Was ever it possible for two, one of rank and another of lowly station, to meet freely and happily in love? A thing to come one day and sweep them together, raise them above all commonness, all earthly considerations as by soaring wings? Could this happen?

Or was Frances right; that there were no classes really; only human beings travelling on different ways that ran parallel?

Her father did not think so. Indirectly, because of this, he had died. Or was that only Agnes' belief and not her own at all?

She was becoming a little puzzled about this lately. Sometimes when she walked along the River road, saw the stately villas and luxury there, she felt a stinging resentment curling in some depth of her where it hurt.

Over in a second it was, yet strangely like the fleck of a lash on shrinking flesh. She fancied it leaving a scar, red and angry.

Frances, keenly intuitive, suspected this. "You're working too hard, Em, my dear. Fatigue opens the way for all sorts of weird fancies. Why not take a little vacation?"

But Emily felt she couldn't go away. The balance in the bank was growing slowly. With her own shop she would be on a different basis.

She thought of this a great deal, especially when Marty wandered up of an evening and sat in the porch swing. She often saw him walking with Anne Morrow, but she cared nothing about that. It kept him away from herself.

She feared, some way, to think of Kingdon Coles. He would be a sort of compromise of all her problems but she didn't like compromises. She was naturally honest.

And she knew she didn't love Coles.

"Like him—oh, yes," she would tell herself. "It's pleasant to have someone as grand as he is in love with you. Can't help feeling sort of proud when he leaves those others, the artists and writers and the Russian woman, because I'm there. But—"

She would remember a tall boy bending toward her in the moonlight, laughing eyes turning serious all at once and a voice saying her name.

A memory; a radiant fancy. But it had taught her what love could be. An incident probably forgotten by Kent Rossiter but one which would change all her life.

The newspaper began to print long accounts of grandeur. For the wedding there would be an altar of white orchids; Miss Rossiter was giving her bridesmaids bracelets of star-sapphires; the most famous orchestra in America would play the march.

The bridal gown was coming direct from Paris but the veil would be old lace worn by many generations of Rossiter brides.

There it was again. Emily reflected. Not only wealth but ancestry. Your great-great-grandmother made you somebody. If blue ran in your veins you could get away with anything, even a love affair with a Nolan, and be married afterward like this.

Mrs. Briggs brought over one of the cakes from a pre-wedding festivity and told a shocked tale of the bride-elect.

"She says to the Mister she'd be damned—excuse me Mrs. Day, dear—an' she'd not go through with it. An' he says, 'Very well, it's that or the ranch,' meanin' his place out West somewheres, mind you.

"She took on somethin' terrible but she'll be married all right.

"An' didn't the Grainger baggage step up a-grinnin'. 'Buck up, ol' thing' says he, tough-like. 'A married lady can get away with murder these days,' says she."

Emily thought, curiously, "Why, it isn't a wedding at all! It's just a beautiful play they go through, everyone doing a part, meaning nothing by it. Nothing fine in that. And I've been sort of envying her. Well—"

The next day the Lyall Star said Kent had come home to be Van Alstyne's best man.

Emily caught sight of his name as the paper lay folded on the news stand and her heart went pounding into her throat. She fumbled for coins, put them down with her fingers shaking—carried the paper home.

When she had locked her door she read the item again. Only a line or two; young Mr. Rossiter would leave directly after the wedding for Paris where he was entering the Sorbonne. He had been absent from Lyall, excepting for short visits, nearly six years . . .

He was coming—he was coming! Would she see him, perhaps? Catch a glimpse of him one day as he went past the shop? Would he know her if they came face to face?

She said "Oh"—dimly, and clipped the item. The Japanese box was nearly filled now! She thought that she must get a larger one soon.

On the night of the wedding she coaxed Kitten to walk out the River road. There were guards by the gateway at Highcliffe and little could be seen save people moving past lighted windows.

Others watched from across the street, and the girls stopped there. They heard the wedding march quite clearly; Emily thought, "Now he is waiting by the altar—" "Now he is giving them the ring—" "Now he is smiling—"

Kitten grumbled, "Gee, wish we could get a look at her. Eight bridesmaids!"

"Oh—bridesmaids—"

Eventually motors rolled away and the watchers went too. For better or worse, till death—or divorce—did them part, Avis Rossiter and Dirk Van Alstyne were married now. The pageant was over.

"That's that. C'mon, 'Im, what you waiting for? Nothing in your young life what's going on over there."

"No, nothing in my young life."

LONDON 'CAN'T SEE' UNCLE SAM'S OFFER FOR SUB ABOLITION

LONDON, Feb. 6. (AP)—The London Times commenting editorially on Secretary Kellogg's proposal to abolish the submarine takes the view that it is a very attractive proposition, but, under present circumstances, quite hopeless.

Not only, the paper says, do France and Italy still regard submarines as indispensable, but also the smaller maritime nations are increasing their submarine strength since "they rely on submarines to do the work for which richer countries build cruisers."

The Times thinks under present circumstances both the United States and Great Britain would gain by the abolition of the submarine, but regrets there is no sign the smaller nations, from whom the proposal would come most hopefully, are likely to make a move toward it.

PARIS INDIFFERENT TO PLAN FOR SUBMARINE ABOLITION

PARIS, Feb. 6. (AP)—The proposal advanced by Secretary of State Kellogg looking toward the abolishment of submarines has been received in Paris with marked indifference.

This question, as far as French opinion is concerned, was settled at the Washington disarmament conference when the French delegation agreed to take a lower rank in capital ships on the understanding that defense craft, such as submarines would not be limited.

Comment upon the proposal of the American secretary of state is generally refused in official circles because the government has received no official information of any action. It is said, however, by those in touch with Foreign Minister Briand that the question will not be reopened unless the whole subject of reduction in naval armaments is considered at the same time.

The general view here is that France, obliged to rely on defensive craft, cannot give up submarines without substantial guarantees of security at sea.

SOUTHERN HOTEL AT LAWTON BEING RAZED

LAWTON, Feb. 6.—Work of tearing down the Southern hotel, corner Fifth street and E avenue, one of the old landmarks of the city, was started today. It will be replaced by a modern auto storage and gasoline station, 75 by 100 feet.

Lumber from the big building will be used in the construction of several residence buildings on the North addition.

CHILE PLANS TO KEEP ITS INSURANCE PROFIT

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 6 (AP)—Individuals, business houses and associations of Chile who insure their property in foreign insurance companies must pay a special tax of 15 per cent of the premium levied by Chilean insurance firms.

Merriment of One Prince as Other Suffers Rigors of Mal de Mer Ends Ocean Voyage of Brothers in Schism

NEW YORK, Feb. 6 (AP)—Two German princes of the House of Hohenlohe were in New York today but at different hotels.

Other passengers who came on the North German liner Columbus said that Prince Karl Von Hohenlohe-Bartenstein, 23, and Prince Albrecht Von Hohenlohe-Jagstberg, 71, were very brotherly until Prince Albrecht was seized with an attack of seasickness.

Prince Karl, these passengers said, saw in his brother's misfortune a ludicrous side which the younger brother was not in a condition to appreciate.

When the ship docked, the two declined to pose together for photographers, and Prince Albrecht did not appear pleased when his baggage was placed on the pier close to that of his brother's when they landed. The older prince went to the Hotel Commodore, while the younger chose the Ambassador.

The brothers denied, however, that there was any rift in the brotherly love.

Prince Albrecht is on his way around the world with three college companions while Prince Karl will await delivery here of a 220-horse power automobile in which he plans to visit Washington, Florida, Mexico and California.

OFFICERS AT LAWTON DESTROY LARGE STILL AND QUANTITY MASH

LAWTON, Feb. 6.—A 300-gallon whiskey still, concealed in a post oak grove north of Post Oak creek near the county base line, was destroyed under direction of C. L. Thoroughman Saturday. The "lookout was evidently on the job for no one was found in the vicinity of the still although the mash pot was still "red hot." Three thousand gallons of mash were destroyed together with three home-made vats.

Water for operation of the still was procured from shallow wells.

"Every last button in its place when washed with the NEW Maytag"

HAVE you seen The New Maytag Aluminum Washer—the latest creation of the world's greatest washer builders? It marks another important advance in washer construction, adds another outstanding Maytag achievement to washer history.

Along with several other features of convenience, this latest Maytag incorporates a new method of soap and water removal—the safest, gentlest, but most efficient method ever devised. The top roll of the wringer is made of compensating rubber. This soft roll with large working surface rides on the firm bottom roll much like a balloon tire hugs the pavement.

Instead of riding on the high spots, it penetrates every fold of the clothes the full length of the wringer. Everything is wrung thoroughly yet so gently that the most delicate buttons or filmy lace go through unharmed, and without pressing in hard-to-remove wrinkles.

There is also a new safety feed, an exclusive Maytag feature. This new Roller Water Remover is exclusively owned and controlled by Maytag.

Try a Maytag on your next washing. Experience the joy of complete freedom from hand-rubbing; of a cast-aluminum tub, that keeps the water hot throughout a big washing, that cleans itself and empties itself.

An average washing only takes an hour with a Maytag.

Paris Modistes' Spring Chapeaux

Irregular, Droopy Brims, Novelly Placed Flowers and Nose Veils are Conspicuous Features

By ROSETTE
NEA Fashion Expert

PARIS, Feb. 6.—Parisian modistes, for some unknown reason, are expected to present their collections of spring hats early in the year, instead of showing simultaneously with the couturiers.

This is illogical, for the hat is the complement to the dress and in this era of the "ensemble" craze a woman would never dream of buying a dress to match a hat. Yet we are able now to say what hats will be worn, although the couturiers are still guarding their secrets of spring fashions.

Felt and straw, combined with bakuo, leghorn and crinoline straws will be very fashionable as well as black, navy blue, almond green and other greenish colors.

Alike in This Respect

All the new creations have irregular brims, with a decided droop on one or both sides. Some of the most novel models in the larger hats have a band showing under the brim, fitting close to the head.

Camille Roger, who always has one of the most Parisian of collections, shows a very attractive model along this line. It is made of natural leghorn and is simply trimmed with a deep band of black celophane, the head band being in this same material. Another charming model is in pale pink crinoline straw with a moderate-sized drooping brim, entirely covered with a flower design in narrow silk bias. Still another, a pale green felt, has an open work flower design on the crown in a matching straw.

The tight-fitting toque will still be seen as a complement of the tailored or sports suit and will be made of lightweight felt or the popular bakou straw. Marcelle Lely, another very Parisian house, has a collection of charming hats which will surely prove most becoming to the younger women. She uses bakou in black, navy and natural color as well as laqueged black, the laquer forming modernistic designs over the crown and brim. Flowers are being tried out as a trimming and there is no reason why they should not take, if only for the reason that women are tired of all other forms of ornamentation. Flowers, too, are decidedly feminine-looking, which is in line with the movement for a greater feminity in dress which has been entirely successful, to all appearances.

Underneath the brim and close to the face seems to be the correct place for a flower, a fashion which decidedly adds piquancy to a woman's appearance. Some of these flowers are made of velvet, chiffon, or even straw, in deep shades of orange on black, for example, or a black and almond green cluster on black straw.

The return of the veil has been acclaimed by many men as a distinct proof that woman has learned reason and decided to return to more feminine styles of dress and stop emulating man. It is true that a veil indicates all sort of feminine frills and furbelows, but it seems to have got over its first timidity and is gaining ground every day. It is still only a nose veil, but to its charm is added that of the "mouche," or beauty spot, which lends it a delicate old-world air, all of which adds to the mysterious shadow which such a small wisp of tulle can lend to a face.

CHIC FOR SPRING

Typical of chapeaux Paris has decreed for Milady's spring wear are these: (above) a Camille Roger creation of natural leghorn, with simple trimming and under-the-brim band of black celophane; (left) a close-fitting Marcelle Lely feather toque shading in hue from brown to beige.

BY ANNE AUSTIN

Cherry had not been out of the house five minutes Wednesday morning when Nils Johnson's telephone call came. During breakfast, and those last hurried minutes while Cherry had been giving Hope her nine o'clock bottle, Faith had prayed that the call would come while Cherry was still there.

But fate was ironic. Five minutes after Cherry had left the house, tight-lipped and pale with the disappointment that the morning mail had again brought her the telephone rang long and insistently, proclaiming the fact that it was "long distance" calling.

"Nils speaking, Faith," the rich voice came startlingly clear. "I'm in Darrow. I'll be tied up here all day on business, but I'd like to drop in this evening, if I may."

"Can't you come for dinner?" Faith asked hopefully. Cherry was not to leave for Marlboro until half past eight.

"I'll make it if I can, thanks, but don't count on me. I'm trying to finish up here today, and there are a lot of legal papers to be prepared and signed. Something rather big, Faith, but I'll tell you all about it tonight."

Whether he concluded the conversation abruptly or whether the connection was accidentally broken Faith did not know, but the result was the same. She had no opportunity to tell him of Cherry's engagement for the evening.

She was so concerned with the possibility that Cherry and Nils might not see each other at all on this hurried business trip of Nils' that Faith gave little time to speculating on the nature of the "something rather big" of which Nils had spoken, nor did she mention that part of the conversation to Rhoda, who was as excited over the prospect of a visit from her brother, as if he had been a sweetheart.

Cherry was at home by half-past five. She whirled gayly through her duties for the baby, whisked her off for a brisk walk in the stingingly cold air, came back almost dancing with exuberance and looking as beautiful and carefree as if she had never suffered a headache in her life.

"Going to have fun, Faith, old dear," she sang ecstatically. "Going to have heaps of fun Lord, but I'm simply ripe for adventure. Got to wash my hair and manicure my nails. Hoop-la! Ain't it a gr-e-and and glorious feeling to be young and beautiful and all dated up for a swell party?"

Half an hour later Cherry was sitting on a hassock at Faith's feet, busy with nail file and buffer, while Faith, using a big soft Turkish towel, was rubbing the wet, short curls to dry them.

"Wouldn't it be funny if Bill Warren proposed tonight?" Cherry remarked casually. "Poor duck! He's been half-scared to be seen with me, since my disgrace—"

"Please don't, Cherry," Faith begged. "You were acquitted."

"Of murder — yes." Cherry shrugged her slim, bare little shoulder. She was dressed only in a brassiere and "step-ins," of printed white silk, sprinkled with apple blossoms and tiny knots of pale green ribbon. "But not of the charge of being a heartless flirt, engaged to at least three men at the same time. Poor Bill has been as loyal as his family and friends would let him be, and now I think I detect the well-known glitter in his eye. Yes, Faith, I have a hunch I'm going to be proposed to tonight."

"Are you going to accept him?" Faith asked in a voice that was suddenly slow and dready.

"Half a loaf, darling! But—I don't know! All dry? I'll dress then!"

Tuesday: Nils declares himself.

Supervison Music City Schools Emphasizes Value of Grand Opera To Students as Well as Public

Miss Erma Nala Voss, supervisor of music, Wichita Falls schools, emphasizes the value of grand opera, not only as entertainment, but for its educational value to the student.

In discussing the forthcoming opera season, Miss Voss says:

"The teaching of appreciation of art in all its forms is a phase of education which is becoming increasingly more important in the minds of educators. The appreciation of music is a vital branch of this art education, and certainly one's knowledge and appreciation of music are incomplete without opera experience. Since the opportunities to hear opera in our community have been rare, I crave this experience now for the boys and girls in upper grades of elementary schools and in the junior and senior high schools. We can, and do teach opera—about opera—but it is perforce a second, third, or fourth hand experience for the pupils. Now comes the opportunity for first-hand experience, to hear opera in all its color for ear and eye. Clarence Dickinson says, 'It is not what he knows about a work (of art) but how he feels toward it that is of consequence.' Let us give the boys and girls the chance to feel toward it.'

"Walter Pater tells us that 'Our education becomes complete in proportion as our susceptibility to art impressions increases in depth and variety.' Think how one's art impressions are deepened and iven variety in the hearing of opera, for it is eminently a composite art. There is music: vocal—and this of high order and great variety, and instrumental—in overture or introductions, intermezzo. There are dramatic action, and ballet frequently, costumes, settings, customs and manners of periods, which, aside from their beauty and splendor, are of historical and human interest.

"Certainly I should choose 'Aida' for boys and girls. Verdi is at his best in this opera. Its form is well-nigh perfect, the melodies are beautiful and significant, the harmonies rich and full. The story is heroic, will interest every live boy and girl. Where is the boy or girl who has not heard or read stories of Egypt during the time of the Pharaohs? In 'Aida' he will have graphically portrayed to him somewhat of the gorgeousness of that period; its religion, its customs and manners, its dress.

Walt Whitman said, 'Music is what awakes in you when you are reminded by the instruments.' How much more will awaken when reminded by all that is added to the instruments to make opera!"—Erma Nala Voss, supervisor of music, city schools.

Plans That Mean Business

"Dear Zoe: I am 22 and love a man twice my age. He says he loves me better than any girl he ever knew but has only asked me to marry him in a round about way. I want him to propose outright. Am I wrong in this? We draw plans for a house and he tells me to suit myself. We are both jealous to a certain extent. Is this foolish? —W. M. D."

We wouldn't bother, if we were you, about a formal proposal. Half the marriages that happen come about without a regulation cut-and-dried "Will you marry me?" and a hard-and-fast "Yes, you bet I will!" Looks to us as though this drawing of house plans meant business! Men don't get as far as that without having marriage in mind. Words don't mean much. It's actions that count. If he is 44 years old it is probable that he has outgrown the impetuousness of youth.

Being a little jealous doesn't matter. It shows you aren't indifferent. But don't be unreasonably jealous for it makes the ugliest kind of trouble.

The Pale White Fib

"Dear Zoe: A young man asks me to a dance and I don't care for his type. He seems a bit ordinary or something. Yet I don't want to seem snobbish and I don't want to hurt him. How can I manage to decline?

—SNOB?"

We hate to counsel anybody to be a naughty lying minx. But a lie is a lie and a white fib is only its harmless little sister.

Why couldn't you say to your well-meaning young man that it's mighty nice of him to ask you but you have sort of half-way promised someone else to go.

You might add that you aren't a great hand for dances anyway, and only take a wild fling occasionally. This will discourage him and leave the way open to you to sidestep the next one if you want to.

Burden Bearers

"Dear Zoe: My husband has a blind, afflicted sister whose parents are dead. She has brothers and sisters, and I contend that it is their place to provide for her. They, however, think the wives of the various brothers are obligated to share in her care. Who is right? —KENTUCKY."

If the brothers and sisters of the afflicted girl are not frightfully pinched for money, it seems to us they should most certainly chip in and pay for her board and kindly care.

It is a great deal to ask of the wives of her brothers to take personal care of her, and she would probably be no happier with them who do not and cannot truly love her, poor child, than with good people who would be glad to look after her and thus add to their financial budget.

Surely you can find some family in your neighborhood who would cheerfully take this lonely one into their home and treat her well? And of course their service should be paid for. If all the kinfolk chipped in, the burden would not be heavy for any one.

There are institutions, too, you know. Possibly she would be best in a place where the blind are taught, and where she would be with others who are afflicted like herself.

Help, Help! Police!

"Dear Zoe: A girl I no longer like persists in keeping after me. We go to the same church and it is hard to cut her. She is in high school and I am in college. How can I end the affair? —ASA."

Anything dies if you starve it long enough. Get someone else to answer the phone for you—or let it ring. When you meet her, be polite but coolish. If she writes, deluging you with invitations, decline them kindly but firmly on the ground of "another engagement."

Chilly politeness is the surest killer of any girl's ardor.

A Very Real Problem

"Dear Zoe: I am married and have a brother 18 who is not only ne'er do well but asked me something which makes me afraid of him besides. He has lived with us because he was no one else but me. Because my husband asked him $8 for room, board and laundry, he has stopped boarding with us and now only has his room which he won't even pay for. If I send him away I am afraid he will go altogether bad. What can I do, Zoe?

—BIG SISTER."

Tell your husband the whole story and see if he cannot talk the boy into joining up with the army or navy and getting some training that will make a man of him.

It is possible he may outgrow his ugly tendencies, but hardly probably unless he can get interested in some sort of work, or in some person who can influence him. The Y. M. C. A. usually has someone who advises in such cases or can tell you some organization that specializes in influencing wayward boys.

Best talk it over frankly with your husband. He will probably be able to help you more than anyone. But do something definite, for this brother of yours, poor chap, is in need of real help before he goes the way of so many who get into bad company and end in jail.

Careless Washing Spoils the Hair

If you want beautiful hair, ordinary old time methods of washing will not do. To bring out the real beauty, the hair must be shampooed properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and luster, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and luster.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.

PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARIES BEGIN TO FUNCTION THIS MONTH

Beginning February 24 Campaign Will Start in Earnest With Ohio And New Hampshire Taking Lead

By MARK SULLIVAN
Political Correspondent Wichita Daily Times
(Copyright 1927, by Wichita Daily Times and New York Tribune)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—On the 24th of this month the direct primaries begin to function. That is, no direct primary is held this month—the first primary actually to be held will come on March 13, in New Hampshire. But beginning February 24 there will be quick succession of events looking toward the primaries and calling for definite declarations and other actions on the part of presidential aspirants. On February 24, in Ohio, it will be necessary for every candidate for the presidential nomination, if he expects to run in that state, to file a written declaration of candidacy, personally signed. An analogous ceremony, anticipatory of the direct primary, occurs in New Hampshire on the same day, and others in Michigan and North Dakota on March 1.

SULLIVAN

Let us then consider the presidential race from the direct primary point of view—consider the effect the primaries will have on the various aspirants for the presidential nomination.

Theoretically the direct primary is a mechanism through which the people, the actual individual Republican voters, say who they want as the presidential candidate. The hope and expectation in the minds of Roosevelt and others, who promoted the adoption of the direct primary system, was that by it they would shove aside all the leaders, would take the determination of presidential nominations out of the hands of leaders and machines and put it wholly in the hands of the people.

If this theory of the direct primary were sound and if this were what happens as a result of the direct primary system we should be able to say that one of the Republican aspirants who is best known to the people and most popular among them would be certain to get the presidential nomination. Looking to the situation now developing, we would be able to predict that the Republican nominee would be Secretary Hoover, for it is admitted everywhere that Hoover is that one of the aspirants who is best known to the public and most favored by them. It is doubtful if this assertion about the greater acquaintance of the voters with Hoover would be questioned even by his rivals.

Hoover, next to President Coolidge, is probably the most widely known man in the Republican party; the only rival to Hoover in this respect that one thinks of is Senator Borah, and Borah, while he may be equal to Hoover in the knowledge and approval of the public, is not a rival of Hoover for the presidential nomination. Clearly Hoover is better known than Senator Curtis of Kansas or Senator Willis of Ohio or Senator Watson of Indiana. Hoover is better known throughout the country certainly than Governor Lowden—although in a limited area of the West Lowden is as well known to the voters as Hoover and is preferred by the voters over Hoover. Hoover is somewhat better known than Vice President Dawes, but this comparison at this point has no meaning, because Dawes does not expect to enter any primaries nor to be a candidate in the formal sense. (Let it be understood, however, that Dawes is a very real possibility and that in an easily possible contingency his name will figure in the convention in a most important way.)

If the direct primary were what its inventors and sponsors hoped for it and if this system were universal throughout the country we might say, with hardly any doubt, that Hoover would get most of the votes in the primaries and would be the Republican nominee. Hoover may be the Republican nominee—he is very much nearer to the nomination at this moment than any of his rivals—but Hoover cannot get the nomination solely through the direct primary.

In the first place, the direct primary exists in only 17 out of the 48 states. If Hoover (or any one else) should enter all these primaries and be successful in every one of them he would still be short of the presidential nomination, unless he also has other states. The total number of delegates selected by states that have the direct primary system is 449 out of a total of 1053 who compose the convention.

Moreover, Hoover cannot carry all the direct primary states. He can, almost without doubt, carry any state in which all the aspirants are entered and in which the primary is uncomplicated by the presence of a favorite son. But the fact is in some states there are favorite sons and, as politics goes, the presence of a favorite son candidate in any state makes it difficult, if not impossible, for any outsider to get the delegates.

As an example—an example that weighs much this year—consider Ohio.

In Ohio Senator Willis has proclaimed that he is a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. By that act Willis becomes the favorite son of Ohio. Almost inevitably Willis, by the mere personal assertion of himself as a candidate for the presidential nomination, gets the 51 delegates from Ohio. Certainly he makes it very difficult for Mr. Hoover or any one else to take them away from him.

It may be—as it seems to be a fact—that many of the leading newspapers of Ohio and many of the most powerful leaders of thought in that state doubt whether Senator Willis is of presidential caliber. It may be even that many of the Republican politicians of Ohio doubt whether Willis has the faintest chance of getting the nomination. Nevertheless, Willis, merely by asserting himself as Ohio's favorite son, is likely to get the delegates. It may be—as it seems to be a fact—that large sections of the Ohio electorate and many important business leaders and others in the state are earnestly for Hoover. Nevertheless in the primary Willis is very likely to carry the state and get the delegates.

In the first place, Willis controls the party organization; most of the party workers, the men in the precincts who get out the vote, are under obligation to Willis and loyal to him. In a primary fight, with the organization loyal to Willis and working energetically for him, as they will be, it would be difficult for the Hoover strength to win because it is unorganized.

Further than this, there is a kind of political code which says that it is an unfriendly act on the part of a candidate from outside a state to enter a state which has been preempted by a favorite son. Further yet, there is among the masses of the voters in every state a sentiment which may be illogical but is yet powerful, a sentiment which in the case of Ohio, will tend to vote for Willis as the favorite son, even though the voter may doubt the seriousness of Willis' candidacy. All these conditions combined make it uncertain whether it is wise for Hoover's friends in Ohio to enter his name in that state.

(It may be added that there is a suspicion—which is only a suspicion and may be wrong—that the real, ultimate destination of the delegates Willis will collect in Ohio will be, first, Governor Lowden and, second, Vice President Dawes.)

As it is in Ohio so it is in some other states that have direct primaries. In Indiana, apparently, Senator Watson is going to set himself up as a favorite son. In Illinois it is not yet clear just what is going to happen, but Governor Lowden is a citizen of Illinois and normally would be expected to have the delegates from that state. (Though this expectation is qualified by the fact that Lowden is bitterly opposed by Mayor Thompson of Chicago and by others powerful in the Illinois Republican organization.)

There are some other direct primary states in which, for various reasons, Hoover will not necessarily have all the delegates, even though it be conceded that he is best known to the voters and most favored by them.

The net of all this is to say that the Republican presidential nomination will not be determined by the direct primaries. It will be powerfully affected by the primaries, and the principal beneficiary of the primaries will be Hoover. Hoover almost certainly will have more than half the 449 delegates who will be chosen by the direct primary system; he may even have three-fourths or four-fifths of them, but he will not have them all.

If the direct primary does not determine the nomination, what does—or, more accurately, who does? If Hoover is to have two-thirds or three-fourths of the direct primary delegates by what process must he get the remainder?

Where delegates are not chosen by the direct primary system they are chosen, in effect, by the party leaders. In some cases there are state conventions, but in almost all cases the action of the convention is the will of the party leaders.

It is therefore in the minds of the party leaders that we must search to find out what aspirants for the Republican presidential nomination will be supported by the 640 delegates who come from non-primary states and in what proportions these 640 delegates will be distributed among the candidates. The minds of the party leaders, in short, are the determining influence for more than half the delegates; the minds of the party leaders come close to determining who is to be the Republican nominee.

To enter this field is to deal in terms of the personal equation—personal affections, personal prejudice, personal advantage, personal affiliations—not omitting to list the fact that nearly every party leader is influenced to some degree by the minds of the voters. Party leaders practice self-preservation the same as the rest of us. A leader in a state in which Hoover sentiment is strong will tend to defer to that sentiment. A leader in a state like Minnesota, in which Lowden sentiment is strong, will think a long time before trying to swing the delegates from that state to some other candidate.

It is in this complex in the minds of the leaders, this intricate combination of many motives and conditions, that we must search mainly for the probable outcome of the Republican contest.

A meeting of the minds of party leaders is not like a meeting of the stockholders of a corporation nor the directors of a bank. It is not a case of one man having so many shares of proxies and another a different number. It is not always, nor even usually, a case of each leader being for a certain candidate "first, last and all the time," though occasionally leaders take that position.

If we try to classify the Republican leaders on the basis of their preferences for the presidential nomination one convenient line of cleavage would separate them into the older generation of leaders and the younger generation. As a rule, the younger generation of leaders are for Hoover, militantly for him. The opposition to Hoover, or the indifference to him, is to be found mainly in the older generation of leaders, though to this there are exceptions—some of the most aggressive of the Hoover leaders are among the men of longest service in the party organization.

This cleavage is illustrated, with some exceptions, in New York state. There the younger leaders are, practically without exception, strongly in favor of Hoover. These younger leaders include such men as Ogden Mills, long a congressman from New York City and now Secretary Mellon's assistant in the direction of the treasury; Theodore Robinson, an up-state New York leader of the younger generation, who is now assistant secretary of the navy; Col. William J. Donovan of Buffalo now assistant to the attorney general.

The resistance in New York to having the state's delegation for Hoover centers around Charles D. Hilles, a New York city business man, who as national committeeman is the official representative of the national Republican organization in that state. Mr. Hilles is not materially older than the pro-Hoover leaders already named, but Hilles belongs with the older generation of leaders—he was secretary to President Taft nearly 20 years ago, and his associations are with the generation that dominated the Republican party at that time.

This classification of the younger Republican leaders as pro-Hoover and the older Republican leaders as either inhospitable to Hoover or indifferent to him is, of course, too simple to be wholly accurate. Some of the most seasoned veterans of the old guard leadership in the Republican party are militantly in favor of Hoover. One example is in New York state—William L. Ward. Another example is Secretary of the Interior Hubert Work, who has had an important place in the Republican national organization for a lifetime and who is now more eager for the nomination of Hoover than for anything else in the world.

There are just enough of these older leaders who are earnestly for Hoover to make it impossible for the so-called old guard to achieve any solidarity of opposition to Hoover. Indeed, the older leaders who are for Hoover are so numerous as to compose almost a half of the whole number of older leaders and to make it difficult, if not impossible, for the opponents of Hoover to achieve the kind of tightly organized, last-ditch solidarity that would be necessary to prevent Hoover's nomination.

To inquire who is the beneficiary of the efforts of the older anti-Hoover leaders and the beneficiary of the anti-Hoover strength altogether—to inquire about that is to arrive at the names of Governor Lowden and Vice President Dawes, and to arrive at these two in a kind of twinship.

One learns that both Governor Lowden and Vice President Dawes seem to have a little resentment at being classified as political twins. Governor Lowden's friends resent it because it implies that he is not running wholly as himself—and it is the clearest of facts, which should be stated, that Lowden is a good-faith candidate who expects to go through to the end and hopes to win. Vice President Dawes' friends resent the imputation of twinship between him and Governor Lowden because it implies that Dawes is maneuvering for the nomination through making use of Lowden—and it is the clearest of facts, which should be stated, that Dawes is earnestly in favor of the nomination of Lowden, and loyal to him.

Nevertheless, it is inescapable in the situation that Lowden and Dawes are, in a sense, one; that their support overlaps; that they have, in a sense, a common objective, and that in the convention most of the strength of Lowden will be available for Dawes, and vice versa.

Lowden and Dawes are of the older generation of Republican leadership, and it is these two who are favored by such older leaders as are anti-Hoover. Dawes was extremely active in Republican politics, carrying Illinois for McKinley at a time almost before Herbert Hoover had begun to wear long trousers; Dawes was a member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee when Hoover was still a student at Stanford university. Lowden has had associations almost equally long with the older Republican leaders. Naturally there is a fraternity among men who have worked shoulder to shoulder for more than 30 years; naturally many of the older group, on sentimental grounds, would take pleasure in seeing the nomination go to Lowden or Dawes.

This—the acquaintance Lowden and Dawes have with older Republican leaders all over the country, with men who have been coming as delegates to national conventions for many years, and some of whom will come to the convention next June—constitutes the largest basis of Dawes' strength. The same thing constitutes a large basis of Lowden's strength, plus the additional fact, in Lowden's case, that he is the leader of the farm movement.

This source of strength to Lowden and Dawes is qualified, as has already been said, by the fact that many of the older leaders are in favor of Hoover, because they think, among other things, that Hoover is essential to carry on the Coolidge administration, to avoid any interruption or hiatus in the management of the government or in its personnel. All the Republican leaders are susceptible to arguments about carrying on the Coolidge regime and about prosperity. They expect to make this the basis of their campaign against the Democrats. Feeling this way, they are susceptible to the influence of business; and business almost everywhere, with a few exceptions, is for Hoover.

Also, to a degree not generally realized, the older generation of Republican leaders has been supplanted by younger men—time has its way in politics as in everything else, and youth will be served. Yet again, one-half of the Republican national committee is now composed of women; women have weight in the leadership in many states and districts, and the women as a rule, are for Hoover.

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

For a living dog is better than a dead lion.—Eccl. 9:4.

Coleridge cried, "O, God, how gracious it is to live!" Renan asks, "O, God, when will it be worthwhile to live?" In nature we echo the poets in the world we echo the thinker.—Ouida.

AN EMBATTLED POSTMASTER.

There is a provision in the U. S. penal code authorizing postmasters to bar from the mails matter that is "indecent, lewd, lascivious, obscene, libelous, scurrilous, defamatory or threatening." Acting under the provision in question, Postmaster John K. Kiely of New York City, is holding up all letters that bear the "stickers" of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League. Such stickers are of yellow, bearing the words "Protest Against Marine Rule In Nicaragua." That's all. Whether that legend is held to be lascivious, or merely scurrilous, Mr. Kiely doesn't explain. It is just as well that he doesn't try to explain.

Mr. Kiely is a Republican. The Republican administration at Washington has sent the marines to Nicaragua. From Mr. Kiely's standpoint, that is all that needs to be said about the rightness or wrongness of the Nicaraguan policy. He is entitled to that view, personally, but we are sure the law does not contemplate his undertaking to enforce it, officially, by censoring mail that is opposed to it.

We had never heard of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League, and we are pretty sure that we don't agree with all, if anything, that it stands for with regard to this country's course in Latin-America. It is just another one of those "America always wrong" organizations. But to say that it has not the right to protest, and to urge others to protest, against American activities in Nicaragua, is to involve a principle that is of far more consequence than any phase of the Nicaraguan question; of far more consequence than the New York postmastership.

If a postmaster has the authority that Mr. Kiely claims for his office, he has the authority to close the mails to each and every other "movement" association and propaganda manufacturer in the country, including those that are in sympathy with the Republican administration. There is a lot of mail that comes to the editorial desk of the Times, and that pauses there for a brief space ere the wastebasket claims it, that advocates unworthy, dangerous, visionary, undemocratic and damfool things. It is a confounded nuisance. But we reserve the right to winnow the few grains of wheat from the chaff, ourselves. We don't care to have postmasters doing it for us.

If this country's policy in Nicaragua is as replete with rectitude as Mr. Kiely presumes it to be, it hardly needs such tactics as he is pursuing, to uphold it. And if it is not, we question whether his far-fetched construction of the law will help to make it so.

A FINE SHOWING.

If tax collectors' estimates of poll tax totals are accurate, Wichita county has a right to be proud of its showing; it doesn't appear that any county in Texas had more poll payments, in proportion to population, than our own. Tarrant county's total was 43,500, about two and a half times as many as Wichita county's 18,500, although that county has more than three times Wichita county's population. The figures for Dallas county, 65,000, Bexar 57,000, Harris 80,000, Galveston 33,000, Travis 18,000 and Potter 12,000 indicate that, in proportion to population, Wichita county did better than most.

We would like to see comparative figures also on automobile registrations. Figures for previous years have shown this county to have as much automotive transportation equipment per capita, as any in Texas. We believe that when this year's registration figures are compiled, they will show that, in spite of various things, this county has maintained its position in that significant particular.

HEADLIGHTS.

A Houston citizen writes to the Post-Dispatch of that city that the state law governing issuance of headlight certificates is being grossly violated in Harris county; the citizen claims to know of some instances in which certificates have been issued on cars that were 350 miles from the inspecting station.

Well, judging from what anyone can find out about headlights by driving around for a few minutes after dark, we don't know but that all certificates might as well be issued that way. If headlight inspection does not make for safer night driving, it is futile and foolish; yet the cars whose lights do not blind you to the point of helplessness are greatly in the minority. We believe that a general disregard of the inspection law could make matters little worse, and it would save autoists considerable time and annoyance at inspection time.

THE THEATER TRIES SOMETHING NEW.

An unusual experiment in stagecraft is under way at the John Golden theater in New York City, where Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" had its premiere last Monday.

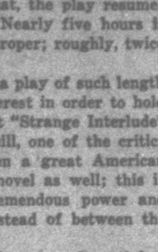

The production starts at 5:15 p. m. and continues until about 8 p. m. when there is an hour's intermission for dinner; after that, the play resumes and continues until 11 p. m. Nearly five hours is required for the performance proper; roughly, twice as long as the usual play.

It goes without saying that a play of such length must be one of exceptional interest in order to hold its crowd, and we are told that "Strange Interlude" is that sort of play. Mr. O'Neill, one of the critics declares, "has not only written a great American play but the great American novel as well; this is a psychological novel of tremendous power and depth put into the theater instead of between the covers of a book."

The experiment seems likely to result satisfactorily. It violated many of the sacred laws of the theater, but the end seems worthy of the means. Probably there will be other productions in which the same thing will be attempted, and the idea of extra-long plays will have its vogue. The trouble with other attempts is that there is only one Eugene O'Neill.

A NAME.

God gave me life, and when I came
My parents gave to me a name.

A name to carry while I live—
The richest treasure they could give.

For other gifts may go astray,
High fortune may be tossed away.

Nor health, nor skill may long endure,
Only the name I bear is sure.

That to the end of time remains
In spite of losses or of gains.

Some things I have I can forsake,
I choose what baggage I shall take.

What raiment I shall wear, what shoes
For each occasion I shall use.

Where'er to wander I'm inclined
Some things of mine I leave behind.

But from my name I'm never free,
Forever it must go with me.

And since from it I cannot hide,
Lord, let me hold my name in pride.

Is a Man Old at Forty?

By GLENN FRANK
President of University of Wisconsin and Former Editor of the Century Magazine

Two fateful spirits battle for control of our lives—the spirit of courage and the spirit of caution.

Courage makes us creative.
Caution makes us compromising.
Courage makes us receptive to new ideas.
Caution makes us resentful of new ideas.
Courage makes us daring.
Caution makes us diplomatic.
Courage is commonly associated with youth.
Caution is commonly associated with age.

When does a man cease to be young and begin to be old?

Touching the question at only one point, at what time in a man's life does courage wane and caution wax?

The French have a phrase—la crise de quarante ans—that puts this turning point at the fortieth year.

I am more than journalistically interested in this, for I turned forty the other day, and by chance came upon a collection of the addresses of Sir William Osler the same day—a volume in which Dr. Osler elaborates his theory that men above forty are rarely pioneers, that the great work of the world has been done by men who had not reached the crisis of the fortieth year, and that after forty a man must exert a special effort to keep his mind elastic and receptive and courageous.

Osler thought the fifteen years from twenty-five to forty the creative and courageous years in which a man must make his contribution to the life of his time.

He took delight in quoting Harvey's comment on the long and difficult task of convincing the world of the truth of his theory of the circulation of the blood, when Harvey said that, after twelve years of demonstration that should have convinced even the most reluctant, he did not think any man above forty years of age had accepted the new truth.

I was a bit blue on that fortieth birthday, until I remembered that recent psychological research, notably the work of Thorndike, has demonstrated that, all things being equal, a man of thirty-five or forty can actually learn more easily and effectively than a man of twenty; I looked up the Thorndike researches and breathed a bit easier and felt a bit less doddering at forty.

It is a relief to know that a man's brain power has not stiffened at forty—if he has taken care of his mind—but the fact remains that by forty a man has entered into a hundred and one entangling alliances that hamper his courage and make for caution.

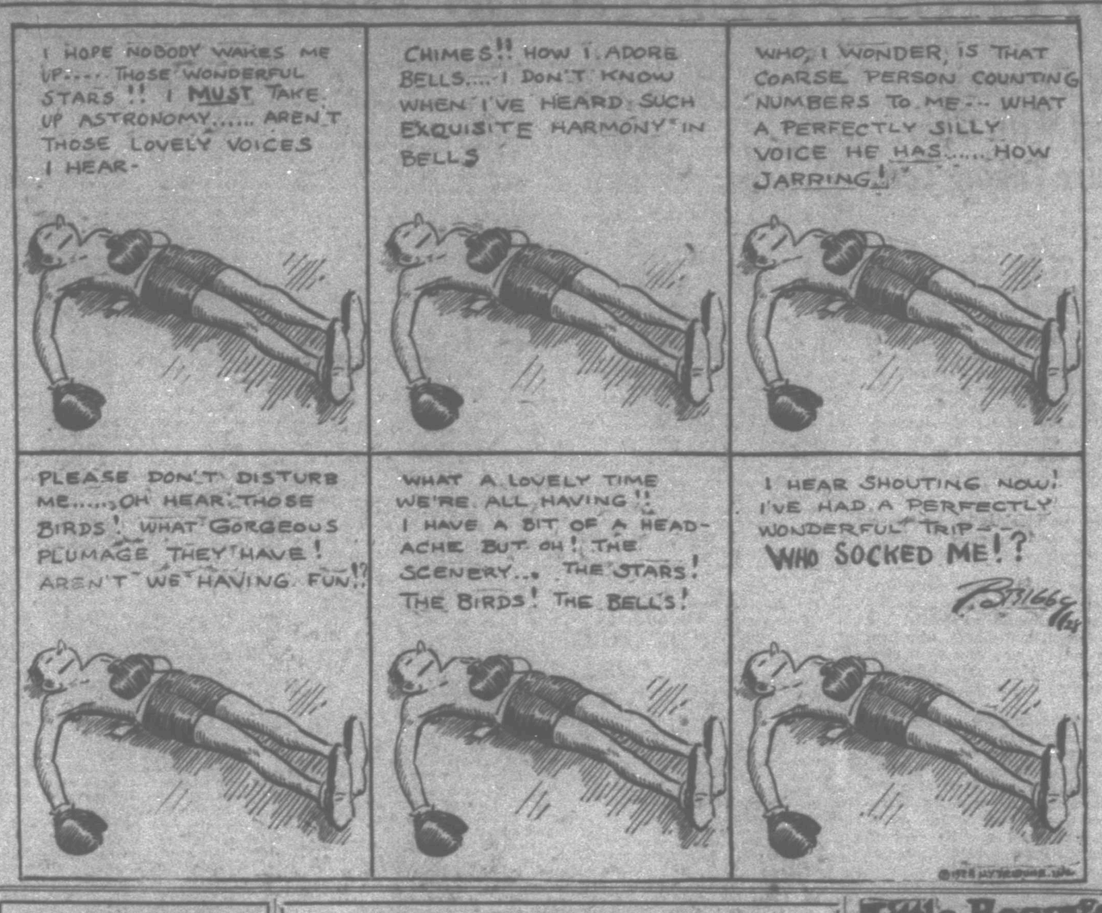

He has a family to support and a job to keep, and finds his head and his hands entangled in the red tape and reverenced traditions of the institution he may be serving.

If Osler was right about the work of the world being done by men before forty, it is probably because after forty our obligations and our commitments make us think twice before attempting things outside the accepted code of our crowd.

At forty, then, a man must tighten his belt and strengthen the guard around his courage, if he is to escape the fate of the routineer.

Hero Worship

"Who would you like to be if you were not yourself?"

That was the question presented to 682 boys in Belleville, New Jersey, with results that were quite surprising and—to fathers—not particularly flattering.

Before we start this interesting test we may as well admit that our flying colonel of good will is an easy winner in this contest. It is reported that some of the fathers in the New Jersey city were decidedly annoyed that the fathers, as a group, trailed all the rest. The contest however, was by secret ballot and so although "My Dad" only received two votes that was enough to permit each father to think that his boy voted for him.

I am sure that no understanding father will resent running second to Colonel Lindbergh, or possibly even Babe Ruth, but it might get down to a matter of argument in the case of Jack Dempsey. Fathers might resent having the Manassa Mauler pull five times as many votes as "My Dad." Well, Jack did this very thing and we'll have to make the best of it.

Here now, boys, is the questionnaire for you. I have printed the names without regard to my idea of their relative importance. The test is for you to think these names over carefully, then number them in the order of their importance to this nation. Show us "who you would rather be if you were not yourself."

OUR CONVERSATION CORNER
College Questions

It has always been my desire to go to college, but my parents, like a good many others, think a girl does not need an education—that the boy is the one who needs it. But then how can a girl expect to "get" the educated boy if she herself is not educated. —A STENO.

Answer: Very, very true. And how can a girl grow with her young husband who has every opportunity for personal growth unless she has herself a background on which to build? If there is not money enough for both there are only two solutions: For both to work part of their way through, or, one of them must get the equivalent of a college education by books, association with educated people, night school, etc.

Dad's Tantrumitis

I believe in putting our six-year-old child to bed at 7:30. My husband does not believe in a fixed hour and puts her to bed himself, saying, "If you go to bed now I will bring you a pencil tomorrow or some other nice thing." When we have company daddy insists on letting her remain up perhaps until 10 o'clock. He also insists on giving her a glass of water every night and the result is epuresis. For six years I have had to do the washing. How can I impress him? —DISCOURAGED.

Answer: A small child should have regular hours and under no condition would I reward her for going to bed. If she is troubled with the habit you mention, you must establish the corrective habits outlined in the enclosed helplet.

Flying Guards Watch Forests In Five States

By NEA Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—The air patrol, Uncle Sam's most modern means of fighting dreaded forest fires, claims a fine record as the year starts.

Limited, thus far, to the three western districts of the forest service, the air patrol operates from five bases—Spokane and Seattle, Wash.; Eugene, Ore., and Mather Field and Griffith park, Calif. The patrol covers forests in California, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

Several services are rendered by the pilots. They seek new blazes, watch the progress of going fires and report to ground workers, and carry officials and men from job to job.

After Storms

The air patrol was operated in California in 1920, 1921 and 1922 by the forest service in cooperation with the army air service. Airplanes—Jennys and DeHavilands—were furnished by the war department and flown over regular patrol routes by members of the air service.

After a trial of three seasons the regular flying patrol was abandoned and the planes were held in readness for special flights after severe electrial storms, for reconnaissance on going fires and for transporting equipment and officers.

Some experiments also have been made with planes in other forest activities, such as extensive scouting a lodgepole pine area for bark beetle damage.

Now the planes operate from five bases, each accessible to a large fire area. In normal years the patrol commences about June 15 and continues until the end of the fire season in September or October. Many trips have been made this winter, especially in Southern California, where some serious outbreaks have been reported.

Makes Good Record

Now the war department furnishes DeHavilland planes, flying equipment and repair parts and the forest service furnishes pilots and maintenance.

Here is how the air patrol has protected Western forests during the last three years:

	1925	1926	1927
Number flights	429	483	247
Hours in air	902	1002	546
New fires reported	25	26	35
Reconnaissance flights	107	148	82

And during the three-year period, there have been no serious accidents except such minor things as broken landing gears.

By the Way in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. — The Methodists and the Episcopalians could form a bloc to control the senate, whereas at least four denominations would have to combine to form a majority in the house.

No one has suggested such a thing—it is just one of your correspondent's fool ideas, after applying some higher mathematics to a tabulation of the religious affiliations of congress issued by the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals.

Methodists lead the list in both house and senate. Presbyterians run second in the house and Episcopalians in the senate. Here's the list:

House: 94 Methodists, 84 Presbyterians, 51 Episcopalians, 51 Baptists, 35 Roman Catholics, 26 Congregationalists, 20 Christian Disciples, 16 Lutherans, 10 Jewish, four Unitarians, three Dutch Reformed, three Quakers and one each for the United Brethren, Mennonites, Christian Scientists and Mormons.

Senate: 32 Methodists, 24 Episcopalians, eight Presbyterians, seven Congregationalists; six Baptists, five Roman Catholics, three Unitarians, two Lutherans, two Mormons, a Christian Scientist and a Quaker.

Eleven congressmen are listed as Protestants with denomination unknown, 24 congressmen and four senators unaffiliated with any church and 13 congressmen and one senator whose affiliation has not been ascertained.

There ought to be a law to allow politicians to repudiate anything they may have said more than two weeks back. Conditions change so, you know. Or at least, a law to prohibit anyone from ever bringing up a politician's statement again once its uttered and duly recorded.

For instance, certain mean persons insist on quoting Senator David Reed of Pennsylvania just at the time when he's devoting himself ardently, and passionately to the task of saving the somewhat moth-eaten senatorial skin of William S. Vare.

"I couldn't vote for Mr. Vare because that would be too much to pay for a drink," said Senator Reed while he was helping the Mellon machine and its candidate, Senator Pepper, try vainly to beat Vare in the 1926 primaries.

And after the voters had turned down Mr. Pepper for Mr. Vare, Senator Reed said publicly that they had "voted like a lot of dunderheads."

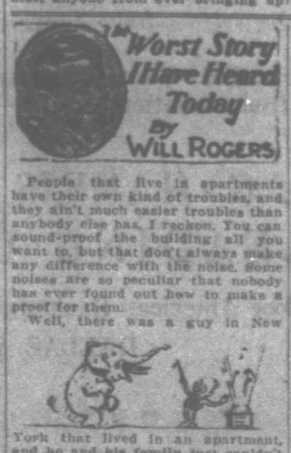

For some time now, Senator Reed has been trying to get other senators to vote for Mr. Vare.

But isn't it mean to keep bringing up those old things?

Reed and his friends at least ought to be able to keep Pennsylvania from going to Al Smith next November. Some of the younger and more enthusiastic Tammany congressmen are trying hard to believe that Smith will get large majorities in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and sb carry the state, but even the Pennsylvania Democrats don't seem to believe that. The big city political machinery is too firmly imbedded. There isn't, according to latest reports, any particular cohesion among Pennsylvania Democrats.

When Boies Penrose was boss of the state, he once said: "I don't have any trouble with the Republicans. My job is to keep the Democrats fighting among themselves."

Incidentally, that's a job in which Republicans generally are supposed to be interested in this year of grace, 1928.

People that live in apartments have their own kind of troubles, and they ain't much easier troubles than anybody else has, I reckon. You can sound-proof the building all you want to, but that don't always make any difference with the noise. Some noises are so peculiar that nobody has ever found out how to make a proof for them.

Well, there was a guy in New York that lived in an apartment, and he and his family just couldn't sleep for all the noise above them. But this man Jones had a wife, Mrs. Jones, she was called, that played bridge with the lady up on the next floor, who was Mrs. Brown. So the Joneses didn't dare to complain to the landlord about the noise in the Browns' apartment, because then Mrs. Brown wouldn't give much of a prize when Mrs. Jones played bridge at her place.

Well, one night the Browns visited the Joneses, and there was a lot of talk about this and that, and while the men were sparring around to find out how much income each one of them made, it come out that Brown was a general manager of a circus.

"Yes," says Brown, "I got an act for next summer that will knock 'em cold. Twelve elephants trained to dance the Charleston together."

"Oh, yes" says Jones. "I kinda guessed that."

"How did you guess it? We ain't had a word in the papers about it yet, and we're going to surprise the competitors."

"Yes, but I heard you training 'em up in your apartment all winter."

Spend the Difference.

SAVING the PIECES

(Expressions from other publications appearing in this column are chosen for the information they give on subjects of interest; they do not necessarily reflect the editorial viewpoint of The Times.)

Italy and the Papacy

Mr. Emil Fluschc of Electra furnishes The Times with a clipping from the American Tribune of Dubuque, in order, he says, to correct an article which The Times recently published. The clipping follows:

The fact is that in the discussion of the Roman question the true situation seems to be entirely lost sight of. The facts are that for more than 1000 years Rome was the "City of the Popes," the "Eternal City," the city prepared by Providence from all eternity to be the see of Peter. As such the papacy became the custodian of priceless treasures which belonged to the entire Christian world, and for which the pope acted as trustee.

The Italian government is in the position of a robber who after holding up his victim tries to induce him to sign a quitclaim deed to all his property in return for some trifling trinket prized as an heirloom, but of purely sentimental value. As custodian of the property of Catholics all over the world the pope has no authority to barter away the goods and possessions for which he is merely the trustee.

The king of Italy never paid a cent for the priceless treasures, relics and monuments that have accumulated in the center of Christendom for centuries, which he appropriated with the aid of 60,000 rifles and heavy artillery. On the contrary, if the pope were to turn "about face" and demand immediate payment of the accumulated annual budget assigned to him by the "Law of Guarantees," it would bankrupt the Italian government.

Italy's anxiety to bridge over the gulf between church and state is purely selfish, because she recognized the immense advantage it would be to her to have the troublesome Roman question settled.

The Real Peace Treaties

The important thing about the present international peace negotiations is that in the United States, France, Great Britain and Germany public opinion approves the proposals to outlaw war.

The man in the street is not excited over the efforts to find a mutually acceptable formula of words to write into treaties. Even if such a formula be found it is too much to hope that it will forever abolish war, even by the contracting parties. And if an acceptable combination of words cannot be devised at this time it will not mean failure.

Peace is not a matter of words, but of spirit. Warlike people cannot be chained down by dictionaries, by leagues or treaties. But when the peoples of these four nations agree that war is barbaric and that even when engaged in as a last resort it throws all concerned under suspicion it is a long step forward.—San Francisco Chronicle.

We would suggest that, before companionate marriage be tried, the couple experiment with a few sessions of companionate bridge-playing.—Louisville Times.

Another thing that seems to improve the longer you keep it is your temper.—Detroit News.

Youth Really Reactionary

That flaming group of the younger generation which regards itself as extremely advanced, revolutionary and intellectual is reactionary. It not only is not advancing, but is slipping backward from the state of civilized progress attained by the Victorians at whom it sneers.

The trouble with them is that they are out for a good time and don't know how to get it. They have picked up some stuff about repressions and inhibitions from doctor books, and so they think the way to enjoy life is to let themselves go.

The youngsters who scoff at the conventions of the past generation have substituted no improvements, but have merely stripped off the code of their elders and are reverting toward barbarism by coarsening their social relations and going to excess in physical pleasures. They don't even know how to drink. They just get drunk.

I admire them for wanting to be happy. That is right. It is God's will backed by scientific findings. They are keen on science, they are out for the truth. That's fine, too. They are the first generation that has been conceived and born in science. But the trouble is that they have not gone far enough.

Although it uses "Victorian" as a term of scorn, the younger generation is really imbued with Victorian ideas, those of Darwin, Huxley, Sumner and Freud, which it hasn't had time to digest. The often-blamed war is not the cause of the moral upheaval and revolt against convention. The war didn't do it; the war merely precipitated it. The scientific spirit was coming along nicely before the war. It was gradually permeating our life and thought in an orderly, evolutionary manner. Then the war changed evolution into revolution. These kids are premature children, produced by the shock of battle. Therefore they are slightly abnormal now. But they'll grow up all right.—Jesse S. Williams in McClure's magazine.

A new mixed drink that has become very popular in the East is known as the March highball. Those who drink it come in like lions and if they keep on drinking it they go out like lambs.—Erasmus Tack in Amarillo Globe.

BECK FIGHTS MOVE PLANNED TO EJECT HIM FROM HOUSE

CONGRESS MEMBER POINTS OUT HE IS RESIDENT OF PHILADELPHIA

OWNERSHIP OF HOME AT U. S. CAPITAL NOT BAR

Ejection of Solons on Grounds of Washington Residence to Eliminate Majority

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6. (AP)—James M. Beck charged today that to deny him his seat in the house as a Republican representative from Pennsylvania because he had a home in Washington would disqualify nearly half the senate and a considerable number in the house.

Defending himself from Democratic charges that he was not an inhabitant of Pennsylvania in a constitutional sense when he was elected, Beck declared before a house elections committee that an increasing number of senators had acquired homes in Washington and lived there the greater part of the year, being only occasionally in the states they represent.

"If the doctrine of predominate physical presence is to prevail," Beck declared, "then Senator Borah could not hold his seat, when he lives far more in Washington than he does in Idaho. Senator Lodge lived nine months of the year in Washington and when not in Europe, a few months in his summer home in Massachusetts. Senator Knox lived the greater part of the year in Washington and, while he had a country residence in Pennsylvania, he voted from a room in a hotel in Pittsburgh.

"Therefore my residence in Washington can be eliminated unless this committee is prepared to suggest a wholesale slaughter of our most prominent men in public life in the matter of their eligibility."

Beck said he was born in Philadelphia and for years was a resident of that city, but admitted that for 17 years he had been a resident of New York and New Jersey, voting for several years in New Jersey. In 1924, he added, he determined to resume his residence in his native city. He said further that he has a residence in Washington which he purchased before he became solicitor general.

He contended that he was an "inhabitant" of Pennsylvania in the meaning the framers of the constitution had given to the word, basing his contention upon his establishment of a legal voting residence a year and a half ago in Philadelphia, preceded by the public announcement of his intention to resume his Philadelphia citizenship.

TRIO OF IMPORTANT CHANGES ANNOUNCED BY GRID RULEMAKERS

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Three important changes in the football code governing the lateral pass, muffed punt and so-called "screening" of the forward pass were announced Monday by the national football rules committee through William S. Langford, secretary.

The most important change was made in the lateral pass rule, which was amended to allow recovery of a fumbled lateral by the defense, the ball being dead, however, at the point of recovery. The rule likewise added light to the definition of a lateral pass.

The new rule said:

"On any such pass (other than a pass from the snapper-back) which is clearly thrown a distance of approximately two yards through the air and is not merely handled to or toward another player, the ball, if it hits the ground, is a free ball but is dead at the point of recovery, counting a down if recovered by the passing side."

The change in the "muffed" punt rule was simple and designed to differentiate between a "muff" and a fumble, a moot point during the pigskin season of last fall, by removing the distinction.

The rule said:

"A player who is offside is put on-side when the ball is touched by an opponent, but also when a kicked ball other than a free kick or one that is blocked and does not cross the line of scrimmage, is legally recovered by the kicker's side, the ball shall be declared dead at the point of recovery."

Editor's Note—Stunned by the confession of her son, William Edward Hickman, to the murder of little Marian Parker, Mrs. Eva Hickman has gone to Los Angeles to testify in his behalf at his trial. In order that the nation may understand why she will testify for him, she has written exclusively for The Times and NEA Service the following article, setting forth a mother's emotions as her son goes to trial for his life for murder. It is presented here exactly as she wrote it.

I have a message for mothers.

Don't let your boy get away from you. Don't let him out of your sight until you are sure he knows what he's about.

Of course, it seems that with all the talking and reasoning I did with my Edward before he left home he would have remembered some of it. But as soon as he got away it seems he didn't realize or pay any attention to what I said to him.

Must Be Insane

It's just too pitiful, too pitiful for words. I'm just so hurt, so hurt. He's not so black. His raising hasn't been to that effect. He's bound to be insane.

Young like he is . . . . This way it's all put up as if he was a soulless monster. If only a closer watch could have been kept on him, if I had been with him, if I hadn't let him go away this wouldn't have happened.

Edward just can't be right, that's all. Or he never could have done a thing like that. When he was a boy growing up he was just like other boys. He was a mischievous and lively child. It's been in the last year he's changed. He's been restless and full of notions and didn't seem to know what he wanted to do. He wouldn't stay at any one thing. It was just his mind.

Didn't Discuss Murder

When I saw him the other day, when I walked into that jail cell the first time I'd seen him since last October, he just said, "Hello, mother," as if he'd parted from me that very morning. Then said, "How are you? Don't cry, mother." He was really consoling me.

He asked me about his sister. We didn't mention the trouble at all. . . . He didn't and I didn't. . . . But next time I see Edward I'll pull him out and see what he will say in regard to it.

I wouldn't have been a true mother at all if I hadn't come to see him. I hope that I can help him, but I don't see how. He doesn't look like a criminal. But maybe that's because he's mine I think like that. He looks all right to me.

He studied very hard that last year in high school for an oratorical contest and when he lost he was so disappointed. He came home and cried over it. He used to mourn too because his father went off and left us. He used to say if his father had stayed home and he had his companionship things would have been different.

Missed His Father

I always tried to encourage him and tell him that he could be a real man even if his father was gone. Of all my children Edward seemed to miss his father most. He was the only child who mentioned his father being gone. He was only 9 when his father left in 1917.

My life has been just one tragedy after another. I'll stay until the finish if my funds hold out. I'm against capital punishment. The way I look at it, it's not the way of punishing anyone. It doesn't do an good. Seems as if a person is insane he should be put away and cured.

Edward said the other day, "Mother, I wouldn't read the papers." It's terrible. You can just go there and look at his face and never think such a thing as this would befall him. I can't figure where he could carry out a thing like that. Seems like someone older than he is in it.

Poor little old Ed . . . It's just unbelievable. I can hardly make myself believe he's in it. . . . It's so tragic. Sometimes I seem bound to break. Then I take on a little courage and go on.

Recalls His Childhood

I can see him in every conceivable way when he used to be at home and picture him in this trouble.

Anyone who was normal couldn't do such a thing. How can everyone be so bitter? If there was just justice and fairness. Lots and lots of things can be turned and twisted.

Only my God is with me. Anybody in trouble like this draws nearer to God.

Balentine's friends at the capitol Monday said they thought he "must have been drunk and got the wrong house." His own was two blocks away, and his friends could not understand the supposition of attempted burglary, since they said, he was comparatively "well to do." Big Crowd Hears M'Kenney Talk On the 'Tongue'

A crowd that filled the First Methodist church heard the first sermon-lecture of a series on "The Tongue" by the pastor, Dr. S. Stephen McKenney, Sunday evening.

The first lecture was on "The Natural Powers of the Tongue." "All animals have a tongue with which to masticate, swallow and taste," said Dr. McKenney, "but with man it is also an organ of communication. No animal except man has crossed the barrier of speech; all others are non-progressive. The parrot is an echo, not a voice. Language is determined by one's environment. We speak the language we hear. The gift of speech is almost universal. Only those few who are born deaf are deprived of speech. In the beginning the babe expresses its ideas by gestures. It has been found by men of science that his gesture form word-cells in the brain, very similar to the indentations made on a phonographic record, the cells being the abodes of sound, expressed in words.

"We have two eyes and two ears, but only one tongue, that we might see and hear twice before speaking once. Moreover, the tongue is closed in behind a double wall of teeth and lips so that it should seldom appear. Bulwer says, 'The pen is mightier than the sword.' Let me add: 'The word is mightier than the pen.' No printed page can ever take the place of the spoken word. Cold type can never portray the eloquence of the world's greatest orators. The highest gift of nature to man is the gift of speech, and eloquence and oratory is the highest form of speech. But the tongue also sings. Carlyle says 'Music is the speech of angels.' Another says 'Music is the art of heaven that was brought to earth, and the art of earth that goes to heaven.' Song and praise were first learned in the sanctuary of worship.

"What a revelation the tongue makes! When I hear a stranger speak, I know his nationality and locality; I know the extent of his education and the type of his character. When I hear one sing, I can tell whether they are lovers of ragtime or classical music. The first command of the physician to the patient is 'Put out your tongue.' The Gileadites of old slew the Ephraimites who could say the word 'Shibboleth.'

"But works and not words are final. Words are not an end in themselves; they are only a means to an end. Shakespeake said 'Talkers are not doers.' Bunyan, in his Pilgrim's Progress, pictures Talkative as a saint abroad and a devil at home. Some engines are so constructed that when they blow their whistles they stop their engines. Rabbi Simeon, the son of Gamaliel, sent his servant Tobias to purchase some good food. He brought tongue. Later, he sent him to buy some bad food. He also brought tongue, saying, 'There is nothing better than a good tongue; there is nothing worse than a bad tongue'."

Dr. McKenney will speak next Sunday on "It's Social Properties" and the Sunday following on "Its Moral Possibilities."

JOHNNY MOSTIL REPORTED IN GREATEST SHAPE OF CAREER

WHITE SOX BOAST SURPLUS OF OUTFIELD MATERIAL; METZLER IS CERTAIN OF REGULAR JOB

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Johnny Mostil, White Sox hero of the 1926 season, attempting a comeback after being out of the game last season, has presented the problem of too much rather than too little talent for the Sox outfield.

The Whiting, Ind., star, who has been training hard since his recovery from a suicide attempt during last year's training season, has been pronounced in better condition than ever before. We was confident that he would be able to make the grade, an opinion apparently shared by Manager Ray Schalk.

The University of Texas Interscholastic league has made high school football just about the greatest institution of all Texas sports. Undoubtedly, more people are interested annually in high school football than in any other sports endeavor, not excluding Texas league baseball or Southwest conference football. The Interscholastic league is ever striving to perfect its organization to an even higher standard. Roy B. Henderson, director of the league, has mailed out to members a bulletin seeking the opinions of the constituent schools on proposed changes.

Some of the proposals loom as capable of doing much good. Others are not so good. Probably the most important is the re-districting plan for the B class. For the last two years the state has been divided into a comparatively small number of class B districts, leaving 20 or more schools in some of the larger districts. Arriving at championships was a complicated matter and it was difficult to keep track of the race. The new plan would create 36 districts with far fewer members in each district. The smaller districts should meet with the approval of the schools and make for more interest in the class B races.

The league offers two proposals limiting eligibility of grid players. One would require passing grades in four subjects the semester preceding the football campaign. The present requirement is three passing grades. Players at present are limited to four years of participation. The league would like to make the limit eight semesters, regardless of the number of years in football. This latter proposal is a good one, we believe, for the student who goes to school solely to play football is not desirable. Occasionally there is a student who will purposely fail in a subject to keep from graduating and get in another year of football.

Frank Newhouse, veteran follower of baseball in many and varied capacities, now an advertising operator in Denver, Colorado, was a visitor in Wichita Falls Monday. Newhouse is the originator of the oldest of Denver's amateur baseball tournaments, founded some 11 years ago, and still is active in one of the tournaments. Several years before Fred Fussell accepted his first professional job with the Chicago Cubs Newhouse tried to sign the lefthander for the Detroit Tigers. But Fussell liked his home in Nebraska and his semi-pro ball of that section. He was in Wichita Falls mainly to visit the lefthander.

Newhouse's greatest experience in organized baseball was as an umpire and he served in this league in 1909, 1911 and 1912. Since, he has stayed close to the game as a college and sandlot umpire just for the fun of it. Newhouse has never used a breast protector and says he never will. A steel plate, worn under his clothing, protects his chest and ribs. Whether original or not, Newhouse offers a suggestion on umpiring that surely sounds good. Under the present system or working two umpires in each game, the arbiters alternate games behind the plate and on bases. Newhouse avers that more efficiency could be attained by permanently assigning the big man behind the plate and the smaller and faster ones on the bases.

There is lots of logic in that idea. An umpire behind the plate who is not large enough to see over the pitch is at a great disadvantage. It is a certainty that the catcher obstructs the view of the smaller man on many pitches. Often it is necessary for the base umpire to get clear lots of ground to be in position to see a play. The small, speedy chaps certainly should be more efficient than the big lumbering kind, of which the Texas league has seen many during the last few years.

Denver's baseball tournaments are among the largest and most important in the country and each year these events attract scouts from all classes of minor leagues and the majors. Many minor league players and a few in the majors got their first professional trials as the result of good work in the Denver tournaments.

Les Tullos, veteran Texas league outfielder and Spudder scout last season, is to manage the Abilene club in the new West Texas league, says an Associated Press dispatch. Tullos last season was the first full time scout a Wichita Falls club has ever employed and his efforts resulted in the purchase of at least three players of prominence in the crop of youngsters that will report early next month. Tullos spent 10 days on the trail of George Stanton, the new first sacker, and his reports of the ability of this youngster were largely responsible in the club decision.

Mostil Sure

Bib Falk in left is the only certainty in the Sox outfield, but Alex Metzler also is sure to play. If Mostil can show his old form, he will return to center and Metzler to right.

Otherwise Metzler will take Mostil's position and Barrett, Reynolds and Moore will fight it out for right field.

Should Be in Prime

Mostil's friends pointed out that he is only 30 years old and of the type that reaches his best physical form at that age. His training has been arduous. When not on hunting and camping trips, Johnny has spent his time on the bowling alleys, the basket ball court and the handball court. He plays handball equally well with either hand.

It also has been pointed out that he has taken a new outlook on life since his brief reappearance in a Sox uniform at the close of last season, which had stimulating mental effect upon him.

Ed Dudley Shows Way to Golfers In First Round

Wet Course Leads to High Scores, With Coast Pro's 72 Topping Field by One Stroke

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 6. (AP)—With 54 holes in which to make up for poor scores Sunday contenders for the Texas open turned were scheduled to play the second 18 holes of the annual 72 hole open tournament Monday. Scores on the first 18 holes played Sunday ran high in most instances, due to the muddy condition of the fairways and slow greens. There was promise of better weather, however, for Monday's and Tuesday's play.

Ed Dudley, Hollywood, Calif. pro, led the field Sunday and faced his second round with a one stroke advantage over Tom Lally of San Antonio, his nearest competitor. Dudley scored a 72 while Lally was making a 73 and Bobby Cruickshank of Purchase, N. Y., Larry Nabholtz of Cleveland, Don Malarkey of Lufkin and Bill Mehlhorn of Pittsburgh achieved 74's.

Cruickshank won the event last year and Nabholtz was second. Almost all of the nationally known tournament players entered in the event were still within striking distance of the lead although Al and Abe Espinosa of Chicago chalked up a brace of 80's and were apparently almost out of the money. Reuben Albaugh of San Antonio who also scored an 80 appeared to be the only amateur within striking distance of the title.

Dudley's 72 was one over par and with the course in better condition Monday several pros were expected to break par and possibly get into the high 60's.

PELTZER TRAINS FOR ILLINOIS CLUB GAMES

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Dr. Otto Peltzer, German track star, came back from New York Monday to begin intensive training for the Illinois Athletic club games Friday night.

One of the men entered against him is Ray Dodge, who has run many a winning race for the I. A. C., and who will prepare himself on the same track as the German flash. Word from New York is that Lloyd Hahn will not take part in the meet, although I. A. C. officials said they had expected him to be here.

The games Friday will be run on a dirt track, said to be more popular than the board tracks with most entries.

Additional competition for Dr. Peltzer was seen in the entries of Ray Conger and Jack Sittig.

Four crack college relay teams—Ames, Notre Dame, University of Michigan and the University of Iowa—are outstanding features of the meet. Laddie Myers, twice a member of the United States Olympic team, and Droegmueller of Northwestern university, Big Ten star, are entered in the pole vault events.

Harold Osborn, holder of the world's record of 6 feet 8¼ inches, and Anton Burg, a probable Olympic entrant, are among the high jumpers to compete.

Interscholastic League Proposes Changes in Grid Code

Tris Speaker Is Added to Mack's White Elephants

"Gray Eagle" Comes to Terms With Athletics Leader and Is to Supplant Cobb in Outfield

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Tris Speaker has landed with the Philadelphia Athletics.

The veteran outfielder who was released a few days ago by the Washington Senators came to terms with Connie Mack and as a result will report at the Athletics training quarters at Fort Meyers, March 1.

Speaker arrived in New York Sunday from a hunting trip and arranged details by telephone with Mack, who is vacationing at Mount Plymouth, Fla.

Takes Cobb's Place

Mack's signing of Speaker fills a gap made in the Philadelphia outfield by the release of Ty Cobb and Zach Wheat. Last season "Spoke" it is understood, received a salary from the Senators ranging from $40,000 to $50,000 which price was an obstacle this year for a renewal of contract.

Speaker declined to accept a reduction, as suggested by Clark Griffith of the Washington club.

Neither Tris nor Mack would comment on the salary arrangement.

"I'm satisfied with the terms and so is Connie," Speaker said.

Mack paid Cobb a huge sum last year, some reports quoting his services commanding as high as $60,000 which would be $10,000 under Babe Ruth's annual check from Colonel Ruppert.

The addition of Speaker to the Philadelphia roster will give Mack a veteran outfield with Tris at center, Al Simmons at left and Bing Miller in the right corner.

Likes Athletics

Speaker commented on his stay with the Senators as a most pleasant relationship and referred to Shirley Harris as one of the greatest managers in baseball.

As to his new affiliations the "Gray Eagle" said the Athletics had fine prospects and that he looked forward to playing under Mack with great satisfaction.

Asked what he thought of the approaching pennant scramble and the Yankees, Tris replied:

"Of course the Yankees are a great machine but the Athletics and other members of the circuit are bound to furnish plenty of opposition. The Athletics were second last year and like the other clubs they will be out for the championship."

Waino Ketonen And Mantell to Mix Monday Eve

Veteran Middleweights Meet in Return Scrap; Meyers and Larry Slated in Preliminary

Dutch Mantell and Waino Ketonen, veteran wrestlers of the middleweight ranks, were all set Monday morning for their skirmish at the Gym Monday night in the feature event of Promoter Alec B. Rose' weekly mat show. The Dutchman and the Finn tangled two weeks ago, with the former winning by virtue of fists and feet and it is said in the voluminous ballyho that precedes the match that Ketonen is going to battle Mantell at his own game.

It was announced after the first meeting of the two that Mantell would not give Ketonen a return match, but somehow or another, Dutch seems to have suffered a sudden change of mind, and Monday night's match is the result.

Jack Larry, Portland middleweight, and Lee Meyers of Houston are scheduled in the preliminary, also a finish encounter. Larry was beaten in his only appearance here and an injury sustained in this match has kept him on the shelf, but he expects to come back in Monday night's scrap.

NEBRASKA SOON TO KNOW IF IT GETS ARMY GAME

LINCOLN, Neb., Feb. 6. (AP)—Athletic authorities at Nebraska university Monday promised definite word probably before the end of the week, concerning the negotiations having for their object a Nebraska-Army football game next fall. Herbert Gish, acting athletic director, returned from West Point Sunday following several days of discussion with Army officials. He said there has been no definite decision either way concerning the proposed conflict.

Nebraska has been one of the most aggressive of the schools seeking a place on the Army schedule made vacant by the Army-Navy football breach.

SOONERS HANG UP TEN STRAIGHT VICTORIES

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 6. (AP)—With the visit of its first valley basketball championship taking definite shape, the undefeated Oklahoma Sooner quintet Monday was back at the home court for three days of practice determined to repeat last week's victories over Washington and Missouri.

While Washington slowed the Oklahoma machine Friday to a 28 to 20 count, the Sooner squad regained its average speed the next evening to swamp Missouri, 40 to 24. In ten straight wins, the Oklahomans have averaged 41 points a game as compared to 25 for opponents. Nebraska is the only team the Sooners have not played.

BELANGER TO DEFEND TITLE MONDAY NIGHT

TORONTO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Frenchy Belanger of Toronto, recognized by the National Boxing association as the world's flyweight champion, defends his title Monday night against Frankie Genaro of New York in 10 rounds to a decision.

OUT OF KEELER'S GOLF BAG

Phillips Finley

By O. B. KEELER
(Written exclusively for the Associated Press.)

They tell me that young George Dunlap, a 20-year-old easterner, rarely wins a big golf tournament away from Pinehurst, and never loses the famous midwinter event there. At least, he hasn't lost in these last three winters. I saw him wind up the last one a few days ago in a blaze of glory, defeating Phillips Finlay and Gene Homans in the last two bouts, each going 20 holes.

Now, I never have seen George play except those two matches on the No. 2 course at Pinehurst. His style looked somewhat eccentric to me, with a lot of spring in the knees, and a mannerism of "pitching" into the stroke. And he seemed not to have great range from the tee, but then he was driving against Phillips Finlay in that match, and Finlay's drives—I averaged them carefully later—amounted to 292 yards from the 14 tees where distance counted. Anybody would be likely to look pretty short against that sort of thing.

However, I fancy Dunlap on a course needing long carries, with diagonal hazards and such matters, would be found rather on the short side, especially in the air.

He was long enough, on the No. 2 course at Pinehurst, however. And the boy unquestionably showed great courage and determination, playing his game steadily and accurately, in the faces of wallops his own drives at times.

Dunlap holed each round of his last two matches in 74, which is good work on No. 2 at Pinehurst. Counting the two extra holes in each match, he finished out 40 consecutive holes in two above par. You cannot ask much better than that.

Dunlap knows his Pinehurst approach. The play there on all courses is quite different from the play about the greens where grass is the surface. The putting surfaces at Pinehurst are small and beautifully smooth, with carefully treated and kept sand. Around the sand you will find very good turf, for some yards, but not at all a putting surface. The "Pinehurst Cleek" is a good little iron designed for these short approaches, the idea being to get the ball close to the pin from 10, or 15 or maybe 20 yards off the sand.

George Dunlap used an aluminum putter with deadly effect. He putted virtually all his approaches; and he had the sand greens calling him uncle. In his final match, he putted only 25 times after reaching the sand greens.

This frequently is good enough to that sailed 50 and 60 yards beyond win any match.

VETERAN SKI JUMPER RETAINS TOP HONORS

RED WING, Minn., Feb. 6. (AP)—For the fifth time in 10 years Lars Haugen, St. Paul veteran, is the class A champion of the National Ski association.

He outshone a large field at the national tournament Sunday, defending the honors he won at Denver a year ago. The judges gave him a total of 18.588 points for first place with Pedar Fahstad of Canton, S. D., in second, with 18.288.

SPRING FOOTBALL

URBANA, Ill., Feb. 6. (AP)—Coach Zuppke, who brought a Big Ten football title to the University of Illinois last fall, has his first chance Monday to look over his 1928 prospects.

The spring practice was to open simultaneously with the registration by the eleven thousand students for second semester work.

WOULD REDUCE BULKY CLASS B DISTRICTS TO HALF THE SIZE OF 1927; OTHER SUGGESTIONS

A number of changes in the football eligibility rules of the University of Texas Interscholastic league and a drastic revision of class B districting is recommended by the league in a bulletin received by Principal S. H. Rider of Wichita Falls High school. The communication merely offers suggestions in an effort to determine sentiment of the schools on proposed changes, and definite action has not been attempted.

Probably the most important proposal is the scrapping of the class B plan that has been in effect for the past two years. The league authorities have found that most of the class B districts have been too large, and consequently championship eliminations too intricate. The league proposes to more than double the number of class B districts, placing about half the number of schools in each district as compared with the present.

Would Limit Practice.

A suggestion that probably will meet with the disapproval of the members is that no school be allowed to start practice prior to October 1. Rider is opposed to this, but would like to see a rule prohibiting practice before the start of school.

More drastic scholarship requirements are aimed at in proposal that "no student be allowed to participate after he has been in attendance eight semesters" and "that the scholarship rule be changed to require a student to make a pass in four subjects for the entire year before being eligible." The present rule requires passing grades in three of four subjects.

The Wichita Falls principal favors the "eight semester" rule, but believes that the present limitation of three passing subjects is sufficient and that four would be too drastic.

Favor Round Robins.

The interscholastic league favors the institution of round robin schedules to determine district championships. This plan was put into effect last year in this class A district and proved satisfactory, though the class B districts have been too large to permit such an arrangement. The proposed re-districting, however, would enable most of the districts to follow the suggestion.

The league also submits a proposition that "five per cent of the gross receipts of inter-district games be paid to the state office to maintain a fund for investigating eligibility questions, to provide appropriate trophies for all district winners, to supplement printing, salary and office appropriations relating to football."

The following new class B districts of this section are proposed:

District No. 1—Canadian, Follett, Higgins, Miami, Pampa, Panhandle, Perryton, Shamrock and Wheeler.

District No. 2—Childress, Chillicothe, Clarendon, Claude, Crowell, Matador, Memphis, Paducah and Wellington.

District No. 3—Abernathy, Canyon, Farwell, Floydada, Hale Center, Hereford, Littlefield, Lockney, Sudan and Tulia.

District No. 4—Brownfield, Crosbyton, Lamesa, O'Donnell, Post, Ralls, Slaton, Tahoka and Wilson.

District No. 5—Archer City, Bellevue, Bowie, Burkburnett, Henrietta, Iowa Park, Nocona, Olney and Scyamour.

District No. 6—Alvord, Bridgeport, Decatur, Graham, Jacksboro, Mineral Wells, Strawn and Weatherford.

District No. 14—Albany, Anson, Clyde, Hamlin, Haskell, Moran and Stamford.

A.E.F. Fight Best of All, Tunney Declares

Champion Looks Back on Bout That Gave Him Top Honors of Army and Considers It Greater Than Two Victories Over Dempsey

By GENE TUNNEY
Heavyweight Champion of the World

The biggest fight card ever held on foreign soil was the one in which the A. E. F. championships were settled in Paris, April 26, 1919. Also the 10,000 uniformed men who were the spectators made more noise than any crowd I have seen before or since, and that isn't leaving out the crowd at Chicago. That was the night I won the light heavyweight title of the A. E. F. from Ted Jamison.

Those were the days when boxing was carried on under the most ideal circumstances ever known. If professional boxing in America could be handled as Jimmie Bronson and Bill McCabe handled army boxing in those days, there would be no limit to its popularity. Of course, there were other officers who helped run the A. E. F. and inter-allied championships right, but Jimmie and Bill were the leading figures and entirely responsible for the organization of the tournaments which to the 2,000,000 soldiers left over there by that time were the only sporting events in the world that made the slightest difference in their lives.

You couldn't tell any of them that every bout that night wasn't for a world title. There they were, waiting to go home, and until they did their interest was concentrated in their immediate surroundings.

Can you imagine boxing in the United States being run just for the sake of the game, with every official absolutely on the square, with a board of judges whose honesty wasn't even a matter of discussion, and with every fan ready to back the man from nearest his outfit with his O. D. shirt purely out of loyalty?

Great Ovation

Well, that was something of a picture of the boxing situation in the army, winding up with the night that seven titles were made. I don't know that I have ever been prouder of winning a fight than I was when I climbed down through the ropes and heard 10,000 leather lunged soldiers tearing off the roof. That was another thing about those fights. There was bitter strife for months after the final bouts, but when a man won a title the whole crowd joined in cheering him. I will never forget that ovation and I doubt it there will ever be another boxing crowd just like it. I don't think there could be.

The elimination for this big night had been going on ever since the armistice, and many of the boys who participated had been boxing before that back in the rest areas. There were hundreds of regimental champions at first, but elimination kept narrowing down the number until only a few survived for the final eliminations in Paris.

Champions poured into Paris from Coblenz and from Brest; from Belgium down to the Italian sector. And in the great, barn-like building, the Cirque de Paris, where in peace times the French children laughed at clowns and elephants, there was battle, battle, battle every night.

The championships of the American army were settled that night in April, and later in the summer at the Pershing stadium the inter-allied competition was held.

Had to Win

I had some hard battles, and a lot of them one right after another in preparation, and my hands were so swollen I could hardly get them into a pair of gloves. Perhaps I wouldn't have done so if Bill McCabe had not brought a basin of hot water to my dressing room a short time before I went on. That visit was a great comfort to me, for I knew I had a great opponent, and I also knew I had to win. And right there was another thing about the great spirit that prevailed. A boxer wants to win any match and feels that he has to, but after all, if he doesn't, it is his own funeral. But I felt if I didn't win then I'd be throwing down my pals, my outfit and the whole service. I certainly was carrying a load of responsibility, and the other contestants felt the same, I am sure.

And still another sportsmanlike thing was in the first event of the evening, a wrestling match between Cal Farley of Minneapolis and Walter O'Connor of Iowa for the middleweight title. Championships in all other weights had been decided a week before, but O'Connor refused to take the title by default when Farley could not appear on account of an injured knee. Wrestling would never die out with that spirit.

One Class Missing

There were seven championship bouts on the card that night besides the wrestling match—a dish to set before any sport fan. The only class in which there were no contestants was the flyweight, but there were Babe Asher and George Schreiber as bantam, and at the other extreme Bob Martin and Fay Keyser as heavyweights. In between were "Bush" Graham of Brooklyn and the fast colored boy, Leo Patterson, as lightweights, myself and Ted Jamison as light heavies and the rest.

Jamison was a game and clever fighter and he had made a marvelous record in climbing up through the elimination mill. He had a good punch with both hands and was aggressive, so I spent the first round sizing up the style of his attack and then walked in. In the third round he changed his tactics again, but I solved that after taking a swift right to the head which, however, was too high to do any damage. I saw that I was faster than he, and after that I was completely confident. My hands were very painful and for a few rounds I saved them by playing for his body, and waited until the tenth round to work up to his head, winning the decision and sparing my hands as much as possible.

When I crawled out of the ring it seemed that the whole crowd had been with me from the start, although I knew from the ovation Jamison got when he entered the ring that he had a mighty following, too. And then when he stepped out of the ring the crowd broke loose again for the loser. So that's the kind of sportsmen that attended the biggest boxing carnival ever held on foreign soil.

WESTERN ASSOCIATION WORKS FOR SIX CLUBS

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 6. (AP)—Announcing that a six-club circuit apparently was assured, officials of the Western association Monday planned a week of activity in an effort to perfect the 1928 organization.

Meeting here Sunday, representatives of Fort Smith, Ark., Muskogee, Okla., Independence, Kan., and Springfield, Mo., clubs, announced they were ready to proceed with a program calling for 140 games starting April 24. It was said a split season probably would be arranged.

LONGHORNS START SPRING GRID TRAINING MONDAY

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 6. (AP)—The moulding of what Head Coach Clyde Littlefield hopes to be a conference championship football team for 1928 will begin on the Texas university stadium field Monday afternoon.

From the varsity season of 1927 will come the fast stepping Eddie Beular, who would have been a sensation in the conference had he not been laid up with injuries. Captain Rufus King will again don the moleskins after almost a year of absence. Then there is Co-Captain Ike Sewell, who has postponed his trip to Europe long enough to start the men on their grid training. Other men from the varsity team include Tigner, Phillips, Beaty, Cowley, Brown, Mobley, Broyles and Wilbanks.

Coach Littlefield is especially interested in the freshmen. He has found that this year's yearling team under the direction of Shorty Alderson included some good men. He does not want to wait until next September to see what these men can do.

Big Racing Car Ready for Trial On February 15

Four-Ton 36-Cylinder Machine Capable of Doing 270 Miles an Hour, Says Manufacturer

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6. (AP)—A four-ton, 36-cylinder racing car, built here under the direction of J. M. White, wealthy wire manufacturer, is ready to wrest the speed championship from England. The record is held by Major H. O. D. Seagrave, 203.79 miles per hour, and was made at Daytona Beach, Fla., last year.

White's long-nosed "Triplex," so named because of its three 12-cylinder Liberty aviation type motors, will be shipped to Daytona Beach Sunday to participate in the national straight-away speed trials February 15.

Two of the racer's motors are placed back of the driver's seat. Redesigned, they have achieved 3300 revolutions a minute compared to their original speed of 1500.

"Mathematically," said White, "this would give the Triplex a speed of 270 miles an hour. I will be satisfied with 210 and am satisfied we can stay on the course and on the ground at that speed."

The rear axle, of the fixed type, is almost as large as that on a freight car and runs on six sets of bearings. Three special bevel gears, one for each motor, form the contact units of propulsion.

The tires were built to order, eight of them costing $1340. They have no tread, look like enormous airplane tires, and carry 125 pounds pressure. The cost of the car, White estimated, was $15,000.

Babe's Homers Spell End for Most Chunkers

Only Three Pitchers Contributing To Record Years of 1921 and 1927 Remain in Majors.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Out of the scores of American league sharp-shooters who have tried—and failed—to put 'em past Babe Ruth only three enjoy whatever distinction is gained from having contributed to the Bambino's record-breaking home run campaigns of 1921 and 1927.

The deliveries of exactly 40 twirlers were walloped for the circuit clouts that contributed to Ruth's 1921 total of 59 but only Howard Ehmke, Tom Zachary and Bryan Harriss survived to have their fast ones nicked again while the Babe was piling up his crop of 60 last season.

It is a curious fact that each of this trio yielded four homers to the Babe in the two record-busting years. All three also changed uniforms in the six-year interval, but Zachary, after a brief turn with St. Louis, was back with his old club, Washington, in time to have the distinction of being hit for the historic 60th Ruthian rap of 1927.

Zachary's southpaw delivery was touched for one of the big wallops in 1921 and three last year, as were the slants of Slim Harriss, first with the Athletics and now with Boston. Ehmke, with Detroit in 1921 and the Athletics last year, yielded two homers to the Babe in each of these seasons.

If Ruth sets out on another record-breaking jaunt this year it will be interesting to see how the Three Musketeers of the Grand Army of Ruthians Victims fare.

Of the original two score who withstood the famous 1921 bombardment 23 have passed from the big show while three—Coveleskie, Pennock and Shocker—are out of range by the simple process of being on the Yankee payroll. Another, McWeeny, is in the National league.

APPELLATE COURT OKEHS CONVICTION ALIEN CUSTODIAN

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—The conviction of Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian for conspiring to defraud the government, was upheld by the United States circuit court of appeals today. Miller was tried jointly with Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general but the indictment against Daugherty was quashed after two juries had disagreed as to his innocence or guilt.

There were two Daugherty-Miller trials, the first jury disagreeing as to both defendants and the second convicting Miller. Miller was sentenced to serve 15 months in the federal penitentiary and to pay a fine of $5000. The appeal on which decision was rendered today was argued on January 16 last.

NEW HOME OF NATIONAL PRESS CLUB

The new building in Washington of the National Press club (above) dedicated with an address by President Coolidge, giving Washington newspapermen the home of which they have long dreamed. J. Fred Essary (inset) of the Baltimore Sun is president. Below is a view of the lounge in the new quarters.

The club's new home rises skyward on a corner steeped in Washington newspaper history. It is described as one of the best appointed and most completely outfitted of its kind, and already the membership, embracing representatives of the leading newspapers of the world, has moved in.

Overlooking the White House and the treasury on one side and under the shadow of the towering Washington monument on another, the club quarters occupy the two top floors of the 14-story National Press building at the corner of Fourteenth and F streets, Northwest. Fourteenth street between F and E long has been known as Washington's "newspaper row."

Already the new walls are absorbing newspaper history of the capital as members of the "Old Guard," who organized the club 20 years ago, sit contentedly in their new home and reminisce of times which have brought virtually every leader in world affairs into association with the club during the period.

SUSPECTS IN 'TAPE' MURDER PREPARE TO GIVE UP TO POLICE

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Two men who have successfully evaded police efforts to find them for questioning in connection with the Betty Chambers "tape murder" have served notice through their attorneys that they will give themselves up before nightfall. They are Gordon Chambers, the husband, and Joe Miller.

The attorneys said the men had wanted to surrender before but that they had feared the "third degree."

Betty Chambers was found dead in her north side apartment last month, her nose and mouth taped and her head marked by a heavy blow.

Clink of Glass Causes Arrest Liquor Suspect

Because the contents of a paper sack he carried along Ohio avenue "clinked," a man arrested Sunday by Dick Morris and Charlie Gant, deputy sheriffs, was to be charged Monday with possession and transportation of liquor, according to the officers. The complaint, they said, will be filed before J. A. Lauta, United States commissioner.

The sack, officers said, contained four six-ounce and two pint bottles of whiskey. Each bottle had been wrapped in paper, but not well enough to silence the clinking.

Trixie disappeared 23 days ago, and a constant search for her was unavailing until her owner today opened the door to the storm cellar. She came up the steps thin and weak, but apparently suffering no permanent injury. She had neither food nor water during her imprisonment.

K. D. Kinsner, 26, brakeman on the Fort Worth and Denver railroad, received a deep gash on the forehead and was severely bruised and beaten up when attacked by three hobos at a switch near Henrietta shortly before midnight Sunday.

The hobos ceased their attack when W. E. McCracken, 1417 Thirteenth street, conductor of the freight train on which Kinsner was working, approached the spot. The injured man was brought by train to Wichita Falls and taken from the union station to the Wichita General hospital in a Hines ambulance.

Attendants at the hospital said Monday morning that Kinsner's condition was not considered serious. Kinsner, who served as a city motorcycle officer here several years ago, lives at 1403 Travis street.

GRAND JURY IN ARIZONA CALLS LOCAL SHERIFF

Sheriff W. C. Bralley, served with a subpoena late Sunday to appear less than 24 hours later before the grand jury in Phoenix, Ariz., awaited further instructions Monday after notifying that body it would be impossible for him to appear there in time. The sheriff was holding himself in readiness Monday to depart for Arizona at brief notice.

Although the subpoena did not indicate the case in which Mr. Bralley is desired as a witness, the sheriff here expressed the opinion that it relates to the arrest by him several weeks ago of one Clyde Moore. Moore since has been surrendered to federal authorities and was taken by them to Kansas City to await disposition of a charge of burglarizing a postoffice substation there.

Moore, according to Arizona authorities, faces charges there.

UNCLE SAM FACES IRE OF REPUBLICS FOR INTERVENTION

EIGHT LATIN STATES LINE UP IN SOLID FRONT AGAINST POLICY

PAN-AMERICA CONGRESS FACES TOUGH PROBLEM

Argentine and Mexico in Lead of Groups Taking Issue Against Washington

HAVANA, Feb. 6. (AP)—The attack of eight Latin American republics on the right of one nation to intervene in the affairs of another dominated the atmosphere of the pan-American conference today.

Preliminary conversations among chiefs of delegations were held to determine the attitudes they would assume in the special subcommittee appointed to pass upon the subject of the fundamental rights and duties of states.

The attack came suddenly Saturday after Charles Evans Hughes, chief of the United States delegation, had promised the report of Dr. Victor Maurtua of Peru the full and unconditional support of the American government. Dr. Maurtua's report expounded the principle that the independence of countries is correlated with their duty not to "interfere with or violate the rights of other states."

This was attacked as too vague. The Rio Janeiro jurists' report saying "no state may intervene in the internal affairs of another" was urged in its stead.

The attack on the Maurtua report was led by Argentina while Mexico, Guatemala, Salvador, San Domingo, Honduras, Colombia and Uruguay joined in assailing it.

The United States delegation was optimistic today that a final agreement would be reached, but other delegates were wary in predicting what the final outcome of the subcommittee's work would be.

This committee will probably not meet for several days since a plenary session is scheduled for tomorrow and the arrival of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh here on Wednesday is expected to cut short the work of the congress that day.

JACK CARTER IS RECAPTURED AT HILLSBORO

Jack Carter was recaptured at Hillsboro less than a week after his escape from the penitentiary to which he had been sent from Wichita county to serve a life sentence for robbing a filling station. Word of the capture was contained in news dispatches Sunday.

According to the dispatches, Hill county officers trailing an automobile stolen at West found Carter in the machine and arrested him. He was identified later as being an escaped convict.

The charge against Carter here grew out of the holdup of a filling station at Brook and Eighth street. In a duel which followed the robbery, one of the attendants was slightly wounded and Carter was seriously wounded but made good his escape.

Carter also was tried in Dallas county on a charge of robbery with firearms. The jury there fixed life imprisonment as punishment.

Seriously, it looks as though the British intend to forget their navy and take to the air.

SH! FRISBY REVEALS HIS AIRPLANE PLAN!

Youth who claims Frisby is his father. "The Congressman's Son," he calls his expose, now available at all book stores, curio shops, etc.

By the Hon. Mister Frisby,
Congressman at Large.

WASHINGTON—I am amazed by the London Gazette's inadvertent publication of the British Admiralty's secret plan to have submarines carry folding aircraft.

In the first place, it is apparent to a child in arms that airplanes are quite impractical when flying under water.

On the other hand, the Gazette's blunder has stimulated me to work out a plan.

I haven't gotten the details on paper, but it is my purpose to perfect a folding airplane that can be carried in an ordinary spectacles case.

Then I will introduce a bill making it necessary for everyone to carry one of these vest-pocket airplanes.

My friends call me "Lucky" Frisby, because I am the new hero of the air.

"Oh, doctor!" said the chorus girl, "if I must be vaccinated, please do it where it don't show."

"All right," said Doc, "but you may not be able to wear your left shoe for a coupla' days."

Paris Duelists Use Their Fists In Lieu Sabers

PARIS, Feb. 6. (AP)—The traditional dueling weapons, swords and pistols, went by the board when M. Liberel, business man, met M. Docquois, dramatist, on the field of honor. They used ordinary boxing gloves to settle their differences. The dramatist won on points.

Liberel challenged Docquois to a duel to avenge what he considered to be a direct insult in the dramatist's latest play.

Three hundred invitations were issued so that the world might know every point of honor had been observed. Four hundred persons attended.

Many heavy swings were noted in the combat, but little damage was done. At the conclusion Liberel kissed his opponent to show that honor was satisfied and reconciliation effected.

The Dutch settlers paid $24 for Manhattan Island.

The average person has four distinct tastes.

CURB MARKET QUOTATIONS

Sales of stocks 458,300 shares.
Sales of bonds $1,176,000.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Tone and movements were mixed on the curb exchange today, the action of the market being without any general incentive and depending on special operations in its various fluctuations. Accumulation of the specialties was renewed, causing vigorous advances in one group of stocks, but others which had been prominent were pressed on the market and dropped to new low levels for recent trading.

Celanese issued were among the strong features, the common advancing 4 points and the preferred moving up over 6 points. Celluloid made a gain of 7 points and American Cyanamid "B" rose about two points. Bancitaly, American Rolling Mills and General Baking were among other strong features. Newmont Mining, after being under pressure recently was against strong advancing about 5 points. Case Plow Works came into prominence, advancing over 5 points to 17. That stock sold early in the year at 6.

Utilities generally were strong. Commonwealth Edison advanced 2 points and Electric Bond & Share made a gain of about a point. American Gas & Electric and American Light & Traction both were in supply at lower levels.

Standard Oil of Kentucky was a strong feature in the oil group, rallying over 2 points, but other oil stocks were without special feature.

BABSON PARK, Jan. 30.—The last few months of 1927 witnessed a rather noticeable dullness in employment in some of the important industries. The situation did not approach in severity anything like the conditions of unemployment in a period of real business depression. Still it has been noted that in certain lines such as building, the decline was greater than could be explained by normal seasonal influences. Statistics of the department of labor show that of 54 manufacturing industries, 39 reported fewer workers on the payroll in November, 1927, than in November, 1926. Forty-one industries reported a lower total amount of payroll.

Although there was a decline in a number of important trades there were also lines where activity was greater. Measured both by the number of people employed in them, and the amount of wages paid, the following industries gave evidence of greater activity in the latter part of 1927 than in the corresponding period of 1926: cotton goods, hosiery and knit goods, silk and women's clothing. Increases in these lines range from 1 per cent to 15 per cent. A slight increase was indicated in employment in newspaper printing. Chemical manufacturer was slightly more active as was also the manufacture of tobacco and cigarets. Some increases were noted in building and repairing of electric railroad cars. The baking and sugar refining industries also showed greater activity.

Decrease in employment was marked in automobiles, petroleum refining and lumber manufacturing. There was also less employment in the cast iron pipe business, foundry and machine shops, machine tools, and the iron and steel trade generally.

The outlook for employment for the next few months is distinctly better. Ford is again back in active production of automobiles which will greatly stimulate activity in this line. Other big automobile manufacturers are planning heavy schedules.

Indications are not lacking that railroad equipment buying will soon be heavier, and this together with increased automobile output should help the steel business. Building construction will not open up in volume until spring, but there are many large construction projects that will get under way when spring opens up.

In general it may be said that the outlook is for improving employment conditions over the next five or six months.

Radio Supplies Not Burdensome.

Conditions in the radio industry have greatly improved. This is shown by a statistical survey conducted by the department of commerce enumerating the stock of radio sets and their principal accessories in dealers' and jobbers' hands. About 7790 reports were secured. These dealers had 147,548 battery receiving sets on hand and 9548 socket power sets; ordinary speakers 152,091, amplifier-speaker units 5015, "B" and "C" batteries rated in 45 volt units 525,411, storage "A" batteries 77,148.

A year or two ago there was little question that radio dealers were overstocked. Price cutting was the rule rather than the exception. This situation is now changed. The radio trade has cleaned house, and is now on a sounder basis than it has been for several years. The survey shows an average stock of 20 battery operated receiving sets and a little over one socket power set per dealer. This indicates a healthy condition. Certainly during this heavy consuming season for radios, the dealers should be able to move at least 150,000 sets.

Retail Outlets for Radios.

The department of commerce finds that there are 68 different varieties of retail outlets for radio sets and supplies. The leaders in the radio sales are the electrical supply dealers, who account for 26 per cent of the total sold. Next come the radio dealers with 20 per cent; third, the hardware dealers with 13½ per cent; fourth, dealers in musical instruments with 8½ per cent; fifth, automobile dealers with 6 per cent; sixth, battery and ignition supplies, with 5½ per cent; and seventh, tires and tire repair shops with 4½ per cent. There are two rather surprising features of this study. First, the important place of the hardware dealer in the radio trade; and second, the small proportion sold by the music dealers.

COTTON STARTS OUT WEEK WITH STEADY TONE ON MARKETS

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Realizing and Southern selling, attracted by an opening advance in the cotton market today, was absorbed on a moderate setback and prices firmed up again on profits of smaller sport offerings and complaints of inadequate rains in West Texas, active months sold about 40 to 43 points net higher and prices were at approximately the best levels in midafternoon.

The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 7 to 14 points in response to relatively firm cables.

Buying was restricted by reports of light rains at points in West Texas, however, and after selling up to 17.28 for May and 17.14 for October, or about 19 to 14 points net higher, the market sagged off under realizing or liquidation and some selling supposed to be for southern account.

The price of May dropped back to 17.19 with the general list ruling about 2 to 11 points net higher at the end of the first hour.

Private cables said Liverpool had been influenced by covering and calling with London and continental buying, and that the market for Egyptian cotton had advanced owing to the low Nile and a threatened shortage of water. Manchester reported a limited turnover in cloth and yarns and that manufacturers were losing ground.

The offerings attracted by the opening advance were soon absorbed and the market became firmer on covering and trade buying inspired by reports of increased spot demand in Eastern belt markets. Some buying on the forecast for fair weather in West Texas was evident.

May sold up to 17.48 and October 17.36, making net advances of about 30 to 35 points.

New Orleans Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 6. (AP)—The cotton market advanced nearly $2 a bale here today due to the oversold condition of the market, much better Liverpool cables, absence of any further hedging and a belief that the rains in the drought section were insufficient to relieve the situation there. At the highest reached at midafternoon, March traded at 17.20, May 17.18 and July 17.23, or 34 to 39 points net up.

Exports 54,372 bales.

The cotton market was erratic in rather quiet early trading today and an opening advance was lost later on selling induced by reports of rain in the drought section of the belt.

First trades showed gains of 11 to 12 points in sympathy with higher Liverpool cables. March contracts traded at 16.93, May 16.95 and July 17.00. The subsequent decline carried March and May back to 16.86 and July 16.94, or 6 to 9 points down from the highs.

Towards the end of the first half hour prices rallied practically to the highs on some trade buying probably inspired by the official forecast indicating colder and fair weather for the western belt.

The market continued to advance during the morning under buying inspired by the oversold appearance of the market and impressions that rains had been insufficient to relieve the drought in the West. March developed especial strength which was accepted as indicating a better spot situation. Contracts for that month sold up to 17.17, or 36 points above the previous close. May rallied to 17.15 and July 17.20, or 31 to 32 points net up.

Towards noon prices eased off 4 to 11 points on realizing, but the undertone was very steady.

Cotton futures closed steady at a net advance of 35 to 40 points.

TEXAS LIVESTOCK SHIPMENTS BIGGER THAN DURING 1927

DALLAS, Feb. 6. (AP)—For the two weeks ended January 26, shipments to the Fort Worth market of cattle were nine per cent, of calves 50 per cent and of hogs 7 per cent greater, and of sheep 20 per cent less than for a corresponding period a year ago, the American Railway association announced today.

Prices of cattle, calves and sheep continue good, but hog prices are now substantially below the cost of production, the report declared.

Stock ranges in the Southwest, particularly in the southern, western and northwestern sections have begun to deteriorate perceptibly because of lack of moisture. The present condition of livestock generally, however, is reported to be fairly good.

A comparative table follows:

The better tone in the spot market and the lighter offerings inspired optimism in raw sugar futures. After opening unchanged to 2 points higher, prices continued firmer and at midday showed net gains of 2 to 3 points. While there was moderate covering and some buying by houses with European and trade connections, traders were inclined to limit operations. No changes occurred in refined prices. GOOD RAINS SEND WHEAT PRICES OFF IN PIT OPERATIONS

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—With the southwest reporting widespread soaking rains, the first in four months, wheat prices underwent a material setback today. Closing of spread between here and the northwest, however, checked the decline. Corn eased down in the late dealings as a result of scattered selling which developed notwithstanding increased corn export business which by some estimates was as high as 1,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed unsettled, ½@to2c net lower, corn ½ to 2c to ⅝c down, oats a shade to 1⅛@½c off and provisions showing 10 to 22c down.

More optimism in regard to the crop outlook for domestic winter wheat was encouraged today by word of liberal moisture southwest and west tending to banish drought damage fears. In addition unexpected downturns in wheat quotations at Liverpool were associated with an increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage.

Supplementing the bullish effect of adverse conditions reported today for the corn crop movement were indications that enlarged of corn for export had been made overnight. Some estimates put the aggregate at 600,000 bushels.

Grain Pit Notes

CHICAGO, Feb. 6. (AP)—Despite the largest movement of corn from the country in recent years the market has acted remarkably well. A large number of traders who believe that corn will ultimately be worth more have been on the buying side. They say that holders in previous years have reaped handsome profits and expect to do it again.

There has been little buying of oats, the indications being that the market has bought to about a standstill. Although there has been considerable liquidation, the sentiment in the main is bullish; with a belief that later the market will climb higher.

Bond Market

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Bond prices generally were steady today, and buying again was in moderate volume. The trend of the money market continued to be the principal concern of traders, who still showed disposition to refrain from adding largely to commitments. The sudden burst of new offerings last week, presenting a measure of competition to the listed market, also was a probable factor in slowing up trading as the new week began.

Some interest was manifested in convertible issues. New York Central and Hudson River 6s gaining more than a point and Andes Copper 7s moving up fractionally. Securities of a strictly investment order were quiet.

French issues made the best showing in the foreign group, which elsewhere showed fractional irregularity. United States government obligations made little progress in the early trading.

Total sales $10,646,000; previous day $6,651,000; week ago $11,671,000; year ago $14,943,000; January 1 to date $339,378,000; same year ago $466,757,000; same two years ago $365,771,000.

Ticker Ticklers

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—W. B. Storey, president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, does not expect earnings for the first half of 1928 to be as large as a year ago, when the road was then carrying wheat and oil, which, he thinks, it is not likely to get this year. Indications pointed to a normal wheat crop this year in the road's territory, he said, and while prospects in western Kansas were not good, those in eastern Kansas were very good. Cattle and wool prices were favorable and the feed situation good.

Expenditure of $5,000,000 by American Steel & Wire company, subsidiary of U. S. Steel, is planned for 1928, among the improvements being a new rod mill for the Cuyahoga works costing $2,000,000.

Crude oil production in California last week averaged 614,500 barrels daily, a decline of 300 barrels daily from the week before.

Lima Locomotive Works had net loss of $191,341 for 1927, in contrast to net profit of $1,704,827 in 1926, or $8.07 a share. Unfilled orders at the close of 1927 were $3,580,727.

Laclede Gas Light company earned $12.21 a share on the common stock in 1927 against $15.46 a share in 1926.

Net earnings of the Pacific Coast company for 1927 declined to $215,453 from $420,259 the year before. Fourth quarter net was $106,129 against $55,152 in the third quarter.

Otis Steel company had $2,370,000 cash on hand at the close of last week. Shipments in January were 18 per cent ahead of January, 1927, E. J. Kulas, president, reports. The company plans additional open hearth furnace capacity at cost of between $450,000 and $650,000.

Chandler-Cleveland Motor company shipped 42 per cent more cars in January than a year ago. Production has been increased to 100 cars a day, the best rate for some time at this season of the year.

Freight traffic on Canadian railroads in the week ended January 28 was 62,104 carloads, against 63,168 the week before and 59,295 a year ago. Receipts from connections were 36,697 carloads against 35,509 the previous week and 37,091 last year.

Stockholders of Trumbull Steel will hold a special meeting February 16 to approve the sale of the company to Republic Iron and Steel on or before May 1.

Paramount-Famous-Lasky corporation produced 63 pictures in 1927 against 58 in 1926 and distributed 78 pictures compared with 67 the preceding year. Despite increased production and distribution, the company's actual saving in disbursements for 1927 was $1,700,000 more than in 1926, most of it being in the production department where a policy of economy was inaugurated last spring.

January sales of F. W. Woolworth company rose to $17,114,293 from $16,116,517 in January, 1927, a gain of 6.19 per cent.

Carols were first sung in the thirteenth century.

Gas Tax Success.

The new 2-cent gas tax law, put into effect in New Jersey this year to obtain $6,000,000 for road construction, will bring in returns far in excess of this expected figure.

PRICES FIRM WITH OIL SHARES GAINING INITIAL ATTENTION

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—The stock market today lacked uniformity after a strong forward movement in the morning had spent much of its force. Profit taking in some issues which have recently advanced sharply, and a growth of selling for both accounts reduced a number of earlier gains of 3 to 6 points shortly after noon. Banks called about $10,000,000 in loans.

Confidence in the business outlook, reinforced by a statement by Secretary Hoover that he saw nothing distressing in the business situation, had impelled active buying in the early hours, particularly in the steel, public utility, copper and miscellaneous groups. The extraordinary interest in Vanadium Steel, which has advanced about 20 points in the past week or so, was reflected in an increased inquiry for other independent steel shares, particularly Midland Steel products preferred, Sloss-Sheffield and Bethlehem, which registered gains of 3 to 5 points.

Pools operations were prosecuted in many quarters in the morning, but were considerably modified when the market began to reflect the increased volume of sales for both accounts shortly after midday. Railroads were somewhat sluggish and there was some pressure against such industrials as the sugar shares, attributed to unfavorable trade news. There was effective pressure at intervals against Greene Cananea Copper and some of the rubber shares.

Prices were firm at the opening of the stock market today, with buying of motors, public utilities and some of the oils in evidence. Radio Corporation had an initial advance of a point.

The extraordinary buying movement in Vanadium Steel was resumed carrying the price up 7½ points to 97½ before the end of the first half hour. Other independent steels responded to further talk of new combinations, early gains of 2 to nearly 4 points being recorded by Republic, Inland and Gulf States. U. S. Steel quickly gained more than a point. Much of the buying was attributed to Secretary Hoover's statement that he saw nothing seriously wrong with the business situation.

Prospects of tighter call money followed Saturday's decrease in bank reserve to a deficit of $20,000,000 apparently was ignored in the initial dealings. Allis Chalmers soon was selling at a new peak of 125, a gain of 3 points, while advances of about as much were registered by American Zinc preferred, Peoples Gas, Continental Can, Purity Baking B and others. Nevada Consolidated, a feature late last week, quickly went up to 22⅞, the highest in several years.

Foreign exchanges opened steady except for a 3-point drop in Spanish pesetas. Sterling cables ruled around $4.87 2-16 and French francs just about 3.92½ cents.

Cropping out of a few soft spots among the railroads and industrials including Atchison and the American Tobacco issues, cut little figure in the calculation of the pools who were boosting prices vigorously in many sections of the list elsewhere. Some well known issues sold at their best figures for some time, Studebaker reaching 64½, the highest since 1925. Money again renewed at 4½ per cent in face of the $20,000,000 bank deficit.

The closing was irregular. Activity increased somewhat in the final hour when the express and steel issues began to rise again. American Express advanced almost 10 points and Crucible, Bethlehem and Republic Steels were absorbed in round amounts. American Linseed rose to a new peak above 75. Tightening of money following the raising of the Minneapolis rediscount rate was without immediate effect on the market. Total sales approximated 2,000,000 shares.

Classified Ad patrons desiring to have ads charged must have a telephone listed in their own name. No book record is made by the publishers on account of the great number of transactions, hence the necessity of collecting promptly.

Correction of errors in Classified Ads must be made before the second insertion. No allowance will be made for more than one incorrect insertion.

THIEVES POISON WATCH DOGS ON POULTRY RANCH

A warning that chicken thieves have appeared here, who first poison watch dogs at the place they intend to raid, was given Monday by Sheriff W. G. Bralley.

The advice that poultrymen be on their guards followed a report to the sheriff by Mrs. Emmett Johnson, who resides near Iowa Park, during the weekend that two watch dogs on her place had been poisoned, presumably by chicken thieves.

The condition of the dogs was discovered in time and both were saved. The discovery likewise put Mrs. Johnson on her guard and the thieves did not appear.

This is about the time of year, Mr. Bralley warned, that chicken thieves begin their activities. Several such bands were broken up last year and a number of men implicated were sent to the penitentiary. Two were convicted under the law enacted a few months before, making theft of chickens punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. Others, although implicated in the same cases, were tried on other charges.

Officers will be materially assisted in stopping chicken thefts, the sheriff advised, if owners put marks upon their poultry which will enable them to positively identify their property if the birds should be stolen and recovered. To the average juror, he explained, a chicken of one breed looks like another of the same breed and to give positive evidence the owner should mark his birds so as to remove any possible doubt of ownership.

FIRST METHODISTS HOLD FIRST SERVICE IN NEW BUILDING AS SURPRISE

Members of the First Methodist church held their first service in the new church building Sunday morning—a very short prayer service under the direction of the pastor, Dr. S. Stephen McKenney.

Following the regular order of service in the old building, the pastor preached a 10-minute sermon and then led his members into the new building, which, although unfinished, was complete enough so that the members could stand during some singing by the choir and a prayer by the pastor.

Complete furnishings for the building have already been ordered, and the work will continue without pause until the completion of the entire church, according to Dr. McKenney, and it is believed that services will be held there regularly by May or June.

FLIERS AT FORT WORTH TO ATTEMPT TO BREAK RECORD FOR ENDURANCE

FORT WORTH, Feb. 6. (AP)—In an attempt to break the world's endurance flight record, Al Henley and Joe Hart, Oklahoma aviators, will take off here in their specially built monoplane Wednesday or Thursday.

The time of the start depends upon results of motor tests which were begun at the municipal airport here today. The plane is equipped to carry 525 gallons of gasoline. Fred L. Foster, Washington, D. C., official observer for the National Aeronautical association, and E. M. Walsh, Paterson, N. J., aeronautical engineer, are here aiding in the preliminary tests. Foster will also seal the barograph, set the watches and check the flight.

Henley started in the ill-fated Dole transpacific flight of last August as navigator for the monoplane Oklahoma, piloted by Bennett Griffin of Oklahoma City. The two turned back soon after starting, engine trouble having developed.

Hart was an army pilot during the world war. He is in the cotton ginning business at Chickasha, Okla., and aviation is a diversion.

MANAGER COULD SAVE $100,000 A YEAR—BLAND

Declaring that he believed a city manager could save the city of Wichita Falls $100,000 a year, J. M. Bland of this city addressed members of the local Kiwanis club Monday noon on two proposed amendments to the city charter on which a public hearing will be held before the council February 27.

The two proposed amendments which Mr. Bland explained will make the city manager plan mandatory in Wichita Falls and set the salaries of the mayor and commissioners at nominal amounts. Mr. Bland served as a member of the committee that prepared the two amendments.

Mr. Bland explained that his talk was not an atack upon the present city administration and that he was interested only because it is a business proposition.

"The city manager will be manager of the city's business and will not have any legislative powers," Mr. Bland explained. "He will not be in politics and I believe that an out-of-town man should be secured for the position.

"A city manager has the power to fire any common laborer for the city but any departmental head may demand a hearing before the council if he feels that a discontinuance of his services is unjust. The manager may be dismissed at any time by the council when he fails to deliver. However, if he feels that such action is unwarranted he may also demand a public hearing."

J. M. Baber, chairman of the agricultural committee, will be in charge of the program to be presented at the regular weekly meeting of the Kiwanis club next Monday noon.

Appearing before the board the nurses, Mrs. J. V. Hause and Mrs. Dick Burford of Austin, contested the superintendent's action in discharging them. Shallow Wells in North Young and Strawn Sand Producer in the East Graham Field Highlights of Week

Special to the Times.

GRAHAM, Texas, Feb. 6.—The splendid shallow wells in north Young and one Strawn sand producer in the east Graham field are the highlights for the past week in Young county.

The Allday Oil company of Wichita Falls completed a splendid well on the C. W. Johnson Jr., ranch on the E. W. Sargent survey. They cut 16½ feet of splendid sand and the hole filled immediately. Conservative estimates placed the well at 50 barrels.

The well of Kleiner-West and Hill, a direct offset to the Allday well, is pumping 40 barrels.

Kleiner, West and Hill have their No. 2 Langston about on the sand.

Alexander, Reed et al. are placing their No. 1 Johnson on the pump. It is good for 15 barrels.

Pennell-Wooten and Reed completed their No. 1 Johnson northwest corner block 16 Sargent survey for a seven barrel pumper.

Buck Williams is drilling at 650 feet on the Allen Casey farm in T. E. & L. Co survey No. 1486.

Allday Oil company has made a location for its No. 2 Johnson 300 feet north of their No. 1 Johnson.

W. R. Stafford is moving a machine for a test on the Boone or Boyd land a mile south of the Langston pool.

Wootten & Reed completed a well for the Rannell Oil Co. on the J. W. Jack farm at Markley that is pumping 100 barrels per day.

A new location has been made for No. 5A J. W. Jack in block No. 28 which will be an offset to the splendid well just finished. Wootten & Reed have acquired the south 56 acres of block No. 28 adjoining the Jack lease and will drill a test soon.

Parker et al. have moved a machine and will drill a well on the C. F. Newman farm near Markley.

Great activity is centered around the A. W. Johnson Panhandle lease on the Garvey ranch north of Farmer where one of the best shallow wells in the district was recently completed.

The Texas company, Gulf, Panhandle, A. W. Johnson and others are drilling but exact locations are not available at this time. Any movement toward a boost in crude would start a drilling campaign in north Young as the very shallow depth makes it profitable for small pumpers.

East Graham and South Young

White Brothers of Wichita Falls completed their rotary on the Eddleman Bros. lan3 east of Graham for a 50 barrel well at 2650.

Jack Dunn is drilling at 1000 feet on Eddleman Bros., one mile southeast of the Morrison pool.

Pitzer & West are drilling at 1270 feet on their No. 1 Scarborough half mile southeast of the Morrison pool.

Pitzer & West have erected derrick and will drill on the Eddleman Bros. lease T. E. & L. Co. No. 2691 about two miles northeast of the Morrison pool.

Tidwell & Minson No. 1 England is drilling at 1875 feet and looking like a producer.

Riggs-Fultz and Reed are drilling at 1950 on their No. 1 Goldston, J. Meyer survey, northeast of Graham.

Dewey Knox is making hole in a hurry on the Shaw interests well on the Martin land, six miles east of Graham in R. M. Burton survey.

Schoonmaker et al. have closed a contract for a well in the J. D. Baty vicinity on the Graham and Jacksboro highway eight miles east of Graham.

The United Royalties have spudded on their Mary Taylor No. 1 J. B. Whittenburg survey five miles south of Graham.

The same company have also spudded on their C. B. Hockaday No. 1, Upham survey, four miles southeast of Graham.

Floyd Mann is deepening his No. 1 Dick Whittenburg in the Oil City pool.

The Gulf company Lisle well recently completed is making 40 barrels of oil and several million feet of wet gas.

M. R. Hemphill is making hole around 2600 feet on the Margaret Edmonds survey near Murray.

The Texas company No. 1 L. B. Street is into its second fishing job at 1580 feet, two miles west of Murray.

JAKE HAMON BUYS 70-ACRE LEASE IN ARCHER FOR $55,000

Jake Hamon has purchased from the Marland Oil company its Thomas lease in the N. Thomas survey 454, two miles northeast of Archer City in Archer county, for a consideration of $55,000.

The property acquired by Mr. Hamon has 70 acres known as A. & B. lease, with 11 wells and a daily output of 55 barrels from the 1300 foot sand.

Gas Well's Roar Forces Teachers To Close School

RAYVILLE, La., Feb. 6. (AP)—Flames from a gas well at Alto that lighted the countryside for miles around last night endangered a school house and several residences today while efforts were under way to control it. Craters appeared to be forming around the well, adding further apprehension.

The well, known as Thomason gas well A-1 of the Natural Gas and Fuel corporation, came in January 27 with an estimated flow of 65,000,000 cubic feet daily and caught fire late yesterday after having burst through the casing and engulfed the derrick.

School was adjourned last week because even before the fire, the teacher could not make herself heard above the roar of escaping gas.

DEEP LIME PRODUCTION HOWARD COUNTY LIKELY TO BE KEPT SHUT IN

FORT WORTH, Texas, Feb. 6. (AP)—Prospects for indefinite shut-in of the newly discovered deep lime production in Howard county appeared here following the conference Saturday of Owens and Sloan and officials of the Magnolia Petroleum company, owners of the two deep wells completed so far.

The Magnolia has the only pipeline outlet for the new production in the field. It is a four-inch line, and is hardly sufficient to more than care for the shallow production developed prior to the deep pay discovery. Magnolia officials appeared loath to extend additional pipeline facilities at the time, due to lack of room in its trunk line and to the already overproduction of oil of the West Texas permian basin grade.

However, it is reported, Magnolia officials assured the representatives of Owens and Sloan and other independent operators interested that it would not favor its own production over theirs, and as it was unable to handle the deep production for others it would not run its own from neighboring properties, causing them drainage.

The Magnolia well, good for 2000 barrels daily, and the Owens and Sloan well, which rated over 2000 barrels initial, are both shut in. It is expected that the same thing will be done with early completions in the new pay zone.

BULLET SHATTERS WINDOW OF CHURCH AS PASTOR PRAYS

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 6. (AP)—The Rev. Dr. Clarence Bleakney, pastor of the Roseville Baptist church, continued today in the belief that the bullet which pierced a window and showered him with glass as he delivered his vesper sermon last night was accidental.

The police, however, said they were working on the theory that a deliberate attempt had been made on the pastor's life.

Dr. Bleakney had just started his sermon when a shot was heard. A bullet crashed through a big, stained glass window behind him, and embedded itself in the rear balcony.

With blood flowing from several minor cuts on his head, due to glass, Doctor Bleakney had the congregation sing in order to allay excitement.

After benediction had been pronounced, the service was ended.

Paris Cops Put 2000 in Bastile To 'Purify' City

PARIS, Feb. 6. (AP)—The process of "purifying" Paris, which M. Chiappe, prefect of police, began just before the arrival of the American Legion last year, reached a climax over night with the arrest of more than 2,000 persons for various minor offenses.

Many of those picked up by the police were foreign interpreters who often lure tourists into the lowest dives of the Montmarte, while others were foreigners who could not furnish satisfactory identification papers. Some of these will be deported and others, it is likely, will be let off with fines.

TYPIST TO SING

HELEN ARDELLE

NEW YORK, Feb. 6. (AP)—Helen Ardelle, soprano, who began the study of music in Kansas City while employed as a stenographer, will be the feature artist with Roxy and his gang at 6:30 p. m. today over WJZ and chain.

Miss Ardelle, who was born in Tucson, Ariz., went to Kansas City to take employment as a stenographer. On Sundays she sang in a choir, and finally at the insistence of the choir director, began to study voice.

Last September she came to New York, first taking a stenographic position but later becoming a member of the quartet of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. Soon she was singing leading soprano roles with the Little Opera company in Brooklyn. She joined Roxy's gang about two months ago.

RUSSIAN PHYSICIAN AWAITS COURT TEST IN AUSTIN BASTILE

AUSTIN, Feb. 6. (AP)—Nicholas Trotzky, self-termed Russian revolution hero was being held practically incommunicado here in the county jail Monday pending a removal order by Federal Judge Duval West.

The prisoner who in a plea to Governor Moody said he was the physician whom the soviets selected to examine the bodies of the czar and his family after they had faced a firing squad, has made no efforts to obtain an attorney and apparently stands ready to take whatever punishment may be prescribed, Deputy United States Marshal J. W. Quinlan said Sunday night.

Trotzky, alias Dr. Bob Lukan, alias Dr. Bob Anthony, is formally charged with illegal transportation of an automobile from one state to another, a federal violation. Several state charges are also pending.
